"I have spoken with the White House; which has assured me that whatever Federal assistance New York needs, it will get. I have been in constant contact with FEMA, which wanted me to stress just how important the need for blood is during this crisis. I urge all those who are able to donate blood, to call the Red Cross hotlines, at 1-800-HELP NOW. If anyone has any information on either yesterday’s attacks, contact the FBI at 1-866-483-5137.

"Mr. Speaker, all New Yorkers understand and feel empathy for those who lost loved ones on hijacked flights. New Yorkers, and indeed all Americans, will remember those victims at the Pentagon, for putting their lives at risk and paying the ultimate price, so that we can live our lives in freedom.

"In the end, that is what this comes down to—our freedom. To the majority of the world, our Nation stands as a beacon of hope. To those who want to crush freedom, to have people live in population stations as a rebuke as well as a threat.

"However, what those enemies of freedom fail to understand is that no amount of physical damaged can kill the ideals for which this Nation stands. Just as Pearl Harbor roused the sleeping giant to crush those who attacked it, this Nation must crush those who have declared war on us now.

"Let there be no mistake: We are at war, and have been for some time. We must make it clear, we will find those terrorists responsible for yesterday’s attacks and punish them. That we will find, and punish, all those who seek to murder innocent people through terrorism. To those nations harboring and protecting terrorists, all the while pretending to be America’s friend, you are no friend of ours. If you encourage hatred of the United States, and proclaim these attacks some sort of heroic act, you are no friend of ours. If you pay tribute to terrorists, you are no friend of ours. If you do not fully cooperate with our efforts to find terrorists and bring them to justice, you are not friend of ours.

"Today, we stand united, to mourn our losses, but determined to show the resolve upon which our Nation has always prided itself, as we rebuild. We will show the strength that can only be found in a free people. In the words of Lincoln, today, ‘we here highly resolve that these dead shall not have died in vain, that this Nation under God shall have a new birth of freedom, and that government of the people, by the people, for the people shall not perish from the earth.

"Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Florida (Mr. DIAZ-BALART), a member of the Committee on Rules.

"Mr. DIAZ-BALART. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

"Yesterday, terrorists attempted to spread fear throughout this great land as they murdered innocent men, women and children. These cowards, in effect, declared war on the United States; and we will fight back. America is the light of freedom and opportunity around the world. Those cowards attempted to extinguish that light from the world, but we will never allow it to be dampened.

"The American people will now demonstrate their resilience. America will show the world that in the face of tragedy it becomes stronger, and the American people become more united. As the sun rose this morning, the light of America shone stronger. Americans from all walks of life have come together in pursuit of the common mission supporting all necessary action to end the scourge of terrorism.

"Americans continue to search for survivors and to all civilians caught off guard. Our prayers go out to the victims, their families and the valiant rescue efforts.

The American people, Mr. Speaker, are a peaceful people. Americans do not seek to conquer other peoples or commit violence against others; but because of America’s way of life, prosperity and freedom, America and Americans are hated and envied by resentful forces of evil in the world.

The battle before us will be long and difficult, but the United States has the courage to fight and to do so again. Americans, united together, will send the cowardly terrorists shrieking in fear when they realize the resolve of the American people and the brilliance with which America’s light of liberty shines.

God bless this great Nation, a beacon of freedom.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he requests to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. STENHOLM).

Mr. STENHOLM. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of this resolution condemning the terrorist attacks against the United States.

Today, in the House of Representatives, feel the need to speak of the unspeakable: yesterday’s evil, perpetrated by cowardly forces who cannot muster the courage even to reveal their faces. Evil is difficult to speak about and yet, as yesterday’s events remind us, its horror calls forth responses which reveal even greater good, greater strength, greater wisdom than we knew possible.

It has been said repeatedly in the past 24 hours that America has been changed forever. There is much truth in that statement. Just as the attack on Pearl Harbor altered the psyche of the American people nearly 60 years ago, we cannot deny the loss of innocence and carefree confidence created by yesterday’s heinous deeds. Tragically, the horrendous loss of life of American civilians may even be exceeded when the final toll is tallied in New York City, Washington, and Pennsylvania. How can we possibly comfort all those who grieve those deaths or thank those who died trying to make our Nation safer and stronger?

But those dear losses are not the only changes which have been wrought in our Nation. Contrary to the terrorists’ intentions, their acts have also borne a new unity among the American people, a renewed sense of solidarity and commitment to each other. Folks in Michigan waited hours in lines to donate vital blood for victims in New York City. School children in Texas dressed in red, white and blue to support the uniformed troops and civilians killed at the Pentagon in Washington.

Here in Congress, we are changed. Each of us, regardless of party label or ideology, has set aside our differences to swear a unified commitment to supporting those most harmed, to relentlessly seeking the perpetrators of this act of war, and to bringing about a swift and just response. Both Democrat and Republican stand solidly behind our President as he leads us in all of those efforts.

And around the world, there is also a change—a new understanding of the threat which faces us from all civilization’s enemies as well as long-time allies across the world have expressed their sympathy and their willingness to stand with the United States in fighting the perpetrators of this horror.

Let us not forget, though, that while some things much remain the same. Our enemies stole American lives thinking that they could steal our American Spirit. They were wrong. Our hearts are indeed broken today but our spirits are not only intact, they are strengthened. Bricks and mortar may have been leveled but the American Spirit stands. The attempt to cut us down has only deepened our devotion to democracy, freedom and justice.

The beloved Twenty-Third Psalm asserts, “Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil.” These sacred words do not deny the existence of evil or pretend that we can be spared from facing it. But they remind us that we need not fear that evil. Why? Because God is with us, preparing the safe and proper way if we will follow.

Our enemies and those who harbor our enemies should understand what they have done. The tragedy which they have caused already is being transformed into unity and that unity will become strength. Perhaps the giant was sleeping. We became too accustomed to choosing convenience over security. We have tilted towards privacy over prudence. We became over-confident in our impenetrable shield. But make no mistake; the giant is now awake. Americans may need to make the sacrifices which a state of war requires but we are committed to making those sacrifices. This is war. It is not a war for territory or possessions but it is a war for democracy and freedom. It is a war for security and peace. It is a war which the united and civilized nations of the world will relentlessly pursue and win. September 11 will live in infamy but it will not die in impotence. Evil may be unspeakable but it will not be victorious.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from West Virginia (Mr. RAHALL), my friend and colleague.

Mr. RAHALL. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of this resolution of the condemnation of the heinous attack on our country.

Mr. Speaker, Southern West Virginia know loss. We hope and pray for the victims of these attacks and their families as other Americans have hoped and prayed for us in the past. Our nation’s motto is E Pluribus Unum: Out of many, one. Americans always display this unity best when disaster strikes our fellow citizens.

Yesterday’s attacks did not kill only Washingtonians and New Yorkers. The victims came from across this country. At least one family member was torn apart. Dr. Paul Ambrose, a talented and public-spirited young physician, was aboard one of the airplanes that the terrorists crashed. The sympathies of all America are with Ken Sharon Ambrose of Huntington, West Virginia, today.

We will avenge their loss.

America seeks peace, but it is not blind. The people who planned these attacks are out there, and we know that they still pursue their evilness. Their celebrations will be short, because America’s resolve is sure. I support the President’s vow to punish these murderers and those who give them shelter.

As the world marked the aftermath of the most vicious terrorist attack ever perpetrated on Americans and America, I ask the good Lord to give us the courage, wisdom and conviction to bring those responsible to justice.

Certainly, the horror of this attack has been matched only by the resolve of all Americans. It is time to mourn the dead. To care for the injured. But it is also time to plan for our future, and to take actions to insure that the lessons of this attack will not be lost. That those who perished will not have done so in vain.

America will persevere. We are not weakened by this attack, but rather, will grow stronger. Out of these flames of death, an even stronger American spirit will be born. And the beacon of freedom, of our Democratic institutions, will burn even brighter upon the world.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. REYES), my distinguished colleague.

Mr. REYES. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

Mr. Speaker, yesterday our Nation was attacked by cowards. I, like all of my colleagues, am equally outraged by this attack on the people of the United States. Today, our thoughts and prayers are with the victims and their families. As the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. HASTERT), the Speaker of the House, said yesterday, we as a Congress and as a government stand united.

Mr. Speaker, there is no question that this was an act of war. We must find those responsible and bring them to justice. We must do so swiftly, with the full might and power of the United States. We will find those responsible for these mass murders, and they will be punished.

We, likewise, must develop the response that will destroy the very system responsible for this attack on our freedom. The global terrorist organizations that take refuge in some nations across the world must be destroyed, and any nation who protects any terrorist network or who provides shelter or refuge to these terrorist networks are on notice that they will also be subjected to the justice and the might and power of the United States military if they continue to protect those responsible for these mass murders.

This attack was intended to bring down the most powerful Nation in the world, to paralyze our government and economy. And yet, this has not happened and they have failed. Last night, our President spoke from the Oval Office of the White House, and Secretary of Defense Donald Rumsfeld never actually left the Pentagon while those inside were the heroes of the rescue crews and consulting with the national security team. Last night, the world saw and heard representatives of the people of this Nation speaking with one voice. Today, we are all here on the floor of the House ready to continue our work. We will not allow cowards to shut us down.

No one will ever forget the images that we have all seen in the last 2 days. We must never forget those who lost their lives. My thoughts and prayers are with those rescuers working around the clock to save those trapped in the rubble of the World Trade Center and the Pentagon.

The events of Tuesday, September 11, 2001, have changed the face of America forever.

I have no doubt that we will respond to this crisis in a very American way . . . we will unite, we will defend our freedoms, we will persevere.

In closing let me commend all those first responders that worked so hard and have sacrificed so much, the police, the fire fighters, EMS and medical personnel and our own dedicated, committed and very professional Capitol Police.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from New York (Mr. REYNOLDS), a member of the Committee on Rules and a deputy whip.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. Speaker, no words can adequately express this Nation’s sense of loss and outrage over yesterday’s vicious, cowardly attack on two of our country’s most recognizable landmarks, one of which is in my home State of New York.

This was an attack not only on America, but as British Prime Minister Tony Blair remarked, on the free and democratic world.

The death toll of innocent Americans will certainly surpass that of Pearl Harbor, and as quickly and as assuredly as America came together to defeat fascism and imperialism at that time, we must quickly and decisively come together to defeat this enemy of a free and democratic world.

Many have said that after yesterday, the face of America will be changed forever. That may be true, but what will not change is America’s heart, America’s character, and America’s continued belief in the principles, ideals and values that have made this country the freest, most prosperous Nation the world has ever seen.

Like many in this Chamber and across America, I wish the families of the dead, the missing, and the injured of friends, in both public service and the private sector, who worked in New York’s World Trade Center; and I pray for them and their families, all of the victims and families in New York, the Pentagon, the hijacked flights, and for those who have put themselves in harm’s way, our police and our fire fighters, military and emergency crews, and countless volunteers, that they will carry out their mission safely and successfully.

It is true that we have suffered tremendous loss of life and property at
Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from New York (Mr. TOWNS).

Mr. TOWN. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of this resolution, and my prayers go out to the families.

Mr. Speaker, I rise today in support of H.J. Resolution 61, the Joint House-Senate resolution expressing the sense of the Senate and the House of Representatives regarding the attack on the World Trade Center and the Pentagon.

The forces of darkness have broken through the heart of our capital over 36 hours ago. Its opening pages likely not know how many innocent lives were brought to bear to find you in whatever corner of the world that you may hide. You have no safe harbor. We will see that justice is served.

God bless America.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from New York (Mr. TOWNS).

Mr. TOWN. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of this resolution, and my prayers go out to the families.

Mr. Speaker, I rise today in support of H.J. Resolution 61, the Joint House-Senate resolution expressing the sense of the Senate and the House of Representatives regarding the attack on the World Trade Center and the Pentagon.

The forces of darkness have broken through the heart of our capital over 36 hours ago. Its opening pages likely not know how many innocent lives were brought to bear to find you in whatever corner of the world that you may hide. You have no safe harbor. We will see that justice is served.

God bless America.
prevented a repeat of the tragedies at the Pentagon and the World Trade Center? Was this plane intended to destroy this magnificent Capitol of democracy that we are sitting in today? Do we who labor here owe countless passsengers or crew our very lives?

We will always be grateful for the efforts of these men and women who lost their lives in the line of duty who will not be going home to their families, and who paid the ultimate price just to help others. We pray for their families and we pray for their loved ones.

As a Nation, we will mourn the loss of our neighbors, family members, and friends, and as a Nation, we will avenge their deaths. We will not let this despicable act go unchallenged. Those responsible will pay an awesome price.

In many ways, our Nation will forever be changed by these disasters, but they will in our heart dim in the spirit of the fewest people who have never walked the face of this Earth, the American people.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 2 minutes to my friend and colleague, the gentlewoman from California (Mrs. DAVIS).

Mrs. DAVIS of California. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me.

I rise in strong support of the resolution. My heart goes out to everyone who experienced a loss, and to those still waiting for news about their loved ones. To the families of the 278 heroes, the firefighters and police who are missing and presumed dead, I offer my deepest condolences.

I also offer my support and praise to the rescue workers and countless volunteers who are searching, as we speak, for survivors and victims. Like many of my colleagues and many Americans, my first reaction was to assess how safe my family, especially my son, daughter-in-law, and my grandson Henry, who live in New York City.

Though my news was reassuring, hundreds, even thousands of people did not enjoy that same fortune. Yesterday’s tragic events tore at the heart of America’s fabric, and I believe that every American’s life was affected. It is from that very fabric of community that we derive our real strength, not just will in no way erode energy or from our military might.

Mr. Speaker, we are strong and will remain strong. The attacks serve as a stark reminder of the dangers faced by a free country, and especially by those whose lives are devoted to protecting our country, whether at home or abroad. We must never forget the threats that exist.

Anger and rage and evil roam the Earth, and at times these forces continue. Eons ago, millions of Americans started their morning routine. Americans went to their places of work. They boarded airplanes, just like every other day. Then these routines were violently interrupted.

Yesterday showcased the worst and best of humanity. The precision strikes describe a foe that clearly calculated this move against the very heart of our community. Yet, Americans are able to rise above the grief and horror.

To my colleagues and to all Americans, I say that now is not a time to abandon our priorities. As we work to-together to heal, we must continue to look forward and work to ensure a world safe for our children and grandchildren. We need to let our grief and our anger and our outrage work for us, not control us. Let us act with the careful and considered judgment that we as Americans possess.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr.
Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from California (Mr. LEWIS), the chairman of the Subcommittee on Defense of the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. LEWIS of California. Mr. Spea-er, I rise today joining my colleagues, Democrats and Republicans alike, in support of this resolution.

Mr. Speaker, the American people need to know just how dangerous today’s world is.
Many have presumed that with the passing of the Soviet Union and the East-West confrontation that peace was at hand. That without these formidable enemies, America no longer had to worry about attacks.

Tuesday’s tragedy sends a message—loud and clear—that there are those who have no concern for innocent human life. They will kill with malice, with no other goal except to prove they can strike at the world’s most powerful symbols of freedom. This was not a political statement or a military attack. It was murder, an act that is abhorred by all nations and faiths. We must do whatever is needed to protect our homeland from such unconscionable criminals.

This nation is in shock and mourning. Americans are too big-hearted to understand why a group of inhuman thugs would bring these attacks on thousands of innocent victims. We will spend this day rallying to support the families of those who perished and the brave rescuers who are desperately trying to find any who might have survived. We will show our resolve that America will rise to this challenge and overcome it to remain the beacon of liberty and optimism.

In the days to come, we will dedicate ourselves to finding who planned and executed this despicable act, and prove to them that we will do everything in our power to bring them to justice and ensure it can never happen again. To those who shared the cowardice of the hijackers: We will not rest until justice is served, until those who committed these criminals in the past or consider sheltering them in the future; We will hold you accountable and make it clear that it is a terrible mistake to support attacks on America.

For the future, all Americans must realize that we are under attack, and we must accept that we must commit the resources necessary to meet the threat of those whose fanaticism blinds themselves to their humanity.
Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Tennessee (Mr. WAMP), a member of the Committee on Appropriations and a member of the Helsinki Commission.

Mr. WAMP. Mr. Speaker, we know that fear is one of the most powerful forces in the world today. Yesterday, the lowest of the low, the dregs of our international community, used fear to carry out plots on all of humanity. Today, we claim the truth that one force is greater than fear. That is love.

Throughout the ages, love has conquered fear over and over again. Our love for our fellow man will overcome fear of these outrageous criminals. Our love of freedom will overcome our fear of tyranny. Our love of country will overcome our fear of terrorism. Our love of God will overcome our fear of Satan himself. Our love of God will overcome our fear of evil. Our love of peace will overcome our fear of war.

Mr. Speaker, today we stand together, our President, the United States Congress, and 270 million people, mourning those lost, comforting those left behind, praying for our Nation at this dark hour.

Yesterday, our House Chaplain, Father Daniel Coughlin, prayed that “In God we trust,” our Nation’s motto, but that today, may it be our strength.

Much of our character has been born from adversity. An even stronger America must rise from the ashes of September 11, 2001 CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—HOUSE 16789 these fiery crashes so that good does once again triumph over evil.

May the peace of God that passeth all understanding be with us now and forever.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I am very pleased to yield 2 minutes to my dear friend and colleague, the gentleman from California (Ms. PELOSI), the distinguished ranking member of our Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence.

Ms. PELOSI. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me.

Mr. Speaker, yesterday was a day from hell, a day when terrorists who do not value human life engaged in a demonic act which has touched everyone in America; indeed, in the world.

Today, over and over again, in contrast, we hear our colleagues express the courage of our fellow citizens.

And indeed, in the spirit of the American people, God has blessed America. God blessed us with the courage of the public safety workers, including hundreds of firemen who plunged into a burning building to help people escape, risking their own lives; indeed, sacrificing them.

God blessed America with the compassion of the American people across our country, giving blood and offering to help in so many ways.

God blessed America with the determination of our public servants in this building, our Capitol Police, the military, and so many others who are helping this government go forth, foiling, foiling the plot of these terrorists who want to create panic in our country and stop our government.

The magnificent city of New York, which has led our country in so many ways, will rise like the great Phoenix and will be stronger than ever. People across the country all have a special fondness for New York. It is the center of commerce and the arts, and its beautiful and magnificent diversity is a source of strength to our great country. The energy of New York will not be deterred.

That will be our message: New York rising from the Phoenix, leading the recovery of our entire country from this terrible tragedy. That is the message to the cruel, cowardly terrorists: God has blessed America.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. PITTS), a member of the Committee on International Relations.

Mr. PITTS. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H.J. Res. 61.

Terrorists have declared war on America. What happened yesterday was not merely a crime, it was an act of war. It was a massive attack by a foreign power, a terrorist organization on American soil.

We are used to calling terrorist attacks the senseless acts of cowards. But this was a sophisticated, calculated and coordinated attack by deadly savages; trained terrorists. The perpetrators knew precisely what they were doing, why they were doing it, and how to do it.

At Pearl Harbor, over 2,000 Americans were killed in the attack. Many more than that died on Tuesday. Innocent victims perished for no other reason than that they were Americans. We did not ask for this war. America has worked tirelessly for world peace since its founding; peace in Middle East, in Europe, in Africa, in Asia, and in Latin America. But America stands for more than just peace. America stands for freedom and democracy.

We have proved to the world that freedom and democracy work. But many haters of freedom remain in the world. Those who continue to misuse ideologies like radical Islam and Stalinism despise freedom because they do not like to be challenged. They cannot stand the light of day, and so they kill. And we are their target because America is the preeminent champion of freedom. They believe because we are free we are also weak. But they are wrong.

We will find out who the terrorists are. We must seek them out and punish them severely. This is a time, without apology, to bring the full measure of military force to bear on these terrorist organizations.

As thousands of bodies are pulled from the rubble in New York and Virginia, we are watching more than a tragedy; we are witnesses to a turning point in American policy. No longer will we coddle terrorists and seek merely to bring them into courtrooms. Instead, we will treat them as the military enemies they are. We will seek justice of the kind seen in war.

On Tuesday, terrorists declared war on America. It is a war they will lose. America will make sure of it. Freedom will prevail.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. ROTHMAN).

Mr. ROTHMAN. Mr. Speaker, today all Americans must pray with one voice; pray for those innocents killed in yesterday’s cowardly attacks, for those families torn asunder by this evil, for those rescuers, police, fire, and health workers putting their lives at risk.

Let us all raise our voices today in one American prayer, then we will bury our dead and we will care for our injured and all those affected by this tragedy. We will pick up the pieces as one great nation, and together we will have our justice with a sure and mighty sword.

To the terrorists who conspired in this horrific crime, to those who harbor those terrorists, know this: you are America’s mortal enemies. America is the strongest country in the world. We have the will, the resources, and the power; and we will defeat you. We will hunt you down like the evil murderers that you are.

In doing so, we will be demanding the assistance of every government in the world. Those who help us, they will be our friends. Those who do not help us, we will consider our enemies.

With one voice, America says to the cowardly terrorists and their supporters, we Americans are still here. You have not stopped America. You have not stopped freedom. You have not stopped what a great people have spent 225 years building, the light of hope and humanity and liberty for all the people of the world, the United States of America. Those who came before us had to fight and die for their Nation and her freedoms; from Lexington and Concord to Gettysburg, from the Alamo to Omaha Beach, from the World Trade Center to the Pentagon.

Now, today, it is up to us, this generation of the greatest nation on Earth, to be ready to answer the call for freedom. We are ready to answer that call.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey, Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Florida (Mr. YOUNG), the distinguished chairman of the full Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. YOUNG of Florida, Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time, and I want to compliment him and the ranking member and the chairman of the committee for having introduced this resolution. It is important that the Congress, the House, the Senate, the President of the United States speak in one solid voice that we will not now or ever tolerate the type of terrorist activities that we saw brought upon our shores yesterday.

Today, and numerous visits with those dealing with this tragedy. One of the visits I made today was to the Pentagon. I visited there last night. The Pentagon was still burning, and there are still some electrical fires today in the Pentagon. But standing there in the rubble and recognizing what happened there, recognizing how many bodies were still entombed somewhere in that building, I might tell my colleagues that it causes a great emotional effect on this Member, and I think anyone there.

I would like to say that the firefighters, the rescue people who are out there, the Red Cross, just everybody involved have done a magnificent job in trying to deal with this terrible, terrible tragedy.

It is going to be fairly expensive to rebuild that section of the Pentagon that is going to have to be rebuilt, and Congress has to realize that. As I listened to our Members after Member standing here in the well condemning terrorism and standing strong for our country, because our country was attacked, this Congress to a man and to a woman, Republican and Democrat, have made a declaration that we are not going to let the hijackers get away with some immediate reaction from us.

The President has asked for some funding to deal with the immediate issues, the immediate damages that have been done here at our Pentagon in New York, and the terrible tragedy was unbelievable. And I would announce to the Members that, after having worked with the President's budget office today, the President's office, and with the appropriation leaders of the House and Senate in both parties, tomorrow I will introduce a supplemental appropriations bill that would give the President authority to move strongly, quickly, and swiftly. To not only begin to rebuild and recover from the damages that have been done to our people, our friends and our neighbors, but also to give him additional funding for airport security, which obviously was violated by these hijackers being able to take over four of our major airline aircraft. He would have additional funds for counterterrorism activities, and he would have the money to add additional assets to hunt down, to search out, to find, to discover and to punish those who were responsible for this dastardly act.

It is my intention, Mr. Speaker, that tomorrow morning we will introduce this bill, and I believe that we will be able to actually consider it on the floor tomorrow before we adjourn for the day. I would hope that, and as I listened to the Members who are speaking out so strongly today, that we will again speak out strongly as we pass this resolution to guarantee the world that we as the Congress, the President, all of our people, are together in this determination; that we are not going to take this sitting down, and we are going to protect our country and our people from terrorists acts.

Mr. LANTOS of Texas, Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from South Carolina (Mr. SPRATT), the ranking member of our Committee on the Budget.

Mr. SPRATT. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

Yesterday, Mr. Speaker, was a dark day in the history of our country. Today, we are bloodied but not bowed. We are a country united. Here in Congress, the Democrats and Republicans, we are Americans, and we have closed ranks behind our President.

We come here in this hallowed hall of democracy to express the grief and proceed to further our cause for the victims of yesterday's heinous attacks and their families, and we come together resolved to see that their loss will be avenged and never repeated.

These attacks were not just vicious crimes committed against innocent people. As many have already said, they were acts of war against the United States of America, and we must respond accordingly. We should spare no effort in tracking down these culprits and their cohorts, wherever they may be found, and we will administer justice swift and severe; so severely that even fanatics like these see that there is no gain from such violence, not when it is committed against the United States of America.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. GOODLATTE), a member of the Committees on Agriculture; Education and the Workforce; and the Judiciary.

Mr. GOODLATTE. Mr. Speaker, as we adopt this resolution today condemning the attacks against the United States, words cannot adequately express the sorrow and anger we feel at this trying time. Our hearts grieve for the families of those who have been lost to these acts of terrorism, but the depth of that grief is difficult to fully comprehend.

The sight of thousands of people spontaneously gathering at places of worship yesterday gives us just a glimpse of the compassion in the hearts of the folks around the country. But beneath that compassion burns a white hot anger. It burns with a fury that begs to be unleashed on the perpetrators of this act of war. Because we must make no mistake about it, September 11, 2001, was the clarion call to arms in a new war against terrorism. It will be unlike any war America has ever fought. The enemy is nameless, faceless, and operates without borders.

We use words like barbaric and cowardly to describe this enemy, but we must recognize that this enemy recognizes and adapts with cunning and sophistication. They have the advantage of stealth, and we must recognize that this enemy will continue their efforts until they understand that America will never, ever cease to be a beacon of hope and freedom to the world.

To those responsible for these acts of evil committed yesterday, look closely at the American faces you see on the screen. Look at the firefighters and police who risked and gave their lives yesterday. Look at the faces of the medical personnel who work through the danger and exhaustion to save lives. Look at the faces of the many Americans who are waiting in line for hours to give blood or donate their time and energies to defeating you. And look at the faces here in this House, united in our resolve. We are defenders of a Nation built on principles that can never be destroyed and never be extinguished.

We will find you. We will defeat you. And at that point, you will know America’s dedication to ensuring that freedom and democracy will ultimately prevail over evil and terror.

God bless America.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Florida (Mr. Boyd).

Mr. BOYD. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H.J.Res. 61.

Mr. Speaker, yesterday, our great Nation suffered its greatest tragedy of a single day since the Civil War. I join all other Americans who are shocked and outraged by the terrorist hijackings and attacks on the World Trade Center and on the Pentagon.

With this attack, the United States has entered a new era. We have been thrust into a new type of conflict and face an implacable enemy who will not hesitate to destroy innocent life.

CIA Director George Tenet has said in testimony before Congress that terrorist attacks are impossible to prevent. We must gain certainty where or when terrorists might strike again. But this incomprehensible tragedy is a terrible reminder that we must take the threat of terrorism seriously.

Let there be no mistake—the U.S. Government will investigate, pursue, and seek convictions of the criminals who were behind this cowardly attack. These terrorist attacks were truly acts of war, and we will respond forcefully and appropriately. The United States will take action against the terrorists and punish the governments that support and harbor such criminals.

We must pull together as a country to grieve for all those we have lost, to care for all those who were injured and support all those families who have been affected by this tragedy. We must pull together as one people to protect our nation and our way of life.

Mr. Speaker, yesterday, our great Nation suffered its greatest tragedy of a single day since the Civil War. I join all other Americans who are shocked and outraged by the terrorist hijackings and attacks on the World Trade Center and on the Pentagon.

With this attack, the United States has entered a new era. We have been thrust into a new type of conflict and face an implacable enemy who will not hesitate to destroy innocent life. We must gain certainty where or when terrorists might strike again. But this incomprehensible tragedy is a terrible reminder that we must take the threat of terrorism seriously.

Let there be no mistake—the U.S. Government will investigate, pursue, and seek convictions of the criminals who were behind this cowardly attack. These terrorist attacks were truly acts of war, and we will respond forcefully and appropriately. The United States will take action against the terrorists and punish the governments that support and harbor such criminals.

We must pull together as a country to grieve for all those we have lost, to care for all those who were injured and support all those families who have been affected by this tragedy. We must pull together as one people to protect our nation and our way of life.

America’s dedication to ensuring that freedom and democracy will ultimately prevail over evil and terror.

God bless America.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Florida (Mr. Boyd).

Mr. BOYD. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H.J.Res. 61.

Mr. Speaker, yesterday, our great Nation suffered its greatest tragedy of a single day since the Civil War. I join all other Americans who are shocked and outraged by the terrorist hijackings and attacks on the World Trade Center and on the Pentagon.

With this attack, the United States has entered a new era. We have been thrust into a new type of conflict and face an implacable enemy who will not hesitate to destroy innocent life. We must gain certainty where or when terrorists might strike again. But this incomprehensible tragedy is a terrible reminder that we must take the threat of terrorism seriously.

Let there be no mistake—the U.S. Government will investigate, pursue, and seek convictions of the criminals who were behind this cowardly attack. These terrorist attacks were truly acts of war, and we will respond forcefully and appropriately. The United States will take action against the terrorists and punish the governments that support and harbor such criminals.

We must pull together as a country to grieve for all those we have lost, to care for all those who were injured and support all those families who have been affected by this tragedy. We must pull together as one people to protect our nation and our way of life.

America’s dedication to ensuring that freedom and democracy will ultimately prevail over evil and terror.

God bless America.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Florida (Mr. Boyd).

Mr. BOYD. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H.J.Res. 61.

Mr. Speaker, yesterday, our great Nation suffered its greatest tragedy of a single day since the Civil War. I join all other Americans who are shocked and outraged by the terrorist hijackings and attacks on the World Trade Center and on the Pentagon.

With this attack, the United States has entered a new era. We have been thrust into a new type of conflict and face an implacable enemy who will not hesitate to destroy innocent life. We must gain certainty where or when terrorists might strike again. But this incomprehensible tragedy is a terrible reminder that we must take the threat of terrorism seriously.

Let there be no mistake—the U.S. Government will investigate, pursue, and seek convictions of the criminals who were behind this cowardly attack. These terrorist attacks were truly acts of war, and we will respond forcefully and appropriately. The United States will take action against the terrorists and punish the governments that support and harbor such criminals.

We must pull together as a country to grieve for all those we have lost, to care for all those who were injured and support all those families who have been affected by this tragedy. We must pull together as one people to protect our nation and our way of life.

America’s dedication to ensuring that freedom and democracy will ultimately prevail over evil and terror.

God bless America.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Florida (Mr. Boyd).

Mr. BOYD. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H.J.Res. 61.

Mr. Speaker, yesterday, our great Nation suffered its greatest tragedy of a single day since the Civil War. I join all other Americans who are shocked and outraged by the terrorist hijackings and attacks on the World Trade Center and on the Pentagon.

With this attack, the United States has entered a new era. We have been thrust into a new type of conflict and face an implacable enemy who will not hesitate to destroy innocent life. We must gain certainty where or when terrorists might strike again. But this incomprehensible tragedy is a terrible reminder that we must take the threat of terrorism seriously.

Let there be no mistake—the U.S. Government will investigate, pursue, and seek convictions of the criminals who were behind this cowardly attack. These terrorist attacks were truly acts of war, and we will respond forcefully and appropriately. The United States will take action against the terrorists and punish the governments that support and harbor such criminals.

We must pull together as a country to grieve for all those we have lost, to care for all those who were injured and support all those families who have been affected by this tragedy. We must pull together as one people to protect our nation and our way of life.

America’s dedication to ensuring that freedom and democracy will ultimately prevail over evil and terror.

God bless America.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Florida (Mr. Boyd).

Mr. BOYD. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H.J.Res. 61.

Mr. Speaker, yesterday, our great Nation suffered its greatest tragedy of a single day since the Civil War. I join all other Americans who are shocked and outraged by the terrorist hijackings and attacks on the World Trade Center and on the Pentagon.

With this attack, the United States has entered a new era. We have been thrust into a new type of conflict and face an implacable enemy who will not hesitate to destroy innocent life. We must gain certainty where or when terrorists might strike again. But this incomprehensible tragedy is a terrible reminder that we must take the threat of terrorism seriously.

Let there be no mistake—the U.S. Government will investigate, pursue, and seek convictions of the criminals who were behind this cowardly attack. These terrorist attacks were truly acts of war, and we will respond forcefully and appropriately. The United States will take action against the terrorists and punish the governments that support and harbor such criminals.

We must pull together as a country to grieve for all those we have lost, to care for all those who were injured and support all those families who have been affected by this tragedy. We must pull together as one people to protect our nation and our way of life.

America’s dedication to ensuring that freedom and democracy will ultimately prevail over evil and terror.

God bless America.
will show the world that our ideals will not be compromised by those who believe they can scare us into submission. I truly believe that goodness will prevail and heal America, just as we did, six years later.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentlewoman from Illinois (Mrs. BIGGERT), the Ranking Member of the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure.

Mrs. BIGGERT. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in strong support of House Joint Resolution 8. Like all Americans, the very first thing I did as the tragedy unfolded was to call my family to ensure that everyone was safe, and to assure them that I was safe.

My heart and my prayers go out to all those families who did not get that reassuring phone call they hoped for. Today will be the hardest day for them as shock melts to grief, and grief unfolds to renewed resolve.

Today is the hardest day for us as a Nation. As we stated in this resolution, this day stands as a national day of unity and mourning. It is not a day for anger; it is a day of resolve: cold, calculated, patient and unemotional and universal resolve.

In passing this resolution today, what we as a body say to Americans, to the world community, and to those who perpetrated or aided these crimes, is simple: never forget and never again.

Never will we forget the terror and tragedy of this day. Just as our children and grandchildren ask, Where was responsible for the TWA 800 explosion, spurred by initial concerns that a terrorist act was responsible for the TWA 800 explosion, President Clinton organized another commission, the 1996 White House Commission on Aviation Safety and Security, which made 31 recommendations for enhancing aviation security. Again, Congress acted swiftly and, in the 1996 FAA Reauthorization Act, included measures to intensify security.

The universe to be protected is enormous and growing—666 million passenger enplanements annually, expected to grow to over 1 billion by 2010, with several hundred million pieces of luggage to screen.

Likewise, the magnitude of the threat is growing and changing. Between 1961 and 1972, there were over 134 domestic hijackings. In 1972, in response to this rash of hijackings, FAA ordered metal detector searches of passengers and x-rays of carry-on bags. In 1974, the Congress imposed these requirements legislatively with the passage of the Anti-Hijacking Act of 1974.

As we installed metal detectors to find guns, the threat changed to bombs aboard aircraft. Following Pan-Am Flight 103, and based on the Commission's recommendations, significant steps have been taken to invest and deploy new techniques and equipment to detect items that pose an aviation security threat.

Since the passage of the 1996 FAA Reauthorizations, Congress has provided more than $350 million for deployment of security equipment, and over $250 million in research funds. To date, the FAA has installed 92 FAA-certified explosives detection machines at 35 airports, 553 explosives trace detection devices at 84 U.S. and foreign airports, and 18 advanced technology bulk explosives detection x-ray machines at 8 airports. In addition, FAA has deployed 38 computer-based training device platforms at 37 airports. The airlines have also invested heavily in security equipment.

We have made great strides in aviation security. However, I have long expressed my concern about reports that, although the FAA is deploying this much needed equipment, there is no long-term strategy for integrating that equipment into a seamless security system.

It is also of paramount importance to maintain passenger-screening checkpoints and ensure that the screeners who operate them are qualified. Millions of passengers and pieces of baggage pass through our airports each day. However, high turnover, low wages, and lack of adequate training hinder security screener performance. Both the General Accounting Office and the Office of Inspector General have uniformly described security screener performance as the "weak link" in aviation system. I believe that the FAA and the airlines share the responsibility to ensure optimal performance of security screeners.

We have also received reports from the Office of Inspector General regarding the inefficacy of FAA's background investigative procedures and the vulnerabilities in airport access control.

Congress responded to these concerns on two fronts: the Wendell H. Ford Aviation Investment and Reform Act (AIR 21), P.L. 106–181, authorized $5 million annually for the transportation and the Screening Systems Test and Evaluate Innovative Aviation Security Systems. The bill also authorizes such sums as may be necessary to develop and improve security screener training programs; and such sums as are necessary to hire additional inspectors to enhance air cargo security programs.

Last year, Congress passed the Airport Security Improvement Act, P.L. 106–528, which requires criminal history record checks for those individuals who apply for a security sensitive position as a screener or a screener supervisor and adds several crimes to the list of crimes that disqualify an individual from holding such a position. In addition, the law requires the expansion of FAA's electronic fingerprint transmission pilot project into an aviation-industry-wide program to allow for quick turnaround on criminal background checks, and includes provisions to strengthen access control requirements.

The FAA must take a holistic view toward its security responsibilities to ensure that all areas of vulnerability are addressed. However, the airlines and airports also share in that responsibility—and they should not put costs above passenger safety.

We must also be more aggressive in our intelligence gathering, evaluation, and dissemination. This is the most challenging aspect of our aviation security network. It is difficult to penetrate these highly secretive organizations that operate on a war-like footing. Counter-terrorism also requires renewed higher-level coordination through Interpol, with our allies, and with other nations like Russia and China, as the Pan-Am 103 commission recommended eleven years ago. The skills of terrorists have stepped up several levels since the Commission's 1990 report. We must ensure that our counter-intelligence rises to meet that threat.

With the appropriate counter-intelligence efforts and security implemented to the fullest extent, our citizens can forever enjoy the freedom of travel that this great nation provides to the envy of the rest of the world.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Illinois (Mrs. BIGGERT), the Ranking Member of the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure.

Mrs. BIGGERT. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in strong support of House Joint Resolution 8. Like all Americans, the very first thing I did as the tragedy unfolded was to call my family to ensure that everyone was safe, and to assure them that I was safe.

My heart and my prayers go out to all those families who did not get that reassuring phone call they hoped for. Today will be the hardest day for them as shock melts to grief, and grief unfolds to renewed resolve.
September 11, 2001

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—HOUSE

were you when Pearl Harbor was bombed by Japan or when President Kennedy was shot by Oswald, so too will they ask where were we when America was attacked by the stealth enemy of cowardice and terror, now vanquished.

Never again will Americans face the horror and the loss that we feel today. Never will we be lulled into a false sense of complacency that the world is safe or that national security can ever take a back seat to other more pressing priorities.

Cynics say this is a resolution that is nonbinding, that it holds not the weight of law nor the power of resources. Cynics are wrong.

Mr. Speaker, there is no more important statement this body has made or will make that holds the strength and meaning of our vote today. This measure is an expression of support for our people, our values, our President. This measure codifies our commitment and unites us in our pledge: never forget, never again.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from California (Ms. ESHOO), my good neighbor, dear friend and distinguished colleague.

Ms. ESHOO. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from California (Mr. LANTOS) for yielding the time.

Mr. Speaker, we have all come onto the floor of the distinguished House and looked at whomever is in the chair, and then raised our eyes just a little higher and looked at the words that are above, “In God we trust.”

I think it is very important today for our Nation to look at those words again and repeat them, either out loud or silently, as a prayer for our Nation, for those whose lives have been taken, in God we trust that they are living in the face of time this evening, and in whose families, in God we trust; and ourselves, that we will help to heal another; and that in God we trust, have entrusted our lives in the noble Americans that we have seen on the face of television that have moved to take care of those that have fallen.

So in God we trust today in the ingredients of our democracy, that are imprinted and engraved in the wood of the bench here that surrounds the place where the President comes to address the Nation, and where the Speaker, in our democracy in this House of Representatives, resides. It says “Union,” and we believe in our Union.

Mr. Speaker, I recall the ingredients of our democracy. I say this, the entire world should pay attention to what the ingredients of our democracy are: union, and make no mistake about it, we are unified; in justice, that is at the desk, and those who are less than animals who have done this to our people will be brought to justice; for tolerance, our tolerance as we debate and that we will bring tolerance to what these outcomes are; to liberty and understanding that there are those who have to pay a price for that; and for peace, peace of mind, peace in this land.

Mr. Speaker, in God we trust that we will honor the ingredients, that we will honor those whose lives have been taken, that we honor the Capitol Police tonight, and our staffs, I would like to thank because they have worked very hard to take care of us, and to all of us we must say in God we trust that our deliberations will bring about the results that this magnificent Nation and our democracy deserves.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Colorado (Mr. HEPLEY), a member of the Committee on Armed Services.

Mr. HEPLEY. Mr. Speaker, yesterday’s devastating terrorist attacks will forever be seared on our individual and national memories. It was an unreal event and it left pain in our people and our Nation. When I awoke this morning, it was with the sad realization that the attacks of yesterday actually occurred and claimed so many innocent lives.

Mr. Speaker, I passed the Pentagon on my way to work just a few minutes before the plane hit. This morning when I drove by the Pentagon, it was a very real and very different scene. The smoke was still pouring out, and the water was pouring in; but in a glimmer of hope, the American flag continued to wave on the grounds of the Pentagon. The American spirit will not be disabled.

It is shameful that thousands of American civilians gave their lives for a cause they did not know, for an issue they were not concerned. An attack against civilian targets of women and children is an attack against our peace, and without prejudice is beyond comprehension in our modern day, civilized world.

I mourn for the dead and extend my sympathy to the families of the afflicted. In this hour of bereavement, I extend my gratitude and praise for the men and women who risk their lives and continue to risk their lives to find the victims and rescue the injured. The men and women who serve to protect our society cannot pause to grieve, for their job is far from complete. To the families who grieve, the citizens who serve and a Nation that questions, I cannot underscore enough the desire of this Congress to find the perpetrators and inflict punishment.

Mr. Speaker, there will be an enormous price to pay, both to the cowards behind these horrendous acts and to any notion that hatred is a means. Yesterday, the United States of America was the greatest Nation on the face of the Earth.

Today, the United States of America is the greatest Nation on the face of the Earth, and by the grace of God we will remain so.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from California (Ms. WOOLSEY), my friend and colleague.

Ms. WOOLSEY. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from California for yielding me the time.

Mr. Speaker, it is with profound sorrow and sympathy that I join my colleagues to condemn the horrific acts of terrorism yesterday in New York City and here in our own Nation’s capital.

Mr. Speaker, in the face of this attack, our Nation has a solemn and defining responsibility: to offer our support and console. To those who selflessly and bravely offered themselves in our Nation’s greatest time of need, we thank you.

Mr. Speaker, when we were called to offer a message to those guilty of those disastrous acts. Our message is that their acts of destroying the World Trade Center, damaging the Pentagon, and using U.S. airlines to carry out their brutal deeds of death, those actions fully intending to destroy our democracy through terror, death, and disability will not succeed. This Nation’s steadfast determination to support democracy will not bow to terrorism.

We will instead reach out, reach out to the victims and their families. We will rebuild our cities and we will rebuild our confidence. We will not let the forces of evil prevail or go unpunished.

Yet, as we try to make sense of yesterday’s senseless activities, we will remember that our Nation’s response to these acts will also leave an indelible mark on American people. Determining an appropriate response and bringing those responsible for the attacks to justice means that we must temper our absolute resolve with wisdom, and Mr. Speaker, in God we trust.

I pay to support democracy will not bow to terrorism.

First, we can be divided, cast blame, point fingers and dissolve into partisanship, or we can unify, pull together, and strive to be one Nation.
The whole is always greater than the sum of its parts. Unity of purpose is critical.

Second, we can become hesitant and fearful. We can be realistic but show great courage. The President's declaration that those who harbor terrorists will be treated as terrorists is significant. Our pursuit of those responsible for the attack must be focused and relentless. Yet we must be certain that innocent people are not harmed in the process.

Third, adversity is a great teacher. We can learn from this event and become more vigilant and better prepared. Nation. It is critical that we correct flaws in our national security. It is equally important that these corrections are made without acrimony and in a constructive atmosphere.

Fourth, we can demonstrate the vitality of our faith or we can yield to cynicism and despair. It has often been said that America is great because America is good. We were founded as one Nation under God, and our faith in God has undergirded our Nation since its inception. Hopefully an event such as this will underscore our reliance upon a power beyond and our faith in God has undergirded our resistance to suicide attacks.

I firmly believe that the biggest risk to our country, to all Americans, is not some missile from some rogue Nation but terrorism.

Make no mistake, Mr. Speaker, both are threats, but as a country we need to get our priorities right. We need to devote more funds to counterintelligence support and infrastructure and education of terrorist activities. Yesterday was an assault on the freedom of every American, and we must come together and offer our support.

Today, we grieve those who have lost their lives. As we pray for their families, we speak in one voice to condemn these attacks. Today, the healing must begin.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. SWEENEY), in order for the managers to better manage time, the Chair wishes to inform Members that the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. SMITH) has 50 minutes remaining, the gentleman from California (Mr. LANTOS) has 31 minutes.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Missouri (Mr. GRAVES), a member of the Committee on Agriculture.

Mr. GRAVES. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in support of this resolution. This is a solemn moment in our Nation's history. American men and women, civilians and soldiers, firefighters and police, mothers and fathers, were slain yesterday for a cause so terrible, so heinous, and so despicable that we find it completely unimaginable.

Today, we struggle as a Nation to find meaning and hope in a seemingly hopeless and completely senseless act. In the days to come, America will be united, shoulder to shoulder, in a struggle to meet the challenges of a world that is a little less safe, a little scarier and far less predictable. Nevertheless, we will unite in the defense of our neighbors and our friends who have lost their lives, their loved ones, and their friends through these acts of terror.

We will unite, resolved to find the terrorists and those that harbor them and bring them to justice. We will unite in retaliation for a war that has been brought to our soil. And, Mr. Speaker, we will prevail.

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—HOUSE
September 11, 2001

The Speaker. Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Michigan (Mr. KNOLLENBERG), a member of the Subcommittee on Foreign Operations of the Committee on Appropriations.
September 11, 2001

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—HOUSE 16795

Mr. KNOLLENBERG. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to offer on behalf of the people of the 11th Congressional District of Michigan our thoughts and prayers for each and every one affected by the tragedy. Words alone cannot express the sorrow that America feels. Nor can words express the anger America feels. These attacks were a cowardly assault on innocent Americans, and this will not stand.

Make no mistake, these attacks were an act of war. All of us stand firmly behind the President in his efforts to identify and punish the perpetrators of these evil deeds. No one will rest until justice is done on those who committed these heinous crimes and on those who provided aid and comfort to those criminals.

Let me be clear. America’s relationships with our allies and those who would be our allies will be defined by their reactions to these events and their support for our efforts to bring these terrorists and their accomplices to justice.

Our Nation’s capital has suffered as well. I have been in touch with the city’s leadership to assess their needs. As chairman of the Subcommittee on the District of Columbia of the Committee on Appropriations, I will do what I can to ensure that it has the resources it needs to be as safe as possible.

Yesterday, we saw the worst of humanity. But it is the better angels of our nature that will prevail. Terrorism tries to defeat us with fear. Judging by the response of all Americans, fear is not winning.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. DOGGETT).

Mr. DOGGETT. Mr. Speaker, against this backdrop of an unfolding and unforgettable horror, we draw our loved ones a little closer. Let our prayers comfort those in pain and our gratitude sustain those who rescue and protect and heal. As our grief yields to anger, we unite in support of a swift response, commensurate to the evil, targeted against the guilty, sufficient to deter others who would visit terror on our shores.

The words of President Bush have been well chosen; his response has been firm, but measured. All of us want to join the President with a bipartisan display of national unity, just as we did last evening on the steps of this Capitol. As President Bush well understands, nothing good would be accomplished by attacking the innocent based on mere suspicion.

In today’s world, there can be no absolute security, no impenetrable “Fortress America.” For as long as tyrants exist, they will challenge and demonize the United States because of our ideas of freedom and liberty. We can only dedicate ourselves to determining how this terrible attack occurred, redouble our efforts to protect our families from the greatest dangers, and ensure that only the guilty bear our retribution.

As we renew our declaration of war against terrorism, we know that if our enemies could be easily vanquished, they would already be gone; if we could buy our way out of such tragedies, the dollars would already have been spent. More money may be needed for some purposes, but a blank check is no substitute for policies that are sound, well coordinated and effectively implemented.

Certainly the lessons we learn in this kind of situation and the memories we take away are very individual. As I passed the Tidal Basin yesterday and witnessed the smoke rising from behind the Jefferson Memorial coming from the still-burning Pentagon, I will concede to being moved by the juxtaposition—the gray smoke from the Pentagon against this classic white marble structure where the words of Jefferson are inscribed: “I have sworn upon the altar of God eternal hostility against every form of tyranny over the mind of man.”

Today we join in subscribing to that same oath.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Mississippi (Mr. WICKER), a member of the Committee on Appropriations and, of particular note, the Subcommittee on Foreign Operations.

Mr. WICKER. Mr. Speaker, on Tuesday, September 11, 2001, a dark cloak of terrorism fell across the United States with the brutal and heinous attacks on our country. The Nation watched in horror as events unfolded and Americans faced the harsh reality of terror right on our own doorstep.

In the shadow of the Statue of Liberty, thousands of people lie in the rubble. In the still smouldering center of our national defense headquarters, many are still unaccounted for.

Our hearts and prayers go out to those victims and their families. The surest consolation for those left behind, and indeed for all of us, can be our resolve to defeat these heinous attacks and ensure that the blessings of this Nation, life, liberty, and freedom, will endure.

One of our most treasured symbols of freedom is the Statue of Liberty. Inscribed in the pedestal are these words of our Founding Fathers, which are appropriate today. They are taken from President Franklin Roosevelt’s State of the Union message less than 1 month after the bombing of Pearl Harbor: “Liberty is the air America breathes. In the future days, which we seek to make secure, we look forward to a world founded upon four essential freedoms: freedom of speech, freedom of worship, freedom from want, freedom from fear.”

Mr. Speaker, Americans today yearn to be free of fear, to believe these terrorist attacks were an isolated incident which will not happen again. Yet we have no such guarantee.

Americans should know that the forces of evil which perpetrated these acts may make further attempts on our soil. These forces are not readily identifiable. As the President said this morning, “The American people need to know that this is a different enemy than we have ever faced.”

Mr. Speaker, that is why the United States must candidly acknowledge that more resources must be devoted to our intelligence and defense operations to defend against this new type of warfare. America will respond swiftly, decisively, and with force to these acts of war on our homeland; but we must also, to the best of our ability, make the necessary preparations to protect our country from the threat of this new wave in the future.

We stand united as a Congress and as a country to defeat our enemies and to preserve our freedom, now and forever. May God grant us the resolve, the courage, and the national determination to overcome this tragedy.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 3 minutes to my friend, the gentlewoman from Texas (Ms. JACKSON-LEE).

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I thank the distinguished gentleman for yielding me time, and I thank the chairman.

Mr. Speaker, on behalf of the constituents of the 18th Congressional District of Texas, I offer my deepest sympathy. Today, Mr. Speaker, I am as proud to be an American as ever, because we are not afraid. However, I do want to express my deep pain and sadness regarding the tragic events that took place on United States soil yesterday morning.

The aggressive and unwarranted seizing of civilian airplanes originating at airports in Newark, Boston, and Washington, resulting in violent attacks and explosions at the World Trade Center, the Pentagon and rural Pennsylvania, have shocked the Nation and the world.

I would also like to express my deepest sympathies to the families and friends of those involved in this great horror of horrors. I hope that all Americans upset by this tragedy have and will find solace in churches, mosques, synagogues, temples, or any place where peaceful people might congregate to comfort one another in their sadness. This weekend, I call for Americans to worship in unity together, praying for the will of our Founding Fathers.
At a time like this, individuals who think little about the tenets and principles that undergird this government and this Nation are reminded of the values and the democratic legacy that we citizens of the United States so often take for granted. We will also never forget our loyalty to the rule of law.

It is important when the comfort of this Nation is shaken and we can see what we appear to have lost, we then realize how great a nation the United States is and how we must truly love our country. Thank you, warriors of charity, our firefighters and police, emergency workers and the U.S. military, in New York and Washington and the Nation, for your selflessness.

As chair of the Congressional Children's Caucus, I am amazed and impressed by the efforts made by the American children to help each other cope with this horrible tragedy. A member of my staff's younger sister, a 14-year-old from New York City, recalled the dual shock of the events she experienced at a nearby school. She explained to her father how to travel to the plane that was crashed in the first World Trade Center tower. Another of her friends lost both of her parents, who went to work in the World Trade Center yesterday morning, but will never return home.

Despite the magnitude of this human tragedy, I am moved by this young girl's optimistic perspective of these events which she experienced firsthand. She explained that although her life and world have forever changed because of this great tragedy, she felt safe and proud when her classmates, children of all colors, creeds and national origins came together as Americans and drew strength from their collective diversity and richness. We must not forget our children.

As the people of this country and the nations of the world look upon this House, let me join my colleagues in stating unequivocally that this Nation is of one mind and one voice in this time of tragedy. I support the President and will work to ensure that all available resources are devoted toward finding and holding accountable those individuals responsible for this attack on United States' soil.

The nations of this world should understand both our determination to find the patrons of these heinous acts, and our collective faith that we will pursue this goal with the integrity and conviction that the gravity of the situation demands that the principles and Constitution that have shaped this great Nation—require.

As we move forward in our pursuit of justice, we must also be mindful not to assign collective guilt on any one group among us. I know that at times such as these people have a tendency to generalize, stereotype, and single out individuals who have had no hand in these heinous acts. I have heard reports of Muslim schoolchildren being harassed because of others who misunderstand the complexities involved in fighting religious terrorists. We must be sure to help Americans turn away from this hateful and hurtful behavior, lest they lead to even more violence and divert us from our purpose.

The United States will act against the zealots that committed these crimes in a manner that eliminates their effectiveness and denies them martyrdom. We will also act against third parties who know or should know of the involvement of these international criminals at the expense of their peaceful and law-abiding citizens. My fellow Americans, the United States will act to the magnitude of this human tragedy, I am moved by this young girl's optimistic perspective of these events which she experienced first-hand. She explained that although her life world, I would like to express my deep pain and sadness regarding the tragic events that took place on United States soil yesterday morning. These aggressive and unwarranted attacks on innocent families and friends of those involved in this horror of horrors. I know that many Americans lost some of the most important people in their lives yesterday, and I know that mere words cannot express their pain. I hope that all Americans upset by this tragedy have found solace in Churches, Mosques, Synagogues, Temples, or any place where peaceful people might congregate to share their shock and sadness. All Americans are stunned at the magnitude of damage, the obvious and extreme loss of life, and the uncertainty of huge totals regarding loss of life that we face in the months to come.

At a time like this, individuals who think little about the tenets and principles that undergird this government and this nation are reminded of the values of freedom and democracy we citizens of the United States so often take for granted. When the comfort of this nation is shaken, and we can see what we appear to have lost, we then realize how great a nation the United States is and how much we truly love our country. Perhaps this is but a function of God's Grace toward our nation, because when faced with tragedies like those which unfolded yesterday, Americans are reminded not of kings and aristocrats, but of the constant struggle of American citizens of all races, colors, religions, and national origins fighting for freedom, equality, and justice for all.

As America watched the events unfold on television, we saw countless examples of this collective American spirit animating individuals to acts of heroism. I would like to especially recognize the selfless heroism of the many thousands of New York City and National Police, Fire Department, and National Guard workers throughout this tragedy. I thank the men and women of the U.S. military. They have worked and continue to work through the most dangerous and catastrophic event in American history. To those who have made the ultimate sacrifice while saving the lives of others, and to their families, I say to you "Thank you, and God bless you. Your faith and commitment to democracy and to the sanctity of human life will make us all safer, healthier, and better able to serve those around the world."

As Co-Chair of the Congressional Children's Caucus, I am amazed and impressed by the efforts made by American children to help each other cope with this horrible tragedy. A member of my staff's younger sister, a 14-year-old from New York City, recalled the dual shock of the events she experienced at a nearby school yesterday. She explained that one of her friends had lost his father who was travelling on the plane that was crashed into the second tower of the World Trade Center. Her mother of course and her friends lost both of her parents who went to work in the World Trade Center yesterday morning, but will never return home. Despite
September 11, 2001

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—HOUSE 16797

Mr. Speaker, yesterday, for the first time in 187 years, we have been attacked in the continental United States. In 1814, during the War of 1812, both the White House and the Capitol were set on fire and nearly totally destroyed.

In the time between, buttressed by two enormous oceans, Americans felt an enormous sense of security. Today, that feeling is gone. It will be a very, very long time before we feel safe again, like before!

We grieve—not only for the thousands who died yesterday—but for ourselves.

Our natural human response is—first denial—then apathy—and then rage.

The United States is the greatest, most powerful nation in the world—a nation that cannot allow itself to react irresponsibly, against innocent people, out of an act of rage.

America must be careful in its response.

Our prayers go out to the victims and families of the thousands who were senselessly killed and injured. Our nation is committed to justice, eradicating terrorists, bringing those who orchestrated this atrocity to justice.

We must not act in haste—by rushing to act out our vengeance against fellow Americans—because America is the world’s greatest melting pot, and in today’s society, we simply cannot guess at an individual’s country of natural origin by their appearance. We have to make sure that we make war on terrorism—not on Arabs!

We must make a further distinction between the war on terrorism and the war on Americans of Near or South Asian descent. There have been many references to a second Pearl Harbor, and while the shock and anger certainly are similar and warranted, that anger should not be directed towards our neighbors in ethnic communities across the country. We do not need the attitudes that will lead to a mentality of a lynch mob.

We must set an example to the world. Americans will not lower themselves to the mentality of a lynch mob.

We must not make a mistake in our response.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. LAMPSON).

Mr. LAMPSON. Mr. Speaker, I rise today with a heavy heart to express for the people of Southeast Texas and for myself our sympathy for those who have lost family members and loved ones to this dastardly deed.

Yesterday morning, while I prepared to come to the hill, I watched in horror on the television as the World Trade Center burned.

Then a second plane I saw fly deliberately into the second tower. And as I was watching that, I heard of the third plane crashing into the Pentagon.

I, along with the rest of the Nation, was riveted to the news for the rest of the day. Words cannot describe the shock and the horror that overcame us. The United States of America is strong, and will not be shaken by such a cowardly act which killed so many of our countrymen.

But, Mr. Speaker, I want to talk about something different than my colleagues have spoken of so far, a message about children. As adults, we have the ability to process this tragedy much differently than how our young children do.

As Chairman of the Congressional Caucus on Missing and Exploited Children, I rise in support of this resolution.

Mr. Speaker, I want to thank the police, the firefighters, the emergency personnel and the magnificent citizens who sacrificed their lives or who are still helping in this disaster. My heart and the hearts of my constituents go out to the people of New York and of Washington, D.C. I urge my fellow citizens to support our President as we take swift and decisive action against the persons who perpetrated this tre mendously horrendous act of cowardice.

Mr. Speaker, I ask my colleagues to support this resolution, and I ask that God bless America.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from California (Mr. McKean), a member of the Committee on Armed Services.

Mr. McKean. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of this resolution. My thoughts and sympathies go to those who have lost family members and loved ones to this dastardly deed.

As adults, we need to be calm and focused for the children. We need to receive support from other adults, so that we are able to effectively guide our children. We must talk with our kids and listen to them, find out what their fears are, what their concerns are, and then try to address them as directly and as calmly as possible. We must try to reassure them that there are adults there to help them and to protect them, and, after giving them time to talk and to share, to return them to their regular routine of school. Our children are worth the time that we take to do this, and it is indeed important.

Mr. Speaker, I want to thank the police, the firefighters, the emergency personnel and the magnificent citizens who sacrificed their lives or who are still helping in this disaster. My heart and the hearts of my constituents go out to the people of New York and of Washington, D.C. I urge my fellow citizens to support our President as we take swift and decisive action against the persons who perpetrated this tre mendously horrendous act of cowardice.

Mr. Speaker, I ask my colleagues to support this resolution, and I ask that God bless America.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from California (Mr. McKean), a member of the Committee on Armed Services.

Mr. McKean. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of this resolution. My thoughts and sympathies go to those who have lost family members and loved ones to this dastardly deed.

Yesterday morning, while I prepared to come to the hill, I watched in horror on the television as the World Trade Center burned.

Then a second plane I saw fly deliberately into the second tower. And as I was watching that, I heard of the third plane crashing into the Pentagon.

I, along with the rest of the Nation, was riveted to the news for the rest of the day. Words cannot describe the shock and the horror that overcame us. The United States of America is strong, and will not be shaken by such a cowardly act which killed so many of our countrymen.

But, Mr. Speaker, I want to talk about something different than my colleagues have spoken of so far, a message about children. As adults, we have the ability to process this tragedy much differently than how our young children do.

As Chairman of the Congressional Caucus on Missing and Exploited Children, I rise in support of this resolution.

Mr. Speaker, I want to thank the police, the firefighters, the emergency personnel and the magnificent citizens who sacrificed their lives or who are still helping in this disaster. My heart and the hearts of my constituents go out to the people of New York and of Washington, D.C. I urge my fellow citizens to support our President as we take swift and decisive action against the persons who perpetrated this tre mendously horrendous act of cowardice.

Mr. Speaker, I ask my colleagues to support this resolution, and I ask that God bless America.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from California (Mr. McKean), a member of the Committee on Armed Services.

Mr. McKean. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of this resolution. My thoughts and sympathies go to those who have lost family members and loved ones to this dastardly deed.

Yesterday morning, while I prepared to come to the hill, I watched in horror on the television as the World Trade Center burned.

Then a second plane I saw fly deliberately into the second tower. And as I was watching that, I heard of the third plane crashing into the Pentagon.

I, along with the rest of the Nation, was riveted to the news for the rest of the day. Words cannot describe the shock and the horror that overcame us. The United States of America is strong, and will not be shaken by such a cowardly act which killed so many of our countrymen.

But, Mr. Speaker, I want to talk about something different than my colleagues have spoken of so far, a message about children. As adults, we have the ability to process this tragedy much differently than how our young children do.

As Chairman of the Congressional Caucus on Missing and Exploited Children, I rise in support of this resolution.

Mr. Speaker, I want to thank the police, the firefighters, the emergency personnel and the magnificent citizens who sacrificed their lives or who are still helping in this disaster. My heart and the hearts of my constituents go out to the people of New York and of Washington, D.C. I urge my fellow citizens to support our President as we take swift and decisive action against the persons who perpetrated this tre mendously horrendous act of cowardice.

Mr. Speaker, I ask my colleagues to support this resolution, and I ask that God bless America.
that I have been here in Congress, we have suffered other terrorist attacks and all we have done is talk. This has to stop. This time, we have to retaliate; and we have to do so strongly that no one will dare attack us on our homeland again.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Arizona (Mr. PASTOR). Mr. PASTOR. Mr. Speaker, I would like to express my condolences to the victims and my support for all of the people who are rescuing, and I join my President in resolving to join him in finding those people who perpetrated this crime.

Mr. Speaker, I rise today with a heavy heart and a deep resolve. I rise in support of this Resolution.

Like all other Americans, and many from other countries around the world, I am saddened by the events of yesterday. Our hearts weep for the victims and families of this horrendous attack. Our hearts weep for our nation. And our hearts weep for our civilization.

But, just as Americans of past generations have stared down the grisly realities of malicious and wanton aggressions upon our freedom, our livelihood, and our way of life, so we will rise up to denounce, withstand, and battle this atrocity.

Let no one throughout the world misunderstand America's resolve to end the senseless carnage that we observed yesterday. Let no one throughout the world misunderstand America's spirit to defend democracy and freedom. Let no one throughout the world misunderstand America's will to prevail.

It is a time of sadness and a time of challenge in our nation. We will continue to remember and revere those who perished. But we will also meet this challenge with the conviction and the courage that has made our nation the shining symbol of freedom throughout the world.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I am delighted to yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from North Carolina (Mr. ETHERIDGE), my good friend and colleague.

Mr. ETHERIDGE. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me.

Mr. Speaker, I rise today to speak about yesterday's outrageous attack on America. First and foremost, I want to express my sympathy and condolences to the victims of these attacks and to the families. Their unimaginable suffering that they have been forced to endure will forever give them a unique place in America's collective hearts. We pray that the good Lord, in his mercy, will comfort the innocent and heal the wounded. This is a path to perseverance and strength. We resolve that their loss will never be forgotten in this country where we share their deep grief.

I commend the many acts of heroism performed by civilians, police, fire-fighters, and others. The response of the American people has been overwhelming, as people give their time, their prayers, and their blood to assist our fallen brothers and sisters. Americans of all walks of life have shown their true colors in this crisis, and those colors are unmistakably red, white, and blue.

Yesterday, we witnessed multiple acts of extreme cowardice, precipitated by individuals so twisted with hate as to slaughter innocent citizens, men, women, and children who have done them no harm and posed them no threat. The people of this country feel these attacks deeply because we know that the target of those assaults were every man, woman and child in this country. Freedom itself and our way of life came under attack yesterday, and we must answer that call to protect our citizens.

President Roosevelt correctly stated, "We, born to freedom and believing in freedom, are willing to fight to maintain our freedom." These evil acts against the American people and our way of life may be sophisticated, but he is not invisible. Our enemy is certainly ruthless, but he will know America's resolve. The people of America want an end to this threat; and by joining together, we can and will do it.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Florida (Mr. WELDON), a member of the Committee on Science, Committee on Financial Services, and the Committee on Government Reform.

Mr. WELDON of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

I rise in support of the resolution. Words can never be found to fully express the sorrow we share for the many, many innocent men, women, and children who lost their lives and for their families. The lives of thousands of innocent civilians were taken yesterday in acts of cowardly violence. I urge all Americans to continue to lift up prayers for the families and friends of those whose lives were viciously taken.

These evil acts against the American people will strengthen the resolve of the United States in our commitment to the principles upon which our Nation was founded. The American people will not flinch, but will respond with all strength and unity against these cowards and their supporters. The resolve of the American people and our military might is united in hunting down everyone involved in this tragic act of war against the American people. Anyone who was connected in any way with these terrorists shall receive the full brunt of our justice. They will rue the day they conceived this act of violence.

I urge my colleagues and all Americans to join President Bush as we stand together in unity against those who senselessly took the lives of countless American men, women, and children. This terrorist action amounts to a declaration of war on innocent civilians and will not be allowed to stand. May God sustain us through our hour of need and give us wisdom to do what is right.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Florida (Mr. DEUTSCH), my distinguished colleague.

Mr. DEUTSCH. Mr. Speaker, this is my 10th year in this Chamber; and I will say to my colleagues that I still have my first words to say. I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Florida every day, even after 10 years, because we are part of not just the greatest Chamber in the history of the world, but the greatest country in the history of the world.

Over 300 years ago, people left their homeland and some of them landed on the tip of Manhattan, not far from where the World Trade Center was destroyed; and those were early pioneers in the creation of America, the oldest democracy in the history of the world, a country unique in world history for many reasons. Yesterday was a day that is part of our history now. We have faced challenges as great as what we face at this point in our history, and we have met every one of those challenges. I have no doubt that we will meet this one as well.

Mr. Speaker, there are many analogues about Pearl Harbor. I had the opportunity to visit Pearl Harbor for the first time this past July. I read a little history in the history of the world and after Pearl Harbor. I think in time, people will read about the history of yesterday, as well, in the same context. The Japanese might have thought that they had the strategic advantage and made a policy-correct decision in that attack, but the history is clear. It was an incredible strategic failure. Just as the action of yesterday, I think for sure, history, in time, will show it an absolute colossal strategic failure.

This Congress, I do not know if by our actions will, in fact, declare war on the perpetrators of this act, but I believe we should. There is precedent to do such action. The Barbary pirates were not a country, they were terrorists on their day, an act of war. The body that we serve in today, declared war on the Barbary pirates and the implications of them. I believe that is what we should do, whether by direct deeds or by other actions; and it is a war that we are committed to and that we will win.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Tennessee (Mr. Jenkins.)
Mr. JENKINS. Mr. Speaker. I rise in strong support of the resolution.
Mr. GREEN of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. Green), a member of the Committee on Armed Services as well as the Committee on the Judiciary.
Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of the resolution.
Mr. Speaker, throughout history, our foes have misunderstood and underestimated the American people. They have often mistaken our love of peace for a fear of using force. They have mistaken our adherence to the rule of law at home for an unwillingness to take decisive action abroad, and they have mistook our vibrant democracy for an inability to stand together. But they are wrong. The foes responsible for yesterday's outrage will soon feel the depth of their miscalculation.
In times like this, Mr. Speaker, I take great comfort from the halls of this old capitol itself. We are in crisis, I say to my colleagues, but as Americans, we have seen crises before: Civil War, world wars, calamity and catastrophe, but this capitol and this Nation have persevered and somehow grown stronger. Many of us, when we walked into these Chambers today, walked through what is known as Statuary Hall, where there are monuments to some of the great men and women who have gone before us and built this empire of liberty. Black and white, rich and poor, people from all walks of life, there is nothing like it, and nothing like them anywhere in the world. It is time to stand together to protect our legacy. It is time to reawaken this Nation and our spirit so that we may show the world a force that is stronger and more potent than any weapon on Earth: the force of a free people, united in a single purpose.
Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker. I am pleased to yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. LURIEH.)
Mr. LURIEH. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the resolution.
Yesterday, our Nation was met with an unspeakable tragedy as we were stripped of the peace and security that we have enjoyed for so long. This is a time of great national grief; and on behalf of myself, my staff, and the people of Minnesota who I represent, I join all Americans in praying for the victims, survivors, friends, and loved ones.
Unfortunately, yesterday’s events are a stark reminder of the dangerous world in which we live and the serious risks to people who are firmly committed to democracy, freedom and opportunity for all, as we Americans are. Our law enforcement and military officials will work to promptly find those responsible, and we will prepare a strong and appropriate response. But today, as today, as a Nation, let us recognize the victims and the survivors, the response teams and all of the other heroes from all walks of life who have reached out to those hit by the terrorist attack.
Mr. PRICE of North Carolina. Mr. Speaker, the horrific images of yesterday will never leave our memories: people leaping from the World Trade Center as the flames advanced; the terror of passengers aboard those hijacked planes as they attempted to warn us of what was to come; a gaping hole in the Pentagon, with workers killed at their desks.
It is difficult in such times as these to recapture the images and these thoughts, and our first, human response must be to express our profound sympathy to the victims and their families; to pursue a vigorous rescue operation; to reach out, to give blood, to do whatever we can to alleviate the suffering of those directly targeted in yesterday’s attack.
I am confident that we will reach out and work together as a united community. We have proven before that we can and will pull together at times of danger and disaster, as we in North Carolina know from our experiences after Hurricanes Fran and Floyd.
There were moving stories of heroism and sacrifice yesterday from police and firefighters, men and women, and ordinary citizens. We must honor them for their incredible contributions to their communities. We will never forget what they have done.
Now, as we try to find the words, the correct words, to put it all into proper perspective, we must have the resolve to take all of the necessary action and we must have the resolve to provide our warfighters and intelligence agencies the resources they need.
We must provide them the resolve they will need to remove this blight from our international society.
As the rescue efforts continue, our hearts and prayers go out to the families, friends, and coworkers of those missing and lost yesterday and today. America was founded on freedoms, and we have always fought for our freedoms. We will never give in to terrorism. We will never give up until everyone responsible for this cowardly act has paid the price.
We will prevail. America must prevail. May God bless the United States of America, and grant us the will and strength to see this through.
Mr. PRICE of North Carolina. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 2 minutes to my distinguished colleague, the gentleman from North Carolina (Mr. PRICE.)
Mr. PRICE of North Carolina. Mr. Speaker, the horrific images of yesterday will never leave our memories: people leaping from the World Trade Center as the flames advanced; the terror of passengers aboard those hijacked planes as they attempted to warn us of what was to come; a gaping hole in the Pentagon, with workers killed at their desks.
I was not alive on December 7, 1941, but for those who were, it was one of those “Where were you on December 7, 1941?” days.
Congressional Record—House

September 11, 2001

16800

1941” days when the Japanese bombed Pearl Harbor.

I was alive in November of 1963. In fact, I was in the eighth grade in Innis Junior High School when President Kennedy was assassinated less than 50 miles away in Dallas outside the School Book Repository Building.

I was alive in July, 1969 when the first man, a United States astronaut, landed on the Moon.

Obviously, I was alive yesterday when the tragic plane attacks hit the Trade Center and the Pentagon, and then the plane crashed in Pennsylvania. So that is one of those “Where were you” days.

The question before the Congress today, the Presidency, and to some extent the American people, is what are we going to do about it.

There has been a lot of talk on the floor about the cowardly act. Well, it is cowardly in the sense that our attackers did not warn us and they did not declare war on us in the classic sense, they just hijacked the planes and attacked civilian targets in New York and the military target here in Washington.

But it was not cowardly in the sense that the people that perpetrated it were cowards; just the opposite, they were probably very religiously committed, willing to die for a cause that they believe in. And however many there were that died yesterday, we have to assume that there are more who are willing to die in the future.

So if we are really serious about a war against terrorism, we need to think about that. I am very committed to bringing the perpetrators, either eliminating them with military action or capturing them and taking them through whatever the legal system is, if that is appropriate.

But we are going to declare war, let us really think that through and be prepared to do what it takes.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 2 minutes to my good friend, the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. LEVIN), my distinguished colleague.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. Speaker, yesterday was like a massive earthquake, except that it was not of active nature but of evil men. Like in a massive earthquake, the casualties were mainly of huge, horrible, physical damage. The worst was yet to come, as we are now beginning to glimpse the full extent of the unspeakable loss of human life and the pain and suffering of the families who have loved.

The days ahead will be filled with unbearable grief. The entire Nation will be in deep mourning. Because this disaster was man-made, it also poses a special challenge to our Nation and to our spirit and our resolve.

We must take definitive steps against the persons who caused this horrendous tragedy and against any Nation that shelters agents of terror.

Unlike acts of nature, our goal must be a singular one: that we not let it ever happen again.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to my good friend, the gentleman from Montana (Mr. RUTHKIS), a member of the Committee on Agriculture, the Committee on Transportation, and frankly, the entire delegation of Montana.

Mr. REHBERG. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of this sense of Congress resolution. To me, this is simple: Yesterday’s attack against America was not just a criminal act, it was an act of war.

It is important to understand that these terrorists were specially trained soldiers, with a clear intent on destroying America and our way of life. They were willing to take their own lives in order to accomplish their military objectives.

That is why America must not treat yesterday’s tragedy as a criminal case, or simply seek justice. Rather, we must take it for what it is: an act of war that demands a swift, thorough, and decisive response from the United States Armed Forces. In short, we must strike back at those responsible. A military action, not subpoenas and courtrooms, is the only way to prevent this from happening again. We must bring these armies of terror and any country found to be aiding or abetting their actions to their knees. The time for talk is over.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 2 minutes to my friend and colleague, the gentleman from California (Mr. BACA).

Mr. BACA. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of this resolution. As I walked up the steps of the Capitol this morning alone, I was overcome by an eerie sense of silence. An eerie sense of silence, I have to say to you. It is finally hitting home what happened yesterday, because yesterday I was struck with disbelief as I watched the horrible pictures on television. Yet, today my stomach churns with a sudden sickening feeling of sorrow and sadness for the people who lost loved ones.

Yesterday it was a feeling of horror as I watched those pictures of mass destruction. Yet today my eyes have been burned with tears as I watched real men and women talk about real sons and daughters who are lost in yesterday’s tragedy; from disbelief to sadness, now to anger and revenge, and I am sure that all Americans share these feelings with me.

Yet we must now focus our feelings on the need for resolve, a resolve that says that we will no longer tolerate such actions; that the United States of America, the greatest country on the face of the Earth, will not be intimidated by terrorists, no matter how powerful they are.

Yesterday, terrorism struck, and it struck as it always does, without warning, without reason. It struck by those... who have no heart and have no conscience, have no soul, cold-blooded murderers.

Yesterday, the terrorists succeeded. They succeeded in shaking the foundations of two great symbols of America. But make no mistake, history will record those terrorists failed miserably in shaking the very foundations of this great country. I urge adoption of this resolution.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 2 minutes to my friend, the gentleman from North Carolina (Mr. McIntyre).

Mr. McIntyre. Mr. Speaker, the horrifying acts of terrorism which occurred yesterday were a cowardly act of attacking America.

We in Congress must be dedicated and determined to take immediate action in three ways:

First, to help the victims and their families and to make sure that all Federal resources that are necessary are available;

Second, to ensure that our liberties as American citizens are protected and that the American public is safe;

Third, to make sure that the perpetrators are discovered and punished.

Our focus must be on the injured and their families and those who are offering medical assistance, and others who are helping in so many different ways. It has taken, unfortunately, these horrifying acts of terrorism to draw attention to the resources and needs of our intelligence and defense agencies, and we must address those needs immediately so that our Nation's citizens know that their freedoms are not being compromised.

We need prayer also for the injured and the suffering and their families, for our law enforcement, our EMS units, and our medical and health care providers, for our military, which stands ready, to the heavens and whatever is needed, and wisdom for our government in the decisions that we yet have to make.

We have heard the word faith used many times today. Mr. Speaker, behind you are the words "In God We Trust." As the psalmist has written, "God is our refuge and strength, an ever-present help in trouble. Therefore I will not fear."

Mr. Speaker, I have full confidence that our President will hold accountable those who were responsible and ensure they pay the ultimate price for the evil they have wrought. We in Congress should provide all the means of support available to help in the search and the rescue efforts, the recovery efforts, and the rebuilding of the damaged and destroyed structures, as well as the investigation to find the criminals responsible.

Mr. Speaker, this can never happen again.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Texas (Mr. Sandlin).

Mr. Sandlin. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

Today, we stand. Reflecting on the evil of yesterday with the silence of death and the stench of terrorism in the air, we stand. We stand united. We stand committed. We stand determined. We stand confident. We stand, and we shall overcome.

Edmund Burke once said, "All that is necessary for evil to triumph is for good men to do nothing." Mr. Terrorist, make no mistake about it, we will act. We will be patient but deliberate. We will be open but focused. We will not seek senseless revenge, but we will insist on justice.

And justice will be decisive, swift, compelling, horrible, and justified. Woe be to those that call evil good. Woe be to the terrorists who claim some sort of moral right to murder those who harbor these criminals will be held accountable.

Today, as we seek solace from the icy pain of yesterday, do not seek God in the theatres, temples, or mosques of this country; do not seek justice in the halls of Congress or in our courtrooms. For God is in the streets and homes of America. Justice is in the wings of the world theater, preparing to be released in a focused fury.

Harriet Tubman, once complimented on her humanitarian efforts, responded, "'Twasn't me. 'Twas the Lord. I always told him, 'I trust to you. I don't know where to go or what to do, but I expect you to lead me,' and he always did."

We can expect that same leadership today. Thank God we live in America. May He bless this country and our efforts.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Tennessee (Mr. Duncan), a member of the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure.

Mr. Duncan. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

I rise in the strongest possible support of this resolution and to condemn the cowards who perpetrated these horrendous acts against the people of the United States; certainly what many people say is the darkest day in American history.

I believe we must do everything humanly possible to find out who is responsible for these acts of terror and take the strongest possible action against them. We need to show the world in a very determined and dramatic way that we will not stand for this type of senseless violence.

I will support the President in taking the strongest possible action against the leaders and cowardly terrorists who are responsible for yesterday's tragedies, as well as any country which offers safe harbor to these inhuman thugs.

Most importantly, right now, Mr. Speaker, our sympathy should go out in the most heartfelt way to the families of those who have fallen victim to these unspeakable tragic events. The American public and the world should know that this Congress, working closely with the administration, will not rest until these mass murderers are brought to swift decisive justice and punishment.

We must recognize that there are fundamental security problems in our government that account for the possible events to take place. We need to work with the FAA, the Department of Transportation, as well as the airlines to secure our airports and our airplanes against people who would cause such destruction.

I have spent the last 6 years as chairman of the House Subcommittee on Aviation. We need to immediately... place U.S. marshals or other law enforcement officials on all commercial flights. We also need to focus more resources on and do more detailed background checks on the men and women who are the security screeners in the airports across our country. We need to make it impossible for terrorists to compromise the cockpits of our airliners by retrofitting all aircraft with an impenetrable barrier between the cockpits and passenger cabins. Most importantly, we must restore the confidence of the flying public in the security and integrity of our commercial aviation infrastructure.

Mr. Speaker, I urge support for this resolution. It is the least we can do, and we all need to join together in supporting those who have suffered so much in these horrible tragedies.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Louisiana (Mr. JOHN).

Mr. JOHN. Mr. Speaker, it is with a heavy heart that I rise today to offer my condolences to the families from across our great nation who are coping with the grief of yesterday’s tragic events.

Terrorists have broken our hearts, but they have not broken our resolve. Yesterday, we were a nation in shock. Today, we are a Nation in mourning. And while we are numb in disbelief, America is not paralyzed. Our brave rescue workers are still finding survivors and providing hope for all Americans. Our faith in God is providing Americans with solace. And, Mr. Speaker, this Congress will support and give the President all the resources he requires to provide Americans with justice.

The diabolical sophistication of yesterday’s attacks point to a well-coordinated network of evil. The United States cannot passively stand by as this considerable organization in plan and implementation. We stand here tonight united as a Congress and as a nation in telling the world that we will not leave one stone unturned until we find and punish these terrorists and their supporters.

America is still a nation of heroes. The men and women who gave their lives yesterday in an attempt to rescue others is a statement to the courage and bravery of our everyday people when faced with enormous challenges.

Mr. Speaker, as I stand here tonight surrounded by my colleagues in Congress, I have never been more sure of myself that America is up to the challenge to Yale study. And we will forever be changed because of yesterday’s attacks, but we will be a stronger, not a weaker Nation for them. God bless America.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I would like to inquire as to how much time remains.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Mr. SIMPSON. The gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. SMITH) has 27 minutes remaining, and the gentleman from California (Mr. LANTOS) has 5 minutes remaining.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that during consideration of H.J. Res. 61, pursuant to the order of the House earlier today, debate on the joint resolution be extended 2 hours equally divided and controlled by the chairman or his designee and the ranking minority member of the Committee on International Relations.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New Jersey?

There was no objection.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from California (Mr. THOMAS), chairman of the Committee on International Relations.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. Speaker, along with everyone else, I support this resolution. However, mentally, I want everyone to know that I will assume it is a declaration of war. I believe that from a mental set a declaration of war is what we need.

First, it will allow us to use any and all means necessary to strike at any group or government when facts support it and do it in a wartime mentality. Secondly, believing this resolution is a declaration of war I think creates a mental framework which we need as a society. We need to reach out in meaningful ways, in sustaining ways, to aid those who have suffered personal tragedy. We need to strengthen our economy to sustain our people, and understand that property damage can be repaired, that economic strength will be the key not only to carrying out the fight against those who have perpetrated these deeds, but also to make available all of our resources. This will not be a short fight. It will be a long and difficult one.

We need all of the resources available to us, moral, religious, and economic; and I will be looking at short-term, medium-term, and long-term responses to this. So that from a military point of view, from an economic point of view, and from a sustaining societal and nurturing point of view, we will not just fight Words against our enemies, we will have real arrows in our quiver.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield such time as she may consume to the gentlewoman from Texas (Ms. EDDIE BERNICE JOHNSON).

Ms. JOHNSON of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to this resolution.

Mr. Speaker, I rise to stand in solidarity with the people of America and to speak out against the senseless, horrendous tragedies of September 11, 2001. It is a day that will live in infamy. There are no words, no pictures, no sentiments that can express the magnitude of the evil that showed itself yesterday. My heart and my thoughts go out to the families of those who were murdered, and to all those affected. The love of the people of this great country embraces the spirit of those heroes and their loved ones.

Those glorious Americans, who worked at the World Trade Center and the Pentagon, members of the Police and Fire Departments and EMS, represent the best of America. They are unique contributors to Dallas-Fort Worth. They are unique contributors to America. They are a part of all of our lives. They are a part of our souls. We honor the lives they lived as Americans.

Let it be known, that the United States Congress will stop at nothing, and at no time, to protect our citizens. Let it be known, that the United States of America will never, ever, cower to terrorists and never give up our way of life. Let it be known that Americans may be terrorized, but Americans are not a weaker Nation for them. God bless America.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from Florida (Ms. BROWN).

Ms. BROWN of Florida. Mr. Speaker, God bless America.

Yesterday, on September 11, for the first time in 175 years, the capital of the world’s greatest military power was attacked by a cowardly and totally spineless enemy. We, the United States, the leader of the free world, the country that saved Europe from Nazi Germany, the country that had the courage to stand up to communism and dictatorships worldwide, the one Nation in the world looked to for leadership cannot submissively stand by while our Nation is attacked.

This was a well-organized and thought-out attack and it demands a well-organized and powerful response. Members of these fanatical groups cannot go unpunished, nor will this nation support them. Those nations that give them shelter, weapons, support and training, we will deliver a swift and immediate response to this horrible act.

Congress and the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure must take steps to implement new safety standards for air travel and, in fact, all modes of transportation. I have received numerous calls today from pilots saying that we have to absolutely secure the cockpits on our airplanes. We need to improve U.S. marshals on each and every plane again just as we did in the 1990s.

My heart and prayers go out to the families of the victims, and I want to commend the volunteers and emergency personnel on their tremendous efforts. How can you help? I am donating blood tomorrow and asking my constituents to do the same. For all the people out... there that are watching, if you have any information that could assist this ongoing investigation, please call the FBI hot line.

In conclusion, I want to make it clear, whether we are a Democrat, a Republican, male or female, black or white, we stand behind the Commander in Chief. War has been declared against the American people, and you are either with us or against us. There is no in between.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Louisiana (Mr. TAUZIN), the distinguished chairman of the Committee on Energy and Commerce.

Mr. TAUZIN. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of this resolution.

I, like all of my colleagues, suffer with the inconsolable grief of all our countrymen who watched the horrific destruction visited on our Nation yesterday. But we also watched with humility and admiration the amazing acts of courage and sacrifice and heroism of firemen and rescue workers and police, both here in this city and New York City; and we pray for all of them tonight.

There are criminal acts and there are acts of war. Criminal acts are answered in court within the judicial system. Acts of war are answered militarily. Yesterday was an act of war; and there will be a military response. You know it. It is coming. Those who have visited that destruction upon America yesterday had better get themselves ready for it. But there were other criminal acts yesterday that I want to talk about tonight, and I want to talk to those criminals.

There is no shortage of gasoline in this country. There is no shortage of crude oil. Every one of you who jacked the price up yesterday to $3 and $4 and $5 and took advantage of Americans who suffer with all of us in this crisis are petty criminals, and you ought to be in the hoosegow and you will be.

The Department of Energy, FTC, Attorney General, the Department of Justice have all issued warnings today that they are investigating. Criminal prosecution is coming. We need to live in the land of the free and the democracy that make this Nation great. Our constitutional liberties shall not be violated. America's immigration policy, our governmental law enforcement resources, and our military capabilities must be bolstered to meet our national challenge.

America's story is one of providence. Over the last 225 years, God and truth, combined with American courage and spirit, have allowed us to triumph in every honorable national struggle placed before us. There is a resilience in our country that transcends tragedy. Those who repudiate reason—and twist it to such ghastly ends as these—do not deserve the gift of life. Their actions cannot be allowed to triumph over freedom and democracy. We must pray to God that they will not.

A war of terrorism has been declared against America, and more has been attacked than just our great land. I support President Bush's initiative to mobilize our national military forces, and forces around the world which love freedom, in order to push terrorism from the face of the world. Foreign states that facilitate, harbor, employ, or conveniently turn a blind eye to those who engage in missions of terror, should suffer the consequences of their misguided judgement. America's immigration policy, our governmental law enforcement resources, and our military capabilities must be bolstered to meet our national challenge.

The sense of heightened patriotism being exhibited as a result of this tragedy will assist the efforts being called for from all corners of our nation to exact justice. It also gives us the chance to pay tribute to the firefighters, police, rescue crews, medical teams, survivors and supporters alike who are the true heroes of the day. The families of those who perished deserve our prayers and deep sympathies.

As in all difficulties in life, our faith as a people is being tested. I pray that we will remain strong and resolve to choose the path of submission.

I yield back to the gentleman from Louisiana.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of House Joint Resolution 61.

Ms. BALDWIN. Mr. Speaker, each and every day I am humbled to serve as a Member of the United States Congress. I am humbled by the honor of representing the people of Wisconsin and privileged to serve this great Nation. I love this country. I cherish our freedoms.

I have great regard for the leadership and courage that has been demonstrated by the Members of the leadership of this Chamber throughout our Nation's history from its birth onward. Time and time again our Nation has risen to the challenges posed by evil, violence, intolerance, and injustice. These were challenges of immense proportions, and we did not shrink from them. Of course, all of us hoped that these sorts of challenges, these attacks on our very own soil were part of our Nation's history, not our Nation's present or future.

Most Americans yesterday and today saw television images that will be indelibly inscribed in their minds and consciences. In New York, Pennsylvania, and our Nation's capital, other Americans witnessed these tragedies firsthand. Our Nation and our Nation's families have suffered unimaginably from the unspeakable evil acts of yesterday. We will not shrink from facing this challenge either.

I have been so deeply moved by the capacity of the American people to respond to this crisis, Words cannot express the gratitude that I feel and want to convey to our Nation's emergency workers, the paramedics, nurses, doctors, firefighters, police officers, members of National Guard and so many others.

Words are also inadequate to express the depth of the sympathy that I want to share with the victims and their families. I join all my colleagues in condemning these despicable acts. We must bring the perpetrators to justice.

The greatness of this country in our own eyes and the eyes of the world is the promise that we will act against the perpetrators only when we are certain of their culpability.

I also know that it is the American people, our freedoms and our democracy that make this Nation great. Our constitutional liberties shall not be sacrificed in our search for greater security, for that is what our enemies and all enemies of freedom and democracy hope to achieve.

I have never been more deeply moved to live in the land of the free and the home of the brave.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Washington (Mr. NETHERCUTT).

Mr. NETHERCUTT. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of House Joint Resolution 61.

Mr. Speaker, in the course of human events, there are moments that so impact the progression of world history, that the character of all people becomes imbued with the solemn understanding that life will never be the same. The terrorist events that transpired on September 11, 2001, collectively create a most infamous moment in the history of the United States.

These cowardly acts of destruction were intended to strike fear in the American spirit with the hope that our Nation will retreat from its policies and obligations overseas. If these perpetrators chose to study American history rather than how to conduct destruction, they would realize the futility of their actions and know that there is one choice we cannot and will not make. America will never choose the path of submission.

Our hearts have been pierced by tragedy and weep for those lost souls and their families of America's worst disaster. Throughout American history, our lands and others have been turned red by the blood of those who defended America's character. Now, in modern times, the urban streets of two great cities share this unfortunate distinction.

America's story is one of providence. Over the last 225 years, God and truth, combined with American courage and spirit, have allowed us to triumph in every honorable national struggle placed before us. There is a resilience in our country that transcends tragedy. Those who repudiate reason—and twist it to such ghastly ends as these—do not deserve the gift of life. Their actions cannot be allowed to triumph over freedom and democracy. We must pray to God that they will not.

A war of terrorism has been declared against America, and more has been attacked than just our great land. I support President Bush's initiative to mobilize our national military forces, and forces around the world which love freedom, in order to push terrorism from the face of the world. Foreign states that facilitate, harbor, employ, or conveniently turn a blind eye to those who engage in missions of terror, should suffer the consequences of their misguided judgement. America's immigration policy, our governmental law enforcement resources, and our military capabilities must be bolstered to meet our national challenge.

The sense of heightened patriotism being exhibited as a result of this tragedy will assist the efforts being called for from all corners of our nation to exact justice. It also gives us the chance to pay tribute to the firefighters, police, rescue crews, medical teams, survivors and supporters alike who are the true heroes of the day. The families of those who perished deserve our prayers and deep sympathies.

As in all difficulties in life, our faith as a people is being tested. I pray that we will remain strong and resolve to choose the path of submission.

I yield back to the gentleman from Louisiana.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Louisiana (Mr. McCREADY).

Mr. McCREADY. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of House Joint Resolution 61.

This resolution expresses clearly the sentiment not only of this Congress, but the sentiment of every American person in condemning the despicable actions of terrorists who planned and carried out the attacks yesterday against the people of the United States. It extends the condolences of all our citizens to the victims and their families, commends the heroic actions of the fireman, police, and other rescue workers who responded to these tragic events, and underscores the resolve of all of us in America and many others around the world to fight and win this war against terrorism.

Mr. Speaker, it is important to note that so many Members of Congress are speaking for their constituents in support of this resolution, and thereby speaking, not as Republicans or Democrats, liberals or conservatives, Easterners or Westerners, but as Americans. It is this unity of spirit, singularity of purpose, and faith in our destiny as purveyors of freedom which will see us through this and lead us to victory.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from South Carolina (Mr. GRAHAM), a member of the Committee on the Judiciary and the Committee on Armed Services.

Mr. GRAHAM. Mr. Speaker, from what I hear on television, we may have found our first example of how America will rise to the occasion. Apparently, the people on United Flight 93, the Pennsylvania flight, were talking to their relatives and the picture was becoming clear to them what their fate was about to be.

The story goes, according to recent reports, that one of the passengers told his wife that we just voted among ourselves to take on the hijackers. I think that gives the best example of what awaits the terrorists.

We will soon vote here, Republicans and Democrats. We will vote to take on the terrorists who tried to destroy freedom and our way of life. Our allies today in NATO voted to consider the attack on the United States as an attack on NATO.

The message that was trying to be sent by the fanatics who orchestrated this I am not sure of, but the message we are going to send them will be very clear. Our forefathers defeated tyranny; so shall we.

Mr. Speaker, the story goes when the staff of Admiral Yamamoto congratulated him on the bombing of Pearl Harbor, he replied, “I am afraid all we have done is awoken a sleeping giant.”

Mr. Speaker, that is exactly what happened yesterday. America sleeps no more.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Indiana (Mr. VISCLOSKY).

Mr. VISCLOSKY. Mr. Speaker, my thoughts and prayers go out to those who have lost loved ones and family members in this evil and barbaric act.

We as a Nation cannot tolerate these kinds of attacks on American citizens.

Today we must first pledge our unwavering support for those involved in the search and rescue missions underway in Washington, D.C., and New York City. In government offices, fire fighters, doctors, nurses, rescue workers have committed thousands of selfless acts to help those injured.

Secondly, we must persevere in the fight against the enemies of freedom and democracy, as we have in the past. It took the United States over 4 years to win the Revolutionary War, and more than 40 years to win the Cold War. All Americans must now display the same patience and strong resolve in the war against terrorism. We have a moral obligation to seek out these craven individuals, wherever they may hide, to destroy them and their organizations so they may no longer kill, maim or injure innocent people in the future.

America and its people are good and just. Our democracy is strong, and the good we do will prevail in the end. We live in a free and civilized society. Our resolve tonight and tomorrow and forever must be to permanently establish these values across the globe.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Kentucky (Mr. FLETCHER), a member of the Committee on the Budget, the Committee on Agriculture, and the Committee on Energy and Commerce.

Mr. FLETCHER. Mr. Speaker, I rise to address this honorable body. Words fail to fully express our grief and fall short of describing our resolve as we respond to this act of barbarity and violence against the free and innocent.

Throughout our Nation’s history, we along with the world watch and witness that during the darkest hours, America unites with exemplary character, strength and bravery. We witness a diverse Nation pulling together with tireless compassion towards those fallen, wounded and grieving.

We also feel the swelling strength of a government, united to ensure that evil is answered with the goodness of justice so that freedom’s peace and security prevail.

Our prayers and resources are with all those grieving, and our gratitude and full support is with all of the men and women engaged in this unrelenting endeavor against the evil terror of those who harbor hate and violence.

We reaffirm our unwavering support of President Bush and his able staff. We also extend our gratitude to NATO and other free and friendly nations who join us in our resolve to destroy not only the branches but the very roots of these intolerable acts of terror.

Across from the battered walls of the Pentagon lay the graves of those who have given their all for freedom. By our resolve, we honor them, as well as all the fallen we now grieve, that none of these intolerable acts of terror will ever be allowed.

Mr. Speaker, we have witnessed an act of war, and we must now respond accordingly.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from California (Ms. SOLIS), my good friend and colleague.

Ms. SOLIS. Mr. Speaker, today I would like to express my sorrow, my honor, my anger about yesterday’s attacks on the United States democracy. I offer my most sincere condolences to the victims and their families. I offer my support to the President, and to the many Federal, State and local agencies that are taking part in the ongoing investigation and rescue efforts.

Today I stand with the entire United States Congress, and perhaps most importantly, stand alongside every other American citizen in a united and invisible defense of our freedom. We know that our democracy will not falter during this test. Our democratic foundations, our government, and our people are too strong.

Finally, I want to acknowledge the outpouring of sympathy and assistance that the American people have generously provided during this crisis. My thoughts, my prayers and encouragement, are with the missing fire fighters in New York and the many rescue teams, the military and medical personnel here and in New York.

Mr. Speaker, I ask the American public to continue donating blood and continue to fly our American flags. Continue to stand as one Nation, under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Tennessee (Mr. BRYANT), a former U. S. Attorney and a member of the Committee on Energy and Commerce.

Mr. BRYANT. Mr. Speaker, it has been a long and difficult 36 hours since the first airplane crashed into the tower of the World Trade Center yesterday.

I rise in support of this motion, as has practically every Member of this House today, to show the resolve of this body that we will finish what the terrorists began yesterday.

Make no mistake about it, the surprise attack that we had yesterday was the product of cowards, outlaws, criminals within a civilized world. Hijacking airplanes containing innocent men, women and children and crashing them into an office building at a time when large numbers of workers were present were the pathetic acts of insane minds, illegitimate by any standard.

Those responsible for this attack, especially those aiding and abetting, will feel the full power of the United States and our allies. I join with the President, Congress, world leaders, and the American people in blanket condemnation of all involved in this ruthless conspiracy.

And as more facts develop and become known, we will recognize those in the airplanes, some known, such as Tom Burnett and others, some forever unknown, who tried to prevent... last night's heinous crimes and mitigated those crimes and became heroes in doing such, as well as recognizing the hundreds and hundreds of heroes now working to save lives both in New York and here at the Pentagon.

The United States will not stand for terrorism on its soil and we will join together to fight it. Terrorism's goal is to disrupt life and make people fearful. But fanatic acts of these extremists will fail as we continue on with our lives with even more resolve. Our great Nation will come together around this tragedy because our freedom, as said earlier by one of our leaders, our freedom is our strength, not our weakness.

Let me just echo what the gentleman from South Carolina (Mr. GRAHAM) said a few minutes ago about Pearl Harbor. When it was attacked, President Roosevelt said it was a day that would live in infamy. That generation of Americans, which can be argued was our greatest, rose to the occasion and a sleeping giant was awakened. Now we have yet another day that will forever be burned into the minds and hearts of Americans, and again a sleeping giant has been awakened.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I am very pleased to yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Vermont, my good friend and distinguished colleague.

Mr. SANDERS. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me the time.

Mr. Speaker, on behalf of the people of the State of Vermont, I rise and in the strongest possible terms condemn the unspeakable acts which were perpetrated yesterday by cowardly terrorists. I also wish to express my condolences for the thousands of families who are suffering tonight from their losses on the four planes that went down, the losses at the World Trade Center and at the Pentagon.

Mr. Speaker, the goal of terrorism is to demoralize people and to create fear, uncertainty, and instability. Our Nation must not succumb to that and give terrorists that victory.

Tonight we grieve for the incredible and horrendous loss of life that we suffered yesterday. It is unprecedented in the history of our country. We were touched by the courage of those who are suffering tonight from their losses, the on the four planes that went down, the losses at the World Trade Center and at the Pentagon.

Mr. Speaker, the goal of terrorism is to demoralize people and to create fear, uncertainty, and instability. Our Nation must not succumb to that and give terrorists that victory.

Tonight we grieve for the incredible and horrendous loss of life that we suffered yesterday. It is unprecedented in the history of our country. We were touched by the courage of those who are suffering tonight from their losses, the on the four planes that went down, the losses at the World Trade Center and at the Pentagon.

Mr. Speaker, the goal of terrorism is to demoralize people and to create fear, uncertainty, and instability. Our Nation must not succumb to that and give terrorists that victory.

Tonight we grieve for the incredible and horrendous loss of life that we suffered yesterday. It is unprecedented in the history of our country. We were touched by the courage of those who are suffering tonight from their losses, the on the four planes that went down, the losses at the World Trade Center and at the Pentagon.

Mr. Speaker, the goal of terrorism is to demoralize people and to create fear, uncertainty, and instability. Our Nation must not succumb to that and give terrorists that victory.

Tonight we grieve for the incredible and horrendous loss of life that we suffered yesterday. It is unprecedented in the history of our country. We were touched by the courage of those who are suffering tonight from their losses, the on the four planes that went down, the losses at the World Trade Center and at the Pentagon.

Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Florida (Mr. STEARNS), my good friend.

Mr. STEARNS. Mr. Speaker, as the smoke clears from the skies over New York City, and western Pennsylvania, we in Congress should not forget that we are a free society. Sweet freedom. We cannot abandon our ideals or wrap ourselves in a cocoon or isolate ourselves from a world because of this senseless destruction.

The resolution this evening condemns in the strongest possible terms the terrorists who tried to disrupt our country and to kill our innocent citizens.

Our government cannot permit its citizens to be attacked with impunity. We as elected officials have a responsibility to protect them just as we have protected them throughout the history of this grand Republic.

All of us have watched in horror the amount of destruction that has occurred. We commend the heroic action of the rescue workers, volunteers, State and local officials who responded to these tragic events with courage, determination, and skill. Our prayers are made for those who suffered and lost their loved ones.

Mr. Speaker, we need to send a message to those engaged in terror that we will fight and not fold. We need to stand up to them. Our struggle will not be won in a day or a month or culminate with a single victory. Victory will require us to display courage, faith, unity and determination to carry on for an indefinite time in the face of this new gray war with faceless terrorists who have a holy war to destroy the United States.

Towards that end, Mr. Speaker, I fully support House Joint Resolution 61 and look forward to supporting the President and other agencies of government as they seek to find the guilty parties.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield such time as she may consume to the gentlewoman from North Carolina (Mrs. CLAYTON).

Mrs. CLAYTON. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time. I rise in strong support of this resolution.
used more in the aggregate than at any time since its inception; September 11, or 9–1–1, summons the brave, the selfless, the life preservers, if they could they have heard it. What happened to the firefighters? They have long been a service and fixture at airports, as long as the airports have been there themselves.

Mr. Speaker, from time to time down through our history, our Nation has been tested. Certainly today our peaceful way of life is being tested again in a most cowardly fashion. So in the face of this great tragedy, it is time that we renew our prayers for peace around the world, re dedicate ourselves to the work of citizenship, and sustain the quality and integrity of those who seek to serve us in the capacity of public servance.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr.
Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Michigan
(Mr. SMITH), a member of the Committee on Agriculture as well as the Committee on International Relations.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Mr. Spea-er, we have talked and dedicated ourselves to making sure that we identify and capture the perpetrators, that these atrocities cannot be tolerated in a free society, and that for the sake of not only America but for the rest of the world, we need to be very aggressive and dedicated in the effort that we are about to undertake.

As chairman of the committee that oversees the Federal Fire Administration, I would like to take a moment to speak about the Nation’s first responders, the firefighters, the emergency medical personnel, the police who were first to arrive at the scene and certainly the last to leave such a scene in situations as happened at the Pentagon and in New York and also south of Pittsburgh.

As the Nation mourns the deaths of hundreds and probably many thousands of our fellow citizens, as we take stock of the destruction caused by yesterday’s terrorist attacks, we should also pause for a moment to reflect on the brave men and women who put their lives on the line every day in every small town and suburb and every big city across the country. We have all been deeply moved by the tragic scenes at the Pentagon, Pennsylvania, and especially New York. But we can be proud that in a time of great peril, the Nation’s first responders answered the call, conducting themselves with bravery, with dedication that does credit to themselves, their city, and their country.

It has been reported that over 202
New York firefighters and 57 police of-feres may have perished at the World Trade Center, a tragic loss. Witnesses said that as they were running down the stairs to escape the burning buildings, they passed New York firemen running up those stairs to put out fires and to assist other people stuck on higher floors. Just imagine that for a moment. With fire and smoke all around, with a 110-story building buckling, how in the world could these firefighters ignored their own safety to help people they did not know but who were in great need of help, their help.
Under such horrible conditions, who could have blamed them for abandoning the burning building? But instead of turning their backs on people in need, they faced the danger head-on because that is their job. We may never know how many lives they saved, but do we know that many people would not be alive today but for the bravery and sacrifice of these dedicated men and women. Their deaths cannot be in vain. We have an obligation to ensure that they get the support they need, God forbid, should they be called on again to deal with a terrorist attack.

They represent the very best of America, and our Nation owes them and their families a debt of profound gratitude. We in this House and across America mourn for these heroes and we pray for their families.

We cannot bring them back but we can promise their loved ones this: The terrorists who were responsible for these depraved acts will pay for them. They can run, but then cannot hide. And they will pay.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I am delighted to yield 2 minutes to my neighbor, good friend, and distinguished colleague, the gentlewoman from Hawaii (Mrs. MINK).

Mrs. MINK of Hawaii. I thank the gentleman from California (Mr. Lan-tos) for yielding me time.

Mr. Speaker, I rise tonight overwhelmed by indescribable grief and sorrow. A taking of any innocent life is an atrocity. A taking of hundreds is a massacre of monumental proportions.
Yesterday, a massacre of unthinkable numbers occurred. The World Trade Center and the Pentagon were deliberate targets of fanatics. These terrorists hijacked four commercial airliners. They slammed three of these planes into these buildings, knowing the mayhem and chaos that this destruction would cause.

As a Nation, we are left emotionally speechless at the loss of so many innocent lives. We are numbed by the numerous lives that were lost in this diabolical act of vengeance against our way of life. So long as we continue to stand for freedom and democracy, these enemies will not succeed.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr.
Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from North Caro-linha (Mr. COBLE), the chairman of the Subcommittee on Courts, the Internet, and Intellectual Property of the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. COBLE. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me time.

Mr. Speaker, ruthless, cowardly, in sensitive, uncaring, evil, wicked, fanat-cical; words cannot describe the events of yesterday. I spoke at an official ConfERENCE at the Supreme Court yestday morning. Just prior to my speech, the Chief Justice handed me a note indicating that the Pentagon had been attacked and was then afire. I knew then that life in the United States had been drastically altered.

Sandy Brashaw, a 38-year-old flight attendant who resided in North Carolinha’s Sixth Congressional District, walked on the United Flight 93 yesterday to work her shift. Thousands of other Americans reported to their respective jobs yesterday as well. Neither Sandy, Mr. Speaker, nor many of these other thousands will ever report for work again. Their lives were snuffed out yesterday. These losses will not carry on. These ruthless criminals will be identified and duly punished.

Our thoughts and prayers are extended to all who suffered losses yesterday.

Mr. Speaker, these thugs who yesterday inflicted this pain upon us, concluding that we would not respond to

We may not have been in New York City or anywhere near the Pentagon, but all who witnessed these attacks on television knew then we were living in a terrible new world.

Our resolve today is to root out the perpetrators of this heinous plot to destroy us. We must explore all avenues to make sure that this can never happen again. We must not surrender until the country is made safe again for our children and for their families.

Every place in America has lost loved ones in this national tragedy. No com-Community is immune to this loss. I am advised that four Hawaii residents may be among the casualty lists. One is list-Matting missing in the rubble of the World Trade Center, the other three in airplanes in which they were passengers on the way to the West Coast. I cannot reveal their names, as I am advised that not all the families have yet been notified. My heart goes out to all the lost ones throughout the country in this national nightmare.

The human toll will undoubtedly mount over the next few days, and our lives will be forever changed. Today we mourn those lives that were lost in this diabolical act of vengeance against our way of life. So long as we continue to stand for freedom and democracy, these enemies will not succeed.
From Western Europe:
I cannot find the words to describe our feelings about what happened in NY and Washington. Our thoughts are with you and all American people.
While obviously it’s difficult to go forward together, it’s the only way!
Hope that nobody of your relatives/friends will be amongst the victims.
Warm regards.

From Canada:
AMERICA: THE GOOD NEIGHBOR
This Canadian thinks it is time to speak up for the Americans as the most generous and possibly the least appreciated people on all the earth. Germany, Japan and, to a lesser extent, Britain and Italy were lifted out of the debris of war by the Americans who poured in billions of dollars and forgave other billions in debts.
None of these countries is today paying even the interest on its remaining debts to the United States. When France was in danger of collapsing in 1946, it was the Americans who propped it up, and their reward was to be insulted and spat on the streets of Paris. I was there. I saw it.
When earthquakes hit distant cities, it is the United States that hurries to help. This 23 November, Americans were flattened by tornadoes. Nobody helped. The Marshall Plan and the Truman Policy pumped billions of dollars into discouraged countries. Jow newspaper in those countries are writing about the decadent, warmongering Americans.
I’d like to see just one of those countries that is floating over the erosion of the United States dollar build its own airplane. Does any other country in the world have a plane to equal the Boeing Jumbo Jet, the Lockheed Tri-Star, or the Douglas DC10? If so, why don’t they fly them? Why do all the International lines except Russia fly American Planes?

From Russia:
DEAR CONGRESSWOMAN: All of us in Russia, just as the same throughout the world, express our deepest condolences over the terrible losses suffered in the United States. We believe that this tragedy affects us all. We share the pain of the lost lives and know that we must unite our efforts to do everything in our power for this to never happen again. We should forget about all our differences, and focus together on the critical issues that need to be resolved in the world today.
Pray for you, and all your other brothers and sisters in Russia.

From Ukraine’s Roman Catholic Vicar General, Bishop Stanislav Szyrokoradiuk:
DEAR CONGRESSWOMAN KAPURT: I would like to present to You and through You—to all American people—our condolences because of the terrible tragedy that has struck the whole world.
We have been very shaken to know about a series of acts of terrorism that happened in the United States of America yesterday. It has been an awful blow by its cruelty and scale that struck not only USA but all humanity. I received this notice during spiritual retreat in the Holy Hill Monastery in Vorzel, where all priests of our Diocese came. As a sign of our unity and sympathy in your grief we celebrated Holy Mass for the souls of the departed and prayed for all victims. May the Lord strengthen them by His grace that they may outlive this horrible disaster.
In all our churches there are Divine Services and prayers said for the souls of the departed and for all those who have suffered.
These days our hearts and our prayers are with your people.
Sincerely yours,
BISHOP STANISLAW SYYROKORADIUK, The Roman Catholic Vicar General of Ukraine.

From an elderly and disabled constituent from our district:
She can’t give blood or send money, but has been trying to think what she could do in this situation. It came to her that everybody should fly their flag. It’s a visible sign of our support of our nation and the perseverance of the citizens. Also all the tv and radio stations could be asked to play the national anthem once all at the same time. She’s asking Marcy to “get the word out” so people could be asked to do this. May we?

From Arab-American Muslims in my community, the strong resolution of condemnation that no political cause could ever be assisted by such immoral acts:

We deplore the attacks on the World Trade Center and the Pentagon.
We strongly condemn this morning’s plane attacks on the World Trade Center and the Pentagon and express deep sorrow for Americans who were injured and killed. We sends our condolences for the cowardly terrorist attack. There is no cause that justifies this type of an immoral and inhuman act that has affected so many innocent Americans. We support the investigation in order to track down the people responsible for this tragic act of terrorism.

From Arab and American Muslims utterly condemn what are apparently vicious and cowardly acts of terrorism against innocent civilians. We join with all Americans in calling for the swift apprehensions of the perpetrators.

HUSEIN H. SHOUSSHAR.
From a Technical Sergeant at our Toledo Air National Guard, who suggests new safety technologies on airplanes using Internet video surveillance:

In light of today’s unfortunate events, I believe the solution to help prevent future catastrophes involving hijackings. An internet video surveillance system. The equipment to record movement and an FCC pipe to the internet is already available from http://www.x10.com, and x10.com has been delivering affordable internet since the 1980s.

I’m sure with a few simple adjustments, and an FCC pipe to the internet a plane could be equipped with the same surveillance system as a house. The system could continually post updates to the internet where the video could be monitored for the safety of the passengers and people on the ground. This would be a deterrent for future attacks. It would give passengers some peace of mind. And it would give us the opportunity to strike back and bring a commercial plane down before it was close enough to crash into a building that thousands of people were working in.

I would be happy to help out with the development and installation of such a life-saving device.

Thank you.

Joseph A. Poirier,
The Toledo Air National Guard.

From a constituent who e-mailed us:
DEAR MARCY. Some thoughts about what may be some of the gifts of this tragedy. I am grateful for the heart you have always brought to your leadership.

Please lead for us in a new way. Find the power in collaboration. Power to create
The outpouring of good will over evil is evident in every act, every letter, every call, every encounter. America will surmount this new test of her will and her freedom.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Kentucky (Mr. WHITFIELD), who has waited for hours to get to the floor to speak, a Member of the Committee on Energy and Commerce.

Mr. WHITFIELD. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me time.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of this resolution. Yesterday’s treacherous acts of demented minds led to families shattered, dreams crushed, lives lost, unwritten futures tragically ended. Immediately though came America’s reaction. Rescuers charged into doomed buildings, police brave falling debris to aid the wounded. Evil attacked yesterday; America withstood the assault.

Those shocking images of smoke and dust came down to this: a father gone; a wife, a sister, gone. As sure as the fall of the Twin Towers en route to California and elsewhere. Nationwide, people rushed to blood banks, eager to have their own blood flow into the veins of those wounded by an unknown enemy.

Let that enemy note that this nation of many people is often at odds, but under pressure is united. A blow against one is a blow against all. Let the enemy know, America will respond.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Georgia (Mr. NORWOOD), a member of the Committee on Energy and Commerce.

Mr. NORWOOD. Mr. Speaker, I support this resolution to condemn these terrorists. Our hearts are broken for the loss of life. We must condemn this act. We have to treat our wounded. We pray for the mortal souls of the victims, for peace and grace of the family members, and we will mourn, and we will bury our dead.

Then what? These attacks have likely cost more American lives than we lost at Pearl Harbor, and in a far more cowardly manner.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Georgia (Mr. NORWOOD). Mr. Speaker, I support this resolution to condemn these terrorists. Our hearts are broken for the loss of life. We must condemn this act. We have to treat our wounded. We pray for the mortal souls of the victims, for peace and grace of the family members, and we will mourn, and we will bury our dead.

Mr. Speaker, there have been attacks. We are at war, and we just lost a battle. Let us move this debate to the level necessary to defend our country. I urge every Member to vote for this resolution and rapidly move to the real debate to protect America.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I am very pleased to yield the next 2 minutes to my good friend, the distinguished gentleman from Tennessee (Mr. TANNER). Mr. TANNER. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me time.

Mr. Speaker, yesterday this nation, our citizens and really the entire civilized world witnessed what is arguably the most barbaric action against humankind on this Earth since the dawn of civilization, save maybe the Holocaust.

Mr. Speaker, I think if anyone who has been listening for the last 6 hours or so has any doubt that this Congress, speaking on behalf of our constituents, has the total and complete resolve of them, our constituents, and this Nation, to take whatever action is necessary to revenge and to stamp out terrorism where it exists anywhere in the world, they must be reassured by what they have heard.

I want to join in expressing my profound sorrow for those who lost their lives, their families, and their co-citizens. I want to join in expressing how, if we were to reflect on the attacks of yesterday, we might be able to draw conclusions about the way we are going to approach the next terrorist attack.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Alabama (Mr. ADERHOLT).
a distinguished member of the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. ADERHOLT. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

Mr. Speaker, as we think of the most important things tonight, we think of prayer and we think of the people of this Nation. Prayer is sometimes spoken of as a thing of last resort, but it is actually our primary source of strength and power before, during, and after a crisis like this one. Above all, let us pray at this time for the endurance of survivors and rescue workers in New York and at the Pentagon so that those who are trapped can be rescued and returned to their loved ones. Let us pray for the President and all of those who offer him council and advice.

Mr. Speaker, we are proud beyond words of the spirit of this Nation. The Red Cross is overwhelmed with volunteers wanting to give blood. We are proud of the orderly way in which this Nation handled a day of attack and uncertainty.

We all take comfort that there are still those who will give up their time and effort to those in need; and we saw that demonstrated yesterday, and we continue to see that even now.

Earlier this year, I had an opportunity to visit Pearl Harbor and to visit the place where the U.S.S. Arizona was attacked near December 7, 1941. Along with the other Members of Congress who were there with me that day, we never thought that within 4 months, America would see even more loss of human life than that terrible day in 1941. My generation has actually seen very little of war. However, after yesterday, my generation knows what it is for these United States to be under direct attack.

The legislation before us tonight, clearly by any measure this House feels about these attacks. Furthermore, we must use our resources to make sure that as much as humanly possible, that what happened on September 11, 2001, does not happen again.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I am delighted to yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Rhode Island (Mr. KENNEDY), my dear friend and distinguished colleague.

Mr. KENNEDY of Rhode Island. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from California, and I salute him for his leadership on this issue, as I do my colleagues on the other side of the aisle. I rise in strong support of this resolution and I thank our congressional leaders for bringing it here.

The images that we have witnessed on television over the past 2 days defy comprehension. As we struggle to come to grips with the devastation we have seen, we must come together in support of those who have experienced this national tragedy on a personal level. Those who have lost their loved ones have my and all of our deepest sym-pathies. American life as we know it was tragically changed yesterday; and yet we will not find the cowardly perpetrators of this violence if we do not take the necessary steps to make sure of it.

America is not a Nation that flinches when struck, that backs down when threatened, that blinks in the face of evil. As my uncle, President Kennedy, once said, ''We stand for freedom. That is our conviction for ourselves and that is our only commitment to others. No friend, no neutral, no adversary should think otherwise.''

Our Nation will take every and all appropriate steps against those responsible for taking the lives of innocent Americans, and we will show America’s enemies that they may damage our buildings and attack our citizens, but they cannot destroy our spirit. Our armed forces and our intelligence community will hunt down and root out this terrorism. The whole Federal Government is behind this, and we are united in our efforts. We will find these perpetrators, regardless of where they are and wherever they attempt to hide. America will not rest until we bring them to justice.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. PORTMAN), a member of the Committee on the Budget and the Committee on Ways and Means.

Mr. PORTMAN. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

Mr. Speaker, in times of such a tragedy, it is very difficult to put our thoughts into words. While our minds are busy trying to comprehend just what happened in the tragic events of yesterday, our hearts are burdened with grief. We have seen the pictures of what happened, and we are beginning to hear the heart-wrenching stories of innocent lives lost. As President Bush said so well last night, “Our Nation saw evil.”

But in the wake of this tragedy, we have also seen something else: the goodness of the American people and the strength of the American spirit. I think of the elderly man my wife saw yesterday afternoon placing small American flags carefully along the highway in front of the gas station where he worked. I think of a story I heard last night from a friend who said that she waited 4½ hours in line at a blood bank where he worked. I think of the official worker I saw on television sometime yesterday on some TV show, one of the World Trade Center office workers, who got out of the building just before it collapsed. She said, as she was coming down the stairs, there were firefighters going up, firefighters who lost their lives, even as they fought to save the lives of others.

Yes, Mr. Speaker, our Nation did see evil yesterday; but we also saw something else. In the proud display of our flag throughout this land, we saw patriotism. In the outpouring of support we saw at local blood banks, we saw compassion; and in the heroic actions of those very firefighters and rescue workers, we saw courage and sacrifice. In these noble actions around this country, some big and some small, we saw our Nation’s character.

Now we call on this character, both to help continue finding our fellow Americans and to track down the perpetrators of these unspeakable crimes. We must find those responsible; and when we do, they must suffer the consequences of their actions. We must always remember that though America may be attacked by terrorists, America will not be defeated. This attack may shock us, but it also unites and strengthens us.

Today, our Nation stands tall, as it will continue to stand in the days and years to come, graced by God and as a beacon for freedom and justice for the entire world.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Before yielding to the gentleman from Illinois, I want to share with all of my colleagues a statement issued by our allies of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

"On September 12, the North Atlantic Council met in response to the appalling attacks perpetrated yesterday against the United States. The Council agreed that if it is determined that this attack was directed from abroad against the United States, it shall be regarded as an action covered by Article 5 of the Washington Treaty, which states that an armed attack against one or more of the allies in Europe or North America shall be considered an attack against them all.

"The determination that this attack was a serious threat to peace and stability in Europe or North America shall be considered an attack against them all.

"Of the Heads of Government meeting in Washington in 1999, they paid tribute to the success of the Alliance in ensuring the freedom of its members during the Cold War and in making possible a Europe that was whole and free. But they also recognized the existence of a wide variety of risks to security, some of them quite unlike those that had called NATO into existence.

"Article 5 of the Washington Treaty stipulates that in the event of attacks falling within its purview, each Ally..."
Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of this resolution and will stand with the President to find those responsible and to bring swift punishment for these reprehensible acts of violence.

Mr. Speaker, my colleagues and I will stand with our President to ensure those responsible are held accountable for their actions. Any nation that supports or harbors these terrorists should be retaliated against by the United States to the full extent of our military capabilities.

Mr. Speaker, today, as heroic men and women in New York and Washington continue to search for victims, we pray for the families and friends of those who have lost loved ones and those who still wait to receive word on the missing.

Yesterday, after witnessing the horrors at the World Trade Center and the Pentagon, citizens of this great Nation demonstrated their courage and their willingness to help their neighbors in need.

In my home State of New Jersey and in my district, thousands of residents came forward and contributed blood for the victims of the World Trade Center. So many of my constituents answered the call for blood that many had to wait in line for several hours before they were able to assist.

Owners of ferry boats in Atlantic Highlands, New Jersey transported displaced workers trapped on the tip of Manhattan to a safer spot in New Jersey. Emergency personnel, doctors, and nurses from New Jersey have worked around the clock to assist the courageous firefighters and police officers in New York.

The reaction to this tragedy by the American people is proof of how strong this Nation is. The government, including this Congress, continues to operate. We will likely bring up legislation to authorize the allocation of Federal aid for the rescue efforts in New York and Washington.

Mr. Speaker, terrorism does not work against the United States. It will only strengthen our will to stamp out this evil.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey, Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of House Joint Resolution 61.

Mr. Speaker, terrorism cannot be destroyed by cowardly, faceless acts. Never, never will we be defeated. The United States has been violated as a Nation, but we are united. We will pick ourselves up and face the challenges of the coming days, weeks, and months.

West Virginians and others around the country are outraged and sickened by yesterday’s attack, but I ask my constituents, my colleagues, and my fellow Americans not to let the outrage and outrage, and our compassion and cooperation. The heroic efforts of so many Americans are inspiring and heartwarming.

Now is the time for us to unite and follow our Nation’s leaders with full faith. I know that the United States is the greatest country in the world, and I feel blessed to enjoy the freedoms that we share. God bless America.

Mr. SMITH, Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of this resolution and will stand with the President to find those responsible and to bring swift punishment for these reprehensible acts of violence.

Mr. Speaker, we must not let these attacks on our country weaken our resolve to maintain a free and open society that all countries can emulate. We must now show the world that our country will continue to stand strong in the face of tragedy. We must show the cowards responsible that they will not win. If we place our faith in God, pray for wisdom, and pray that God be our pilot, we will succeed and be victorious.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of House Joint Resolution 61. Today, my heart is heavy, filled with sorrow and outrage. Today, there are children who will be unable to hug their parents again, and there are parents who will never hear the voice of their children exclaim, Hi, Mom; Hi, Dad. So today, I join with my fellow West Virginians and my colleagues to offer our tears, our support, and our prayers.

The events of yesterday bring our perspective into sharp focus, reshaping and strengthening our notions of freedom, democracy, and peace. An attack that claimed the lives of our loved ones and attempts to destroy our national resolve hurts America.

But make no mistake, we will rise to fight this horrible offense. The heart and soul of the American people cannot be destroyed by cowardly, faceless acts. Never, never will we be defeated. The United States has been violated as a Nation, but we are united. We will pick ourselves up and face the challenges of the coming days, weeks, and months.

West Virginians and others around the country are outraged and sickened by yesterday’s attack, but I ask my constituents, my colleagues, and my fellow Americans not to let the outrage and our compassion and cooperation. The heroic efforts of so many Americans are inspiring and heartwarming.

Now is the time for us to unite and follow our Nation’s leaders with full faith. I know that the United States is the greatest country in the world, and I feel blessed to enjoy the freedoms that we share. God bless America.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I rise to join with my colleagues in Congress and all Americans to express support for this resolution and to stand by our President as we weigh down by the tragedies affecting our Nation, I stand in appreciation of the strength and resilience shown by Americans here and abroad.

There have been countless examples of terrorism in the face of an unbelievable tragedy. Hundreds of rescue workers continue to work and look for survivors. Thousands of Americans have... lined up to give blood, and all across the country, citizens are offering sincere prayers. Their faith in America proves that this country will prevail in the face of our tragedy. My prayers are with the victims and their families.

This resolution further confirms and makes clear that rescue efforts and investigators are receiving and will continue to receive the full resources of the Federal Government.

The cowards who helped perpetrate this act will not get away. They and those who offer them assistance and haven will be punished. Terrorism against America will not be tolerated. This resolution clearly sends a message to those responsible that they cannot hide, and they will face the wrath and justice of the United States of America. America will remain united as we rebuild and recover in the aftermath of these tragic losses.

May this message be clear: The spirit of democracy and freedom that America embodies will survive and cannot be shaken by violence or terror. I urge all of my colleagues to support this measure to send a clear message that America will not tolerate terrorism and will punish those who commit such appalling acts.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I am dedicated to yield 2 minutes to my friend and colleague, the gentleman from California (Mr. HONDA).

Mr. HONDA. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me.

Mr. Speaker, I rise today to join my colleagues to offer my prayers to families of the victims, those that have been injured or lost, those who seek bravely to find life among the rubble.

I join with my colleagues in strong support of this resolution. All four flights yesterday were bound for my home State of California. Many families in the impacted area are still waiting for family members and loved ones who will never return.

In their memory, I am proud to stand today with all of my colleagues to inform the enemies of the United States that they may have shaken the foundations of our buildings, but they will never, they will never shake the foundation of our democracy. The unwavering strength of our democracy can be found in our people and in our beliefs and in the enduring ideal of our Republic that states “All men are created equal.”

Mr. Speaker, many have likened yesterday’s attacks to the surprise attack made upon Pearl Harbor in 1941. When I saw the images of Americans offering compassion in the streets of New York and at the Pentagon, I firmly believe that we as Americans have lived up to the lineage of valor from that fateful day.

I firmly believe that we will find those responsible, and that the fullest measure of our justice will be meted out. There is one legacy I pray that we do not embrace: the abandonment of our most cherished ideals when blinded by rage.

Former Secretary of State Warren Christopher said it best last night: “We must learn from the past to make sure that we do not repeat the injustices visited upon one ethnic group in 1941.” I pray we bring those responsible to justice, and that we do so justly, in a manner unclouded by hatred or racial prejudice. That is the foundation of our democracy.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Connecticut (Mr. SHAYS), the chairman of the Subcommittee on National Security, Veterans’ Affairs and International Relations of the Committee on Government Reform and Oversight.

Mr. SHAYS. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from California (Mr. LANTOS), a senior member of the Committee on International Relations of the Committee on Government Reform and Oversight.

Indeed, our American family has witnessed evil at times throughout its history. Whether it be against the innocent bystander in the annihilation of Hiroshima and Nagasaki, or the grass roots opposition to the ethnic cleansing in Bosnia, we have always responded with action that exemplifies the very best of what we stand for.

And it continues. Yesterday, with the daring of our rescue workers, with the complete compassion of strangers standing in lines 800 deep to give their own blood, the government wholly unified as one voice behind a Commander in Chief. We have shown the world that it is impossible to break our will in America. Our country will move on, our mission still intact. We will march forward with all conviction to fight for freedom.

Mr. Speaker, make no mistake, make no mistake about how resolved we are. We are resolute in our stance that those hateful warmongers who perpetrated these atrocities will be hunted as predators, the very predators that they are. They will be punished in a way that is unmistakable in the defense of our country and all we hold dear.

Justice, I say to the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. SMITH) and the gentleman from California (Mr. LANTOS), must prevail, even though the heavens may crumble.

God bless America. God bless our families.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Iowa (Mr. LEACH), a senior member of the Committee on International Relations and former chairman of the Committee on Banking and Financial Services, and now on the Committee on Financial Services.

Mr. LEACH. Mr. Speaker, there is nothing more difficult than to provide perspective to events of this week, but it would be self-evident that two of the profoundest lessons are that all societies, particularly democracies, are vulnerable to terror and that there is a growing breach between elements of the Islamic world and Judeo-Christian values.
In this context, it is imperative that those responsible for heinous acts be held accountable at the bar of justice. Likewise, it is critical that any response be fair as well as firm so that an action-reaction cycle is not precipitated.

Force is justified against terrorists and their harborers, not Islam or innocents. I stress this point because from an American perspective, terrorism is the enemy. We respect Islam and Islamic nations. The only brief we hold is against parties that manipulate hatred and employ tactics of terror.

Civilized values, whether of the East or of the West, are rooted in just behavior and fundamentals of faith. Accordingly, at this traumatic juncture, the U.S. has an obligation to emphasize our identity with those individuals of faith who derive their values from the Koran, as well as the Old and New Testament.

The barbarous acts precipitated in New York and Washington are more crimes against civilization and humanity than attacks on the United States as a Nation. Hence, as we seek accountability, we look for the support of faithful people and justice seekers of all societies in a war to eliminate the cowardice of terrorism.

The despicable acts of this past week do not put American security particularly at risk; it is civilization and civilized values which demand protection.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. SCOTT).

Mr. SCOTT. Mr. Speaker, I rise with my colleagues in support of the resolution.

Yesterday freedom's bell rang for thousands of civilian and military personnel as it has for over 200 years. Mr. Speaker, on December 8, 1941, President Roosevelt and his message to Congress declared, "Yesterday, a date which will live in infamy, the United States of America was suddenly and deliberately attacked." Likewise, we today declared that the date of September 11, 2001, will also live in infamy.

Yesterday's attack is in the order of magnitude beyond anything we have ever experienced in the history of the United States. As many as five to ten times more lives lost than at Pearl Harbor, lives of Americans from all walks of life. At this tragic time, America must speak with one voice and support the President in his efforts to hold all of those responsible accountable for their actions.

Our thoughts and prayers go out to the families who lost loved ones in this great tragedy.

The American extends its greatest appreciation to rescue personnel who responded to this tragedy, especially those who risked or gave their lives in an effort to help others and those who will continue the grim work in the days and weeks to come.

May God bless America.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as she may to the gentleman from Wyoming (Mrs. CUBIN).

Mrs. CUBIN. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the resolution.

Mr. Speaker, there are no words to describe the anguish we and all Americans feel on this day. Our innocence has been stolen as we discover our vulnerability to the acts of zealous madmen.

President Bush reassured Americans last night that, while those who detest freedom may destroy brick and mortar and even take the lives of innocents, they can not destroy the American spirit. We can take comfort and confidence in our national resolve and depend on it to help us overcome this temporary setback.

Clearly, we must gather the American spirit and rally around our Commander-in-Chief. We must support his efforts to make crystal clear the fact that the American people are united and resolute; that we will take a stand against attacks on our sovereignty; and that we will avenge this grievous act.

I am sure the entire membership of this body joins me in supporting the President in the crisis and in praying to God for guidance.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I yield 6 minutes to the gentleman from Arizona (Mr. SHADEGG), a member of the Committee on Energy and Commerce.

Mr. SHADEGG. Mr. Speaker, on December 7, 1941, America was forthrightly challenged by a foe. A foe that came in marked planes and attacked military targets. They stood forward to defend themselves and their possessions. That was the Pearl Harbor attack.

Yesterday, America sustained a cowardly attack. Our foes came in unmarked planes and attacked civilian targets. They stood forward to defend themselves and their possessions. That was the Pearl Harbor attack.

Yesterday, America sustained a cowardly attack. Our foes came in unmarked planes and attacked civilian targets. They stood forward to defend themselves and their possessions. That was the Pearl Harbor attack.

Yesterday, America sustained a cowardly attack. Our foes came in unmarked planes and attacked civilian targets. They stood forward to defend themselves and their possessions. That was the Pearl Harbor attack.

Yesterday, America sustained a cowardly attack. Our foes came in unmarked planes and attacked civilian targets. They stood forward to defend themselves and their possessions. That was the Pearl Harbor attack.

I am sure the entire membership of this body joins me in supporting the President in the crisis and in praying to God for guidance.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as she may to the gentleman from Utah (Mr. WINTER).
Mr. SOUDER. Mr. Speaker, it is hard for us, as we have been in one of centers of the firestorm, to react emotionially as we have tried to deal with this issue with our workmates on the second floor of the building. We can see the pictures like other Americans. But last night, when I went home to my apartment and actually could look out the window and see the smoke from the Pentagon across the interstate highway, the smoke from my apartment, it became a little more real.

Until the Republican Study Committee organized this first group of Members to go over this afternoon and we were standing there at the site, we thought that it is just a small measure of what they must feel in New York. The ability to thank our workers who are strained, who are stressed, who are now going to try to find the bodies, the dads and the moms and the brothers and the sisters of Americans who have been brutally assassinated by terrorists and to talk about how in their offices now they have the names and how they are targeting where they are going to go in and try to find them.

The building is still burning in some parts as they try to find the black box. The men were trying to figure out whether the structure was safe for them to go in. Yet, if they do not go in soon, they cannot get the black box out and this holds valuable information. So time is of the essence.

We wanted to personally thank, in our small way, those Americans so dedicated and make it clear to anybody around the world that this is a Nation of love but also a Nation that is angry. This is a Nation that is very passionate and cares but also wants some answers and some results. Our heart goes out to them; and I thank the gentleman from Arizona (Mr. SHADEGG), the leader of the Republican Study Committee, for organizing this because it was an experience that many of us will never forget.

Mr. SHADEGG. Mr. Speaker, as we stood outside of the building, witnessing the devastation, listening to the descriptions, the fact is that from the outside we can only see a part of what is going on. There is vastly more destruction inside the building as it is spread out and there are dead bodies there. I was struck by the comment of one worker. He had been there when the plane went in the building. He had seen the building moments after its first impact.

He said to me his most difficult moment was not then and not when he was told perhaps there is a second plane en route and their lives were in danger. His toughest moment was when he went home last night and his 5-year-old asked him who would do this and why would they portray such an act, why would they bring down an airplane, why would they seek to kill so many people.

It is incomprehensible when you see the death, when you see the devastation, and when you understand it. But make no mistake, our opponents need no other stimulus than the fact of this building. The American flag, the symbol of freedom, Old Glory was there yesterday. It is there today. It will be there tomorrow. We will not surrender until we have found them and we have exacted retribution.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. MORAN), my friend and distinguished colleague.

Mr. MORAN of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, we cannot yet grasp the impact of Tuesday’s events on the future of American life. In Northern Virginia, our fear and anxiety are almost overwhelming. All of us know someone who works at the Pentagon. They are friends and family members active in our schools and churches. In short, they are good people who have devoted their lives to the defense of freedom. Our thoughts and prayers are with the entire family of Pentagon employees. They have demonstrated once again the particular dangers to which our military and Federal civil servants are often subjected.

While thousands of innocent lives have been lost, this much is certain. The perpetrators of this horrible act must not succeed in weakening the United States or its core values. We must not retreat from our legitimate role as the leader of the free world.

Where American interests are at stake or where the cause of freedom and democracy can be appropriately advanced, American foreign policy must be one of active engagement. American leadership in promoting peace and democracy will put the Nation at odds with terrorists and others bent on evil.

Tuesday’s events, as horrible and as tragic as they are, do not mark the first time America has been targeted because its most basic values are correct. Fear of terrorists must not deter us from carrying on our policies just as we have for more than 200 years.

America must also stand firm, though, in its commitment to civil liberties for all of our people. In the coming months, all of us will have to make accommodations to heightened security at our airports, Federal buildings, and other large landmarks. We can and must make those accommodations and in a manner that is fully consistent with the U.S. Constitution.

We will have to devote more of our national resources toward intelligence gathering and counterterrorism. We must resist the dark temptation to give in to terrorism. We will ask this Congress to stand with me in providing the funding necessary to our war effort and to do so without coming away stronger words to describe that act and that tragedy. This was an act of war, and we need to respond accordingly. We believe we live in a free society; and because we do, there are some things that we will never do, some risk that we are always willing to accept in order to live in a free society. But at the same time there are things that we need to do.

The first thing we need to do is to respond to this act of terror. I was heartened by the President’s statement last night that he draws no distinction between those who committed these acts and those who harbor terrorism, those who assist terrorism. We should draw no distinction either, and I would urge this Congress to stand behind the President in this regard.

Seeing Americans all over the country, we have been proud once again to be an American. Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. GREEN), my friend and valued colleague.

Mr. GREEN of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. GREEN), my friend and valued colleague.

Mr. GREEN of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from California for yielding me time.

I rise today, like a lot of my colleagues, with a heavy heart for anyone who lost a loved one in yesterday’s tragic and cowardly attack. Yesterday was one of America’s darkest hours. Our thoughts and our prayers are with the families of the victims and those who were injured or killed yesterday and with all Americans who are strained, who are stressed, who are mourning.

America is coming together and focusing on bringing the full weight of our Nation into recovery effort. We... against all freedom-loving people not only against the United States, but their act of war was their deeds while praising these acts.

I strongly support President Bush and his position that countries providing safe havens to known terrorists be treated no differently than the terrorists themselves. We have the ability to deliver destruction of biblical proportion to carry out these horrible acts need to be punished, either through our court system or through the reach of our military.

To the people of America, I ask you to continue to keep the victims of this attack in your prayers and pray for the safety of those engaged in our rescue efforts.

This cowardly attack was condemned throughout the globe but was cheered in the streets of Iraq, East Jerusalem, and the West Bank. It is truly a sicken society that teaches its children such hate. For them to cheer at this terrible loss of innocent life is something I will make a point of remembering.

The new war against terrorism began yesterday, but the healing begins today. Our enemies hoped yesterday to weaken America, to hurt it, but they failed. America will come out of this horrible event stronger, more united, and more powerful than ever.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Northern Virginia (Mr. TOM DAVIS).

Mr. TOM DAVIS of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I rise in favor of this resolution.

The event of yesterday, of course, will leave a lasting impact in our community in Northern Virginia.

Mr. GRUCCI. Mr. Speaker, I rise as so many do here this evening to speak about the atrocities that have happened with a very heavy heart. In my district there are men and women who work yesterday morning to work at the World Trade Center and they never returned home. Their children have no mother or father, and their families will forever be touched. I ask why. Why does something like this happen? Was that a military installation that was targeted for attack? The answer is, no. It was a building where men and women shopped and worked, and children from schools would go to ride the elevator to the top floor to look out over the horizon of the New York City skylines to New Jersey and out to Long Island.

I ask myself did those people do something wrong. The answer is no, they did nothing wrong. Why? The answer is there is no answer to a question of people. When people are bored to be evil as those who have perpetrated this crime against society have been, there is only one answer, and that answer is to eradicate that evil from our society so that freedom-loving people and millions of people live with the liberties that we enjoy in this country, the same kinds of liberties that have brought many people through the globe. Any failure on our part to act decisively against these mass murderers will only encourage more such acts against other peoples and other countries.

Our country has put aside the partisan squabbling, and we stand united behind our President to give him the resources he needs to seek out and punish those responsible for these cowardly acts.

We thank our allies and other leaders across the world for their expressions of support and sympathy; and working together, we can rid this planet of the terrorist menace that knows no boundaries, obeys no rules, respects no life.

Mr. Speaker, this resolution is only a start, but it demonstrates our determination as a Nation to stand shoulder to shoulder united as one people, to bring justice to these attackers and normalize terrorism.

My deepest sympathy to the families of these victims and those awaiting word on loved ones who cannot be accounted for. My appreciation to the rescue workers, the police, firefighters and medical personnel and volunteers who have risked their lives to help their brothers and sisters. These Americans and countless volunteers have again demonstrated the American spirit at this time of crisis.

To those military and Federal employees who were targets of the suicide bombers, they once again, as in Oklahoma City, have paid the supreme price for anger directed at our political system. They are heroes who will forever be remembered for the sacrifice they made for freedom. History will never forget their heroic sacrifice.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. McGovern), my distinguished colleague.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of this resolution; but tonight I would like to take a moment to tell my colleagues about three of the lives so cruelly ended yesterday by nameless cowards.

Tara Shea Creamer, Dianne Snyder and their families, along with all of the victims of this tragedy, in their thoughts and prayers.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from New York (Mr. Grucci).

Mr. GRUCCI. Mr. Speaker, I rise as through our gates and through the outstretched arms of the Statute of Liberty, to find a new home and to find a life in this country because we allow those freedoms of liberties to our people who live here.

Mr. Speaker, yesterday is not going to take that away. There was an attempt to rock the seat of government of this country, to take out our leaders and destroy our economics. All of those have failed. The only thing that has succeeded was the pain, the suffering, and the needless death of so many innocent people, the number of which is staggering, and may be as high as 20,000 to 30,000 people will be found to be the victims of that terrible ordeal.

Our hearts go out to the families, and the Federal Government is marshaling its resources to help in the recovery and to help in trying to find those who may still be twisted, mangled and that wreck of a building that was a landmark of this great Nation.

When that is completed, and as we continue to discuss this today, we will find those who are responsible and bring them to the swift justice that they deserve. No place can they hide on this planet; nowhere can they find refuge from what they did yesterday.

Mr. Speaker, I wholeheartedly support this resolution. The prayers of this house, the prayers of the world are with those families who have been touched in Washington and New York, and the families who are the victims of those plane crashes. God bless America and God bless those who are in pain and suffering tonight.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from North Dakota (Mr. POMEROY).

Mr. POMEROY. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the resolution before us.

Today, Americans the Nation over went to work with a unity and a purpose borne of the unspeakable tragedy we suffered as a country yesterday. We are all filled with a deep sense of loss for the thousands of innocent victims, their families and friends. We are all as Americans in awe of the heroism we have seen by our police and our firefighters, as well as that from ordinary Americans who have risked or even given their lives in courageous efforts to help others.

Mr. Speaker, as Americans we all want to pitch in and help in the immediate recovery effort; and the long, slow lines of the Nation’s blood banks will bear witness.

As Americans, we also know that we are in a war today. We are at war with terrorists who seek to rob us of our way of life, just as they robbed us of our countrymen in their cowardly attacks of yesterday. They will not win their war against the people of the United States of America.

Our freedoms, liberties and collective strength of united American people represent a far more mighty force than these murderers could ever have imagined. We are applying that strength today in an urgent, focused effort to identify those responsible. And when we know the plans, the intentions, the motives and the methods that created these terrible acts, we will render a fearsome punishment in response, not solely to account for the lives taken and the losses inflicted against us, but in defense of freedom for us and people around the world.

Despite the devastation and horrific loss of life wrought by yesterday’s attacks, the terrorists failed to achieve their objective. They have not even made a dent in the very source of American greatness: a strong, united people living freely in the greatest democracy the world has ever known.

In honor and loving memory to all who died and their families, we will not rest until this war these terrorists cowardly launched yesterday is won and won completely, and our country and the world made safer as a result.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. PETRI), the chairman of the Subcommittee on Highways and Transit.

Mr. PETRI. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the resolution before us. Tuesday’s terrorist attacks were designed to create fear and chaos, but the real effect has been to pull us together. Through a systematic act of war, the terrorists have awakened a sleeping giant, and as a result they will discover how effective we can be now that we are sufficiently united and motivated.

Mr. Speaker, our friends in the British Parliament and German Bundestag have made it clear to me that they regard yesterday’s attack as an attack against civilization, not just against the United States; and I believe that attitude is shared by most people around the world and by most of the world’s governments will cooperate with us in a spirit of resolute solidarity as we develop a strong, intelligent response.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from Ohio (Mrs. JONES).

Mrs. JONES of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

Mr. Speaker, yesterday, in addition to losing thousands and thousands of our fellow citizens, loved ones, parents, moms, brothers and sisters, we were attacked at three symbolic buildings, a financial center, a military center, and the government buildings which Americans recognize, visit and study. The financial center, the World Trade Building, where wheelings and dealings that affect the entire globe take place, indeed the actions themselves, breaking the skyline of New York City, the economic beacon of the West. The Pentagon, where our strategists, our generals, get together, the wizards of what is best for national security. And Washington, D.C., the very center of the free government and representative democracy.

We were stunned in disbelief, confused in grasping the scope of the hatred behind such an act, and yesterday was a very low and sad day for the United States of America. But it was also a defining moment, because Americans, which are so often divided in philosophy and geography, by region, by politics, by race and by economics, we are now one. We are united in our patriotism, our resolve and our commitment.

This United States Congress will get behind the proper government agencies, the FBI, the CIA, the military, the Attorney General, we will give them the resources they need to identify and plan a strategy to retaliate.

And, Mr. Speaker, the citizens of the United States of America will get back on our airplanes. We will return to our workplaces. And we will resume our government in this great and free country, and this land of freedom will reign on and the bell will be heard all over the world.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. BROWN) a valued member of the Committee on International Relations.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I rise to honor the victims and the families, especially the firefighters and the police officers who gave their lives.

Mr. Speaker, no words can properly express the emotions we all feel regarding the attacks in New York and Washington. My deepest sympathies go to the families and friends of those Americans taken from us in this brutal, senseless manner.

Thousands of military, law enforcement, and rescue personnel are currently assisting the victims and piecing together the clues that will lead to the capture and appropriate punishment of the perpetrators of these horrendous acts. At this time of crisis in our nation, I urge all Americans to exercise patience and caution and to search for ways to help fellow citizens. I also urge my fellow Americans not to allow these unpardonable acts to diminish our shared faith in the United States or to compromise the values that make ours the freest country in the world. The celebrated resolve of the American people to overcome adversity must and will prevail. With the memory of those lost, America will persevere.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I am very pleased to yield 2 minutes to my distinguished colleague and good friend, the gentlewoman from Minnesota (Ms. McCOLLUM).

Ms. McCOLLUM. Mr. Speaker, yesterday’s terrorist attack was a crime against the American people and it was a crime against humanity. Calling this attack an act of war does not begin to accurately describe this barbaric attack.

Today, we stand with our President, the men and women of law enforcement, and with our Armed Forces as we dedicate our Nation to achieving swift and appropriate justice for the victims of this terrorist attack.

Today, we have been inspired by the courage of Americans risking their lives to rescue and heal their neighbors. Today, we are comforted by America’s prayers for the injured and those mourning the loss of loved ones. This horrific act, as we Americans reaffirm our highest beliefs in freedom, democracy and justice.

On behalf of the people of Minnesota’s Fourth District, our hearts and prayers are with the victims of this terrible crime.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Florida (Mr. PUTNAM), a member of the Committee on Agriculture and the Committee on the Budget.

Mr. PUTNAM. Mr. Speaker, America changed forever yesterday. Our innocence lost, we have had the horrors of faraway capitals delivered to our own. Our freedom at stake, we have resolved to fight back at all forms of terror and tyranny. We have seen Americans rally behind the blood drives to aid the wounded, shopkeepers who opened up their stores to weary, shell-shocked fellow citizens, refused payment and bid only “God bless you.”

I was with the President yesterday in Florida when the initial attack occurred, and aboard Air Force One throughout much of the day as the breadth of the horror unfolded. The President was calm, deliberate, and thoughtful as he received wave after wave of bad news and analysis. He immediately reached out to his national security team and settled into his Commander in Chief responsibilities. He rightly made the decision to go to a secure location to manage the crisis as it developed. I am sure all Americans are grateful, as I am, that the threats against the White House and Air Force One were not carried out.

Mr. Speaker, the fabric of American life was frayed but not torn yesterday. It was sullied with the blood of innocent American civilians. But our American way will not be diminished, and America will not be tarnished by these agents of evil. May America endure and prosper forever.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 2 minutes to my valued colleague, the gentleman from Kentucky (Mr. LUCAS).

Mr. LUCAS of Kentucky. Mr. Speaker, I rise to add my voice to the outpouring of grief and outrage we are feeling today. My condolences and those of my fellow Kentuckians go out to the families who have lost loved ones as a result of yesterday’s tragic events. The victims of these cowardly attacks were innocent Americans of every color and creed. Heartbreak is the only word that can adequately describe what I felt as I witnessed one of the most despicable crimes in our history.

Franklin Delano Roosevelt described something that must live in infamy. He described that day’s attacks upon Pearl Harbor as an unpardonable and dastardly act. I say to my colleagues here in Congress, and my fellow Americans watching us here today, that the President of the United States of America was right when he welcomed yesterday to the country to see for himself the thousands of peace-loving Americans rivals that evil which plunged our Nation into World War II some 60 years ago. And make no mistake, Mr. Speaker, yesterday’s attack was nothing less than an act of war.

The terrorist forces against us would see us brought to our knees and see us shattering in terror. They would have us back away from the freedoms we hold dear. But they must be made to understand that those freedoms are the result of 200 years of struggle. Nothing within the terrorists’ power can daunt this great democracy and its resolve.

It was John F. Kennedy who said, “Let every nation know, whether it wishes us well or ill, that we shall pay any price, bear any burden, meet any hardship, support any friend, oppose any foe, to assure the survival and the success of liberty. This much we pledge and more.” The circumstances have changed since President Kennedy said these words. The sentiment has not. God bless America.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Florida (Mr. MILLER), a member of the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. MILLER of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I join my colleagues and millions of Americans in their shock, sorrow and outrage at yesterday’s horrific attack. I join with them, too, in the resolution to stand united against terror and against cowards that would attack innocent men, women and children, and against the fear that would overthrow our liberty. We will recover. We will rebuild. And we will continue to stand proudly, a shining city on a hill, a target for envy and hatred, and a beacon of hope to so many more.

To the thousands of victims of yesterday’s attack, their family and friends, we offer nothing less than the full support of the most powerful nation on earth. All of us share in this tragedy, and my heart and prayers go out to the friends and family of the victims, including the two employees of the Census Bureau’s New York Regional Office. Words cannot soothe the pain of this loss, but I pray that it is some consolation, to those who grieve, that a day of mourning bestows.

Already, the armies of compassion are mobilized. Amid yesterday’s terrible destruction was also great heroism. Police, firemen, and rescue workers put themselves in grave danger in order to save the lives of others. Volunteers worked through the night. People lined up around the block and around the country to give blood. Yesterday was a call to action and America answered.

No one answered more readily than our Commander in Chief. President Bush’s day began yesterday with a visit to Booker Elementary School in my congressional district in Sarasota, Florida. The gentleman from Florida was not permitted to enter the school, or to meet with any of the children until yesterday. President Bush welcomed him to the school when we learned of the attack. We joined him aboard Air Force One to return to Washington. En route to Andrews Air Force Base, we received a credible security threat to Air Force One. Because of this threat, we were diverted to Barksdale Air Force Base in Louisiana. During the flight, we met with President Bush and he updated us on this tragedy. My respect for him has only increased as a result of the experience. I witnessed a President fully informed, engaged, and resolute in easing the pain of the victims’ families and our Nation, as well as finding and punishing those responsible.

To those who committed this act of war and those who would stand with them or hide them or assist them in any way, I offer only scorn, defiance, and resolution.

Scorn, that small men with evil intent would think for a moment that a cowardly attack against innocent men, women and children would ever constitute any kind of victory. Defiance, that we will not allow fear to compromise our liberty or our way of life.

And resolution, that those responsible will be found, will be brought to justice, along with any who would follow their example.

These people sought to visit terror upon our country but it is they who will live in fear, their nights spent in terror and their days spent in hiding, until justice is done.

Mr. Speaker, I join our President and our country in sorrow and resolution.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 2 minutes to my good friend and colleague, the gentleman from California (Mr. LANTOS) for yielding me this time.

Mr. Speaker, it was 187 years ago this very evening that in Baltimore, Maryland, at Fort McHenry, this Nation, this young Nation, won its second war of independence. It was the beginning of the end of the War of 1812. Francis Scott Key on this very evening 187 years ago wrote his inspirational poem that became our National Anthem.

In that third verse, he wrote some words that are helpful for us this evening:

From the terror of flight or the gloom of the grave.

And the Star-Spangled Banner in triumph doth wave.

We survived the attack by a hostile power and became the strongest Nation in the world, and we will survive this attack on our democratic principles, and we will grow even stronger.

Marylanders have once again shown their patriotism. Mr. Speaker, the calls to our office from doctors, from firefighters, from ordinary citizens offering their help has been heartwarming.

Let me just conclude by the words that were included on a page of one of our major papers in the editorial section, with the photo of Lady Liberty still stands tall, shrouded in smoke, covered in dust and blood. She is crying, she is afraid, she is angry, but she will not yield.

Mr. WELDON of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, I think first tonight about the quiet efforts of thousands of ordinary people yesterday who were called upon to do extraordinary things: the firefighters and EMS personnel who climbed up the stairs of the World Trade Center towers while thousands of their fellow citizens were going down. Why did they do that, knowing full well that they might not survive? Because they could save people, strangers who were trapped inside. How many did they save we will never know. Those brave heroes are no longer here to tell us their stories. They perished, sadly, when the towers collapsed. Who will tell their story now? We have only the testimony of those they helped, those who did not make it out, and, of course, we have the thanks and prayers of a grateful Nation.

How about the workers at our airports who were called upon to land hundreds of planes all across America at airports large and small? They landed them all safely. That is a story that did not make the news. And the people in the World Trade Center and the Pentagon, just folks who work a job day by day, just like the rest of us. They got up, went to work, kissed their spouse and their kids, and never came home. And of the passengers and crew of the four hijacked planes, innocent people just trying to get from place to place on a busy day. They were going to business meetings, family outings or vacations.

And so we ask as we take stock of our loss, what cowards could perpetrate such acts? Who would kill innocent people on such a massive scale? Dozens of our colleagues have said it correctly. We are at war. So let us today prepare for a war. A Declaration of War has been drafted. I will circulate it tomorrow for my colleagues to co-sponsor. We have a unique responsibility here in this House, for the Constitution, Article I, section 8, gives the Congress, and the Congress alone, the constitutional function of the Federal Government to provide for the common defense.

Our response should be swift and strong, one that will send a message, loud and clear, to terrorists around the world: we will not allow this to become the kind of country where our children and grandchildren will always fear, a fear of terrorism.

Our country is in a state of shock, but we are resolved to not let these groups alter our Nation’s livelihood. We will overcome this tragedy, and we will become a stronger Nation because of it.

Mr. Speaker, yesterday’s attacks were a threat, not only to our people, to our children, to our grandchildren, but to our freedom, and, indeed, the American way of life. Simply put, they were acts of cowardice that will not be tolerated.

Our response should be swift and strong, one that will send a message, loud and clear, to terrorists around the world: we will not allow this to become the kind of country where our children and grandchildren will always fear, a fear of terrorism.

Make no mistake about it, the President, the administration and this Congress will stand united as one America in our endeavor to root out, not only those who harbor and support such evil and inhuman acts of terror.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. UPTON), the chairman of the Subcommittee on Telecommunications and the Internet of the Committee on Energy and Commerce.
Mr. UPTON. Mr. Speaker, this has been a long day, and somehow we knew last night that this nightmare would not go away when daybreak came this morning. This has been a long day, particularly for those families that have lost a loved one, and also for the emergency personnel, friends, and neighbors. This has been a long day for America, as we come to grips with this attack on America and the values that we hold so dearly.

I spoke earlier this afternoon with a family in my district whose son, Brad, worked on the 83rd floor of the World Trade Center. Their news was no news, no word, no good.

As we struggle with our grief and pray for those families, we are reminded that this is a country that stands for freedom and justice, and, yes, we will prevail. We stand here tonight united behind our Nation's efforts to seek swift justice. We will find all the people who orchestrated and participated in this evil web. I have no doubts. These mass murderers, wherever they are, will be identified and, yes, justice will be served.

Tonight I participated, like thousands of Americans, in a prayer vigil, and I said a prayer for Brad. I asked for a miracle to save him and so many others like him.

I say to our fellow citizens across the country, thank you. Thank you for your prayers for us, for the leaders of this country, and the so many public servants. They are appreciated, and they help right the mayhem to lift us all.

Yes, we are united. We are the United States of America, God bless America.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 2 minutes to my friend and colleague, the gentlewoman from California (Ms. LOFGREN).

Ms. LOFGREN. Mr. Speaker, yesterday America experienced tragedy. With the collapse of the World Trade Center and the penetration of the Pentagon by hijacked aircraft, thousands of Americans lost their lives. We all mourn, and we are all resolved to take new steps to secure again the safety of our country.

We Americans stand together now. As Americans, we will insist that these American deaths be accounted for and that American lives lost will not come without an extraordinarily high cost to those who are our enemies and those who help and support our enemy.

As we move ahead through each day, there is something that we must remember and take comfort in: a great nation defined by great peoples, that saw this greatness yesterday in the heroism of firefighters and police and volunteers who tried to save others. We saw it in the victims on planes who, while facing certain death, called ground information that today are helping us put together the evidentiary pieces to identify our enemies.

We Americans, our heritage may be Irish, Chinese, German, Italian, and many more; we are Catholic, Hindu, Jewish, Muslim, Protestant, and more. It is important to remember that it is not how we look or how we dress or the religion we follow that distinguishes us as Americans. No, instead, it is our commitment to liberty, our dedication to the American beacon of liberty and the passion with which we love America.

Let us punish America's enemies, but take care never to dishonor our country by blaming other loyal Americans merely because of their religion or ethnicity.

Mr. Speaker, our country will emerge stronger after enduring these attacks.

Today, our hearts and prayers go out to those who are lost and to their families; and, as a diverse and united people, we pledge together that God bless the United States of America.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 1/2 minutes to the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. STRICKLAND).

Mr. STRICKLAND. Mr. Speaker, on behalf of my constituents in Southern Ohio, I want to express our condolences to all those who have suffered the tragedy of the last few hours.

Many years ago, a young missionary was murdered while working in the jungles of South Africa. Later, his parents found in his diary a message that is appropriate for us to contemplate today. The young man had written the following words: "He is no fool who gives what he cannot keep to gain what he cannot lose." All of us are mortal. We cannot determine the length of our lives or the circumstances of our deaths. That is true of us today as it was true of those innocent Americans who worked in the World Trade Center towers, and in the Pentagon, or were passengers in the hijacked airliners yesterday morning.

As the day unfolded, they had no way of knowing the sad historic acts which would take their lives. They were innocent victims, and we mourn their deaths.

But we also mourn the deaths of those who freely gave their lives while trying to save others. We honor the firefighters, the police officers, and the citizen volunteers who unselshly gave what they or none of us can forever keep. They gave their lives, and, in doing so, they have gained what they can never lose, that is the everlasting honor, gratitude, and devotion of the American people.

Today I feel unspeakable rage for those who killed our people. But, even more strongly, I feel the sense of pride and the goodness and the decency of our countrymen.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from California (Mr. COX), the distinguished chairman of our Policy Committee.

Mr. COX. Mr. Speaker, the magnitude of this tragedy is still revealing itself. The bombings are over, but the extent of the damage, the number of people killed, is still partially obscured to us. The death toll in a single day may eclipse the entire toll from the Korean War. That this war, waged by foreign enemies of the United States, happened on American soil, makes it unique in our modern history. That it happened on our city streets, that it targeted our national symbols, makes it all the more unbelievable.

But it is true, it happened. We are brought face to face with the grim reality that not only do a dangerous few of our fellow human beings hate America and what she stands for, but they are willing to kill all of us and themselves in order to vindicate that hate.

These terrorist shock troops did not know the names of the people they killed, they did not know the identities of the families they have destroyed forever, and they do not care. As General Norman Schwarzkopf said so pointedly yesterday, always, even during the Gulf War, the United States has taken extraordinary measures to avoid civilian casualties in its military operations. But these terrorists intentionally target innocent men, women, and children. That, he said, is the difference between these bastards and us.

The terror of that day did not break the spirit of the people that harbor them do not hate any of us as individuals. They hate America; they hate our civilization. Now civilization must defend itself. We cannot bring back the wonderful people who perished yesterday, but we can honor their memory.

The Statue of Freedom atop this capitol stands as a beacon. It was placed there when our Nation was torn apart by the Civil War. That war shook the foundation of that building, but it did not undermine the foundations of our country.

Let us honor the dead, the wounded, and the tens of thousands of the heroes who are bringing New York and Washington back to life. Let us defeat those who have declared war on America.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from the Virgin Islands (Mrs. CHRISTENSEN).

Mrs. CHRISTENSEN. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

I rise this evening to join my colleagues in support of this important resolution condemning the vicious, unprovoked, and tragic attack against our constitutional democracy.

Yesterday is a day that we will never forget, a day which began like any other, but one in which our lives were changed forever as we saw and heard about the damage and destruction of our Nation’s symbol of freedom and the very many lives that are being lost. My heart, sympathy, and prayers, and those of all of the people of the U.S. Virgin Islands, go out to the families and friends of those who lost their lives in yesterday’s attack and to those who were injured.

We also want to express our deep appreciation to those police, emergency medical personnel, firefighters, and the countless others who selflessly and quickly responded to save and protect lives and who continue their efforts today and will do so for as long as they are needed.

I fully support, and ask all Americans to support, our President in his determination to identify and find those who committed these acts and bring them to justice.

But I also want to recall for all of us the prayer of our chaplain this morning who asked God to help us proceed free of prejudice. We must not use this tragedy to promote intolerance. It is not about Arab Americans or any other people living in this country as we learn more about the true perpetrators of this heinous act.

Mr. Speaker, America is strong. The American people are strong. We are a country and a people of a deep and abiding faith. With that faith, we will face this tragedy as we have faced others before; and we will never let the actions of those who would foster and act out of hate poison our hearts; nor will we let these terrorists or any terrorists succeed in further inflicting their evil and their hate on us or the rest of the world.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Florida (Mr. Goss), the distinguished chairman of the Committee on Intelligence.

Mr. Goss. Mr. Speaker, we all know what an arduous and shocking day yesterday was. Mr. Speaker, we are experiencing this tragic loss of life in our country, this grief and loss for the families of the victims, so many victims there were. CecCee Lyles of Port Myers, Florida, in my district was a flight attendant on one of the United Airlines flights, number 93, one of the brave Americans who called her husband, reported the hijacking, and said goodbye. Imagine the terror of that.

Today I started my day as usual, walking to the Capitol office from my nearby home, and then watched the Capitol dome above us, rising beautifully, boldy, reassuringly, into a bright, blue sky and the strong sunshine of the morning today. I thank the Lord for keeping it safe, and the good Americans who worked to do that as well.

For a minute, it was like yesterday never happened; it was just all a bad dream. And then we all went to work. The images, the statistics, the reports, they are heart-wrenching.

What kind of people, if we can call them people, could think up and carry out such fanatical and diabolical atrocities against innocent human beings? How does hate grow so grotesquely and get channeled into such devastation? What type of murderous leaders would advocate these kinds of things?

Mr. Speaker, I say to my colleagues, this is the face of terrorism. It is un speakably evil; and we, the United States of America, are confronted with it on behalf of our citizens. I have no doubt we shall prevail. We have professionals at work who will find those responsible; and they will protect us, as they have done so well. We have the capability to render harmless those who have done this; and we, I think, the resolve of the people in our land and the leadership of our land committed to this task.

There are so many Americans stepping forward in so many ways, doing wonderful things to provide relief, to tend to intimidate our Nation and show its strength and success, clearly were in the face of this heinous act.

Mr. GOSS. Mr. Speaker, we all know this heinous act. What kind of people, if we can call them people, could think up and carry out such fanatical and diabolical atrocities against innocent human beings? How does hate grow so grotesquely and get channeled into such devastation? What type of murderous leaders would advocate these kinds of things?

Mr. Speaker, I say to my colleagues, this is the face of terrorism. It is un speakably evil; and we, the United States of America, are confronted with it on behalf of our citizens. I have no doubt we shall prevail. We have professionals at work who will find those responsible; and they will protect us, as they have done so well. We have the capability to render harmless those who have done this; and we, I think, the resolve of the people in our land and the leadership of our land committed to this task.

There are so many Americans stepping forward in so many ways, doing wonderful things to provide relief, to tend to intimidate our Nation and show its strength and success, clearly were in the face of this heinous act.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. Rodriguez), my valued colleague and friend.

Mr. RODRIGUEZ. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time, I thank my colleagues for bringing this resolution before us.

My daughter asked me, What has happened? I could not get the words to explain what has occurred. For on September 11, the agents of evil and hatred have declared war against our country, seeking to use fear as a weapon in a cowardly attack on the World Trade Center in New York and the Pentagon near Washington, D.C. These attacks were, by far, the deadliest ever launched against the United States and by, targeting symbols of American strength and success, clearly were intended to intimidate our Nation and weaken its resolve. But the cowardly perpetrators of these heinous crimes do not know America. They do not know Americans.

For freedom is not a vulnerability; it is our strength. This is not the history we have met every challenge, and we will meet this one. Make no mistake: this was an act of war against the United States and all of our people, and we will not tolerate it. As weexpérience terror today, I say to those who have done this, I say, indeed, we have woken up; you will be hearing from us.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. Rodriguez), my valued colleague and friend.

Mr. RODRIGUEZ. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time, I thank my colleagues for bringing this resolution before us.

My daughter asked me, What has happened? I could not get the words to explain what has occurred. For on September 11, the agents of evil and hatred have declared war against our country, seeking to use fear as a weapon in a cowardly attack on the World Trade Center in New York and the Pentagon near Washington, D.C. These attacks were, by far, the deadliest ever launched against the United States and by, targeting symbols of American strength and success, clearly were intended to intimidate our Nation and weaken its resolve. But the cowardly perpetrators of these heinous crimes do not know America. They do not know Americans.

For freedom is not a vulnerability; it is our strength. This is not the history we have met every challenge, and we will meet this one. Make no mistake: this was an act of war against the United States and all of our people, and we will not tolerate it. As weexpérience terror today, I say to those who have done this, I say, indeed, we have woken up; you will be hearing from us.
Committee on Armed Services and a member of the Terrorism Panel, we will push for action to see that the cruel people who have committed this horrific act and those who have sponsored them meet with justice expeditiously.

With the fall of the Twin Towers and the devastation of the Pentagon, Americans have lost their innocence, but America will be defended. We do not know how many lives have been taken. We do not know how many tragic stories we will be hearing. But our hearts and our prayers go out to the many victims, to the loss of life, to the pain and the suffering that is immeasurable. The heroic and selfless actions of those workers, volunteers, State and local officials who responded to the tragic events with courage and determination will not be forgotten. Our prayers go out to the victims and with everything God bless America.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Michigan (Mr. EHLERS).

Mr. EHLERS. Mr. Speaker, in the hours since yesterday morning, my emotions and certainly those of my colleagues in Congress and, indeed, of every American, have ranged from disbelief to shock, anger, and sadness, and then to a determination to see that all those responsible for this reprehensible act be brought to justice, and that we do all we can in our society to prevent a recurrence.

Since the attacks, I have been deeply moved by the courage of all of those who have been involved in the rescue efforts in New York and Washington, as well as the individual bravery of hundreds of thousands of everyday Americans who have lent helping hands in countless ways. The scenes and stories of the thousands of rescuers who willingly placed themselves in mortal danger in order to rescue survivors, which resulted in hundreds of firemen and police officers ultimately giving their lives in that effort, is something that will stay with me forever. We are truly a Nation of great and heroic people.

I know that the thoughts and prayers of everyone in our Nation go out to many people involved in this event: the victims, their families and friends, the rescuers, those involved in the investigation and, certainly, the President on whose shoulders now falls tremendous responsibility. We have many difficult days ahead of us; but this Nation is strong, and, by the grace of God, we will survive and grow stronger through this trial, as we have many times before. The terrorists have robbed our Nation of many lives, but we will never let them rob us of our spirit.

In closing, let me quote from former President Jerry Ford who made these comments when he received the Congressional Gold Medal last year: "In the course of some 86 years, I have seen more than my share of miracles. I remain convinced that politics is a very noble calling, one worthy of enlisting the idealism and commitment of a young America. History tells us that it is only a matter of time before your generation is going to be tested, just as mine was tested by the economic depression of the 1930s, foreign tyranny in the two World Wars and the hateful traditions of Jim Crow. To you will fall the responsibility of crafting a political process that rises above focus groups and sound bytes; for supplementing material prosperity with a spiritual purpose and a spiritual goal. But, above all that is new, I hope you never lose the old faith in an America that is bolder, freer, and more just with every passing generation. America is a work in progress, and all of us, past, present and future, have been called to bear the torch carriers for liberty and freedom in the 21st century."

Let us be those torch carriers. May God bless and comfort our Nation and all of our people.

Let us follow the path laid out by President Ford. Let us have his hope, and let us stand firm for our noble cause, let us be workers for justice, and let us be torch carriers for liberty and freedom.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Texas (Mr. BRADY).

Mr. BRADY of Texas. Mr. Speaker, on behalf of the caring families and communities in the Eighth Congressional District, and on behalf of the members of the Texas Task Force One, the Urban Search and Rescue Team from Texas A&M University who were swiftly deployed to help New York, I rise to pledge our help, our support, and our prayers.

Today we come together to reinforce America’s resolve, to state our unqualified support for the President in this time of crisis.

We come here also for the very real purpose of trying to show those dearest and nearest to the victims of yesterday’s terrorist attack that their deep sense of loss is shared by a Nation.

Of loved ones suddenly taken, we hope that in some small way we can help further the sense of a life well filled, a time on Earth well spent, and joyous days to come in a glorious place waiting eagerly for us; of loved ones we hope to be reunited.

Years from now, the vision of September 11, 2001, will mean something different to every eye that sees it. It is a dark day, and to paraphrase the poet Alfred Tennyson, the heavens must surely have filled with shouting at that sheer evil that man plunged upon innocent man. Here on Earth we shouted as well.

By any measure, yesterday’s attack was a declaration of war on our country, on our shores, and we must act accordingly. In the coming days, our leaders must commit, with all the fallen friends while showing the world that America is absolutely unbowed. And then, after due diligence and without mercy, we must calmly and deliberately exact justice from the terrorists responsible, and each complicit government.

It will not be easy. “The times which future generations delight to recall are not those of ease and prosperity, but of adversity bravely borne.” America has faced unimaginable adversity before, and we have borne it with one voice and one power.

If Members believe in justice, believe this: America’s time will come, and those who celebrate terrorism will celebrate no more.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that during consideration of House Joint Resolution 61, pursuant to the order of the House of earlier today, debate on the joint resolution be extended by 30 minutes, equally divided and controlled by the chairman and/or his designee and ranking minority member of the Committee on International Relations.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. SIMPSON). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New Jersey?

There was no objection. Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I am very pleased to yield 2 minutes to my dear friend and distinguished colleague, the gentlewoman from the District of Columbia (Ms. Norton).

Ms. NORTON. Mr. Speaker, I thank the distinguished gentleman for yielding time to me.

As we pray for the September 11 victims and their families, let us remember only what we do in Washington, D.C., like the 600,000 people who call the Nation’s capital home. Many of us who serve in this House live here, too, and the rest of us spend as much time in the District as they do in their own districts.

The enemy knew well that the way to attack our country was to try to attack this city. If we shift course enough to learn how to safeguard the Nation’s capital from new terrorism, New York and the rest of the country will not be far behind.

Understand that this will require a radical reevaluation of security as we have known it. Just as important, it will require that we reconcile our security with our core identity as an open, democratic society.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Illinois (Mr. Johnson).

Mr. JOHNSON of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, today we resume the process of moving forward. All across our great land, people are crying out for justice. We as a Nation now know the horror and the terror that so many in the world have endured daily. The actions taken yesterday by a few without a doubt have the sanction of many.

Where is the return of good will that the United States so generously hands out? We, the United States of America, are the custodians of democracy and stability, of justice and of the sanctity of human life. Indeed, we have new fears that did not exist before. However, these fears have brought out a new, untapped, infinite reservoir of courage and strength never before witnessed in history.

Make no mistake, the perpetrators of this act of cowardice will be found. We are engaged in an undeclared war against a tyranny of historical proportions that has no face, bears no names, and yet has many followers. The battle we wage at this moment is a battle against a diseased and flawed philosophy that encourages the attack and the destruction of that which is good and right.

As we move forward in the days to come, we must carefully use words such as ‘safety’ and ‘order,’ and we must be cautious when calling for actions that ‘need to be taken for the good of the people.’ I encourage my colleagues to be wary of any suggested government action that would infringe on our freedoms. Any encroachment of our civil liberties is a victory for the perpetrators of yesterday’s heinous crimes.

We must continually bear in mind the words of Benjamin Franklin when he had stated that “those who would sacrifice their essential liberty to seek a small portion of temporary safety deserve neither liberty nor safety.” Freedom is not our greatest liability, it is our greatest asset.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 2 minutes to my distinguished colleague, the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. NEAL).

Mr. NEAL of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me.

Mr. Speaker, I just want to join all who serve in this wonderful House on this occasion, both Democrat and Republican, in sending our thoughts to the families of those who perished in the World Trade Center and the Pentagon to the defying images of a lifetime. No words can really express the feelings of shock, sorrow, and outrage that we all feel, and we are all in the process of mourning in our own way.

But soon we are going to desire answers to precisely what happened, why it happened, and how we will prevent it from happening again. That, too, is a natural response. But we also have to be patient, because we need and want our response to be right.

Americans have been challenged before, and we will meet this challenge as we have before. We are blessed as a people by having our values and beliefs written in our Constitution, a wellspring to which we repeatedly turn in times of trouble.

It is important to remember that this is the act of a small group, and these actions cannot be blamed on any ethnic group to which they belong. That is the foundation on which our Constitution rests, and it is not, even on this occasion, worth giving up.

It is clear to the world that we stand united on this issue, and this Congress will support the President as he undertakes action against this enemy. All Congress will support these decisions on rebuilding the devastation we feel today morally and spiritually.

We support the determination of the American people to proceed with prosecuting those who are responsible for these actions. It is true now and it will be true as long as it takes to bring these people to justice.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman for yielding time to me.

Mr. LaTOURETTE. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me.

Mr. Speaker, there are few new thoughts we can add at this hour of the evening about our reflected thoughts of the last 36 hours, but I do appreciate the fact that the House has made it available for every Member who wanted to offer a thought to do so.

Aside from an expression of sincere sympathy to all those who have lost a loved one, a prayer today for the souls of those who have perished in these terrorist acts; to care for those victims and their families. Millions are answering the call for blood donations. Once again, our Nation is demonstrating that we can rise to any challenge. We will not be defeated, and living in fear will not be an option.

The immediate task before us is to secure the safety of our citizens, both at home and abroad, against any future attacks: to care for those victims and their families. Then we must determine how this happened, who is responsible, and how we bring them to justice.

Justice will not be obtained overnight. I pray for the patience of the American people and for the patience of our President so that we may seek the truth and hold accountable those who are responsible. It is only through deliberation and thoughtful action that justice is served and future attacks prevented.

Yesterday, our age of innocence ended, just as it ended 60 years ago at Pearl Harbor. But unlike Pearl Harbor, there is no obvious enemy. But like Pearl Harbor, they have awakened a monstrous and cowardly act against the entire United States and our people. It was well-organized and cold-blooded. The world watched as an army of heroes mobilized to help those in need at great risk and personal sacrifice.

From my home State of Wisconsin, I have heard from many who share a common sense of grief and an outpouring of support for the victims and their families. Millions are answering the call for blood donations. Once again, our Nation is demonstrating that we can rise to any challenge. We will not be defeated, and living in fear will not be an option.

The immediate task before us is to secure the safety of our citizens, both at home and abroad, against any future attacks: to care for those victims and their families. Then we must determine how this happened, who is responsible, and how we bring them to justice.

Justice will not be obtained overnight. I pray for the patience of the American people and for the patience of our President so that we may seek the truth and hold accountable those who are responsible. It is only through deliberation and thoughtful action that justice is served and future attacks prevented.

Yesterday, our age of innocence ended, just as it ended 60 years ago at Pearl Harbor. But unlike Pearl Harbor, there is no obvious enemy. But like Pearl Harbor, they have awakened a sleeping giant.

In the shadow of this terrorist attack, we find ourselves at the dawn of a new era of warfare in the 21st century. As we move forward, we must make our military armed by the stealth, cunning, and terror. We will recover from this, but we will never forget this. For those who mean us...
Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker I yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from North Carolina (Mr. HAYES), a member of the Committee on Agriculture, and very importantly, with this debate, the Committee on Armed Services.

Mr. HAYES. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of this resolution. Yesterday, our Nation suffered the most horrific act of terrorism the world has ever seen. Make no mistake about it, a hostile act of this magnitude should be viewed as an act of war against our Nation.

Like everyone here today, I am proud to be an American. I am proud of our Nation and proud of the values and heritage which have made our Nation great.

Our main government was formed on the base principle that our Creator endowed us with the inalienable right of life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness. Our government is charged with ensuring these freedoms and equal protection to us all.

Unfortunately, there is unspeakable evil alive and at work in our world and against these principles. That evil perpetrated the terrorist attacks against our Nation yesterday.

As we begin our new future, the world can be assured that Americans will respond to yesterday's attacks on three important fronts.

First, we will make every effort to provide care for those who are injured and lend comfort to those who have suffered the loss of a loved one.

Second, we will provide all necessary intelligence and military resources to find the criminals who orchestrated these attacks and all those who aided them in their effort.

Third, our government will use the full assets of our law enforcement and military agencies to find the criminals who orchestrated these attacks and all those who aided them in their effort.

Once they are found, we will act swiftly and deliberately to punish the guilty and show the world that this type of treachery will not be tolerated.

Our country is the brightest light of freedom the world has ever known. The greatness of America emanates from our people, and as we have seen throughout our Nation's history, our people respond to evil like yesterday's events with great, moral resolve. We are a people that understand that our God bless, protect, and guide America.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 2 minutes to our distinguished colleague, the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. OLVER).

Mr. OLVER. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me.

Mr. Speaker, yesterday America was assaulted by a carefully planned and executed campaign of terrorism. My deepest sympathies go to those who have been touched by this tragedy, the victims and their families, and they include victims and families from my district and my State of Massachusetts.

My heartfelt thanks go to the medical personnel, firefighters, policemen, public workers, and volunteers who have selflessly answered the call. We are forever indebted to those heroic rescue workers who have risked and given their lives in search of additional victims.

All of us pray that additional survivors will be rescued from the devastation, and we must be certain that all the needed resources are available to do that. But today we must also look toward the future. We must ensure the safety of our citizens, the primary goal of both military and civilian components of our government.

I support the actions already taken by the President to secure the Nation and provide disaster relief. We must mete out punishment for the perpetrators of this attack. Our response must be decisive but carefully calculated. One critical goal of American force and foreign policy must be to mobilize other nations to join together with us to crack down on terrorism with new determination.
us to stand together as one Nation. A true rainbow of diverse colors, cultures and religions, united against evil. United together, tomorrow is ours to win.

I also urge the American people to remember what a great leader said just a few years ago. Jimmy Carter stated, "We live in a time of transition and an uneasy era which is likely to endure for the rest of this century. During this period, we may be tempted to abandon some of the time-honored principles and commitments which have been proven during difficult times of past generations. We must never yield to this temptation. Our American values are not luxuries but necessities, not salt in our bread but the bread itself."

May God bless America.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from California (Mrs. BONO).

Mrs. BONO. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from New Jersey for yielding me the time.

Mr. Speaker, the entire world watched as this tragedy struck. Like most Americans, I was transfixed by the horrible drama unfolding on my television screen when, without any warning, the foundation of my building was rocked by the blast of the Pentagon only blocks away.

Yesterday’s events shook the very heart and soul of our Nation, regardless of whether you were close enough to feel the impact or watching thousands of miles and a continent away. The rage and frustration Americans shared gave way to a clear understanding that our Nation was now at war, and this is a war like no other. Our enemy is invisible and consumed with hate, and the acts perpetrated against America are an assault on all civilized measure.

Yesterday, the people of California’s 43rd district lost one of our own. A gentle lady parishioner from Palm Springs, who gave selflessly to help others, lost her life at the hands of cowardly and despicable fiends. My prayers and thoughts are with her family and with the families and loved ones of all of the victims of these heinous acts.

Before yesterday, our national security seemed a remote concern. National polls routinely registered very little concern for national security. Indeed, few outside of Washington paid much attention to terrorist acts that were quietly averted nor was there much support for increased funding for intelligence or national security programs. That must, and will, change. Now, there can be no doubt that our first priority must be the security of our people.

To laugh, to weep and mournful over the loss of so many of our fellow Americans cut down by senseless acts of violence, our will is strengthened and our purpose is very clear. We will hunt down and destroy these agents of evil and bring swift and terrible retribution to those who shelter them. Our mission is clear: to extinguish the hopes and dreams of those yearning to live free. From the smoldering ashes of this devastation, a steely resolve has been forged. The bonds that bind these United States will not be broken and we will never ever forget.

God bless America.

Mr. RUSH. Mr. Speaker, I rise this evening in support of this very important resolution. Yesterday, we witnessed a tragedy too devastating to comprehend. Our hearts were broken as we watched the sanctity of the American workplace being attacked by faceless cowards in a senseless act of terrorism.

I say to those spineless scoundrels, America will not be intimidated. America will not be defeated. We will gather greater resolve. We will recapture our focus. We will renew our strength.

Throughout our Nation’s history Americans have always responded to adversity with singular commitment and boundless courage. Indeed, America was born out of adversity.

So, tonight, we pray for every victim and every victim’s family. Many lives were lost and now only our prayers can bring the devastated families peace.

We must acknowledge that yesterday’s assault will change the way we go about our daily business here in this Nation. We must operate under a new, vigorous, and heightened sense of security and with continued courage and focus.

We will, Mr. Speaker, search out every cave, look under every rock and scrutinize every crevice on the face of the Earth until we find the cowardly culprits who attacked and killed the innocent of our Nation. At this time, let us stand closer and more unified against the evil forces that threaten not only our liberty but the liberty of freedom-loving people all around the world.

So, Mr. Speaker, tonight, to the American people, and to my colleagues in the Congress, I quote Proverbs 3:5–6: "Trust in the Lord with all your heart and lean not on your own understanding; in all your ways acknowledge Him and He shall direct your path."

Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from California (Mr. GALLEGLY).

Mr. GALLEGLY. Mr. Speaker, I join my colleagues in standing in strong support of this joint resolution tonight.

I rise in strong support of this resolution that condemns the terrorists who murdered our citizen in a planned act of war, extends our condolences to the families and friends of the victims in these attacks, commends the heroes who responded to the scenes of destruction, and supports the punishment of those directly responsible and their sponsors for these acts of war.

This is, indeed, a national day of unity and mourning. It is important that we stand here today, as representatives of the people in the People’s House, and show our enemies we will not be bowed, that we are strong in our resolve and that we will respond. The hijacked planes attacked New York City and Washington, D.C., but the devastation was wrought from coast to coast. I learned today that one of my neighbors in Ventura County, California, lost her brother-in-law, who was a pilot on one of the doomed aircraft. She is one of thousands of Americans across this great land who mourn today. We owe it to the victims, their families and to all Americans to stand strong and united in our resolve to live in freedom and peace, to promote the same throughout the world, and to punish those who have declared war on our soil and those who protect and encourage them.

There will be justice.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. TOOMNEY), a member of the Committee on the Budget and the Committee on Financial Services.

Mr. TOOMNEY. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of this resolution today.

The cowardly attack on innocent Americans yesterday is the worst assault on our country and our freedom in our Nation’s history. I think we all feel this attack very personally, and we will all keep the victims and their families in our prayers.

As many have said, this was an attack on freedom itself, and we cannot allow the evil, cowardly terrorists responsible to win. We must take what action is necessary to find the people responsible for this atrocity and bring them to justice, and we must also hold fully accountable any country or group which aided or harbored these terrorists in any way whatsoever.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, we must take a new approach to fighting terrorism, a proactive, aggressive, and comprehensive approach. It is no longer sufficient to treat these terrorists as ordinary criminals, waiting for them to act and then attempting to apprehend them and convict them of crimes.

We know several large, sophisticated, determined terrorist organizations who have declared war against the United States and have demonstrated the ability and intent to carry out acts of terrorism against America, including yesterday’s atrocities. These barbarians are worse than criminals. They are enemies in a war that they have launched unprovoked against the United States.

It is time for this Congress, our Federal Government, our Nation to engage in this war against these organizations
Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Washington (Mr. BAIRD).

Mr. BAIRD. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from California for yielding me the time.

My friends, yesterday the story was about terrorismo, horrible acts, despicable acts conducted by a few crazed individuals who gave their lives to take the lives of others. But let the story tonight and tomorrow and the days to come be not about terrorism but about heroism, the heroism of hundreds who gave their lives to save the lives of others.

The firefighters who raced into that burning building knowing full well that it would likely collapse on them and take their lives. The police and rescue squads who raced to the scene in the hopes of saving people who were killed in the rubble. Passengers on that jet, who by their heroic acts may have saved the lives of the people in this building this evening and yesterday. The volunteers who raced to the scene to see if they could help in some way. The heroism of our Armed Forces, on alert even as we speak. The heroism of our staffs who came to work today knowing full well that they too are targets.

We are speaking tonight for those who lost their lives and cannot speak. We are also speaking for the hundreds of thousands of constituents we represent, but more than that, we are speaking for the oldest constitutional democratic republic on the history of this Earth; and we say to those who would attack this great Nation, who would attack our freedom, you will never succeed.

Even if you had managed to destroy this majestic building and even if you had killed each and every one of us, others would rise in our place, others would lift our torch of liberty and defend our people and our freedoms. This Nation will persevere and the light of liberty will continue to burn brightly forever.

Let each American today and in the weeks to come fly the American flag proudly from their home and their businesses and their cars and wherever else. Let us show the world America is united, that freedom will persevere, and that terrorism will never succeed.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Georgia (Mr. LINDER), a member of the Committee on Rules.

Mr. LINDER. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from New Jersey for yielding.

By noon on yesterday, I was thinking about a wonderful book I read many years ago by Alan Paton. It was entitled Cry the Beloved Country. On Tuesday we cried, too. We cried for different reasons than Alan Paton, but we too cried for our beloved country.

The heroism of the individuals that unbelievable day were acts of absolute violation on a society that is so open and so free that even they could travel unrestrained among us.

When the prayers are said, when the tears are dried, when the bodies are buried, and forever. The war against terrorism has been engaged in only casually for the past 30 years. Now we must get serious and win it. There are only two sides in this war. To those who believe there is neutral ground, we must say that belief put them on the side of the enemy; and we will punish those with such beliefs.

To those who believe that they can quietly harbor and help the terrorists, we must say they are the enemy; and our military will bring our enemies to their knees.

To those who commit these unspeakable acts of war, we will find those individuals and kill them. I am not without hope. Eugene McCarthy once observed that America can choke on a gnat, but swallow tigers whole.

Mr. Speaker, I have listened for 2 days to the Members of this body. This is the bigger we were sent here to deal with, and we will. There will be no lack of resolution here. There will be no rancor. We will stand behind the President and do what our Nation must do both here and abroad. We must end the time when radicals can inflict pain, suffering and death on innocent citizens without recourse.

We must end the ability for nations states to see no evil, hear no evil, and speak no evil, even while living in evil’s midst. America has been changed forever through this tragedy. It falls upon us to rebuild the confidence in our society that this great Nation will not cower, that we will be safe again, that freedom works.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. FATTAH).

Mr. FATTAH. Mr. Speaker, I support this resolution along with my colleagues.

We must act, not just speak. Action is our Nation’s heavy burden tonight. Let us begin first, care for the wounded, rescue any survivors, bury the dead, heal New York and begin to rebuild the Pentagon.

Second, think and work to prevent further immediate attacks on our people and infrastructure of all kinds.

Finally, determine who is responsible for these attacks and for past acts that have gone unpunished and make them pay their debt to this country. Avoid harm to innocent people but pursue justice for those who have lost their lives. We can do no less.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from California (Mr. BECERRA).
California (Mr. LANTOS) has 2 minutes remaining. The gentleman from South Carolina (Mr. SIMPSON). The Chair would advise the gentleman from California (Mr. SMITH) to address the House on an amendment to吕布pe’s religious phrase, you have hell to pay. Mr. Speaker, since we are speaking in religious terms, let me close by saying to those criminal in using an ancient religious terms, let me close by saying to the Old Testament and read the words of our President that they have fully cooperated in apprehending these murderers, and that they have further cooperated in fighting terrorism around the world. If this was done in the name of religion, do not mistake the fact that we call ourselves a Christian Nation as a signal of weakness. Perhaps we have followed the New Testament admonition of turning the other cheek in the past when terrorists have bombed our ships and our embassies, but today we turn to the Old Testament and read the phrase, an eye for an eye, a tooth for a tooth.

Mr. Speaker, since we are speaking in religious terms, let me close by saying to those criminals using ancient religious phrases, you have Hell to pay. If this was done in the name of religion, do not mistake the fact that we call ourselves a Christian Nation as a signal of weakness. Perhaps we have followed the New Testament admonition of turning the other cheek in the past when terrorists have bombed our ships and embassies, but today we turn to the Old Testament and read the phrase, an eye for an eye, a tooth for a tooth.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. TIERNEY).

Mr. TIERNEY. Mr. Speaker, I join Americas everywhere today and tonight, as well as my colleagues here, in expressing our sorrow and sympathy and condolences to every family and friend who has experienced a loss as a result of what went on yesterday. And, unfortunately, there were those in my district who suffered loss, and those who go out to all of them this evening.

Mr. Speaker, in the face of this trauma, the American character of resolve has shown itself. Untold numbers of citizens have participated in rescue and medical efforts while others have joined together to comfort victims and their families. Lives have been lost, but lines have been formed as people line up to give blood, and everywhere men and women, boys and girls reach out to help those who are hurt, and that effort will continue.

Congress and the President have pledged to work together; and they are going to work together to meet the challenges and work with essential agencies, and every effort will be made to further rescue, further medical treatments, to support victims and families of victims and to address the enhancement of our security through-out the nation. We face the reality of asymmetrical threats against the United States, including terrorism directed at our civilian population. So now we have reached the point where all of our great rhetoric must be matched by actions. Many Members here this afternoon and evening have ended their comments with the words “God bless America.” That is most assuredly appropriate, but I think we might also ask God for the wisdom collectively to know what is best for our country and then the resolve and courage to do it. We certainly must maintain the qualities and the expectations of the people we represent.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, owing to the unprecedented participation in today’s debate, we have had over 120 Republican Members who have participated and I am sure the number is similar on the side of the gentleman from California (Mr. LANTOS); and owing to the fact that the majority leader, the gentleman from Texas (Mr. ARMLEY), said every Member who wants to participate would be entitled to do so, I understand, if my information is correct, on the Democratic side there are approximately 12 more Members waiting to speak. We have four more as of now.

Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that during consideration of H.J. Res. 61, pursuant to the order of House of earlier today, debate on the joint resolution be extended an additional 30 minutes, equally divided and controlled by the chairman of the Committee on International Relations or his designee and the ranking minority member.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New Jersey?

There was no objection.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. HINOJOSA).

Mr. HINOJOSA. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of this resolution. You and I and every one of our citizens and our sense of ourselves as a Nation suffered a heinous cowardly attack, a blantant act of war that demands a like response.

Innocent American men, women, and children in civilian airplanes were used and converted into the deadly missiles that destroyed thousands of people in our most important centers of military and economic enterprise. The terror of those moments cannot cow us. They must only serve to steel and solidify our resolve.

From the stretches of the Rio Grande to the reaches of the Great Lakes, from the shorelines in the Pacific to every skyscraper on our eastern shore, compassionate and disciplined American men and women will do what is necessary, search for our survivors in the New York World Trade Center and the Pentagon in Washington, D.C., care for our wounded, volunteer to donate blood, reach out and... comfort the grieving, ensure our school children of their safety, and do our Nation's business in State and Federal Government buildings, in banks, in the fields in factories.

The quiet determination of American resolve will grow. The message and the action must be clear. America is a Nation of law, and the lawless terrorists behind this attack on our Nation must be punished and brought to their knees. America is a Nation of peace, but peace will be defended from those who make war. We have the intelligence, the technology and the will to pursue our enemies and put an end to their illusions of invulnerability. We will find them.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr.
Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the disgusted gentleman from Oregon (Mr.
WALDEN) who is a member of the Committee on Energy and Commerce.

Mr. WALDEN of Oregon. Mr. Spea-er, I rise in support of this resolution.

While the terrorists crashed their planes here on the East Coast, the emotional wreckage is strewn across our Nation. From New York City to Dalles, Oregon, families are grieving tonight over the loss of loved ones. My thoughts and prayers are with those who were harmed or killed by this horrific but cowardly act of terrorism.

They and their families have our deepest sympathies. Our prayers go to those brave men and women who even tonight are risking their lives to save the lives of others.

September 11 is indelibly scarred in the soul of our country as a day when terrorists who have no conscience, who have no decency, challenged our very freedom and independence. Those who challenge America and harm her citizens through acts of terrorism shall be brought to justice.

The Quiet determination of American resolve will grow. The message and the action must be clear. America is a Nation of law, and the lawless terrorists
behind this attack on our Nation must be punished and brought to their knees. America is a Nation of peace, but peace will be defended from those who make war. We have the intelligence, the technology and the will to pursue our enemies and put an end to their illusions of invulnerability. We will find them.
Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Minnesota, Mr. KENNEDY, a member of the Committee on Agriculture and the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure.

Mr. KENNEDY of Minnesota. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of the resolution. The American people have shown their heroism and willingness to help one another, and we should not allow our fellow Americans who died yesterday to die in vain.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Minnesota, Mr. GUTKNECHT, a member of the Committee on Agriculture, the Committee on the Budget, and the Committee on Science.

Mr. GUTKNECHT. I thank the gentleman for yielding. As we resolve to move forward and to show the terrorists, whoever they may be, that we will strike back, and that we will continue to prosper and to grow and be the greatest Nation in the history of the Earth, we must not lose the American ideal. That was preserved yesterday in the carnage that occurred by this cowardly, dastardly attack. We must allow our fellow Americans who died yesterday to die in vain.
Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I am delighted to yield 2 minutes to my good friend the distinguished gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. FRANK).

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from South Dakota (Mr. THUNE), the chairman of the Subcommittee on Rural Enterprises, Agriculture, and Technology.

Mr. THUNE. I thank the gentleman for yielding time.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of this resolution. The casualty numbers keep mounting in New York and at the Pentagon. I had the chance this evening to see, Mr. Speaker, up close the wreckage. Pictures really do not do it justice. They do not capture the destruction, because it is much more gripping in real life. Like many Americans, as I viewed the pictures from a distance on television, it was hard to fully capture the horror and the terror that befell people working in New York and at the Pentagon. Yet after seeing it up close, you cannot help but be struck by the realization that somebody's father, somebody's mother, somebody's brother, somebody's daughter is not coming home. I cannot comprehend the pain that these families will deal with.

So I say to the people of New York and the people of Virginia and Maryland and D.C., that the people of South Dakota grieve with you and support you. In past disasters, you have been there for us. We will be there for you, and we are praying for you.

The people of South Dakota stand with our President, President Bush, in supporting our national allies who feel as we do about this hideous affront to the civilized world.

Edmund Burke said nearly 300 years ago, "When bad men combine, the good must associate. Else they will fall, one by one."

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from South Dakota (Mr. THUNE), the chairman of the Subcommittee on Rural Enterprises, Agriculture, and Technology.

Mr. THUNE. I thank the gentleman for yielding time.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of this resolution. The casualty numbers keep mounting in New York and at the Pentagon. I had the chance this evening to see, Mr. Speaker, up close the wreckage. Pictures really do not do it justice. They do not capture the destruction, because it is much more gripping in real life. Like many Americans, as I viewed the pictures from a distance on television, it was hard to fully capture the horror and the terror that befell people working in New York and at the Pentagon. Yet after seeing it up close, you cannot help but be struck by the realization that somebody's father, somebody's mother, somebody's brother, somebody's daughter is not coming home. I cannot comprehend the pain that these families will deal with.

I yield to the distinguished gentlewoman from Ohio (Ms. PEYCE).

Ms. PEYCE of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I thank the honorable chairman for yielding me time.

I yield to the distinguished gentleman from South Dakota (Mr. THUNE).

Mr. THUNE. I thank the gentlewoman for yielding me time.

I yield to the distinguished gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. SMITH).

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Virginia (Mr. SHERWOOD), a member of the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. SHERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, Mr. Speaker, we need to react to these terrorists who perpetrated this monstrous act that they are terribly wrong in thinking that democracy is a source of weakness.

We are unanimous in our resolve to demonstrate to them and to anyone else who doubts it that democracy remains a source of great strength. We will do that by waging a just war on this murderous gang, and on any governments that support them. But we will do it in a way that will show not simply our physical superiority, but our moral superiority, because we will maintain a respect for innocent life that this gang showed no respect for.

We will do it by showing that, in a democracy, we decide our public policies by the deliberative process; and no effort to blackmail or terrorize us into changing what this country decides is in our best interests, domestically or internationally, is going to work. If anything, it will backfire. And we will do it by fully empowering our security forces, who did such a wonderful job yesterday in the face of terrible adversity, to defend ourselves internally and externally in a way that is both effective and fully consistent with our own democratic traditions.

Let me make explicit what a number of us have said: our fight, our war, is with the murderous fanatics who perpetrated this act. With all followers of the Islamic religion, it is not with people of Arab descent who live in this country or elsewhere.

We have the capacity as the greatest and strongest democracy in the history of the world to concentrate our resources in self-defense, both in the immediate sense against these murderers and in the future to protect ourselves in a way that will once again make people understand the strength of democracy.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. SHERWOOD), a member of the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. SHERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, my eloquent colleagues have talked about this terrible act and what has been perpetrated on our soil and our people and the innocent casualties that are mounting every day. Our hearts go out to all families and friends of those who have been supportive. This act has exposed the evil that has been present on this continent since the beginning.

Mr. THUNE. Mr. Speaker, the time for talk and the time for prayer, however important, is behind us. Now is the time to act. We need to react to these terrorists with overwhelming force. We need them to understand that this can never happen again.

God bless the Americans that we have lost, and God bless America.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 2 minutes to my good friend, the distinguished gentleman from Indiana (Mr. ROEMER).

Mr. ROEMER. Mr. Speaker, our American revolutionary soldiers traipsed through the snow 225 years ago, and it was noted that their tracks could be found by the blood in the snow. Thomas Paine said, "These are the times that try men's souls."

September 11, 2001, tried our Nation's soul. And just as the British underestimated those soldiers 225 years ago, these cold-blooded culprits have badly underestimated the United States' steel resolve.

Last night, I went to the Pentagon; and at midnight, I looked up at our fortress where our military stays and saw a building collapsed like a marshmallow accordion by these terrorist acts.

I looked behind me and the only inscription of that day occurred then when I saw an army of Americans behind me, lit up by the lighting, people in the medical profession, excavators, FBI teams picking up small pieces of the airplane. That is what Lincoln talked about, the better angels of our nature.

But our history and legacy is not just about goodness and fairness; it is about force, and it is about justice. Quoting John Paul Jones, "We have not yet begun to fight." When we identify these people, we will track them over hills and valleys and up mountain tops, and they will get their just due. You can count on it.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentlewoman from Ohio (Ms. PEYCE).

Ms. PEYCE. Mr. Speaker, I thank the honorable chairman for yielding me time.

Today, first and foremost, our hearts go out to the victims and families affected by yesterday's sad and shocking attacks. The stories of tragedy and the compelling stories of heroism that have begun to emerge from the smoke and the shattered buildings will forever be a part of this black day that has been burned into our national memory.

But let these days that follow be remembered not just for our sadness and mourning, but for our national resolve. As a Nation, we must now pull together to overcome this vicious attempt to break our national spirit.
September 11, 2001

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—HOUSE 16829

Those responsible for yesterday's horrific events have seriously miscalculated the strength and resolve of Americans. Our sense of security may be tested, our loved ones lost, but our unity is embodied. Our bonds of liberty, our bonds of freedom, our bonds of democracy are stronger and run deeper than any individual, than any building, than any monument, and no act of violence, no savagery, no slaughtered razors, can ever sever them. We will not be intimidated by these cowardly.

We will remain committed until those responsible learn the steep cost of taking innocent lives, innocent American lives, on American soil. The flame of liberty remains bright and will continue to shine upon the world, casting deep into the dark shadows of violence, intolerance and extremism. There will be no corner on this Earth where the demons of September 11 will be safe from justice.

For now, we must go on with our daily lives, because to do otherwise would be giving into the evil behind these events. In our schools and offices, in our neighborhoods and churches, we must help our families, our friends and our neighbors begin the healing process.

I urge my fellow Americans to donate blood, to volunteer, to offer their prayers and their assistance to help those in need.

As America recovers, we will also pursue our attackers and fight on. Mr. Speaker, we are at war with the most vicious, most cowardly and most wicked enemy we have ever faced as a Nation. But America will not go gentle into that good night. For those who have lost and for the future of our Nation and the freedom we hold dear, we will strive, we will persevere, and we will prevail.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 2 minutes to my friend and valued colleague, the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. STUPAK).

Mr. STUPAK. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me time as I rise to support this resolution.

Mr. Speaker, when the President spoke last night, he spoke for all Americans when he said terrorist attacks can shake great buildings, but cannot shake the foundations of American democracy. We stand united with the President when he says those countries which harbor terrorists must share the responsibility for their acts with those who commit them.

We stand united in our grief for the families of those who have loved, but we pray for those who still do not know the fate of their loved ones.

And we stand ready to help, as best we can, those emergency personnel who are looking for survivors and are undertaking the grim task of recovering their remains.

Finally, we stand together, literally together, on the floor of this House, where the work of this great Nation continues. People across the Nation, people here in Congress, have lined up to give blood and to make other kinds of donations. We will show terrorists and would-be terrorists that while you can strike at us, you cannot subdue the strength and spirit of this great country, a strength and spirit that lies within each of us.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from New Hampshire (Mr. BASS).

Mr. BASS. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the pending resolution.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. COMBEST), the very distinguished chairman of the Committee on Agriculture.

Mr. COMBEST. Mr. Speaker, we pray for and extend our sympathies to those who have lost loved ones. We commend and celebrate those who are working day and night to serve the injured and the harmed. This is American resolve at its best, and it is this resolve that should shake the souls of those responsible for this act.

Yesterday, they hit us hard and they hurt us terribly. They watch as we pick up the pieces, as we bandage our wounds, and as we bury our dead. They joy in our pain, they relish in our losses. And they made a big mistake, and they should get prepared, for they are about to feel our pain.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. SIMPSON). The gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. SMITH) has 191/2 minutes remaining, and the gentleman from California (Mr. LANTOS) has 1 minute remaining.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, will my 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from California (Ms. MILLENDER-MCDONALD), my friend and neighbor and my distinguished colleague.

Ms. MILLENDER-MCDONALD. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me time.

Mr. Speaker, just moments ago, I arrived back here in Washington from my home State of New Jersey, where I spent the day visiting hospitals and Red Cross centers and, finally this evening, an interfaith prayer service in one of our lost friends and loved ones.

While we will send a very clear message with our vote tonight in this House that the unbelievable and tragic and cowardly violence of the last 24 or 36 hours will not stand, Americans in New York and New Jersey and across this Nation have already begun to send that signal through their heroism, through their acts of bravery, through their selfless giving of their time and their energy, of their blood.

Mr. Speaker, just moments ago, I arrived back here in Washington from my home State of New Jersey, where I spent the day visiting hospitals and Red Cross centers and, finally this evening, an interfaith prayer service in one of our lost friends and loved ones.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to my friend, the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. FERGUSON).

Mr. FERGUSON. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me time.

As America recovers, we will also pursue our attackers and fight on. Mr. Speaker, we are at war with the most vicious, most cowardly and most wicked enemy we have ever faced as a Nation. But America will not go gentle into that good night. For those who have lost and for the future of our Nation and the freedom we hold dear, we will strive, we will persevere, and we will prevail.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 2 minutes to my friend and valued colleague, the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. STUPAK).

Mr. STUPAK. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me time as I rise to support this resolution.

Mr. Speaker, when the President spoke last night, he spoke for all Americans when he said terrorist attacks can shake great buildings, but cannot shake the foundations of American democracy. We stand united with the President when he says those countries which harbor terrorists must share the responsibility for their acts with those who commit them.

We stand united in our grief for the families of those who have loved, but we pray for those who still do not know the fate of their loved ones.

And we stand ready to help, as best we can, those emergency personnel who are looking for survivors and are undertaking the grim task of recovering their remains.

Finally, we stand together, literally together, on the floor of this House, where the work of this great Nation continues. People across the Nation, people here in Congress, have lined up to give blood and to make other kinds of donations. We will show terrorists and would-be terrorists that while you can strike at us, you cannot subdue the strength and spirit of this great country, a strength and spirit that lies within each of us.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from New Hampshire (Mr. BASS).

Mr. BASS. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the pending resolution.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. COMBEST), the very distinguished chairman of the Committee on Agriculture.

Mr. COMBEST. Mr. Speaker, we pray for and extend our sympathies to those who have lost loved ones. We commend and celebrate those who are working day and night to serve the injured and the harmed. This is American resolve at its best, and it is this resolve that should shake the souls of those responsible for this act.

Yesterday, they hit us hard and they hurt us terribly. They watch as we pick up the pieces, as we bandage our wounds, and as we bury our dead. They joy in our pain, they relish in our losses. And they made a big mistake, and they should get prepared, for they are about to feel our pain.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. SIMPSON). The gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. SMITH) has 191/2 minutes remaining, and the gentleman from California (Mr. LANTOS) has 1 minute remaining.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, will my 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from California (Ms. MILLENDER-MCDONALD), my friend and neighbor and my distinguished colleague.

Ms. MILLENDER-MCDONALD. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me time.

Mr. Speaker, just moments ago, I arrived back here in Washington from my home State of New Jersey, where I spent the day visiting hospitals and Red Cross centers and, finally this evening, an interfaith prayer service in one of our lost friends and loved ones.

While we will send a very clear message with our vote tonight in this House that the unbelievable and tragic and cowardly violence of the last 24 or 36 hours will not stand, Americans in New York and New Jersey and across this Nation have already begun to send that signal through their heroism, through their acts of bravery, through their selfless giving of their time and their energy, of their blood.

America across this Nation have already begun to send a very clear message, not only that we will go out and track down and punish the perpetrators of these heinous acts, but that we as a Nation will continue to stand in solidarity with one another, to make sure that we as a people, as human beings, will never let this stand. Not on our soil.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, we have no further requests for time, but I would just note to the membership that, again, pursuant to the majority leader's statement that every Member who wants to speak on this vital issue will have that opportunity, my understanding is that the gentleman from California (Mr. LANTOS) has six additional speakers, so I would like to again ask unanimous consent that during consideration of H.J. Res. 61, pursuant to the order of the House of earlier today, debate on the joint resolution be extended for an additional 30 minutes, equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on International Relations.

Mr. Speaker, let me be clear that we have no additional requests for time, and we intend on yielding back to expedite these proceedings.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. SIMPSON). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New Jersey?

There was no objection.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. SMITH) for his courtesy.

Mr. Speaker, I am delighted to yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from California (Ms. MILLENDER-MCDONALD), my friend and neighbor and my distinguished colleague.

Ms. MILLENDER-MCDONALD. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me time.

I rise today in strong support of this resolution. On behalf of my constituents in the 37th Congressional District in California, I offer condolences and prayers and support for the families and loved ones of New York, the State of California, and across this Nation devastated by the wanton terrorism perpetrated on these United States of America. This cowardice act against our Nation is permanently etched in the memories of all Americans.

I think about the children, Ayanna, Myles, Ramia and Blair, I think about the psychological toll it has taken on our children who suffer from the ills of this heinous crime that is devastating. However, let it be known that the President and the Members of Congress who stand in this hallowed Chamber shoulder to shoulder will move with swift deliberation to bring justice and to restore confidence to the American people. Our buildings may be shattered, but not our resolve, not our democracy.

Yet in the face of this unspeakable tragedy, we thank our firefighters, law
Mr. Speaker, this has been a tragic moment here in America. We will think back on September 11 as the deadliest assault on America in recent history, but we shall move with resolve to bring the responsible people to justice. We are a united America.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Louisiana (Mr. JEFFERSON), my friend and valued colleague.

Mr. JEFFERSON. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

Mr. Speaker, when I reflect on the events of September 11, 2001, these words of this 19th century poet come to mind. Many Americans have lamented that the horrific terrorist acts of yesterday have changed America forever. I beg to differ. America has not changed. We have merely rediscovered and rekindled that American spirit that defines us as no other people on Earth: our invincible spirit. The chains that we are shaking to Earth like dew which in sleep had fallen on you. Ye are many, they are few.”

Mr. Speaker, my heart grieves for the victims of yesterday’s terrorist acts, for their families and loved ones. But, Mr. Speaker, amidst this palpable grief, I am comforted, as these families should be, by the fact that they now have an extended family of some 250 million people, a response of unity with our Nation.

As a senior Member who serves on the House Subcommittee on Aviation, I pledge to the American people that I will work with the Secretary of Transportation and the FAA, with whom I have worked not to make sure that air travel is safe to fly again. We must applaud our air traffic controllers and the ground crew at airports across this Nation who directed over 2,200 flights from the hostile airways to safe harbors.

We, the people of the world, are saying, cherish the freedom and democracy for which America stands. We are the many, they are saying with us, the noble service is immemorial with our Nation. This response further illustrates the truth of Shelley’s observations as expressed through his poetry.

Mr. Speaker, together, we will indeed be invanquishable. Therefore, Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of this resolution.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. EDWARDS), my friend and colleague.

Mr. EDWARDS. Mr. Speaker, yesterday our Nation was shocked by a despicable act of cowardice. Today, even as we grieve and pray for those killed, injured, and missing, America will show the world that our national spirit cannot be broken by the acts of terrorists.

In times of threat and tragedy, the American family has always come together, and we do so again today.

With strong faith and resolve, we are already working together to help the victims and their families, to punish the guilty, and to move our Nation forward.

Those who underestimated the American spirit should know that today our President and Congress are working in unity to carry out the business of our Nation and to hunt down the perpetrators of this attack against all of the American people.

Once again, American military personnel have sacrificed their lives and service to our Nation. May our country honor them and the courageous rescue workers and all who have died with our prayers, our unity, and our firm commitment to protect Americans’ freedom and safety.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3½ minutes to the gentlewoman from Connecticut (Mrs. JOHNSON), the chairman of the Subcommittee on Health of the Committee on Ways and Means.

Mrs. JOHNSON of Connecticut. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

I would like to just share three thoughts, most of which have already been shared this evening. My first is simply to express my heartfelt sympathy for the families of the victims of this mindless terrorism. May we each help you as you face the pain of your loss. May our prayers, our thoughts, our heartfelt sentiment line out to all of the people willing to give blood, letters from those who knew your sons and daughters, grandchildren, relatives, friends and coworkers, be of some small comfort to you for paying this terrible price of living in a free society in a troubled world.

Secondly, I want to say how proud I am to be an American, to witness our ability to rally, to help each other, to stand tall in the face of senseless, cowardly, vicious terrorism. To all of those policemen, firemen, volunteers, health care providers, folks of all sorts who have come out to help to save lives, to rebuild, we are strong.

Thirdly, and hear this, our friends around the world, America is now at war. It is the first war ever fought against a non-nation entity, but it is war nonetheless, and again a well-organized, well-funded, focused enemy.

While its energies are focused against America now, terrorism is everyone’s problem. The weapons it is developing can be used by any terrorist group, against any object of one’s hate. So while it is terrorism against the United States today, its success strengthens the name of terrorism and will enable others to use this weapon against sponsoring nations in the future. Terrorism is not rational, is not just, is not honest; but it is passionate and powerful.

Differences between nation states can be reconciled. Diplomacy, U.N. peacekeeping forces, intervention by allies are all tools we have developed to help nations resolve differences peacefully, to preserve the lives, hopes and dreams of all of their people and the prosperity and the hope for the common good of all. These tools cannot be used against non-nation states. That is why they are the ultimate danger. Terrorism endangers us all, for it allows only one answers—violence.

So we are at war. It is a war we must win, and it is one all of our allies have an interest in joining us to win.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I am delighted to yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. BARRETT), my friend and colleague.

Mr. BARRETT of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, I stand tonight in prayer and sorrow, for the victims of this terrible attack, for the families, sorrows for people like Nicole Miller, Tom Burnett, Cora Holland, Barbara Keating, John Jenkins, Amy King, Patrick Quigley, Kenneth Lewis, Rodney Dickens, Mark Gingham, and hundreds, if not thousands, of others; all Americans who did not deserve to die in this wicked attack.

I stand in sorrow for the families of people I never knew, people like Andrea Haberman, a young woman from Wisconsin who was on her first business trip to New York and was in the World Trade Center at the time of the attack.

Mr. Speaker, I stand tonight in heartfelt thanks, thanks to the firefighters, police officers and rescue

Mr. Speaker, I stand tonight in prayer and sorrow, for the victims of this terrible attack, the families and people willing to give blood, letters from those who knew your sons and daughters, grandchildren, relatives, friends and coworkers, be of some small comfort to you for paying this terrible price of living in a free society in a troubled world.

First, I want to say how proud I am to be an American, to witness our ability to rally, to help each other, to stand tall in the face of senseless, cowardly, vicious terrorism. To all of those policemen, firemen, volunteers, health care providers, folks of all sorts who have come out to help to save lives, to rebuild, we are strong.

Thirdly, and hear this, our friends around the world, America is now at war. It is the first war ever fought against a non-nation entity, but it is war nonetheless, and again a well-organized, well-funded, focused enemy.

While its energies are focused against America now, terrorism is everyone’s problem. The weapons it is developing can be used by any terrorist group, against any object of one’s hate. So while it is terrorism against the United States today, its success strengthens the name of terrorism and will enable others to use this weapon against sponsoring nations in the future. Terrorism is not rational, is not just, is not honest; but it is passionate and powerful.

Differences between nation states can be reconciled. Diplomacy, U.N. peacekeeping forces, intervention by allies are all tools we have developed to help nations resolve differences peacefully, to preserve the lives, hopes and dreams of all of their people and the prosperity and the hope for the common good of all. These tools cannot be used against non-nation states. That is why they are the ultimate danger. Terrorism endangers us all, for it allows only one answers—violence.

So we are at war. It is a war we must win, and it is one all of our allies have an interest in joining us to win.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I am delighted to yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. BARRETT), my friend and colleague.

Mr. BARRETT of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, I stand tonight in prayer and sorrow, for the victims of this terrible attack, for the families, sorrows for people like Nicole Miller, Tom Burnett, Cora Holland, Barbara Keating, John Jenkins, Amy King, Patrick Quigley, Kenneth Lewis, Rodney Dickens, Mark Gingham, and hundreds, if not thousands, of others; all Americans who did not deserve to die in this wicked attack.

I stand in sorrow for the families of people I never knew, people like Andrea Haberman, a young woman from Wisconsin who was on her first business trip to New York and was in the World Trade Center at the time of the attack.

Mr. Speaker, I stand tonight in heartfelt thanks, thanks to the firefighters, police officers and rescue America's financial institutions are the best in the world because they are free. That is why they have perhaps been a target. Our airlines are the best in the world. They have been a target, too.

The sentiments expressed by people from around the country today suggest what it really means to be an American, these notions that God has given us the rights that have been enshrined in our Declaration of Independence 225 years ago by the most visionary leaders in the history of human civilization: this notion that God has given us the right to life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness.

Every American who revels in those joyous rights also knows the last line of that Declaration: that we must be prepared to pledge to ourselves and each other our lives, our fortunes, and our sacred honor.

All those who have contributed to the greatness of America have been willing to pledge those very elements for the greatness of their country. Some have given their lives. Some have lost their fortunes. But the sacred honor of America has never been stronger.

Mr. Speaker, we beg God for his mercy on the repose of the souls of those lives that have been lost, for those lives that are in peril today. Also, Mr. Speaker, we also must pray for those perpetrators. They are about to meet their makers, too.

Mr. Speaker, the greatness of America stands strong. Americans should hold their heads high and be proud. We are the greatest Nation on the planet, and we will be emboldened and empowered by this challenge and those challenges that lie before us.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 2 minutes to my friend and colleague, the gentleman from California (Mr. CLEMENT).

Mr. CLEMENT. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me. I want to say to the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. SMITH) and the gentleman from California (Mr. LANTOS), they both have given us a splendid opportunity tonight, and have given everyone an opportunity to speak from their soul and from their heart about this true tragedy that we have had in America.

I want to say to the gentleman from California (Mr. LANTOS) over here, he is our only Holocaust survivor in the United States Congress, a true humanitarian. But he knows from another day and another time and another crisis that we cannot look the other way. We as Americans cannot look the other way either.

I remember when Jack Kennedy and Martin Luther King lost their lives in that terrible assassination. I knew where I was and I knew what I was doing. I will never forget the day, September 11, 2001, when I was watching television and thought just an accident had happened, that a plane had happened to hit one of the World Trade Center towers. And then what happened... just 17 minutes later, the second tower was hit. Then we knew, the world knew, the United States knew, that we had terrorism on our hands.

Then I was driving to the U.S. Capitol, and I see all that smoke and all that debris, not just from the Pentagon, and all the tragedy and all the loss of lives. We know that terrorism is systematic. We know that we are in a real battle. It is not going to be easy for any of us in order to bring this terrorism to a halt, because we know it's organized.

We know that they believe in hatred, they believe in negativism, and many of them have been programmed that way.

Support this resolution, support America, and let us continue to fight for freedom and democracy.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 2 minutes to my friend and colleague, the gentleman from New York (Mr. O'WENS). Mr. Speaker, this is a time for mourning. No one should be ashamed to cry. We are all united as one with the numerous victims of this attack on American citizens.

Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 2 minutes to my friend and colleague, the gentleman from New York (Mr. OWENS). Mr. Speaker, this is a time for mourning. No one should be ashamed to cry. We are all united as one with the numerous victims of this attack on American citizens.

Ms. WATERS. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me.

Mr. Speaker, this great country is a mighty democracy built on the hopes, dreams, and sacrifices of many hard-working people who throughout our history were determined to develop, live, and prosper in the world's greatest Nation.

The history of this Nation is one of struggle, and yes, oftentimes disappointments, dashed hopes and dreams. But through it all we have persevered, worked hard, and sacrificed to make this Nation a great Nation. We have come a long way in the elimination of poverty, prejudices and inequalities. We are immensely proud of our successes, and we are confident enough in our freedom to confront our shortcomings.

We are a diverse Nation of many religious and political persuasions. We are an amazing patchwork of hopeful people who believe that we all have potential and we all deserve happiness and success. We do not take lightly any attempts to dim our hopes, to dash our dreams, to destroy, maim, or kill. We deplore terrorism, and we will not and cannot tolerate terrorism and destruction. We will not allow terrorism to erode the constitutional rights and personal freedoms that define us as Americans.

I stand here today to reassure the citizens of New York, Washington, Los Angeles, Pittsburgh, Boston, New York, San Francisco, and other cities throughout the country that this legislative body will indeed work to ensure that the persons responsible for these acts of terrorism will be swiftly brought to justice.

We are a wise people who have transcended a history that has taught us that violence begets violence, and violence serves no useful purpose. The cowardly attacks on the New York Twin Towers Trade Building and the Pentagon, the hijacking of American and United Airlines airplanes, the death, pain, and destruction that has shaken the very core of our society, must be responded to immediately.

We will indeed identify and deal with the perpetrators. We are good people: not a perfect people, but we are good people. We do not deserve to have innocent Americans' lives destroyed by evil minds that plot and plan sneak attacks on our establishments and our structures and our people.

Our hearts go out to the families and friends of the harmed and the deceased. We grieve with them. Their losses are our losses, but we ask that they rest assured that our loved ones, their loved ones, will not have died in vain. We ask God to have mercy on their souls. We are confident that our loved ones, their loved ones, will not have died in vain. We ask God to have mercy on their souls. We know we must take an honest assessment of our national resolve and our moral judgment. All Americans should participate in this important discussion and express our support for this resolution.

Yesterday was September 11, day 9-11, and we were sent an emergency wake-up call. It was not dialed accidentally; it was a deliberate message. Terrorists struck at our greatest symbols of financial power and military might.

We have a profound opportunity not only to investigate who and how this was done, but also, more importantly, why it was done. We may not be able to answer that question today. The pain, the hurt, the suffering, and the anger are too great. But maybe in our tomorrow, when we have the answer to why then we will be better able to work toward the day when such tragedies will never happen again.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from New York (Mr. SERRANO).

Mr. SERRANO. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me.

Mr. Speaker, yesterday terrorists unleashed a highly organized attack on the symbols of our Nation's prosperity and power. In an instant, this tragic attack destroyed the lives of many Americans.

Yesterday morning, countless numbers of ordinary people in my city and in Washington woke up on a beautiful late summer day and went about their lives as they always have. Lawyers and accountants, janitors and clerks arrived at their places of work to start another ordinary day. But the events that soon consumed us all changed that forever. We never expected this to happen on our soil, and in a profound sense we have lost some of our innocence.

How can I begin to verbalize my sorrow over the deaths of so many wonderful people, individuals whose lives touched others deeply in an endless interconnected fabric? These individuals each had unique stories, and friends and families who loved them and depended on them. In an instant, husbands lost wives, children lost parents and siblings lost brothers and sisters. This is heartbreaking.

The perpetrators of these acts intended to create fear and to bring our society shuddering to its knees. But they have failed. Today, as we begin the process of clearing the rubble and rebuilding, we are more united and more dedicated to our core beliefs of liberty and democracy. Yesterday, I was in New York City and it is hard to express in words the devastation that this cowardly act has brought to our city. The people of New York City, and the people of our nation, have responded with generosity, courage, and patriotism. During this time of great sadness, we as a Nation are witnessing the spirit of hope.

Let there be no misunderstanding, the American people will not let this terrible act diminish our spirit or force us into fear. As I left New York City this morning on my way to join this important discussion and express my support for this resolution, I was startled to see the skyline of my city with two great symbols standing above all others. In their space, I only saw a cloud of smoke rising up to the sky.

Yet, even without those towers watching over my city, we will continue to embrace our freedom and live out our principles of democracy. Those faceless terrorists may think that they have won a great battle, but they have only made our country more dedicated to its core principles and determined to defend those principles against any threat.

Mr. Speaker, yesterday terrorists unleashed a highly organized attack on the symbols of our nation's prosperity and power. In an instant, our tragic attacks. We offer our sympathy and condolences.

Our hearts go out to the families and friends of the harmed and the deceased. We grieve with them. Their losses are our losses, but we ask that they rest assured that our loved ones, their loved ones, will not have died in vain. We ask God to have mercy on their souls. We know we must take an honest assessment of all of our public policy at all levels, and strengthen our resolve for peace and security. We ask God to guide us in our response.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. JACKSON).

Mr. JACKSON of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, today we pray for the innocent victims who suffered and died in yesterday's heinous and horrific terrorist attacks. We offer our sympathy and condolences.

We honor alongside the families and friends who lost loved ones in hijacked planes, the World Trade Center, the Pentagon, and rescue workers who sacrificed themselves to save others. We praised the heroic efforts of the police, the firefighters, the emergency medical teams, and volunteers who responded to this tragedy.

Today Americans stand united, a unity that we must trust will strengthen our President with wisdom and good judgment. All Americans should continue to have hope, to find meaning in blood, to volunteer, to pray for peace in the world. America's determination and indomitable spirit must not allow terrorists and terrorism to weaken our commitment to an open and democratic society.

We vow to fully, thoroughly, and aggressively investigate those who are responsible for this dastardly and deadly deed. We are sure we must respond with strength and in a comprehensive and proportionate manner.

Yesterday was September 11, day 9-11, and we were sent an emergency wake-up call. It was not dialed accidentally; it was a deliberate message. Terrorists struck at our greatest symbols of financial power and military might.

We have a profound opportunity not only to investigate who and how this was done, but also, more importantly, why it was done. We may not be able to answer that question today. The pain, the hurt, the suffering, and the anger are too great. But maybe in our tomorrow, when we have the answer to why then we will be better able to work toward the day when such tragedies will never happen again.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from New York (Mr. SERRANO).

Mr. SERRANO. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me.

Mr. Speaker, yesterday terrorists unleashed a highly organized attack on the symbols of our Nation's prosperity and power. In an instant, this tragic attack destroyed the lives of many Americans.

Yesterday morning, countless numbers of ordinary people in my city and in Washington woke up on a beautiful late summer day and went about their lives as they always have. Lawyers and accountants, janitors and clerks arrived at their places of work to start another ordinary day. But the events that soon consumed us all changed that forever. We never expected this to happen on our soil, and in a profound sense we have lost some of our innocence.

How can I begin to verbalize my sorrow over the deaths of so many wonderful people, individuals whose lives touched others deeply in an endless interconnected fabric? These individuals each had unique stories, friends and family who loved them and depended on them. In an instant, husbands lost wives, children lost parents and siblings lost brothers and sisters. This is heartbreaking.

The perpetrators of these acts intended to create fear and to bring our society shuddering to its knees. But they have failed. Today, as we begin the process of clearing the rubble and rebuilding, we are more united and more dedicated to our core beliefs of liberty and democracy. Yesterday, I was in New York City and it is hard to express in words the devastation that this cowardly act has brought to our city. The people of New York City, and the people of our nation, have responded with generosity, courage, and patriotism. During this time of great sadness, we as a Nation are witnessing the spirit of hope.

Let there be no misunderstanding, the American people will not let this terrible act diminish our spirit or force us into fear. As I left New York City this morning on my way to join this important discussion and express my support for this resolution, I was startled to see the skyline of my city with two great symbols standing above all others. In their space, I only saw a cloud of smoke rising up to the sky.

Yet, even without those towers watching over my city, we will continue to embrace our freedom and live out our principles of democracy. Those faceless terrorists may think that they have won a great battle, but they have only made our country more dedicated to its core principles and determined to defend those principles against any threat.

Mr. Speaker, yesterday terrorists unleashed a highly organized attack on the symbols of our nation's prosperity and power. In an instant, our tragic attacks. We offer our sympathy and condolences.
Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 1 minute just to close.

In my 21 years as a Member of this House, I have never seen such an unprecedented outpouring of unity and solidarity with our fellow Americans as has been expressed by my colleagues on both sides of the aisle. This has been an extraordinary debate, a bipartisan expression of our very deep concern and anguish over the horrific loss of human life and an ironclad resolve to effectively prosecute the war on terrorism. It has all been said, Mr. Speaker, today and into this evening.

Mr. GUTIERREZ. Mr. Speaker, we all search for words of wisdom that will help heal these wounds. Yet, there are few poets who could pen the phrases we long to hear. And, certainly, I do not presume to possess the vocabulary to put this tragedy in its proper perspective.

I simply rise to say the following. And I say it with confidence: At this moment, all Americans—regardless of our backgrounds, regardless of our political affiliations, and regardless of the languages we speak—all of us speak with one voice.

As this resolution demonstrates, all of us speak with one voice—to express immense appreciation and awe for the emergency personnel who answered the call of duty, many of whom did not return.

One voice expresses anger and outrage. One voice asks: “What can we do to help?” And one voice expresses full, complete and unwavering support for our military and for our commander-in-chief.

I support this resolution, above all, for the spirit of unity that it embodies. As these events have demonstrated, none of us can predict what today, or the next day, will bring.

Yet, Americans can—and must now—be certain that tomorrow will bring us a nation that is, and always will be, strong yet free, diverse yet indivisible, and, while ever mindful of the magnitude of our loss, also eternal hope and endlessly optimistic that our Nation’s greatness will only grow.

Mr. UDALL of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, I support this resolution. It says what all Americans are saying and expresses our unbroken resolve in the face of this outrageous and cowardly attack on our country.

When I think of the horrific events that happened yesterday, I am consumed with feelings of great sadness and yesterday was a day of outrage and deep loss. Like all Americans, I am filled with sympathy for the victims and families who have lost loved ones in these brutal attacks.

The enormity of this loss is impossible to measure. It may be some time before we fully understand what happened and who is responsible. But make no mistake—those who organized these inhumane and dastardly attacks will be found and they will be brought to justice.

These attacks on Americans on American soil have not and cannot extinguish the American spirit. Now more than ever, we must steel ourselves to do what must be done—and to do it carefully and correctly. Words and rhetoric are not enough. We can no longer appeal to the hearts and souls of terrorists and those who support and harbor them—they have no heart and they have no soul.

Clearly, our concept of national security must include stronger and more effective measures to keep Americans safe from terrorist attacks. We must commit ourselves to a course of action to ensure that this kind of catastrophe never happens again and that those responsible are brought to justice for their crimes.

Mr. MICA. Mr. Speaker, September 11, 2001 is a day that each of us will remember as long as we live. That day and the terrorist acts committed against the United States must always remind us of the price we have paid for our freedom. Our hearts and prayers go out to the thousands of families whose lives have been shattered by the unspeakable horror that we have all witnessed. We can and will rebuild the structures that have been destroyed. We will never restore the lives of those lost in this tragedy. As a Congress and as a nation we have a solemn obligation not to rest until those guilty of these murderous acts are brought to justice. May God have mercy on those who have committed these crimes against us and may God have mercy on the United States.

Mr. MALONEY of Connecticut. Mr. Speaker, joining with my colleagues, I come to the floor with a heavy heart to express my deepest sympathies for the victims and family members of yesterday’s horrific events in New York, Washington, and Pennsylvania. We have them all, including those from my congressional district, in our prayers.

The Congress is prepared to assist all federal, state, and local agencies in any way that it can. The victims and families come first in our concerns.

I also want to assure all Americans that we will find those responsible for these cowardly acts and make sure that they are punished. This type of attack on America and its people will not stand.

If those responsible think that they can shake the foundation of the American spirit, freedom, and democracy, I have a message for them. You have never been more wrong.

The foundation of liberty and freedom that America is built upon is unshakable.

Finally, as a member of the Armed Services Committee, I along with my committee colleagues will do everything in our power to provide the necessary resources to prevent anything like this from happening again.

There is much work to be done as the days and months ahead, but America will rise to the challenges as is always has throughout its history.

Again, my deepest sympathies and prayers go out the victims and their families.

Mr. LARSEN of Washington. Mr. Speaker, after a painful and shocking day where we saw the unthinkable become a reality, I returned to my house to embrace my wife, Tiia, and two children.

My five-year-old son, Robert, had only one question. He asked it in a way that only a five-year-old could: “Why did those mean people fly a plane through that building?”

How can you explain to a child the hate that these people feel for our country? I’m not sure how to answer the question, “Why?”

We may not have that answer soon; however, there are things we do know. These things are as solid and sure as the Cascade Mountains that greet us each morning, and as deep as the Puget Sound waters: the promise and potential that the freedoms we enjoy will never be given up to any terror. The gift of democracy will continue to be exercised no matter what the cost. The values of openness and tolerance, without which we would descend to the level of our new enemies, will continue to stand. Finally, the American spirit which drives us to reach out to help those in need—a spirit we need now more than ever—will continue to triumph.

In the wake of this terrible act of terrorism, I am calling upon all of us to take these actions: (1) Please pray for the victims and their families; (2) support President Bush and the Congress in the actions we must take to respond to this tragedy. This is no time for partisan politics; (3) use my office as a resource to answer questions; (4) donate blood if you can; (5) do not let terrorism scare you. The United States will triumph together as those responsible and bring them to justice.

We have the strongest democracy in the history of the world and we will get through this shocking attack on our country.

In my prayers, and to the victims of the victims.
We must learn from the kindness of strangers who have come to one another’s comfort in the last two days.

Finally, in the process of combating international terrorism, we must either abandon American civil liberties or express our fears and anger by indiscriminately striking out against those with different names, skin color or religion.

Today here on this floor, we honor the victims. Tomorrow, and in the coming weeks and months, we will honor them further by showing that our Nation and her people are stronger than the forces of terrorism.

Ms. SCHAKOWSKY. Mr. Speaker, like most Americans, I was glued to the television yesterday. It was with the eyes and heart of a wife, mother and grandmother primarily that I responded incredulously to the horrific images. Throughout the day, I tried to reach my family back in Illinois, and found myself looking at their pictures. Those of us who did not lose loved ones frequently personally someone who perished in this attack could all empathize with the agony of those who do. We all have sent our precious ones off to work or said goodbye to them at the airport, never giving more than a passing thought about their safety. With great anticipation, we have ridden in elevators to the top of the World Trade Center, and as citizens visited public buildings like the Pentagon. In just a few hours, our sense of security as an American family was shattered. It will be a long time before we take ordinary acts for granted again.

Today, our hopes and prayers are with the injured, and we rejoice with each discovery of someone found in the rubble. Today we marvel at the courage of the firefighters, police, military personnel, emergency crews and volunteers, many of whom also perished, who have worked and are working so hard to save lives.

Yesterday I was consumed by unanswerable questions. What kind of people carefully and deliberately plot to brutally murder thousands of innocent men, women and children? How can one imagine individuals celebrating the deadly success of this evil plot? How could any human being have such total disregard for human life? How could anyone be so consumed by hate? It is still hard to get my mind around this.

Today, I hope that we must be careful as we answer those questions. I represent a very diverse district that includes people of all races, nationalities and religions. All of them are about to find that out the hard way! We will pay tribute to our lost loved ones, to those who have responded so bravely, and we will comfort the families that are aching across the nation. And we will stand together in this country and with our allies around the world and all those who consider themselves civilized, and we will have justice. And the commitment to freedom from which this nation was born will continue to flourish.

Mr. MASCARA. Mr. Speaker, yesterday, America was wounded. Wounded in our souls. Wounded by an unimaginable evil. Our nation will forever remember this despicable attack on America, on our people, and on the freedom we enjoy as Americans. These horrific events will be forever engrained in the minds of our peace-loving people for many years to come.

We must come together in our hearts to bring peace to the families and friends of the lost loved ones. We must open our hearts to those in need.

Lifestyles in this nation and around the world may change, but the message must go out to our faceless enemies that we the American people have the resolve to persevere. In the words of Confucius, “Our greatest glory is not in never falling, but rising every time we fall.”

We are a strong and proud people who have faced adversity and enemies greater than the pathetic cowards who attacked us yesterday. Our enemies will not see us falter. The American people and this congress will stand behind our President.

This tragic event will only serve to solidify our principles of freedom and democracy. Those are the pillars on which we stand, the very foundation of freedom and democracy. They will learn that America’s belief in freedom and democracy are far more powerful than any acts of terrorism.

We will continue to be the greatest nation this planet has ever seen, and our enemies are about to find that out the hard way! I will support the President’s efforts to hunt down and punish those cowards responsible for the killing of unsuspecting and innocent civilians. Unfortunately, whatever action taken will never be enough to sufficiently avenge our nation’s losses.

Let us always remember that although our nation has been violated, we will deal with those who perpetrated this terrorism.

Freedom to live was stolen from many of our mothers, fathers, children, sisters, brothers, and our citizens. We must never forget that, even long after our answer comes.

Mr. KOLBE. Mr. Speaker, yesterday America was hit by an unspeakable tragedy—an act of unconscionable horror.

I am uncomprehending, and I am saddened beyond depths I could have imagined, at the terrorist attacks that have been launched against the United States. My heart goes out to the families of all those who have been lost—airline passengers and crew, workers in office buildings, military personnel, rescue workers—too numerous to even estimate at this point.

Yesterday, Americans from coast to coast and around the world stopped what they were doing and experienced shock, insecurity, and grief.

Our country has not felt such horror or fear in all history. Cities, suburbs, and rural towns became “still” as news spread of the events unfolding in New York City, Washington, DC, and western Pennsylvania.

As we relive yesterday’s events, we will continue to be in shock. We will search for information about friends, family, and professional colleagues affected by this vicious attack.

However, as we move beyond the shock, we must remain assured that America’s institutions and government remain fully intact. The American spirit is stronger than a band of suicidal terrorists. We will survive this depraved attack. In fact, we will grow stronger. While this attack has destroyed lives and infrastructure, it has not destroyed our foundation as a country.

To the perpetrators of this act, I would state that you have not destroyed the spirit of America. You have not even shaken the foundation of this country. If anything, even as our nation grieves, its very foundation has been re-enforced with a sense of itself, its purpose, its freedoms, and the deeply felt civic connections among its citizens.

In the morning hours, even as hundreds of thousands of people were immediately gripped by chaotic circumstances in Washington, DC, and New York, we knew that our faith in one another as citizens would sustain us through the events unfolding before our eyes.

In the afternoon, as we watched the brave men and women of fire, police and medical professions carry out their duties, our confidence in civic institutions was re-assured and grew deeper.

As they as public resources were mobilized to support the efforts of New York City, Washington, DC, and southwestern Pennsylvania, our trust and belief in the leadership provided by local, state, and federal officials grew stronger.

My fellow Americans, after yesterday, that bond that binds us together as Americans, that bond that seems invisible or recessed in our minds of our peace-loving people for many years to come.

All of us felt its presence and re-emergence as we struggled through yesterday. As we evacuated buildings. As we follow the news.

As we mourned. As we took the metro or walked home. As we shared our sorrow with friends and family.

To my colleagues and fellow Americans, I would say that it is through this bond—shared between ourselves, and indeed shared among all people who relish freedom and democracy—that we will tap our inner strength to overcome yesterday’s events.

Over the next several weeks, we will take stock of our loss. We will grieve for friends and loved ones. After that, we will re-build the physical infrastructure that was destroyed, and in so doing make sacred the memories of Americans lost.

Our lives will go on—saddened by those lost—but unencumbered by fear of those who have neither the ability nor courage to truly threaten our freedom and way of life. As we move to respond internationally, we will assemble the facts to identify those responsible. And then we will act swiftly to punish those responsible, and we will protect U.S. national security interests in concert with our friends who share a commitment to actively combat terrorism.

To America's friends and allies, we take comfort in your words of condolence and look forward to your support in the future.

To the perpetrators of this crime against human life, you will be tracked down.

You may wish to remember what Admiral Yamamoto said of the last major attack on U.S. soil at Pearl Harbor mused after that event: “I fear all we have done is awaken a sleeping giant and filled him with terrible resolve.”

The United States will use every resource available to find you and to punish you.

Cowardly acts of terror will not change the United States of America. You will not win.

Mr. THORNBERRY. Mr. Speaker, there have been many times over the past two days when an analogy has been made to Pearl Harbor.

I am struck by a different analogy from the same war.

In August 1940, the Battle of Britain raged in the skies. It was different from previous wars because innocent civilians Were thrust into the battle As bombs rained down on London and the rest of the British.

Prime Minister Winston Churchill spoke to the House of Commons on August 20. He said: “If it is a case of the whole nation fighting and suffering together, that ought to suit us. Because we are the most united of all the nations, Because we enter the war upon the national will and with our eyes open, and because we have been nurtured in freedom and individual responsibility and are the products, not of totalitarian uniformity, but of tolerance and variety.”

The same could be said of us today, Mr. Speaker.

What the terrorists will never understand is that the strength of America is the hearts of our people. They may attack our buildings; they may attack innocent civilians. But they can never harm the thing that makes us great—it’s inside us.

Last night, church services were held across the country—from Claremore, Texas to Washington, D.C.—as people prayed for those affected by the tragedy and for strength and courage to face what lies ahead.

I believe that God will continue to bestow His blessings on this favored land, and each day I will thank Him for the opportunity to be an American.

Mr. SMITH of Texas. Mr. Speaker, it will take weeks, months, perhaps years, for us to understand the magnitude of the terrorist attacks. One thing we will try to do is to try to find a balance between the need for increased security and the necessity of protecting our freedoms.

I was driving to work at the Rayburn House Office Building yesterday morning with my window down because of a broken air conditioner. As I came abreast of the Pentagon, a police aircraft came racing toward a muffled boom and then, after a few seconds, saw a billowing black cloud of smoke. A few minutes later, when I stopped at the entrance of the Rayburn garage, a Capitol Hill policeman told me, “They just hit the Pentagon,” and pointed to the same black cloud of smoke I had just passed.

It will take a while for our government to resume normalcy and for our country to regain its confidence. I used to tell Sunday School students that “confidence” comes from the Latin, “con fides,” which means “with faith.” That is how we will have to proceed.

Mr. BARR of Georgia. Mr. Speaker, the grief millions of Americans are feeling today all across our great nation knows no boundaries. While I recognize the significance the Congress making a statement for the record to condemn yesterday’s attacks, I also recognize mere words ring hollow today to the millions of Americans who have lost so much.

Lost in this tremendous tragedy were friends and loved ones—fathers, military personnel, firefighters, and police officers; inocent men, women, and children all. Over the days, weeks, and months ahead, all Amer-cans must come together, work together, and do what they can, whether it is donating blood to a local blood bank or something as simple as thanking the brave men and women who put their lives on the line each day to ensure our safety and freedom.

The grief and mourning all of us are feeling today however, must be balanced by our resolve to identify and take action against those responsible for these despicable and unprovoked acts of war. For these were not simple acts of terrorism or mere crimes. They were acts of war; a direct and deliberate attack against our country, our government, our economy, and our military.

To that end, I disagree with those who believe we must bring these perpetrators “to justice.” They should be destroyed, and destruction means that these vipers will no longer have the ability to rear their fangs towards our great nation again. I agree with the President who said last night there will no longer be a distinction between those who commit acts of terror and those who provide harbor to them. I only regret such a distinction has existed for so long.

While we remember and reflect on all we have lost, we must also move forward with a renewed fight to destroy terrorists and dismantle their infrastructure. This consists of identifying any and all terrorist elements—whether they be those who actually train and commit these acts, or those who harbor, fiance, supply and otherwise offer support to them. Once we have positively identified them, we take them out; eliminate them from the face of this earth just as strongly as we will never rise again. In doing so, they should be afforded the same lack of warning and mercy as they offered to the innocent victims in the World Trade Center and Pentagon.

There are other steps we could and should take, in light of these terrorist acts.

We must all work to immediately unite the hands of our military and intelligence leaders to deal swiftly with serious and recognized threats to our national security. For the last 30 years, our government, through executive orders, has had an artificial barrier in place; pro-lates our lives and property from doing so. To that end, I introduced H.R. 19, “The Terrorist Elimination Act”; legislation repelling those portions of executive orders prohibiting the government from directly eliminating terrorist leaders.

Terrorist leaders should rarely be targeted, and any such steps should only be considered after very careful and comprehensive consideration involving our military, intelligence, and policy leaders. However, when terrorist leader, such as the ones who caused the attacks in New York City yesterday, Washington, D.C., take and threaten the lives of Americans, I believe it is entirely appropriate for us to remove them by any means necessary, without arbitrarily limiting our options.

Finally, we must begin to take steps toward understanding why our intelligence community failed to have knowledge or warning of such a well-planned, multi-faceted strategic attack. The federal government spends billions of dollars each year to ensure the safety of its citizens. For us to have no knowledge ahead of time is simply unacceptable, and I fully expect steps will be taken to understand the source of these problems and fix them immediately; including allowing our agents in the field more latitude to gain information and eliminating bureaucracy to ensure information is disseminated more quickly.

What we must avoid, however, is the knee-jerky reaction to pass more laws restricting the civil liberties of American citizens. The tragedies of this attack will only be compounded by giving the government more power at the expense of our civil liberties. If we cannot stop this kind of attack with all of our government agencies already have, then we are in very serious trouble. As I have said, the one area where the government can and must approve is in allowing more latitude to gain information overseas and in taking direct action against terrorists.

As I said at the outset, mere words have little meaning during this time of national tragedy. What we must do now is to take meangful steps to exact retribution on those who are responsible and ensure this never happen again.

Mr. MOLLOY. Mr. Speaker, I join my colleagues today in expressing my outrage at these terrorist attacks on American soil. My thoughts and prayers go out to the families of those who perished at the hands of a cruel, and yet unknown, terrorist who seeks to wreak reest and gratitude to the hundreds of emergency responders who, at this moment, continue to make order of the wreckage that has resulted from this most wretched attack.

Our proud nation has never flinched from answers on that has pulled together during extraordinary times. And, indeed, this is an extraordinary time. This unity of spirit is already evident by countless Americans who are lining up at bloodbanks across the country, those offering clothing to the walking wounded whose clothes were seared by burning buildings, and scores of volunteers who are seeking to come to crash sites to relieve exhausted rescue personnel. The resolve of America is evident in the face of this carnage and chaos.

I join Members of the House and Senate in supporting President Bush’s efforts to use all necessary means to protect our citizens and to determine who has perpetrated this unseemly act of terrorism and to punish them, or those who harbor them. I invite the President to communicate swiftly with the Congress to let us know what resources our Government agencies need to address the damage inflicted upon our land and our people. I know that Congress will respond thoroughly and expeditiously.

While buildings, as well as nerves, may be shattered by this heinous act of terrorism, American spirit is steadfast and unflinching. God bless America.

Mr. BERERUT. Mr. Speaker, this Member calls to his colleagues’ attention the exceptionally perceptive editorials of Nebraska’s two metropolitan newspapers—the Lincoln Journal Star and the Omaha World-Herald. The editorial advice of the former newspaper that “now is the time for Americans to unite, to draw together” is certainly evident in abundance in Nebraska today, and throughout this Nation. All of us in Congress and in other national leadership need to consider, and lead by our example and our actions in the Congress, the advice of the Omaha paper that while “this is a time for anger, to be sure, and grief and compassion toward those whose family and friends are among the victims. But it is also a time for a clear-eyed assessment of what Americans can do to make our society less vulnerable to this kind of warfare.”

[From the Lincoln Journal Star, Sept. 12, 2001]

ATTACKS MARK BLOODY END TO COMPLACENCY

Life in America will be forever altered by the terrorist attacks on New York and Washington, D.C.

Life will change because Americans not only will accommodate it, they will welcome it. Aren’t you willing this morning to tolerate ultra-strict precautions the next time you board an airline? Aren’t you willing this morning to tolerate the next time you enter a government building? Aren’t you willing this morning to settle the airline hassles you will have as a result of these precautions?

A message was driven home in the thunder of exploding airplanes and collapsing skyscrapers. The greatest threat to American security may be from shadowy forces using guile, deception and stealth—not from recognizable foes wielding batteries of missiles and the implements of war.

Aircraft carriers, satellites, ballistic missiles, tanks, and helicopters were of little use against the foe who struck Tuesday morning. The battle was a battle against the enemy himself. The battle was the battle against the enemy without who—and where—the enemy was. As yet, we have seen but a small fraction of the strength of what Americans can do to make our society more secure. This is a time for anger, to be sure, and grief and compassion toward those whose family and friends are among the victims. But it’s also a time for a clear-eyed assessment of what Americans can do to make our society less vulnerable to this kind of warfare. [from the Omaha World Herald, Sept. 12, 2001]

Some of the vulnerability exists because Americans wanted more personal freedoms from the Government at the expense of our defense and intelligence. Civil society has grown apart from some of the realities of security. Accordingly, many Americans were unprepared for this kind of introduction to warfare in what is sure to be one of its 21st century forms.

It is a maddening, infuriating kind of conflict in which the enemy will not be identified. Its targets are selected with cruel indifference to human values—the traveling public, the institutions of democratic governance, the large concentrations of innocent civilians.

It is a war on a horrifyingly large scale. Some people compared the attacks with the Japanese ambush of Pearl Harbor. However, the toll was potentially greater than the 2,400 lives lost in that 1941 attack. Fifty thousand people worked in the World Trade Center in New York. If all the terrorists had achieved a maximum kill, it would have been near the magnitude of the 60,000 people who died at Hiroshima. A few of the 1,000 hours passed and shock turned to anger. Gen. Norman Schwarzkopf said what a lot of people were thinking—the terrorist’s to-do list is complete. The President and the persons responsible and punish them severely.

But as Schwarzkopf acknowledged, part of the frustration of a terrorist war is not knowing the adversary, immediately or at all. We can only trust that the government will do its best to take care of that essential part of the response. These should re-examine Americans of the importance of electing the best leaders they possibly can—the most important consideration is not the benifits the candidate promises but the character and wisdom he potentially can bring to an unforeseen crisis.

This is a time for anger, to be sure, and grief and compassion toward those whose family and friends are among the victims. But it’s also a time for a clear-eyed assessment of what Americans can do to make our society less vulnerable to this kind of warfare. Civil society has grown apart from some of the realities of security. Accordingly, many Americans were unprepared for this kind of introduction to warfare in what is sure to be one of its 21st century forms.

Ms. BALLANGER, Mr. Speaker, today is another day that will live in infamy. Americans are not used to attacks on our citizens, especially on our own soil. And America will not stand for this.

Today’s cowardly attacks were made by those who despise freedom. Well, I have news for them: freedom will prevail, and they will pay the highest price for their actions.

This was an act of war. A war against the people. A war against the friends who are World War II veterans compare this to Pearl Harbor. But in World War II, we knew who and where—the enemy was. As yet, we...
September 11, 2001

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—HOUSE

16837

don’t know the answer to that question, but be assured that we will find out.

Our thoughts and prayers today are with the innocent victims and their families. We also owe a great debt of gratitude to those who work in rescue and recovery efforts, risking their lives to save others. As parents, grandparents, and peers, we owe a debt to those who have lost loved ones and to those victims who are fighting to survive their injuries.

I want to express my condolences and prayers to all of the families and friends who have lost loved ones and to those victims who are fighting to survive their injuries. I also want to ask us all to remember and pray for the dedicated people who have worked and continue to work to recover possible survivors.

As a nation of free people we will join together and recover from this tragedy. From the ashes of this tragedy we will rise up and prevail—because in America—every morning the sun rises and a new day dawns, and grieve for the families, friends, and communities that have lost so much.

As Chaplain Coughlin told us through prayer this morning, “Yesterday changed the world, America will rebound from this tragedy. The terrorists took their best shot, and now it’s time that we take ours.

Mr. OSE. Mr. Speaker, yesterday, our great Nation was dealt a blow of untold destruction and loss of life, in a cowardly and egregious act of war by terrorists.

At this time my thoughts and prayers are with the victims and the families of this horrible terrorist act. This is now a time for our Nation to collectively grieve and come together as one to address this crisis. I salute the brave men and women who are, even now, pouring through the tangled remains of the buildings, the doctors, nurses, and paraedics, and law enforcement who are working long hours to provide critical medical attention, and the volunteers who are rallying to support them.

The American people and Congress will support the President’s effort to utilize every resource available to ensure our Nation’s security. Our Nation has not witnessed such an unprovoked attack since Pearl Harbor. As in the past, America will respond. We will identify the perpetrators of these attacks and hold them accountable for an act of war against the American people.

Mr. SIMMONS. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of Joint Resolution 61 expressing the sense of the Senate and House of Representatives regarding terrorist attacks launched against the United States on September 11, 2001.

We are gathered here on the floor of the people’s House 1 day after the worst attack on American soil in our Nation’s history.

We are gathered here to demonstrate that the people’s work must go on. And that we will not be intimidated away from performing the people’s work.

We are gathered here to show the world that you can take our people’s lives, and you can destroy their property; but you can never destroy the spirit of freedom and the institution of democracy.

And so, as the people’s representatives, we must act in the face of turmoil, confusion, and danger to do the peoples’ work; to show our enemies that the people cannot be intimidated, and that our democracy cannot be shut down.

Today is a day that we must demonstrate to the world that terrorism is not free speech, it is murder; and that terrorist acts are not politics, they are war. It is time for us to realize that the perpetrators of these acts are not trying to capture our attention to make a point, but they are trying to destroy us; and it is time for us to respond in kind.

The resolution before us says that we “commit to support increased resources in the war to eradicate terrorism.” It also provides that we “punish the perpetrators of these attacks, as well as their sponsors.” These are appropriate responses to what has happened over the past 24 hours.

In the coming weeks, I do not want to see terrorist faces on the covers of our national newspapers. I do not want to hear the pundit talk of this group or that. I want our intelligence community and military forces to hunt them down like the murderous cowards they are. And I want this Congress to use its “power of the purse” to ensure that they have the resources they need to accomplish this task. That is what this resolution says we will do. That is what we must do.

In closing, Mr. Speaker, I will share with the Chamber that last night, my wife spent the evening hours with beloved neighbors in our hometown of Stonington, CT. Their young grandson, my daughter’s classmate and friend, had a new and exciting job in New York City located on the 105th floor of the World Trade Center. He was a bright and energetic young man; a smalltown boy pursuing the American dream in “the Big Apple.” Following yesterday’s attack, calls to his cell phone went unanswered. He is missing. We fear the worst.

Today in eastern Connecticut we have learned of four others who are missing, and we mourn the deaths of three loved ones who were on two of the aircraft involved.

This distress among our fellow citizens demands that we respond with strong and unequivocal action. This resolution is just the first step. I expect that it will be followed by authorizations and appropriations. In the name of the missing and the dead, we can do no less. This is the people demand in their name, this is what we must do.

Mr. REGULA. Mr. Speaker, I rise to strongly condemn the heinous acts of terrorism committed against the American people yesterday. The barbaric cowards perpetrating these acts have attacked not only our country, but also the values of human freedom and democracy that so many Americans have died defending both here and abroad. Our thoughts and prayers are with the injured and those who have tragically lost loved ones.

In the short term, we must do everything we can to save and care for those injured in these attacks. The Federal Government can and must be a vital partner in this effort. As chairman of the appropriations subcommittee that funds the Department of Health and Human Services, it is imperative that we do everything we can to support the Department in its coordinated response and recovery efforts.

I must express my sincere gratitude to all those police, fire, and volunteer rescue units that have saved so many already at their own risk and continue their efforts to find survivors.

My appreciation also goes out to those treating the many injured. Lastly, I must say thanks to all those who have donated their time, blood, and possessions to aid the rescue efforts. It always impresses me that in times of great tragedy, the people of this country rise to the challenge in coming to the aid of their fellow citizens. This says a lot about the values this nation represents.

Of course, our energies must be strongly focused on finding those responsible and bringing them to justice. I consider this to be an act of war against the United States and a substantial and coordinated response is needed to protect our national security. Like the President, I believe we must strongly punish not only these terrorists, but also those who provide them with a haven in which to operate. I hope that our friends and allies worldwide will help us in this effort.

Clearly, the unforeseen nature of these attacks requires us to rethink the way we defend ourselves, with the help of our friends and allies. Our efforts can be prevented. Domestically, we must pay better attention to unconventional threats and basic security measures. Internationally, we need to better utilize our intelligence resources so that these types of threats can be detected early.

This is not the first time our country and way of life have been challenged. This challenge too will be answered and this great nation will prevail over these faceless cowards. These are the times when all Americans are called upon to rise to the occasion, working together as a community so that our Nation continues to stand tall and proud.

Mr. LATHAM. Mr. Speaker, yesterday our Nation suffered previously unimaginable horrific acts against our Nation’s citizens and our democracy, in an attempt to shake our foundation of freedom.

As parents, grandparents, and peers we not only see these acts as an attack on our Nation—but also an attack that threatens to shatter the innocence of life as seen by our children. Yesterday, the actions of others crushed this innocence and reminded us that freedom does not come without a cost. As so many American’s who have fought for this country already know—freedom is not free.

I want to express my condolences and prayers to all of the families and friends who have lost loved ones and to those victims who are fighting to survive their injuries. I also want to ask us all to remember and pray for the dedicated people who have worked and continue to work to recover possible survivors.

As a nation of free people we will join together and recover from this tragedy. From the ashes of this tragedy we will rise up and prevail—because in America—every morning has the potential for new and even better beginnings.

Mr. SUNUNU. Mr. Speaker, yesterday, our Nation was besieged by images of tragedy and horror as we witnessed an attack on the very heart of the freedom which we hold so dear. Today, the Nation and the world are besieged by emotion: disbelief, anger, and enormous sorrow. We mourn the loss of thousands, and grieve for the families, friends, and communities that have lost so much.

As Chaplain Coughlin told us through prayer this morning, “Yesterday changed the world, and today we are changed.” We will meet this change and this challenge united—knowing that our freedom is our greatest strength and knowing that in our resolve to protect freedom, we will all be a nation united.

Mr. HILLEARY. Mr. Speaker, our Nation, our freedom, and our way of life were violently attacked yesterday. Our thoughts and prayers are with the victims and their families, as well with the men and women who are conducting the rescue effort in New York.

While, our adversaries correctly calculated how to get past airport security and execute their plan, they badly miscalculated the unity and resolve of the American people. Whatever policy disagreements we may have are a family fight. One need only to see the long lines of people waiting to give blood for the victims, or the truck drivers in New York stopping to pick up carry pedestrians across the George Washington Bridge, or the woman handing out free pairs of sneakers to women wearing high heels so they could get through the rubble safely to know that the American people are united as ever.

We stood united behind the President and his national security team. While the people behind these vicious acts don’t have the courage to show themselves, we will find out who is responsible for this, we will hunt down those who financed and protected the terrorists, and we will make an example of them.

This is much more than a massive criminal act; it is an act of war, and will be dealt with as such. The merchants of terror have gambled that America won’t have the stomach to do what is necessary to safeguard our freedom. They have gambled wrong. America can’t—and won’t—flinch.

Mr. LARGENT. Mr. Speaker, today our nation grieves for those lost in yesterday’s horrendous attacks. Our prayers are with the victims and their families. We also must honor the heroic efforts of those who gave their lives while attempting to rescue victims trapped in the Trade Towers. Hundreds of firefighters, police officers and other workers reportedly lost their lives during the terrible collapse of buildings. We will never forget their courage and sacrifice, and we must do all we can to assist those who continue to attend to victims and search for survivors.

Make no mistake: yesterday’s attacks were an act of war against the United States. When we determine who is responsible our reaction must be strong, decisive, and sustained enough to stamp out this threat against our freedom. We determine who is responsible our reaction will be willfully and the values that make America what it is. America has always been a lighthouse to the world, welcoming those seeking a safe harbor and new beginnings. America was attacked precisely because her freedom shines brightest. In the days to come that lighthouse will shine even brighter still, penetrating the darkest of nights and standing tall as an enduring beacon of hope.

May God bless the victims and their families, and may God bless America.

Mr. ISAKSON. Mr. Speaker, September 11th was a tragic day in America’s history, and a defining day in the lives of all Americans and all civilization. My prayers go out to all those whose loved ones were lost or injured.

As we reflect on the horror of the terrorist attack we must all, individually and collectively as a nation, resolve to support our President, military and law enforcement in their pursuit, capture and conviction of those responsible for carrying out this act of terror.

The intent of terrorism, to strike fear in the hearts of all of us, and to cause people to cower and retreat. We must all demonstrate as a nation and as individuals that terrorism has failed in its intent. Our history demonstrates that America has risen to meet and defeat every attempt to shake our dedication to peace and liberty. Now will be no exception.

Freedom and hope in the world rest today, as it has for over two centuries, on the shoulders of Americans. May our response against those who attacked America be swift and decisive, and our resolve to never allow this to happen again ever vigilant. God has blessed America, and I pray God’s healing hand touch all Americans whose families suffered loss and injury yesterday.

Mr. DOOLEY of California. Mr. Speaker, yesterday our nation experienced one of the most disastrous days of its history. It was a tragedy caused by violent terrorists with no regard for precious human lives. It was a tragedy that reminded us not to take our freedoms for granted. And it was a tragedy that will be sure to touch the lives of everyone in our nation for a long, long time. And it will leave deepest personal condolences and concerns to the victims of yesterday’s tragedy and their families.

The attacks yesterday on passengers on four airlines flights, the World Trade Center in New York, and the Pentagon in Washington, D.C. struck at the heart of our nation. They threatened our common heritage and belief that freedom is not free. They reminded us that terrorism is one of our great nation’s most important symbols and institutions. The Pentagon is a symbol of our nation’s great military might, which protects our borders and defends our democratic way of life. The World Trade Center was a symbol of this nation’s vital and strong economy—an economy that will remain as strong as the resolve of all Americans.

More than assaulting our symbols, the terrorists struck at the heart of our nation—its people. They struck not just the immediate victims of yesterday’s violence, but at many, many more. They struck the victims’ families, friends, and all our communities. Their violence didn’t just destroy buildings—it took away the gift of life from countless innocent Americans. The human cost of this violence will be deep.

We must act swiftly in the coming days to provide emergency aid to support to those areas affected by the violence. This should include federal funds for rescue, recovery, rebuilding, and counseling. And it should also include individual volunteer efforts, whether it’s the donation of blood or assistance in providing solace and comfort to the victims’ families.

We must find the perpetrators of these heinous acts and bring them to justice. I have faith the President Bush will act quickly and aggressively to identify the terrorists and launch appropriate retaliation.

We must do everything in our power to prevent terrorists from inflicting this strain of violence on the future by significantly increasing our intelligence budget and investing more in traditional human espionage.

We must work to restore the fullest confidence in our airway safety by strengthening security measures at airports around the country. Most Americans understand that greater security measures may entail some sacrifices, but those sacrifices may be a small price to pay for greater peace of mind.

And finally, we must help each other heal from this tragedy. When terrorists seek to divide us, we must remember to trust each other and to stand united. By placing our trust in each other, we can once again strengthen and preserve the strong bonds of this country that these terrorists tried to break.

Mr. RAHALL. Mr. Speaker, Southern West Virginia know loss. We are still reeling from the effects of the attacks and their families as other Americans have hoped and prayed for us in the past. Our nation’s motto is E Pluribus Unum: Out of many, one. Americans always display this unity best when disaster strikes. We honor the brave men and women who carried out the rescue and recovery operations.

Yesterday’s attacks did not kill only Washingtonians and New Yorkers. The victims came from across this country. At least one family in my own District was torn apart. Dr. Paul Ambrose, a talented and public-spirited young physician, was aboard one of the airplanes that the terrorists crashed. The sympathies of all America are with Ken and Shar- on Ambrose of Huntington, West Virginia, today. We will avenge their loss.

America seeks peace, but it is not blind. The people who planned these attacks are out there, and we know that they still pursue their evilness. Their celebrations will be short, because America’s resolve is sure. I support the President’s vow to punish these murderers and those who give them shelter.

As the death toll mounts in the aftermath of the most vicious terrorist attack ever perpetrated on Americans and America, I ask the good Lord to give us the courage, wisdom, and conviction to bring those responsible to justice.

Certainly, the horror of this attack has been etched into the minds and hearts of all Americans. It is time to return the dead. To care for the injured. But it is also time to plan for our future, and to take actions to insure that the lessons of this attack will not be lost. That those who perished will not have done so in vain.

America will persevere. We are not weak- ened by this attack, but rather, will grow stronger. Out of these flames of death, an even stronger American spirit will be born. And the beacon of freedom, of our Democratic institutions, will burn even brighter upon the world.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, my office manager, Mary Christ, noted the following that I want to share with my colleagues. And I quote:

Suddenly, we are living in a new world.

This attack on the United States is worse than the Pearl Harbor of the past. Then, a known enemy struck at a far-away naval base. Now, an unclear enemy has struck against the heart of the nation.

Innocent civilians were turned into weapons, and innocent civilians were the targets and the hurt. It was unspeakable brutality and terror. It could not have been worse. This was the day we will all remember. This was the day the world changed.

For 10 years, we have been living in the op- timism after the fall of the Evil Empire and a new freedom around the world. Now, a new Evil has struck. A new war will be waged across world. It will never be the same.

Thank you Mary!

Mr. TIAHERT. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of H. J. Res. 63.

September 11 now has as new meaning in America. September 11, 2001 is the day the landscape of America was changed forever. Whenever I hear 911, not only will I think of emergency assistance, I will remember the victims and families of those who were tragically destroyed and the importance of the fight against terrorism.

We will rebuild structures, but we cannot re- build thousands of lives that have been lost to this world forever. Our thoughts and prayers go out to the victims, their families and friends and all Americans hurt by this tragedy. We will respond with un-wavering resolve and cowardly attack against our country. As we attempt to rescue survivors and console those who have lost, we begin our determined quest to find the murderers and impose the appropriate punishment.

Make no mistake. The act of war per- petrated against us will be met with the full force of the United States. Once we have identified the cowards, our response will be swift and severe. President Bush, Congress and the American people are resolved to take on and defeat the forces of evil that attempt to disrupt our way of life. The principles of de- mocracy, in free and open society are an imper- nate. We will not accept them. We shall attack. Weak and cowardly terrorists have de- clared war against all nations that enjoy free- dom and liberty. The world is now divided be- tween those who support terrorism and those who will fight it, and all peaceful nations should band together in a unified force against those that spread hatred and wreak terror. We shall target not only those who plan and carry out these acts of terror, but those who feed, finance, cloth and harbor them.

Congress must reassess our priorities in the way we plan to organize our government. Mr. Speaker, a member of the Appropriations Commit- tee, I pledge to stand with President Bush in addressing our intelligence and national se- curity needs. We must keep Americans safe to assure our freedoms.

Mr. Speaker, yesterday was a dark day in America. Today, the light of freedom shines bright and we must move forward with con- fidence as the greatest nation in the world.

May God bless those who lost their lives and comfort their families. And, my God bless the United States of America.

Mr. SAXTON. Mr. Speaker, I first wish to associate myself with the remarks of Mr. ARMEY and Mr. GEPHARDT. The partnership we have formed and the commitment to work to- gether on a bipartisan basis with no aisle be- tween us is a statement of great importance. The American people today have an en- hanced commitment to freedom and democ- racy, and that commitment is directly reflected through their representatives in this Congress.

Yesterday’s heinous attacks were acts of war against the citizens of the United States. And, the attack clearly points to a well-financed and painstakingly planned operation.

As the chairman of the Special Oversight Panel on Terrorism, Committee on Armed Services in the House, I wish to make a slight- ly different point. During the past 24 hours, since the shock of viewing the events of yes- terday began to wane, the question has been asked many times: how do we prevent this from ever happening again?

As you know, there is no simple answer. However, during our deliberations on the panel which was established by former full committee chairman, the late Floyd Spence, it has become abundantly clear that there are at least five principles which must be developed or enhanced to safeguard the future security of our great country.

First, there is an obvious need for the develop- ment of individual responsibility for the se- curity of ourselves, our families, friends and our communities. An awareness for our sur- roundings and potential dangers must be un- derstood and recognized. We have heretofore existed in a relatively safe environment, free of dangers posed by terrorism. To some degree that may not continue to be the case.

Second, there is a need to develop “institu- tional responsibility.” That is, to take steps to insure the places we go to work and visit are safer from violence. The Congress of the United States, as an institution, has im- portant strides during the past decade in this regard as we have safeguarded in place today that did not previously exist. This is not so with most other institutions. Obviously, there is a need to increase institutional security at air- ports, and other places where governments have special responsibilities in this regard as they are the closest to the people.

Third, to those of us who have studied this subject, it has become apparent that a high level of intelligence information is necessary in order to ward off terrorist acts. Simply stated, if we don’t know they are planning an attack, we have little if any chance of stopping them. The previous administration’s ban on recruiting unsavory characters and excess reliance on electronic forms of intelligence collection pre- vent us from collecting the critical human intelli- gence (HUMINT) that alone can provide warning of such attacks. In regard to the most recent event, we had no specific knowledge of the plan and disastrous results occurred. Better resources and a better organized intel- ligence operation is therefore a principle to ad- vance.

Fourth, as President Bush pointed out in his remarks last evening, international cooperation is an essential principle. International terrorism simply has no borders. Government and soci- eties are threatened by the same groups of individ- uals; no country can win every contest. This very day, we should each reach out to friends and associ- ates in other government’s to offer our co- operation and seek theirs.

Fifth, deterrence will begin to take place when would-be terrorists have developed a full understanding that there is a heavy price to pay for terrorist acts. That is why I believe ev- eryone here today agrees that President Bush was exactly right when he said clearly: “we hold not only the terrorists responsible, but those who harbor and assist them as well, and we must take action against the outfits that shelter them.”

My colleagues, today is the beginning of a new chapter in the history of the USA. I pledge to all of you to work hand in hand to- gether with you to bring an end to these types of heinous events. Together, we will make our country stronger than ever, and together we will see that yesterday’s events are never, ever repeated.

Mr. LIPINSKI. Mr. Speaker, America was faced with a gutless, cowardly attack yesterday. Innocent people were murdered in cold blood—America was awakened—to a new type of warfare. A type of warfare that was unfathomable to decent God-fearing people around the world.

Yet, as in the past, once awakened, to- gether as a people, we will rise up in defense of democracy, rise up in defense of liberty. America was also awakened to its lost patri- otism, a patriotism that we drifted away from because of the security and prosperity this great land of freedom has enjoyed so long. We are a peaceful people—but we will not turn the other cheek. No one should doubt our resolve.

As President Bush said, not only those indi- viduals in this evil should be targeted, but countries who support these people and these acts must and will be punished.

It is sickening to me to see pictures of people celebrating the deaths of innocent Americans. It is heartening to me to see the pictures of the heroes during this opening shot of war—those who helped others—firemen, policemen, doctors, nurses, paramedics—the list goes on and on.

And ultimately, that is the list that will win this war.

While we mourn the growing list of victims—we must celebrate the growing list of heroes. Those are the ones who will win this war.

I pray for the victims and their families. I pray for our Commander-in-Chief. I pray that justice will be ours.

Mr. HOLDEN. Mr. Speaker, I rise today with a heavy heart to pay tribute to those innocent lives that perished yesterday in an attack on America's freedom. The images of collapsing skyscrapers, a burning Pentagon, and large airplanes diving through our metropolitan skies will scar our memories forever.

As a former law enforcement officer, I want to pay particular attention to the thousands of police officers, firefighters, EMS personnel, and other emergency responders who did their jobs with the utmost professionalism during the tragedies yesterday in New York, the Washington, DC area, and in Somerset County, Pennsylvania.

In my 7 years as a county sheriff, never did I train for, or conceive of a tragedy of this magnitude. Hundreds of New York City firefighters, police officers, and other emergency personnel who were the first to respond to the World Trade Center, were crushed in the rubble of the collapsing buildings as they were vigorously carrying out their mission—the mission of rescuing people.

Mr. Speaker, yesterday's events may have exposed the cowardness of a coordinated and faceless act of terror, but let us take note that it also exposed the bravery and professionalism, the perseverance, and heroism of the many police officers, firefighters, and medical personnel who continue to do their jobs as I speak, amid the crushed vehicles and dead bodies of their fallen brethren who were among the first responders to the tragedy yesterday.

As we gather here to express our sadness and our anger at the tragedy of these acts of terror, let us also be sure to express our sincere gratitude to the emergency service personnel in each of our districts who continue to do their jobs every day, the job of protecting our lives and the lives of our constituents, so that we can continue to breathe in the atmosphere of confidence and safety. These men and women are true heroes, and they need to know that they are appreciated.

Mr. BORSKI. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of H.J. Res. 61, which condemns the cowardly and faceless act of terrorism who continue to do their jobs as I speak, amid the crushed vehicles and dead bodies of their fallen brethren who were among the first responders to the tragedy yesterday.

As we gather here to express our sadness and our anger at the tragedy of these acts of terror, let us also be sure to express our sincere gratitude to the emergency service personnel in each of our districts who continue to do their jobs every day, the job of protecting our lives and the lives of our constituents, so that we can continue to breathe in the atmosphere of confidence and safety. These men and women are true heroes, and they need to know that they are appreciated.

Mr. Speaker, yesterday's events may have exposed the cowardness of a coordinated and faceless act of terror, but let us take note that it also exposed the bravery and professionalism, the perseverance, and heroism of the many police officers, firefighters, and medical personnel who continue to do their jobs as I speak, amid the crushed vehicles and dead bodies of their fallen brethren who were among the first responders to the tragedy yesterday.

As we gather here to express our sadness and our anger at the tragedy of these acts of terror, let us also be sure to express our sincere gratitude to the emergency service personnel in each of our districts who continue to do their jobs every day, the job of protecting our lives and the lives of our constituents, so that we can continue to breathe in the atmosphere of confidence and safety. These men and women are true heroes, and they need to know that they are appreciated.

Mr. BORSKI. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of H.J. Res. 61, which condemns the cowardly and faceless act of terrorism who continue to do their jobs as I speak, amid the crushed vehicles and dead bodies of their fallen brethren who were among the first responders to the tragedy yesterday.

As we gather here to express our sadness and our anger at the tragedy of these acts of terror, let us also be sure to express our sincere gratitude to the emergency service personnel in each of our districts who continue to do their jobs every day, the job of protecting our lives and the lives of our constituents, so that we can continue to breathe in the atmosphere of confidence and safety. These men and women are true heroes, and they need to know that they are appreciated.

Mr. BORSKI. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of H.J. Res. 61, which condemns the cowardly and faceless act of terrorism who continue to do their jobs as I speak, amid the crushed vehicles and dead bodies of their fallen brethren who were among the first responders to the tragedy yesterday.

As we gather here to express our sadness and our anger at the tragedy of these acts of terror, let us also be sure to express our sincere gratitude to the emergency service personnel in each of our districts who continue to do their jobs every day, the job of protecting our lives and the lives of our constituents, so that we can continue to breathe in the atmosphere of confidence and safety. These men and women are true heroes, and they need to know that they are appreciated.

Mr. BORSKI. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of H.J. Res. 61, which condemns the cowardly and faceless act of terrorism who continue to do their jobs as I speak, amid the crushed vehicles and dead bodies of their fallen brethren who were among the first responders to the tragedy yesterday.

As we gather here to express our sadness and our anger at the tragedy of these acts of terror, let us also be sure to express our sincere gratitude to the emergency service personnel in each of our districts who continue to do their jobs every day, the job of protecting our lives and the lives of our constituents, so that we can continue to breathe in the atmosphere of confidence and safety. These men and women are true heroes, and they need to know that they are appreciated.
bear that cost in full as well. You will know the fury and scourge of a people provoked to protect their freedom and answer for loved ones who are now dead.

Make no mistake about it. Our Nation is at war. However, this is a new kind of war where we aren’t sure who is the enemy. At least one thing is certain—our resolve is strong to find those responsible and to punish them.

Our response must be swift, forceful, and thorough. But above all, we must be careful that our actions do not unnecessarily increase world tensions. Let us not fall to the barbaric level of our attackers.

Yesterday America lost its innocence. Never again will we feel that we are safe from attack. I am shocked. I am horrified. I am deeply, deeply saddened.

The American spirit cannot be defeated. We will move forward to protect our economy, our military, and our way of life.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, later this week a delegation from the European Parliament was scheduled to meet in Chicago with an American delegation, which I have the honor to lead, in our 53rd meeting of the Transatlantic Legislators’ Dialogue. As much as we would like to proceed in “regular order”, the two delegations have decided that it will be inappropriate at this time for us to meet in Chicago. Instead, we will meet in Washington.

I want to thank the European delegation, headed by chairperson Imelda “Mel” Read of the United Kingdom, for a touching expression of sympathy, solidarity, and willingness to work against terror which she sent me yesterday, which I ask that it be inserted in the RECORD at this point.

In addition, I would like to insert a statement from the Committee on Foreign Affairs of the European Parliament and by the Council of Ministers of the European Union, both of which express their solidarity with the United States.

HON. BENJAMIN A. GILMAN,
U.S. House of Representatives, Washington, DC.

The European Parliament has learned with shock and sorrow of the atrocious terrorist attack in the USA.

We join our colleagues in the US Congress and American people in their deep sorrow and stand united with them in solidarity.

This terrorist act is directed against the entire international community of democracies and their citizens.

We stand together with the USA in the fight against international terrorism.

At the same time, we would develop a joint policy of all democracies against any state hiding or supporting terrorism and we should aim to overcome together the most burning conflicts.

No political reason justifies terrorism.

The Union utterly condemns the perpetrators and sponsors of these acts of barbarism. The Union and its Member States will spare no efforts to help identify, bring to justice those responsible, and to prevent all no safe havens for terrorists and their sponsors.

The Union will work closely with the United States and all partners to combat international terrorism. All international organizations, particularly the United Nations, must be engaged and all relevant international institutions, including on the financing of terrorism, must be fully implemented.

The community and its Member States have offered to the United States all possible assistance with search and rescue operations. Discussions are underway to establish what help would be most useful.

Recalling the strong and enduring ties which exist between the European Union and the United States, the Council has asked the Presidency to stay in close contact with the government of the United States in order to convey this message of solidarity.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the resolution.
We unrestrainedly condemn these cowardly acts of terror against innocent people. All of our delegation stand united behind Prime Minister Tony Blair and Foreign Secretary Jack Straw in offering solidarity and help to bring the perpetrators to justice.

On a personal level, our delegation wishes to record our thanks to the State Department Officials who showed such concern for our safety and welfare when we found ourselves in the Capitol during the attack on the Pentagon.

We are impressed by the bravery and resolve of the American people, their representatives and their government. We are certain they will prevail.

Michael Connarty, James Clappison, David Heath, Patsy Calton, Baroness Walmsley, Angela Watkinson, John Lyons, David Hamilton.

Mr. HALL of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I join all Americans today in mourning the loss of so many innocent American citizens and condemning those who planned and carried out these horrific acts of terrorism on September 11, 2001, a day that will be forever emblazoned in the hearts of all Americans.

This is the fourth generation type of warfare that we have faced and we will employ every available resource to erudicate such tactics from the face of the earth. We will not rest until we ferret out those who perpetrated this infamous act and those who aided or abetted this action.

Our nation is united in our deep sympathy and compassion for the victims, families, and friends of those who perished and were injured. We are united in our gratitude for the heroism of rescue workers and volunteers. And we are united in our indignation and our determination to find and to punish those responsible for these barbaric acts of terrorism.

Our prayers go out to the victims, their families, and for our country at this time of national tragedy. We have been shaken by these savage acts of cowardly attacks—but our resolve and our character will never be daunted. Americans always rise to the challenge of a crisis, and we will once again show the world what it means to be an American.

May God’s grace be with the victims, their families, and America.

Mr. SIMPSON. Mr. Speaker, yesterday, our nation witnessed one of the most despicable acts imaginable to mankind. The senseless devastation unleashed through these cowardly acts left every American with a sense of lost innocence and increased fears. Today, however, our nation stands united against not only the individuals who perpetrated the attacks, but against those who abhor freedom and embrace such evil and hatred.

America is a land that embraces freedom and values human life. We are a people that rush to help our fellow citizens, even at great peril to ourselves. Yesterday, America witnessed the heroism of police, firefighters, and bystanders who risked their own lives to help others. That is America at its finest—a spirit that will be with us forever.

While America grieves, no nation, group, or individual engaged in or harboring terrorism should misunderstand the immense resources being employed to identify and punish those responsible. We will find you, we will hunt you down, and we will eliminate you.

The American people and the rest of the world must know that in times of great pain and tragedy, America is united not divided. As we have done countless times throughout our nation’s glorious and storied history, Americans will unit behind President Bush to ensure that justice is served. Let us not forget the words of Japanese Admiral Isoroku Yamamoto following the bombing of Pearl Harbor who feared he had, “. . . awakened a sleeping giant and instilled in him a terrible resolve.”

We must continue to pray for those who have been impacted by this tragedy. The families and friends of those killed and injured yesterday need our support, comfort, assistance, and prayers for many months to come.

Mr. DICKS. Mr. Speaker, as we pass this Resolution in Congress today condemning the terrorist incidents that took place in New York City and in Washington yesterday, we are also committing ourselves to supporting the increased resources that will be necessary to respond to this newly enhanced threat. All of our lives have been changed as a result of the deaths and destruction, as we reflect upon the loss of life and the human impacts of this tragedy, let us also resolve to take the appropriate actions to assure that we are better able to protect the lives of American citizens in a world that has become a more dangerous place.

In this regard, I believe there is consensus at this time among Members of Congress to support the increased level of spending for defense and national security in the next fiscal year. But I am concerned, Mr. Speaker, about the real defense requirements that each of the military services has submitted to Congress, in response to a request from Congressman Joe SKELTON earlier this year. These “unfunded requirements” of the Army, Navy, Marine Corps and the Air Force represented the actual requests that were NOT included in the budget for Fiscal Year 2002, submitted by President Bush in June. The total amount of that listing of unfunded requirements submitted to Congress was $32.4 billion, and when the President’s budget was submitted to Congress in June, it accounted for NONE of these urgent requirements.

Therefore, as we debate the defense authorization and defense appropriations bills in this Congress, I believe this listing details the kind of expenditures that we have postponed for too long. At this time, I believe the real national security need is closer to the actual requirements that were made by the Joint Chiefs, and I pray to our colleagues to support a more responsible level of defense spending for the next fiscal year. Following are some of the highlights of the listing of Unfunded Defense Requirements for the next fiscal year.

ARMY

Equipment Recapitalization: The Army needs $421 million to recapitalize its Apache and Chinook Helicopters and its Abrams tanks and Multiple Launch Rocket systems.

Comanche: The Army needs $52.3 million to support its Comanche program at the minimum sustainable level. The Army has identified Comanche as its first Transformational program.

Army Data Distribution System (ADDS): The Army needs $124.5 million to upgrade and maintain its data distribution and communications networks in support of more rapid deployments and operations.

SINCgars: The Army needs $17.6 million just to buy the required numbers of the baseline SINCgars radio.

Information Systems Security: The Army needs $48.6 million to upgrade and ensure the security of its information systems.

HMMWs: The Army needs $264 million to purchase 4000 HMMWs to cover unit shortages.

Heaters: The Army needs $22 million to replace unsafe heaters used in field encampments by deployed troops.

NAVY AND MARINE CORPS

Defense Message System (DMS) Transition: The Navy has a shortfall of $15 million because the new Defense Message System (DMS) cannot support the Navy’s special handling and Emergency Action Messages. The Navy has to maintain two messaging networks to handle its highest priority communications as a result, and this requirement is unfunded.

Close-In-Weapons System (CIWS): The Navy needs $85 million to fully fund upgrades to the Close-In-Weapons-System on Navy ships. This system defends against small fast moving boats and both slow and high speed missiles and aircraft.

Rolling Airframe Missile (RAM): The Navy needs $121 million to fully fund the RAM missile which protects Navy ships from Anti-ship Cruise Missiles.

NAVY

F-18E/F: The Navy needs an additional $390 million to buy 7 more F/18s than currently planned. The average age of Navy planes is now on course to exceed the average age of its ships, an astonishing and troubling problem. The Navy must recapitalize its air fleet.

EA–6B Jammers: The Navy needs $15 million to replace 57 jammer pods that are obsolete. These aircraft protect attack aircraft from Surface to Air Missiles (SAMs).

Spares: The Navy needs $294 million to fund Spare Parts Training: The Navy needs $30 million to fund 2 additional trainer aircraft for training Navy pilots and $123 million for live and inert training ordnance.

Integrated Defense Electronic Counter Measures (IDECM): The Navy needs $45 million to equip this year’s F/A 18 E/F fighters with the IDECM system which protect these aircraft from Surface to Air Missiles (SAMs)

AIR FORCE

Wartime Reserve Munitions Replenishment: The Air Force needs $362 million to replenish its stocks of ammunition, bombs, warheads, missiles, and guidance kits of all of its armaments.

Readiness Spares: The Air Force needs $46.5 million to fully equip its readiness spares kits.

Link-16: The Air Force needs $232.8 million to procure and install the Link-16 network capability on its Command and Control Aircraft (the AWACS and JSTARS) and 10% of its strike force to ensure that these aircraft can be updated with the latest information on threats and targets while in the air.

Global Air Traffic Management (GATM): The Air Force needs $50.9 million to equip its C–130, KC–10, and C–12 airlift fleet with the Global Air Traffic Management (GATM) which is required for safe flight in commercial airspace.

Time Critical Targeting: The Air Force needs $291 million for network and planning tools and communications upgrades to allow planning of air campaigns capable of attacking time critical targets as they are identified.

Bomber Upgrades: The Air Force needs $730.7 million to fund upgrades to its workhorse bomber fleet that delivers a majority of all bombs and missiles. These aircraft are projected to have service lives of up to 80 years, and this funding is needed to keep them operating and as capable as possible.

Fighter Upgrades: The Air Force needs $640.9 million to fund upgrades to the A-10, F-15, and F-16 fighters to upgrade avionics, increase reliability and mission capable rates, and enhance survivability.

Stored Munitions: The Air Force needs $127 million to replace obsolete munitions that are prepositioned quiet overseas with modern precision guided munitions.

Mr. COSTELLO. Mr. Speaker, I rise today with the rest of my colleagues to condemn the terrorist attack on the United States and to express my sympathy to the victims of this horrific action. The destruction of the World Trade Center and the Pentagon was a frontal assault on the United States and our people, and our way of life. Democracy and freedom will not yield to these cowardly acts. I have great faith in the citizens of this country, and the heroic and selfless acts witnessed in response to this tragedy are a testament to the strength of the American people.

We stand here today to further demonstrate the resolve of this great nation. The government is functioning normally, and Congress is in session. We come together today. Democrats and Republicans, to send the unmistakable message to the world that this country will not yield to terrorism. We will work with the President and authorize any action necessary—all employing all of the resources at the disposal of the U.S. government—to identify, track down, and bring to justice the perpetrators of this despicable act.

The attack yesterday was the single worst terrorist event in U.S. history. The bombing of Pearl Harbor in 1941 claimed 2,400 lives. Estimates indicate that thousands of lives were lost yesterday. My prayers are with the victims and their families, as they deal with the impact of their loss. It will take some time to fully understand the human toll that was exacted on September 11, 2001. But we already know that the United States will stand tall and survive, with liberty and justice for all, now and forever.

Mr. MEEHAN. Mr. Speaker, I rise today with my colleagues in sadness and anger, as our nation has paid severely for its love for freedom. Yesterday, those who have long practiced terror against the innocent revealed that their capacity for evil truly knows no bounds. They struck at America because America embodies what they hate: prosperity born of liberty; the triumph of diversity; and the pursuit of justice at home and abroad.

While the entire nation mourns the loss of innocent life, many families in Massachusetts are experiencing loss on a personal level as two of the airplanes used in this attack began their journey. Massachusetts is a community of heroes.

My thoughts and prayers are with those who lost friends and loved ones too young, too soon. No words of sympathy can erase their pain; no acts can restore what they have lost. Our responsibility to them above all is to honor and recall those who died and bring those responsible for their deaths to justice.

Those who visit violence on citizens of this nation will feel America's might. We pursue them without joy but with a firm resolve to prevent future tragedy.

Today is a day for mourning and remembrance. In the days to come, we must take a hard look at the state of our defenses against terrorism. It is a delicate task to prevent terror while preserving the civil liberties that have long distinguished our nation. We must rededicate ourselves to finding a balance that both protects and empowers American people. And we must never, ever let down our guard.

Terrorism may spill blood on our shores. But it cannot extinguish our nation's faith in the principles which motivated its founding and have guided its history. America will endure, stronger tomorrow than today, ever a beacon of hope and inspiration to the entire world.

While I recognize that this list may be incomplete, I wish to honor and remember the men, women and children of Massachusetts who died at the hands of terror yesterday, and whose names will forever testify to America's commitment to freedom:

John Ogonowski, Dracut, Mass.
Anna Williams Allison, Stoneham, Mass.
Robin Caplin, Natick, Mass.
Jeffrey Coombs, Abington, Mass.
David DiMeglio, Wakefield, Mass.
Paige Farley Hackel, Newton, Mass.
Alex Filipov, Concord, Mass.
Karleton D.B. Fyfe, Brookline, Mass.
Peter Gay, Tewksbury, Mass.
Ted Harmon, Methuen, Mass.
Charles Jones, Bedford, Mass.
Daniel C. Lewin.
Chris Mello, Boston, Mass.
Laura Lee Morabito, Framingham, Mass.
Jane Orth, Haverhill, Mass.
David Reitk, Needham, Mass.
Richard Ross, Newton, Mass.
Bill Weems, Marblehead, Mass.
Garnet “Ace” Bailey, Lynnfield, Mass.
Mark Bavis, West Newton, Mass.
John Cahill, Wellesley, Mass.
Lynn Goodchild Attohero, Mass.
Peter Hanson, Massachusetts.
Susan Hanson, Massachusetts.
Christine Hanson, Massachusetts.
James E. Hayden, Westford, Mass.
Ruth McCourt, Westford, Mass.
Jesus Sanchez, Hudson, Mass.
Brian D. Sweeney, Barnstable, Mass.
Jessica Sachs, Billerica, Mass.
Alex Filipov, Concord, Mass.
Kenneth P. Parrott, Methuen, Mass.
Peter Hashem, Tewksbury, Mass.
Betty Ong, Andover Mass.
Douglas Gowell, Methuen, Mass.
will around the world to unite and to move to-gether to challenge and uproot those who have destructive goals which seek to create death and drive the world toward chaos. Now, more than ever, America must continue to be a force for peace in the world. We must not let the terrorists win.

Mr. BERMAN. Mr. Speaker, today we come together as a nation to mourn the victims of yesterday’s abominable terrorist attacks, offer our deepest condolences to their families and friends, honor the courageous rescue workers who lost their lives in the line of duty, and condemn in the strongest possible terms those re-sponsible for these monstrous acts.

No words can adequately express our shock, our sadness, and our tremendous loss from this terrible tragedy. The great promise of the new millennium has been forever tarnished by these unfathomable acts of barbarism.

It is almost impossible to comprehend the hatred that motivated the perpetrators to take the lives of so many innocent men, women and children. This was truly an act of pure evil.

We must never forget these heinous attacks and the many victims that perished. But even as we ponder the sheer horror of yesterday’s events, we must not allow ourselves to be come paralyzed by fear and apprehension. This is exactly what the terrorist hoped to achieve. We must deny them any semblance of victory.

In these trying times, we are once again re-minded of the strength and fortitude of the American people, and the power of our shared beliefs in freedom, liberty and justice. The fire-fighters and police officers who sacrificed their lives to help those in need, the thousands of people lining up around the country to donate blood, and the countless others that have come forward to offer assistance typify the es-sence of the American spirit. This is some-thing no terrorist attack can even extinguish.

We will spare no effort or expense in track-ing down the cowardly thugs responsible for planning and carrying out these unprec-edented attacks. There will be no place for them to hide, no sanctuary in which they can cower. We will seek them out wherever they are and see that justice is done.

If our enemies believed that the American people would shrink in the face of terror, then they were wrong. Instead, they will learn—as our foes have learned in the past—that adver-sity only strengthens our resolve. We will fight and win the war against international ter-rorism, and from this battle will emerge a strong, safer American and a more secure, freer world.

Mr. MARKEY. Mr. Speaker, yesterday America walked through the eye of terror’s perfect storm.

Thousands of American families were hide-ously drafted into a war that they, and most of us, only dimly perceived and little under-standing.

But today we emerge from the ashes of hate and the horror of evil reminded that America has an historical mission in the world—to hold up freedom’s light and combat it against every and all attempts to snuff it out.

William Lloyd Garrison once said: With rea-sonable men, I will reason, with humane men I will plead; but to tyrants I will give no quarter, nor waste arguments where they will certainly be lost.

Today, the Congress is saying, for the world to hear, that: With reasonable men we will reason; With humane men we will plead; but to agents of modern terror, we will give no quarter nor waste our arguments.

Mr. CROWLEY. Mr. Speaker, yesterday, September 11, 2001, the most horrific terrorist attack in the history of the world was per-petrated against the people of the United States of America. Some have compared this attack to Pearl Harbor, but I do not. While Pearl Harbor was awful, it was a surprise at-tack against a military installation. Yesterday’s cowardly attack was targeted solely against ci-vilians. This was no Pearl Harbor, but some-thing far worse.

Our nation, especially the people of New York City, are not in a position to begin to un-derstand the catastrophic amount of death and grief we are forced to encounter upon us. It will take time before many of us can fully evaluate the true atrocities that have taken place and begin the process of absorbing and then accepting the events of September 11, 2001. But no one was untouched by these events. All of our lives have been altered forever.

I was in New York at the time of the attack on the World Trade Center and saw with my own eyes the complete destruction that befell a once great structure. Worse than that, I saw the trauma on the faces of the people who may never see or speak to their loved ones again.

What we have witnessed are unforgettable sights. For the rest of our lives, and beyond, people with watch video of a plane crashing into the World Trade Center, of the Pentagon burning uncontrollably, and perhaps most ter-rible of all, two one hundred-den story build-ings tumbling to the earth. These are horrible images, burned forever into the American con-scious.

But beyond those ghastly sights, yesterday’s events remind us of what has brought us with sprints I will never forget.

Inspirational visions of Americans coming to-gether to help fight these cowardly acts; com-ing together to show that even though terror-ists can bring down buildings, terrorism cannot defeat the freedom and patriotism in the hearts of all Americans. People commonly saw how hard and cynical New Yorkers were— but yesterday New Yorkers lined up to give blood, donate supplies and cook meals to help the rescuers and the rescued alike. New York’s firemen and policemen came to the rescue and saved many lives, while sacrificing far too many of their own.

These acts of compassion have brought our nation together.

Every member of this body will come out today and denounce these events, calling upon the world to unite and act. And show that we will not bow down to terrorism, that the people of the United States will fight back against whatever terrorists throw our way.

As I watched the people lining up to give blood, and heard the outspoken anger of peo-ple across this country on every news station that I watched, I realized that America has already begun to strike back. The way terrorists win is to fright-en innocent people, to make them change their lives. The American people have demon-strated a complete unwillingness to let that happen.

Mr. Speaker, we grieve for the thousands of people who lost their lives in New York, Wash-ington, DC and Pennsylvania. And my heartfelt sympathy goes out to all of the families throughout our country who are today mourn-ing a missing loved one. But we do not grieve for America or for the ideas of freedom upon which our country is based. They continue to thrive and without a doubt, they will guide us through these troubled times.

May God bless America and all Americans.

Mr. CUNNINGHAM. Mr. Speaker, Sep-tember 11, 2001 will long stand as one of the darkest days in U.S. history. But in the after-math of those heinous attacks on our nation, the world has seen us in what may well be our finest hours.

With each passing hour after of the attacks on our nation’s most enduring symbols, we find out how truly out American and how we can help our friends, honor the courageous rescue workers who lost their lives in the line of duty, and condemn in the strongest possible terms those responsible for these monstrous acts.

Our nation, especially the people of New York City, are not in a position to begin to understand the catastrophic amount of death and grief we are forced to encounter upon us. It will take time before many of us can fully evaluate the true atrocities that have taken place and begin the process of absorbing and then accepting the events of September 11, 2001. But no one was untouched by these events. All of our lives have been altered forever.

I was in New York at the time of the attack on the World Trade Center and saw with my own eyes the complete destruction that befell a once great structure. Worse than that, I saw the trauma on the faces of the people who may never see or speak to their loved ones again.

What we have witnessed are unforgettable sights. For the rest of our lives, and beyond, people with watch video of a plane crashing into the World Trade Center, of the Pentagon burning uncontrollably, and perhaps most terrible of all, two one hundred-den story buildings tumbling to the earth. These are horrible images, burned forever into the American consciousness.

But beyond those ghastly sights, yesterday’s events remind us of what has brought us with sights I will never forget.

Inspirational visions of Americans coming together to help fight these cowardly acts; coming together to show that even though terrorists can bring down buildings, terrorism cannot defeat the freedom and patriotism in the hearts of all Americans. People commonly saw how hard and cynical New Yorkers were— but yesterday New Yorkers lined up to give blood, donate supplies and cook meals to help the rescuers and the rescued alike. New York’s firemen and policemen came to the rescue and saved many lives, while sacrificing far too many of their own.

These acts of compassion have brought our nation together.

Every member of this body will come out today and denounce these events, calling upon the world to unite and act. And show that we will not bow down to terrorism, that the people of the United States will fight back against whatever terrorists throw our way.

As I watched the people lining up to give blood, and heard the outspoken anger of people across this country on every news station that I watched, I realized that America has already begun to strike back. The way terrorists win is to frighten innocent people, to make them change bind us may be flexible, but they are stronger than ever. It should be clear today that we will always join together when our national security is threatened, and we will do what is necessary to protect ourselves. Unfortunately, some individuals are more committed to extremism in the name of religion rather than freedom. They will go to any lengths to achieve their goals and show their commitment to the cause. Undercutting adversaries—whether real or perceived—is more important than abiding by the laws of their religion. They are threatened by the United States, and our willingness to defend other freedom-loving people under siege. But they are not able to take us on in the open, in the naked light of world opinion, because they know they are destined to lose that battle. And they don’t have the capability or the human resources to confront us military. So they strike us in the kind of cowardly acts of violence we saw yesterday—seeking desperate revenge on those who challenge them and hoping to undermine our will.

It should be clear to everyone following this tragedy that the terrorists have not succeeded in their suicide mission. In fact, world opinion has totally turned against them. Those who supported this deadly mission and any future would-be terrorists need to understand one thing: their attempts to undermine us has only strengthened our resolve to protect our interests. And protect them we will.

Our nation is grieving its losses, and I share in offering my sympathy to the many families and neighbors who have lost loved ones to this senseless crime against humanity. We are grateful for the many individuals who have come to the aid of their fellow citizens, and are humbled by the acts large and small. But as we respond to this tragedy, we will not ignore the need to protect our security interests.

We will stand one hundred percent behind our government in its efforts to respond. Rest assured, we will dedicate no less effort or resources to tracking down the perpetrators of these deadly attacks than we have to the humanitarian efforts we will extend in support of those who acted against our country and all who enabled them—wherever they may be. We will not relent until we are satisfied that all have been accounted for and brought to justice, and that the world understands that the cost of threatening our freedoms is too high.

Mr. CONDIT. Mr. Speaker, yesterday will forever mar American history. We will long remember the horrible tragedy that was inflicted on thousands of innocent men, women and children. While the hearts and prayers of our nation go out to the victims and their families, we must very firmly fix our sights on finding those responsible.

They must be brought to justice and they must pay the price. In listening to the President’s address last evening, I wholeheartedly endorse his statement that any person or groups or nations that played a role in either carrying out these horrific deeds or sheltering those who are responsible must be held accountable.

The World Trade Center has been a target of terror for years. We have before us the sobering fact that major terrorist activities would occur on U.S. soil. Yesterday’s attack required sophisticated planning and coordination. Dozens, if not hundreds of people, had to be part of the plot to bring these attacks into fruition. Others clearly assisted the terrorists. They must be found and they must be punished.

We must not let any stone go unturned. We must follow any path wherever it takes us and clearly determine responsibility for these horrendous acts. Then, we must act swiftly and decisively. Anyone who thinks they can commit barbarous acts such as these must feel the full weight of the American people.

Today we stand as one. We are Americans—united and strong in our resolve. Let no person, group or nation misunderstand that. As tragic as yesterday’s events are, we must learn from them and look at America’s intelligence and security apparatus with an objective eye. Our intelligence and security agencies must be reviewed from the perspective of how we failed to sense that a terrorist operation this large was underfoot, and how our airport security could break down so completely.

We must ask ourselves hard questions and then come up with honest answers. We owe that much and more to the victims, their families and the American people. While we grieve for our losses we must ensure they can never happen again.

Mr. RYUN of Kansas. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in response to this attack on our American way of life and to this affront on our rights to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness.

On behalf of the people of Kansas, we offer our prayers and support to those searching for survivors in the rubble and fighting the still smoldering fires in New York and at the Pentagon. We also want to offer deepest sympaties to those families suffering the loss of a loved one.

And, to all of us as Americans who are feeling a loss of safety and security, I want to share the words found in the Bible in Daniel 3:17 which says:

If we are thrown into the fire, the God we serve is able to deliver us from it.

I also offer these words to those who played any role in this terrible act. The Bible says, and I want to put each and every one of them on notice that deliverance also means that justice will be served. We will dedicate every resource and every fiber of our being to making it so.

Mrs. EMERSON. Mr. Speaker, tonight, America is united in mourning those lost in the faceless and cowardly attacks on Americans in our nation. During this most difficult time, our thoughts and prayers are with the victims, families, law enforcement, and medical professionals that have been directly touched by this senseless crime.

But even as we try to make sense of what happened and destroy all of the terrorists who are responsible for committing these acts.

A free Nation cannot be truly free until the threat of terrorism is extinguished. Any our Nation will be free—the United States of America—shall pay whatever the price to remain free.

Mr. KIRK. Mr. Speaker, as we move from the shock and anger of yesterday’s terrorist attack, we must take action to protect every American.

We suffered an intelligence failure similar to Pearl Harbor. We must identify how our intelligence missed the planning for this attack and correct the problem. We must lift restrictions on our agents operating abroad and provide them with the tools they need to defeat terrorists who attack Americans.

Our aviation security system also failed. We will need to develop a new way of flying. We must instill in all Americans the need to protect themselves.

We must build a Global Alliance Against Terrorism with our key allies in NATO, the Middle East and Asia. If this attack was delivered by foreign terrorists, we will hunt them down and eliminate the individuals and organizations who commit, support, and ferment these acts of evil. We will not rest until we find and destroy all of the terrorists who are responsible for committing these acts.

A free Nation cannot be truly free until the threat of terrorism is extinguished. Any our Nation will be free—the United States of America—shall pay whatever the price to remain free.
Mr. POMBO. Mr. Speaker, at 9:43 A.M. on Tuesday, September 11, 2001, I was atop the United States Capitol giving a tour of the Capitol Dome when I saw a burst of fire, then a mushroom cloud and smoke billowing out of the Pentagon.

At first, I thought the explosion occurred in nearby housing developments. It could not be the Pentagon. But no, it was much too close.

The Pentagon was on fire.

I left my office exactly one minute before the second airliner crashed into the World Trade Center, and I did not know at first that the United States had been the victim of terrorist attacks.

Quickly, though, I could see that something was terribly wrong and was ushering to the families, who safety.

Like everyone else, I was shocked and saddened at the events of that day. These were senseless and cowardly attacks on our freedom and our liberty. These acts will not go unpunished.

We, the Americans, have a tremendous ability to join together and unite in times of need.

We have seen this in the record number of citizens throughout the nation rushing to blood banks to donate blood. My district office in Stockton, California, has been flooded with calls from people wanting to help.

In 1994, when we were faced with the potential of sending United States forces into Bosnia, and again in 1998 facing a potential conflict with Iraq, I presented five parameters to guide decisions to commit our armed forces to overseas conflict. We must:

1. Protect territories belonging to the United States.
2. Preserve our political and economic system from foreign threats.
3. Keep sea lanes open for trade, and maintain free and voluntary trade between the United States and trading partners.
4. Prevent domination of strategic areas of the globe by powers hostile to the existence and interests of the United States.
5. Safeguard Americans and their property from acts of terrorism.

These acts had impacted each and every one of us, but our resolve is unshaken and our courage as a people is solid. And so, our duty as a nation is to unite behind President George W. Bush to take whatever steps necessary to apprehend these cowardly thugs and bring a swift and just punishment.

To the families who have either received the news of the death of a loved one, or are holding out hope that their loved one will be reconnected, and their staff will be donating blood tomorrow to ensure survivors have this vital resource. Our collective grief as a body is enormous and impossible to quantify. We stand united behind our President. Just as we rebuilt our belief in our NASA space program following the 1985 disaster when the Challenger exploded after launch killing all crew including teacher Christa McAuliffe, we can come together as a people and strengthen our national security and work internationally to rid the world of terrorist attacks in the future.

Mr. Speaker, I join with you and all members to remember the victims of the terrorist attacks in New York City, rural Pennsylvania, and at the Pentagon by observing this day, September 12, as a national day of unity and mourning, a tribute of love and a resolution. For the RECORD, I submit a number of personal reflections from members of my congressional staff.

Mr. Speaker, I rise today to speak in favor of the bipartisan resolution sponsored by the House Majority and Minority Leaders. Let me begin by expressing my profound sorrow and deepest sympathy to the families and friends who have lost loved ones in this tragic attack, or who are awaiting word of their friend or family member's well being. I commend the efforts of the rescue workers and volunteers who are working around the clock to aid and assist the victims. Our Missouri FEMA Urban Search and Rescue Team will arrive in New York today to lend their expertise to Congress and their staff will be donating blood tomorrow to ensure survivors have this vital resource. Our collective grief as a body is enormous and impossible to quantify. We stand united behind our President. Just as we rebuilt our belief in our NASA space program following the 1985 tragedy when the Challenger Exploded after launch killing all crew including teacher Christa McAuliffe, we can come together as a people and strengthen our national security and work internationally to rid the world of terrorist attacks in the future.

Mr. Speaker, I join with you and all members to remember the victims of the terrorist attacks in New York City, rural Pennsylvania, and at the Pentagon by observing this day, September 12, as a national day of unity and mourning, a tribute of love and a resolution. For the RECORD, I submit a number of personal reflections from members of my congressional staff.

Jon Atlas, Legislative Correspondent:

In the wake of this disaster, our challenges are threefold:

First of all, we must continue to locate survivors of the attack and work to comfort the families and friends of those most affected. My heart goes out to all those whose family and friends have lost their lives or are still missing in the rubble. In this darkest of moments in history, I am encouraged to know that rescue workers from around the country have convened upon New York for no personal gain, but rather to help save the lives of their fellow Americans. This heroism is an example of our country's greatest assets: our spirit. In the face of this tragedy, our country will come together: to help our neighbors cope, to ease the suffering, and to restore American confidence. After watching yesterday's rescue efforts unfold, I'm extremely honored to call myself an American living and breathing in a land of great spirit, alive within our borders. Secondly, we must ensure that we prevent future acts of terror from reaching American soil. The terrorists of yesterday are still out there and we must close these holes. Our airports must be safe, our roads must be safe, and our borders must be safe. One major area of concern for me is that in an age of immeasurable technological advancement, it is possible for a commercial jumbo jet to simply "disappear" from FAA communication. Each plane in the air should be accounted for at all time. By restoring the secure feeling to which we have become accustomed, America will proceed down the road of prosperity. Finally, we must make sure that America is fighting back those who have shattered the dreams of so many innocent travelers, business people and federal employees and punish them for their heinous act. Soon, foreign governments will understand the consequences of harboring terrorists. The United States will send a clear message that these types of actions against our citizens will not be tolerated. Throughout this day, America's free-dom and way of life were under siege, but our defense, our resolve, our spirit remained unbroken. I hope for swift action to punish those responsible for these incidents. I hope that this tragedy brings together those survivors and families of these heinous acts. From Los Angeles to New York, our appreciation of the value of human life.

Beth Rosenberg, Legislative Assistant:

Mr. Speaker, I join with you and all members to remember the victims of the terrorist attacks in New York City, rural Pennsylvania, and at the Pentagon by observing this day, September 12, as a national day of unity and mourning, a tribute of love and a resolution. For the RECORD, I submit a number of personal reflections from members of my congressional staff.

Mr. Speaker, America suffered the most heinous acts of violence and cowardice in its history yesterday, and it is with a heavy heart and a strong will that I address this body here today.

As we mourn the loss of yesterday's victims and offer our hopes and prayers to the families that have been shattered, it is important that the United States remain resolute. Our friends and enemies alike must understand that we will not, under any circumstances, be divided by terror or deterred from the defense of freedom here and abroad. Our spirits will not be broken, nor will the resiliency of this nation.

This nation, and this Congress, will unite behind our President to deliver this message to the world with swift and certain punishment for those who committed this crime against freedom.

In the meantime, I am moved by the country's outpouring of love, support, and assistance in this time of need. And to those who anxiously await and anguish over the unknown fate of their loved ones in New York and here in Washington—I hope you can find some comfort in Ezekiel 34:11–13.

For the Sovereign Lord says: I myself will search for my sheep and look after them. As a shepherd looks after his scattered flock when he is with them, so will I look after my sheep. I will rescue them from all the places where they were scattered ... and I will bring them into their own land.

God bless America.

Ms. PRYCE of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I thank the honorable Chairman for yielding me this time.

Today, first and foremost, our hearts go out to the victims and families affected by yesterday's sad and shocking attacks. The stories of tragedy, and the compelling stories of heroism, that have begun to emerge from the smoke and shattered buildings will forever be a part of this black day that has been burned into our national memory.

But after these dark days that follow be remembered not just for our sadness and anger, but for our national resolve. As a nation, we must now pull together to overcome this vicious attempt to break our national spirit.

Those responsible for yesterday's horrific events have thoroughly miscalculated the strength and resolve of Americans. Our sense of security may be temporarily unsteadied, but our unity is emboldened. Our bonds of liberty, our bonds of freedom, our bonds of democracy are stronger and run deeper than any individual, than any building, than any monument. No act of violence, no knives or sharpened razors, can sever them. We will not be intimidated by cowards.

We will remain committed until those responsible learn the steep cost of taking innocent American lives—on American soil. The name of liberty remains bright and will continue to shine upon the world, casting deep into that dark shadows of violence, intolerance, and extremism. There will be no corner of the earth where the demons of September 11th will be safe from justice.

For now, we must go on with our daily lives because to do otherwise would be giving in to the evil behind these events. In our schools and offices, in our neighborhoods and churches, we must begin the healing process.

I urge my fellow Americans to donate blood, to volunteer, and offer their prayers and assistance to help to those in need.

And as America recovers, we will also pursue our attackers and fight on. Mr. Speaker, we are at war with the most vicious, most cowardly, and most wicked enemy we have faced as a nation. But America “will not go gentle into that good night.” For those we have lost and for the future of our nation and the freedom we hold dear—we will strive, we will prevail.

Mr. BURTON of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, yesterday, the nation witnessed an evil, unspoken act—by an evil, despicable, and cowardly enemy. The terrorists who perpetrated these atrocities against the United States, killing perhaps thousands of innocent people, shall have no place to hide. I am confident that this Congress will support whatever action the President and his national-security team deem necessary to allow our military and law-enforcement officials to bring these terrorists to justice.

By now, we are all aware of the scope of this national tragedy. In light of this, we have pulled together as a country, demonstrating our resolve to the world that such actions against this nation will not stand. The people of Indiana have joined their fellow Americans, and indeed men and women of goodwill from around the world, to pray for peace, calm, and justice. Our hearts go out to the victims, their friends, and their families.

Mr. CAPUANO. Mr. Speaker, I rise to express my profound sympathy for the victims of this terrible tragedy and their families and friends. I cannot begin to imagine their pain, but my thoughts and prayers, and the thoughts and prayers of men and women across America are with them during this difficult time.

It is hard to find words to express the sadness and outrage I feel about the heinous act of terrorism and cowardice. This is an assault on democracy and the very freedom that, until yesterday, many of us took for granted. We must stand together to protect our freedom and to ensure that the forces of terror do not diminish our spirit.

Congress and the President must now work together in a bipartisan fashion to make sure that our nation has the resources it needs to overcome this tragedy, and to bring those responsible for these terrible crimes to justice.

Mr. DAVIS of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I take this opportunity to express my condolences to the families of all the victims of yesterday’s terrorist attacks. The attacks that destroyed the World Trade Center, damaged our Pentagon, destroyed four aircraft and claimed thousands of lives shall not divide us. This is one of the worst tragedies for the world community. The attempt of the actors on yesterday’s unprovoked acts of war—today—we must unite in our response to an unconventional attack.

As a shepherd looks after his flock when he is with them, I urge my colleagues to support this Resolution of Condemnation. God bless America.

Mr. BARTLETT of Maryland. Mr. Speaker, Americans must defeat evil and uphold our Constitution. September 11, 2001 will be remembered in history. September 12, 2001 is a national day of unity and mourning.

I urge my colleagues to support this Resolution of Condemnation. God bless America.

Mr. WEXLER. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in support of the resolution. No words can express the sorrow and outrage we all feel in the wake of yesterday’s catastrophic events. The lives of countless Americans were forever shattered by the most barbaric act of terrorism ever committed against the United States. My prayers and profound sympathy go to the victims, family, and friends of those affected in yesterday’s tragedy. In a very real way, all Americans are affected by these horror stories.

The terrorists who perpetrated these atrocities are in no place to hide. I am confident that this Congress will support whatever action the President and his national-security team deem necessary to allow our military and law-enforcement officials to bring these terrorists to justice.

By now, we are all aware of the scope of this national tragedy. In light of this, we have pulled together as a country, demonstrating our resolve to the world that such actions against this nation will not stand. The people of Indiana have joined their fellow Americans, and indeed men and women of goodwill from around the world, to pray for peace, calm, and justice. Our hearts go out to the victims, their friends, and their families.

Mr. CAPUANO. Mr. Speaker, I rise to express my profound sympathy for the victims of this terrible tragedy and their families and friends. I cannot begin to imagine their pain, but my thoughts and prayers, and the thoughts and prayers of men and women across America are with them during this difficult time.

It is hard to find words to express the sadness and outrage I feel about the heinous act of terrorism and cowardice. This is an assault on democracy and the very freedom that, until yesterday, many of us took for granted. We must stand together to protect our freedom and to ensure that the forces of terror do not diminish our spirit.

Congress and the President must now work together in a bipartisan fashion to make sure that our nation has the resources it needs to overcome this tragedy, and to bring those responsible for these terrible crimes to justice.

Mr. DAVIS of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I take this opportunity to express my condolences to the families of all the victims of yesterday’s terrorist attacks. The attacks that destroyed the World Trade Center, damaged our Pentagon, destroyed four aircraft and claimed thousands of lives shall not divide us. This is one of the worst tragedies for the world community. The attempt of the actors on yesterday’s unprovoked acts of war—today—we must unite in our response to an unconventional attack.

As a shepherd looks after his flock when he is with them, I urge my colleagues to support this Resolution of Condemnation. God bless America.
must equally be united and vigilant in our resolve to protect and preserve the rights endowed upon us by our Creator.

We must reaffirm the purpose of our government in our democratic republic as stated in our Constitution's Preamble:

“We the People of the United States, in order to form a more perfect Union, establish justice, ensure domestic tranquility, provide for the common defense, promote the general welfare, and secure the blessings of liberty to ourselves and our posterity do ordain and establish this Constitution of the United States of America.”

In responding to this heinous attack, we must reaffirm our commitment to uphold our Constitution, including the rights guaranteed to every American in the Bill of Rights. These precious rights have been secured by the blood and sacrifices of Americans for more than 225 years. I am confident in the ability of today’s generation of Americans to honor those sacrifices and the memories of those killed in the attacks on September 11, 2001.

We have an obligation to overcome this latest test of leadership, to come together in our country to form a more perfect Union.

The mood is somber here in Washington today, but we are here and our government is working. Because of our society and our freedoms, the world is always going to see the United States in the eye of a storm. This heinous act will only further damage the reduce the risks we face from terrorism.

It is also critical for our allies and the entire world community to speak in one voice and to pray for our nation in the difficult days ahead.

Mr. RYAN of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, as we come together today, in continued shock and deep mourning our hearts go out to all who lost loved ones, friends, and colleagues in yesterday’s tragic attacks. As the terrible course of events unfolded yesterday, our nation drew together in shared grief and in strong support for one another—especially for the families of those killed or injured. We need to do all we can to help them now and in the wrenching weeks ahead.

We must preserve the solidarity now shared by all Americans and our allies in other countries in the wake of this horrific act of war. We are resolved to bring those responsible for this atrocity to justice—swift and sure—and make clear that America, that freedom itself, will never be held hostage to terror. An act of war has been committed against the United States, and we are justified in considering a declaration of war. We must have the deterrent and the strength to take action—worldwide, to plague us and our allies. We will find and track down those responsible. We will find justice and we will emerge from this catastrophe stronger than before.

As Ohio’s Seventh District Representative to the Congress of the United States, my thoughts and prayers are with those who have been affected by these attacks and their families. I would ask for all Americans to continue to pray for our nation in the difficult days ahead.

Mr. RILEY. Mr. Speaker, today I rise with a heavy heart to express my deepest sorrow for the victims and the victims’ families of yesterday’s tragedy. Although I know that it offers litttle solace, I hope that the families of those maimed and murdered in this tragedy know that the prayers and thoughts of our entire nation are with them in their time of grief.

Make no mistake about it, we will find and punish those responsible for this horrific act.
Today we grieve, Mr. Speaker, not just for the slain victims and their families, but also for all Americans. America has been attacked through a cowardly act of war. Unlike previous conflicts, we now face a nameless and faceless enemy.

There is an old saying: you can run, but you can’t hide! To those responsible for yesterday’s atrocities—we will hunt you down and the punishment will be swift and severe.

Terrorism today, as always, has been resilient. As Ronald Reagan often said, “America stands as the shining light on the hill for all the world to see.” Unfortunately, as the symbol of freedom and democracy, we serve as a constant target for the forces of evil around the globe. America will rise from these ashes stronger and more resolute than ever!

We often find that rather than be beaten, times of tragedy bring out the best in Americans. This strength is what made our nation great—and what will ensure America’s continued greatness. The efforts of the first responders in New York and Washington have been remarkable and I thank each and every one of them again that it was not a matter of if a terrorist attack of epic proportions would hit our nation, but when. Sadly, the “when” occurred at 8:45 Tuesday morning. Had it not been for the trained first responders, the loss of life could have been double or triple the current known death toll. Sadly, many of those evacuating the World Trade Center became casualties in the buildings’ collapse. Our gratitude and prayer and go out to them and all the victims of this senseless act of terror.

Those who have perpetrated this crime must know that the United States will not allow this injustice to go unpunished. Today we

With a fresh awareness of our vulnerability, we must move forward to secure our nation.

We have lived for years under the threat of terrorist attacks and ominous plots. We have invested a great amount of time and money to try and create an effective system of countermeasures. Unfortunately, we have now seen just how far some people will go to harm the United States and what we stand for.

No political or religious agenda could ever justify the hideous atrocities committed yesterday, and America will have to respond appropriately to ensure that those who would use terror against this country are never again in the position to strike us.

As an international hub of commerce, the World Trade Center contained the offices of individuals from around the world who have suffered as a result of this attack. For that reason, this was not only an attack on America, but on all the nations of the world that trade with us.

Our President in condemnation of these unspeakable acts.

We will have justice and we will emerge from this resolution of condemnation.

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Speaker, yesterday America suffered a cowardly attack upon freedom itself.

Today, our first responsibility must be to respond to this heinous attack, we must send an unmistakable message to the world that we will spare no expense or ef-certorism.

The mood is somber here in Washington
today, but we are here and our government is working. Because of our society and our freedoms, we are always going to see the United States in the eye of a storm. This heinous act will only further damage the reduce the risks we face from terrorism.

It is also critical for our allies and the entire world community to speak in one voice and to say “Terrorism in any form is wrong, and it will no longer be tolerated anywhere in the world.

America has been hurt by these attacks, but we are far from defeated. We will care for our wounded and we will mourn those who lost their lives. We will then repair the physical damage to our institutions and seek out those who have been responsible for this atrocity upon us. We will have justice and we will emerge from this catastrophe stronger than before.

The mood is somber here in Washington
today, but we are here and our government is working. Because of our society and our freedoms, we are always going to see the United States in the eye of a storm. This heinous act will only further damage the re-reduce the risks we face from terrorism.

It is also critical for our allies and the entire world community to speak in one voice and to say “Terrorism in any form is wrong, and it will no longer be tolerated anywhere in the world.

America has been hurt by these attacks, but we are far from defeated. We will care for our wounded and we will mourn those who lost their lives. We will then repair the physical damage to our institutions and seek out those who have been responsible for this atrocity upon us. We will have justice and we will emerge from this catastrophe stronger than before.

As Ohio’s Seventh District Representative to the Congress of the United States, my thoughts and prayers are with those who have been affected by these attacks and their families. I would ask for all Americans to continue to pray for our nation in the difficult days ahead.

Mr. RILEY. Mr. Speaker, today I rise with a heavy heart to express my deepest sorrow for the victims and the victims’ families of yesterday’s tragedy. Although I know that it offers little solace, I hope that the families of those maimed and murdered in this tragedy know that the prayers and thoughts of our entire nation are with them in their time of grief.

Make no mistake about it, we will find and punish those responsible for this horrific act.
Today we grieve, Mr. Speaker, not just for the slain victims and their families, but also for all Americans. America has been attacked through a cowardly act of war. Unlike previous conflicts, we now face a nameless and faceless enemy.

There is an old saying: you can run, but you can’t hide! To those responsible for yesterday’s atrocities—we will hunt you down and the punishment will be swift and severe.

Terrorism today, as always, has been resilient. As Ronald Reagan often said, “America stands as the shining light on the hill for all the world to see.” Unfortunately, as the symbol of freedom and democracy, we serve as a constant target for the forces of evil around the globe. America will rise from these ashes stronger and more resolute than ever!

We often find that rather than be beaten,
times of tragedy bring out the best in Ameri-
We, the people of west central Indiana, we in the Congress stand united with the President to spare no expense or resource to bring to justice those responsible for this unjustifiable, heartless act. This evil must be removed from our world. Anything less is unacceptable.

Mr. Speaker, I strongly encourage my colleagues to support the resolution.

Mr. STARK. Mr. Speaker, yesterday’s horrific, cowardly attack on the United States was a senseless act of terrorism by enemies who abhor America’s principles of freedom and justice. The terrorists who perpetrated this attack, however, have a miscalculated view of America: they believe we are weak, but we are strong; they believe we will cower in fear, but we will stand tall in solidarity; they believe they can break our resolve, but our unity will only be strengthened.

First and foremost, my heart goes out to the victims and the victims’ families of this terrible, horrific attack. The Congress of the United States, as one, stands with you in this time of sorrow and tragedy.

Our thoughts and prayers also go to the firefighters, police officers, doctors, nurses, ambulance teams, hospital workers and all public servants who are working to rescue survivors and to care for the injured. Your heroic efforts will be long remembered.

Even as we care for our citizens who have been victimized by this horrible crime, the resources of our government must now be directed toward finding those who caused these acts of violence and bringing them to justice. We must also examine the ways in which we protect ourselves, and we, as leaders, must critically review how we allocate our resources to defend this nation from terrorist attack.

In the meantime, our nation stands resolute in the face of this crisis. We are confident in the foundations of our democracy and united throughout our strength of spirit, which has withstood the trials of civil war, world war, the Cold War and throughout our history. We are confident in the bonds that hold our nation together as a united family. Today, that bond remains stronger than ever. My heart and prayers are with the injured, the victims, and all their families.

Mr. McCARTHY of New York. Mr. Speaker, yesterday’s horrific and cowardly display of terrorism against the United States has left the country in a state of mourning for the loss of loved ones. This unprompted and barbaric attack against democratic beliefs must not go unpunished. To test the resolve of the United States, one must be prepared to encounter a faceless enemy, a coward in the shadows. Many innocent lives were shattered by these horrendous acts of terrorism. I fully support President Bush’s efforts to bring these criminals to justice.

Mr. ACEVEDO-VILÁ. Mr. Speaker, yesterday we all witnessed in shock and disbelief the worst terrorist attack in the history of this great country. America was attacked by a faceless enemy, a coward in the shadows. Many innocent lives were shattered by these horrendous acts of terrorism. I fully support President Bush’s efforts to bring these criminals to justice. I am confident that justice will be served and that these crimes will not remain unpunished.

My deepest sympathies go to those who yesterday lost their loved ones in Washington and New York. May God Almighty give them peace and comfort them in their grief.

Terrorism will not undermine the strength of this nation and the will of our people. There are still many questions in our hearts. As we look for answers, let us work together through these difficult times. America is at war against the forces of terror and destruction. Peace, liberty, and democracy will prevail. America will prevail.

Mr. MATSUI. Mr. Speaker, I rise in complete unity with my colleagues in this great body to condemn the most horrific acts of terrorism in our world’s history.

Our country mourns together today for the victims of yesterday’s brutal, cowardly attacks on our fellow-Americans and their loved ones. We commend and thank the heroic efforts of the thousands of rescue workers who at this hour search tirelessly for the victims and survivors of this national tragedy.

Make no mistake, what happened yesterday in New York City and our nation’s capital was a deliberate Act of War against the United States of America and as assault upon the freedoms of people worldwide. When the hijackers steered our civilian airliners into the World Trade Center in New York and the Pentagon in Washington, D.C., they not only targeted America’s financial and military centers, they attacked our culture, liberties, and way of life.

Since our founding, America has served as a symbol of freedom and stands today as the bulwark of democracy. While our democratic principles may make us a target for those fearful of freedom, they also bond and unite us in the face of adversity. This tragedy will only make our great nation stronger in rebuilding from the rubble. There shall be no end to the President’s efforts to find the perpetrators of these cowardly murders who are in any way responsible or connected with these atrocious acts.

This Congress and this government will work with relentless resolve to bring the full resources of these United States and her allies to bear upon the perpetrators of these heinous crimes. They will be brought to justice. I look forward to working in steadfast dedication with my colleagues and with the President in avenging these unspeakable acts.

May God bless America.

Mr. THOMPSON of California. Mr. Speaker, it took only a matter of minutes to forever change our nation. The worst fears of a free society have come true, and we will live with both the physical as well as the emotional scars from this tragedy for years to come.

Today is a day for rescue, grieving and investigation. We must do everything within our power to help the rescue efforts in New York City and at the Pentagon to extend a compassionate hand to the victims’ families. The victims include not only the thousands who responded to save lives only to become victims themselves.

As a nation, we took immediate steps yesterday to limit the scope of devastation: we sealed off airspace, closed federal buildings and heightened security across the country. Today we continue to safeguard against the residual threats posed by these horrific events. Yet, a nation whose people are truly free to travel and communicate will always be vulnerable to terrorist attacks.

We need to investigate all the facts of yesterday’s events so we can determine who is responsible for this insidious action and respond appropriately. As federal agencies and other government offices work together, we can begin to match questions with answers. We must make every effort to prevent this type of tragedy from occurring again.

I have every faith that in this time of crisis and mourning, the world will see that the American spirit of resilience remains undiminished. Yesterday our nation came together as a united family. Today, that bond remains stronger than ever. My heart and prayer are with the injured, the victims, and all their families.

Mr. EVERETT. Mr. Speaker, like the millions of other Americans who arrived at work Tuesday morning ready for another day, I was deeply shaken and in utter disbelief at the nightmare events which unfolded before the nation’s eyes in New York, Washington, D.C. and in rural Pennsylvania.

America was the victim of a direct and coordinated attack that is unprecedented in our country’s history. Terrorist forces have declared all out war on the United States and the American people, and in response we must declare war on all terrorists regardless of what barrier they fly over, or what country they seek safe harbor in.

The innocence of this nation has been shattered and our peoples’ peaceful way of life has been forever changed. My thoughts and prayers are with those injured, the families of the victims who lost their loved ones in these attacks, and those brave Americans desperately trying to recover the victims.

In response to horrific injury, loss of life and destruction of our national institutions, the government and the people have rallied together to defend our country and our liberty.

I am very proud of our President for his quick response to this national crisis and I fully support and endorse all efforts now underway to track down and swiftly punish those responsible for these despicable acts against America and her citizens.

America’s resolve has been put to the test like no other time in living memory. We must respond to these terrible acts of cowardice and evil with decisive and overwhelming military force to annihilate those who planned and ordered these attacks on innocent Americans. America is the greatest nation in the history of the world and its greatness will not be diminished by these unspeakable acts of terror and fear. To those who would seek to destroy our land, let me be clear. We will not only survive these attacks, but will become stronger in the process as citizens band together to show the world that Americans can...and will not be defeated.

Mr. OXLEY. Mr. Speaker, September 11, 2001 will be a date forever frozen in American history. We will never forget the sickening sight of the American flag on the Senate Dome being attacked by hijacked airplanes. We will not rest until the criminals who committed these terrible acts are made to pay. We will always remember the thousands of innocent people who were killed, and the heartbreak that weighs so heavily on their families and friends.

But the terrorists did not win. Because while America mourns today, we know from our history that liberty and decency ultimately triumph over tyranny and hate. These fanatics struck with unimaginable might at two symbols of our strength—the financial district that fuels our economy and the fortress of our national defense system—but the United States still stands.

As the Chairman of the House Financial Services Committee, I watched solemnly as the World Trade Center, a towering icon of American and world finance, collapsed into clouds. But our capital markets will survive and thrive, continuing their critical role in our economy. I have been talking with federal regulators and financial industry leaders, including Federal Reserve Chairman Greenspan, and plan to work with them to assure consumers, savers, and investors that our systems remain fundamentally sound.

As a former FBI agent, I have long been concerned about terrorism. We need to recognize, as the National Commission on Terrorism did last year, that the threat is changing—from state-sponsored terrorism that targeted Americans overseas, to the shadowy acts of mass violence against civilians we experienced in its most evil force yesterday.

Even the World Trade Center and the Pentagon again. But to be taken seriously, our vow must be backed up with adequate resources. Despite space-age technological surveillance, my experience is that there is no substitute for good ground-level intelligence. It’s tougher to do, but we can rely on the commonsensical wisdom—necessary to win this fight.

In the wake of this attack, life in this country will inevitably change. In big ways and small, we will have to adapt to a threat that is ever-present and yet mostly invisible.

Terrorist attacks are so brutally effective in part because they are usually unexpected, and because they are so difficult to guard against. They create uncertainty, anxiety, fear, and even panic out of proportion to the threat that they actually present.

We must work to protect our people from terrorist attack. Accomplishing that goal will require the dedication of substantial additional resources to combating terrorism. We must also accept the probability that despite the best efforts of our intelligence and law enforcement personnel, some future acts of terrorism will succeed. But, perhaps the most important of all, we must firmly resolve to prevent the terrorists from winning.

In particular, we must not let terrorists destroy the accomplishments of which our nation should be the most proud. While changes in security procedures are apparently required, we should not sacrifice America’s remarkable freedoms or our civil rights in the battle against terrorism.

I also want to caution my fellow citizens against leaping to unjustified conclusions or taking inappropriate action against other citizens. In this regard, I want to remind the American people that in the wake of the Oklahoma City bombing were foreign agents responsible for the attack; we subsequently learned that that horrible attack was home-grown. And even if, as has been suggested, Osama bin Laden’s organization is behind this attack, we should not attack or discriminate against Muslims or Arab-Americans. America’s fears are most prevalent and Arab-Americans anti-American or pro-terrorist. They are, rather, law-abiding and patriotic citizens who deserve our respect and fellowship. They must definitely not deserve to be vilified or attacked.

As we consider what action we should take, we must carefully and objectively evaluate the threats we face and the means we might use to address them. It is essential that we not underestimation our enemies in this conflict. They are dedicated, ruthless, and—as yesterday’s attacks proved—willing to sacrifice their own lives for a cause they believe in. That being said, there are a number of reasons for Americans to remain calm and confident. We must recognize that the number of active terrorists remains small, and that their resources are limited. We must also remember that most people around the world are as appalled by these attacks as we are, and that they are just as interested as we are in stopping terrorism. We should also remember that most Americans are remarkably safe. While certain symbolic targets may be attacked, the risk for most Americans of experiencing a terrorist attack is still significantly lower than the risk of experiencing commonplace mishaps like heart attacks or traffic accidents. Finally, we must remember that most terrorist attacks are thwarted before they can be carried out; I am certain that Congress will provide the necessary resources to increase security and expand our counter-terrorism operations. Consequently, I am confident that the American people will demonstrate the resolve—and the wisdom—necessary to win this fight.

We can take comfort from the fact that we have dealt with bigger threats in the past. The threats posed by the Axis in World War II and by nuclear weapons during the Cold War were real and potentially much more devastating. The American people rose to those challenges, and they did so admirably. They will rise to this challenge as well.

In closing, Mr. Speaker, let me reiterate my belief that our great nation will prevail in this difficult but unavoidable struggle.

Mr. CHAMBLISS. Mr. Speaker, America is the most free, most open, most democratic nation in the world and yesterday we paid tremendous price for our freedom. Yesterday’s vicious attack on the United States was a heinous and despicable act of murder targeting innocent American families. The devastation are unspeakable, the consequences are unimaginable. Every single American has been touched by tragedy. The Cole Incident was a reminder that in American history, and our national will has been seared by images of death and destruction. Our hearts and prayers are with the families of those whose lives have been lost. We have been hit at our hearts and we mourn our losses. Today we must focus on our principles and our policy. We are not Republicans or Democrats, we are Americans, speaking with one united voice against this terror that has been perpetrated against us.

I commend President Bush and the administration for their steady and unwavering leadership in this crisis and Gov. Pataki, Mayor...
September 11, 2001

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—HOUSE

We have come to rely heavily on the benefits of highly technical intelligence capabilities. While these components are important in keeping our people safe worldwide, it cannot replace the judgment of human intelligence to fill the gaps of would-be terrorists. Humans infiltrated our security yesterday, not high technology. We must focus on that lost component of our intelligence and security effort.

After the attack on Pearl Harbor, a Japanese Admiral was heard to say I hope we have not awakened a sleeping giant. That sleeping giant has awakened again and it will rise quickly—Americans united behind our President—to punish those who would cripple or destroy our freedom and our people.

Ms. KILPATRICK. Mr. Speaker, today, I express my shock and outrage at the attacks that took place yesterday. First and foremost I send out my prayers and condolences to the thousands of American families most directly affected by this tragic event and the millions of Americans who feel the devastation of such a profound strike at the heart of our Nation.

While our pain is immense our actions will be resolute. We will not stand idly by while those who seek to destroy our democracy wreak havoc on our country and the rest of the world. I say to those who have perpetrated this attack: witness the American resolve evident in the immediate aftermath of these horrendous attacks as our Nation’s citizens band together to help one another in time of need; witness the increased sense of American unity, tradition, pride and patriotism your actions invigorate in the American conscious; witness the undying sense of hope and determination evidenced by the American people.

I say that your attack runs counter to your goals, whatever they may be. You have only increased our determination to spread the American spirit and our belief in freedom and justice to the far corners of the world. You have only strengthened our condemnation of undemocratic institutions, and you have re-affirmed yourself to the retribution that your evil acts warrant.

President George W. Bush.

God bless America and God help the families and victims of yesterday’s attack.

Mr. CULBERSON. Mr. Speaker, the House is meeting today to lend 110 percent support to our Commander-in-Chief, President George W. Bush. Every Member of Congress is completely unified in our support for President Bush to do whatever is necessary to rescue the wounded and attend to the victims and their families, and to identify those responsible for this atrocity, hunt them down, and bring them to justice.

These attacks are an act of war against the people of the United States. We will eradicate these terrorists wherever they may be and punish anyone who harbored them, anyone who gave them a nickel, and anyone who gave them comfort and aid.

Members of Congress are furious and outraged, but we will be thoughtful and deliberative in our response. Above all, we will support our Commander-in-Chief.

As Congress and our President decide how America should respond, we must be sure to remember Benjamin Franklin’s warning that those who “give up essential liberty to obtain a little temporary safety deserve neither liberty nor safety.”

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.
CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—HOUSE

September 11, 2001

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

Stated for:

Ms. MCCARTHY of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, during rollcall vote No. 338, H. Con. Res. 61—Expressing the sense of the Congress regarding the terrorist attacks launched against the United States on September 11, 2001, I was unavoidably detained. Had I been present, I would have voted "aye."

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. SIMPSON). Pursuant to the order of the House of earlier today, S.J. Res. 22 is passed.

Without objection, the motion to reconsider S.J. Res. 22 is laid on the table, and H.J. Res. 61 is laid on the table.

There was no objection.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A message from the Senate by Mr. Majority Leader, transmitting the following title which the Senate directs the House to consider:

S.J. Res. 22. Joint Resolution expressing the sense of the Senate and House of Representatives regarding the terrorist attacks launched against the United States on September 11, 2001.

REPORT ON RESOLUTION WAIVING REQUIREMENT OF CLAUSE 6(a) OF RULE XIII WITH RESPECT TO CONSIDERATION OF CERTAIN RESOLUTIONS

Mrs. MYRICK, from the Committee on Rules, submitted a privileged report (Rept. No. 107–204) on the resolution (H. Res. 236) waiving a requirement of clause 6(a) of rule XIII with respect to the resolution (H. Res. 236) waiving a requirement of clause 6(a) of rule XIII with respect to consideration of certain resolutions.

AMERICA WILL NOT REST UNTIL TERRORISTS ARE BROUGHT TO JUSTICE BEFORE THE WORLD

(Ms. KAPTUR asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. KAPTUR. Mr. Speaker, as the profound tragedies in New York, Pennsylvania, and Washington flashed before the world, I was struck again by the greatness of our people—their valor, their order, their dignity. Indeed, their acts of honor—one by one shown to the world. At every turn loving mercy more than life. To America's enemies we say our Nation will not rest until the terrorists responsible for yesterday's carnage are brought to justice before the entire world.

I have also been overwhelmed by the outpouring of sympathy coming to our people from throughout the world—President Putin, Prime Minister Blair of Great Britain, and leaders from throughout the globe. I would like to present to You and Through You—to all the American people—our condolences because of the terrible tragedy that has stricken the whole world.

In all our churches there are Divine Services and prayers said for the souls of the departed and for all those who have suffered. These days our hearts and our prayers are with your people. Sincerely Yours, BISHOP STANISLAW SHYROKORADIUK, Roman Catholic Vicar General Ukraine.

ADJOURNMENT OUT OF RESPECT TO VICTIMS OF TERRORIST ATTACKS

Mr. ARMEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that, consistent with the language of the joint resolution just passed, when the House adjourns on this legislative day, it stand adjourned out of respect to the victims of the terrorist attacks.

As one Member, I can certainly say our Nation will not rest until the terrorists responsible for yesterday's carnage are brought to justice before the entire world.

I have also been overwhelmed by the outpouring of sympathy that our office is receiving from throughout the world. We thank President Putin. We thank the Prime Minister of Great Britain, Tony Blair, and all the world leaders who are sending us condolences and sympathies to our people.

But yesterday I received another offer of sympathy, this time from a Roman Catholic vicar general from the nation of Ukraine:

We thank President Putin. We thank the Prime Minister of Great Britain, Tony Blair, and all the world leaders who are sending us condolences and sympathies to our people.

As the profound tragedies in New York, Washington, and Pennsylvania flashed before the world, I was struck again by the greatness of our people—their valor, their order, their dignity. Indeed, their acts of honor—one by one shown to the world. At every turn loving mercy more than life. To America's enemies we say our Nation will not rest until the terrorists responsible for yesterday's carnage are brought to justice before the entire world.

So the joint resolution was passed.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.
The motion was agreed to. The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the previous order of the House, the House stands adjourned until 10 a.m. respect to the victims of the terrorist attacks.

Accordingly (at 1 o’clock and 10 minutes a.m.), on Thursday, September 13, 2001, (legislative day of Tuesday, September 11, 2001), under its previous order, was resumed under September 13, 2001, at 10 a.m. out of respect to the victims of the terrorist attacks.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS, ETC.

Under clause 8 of rule XII, executive communications were taken from the Speaker’s table and referred as follows:

3575. A letter from the Alternate OSD FR Liaison Officer, Department of Defense, transmitting the Department’s final rule—TRICARE: Civilian Health and Medical Program of the Uniformed Services (CHAMPUS); Nonavailability Statement Requirement for Maternity Care—received August 14, 2001, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on Armed Services.

3576. A letter from the Alternate OSD FR Liaison Officer, Department of Defense, transmitting the Department’s final rule—Civilian Health and Medical Program of the Uniformed Services (CHAMPUS); Bonus Payments in Medically Underserved Areas—received August 14, 2001, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on Armed Services.

3577. A letter from the Alternate OSD FR Liaison Officer, Department of Defense, transmitting the Department’s final rule—Civilian Health and Medical Program of the Uniformed Services (CHAMPUS); Expansion of Dependent Eligibility for TRICARE Retiree Dental Program—received August 14, 2001, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on Armed Services.

3579. A letter from the Executive Director, Committee on Rules. House Calendar. Pursuant to the Committee’s final rule—Additions to the Procurement List—received August 14, 2001, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on Armed Services.

3580. A letter from the Office of Sustainable Fisheries, NMFS, National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, transmitting the Administration’s final rule—Fisheries of the Exclusive Economic Zone Off Alaska; Atka Mackerel in the Eastern Aleutian District and Bering Sea Subarea of the Bering Sea and Northern Gulf of Alaska (Docket No. 010112013–1013–I; I.D. 083001A) received September 10, 2001, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on Resources.

3581. A letter from the Director, Policy Directives and Instructions Branch, INS, Department of Justice, transmitting the Department’s final rule—V Nonimmigrant Classification for Spouses of U.S. Citizens and Their Children Under the Legal Immigration Family Equity Act of 2000 [INS No. 2127–01] (RIN: 1115–AG12) received August 14, 2001, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on the Judiciary.

3582. A letter from the Director, Policy Directives and Instructions Branch, INS, Department of Justice, transmitting the Department’s final rule—K Nonimmigrant Classification for Spouses of U.S. Citizens and Their Children Under the Legal Immigration Family Equity Act of 2000 [INS No. 2127–01] (RIN: 1115–AG12) received August 14, 2001, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on the Judiciary.

3583. A letter from the Chief, Regulations and Administrative Law, USCG, Department of Transportation, transmitting the Department’s final rule—Safety Zone; Fireworks Display, Columbia River, Astoria, Oregon [CGD13–01–021] (RIN: 2115–AA97) received August 17, 2001, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure.

3584. A letter from the Chief, Regulations and Administrative Law, USCG, Department of Transportation, transmitting the Department’s final rule—Safety Zone; Lake Michigan, Pentwater, MI [CGD09–01–087] (RIN: 2115–AA97) received August 17, 2001, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure.

3585. A letter from the Chief, Regulations and Administrative Law, USCG, Department of Transportation, transmitting the Department’s final rule—Safety Zone; Blue Water Offshore Classic, St. Clair River, MI [CGD09–01–098] (RIN: 2115–AA97) received August 17, 2001, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure.

3586. A letter from the Chief, Regulations and Administrative Law, USCG, Department of Transportation, transmitting the Department’s final rule—Safety Zone; Irish Festival 2001, Milwaukee Harbor, Wisconsin [CGD09–01–044] (RIN: 2115–AA97) received August 17, 2001, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure.

3587. A letter from the Chief, Regulations and Administrative Law, USCG, Department of Transportation, transmitting the Department’s final rule—Safety Zone; Lake Erie, Cleveland Harbor, Cleveland, OH [CGD09–01–104] (RIN: 2115–AA97) received August 17, 2001, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure.

3588. A letter from the Chief, Regulations and Administrative Law, USCG, Department of Transportation, transmitting the Department’s final rule—Safety Zone; Seafair Blue Angels Performance, Lake Washington, WA [CGD09–01–108] the CGD115–AA97 received August 17, 2001, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure.

3589. A letter from the Chief, Regulations and Administrative Law, USCG, Department of Transportation, transmitting the Department’s final rule—Safety Zone; Rochester Harbormaster Fireworks Display, Genesee River, Rochester, New York [CGD09–01–014] (RIN: 2115–AA97) received August 17, 2001, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure.

3590. A letter from the Chief, Regulations and Administrative Law, USCG, Department of Transportation, transmitting the Department’s final rule—Vessel Identification System [USCG–1999–6220] (RIN: 2115–AD15) received August 17, 2001, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure.

3591. A letter from the Chief, Regulations and Administrative Law, USCG, Department of Transportation, transmitting the Department’s final rule—Licensing and Manning for Officers of Towing Vessels [USCG–1999–6224] (RIN: 2115–AF23) received August 17, 2001, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure.

3592. A letter from the Chief, Regulations and Administrative Law, USCG, Department of Transportation, transmitting the Department’s final rule—Drawbridge Operating Regulation; Green River, Spottsville, Kentucky [CGD08–01–014] (RIN: 2115–AA97) received August 17, 2001, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure.

3593. A letter from the Chief, Regulations and Administrative Law, USCG, Department of Transportation, transmitting the Department’s final rule—Raising the Threshold of Property Damage for Reports of Accidents Involving Recreational Vessels [USCG–1999–6094] (RIN: 2115–AF27) received August 17, 2001, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure.

3595. A letter from the Chief, Regulations Unit, Internal Revenue Service, transmitting the Service’s final rule—Exempt Organizations (Notice 2001–55) received September 10, 2001, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on Ways and Means.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 2 of rule XIII, reports of committees were delivered to the Clerk for printing and reference to the proper committees, as follows:

(September 13 (legislative day of September 11), 2001)

MRS. MYRICK: Committee on Rules. House Resolution 236. Resolution waiving a requirement of clause 6(a) of rule XII with respect to consideration of certain resolutions reported from the Committee on Rules (Rept. 107–204). Referred to the House Calendar.

PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 2 of rule XII, public bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred, as follows:

(September 12 (legislative day of September 11), 2001)

By Mr. BRADY of Texas:

H.R. 2877. A bill to require that United States assistance may be provided to the government of a foreign country only if a treaty of extradition between that country and the United States is in force, or the government of that country and the United States have entered into negotiations to conclude a treaty of extradition; to the Committee on International Relations.

By Mr. HOLDEN:

H.R. 2873. A bill to amend title 38, United States Code, to provide for the payment of dependency and indemnity compensation to the survivors of former prisoners of war who... died on or before September 30, 1999, under the same eligibility conditions as apply to payment of dependency and indemnity compensation to the survivors of former prisoners of war who die after that date; to the Committee on Veterans’ Affairs.

By Mr. ROSS (for himself, Mr. BERRY, Mr. PICKERING, Mr. SHOWS, and Mr. THOMPSON of Mississippi):

H.R. 2879. A bill to improve migratory bird management by the Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service of the Department of Agriculture, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Resources, and in addition to the Committee on Agriculture, for a period to be subsequently determined by the Speaker, in each case for consideration of such provisions as fall within the jurisdiction of the committee concerned.

By Mr. WATKINS (for himself, Mr. CARSON of Oklahoma, Mr. KILDEE, and Mr. CONDIT):

H.R. 2880. A bill to amend laws relating to the lands of the citizens of the Muscogee (Creek), Seminole, Cherokee, Chickasaw, and Choctaw Nations, historically referred to as the Five Civilized Tribes, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Resources.

By Mr. WELDON of Pennsylvania (for himself, Mr. OSTIZ, Mr. REYES, and Mr. SCHROCK):

H.R. 2861. A bill to authorize emergency appropriations for fiscal year 2002 for the Department of Defense to respond to the infrastructure sustainment and restoration crisis and spare and repair parts shortages adverse affecting the readiness of the Armed Forces and the quality of life of members of the Armed Forces and their families on military installations; to the Committee on Armed Services.

By Mr. ARMEY (for himself and Mr. GEPPARD):

H.J. Res. 61. Joint resolution expressing the sense of the Senate and House of Representatives regarding the terrorist attacks launched against the United States on September 11, 2001; considered and agreed to.

By Mr. NEY (for himself and Mr. HOYER):

H. Con. Res. 223. Concurrent resolution permitting the use of the rotunda of the Capitol for a prayer vigil in memory of those who lost their lives in the events of September 11, 2001; to the Committee on House Administration; considered and agreed to.

By Mrs. EMERSON (for herself and Mr. SKELTON):

H. Con. Res. 224. Concurrent resolution expressing the sense of the Congress that, as a symbol of solidarity following the terrorist attacks on the United States on September 11, 2001, every United States citizen is encouraged to display the flag of the United States; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

ADDITIONAL SPONSORS

Under clause 7 of rule XII, sponsors were added to public bills and resolutions as follows:

(September 12 (legislative day, September 11), 2001)

H.R. 15: Mr. NUSSELE, Mr. PENCE, Mr. HALL of Texas, and Mr. COOKSEY.

H.R. 19: Mr. GOODIE, Mr. McINNIS, Mr. TANCHERO, Mr. JONES of North Carolina, Mr. SESSIONS, and Mr. SOUDER.

H.R. 29: Mrs. JOHNSON of Connecticut.

H.R. 31: Mr. CRANE.

H.R. 154: Ms. DELAURO.

H.R. 337: Mr. FROST.

H.R. 606: Mr. RYAN.

H.R. 770: Mr. MATHRSN.

H.R. 676: Mr. GOODIE and Mr. UDALL of New Mexico.

H.R. 919: Mr. ISA and Mr. BLAGOJEVICH.

H.R. 959: Mr. RADANOVICH and Ms. ESHOO.

H.R. 966: Mr. MATHIESEN and Mr. BROWN of Ohio.

H.R. 1011: Mr. LAHOOD.

H.R. 1035: Mr. GORDON and Mr. ROSS.

H.R. 1143: Mr. McKINNE.

H.R. 1265: Mr. LOFOFRE.

H.R. 1335: Mr. KILDEE, Mr. WALSH and Mr. BARTON of Texas.

H.R. 1478: Ms. LEE.

H.R. 1509: Mr. LAMPSWON and Mr. OWENS.

H.R. 1543: Mr. ROYCE.

H.R. 1556: Mr. GONZEIPE.

H.R. 1701: Mr. LARSON of Connecticut, Mr. ROYCE, and Mr. SHIMKUS.

H.R. 1734: Mr. ABERCHROME.

H.R. 1771: Mr. LEVIN.

H.R. 1798: Mr. MCNULTY.

H.R. 1908: Mr. RIESBERG.

H.R. 1992: Mrs. ROUKEMA, Mr. HOEKSTRA, Mr. GREENWOOD, Mr. NOHWOOD, Mr. KELLER, Mr. TERRY, and Mr. BACA.

H.R. 2073: Mr. THOMPSON of California.

H.R. 2138: Mr. PASTOR and Mr. MARKEY.

H.R. 2142: Ms. LOFOFRE, Mr. DELAHUNT, Ms. HOLLEY of Oregon, Mr. THOMPSON of Mississippi, Mr. MATSUI, Mr. BLOMENAUER, Mr. RYES, Mr. RODRIGUEZ, Mr. RUSH, Mr. THOMPSON of California, Mr. WAXMAN, and Ms. WATERS.

H.R. 2148: Ms. ROYBAL-ALLARD and Mr. FROST.

H.R. 2219: Mr. WOLF and Mr. SCHAFPER.

H.R. 2229: Mr. LEVY, Mr. LOFOFRE, Mr. PRICE of North Carolina, Mr. SERRANO, Mr. MATSUI, and Mr. SMITH of Washington.

H.R. 2349: Mr. TIERNEY, Mr. LEWIS of Georgia, Mr. MATSUI, and Mr. BONIOR.

H.R. 2373: Mr. PETERSON of Pennsylvania.

H.R. 2374: Mr. ENGLISH, Mr. POMEROY, Mr. KINGSTON, and Mr. MCNIN.

H.R. 2492: Mr. ROEMER, Mrs. CARSON of Indiana, and Mr. MHCN.

H.R. 2520: Mr. DAVIS of Illinois.

H.R. 2623: Mr. PELSOI and Mr. McDHRMOTT.

H.R. 2633: Mr. JENG, Mr. DUNCAN, Mr. GIBRONS, and Mr. FROST.

H.R. 2688: Mrs. ROUKEMA.

H.R. 2693: Mr. TOWNS, Mr. CROWLEY, Mr. HINCHET, Mr. KEEG, and Mr. ROSE-LIGHTEN.

H.R. 2709: Mr. HAYWORTH.

H.R. 2714: Mr. CANNON, Mr. MANZULI, Mr. LINDER, and Mr. TOOMBY.

H.R. 2715: Mr. GIBRONS.

H.R. 2740: Mr. MCINTYRE, Mr. GOODE, Mr. ROSS, and Mr. BROWN of Ohio.

H.R. 2617: Ms. HART and Ms. DELAURO.

H.R. 2696: Ms. HARMA节日, Mr. SHAWS, Mrs. TAUSCHER, Ms. MILLINDER-MCDONALD, Mr. BLAGOJEVICH, Mr. FROST, Ms. NOETON, Mr. DOOLEY of California, Mr. BALKACI, Mr. LOWEY, and Mr. BERRY of Pennsylvania, and Mr. BACA.

H.R. 2699: Mr. SAWYER.

H.J. Res. 54: Mr. SCHAFPER.

H.Con. Res. 119: Mr. WELDON of Florida.

H.Con. Res. 184: Mrs. EMERSON, Mr. WATTS of Oklahoma, Mr. RADANOVICH, and Mr. BROWN of South Carolina.

H.Con. Res. 185: Mr. CAPUANO.

H.Con. Res. 197: Mr. KILDEE and Mr. BARR of Georgia.

H.Con. Res. 204: Mr. WOLF and Mr. ETTREDEV.

H.Con. Res. 226: Mr. WATT of North Carolina, Mr. FROST, Mr. GILLMOR, Mr. HILLIARD, Mr. TIERNEY, Mr. KLECEKIA, Mr. SESSIONS, and Mr. FLSBEE.
ATTACK ON THE UNITED STATES

HON. TODD TIAHRT
OF KANSAS
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, September 11, 2001

Mr. TIAHRT. Mr. Speaker, September 11, 2001 is the day the landscape of America was changed forever.

We will rebuild structures, but we cannot rebuild the thousands of loved ones that have been lost to this world forever. Our thoughts and prayers go out to the families and friends of the victims of the reprehensible and cowardly attack against our country. As we attempt to rescue possible survivors and console those who have lost, we begin our determined quest to find their murderers and impose a tough and appropriate punishment.

Make no mistake, the act of war perpetrated against the United States will be met with the full force of the U.S. military. President Bush, Congress and the American people are resolved to take on and defeat the forces of evil that attempt to disrupt our way of life. The principles of democracy in a free and open society are at stake. This is a war against all nations who enjoy the liberties and freedom of democracy, and all peaceful nations should band together in a unified force against those that wreak hatred and terror.

Mr. Speaker, yesterday was a dark day in America. Today, the light of freedom shines bright and we move forward as the greatest nation in the world.

God bless the victims and their families and God bless America.

ATTACK ON AMERICA

HON. HENRY BONILLA OF TEXAS
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, September 11, 2001

Mr. BONILLA. Mr. Speaker, yesterday was a day we never thought we would see in our lifetimes. Unfortunately, we are just learning the depths of the devastation. In the true American spirit, we are also learning about heroes across this country who rose to the challenge to save and comfort their fellow Americans.

President Bush has the full support of this Congress. In the long days and months ahead, we must unite to follow through on his pledge to track down those responsible for these cowardly acts against the American people.

Those who have declared war on the American people must now face the full might and power of the United States. Americans will stand strong and will not let these terrorists take our freedom.

The men and women in our Armed Forces serve our country with brave hearts every single day. But today is a new day in their duty, a new day of a monolithic fight against evil. We must provide our military and intelligence agencies with the resources they need to win this fight.

America must stand together with strength and resolve so America remains free, safe and secure. America must stand together in prayer for the lives that were lost. America will prevail and we will win.

God Bless America.

ATTACK ON THE UNITED STATES

HON. DARRELL E. ISSA
OF CALIFORNIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, September 11, 2001

Mr. ISSA. Mr. Speaker, like many Americans, I woke up this morning after not getting much sleep, with a broken heart and a tremendous feeling of sadness and anger. There are still so many questions unanswered and so much emotion tied in our hearts.

While we see these horrible events, feel these tremendous feelings, and listen to these unbearable stories, we must remember that in the truest sense of the word, we Americans have shown the world what freedom is, and more importantly, what freedom costs. While we share this planet with evil, we will not let evil triumph.

To the victims and to the friends and families of those who have perished, I want you to know that your country—your American family—is praying for you and shares this burden with you.

To those responsible for the unspeakable horrors our country has endured, I say to you: You should not sleep another night peacefully, you should not eat another meal without looking over your shoulder, and you should never have rest because we will find you. Justice will be done.

ATTACK ON THE UNITED STATES

HON. CLIFF STEARNS
OF FLORIDA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, September 11, 2001

Mr. STEARNS. Mr. Speaker, the bloodiest attack in America history occurred yesterday September 11, 2001—a date which will live in infamy. Life in America, as we know it, will change. Let us as Members of Congress, and more importantly, as Americans resolve to help those families who lost loved ones in the cowardly attacks, and provide the necessary resources to both New York and Washington, DC to aid in the recovery and assist these families.

We will work to identify those responsible for these acts of savagery and bring them to justice. We will also, as the President has mentioned, hold those groups or states that harbor these cowards responsible for what has occurred.

The attacks yesterday remind us of the shock and horror experienced at Pearl Harbor. We must—and will—work to ensure that this kind of barbarism will never occur again.

So my colleagues it is clear that the U.S. is at war like December 7, 1941 but a new kind of war. The U.S. won WWI, WWII and the cold war. But now we must prevail in what could be called the gray war. We will prevail here also.

IN HONOR OF THE DEDICATED SERVICE OF JAMES L. CUBBAGE, JR., AND JULIA MAST TO THE DELAWARE FIREFIGHTER COMMUNITY

HON. MICHAEL N. CASTLE OF DELAWARE
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, September 11, 2001

Mr. CASTLE. Mr. Speaker, during my service as a Member of the House of Representatives, it has been my honor and privilege to rise and pay tribute to organizations and people who really make a difference in the Delaware community. Today, I rise to recognize James L. Cubbage, Jr., President of the Delaware Volunteer Firemen’s Association (DVFA) and Julia Mast, President of the Ladies Auxiliary of the DVFA.

On behalf of my fellow Delawareans I would like to commend these two outstanding individuals, not only for their tireless efforts on behalf of the First State, but for their tremendous contributions to the DVFA and the Ladies Auxiliary of the DVFA.

James L. Cubbage, Jr., has been a tremendously active and influential member of the fire prevention community for years. He has served as an active member of the DVFA since the early 1970’s, is a Board Member of the International Association of Arson Investigators (IAAI) Education Foundation, and also former President of the Delaware Chapter of the IAAI. Jim Cubbage has shown exceptional leadership skills throughout his career, reflected in his election as Director of the DVFA in 1987 and serving in that capacity until 1998, when he was then elected as 2nd Vice President of the DVFA, followed by being elected President in 2000.

Mr. Cubbage has also worked diligently for the Clayton Fire Company, No. 1, Inc., being a life member, having joined in 1965. There he has served on the Board of Directors for over 15 years and is a former Chief and President. He is a member of the New Castle County Fire Association and former President. He also serves as Chief Deputy Fire Marshall for the state of Delaware. Jim’s devotion and dedication to fire prevention was acknowledged when he was recognized as “Firemen of the Year” in 1969.

Julia Mast has also played a critical role in keeping our communities safe through her work in the Ladies Auxiliary of the DVFA. Julia has served as a member since 1959, a tribute to her devotion and commitment. She is a charter member and has also served as President of the Clayton Ladies Auxiliary on several different occasions, which is a testimony to her exceptional leadership qualities and hard work. Julia has also shined as an active and enthusiastic member in her local church. Fire service is a long standing tradition in her family and Julia Mast has done a praiseworthy job of keeping this tradition going.

James L. Cubbage, Jr. and Julia Mast are both exemplary models of commitment and excellence and valuable members of the Delaware community. I salute James L. Cubbage, Jr. and Julia Mast for their efforts to keep the Delaware Volunteer Firemen’s Association and Ladies Auxiliary a strong and vital part of Delaware.

THE HORRIFIC ACTIONS OF TERRORISTS

HON. JOHN LINDER OF GEORGIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, September 11, 2001

Mr. LINDER. Mr. Speaker, when the prayers are said; when the tears are dried; when the bodies are buried—we must go on remembering. Always.

The war against terrorism has been casually engaged for nearly thirty years. Now we must get serious and win it.

There are only two sides in this war, ours and the enemy’s. To those who believe that there is a neutral ground we must say that you are on the side of the enemy and we will punish you. To those who believe that they can quietly harbor and help the terrorists we must silence you. To those who believe that they can still praise her as “humble.”

Robbie Rader is leadership in action. It is a testament to the strength of her character that despite all of her accomplishments, her teachers still praise her as “humble.”

Robbie Rader is leadership in action. It is a comfort to know that young people such as Robbie are preparing themselves today to our future leaders. I know that my Colleagues join me in commending Robbie for her national office and her commitment to excellence in her personal life.

ATTACK ON THE UNITED STATES

HON. F. JAMES SENSENBRENNER, JR.
OF WISCONSIN
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, September 11, 2001

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Mr. Speaker, September 11, 2001, is a date that will forever be etched in our memories as a day our very way of life was attacked. These acts of cowardice took the lives of innocent souls away from their families and friends. My thoughts and prayers go out to the families who lost loved ones and my thanks go out to all of the emergency personnel who risked their lives to save others.

The perpetrators believe that our weakness is our freedom. They are so wrong. This will unite our country and they will soon know that freedom is our greatest strength. We should support President Bush and we should expeditiously make available all necessary means so that justice can be carried out. God Bless America.

TRIBUTE TO WEST HERNANDO MIDDLE SCHOOL

HON. KAREN L. THURMAN
OF FLORIDA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, September 11, 2001

Mrs. THURMAN. Mr. Speaker, I am here today to pay tribute to the remarkable students and faculty of West Hernando Middle School. West Hernando Middle is located in Hernando County, Florida which is one of the fastest growing counties in the nation. The faculty at West Hernando Middle works extremely hard to serve students with highly diverse educational needs, with 23% of its students receiving Exceptional Student Education services ranging from Educational Alternative Treatment classes to classes for gifted students.

In 1995, West Hernando resembled many other middle schools in the district. It was hindered with problems such as overcrowding and poor socioeconomic conditions and it became evident that change was needed. In that same year, Ken Pritz was appointed the new principal of the school. Along with their new principal, students at West Hernando Middle received a new approach to learning. This new approach was founded on the shared vision of the staff that, “We at West Hernando Middle believe that all students can and will learn.”

Building on this vision, Ann Bristol, the graphic arts instructor at the school, came up with the theme known as “Dream Extreme.” Ms. Bristol, a teacher known for her infectious enthusiasm and ability to motivate, encouraged her students to learn by creating many different exciting activities. Her unique teaching methods soon spread throughout the school, consuming the faculty and students.

“Dream Extreme” became reality when in the 1998–99 school year the sixth-grade Gemini Team accepted a challenge to build an 87-foot wooden foot bridge over a water retention area adjacent to the school. Students began using the Internet as well as cable television technology to research and implement the design and construction of the bridge. The project, known as “Bringing the Gap in Education,” was a huge success and the bridge was honored as the cover story for the March 2000 issue of Cable in the Classroom. The entire project was evidence that the transformation of abstract knowledge to an actual application and concrete learning process had indeed “brided the gap in education.”

During the 1999–2000 academic year, the Gemini Team embarked on a second project, equally as interesting, just as difficult and even more ambitious than the first. Working alongside the Southwest Florida Water Management District, students began researching the process of xeriscaping (a form of landscaping involving drought resistant vegetation) as well...
September 11, 2001

EXTENSIONS OF REMARKS

HON. MARK UDALL
OF COLORADO
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, September 11, 2001

Mr. UDALL of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, I would like today to pay tribute to Cole Kugel. At the age of ninety-nine, Cole is the oldest certified pilot in the nation. For over half a century, Cole sat side by side in the cockpit with his wife Mildred, soaring in one of the six planes he has owned. Flying safely at any age is a challenge. To have done it for as long as Cole has is truly an accomplishment. Cole began flying in 1929 and never once crashed or even damaged a plane.

Many people might say that flying for over seventy years without a scratch to show for it is just plain lucky. I'm told that while luck might keep you flying, it is good judgment that brings you home at the end of the day. Cole Kugel has been blessed with an abundance of good judgment. For over seventy years he has used his head to safely bring back every plane he has taken off in. Today, he continues to use that judgment. He has said that when his certificate comes up for renewal by the FAA this year, he probably will not renew it. To willingly walk away from something you love when you realize that you may not be able to do it like you used to I believe is the epitome of good judgment. I applaud Cole for loving flying so much yet still walking away from it while he is on top.

Mr. Speaker, I am attaching an article about Cole from a recent edition of the Denver Post. I ask my colleagues to read it and think about this heroic individual and to wish him a safe landing wherever the winds shall take him.

OLDST. U.S.PILOT FACES END OF ERA
(BY KEVIN SIMPSON)

Monday, September 10, 2001—LONGMONT—Throughout the rambling house where Cole Kugel lives alone, airplanes still take flight—images in photographs, models on pedestals, even a replica constructed entirely of 7-Up cans that dance from a perch on the patio.

But Kugel let go of the plane he cared for most—the single-engine Cessna Skylane hungared at nearby Vance Brand Airport—last spring. In the last year and a half, everything about his life had declined. His vision trouble with one eye gives Kugel third-class pilot's license, and some minor health issues had declined. But in May, as Mildred's health failed in a nursing home—and Kugel would go nowhere without his flying partner—Ferguson found that things had changed.

"He said, 'Maybe we ought to take it up and see if you like it,'" Ferguson says. They struck a deal just days before Mildred died.

Kugel has tried not to dwell too much on the sale of the Cessna and the larger loss that accompanied it. But he takes some solace in the fact that the plane will remain nearby, where he can still go see it.

And a stipulation in the sale agreement provides that he be allowed to take it up next March 14—if I'm still here”—on his 100th birthday.

The FAA requires a physical exam every two years for medical certification, and like a third-class pilot's license, and some minor vision trouble with one eye gives Kugel pause, although he doesn't think that would necessarily keep him from flying. He still has offered to buy the plane three years earlier, but Kugel, citing his wife's admonition, had declined.

But in May, as Mildred's health failed in a nursing home—and Kugel would go nowhere without his flying partner—Ferguson found that things had changed.

"He said, 'Maybe we ought to take it up and see if you like it,'" Ferguson says. They struck a deal just days before Mildred died.

Kugel has tried not to dwell too much on the sale of the Cessna and the larger loss that accompanied it. But he takes some solace in the fact that the plane will remain nearby, where he can still go see it.

And a stipulation in the sale agreement provides that he be allowed to take it up next March 14—if I'm still here”—on his 100th birthday.

The FAA requires a physical exam every two years for medical certification, and like a third-class pilot's license, and some minor vision trouble with one eye gives Kugel pause, although he doesn't think that would necessarily keep him from flying. He still has offered to buy the plane three years earlier, but Kugel, citing his wife's admonition, had declined.

"But as old as I am, maybe I ought not to be flying anyway," he says. "I feel competent, but as you get older, everything about you gets out of order and slows down. And a plane is an expensive item to have sitting around and not use it."

If he doesn't get recertified, he said, he'll still take his century flight with Ferguson. Kugel embraced aviation as a young man for the most prosaic of reasons: "Because I wanted to go somewhere."

In 1945, Kugel and his wife left their Oklahoma farm to farm cheap land near Longmont. He remained a farmer most of his life, resuming the flights of fancy that had accompanied it. But he takes some solace in the fact that the plane will remain nearby, where he can still go see it.

And a stipulation in the sale agreement provides that he be allowed to take it up next March 14—if I'm still here”—on his 100th birthday.
TRIBUTE TO LUCY CARLTON

HON. ZOE LOFGREN
OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, September 11, 2001

Ms. LOFGREN. Mr. Speaker, today I rise to congratulate Los Altos Police Chief Lucy Carlton, who will be retiring on September 28, 2001 after 32 years of service. Chief Carlton began her law enforcement career in 1969 with the Milpitas Police Department. Chief Carlton served in a variety of assignments, which included Patrol, Criminal Investigation and Community Relations.

Lucy Carlton was the first female in the organization to be assigned to patrol duty and during her tenure, promoted through the ranks to Police Captain in 1988. In 1991, Ms. Carlton was appointed Chief of Police for the City of Los Altos, becoming the second woman in the State of California to serve as a Chief of Police for a municipality. Chief Carlton has been a trailblazer throughout her career, breaking the “glass ceiling” for every one of her promotions. Lucy Carlton’s efforts have paved the road, so that others might follow.

Police Chief Carlton holds a Bachelor of Arts Degree in Administration of Criminal Justice from San Jose State University and has completed graduate work in Public Administration at California State University, Hayward, also holds a lifetime Teaching Credential from the State of California and has taught classes at San Jose State University, and Evergreen, Gavilan, San Jose City and Chabot Colleges. Ms. Carlton has lectured throughout the United States in the field of adult and child sexual abuse investigation. During her assignment in the investigation bureau, she was certified as an expert witness in the area of child sexual abuse.

Lucy Carlton is the past chair of the Santa Clara County Domestic Violence Council, the Santa Clara County Police Chiefs Association and the Asian Americans for Justice Foundation at San Jose State University. Ms. Carlton has served on the board of the California Peace Officers’ Association and currently serves on the board of the California Police Chiefs’ Association. During her career, Chief Carlton has worked on a number of Peace Officer Standards and Training (POST) projects, which resulted in the development of training guidelines for officers in the area of sexual assault and child abuse investigations. She also served on the Department of Justice task force, which developed State guidelines for the implementation of Megan’s Law.

Lucy Carlton has mentored dozens of men and women preparing for entry into law enforcement, as well as those preparing for promotoral exams. In 1998 she assisted in the development of a series of classes for both men and women on the subject of Women’s Issues in Law Enforcement. Chief Carlton has taught in the program since its inception.

Lucy Carlton has volunteered hundreds of hours to the Milpitas-Berryessa YMCA and served on their board for eight years. In 1995 she was named their volunteer of the year. She also serves on the advisory boards of WATCH (a transitional housing program for battered women and their children) and the Support Network for Battered Women. In 1990, she was named “Woman of the Year” by former Assemblywoman Delaine Eastin and honored for her courage and dedication to the people of the State of California. In 1996, the Women’s Fund of Santa Clara County and the San Jose Mercury news honored her as a “Woman of Achievement” in the category of Public Service. In 1998 she was honored as a “Distinguished Alumna” from San Jose State University’s Department of Administration of Justice. The Los Altos Kiwanis Club honored her last year as their 2000 “Kiwanian of the Year.”

Police Chief Lucy Carlton has been a valuable asset to the State of California and to our district. Though her commitment and dedication to the people of the State of California will be sorely missed, I am grateful to her for her years of service and wish her the best in the next phase of her life.

BIPARTISAN PATIENT PROTECTION ACT

SPREECH OF

HON. W.J. "BILLY" TAUZIN OF LOUISIANA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, August 2, 2001

The House in Committee of the Whole on the State of the Union had under consideration the bill (H.R. 2563) to amend the Public Health Service Act, the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974, and the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to protect consumers in managed care plans and other health coverage:

Mr. TAUZIN. Mr. Chairman, the Ganske-Dingell bill does not guarantee a right to sue for patients. Indeed, the bill makes it difficult for states to create or maintain a cause of action because such causes of action must meet pages of very complicated requirements. A State could, in effect, pass a law consistent with these many requirements. Until they did so, however, patients who were harmed may have no recourse for damages at all. The preemption language under Ganske-Dingell is so fraught with ambiguity that it may take decades to determine whether patients in certain states even have a cause of action and can hold HMO’s responsible for negligence.

Professor Larry Alexander, Warren Distinguished Professor at the University of San Diego Law School, has reviewed the bill and can hold HMO’s responsible for negligence.

Professor Alexander states such a reading would be a hollow liability proposal. I support the Norwood Amendment as a better approach. The crafting of this legislation or any other legislation that affects consumers in managed care plans and other health coverage:

THE SOLIDARITY FLAG

RESOLUTION

HON. JO ANN EMERSON OF MISSOURI

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, September 11, 2001

Mrs. EMERSON. Mr. Speaker, today, the men and women of the United States are facing a tragic loss. But in that adversity we see... men, women, and children who possess an unbreakable, unwavering, and unshakable spirit and a commitment to preserving freedom and democracy, said Emerson. So, in a unified show of support, Congress is asking that for the next 30 days everyone, in every community across America, fly their American flags. Whether it is at home, work, in public buildings, schools, or places of worship, this is a symbolic gesture to remember those individuals who have been lost and to show the solidarity, resolve, and strength of the greatest nation on earth—the United States of America.

JOYCE MESKIS—A CHAMPION OF INTELLECTUAL FREEDOM

HON. MARK UDALL

OF COLORADO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, September 11, 2001

Mr. UDALL of Colorado, Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to Joyce Meskis.

Owner of Denver's famous Tattered Cover Bookstores, Joyce is an ardent supporter of reading and literacy and a strong defender of intellectual freedom. She has served as president of the Colorado Citizens Against Censorship, was a founder of the American Booksellers Foundation for Free Expression, and a leader in the National Coalition Against Censorship.

Her leadership in this area now has been recognized by her receipt of the National Intellectual Freedom Award given by the National Council of Teachers of English. A strong supporter of the freedoms that are guaranteed to all of us by the Constitution's First Amendment, Joyce recognizes how these freedoms make our democracy great. She is an outstanding American who has dedicated herself to ensuring that intellectual freedom and diversity will continue to enrich our lives and the lives of our children. Her contributions have been well summarized in the words of Carol Edmonds Sullivan, a professor at the Colorado College who nominated Joyce for the National Intellectual Freedom Award: “Bookseller Joyce Meskis is nurturing democracy's vital need for access to books, even unpopular ones.”

Mr. Speaker, I am attaching an article on Joyce that recently ran in the Denver Post and ask my colleagues to join me in this tribute.

[From the Denver Post, September 2, 2001]

By Carol Edmonds Sullivan

Confronted a year ago by five police officers expecting to execute a search warrant for the purchasing records of one of her bookstore customers, Denver's Tattered Cover owner Joyce Meskis refused access to the store's files, on behalf of the First Amendment rights of her customers.

Later, she wrote her customers a “Dear Reader” letter admitting that, “When you get served, or even threatened with a subpoena or search warrant, it's pretty scary.” Meskis and her bookstore, which she purchased in 1972, are.model citizens who are not about to let you infringe on our readers' rights by offering a diversity of materials and author events “without prejudice.” In other words, she explains, “We cannot abrogate our responsibility to the First Amendment, which we believe to be the cornerstone of our democratic tradition and of our bookstore. And make no mistake, it is a profound and serious infringement on the author because one doesn’t like the view of the author as it would be if the book were disallowed on the shelf.”

In October 2000, Denver District Judge Stephen Phillips ruled that Meskis was obligated to turn over her purchase records to law enforcement officials. Meskis appealed the ruling to the Colorado Supreme Court, where it is still pending. Meskis' love of reading is rooted in her childhood, when, she says, “I read my way through the library.” One reader picked out as Roald Dahl’s Matilda, particularly in the fourth grade when an adult (whom she declines to identify) told her she couldn’t read a particular book since it was for adults, not children. “But my mother wouldn’t mind,” she protested.

That was among the earliest of Meskis' indefatigable efforts to protect actions that would muzzle intellectual freedom. When she was a young woman working at the Littleton Public Library, a parent chastised her because Meskis recommended Margaret Mead's "Coming of Age in Samoa" to a teenager. Meskis has organized or led various coalitions to assert intellectual freedom—including her service as president of the Colorado Citizens Against Censorship, a founder of the American Booksellers Foundation for Free Expression, and a leader in the National Coalition Against Censorship.

When the Tattered Cover offers controversial books, it loses customers. "Permanently," Meskis emphasizes. Critics accuse her of seeking profit at the expense of morals. Meskis said she has found, "When we have a controversial author, there's a far greater likelihood that offended customers will never return. Meskis also worries about the shrinking harbor for ideas outside the mainstream. In the closing of a "Dear Reader" letter to customers, Meskis makes this declaration: "I increasingly wonder how will we ever continue to be a viable bookstore presenting the variety of books and authors that, in their diversity, strengthen our democratic principles for America."

Tribute to Judy Evans

HON. ZOE LOFGREN

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, September 11, 2001

Ms. LOFGREN, Mr. Speaker, today I rise to congratulate Judy Evans, who for the past thirty-three years served as the Executive Director of Friends Outside National Organization. Judy Evans retired as of July 1, 2001.

Friends Outside National Organization provides mentoring, counseling and case management services in all 33 California state prisons. Under Judy Evans' leadership Friends Outside National Organization has grown to a $3.9 million dollar agency with 139 employees. Over 9,000 children and 21,000 adults receive services at their prison visitor centers each month.

Judy was instrumental in developing an innovative family reunification partnership with the San Francisco Department of Human Services. Through this program, Friends Outside National staff members are able to facilitate successful reunifications between incarcerated parents and their children in conjunction with county social workers. These children are all in foster care or kinship placement. The goal is to assist the birth parent, whenever appropriate, to regain physical custody after release, with the ongoing support of social services. This program directs resources to where they can be used most effectively: to the family.

Judy Evans has mentored a generation of social service professionals who continue the difficult work of counseling families caught up in the criminal justice system. Her example will serve as an inspiration, not only to them, but to all of us.

Previous to her Executive Director position at Friends Outside National, Judy served as the Santa Clara County chapter's Executive Director for ten years, as well as its Director of Family Services for twelve years. Additionally, Judy has served the community through the YMCA, Correctional Institutions Chaplaincy, Justice System Advisory Board, The Women's Fund and the Association of United Way Executives.

Judy has received awards of recognition by the Pathway Society, California Association of Marriage and Family Therapists, California Department of Corrections and the Community Alliance Program for Ex-Offenders.

I, along with many others, thank her for her years of service to the State of California and to our District.

Resolution Opposing the Medicare Prescription Discount Card Program

HON. STEPHANIE TUBBS JONES

OF OHIO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, September 11, 2001

Mrs. JONES of Ohio, Mr. Speaker, Whereas, President George W. Bush unveiled his principles for Medicare reform on July 12, 2001; and

Whereas, under the program, Medicare beneficiaries would be able to purchase Medicare-endorsed prescription drug discount cards with access to lower cost drugs at the point of sale; and

Whereas, the Program was conceived by a select group of pharmacy benefit management companies without the deliberation of the larger pharmacy community; and

Whereas, Community pharmacies will bear the greatest financial burden for this Program to discount prescription drugs; and

Whereas, drug manufacturers account for nearly 80% of the cost of prescription drugs sold in the U.S. but will bear very little of the financial burden created by this Program; and

Whereas, The Program does not provide seniors with access to prescription drugs or the pharmacist's professional services; and

Whereas, seniors take more prescription drugs than any other population group in the U.S. and need the accessibility and expertise of their community pharmacist; and

EXTENSIONS OF REMARKS

HON. ZOE LOFGREN

OF CALIFORNIA

PREVIOUSLY INTRODUCED OR AMENDED

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, September 11, 2001

Whereas, the Program was conceived by a select group of pharmacy benefit management companies without the deliberation of the larger pharmacy community; and

WHEREAS, Community pharmacies will bear the greatest financial burden for this Program to discount prescription drugs; and

WHEREAS, drug manufacturers account for nearly 80% of the cost of prescription drugs sold in the U.S. but will bear very little of the financial burden created by this Program; and

WHEREAS, The Program does not provide seniors with access to prescription drugs or the pharmacist's professional services; and

WHEREAS, seniors take more prescription drugs than any other population group in the U.S. and need the accessibility and expertise of their community pharmacist; and

RESOLUTION OPPOSING THE MEDICARE PRESCRIPTION DISCOUNT CARD PROGRAM

HON. STEPHANIE TUBBS JONES

OF OHIO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, September 11, 2001

Mrs. JONES of Ohio, Mr. Speaker, Whereas, President George W. Bush unveiled his principles for Medicare reform on July 12, 2001; and

Whereas, under the program, Medicare beneficiaries would be able to purchase Medicare-endorsed prescription drug discount cards with access to lower cost drugs at the point of sale; and

Whereas, the Program was conceived by a select group of pharmacy benefit management companies without the deliberation of the larger pharmacy community; and

Whereas, Community pharmacies will bear the greatest financial burden for this Program to discount prescription drugs; and

Whereas, drug manufacturers account for nearly 80% of the cost of prescription drugs sold in the U.S. but will bear very little of the financial burden created by this Program; and

Whereas, The Program does not provide seniors with access to prescription drugs or the pharmacist's professional services; and

Whereas, seniors take more prescription drugs than any other population group in the U.S. and need the accessibility and expertise of their community pharmacist; and
WHEREAS, peer-reviewed research has demonstrated that discount programs have proven not to be effective; and

WHEREAS, The Program is not insurance coverage nor will it provide drug coverage to those millions of seniors who cannot currently afford even inexpensive prescription drugs; and

WHEREAS, The Program promotes the under utilization of generic drugs, heavy use of mail order, and limits senior citizens to the option of only one drug per therapeutic class;

Therefore be it resolved, that the National Pharmaceutical Association representing all of America’s minority pharmacists at its House of Delegates assembly during the 54th Annual Meeting July 20–24, 2001 in Cleveland, Ohio joins other national pharmacy associations in opposing the Prescription Drug Discount Card program as presently composed and urges the President of the United States, the Secretary of the Department of Health and Human Services, and the Director of the Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services to immediately revisit this flawed and potentially unconstitutional Program; and

Be it further resolved, that the Secretary of HHS appoint a blue ribbon committee consisting of all facets of the national pharmacy community to study this issue and make recommendations to solve America’s pressing issue of prescription drug coverage for those Americans over the age of 65; and finally

Be it resolved that a copy of this Resolution be forwarded to the President, Secretary of HHS, Administrator of CMS, and all the national pharmacy organizations.

THE BUDGET

HON. JAMES R. LANGEVIN OF RHODE ISLAND
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, September 11, 2001

Mr. LANGEVIN. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to express my frustration with the state of the budget.

As we all know, during August recess, the Congressional Budget Office announced that the federal government will tap $29 billion from the Medicare Trust Fund and $9 billion from the Social Security Trust Fund to pay for government operations in this year alone, and another $30 billion from Social Security and $170 billion from Medicare over the next five years. This grim scenario will occur without a single dime of additional spending, despite the ever-increasing need to fund critical priorities like defense and education. Nor will we be able to deliver on our promise of a comprehensive prescription drug benefit for Medicare without dipping into Social Security and Medicare. And perhaps worst of all, the years-long delay in passing comprehensive health care will cost taxpayers $2 trillion in the long run.

The CBO estimates represent the most objective and accurate budget projections available. Today, these projections show that the Bush tax cut, which disproportionately favors the wealthy, will combine with the slowing economy to eliminate virtually the entire surplus—the surplus that at one point offered us the rare chance to tackle major initiatives like improving education, making prescription drugs affordable for our nation’s elderly and paying down the national debt. By enacting an irresponsible $1.7 trillion tax cut we have ensured that CEOs get a tax break while their employees get pink slips, students are forced to learn in crumbling schools, seniors face skyrocketing drug prices, and the current workforce is left to wonder whether Social Security will be there for them when they retire.

When I was elected to Congress, I promised my constituents that I would protect the Social Security and Medicare Trust Funds. And I was not alone. Over one hundred of my colleagues have co-sponsored legislation that would prevent Congress from spending the Social Security and Medicare surplus, and this chamber has voted seven times in the past three years to establish lockboxes for these funds.

Past and present adi-ninistrations made the very same pledge to not touch these vital trust funds. We must honor our promises by acknowledging that the economy is slowing and working together to find a solution to the budget crisis that is fair, and based on an honest, realistic budget. It has become clear that relying on the exclusions of other priorities is not the answer. Let us find a better way before it is too late.

APPROVING EXTENSION OF NON-DISCRIMINATORY TREATMENT WITH RESPECT TO PRODUCERS OF THE SOCIALIST REPUBLIC OF VIETNAM

SPEECH OF
HON. MIKE ROSS OF ARKANSAS
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 6, 2001

Mr. ROSS. Mr. Speaker, the catfish industry is an important part of the economy of my congressional district that covers all of south Arkansas. Thirty-six states either produce or process farm-raised catfish, with Arkansas being the third largest producer in the nation.

The catfish farmers in my district and across America are being hurt by the unfair practice of so-called catfish from Vietnam being dumped into our markets and sold as farm-raised catfish.

Last year, imports of Vietnamese catfish totaled 7 million pounds, more than triple the 2 million pounds imported in 1999 and more than 12 times the 575,000 pounds imported in 1998. In Vietnam, these so-called catfish, also known as “basa,” can be produced at a much lower cost due to cheap labor and less stringent environmental regulations. In fact, many of these fish are grown in floating cages in the Mekong River, exposing the fish to pollutants and other conditions. They are then dumped into American markets and often marketed as farm-raised catfish.

Vietnam says they are taking the necessary steps to fix the problem of mislabeling and dumping. However, this problem is not new and has been discussed with Vietnam for several years. We have yet to see any results to show that they are truly addressing this issue.

America is a country founded on the principles of fairness and good faith, but Vietnam must still prove that their actions are, indeed, in good faith. They must stop the dumping of this so-called catfish into America’s markets and allow our catfish farmers to have the level playing field that they deserve. Therefore, I do not support extending trade relations to Vietnam at this time.

TRIBUTE TO ELIZABETH HOFFMAN

HON. MARK UDALL
OF COLORADO
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, September 11, 2001

Mr. UDALL of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to Elizabeth Hoffman, President of the University of Colorado. As Betsy enters her second year on the job, I can proudly say that CU is well on its way to fulfilling her vision of becoming one of the top three public research universities in the country.

During her first year in office, CU has set records in private gift giving, federal research income and state capitol construction funding. One of these gifts, a $250 million donation, is the largest gift ever to a public university. This donation allowed for the creation of a CU institute that will help twenty million Americans with cognitive disabilities.

In addition to her drive to make CU a world-class university, Betsy Hoffman knows that the University of Colorado is also a school for the people of Colorado. She travels tirelessly around the state to “bring CU back to the people of Colorado.” She has quickly gained the support of the people of our state in her endeavors. Governor Owens says, “She’s been very good at representing the university around the state. I give her an A plus.” She is also supported by state legislators on both sides of the aisle and by members of the Colorado congressional delegation.

Under Betsy’s leadership, I have no doubt that CU will become the world class university she is steering it toward. I am including an article about her that was recently published in the Denver Post. Mr. Speaker, I ask for my colleagues to join me in praising the work of a visionary and an educator.

[From the Denver Post, September 2, 2001]

CU CHIEF EARNES FANS, HIGH MARKS

HOFFMAN’S FIRST YEAR BRINGS RECORD FUNDRAISING, LOFTY GOALS

(By Dave Curtin)

The glow of a 10-inch TV illuminates the darkened office of University of Colorado President Betsy Hoffman at 8:15 on a rainy Thursday morning. She’s trying to decide which of four infomercials she likes best to tout CU before 35 million football viewers.

As Hoffman enters her second year as CU’s president, she’s looking for a commercial that sets the tone for the CU she dreams of—a school that is among the top three public universities in the nation.

Hoffman’s first year was record-setting for CU in private gift-giving, federal research income and state capital construction funding. She’s worked to improve faculty salaries. She’s received bipartisan support in the legislature—a feat skeptics said a rookie president would struggle mightily to accomplish.

“There’s no way I could have ended up in a better place than here,” she says. “This is
In hindsight, she says, it was a risk. They and Claudia Coleman created a CU institute a year: the largest gift ever to a public university, Hoffman bemoans. “I had done my homework. I knew Bill liked bold approaches. But he had no desire to make a big impact.” Just before that, Hoffman had surprised everyone at a CU Foundation dinner when she and her husband announced they were donating $100,000 to CU. She’s the first president to make a six-figure donation, which represented more than a third of her first-year salary of $235,000. She recently received a 15 percent raise, bumping her salary to $272,750.

“I can’t ask anyone to make a significant contribution to this university unless I’ve done so myself,” she said at the time.

Rarely does she take a day off—and that includes weekends, her colleagues say. Most mornings she leaves the president’s residence in Boulder. And she has a late-night event nearly every night. She had one evening off earlier in the week. She went grocery shopping. And bought a rain cover for a Sunday trail ride organized by Sen. Ben Nighthorse Campbell to show support for a Continental Divide transnational trail.

On football Saturdays, she’ll host a brunch at her house and then a breakfast on campus. "It’s a very intense schedule,” she says. "All of the job requirements, no one ever tells you about the stamina. That’s the No. 1 criteria for this job.”

10:30-11:45 a.m.

Videotaping at Folsom Field: Hoffman is hustled over to Folsom for another video shoot. She is met at the stadium’s infomercial features a technical climber on a rock wall. A creek rushes below. The first 10 criteria for this job.
EXTENSIONS OF REMARKS

Zedillo, the president of the Central Bank of Buenos Aires, ministers of finance in Mexico and Indonesia and the director of Fuji Bank in Japan.

The graduation will be preceded by a champagne reception. “I don’t think I better have any champagne,” Hoffman tells her husband. “Yeah, it’s only 4 p.m.” Binger says. “The day’s only half over.”

SECURING AMERICA’S FUTURE ENERGY ACT OF 2001

SPEECH OF
HON. HON. ROBIN HAYES OF NORTH CAROLINA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, August 1, 2001

The House in Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union had under consideration the bill. (H.R. 4) to enhance energy conservation, research and development and to provide for security and diversity in the energy supply for the American people, and for other purposes.

Mr. HAYES. Mr. Chairman, oil imports are now at 57% and growing rapidly. If we are to meet our domestic energy needs, we must decrease our reliance on foreign imports by boosting domestic energy supply. A workable energy plan requires attention to all areas, conservation, production, alternative fuels, research, and especially common sense.

Over the last 20 years, the increase in demand for energy has outpaced the increase in supply. Since 1980, the supply has only increased by 18%, while energy demand has increased 24%. The United States is also far too dependent on foreign oil. Today, 57% of our oil comes from other countries; compared to 35% in 1973, and 48% 10 years ago.

Drilling in the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge may provide the necessary increase in production of energy. The U.S. Geological Survey estimates there are up to 16 billion barrels of oil in ANWR; this would be enough to replace all imports from Saudi Arabia for the next 30 years. My family and I lived on the North Slope for a year. The family we lived with perfected the ice pad drilling technique, which leaves virtually no footprint. We can drill in ANWR safely and in an environmentally responsible way. We should do this to secure America’s future energy needs.

Mr. Speaker, the American people deserve the affordable and reliable energy supply that this bill can provide. I commend the bill’s sponsor and the many members and staff who have devoted so much time to this effort, and I ask my colleagues to support this comprehensive energy policy for the future of our country.

TRIBUTE TO MORT MARKS

HON. BOB SCHAFER
OF COLORADO
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, September 11, 2001

Mr. SCHAFER. Mr. Speaker, it is my privilege to rise today to honor an uncommon Coloradan, Mr. Mort Marks of Aurora. Mort has been a tireless worker for the Republican Party and its ideals. A self-described supporter of the Republican big-tent, Mort has been instrumental in bringing the party into the major party in Colorado, and in the United States Congress.

A veteran of World War II and the Battle of the Bulge, Mort continued to work for American freedom even after entering civilian life. Whatever the hard work of campaigns and elections is needed, Mort’s face is the first seen. From writing for a number of state newspapers, to being a tireless advocate for our outstanding Governor Bill Owens and former U.S. Senator Bill Armstrong, Mort has done much for our party, our state, and our country.

I am proud to recognize Mort Marks, the skinny kid from Texas, today and wish him the best of luck with all of his future endeavors. I want he and his wife Edie to know how much I have appreciated his years of service.

Mort is the type of person we need more of in politics. A man of honor who you want on your side, Mort’s political sense is more often right than wrong. On behalf of the citizens of Colorado, I ask the House to join me in extending congratulations to Mort on his years of service to America.

IN HONOR OF FATHER JOHN ZDINAK

HON. DENNIS J. KUCINICH
OF OHIO
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, September 11, 2001

Mr. KUCINICH. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor a great man, Father John Zdinak, for his life of dedicated service to St. Theodosius Orthodox Cathedral of Cleveland on this very special day of reconstitution.

Father John Zdinak has served Theodosius Cathedral in Cleveland, Ohio in many capacities and has touched the lives of his congregation. Father Zdinak was assigned Rector of St. Theodosius in 1999, and has since then served the cathedral in many positions. Perhaps his most well-known act within the cathedral happened within his first year of installation. Father John completed a $400,000 Cemetery Expansion project that developed much of the parish cemetery.

Father Zdinak’s genuine vision for the Cathedral community was to establish a much greater presence in the Cleveland community, and more specifically the Tremont area. He worked to reclaim the former Rectory located behind the Cathedral and developed the Parish Ministries Center. His love, vision, and hope for the cathedral community has benefited the congregation in incredible ways.

Although Father Zdinak worked extensively to expand the Cathedral community, he also spent quite some time improving the physical structure of the Cathedral. Over the years, soot and dust have accumulated on the exterior of the beautiful Cathedral, much due to the nearby steel and coal mills. Father Zdinak spent months cleaning the exterior with his fellow colleagues, friends, and countless members of the congregation. Inside the Cathedral, Father Zdinak removed and replaced copper
Extensions of Remarks

Since then, La Clinica has evolved as a major asset to Alameda County's healthcare system. Congratulations La Clinica on your success.

I join your community of clients, friends and supporters in thanking you for providing exemplary healthcare services.

Sixth District Mourns Terrorist Victim

Mr. COBLE. Mr. Speaker, today the Sixth District of North Carolina is mourning the loss of life of one of our own in the tragic, senseless violence which has assaulted our nation.

Sandy Bradshaw, who was just 38 years old, and lived in Greensboro, was a flight attendant on United Airlines flight 93 that was hijacked and crashed outside Pittsburgh. She leaves behind her husband, Phil, her daughter, Alexandria, 2, and her son, Shayan, not yet one.

Members of the Bradshaw's church, Westminster Presbyterian Church, have described Sandy as friendly, outgoing, bubbly and devoted to her family. I have spoken at Westminster Presbyterian Church, and have met many members of the congregation and I join them in their sorrow.

This highlights to me how so many people, from every part of this huge country, have been directly affected by these terrible, inexcusable and cowardly terrorist acts. We pray that the number of people who have lost their lives is a great deal smaller than the thousands feared. Whatever the final figure may be, it is already clear that far too many people have had their lives devastated by terrorists. We are all both shocked and angry, but this anger will now be channeled towards finding the terrorists and bringing them to justice.

I hope to see a quick and decisive response against the perpetrators of this attack on our nation. I am glad to see that the federal government is back at work and that we have not been affected by these terrible, inexcusable and cowardly terrorist acts.

I do not wish to see it be too hurried and botched.

I would like to take this opportunity to extend our condolences to all of those affected by the events of yesterday, and in particular Sandy Bradshaw's family and her many friends. Let it be known that this crime will not go unpunished, the terrorists will be found, and the most severe action will be taken against them. On behalf of the citizens of the Sixth District of North Carolina, we offer our hope that the Bradshaw family and all of us will make it through this difficult time.

ON MEMORY OF MR. JOE DARION

Mr. KUCINICH. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor the memory of a man who inspired the American people with beautiful song, Mr. Joe Darion, lyricist of "Man of La Mancha."

Born in New York City in 1911, Mr. Darion worked throughout his life in every genre of music from popular songs to opera. Mr. Darion attended City College before serving his nation in World War II. In the early 1950's he had three Top-10 hits; the Patti Page ballad "Changing Partners", the Teresa Brewer novelty "Ricochet", and Red Buttons' comedy hit "The Ho Ho Song."

Mr. Joe Darion is most known for his beautiful lyrics of "The Impossible Dream," which quickly became one of the most beloved pop anthems of our time. "Man of La Mancha" opened in New York in 1956 and ran for an incredible 2,328 performances. In recognition of his heart-warming lyrics, Mr. Darion was rewarded a Tony Award for best score.

"The Impossible Dream" has affected thousands of people, young and old. His lyrics have inspired and touched countless Americans. His words dive deep into the human soul and character. His words,

"To dream the impossible dream,
To fight the unbeatable foe, to bear with unbearable sorrow,
To run where the brave dare not go.
To right the unrightable wrong,
To try when your arms are too weary,
To reach the unreachable star."

Mr. Speaker, please join me in honoring the memory of a man who touched millions of Americans with his inspiring lyrics and enabled countless people everywhere to "Dream the Impossible Dream", Mr. Joe Darion.
Meetings scheduled for Thursday, September 13, 2001 may be found in the Daily Digest of today’s RECORD.

MEETINGS SCHEDULED

SEPTEMBER 19
2 p.m.
Judiciary
To hold hearings on S. 702, for the relief of Gao Zhan.
SD–226

SEPTEMBER 20
10 a.m.
Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions
To hold hearings on the nomination of Eugene Scalia, of Virginia, to be Solicitor for the Department of Labor.
SD–430

Governmental Affairs
International Security, Proliferation and Federal Services Subcommittee
To hold hearings to examine the annual report of the Postmaster General.
SD–342

2 p.m.
Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions
To hold hearings to examine the effects of the drug OxyContin.
SD–430

SEPTEMBER 25
10 a.m.
Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions
Public Health Subcommittee
To hold hearings to examine environmental health issues.
SD–430

2 p.m.
Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions
Employment, Safety and Training Subcommittee
To hold hearings to examine workplace safety for immigrant workers.
SD–430

SEPTEMBER 26
10 a.m.
Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions
Business meeting to consider pending calendar business.
SD–430

CANCELLATIONS

SEPTEMBER 14
10 a.m.
Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions
Children and Families Subcommittee
To hold hearings to examine early childhood issues.
SD–430

SEPTEMBER 19
10 a.m.
Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions
To hold hearings on the nomination of Brigadier General Edwin J. Arnold, Jr., U.S.A., to be a Member and President,
The Senate met at 10:01 a.m. and was called to order by the President pro tempore [Mr. BYRD].

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. By unanimous consent, the Senate will now convene notwithstanding the provisions of Senate Resolution No. 6 adopted January 3 in this year of our Lord, 2001.

PRAYER

The Chaplain, Dr. Lloyd John Ogilvie, offered the following prayer:

Almighty God, source of strength and hope in the darkest hours of our Nation’s history, we praise You for the consistency and constancy of Your presence with us to help us confront and battle the forces of evil manifested in infamous, illusive, cowardly acts of terrorism. We turn to You with hearts filled with dismay, anger, and grief over the terrorist attacks on the World Trade Center buildings in New York City and the Pentagon here in Washington. We pray for the thousands of victims who lost their lives as a result of these violent acts against our Nation. We intercede for their loved ones; comfort them and give them courage. In particular, we pray for the loved ones of the fire fighters and police who died seeking to help others. Quiet our turbulent hearts. Remind us of how You have been with us in trouble and tragedies of the past and have given us victory over tyranny. Bless the women and men of this Senate today as they join with President Bush in decisive action. Guide them as they seek justice against the perpetrators of yesterday’s evil destruction and seek to devise a long-range solution to the insidious problem of terrorism. Thank You in advance for the courageous leadership You will provide through this Senate. You are our Lord and Saviour. Amen.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE

The Honorable Robert C. Byrd led the Pledge of Allegiance, as follows:

I pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America and to the Republic for which it stands, one nation under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.

RECOGNITION OF THE MAJORITY LEADER

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The majority leader is recognized.

ORDER OF PROCEDURE

Mr. DASCHLE. I ask unanimous consent that the Journal of proceedings be approved to date; that the morning hour be deemed expired; that the time for the two leaders be reserved for their use later in the day; further, that the Senate recess from 12:30 to 2 p.m. for the weekly party conferences.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the requests are granted. Thanking the Chaplain.

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, I thank the Chaplain for his prayer. I know he speaks for us all.

THANKING THE REPUBLICAN LEADER

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, I also thank the distinguished Republican leader for the cooperation and leadership that he showed yesterday as we made decisions throughout the day with regard to the schedule.

SCHEDULE

Mr. DASCHLE. For the interest of all Senators, there will be a debate on the resolution which I am about to propose on behalf of both leaders. I might say this is also a resolution verbatim that will be offered in the House of Representatives; the same resolution will be offered simultaneously in both the House and the Senate this morning. We will break for party conferences at 12:30. We will have a classified briefing at 2 o’clock this afternoon for all Senators. We will continue to have an opportunity for Senators to be heard on the resolution throughout the day. And at a time upon which we will agree later, there will be a vote on the resolution sometime this afternoon. It is my hope and expectation that there will also be a prayer service tonight. The time will be announced at a later time today subject to further discussions with the Speaker and, of course, the Republican leader.

I would also ask, Mr. President, to accommodate schedules of certain Senators, that after the resolution is proposed and the four leaders have been recognized for their statements, the Senators from New York and the Senators from Virginia be given first recognition, and following the statements made by those Senators, that Senators be recognized on an alternative basis throughout the day.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, it is so ordered.

RECOGNITION OF THE MINORITY LEADER

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Republican leader is recognized.

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, I just want to say also—and I will have more to say about the resolution in a moment—how much I appreciate the work yesterday that was totally nonpartisan, totally cooperative from the leadership on the Democratic side of the aisle and on this side of the aisle and with the House of Representatives. That was the right thing to do. It was done. Senator Daschle was there. He made decisions that were appropriate after consultation—and some of them were tough—that even sometimes had to be modified later because events kept changing. I express my appreciation to him for that.

Also, this resolution today is bipartisan and bicameral; the same resolution will be considered in the House of Representatives. It is a good resolution. I believe it is strong. It is important that the American people and the world know that is the way we are proceeding. I thank Senator Daschle for his cooperation.

TERRORIST ATTACKS AGAINST THE UNITED STATES

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, I send a resolution to the desk.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will state the resolution.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

A joint resolution (S.J. Res. 22) expressing the sense of the Senate and the House of Representatives regarding the terrorist attacks launched against the United States on September 11, 2001:

Whereas on September 11, 2001, terrorists hijacked and destroyed four civilian aircraft, crashing two of them into the towers of the World Trade Center in New York City, and a third into the Pentagon outside Washington, D.C.;

Whereas thousands of innocent Americans were killed and injured as a result of these attacks, including the passengers and crew of the four aircraft, workers in the World Trade Center and in the Pentagon, rescue workers, and bystanders;

Whereas thousands of innocent Americans were killed and injured as a result of these attacks, including the passengers and crew of the four aircraft, workers in the World Trade Center and in the Pentagon, rescue workers, and bystanders;

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That Congress—

(1) condemns in the strongest possible terms the terrorists who planned and carried out the September 11, 2001, attacks against the United States, and by targeting symbols of American strength and success, clearly were intended to intimidate our Nation and weaken its resolve: Now, therefore, be it—

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That Congress—

(1) condemns in the strongest possible terms the terrorists who planned and carried out the September 11, 2001, attacks against the United States, as well as their sponsors;

(2) extends its deepest condolences to the victims of these heinous and cowardly attacks, as well as to their families, friends, and loved ones;
The full resources of our economic and military strength.

The world should know that the Members of both parties in both Houses stand united. The full resources of our Government will be brought to bear in aiding the search and rescue and in hunting down those responsible and those who may have aided or harbored them.

Nothing—nothing—can replace the losses that have been suffered. I know there is only the smallest measure of inspiration that can be taken from this devastation. But there is a passage in the Bible from Isaiah, that I think speaks to all of us at times such as this:

The bricks have fallen down, but we will rebuild with dressed stone; the fig trees have been felled, but we will replace them with cedars.

That is what we will do. We will rebuild and we will recover. The people of America will stand strong together because the people of America have always stood together. And those of us privileged to serve this great Nation will stand with you.

God bless the people of America.

I yield the floor.

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, any expression of sympathy for the suffering today is too weak. Every expression of horror at this outrage is too mild. But we must confront these acts and find a way to come together and make sure that this kind of heinous, vicious action will not happen again in America.

This premeditated action against innocent men and women and children and their families, at the symbols of our country—our economic strength, our military strength, and most importantly, our freedoms—is unimaginable.

There's no way to understand it, to explain it, to defend it. Americans just don't think that way. That makes it hard for us to comprehend this very difficult moment and to do what's necessary to deal with terrorism and stop it in the future.

Our prayers are going out to the victims and their families, to those who are suffering in so many ways in New York, in Virginia, and in Pennsylvania—in all of America. We have such a debt of appreciation to pay to those who have struggled mightily with these catastrophic events at the Pentagon and at the World Trade Center and in our cities and states—the volunteers, those who gave their lives trying to deal with this terrible moment. To the people around the world who see this not just as a strike at America, but at freedom and democracy all over the world, and to those who already have extended hands of cooperation, understanding, and support, we appreciate it on behalf of the American people.

My heart aches for the people of New York, our men and women serving at the Pentagon, the passengers and crew of the four hijacked aircraft, and for their families and friends. These attacks were an assault on our people and on our freedom. They aimed at the symbols and structures of our country, but also at the symbols and structures of our economic and military strength. They aimed at America, but also at freedom and democracy all over the world who see this not just as a strike at America, but at freedom and democracy all over the world, and to those who already have extended hands of cooperation, understanding, and support, we appreciate it on behalf of the American people.

Now, Mr. President, it's so important that we show that even these terrible acts cannot stop America from going forward. We must get on with important work. But it is important also to make it clear that this is not business as usual. We're going ahead with our responsibilities. But we are going to act now, tomorrow, and in the weeks and months ahead to deal with those people who have taken these actions and with those who have supported them.

We will take whatever action is necessary in the Congress, working with the administration, working with the American team to stop this kind of terrorism. Whatever we call it, we must put ourselves in a war footing. We must make up our minds we're going to fight this scourge of the world. We will. We have come together.

There are moments in history when in the past the people of this country have set aside conflicts and prejudices and passions and have come together. We'll do it now. We've already done it. But we must continue to do so, regardless of region, religion, party, philosophy, or anything else.

There's much to do. We've got to find out how this happened. Congress has a right and a responsibility to learn what has happened here. We must find out who did it. And we must be prepared to take actions and fight terrorist attacks in the future.

This is not a time for timidity. This is not a time for pontification. Yes, we need to be sure of our actions. We need to be committed and determined. We need to be bold.

Here in the Congress I hope we will think about how we most effectively can fulfill our responsibilities to do everything we can to fight terrorism, to provide the funds necessary in this fight and to provide the aid so necessary for those who have been damaged and have lost so much.

Just in a few hours we will take up the Commerce-State-Justice appropriations bill. In that bill is funding for counterterrorism. Is it enough? Can we do more? What should we do? I call on the Senate, as I know it will, to rise to this occasion, to be bold. Let's act together. The American people expect no less.

I yield the floor, Mr. President.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Nevada, Mr. REID.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, Senator BIDEN, the chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, will manage the discussion on this resolution today.

I join my colleagues in saying that my thoughts and prayers are with those individuals and families who were victimized by the cowardly terrorist acts perpetrated against the United States yesterday.

We in Congress stand united in our resolve to ensure that President Bush has every necessary resource as he leads our great Nation forward in the coming days and weeks and months.

I am very confident that every Member of the Senate views this as an American issue. No party affiliation, no partisanship, no attempt to gain political advantage—nothing—will erode our solidarity or undermine our united resolve as we respond to protect our country and our people.

I personally express my appreciation to our armed forces and defense workers who yesterday acted so brilliantly, so heroically, in being called to arms, literally, at a moment’s notice. I am very proud of the Capitol Police. We all shall be. Every day they put their lives on the line for us.

My heart goes out to the police officers and firemen in New York who lost their lives attempting to help other people.

I hope we will all join with Senators DURBIN and BENNETT to make sure that every penny necessary to build the Visitors Center is provided this year. We need more than a plaque on a wall for Officer Chestnut and Detective Gibson. In their honor, we need to build a Visitors Center. Officers Chestnut and Detective Gibson gave their lives protecting us, our staffs, and the millions of people who visit the Capitol complex every year. Building the Capitol Visitors Center is critical to ensuring the safety of all those who come to the U.S. Capitol.

We will do everything in our power to support President Bush in his efforts to ensure that those who have done such evil and perpetrated these despicable acts do not go unpunished.

But let me be clear about what we know. America is the greatest democracy and force for freedom the world has ever known. All of America will stand together to make sure that we rebuild and that we fight back, and that Americans continue to enjoy the freedoms and liberty that are the hallmark of this great country of ours.

Perhaps of even greater importance, we must guarantee that no such act of terrorism ever revisits our Nation’s shores. Our democratic values and American freedom, the United States—as the leader of the free world and its only remaining superpower—should be prepared to use every diplomatic, economic, and military means at our disposal to stop those who commit these acts of terrorism, and to defeat these forces of evil.

And in the war against those who would use terror to attack innocent civilians, our democratic values and American freedom, the United States—as the leader of the free world and its only remaining superpower—should be prepared to use every diplomatic, economic, and military means at our disposal to stop those who commit these acts of terrorism, and to defeat these forces of evil.

Of course, we should deploy our best diplomatic efforts to engage our friends and allies around the world in this war against international terrorism. Of course we should do that.

I personally appreciate, as I think our Nation should, and does, the support immediately expressed yesterday by President Putin and the Russian people.

As our allies around the world look to us for leadership and protection, we must have as our goal to use diplomacy, to enlist the support of our friends and allies around the world, to provide their friendship and support in this critical time of need. However, while diplomacy will play a central role in this war against terrorism, we must deploy the full economic and military might of the United States against those who threaten our citizens, our national security interests, our democracy, and our freedom.

As I supported President George Herbert Walker Bush 10 years ago in his decision to use the overwhelming military force of the United States in the Persian Gulf war, I stand with President George W. Bush in his commitment to use every means at our disposal to exterminate the perpetrators of this earlier war. Those who kill innocent Americans must be held accountable. And make no mistake about it, they will be. Moreover, I stand firmly with the President on this crucial point: Those who aid and harbor perpetrators of terrorism must also be held accountable. Make no mistake about that, they will be.

While I can assure the American people that we will hunt down those barbarians who committed yesterday’s heinous acts, we must also act to prevent these types of attacks from occurring in the future. International terrorism is perhaps the greatest modern threat to our national security interests. We must be prepared to act accordingly.

General Holland, the U.S. Air Force Commander in Chief of the Special Operations Command at MacDill Air Force Base in Florida, directs our counterterrorism efforts on behalf of the military. He has no civilian counterpart. We need to establish one.

The successful fight against terrorism is one that will require the highest level of diplomatic skill in gathering intelligence, as well as the most effective use for economic and military strength. However, when diplomacy fails, as regrettably it does on occasion, we must be prepared to employ alternatives. Terrorists, especially those who have the capability to plan and execute the kinds of attacks we witnessed graphically yesterday, require a significant level of financing and protection. We should be prepared to use alternatives such as economic sanctions to deter and prevent nations, organizations, and individuals from aiding and abetting those who engage in terrorism.

When diplomacy and economic sanctions fail, as they do on occasion, our resolve to fight terrorism must not waver. We must face the enemy with the courage of our convictions. We must never under any circumstances compromise our resolve.

I assure the American people as well as our friends and allies throughout the world, we as a nation are ready for this challenge. I make it clear to enemies, to anyone who would consider bringing harm upon Americans, our democratic values, and our freedom, that we are strong, we are resolved, and we will prevail.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The majority leader.

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, I am advised that the assistant Republican leader would prefer to speak later in the day. I ask unanimous consent all remarks be limited to no longer than 10 minutes in order to accommodate as many Senators as possible.

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. President, I very much appreciate, first, the hundreds of expressions of the Members of this body and the heartfelt expressions of grief to New Yorkers during our time of grief and our sadness. We need to be there for them.

When something this cataclysmic occurs, one’s mind works at many, many different levels. It is very difficult to come to grips with such an intense and terrible tragedy, but we must; we have to. We seek as guidance the generations before us who had their tragedies, they who rose to the occasion. We must, as well.

There are many different levels of this tragedy. I will discuss four: the individual level, the level as a New Yorker, the level as an American, and the level of the world.

As an individual, our first thought goes to all who grieve. Last night in my city and State, there were thousands of people who called their loved ones, got a missing person. There were thousands of families waiting for that phone call, dialing their phones endlessly to try to find a loved one. I know a little bit of that angst they went through. I was in the White House when the report was ready to address the Supreme Court. I saw the picture of the first damage to the World Trade Center. At first, I said... what most said: This must have been an accident, a little propeller plane that accidentally ran into the World Trade Center.

But that fire looked too large. Then we saw the second plane crash. Immediately, it hit me: My daughter attends high school within the shadow of the World Trade Center. Most of the pictures of the conflagration show her high school in the background. I reached my wife and for 2 hours we were in virtual panic, trying to locate her to see how she was. Then, praise God, she called and we were relieved. Those 2 hours of pure misery are now being experienced tenfold, a hundredfold, a thousandfold by all of the families in New York and in Washington and in Boston and in California who have lost loved ones to this dastardly and disgusting act.

So we first think as individuals how this has affected the lives of all of us. Everyone in New York right now knows somebody who is missing. I know someone on the 10th floor who worked for Cantor Fitzgerald. We can’t find hardly anybody from that firm. He called his parents, told them he loved them, and they haven’t heard from him since.

On Thursday we learned of the search of a mother and two daughters for their father and husband who worked in the World Trade Center restaurant. I have two daughters about the same age. We saw those little girls. There was almost nothing you could say. I have subsequently been told they found their father. Let us hope and pray that the others find their fathers, mothers, brothers, sisters, friends. Let us hope and pray that this tragedy, which is already the largest tragedy we have experienced since World War II, is as minimal as possible. But our hearts go out to all of those who are suffering now. We are with them from one end of this country to the other.

Our city is a beautiful city. We have been bringing in people from all over the world for 300 years. In one generation we change them into Americans, and they sally forth around the country, adding vim and vigor and new ideas. That function of New York will never die. We are an international city and we love being an international city. We New Yorkers feel the loss of life as a whole, as a city.

Out my window in Brooklyn, the dominant scene, after the Statue of Liberty looking over the harbor, are the two towers. Not seeing them anymore, I feel violated. I feel that some horrible person has come in and taken something away from all of us as a city. But we will survive and we will prevail. We are New Yorkers. The diligent firefighters and police officers, many of whom have now passed, run to this tragedy, not away from it; their job is to save lives.

It was told to me by many people that the lines to give blood went around block after block. People were waiting at 9 o’clock, at midnight, at 3 in the morning, standing in line because they knew blood was needed. This is well more than I expected, that the crisis, at least in terms of blood donation, is over. We do have enough blood.

I was told of the story of the merchant whose store was on the path of the World Trade Center. He owned a shoe store. He stood outside and gave the fleeing women sneakers, just handing out sneakers, tennis shoes. He knew they couldn’t run in their high heels. That is a New Yorker; and there are millions of us.

We are going to need your help. It has already been offered. I was gratified when the President called me yesterday afternoon and said this Nation will do anything it takes to help New Yorkers recover. We went on to say about every Member came over to me and to HILLARY and offered us the help that we will need. We need help immediately.

The FEMA Director, I believe, will be flying with us to New York early this afternoon to try to give help in terms of survival, in terms of the immediate rescue. We will need lots of help after that. We have suffered a huge, huge loss. Our financial industries have to recover, the lifeblood of the Nation and the world. I appreciate the offers. We will be counting on everyone here and in the other body and the White House.

As an American, make no mistake about it, we did wake up in a new world in America. It is a new era. Since World War II, we had the cold war. We had a brief respite, for 5, 7, 10 years. But we are now in a new era. There are forces against us, and they are in many corners of the world. They hate us for our freedom. They are against the very miracles of freedom. They want us to turn the clock all the way back to the Middle Ages. In the past, there have always been backward forces. But technology has given this group the power to affect our lives in ways we never before imagined.

Yes, this was a 21st century Pearl Harbor. But a little different because they aimed at civilians, as they know our military is too strong. They are ultimately cowards and bullies. It is not a nation that conquers this, but it affects us. I say three things in that regard.

First, we are a resilient nation. We don’t take anything on our knees. We will not take this. I assure the enemies of America, the enemies of freedom, the enemies of the nation that this will not stand, that we will not win this war against those who seek to destroy our very way of life in a day or in a month or even a year. It is going to take several. If we are resolute, we will succeed.

They have their weaknesses and their pressure points. I was glad the President said we will not only go after the terrorists but those who harbor terrorists. This could not have been done without some help from countries. There are countries that aid terrorists. We know who they are. They are on the terrorist list. They should not remain immune from what happened. In fact, they are the weak pressure point of the groups that seek to hurt us and destroy us.

Some of these awful people who did this yesterday knew how to fly 757s. There was no 757 in the mountains of Afghanistan. How did they get access to learn to do this? These are the kinds of questions we have to ask in the next weeks and months ahead, if we do find, as all fingers seem to point, that is from where it came.

We have to do one other thing. We have to have our European allies know that this finger is not just pointed at us but at them. This idea that for temporary economic advantage they can continue to have strong economic relations with countries that help and abet and harbor terrorists must go out the window.

I was proud to speak to the President yesterday. I assured him something, and I mean something. There was no 757 in the mountains of Afghanistan. How did they get access to learn to do this? These are the kinds of questions we have to ask in the next weeks and months ahead, if we do find, as all fingers seem to point, that is from where it came.

We have to do one other thing. We have to have our European allies know that this finger is not just pointed at us but at them. This idea that for temporary economic advantage they can continue to have strong economic relations with countries that help and abet and harbor terrorists must go out the window.

I was proud to speak to the President yesterday. I assured him something, and I mean something. There was no 757 in the mountains of Afghanistan. How did they get access to learn to do this? These are the kinds of questions we have to ask in the next weeks and months ahead, if we do find, as all fingers seem to point, that is from where it came.

We have to do one other thing. We have to have our European allies know that this finger is not just pointed at us but at them. This idea that for temporary economic advantage they can continue to have strong economic relations with countries that help and abet and harbor terrorists must go out the window.

I was proud to speak to the President yesterday. I assured him something, and I mean something. There was no 757 in the mountains of Afghanistan. How did they get access to learn to do this? These are the kinds of questions we have to ask in the next weeks and months ahead, if we do find, as all fingers seem to point, that is from where it came.

We have to do one other thing. We have to have our European allies know that this finger is not just pointed at us but at them. This idea that for temporary economic advantage they can continue to have strong economic relations with countries that help and abet and harbor terrorists must go out the window.

I was proud to speak to the President yesterday. I assured him something, and I mean something. There was no 757 in the mountains of Afghanistan. How did they get access to learn to do this? These are the kinds of questions we have to ask in the next weeks and months ahead, if we do find, as all fingers seem to point, that is from where it came.

We have to do one other thing. We have to have our European allies know that this finger is not just pointed at us but at them. This idea that for temporary economic advantage they can continue to have strong economic relations with countries that help and abet and harbor terrorists must go out the window.

I was proud to speak to the President yesterday. I assured him something, and I mean something. There was no 757 in the mountains of Afghanistan. How did they get access to learn to do this? These are the kinds of questions we have to ask in the next weeks and months ahead, if we do find, as all fingers seem to point, that is from where it came.
In conclusion, this event will never leave us the same, not as individuals, not as New Yorkers, not as Americans, not as residents of the planet earth. But with it as we grieve, we can meet the challenge and rise to the next level of civilization. I am confident we will.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Under the order previously entered, the senior Senator from Virginia, Mr. Warner, is recognized for not to exceed 10 minutes.

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, I thank my colleagues and commend our leadership. I want to pick up on the note of our distinguished colleague from New York. We will never be the same as a nation. That is true. We will be a better nation. We will be a stronger nation, as we step up to meet this challenge. Yesterday our great Nation, our people were subjected in a single day its greatest tragedy of a single day. Immediately thereafter, this Nation, arm in arm, embarked on what I think history will reflect is its finest hour—hours yesterday, today, and tomorrow, into the future.

Our Nation from coast to coast, locked arms, irrespective of our backgrounds, our cultures, our faiths, our beliefs—indeed, our differences. We locked arms, united as a nation behind our President, behind our Government, putting full faith in our Government to lead us in this crisis.

I pray that our President, our Congress, the Governors of the States, right on down to the city councils, the police, the firemen who are working today, seize this opportunity and make our Nation even stronger and greater.

Our challenge here in our legislature, working with the President and others, will be to devise, yes, a strengthened security system in every walk of life for America, every aspect of our daily life, with emphasis this morning on airports. But those of us who have worked in the area of terrorism know that airports, yes, are vulnerable, but there are many other areas in which we are vulnerable.

I am proud that the Senate Armed Services Committee, working with the other committees of this body, 3 years ago, when I was privileged to be chairman, instituted a special subcommittee solely dealing with those threats that are emerging against the United States of America. We have done a lot of work in this Congress. We have done our best to legislate and put our funds behind us. But now let us seize this opportunity and to indeed make this Nation stronger.

Each of us will forever remember yesterday, where we were, what we did. Those of us who convened here yesterday morning then went to our staffs. I commend the leadership of the Congress, indeed, the police and others who had an orderly evacuation. I then called the Secretary of Defense, Don Rumsfeld and asked what could I do as the ranking member of the committee to show my full support for the men and women of the Armed Forces and the law enforcement. He said: JOHN, come over.

I called my colleague, the chairman, Senator LEVIN. We joined and went over and stayed the better part of 3 hours which I will never forget. The Secretary had us in the room, the chairman and I, the Joint Chiefs, the other staff. We watched the operations. The President called in. I watched the Secretary and the President. The Secretary handed me the phone and said: The President wishes to speak to you.

America will be proud of the manner in which our command and control of our military and indeed the executive branch functioned to address this crisis. That chapter will be written. I said to the great Secretary: I want very much, as a Senator from Virginia, to go and look at that area of the building that was struck.

He said: Of course. I will escort you. And that he did for Senator LEVIN and I.

We went around that building, in which I spent over 5 years of the happiest days of my life in the Navy's secretariat. We speculated as far back as the late 1960s and 1970s how that building could be attacked. Yes, we thought of this scenario. But that is history.

There I saw that building and how that aircraft, Mr. President, was skillfully guided and piloted such as to penetrate that building through three or four of the rings. And as we are here today, the casualties we know not in number, but what we do know and what I saw, as I sat there but a few feet from the building, all around me were voluntary firemen, men and women, police officers and rescue men and women. Therein rests the greatness of our Nation as to how they responded and what they were doing, unselfishly, risking their own lives. We saw some coming out filled with smoke and debris but doing what they could to help those trapped, dead or otherwise, in that building.

Our colleagues from New York have most dramatically and passionately described what has occurred in their State. We grieve with our citizen today who are suffering these losses, the dead, the injured, and their families. But America remains unbowed.

America is stronger. America is united and we are ready to help have our greatest challenge in this hour.

Again, as we pursue the legislative challenge to balance the magnificence of our Constitution, which has held us united—it remains the oldest continuous democratic government in the world today—and balance the need of additional security against human rights, civil rights, and the rule of law, we will do it. Never before has our Congress been faced with a greater challenge to preserve one of the greatest parts of this Nation, and yet address the future. To our distinguished colleague from California that the leader, the two leaders have said that anyone who wants to speak on this resolution... throughout the day should be able to do so. There are some schedules that have to be met, especially by the Senators from New York. They need to return to their State. We need to get the vote out of the way. There will be added opportunity to speak.

The President pro tempore. Is there objection to the several requests?

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. Further reserving the rule to object, if I understand then, the vote will be at 1:45, the Senate will go into recess until 3, and then the floor will be open to continue; is that correct?

Mr. REID. The Senator is right.

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. I thank the Chair.

The President pro tempore. Is there objection to the several requests?

Mr. WARNER. Reserving the right to object, if I understand, then, the vote will be at 1:45, the Senate will go into the second hour of the vote. If not, I ask unanimous consent that all Members of this body be co-sponsors of the resolution.

The President pro tempore. Is there objection? Without objection, it is so ordered.

Under the previous order, the Senator from New York, the junior Senator, Mrs. CLINTON, is recognized for not to exceed 10 minutes.

Mrs. CLINTON. Thank you, Mr. President. I thank my colleagues for their outpouring of support, their concerns, and their many offers of additional aid that has come to the rescue of our people as a result of this devastating tragedy.

Yesterday dawned a beautiful day in New York. My daughter told me it was one of those days where the sky was totally clear, there was a breeze, people were starting to line up at the polling places to vote because it was primary day, an election day, a continuation of the democratic process, self-government that has set us apart from every society that has ever existed because of the longevity of our democracy and the will of our people to constantly renew themselves.

New Yorkers went from standing in line to vote to standing in line to donate blood in just a few hours. I do not think any of us will ever get out of our minds the images we saw on television of the plane going into the first tower, the plane going into the second tower, and the plane going into the Pentagon, but there were tens of thousands of our fellow Americans, people who live in New York, New Jersey, and Connecticut, people literally from every part of this land, indeed, the world for whom this was not an event they watched in horror on television but lived through and in too many instances did not survive.

We are beginning to find out what that was like. CHUCK and I have a lot of friends who worked in those towers, who worked in the center, and worked nearby. We are hearing the stories of husbands and wives grabbing cell phones and calling home to say: I love you; goodbye.

We know that if we assure every person in the body, in the House, and many, many of our fellow citizens, when we finally know the names of those killed and injured, they will know someone.

This was an attack on New York, but it was really an attack on America. I have been very gratified to know that CHUCK has and all of our colleagues in the House, by the strong support we have received from the President. I am very grateful. We have expressed our appreciation.

Chuck and I will be going to New York this afternoon with FEMA, and we could not ask for more than we have received in the immediate aftermath of this horrific attack.

We are by no means anywhere near the end of the story. We will have to continue the search and rescue efforts. We are finding people even as we speak. Yet we know there is a very grim task ahead to do everything we can to find every person, to account for every single person who went to work. That is all they did. They went to work on a beautiful September day in New York.

We will also stand united behind our President as he and his advisers plan the necessary actions to demonstrate America’s resolve and commitment not only to seek out an exact punishment on the perpetrators but to make very clear that not only those who harbor terrorists but those who in any way give any aid or comfort whatsoever will now face the wrath of our country. I hope that message has gotten through to everywhere it needs to be heard: You are either with America in our time of need or you are not.

We also stand united behind our resolve, as this resolution so clearly states, and we will stand behind those who died, that we offer assistance to you, stand with you, and pursue those who reached deep into your families and homes yesterday and took someone you loved away from you.

To all of those who are missing a loved one, there are no words any of us can express except to tell you in the clearest possible terms: We will in a united American response support you, offer assistance to you, stand with you, and pursue those who reached deep into your families and homes yesterday and took someone you loved away from you.

There will be a lot of work ahead of us in this body and in the House, and we will pursue that. I am grateful for the support we have received. Thank you very much.

(Appause.)

The President pro tempore (Mr. Nelson of Florida). The Senator from Delaware, the manager of the resolution.

VISIT TO THE SENATE BY THE PRIME MINISTER OF AUSTRALIA,
JOHN HOWARD

Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, there has been a request, with which I agree, that we recess for up to 3 minutes. We would be honored to welcome Prime Minister of Australia, one of our strongest allies, a man who himself is in deep sympathy and mourning for this Nation, in a joint meeting. He is in the Chamber.
September 12, 2001

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—SENATE

16871

RECESS

Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate recess for 3 minutes so that the Prime Minister of Australia may be greeted.

There being no objection, the Senate, at 11:10 a.m., recessed and reassembled at 11:13 a.m. when called to order by the Presiding Officer (Mr. NELSON of Florida).

TERRORIST ATTACKS AGAINST THE UNITED STATES—Continued

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the Senator from Virginia is recognized for up to 10 minutes.

The Senator from Virginia.

Mr. ALLEN. Mr. President, my fellow Members of the Senate: This is a very sad day as we witness all of the heart-breaking implications, tragedies and lives lost at a result of yesterday’s des- tardly terrorist attacks on the United States.

Yesterday’s attacks were attacks not just on our particular Commonwealth of Virginia or State of New York or the United States; rather it is an attack on freedom-loving people and all the prin- ciples that we stand for as a unique and great nation.

On Monday afternoon, Senator BOXER and I were ready to introduce a resolution condemning the suicide bombings in the Middle East. We would have intro- duced that resolution on Monday, but wanted to include another “where- as” clause recognizing the attacks in Israel on Sunday. We now see with great shock and horror that our United States is obviously not impervious to these suicide bombings and such vi- cious attacks on innocent people.

What we need to do now is coalesce. Coalesce as a people with our shared beliefs. Coalesce to comfort those who have lost loved ones. And then we must determine where we must improve and move forward to try to prevent such acts from occurring in the future.

First, our goal and prayers right now must be focused on the rescue, hoping that we can save those who are still alive. Secondly, we need to find and as- certain as many details and informa- tion as to determine how our security was breached so as to hopefully prevent it in the future. And thirdly of course, we will hold accountable those who are responsible for this attack and attain justice.

Presently, we are hearing stories of great heroes just in the first day of re- covery. People who knew that the building was going to collapse, but nev- ertheless stayed there trying to usher people out. On C-Span this morning, one of those who was just a volunteer helper knew what was going on . . .

where those who were emergency, fire and rescue workers and FBI agents were as well . . . knowing that the building was going to collapse . . . staying knowing those were the last minutes of their life trying to save other people.

The same was happening in Virginia where we have lost many lives, untold numbers indetermined as of yet, at the Pentagon in Arlington, Virginia, as well as the passengers on flight 77 fly- ing from Dulles, Virginia, that was hi- jacked and crashed into the Pentagon.

Reports in Virginia indicate that cas- ualties in the Pentagon may be as high as 800, or hopefully, as low as 100. I pray to God it is as low as possible.

There are great stories of bravery, with people going above and beyond what is expected, and that should give us comfort as a nation. This tragedy has affected many lives, and we still don’t know how many lives. It will probably take a week if not weeks to determine how many lives have been lost. In the families that lost my daughter, children were crying because their parents work at the Pen- tagon. Others work at Fort Belvoir and they worried that Fort Belvoir was being hit. There’s only maybe a couple of dozen houses in our development that my family just moved into but one youngster who came by our house to get to know my children . . . his fa- ther was on Flight 77 from Dulles.

So, as the days go forward, we’re all going to be learning these stories of inno- cent people whose lives have been live and the families that will forever be scarred with the loss of that loved one. Our thoughts and prayers must be with those families. Whether they’re lost in the New York City attack which includes victims from New York, Con- necticut and New Jersey. Lost also are many people hailing from Virginia. Here in the D.C. area, I am sure there are folks from Maryland and the Dis- trict of Columbia, Massachusetts and New England on the hi- jacked flight from Boston were lost. Also undoubtedly lost were many peo- ple from California, since the destina- tion of all of those flights was to be California.

This is truly a day that will live in infamy. History will record this as the most violent, insane, vile act that has ever been perpetrated on our homeland in the United States of America. We need to be united, coalesced as Ameri- cans, along with our allies in our re- solve, our resolve to pursue these cowardly conspirators who perpetrated these murderous acts.

Our response and justice must be sure; we need to be swift in our assess- ment of culpability; and we need to be commensurately severe. In my view, we have allowed terrorism to go on too long, thinking that we could be im- mune from it. But nevertheless, we need to recognize that we’re going to have to wage warfare.

These people have struck against the symbol of American strength and power. They are not, though, going to be able to weaken the will of the people of the United States. We will become more united, defending our interests and our principles. We will also stick together, not just as Virginians and New Yorkers, but as Americans aiding and helping the families who have lost loved. We’re people in what we can do. The senior Senator from Virginia, JOHN WARNER, and I will work together to make sure that for those Federal, mili- tary and civilian employees that the Government will do all that we can to assist the families. And it’s not just as Virginians. I know that the Presiding Officer of the Senate, Senator NELSON, from Florida, cares just as much as anybody else does. And so we are all going to stick together in that regard for the grieving families of victims and their families.

Finally, Mr. President, as we respond here at home to what we learn from these attacks, we cannot be tempted in any way to diminish what makes us a great nation. And what makes us a great nation is that this is a country that understands that people have funda- mental God-given rights and lib- erties and our government is con- stituted to protect those rights. We cannot—in our efforts to bring jus- tice—diminish those liberties.

Clearly, this is not a simple, normal criminal case. This is an act of war, and those rules of warfare apply. But at home and domestically, we need to make sure that we are not tempted to abrogate any civil rights such as ha- beas corpus or protections against un- reasonable searches and seizures which includes victims from New York, Con- necticut and New Jersey. Lost also are many people hailing from Virginia. Here in the D.C. area, I am sure there are folks from Maryland and the Dis- trict of Columbia, Massachusetts and New England on the hi- jacked flight from Boston were lost. Also undoubtedly lost were many peo- ple from California, since the destina- tion of all of those flights was to be California.

Let’s get the facts, move swiftly and properly. But most importantly, as Americans, let’s stay strong and vigil- ant. Let’s stay resolved, and let’s keep moving forward. We will not let the world be watching, not just the Senate; they’re watching the United States and Americans. What will their impression? Let’s keep moving for- ward. We are the beacon for freedom- loving people in the world. And by sticking together we will persevere. We will achieve justice. And we’ll come out safer and stronger in the end.
Thank you, Mr. President.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Delaware, the manager of the resolution.

Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, I cannot think of any other legislative body in the world where we would hear the speech we just heard by the junior Senator from Virginia, where his heart is aching, many in his constituency have died. Part of the building in his State is still burning.

In the ultimate American way, he called at the end of his speech for not abrogating the basic cherished liberties that this Nation has. I doubt whether one would hear that in any other assembly in the world after such an attack, slaying into the second tower has reverberated around the world and everywhere.

My heart and my sympathy go out to colleagues from New York and Virginia in particular, but all those who have had their fellow citizens and their constituents victimized by this act.

This is a time to mourn but not to despair, a time for resolve but not remorse, a time for sober investigation and not recrimination, and a time to unite, not to debate.

Some have said yesterday and today that all has changed, all has changed for America. I know what they mean by that, and I respect their view, but I pray that is not true. I pray that is not true.

I pray my junior colleague from Virginia is correct when he says the one thing we cannot allow to change is the values upon which this country is built, for if that were to occur, then they would be able to declare victory, genuine victory.

I predict one thing has changed, though. I respectfully suggest the way of life and future of the world has changed forever.

The future of organized terrorist cells is about to welcome the 21st Century in a way they never anticipated, for in this dastardly act they may have done what no other group of people could possibly have done, and that is to unite the civilized world, unite our allies in Europe who share our values, unite our Russian friends, our Chinese friends, unite the world, because that image of that plane smacking into the second tower has reverberated around the world and every leader in every country can picture the same thing happening in their nation.

I recently visited China with three of my colleagues. They have buildings in China that dwarf the World Trade Center. I can picture the President of China sitting there envisioning the same thing happening. So I do not think all of a sudden there has been a conversion of democratic zeal on the part of those who are not often thought of as our allies to resolve with us to fight worldwide terrorism, but it is a reflection of the reality that the world has changed in a way that we all are vulnerable.

A further reality is that no one could have undertaken this very well planned, very well executed, well coordinated terrorist act without an extensive network, without a place in which to plan it that was within earshot and eyesight of some country, without some people who, by their inaction at a minimum and their complicity, altered this to occur. There will be very few places to hide, I predict, from this moment on, for these are not the acts of a single man or a single woman. They are and they were and they will, if they try again, have to be well planned, well funded, and widely supported by dozens upon dozens of individuals and individual leaders.

In speaking to the President, the Secretary of State, and other leaders in the administration, they are impressed by what they believe to be the heartfelt, sincere, and resolute offers of support to deal with terrorism that not only come from expected quarters such as England, France, Germany, Italy, and our European allies but from unexpected quarters.

The word should go out to those who pretend they wish to be our friends that they are going to have to make some very difficult choices. Pakistan in particular is going to have to make a very difficult choice, very soon, for we are counting. We are counting and we are looking. Words will not be sufficient. Actions will be demanded.

All of us say we will never let this happen again. Well, the act of a single individual strapped explosives to their body is probably something no one can ever guarantee will not happen, but dealing with well organized, well-funded, well-coordinated, massive actions is something that can be done only in a multilateral way, only internationally.

No matter what we do, if we fail to lead the world in a multilateral unity of absolute resolve, I say to you, sadly, that this could happen again. But I am convinced it will not.

Today, as it has for 212 years, the U.S. Congress has convened. Two miles down Pennsylvania Avenue, President Bush sits in the Oval Office leading the executive branch and the country in a wide-ranging investigation to find the people behind these imparadigm acts. Around this city and around New York, dedicated public servants are back at their desks in Federal office buildings doing the people's business.

New York—the city that never sleeps—has a duty to comfort the 60,000 survivors and find the people behind these imparadigm acts. Around the Nation, citizens of every age, every race, and every religion grieve for their fellow citizens. But they stand united. They stand united in the search for the people behind these imparadigm acts which has endured over two centuries against all enemies, foreign and domestic. They stand united in readiness to answer the call for their fellow neighbors. As Senator CLINTON and Senator SCHUMER pointed out, they lined the blocks in New York City to give blood. I would be justified if you did not see black faces, Asian faces, Hispanic, every race, and every religion standing in that line. They stand united in support of the President of the United States, as do all of us here in the Senate.

Much will be said today and in the days ahead about the appropriate responses to these heinous acts. But for now let me just say this. This is not a struggle over ideology. This is not a struggle over religion. This is a struggle between civilization and barbarity.

Let there be no doubt that the United States and civilized nations of the world will unite and win this struggle. Our enemies will not, and cannot, defeat this country. It will be deeply wounded by the loss of so many but strengthened by our resolve and our commitment to sustain this great democracy.

I see in this cataclysmic tragedy the beginning of the end of organized and legitimized terrorist activities.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Hampshire, the Republican manager of the resolution, is recognized for 10 minutes.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I yield 10 minutes to the Senator from Pennsylvania, Mr. SANTORUM.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Pennsylvania is recognized for 10 minutes.

Mr. SANTORUM. Mr. President, I thank the Senator from Delaware. I want to say to the Senator from Delaware, those are very eloquent and appropriate and I think appropriately forceful remarks. I am in agreement with every word he said. I think you are going to see today the U.S. Senate in agreement. Everyone is standing up in support of each other and in support of the President and the people. We are here for them. We are meeting today. We are meeting for them. I think it is an important sign that this beacon of freedom is open and that the U.S. Senate, the greatest deliberative body in the world, is meeting, talking, and I hope acting today, tomorrow, and for the weeks and months to come this year.

My wife, Karen, and I, and our whole family, watched television yesterday, just in amazement, in grief, in sorrow, and in tears. We went to church and prayed. We didn't know what else to do. We were in shock. We were thinking that somehow and in some way people would survive this horrible tragedy.

It has been a very difficult time for a lot of us. It has been a horrible time for the people of New York and the people in northern Virginia.

We are committed, as you heard the President say today, to do everything we can here in Washington, DC, to help those who are struggling and to support those who are doing heroic things in Pennsylvania trying to recover what is left of the plane that crashed in Pennsylvania of course, and also in New York as well, there are incredible stories of heroism, and at the Pentagon in northern Virginia. Our sympathies and our support go out to all of those men and women and their families.
September 12, 2001 CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—SENATE 16873

It is very important for us to know, as the Senator from Delaware said, that things should not change here in America. I could not agree with him more. Things must not change with respect to our freedom and our democracy. But there are certain things that must change. I think the Senator from Delaware hit the nail on the head when he said that our actions towards terrorists must change.

What happened yesterday was not merely a hijacking of a domestic airline flight. What happened yesterday was an enemy missile loaded with explosives—11,000 gallons of jet fuel—that exploded into targets here in the United States of America. It was an act of war. It was an enemy missile that was directed at our country. We must respond accordingly to this act of war—to those who perpetrated it. We are at war with terrorists and with those nations that harbor them, that finance them, and that in any way encourage and support them. I think it is important that we say so here in the United States Senate, at some point, that this is war with the forces of evil that attacked this country.

This is not—and I can’t stress this more strongly—a time merely to bring people to justice. It is a time to wage war and win a war against those who committed this act, and against those who harbor those who committed this act, and against those who support and encourage those who committed this act.

In the U.S. Senate, there are things we can do, sensible things we can do, to support our President and to support the American people.

First, as I mentioned before, we can support the American people right now with the resources they need to try to find survivors and repair the damage that was caused in this country.

Second, we need to bring up the Defense appropriation bill and the Defense appropriations bill right now. We need to make sure we have the necessary tools in place to be able to defend our country. We need to look at the intelligence and counterintelligence of this country and determine soon whether we should enhance that capability, which is obviously insufficient. We here in the United States Senate must do something about it. We must do something about the intelligence and counterintelligence of this country. We need to have more domestic security. We need domestic energy security.

These are the kinds of things I hope we in the Senate can join together to pass measures that are important and to prepare ourselves for the war ahead. This is a time for us to begin to put the building blocks in place so we can engage in a war against those who attacked this country. I am hopeful, in fact I am confident, that we can do so in a bipartisan way, in a way that will lend great honor and credibility to this great institution.

Thank you, Mr. President.

Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, I yield to the Senator from Connecticut.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Connecticut is recognized for 10 minutes.

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, I thank the chairman.

I want to begin by thanking my colleague from Delaware for not only his managing this resolution but also for his eloquent remarks a few moments ago.

I also commend the distinguished majority leader, Senator DASCHLE, and the distinguished minority leader, Senator LOTT, and their respective leaderships, the way they conducted business in this body yesterday. I also commend the President of the United States for his very eloquent remarks last evening to the Nation.

I commend Don Rumsfeld, Secretary of Defense for his efforts yesterday and for staying on the job while the Pentagon was burning. I know there were probably those on his staff and elsewhere who urged him to leave. I presume they made a good case for it. But I admire the fact that Don Rumsfeld stayed on the job yesterday with the men and women who were there—the injured, those who lost their lives, not to mention those who are fighting the blaze and trying to bring that incredible scene under control.

It has been a very sad time. It has been said by others here this morning, and it will be said repeatedly this afternoon. There are no words I can utter in these next few moments that will serve to lessen the sense of loss that all of us feel as Americans. There is a sense of poignancy to all of this, obviously, if you are from New York. If you had a loved one who worked at the Pentagon, there is a special dimension. And, if you had a loved one on one of the four aircraft yesterday that left Newark, Boston, Los Angeles, or Dulles, you have been hurt today. Truly, there is a human dimension to this that we don’t have the ability to understand yet.

It is a God-given blessing during moments such as this that human beings are incapable of fully understanding and appreciating the depth of loss immediately. It will take days—or longer.

Oftentimes what we see with families when a person very close to them is lost, is that in the immediate hours and days after that loss, they function because they have to in order to manage affairs. But the true impact of loss is sometimes not felt for days and weeks afterwards. I think our country is in that state this very day.

So, I want to take a few minutes to talk about that human dimension. There will be plenty of time for us to debate bills on the floor of the Senate and to discuss the priorities we ought to have and who should be held responsible. But the human impact is all of this is something I haven’t been able to get my hands around in these last 24 hours. I just can’t imagine what it must be like to be one of the victims of these terrorist acts, or to know that there is a loved one trapped somewhere in those buildings in lower Manhattan, or to be the family of a service man or woman who knows that just a few blocks from here their husband, wife, father, sibling, child, or neighbor is lying in the rubble of the Pentagon, or to be the family of one of the passengers on the planes hijacked yesterday. I can’t begin to imagine.

I want to start by telling those families that every one of us here in Congress, and every one of us here in this Congress, and every one of us here in America, would to God we could express our sense of grief for you. In the days and weeks to come we will try to do that in ways that are meaningful.

I would also like to mention the firefighters and police, and the public servants who were told last evening that we don’t know what the numbers of emergency personnel lost are. There may be several hundreds who lost their lives as they raced into those 110-storey buildings while trying to bring relief to others only to lose their lives in the collapse of those buildings.

Again, for those of you who watched the tragedy last year in Wooster, MA, or other places where firemen and emergency services people have given their lives, I suppose in one sense it is not a surprise that the dedication that we saw yesterday is seen so frequently around the country, but particularly because of the magnitude of the events yesterday, we are struck by it. And as Senator BIDEN, Senator SCHUMER, Senator CLINTON, and Senator WARNER mentioned in their very fine remarks this morning, the people who donated blood and who are offering services deserve our respect and admiration. So I express my gratitude to all of them.

We need to yesterday’s events, and we will. I have no doubt of this. However, building the kind of international cooperation necessary to do so is awfully difficult. Indeed, if there is a slight glimmer of a sliver lining to this tragedy, it may be in the responses our President received yesterday from almost every civilized head of state around the globe—responses of support. Maybe in all of this tragedy and rubble, the possibility that the kind of response the world has been seeking for years may emerge like a phoenix from these ashes, and we will be able to forge the kinds of relationships that allow us to stamp out this cancer that has been with us for far too many years in Beirut, in the Marine barracks in Saudi Arabia, and other places. I saw the list of victims of past terrorist attacks the other day. It is many pages long—not of the magnitude we saw yesterday, but nonetheless, cumulatively hundreds and thousands of their lives at the hands of fanatics who believe the loss of innocent life is a justifiable means to achieve their extreme ends.

So maybe—just maybe—if there is any solace we can offer to the families of the people who have lost their lives, out of this we will begin to deal effectively with the scourge of terrorism. I hope that is the case. I hope the President will work on that, and I know we here in Congress will. It will be important that in the context of the events, we are not in a rush to respond to this—and there is a passion we all feel that makes one want to strike out and grab somebody and make them pay for what they did that we temper our anger. I hope we have enough sense now to know that when we strike, it needs to be right because the coalition that we need to build to respond to this requires that we act smartly, intelligently, and correctly. If we don’t, we run the risk of fracturing the very kind of coalition that will be necessary.

These terrorists had a remarkable success yesterday. They utilized American planes and American fuel to use as their bombs. That they went into three major airports, 15 or 20 people, I am told, in teams of 3 or 5, and commandeered those buildings for major sites, economically and militarily, and apparently had a target of a third, politically, is a stunning, stunning set of circumstances. We need to get some answers. Today may not be the day to get them, but I know my colleagues and millions of Americans have questions on their minds. People will have to answer how this could occur in the country.

Yet, I come back to the question of the human element of all of this, and the human element also requires that I speak to those who are Muslims in our country. There has been a lot of chatter over the last 24 hours of who is responsible here—Islamic fundamentalists, Jews, Muslims, do I know if that is right or wrong. I am not privy to that information. But I urge those who want to provide answers to this question to be careful. You only had to listen to the words of DAN INOUYE to understand why we should not vilify all members of an ethnic group for the sins of a few individuals. You only need to walk a block away from here to a monument commemorating the imprisonment of thousands of people of Japanese descent 60 years ago. We have wonderful citizens here who are Muslims and practice the Islamic faith. I fear that sometimes in our momentary passions we can indict some wonderful Americans, wonderful people, innocent children in this country who were raised in a very proud and serious religious faith. So we need to be cautious about the rhetoric we use and the fingers we point before we have the facts before us.

Lastly, I say this. I see my friend and colleague from Texas on the floor. On Monday afternoon about 4 o’clock I got a call from a former colleague of ours, Bob Kerrey. He called me from a delivery room in New York to tell me that an hour and a half earlier he became the proud father of a young man named Henry. My colleague from Texas and her wonderful husband have taken on a magnificent responsibility—recently adopting the great love of their lives, Bailey Hutchison. I am going to leave here momentarily and go with my wife to Arlington to see her doctor. We are expecting a new arrival. I can’t tell you how proud I am of that blessed event.

I want to end on this note and say to young Henry and to Bailey and to my young men and women who are going to build a world for you that is deserving of the kind of place you ought to have. Previous generations did it for us. Certainly, those of our colleagues who served in World War II, Vietnam, to young America, the United States of America is a land of peace and democracy. Our responsibility is no less to future generations. The words “an act of war” have been used. I agree with that. We need to respond to this and to build the kind of society to sustain our democratic values, which we have embraced for more than 200 years. Everything is in question now, everything is in question. This administration has said that it was terrorism. We shut down every airport and grounded every plane in America. I believe that was exactly the right thing to do and it was only the first response.

Today, the FAA issued an order banning all knives from air crafts brought on by passengers or in carry-on luggage. It used to be you could take a knife on an airplane that was shorter than 4 inches, like the kind many people carry on keyrings. That will no longer be allowed. I am glad the FAA took that immediate action because we know from early reports that those were the weapons used by these terrorists. The FAA has also ended curbside baggage checks. Every time we reflect upon this tragedy, this will of course be a focus of it. Unfortunately, this program will have U.S. law enforcement personnel randomly assigned to flights to help ensure our
September 12, 2001

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—SENATE

September 12, 2001

It is our constitutional obligation, but it is also our personal determination.

As we, the Members of Congress, stood on the Capitol steps last night, I was aware of how deeply we each of us were touched by the loss and the need for retirement purposes of military personnel who have died in the line of duty such as the many victims at the Pentagon yesterday.

I think their surviving spouse should receive survivors retirement benefits commensurate with the number of years they have served, which is not presently the law. Senator WARNER is going to push that bill through the Armed Services Committee because of his great leadership position and because his constituents are so affected.

Many people are in dire straits right now, not knowing what their future is because of the number of people we lost yesterday serving our country in the Pentagon. I am going to see some states coming forward in the next few days and weeks and months to try to address the many issues that are now occurring because of yesterday’s tragedy.

Today, however, is more of a solemn moment. It is a moment of horror, a moment of grief, a moment of tragedy, and a moment for reflection. It is a moment which really can’t be described, but we all understand because we feel. It was once said that “democracy is based upon the conviction that there are extraordinary possibilities in ordinary people.” We saw that yesterday—for evil and for good.

Yesterday’s attack stunned our Nation, shocked a people, and destroyed lives and buildings. The blasts and collapse were felt across our Nation, both physically and emotionally. But they did not destroy our spirit, they did not destroy our faith, and they will never destroy our belief in freedom.

Yesterday’s attack witnessed images of horror and unspeakable evil, but also of the American spirit, as individuals and a nation rose to the occasion, met the crisis head on, came together to rescue fellow citizens, and also to show the crisis head on, came together to rescue fellow citizens, and also to show to the world.

I thank the Chair and yield back my time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Delaware.

Mr. BIDEN. Madam President, I yield to Senator DORGAN, who is next on our list.

Mr. DORGAN. Madam President, I listened to my colleague from Texas and I share her sentiments. There are unique moments in history, that are too deeply etched in our memory to ever be erased. We are Americans stand together with a relentless determination to combat the forces of evil, and to reaffirm that our freedom is secure. This, regrettably, is one of those moments.

Cowards struck innocent men, women, and children yesterday, but really all of America was their target. It was clearly an act of war, committed by madmen, directed against our country.

Our hearts are broken, but our spirit is not. And the world should know that we will not give in to terror.

Last evening, when I drove home from the Capitol at about 11 in the evening, clouds of black and gray smoke billowed from the Pentagon where one of those acts of terrorism occurred.

This morning, when I came back to the Capitol at about 7 a.m., smoke still rose from the ashes of the Pentagon.

Only F-16s and F-15s flew over our country’s capital and in the airspace above New York City.

All of America is affected by this deed in a very dramatic way—from young folks to old folks.

Last evening, when I arrived home at about 11 o’clock, my 14-year-old son heard the door close, got out of bed, and came up to me and said: Dad, what happened? Who did this?

I told my son—and all of us in Congress will tell America—that we will search for, find, and punish those responsible for these acts of terrorism. That is our pledge.

We must now wage war on terrorism. And we must ask all the other countries in the world who believe in freedom as we do to join us in this effort to eradicate terrorism.

Terrorist camps cannot be allowed to continue to train terrorists. Countries that harbor terrorist camps must, as the President said, pay a price for harboring them. We must re dedicate ourselves to those tasks.

Yesterday, I thought about the carnage that has occurred in our country, and the thousands of people who have unluckily lost their lives because of these acts of terrorism. It reminded me again of why our country has such an enormous burden of responsibility to lead the world, and especially why we need to lead the world in combating the proliferation of weapons of mass destruction, in cutting the number of nuclear weapons, and in stopping the spread of nuclear weapons.

Yesterday it was a commercial airliner full of jet fuel. In the future it could be a vial of deadly biological agents that can kill a million people. Or it could be a suitcase nuclear device in the trunk of a rusty car parked on a dock in one of America’s largest cities.

If ever we must understand our world, it is now.

Over a century ago, after the carnage of the Battle of Gettysburg, Abraham Lincoln said:

Today, in this time and in this place, we should let those words from nearly 140 years ago again inspire our nation’s steeled resolve that those who died yesterday did not die in vain.

America’s response to the deadly crime against the United States District Court in Virginia will be dedicated to destroying the ability of terrorists to wage this kind of war, and giving those who live a new birth of freedom from the fear and the impact of terrorist acts.

Today the U.S. Congress says to those in Virginia—and to those in every American city or town, who have lost their lives, those who loved them, their relatives, their friends—you are not alone. Our country grieves with you. And our country reaches out to you. You are not alone.

Final words of Madam President, Shakespeare wrote:

Grief hath changed me since you saw me last.

We are all changed. Yesterday changed all of us. Our world has changed since yesterday. We all carry the heavy burden of grief, and we all carry the responsibility today to ensure that our response is swift, severe, and just. And we all carry the opportunity today to hold high the torch of freedom, and to say to the world: Yes, America’s heart is broken, but America’s spirit will not bend.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from North Carolina.

Mr. HELMS. Madam President, I yield to Senator SPECTER and will reclaim my 10 minutes after him.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Pennsylvania.

Mr. SPECTER. Madam President, I thank my distinguished colleague from North Carolina for yielding.

Madam President, today’s resolution speaks in the strongest terms condemning yesterday’s cowardly act of terrorism. Tomorrow, we must do more to bring the perpetrators to justice and take steps to see to it that such terrorism never occurs again.

While there have been many public comments pointing to the so-called signature of Osama (aka Usama”) bin Laden as yesterday’s terrorist attack, we cannot, consistent with our values, make any judgments until we know more. But what we do know is that Osama bin Laden has been at war with the United States since 1989. We know that in indictments returned by the United States District Court for the Southern District of New York in 1998, as referenced in the Terrorist Prosecution Act of 1996, we convicted them, and we punished them.

Following a record of premeditated and deliberate attacks, we cannot, consistent with our concern about that. Similarly, what bin Laden did in Mogadishu in 1993 and in the Embassies in Nairobi and Dar es Salam in 1998 were acts of war. At this time, while the Congress should never act precipitously, I do suggest that consideration be given to a declaration of war against the political entity which harbors and has given aid and assistance to bin Laden’s terrorist organization and all his co-conspirators, based on the indictments which already have been handed down, to which I have referred.

I do not propose to decide this issue today, but I do think it is important that we not rush to judgment today, but I do think it is important that we not rush to judgment, we should begin.

That is why I think with these outstanding indictments, which have been handed down and the statement of our extraterritorial jurisdiction in the Terrorist Prosecution Act of 1996, we must act. Where we have faced the extraordinary wounds from yesterday, and they may not be a continuation of bin Laden’s past acts—time will tell—but in accordance with our values on the presumption of innocence and not rushing to judgment, we will await further developments as we find out what the facts are and who the perpetrators were yesterday, even though they do bear the so-called signatures of bin Laden. But for the acts in 1993 in Mogadishu, for the attacks in 1998 on our Embassies in Tanzania and Nairobi, Kenya, there is no doubt that we have the authority to act.

That is why I think with these outstanding indictments, which have pinpointed the evidence as to Osama bin Laden, that consideration should be given to responding to acts of war against the United States with the appropriate counterattack, to see to it that we take into custody bin Laden, bring him to the United States for trial, for conviction, and the potential of our nation in accordance with the death penalty which is provided by U.S. law.

I again thank my colleague from North Carolina. I thank the Chair and yield the floor.
EXHIBIT I

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT, Southern District of New York, 98 Cr.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA v. USAMA BIN LADEN, a/k/a "Usama bin-Muhammad bin-Ladên," a/k/a "Shaikh Usamah bin-Ladên," a/k/a "Mujahid Shaykh," a/k/a "Abu Abdallah," a/k/a "Jalal Shayeek," a/k/a "Al Qaqa," a/k/a "the Director;" MUHAMMAD ATIF, a/k/a "Abu Hafs," a/k/a "Abu Hafs el Masry," a/k/a "Abu Hafs el Masry el Khair;" M. ABDULLAH, a/k/a "Sheikh Tayyib Abdallah;" WADIL AL HAGE, a/k/a "Abdus Sallam," a/k/a "Abd al Sallam," a/k/a "Wadi el Ghareib," a/k/a "Wadi el Hage;" FAZUL ABDULLAH, a/k/a "Abdus Salam," a/k/a "Abd al Salam;" ABDUL NAJJAR, a/k/a "Abu Hafs el Masry el Khabib;" M. FALAH, a/k/a "Abu Hafs el Masry," a/k/a "Abdus Sabbur," a/k/a "Abd al Sabbur," a/k/a "Mohamed Sadeek Odeh;" FALAH, a/k/a "Sheikh Usamah bin-Ladên," a/k/a "Shaykh Usamah bin-Ladên;" FAZUL ABDULLAH MOHAMMED, a/k/a "Harun Fazhi;" FAZUL ABDULLAH MOHAMMED, a/k/a "Abdus Salam;" HAJI FALAH, a/k/a "Abdus Sabbur," a/k/a "Mujahid Shaykh," a/k/a "Al Qaqa," a/k/a "Al Qaqa;" TAYSIR, a/k/a "Sheriff Tayyib Abdallah;" FAZUL ABDULLAH, a/k/a "Abdus Salam;" FAZUL ABDULLAH MOHAMMED, a/k/a "Harun Fazhi;" FAZUL ABDULLAH, a/k/a "Fazhi;" FAZUL ABDULLAH MOHAMMED, a/k/a "Khalid Salam;" FAZUL ABDULLAH MOHAMMED, a/k/a "Moath;" "Abdul Jabbar Ali Abdel-Latif;" DEFENDANTS.

COUNT ONE: CONSPIRACY TO ATTACK DEFENSE UTILITIES OF THE UNITED STATES

1. At all relevant times from in or about 1989 until the date of the filing of this Indictment, the defendants, together with other persons known and unknown, made efforts to obtain the components of nuclear weapons, and to effect the illegal objects thereof, the United States, and in particular, the United Nations' intervention in Somalia; and
2. At various times from at least as early as 1993, USAMA BIN LADEN and others known and unknown, made efforts to obtain the nuclear weapons.

COUNT TWO THROUGH TWO HUNDRED TWENTY

1. At all relevant times from in or about 1989 until the date of the filing of this Indictment, an international terrorist organization, Usama bin Laden, a/k/a "Usama bin-Muhammad bin-Ladên," a/k/a "Shaikh Usamah bin-Ladên," a/k/a "Muhammad Atif," a/k/a "Abu Hafs," a/k/a "Abu Hafs el Masry," a/k/a "Abdus Salam;" and its affiliated groups; the Bin Laden Personal and Real Estate Trust; the Al-kifah Refugee Center in Brooklyn; and persons employed by the United Nations, including the United Nations' intervention in Somalia, should be attacked;
2. The Bin Laden Personal and Real Estate Trust, the Al-kifah Refugee Center in Brooklyn; and persons employed by the United Nations, including the United Nations' intervention in Somalia, should be attacked;
3. The defendants, together with other persons known and unknown, made efforts to kill Americans and to attack defense utilities of the United States, to wit, the defendants, to-
The Grand Jury further charges:
13. The allegations contained in paragraphs 1 through 7 are repeated herein.
14. On or about August 7, 1998, in Dar es Salaam, Tanzania, and outside the jurisdiction of any particular state or district, Usama bin Laden, a/k/a “Usama bin-Muhammad bin-Ladin,” a/k/a “Usama bin-Ladin,” a/k/a “Abu Abdullah,” a/k/a “Mujahid Shaykh,” a/k/a “Hajj,” a/k/a “al Qaqa,” a/k/a “the Director”; Muhammad Atif, a/k/a “Abu Hafs,” a/k/a “Abu Hafs el Masry,” a/k/a “Fazhi Khan”; Mohamed Sadeek Odeh, a/k/a “Abu Moath,” a/k/a “Marwan,” a/k/a “Hydar”; and Mustofa Rasheed Daoud al-Owhali, a/k/a “Khalid Salim Saleh bin Rashid,” a/k/a “Moath,” a/k/a “Abdul Jabbar Ali Abdel-Latif,” defendants, at least one of whom was first brought to and arrested in the Southern District of New York, and others known and unknown, unlawfully, willfully, and knowingly did kill persons, listed below during the course of an attack on a federal facility involving the use of a dangerous weapon, to wit, the defendaants and a destructive device that damaged and destroyed the United States Embassy in Nairobi, Kenya, and as a result of such conduct directly and proximately caused the deaths of at least 11 persons, including Tanzanian citizens.

16. On or about August 7, 1998, in Nairobi, Kenya, and outside the jurisdiction of any particular state or district, Usama bin Laden, a/k/a “Usama bin-Muhammad bin-Ladin,” a/k/a “Shaykh Usama bin-Ladin,” a/k/a “Abu Abdullah,” a/k/a “Mujahid Shaykh,” a/k/a “Hajj,” a/k/a “al Qaqa,” a/k/a “the Director”; Muhammad Atif, a/k/a “Abu Hafs,” a/k/a “Abu Hafs el Masry,” a/k/a “Fazhi Khan”; Mohamed Sadeek Odeh, a/k/a “Abu Moath,” a/k/a “Marwan,” a/k/a “Hydar”; and Mustofa Rasheed Daoud al-Owhali, a/k/a “Khalid Salim Saleh bin Rashid,” a/k/a “Moath,” a/k/a “Abdul Jabbar Ali Abdel-Latif,” defendants, at least one of whom was first brought to and arrested in the Southern District of New York, and others known and unknown, unlawfully, willfully, and knowingly did kill persons, listed below during the course of an attack on a federal facility involving the use of a dangerous weapon, to wit, the defendaants and a destructive device that damaged and destroyed the United States Embassy in Dar es Salaam, Tanzania, and as a result of such conduct directly and proximately caused the deaths of at least 11 persons, including Tanzanian citizens.

THEREFORE, if you find the defendants guilty of any of the offenses charged, you are hereby directed to return a verdict as to each count. If you find the defendants not guilty of any of the offenses charged, you are hereby directed to return a verdict of not guilty as to each count.

COUNTS FOUR THROUGH TWO HUNDRED SIXTEEN: MURDERS IN NAIROBI, KENYA

The Grand Jury further charges:
15. The allegations contained in paragraphs 1 through 7 are repeated herein.
16. On or about August 7, 1998, in Nairobi, Kenya, and outside the jurisdiction of any particular state or district, Usama bin Laden, a/k/a “Usama bin-Muhammad bin-Ladin,” a/k/a “Shaykh Usama bin-Ladin,” a/k/a “Abu Abdullah,” a/k/a “Mujahid Shaykh,” a/k/a “Hajj,” a/k/a “al Qaqa,” a/k/a “the Director”; Muhammad Atif, a/k/a “Abu Hafs,” a/k/a “Abu Hafs el Masry,” a/k/a “Fazhi Khan”; Mohamed Sadeek Odeh, a/k/a “Abu Moath,” a/k/a “Marwan,” a/k/a “Hydar”; and Mustofa Rasheed Daoud al-Owhali, a/k/a “Khalid Salim Saleh bin Rashid,” a/k/a “Moath,” a/k/a “Abdul Jabbar Ali Abdel-Latif,” defendants, at least one of whom was first brought to and arrested in the Southern District of New York, and others known and unknown, unlawfully, willfully, and knowingly did kill persons, listed below during the course of an attack on a federal facility involving the use of a dangerous weapon, to wit, the defendaants and a destructive device that damaged and destroyed the United States Embassy in Nairobi, Kenya, and as a result of such conduct directly and proximately caused the deaths of
CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—SENATE

September 12, 2001

COUNTS TWO HUNDRED SEVENTY THROUGH TWO HUNDRED TWENTY SEVEN: MURDERS IN DAR ES SALAAM, TANZANIA

17. The allegations contained in paragraphs 1 through 7 are repeated herein.

18. On or about August 7, 1998, in Dar es Salaam, Tanzania, and outside the jurisdiction of any particular state or district, Usama bin Laden, a/k/a “Usamah bin-Muhammad bin-Ladin,” a/k/a “Shaykh Usamah bin-Ladin,” a/k/a “Abu Abdullah,” a/k/a “Mujahid Shaykh,” a/k/a “Haji,” a/k/a “al Qa’qa,” a/k/a “the Director”; Muhammad Atef, a/k/a “Abu Haif,” a/k/a “Abu Haif al Masry,” a/k/a “Abu Haif el Masry el Khattab,” a/k/a “Taysir,” a/k/a “Sheik Taysir Abdulrahman”; Fazul Abdullah Mohammed, a/k/a “Harun Fazhi,” a/k/a “Fazhi Abdullah,” a/k/a “Fazhi Khan”; Mohamed Sadeek Odeh, a/k/a “Abu Moath,” a/k/a “Noureddine,” a/k/a “Marwan,” a/k/a “Hydar”; and Mohamed Rashed Daoud al-Owhali, a/k/a “Khalid Salim Salah Bin-Bashard,” a/k/a “Abdul Jabbar Ali Abdel-Latif,” defendants, at least one of whom was first brought to and arrested in the Southern District of New York, and others known and unknown, unlawfully, willfully, and knowingly, did unlawfully, willfully, and knowingly, did

* * *

COUNCIL: FALSE STATEMENTS

38. On or about August 20, 1998, in Dallas, Texas, and Arlington, Texas, the defendant Wadid el Hage, a/k/a “Abdu Sabbur,” a/k/a “Abd al Sabbar,” a/k/a “Abd al Sabbar,” a/k/a “Wad-el-Hage,” a/k/a “Wa’da Norman,” in a matter within the jurisdiction of the executive branch of the government, to wit, a criminal investigation based in the Southern District of New York, unlawfully, wilfully and knowingly, did make materially false statements and representations, to wit, the defendant falsely stated to a Special Agent of the Federal Bureau of Investigation that he did not know Mohamed Sadeek Odeh and did not recognize his photograph when in truth and fact el Hage knew that.

COUNT 235: FALSE STATEMENTS

(The Title 18, United States Code, Sections 993(c) and 2.)

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Vermont.

Mr. LEAHY. Madam President, I applaud the Senators from Delaware and the others who led the debate on this resolution and, of course, our leaders, Senator DASCHLE and Senator LOTT, for bringing this resolution before the Senate.

Most Senators will speak on the floor about yesterday’s tragedy. It perhaps is impossible for the men and women of this body to say all the things that can be said and should be said. The 100 of us, though, are given the duty and the honor to speak for over 260 million Americans. I know in my case my wife Marcella and I, like all Vermonters, pray for the victims of these heinous acts. We also pray for their loved ones who remain behind.

The heart of every American aches for those who died or have disappeared. I have heard from my friends and members of my staff of the losses they have suffered of family and friends. I think of my own children, each one of whom were trying to call Washington yesterday when all the phones were jammed, to find out where their mother and I were. You can replicate that for hundreds of thousands of people around the country.

We have tried to answer those calls. We have tried to get the answers for them and so often the answers are terrible ones.

I listened to the news a little after 5 this morning. I heard the name of a friend of mine who went into the World Trade building to help with the rescue and the building came down—and he died with hundreds of New York firefighters, police and F.M.S personnel.

I have said for so many years that in democracy, our community, our humanity—our democracy. Trial by fire can refine us or it can coarsen us. If we hold to our ideals, then it strengthens us. Our people, our values, our institutions are strong. President Roosevelt spoke of the arsenal of democracy. That arsenae—our ideals, our values, our freedom, our community, our humanity—sustains us and propels us forward. As much as our military weaponry these ideals are the arsenal of democracy.

I have no question about this: Americans are united. All the free world, all civilized nations, all caring people will join to-gather at this difficult time. It has meant so much to hear the calls from around the world.

Our values, our resolve, our commitment, our sense of community will serve us well. I am confident that, as a nation, we will seek and serve justice.
Our Nation, my neighbors and friends in Vermont demand no less, and thank you.

I am confident that, as a country, we will seek and serve justice.

I was proud to be in my seat rep-representing Vermont when we opened the Senate and this building today. We know that quite possibly this building crashed, but we know that this building must be opened because the peo-lies’ business is done here. No country, and no terrorist, no matter how evil, no matter how twisted, no matter how dreadful the terrorist threat, no matter what we do. Just as the brave men and women of our Armed Forces will not stop because of this dastardly attack on the Pentagon.

And, just as the people in New York City who make up the fiber of ingenuity, innovation, economics, and learning in our country. The rest of the country will pick up the torch.

Franklin Roosevelt called December 7, 1941, the day Pearl Harbor was attacked, “a date which will live in infamy.” Almost 60 years later, Americans face such another day and challenge to our democracy. Just as the people of this country became united in World War II, we must unite against the cowardice of evil and terrorism. As our leaders said this morning: We stand here not as Republicans or Democrats, we stand together.

We will be supportive of our President, our institutions and of each other because a challenge to our freedom is just as clear that now more than ever we have the cowardice of evil and terrorism. As our leaders said this morning: We stand together.

We will be supportive of our President, our institutions and of each other because a challenge to our freedom is
...
but we are a nation capable of a terrible fury, and our enemies must know that. Madam President, our enemies will know that.
I yield the floor.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from North Carolina.
Mr. HELMS. Madam President, I yield myself 10 minutes, and I ask unanimous consent that I be permitted to deliver my remarks seated at my desk.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.
Mr. HELMS. Madam President, I have counted the number of today’s U.S. Senators who were around on December 7, 1941. There are not many of us. Many present members of the Senate were not born. The Honorable Strom Thurmond was indeed around, and bless his heart. I am so pleased the able senior Senator from South Caro-ilina is still here and active.
I remember that Sunday on December 7, 1941, when we came out of church and heard the news about the bombing of Pearl Harbor. As one of the staff editors of the afternoon 6-day-a-week newspaper in Raleigh, NC, we prevailed upon the then publisher of The Raleigh Times to publish an “extra”—and it was the last “extra” newspaper published in the State of North Carolina, to my knowledge. I recall that we sold approximately 12,000, which pleased the management of the newspaper.
After the paper was put to bed, I walked up the street to the Raleigh post office and into the Navy recruiting station to volunteer. I did pretty well, but was turned down because of my hearing in my left ear. I recall my disappointment. But over in the corner was a regular Navy chief petty officer.
Mr. President, I have never met a chief petty officer of the regular Navy who didn’t talk out of one side of his mouth.
He said: “Hey, boy, come over here.”
I went.
He said: “You want to get in this man’s Navy?”
I said: “Yes, sir.”
He said: “I have some friends in BUPERS.” I did not know what BUPERS was, but I later found it was Bureau of Naval Personnel in Washington. I thought he was pulling my leg, but it turned out that he was not, because about 2 months later, I recceived a waiver; I was sworn into the Navy and went to San Diego for 2 or 3 months’ boot camp.
Which is beside the point, except to say that the recruiting station that Sunday afternoon, December 7, 1941, was filled with young men, all wanting to defend their country. A lot of them did not know where Pearl Harbor was or what Pearl Harbor was, but they came anyhow because they realized that their country had been attacked unfairly.
Mr. President, that is the reason we won the war; that was a time when the accepted and effective policy of the United States of America was to seek out and find and, when necessary, destroy the leaders of forces resorting to violent harm to the American people.
That policy was in effect, as I say, on December 7, but in the years following, some in political circles decided to subitute only a vague warning to those making a Pearl Harbor, crashing airliners loaded with innocent Americans.
Mr. President, I was encouraged to hear the President of the United States last evening and again this morning say, in effect, we are going to get them;
They are not going to get by with it.
That was the attitude in 1941 when Franklin Roosevelt—and I am the only one present in this Chamber at the mo-time who heard FDR say “this is a day that will live in infamy.”
Well, Mr. President, yesterday was another day that must live in infamy.
Not since the war of 1812 has the city of Washington been attacked by a hostile adversary. The attack on Pearl Harbor, of course, matched yesterday’s cowardly, sudden, suprising and swiftness that occurred yesterday. The losses are perhaps more enormous yesterday; in number in terms of innocent lives, than those astronomical numbers in 1941 at Pearl Harbor.
The policy I have just mentioned—of going after adversaries of the United States of America—was in effect on December 7, but somewhere along the line it began to dissipate after World War II. The mind-set in some political circles gradually was substituted for a two-fisted warning to the mean, cruel terrorists who made their threats yesterday by crashing airliners loaded with innocent Americans into public buildings in New York City and Washington.
That was the kind of terrorists who created that disaster yesterday; I hope I will live to see the day when it will once again be the unmistakable policy of the United States of America to search for and find that kind of sneaky slimy terrorist who created this morning’s headlines by crashing those airplanes and creating destruction and disaster and bloodshed and loss of lives.
Senator Kay Bailey Hutchison mentioned the young lady who called her husband from one of the planes on her cell phone. All of us had seen her many times on television and enjoyed her talent—and she will be missed. But I hope Americans will again be two-fisted, standing together.
President Bush laid down the bill of particulars, and I believe he is going to say let us get back in the game and hunt those cruel terrorists.
I intend to do my best as a United States Senator to encourage and supplement such a revival of a policy that once protected the lives and property of innocent Americans.
That policy was in effect, as I say, on December 7, 1941, was a day of infamy, and yesterday, September 11, 2001, was also a day of infamy.
We must stand together and vote together and never be deterred in our efforts to put an end to this sort of thing, wherever it happens around this world.
I yield back the remainder of my time.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Delaware.
Mr. BIDEN. Madam President, I say to my colleague from North Carolina, that I am going to have them both 10 minutes; but one of our colleagues has to go to California and one up to New Jersey because of so many folks involved in the Trade Tower. If they can split their 10 minutes, will it be all right to have them go in succession? I spoke with the Senator from Mississippi about this.
Mr. HELMS. That is fine.
Mr. BIDEN. I understand the Senator from Mississippi has a statement he wishes to make first.
Mr. COCHRAN. Madam President, I thank the Senator for yielding to me.
The resolution before the Senate should be considered by those who have planned and perpetrated the heinous attacks in New York City and Washington as more than a warning. It is a promise that will be kept.
We pledge today our whole hearted support for President Bush and his commitment to hunt down those responsible for these atrocities and to punish them in a way that is commen-surate with their horrible acts.
At the same time we are committing ourselves to provide the resources our government and our President may need as Commander in Chief to wage a war to eradicate terrorism. I am pleased the Senate is united in this resolve to help ensure that we will do all we are able to do to ensure these tragedies are never repeated.
I thank the distinguished Senator.
Mr. BIDEN. I thank the Senator from Mississippi.
Madam President, I yield 5 minutes, or slightly more if he needs it, to the Senator from New Jersey. I thank him for accommodating the Senator from California as well.
Mr. CORZINE. Madam President, I thank you for this opportunity to speak. I am awestruck by the passion I feel among all of the Senators in this Chamber.
Today, America’s people in the civilized world join hands and hearts to share our grief and our love and to steel our will. First for victims, we share our grief. We share our love with the ones who are the heroes of rescue, and we truly steel our will against the evil actors of terrorism.
In my home State of New Jersey, there are unknown numbers of families heartbroken with the horror of yesterday, and in our own lives, griefs and relarelationships affected in my own life are acutely painful. As do all of my colleagues, from the bottom of my heart I extend my deepest condolences to the families and friends of the victims and to the courageous men and women whose life’s work has been to protect us in time of need.

In this moment of grief, we must and we will stand together as families, as communities, as one Nation.

Yesterday, America came under attack in a manner none of us thought imaginable. Our freedoms and liberties were challenged by cowardly, faceless fanatics who thought nothing of killing innocent people, women and children, hard-working men and women who dedicated their lives to believing in the American promise, the American dream, the values that we all cherish in a society.

In response to those attacks and this challenge, we need to be united in purpose to move swiftly, surely, thoughtfully, in an uncompromising fashion. I know we all recoil with horror as we think of those who died in the destruction of the World Trade Center. It was a true symbol of America’s financial and economic strength, just as certainly as the Pentagon represents our military strength.

I worked for many years in that neighborhood I saw buried under the rubble yesterday. In fact, I commuted through that building for over 20 years, and I fear for the many whose paths I crossed there because of potentially unspeakable horrors.

Equally shocking, it is just as difficult to imagine hijacked airliners being taken from Newark International Airport, where I have traveled literally thousands of times. But these shocks and circumstances which are not only personal to me but to everyone cannot allow us as a nation to weaken our resolve.

I boil with anger at what has occurred and share with my country men and women the belief that we will leave no stone unturned tracking down those responsible for these acts. I, too, join in a chorus that says we must hold all accountable, including those who harbor these criminals and give them aid and comfort. They have no clean hands.

Our Nation was born of strife and the horrors of war, but we built a country with the brick and mortar of freedom and democracy. That is what we must have and protect back in the American dream.

It is our responsibility at this moment in time to stand strong on those principles. It motivates us and moves us to protect and preserve the security and freedoms. We fought too hard and, frankly, we care too much. Millions of men and women have sacrificed their lives over time to secure those freedoms. Yesterday, others joined in that sacrifice. We honor them, but we must not be deterred. Our resolve must be strengthened and moved forward in a sure and certain work of justice.

I want to make sure we do everything we can to bring those who are responsible to justice, but we must be as just as strong to make sure we rebuild and move forward in a sure and certain work of justice.

I know one aspect of that in the financial world, and I am clear in my own mind that we will not hesitate, that we will not step back and we will marshal every resource to make sure things will move forward, and they will.

As we move forward from this tragedy, we must capture and hold those responsible, but the positive is where our hearts must be. But we will never forget.

Yesterday, Lady Liberty stood in our harbor, the New York/ New Jersey Harbor, and watched unspeakable horrors unfold, but today she stands tall. And so shall we, Madam President. I thank you.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from California is recognized.

Mrs. BOXER. Madam President, I thank my dear friend, my eloquent friend, my chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, for this opportunity and for his eloquence, indeed, his vigilance on this topic. I am proud to be on his committee and to head his Subcommittee on Terrorism.

Today, I rise with pain in my heart and great emotion to offer my prayers and my condolences for the people in this country who have been directly hit by an act of war, people of my State of my birth, New York, looking at that skyline, the people who work at the Pentagon every day, who have chosen to work near the Pentagon, and the people of California who were on those planes that were hijacked and, of course, to every other individual who was directly affected, and all of us will have our stories.

I first thank the people of California for their outpouring of love and support for the people of this country. There were vigils, there were prayer services in every denomination yesterday. There was an outpouring of people giving blood.

People did not know what to do. The L.A. County Search and Rescue Team somehow got a plane at 4 a.m. They boarded on that plane and they are on the ground in Manhattan. Indeed, we are a country east coast to west, north to south. I have never seen such unity.

One of our colleagues said we remember where we were when tragedy hit this country. In my lifetime, I remember many things as perhaps Senators who are older, but I certainly remember where I was when I saw John Kennedy go down and Martin Luther King go down, the Challenger disaster, and yesterday the image of our planes, commercial American planes, four of them, going down crashing into buildings, being used as lethal weapons against our people—an image that has shaken us but has not shaken our resolve.

Once I was on a plane that was in some type of mechanical trouble. We had to make an emergency landing. For an hour we really didn’t know if we were going to make it. In that time, passengers were consoling each other and getting out their fears, attendants were reading the crash landing manuals, I called my phone, I called my family. I left a message. I thought: Did I tell them before how much they mean to me? All I could think of yesterday was about the people on those planes, every one of whom had a family. Bascially, as I understand it, they knew they were going to go down, and in many cases, as I understand, were being told if they wanted to call their families, they were crashing. The utter terror, the utter terror of this, the inhumanity of this, is unbearable, what our people went through on those planes and then those innocent people working in the Pentagon and the World Trade Center.

I am going to make a very strong statement. When we look back into history and what happened in Bosnia, people suffered genocide because of their nationality, and to the Holocaust, people suffered annihilation because of their nationality. People were killed yesterday because they were Americans. People were killed not because they were bad people—they were good people—they were killed because they were Americans.

It is time for us to say we will fight and stand up for them and their memories. We will take a stand against inhumanity that occurred on our own soil. We are resolved to honor those who did not sacrifice additional 5 minutes.

I am going to make a very strong statement. When we look back into history and what happened in Bosnia, we suffered victims, we suffered and lost. I am equal, as I understand it, they knew they were going to go down, and in many cases, as I understand, were being told if they wanted to call their families, they were going down. The utter terror, the utter terror of this, the inhumanity of this, is unbearable, what our people went through on those planes and then those innocent people working in the Pentagon and the World Trade Center.

I am going to make a very strong statement. When we look back into history and what happened in Bosnia, people suffered genocide because of their nationality, and to the Holocaust, people suffered annihilation because of their nationality. People were killed because they were Americans. People were killed not because they were bad people—they were good people—they were killed because they were Americans.

It is time for us to say we will fight and stand up for them and their memories. We will take a stand against inhumanity that occurred on our own soil. We are resolved to honor those who did not pay the ultimate sacrifice additional 5 minutes.

I am grateful for my colleagues on both sides of the aisle and with our President. We will be resolved to do everything—and do it well and do it right—to bring justice in the world.

Thank you.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Delaware.

Mr. BIDEN. Madam President, we have a long list. I ask unanimous consent that the next person on the list be Senator KERRY to speak for 5 minutes and that we extend the recess for an additional 5 minutes.

Mr. WELLSTONE. Madam President, I was interested in the order.
Mr. BIDEN. The order after that is for the vote on HOLLINGS, FEINSTEIN, DURBIN, KENNEDY, LIEBERMAN, WYDEN, and WELLS

Mr. WELLS. Thank you, Madam President.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. The quorum call be dispensed with.
The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll. The yeas and nays were ordered.
Mr. DASCHLE. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent the order for the quorum call be rescinded.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. REID. Madam President, the order now before the Senate is that when the vote is completed, we will go into recess until 3:30 today.

Prior to the recess before the noon luncheon, there were two Democrats who had spoken, so now the Republicans have the opportunity to speak twice. Two Republicans would like to do that prior to the recess beginning.
Mr. REID. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that two Republicans be allowed to speak for up to 10 minutes each prior to the recess beginning.
Mr. REID. Madam President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll. The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DASCHLE. Madam President, I ask for the yeas and nays on the resolution.

Mr. REID. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The quorum call be rescinded.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. REID. Madam President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.
The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DASCHLE. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent the order for the quorum call be dispensed with.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

TERRORIST ATTACKS AGAINST THE UNITED STATES—Continued

Mr. DASCHLE. Madam President, I ask for the yeas and nays on the resolution.

Mr. REID. Madam President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.
The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DASCHLE. Madam President, I ask for the yeas and nays on the resolution.

Mr. REID. Madam President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.
The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DASCHLE. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent the order for the quorum call be rescinded.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. REID. Madam President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.
The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DASCHLE. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent the order for the quorum call be rescinded.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. REID. Madam President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.
The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DASCHLE. Madam President, I ask for the yeas and nays on the resolution.

Mr. REID. Madam President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.
The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DASCHLE. Madam President, I ask for the yeas and nays on the resolution.

Mr. REID. Madam President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.
The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DASCHLE. Madam President, I ask for the yeas and nays on the resolution.

Mr. REID. Madam President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.
The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DASCHLE. Madam President, I ask for the yeas and nays on the resolution.

Mr. REID. Madam President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.
The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DASCHLE. Madam President, I ask for the yeas and nays on the resolution.

Mr. REID. Madam President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.
The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DASCHLE. Madam President, I ask for the yeas and nays on the resolution.

Mr. REID. Madam President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.
The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DASCHLE. Madam President, I ask for the yeas and nays on the resolution.

Mr. REID. Madam President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.
The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DASCHLE. Madam President, I ask for the yeas and nays on the resolution.

Mr. REID. Madam President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.
The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DASCHLE. Madam President, I ask for the yeas and nays on the resolution.

Mr. REID. Madam President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.
The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DASCHLE. Madam President, I ask for the yeas and nays on the resolution.

Mr. REID. Madam President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.
The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DASCHLE. Madam President, I ask for the yeas and nays on the resolution.

Mr. REID. Madam President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.
The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DASCHLE. Madam President, I ask for the yeas and nays on the resolution.

Mr. REID. Madam President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.
The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.
September 12, 2001

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—SENATE 16883

Mr. THOMPSON. I thank the leader.

Mr. THOMPSON. Madam President, was it the intention to recess immediately or will there be an opportunity to make a short statement with regard to yesterday’s matters? May I ask the leader?

Mr. DASCHLE. Madam President, if I may respond, under the previous unanimous consent request, two of our Republican colleagues had sought recognition and we had locked in time for those two speakers prior to the time we recessed. That will still be the order.

Mr. THOMPSON. I thank the leader.

Mr. DASCHLE. Madam President, we meet here today to express our outrage even though words cannot express the sorrow and anger that fills our hearts. But we must express these feelings—on behalf of the family and friends of thousands of innocent victims, many whose identities we do not yet know—and on behalf of our entire nation.

Our young people must wonder why the United States who they are taught is the beacon of hope and liberty for the world—why we of all countries—should be the world’s main target of such savagery.

I suggest it is because those teachings to our young people are true. It is because our history, and the principles on which our country was founded go against the trend of thousands of years of human history. Thousands of years of “might makes right,” of rulers and dictatorships of all shapes and forms, of the political attack versus a cyber attack.

We have shown the world that it doesn’t have to be that way. And today’s tyrants and would-be tyrants cannot afford to let that example stand.

But stand it will. If this giant, America, has been sleeping as some say, it has been awakened once again and will not rest until an example is made of those who would murder our innocent citizens and tear at the very fabric of our nation. Our nation’s responsibility for keeping peace in the world is the threat it must pose to those who would upset that peace. Therefore, we must act as a deterrent to outrageous activity when our interests are involved.

And America’s response in this matter should set a lasting example of what happens to those who unleash bloody attacks especially on our own soil.

The time for carefully measured pinprick responses to terrorists activities has passed.

But we in this body and in the House do not have the luxury of simply expressing our outrage demanding retribution. We, along with the President, set policy and we must quickly reconcile ourselves to some of things that we must do.

Since our victory in the cold war, we have become somewhat complacent in the notion that the most significant danger to our nation has passed. We see it in our military budget and we hear it in our rhetoric. We see it in our debates over which threat to our country is most probable even though yesterday’s events should remind us once again how faulty such predictions can be. We attempt to decide with precision what the chances are of a missile attack by a rogue nation or by terrorists versus a suitcase bomb versus a biological attack versus a cyber attack.

Surely, we must now realize that, as the world’s number one target, we must protect our citizens from all of these possibilities. While protection can never be complete, who is going to decide which window of vulnerability we choose to allow to remain open? The old Soviet threat has been replaced by new ones that are in many ways more dangerous and more insidious. We have been warned about this repeatedly—by the Hart-Rudman Commission, by the Bremer Commission, and by experts in numerous committee hearings. Surely, now we will listen. Surely now we will resist the temptation to continue to squeeze out more “peace dividends” from the cold war which place our defense requirements in a secondary position to our domestic wish list.

And surely, we will reanalyze the wisdom of America contributing to the proliferation of militarily useful technology simply because we want the sales. It is my belief that this is what we did as late as last week with the passage of the Export Administration Act.

If we place short term considerations, our desire for profit, or our desire to maintain record high surpluses above our national security, we will become much more vulnerable to the potential of experiencing other days like yesterday.

Historians tell us of another democracy which, after major military successes pulled itself inward, and failed to react to provocations in hopes of maintaining peace—a nation of leaders who followed the popular demand for more butter and fewer guns and who felt that if worse came to worse technology could bail them out and that treaties with dictators would substitute for defenses.

That country was England after World War I and those policies contributed to causing the biggest war in the history of the world. We must not make a similar mistake.

We cannot alter the past. But we can affect the future. I sincerely urge that we keep these things in mind as we consider our appropriations bills and especially as we consider what monies are necessary to keep this country safe. It is not only the right and necessary thing to do. It is the real tribute we can pay to our citizens who have so recently paid such a dear price simply for being Americans.

Mr. DESCHLER. Madam President, as some of my colleagues here today and so many Americans across our country, I rise to express great sorrow, and send our prayers to those who lost loved ones and who have been injured. Unfortunately, in my own community right next door, the copilot of the American Airlines Flight II, Tom McGuinness, came from Portsmouth and leaves behind a 14-year-old son and a 16-year-old daughter. One of the fire chiefs who went into the building to save lives, Jack Fanning, testified before our committee on the issue of terrorism just a few weeks ago. This touches all of us in extraordinarily personal ways, and it touches our Nation dramatically.

We wish to also congratulate and express great appreciation to those people who are risking their lives to rescue the injured and the harmed—firefighters, policemen, the citizenry who are stepping forward during this time of crisis.

The joint resolution (S.J. Res. 22) was passed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The majority leader.

Mr. DASCHLE. For the information of all Senators, this will be the only vote cast today. We will stand in recess until 3:30 this afternoon to accommodate the briefing that begins—now at 2:30, not 2 o’clock, in room 407.

Mr. DASCHLE. Madam President, was it the intention to recess immediately or will there be an opportunity to make a short statement with regard to yesterday’s matters? May I ask the leader?

Mr. DASCHLE. Madam President, if I may respond, under the previous unanimous consent request, two of our Republican colleagues had sought recognition and we had locked in time for those two speakers prior to the time we recessed. That will still be the order.

Mr. THOMPSON. I thank the leader.

Mr. DASCHLE. Madam President, we meet here today to express our outrage even though words cannot express the sorrow and anger that fills our hearts. But we must express these feelings—on behalf of the family and friends of thousands of innocent victims, many whose identities we do not yet know—and on behalf of our entire nation.

Our young people must wonder why the United States who they are taught is the beacon of hope and liberty for the world—why we of all countries—should be the world’s main target of such savagery.

I suggest it is because those teachings to our young people are true. It is because our history, and the principles on which our country was founded go against the trend of thousands of years of human history. Thousands of years of “might makes right,” of rulers and dictatorships of all shapes and forms, of the political attack versus a cyber attack.

We have shown the world that it doesn’t have to be that way. And today’s tyrants and would-be tyrants cannot afford to let that example stand.

But stand it will. If this giant, America, has been sleeping as some say, it has been awakened once again and will not rest until an example is made of those who would murder our innocent citizens and tear at the very fabric of our nation. Our nation’s responsibility for keeping peace in the world is the threat it must pose to those who would upset that peace. Therefore, we must act as a deterrent to outrageous activity when our interests are involved.

And America’s response in this matter should set a lasting example of what happens to those who unleash bloody attacks especially on our own soil.

The time for carefully measured pinprick responses to terrorists activities has passed.

But we in this body and in the House do not have the luxury of simply expressing our outrage demanding retribution. We, along with the President, set policy and we must quickly reconcile ourselves to some of things that we must do.

Since our victory in the cold war, we have become somewhat complacent in the notion that the most significant danger to our nation has passed. We see it in our military budget and we hear it in our rhetoric. We see it in our debates over which threat to our country is most probable even though yesterday’s events should remind us once again how faulty such predictions can be. We attempt to decide with precision what the chances are of a missile attack by a rogue nation or by terrorists versus a suitcase bomb versus a biological attack versus a cyber attack.

Surely, we must now realize that, as the world’s number one target, we must protect our citizens from all of these possibilities. While protection can never be complete, who is going to decide which window of vulnerability we choose to allow to remain open? The old Soviet threat has been replaced by new ones that are in many ways more dangerous and more insidious. We have been warned about this repeatedly—by the Hart-Rudman Commission, by the Bremer Commission, and by experts in numerous committee hearings. Surely, now we will listen. Surely now we will resist the temptation to continue to squeeze out more “peace dividends” from the cold war which place our defense requirements in a secondary position to our domestic wish list.

And surely, we will reanalyze the wisdom of America contributing to the proliferation of militarily useful technology simply because we want the sales. It is my belief that this is what we did as late as last week with the passage of the Export Administration Act.

If we place short term considerations, our desire for profit, or our desire to maintain record high surpluses above our national security, we will become much more vulnerable to the potential of experiencing other days like yesterday.

Historians tell us of another democracy which, after major military successes pulled itself inward, and failed to react to provocations in hopes of maintaining peace—a nation of leaders who followed the popular demand for more butter and fewer guns and who felt that if worse came to worse technology could bail them out and that treaties with dictators would substitute for defenses.

That country was England after World War I and those policies contributed to causing the biggest war in the history of the world. We must not make a similar mistake.

We cannot alter the past. But we can affect the future. I sincerely urge that we keep these things in mind as we consider our appropriations bills and especially as we consider what monies are necessary to keep this country safe. It is not only the right and necessary thing to do. It is the real tribute we can pay to our citizens who have so recently paid such a dear price simply for being Americans.

Mr. DESCHLER. Madam President, as some of my colleagues here today and so many Americans across our country, I rise to express great sorrow, and send our prayers to those who lost loved ones and who have been injured. Unfortunately, in my own community right next door, the copilot of the American Airlines Flight II, Tom McGuinness, came from Portsmouth and leaves behind a 14-year-old son and a 16-year-old daughter. One of the fire chiefs who went into the building to save lives, Jack Fanning, testified before our committee on the issue of terrorism just a few weeks ago. This touches all of us in extraordinarily personal ways, and it touches our Nation dramatically.

We wish to also congratulate and express great appreciation to those people who are risking their lives to rescue the injured and the harmed—firefighters, policemen, the citizenry who are stepping forward during this time of crisis.
There has been significant harm to our Nation. But we are a resilient people and a resilient country, and we shall not allow these doers of evil, these people who are such human and national activity to fundamentally harm our society.

The fact that we meet today and the fact that our Nation goes forward is a reflection of our strength and our commitment to maintaining the openness and freedom that comes with the greatest democracy in the world.

We stand here united and resolve that we shall not allow this democracy to be undermined by such horrific and criminal acts.

We as a Congress have recognized for a fair amount of time that terrorism is the threat which we as a nation see as most imminent. Clearly, since the end of the cold war that has been true. We have attempted to address that threat. Obviously, in this instance we were not successful. But I think it is important that we review where we are and what we need to do as we move forward because this is not the end, regrettably, of the issue. This is simply a sign of what our times are going to bring. We need to prepare, and we need to plan the battle lines.

The issue of terrorism and the confrontation of it basically divides itself into three categories. The first is maintaining adequate intelligence capability. The second is apprehension of people who would commit terrorist acts. And the third is dealing with the events should they occur, as they regrettably have in New York and here in Washington.

In hearing after hearing, we have heard regrettably that we were not ready but that we were moving in the right direction. Unfortunately, it was predicted that there would be a major terrorist attack on this Nation in the near future, at three different hearings that I know of when I was chairman of the appropriations subcommittee that has jurisdiction over the Justice and State Departments, it was clearly stated by our intelligence community that they anticipated a significant terrorist act sometime in the future. No one was specific as to when. We now know when. It has occurred.

How do we prepare so it does not occur again or so we can mitigate the damage?

First, our commitment to intelligence must be dramatically increased. During the 1980s and into the 1990s, we allowed our intelligence community to basically atrophy in the area of human intelligence—people on the ground.

We have electronic intelligence of immense capability. It needs to be improved, especially in the area of encryption. We need more people involved in intelligence efforts. We have to, as a nation, recognize that this is, for all intents and purposes, a war, and that it is going to take soldiers, and that some of those soldiers are going to have to participate in counterintelligence activities that are of a different nature, something from which we have shied away as a society. We are going to need to commit significant resources to this.

In the area of apprehension, we need to get more coordination between our nation and other nations that should be helping us so that when individuals whom we know are threatening us or some other democratic government are on the move, when those individuals are planning, we have the capability to apprehend them. This means significantly increasing the efforts of the FBI in reaching across international boundaries, something our committee has tried to do, something that former Director Freeh made a major commitment: the expansion both operationally and organizationally of the investigative activities of our premier and key law enforcement agency, the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Most importantly, we need to get coordination within our own house, not only in the area of apprehension but, even more importantly, in the area of response. We have watched what has happened in New York. We congratulate the city of New York, the State of New York, and the Federal people who were on the front line. An extraordinary effort and a heroic and courageous effort has been undertaken.

The fact is that within our own Federal agencies we have considerable overlap, inconsistency, and lack of command and control.

Our committee has suggested, on innumerable occasions, that we centralize control over counterterrorism activity and, specifically, response activity and consequence management, terrorism. We have met it. We have met it. We have met it. And extraordinary effort and a heroic and courageous effort has been undertaken.

The Presiding Officer, without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. GREGG. But we must be careful, as a nation, as we hunt these people down—and we have to do that—and as we seek retribution against anyone who will have supported them, that we not cast our net so wide that we catch nations which do not threaten us and people who are not our enemies. We must be careful to use the rule of law so that we do not abandon what has made us great in order to confront this type of evil. We are a nation which is built on openness and law, and it would be a mistake if we abandon it as we attempt to pursue these individuals. No rock must be left unturned to find them; it is clear they live under rocks. But in that process, let us not paint with a brush that creates enemies that do not exist today. Let us also not act in a way that creates martyrs for the people who would also act in this way.

This is a time that will test America. America has been tested before and we have met it. We shall certainly be resilient in the face of this test.

I appreciate the courtesy of the Chair and yield the floor.

The Presiding Officer (Mr. AKAKA). The Senator from Michigan is recognized.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that we be allowed to proceed—the two of us—for 2 minutes each.

The Presiding Officer. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, through our actions that the terror tactics on our people and our free institutions shines a focused determination to recover our loved ones and friends who are still lost, and to assist their loved ones to cope with the devastating void into which they have been plunged. Our fury at those who attack innocence is matched by our united determination to protect our citizens from more terror and by our resolve to track down, to root out, and to relentlessly pursue terrorists and those who would shelter or harbor them.
CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—SENATE 16885

September 12, 2001

Last night, at the Pentagon, I joined Secretary of Defense Rumsfeld, Senator WARNER, and General Shelton in sharing that determination with the American people. That resolve is reflected in the fact that the Pentagon is functioning. Men and women who work there are assisting the heroic recovery efforts, although a few feet away loved ones and friends are still missing or presumed to have been killed, and while the smoke of the sav- agey is still permeating the Pentagon.

The President, last night, spoke for all Americans and all civilized people everywhere about his commitment to recover, to deter, and then to root out and destroy the terrorists.

Debate is an inherent part of democracy. And while our democratic insti- tutions are stronger than any terrorist effort to shake them, in one regard we operate differently in times of national emergency. We set aside our differences to join forces together, with decent people everywhere, to seek out and defeat a common enemy of the civilized world.

Our unity is unshakable, and, God willing, we will persevere and prevail. I yield the floor.

RECESS

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the Senate stands in recess until 3:29 p.m.

Mr. NICKLES. Mr. President, I thank you for your unanimous consent agreement, and I recognize the Senator from New Hampshire.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I yield 10 minutes to the Senator from Oklahoma, the assistant Republican leader.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oklahoma is recognized.

Mr. NICKLES. Mr. President, I thank my colleague. Yesterday was a tragic day in U.S. history. It is a tragic day for people who love freedom, who cherish freedom. Some may claim it was a victory for terrorism. I don’t think so.

This act of terrorism has brought our country together in a way that we haven’t been able to do among ourselves. Yesterday, with Democrats and Republicans who said: We are going to be united against this type of senseless violence. We are going to stand together and say it will not stand. It will not be successful.

I congratulate the President and his Cabinet, not only for his speech last night but also for the Cabinet he has assembled. He has assembled a Cabinet of unequaled reputation, quality, who have proven themselves to meet the challenge in the past, whether we are talking about Vice President DICK CHE-   NER, Secretary of State Condoleezza Rice, Secretary of Defense Don Rumsfeld.

In witnessing the events yesterday, it took me back to the tragedy we suffered 6 years ago in Oklahoma City where 168 people lost their lives to an- other act of terrorism. The most dead- ly act of terrorism in U.S. history hap- pened in Oklahoma City that year on April 19. Until we saw it replaced by an even more horrendous act, an act that certainly was designed by people who wanted to do the maximum amount of deadly operations they could against the United States.

They will not be successful in any way, shape, or form. The United States, under the leadership of Presi- dent Bush and his administration, and a united Congress, Democrats and Republi- cans, will stand up and say that type of violence will not stand. It will be punished.

Our condolences go to the families, to the victims of this terror. It comes home to all of us in different ways. The thousands of people who were injured or lost their lives in the World Trade Center, the many people in the Pen- tagon, the hundreds of people who were on the airplanes, those were husbands, mothers, fathers, children, parents, grandparents. They disrupted thou- sands of lives. Those were friends.

Yesterday was a tragic day, one that I believe our country will pull together and say: This type of ter- rorism will not prevail. We have so many good people in the United States, so many people who are coming to- gether to assist the victims, so many people who are coming together world- wide to assist to make sure this type of tragedy will not go unpunished and also to alleviate the pain and suffering of the innocent victims in this terrible tragedy. My heart, my sympathy, my prayers go out to the victims. Our re- solve has never been stronger to stand together to fight this type of ter- rorism.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Ms. LANDRIEU). The Senator from Nevada is recognized.

Mr. REID. There is an order in effect now that each Senator will have 10 minutes to speak. The way the day has been made available, we had approximately 25 Senators still wishing to speak. If we use the 10 minutes each, we simply cannot finish and allow each Senator to speak. I have conferred with the mi- nority and they are in agreement that each Senator should have 5 minutes, and we alternate back and forth. I pro- pound a unanimous consent request that Senators be allowed to speak for up to 5 minutes each rather than 10 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from Minnesota is recognized.

Mr. REID. Will the Senator yield? I want to express on behalf of the majority leader and minority leader apprecia- tion for the cooperation. Everyone wants an opportunity to speak. But for this unanimous consent agreement, that would not be possible.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Sen- ator from Minnesota.
Mr. WELLSSTONE. Madam President, as a Senator from Minnesota, I rise to thank the religious community, the faith community in my State—Christians, Jews, Muslims—and others of yesterday’s attacks together and for their prayers for all of the men, women, and children who were murdered in our country. That is the very best of Minnesota. That is the very best of our country.

Let us also think and pray for all of the loved ones of our firefighters and law enforcement community who have lost their lives in trying to protect people and save people’s lives.

I believe people in our country will come together and that one message for these terrorists who have committed this murder on a mass scale is that they will not change our values. They will not change our way of life. They will not change who we are as Americans. We will never give way to the politics of hatred. We are a diverse people of many different colors and religious backgrounds. We will continue to respect and support one another.

President Bush is certainly right when he says we will leave no stone unturned in getting to the bottom of who committed this act of murder. As a Senator, I certainly believe we must hold them accountable.

Most importantly, we have to do everything within our power, regardless of political party, to take the steps and do what is necessary to make sure people in our country are safe and secure.

Madam President, one more time, I want to finish up in the few minutes I have by saying that murder is never legitimate, and this was a mass murder of men, women, and children. I think the thing that I will never be able to get out of my mind is that so many innocent Americans could be murdered in a single day in our country. To me, in my adult life, yesterday was the worst day for our country, and there are going to be many more difficult days because we don’t even have a sense of the loss of life.

I am absolutely convinced this will bring out the best in us. I am absolutely convinced that the terrorists will see Americans coming together and I hope the whole international community that represents civilization will come together so these kinds of acts of murder can never be committed again.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The time of the Senator from Arizona has expired.

The Senator from Iowa is recognized.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, yesterday was a day that will live in all of our memories. America was struck by an unprecedented and unprovoked act of violence, so vicious and calculated that the entire world has reacted in horror and revulsion. In that hour when so many were taken from us, America did not bend or buckle. We stood strong.

That strength is best exemplified by the courage of our firefighters, police and services personnel who courageously raced to the scene. When everyone was running away from the danger, they were running toward it. Here in Washington, as the U.S. Capitol was being evacuated, our Capitol Police were standing guard.

All of these public servants deserve our thanks. And their families, especially the families of the police and firefighters in New York who are currently missing, should know that our prayers are with them in this difficult time.

We pray for those lost and for their families. In Iowa, Doug and Betty Haviland, our former neighbors in Ames, IA, are going through a difficult time right now. Their son, Tim, worked on the 96th floor of the World Trade Center, and Tim is currently missing. I want Doug and Betty to know that my thoughts and prayers are with them today. I am hoping for the best.

The sister of my long-time friend Kasey Kincaid, an attorney in Des Moines, Karen Kincaid, an attorney here in Washington, born in Waverly, a graduate of Waverly High School, was on the ill-fated flight that crashed into the Pentagon yesterday.

When the smoke clears, we will confront all the families in their time of need. We want them to know that although their loved ones may be gone, they are not alone. All of America stands with them. We are Americans and we take care of our own. The tallest buildings may crumble, but no one will bring down our spirit.

We have tough times before; we will do so again. Let me be clear. These cowardly acts against our great Nation will not stand. I stand with President Bush in calling on every resource of our Government to track down and destroy who committed these acts and to bring them to swift and certain justice. We will seek out not only the terrorists but their backers and financiers as well. Americans will do what we have always done. We will come together, get down to work, and we will demand justice.

Mr. President, when we do strike back, we must be very careful. We must ensure that when we train our sights on the enemy, we do not harm innocent people in the crossfire. I want to quote the words of Cardinal Theodore McCarrick, the Archbishop of Washington, who spoke at a mass yesterday. He made a point that we should all take to heart.

Let us pray for those who have lost their lives or who have been seriously injured in this calamity. But we must resist the temptation to strike out in vengeance and revenge and, in a special way, not to label any ethnic group or community for this action, which certainly is just the work of a few madmen. We must seek the guilty and not strike out against the innocent or we become like them who are without moral guide or direction.

I could not agree more strongly. We must not use these events of yesterday to paint with a broad brush all Muslims, who are of the Islamic faith or of Arabic descent. It has happened before; it should not happen again.

Those who perpetrated these murders yesterday are not associated with Muslims or with the Islamic faith. If they claim to be part of Islam, they are using the cloak of religion to justify the murder of innocent people. Again, we have seen this before.

We must also make sure we do not fall prey to the theory that in order to defeat this enemy, we must become more like them. I am old enough to remember the McCarthy era, when there were those who said in order to defeat communism, we had to become a police state. There were reasonable voices that said: No, we do not have to; we can strike out in vengeance and still maintain our freedoms. That, Mr. President, is what we must do.

We as Americans respect civil rights and human rights and diversity. We are of diverse backgrounds and faiths. Muslims are part of the fabric of America, part of our strength. Let us be sure we go after the real enemy, and let us not paint with a broad stroke those who are of the Islamic faith who are Americans, who are Muslims, who are part of our great society.

I thank the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. CARPER). The time of the Senator from Iowa has expired.

The Senator from North Carolina.

Mr. HARRIMAN. Mr. President, I ask that the distinguished Senator from Wyoming be recognized.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The distinguished Senator from Wyoming is recognized.

Mr. THOMAS. I thank the Chair. Mr. President, I thank the Senator from North Carolina.

We all have very strong feelings at this time, and most of all those feelings have been expressed, eloquently I might say, and now we have time for the real challenge.

Yesterday was a very sad day. The sadness, of course, continues for those who were injured and the families of those who were lost.

Acts of war have been committed against our Nation. Forces of evil have struck at the center of our Government, our families, and our communities.

There are no words that can possibly explain the devastation or convey sufficient sympathy to those who lost their lives, nor even do words exist to describe our collective anger.

It is a somber day, but our sadness will lead to resolve.

Powerful symbols of our democracy have been destroyed, but the root of our strength—our personal commitment to our country and our families—is even stronger.

Our focus now must be on the victims, of course, and those who still face the challenge of life and rescue. America will take care of its own.

Let me assure people today that the functions of Government will continue. As you can see, Congress is meeting and most Federal agencies in Washington are open and doing their jobs. There is no amount of terror that can be committed that will throw us off course to protect and serve democracy today.

The next great test for the Government is whether America will rise to the challenge to move forward—and that is a necessary part—to comfort those who have lost everything in their lives and rebuild the physical structures that have been lost. Our democracy will continue to exist uninhibited and unimimidated.

Next we must strive to devise updated security and intelligence measures to serve us better in the future so this will not happen again.

Next, and at the appropriate time with the intelligence information that is required, the United States will exact a supreme measure of justice against the criminals who have perpetrated terror on this country, and they are not long for this world. Those terrorists should understand well we are coming for them and nothing will deter us from seeing that they are eliminated, as well as other terrorists around the world, even though they may not be specifically involved with this terrorism.

We all offer our condolences and prayers to the families of the missing. I offer my hopes for those who are working these tragedies today and rescue efforts. God bless them. God bless America.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Wyoming yields back his time.

The Senator from Washington.

Mr. WYDEN. I thank the Chair. Mr. President, on Tuesday morning this Nation witnessed an attempt to pitch into darkness the light of American liberty. It was nothing less than an offensive against the freedom our Nation represents. It was nothing less than pure evil that cast a shadow over our country darker than the smoke from any explosion.

Yesterday, fanatics challenged our Nation to war, striking at civilians and service members alike. Today the Senate is making it clear that we will not bow to this brutality. We believe passionately in our country in due process, in the rule of law. But the effort to find justice cannot be allowed to degenerate into the all-too-frequent endless debate. America must act decisively.

Families across this country are in their darkest hour right now. At the moment, not all of the victims’ names are known out of the thousands believed lost in the tragedy. In the coming days, they are going to become familiar to us, and their lives and legacies will be shared with the world. But we already know them. These victims are husbands and wives, daughters and sons, brother and sisters to every American.

We honor the memory of those whom we have lost, but we also make it clear that we will use this Nation to be sapped by terror. America is not going to be drained by devilish acts of rage.

The light of hope is burning across this country. The voice of a New York firefighter who says he will not stop searching until the last stone is turned is a voice of hope.
The courage of the Federal employees who returned to work today across the country is a courage ground in hope.

Hope shines in the people willing to wait for hours to help, as we saw yesterday when they donated blood. It shines in the hearts of those who are praying today in churches and synagogues and mosques across the country.

Here is my bottom line, Mr. President: The light that shines in America is going to be relentless when it is turned on those who have declared themselves our enemies. The dark forces that perpetrated these acts ought to make sure today that they are in their hiding places because we are going to come after them. The blinding beam of our determination and the long arm of the United States of America is going to expose them and extract justice.

Our entire Congress stands united behind the President of the United States and against our enemies and against those who would shelter them. Our whole Nation stands together with a very clear intention: To endure.

Our enemies should know the entire free and democratic world stands unmoved in its dedication to liberty for all. We speak with one voice, and we will move in concert to protect principles that we hold dear.

The flame of democracy is going to be fanned even brighter. We will not just carry the torch, but we are going to make sure that standard is held higher than ever before.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Mexico is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, first, it is a pleasure to speak to the Senators who are present and listening.

An era has come to an end. As many commentators have noted, most say it was an era of innocence. I agree. Americans now know firsthand the kind of mindless terrorism and brutal disregard of all concepts of morality that afflict the whole world. What will be our measure of response as a nation?

Our people in the world will watch, listen, and wait for, as Franklin Roosevelt said, "We defend and we build a way of life not for America alone but for mankind."

We will, of course, support the President in every respect, provide any and all resources, including emergency funding for New York City, for Washington, D.C., Virginia, and Pennsylvania, with no expense to save our neighbors who need our help in this time of great distress.

Whatever it takes—and I repeat, whatever it takes—to pursue those who planned, funded, aided, harbored, and carried out yesterday's destruction, we will never, ever let them win, for history will record that when history is judged, America will respond to this attack.

All the resources of this great nation must be brought to bear to demonstrate our unity and our power. We know something else now. We understand that the threshold of possible terrorism has been crossed.

We know more, but the terrorists know more, too. We must commit to an all-out effort, not just to a war against terrorism but to new weapons in this war. We must do everything possible to prevent the possibility of calamities above this threshold. The Federal Government must pursue every avenue. Our defense programs—our national laboratories, universities, and other research institutions—must take the next technological steps to win the war that terrorists declared yesterday on our people.

Congress can do two or three things, less obvious perhaps, but more important in the long run. We can set aside petty bickering. We can unify in concrete terms by attending to the Nation's business. The American people can judge barbarians who committed this act of war yesterday, but they will judge us in Congress, too.

We in this time of grave challenge must rise above the political bickering that has affected us for too long. We must quickly unify on the issues that have divided us, whether it is defense spending or energy policy. By doing so, we can show by our actions that truly yesterday was the end of an era.

I am not naive. I understand politics. But now is the time to lay them aside, and, as the American people, unite behind our President. Let us in Congress rise to this historic challenge by joining hands and doing the Nation's business now.

A final word of advice, too, for those who committed these atrocities. How little you know of our Nation, for you are so cowardly you have no way of understanding us. No act these criminals could have contemplated will unify this Nation more, nor galvanize our will more firmly than yesterday's destruction. They have done what many feared perhaps could no longer be done. They have handed this Nation's resolve, prompted our patriotism, and unleashed our power. They have committed an act of war. They have awakened a sleeping giant, and they will inherit the whirlwind.

My heart goes out to all of those suffering today. I know that New Mexicans have suffered losses but, we understand, nothing like New York. I know other Americans have suffered losses. I share in their grief, and I hold them up in my prayers and in the prayers of our family.

Let us understand if we have been awakened, as I believe we have, by uniting and eliminating the bickering, we can move our Nation ahead and we can begin to solve and get rid of terrorism here and everywhere.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Louisiana.

Ms. LANDRIEU. Mr. President, let me begin by that eloquent comment, thank him for his extraordinary leadership on this particular subject, and for the years he has served as a leader to our Nation.

Let me begin by thanking the many people in Louisiana, first our spiritual leaders, our military leaders, our elected officials at every level, our emergency personnel, every citizen who through prayer or action is engaged in helping this Nation at this time. We all appreciate their efforts.

In the darkest hours, America has always risen to her promise. We find ourselves again in the very darkest of times. For only the second time in American history, our borders have been penetrated and Americans attacked.

The greatest generation of Americans responded to the first attack, Pearl Harbor, with an unwavering commitment to defend the ideals of democracy around the globe.

Our generation will be remembered for how we respond to this attack against our Nation, our liberty, and our freedom. I have no doubt our Nation will rise to the challenge and find light in our darkest hour.

Through the endeavors of our people and the providence of God, our Nation prevailed in the struggle with the Soviet Union. It was a struggle lasting over 40 years, spread over every continent, costing this Nation the treasure of its youth and resources beyond imagination.

After yesterday, the American people must understand that today we begin to undertake a task no less daunting. President Kennedy's inaugural address is remembered for its impact in rallying the resolve of our Nation at that time. I can think of no better place to turn to today. His eloquence is as relevant this morning as it was 40 years ago: Now the trumpet summons us again. Not as a call to bear arms, though arms we need; not as a call to bear hatred, though embittered and exasperate, but a call to bear the burden of a long twilight struggle year in and year out, rejoicing in hope, patient in our tribulation, a struggle against the common enemies of man—tyranny, poverty, disease, and war itself.

Yesterday we heard the pages of history turn in explosions which brought down skyscrapers. The sound heard around the world was deafening, perhaps a fitting beginning to what we now know as the silent war; a silent war where cowardice of our enemies is their greatest asset. Yet no deception, no amount of subterfuge, no resort to villainy will protect our enemies from the righteous anger of the American people called to war.

It is important for our people to know that all being called into this struggle. In a silent war, we are all targets and, therefore, we are all combatants. Sacrifices to the unparalleled freedom that we enjoy, costly expenditures, and the employment of our military men may all be required before this war is over.

Yesterday’s terror may have broken the hearts of American families, but it will not break the American family. Yesterday’s terror may have destroyed lives but it will not destroy this Nation’s destiny. Yesterday’s terror may have shattered buildings, but it will not shatter the American spirit.

This morning, not that long ago, over the crater that used to be part of the Pentagon, the lights of a fighter jet hit an American flag flying over the rubble. It is in that spirit America will prevail. I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. Nelson of Nebraska). The Senator from Maine is recognized.

Ms. SNOWE. Mr. President, as did all of my colleagues and all Americans, I woke up this morning with a broken heart but not a broken spirit.

The unimaginable and horrific attack on the World Trade Center and the Pentagon was an attack on all Americans and against every freedom-loving nation of the world.

Today, our prayers and our deepest sympathies are with the families of those innocent victims who lost their lives, as well as those who were injured in these monstrous tragedies. We can scarcely comprehend the images that have flashed before our eyes over the past 24 hours, but we know that so many of our fellow Americans are grieving the loss and yet short and possibilities ended. And so today we grieve as one nation, under God, indivisible.

Our hearts are heavy but our resolve is strong. This outrageous attack has reverberated through every level of our society. But let there be no mistake, and let the word go forth from the Halls of Congress and from the White House and from every house across our indomitable Nation that we will find who is responsible, we will hold them accountable, and we will persevere.

The soul of this country and the ideals upon which it was built cannot be torn asunder neither by war, nor by terrorism, nor by the blunt and bloody instruments of faceless cowards. The faces have been blurred but our country’s determination before. As we rose to the challenge then, so will we rise at this most solemn of times.

Clearly, the attacks on our Nation were coordinated, and they were calculated by our own twisted fanaticism—whatever brand of fanaticism that may prove to be—the perpetrators of this crime against humanity and the American people failed to understand that ours is a nation in which the principle of individual freedom is exceeded only by our commitment to protect our freedom. We are determined, as one nation, under God, indivisible.

The American spirit is stronger than stone and water, tougher than steel and glass, and more enduring than any pain or suffering that can be inflicted on our national conscience. It cannot be collapsed by fire and terror.

To the contrary, today we stand united behind our President and the entire leadership of the Congress. Today, solidarity eclipsed politics and partisanship. And this will remain so for every minute of every hour of every day that it takes to right this injustice.

We must remain always vigilant but never fearful. We must relentlessly seek justice, and we must do all that is within our power to prevent such catastrophic terrorist attacks both at home and abroad.

There are events in our lives that will forever etch on the landscape of our consciousness. We all know where we were and what we were doing at the precise time they happened. As we remember the assassination of President Kennedy and, for many of my colleagues, Pearl Harbor, our children will remember this day.

We are angry as a nation, and we have every right to be angry. But now it is time to focus our energies on responsible actions and swift responses when the masterminds are found. Now is also the time to heal and to tend to our neighbors and families and friends. In typical American fashion, heroes rushed to the aid of those in peril, even as the sounds of blasts still echoed across Manhattan and our Nation’s Capital.

For the unthinkable numbers of people in New York, Virginia, Pennsylvania, military personnel at the Pentagon, passengers on planes from across America, policemen, firefighters, and emergency personnel who gave their lives, their memory will live on with the memory of this tragedy. To the families, our Nation shares in your unspeakable loss.

America will never be the same, just as we were forever changed by two World Wars and numerous other conflicts throughout the world. Now terrorism has come to American soil on a scale most dared not imagine. We are changed, but we are far from broken. Ours is a nation born of adversity, forged by perseverance, and defined by our ability to rise from the ashes and to protect our freedom.

To whomever is responsible for this tragedy, heard this loud and clear and be damned if you will voice. You will be found, You will be held accountable, and this injustice will not stand.

Thank you, Mr. President. I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from California is recognized.

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. Mr. President, I rise to join my colleagues. Very frankly, my heart is filled with a great deal of mixed emotions. On the one hand, I want this country to smash back. On the other, I want us to be sure that we are on firm ground, that we know what we are doing, and that we are successful in our mission.

Yesterday was one of the darkest days I can remember. Many have speculated that the loss of life may well only be exceeded by the battle, 1-day battle, 1-day battle at Antietam during the civil war. It will certainly be more than the loss at Pearl Harbor.

One of the things that I have recognized, and what should be abundantly clear to all of us, is that there are those out there without a heart who are willing to carry out this kind of attack, and to do it with malevolence and cunning that defies science and humanity. That is really what we are up against.

I really consider what happened in New York and at the Pentagon to be a declaration of war against the United States. I believe we must respond accordingly in a well-considered military way.

I join the President, the congressional leadership, and particularly Secretary of State Colin Powell, whose remarks this morning share that same determination.

Let there be no mistake. This attack was deliberately planned. It was planned to have the largest possible impact and to maximize the loss of innocent human life.

The terrorists deliberately selected the largest planes with the greatest fuel load to create the biggest explosion, to kill the most people, and to do it at a time of day when that would happen.

They deliberately selected important symbols—one, the military headquarters of the United States, and the other a major center of American economic entrepreneurship.

What is now emerging is genuine acts of heroism aboard our planes. Heroism aboard UAL Flight 93, which left Dulles International Airport, may well have prevented Flight 93 from striking the White House or the United States Capitol.

Californians were aboard that plane. One Californian, Thomas Burnett of San Francisco, and two other passengers were determined to do something about it. “I love you honey” were Burnett’s last words to his wife. He said, “I know we are all going to die, but there are three of us who are going to do something about it.” He worked for a company called Thoratec. He leaves three children.
September 12, 2001

We all woke up yesterday and prepared to go about our normal business in a world that looked the same as it did the day before. Today everything is different. The New York skyline is changed, and so is the geopolitical landscape of the world.

We stand at the violent birth of a new era in international relations and national security. The strategic pause that we enjoyed after the cold war ended is over. I pray that we have used this interlude properly; and I fear that we may not have.

But this needs to be clear: Any nation that harbors, shelters, or abets these terrorist thugs will be regarded as full participants in these acts of war and will be held equally accountable.

We will devote as many resources as necessary to find and punish the perpetrators of such acts. We must make it clear to all nations that countenance any terrorist that the organization is wanted as well as the people behind it.

We Americans must be prepared to launch—and this is what I mean by the word ‘prepared’—an unprecedented attack on United States. We must also organize and coordinate our efforts. I speak now as chairman of the Technology and Terrorism Subcommittee of the Senate Committee. We must see that the President of China had been informed of the attack on the Embassy in Beijing.

We Americans are a resilient, determined, and patriotic nation. We will not lose the spirit that makes us the greatest democracy on Earth by going after terrorists full scale.

We must also understand that homeland defense should be our highest priority: coherent and carefully balanced, with trained personnel in every State, and an intelligence network that provides a coordination between all branches of Government. The mission of the President is to see that these deaths were not in vain.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have a couple additional minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. FEINSTEIN. Thank you, Mr. President.

All civilized nations, whether it is NATO, our European allies, Russia, China, the moderate Arab States, or anyone else—I received a call this morning from the Chinese Embassy saying that the President of China had called our President yesterday to indicate China’s solidarity with the United States and to offer any help. Indeed, that is a giant step forward. It is a beginning. I believe we must create a critical divide between the civilized nations that will not sanction terrorism and spell out those that do and do something about it.

Presently, the United States spends about $12 billion, spread among a number of Departments dealing with terrorism. The proposed budget will short-term be before the Senate. If we are to engage against this threat, I think we must also organize and coordinate our efforts. I speak now as chairman of the Technology and Terrorism Subcommittee of the Judiciary Committee and also as a member of the Intelligence Committee. We must see that these dollars are wisely spent, not frittered among more than 40 Departments. I do not believe those dollars are well spent at the present time.

We must also understand that homeland defense should be our highest priority: coherent and carefully balanced, with trained personnel in every State, and an intelligence network that provides a coordination between all branches of Government and each of our States.

America has at its disposal a wide array of tools, but these tools must be directed carefully, with a coherent policy. This is not now the situation. I believe we must remedy it promptly.

We Americans are a resilient, a determined, and a patriotic nation. We will not lose the spirit that makes us the greatest democracy on Earth by going after terrorists full scale.

We have always been ready to respond in defense of freedom. And now that challenge is before us in a manner, shape and form that offers unprecedented challenges. We must respond.

Let me also speak a few moments as a Californian. The four planes that were hijacked were all going to California, three to Los Angeles, one to San Francisco.

Two hundred sixty-six people died on the planes. It is certain that many of them have families in California. To them, I extend my heartfelt sorrow.

But I also extend a commitment that I will do everything in my power as one Senator to see that these deaths were not in vain.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, I ask that the able Senator from Arkansas be recognized.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Arkansas.

Mr. HUTCHINSON. Mr. President, on this day of mourning and on behalf of all Arkansans, I offer my deepest and most sincere sympathy to the families of the victims of the cowardly attacks on the World Trade Center and the Pentagon.

I especially want to mention the Arkansas flight attendant, Sara Lowe, and offer my sympathy and condolences to her parents Mike and Bobbie, and to her sister Allison. There may well be other Arkansans who were aboard, but Sara served, and served well, on Flight No. 1.

While New York bears the brunt of the pain today, I am reminded, as I think of Sara Lowe from Batesville, AR, that there are hundreds of towns and hamlets and villages all across the Nation that share in the grief and the suffering today. Our Nation is grief-stricken but our Nation is strong. Our Nation is united, and our Nation is resolved to bring those responsible to justice.

I honor today the courage and compassion of the rescuers in New York City and at the Pentagon. Your Nation is grateful and your Nation is indebted.
But I think of the families as well who have suffered forever the loss of a loved one. Many children will go without fathers tonight. Many families will go to bed tonight wondering who they will match and undercoordinate in our ability to respond. Are we ever to live from crisis to crisis under threat of terrorist attack? I don’t think that is the way Americans are supposed to live or were born to live.

My mind recalls the great words of F.D.R. when he launched the greatest generation on its great crusade, World War II, the four freedoms, Roosevelt’s famous speech. What are the four freedoms that Americans have an inherent right to enjoy? First, freedom of expression, the ability to talk in this great Chamber and express our opinion and the ability of any American to express the same; second, freedom of religion, which unquestionably is part of our national Bill of Rights; third, freedom from want; all of us feel this country is, as Lincoln said, the last best hope of Earth; finally, as F.D.R. put it in 1941, freedom from fear.

Many Americans are fearful today. They are fearful for the future of their homeland, their communities, their families. We do not deserve to live in fear.

I dedicate myself, as a Member of this body, as an American, as someone who has seen combat and who has lived in fear, to make sure that I re dedicate myself to the task remaining before us: That we will work out, with the President of the United States and this administration, every aspect of a plan to rid ourselves of international terrorism and to work with other nations, other civilized nations, other nations committed to democracy and opportunity that believe in the four freedoms as we do, to work out with them, in coordination with them, an assault on terrorism.

Yesterday was a declaration of war by terrorists on this country. This resolution we pass today in an unanimous fashion is, in my opinion, a resolution of guts and courage that this body sends forth, that we declare war on international terrorism and terrorism and responsibilities for preventing, preparing and responding to acts of domestic terrorism. This lack of clarity is due to the absence of a true, comprehensive national strategy that you solicit input from and in which President Cheney is embodied in two Presidential Decision Directives, the Attorney General’s Five Year Plan and two Federal response plans, one maintained by the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) and one maintained by the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA). This “patchwork quilt” approach is not a substitute for a national strategy, the purpose of which would be to coordinate our Federal agencies into an effective force.

The attached report contains seven recommendations that emerged during the course of the hearings. They merit your strong consideration as you move toward bringing all of the Federal entities involved in combating terrorism under a single umbrella of clear leadership and a consolidated national strategy. The recommendations identify and propose actions to address weaknesses in our overall national system to combat domestic terrorism.

We hope these recommendations will be useful to you as you chart a new course for this nation’s domestic terrorism policy. With respect to the review itself, we strongly recommend that you solicit input from and incorporate the worthwhile suggestions of members of the first responder community, including fire, law enforcement, medical, and emergency management personnel. In addition, just as you have requested the assistance and support of the Director of the Federal Emergency Management Agency, we urge you to also do so upon the experience and expertise of the Attorney General and the Department of Justice. This will ensure that you have all the necessary information and resources at your disposal, and that your review is balanced and thorough. We in the Senate stand ready to assist you in this historic and critical enterprise.

Sincerely,

TED STEVENS,
Committee on Appropriations

JOHN WARNER,
Committee on Armed Services

RICHARD SHELBY,
Select Committee on Intelligence

PAT ROBERTS,
Subcommittee on Emerging Threats & Capabilities, Committee on Armed Services

JUDD Gregg,
Subcommittee on Commerce, Justice, State, and Judiciary, Committee on Appropriations.

REPORT TO THE VICE PRESIDENT FINDINGS PURSUANT TO THE SENATE HEARINGS ON U.S. FEDERAL GOVERNMENT Capabilities to Combat Domestic Terrorism

I. Leadership.—During the course of the hearings, several agencies announced the creation of a new position that would coordinate those agencies’ terrorism-related activities. HHS is appointing a Special Assistant, DOD is designating an Assistant Secretary of Defense, and FEMA has appointed a Deputy Director. To improve coordination and centralize the policy-making structure within the Department of Justice, we recommend establishing a law as Deputy Attorney General for Combating Domestic Terrorism (DAG–CT). The position would have as its principal duty the development and coordination of the department’s overall policy for combating domestic terrorism. The DAG–CT would report directly to the Attorney General. The DAG–CT and the Deputy Director of FEMA, as Co-Coordinators, should coordinate with the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) to centralize the policy-making structure for combating domestic terrorism, including all of the relevant agencies, and for coordinating the national strategy.

II. The National Strategy.—The Congress, the President, and the National Security Advisor must be able to look to the Co-Coordinators to coordinate a single national strategy to combat terrorism within the country from foreign and domestic terrorism. The national strategy should establish the policies, objectives, and priorities of the Federal government for preventing, preparing, responding to, and recovering from terrorist attacks. The strategy should include specific objectives to be achieved. Also, it should include the requirement that Co-Coordinators be in charge of Federal department and agency and State and local government entity should perform in combating domestic terrorism, and coordinate Federal department and agency and State and local government entity should perform in combating domestic terrorism.

The sharing of information, especially by intelligence agencies and law enforcement agencies, remains an empirical concept in the fight against acts of domestic terrorism. The Department of State also has an important role to play in preventing terrorism through its diplomatic and law enforcement efforts. The Co-Coordinators should work in close cooperation with the Department of State to ensure that we have a unified strategy for combating both domestic and international terrorism. Our level of preparedness will depend on our commitment to training, equipment programs, and regularly scheduled exercises which allow us to hone our skills. Our ability to respond to a domestic terrorist attack will require the close coordination of all entities with responsibility for combating domestic terrorism. Pre-established guidelines outlining agencies’ missions and order of operations during a range of plausible threat scenarios must be developed and distributed.

The Co-Coordinators should be responsible for coordinating agencies’ and departments’ programs and policies so that they complement the national strategy. The Co-Coordinators also will be responsible for the coordination of the Federal departments and agencies which have the Co-Coordinators appraised of any changes in their organization, management, or responsibilities pertaining to combating domestic terrorism. All agencies and departments involved in combating domestic terrorism should participate in an annual review process coordinated by the Co-Coordinators, who should undertake this review on behalf of the President. In conducting this review, the Co-Coordinators should consult with the appropriate entities, including Congress and the State and Local Advisory Group. The Co-Coordinators should make specific recommendations regarding agencies’ policies, programs, and objectives for combating domestic terrorism as well as monitor their progress in implementing the national strategy.

III. Reorganization.—One office within the Department of Justice should oversee the work of the entire Department on domestic terrorism issues. This office should be consistent with the FBI’s Domestic Terrorism Division. The office should be responsible for the activities of the Deputy Director of the Department of Justice’s National Domestic Preparedness Office (NDPO). This new position should be named the Deputy National Coordinator for Combating Domestic Terrorism (DAG–CT) and would report directly to the Deputy Attorney General. The DAG–CT would be responsible for the coordination of the Office of Domestic Preparedness and would work closely with the FBI’s Counterterrorism Division and other Federal departments and agencies to coordinate the efforts of the Federal government for preventing, combating, and preparing for domestic terrorism. The DAG–CT would be appointed by the Attorney General.

IV. Budget Reviews.—There is currently no national strategy for combating domestic terrorism. The national strategy should be focused on the broadest dissemination and to avoid duplication.

V. Chain of Command.—The Senate hearing has demonstrated that there is a need for a coherent chain of command at the Federal level during the response phase of a terrorist incident. During a recent exercise, agents from the FBI and Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms (ATF) argued for an hour over who was “in charge” at the scene, while actors playing the part of the wounded and dying got hypothermia. This confusion is the result of a poorly understood and communicate chain of command.

The Federal Register Plan (FRP) and Concept of Operations Plan (CONPLAN) identify which agencies must respond at what point in time and what function each agency must perform or lead. These plans have not been effectively communicated to responders at all levels, from local to Federal. Furthermore, these plans were designed for a number of different disaster scenarios. This “one size fits all” approach to domestic terrorism is unacceptable to the President, and the National Security Advisor. We recommend that FEMA expand its efforts to provide FRP and CONPLAN to suit each particular type of threat, such as biological, chemical, nuclear, and other safeguards are justified. Such programs should be supported and cooperated with existing DOJ training and planning efforts to ensure the broadest dissemination and to avoid duplication.

VI. Risk and Threat Assessments.—Federal programs to combat domestic terrorism are being initiated and expanded without the benefit of a sound threat and risk assessment process. Although it is not possible to reduce risk for all potential targets of terrorism, a rigorous and continuous assessment of risk can help ensure that preventive, protective, and other safeguards are justified. Such programs must be implemented based on the threat, the level of uncertainty surrounding that threat, the vulnerability to attack, and the criticality of assets.

Because the terrorist threat pose is dynamic and countermeasures may become obsolete, risk assessments must be continually updated. A multi-disciplinary team of experts selected by the Co-Coordinators should generate these assessments as well as the threat, vulnerability, and risk assessments. Regularly scheduled exercises will provide an opportunity to demonstrate and validate the national strategy. This process is crucial to ensuring that initiatives are based on reality and are proportional to the threat.
warned several years ago: Terrorist cells are increasingly adaptive and renew attempts to forge a national strategy to combat terrorism and safeguard our national security. The Co-ordinators should therefore be tasked with coordinating a technological blueprint for the remainder of the decade. This plan should be based on sound needs and threat assessments and should be set specific goals to be accomplished within a defined time frame.

Mr. ROBERTS. This letter followed 3 days of hearings in which bipartisan Members of Congress asked detailed questions of some 46 Federal agencies. Senators Warner, Senniala, Gregg, and Roberts offered this letter as a blueprint from which to eliminate the current patchwork quilt approach and renew attempts to forge a national strategy to combat terrorism and safeguard our national security. Let me warn all of this act of terrorism may well be just the beginning. We must understand our enemy. In this regard, I quote from a retired Army of-...
in Kenya and Tanzania, Khobar Towers, or the U.S.S. Cole, they have been based on the “criminal model.” This is the notion that our main task is to identify the criminals, identify and apprehend perpetrators, and build a case sufficient to convict them beyond a reasonable doubt in the court.

This criminal model obscures the strategic implications, which should be our main task. Where the criminal model should be replaced with a warfare model adapted to 21st century conditions in which war no longer means a confrontation along a defined front between armies fielded by industrial states. Instead, under conditions in which the distinction between state and private violence is not relevant, war means determining within a moral certainty the responsible actors—state or nonstate—and delivering a devastating punitive and exemplary reprisal. Consideration should be given to a congressional declaration of war against such state and nonstate actors.

Based on past experience, it is inevitable that part of the response will involve a further tightening of security procedures right here in this country. These measures, which almost never are removed once they are put in place, have little utility, except to tighten Federal control over Americans, and it really should be minimized. That is not to say we ought not look at them, reconsider them, and where they are best used, estimate their value—but not overestimate the outcome. More importantly, they are a measure of our failure of strategic vision.

Instead, we should concentrate on identifying the hijackers who flew the airplanes to their targets, and determining how they entered the United States. This is what we ought to be about. Misguided efforts to relax bars to allow American security agencies have derogatory information should be shelved. Border controls should be tightened.

While targeted reprisal is a necessity, it should be accompanied by a comprehensive reexamination of U.S. post-cold war strategy. Currently, that strategy is largely based on cold war inertia, consisting primarily of maintaining, extending, and perpetuating our status as “the world’s sole-surviving superpower”—in effect, exercising global hegemony, and preventing the emergence of any potential rival, such as China or Russia.

This policy, with its focus on global dominance rather than domestic defense, leaves us more vulnerable to terrorism than it did a generation ago. It leaves the United States more vulnerable to terror attack, not less. We have to look at global policy, but clearly we must focus now more than ever on domestic defense.

This policy must be replaced by one that places a priority on the defense of our sovereignty, our people, and our territory. With regard to yesterday’s attacks, our global strategy should be reexamined to include undermining the harboring regimes or regimes by diplomatic and possibly military means; withdrawing, more positive, public policies toward nearby countries opposed to such regimes; and pressuring countries with which the United States has friendly relations, but that may be supporting the harboring regimes, to cease that support.

These efforts will require a thorough assessment of American policy. No part of it can be left out. We do not stand in a situation of isolation today. Our neighbors will gather around us. Let us examine ourselves into the 21st century. Let us use our ability in that context to shape a new foreign policy and resolve that what happened yesterday in this country shall never happen again.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Jersey is recognized.

Mr. TORRICELLI. Mr. President, the calendar and history rarely perfectly coincide. It was remarked that the 20th century really began in August of 1914 with the commencement of European hostilities. It may, on reflection, prove to be true that the 21st century did not begin when that famous ball fell in Times Square; it began on September 11, 2001.

The world has now been introduced to a new and difficult struggle against terrorism, asymmetrical war, held along the fissure lines of culture, prosperity, and commitment to law.

I regret that the front lines of this new struggle have formed through the communities I represent in northern New Jersey and our neighbors in New York City. Last night, children waited at home for parents who never arrived. Spouses held dinner for husbands and wives who never came home. The battlefield of this new war was Manhattan and Jersey City and Fort Lee and Queens. We are all soldiers.

There is a temptation to accept that this new chapter in the war on terrorism is merely a continuum of the same. Perhaps the scale and the intensity is only different from Lebanon or Saudi Arabia or, indeed, the World Trade Center itself 8 years ago.

By definition, it is fundamentally different. The very scale of this attack and the premeditation of those involved suggest that the organizations or the nations that planned this attack intended to strike at the Government of the United States.

I offer these observations not because I differ from the President of the United States but because I offer my support and because I believe that, as a Congress and as Americans, we must not retreat in the face of what occurred in this country last 48 hours. I offer a difference in my observation. The arbiter of this act of terrorism will never be a jury. It is history. It is not those who were agents in the commission of this crime that we seek but the organizations that are responsible.

At the outset, it must be made clear this is not a law enforcement matter. It does not matter who rented the cars or even who flew the airplanes. They are agents of others. I will find no satisfaction in their indictment, whether they are alive or deceased. It is those who wrote the plan, harbored the conspirators, gave them sanctuary within their borders.

It is not enough that we are pursuing a legal case against those who are responsible for this crime. It has become axiomatic to suggest an act of war has been committed against the United States. Those are our words. But our deeds are suggesting that we believe we must simply victimize a hijacking, that a murder was committed—a crime of large proportions but ordinary in concept.

We are missing the point. If those who committed this crime wore uniforms or had a flag or a capital, the response of the United States would be clear. This operation would be run from the military, not the Justice Department. It would be the Air Force, not the FBI, conducting operations.

I support the President of the United States, but I do believe, with all respect, we are not properly conceiving the magnitude of the moment. A fissure of history was reached yesterday, and in all of our sorrow and our grief, we are not yet seizing the moment.

It is my belief the President of the United States should come to this Congress and ask for a declaration that since September 11, 2001, the U.S. Government is engaged in general hostilities against a series of terrorist organizations; that in these hostilities, we will not respect the sovereignty of those nations that give safe harbor to those who committed acts against our country and our people.

I recognize that it is not possible with precision to identify every organization that was complicitous or involved. I also do not believe that it is necessary. Many of these terrorist organizations previously committed acts against the United States. Others are known to have planned such operations. Many have the intention of committing such atrocities; that in these hostilities, they represent a network that is a worthy and legitimate target of our hostilities.

Second, I cannot return to the people of New Jersey who have lost hundreds or, tragically, even thousands of citizens without explaining the role of the U.S. Government in their defense. The scale, the intensity, the magnitude of this attack, the last 48 hours may have been unpredictable, but the source and the means and the targets were not.
The American people have trusted this Government through our intelligence communities to defend our Nation and its people and our varied interests. This has not occurred. It is my belief that the President of the United States should form a board of general inquiry to review the actions of the U.S. intelligence community and the failures which led to this massive loss of life and compromise of national security.

It can never be enough to explain that the unforeseeable happened to the unprotectable because neither is the case.

Only two decades into the 20th century, Winston Churchill remarked: What an extraordinary disappointment the 20th century has been. Here in our first year of a new century, on behalf of all those at home who suffer, who have dealt with unconscionable acts, let me simply say what a disappointment the 21st century has already been.

I thank the Chair, and I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Arizona.

Mr. KYL. Mr. President, today our entire Nation confronts an evil inflicted upon it by those who resent our values and our way of life. All of us address the Nation as Americans, not partisans. That is as it should be when we are hit by a tragedy of this magnitude.

I first want to join my colleagues in assuring our fellow Americans our Government is carrying on the business of the people. Our Nation has not bowed and will never bow to violence and terror.

Second, I join in expressing our love and concern for the victims of these evil deeds. We will never forget them.

Third, if our words are to have effect, we have to change the way we deal with terrorism. Things have changed. No nation can ever be completely safe from threats to its security, but sadly today our Nation is forced to recognize what many of us have long known: that America is vulnerable to attack. But there are steps we can take to make it safer.

As members of the Intelligence Committee, and as chairman and ranking member of the Senate Judiciary’s Subcommittee on Terrorism, respectively, Senator DIANNE FEINSTEIN and I have held a series of hearings on recommendations about how to deal with terrorist threats. Things have changed. No nation can ever be completely safe from threats to its security, but sadly today our Nation is forced to recognize what many of us have long known: that America is vulnerable to attack. But there are steps we can take to make it safer.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from North Carolina.

Mr. EDWARDS. Mr. President, we learned yesterday to a much different world than the world we are required to accept today. On the most basic and fundamental level, we have lost the lives of heroes and victims, and we know that behind the devastating numbers we have all been seeing are real people, with real families, with real lives, with real accomplishments, and real hopes. We also know sadly for all of us that we can never, ever reclaim those lives.

We can honor them and remember them, and in their names we can devote ourselves to take every action to assure that no other Americans have to make this supreme sacrifice.

My Scripture teaches us to weep with them that weep and be of the same mind one toward another.

I speak now to the families of those who have been taken. We in this Chamber cannot erase yesterday, although we wish with everything inside us that we could. In the difficult days and years to come, we will keep their lives and their names and their sacrifices in our hearts, and we will translate our grief and our anger into a determination to prevent this tragedy from ever being repeated.

In this I see little solace for their extraordinary loss, but it is an important commitment that I truly believe every one of them would wish us to make. We will not forget, and we will act.

For 225 years now, America has been more than a nation-state, more than a set of borders, more than a piece of land. America is an idea, and that idea is freedom: Freedom of thought, freedom of movement, freedom to shape our lives and our society the way we choose.

Yesterday morning, it was not just America that came under attack. It was the hopes and aspirations of freedom-loving people all over the world.

There is a reason America does not bow to terrorism. There is a reason we live by the rule of law and not the rule of the jungle. There is a reason we return to our homes and offices and reclaim our skies and our pride. There is a reason we will marshal our resources, all our resolve and the awesome strength of our military to catch these death mongers, to punish them, to make them pay for what they have done to us and our people because we surrender our freedom to no one.

I commend President Bush for his leadership in this extraordinarily difficult time. I urge all my colleagues on
From time to time, from issue to issue, the votes in this Chamber are divided, and when it comes to defeating terrorism and hate, the Senate will not be divided.

When we prayed last night, we did so not only for those who were injured or killed yesterday, but for what our nation and people are still to face. After the horror of yesterday, there are still other horrors to come. One of those horrors will be the casualty figures. The disaster is so large we don’t even yet know how large it is. Some, in the next few weeks, we are going to hear a number of the dead and permanently missing. It will probably be in the thousands.

I would like to take a moment to mention Capt. Jason M. Dahl, the pilot of United Airlines Flight 93. This 43-year-old Ken-Caryl Ranch, CO, father spent most of his workdays training others to fly Boeing 757’s and 767’s. That way, according to newspaper reports, he got to spend more time with his wife and teenage son, Matthew. But the training of yesterday, and Dahl apparently scheduled himself on Flight 93. He died yesterday morning when the plane slammed down into a Pennsylvania field. This is one name, one short background, and there will be thousands more.

But America is strong. No terrorist can undermine our country. There is no casualty figure that could come from this that will make us lose our fundamental purpose as a nation and a people. Anyone who doubts this only needs to look at the flags popping up on streets, the lines outside blood donation centers, the supplies being gathered for the survivors. America has long exported compassion by responding to African droughts and Central American hurricanes and European earthquakes. Now we have to deal with a massive tragedy in our own land, and I am sure we will do so strongly.

I was in a meeting yesterday dealing with Middle East security when my father said that when the building was being evacuated. It occurs to me that aspects of life in the Middle East—terrorist attacks, public fear and public mourning, heavy domestic security, checkpoints, rigid airline safeguards—could quite possibly be incorporated into the American way of life as well. Things that we have seen before only on TV broadcasts from foreign lands could be brought home to us, right here in America.

But America is strong. We will understand that these new measures might change our lives, but not our way of life. Increased security might, for instance, add to travel time, but not effect our ability to travel. Just as we learned to live with safety, we will live with the potential of nuclear war. Some of the old Cold War defenses we incorporated into our lives were even able to assist us in this new war we face. The North American Aerospace Defense center—NORAD—in Colorado Springs was monitoring the highjacked airplanes yesterday.

We in the Government are going to have to answer “What next?” The Senate has already approved supporting increased resources in the war to eradicate terrorism, and supporting the president in punishing the perpetrators of the attacks.

The phrase “war on terrorism” has been used lightly before. This is a war. And this war cannot be fought by, as I have heard it mentioned, by just using cruise missiles to blow up tents in a desert.

I thank again the thousands of personnel who have responded, in New York, Pennsylvania and Washington, to the crisis. Especially those whose response only meant that they themselves became victims of this hostile tragedy.

This morning New York Mayor Rudy Giuliani said “we are better than they are.” A simple statement, but it accurately reflects a truth. America is better than evil terrorists, America is better than sneak attacks on innocent civilians, America is better than fanatics, and America will prevail in this crisis.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Illinois.

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, today we know our duty as Americans. We will bury our dead, we will comfort our wounded, we will honor our heroes, and we will protect and defend our Nation. We will stand as one against the treachery visited on America on Tuesday, September 11, in the year 2001.

We invite our friends and allies among the civilized nations to not only share our grief but to share our decision not to end the scourge of terrorism. The enemies of America, the enemies of freedom, unleashed their fury yesterday in New York and at the Pentagon in an effort to destroy our resolve. Our enemies have failed.

Today our hearts are heavy for all of the innocent lives lost and scarred by these barbaric terrorists. But our resolve has not been shaken. We stand as one, committed to freedom. We stand as one, committed to tolerance. We stand as one, committed to fighting for the innocent in the name of righteousness. We stand as one against those who in the name of God perpetrated godless acts.

In the days ahead, we will undoubtedly learn of unparalleled, selfless courage by so many, the firefighters and police, who awakened yesterday as they did every day of their professional lives, pinned their badges and shields over their hearts, and risked their lives to save those who never knew, of the hundreds of firefighters who streamed into that inferno at the World Trade Center while every human instinct told them to flee the overwhelming danger. We will never know the details of their many courageous acts nor about the battles waged on the airliners hijacked by the terrorists. But we owe the deepest debt of gratitude to all of those Americans who demonstrated remarkable heroism at America’s time of testing.

The terrorists set out to bring America to its knees. Instead, they have brought America to its feet, stronger than ever in our alliance with Israel and more understanding of the price terrorism exacts from the heart and soul of people.

A word of caution to all of us: As we identify the sources of terrorism, it is possible to call out an Arab person, or a group of Arab people, or those of the Muslim faith. We should never allow those facts, if they turn out to be true, to cloud our judgment when it comes to our fellow Arab Americans and those who believe and practice the Muslim faith. Many of them share with us the pain and sorrow of yesterday’s tragedy.

Let me bring this tragedy very close to home. During the course of the Civil War, Abraham Lincoln came to Washington as the new President. The States began to divide into the Confederacy and the Union. When he arrived, this Capitol dome which you see outside was destruction. Many people went to the President and said: Mr. President, we can’t afford to wage a war and build this Capitol dome. He said: Yes, we can, because that Capitol dome represents the unity of this country and that is so necessary. During the Civil War, he continued the construction of that great dome we see today. And Lincoln was right.

We should take a lesson from that. As we talk about security in America, we should understand that one of the prime targets is the building I speak from—this Nation’s Capitol, which attracts millions of visitors every single year. We owe those visitors, their families, and the thousands of people who work here the security and peace of mind of knowing that we have done everything we can to protect them in this age of terrorism. That means building a national visitors center, one which provides the security they deserve. This building, as we get ready to enter the 21st century, should have 21st century security. I am happy to say that Senator BENNETT of Utah as well as leaders on both sides of the aisle believe this is the moment when we should make that commitment to the national visitors center.

The last item to which I will make reference is a small one, but it is especially irritating. Yesterday in my home State of Illinois, after this tragedy was reported in New York, many gas stations across our State raised the price of gasoline dramatically to as high as $5 a gallon. Profiteering in a time of national crisis is the lowest form of citizenship. It is little better than looting during a national tragedy. I have called on the residents of Illinois to report those stations that did it. They should be ashamed. And we will report their findings and their stories to the investigation of the unfair gasoline prices we have seen in the Midwest.

Let me close by saying this: America will be tested now. We will be tested because of this tragedy yesterday. Some people said if we can just identify that one person who is the leader of this terrorist group and somehow capture or take him away, we will end the terrorism. We are cutting off the head of one serpent doesn’t clear a viper’s nest. This is a network of terrorism throughout the world that really threatens every civilized nation, and we have to understand the complexity of the challenge we face.

In closing, I am reminded of the comments of Winston Churchill in the House of Commons on October 8, 1940:

Death and sorrow will be the companions of our journey; hardship our garment; constancy and valor our only shield. We must be undaunted, we must be inflexible.

Thank you, Mr. President.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Alaska.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, perhaps because I represent the State that has the youngest age population in the country, I approach this subject from a different point of view.

Many have said that this terrible, cowardly attack against our country by terrorists is similar to the experience we had at Pearl Harbor. I think perhaps Senator INOUYE and Senator AKAKA might have had similar experiences. But those of us who were alive and part of the younger generation then did not have the experiences that our young people had yesterday as they watched and were just mesmerized by the live coverage as two great buildings collapsed, of people jumping from those buildings, of the knowledge of how many people were killed and injured, of seeing our Pentagon struck.

This vividness has affected the young people of our country much more than Pearl Harbor affected us. We had been accustomed to the fact that we were going to war. We had watched in the newsreels in 1939, in 1940, and 1941 the Germans marching across Europe and the Japanese raping Nanking. Such things came at us in a small bite, as we might call it today, with a little exposure here and there.

If our generation truly is the greatest generation, it is because of our parents and our guardians and our teachers. They prepared us for what we knew would be our duty to fight a war to restore freedom in the world.

Our young people yesterday saw just this total exposure to death and the effects of terrorism. I think we have to be aware of that. They have not been prepared as young people in this period when they knew there were freedoms to the exposure through so many means of communication and acquisition and knowledge. I believe our young people are in a state of shock. It is time we thought about that and what it means to America to have this sudden awareness by so many people, particularly young children and the younger generation, becoming exposed to the visible impact of terrorist activity.

We don’t live in a country like Israel where they have been attacked on the streets and they have seen bombing every day. We have really been living the life of luxury in terms of not being exposed to this type of activity. But it is here now. We wish it were not true but it is. I don’t think it is over.

I call on the Senate and the Congress and the President. I hope we think about the young people. I hope we take the time to explain to them why we are going to retaliate. I hope we take the time to explain to them why we are going to change some of the security procedures of our country in terms of getting on and off interstate and even local transportation. I hope we explain to them why there are no people in the gallery here today—which I object to, by the way.

But I think it is incumbent on those of us who are mature to try to guide these people toward the goals we hope they will pursue with us; that is, the goal of pursuing the perpetrators of these vicious terrorist attacks against the United States, and to support us in what we have to do. We should take time to understand that we should take the time to try to explain to them why we may not react the same way they would.

I had calls from all over the country yesterday. I don’t know if everyone else did. I assume so. I certainly had an enormous number of calls from home. They were asking if I was safe and if my family and my staff were safe. And the totality of the experience they had, people around the country, in viewing what they were going through, or they were watching in the news—what went on—I have to say myself, I was totally shocked when I saw that first tower come down. And then when the second one came down. I just felt a lump in my stomach. That is, how we act in terms of understanding that we have a job to lead the country, to have people understand what we are going to do in the future. If I have anything to do with it, we will finish our work here very quickly. I think we should bury our differences, find a way to move the appropriations bills, deal with the subjects we have to deal with, and go back to our homes to try to assist people in understanding why we are going to act as we must act; that is, we must deliver the most fierce retaliation against these people that the world has ever seen, because if we do not—if we do not—we are going to have some copycats around the world who think they, too, can take a crack at this country. That is something I would not like to see.

But I hope we all keep in mind and think of the young people, think of the children, and try to explain to them what they saw and why we are going to do what we must do.

Mr. President, II Corinthians, 4:8–9, states:

We are hard pressed on every side, but not crushed;
Perplexed, but not despairing;
Struck down, but not destroyed.

Thank you, Mr. President.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, yesterday's terrorist atrocities against innocent Americans were vicious and horrifying. They were acts of unappeakable cruelty unleashed against the American people in a shameful attempt to spread chaos throughout our nation and instill fear in the hearts of our citizens. But such acts will not succeed, they will never succeed.

No American will ever forget watching a hijacked civilian aircraft crash into the towers of the World Trade Center, or seeing the plume of smoke rise from the Pentagon in the aftermath of the terrorist attack. No American will ever forget the sense of anger and vulnerability that swept our nation yesterday, when thousands of innocent lives were suddenly, and senselessly ended by the vicious acts.

My heart goes out to the victims of this attack—loved ones. The American people share our anger, our grief—and our resolve. We cannot bring back the lives of the fathers, mothers, sons, daughters, brothers, sisters, relatives, and friends—although we wish desperately that we could. We cannot yet fully answer the complex questions that haunt the country about this atrocity. As we search for and find the answers, we pray for the victims and their loved ones, and we hope that they will find a measure of peace and comfort from our prayers.

This is a massive tragedy for America, and we must make clear that our national resolve will not be weakened. Our country has been tested and tried in the past, and we have always emerged stronger and wiser. We will do so again now. America's commitment to the values of freedom and justice has not been shaken in the past. It will not be shaken by these acts of terrorism.

I commend President Bush for his strong statement last evening about finding and punishing the perpetrators of this atrocity. Those who murder American citizens must have no safe hiding place, and those who shelter terrorists must be punished as well. America will not be shaken by these acts of terror. It will prevail in the ongoing war against global terrorism.

It is tragic that these criminals were able to succeed in carrying out the most brutal terrorist attack in history on American soil. Just as the Pearl Harbor attack galvanized the American people in their resolve to prevail in the war against fascism and tyranny, I am confident that yesterday's attack on the American people will galvanize our citizens and strengthen our spirit to prevail in the ongoing war against global terrorism.

Like December 7, 1941, September 11, 2001 will be remembered as a day that will live in infamy. Just as the Pearl Harbor attack galvanized the American people in their resolve to prevail in the war against fascism and tyranny, I am confident that yesterday's attack on the American people will galvanize our citizens and strengthen our spirit to prevail in the ongoing war against global terrorism.

Like December 7, 1941, September 11, 2001 will be remembered as a day that will live in infamy. Just as the Pearl Harbor attack galvanized the American people in their resolve to prevail in the war against fascism and tyranny, I am confident that yesterday's attack on the American people will galvanize our citizens and strengthen our spirit to prevail in the ongoing war against global terrorism.

As we seek to find those who perpetrated the crimes, we must also be resolute and sensitive to the extraordinary concerns about violence that will have an impact on a whole generation of children. I think many of us have heard about and seen, as we were getting ready to come to work this morning, the counseling that is being provided to America's parents and children about how to cope with this violence.

We have not focused extensively on this subject in the hours that we have discussed this resolution, but I thank the Senator for bringing this up. He is active in supporting the interests of children, and I think his point is extremely well taken.

This resolution was overwhelmingly supported by all Members. It is what we can do today. There will be other opportunities to support activities to address this issue.

The resolution recognizes the extraordinary suffering and the losses that have been experienced by so many families in America today. I think the focus, rightfully so, has been on New York City, in the World Trade Center. But in my own State of Massachusetts, we have 39 parents who will not be returning home this evening. We have dozens of children who will be missing one parent, and in some instances two parents. There are scores of people who worked in the World Trade Center who were from Massachusetts as well. And that has been generally true about so many other States.

Although the targets were in New York and the Pentagon—and Lord only knows where the other plane was headed—all families feel an extraordinary threat to their lives and well-being and to the lives and well-being of their children. So we all reach out to them. I remember very well the extraordinary way people came together in my State when five extraordinary firefighters perished in a fire in Worcester, MA, just a little over a year ago. They were brave volunteers, who sought to save two homeless people, and we now know that the homeless people had left after the fire had started. Because of the concern for the two homeless people, they volunteered and went in, and all of them perished. I remember the impact this had not only on Worcester but on our State.

When I heard, for the first time yesterday, of the loss of some 225 firefighters, more than 50 police officers, and scores of rescue workers, it is something that for many of us it felt very deeply. I know Americans across this country feel very deeply about it.

We say our prayers for the victims and their families. We reach out to them. We feel, to the greatest extent that we possibly can, the senselessness of this violence. And we resolve with them to bring to justice the perpetrators.

I support this resolution because it commits this Nation to bring the perpetrators of the terrorism to justice. We have all heard the speeches here, and we are all resolute in this.

I join with my colleagues who hope that we will have the opportunity for resolution. It appears from the briefings we have received that we have had good fortune in moving the investigation forward, and I hope that we will be able to identify those who perpetrated the crimes and those that supported them. There is some indication for that hope, as we have heard over the last days. But as has been pointed out, we will need to be resolute in this undertaking.

We have 13 families in Massachusetts who lost relatives Pan Am Flight 103. Yet, it was only a few months ago that many of our colleagues were talking about lifting the sanctions. Many of our European allies, many of our oldest friends in Europe wanted to abolish those sanctions.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent for 1 more minute.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. KENNEDY. I can still name the names of those families who lost people on Pan Am flight 103.

Yet, it was only a few months ago that many of our colleagues were talking about lifting the sanctions. Many of our European allies, many of our oldest friends in Europe wanted to abolish those sanctions.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent for 1 more minute.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. KENNEDY. I can still name the names of those families who lost people on Pan Am flight 103.

Yet, it was only a few months ago that many of our colleagues were talking about lifting the sanctions. Many of our European allies, many of our oldest friends in Europe wanted to abolish those sanctions.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent for 1 more minute.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. KENNEDY. I can still name the names of those families who lost people on Pan Am flight 103.

Yet, it was only a few months ago that many of our colleagues were talking about lifting the sanctions. Many of our European allies, many of our oldest friends in Europe wanted to abolish those sanctions.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent for 1 more minute.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. KENNEDY. I can still name the names of those families who lost people on Pan Am flight 103.

Yet, it was only a few months ago that many of our colleagues were talking about lifting the sanctions. Many of our European allies, many of our oldest friends in Europe wanted to abolish those sanctions.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent for 1 more minute.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. KENNEDY. I can still name the names of those families who lost people on Pan Am flight 103.

Yet, it was only a few months ago that many of our colleagues were talking about lifting the sanctions. Many of our European allies, many of our oldest friends in Europe wanted to abolish those sanctions.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent for 1 more minute.
Finally, I hope at this time we will not look for scapegoats. I hope that we are going to be careful, particularly with regard to our Arab-American friends. I hope that we will free ourselves from scapegoating and from the kind of conduct which would be helpful to terrorists who are interested in dividing this Nation in so many different ways.

We reject that. We must stick with the facts and follow them where they lead us and not involve ourselves in that kind of activity.

The PRESIDENT. The Senator from Oregon.

Mr. SMITH of Oregon. Mr. President, I think all of us who have an election certificate and who have been called upon to represent the citizens of our State feel an obligation today to come together as Americans, not as Republicans and Democrats but to come together in a way that says symbolically and in reality to our constituents that our ship of state is still on course.

Yesterday was called to endure yet another day of infamy. And in times of infamy, in times of tragedy, I find it helpful for us to refocus on the fundamentals that make us a great nation and a great people.

So I say to my friends, my constituents of the great State of Oregon, that this is a time to come together as a country the way the U.S. Senate today is showing it can.

Indeed, it is in time, as individuals, to reach out to our neighbors, to love them better, to hold our families closer, and to serve our country with more determination than ever in the way we live our lives.

Yesterday I was, like all, shaken beyond words at this tragedy and was soon hustled into a room—a secure room—where I was in the presence of Senator DASCHLE, Senator LOTT, Senator SMITH of Oregon, Senator REID, the DELEGATE of the House, and a number of others.

It was not a large group, but it was a group that normally has daily differences. Those differences melted away, and what remained were Americans determined to seek the greatest good of our country.

That is the kind of unity that has preserved America through days of infamy that can sustain us yet again today and in the future.

When I spoke about focusing on fundamentals, this morning I got out my little copy of the Constitution. The preamble is worth reading, as we, Members of this body, consider our responsibilities:

We the People of the United States, in Order to form a more perfect Union, establish Justice, insure domestic Tranquility, provide for the common defense, promote the general Welfare, and secure the Blessings of Liberty to ourselves and our Posterity, do ordain and establish this Constitution for the United States of America.

That preamble, that set of values, brought people of diverse interests together to make of States united States and the United States the leader of the free world. Freedom is not free. America knows that now in a renewed fashion.

Our duty in this Senate, in this Congress, and in this country is now to rescue what victims remain alive and to comfort the families of those victims who have perished. It is to restore our institutions so that we might attach the shaken confidence many feel.

Then it is to seek retribution that is careful but certain and as swift as possible. When I say that freedom is not free, I believe the American people will expect of us a heightened sense of security, but the balance, we must remember, is that as we seek security we not trample on liberty.

The great test of our time in this tragedy, as one who supports without reservation the State of Israel, is how we treat our Arab brothers and sisters who are citizens of this land. We must not repeat the mistakes of the past. We must be judicious.

We are the leader of the free world. We must not trample on freedom, as we continue to lead. We are the leader of the civilized world. Our retribution must not target in any way innocent civilians. They are the leaders of the uncivilized world, and we saw their work yesterday. America is called to lead in a different way. We are called to lead the civilized and the free.

I say, God bless our fellow citizens who perished yesterday. I say, God bless America.

I take this opportunity to recognize some Oregonians who are doing their part to respond to this tragedy. The Oregon Disaster Medical Assistance Team has assembled and is prepared for immediate deployment by the Office of Emergency Preparedness. Many of their colleagues have already been deployed; the Oregon team is still on the ground; the air support of the air transport. Their courage and willingness to serve is one of many bright lights that have brightened this dark day.

The PRESIDENT. The Senator from Connecticut.

Mr. LIEBERMAN of Connecticut. Mr. President, I arise to support this resolution.

Yesterday was a terrible day of terror. Today to me seems even worse. Yesterday, perhaps because the acts of war that were carried out against our people were so horrific, we responded. We moved forward. But it all seemed unreal. Today when I arose, it seemed painfully real. It reminded me of terrible days in my personal life when I have faced the grief of the loss of one, or two, or three.

You cope, and then you wake up with the reality and the pain is deeper.

We all feel that today, and we can only imagine, therefore, how deep and pervasive is the grief of those many families whose lives have been devastated by the acts of terror that were carried out yesterday.

I pray that God will be with them and the souls of their loved ones who are gone, that they will find comfort in good memories and strength from their faith in God.

I have been very proud to be a Member of the Senate over these last few days. And it continues today, as I listen to the statements we have heard in this Chamber which should lay no doubt of our resolve nor our unity in holding accountable those who attacked us yesterday and sought to destroy our Nation.

Today we are filled with the deepest feelings of anger and outrage. We want retaliation, and we will have it. We will not rest until we know who perpetrated these evils, and we will then respond with the full force of the righteous might that President Roosevelt summoned in 1941.

We must be careful not to mistake swift punishment for lasting peace. We are at war. That is true. But this war is dramatically different from the one we engaged in after Pearl Harbor. In this struggle, vengeance is not our destiny. Retaliation for yesterday’s atrocities is only the end of the beginning of what should be our response, not the beginning of the end of that response.

In light of this and in this regard, we are acknowledging that we are in a war against terrorism, then we must understand that this war is not against a single known enemy but a broad and elusive threat from the forces of terror. And if we are to win this war, if we are to protect our security and freedom, we must adapt both offensively and defensively to the true nature of this threat and commit ourselves to a long and difficult struggle.

We have several challenges ahead of us. First, of course, we must identify and punish the perpetrators. We must also honestly then assess our vulnerability here at home and then take swift, strong action to secure our critical national infrastructure from attack and to improve the ability of national and State and local authorities to respond to such attacks. We must consider with renewed purpose the proposals that have been made to create a new agency with responsibility for defense of our homeland, for the decades of security that our two oceans have given us are over. Our enemies can strike at us with terrorism, with cyberattacks, or with ballistic missiles. We must raise our guard here at home to those attacks.

We have been warned by many experts that the threats we will face in the 21st century would be different and more diffuse than those we had faced over the last half century. That is why we have embarked on a path of transforming our military and other Government agencies to better prepare to wage and defend this new warfare.

We must now move, after yesterday, with far greater urgency, for our enemies will not wait. They will not
The President. Mr. President, yesterday was a day of great darkness, the likes of which we have never seen before. Yesterday we saw the face of evil in a way that we have never seen before. The tragic events were a grave reminder of our Nation’s vulnerability.

Sadly, the light of a new day has continued to show us that the horror of yesterday was all too real. Our worst nightmare has come true.

We all lost loved ones yesterday, something very precious and something very real. I don’t think we will ever again look at the footage of terrorist activities overseas quite the same way again. The comforting thought that protected us in the past—“It can’t happen here”—is no longer comforting, because it has been shown to us in very real and stark terms—it can happen here.

President Bush has stated his resolve to find those responsible for this attack and bring them to justice. I support him in this effort and I am confident that President Bush, together with the members of Congress and the people of America will come together in the next days and weeks as we mourn our dead and honor the memory of those who were injured in the attacks or subsequent rescue efforts.

Yesterday threatened to increase the anger we already feel in our hearts and make us cry out for revenge against someone, anyone. Yet we did not allow that to happen. We all know the real goal of terrorism is to turn neighbor against neighbor to make us fear and mistrust the people of our communities. With God’s strength and support, and our faith and trust in Him, we can show that we are bigger and stronger than that.

Our strength as a nation comes from the different backgrounds, cultures, talents and abilities of our people. E Pluribus Unum. One out of many, is our society, and the strength of our democracy depend on it.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Wyoming is recognized.

Mr. President, yesterday was a day of great darkness, the likes of which we have never seen before. Yesterday we saw the face of evil in a cowardly and reprehensible act against the United States. The tragic events were a grave reminder of our Nation’s vulnerability.

Sadly, the light of a new day has continued to show us that the horror of yesterday was all too real. Our worst nightmare has come true.

We all lost loved one yesterday, something very precious and something very real. I don’t think we will ever again look at the footage of terrorist activities overseas quite the same way again. The comforting thought that protected us in the past—“It can’t happen here”—is no longer comforting, because it has been shown to us in very real and stark terms—it can happen here.

President Bush has stated his resolve to find those responsible for this attack and bring them to justice. I support him in this effort and I am confident that President Bush, together with the members of Congress and the people of America will come together in the next days and weeks as we mourn our dead and honor the memory of those who were injured in the attacks or subsequent rescue efforts.

Yesterday threatened to increase the anger we already feel in our hearts and make us cry out for revenge against someone, anyone. Yet we did not allow that to happen. We all know the real goal of terrorism is to turn neighbor against neighbor to make us fear and mistrust the people of our communities. With God’s strength and support, and our faith and trust in Him, we can show that we are bigger and stronger than that.

Our strength as a nation comes from the different backgrounds, cultures, talents and abilities of our people. E Pluribus Unum. One out of many, is our society, and the strength of our democracy depend on it.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Wyoming is recognized.

Mr. President, yesterday was a day of great darkness, the likes of which we have never seen before. Yesterday we saw the face of evil in a cowardly and reprehensible act against the United States. The tragic events were a grave reminder of our Nation’s vulnerability.

Sadly, the light of a new day has continued to show us that the horror of yesterday was all too real. Our worst nightmare has come true.

We all lost loved ones yesterday, something very precious and something very real. I don’t think we will ever again look at the footage of terrorist activities overseas quite the same way again. The comforting thought that protected us in the past—“It can’t happen here”—is no longer comforting, because it has been shown to us in very real and stark terms—it can happen here.

President Bush has stated his resolve to find those responsible for this attack and bring them to justice. I support him in this effort and I am confident that President Bush, together with the members of Congress and the people of America will come together in the next days and weeks as we mourn our dead and honor the memory of those who were injured in the attacks or subsequent rescue efforts.

Yesterday threatened to increase the anger we already feel in our hearts and make us cry out for revenge against someone, anyone. Yet we did not allow that to happen. We all know the real goal of terrorism is to turn neighbor against neighbor to make us fear and mistrust the people of our communities. With God’s strength and support, and our faith and trust in Him, we can show that we are bigger and stronger than that.

Our strength as a nation comes from the different backgrounds, cultures, talents and abilities of our people. E Pluribus Unum. One out of many, is our society, and the strength of our democracy depend on it.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Wyoming is recognized.

Mr. President, yesterday was a day of great darkness, the likes of which we have never seen before. Yesterday we saw the face of evil in a cowardly and reprehensible act against the United States. The tragic events were a grave reminder of our Nation’s vulnerability.

Sadly, the light of a new day has continued to show us that the horror of yesterday was all too real. Our worst nightmare has come true.

We all lost loved ones yesterday, something very precious and something very real. I don’t think we will ever again look at the footage of terrorist activities overseas quite the same way again. The comforting thought that protected us in the past—“It can’t happen here”—is no longer comforting, because it has been shown to us in very real and stark terms—it can happen here.

President Bush has stated his resolve to find those responsible for this attack and bring them to justice. I support him in this effort and I am confident that President Bush, together with the members of Congress and the people of America will come together in the next days and weeks as we mourn our dead and honor the memory of those who were injured in the attacks or subsequent rescue efforts.

Yesterday threatened to increase the anger we already feel in our hearts and make us cry out for revenge against someone, anyone. Yet we did not allow that to happen. We all know the real goal of terrorism is to turn neighbor against neighbor to make us fear and mistrust the people of our communities. With God’s strength and support, and our faith and trust in Him, we can show that we are bigger and stronger than that.

Our strength as a nation comes from the different backgrounds, cultures, talents and abilities of our people. E Pluribus Unum. One out of many, is our society, and the strength of our democracy depend on it.
September 12, 2001

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—SENATE
16901

than just symbols, and landmarks and monuments, though they are all important and beloved by us all. We are a nation of strength and spirit and freedom and we will not be held captive by these terrorists to our principles, to each other and to our shared future.

Last night, today, and for a long time to come, people in Wyoming, in Washington, in New York and all over the country will be holding prayer vigils, attending Church services, and reaching out to one another in an embrace of faith, hope and love. That is how we will continue, one people, one step at a time, to assure each other of our support for each other and to ensure that this terrible tragedy never happens again.

We also join in prayer for the victims of this tragedy, for their families, friends and loved ones. We proudly recognize their efforts for our justice. The police and rescue workers who risked their lives to help those in need. Your efforts were greatly appreciated. You will never be forgotten.

Yesterday we witnessed both chambers of this great Congress come together as one, united in plan, purpose and resolve. May we continue to work together to make our nation stronger and the world a better place for us all. It won’t be easy, but that never has not and never will stop us. May God bless and keep us all firm in our resolve.

Mr. CONRAD. Mr. President, I rise today not as a Democrat or as a Republican, but as an American. The vicious, premeditated terrorist attack on our country cannot stand. We are joined in common purpose to defend our Nation and to strike back against those who have committed these crimes against humanity. Operating under the cloak of secrecy, they destroyed the lives of thousands of men, women, and children who were completely innocent.

Those innocents were not combatants in any cause. They were merely traveling to rejoin their families, or going to work, or heading for a holyday. They were harming no one. But terrorists bent on destruction transformed airliners into flying bombs and attacked them, attacked us, and attacked America.

Let the word go out that we will not be deterred, we will not be defeated, we will not be moved by false images of evil perpetrators of mindless violence who are suffering today from this tremendous tragedy.

I want to join with others who have thanked the courageous individuals in New York and Washington and elsewhere who are helping to try to save whomever they can. And, of course, I share the intense feeling of rage and disbelief when it comes to those acts.

I had the same reaction a lot of other people did when I heard the news. It happened when, for the first time in my life, during the recess I had a chance to visit Pearl Harbor and tour with the admiral there and get a sense of just how terrible and surprising that attack was.

For many of us, that is why this action yesterday was so reminiscent of Pearl Harbor. It was an attack on our territory, on our executive, when some of us make the comparison, that is not to suggest which situation was more dangerous or what was a greater sacrifice. Really, what it is about is an expression of gratitude and love across the generations but at different times in our history. Whether it be Pearl Harbor or yesterday’s attack, the American people are asked to do extraordinary things—to defend our freedom.

In that context, I want to mention two elements of resolve and two cautions. The first resolve is that, obviously, this situation is almost certain to require military action. As a number of people have said today, this is not about simply bringing people to trial or finding a legal standard. I agree with those who say that these were “acts of war.”

As one who has frequently questioned our military intervention and the wisdom—for example, our intervention in Bosnia, whether we really went about it the right way—this situation is different. It requires a strong and aggressive military response when we are able to determine exactly who we should be going after, and I understand we are pretty close to being certain of that.

One reporter already asked me if what we did today constituted something similar to the Gulf of Tonkin resolution. Of course not. It is not a blank check.

We as Americans are all united on this issue. We can respect article I of the Constitution if we are talking about a declaration of war. We can respect the War Powers Act. We can act together and as a Congress to be sure we are unified, not just emotionally, but as a government and a country when the necessary acts have to be taken to retaliate against those who have committed these deeds.

I have heard suggestions by some that perhaps the American people will grow weary of our involvement in the Middle East and our concern about the Middle East. We will not retreat from our commitment to peace in the Middle East and, more specifically, we will not reward these terrorists by reducing or eliminating our support for the State of Israel, which is the only democracy in the Middle East, which is our steadfast ally militarily and otherwise. If those who committed these deeds believe this is the way to destroy the link between our two nations, they have just made a very large mistake.

Let me also mention two cautions, and others have already done this today, but it is important to express this. One is, as we look for answers and we look for solutions and we look for the things we must do, domestically as well as externally, we must continue to respect our Constitution and our civil liberties in this country. I am the chairman of the Constitution Subcommittee of the Judiciary Committee. I recognize this is a different world with different technologies, different issues, and different threats, but we must examine every item that is proposed in response to these events to be sure we are not rewarding these terrorists by giving up our cherished freedoms that they do not believe in and that they would like to destroy.

Finally, the other caution, which has been mentioned by so many, particularly eloquently by Senator Schumer, the senior Senator from New York, this should not be an occasion for ill-treatment of Arab Americans, Muslim Americans, South Asians, or others in this country. It is wrong. They are as patriotic as any other Americans and are feeling extremely stressed as a result of this situation. I have already heard some reports of some acts, and I roundly condemn them. We must stand together, all Americans of all backgrounds, to condemn these actions.

I think I can finally say that in the middle of this enormous sadness, I can already see our country responding. I can already feel from the contacts we have had back home and the comments and actions of our colleagues here that we are responding in the best possible way to this unprecedented challenge.

I thank all my colleagues for the way in which things have been handled in the last day, and I look forward to working together in the coming days and weeks to find the best solutions for this enormous challenge.
the loss and tragedy our Nation has suffered, the shock of which still stuns us today.

I also express the complete unity of all of us in Congress in our absolute determination to respond to this atrocity quickly, wisely, and forcefully. We will rescue survivors, bury our dead, rebuild our centers of commerce, and find the killers. Already there is order; soon there will be justice.

Kansans and Americans must be assured that our country will remain strong and will become stronger through this trial. Every hour I hear of new reports of Americans volunteering their time, their medical experience, their resources, and their blood to help their fellow citizens. We are responding to the evil of terrorism with the best of human nature, and I thank everyone who has helped those in need in Washington and New York. These unsung heroes and untold stories are the bright lights in this dark sky.

We will not only help the hurting, but we will seek out and find those killers. To terrorists and the nations that harbor them, we have this to say: We will find you, and we will deal with you as you deserve. Justice will be done.

If there are rogue nations or terrorist groups that think they can intimidate our country, they are mistaken. I have spoken with Jordan’s King Abdullah, who is vigorously assisting the United States, and also there are other Arab countries, to encourage calm and reason in the Middle East and to support us in finding those who have conducted these heinous acts. We appreciate the efforts of Jordan and thank her people and her King.

There is another point that needs to be made. The culprits are terrorists, not the Arab people or those of the Muslim faith generally or any other group or nation, but those who attempt to provide a safe harbor for terrorists.

We had already been investigating reports of increased gasoline prices, associated with gasoline price gouging. We are confident that the problems will be resolved in short order. Oil supply channels remain open. Measures are being taken to ensure the uninterrupted flow of oil, and anyone who does engage in the disgusting practice of price gouging in a time of tragedy will be prosecuted.

I encourage my fellow citizens to contact offices in their States and public authorities if there is any way we can be of assistance in dealing with this matter.

The Congress will be convening in both joint and special sessions throughout the remainder of this week. That is an important statement of our resolve to continue to conduct business, even though it is not business as usual. I certainly intend to be at every session and meeting that involves our current national crisis.

I assure every American, particularly Kansans back home, that we are determined, and we will seek justice to be done, swift and sure.

I ask for your prayers for all the victims and their families and offer my deepest condolences to the families and appreciation for the many prayers that have been offered and the help that has already flowed so richly to those who need it.

I finally note, in the weeks and months ensuing, we will be a changed nation. There are many things with which we will need to deal. We will need to deal with this battle, this war that we are in with terrorism, and we are going to have to fight it much more aggressively. It is an insidious conflict. We are going to have to get at it at its roots around the world, and we are going to need much help from many corridors. We will seek that, and we will fight and win this battle even though it is different from any other we have fought. We will pull together as a nation and do it. This will not be a Republican or a Democrat issue; this will be an American issue, as wars have been in the past, and we will wage it successfully.

I pray we will continue and we will grow from this experience. May God keep the souls of those who have lost their lives. May God save those who at this hour await rescue. May God lift the weighted hearts of the families of the missing and the dead. May God preserve all those who love freedom in this world. May God bless the United States of America.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from South Dakota is recognized.

MR. JOHNSON. Madam President, today we are gathered here in the Senate chamber to commemorate a nation under siege.

Make no mistake, the recent attack against the United States of America was intended as an attack against the principles of democracy, of personal liberty, and of religious tolerance. Our security is at stake, but even more importantly our fundamental values are under siege.
American citizens, Christian, Jewish, Muslim, have denounced this terrible violence. It is important we condemn the guilty but recognize that our American principles, the principles in our Constitution, keep us from unfairly stereotyping any ethnic or religious group. We need now, more than ever, to remain united as Americans, to put aside partisan politics, in this new war against the evil of hatred, intolerance, and barbarism.

God bless our Nation, and on this very difficult day, God bless the families who have lost so much. God bless our effort for renewed vigor in maintaining the principles of our democracy. I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oklahoma is recognized.

Mr. INHOFE. Madam President, I have heard since never have seen by Members of the House and Members of the Senate, and I have heard a lot of redundancy. We certainly have the resolve to do all we can to go after those who were responsible.

The one question I have heard over and over again is: Did we receive a warning? Were we warned this was going to happen? I look at this in a little different context in that this should serve as a warning to us. It is time to get something on the record in the Senate as to what this means and what it really could mean in the future.

Ironically, at the time this happened I was on the ninth floor of the Hart Building in the Nation's Capitol complex, and I was looking out the window as I was speaking to a group. The last phrase of my speech was the same as it has been since 1995, and that is: We in the United States are in the most vulnerable and threatened position now as a nation than we have ever been in this Nation's history. As I said that, it happened to be right at 9:30 and I saw this billowing smoke come up from the area of the Pentagon, to find out later the tragedy really took place.

We are vulnerable, and we are vulnerable in three areas, certainly in conventional forces being one-half the force strength we were in 1991. We have to understand this; the American people have to understand this: We deployed our very rare resources to places we have never seen an American, such as Bosnia or such as Kosovo.

More than any other reason our vulnerability is that we had the opportunity to have a missile defense system in place after 1999, and I say this criticizing the previous administration because they did not realize the threat was out there, the threat was real. We have veto messages from President Clinton that said: I will veto any bill that in its title contains the words conventional missile defense system because the threat is not there. In fact, a threat is there. So in looking back at what happened yesterday, I think we should have that as a warning to us of what could be even more devastating than what we witnessed yesterday.

I mention what I consider to be six incontrovertible facts. First of all, we are facing enemies who have the weapons and the skills and the mentality to strike without warning. We know that.

No. 2, they are willing and able to target innocent civilians within our borders.

No. 3, virtually all countries have weapons of mass destruction today, biologically or chemical or nuclear.

No. 4, at least three countries—I say at least because we know North Korea, Russia, and China have ICBMs that will reach the United States from anywhere in the world, but we do not know for sure that they are the only three countries because we do know China has been trading technology with countries such as Iran, Iraq, Libya, Syria, and Pakistan. So we do not really know how many there are, but we know at least they exist out there.

No. 5, we have absolutely no defense. I hope Americans understand that if a missile came over from anywhere in the world, we would be totally naked. We have no defense against an incoming ICBM.

No. 6, the will is out there. No one can question that the will is there. We can remember even China saying back during the Taiwan Straits demonstration: We are not concerned about America coming to the aid of Taipai because they would rather defend Los Angeles than Taipai. Then we remember what Saddam Hussein said in 1991: If we had waited just 10 years to go into Kuwait, the Americans would not have come because we would have had the ability to launch a missile. And here it is, 10 years later.

I hope no one has any doubt, there should not be one Member of the Senate that has any doubt—of the fact that if someone is willing to drive an airplane to the United States of America against a limited missile attack. This should be our No. 1 priority. We are now warned. The ultimate weapon of a terrorist could become a real threat very soon.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Hawaii.

Mr. AKAKA. Mr. President, no words can ever convey our regrets, our sadness, our shock, our great tragedy of September 11, 2001. The newness of the century, of a millennium, has been tarnished forever by the blood of innocent victims shed by anonymous assassins, terrorists whose only motivation is an evil hatred.

All our prayers are with the victims and their families and friends. When the final list of casualties is known, I am certain that every state, and perhaps every nation in the world will have been touched by this calamity. Our prayers will be with them forever. We will remember each and everyone as long as we live and then our descendents will remember them too. It will be their memories that guide us in the difficult days ahead.

Their deaths have reminded us of our common humanity, that what we share is greater than what separates us, and that the fabric of beliefs which makes us Americans is strong enough to resist any cowardly act by terrorists. Where one American falls, another will stand. Each of us shine as a beacon of our shared beliefs in freedom, liberty and justice. In the dawn after this dark day we will all shine. Those who expect us to be weakened will be sadly mistaken.

Those who think Americans are soft and fearful will be astonished by our strength and determination. I was a young man when Pearl Harbor was attacked. I witnessed the bombing of Pearl Harbor by Japanese torpedo and bomber planes from my dormitory in the hills above Pearl Harbor. Then we knew our enemy and he thought our will would be shattered by one frightful day of disaster. Instead our enemies in Europe and the Pacific learned that where we had been broken, we healed and became stronger.

Today we begin to become stronger. We begin by mourning our dead brothers and sisters. We begin by comforting the survivors. And as we pick up the bricks and the steel and sweep away the glass and dust, we begin to identify our enemies and design the strategy for defeating them.

There will be no place that our enemies can hide, no sanctuary for them to cower in. We will seek them out and justice will be done. It will be a long process but it will be thorough. We have come brutally to understand that terrorism is an evil beyond our borders that still threatens our homeland. We have come to understand that our enemies want to extinguish the light of freedom in America. We have come to understand that the only way to resist the darkness of hatred is to spread that beacon of light.
even farther from our shores. From this battle we hope will come not just a stronger, safer America, but a better, more secure, freer world.

May God bless America.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Texas is recognized.

Mr. GRAMM. Madam President, yesterday, terrorists attacked the temple of American capitalism and the center of American democracy. With all of their terrible sophistication, they natively have seemed to believe, by destroying buildings and killing our people, that they can kill an idea. Capitalism and democracy are the most powerful ideas in the world. They are the crowning achievement of mankind on this Earth and they are not going to be destroyed by terrorists.

Our task today is to find out with certainty who did these terrible deeds, and then to make public the names of those who made war against America. I am not talking about criminal justice. We are not going to be reading anybody their rights. No one is covered by Miranda. Any country, any city, any region, and any person who makes common cause with those who make war against America is making war against America, and the wages of sin is death. I believe these people have a hate that we cannot comprehend or understand. We are only going to be safe when these people are captured or killed.

We are hearing a lot of talk today about what we can do to be safer. I want to be safe. But let me make it clear: I don’t want to change our way of life. I want to change their way of life. If we start infringing on our own freedom, if we start limiting our own freedom to move about our country and engage in our business and live our lives, then we are giving up what this Nation will endure as it has endured, and that we are ready to change the way we do things—no, they don’t do this again, and that no one else ever has the courage to do it again.

Thank you, Madam President.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from North Carolina.

Mr. MILLER. Madam President, I am pleased to have been on the floor to hear that speech from the senior Senator from Texas. The Senator is a great patriot, and his forthrightness is going to be missed.

The victims and the loved ones of this horrible act of war should be in our prayers. The perpetrators and those who give them shelter should be in our prayers. The perpetrators and those who give them shelter should be in our prayers. The perpetrators and those who give them shelter should be in our prayers. The perpetrators and those who give them shelter should be in our prayers. The perpetrators and those who give them shelter should be in our prayers.

After Pearl Harbor, the Japanese remarked that the “sleeping giant has been awakened.” I pray that “the sleeping giant” has again been awakened, and that we are ready to change our way of life.

For too long, after terrorist attacks have happened, it seems America’s first and foremost interest has been to please our friends, and then, if permitted, punish our enemies.

After yesterday, I hope from here on out, that must be reversed. America’s first and foremost interest must be to punish our enemies, and then, if possible, please our friends.

Our response should not only be swift but it must be sustained. As I said yesterday, our will as a country has been tested. Too often in the past terrorist attacks have not been answered as forcefully as they should have been. Oh, yes, there has been indignation, even outrage. There has been wringing of hands and sad talk. We have shaken our collective heads in dismay, sighed over our cocktails, then gone home, had a nice dinner and got into a comfortable bed, feeling safe and secure that it is not going to happen here, that it is not going to happen to us.

Well, it has happened to us. It has happened here. Our world has been turned upside down. It will never be the same again, and it shouldn’t.

We must strike the viper’s nest—even if the viper is not there. We know that the Taliban and the Government of Afghanistan have nurtured Osama bin Laden for years. The diabolical plot was probably hatched there. Certainly many of the plots have been. And it is time for us to respond.

I say, bomb the hell out of them. If there is collateral damage, so be it. They certainly found our American cities to be expendable.

I also believe that we could immediately turn our attention to the security of our airlines. There is a large pool of willing ex-military personnel out there who possess the rudimentary skills to be effective, temporary air marshals if given a crash training course on the basic requirements of that job. Another option may be to have active duty military personnel do that job.

We should also install “communications hardware” aboard each aircraft that would let pilots make emergency transmissions to air traffic controllers. With today’s “star wars” capability, I believe it is possible to outfit each aircraft with an emergency combined with an “open mike” type system that would be strictly for one-way communication from aircraft to air traffic controllers. The pilot or crew member could push a button, much similar to a silent panic alarm, that would instantly alert authorities. It could also serve as a hidden microphone in the cockpit or in the passenger cabins.

Those are some of my thoughts today for whatever they are worth at this terrible time.

To paraphrase President Roosevelt, this Nation will endure as it has endured, but we must change the way we do business drastically.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Alabama is recognized.

Mr. SESSIONS. Madam President, I am honored to have the opportunity to say a word today after the most terrible tragedy that we suffered yesterday. It was a dastardly attack on our Nation that has occasioned the greatest loss of life domestically I suppose in our Nation’s history—men, women, and children, police, firemen, soldiers, and all of the families and friends will be with us on this Earth no more. Our hearts go out to those who suffered pain and injury. Our hearts go out to the families and friends who are grieving tonight. All over America, this great Nation hurts.

My own church, just for example, the Ashland Place United Methodist Church, had a time of prayer today for our families, our Nation, and its leaders. That is happening all over this country. As President Bush said, prayer is an important factor in providing this Nation strength.

We must ask ourselves: Now what can we do? What are our possibilities? I believe we can do a better job of preventing these events. Our techniques work for some time, but after a period of time people learn how to get around them. We can improve that. We can do a very good job of identifying the people who commit these crimes.

Second, we have to respond to a single terrorist act that has involved the United States, this Nation has been able to identify the people who were behind it.

Third, we can take steps at which we have not been so successful; that is, taking action against the people who perpetrate these horrible acts.

We have been, to some degree I think, handicapped by seeing these events in terms of our criminal justice system. As a Federal prosecutor, I know about the difficulties that have to be overcome to prosecute a person and convict them beyond a reasonable doubt. You don’t have that burden when you are in war. We are in war today, or at least much closer to war than we are in our criminal justice system. Thinking in terms of war will give us more freedom, once we identify who the people are, to act effectively against them. Locating them, however, is a difficult problem. We can identify them, but where are they at a given time?

I believe it was Branch Rickey who said: Luck is merely the residue of design. As a prosecutor, I know in investigating cases you have to have some luck, but you won’t have luck if you are not out there working. You will not have the break in the case that identifies where these people are until and unless you are out there shaking that tree, doing everything possible throughout this world to identify where they are. Then you make your luck.

So that is what we have to do with regard to locating these people. And make no mistake, I am absolutely confident that, if we remain steadfast and determine, we will locate these people. Then we have to develop a plan to apprehend or destroy them. We have to trace them back to their lairs and make sure they are no longer capable of inflicting this kind of death and destruction on the Nation or the world.

The Romans, a number of years ago, in the Mithridatic wars faced this problem. The pirates had grown in strength. They were all over the Mediterranean. There were tens of thousands of them, and the war was threatened very seriously. They had to face a decision; and they made that decision. According to “Apian’s Roman History” this is what happened:

When the Romans could no longer endure the damage and disgrace they made Gnaeus Pompey. They had the man of greatest reputation, commander by law for three years, with absolute power over the whole sea within the Pillars of Hercules, and of the land for a distance of 400 stades from the coast. They sent letters to all kings, rulers, peoples and cities, that they should aid Pompey in all ways. They gave him power to raise troops and to collect money from the provinces. . . .

And they raised an army. And they developed a plan. They set about to execute that plan, and it was a brilliant plan. They killed 10,000 of the pirates, and smashed the thing. It was at the end, and it broke the back of this kind of activity.

We have a similar time today. We simply have to be determined. We have to remember the friends that have been lost, and, too, as Senator Gramm, remember, with so much sadness, Barbara Olson, such a wonderful, vivacious person who loved life and gave herself to it. It is just a tragedy that she will not be with us, one who worked in this Senate as a staffer. So all of us have those whom we have lost.

In conclusion, every single person, every group, every organization, every nation must know that if they perpetrate an attack on the United States, or on those who attack the United States, they will pay a cost far more than their gain. Those individuals and groups must be hounded to their lairs and destroyed. We simply cannot tolerate this kind of activity in the future. Only in this way can we ensure that the lives lost yesterday will be given their full meaning. And only in this way can we prevent further attacks on this Nation. Because to fail to act effectively we will everywhere encourage more groups to attack this great Nation. And a great nation never encourages attacks upon itself but discourages attacks upon itself.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The time of the Senator has expired.

Mr. SESSIONS. I thank the Chair. Our Nation will, I am confident, fulfill its role as the greatest nation in the world, defend its people and its territory, and bring justice to those who have damaged us.

I yield the floor.

Mr. REID. For the information of Members, we have a prayer service tonight, as has been previously announced. It starts at 7:30. We are going to have to end business today at about 7:15 so Senators have an opportunity to gather here to move over there.

I see Senator HATCH and Senator Breaux are here. I hope we will understand that at 7:15 we are going to end the debate, if we can. There appears to be enough time for everybody if they stick to the 5 minutes. There will be some time perhaps tomorrow. The leaders are talking about that now. Maybe in the morning, before we go to the appropriations bill, we could do that. But if not, and if not, that announcement will be made later. If everyone would do what they could to expedite matters, we will have another announcement later.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Rhode Island.

Mr. REED. Madam President, we have suffered an egregious loss. We mourn for those who have perished. We pray for those who suffer. We are inspired by the courage and heroism of the people of New York, particularly the firefighters and police officers. We are inspired by the fidelity to duty of our men and women in uniform at the Pentagon and around the world.

Ages ago, the Greek historian Thucydides reminded us:

‘The bravest are surely those who have the clearest vision of what is before them, glory and danger alike, and yet notwithstanding all to meet it."

Yesterday we saw the bravest: firefighters and police officers who rushed into a burning and collapsing skyscraper, a chief of the New York City fire department, a deputy chief, and department chaplain who stayed at their posts as the building collapsed around them; soldiers, sailors, airmen, airwomen at the Pentagon who struggled through wreckage to take out survivors, and returned today to work at their posts; office workers in New York who carried fellow office workers down 60 flights of stairs to safety.

Their bravery and their courage is an inspiration to all of us. And we are profoundly angered by those terrorists who have struck this devious, horrific blow against us all.

The emotions of yesterday and today must and will coalesce into a steely resolve to mete out justice to the terrorists, those who train them, to those who harbor them, to those who train them, and to those who encourage them.

We must work with our allies to destroy the network of terrorism that is committed to imposing its fanatical and suicidal pathology on free men and women everywhere.

Yesterday we lost what little innocence that remained in our view of the world. We have been bloodied. But we retain a common and constant faith that men and women, committed to individual progress, and mindful of the dignity of all men and women, will prevail over the fanatic dedicated to destruction and darkness.

Archibald MacLeish, the American poet, gave voice to many of the emotions we feel when he spoke of those who fell in battle:

The young dead soldiers do not speak.

Nevertheless, they are heard in the still houses: who has not heard them? They have a silence that speaks for them at night and when the clock counts.

They say: We were young. We have died. Remember us; they will mean what you make them.

They say: We have done our work. We have done what we could but until it is finished it is not done.

They say: We have given our lives but until it is finished no one can know what our works were.

They say: Our deaths are not ours; they are yours; they will mean what you make them.

They say: Whether our lives and our deaths were for peace and a new hope or for nothing we cannot say; it is you who must say this.

They say: We leave you our deaths. Give them their meaning.
We will rebuild New York and the Pentagon. And although we can never replace the lives that were lost, we will give them their meaning. Let our foes everywhere know that our resolve will be more than a lamentation; they are a call to action and a promise of swift and certain justice.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Utah.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, yesterday was one of the bloodiest days in American peace time history. When suicide terrorists attacked New York and Washington, DC, they attacked our whole country.

The horror we witnessed yesterday when we saw New York’s proud skyline shattered will be with us forever. Few Americans will remain untouched by the mass graves of our citizens that we will now bury in downtown New York, in the Pennsylvania countryside, and, of course, at our Pentagon.

These terrorists killed innocent Americans from every part of our country. We were so saddened to learn that Mary Alice Wahlstrom and her daughter, Carolyn Beug, of Kaysville, UT, were struck down by this senseless violence.

Mary Alice’s husband of 52 years, Norman, described Mary Alice as the “happiest lady you’ll meet.” As one of the “kids,” she joined with her only daughter to help her twin 18-year old granddaughters settle in at art school on the East Coast. In this time of grief, we join Norman, her four sons, and eighteen grandchildren in hoping that our love and faith will continue to sustain each of us during this tragedy.

We also were devastated to hear of the loss of Barbara Olson, who perished on the plane hijacked to the Pentagon. Barbara was one of the bright lights among our creative commentators and legal experts, and her passing will most certainly leave a void not easily filled. My deepest condolences go to her husband, Ted, our Solicitor General, at this terrible, terrible time. I called him yesterday. He was devastated. This is a terrible, terrible day.

Many of us were equally grief-struck to learn that Lisa Raines, was on board American Airlines Flight 77. Lisa, although only 42, was a senior officer of Genzyme Corporation. In Congress, we lost a biotechnology leader who touched our staff and the most effective biotechnology leaders in the technology industry and one of the most effective biotechnology leaders with whom I have worked. My staff and I will miss her terribly. We share in her family’s sorrow and extend our prayers and deepest sympathy to Lisa’s husband, Steve Push.

The grief all Americans feel today is barely expressable, barely expressible in words the sorrow I feel for the thousands of families profoundly shattered by the acts of war perpetrated against us yesterday by the cowards. I commend my colleagues who have spoken so eloquently at such a great moment of national tragedy.

As my colleagues have noted, our grief is leavened by the countless stories of sacrifice and heroism. News reports yesterday from New York said that approximately 50 percent of New York’s first responders to the attacks on the Twin Towers are missing. These were the policemen, firemen and emergency personnel who rushed to the buildings and entered them in a race against collapse—a race that they lost. I hope that every American who sees a firefighter or a policeman today thinks of the sacrifice that these everyday individuals are prepared to make for the good of our society, for the good of ourselves every day.

There is no calamity America will ever meet with, and overwhelmed by, the decency, courage and selflessness of Americans coming to the aid of their own. It will be years before we can collect all of these stories and I expect, we never will, because it is impossible to measure the courage and bravery of Americans. As John says in the Bible, “Greater love hath no man than this; that a man lay down his life for his friends.”

I also commend my colleagues for their unanomous support for the administration of President George W. Bush. Americans are not partisan when they lose. These were the policemen, firemen and emergency personnel who rushed to the buildings and entered them in a race against collapse—a race that they lost. I hope that every American who sees a firefighter or a policeman today thinks of the sacrifice that these everyday individuals are prepared to make for the good of our society, for the good of ourselves every day.

President Bush was absolutely correct last night when he said that we would make no distinction between the terrorists who committed these attacks and the countries that harbor them.

We have reached the end of ambivalence when it comes to dealing with terrorism.

And while we may have a difficult battle before us, the United States will prevail, and the world of freedom-loving people will benefit.

My colleagues know that I have focused a great deal of time on the Osama bin Laden through the years, who is widely believed to be the major perpetrator of this attack. While the United States government has made no official determination over the mastermind of the terrorist organizations we have previously determined that bin Laden is an armed and active threat against this country and its interests—and he has been for over a decade.

We will have plenty of time to discuss policy in the coming days and weeks, but I say today that the threat of Osama bin Laden and his cohorts must be eliminated. And his protectors—the Taliban regime of Afghanistan, which has become a front for the violent, anti-American internationalist jihad movement that the vast majority of the Afghan people reject—must be removed from power. The government of Pakistan, a country with whom we have had many constructive relations in the past, must fully cooperate with us on these goals from this day on.

I am very grateful for the expressions of support that we have heard from around the world. But I am extremely troubled by the reports I have read and watched of some communities celebrating this attack against the U.S. The United States was attacked yesterday and thousands of our citizens perished. Now is the time that we express to the rest of the world stands, and I assure you that I will forever appreciate all of the support we receive from our allies and friends around the world—as I believe American policymakers must take note of all of those who offer rhetorical or other support for the attackers on America.

The U.S. Congress will, I know, provide all of the support and resources the administration needs to respond to this act of war, so that we can pursue the perpetrators, where ever they may be, and deliver justice to the world. But I am extremely troubled by the reports I have read and watched.

I commend my colleagues for this resolution. Elaine and I offer our prayers for the victims and their families, as well as the thousands of brave rescue workers, including Utah’s Urban Search and Rescue team. The team consists of fire department personnel from Salt Lake City and County. Our prayers go to the members of our armed forces—the greatest defenders of freedom a nation has ever known. And our prayers go to President Bush and his administration, who are dedicated to peace and must now respond to war.

May God bless America.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Missouri is recognized.

Mrs. CARNAHAN. Madam President, today—all across America and the world—hearts are heavy with grief.

We mourn for the victims and families of those lives that have been separated by yesterday’s horrific and unprecedented attack on innocent men, women and children.
September 12, 2001

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—SENATE

16907

Like all Missourians, I am deeply grateful to the rescue workers and volunteers whose heroism saved thousands of lives. Tragically, many of those heroes are now among the victims. Their sacrificial deeds stand in stark contrast to the barbaric acts we witnessed during yesterday's air attacks on peaceful people.

The terrorists wanted to do more than destroy our buildings. They wanted to destroy our influence in the world, the core of who we are as a people, and the beliefs we stand for as a democracy. They will not succeed.

I can remember as a young girl the shock and sadness we felt with the sneak attack on Pearl Harbor.

But I also recall the undaunted spirit of America and our resolve to win a victory over tyranny.

We dropped everything we were doing and devoted our full energy and resources to eradicating the threat to our freedoms.

That resolve is as firm today as it ever was.

The pursuit of freedom is our destiny as a people.

We will not now, or ever, flinch in the face of any aggressor or threat to our homeland.

Let those who practice terrorism or harbor terrorists have no doubt about America’s resolve. There is no hiding place.

We will find you.

And you will pay a heavy price for your acts against mankind.

We have withstood worse enemies than you. We conquered the evil of fascism in Europe and Asia, we rescued democracy, and we built a better world.

We defied communism for decades and proved the certainty that freedom would ultimately triumph over oppression.

Tyrants will not take these gains from us.

Admittedly, today's foes are different.

They are faceless fanatics with no clear address or even purpose.

They target innocent people, sitting in offices and airplanes.

But they are sophisticated and well-funded.

Their days are numbered. We will stand united against their aggression, and we will do so in a manner that is consistent with the Constitution that is the foundation of our greatness.

During this time of national tragedy, we stand behind our President and our national leaders.

We will make the necessary sacrifices, direct the necessary resources, and use American might, technology, and ingenuity to secure our homeland.

But most of all, we will rely on America’s courage and faith, knowing that our country has been a source of progress for humankind for over two centuries; knowing that peace-loving people around the world will join with us to eliminate this evil that plagues us all.

To the families who grieve and the victims who suffer, I say we mourn with you this day.

But there will be a dawn tomorrow and many tomorrows after that.

There will be many dawns for America.

We will prove again what the poet Carl Sandburg once said: “We are Americans. Nothing like us ever was.”

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Tennessee.

Mr. FRIST. Madam President, I join my colleagues in support of today’s resolution condemning those who perpetrated these barbaric and godless acts against our country. Our hearts ache for those who have lost loved ones, even as our minds struggle just to comprehend this unspeakable horror.

The scope of these evil acts is breathtaking. The economic losses are staggering, but they pale in comparison to the loss of life that touches so many.

The greatest and most immediate losses, of course, have been suffered by the tens of thousands of Americans who have lost family members, who have lost loved ones. Those are wounds that time will never heal.

As a nation, we have not faced a stern test in modern times. So I want to say to those responsible: Do not doubt our resolve. We will not stop until we find you and destroy you.

Our country is united. I have never before seen the unity that is everywhere in this country. In Tennessee, all across the country, Americans are joined together in their commitment to the destruction of this evil. We invite freedom-loving people from around the world to join our cause. The American spirit is alive. Americans are also united in our desire and willingness to help. Blood banks are overwhelmed with donors. Special response teams from around the country are organizing to help. A medical group just arrived from Tennessee to assist at the Pentagon.

In the coming days, those of us in Government will be making decisions intended to help restore the protections and hope that people had that all too often we take for granted.

This is no simple task, and I realize that America will never be the same after the events of September 11. As an open society with enormous respect for individual liberty, we will not tolerate police state measures.

But we must act decisively, and they expect us to act with great determination so that this will never happen to us again. President Bush and his team have given us their assurances, and all of us pray for his leadership and pledge our strong, bipartisan cooperation and support in his efforts.

We must all act as one. We must all act as one Nation and we must all speak with one voice. Let us at the same time all be mindful of some points that I think need to be remembered. First, these perpetrators are not American citizens. They are not entitled to the protection of the Constitution. They are not entitled to a presumption of innocence. They are not entitled to a trial by jury of their peers, and they are not entitled to the services of a free attorney. They have not chosen on which they will be judged, and the field that they have selected is clearly the battlefield and not a courtroom.
The nation's heart goes out to the victims, to those families who have suffered who did not do it or even help those who did, only archives what the terrorists want. Most suspicion points to Osama bin Laden and the network of affinity groups linked to him. The Saudi-born, Yemenite-descended exile in Afghanistan has orchestrated a great deal of terrorism, including the bombings of the New York World Trade Center in 1993, of two U.S. embassies in Africa in 1998, for which he has been indicted, and of the USS Cole in Yemen last October. Vows to get bin Laden have only fueled his mystique. Yet knee-jerk assumptions he was behind the 1996 Oklahoma City bombing were made foolish by the home-grown terrorist Timothy McVeigh. Attacks at wrong targets would only help highlight the vulnerability of the American people to endure terrorism. The United States has no quarrel with Islam. Most of the world's Muslims have no quarrel with the United States. The attacks produced all sorts of precautions across Maryland and the nation. A review must examine which were sensible and which were not. Certainly transportation was needed to get school children and commuters home, whether from Washington or the Baltimore suburbs. Panic, chaos, confusion and unnecessary shutdown all reward the terrorist. Terrorism must be fought with steely resolve, but also with common sense and precision.

The United States is supposed to be the only superpower, in an era of peace. Clearly very good things about American society make it vulnerable. But we are not the first people to endure terrorism. Now Americans understand better what Islam has been living through, what British people lived through before the IRA cease-fire, what ordinary law-abiding Colombians are living through from FARC. Life, the nation's business and civil society go on. Otherwise, the terrorists win. The policies of the nation, including the search for a just peace in the Middle East, go on. Otherwise, the terrorist threat on the home front, the terrorist threat on the home front, the terrorist threat on the home front. Courage and steadfastness, of an unremarkable, everyday persevering kind, are required. A well-directed and effective response from government is required. Determination, a steely resolve to see that those responsible for these horrific acts will be held accountable.

I urge our Government to proceed carefully but also to proceed not as if we were preparing for an indictment to be followed by a trial in which we must prove our case beyond all shadow of a doubt. What they did to us was to physically invade our country and slaughter innocent people in the process. What they did was to declare war on the United States of America and the people of our country.

We must respond in kind. Our military must be fully utilized. The world is watching our Nation and what we do should be remembered for longer than what they did. After they are removed as a cancer in this world, we must also address our own internal security. People in our country must know that they can fly without fear, that we can gather in large numbers and celebrate and be entertained without worry, and that our loved ones can live in a country in which we are all safe and also secure.

That is our goal. That is our challenge. We will meet that challenge.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Florida is recognized.

Mr. NELSON of Florida. Mr. President, this has been quite a day for all of us. I have the very sad duty in the State of Florida to call the loved ones of all peoples and all faiths. But we are Americans, we stand united behind our President, speaking with one voice as we move forward in the wake of this tragedy, and move forward as a nation we will.

This will be the beginning to bear all of our country's formidable resources of heart and mind. We must reach out to those families who have suffered grievous loss and to the communities torn apart by this savage act.

The challenge we face will not be surmounted overnight. We must seek out the facts which will be the basis for our response. We must have a binding determination, a steely resolve to see that those responsible for these horrific acts will be held accountable.

We should not fool ourselves that we will find a quick or simple answer, but we will persevere, and we will work in concert with democratic forces the world over to see that this terrible scourge, which has just had such devastasting consequences, is eliminated altogether.

I thank and praise the heroic efforts, the courage, and the sacrifice of our police, our firefighters, our emergency medical personnel—all of the rescue workers who have been involved in addressing this tragic situation in New York, in Pennsylvania, and here in Washington.

In fact, numerous firefighters and emergency medical service personnel from my own State have responded to the attack upon the Pentagon, and my thanks go out to all of them for their prompt efforts.

This morning, the Baltimore Sun ran a very strong editorial entitled "Answer Terror with Resolution."

Answer terror with resolution. It went on in the course of that editorial to say:

The Nation needs unity, clarity, purpose.

Courage and steadfastness of an unremarkable, everyday persevering kind, are required. A well-directed and effective response from government is required. Resolution is required to continue on our path to do what is right. These are the ways the terrorists lose.

We are resolved and determined that they shall lose.

I ask unanimous consent that the full editorial from this morning's Baltimore Sun be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material will be referred to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From The Sun, Sept. 12, 2001]

ANSWER TERROR WITH RESOLUTION

ATTACKS ON U.S.: NATION NEEDS UNITY, CLARITY, PURPOSE. TO THwart TERRORISTS’ O B JECTIVES.

The American people will rise to the challenge of the most depraved terrorist atrocity in history. We were all attacked. We are all in it together, sharing shock, fear and grief. The terrorists know that, and they are counting on it. The message was not lost on the perpetrators.

The nation's heart goes out to the victims, the innocent chosen at random and their loved ones.

Terrorism is war. It is also publicity stunt. Its purpose is to be noticed, to spread fear, to undermine confidence. The wrong responses so as to alienate more people. Terrorism has little function if the cause is not known. Usually the perpetrators seek recognition, as well.

This plot showed extreme sophistication in coordinating four plane hijackings, apparently inserting suicide pilots, and going for targets that could be hit with bombs that were not the ones against which the United States was conspicuously guarding.

All that suggests a large and well-funded not a lone wolf, a great deal of thought went into the terrorism. A great deal of cool rational thought should go into the responses.

A civil and open society is vulnerable. But this attack brought the nation and much of the world's business to a standstill. Clearly, airport security for all its nuisance to passengers is not as good as U.S. experts thought, and the terrorists must have experimented and known how to penetrate it.

President has vowed to hunt them down and we need to hunt them down and we need to establish a just trial in which we must prove our case beyond the shadow of a doubt.

I yield the floor.
do what is right. These are the ways the terrorists lose.

Mr. MCONNELL. Mr. President, yesterday's horrific and tragic events were worse than a carefully planned terrorist attack against the United States. The slaughter of innocent civilians, the total destruction of the World Trade Center, and the significant damage to the Pentagon by hijacked commercial airplanes were a brutal and outright assault on America, and all humanity.

Make no mistake, our country is at war, and this Congress should consider a formal declaration. The world must understand that America will respond with the overwhelming force and conviction that her citizens demand and expect. Let me be clear: America will identify those responsible for yesterday's violence, and they will be destroyed, no mercy.

America is at war against fanatics who appear threatened by our freedoms, prosperity, and respect for the rule of law. In the past, this war was undeclared, but undeniable. The American lives lost in the 1993 bombing of the World Trade Center, the terrorist attacks against U.S. facilities in Kenya and Tanzania, and the more recent assault against the U.S.S. Cole serve as concrete evidence of the ongoing and escalating battle.

As we sift through the rubble of buildings and comfort those whose lives have been shattered, America stands as a strong and united Nation. The shocking events of yesterday did not weaken or undermine the foundations of our democracy, foundations that were forged over two hundred years ago and have been continuously strengthened throughout our history. We fought for our freedoms then, and we will continue to defend them now. Whatever the political objectives of yesterday's terrorists, they have failed. And the extent of their failure will become abundantly clear in the coming days.

America did not seek this conflict, but we will not shy away from our responsibility to protect life and liberty. Nations that harbor or shelter terrorists must also be treated as terrorists themselves. A declaration of war would make clear to the world that the United States will be no longer stand for violence against innocent men, women, and children be they in midtown Manhattan or Murray, Kentucky.

As the world's sole superpower, we bear an awesome responsibility to assist those with similar values and strategic interests. These nations, in turn, bear a responsibility to support the United States in times of emergency. Israel, a nation long at war against some of the very radicals who may have inspired yesterday's death and destruction, has already pledged to join arms with the U.S. in the struggle against fanaticism. We should embrace Israel's offer, and enlist the assistance of other democracies in what may be a long and difficult war.

In the days, weeks, and years to come, America, alone, or with her allies will take action to prevent and lessen the opportunities for such carnage to occur in the future. These measures should include: (1) reasserting and improving intelligence operations and capabilities that must provide early warning to deter terrorist attacks at home and abroad; (2) identifying terrorist organizations worldwide and actively subverting their capabilities and physical existence; (3) reassessing and improving airport security and the integrity of aircraft cockpits; (4) enhancing security and emergency response procedures for America's most vulnerable targets, including major targets, systems of historic or symbolic significance; (5) increasing citizen awareness of suspicious activities; (6) restricting assistance and imposing sanctions against those countries harboring terrorists; and, (7) investing in the promotion of democracy and the rule of law abroad.

Once before in our history, America was the target of a surprise and deadly attack. As with Pearl Harbor, violence has been met with resolve and common purpose to defeat the enemies of our Nation. As in December 1941, our Nation is led by capable and dedicated leaders who are up to the task of responding to terrorist attacks, both foreign and domestic. President Bush and the Administration know full well that they have the support and backing of the American people.

On December 8, 1941, President Franklin Roosevelt addressed the Nation on "America's Answers to Japan's Challenge." His words ring true nearly sixty years later. If we are to win this war, we must be determined that this force shall be directed toward ultimate good as well against immediate evil. We Americans are not destroyers, we are builders. . . . We are going to win the war and we are going to win the peace that follows."

The dark minutes and hours of yesterday failed to bring our country to its knees. America's strength is its diversity, its institutions, and its people. No terrorist attack will ever extinguish the flames of freedom and democracy.

Mr. ROCKEFELLER. Mr. President, a brutal and cowardly act of terrorism has taken thousands of lives, destroyed great swathes of U.S. property, wealth, and stolen from every one of us a measure of the joy and confidence that Americans take as our birthright. As the poet Yeats once wrote, "everything is changed, and changed utterly;"

In this dark hour we all stand with President Bush and the military and intelligence leadership of this Nation in the search for the propagators of this great evil, and for an appropriate and strong response. America must respond to this crime, this act of war, rapidly and decisively, with an intensity and determination that reflect the outrage every American and I feel. A response whose violence and magnitude makes it clear to every terrorist that their lives are in danger and makes it clear to every nation that the cost of supporting terrorism is too high to bear. We will not hesitate to put the strongest military on earth to use as it was intended: to protect the lives, safety and property of American citizens, everywhere in the world.

But we must also respond with a defiant embrace of our way of living.

The United States must continue to make military and foreign policy decisions based on what is right and what is wrong, and what is in the best interest of the American people and allies with whom we are proud to stand.

This Nation must remain a free and open society, people of every race and background must be accepted and embraced without fear and without prejudice.

And America must continue to prove to the world the worth of our beliefs and of the society we have created by remaining the most dynamic force for growth, creativity and opportunity this earth has ever seen.

For all that must and will change, for all that has changed already, some things must remain constant: America must remain a moral, open and vital society embarked on a new era of triumph.

Franklin Roosevelt said that "the only thing we have to fear is fear itself." Fear is the terrorists' greatest weapon, and together, looking confidently ahead, we can disarm this cowardly and elusive foe.

The Senate will be searching for the reasons behind this tragedy and for strategies that will prevent another, similar disaster. I will report to the people of West Virginia regularly, consistent with national security.

Mr. NELSON of Nebraska. Mr. President, I would normally express that 'it's at a moment like this' when words cannot suffice to express the anguish of yesterday's attack, but there has never been a moment quite 'like this' in our history as a sovereign nation.

The magnitude of the events that transpired yesterday will be measured by an infinite number of ways for years to come. We will mourn with words and photographs and stories as we try to wrap our arms around this tragedy and try to make sense out of that which seems so senseless.

We are One Nation Under God—a God who is bigger than terrorism, who is bigger than hate, and who cannot be destroyed by acts against humanity.
As I have listened to my colleagues today, I have been deeply moved by their compassion and I share their grief and sense of loss. I join with them in expressing our best wishes for those who were injured and our deepest sympathy for those whose loved ones were lost. And I extend my thoughts and prayers to all those who have lost friends and neighbors in this tragedy.

We know that the anger and the sadness we feel are the reactions we should have when innocent people are killed, and they are reflected in the expressions of determination to hold those who are responsible accountable—to the fullest extent possible.

In an effort to find hope in the midst of this pain, I have focused on the truth that terrorism cannot expunge the virtues on which this country was built. Yes, the landscape has been irrevocably changed and lives on Earth tragically and abruptly ended, but our composition, our principles and our freedom remain the same.

We Americans are a people whose spirit of freedom and democracy will not be defiled by those who choose terrorism over the lives of our mothers and brothers and sisters and fathers.

America’s freedom and democracy—the realm of the individual, untarnished by the enemy—will never be compromised. Ever.

Yes, those virtues can be challenged. And they have been to a most un-conscionable degree. Make no mistake. We are at war. But this is not a conventional war fought by conventional means, rather this is an invisible war where the targets are uncertain and the attacks are unpredictable. There are no tanks, no troops, and no clear military objectives in this new war. We have worked to define and counter these new threats to world stability. But yesterday those new threats, which we have sought to define, were made real.

But just as those threats were made real, the spirit of America was renewed. Firefighters and policemen in Pennsylvania and New York and Washington have worked—and continue to work—selflessly to salvage lives, as well as clues from the wreckage. These men and women are heroes—every one of them. In the hundreds we have lost, there have perished in the line of duty. Each has made the ultimate sacrifice. This display of courage has been an important first step toward healing.

As we survey the emotional and physical damage, we will not brush aside the implications of the attack. The world is on notice. America is more than bricks and mortar. Her citizens are strong. I am convinced we will show the world how great nations emerge as the deadliest day in the history of the United States. More than 2,400 Americans perished in the attack on Pearl Harbor and nearly 1,500 lost their lives on the beaches of Normandy during the D-Day invasion. The Battle of Antietam, the bloodied day of the Civil War, resulted in more than 4,800 deaths and 2,800 missing. The death toll of Tuesday’s terrorist attacks may reach the tens of thousands. The magnitude of these losses is unimaginable.

America’s indomitable spirit is un-daunted. We’ve seen it in the actions of rescue workers who risked, and gave, their lives to save others. We’ve seen it in reports of brave actions attempted to rescue hijacked planes. We’ve of the lines of volunteers outside blood banks and the prayer services held throughout this Nation. We’ve seen it in the steady determination of those ready to rebuild what has been lost. We’ve seen it in the resolve of a President and our military, ready, willing, and able to strike back at whoever we determine committed this horror. Our Government stands in unity. Republican and Democrat. House and Senate. In support of our Commander-in-Chief.

We are at war with the scourge of our time: terrorism. This was not just an attack upon America. As Britain’s Prime Minister Tony Blair commented, it was an attack upon democracy. It was a blow against the civilized world. Our allies and those opposed to terrorism must unite with resolve and commitment to rid the earth of this plague. We cannot deliver a glancing blow, we must go to the root and strike at the heart of terrorist organizations and those nations granting them safe harbor.

America will be forever changed. As with Pearl Harbor, our very way of life has been threatened. We must look at whatever shortcomings in either intelligence or security procedures allowed this tragedy to happen. But we must not relinquish the freedoms that make us Americans. If we abandon the liberties we cherish, the terrorists will have won.

America will stand together, as we always have when our Nation is threatened. We will defeat this enemy.

As President Franklin Delano Roosevelt said on December 8, 1941:

No matter how long it may take us to overcome this prelude and destroy the American people, in their righteous might, will win through to absolute victory . . . Hostilities exist. There is no blinking at the fact that our people, our territory, and our interests are in grave danger. With confidence in our Armed Forces, with the unbounding determination of our people, we will gain the inevitable triumph. So help us God.

As I arrived at the Capitol early Wednesday morning, I was greeted by the sounds of fighter jets and military helicopters in the air above Washington. But I heard something else as well, a clear sound that pierced the morning air, a lone trumpeter nearby played the National Anthem.

God bless the United States of America.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, America, sadly, has a new date that will live in infamy for the rest of our lives and generations to come.

Today, more than 24 hours after the first plane hit the Pentagon, I am here to ask this Nation to unite in the resolve to win this. In the line of countless U.S. civilians, we are only now beginning to realize that we will spend many days, weeks, months and years trying to come to grips with the magnitude of yesterday's attack on our freedom.

We are left with searing images of a horror that could not be contained, acts of terrorism that unfolded before our eyes, gripping this Nation and the world in raw and vivid devastation, touching all of us with feelings expressed in public and in private: from panic to helplessness; helplessness to anger; and anger to loss.

This morning we stand in this capital as one to condemn these attacks, comfort the victims and their families and commit our full support to bring those responsible to justice. Our heartfelt thoughts and fervent prayers go out to those who have been lost.

Our response in the days ahead to the mass murder we planned to carry out the attack and to any nation or nations that gave them aid must be as decisive as was our steadfast determination to defend our homeland and punish the aggressors in the immediate aftermath of a day that we will remember as one of the worst in American history.

The challenge ahead will require strengthening U.S. defenses and intelligence at home in ways consistent with American values. Embassies and military bases must be better defended along with domestic airports and other civilian targets.

But this does not mean that we can allow terrorists to alter the fundamental openness of U.S. society or the government's respect for civil liberties. If we do so, they will have won.

Some have rightfully declared that yesterday's attacks amount to an all-out declaration of war against America. If so, then we will have to make sacrifices by accepting greater inconvenience in public places and perhaps developing and cultivating a heightened sense of awareness common in other nations that have come to accept terrorist activity as a price for openness and democracy.

But above all, a state of war means a national bipartisan commitment to attack and defeat our Nation's enemies. There can be no greater purpose to our foreign and defense policy in the years ahead.

This means that we must embark on an unprecedented effort that will take us beyond arresting individual suspects or engaging in isolated attacks as has been done in response to previous incidents such as the attack on U.S. military in the 1996 Khobar towers bombing in Saudi Arabia, or the 1998 bombings of the U.S. embassies in Kenya and Tanzania by the jurisdiction of bin Laden's network to name a few.

In the past, the United States has failed to fully confront those linked to terrorist attacks against Americans. Yesterday, it was made clear that we can no longer afford to do so.

The United States must now seek to assemble an international alliance to identify and eliminate all sources of support for the terrorist networks that would wage war on our nation including the identification and destruction of the larger networks behind these attacks.

So many have drawn a comparison between September 11 and December 7, 1941. And while there are differences, what President Franklin D. Roosevelt said after Dec. 7 in Pearl Harbor, "a date which will live in infamy," applies to yesterday just as well. "Always will we remember the character of the onslaught against us," Mr. Roosevelt said. "No matter how long it may take us to overcome this premeditated invasion, the American people in their righteous might will win through to absolute victory. I believe I interpret the will of the Congress and of the people when I assert that we will not only defend ourselves but will make very certain that this form of treachery shall never endanger us again."

Yesterday the world changed for every American. What those responsible for these barbaric acts will come to learn is that our resolve has not.

Mr. ENSIGN. Mr. President, as a Nation we mourn the loss of so many Americans whose lives were tragically ended by these vicious attacks, the folks on the airplanes, the soldiers and civilians at the Pentagon, the office workers at the World Trade Center and the rescue workers who tried to save them. Each one of them had family, friends, and loved ones, and plans for the future. We cannot begin to fathom the incomparable grief their deaths have produced—of mothers who lost sons, husbands who lost wives, children who lost parents.

While we bow our heads in prayer for those whose lives were taken, we remain unbowed in the face of this heinous assault on our Nation. The terrorists who perpetrated this crime may have succeeded in striking the symbols of American power, the World Trade Center and the Pentagon, but they cannot succeed in inflicting any harm on the American people or our commitment to defend our liberty, our democracy and our way of life.

I have full confidence that the United States has the will and ability to determine and execute its duties as the only nation responsible for this assault on our homeland, as well as those states that are giving them refuge, and those entities that are providing them aid and financial support.

We must deliver a punishing blow to these terrorists and those who aid and abet them, because terrorists only understand one language, the language of force.

Anything less than a full response to these attacks will leave our borders wide open. We must not abandon civil liberties within the country when I assert that we will not only defend ourselves but will make very certain that this form of treachery shall never endanger us again.

Let there be no doubt: We are at war. It is not a war we choose to fight, but one that we will finish and win.

The last time an act of war was committed against the U.S. on our soil, at Pearl Harbor, our military and economic power combined to form the greatest fighting force the world had ever seen. Admiral Yamamoto had called us a "sleeping enemy." He woke us to his great regret. The terrorists who committed these crimes have made a similar mistake, they have awoken a sleeping giant. Americans are slow to anger, but once roused we are not to be trifled with.

Today, the men and women in this great chamber are not Democrats or Republicans, but Americans. And as Americans, we in Congress stand united in support of our Nation's leader, the President of the United States. You will not hear partisan bickering. You will not see members trying to lead from Capitol Hill. The United States must speak with one voice and act in concert for the good of our nation.

We will stand united, because Americans always unite in the face of adversity. We cannot allow these acts of terrorism to divide Americans by race, ethnicity, or religion. If we start fighting, neighbor against neighbor, then the terrorists have won. We will have destroyed the very foundation of our country's greatness, the fact that people of all backgrounds can join together in the great American experiment.

As our Nation prepares to confront the threat of terrorism, we must be careful not to destroy the freedom which makes this country great. We must not abandon civil liberties within our borders or our ability to act unilaterally outside our borders if we want to be safe. As Thomas Jefferson warned us, "Those who desire to give up Freedom in order to gain Security, will not have, nor do they deserve either one."

Nevada is proud of our slogan, that we were "Battle Born." It is on our State flag. It reflects the firmness of purpose and the willingness to fight for what is right that is so much a part of the character of the Nevadan people.

This is as true today as it was when we entered the Union during the Civil War. The nature of the challenges may have changed over the years, but not the nature of the Nevadans fighting to overcome them.

I know that Nevadans—and, indeed, all Americans—will rise to this challenge. We can give blood and donate to charities that are helping the victims like the Salvation Army and the Red Cross. We can go out to our front yards and proudly fly the American flag to send a signal across oceans that we will not be cowed by terrorists.

The Nevadans in our Armed Forces stand ready to fight and die to defend their Nation. Let us pray for them, for all our men and women in uniform. Let us pray for President Bush our military leaders, and for all the rescue workers and victims. And most importantly, let us pray that, in this struggle between good and evil, the righteous will prevail.

Mr. DAYTON. Mr. President, today, I join with my Senate colleagues in united support for this joint resolution. I share their horror and outrage at the terrible atrocities committed yesterday against our country and our citizens. Those criminal acts will not be forgotten, and they will be avenged, at the right time, against their evil perpetrators.

One hundred years ago, at our Minnesota State Fair, Theodore Roosevelt spoke his famous words: "Speak softly, and carry a big stick." Today is a day to speak softly and briefly. Words can barely describe our reactions, our revulsion, and our resolve.

Let there be no doubt: our Nation will recover from these despicable acts. We will learn the painful lessons necessary to strengthen our domestic and foreign intelligence capabilities, our air traffic emergency system, and our guarantee to our citizens of their safety wherever they live, travel and work.

We will support our President and his associates as they identify those responsible for these vicious assaults and retaliate against them. We will move forward and we will move ahead. No one anywhere should doubt our national strength and resolve; our private and public actions in the days and months that follow it.

Ms. COLLINS. Mr. President, Americans woke up this morning a sadder and angrier people. It is very difficult to wrap one's mind around the terrible tragedy this country suffered yesterday, and still harder to comprehend what must have been in the hearts of the people willing to commit such atrocities against their fellow human beings. It is very hard even to find the words to speak about it.

But speaking about it is something that we must do. The American people and the government of the United States of America must today speak with crystalline clarity. The families and friends of those killed or wounded in this heart attack, and the millions upon millions of people around the world, are with them this day. The heroic firefighters, police officers, rescue workers, National Guardsmen, and medical personnel who are even now struggling to find and save the lives of surviving victims must know that our hearts and deepest gratitude are with them in their vital work. Our commander-in-chief and all the men and women of our armed forces, our law enforcement agencies, our intelligence agencies must know that we stand behind them as perhaps never before in my lifetime, as they set about with grim resolution to ensure that justice is done to those responsible.

Yesterday we were attacked, but today, we stand united.

As our work resumes, we will work together to plug the security holes that this attack has uncovered.

I want to thank all of the emergency personnel who responded with such courage: including the brave men and women of our armed forces, police, firefighters and medical personnel.

And I want everyone to know that our Nation is united behind the President. We will help the injured. We will protect our citizens. And will punish those who committed these cowardly acts. Every resource we have will be made available to support the recovery effort.

Yesterday we were attacked, but today, we stand united.

As our work resumes, we will work together to plug the security holes that this attack has uncovered.

I want all of my colleagues to know that as chair of the Transportation Appropriations Subcommittee, my top priority is the safety of the traveling public.

We will do what it takes to ensure the safety of our Nation’s transportation system.

In the coming days and weeks, we must evaluate our security system, our intelligence abilities and the safety of our transportation network.

Out citizens have a right to feel secure at home, at work, at school, and on our Nation’s transportation system. We are going to make sure Americans have the safety and security they deserve.

Ours is a great Nation. We have withstood many challenges. We will learn the lessons of this challenge, and together, we will build a stronger country.

So as we take stock of this unspeakable tragedy, as we learn the names of the victims, as we bear stories of the heroism and compassion in the wake of this attack, we are standing together we are speaking with one voice and will do everything we can to ensure our safety and to answer this evil act with just and peaceful action.

Mr. VOINOVICH. Mr. President, yesterday the United States of America suffered a horrible national tragedy the images of which will forever etch the date, September 11, 2001, in the collective minds of the American people.

As Father Eugene Hemrick of St. Joseph’s Church said this morning at mass, our lives will never be the same.
As one who has lost a child, I know this is especially true for the families of those who were the victims of this act of war and of those who laid down their lives to save them. My thoughts and prayers are with them.

As Members of Congress, our first responsibility, working with the President on a bipartisan basis, is to secure the support that the victims and their families—and those who provided their loved ones to the United States armed forces in the days and months ahead—their grief should not be compounded by worrying about how they will deal with their tragedy financially.

We must provide the resources our country needs to guarantee that yesterday’s tragedy will not be repeated during the lifetime of our children and grandchildren.

We must prioritize how we allocate these resources including the money to upgrade the technology and personnel that secure our airports, and we must respond to the human capital needs that caused former Defense Secretary James Schlesinger, who now represents the U.S. Commission on National Security in the 21st Century, to say before the Oversight of Government Management Subcommittee earlier this year: . . . it is the Commission’s view that fixing the personnel problem is a precondition for fixing virtually everything else that needs repair in the institutional edifice of U.S. national security policy.

We must also dedicate ourselves to meeting a number of other challenges, including: providing the resources that will help improve our signals intelligence capabilities, or, in other words, our ability to “listen in” on unfriendly nations; stepped-up law enforcement to prevent the dispersal and coordination of effort between various Federal agencies such as CIA, FBI, NSA, etc.; coordination of effort between Federal, State and local governments and law enforcement to maximize our ability to stop terrorism at its source; and increasing electronic surveillance and satellite imagery to track the enemies of peace.

Finally, we must identify those responsible for committing these cowardly acts of war as well as those who have encouraged them by silence, assistance or asylum and we must hold these individuals or Nations accountable.

I agree with what President Bush said in his address to the Nation last evening: we will make no distinction between the terrorists who committed these acts and those who harbor them.

We must also join the President and declare war on terrorism and convince world religions and political leaders that terrorism is a threat to peace in the world and a prelude to Armageddon. We need more voices in the world like Pope John Paul II who said: “Time has now come to renew lead to genuine solutions to humanity’s problems.

Our determination to winning the war on terrorism must have the same high priority that we gave to winning World War II, and we must engage our allies in this war.

We should make the same preparation that we made for D-Day and the world’s entry into the Persian Gulf war. Our actions must be ongoing and relentless, and be dedicated to excising the cancer of terrorism wherever it raises its ugly head.

Our efforts cannot be another catharsis after a national tragedy, and they must not fade with time into business as usual. We owe it to yesterday’s victims and their families, especially their children and grandchildren.

Most of all, we owe it to the American people and the world community to bring an end to terrorism everywhere and forever.

Mr. BINGAMAN. Mr. President, all of us share in the overwhelming shock and grief at the horrible events of these past 24 hours. All of us are struggling to find the right words to say—struggling to understand our own emotions—struggling to ask the question, “Where do we go from here?” Despite our uncertainties, we share a common bond—the deepest sorrow and sympathy we feel for those innocent people who have lost their lives or whose loved ones in those instants of unspeakable inhumanity. I join with the people and leaders of the world in expressing my profound sadness and extending my personal condolences to all of those who have been victimized by these acts of terror.

Ten years ago, the Soviet Union crumbled and the Warsaw Pact disappeared. The cold war, many have said, is over. The nation moved quickly to come to terms with the evolving international system were high. What we were only beginning to understand, however, was that the end of the cold war did not mean the end of America’s need to ensure its security in new and different ways.

In the wake of the cold war, military experts around the country began to discuss their concerns about the nation’s new vulnerabilities. The prospect of a pitched battle between heavy tanks on the fields of Europe was no longer the most likely threat to which our military forces would be asked to respond. Experts began discussing the idea of “asymmetric warfare”—that is, the ability of America’s enemies to attack us on our weakest side. The cold war structure of our military and its weaponry was designed to meet adversaries with similar capabilities—not to meet adversaries who chose different, often less sophisticated ways to get the job done.

Slowly, too slowly, we have begun to understand the full extent of our country’s vulnerability. Many are concerned that potential enemies are developing intercontinental missiles with destructive warheads and that we have the current missile defense system capable of deterring an attack of that kind. Others have warned that our enemies could deliver packages of destruction in suitcases, rental trucks, or on shipboard. Still others have observed our inability to intercept low flying aircraft or cruise missiles heading to American targets. The events of the past 24 hours demonstrate another horrible scenario of America’s vulnerability to terrorist attack, an attack that was indiscriminate in those who were targeted.

Our priorities are clear at this point. First, rescue these victims and help those who survive, their families, their children. Second, resolve to identify and punish those who perpetrated these heinous acts. And finally, we must put in place the safeguards and protections so that this type of heinous act can never occur again in this country.

My colleagues have referred to September 11th as a day of infamy—calling the same shock and horror the nation experienced at the news of Pearl Harbor on December 7, 1941. President Roosevelt offered the nation some vital words on that occasion. He said: "No matter how long it may take us to overcome this premeditated invasion, the American people in their righteous might will win through to absolute victory. This is a time of national resolve. This is a time for us to also recall President Roosevelt’s directive that “the greatest fear we have, is fear itself.”

We cannot permit ourselves to stand still, overcome by shock and grief such as these. We must move forward as one, resolved to seek justice, and solutions to our national security laid bare by this horrible event.

Ms. STABENOW. Mr. President, I rise today to talk about how Tuesday’s terrorist attack is testing our national will and our character. There are no words to fully describe the depth of that infamy and not enough tears to properly mourn the innocent lives that have been so cruelly taken. We join all Americans in a focus to help those victims, families, and communities who have been terrorized, and also to focus on those who are responsible and hold them accountable.

I come together to say loudly and clearly that we will respond to those who have attacked and murdered Americans. But I am also concerned that in our anger, an anger we all share, we would lash out at fellow Americans who come here from the Middle East, which is also wrong.

I am disturbed by reports from my home State of Michigan that Arab Americans have been victims of threats and hate mail and their businesses and families have been threatened. One businessman felt so threatened that he bought two American flags—one for his home and one for his business—as he felt he needed to prove his love for his country. We want people to fly American flags out of pride, not out of fear.

The Koran, just as the Bible, is a book of love, peace, and tolerance. There are those who have outrageously perverted that message. It reminds me of the Ku Klux Klan that took the symbol of the cross and the words of Christianity and perverted them to lash out with hate and violence against other Americans. There are those in the world who are extremists who are doing the same thing with the religion of Islam.

I know Arab Americans, as all Americans, grieve and have anger and outrage about what has happened, and they want justice for Americans.

I stand here today urging all of us to come together as Americans and not allow the terrorists to have another victory of terror and take steps against one another. Arab Americans, as all Americans, have lost loved ones. They are part of the rescue crews, and they are the nurses and the doctors working around the clock to save lives. We, all of us, have been attacked and assaulted as Americans of all faiths, of all backgrounds. We stand as Americans to take on those who threaten us and to respond and hold them accountable. It is important in our grief and in our anger that we not allow the terrorists to turn us on each other.

This is a time of testing our American values, our beliefs, and our will. It is an opportunity for all of us to stand together and make a statement about who we are and what we believe. I know that in the great State of Michigan, all that I represent, everyone I represent, stand together arm in arm to make sure the victims and the families have what they need and that justice is served in this outrageous attack on America.

Mr. BURNS. Mr. President, on September 11, 2001, the United States suffered the worst combined acts of domestic terrorism in our Nation’s history. The world stood shocked and outraged at unprovoked acts of violence committed upon thousands of innocent Americans.

President George W. Bush has ordered the Federal Government to assist the victims of violence, investigate these acts by having us take on and track down, root out and relentlessly pursue terrorists and the states that harbor them. I stand by to support our military and intelligence community do their work. As a member of this body, I stand ready.

I stand firmly behind our Commander-in-Chief, President Bush. There is no doubt of our unity and resolve to track down, root out and relentlessly pursue terrorists and the states that harbor them. I stand by to support our military and intelligence community and fight for any and all of the resources they need to ensure our national security. Let us not forget this as we consider our fund-

This is a great Nation with a strong and brave history. Americans have come together and triumphed through difficult times like these. We will again, and we will punish those responsible. This is not a time for hate and mistrust. Our military might remains unchallenged. America remains resolved in its efforts to find those who so cowardly committed these horrific acts.

To quote a few words from our Battle Hymn. “We, as a community will soon understand the true meaning of the line, ‘he hath loosed the fateful lightning of his terrible swift sword’ as America will indeed march on.

Mr. CAMPBELL. Mr. President, first and foremost, my thoughts and prayers are with the families, the friends, and the fellow citizens of the victims of violence, those who were wounded, and the families of the lost. Words cannot fully describe what happened to these victims yesterday. But our actions in the days and months ahead must do them justice as we honor their ultimate sacrifice.

I also extend my gratitude to the scores of emergency service providers, police, firefighters, medical personnel who rushed to the World Trade Center and the Pentagon to save lives, only to lose their own. And we remember the many military and federal law enforcement personnel who were working in those buildings at the time of the attacks who also lost their lives.

As we sort through the details of the savagery terrorist attacks yesterday, and the wreckage left in their wake, we begin to comprehend more fully the scope of this tragedy in our history. On December 7, 1941, more than 2400 lives were lost at Pearl Harbor. And, during the Battle of Antietam on September 17, 1862 the day with the highest death toll on American soil—approximately 22,000 lives were lost. No matter what the final count will be of lives lost yesterday, what distinguishes us from the terrorists is the value we place on those lives as we learn more about the enormously sad events of this newly written chapter in our nation’s history.

This morning all Americans woke up to a different world. The horrific terrorist attacks yesterday on our economic and military institutions were a frontal assault not only on America, but on freedom and democracy enjoyed by millions of people around the world. We Americans learned again that our freedom comes with a cost, and the battlefields are not on foreign soils or far away beaches. While we must always seek peace we, as a nation, will always defend ourselves from any enemy.

America has been challenged before, and now America once again will rise to meet this challenge head-on.

The terrorists who perpetrated yesterday’s carnage will be held accountable for their senseless acts of violence. Towards that end, I strongly support the statement President Bush made last night to the nation and his commitment that “we will make no distinction between the terrorists who committed these acts and those who harbor them.”

The U.S. military has come to quit treating terrorists as mere criminal disobedients, and begin treating their acts as acts of war.

The time has past when renegade nations can give safe harbor to terrorists or provide assistance to those who harbor them. The U.S. military have my full support to strike and strike hard when the perpetrators and their accomplices are identifying and found. For this Senator, that time can’t come soon enough.

Ms. MIKULSKI. Mr. President, I rise to add my voice in our united support for the moment of silence we are adopting today.

American citizens, American aircraft, American buildings have been brought down by barbaric terrorist attacks. Yet the American people, as with their elected representatives, and our free and open society stand un bowed and united.

America’s spirit and resolve remain strong.

Today, we express condolences to those who suffered unspeakable loss. The victims and their families are in our thoughts and prayers.

We commend the rescuers, working even now to save lives, the brave firefighters and police, doctors and nurses and volunteers helping others and giving blood.

The Federal Emergency Management Agency, which my Appropriations subcommittee funds and oversees, is coordinating Federal assistance. Director Albaugh and FEMA have mobilized urban search and rescue teams. A top notch team from Montgomery County and 7 others from around the country are hard at work at the Pentagon and in New York. All 20 other teams are ready to go. FEMA has also mobilized Army medical support, the Army Corps of Engineers to help debris removal, and Army mortuary teams.

We are cooperating to confront this tragedy with President Bush and the Administration, within Congress, and with allies around the world.

We condemn these barbaric attacks.

We are committed to tracking down the terrorists, punishing them and those who harbor them, and preventing future attacks.

American people being tested by terrorism and America is rising to the challenge. I am proud of the American people, who are responding not only with shock and grief, but with unity, resolve, and generosity.

Mr. THURMOND. Mr. President, I rise in support of the resolution condemning yesterday’s terrorist attacks. These assaults were a strike not only against America, but against freedom itself.

My deepest condolences go out to those who lost loved ones during this tragedy, and to those rescue workers who risked, and many times lost, their lives in an effort to save the victims of this horrific event. Even as we pause to remember our victims and their families, we promise to be unswerving in our pursuit of the cowards responsible for these acts. It is a day we will never forget, but a day that only strengthens our resolve to protect the freedoms that are the cornerstone of our society.

Watching this tragedy unfold, I recalled the day when our sovereign country was violated by the attack on Pearl Harbor. Over the years, I hoped and prayed that our hallowed lands would never again be defiled, and now yesterday’s attack has been attacked. This time, however, our enemies remain nameless. These cowardly acts of terrorism will not be tolerated, and those who are responsible for these atrocities will suffer the consequences of their actions. In this misstep, we have faced adversity before, and the United States of America will once again prevail.

If this assault was intended to weaken the American spirit, these cowards will be very disappointed. When speaking on the purpose and means of war, the military theorist Carl Clausewitz stated that "the fighting forces of the enemy "must be put in such a condition that they can no longer carry on the war." We stand united and prepared to use whatever means necessary to respond and destroy those responsible.

The acts of heroism and generosity by Americans in New York City, Washington, D.C., and across the Nation has been extraordinary, but not surprising. It is in difficult times that we are fortified by unity, and this will be no exception.

On December 8, 1941, President Franklin D. Roosevelt addressed Congress in response to Pearl Harbor. His words then inspired our Nation to victory. Once again, his words ring true, "With confidence in our armed forces—with the unbounding determination of our people—we will gain the inevitable triumph—so help us God."

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, much has been said on the Senate floor about the events of the last 24 hours. I, too, want to express deep sadness and remorse for those that lost family and lived ones. I, too, share your loss. The free world shares your grief. This was an attack on liberty, an attack on freedom, we are all victims.

As a veteran of the last World War, I know personally the horrors of war. Pearl Harbor woke us from the dream that we would not be dragged into World War II. Many commentators have made the parallel between yesterday’s attack and the attack on Pearl Harbor in 1941. We were compelled to act to stop the country from an unprompted attack.

The events of yesterday, like those during Pearl Harbor, shattered our innocence and exposed our vulnerabilities as a Nation. In my view, yesterday’s event is more than an act of war because, unlike Pearl Harbor, the enemy preyed upon unsuspecting, defenseless civilians to maximize the loss of innocent human life and spread terror. Our freedom and our values, the open and essential virtues that define us as a Nation, were exploited to inflict terror upon our society. These were coordinated, well-organized attacks on our Nation. Unlike the wars of the past, today we face an enemy we cannot immediately identify and whose exact location is unknown. The President and his national security team have committed all the resources possible to find those who are responsible. I stand with the President and the American people, we must seek those who are responsible and respond with overwhelming force.

While this is still an emotionally charged time, we must begin the process of looking forward and addressing our security vulnerabilities exposed by yesterday’s attacks. It is important to note that as the events were unfolding, the Senate was debating the appropriations bill for the Departments of Commerce, Justice, and State, the funding legislation that directly addresses counter-terrorism. And while it may not provide immediate relief for the situation that we’re faced with today, it is one of the legislative vehicles through which we can impact the Nation’s ability to address counter-terror.

We must have better organization and coordination of our counter-terrorism efforts. Sen. JUDD GREGG and I have worked to organize an Office of Counter-terrorism under the Attorney General and provide adequate funding for the Department of Justice. As we have argued, we must redouble our national commitment and sustained effort to address counter-terrorism. It begins with a coordinated effort organised in the Department of Justice, it is enhanced by improved security standards, and it is sustained through adequate funding.

This attack has highlighted the need for a new national security paradigm. It has showed us that the tools of our economic strength, such as civilian aircraft, can be used as instruments of destruction. Therefore, we must analyze the security threats associated with all modes of commerce. Obviously, we must take immediate action to review and enhance the security at our Nation’s airports. Moreover, we know that current, inadequate security at our nation’s ports makes us vulnerable to future attacks. With this knowledge, Senator GRAHAM and I introduced a bill to address security at our ports. The legislation seeks to enhance security at U.S. seaports through better interagency coordination and more sufficient resources.

Seaports are international borders that currently are not subject to any security guidelines enforced by the federal government. Drug smuggling, illegal alien smuggling, and trade fraud are prevalent crimes along the Nation’s seaports, and the lax security measures make terrorist activity an imminent threat as well.

Terrorism affects us all. We as a nation must stand together and state resolutely that we will not tolerate terrorism, in the United States or abroad.
HUGH C. GRAHAM

• Mr. DODD. Mr. President, I rise today to honor a distinguished constituent of mine, Hugh C. Graham, upon the occasion of his retirement from the American Legion Department of Connecticut.

As a member of the American Legion for 57 years, Hugh served as an Adjutant for 32 years, the longest-serving Adjutant in the country. During his tenure within this revered national organization, Hugh admirably dedicated himself to promoting the health and well-being of our veterans, both in Connecticut and beyond.

Hugh himself served his country with distinction during World War II. Having enlisted in the United States Army in New Haven on February 16, 1942, he served as a rifleman in the 45th Infantry “Thunderbird” Division of the 180th Infantry Regiment.

For 51 days, he fought bravely in the European theater, earning commendation, and participated in five amphibious assault landings. For his valor and wounds received at Anzio Beach, Hugh was awarded the Purple Heart Medal. He was also awarded the European-African Theater Medal with five campaign stars, the World War II Victory Medal, and the Combat Infantryman’s Badge. Hugh received an honorable discharge from the Army on September 5, 1945.

Over the years, Hugh’s work with and for veterans has received well-deserved recognition from numerous organizations. He has received various service and achievement awards from the Forty and Eight Society, the Veterans Administration, and the American Legion Department of Rhode Island.

Although Hugh is retiring from active duty in the American Legion, I know that he will continue to promote veterans affairs and that his legacy will live on within the organization. Once again, I would like to congratulate Hugh upon the occasion of his retirement and I sincerely thank him for all of the service he has given to both Connecticut and our nation. I wish him all my best in his future endeavors.

ADDITIONAL STATEMENTS

HONORING JAMES L. VOSS, DVM

• Mr. ALLARD. Mr. President, I rise today to pay tribute to a man who has had a profound impact on Colorado State University, the City of Fort Collins, CO and the veterinary community nationwide.

According to US News and World Report, Colorado State University boasts the second best veterinary medicine program in the nation. One of the reasons CU is so nationally renowned is Fort Collins Veterinary Teaching Hospital. And one of the reasons that hospital exists is because of Dr. James L. Voss.

HUGH C. GRAHAM

• Mr. DODD. Mr. President, I rise today to honor a distinguished constituent of mine, Hugh C. Graham, upon the occasion of his retirement from the American Legion Department of Connecticut.

As a member of the American Legion for 57 years, Hugh served as an Adjutant for 32 years, the longest-serving Adjutant in the country. During his tenure within this revered national organization, Hugh admirably dedicated himself to promoting the health and well-being of our veterans, both in Connecticut and beyond.

Hugh himself served his country with distinction during World War II. Having enlisted in the United States Army in New Haven on February 16, 1942, he served as a rifleman in the 45th Infantry “Thunderbird” Division of the 180th Infantry Regiment. For 51 days, he fought bravely in the European theater, earning commendation, and participated in five amphibious assault landings. For his valor and wounds received at Anzio Beach, Hugh was awarded the Purple Heart Medal. He was also awarded the European-African Theater Medal with five campaign stars, the World War II Victory Medal, and the Combat Infantryman’s Badge. Hugh received an honorable discharge from the Army on September 5, 1945.

Over the years, Hugh’s work with and for veterans has received well-deserved recognition from numerous organizations. He has received various service and achievement awards from the Forty and Eight Society, the Veterans Administration, and the American Legion Department of Rhode Island.

Although Hugh is retiring from active duty in the American Legion, I know that he will continue to promote veterans affairs and that his legacy will live on within the organization. Once again, I would like to congratulate Hugh upon the occasion of his retirement and I sincerely thank him for all of the service he has given to both Connecticut and our nation. I wish him all my best in his future endeavors.

ADDITIONAL STATEMENTS

HONORING JAMES L. VOSS, DVM

• Mr. ALLARD. Mr. President, I rise today to pay tribute to a man who has had a profound impact on Colorado State University, the City of Ft. Collins, CO and the veterinary community nationwide.

According to US News and World Report, Colorado State University boasts the second best veterinary medicine program in the nation. One of the reasons CU is so nationally renowned is Fort Collins Veterinary Teaching Hospital. And one of the reasons that hospital exists is because of Dr. James L. Voss.

HUGH C. GRAHAM

• Mr. DODD. Mr. President, I rise today to honor a distinguished constituent of mine, Hugh C. Graham, upon the occasion of his retirement from the American Legion Department of Connecticut.

As a member of the American Legion for 57 years, Hugh served as an Adjutant for 32 years, the longest-serving Adjutant in the country. During his tenure within this revered national organization, Hugh admirably dedicated himself to promoting the health and well-being of our veterans, both in Connecticut and beyond.

Hugh himself served his country with distinction during World War II. Having enlisted in the United States Army in New Haven on February 16, 1942, he served as a rifleman in the 45th Infantry “Thunderbird” Division of the 180th Infantry Regiment. For 51 days, he fought bravely in the European theater, earning commendation, and participated in five amphibious assault landings. For his valor and wounds received at Anzio Beach, Hugh was awarded the Purple Heart Medal. He was also awarded the European-African Theater Medal with five campaign stars, the World War II Victory Medal, and the Combat Infantryman’s Badge. Hugh received an honorable discharge from the Army on September 5, 1945.

Over the years, Hugh’s work with and for veterans has received well-deserved recognition from numerous organizations. He has received various service and achievement awards from the Forty and Eight Society, the Veterans Administration, and the American Legion Department of Rhode Island.

Although Hugh is retiring from active duty in the American Legion, I know that he will continue to promote veterans affairs and that his legacy will live on within the organization. Once again, I would like to congratulate Hugh upon the occasion of his retirement and I sincerely thank him for all of the service he has given to both Connecticut and our nation. I wish him all my best in his future endeavors.
CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—SENATE

September 12, 2001

MESSAGES FROM THE PRESIDENT

Messages from the President of the United States were communicated to the Senate by Ms. Evans, one of his secretaries.

EXECUTIVE MESSAGES REFERRED

As in executive session the Presiding Officer laid before the Senate messages from the President of the United States submitting sundry nominations which were referred to the appropriate committees.

(The nominations received today are printed at the end of the Senate proceedings.)

MESSAGES FROM THE HOUSE

At 12:48 p.m., a message from the House of Representatives, delivered by Mr. Hays, one of its reading clerks, announced that the House has passed the following bills, in which it requests the concurrence of the Senate:

H.R. 434. An act to direct the Secretary of Agriculture to enter into a cooperative agreement to provide for retention, maintenance, and operation, at private expense, of 12 concrete dams and weirs located within the boundaries of the Emigrant Wilderness in the Stanislaus National Forest, California, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources.

H.R. 695. An act to establish the Oil Region National Heritage Area; to the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources.

H.R. 788. An act to provide for the conveyance of the excess Army Reserve Center in Kewaunee, Wisconsin; to the Committee on Armed Services.

H.R. 1628. An act to amend the National Trails System Act to designate El Camino Real de los Tejas as a National Historic Trail; to the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources.

H.R. 1761. An act to designate the facility of the United States Postal Service located at 8588 Richmond Highway in Alexandria, Virginia, as the “Herb Harris Post Office Building”; to the Committee on Government Affairs.

H.R. 1766. An act to designate the facility of the United States Postal Service located at 4270 John Marr Drive in Annandale, Virginia, as the “Stan Parris Post Office Building”; to the Committee on Government Affairs.

H.R. 1937. An act to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to engage in certain feasibility studies of water resource projects in the State of Washington; to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

EXECUTIVE AND OTHER COMMUNICATIONS

The following communications were laid before the Senate, together with accompanying papers, reports, and documents, which were referred as indicated:

EC-3733. A communication from the Program Analyst of the Federal Aviation Administration, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Airworthiness Directives: Airbus Model A319, A320, and A321 Series Airplanes” ((RIN2120–AA64)(2001–0439)) received on August 23, 2001; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-3734. A communication from the Program Analyst of the Federal Aviation Administration, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Airworthiness Directives: Empresa Brasileira de Aeronautica SA Model EMB 135 and 145 Series Airplanes” ((RIN2120–AA64)(2001–0441)) received on August 23, 2001; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-3735. A communication from the Program Analyst of the Federal Aviation Administration, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Airworthiness Directives: Empresa Brasileira de Aeronautica Model EMB–135ER and 135LR Series Airplanes, and Model EMB 145, 145MR and 145LR Series Airplanes” ((RIN2120–AA64)(2001–0442)) received on August 23, 2001; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-3736. A communication from the Program Analyst of the Federal Aviation Administration, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Airworthiness Directives: McDonnell Douglas Model DC 10-30 Series Airplanes Modified by Supplemental Type Certificate SA8432SW” ((RIN2120–AA64)(2001–
EC-3755. A communication from the Program Analyst of the Federal Aviation Administration, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Airworthiness Directives: McDonnell Douglas Model MD 11 Series Airplanes” ((RIN2120-AA64)(2001–0467)) received on August 23, 2001; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-3756. A communication from the Chief of Regulations and Administrative Law, United States Coast Guard, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Safety/Security Zone Regulations: Naval Submarine Base Bangor and Naval Submarines, Puget Sound and Strait of Juan De Fuca, WA” ((RIN2115-AA97) (2001–0077)) received on August 23, 2001; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-3757. A communication from the Program Analyst of the Federal Aviation Administration, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Airworthiness Directives: McDonnell Douglas Model MD 11 Series Airplanes” ((RIN2120-AA64) (2001–0465)) received on August 23, 2001; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-3758. A communication from the Program Analyst of the Federal Aviation Administration, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Airworthiness Directives: McDonnell Douglas Model MD 11 Series Airplanes” ((RIN2120-AA64)(2001–0463)) received on August 23, 2001; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-3759. A communication from the Chief of Regulations and Administrative Law, United States Coast Guard, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Safety/Security Zone Regulations: Summerfest 2001 and Milwaukee Island Lagoon, Milwaukee, Wisconsin” ((RIN2115-AA97) (2001–0077)) received on August 23, 2001; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-3760. A communication from the Chief of Regulations and Administrative Law, United States Coast Guard, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Safety/Security Zone Regulations: Lower Mississippi River, LMR Mile 351.1 to 357, Vaucouleurs Trenchfill A (COTU: Memphis 01-007)” ((RIN2115-AA97) (2001–0078)) received on August 23, 2001; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-3761. A communication from the Chief of Regulations and Administrative Law, United States Coast Guard, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Establishment of a Class E Enroute Domestic Airspace Area, Kingman, AZ; confirmation of ef- ficiency and cost-benefit analysis” ((RIN2120-AA64)(2001–0455)) received on August 23, 2001; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-3762. A communication from the Chief of Regulations and Administrative Law, United States Coast Guard, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Safety/Security Zone Regulations: Vicinity of Atlantic Fleet Weapons Training Facility, 0468) received on August 23, 2001; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-3745. A communication from the Program Analyst of the Federal Aviation Administration, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Airworthiness Directives: Boeing Model 737–600, 700, and 800 Series Airplanes” ((RIN2120-AA64)(2001–0456)) received on August 23, 2001; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-3746. A communication from the Program Analyst of the Federal Aviation Administration, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Airworthiness Directives: Boeing Model 747–400 and 767 Series Airplanes Equipped with GE CF6-80C2 Series Engines” ((RIN2120-AA64)(2001–0452)) received on August 23, 2001; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-3747. A communication from the Program Analyst of the Federal Aviation Administration, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Airworthiness Directives: McDonnell Douglas Model MD 11 Series Airplanes” ((RIN2120-AA64)(2001–0451)) received on August 23, 2001; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-3748. A communication from the Program Analyst of the Federal Aviation Administration, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Airworthiness Directives: McDonnell Douglas Model MD 11 Series Airplanes” ((RIN2120-AA64)(2001–0449)) received on August 23, 2001; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-3749. A communication from the Program Analyst of the Federal Aviation Administration, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Airworthiness Directives: McDonnell Douglas Model MD 11 Series Airplanes” ((RIN2120-AA64)(2001–0448)) received on August 23, 2001; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-3750. A communication from the Program Analyst of the Federal Aviation Administration, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Airworthiness Directives: McDonnell Douglas Model MD 11 Series Airplanes” ((RIN2120-AA64)(2001–0447)) received on August 23, 2001; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-3751. A communication from the Program Analyst of the Federal Aviation Administration, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Airworthiness Directives: McDonnell Douglas Model MD 11 Series Airplanes” ((RIN2120-AA64)(2001–0446)) received on August 23, 2001; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-3752. A communication from the Program Analyst of the Federal Aviation Administration, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Airworthiness Directives: McDonnell Douglas Model MD 11 Series Airplanes” ((RIN2120-AA64)(2001–0444)) received on August 23, 2001; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-3753. A communication from the Program Analyst of the Federal Aviation Administration, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Airworthiness Directives: McDonnell Douglas Model MD 11 Series Airplanes” ((RIN2120-AA64)(2001–0443)) received on August 23, 2001; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-3754. A communication from the Program Analyst of the Federal Aviation Administration, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Airworthiness Directives: McDonnell Douglas Model MD 11 Series Airplanes” ((RIN2120-AA64)(2001–0442)) received on August 23, 2001; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-3755. A communication from the Program Analyst of the Federal Aviation Administration, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Airworthiness Directives: McDonnell Douglas Model MD 11 Series Airplanes” ((RIN2120-AA64)(2001–0441)) received on August 23, 2001; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-3756. A communication from the Program Analyst of the Federal Aviation Administration, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Airworthiness Directives: McDonnell Douglas Model MD 11 Series Airplanes” ((RIN2120-AA64)(2001–0440)) received on August 23, 2001; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-3757. A communication from the Program Analyst of the Federal Aviation Administration, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Airworthiness Directives: McDonnell Douglas Model MD 11 Series Airplanes” ((RIN2120-AA64)(2001–0439)) received on August 23, 2001; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-3758. A communication from the Program Analyst of the Federal Aviation Administration, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Airworthiness Directives: McDonnell Douglas Model MD 11 Series Airplanes” ((RIN2120-AA64)(2001–0438)) received on August 23, 2001; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-3759. A communication from the Program Analyst of the Federal Aviation Administration, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Airworthiness Directives: McDonnell Douglas Model MD 11 Series Airplanes” ((RIN2120-AA64)(2001–0437)) received on August 23, 2001; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-3760. A communication from the Program Analyst of the Federal Aviation Administration, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Airworthiness Directives: McDonnell Douglas Model MD 11 Series Airplanes” ((RIN2120-AA64)(2001–0436)) received on August 23, 2001; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-3761. A communication from the Program Analyst of the Federal Aviation Administration, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Airworthiness Directives: McDonnell Douglas Model MD 11 Series Airplanes” ((RIN2120-AA64)(2001–0435)) received on August 23, 2001; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-3762. A communication from the Program Analyst of the Federal Aviation Administration, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Airworthiness Directives: McDonnell Douglas Model MD 11 Series Airplanes” ((RIN2120-AA64)(2001–0434)) received on August 23, 2001; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-3763. A communication from the Program Analyst of the Federal Aviation Administration, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Airworthiness Directives: McDonnell Douglas Model MD 11 Series Airplanes” ((RIN2120-AA64)(2001–0433)) received on August 23, 2001; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-3764. A communication from the Program Analyst of the Federal Aviation Administration, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Airworthiness Directives: McDonnell Douglas Model MD 11 Series Airplanes” ((RIN2120-AA64)(2001–0432)) received on August 23, 2001; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.
Vieques, PR and Adjacent Territorial Sea” (RIN2115-AA97) (2001-0080)) received on August 23, 2001; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-3763. A communication from the Chief of Regulations and Administrative Law, United States Coast Guard, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Drawbridge Regulations: Atlantic IntraCoastal Waterway, Port of Key West, Monroe County, FL” (RIN2115-AB47) (2001-0077)) received on August 23, 2001; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-3764. A communication from the Chief of Regulations and Administrative Law, United States Coast Guard, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Drawbridge Regulations: Connecticut River, CT” (RIN2115-AB47) (2001-0078)) received on August 23, 2001; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-3765. A communication from the Chief of Regulations and Administrative Law, United States Coast Guard, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Drawbridge Regulations: Harlem River, Newton Creek, NY” (RIN2115-AB47) (2001-0076)) received on August 23, 2001; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-3766. A communication from the Chief of Regulations and Administrative Law, United States Coast Guard, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Drawbridge Regulations: Manitowoc River, Wisconsin” (RIN2115-AB47) (2001-0075)) received on August 23, 2001; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-3767. A communication from the Chief of Regulations and Administrative Law, United States Coast Guard, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Regatta Regulations: SLK, Inner Harbor, Patapsco River, Baltimore, Maryland” (RIN2115-AB46) (2001-0024)) received on August 23, 2001; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-3768. A communication from the Chief of Regulations and Administrative Law, United States Coast Guard, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Regatta Regulations: Harlem River, Newton Creek, NY” (RIN2115-AB47) (2001-0076)) received on August 23, 2001; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-3771. A communication from the Chief of Regulations and Administrative Law, United States Coast Guard, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Drawbridge Regulations: Wisconsin” (RIN2115-AB47) (2001-0075)) received on August 23, 2001; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-3772. A communication from the Chief of Regulations and Administrative Law, United States Coast Guard, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Drawbridge Regulations: John Lighthouse Bridge (ICW), Johns Island, SC” (RIN2115-AB47) (2001-0071)) received on August 23, 2001; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-3773. A communication from the Chief of Regulations and Administrative Law, United States Coast Guard, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Drawbridge Regulations: Komenevec River, ME” (RIN2115-AB47) (2001-0070)) received on August 23, 2001; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-3774. A communication from the Chief of Regulations and Administrative Law, United States Coast Guard, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Drawbridge Regulations: Jamaica Bay and Connecting Waterways, NY” (RIN2115-AB47) (2001-0074)) received on August 23, 2001; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-3775. A communication from the Chief of Regulations and Administrative Law, United States Coast Guard, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Safety/Security Zone Regulations: Oswego Harbor, Oswego, NY” (RIN2115-AA97) (2001-0074)) received on August 23, 2001; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-3776. A communication from the Chief of Regulations and Administrative Law, United States Coast Guard, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Fisheries of the Northeastern United States; Atlantic Bluefish Fishery; Commercial Quota Transfer and Reopening” (I.D. PR-2001-0085) received on August 23, 2001; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-3777. A communication from the Chief of Regulations and Administrative Law, United States Coast Guard, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Office of Sustainable Fisheries, National Marine Fisheries Service, Department of Commerce, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Fisheries of the Northeastern United States; Summer Flounder Fishery; Commercial Quota Harvested for Connecticut” (I.D. PR-2001-0086) received on August 23, 2001; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-3778. A communication from the Acting Director of the Office of Sustainable Fisheries, National Marine Fisheries Service, Department of Commerce, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Fisheries of the Northeastern United States; Summer Flounder Fishery; Closure of the Commercial Fishery from Horse Mountain to Point Arena, CA” received on August 25, 2001; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-3779. A communication from the Senior Legal Advisor to the Bureau Chief, Mass Media Bureau, Federal Communications Commission, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Amendment of Section 73.622(b), Table of Allotments, DTV Broadcast Stations, Charlottesville, VA” (Doc. No. 06-240) received on August 30, 2001; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-3780. A communication from the Senior Legal Advisor to the Bureau Chief, Mass Media Bureau, Federal Communications Commission, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Amendment of Section 73.622(b), Table of Allotments, DTV Broadcast Stations, Lexington, KY” (Doc. No. 06-240) received on August 30, 2001; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-3781. A communication from the Acting Director, Office of Sustainable Fisheries, National Marine Fisheries Service, Department of Commerce, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Fisheries of the Northeastern United States; Summer Flounder Fishery; Commercial Quota Harvested for Connecticut” (I.D. PR-2001-0086) received on August 23, 2001; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-3782. A communication from the Acting Director of the Office of Sustainable Fisheries, National Marine Fisheries Service, Department of Commerce, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Highly Migratory Species Fisheries; Atlantic Highly Migratory Species Fisheries; Atlantic Highly Migratory Species Fisheries; Atlantic Highly Migratory Species Fisheries” (I.D. PR-2001-0085) received on August 23, 2001; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-3783. A communication from the Acting Director of the Office of Sustainable Fisheries, National Marine Fisheries Service, Department of Commerce, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Highly Migratory Species Fisheries; Atlantic Highly Migratory Species Fisheries; Atlantic Highly Migratory Species Fisheries; Atlantic Highly Migratory Species Fisheries” (I.D. PR-2001-0085) received on August 23, 2001; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-3784. A communication from the Acting Director of the Office of Sustainable Fisheries, National Marine Fisheries Service, Department of Commerce, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Fisheries of the Northeastern United States; Summer Flounder Fishery; Commercial Quota Harvested for Connecticut” (I.D. PR-2001-0086) received on August 23, 2001; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-3785. A communication from the Acting Director of the Office of Sustainable Fisheries, National Marine Fisheries Service, Department of Commerce, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Fisheries of the Northeastern United States; Summer Flounder Fishery; Commercial Quota Harvested for Connecticut” (I.D. PR-2001-0086) received on August 23, 2001; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-3786. A communication from the Acting Director of the Office of Sustainable Fisheries, National Marine Fisheries Service, Department of Commerce, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Fisheries of the Northeastern United States; Summer Flounder Fishery; Commercial Quota Harvested for Connecticut” (I.D. PR-2001-0086) received on August 23, 2001; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-3787. A communication from the Acting Director of the Office of Sustainable Fisheries, National Marine Fisheries Service, Department of Commerce, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Fisheries of the Northeastern United States; Summer Flounder Fishery; Commercial Quota Harvested for Connecticut” (I.D. PR-2001-0086) received on August 23, 2001; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-3788. A communication from the Acting Director of the Office of Sustainable Fisheries, National Marine Fisheries Service, Department of Commerce, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Fisheries of the Northeastern United States; Summer Flounder Fishery; Commercial Quota Harvested for Connecticut” (I.D. PR-2001-0086) received on August 23, 2001; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.
Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Regatta Regulations: SLK; Bush River, Abingdon, Maryland” (RIN2115-AE66 (2001–0056)) received on August 30, 2001; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-3798. A communication from the Chief of Regulations and Administrative Law, United States Coast Guard, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Drawbridge Regulations: Bayou Bœuf, LA” (RIN2115-AE63 (2001–0051)) received on August 30, 2001; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-3799. A communication from the Chief of Regulations and Administrative Law, United States Coast Guard, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Drawbridge Regulations: Mississippi River, Iowa and Illinois” (RIN2115-AE67 (2001–0081)) received on August 30, 2001; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-3800. A communication from the Chief of Regulations and Administrative Law, United States Coast Guard, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Safety/Security Zone Regulations: Henlopen Inlet, RE” (RIN2115-AA97 (2001–0086)) received on August 30, 2001; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-3801. A communication from the Chief of Regulations and Administrative Law, United States Coast Guard, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Standard Instrument Approach Procedures; Miscellaneous Amendments (36) Amdt. No. 2065” (RIN2120-AA55 (2001–0048)) received on August 30, 2001; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-3802. A communication from the Chief of Regulations and Administrative Law, United States Coast Guard, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Safety/Security Zone Regulations: Indian Summer Festival 2001, Milwaukee, Wisconsin” (RIN2115-AA97 (2001–0061)) received on August 30, 2001; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-3803. A communication from the Chief of Regulations and Administrative Law, United States Coast Guard, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Safety/Security Zone Regulations: Interior Trunk Release; Response to Petitions for Reconsideration” (RIN2127-A137) received on August 30, 2001; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-3804. A communication from the Chief of Regulations and Administrative Law, United States Coast Guard, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Safety/Security Zone Regulations: Indian Summer Festival 2001, Milwaukee, Wisconsin” (RIN2115-AA97 (2001–0061)) received on August 30, 2001; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-3805. A communication from the Chief of Regulations and Administrative Law, United States Coast Guard, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Safety/Security Zone Regulations; Arthur Kill, Staten Island, NY” (RIN2115-AA97 (2001–0062)) received on August 30, 2001; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-3806. A communication from the Parallel Specialist, Federal Aviation Administration, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Airworthiness Directive: CFM International CF656 Series Turbofan Engines” (RIN2120-AA64 (2001–0471)) received on August 30, 2001; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-3807. A communication from the Parallel Specialist, Federal Aviation Administration, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Drawbridge Regulations: McArdle Bridge Repairs—Boston, Massachusetts” (RIN2115-AA97 (2001–0084)) received on August 30, 2001; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-3808. A communication from the Parallel Specialist, Federal Aviation Administration, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Safety/Security Zone Regulations; Sister Bay Marina United States Coast Guard, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Drawbridge Regulations: Ouchita River, LA” (RIN2115-AA97 (2001–0093)) received on August 30, 2001; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-3809. A communication from the Parallel Specialist, Federal Aviation Administration, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Airworthiness Directive: BAE Systems (Operations) Limited Model Avro 146-J83A and 146-J100A Series Airplanes” (RIN2120-AA64 (2001–0472)) received on August 30, 2001; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-3810. A communication from the Parallel Specialist, Federal Aviation Administration, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Standard Instrument Approach Procedures; Miscellaneous Amendments (36) Amdt. No. 2065” (RIN2120-AA55 (2001–0048)) received on August 30, 2001; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-3811. A communication from the Attorney/Advisor, National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Anthropomorphic Test Devices; 12-Month Review; Response to Petitions for Reconsideration” (RIN2127-A137) received on August 30, 2001; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-3812. A communication from the Attorney/Advisor of the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Interior Trunk Release; Response to Petitions for Reconsideration” (RIN2127-A151) received on August 30, 2001; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-3813. A communication from the Attorney/Advisor, Maritime Administration, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled...
CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—SENATE

September 12, 2001

16921

“Eligibility of U.S.-Flag Vessels of 100 Feet or Greater in Registered Length to Obtain a Fishery Vessel Documentation” (RIN233–AB45) received on August 30, 2001; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-3815. A communication from the Senior Legal Advisor to the Bureau Chief, Mass Media Bureau, Federal Communications Commission, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Amendment of Section 73.202(b), Table of Allotments, FM Broadcast Stations (Elkhorn City and Coal Section, Kentucky)” (Doc. No. 00–116) received on August 30, 2001; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-3822. A communication from the Senior Legal Advisor to the Bureau Chief, Mass Media Bureau, Federal Communications Commission, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Amendment of Section 73.202(b), Table of Allotments, FM Broadcast Stations (Salem and Molalla, Oregon, and Fairport and Avon, New York)” (Doc. No. 01–59) received on August 30, 2001; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-3816. A communication from the Senior Legal Advisor to the Bureau Chief, Mass Media Bureau, Federal Communications Commission, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Amendment of Section 73.202(b), Table of Allotments, FM Broadcast Stations (West Hurley, Rosendale and Rhinebeck, New York, and North Canaan and Sharon, Connecticut)” (Doc. No. 97–178) received on September 4, 2001; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-3817. A communication from the Senior Legal Advisor to the Bureau Chief, Mass Media Bureau, Federal Communications Commission, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Amendment of Section 73.202(b), Table of Allotments, FM Broadcast Stations (Topeka, Iola, Emporia, and Pleasanton, Kansas)” (Doc. Nos. 98–9, 98–13) received on August 30, 2001; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-3818. A communication from the Senior Legal Advisor to the Bureau Chief, Mass Media Bureau, Federal Communications Commission, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Amendment of Section 73.622(b), Table of Allotments, FM Broadcast Stations (Sugar Hill and Toccoa, Georgia)” (Doc. No. 98–162) received on August 30, 2001; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-3819. A communication from the Senior Legal Advisor to the Bureau Chief, Mass Media Bureau, Federal Communications Commission, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Amendment of Section 73.622(b), Table of Allotments, DTV Broadcast Stations, Panama City, Florida” (Doc. No. 99–215) received on August 30, 2001; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-3820. A communication from the Senior Legal Advisor to the Bureau Chief, Mass Media Bureau, Federal Communications Commission, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Amendment of Section 73.622(b), Table of Allotments, FM Broadcast Stations (Elk horn City and Coal Run, Kentucky)” (Doc. No. 00–114) received on August 30, 2001; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-3821. A communication from the Senior Legal Advisor to the Bureau Chief, Mass Media Bureau, Federal Communications Commission, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Amendment of Section 73.202(b), Table of Allotments, FM Broadcast Stations (Naches, Sunnyside and Benton City, Washington)” (Doc. No. 01–95) received on August 30, 2001; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-3824. A communication from the Chief Financial Officer, Office of Managing Director, Federal Communications Commission, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “In the Matter of Amendment of Parts 1, 21, 61, 73, 74, and 76 of the Commission’s Rules; Adoption of a Mandatory FCC Registration Number” (Doc. No. 00–205) received on September 4, 2001; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES

The following reports of committees were submitted:

By Mr. LEVIN, from the Committee on Armed Services, without amendment:

S. 1416: An original bill to authorize appropriations for fiscal year 2002 for military activities of the Department of Defense, to prescribe personnel strengths for such fiscal year for the Armed Forces, and for other purposes; from the Committee on Armed Services; placed on the calendar.

By Mr. LEVIN:

S. 1418: An original bill to authorize appropriations for fiscal year 2002 for military construction, and for other purposes; from the Committee on Armed Services; placed on the calendar.

By Mr. LEVIN:

S. 1419: An original bill to authorize appropriations for fiscal year 2002 for military construction, and for other purposes; from the Committee on Armed Services; placed on the calendar.

By Mr. HATCH:

S. 1420: A bill to make clerical and other technical amendments to title 18, United States Code, and other laws relating to crime and criminal procedure; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. DASCHLE (for himself, Mr. LOTT, Mr. REID, Mr. NICKLES, Mr. SCHUMER, Mr. CLINTON, Mr. WARNER, Mr. ALLARD, Mr. HELMS, Mr. AKAKA, Mr. ALLARD, Mr. BACCUS, Mr. BAYH, Mr. BENNETT, Mr. BINGMAN, Mr. BOND, Mrs. BOXER, Mr. BURD, Mr. BURNT, Mr. BURNT, Mr. BYRD, Mr. CAMPBELL, Ms. CANTWELL, Ms. CARNARAN, Mr. CARPER, Mr. CHAFEE, Mr. CLELAND, Mr. COCHRAN, Mr. COLLINS, Mr. CONRAD, Mr. CORZINE, Mr. CRAIG, Mr. CRAPO, Mr. DAYTON, Mr. DEWINE, Mr. DODD, Mr. DOMENICI, Mr. DURBIN, Mr. EDWARDS, Mr. ENNIS, Mr. ENZI, Mr. FRANKOVL, Mrs. FRANKOVL, Mr. FITZGIBBON, Mr. FRIST, Mr. GRAHAM, Mr. GRAMM, Mr. GRAHAM, Mr. GREGG, Mr. HAGEL, Mr. HARKIN, Mr. HATCH, Mr. HOLINGS, Mr. HUTCHISON, Mr. INHOFE, Mr. INOUYE, Mr. JEFFORDS, Mr. JOHNSON, Mr. KENNEDY, Mr. KERRY, Mr. KOHL, Mr. KYL, Ms. LANDRIEU, Mr. LEEAHY, Mr. LEVIN, Mr. LIEBERMAN, Mrs. LINDSAY, Mr. LIEBERMAN, Mr. MCDONALD, Mr. MCDONALD, Mr. MCMILLAN, Ms. MCMILLAN, Mr. MURKOWSKI, Ms. MURRAY, Mr. NELSON of Florida, Mr. NELSON of Nebraska, Mr. KENNEDY, Mr. ROACH, Mr. ROBINS, Mr. SFRITZ, Mr. SHELBY, Mr. SMITH of Oregon, Ms. SNOW, Mr. SPECTER, Ms. STABENOW, Mr. STEVENS, Mr. THOMAS, Mr. THOMPSON, Mr. THURMOND, Mr. TORRICHelli, Mr. VON VON STEVENS, Mr. WISE, Mr. WYDEN):

S.J. Res. 22. A joint resolution expressing the sense of the Senate and House of Representatives regarding the terrorist attacks launched against the United States on September 11, 2001; considered and passed.

SUBMISSION OF CONCURRENT AND SENATE RESOLUTIONS

The following concurrent resolutions and Senate resolutions were read, and referred (or acted upon), as indicated:

By Mr. THURMOND (for himself, Mr. ALLEN, Mr. BAYH, Mr. RUIZ, Mr. RUSSELL, Mr. BOND, Mr. BROWNBACK, Mr. BURNING, Mr. BURNS, Mr. BYRD, Mr. CAMPBELL, Mr. CLELAND, Mr. COCHRAN, Mr. CONRAD, Mr. CRAIG, Mr. CRAPO, Mr. DEWINE, Mr. DODD, Mr. DOMENICI, Mr.
CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—SENATE
September 12, 2001

DURBIN, Mr. EDWARDS, Mr. FITZGERALD, Mr. Frist, Mr. GRAHAM, Mr. GRAM, Mr. GRASSLEY, Mr. HAGEL, Mr. HATCH, Mr. HELMS, Mr. HOLLINGS, Mrs. HUTCHISON, Mr. HUTCHINSON, Mr. KERRY, Ms. LANDRIER, Mr. LEVIN, Mr. SMITH of New Hampshire, Mr. NICKLES, Mr. ROBERTS, Mr. ROCKEFELLER, Mr. SANTORUM, Mr. SCHUMER, Mr. SESSIONS, Mr. SHEVLAY, Mr. SMITH of Minnesota, Mr. SMITH of Oregon, Mr. SPERET, Mr. THOMPSON, Mr. Voinovich, Mr. WARNER, and Mr. WELSTON):

S. Res. 199. A resolution designating the week beginning September 16, 2001, as “National Historically Black Colleges and Universities Week”; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. HATCH (for himself, Mr. REID, Mr. INHOFE, Mr. THURMOND, Mr. BENNETT, Mr. DODD, Mr. STEVENS, Mr. CRAIG, Mr. GRASSLEY, Mr. CLELAND, Mr. HUTCHISON, and Mr. INOUYE):

S. Res. 160. A resolution designating the month of October 2001, as “Family History Month”; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

ADDITIONAL COSPONSORS

S. 88
At the request of Mr. ROCKEFELLER, the name of the Senator from California (Mrs. FEINSTEIN) was added as a cosponsor of S. 88, a bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to provide an incentive to ensure that all Americans gain timely and equitable access to the Internet over current and future generations of broadband capability.

S. 227
At the request of Mr. SMITH of Oregon, the name of the Senator from Washington (Ms. CANTWELL) was added as a cosponsor of S. 172, a bill to benefit electricity consumers by promoting the reliability of the bulk-power system.

S. 247
At the request of Mr. HARKIN, the name of the Senator from New York (Mrs. CLINTON) was added as a cosponsor of S. 247, a bill to provide for the protection of children from tobacco.

S. 484
At the request of Ms. SNOWE, the name of the Senator from New Mexico (Mr. BINGAMAN) was added as a cosponsor of S. 484, a bill to amend part B of title IV of the Social Security Act to provide for research with respect to various forms of muscular dystrophy, including Duchenne, Becker, limb-girdle, congenital, facioscapulohumeral, myotonic, oculopharyngeal, distal, and emery-dreifuss muscular dystrophies.

S. 935
At the request of Ms. SNOWE, the names of the Senator from New Mexico (Mr. BINGAMAN), the Senator from Washington (Ms. CANTWELL), and the Senator from Michigan (Ms. STABENOW) were added as cosponsors of S. 913, a bill to amend title XVIII of the Social Security Act to provide for coverage under the medicare program of all oral anticancer drugs.

S. 977
At the request of Ms. COLLINS, the name of the Senator from Massachusetts (Mr. KERRY) was added as a cosponsor of S. 917, a bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to exclude from gross income amounts received on account of claims based on certain unlawful discrimination and to allow income averaging for backpay and frontpay awards received on account of such claims, and for other purposes.

S. 966
At the request of Mr. DORGAN, the names of the Senator from Iowa (Mr. HARKIN) and the Senator from North Dakota (Mr. CONRAD) were added as cosponsors of S. 966, a bill to amend the National Telecommunications and Information Administration Organization Act to encourage deployment of broadband service to rural America.

S. 1022
At the request of Mr. WARNER, the name of the Senator from Idaho (Mr. CRAPPO) was added as a cosponsor of S. 1022, a bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to allow Federal civilian and military retirees to pay health insurance premiums on a pretax basis and to allow a deduction for TRICARE supplemental premiums.

At the request of Mr. HATCH, the name of the Senator from Maine (Ms. COLLINS) was added as a cosponsor of S. 1140, a bill to amend chapter 1 of title 9, United States Code, to provide for greater fairness in the arbitration process relating to motor vehicle franchise contracts.

S. 1333
At the request of Mr. JEFFORDS, the name of the Senator from California (Mrs. FEINSTEIN) was added as a cosponsor of S. 1333, a bill to enhance the benefits of the national electric system by encouraging and supporting State programs for renewable energy sources, universal electric service, affordable electric service, and energy conservation and efficiency, and for other purposes.

S. 1379
At the request of Mr. KENNEDY, the name of the Senator from South Carolina (Mr. HOLLINGS) was added as a cosponsor of S. 1379, a bill to amend the Public Health Service Act to establish an Office of Rare Diseases at the National Institutes of Health, and for other purposes.

At the request of Mrs. FEINSTEIN, the names of the Senator from Louisiana (Ms. LANDRIEU) and the Senator from Oregon (Mr. WYDEN) were added as cosponsors of S. 1409, a bill to impose sanctions against the PLO or the Palestinian Authority if the President determines that those entities have failed to substantially comply with commitments made to the State of Israel.

STATMENTS ON INTRODUCED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS
By Mr. HATCH:

S. 1420. A bill to make clerical and other technical amendments to title 18, United States Code, and other laws relating to crime and criminal procedure; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 1420
Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the “Criminal Law Technical Amendments Act of 2001”.

SEC. 2. TECHNICAL AMENDMENTS RELATING TO CRIMINAL LAW AND PROCEDURE.

(a) Missing and Incorrect Words.—

(1) CORRECTION OF GARELED SENTENCE.—Section 510(c) of title 18, United States Code, is amended by striking “fine of under this title” and inserting “fine under this title”.

(2) INSERTION OF MISSING WORDS.—Section 891(d) of title 18, United States Code, is amended by inserting “traveling” in the first sentence of this section and inserting “proceeds from the sale of such property under this section”.

(3) CORRECTION OF INCOMPLETE WORD.—Sections 1172 through 1177, 1441 through 1446(a) of title 18, United States Code, are each amended by striking “to facility” and inserting “to facilitate”.

(b) Correcting Derivative Amendatory Language on Executed Amendment.—Effective on the date of the enactment of Public Law 106-332, section 6003(a)(15) of such public law is amended by striking “$1,000,000 or imprisonment” and inserting “$1,000,000 and imprisonment”.

(c) Insertion of Missing Word.—Section 3286 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by inserting “section” before “2323(b)”.

(d) Correction of Reference to Short Title of Law.—That section 2323h(a) of title 18, United States Code, which relates to financial transactions is amended by inserting “of 1979” after “Export Administration Act”.

(e) Elimination of Typo.—Section 1992(b) of title 18, United States Code, is amended by striking “term or years” and inserting “term of years”.

(f) Spelling Correction.—Section 3389(a)(a) of title 18, United States Code, is amended by striking “or an escape” and inserting “of an escape”.

(g) Correction of Referee to Short Title of Law.—That section 3389(a)(1)(B) of title 18, United States Code, is amended by striking “a” before “minimum”.

(h) Misspelling in Section 205.—Section 205 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by inserting “‘group’s” and inserting “‘group’”.

(2) Insersion of Missing Word.—Section 1420 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by striking “fine of under this title” and inserting “fine under this title”.

(3) Correction of Incomplete Word.—Sections 1172 through 1177, 1441 through 1446(a) of title 18, United States Code, are each amended by striking “to facility” and inserting “to facilitate”.

(4) Correcting Derivative Amendatory Language on Executed Amendment.—Effective on the date of the enactment of Public Law 106-332, section 6003(a)(15) of such public law is amended by striking “$1,000,000 or imprisonment” and inserting “$1,000,000 and imprisonment”.

(5) Insertion of Missing Word.—Section 3286 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by inserting “section” before “2323(b)”.

(6) Correction of Reference to Short Title of Law.—That section 2323h(a) of title 18, United States Code, which relates to financial transactions is amended by inserting “of 1979” after “Export Administration Act”.

(7) Elimination of Typo.—Section 1992(b) of title 18, United States Code, is amended by striking “term or years” and inserting “term of years”.

(8) Spelling Correction.—Section 3389(a)(a) of title 18, United States Code, is amended by striking “or an escape” and inserting “of an escape”.

(9) Section 3553.—Section 3553(e) of title 18, United States Code, is amended by striking “group’s” and inserting “group”.

(10) Misspelling in Section 205.—Section 205 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by striking “a” before “minimum”.

(5) TYPOGRAPHICAL AND TYPEFACE ERROR IN TABLE OF CHAPTERS.—The item relating to chapter 18 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by striking “section 3565 of this title and United States Code, is amended by striking ‘‘section 2401’’ and inserting ‘‘Section Act, 1998 (111 Stat. 2436) is amended by financing, and Related Programs Appropriations, effective on the date of its enactment, section 3565 of this title’’; (6) ERROR IN CROSS REFERENCE TO COURT RULES.—The first sentence of section 3593(c) of title 18, United States Code, is amended by striking “Section 2339A(a) of title 18, United States Code, is amended by striking ‘‘(f) TABLES OF SECTIONS CORRECTIONS.— (1) in section 14 of title 18, United States Code, and the item relating thereto in the table of sections at the beginning of chapter 1 of title 18, United States Code, are repealed.
(b) Section 1261 of such title is amended—
(1) by striking (‘‘The Secretary’’ and inserting ‘‘The Secretary’’; (2) by striking subsection (b).
(c) Section 1821 of such title is amended by striking ‘‘, the Canal Zone’’.
(d) Section 3181 of such title is amended by striking ‘‘or the Panama Canal Zone,’’.
(2) in section 922(t)(1)(C), by striking ‘‘applicability to conduct’’ and inserting ‘‘Applicability to conduct’’.
(3) in section 1005—
(A) in the first undesignated paragraph, by striking ‘‘At the end of’’ and inserting ‘‘At the end of’’; (B) so that the item appears in bold face type.
(4) in section 1956(c)(7)(B)(ii), by inserting ‘‘closing parenthesis after ‘‘1978’’; (5) in subsect. 2009(c)(i) and (c) of section 2252A, by striking ‘‘paragraphs’’ and inserting ‘‘paragraph’’; and (6) in section 229(a)(3), by striking the comma before the period at the end.
SEC. 3. ADDITIONAL TECHNICALS.
HEADING OF SECTION.—The item relating to the Communications Act of 1934;’’. (7) E RRO R IN AMENDATORY LANGUAGE.— ‘‘Section 2339A of title 18, United States Code, is amended by striking ‘‘Section 2401’’ and inserting ‘‘Secctions Act, 1998 (111 Stat. 2436) is amended by financing, and Related Programs Appropriations, effective on the date of its enactment, section 3565 of this title’’; section’’ and inserting ‘‘this section’’.
RULES.—The first sentence of section 3593(c) (7) E RRO R IN AMENDATORY LANGUAGE.—Ef-of title 18, United States Code, is amended by striking ‘‘Conform, in close consultation with Congress, to the United States is entitled to respond accurately and calmly. We can bring to justice and punish the perpetrators of these attacks, as well as to their families, friends, and loved ones; (3) is certain that the people of the United States will stand united as our Nation begins the process of recovering and rebuilding in the aftermath of these tragic acts; (4) commends the heroic actions of the rescue workers, volunteers, and State and local officials who responded to these tragic events with courage, determination, and skill; (5) declares that these premeditated attacks struck not only at the people of America, but also at the symbols and structures of our economic and military strength, and that the United States is entitled to respond under international law; (6) thanks those foreign leaders and individuals who have expressed solidarity with the United States in the aftermath of the attacks, and asks them to continue to stand with the United States in the war against international terrorism; (7) commits to support increased resources in the war on terrorism; (8) supports the determination of the President, in close consultation with Congress, to bring to justice and punish the perpetrators of these attacks as well as their sponsors; and (9) declares that September 12, 2001, shall be a National Day of Unity and Mourning, and that when Congress adjourns today, it stands adjourned out of respect to the victims of the terrorist attacks.

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That Congress— (1) condemns in the strongest possible terms the terrorists who planned and carried out the September 11, 2001, attacks against the United States, as well as their sponsors; (2) extends its deepest condolences to the victims of these heinous and cowardly attacks, as well as to their families, friends, and loved ones; (3) is certain that the people of the United States will stand united as our Nation begins the process of recovering and rebuilding in the aftermath of these tragic acts; (4) commends the heroic actions of the rescue workers, volunteers, and State and local officials who responded to these tragic events with courage, determination, and skill; (5) declares that these premeditated attacks struck not only at the people of America, but also at the symbols and structures of our economic and military strength, and that the United States is entitled to respond under international law; (6) thanks those foreign leaders and individuals who have expressed solidarity with the United States in the aftermath of the attacks, and asks them to continue to stand with the United States in the war against international terrorism; (7) commits to support increased resources in the war on terrorism; (8) supports the determination of the President, in close consultation with Congress, to bring to justice and punish the perpetrators of these attacks as well as their sponsors; and (9) declares that September 12, 2001, shall be a National Day of Unity and Mourning, and that when Congress adjourns today, it stands adjourned out of respect to the victims of the terrorist attacks.

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the text of the joint resolution be printed in the RECORD.

The there being no objection, the joint resolution was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S.J. RES. 22

Whereas on September 11, 2001, terrorists hijacked and destroyed four civilian aircraft, crashing two of them into the towers of the World Trade Center in New York City, and a third into the Pentagon outside Washington, D.C.;
Whereas thousands of innocent Americans were killed and injured as a result of these attacks, including the passengers and crew of the four aircraft, workers in the World Trade Center and in the Pentagon, rescue workers, and bystanders;
Whereas these attacks destroyed both towers of the World Trade Center, as well as adjacent buildings, and seriously damaged the Pentagon; and
Whereas these attacks were by far the deadliest terrorist attacks ever launched against the United States, and, by targeting symbols of American strength and success, clearly were intended to intimidate our Nation and weaken its resolve: Now, therefore, be it Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That Congress— (1) condemns in the strongest possible terms the terrorists who planned and carried out the September 11, 2001, attacks against the United States, as well as their sponsors; (2) extends its deepest condolences to the victims of these heinous and cowardly attacks, as well as to their families, friends, and loved ones; (3) is certain that the people of the United States will stand united as our Nation begins the process of recovering and rebuilding in the aftermath of these tragic acts; (4) commends the heroic actions of the rescue workers, volunteers, and State and local officials who responded to these tragic events with courage, determination, and skill; (5) declares that these premeditated attacks struck not only at the people of America, but also at the symbols and structures of our economic and military strength, and that the United States is entitled to respond under international law; (6) thanks those foreign leaders and individuals who have expressed solidarity with the United States in the aftermath of the attacks, and asks them to continue to stand with the United States in the war against international terrorism; (7) commits to support increased resources in the war on terrorism; (8) supports the determination of the President, in close consultation with Congress, to bring to justice and punish the perpetrators of these attacks as well as their sponsors; and (9) declares that September 12, 2001, shall be a National Day of Unity and Mourning, and that when Congress adjourns today, it stands adjourned out of respect to the victims of the terrorist attacks.
Historically Black Colleges and Universities in this Country. These institutions have a long and distinguished history of providing the training necessary for participation in a rapidly changing society. I am pleased that eight of the 105 Historically Black Colleges and Universities are located in my State of South Carolina. Historically Black Colleges offer our citizens a variety of curricula and programs through which young people develop skills and talents, thereby expanding opportunities for continued social progress.

Studies have shown that Historically Black Colleges and Universities have graduated the majority of black professionals in the Nation. The adoption of this resolution will affirm the United States’ support for these institutions and the critical contributions of their alumni to our society.

Whereas it is the family, striving for a future of opportunity and hope, that reflects our Nation’s belief in community, stability, and love; and
Whereas the family remains an institution of promise, reliance, and encouragement; and
Whereas we look to the family as an unwavering source of security and the promise of permanence of our future; and
Whereas interest in our personal family history transcends all cultural and religious affiliations;
Whereas to encourage family history research, search, education, and the sharing of knowledge is to renew the commitment to the concept of home and family; and
Whereas the involvement of National, State, and local officials in promoting genealogy and in facilitating access to family history records in archives and libraries is important; Factors in the perception of nationwide camaraderie, support, and participation: Now, therefore, be it
Resolved, That the Senate—
(1) designates the month of October 2001, as “Family History Month”; and
(2) requests that the President issue a proclamation calling upon the people of the United States to observe the month with appropriate ceremonies and activities.

AMENDMENTS SUBMITTED AND PROPOSED

SA 1548. Mr. KERRY (for himself and Mr. BOND) submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill H.R. 2500, making appropriations for the Departments of Commerce, Justice, and State, the Judiciary, and related agencies for the fiscal year ending September 30, 2002, and for other purposes; which was ordered to lie on the table.

SA 1549. Mrs. FEINSTEIN (for herself, Mrs. Hutchinson, and Mrs. Boxer) submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by her to the bill H.R. 2500, supra; which was ordered to lie on the table.

TEXT OF AMENDMENTS

SA 1548. Mr. KERRY (for himself and Mr. BOND) submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill H.R. 2500, making appropriations for the Departments of Commerce, Justice, and State, the Judiciary, and related agencies for the fiscal year ending September 30, 2002, and for other purposes; which was ordered to lie on the table; as follows:

On page 102, line 3, strike the period and insert: “Provided further, That $33,700,000 shall be available in fiscal year 2002 to fund grants as authorized by section 29 of the Small Business Act.”

SA 1549. Mrs. FEINSTEIN (for herself, Mrs. Hutchinson, and Mrs. Boxer) submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by her to the bill H.R. 2500, making appropriations for the Departments of Commerce, Justice, and State, the Judiciary, and related agencies for the fiscal year ending September 30, 2002, and for other purposes; which was ordered to lie on the table; as follows:

On page 75, insert between lines 11 and 12 the following:

SEC. 206. ADDITIONAL FEDERAL JUDGESHIPS FOR CRITICAL AREAS.
    (a) DISTRICT JUDGES FOR THE DISTRICT COURTS.—The President shall appoint, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, the number of additional permanent district judges recommended by the Judicial Conference’s Request to Congress issued February 5, 2001, for any district where the weighted filings per judgeelastic in the 12 months ending September 30, 2000 is, according to the Judicial Conference, greater than twice the national benchmark caseload standard used by the Judicial Conference as a measure of the need for new judgeships.

(b) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary to carry out this section, including such sums as may be necessary to provide appropriate space and facilities for the judicial positions created by this section.

SA 1550. Ms. COLLINS submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by her to the bill H.R. 2560, making appropriations for the Departments of Commerce, Justice, and State, the Judiciary, and related agencies for the fiscal year ending September 30, 2002, and for other purposes; which was ordered to lie on the table; as follows:

On page 101, line 19, insert the following before the colon: ‘‘of which, $13,700,000, shall be available to carry out the Women’s Business Development Program established under section 29 of the Small Business Act (15 U.S.C. 656), and shall remain available until expended’’.

AUTHORITY FOR COMMITTEES TO MEET

COMMITTEE ON GOVERNMENTAL AFFAIRS

Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Governmental Affairs be authorized to meet on Wednesday, September 12, 2001, at 11:00 a.m. SH-216, for a hearing regarding ‘‘How Secure is Our Critical Infrastructure?’’. The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

AUTHORIZING THE USE OF THE CAPITOL ROTUNDA

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the immediate consideration of H. Con. Res. 223, just received from the House.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the concurrent resolution by title.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the concurrent resolution.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the concurrent resolution be agreed to and the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The concurrent resolution (H. Con. Res. 223) was agreed to.

UNANIMOUS CONSENT AGREEMENT—S.J. RES. 22

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the following be the order of speakers on Thursday morning dealing with S.J. Res. 22 which we voted on today: Senators Bond, Lincoln, Smith of New Hampshire, Stabenow, Collins, Graham, Murkowski, and Byrd.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

ORDERS FOR THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 13, 2001

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that when the Senate completes its business today, it adjourn until the hour of 9:30 a.m. on Thursday, September 13. I further ask unanimous consent that on Thursday, immediately following the prayer and the pledge, the Journal of proceedings be approved to date, the morning hour be deemed expired, the time for the two leaders be reserved for their use later in the day, and the Senate be in a period for morning business until 11 a.m., with Senators permitted to speak with respect to S.J. Res. 22 for up to 5 minutes each, with each side alternating; further, at 11 a.m., the Senate resume consideration of the Commerce-State-Justice appropriations act.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

PROGRAM

Mr. REID. Mr. President, based on the ruling of the Chair, tomorrow morning the Senate will convene at 9:30 a.m., with a period for morning business for Senators to speak regarding S.J. Res. 22. At 11 a.m., the Senate will resume consideration of the Commerce-State-Justice appropriations act. We hope to complete action on the Commerce-State-Justice appropriations bill early tomorrow evening. It would be a big accomplishment for us to be able to do that. There will be votes throughout the day.

Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the immediate consideration of H. Con. Res. 223, just received from the House.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

NOMINATIONS

Executive nominations received by the Senate September 12, 2001:

DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE

EDWARD R. MCPHERSON, OF TEXAS, TO BE CHIEF FINANCIAL OFFICER, DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE, VICE BARRY THOMPSON, RESIGNED.

DEPARTMENT OF TRANSPORTATION

BRAD VAN DE WATER, OF NORTH CAROLINA, TO BE AN ASSISTANT SECRETARY OF TRANSPORTATION, VICE FRANCISCO J. LIVERMORE, RESIGNED.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE

RALPH LEO BOYCE, JR., OF VIRGINIA, TO BE A CAREER MEMBER OF THE SENIOR FOREIGN SERVICE, CLASS OF MINISTERS-COUNSELORS, TO BE AMBASSADOR EXTRAORDINARY AND PLENIPOTENTIARY OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA TO THE REPUBLIC OF EQUATORIAL GUINEA.

ROBERT W. JORDAN, OF TEXAS, TO BE AMBASSADOR EXTRAORDINARY AND PLENIPOTENTIARY OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA TO THE KINGDOM OF SAUDI ARABIA.

ROBERT V. ROYALL, OF SOUTH CAROLINA, TO BE AMBASSADOR EXTRAORDINARY AND PLENIPOTENTIARY OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA TO THE REPUBLIC OF TANZANIA.

KEVIN E. MOLEY, OF ARIZONA, TO BE REPRESENTATIVE OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA TO THE EUROPEAN OFFICE OF THE UNITED NATIONS, WITH THE RANK OF AMBASSADOR, VICE GEORGE EDWARD MOORE.

KENNETH C. BRILL, OF MARYLAND, A CAREER MEMBER OF THE SENIOR FOREIGN SERVICE, CLASS OF MINISTERS-COUNSELORS, TO BE REPRESENTATIVE OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, TO THE INTERNATIONAL ATOMIC ENERGY AGENCY, WITH THE RANK OF AMBASSADOR.

KENNETH C. BRILL, OF MARYLAND, A CAREER MEMBER OF THE SENIOR FOREIGN SERVICE, CLASS OF MINISTERS-COUNSELORS, TO BE REPRESENTATIVE OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, TO THE VIENNA OFFICE OF THE UNITED NATIONS, WITH THE RANK OF AMBASSADOR.

INTER-AMERICAN DEVELOPMENT BANK

JOSE A. FOURQUIT, OF NEW JERSEY, TO BE CHIEF EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR OF THE INTER-AMERICAN DEVELOPMENT BANK FOR A TERM OF THREE YEARS, VICE LAWRENCE HARRINGTON, RESIGNED.

UNITED STATES AGENCY FOR INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

J. EDWARD FOX, OF OHIO, TO BE AN ASSISTANT ADMINISTRATOR OF THE UNITED STATES AGENCY FOR INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT, VICE JOSEPH R. CHAPA, RESIGNED.

KENNETH E. PETTSON, OF VIRGINIA, TO BE AN ASSISTANT ADMINISTRATOR OF THE UNITED STATES AGENCY FOR INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT, VICE BARRY EDWARD CAISTER.

DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE

DUNN LAMPTON, OF MISSISSIPPI, TO BE UNITED STATES ATTORNEY FOR THE SOUTHERN DISTRICT OF MISSISSIPPI FOR THE TERM OF FOUR YEARS, VICE JOE B. HIXSON, RESIGNED.

RENE M. RAYNA, OF TEXAS, TO BE DIRECTOR OF THE UNITED STATES MARSHALS SERVICE, VICE JOHN W. MARSHALL, RESIGNED.

JUAN CARLOS BENITEZ, OF PUERTO RICO, TO BE SPECIAL COUNSEL, FOR IMMIGRATION-RELATED UNFAIR EMPLOYMENT PRACTICES FOR A TERM OF FOUR YEARS, VICE JOHN D. TRAVINAS, RESIGNED.
The House met at 10 a.m. and was called to order by the Speaker pro tempore (Mr. LATOURETTE).

DESIGNATION OF THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore laid before the House the following communication from the Speaker:

WASHINGTON, DC, September 13, 2001.

I hereby appoint the Honorable STEVEN C. LATOURETTE to act as Speaker pro tempore on this day.

J. DENNIS HASTERT,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.

PRAYER

The Chaplain, the Reverend Daniel P. Coughlin, offered the following prayer:

The Lord God, Your light has come into this world. Your revelation guides this Nation still.

In the very beginning You separated out the light from the darkness. Perhaps this is exactly what You want us to do on this new day.

Remove from us the darkness of fear and fantasy, projection and prejudice, blinding anger, and confusion. Help us to be realistic and unafraid to walk in the light of day, returning to ordinary tasks which make this Nation vibrant and strong.

As so many dead are laid to rest we must memorialize their ordinary innocence, their daily hopes and responsibilities as well as their love. Assist with Your grace the noble task of grieving families, medical, counseling and search teams in their untiring work of compassion.

May prayer in Your spirit enlighten the Members of this Congress so they may be sound and unified in purpose. Make them Your instruments to stabilize this Nation and bring about lasting peace so all Americans here and abroad, with our friends around the world, may live in the freedom of expression of faith, hope and love, now and forever. Amen.

THE JOURNAL

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair has examined the Journal of the last day’s proceedings and announces to the House his approval thereof.

Pursuant to clause 1, rule 1, the Journal stands approved.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Will the gentleman from New York (Mr. McNulty) come forward and lead the House in the Pledge of Allegiance.

Mr. McNULTY led the Pledge of Allegiance as follows:

I pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America, and to the Republic for which it stands, one Nation under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.

ON RECENT U.S. TRAGEDY

Mr. FOLEY asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.

Mr. FOLEY. Mr. Speaker, it is a new day and a new dawn in America, and how lucky I am to be an American citizen.

Watching the TV in the morning is very, very difficult because we see families looking for loved ones and we see people searching for answers and clues to this devastating tragedy.

Whoever did this may have taken a bite out of the big apple, but they are rotten to the core for inflicting the damage on innocent people.

We will see the opening, hopefully soon, of the financial markets, and we pray people are not only sensible but reasonable and understand that there should be no egregious trading on the backs of this disaster.

When the airlines open today we ask for calm and reasonableness as people approach those who work in our airports.

We also ask each and every citizen living in communities throughout this country to take a moment to salute the police officers, the firefighters, the military personnel who don the uniforms of service to this country, to this Nation, and to our communities to protect and provide for us. Oftentimes we are not thankful enough for those who risk their lives because we are simply usually inconvenienced at the red or blue lights we see in our rear-view mirrors. We do not thank them enough until we need them, until we call 911, and then we desperately ask for their help. Society requires us to be bigger and better than that.

I hear some of our Members complaining about not being briefed enough, not being informed enough about what has happened. I do not want a briefing, I say to my colleagues. I want those people who need to pursue this tragedy with vigor to not interrupt their investigation to brief us now. We have a chance to be Monday morning quarterbacks, we have a chance to review what has happened, but the most important thing now is answers for families and answers to who created this problem and staying resolved as a Nation that we are bigger and better than they are.

Let us not target citizens needlessly who may be related by ethnicity or religion. Let us focus on those perpetrators who inflicted this damage and this devastation to our country. We are a bigger and better place than anywhere else in the world. And in these critical hours, it is more important than ever to prove it, to show the world who we are as people, and to make certain while we talk about acts of war and treason and treachery that we focus our full, complete attention on those who have inflicted this pain and damage.

We are a proud Nation and we are great Americans, and in this hour of need let us rise above the din of acrimony and pray to the Lord for strength and make certain that in this hour we help our fellow man more than ever before.

INTELLIGENCE NETWORK A WASTE OF CONGRESS’ FUNDING

Mr. TRAFICANT asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.

Mr. TRAFICANT. Mr. Speaker, the Berlin Wall, the Soviet Union, the invasion of Kuwait, the Oklahoma City bombing, Pan Am 103, our World Trade Center, two times, now the Pentagon, and on and on. Let us tell it like it is: America gives $60 billion a year to the FBI and CIA for intelligence, and the truth is we learned of every one of these tragedies from Fox News and CNN.

Tell me, after all these years, you mean to tell me our intelligence network cannot locate and infiltrate Osama bin Laden’s organization? Tell me, Congress, when are we going to tell Afghanistan, when are we going to tell Iran that if they are housing bin Laden we will declare war against them?

The truth is we have an intelligence network that is so dumb they could throw themselves at the ground and miss, and Congress keeps throwing money down a black hole.

I yield back the fact that this is another tragedy that could have been prevented, that everybody knew was coming, and it will not be the last.
IMPOSSIBLE TO MAKE SENSE OF TERRORIST ATTACK
(Mr. GIBBONS asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)
Mr. GIBBONS. Mr. Speaker, words cannot begin to express the emotions that Americans all across this country are experiencing after Tuesday's events. We are all grief stricken. We are stunned. We are amazed. We are angry. And amongst these emotions, we are just simply trying to make sense of it all.
Well, Mr. Speaker, I stand here to say that it is impossible to make sense of it all. It is impossible to make sense of the loss; possibly in the tens of thousands of Americans have lost their lives in these recent terrorist attacks. Innocent civilians, military officers, men and women not fighting a war but innocent mothers and fathers, sons and daughters, brothers and sisters, who were only going about their daily routine.
I would like to reiterate the words expressed by Leonard Pitts, a columnist for the Miami Herald, who is also trying to make sense of these recent events, and I quote: "Did you want us to respect your cause? You just damned Your cause. Did you want us to fear you? You just steeled our resolve. Did you want to tear us apart? You just brought us together."
Yes, Mr. Speaker, we are a united Nation, a united country, the United States, today, tomorrow, and forever, and we will overcome.

AMERICANS SHOULD NOT TURN ANGER AGAINST ONE ANOTHER
(Ms. SCHAKOWSKY asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)
Ms. SCHAKOWSKY. Mr. Speaker, this is a time for Americans to stand together through our grief and our frustration and even our anger. But I wanted to come down here this morning to say how important it is that we do not turn our anger on one another.
We are beginning to hear some disturbing reports of acts of bigotry against people who are perceived to be or who are Arab Americans or people who are wearing turbans; of angry mobs, angry crowds coming to a mosque; a person wearing a turban being thrown off a train. It is only a victory for those who would perpetrate acts of terrorism against us if we begin to turn against one another.
There are millions of Arab Americans who contribute, who died in the explosions and the attack and who are mourning, along with all the rest of America. We must allow our grief to turn into acts of violence or acts of bigotry against one another.
I would just urge that we hold hands, that we stand firmly together to oppose this terrorism, that we stand with our allies around the world, and that we look to find common cause, each as Americans to fight this enemy.

ANNOUNCEMENT TO CONGREGATIONS REGARDING ACTIONS THEY CAN TAKE
(Mr. WELDON of Pennsylvania asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)
Mr. WELDON of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to make some announcements to our colleagues.
First of all, our colleagues can call my office today to cosponsor a Declaration of War Resolution that I have prepared which will be introduced within the next several days. This Declaration of War gives the White House the authority and the ability to declare to specific terrorist groups that in fact we are at war with.
Number two, our colleagues can call my office and cosponsor a joint resolution creating a joint task force between the U.S. and Russia to combat terrorism. This comes about because of communications I have received from the Russian Duma offering to work with us. The Russians have the same threat that we do, and this is an opportunity for us to work together.
Number three, our colleagues can join next week in State Farm's announcement of several hundreds of thousands of dollars going to the Police and Fire Foundation to benefit the families of those police and firefighters who are currently missing in New York.
And, number four, our colleagues can join the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. Howard) and I as we announce next week the creation of a multimillion dollar fund to support the Police and Firefighters Hero Scholarship Fund in New York so that we can provide for full college scholarships for every son and daughter of every police officer and firefighter in New York City who is determined to have been killed in this terrible tragedy.
I urge my colleagues to join us in these efforts.

CONDOLENCES TO FAMILIES OF VICTIMS OF TERRORIST ATTACK
(Mr. PASTOR asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)
Mr. PASTOR. Mr. Speaker, this morning, again, I extend my condolences and my most heartfelt sympathies to the loved ones and families of those who were victims in this tragic event. My prayers go out to the families that are looking with hope to find their loved ones. My gratitude continues to the men and women who are endangering their lives looking for victims. And my hope is that those that were injured will recover quickly. It is a time of anger, a time of fear, but we need to ensure that our Constitution does not become a victim. We need to protect and ensure that we protect our civil rights. We also need to ensure that our democracy does not become a victim. We need to ensure that we protect the separation of powers. We need to ensure that the executive branch works with the Senate and the House in concert, in order that we bring about a resolution.
Our American spirit will help us overcome this great tragedy, and may God continue to bless America.

HEROES
(Mr. PITTS asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)
Mr. PITTS. Mr. Speaker, Tuesday morning, a passenger named Jeremy Glick called his wife from United Airlines Flight 93 as it flew over Somerset County, Pennsylvania. Jeremy knew he was going to die, and told his wife he wanted her to have a good life and asked her to please look after their 3-month-old baby girl. Then Jeremy and another passenger named Thomas Burnett charged the cockpit to overcome the hijackers.
The plane crashed in a field, killing all of its passengers but no one else. It has been reported that that plane was headed for Andrews Air Force Base on a mission to take out Air Force One.
Ali Taqi, a 24-year-old firefighter from Michigan, hopped in his car Tuesday and drove all the way to New York City to see if he could help out with rescue efforts.
Tuesday morning, hundreds of firefighters, police officers, EMS workers charged into the first of the twin towers only to lose their lives when the second one was hit, and both buildings collapsed.
Mr. Speaker, every one of these people is an American hero.
Passengers on Flight 99 literally gave their lives to save others.
Nathan Hale rued the fact that he had "but one life to give for his country." None of us has more than one life to give, but the way Tuesday's heroes gave theirs and the way today's are risking theirs to search for survivors will be remembered forever.

SUPPORTING THE CHILDREN OF AMERICA
(Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)
Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. Mr. Speaker, it is important that we begin as a Nation to rebuild our lives and rebuild our spirit. September 11, 2001 was a day we will never forget. But as we move forward to acknowledge and thank and praise those heroes, those firefighters and police persons, we must also embrace and collaborate and love those families.

Today I stand and ask the Nation to remember the children, children now that are left without mothers and fathers, grandparents and grandfathers, aunts and uncles, children who are left without care. These children must be embraced by this Congress and this Nation.

We must be reminded of the necessary resources to help them build their spirits, their lives, to keep them in these very cold nights, and to be sure that they grow up knowing that this is a Nation of freedom and one that will not abandon them.

As we remember our children, remember they come in all races, colors, creeds and religions. Let us stand away from accusing and threatening different ethnic groups that we may think are involved. Let us stand for what is right and let us find the facts. Let us stamp out terrorism. Let us know what is right. Let us not attack and forget the Constitution and what this Nation was built upon.

Mr. Speaker, I expect to offer a resolution that will deal with our children, focus on them, and help us help them by making sure that we have both the resources and the infrastructure to deal now with lonely children left all over this country because their parents have not returned home. Heroes that they may be, but they have not come home to these children.

This Nation has higher angels and it is now we have these higher angels to take the realm of government, to fight to stamp out terrorism, but never forget our people. For this is the land of the brave and the free.

EXPRESSING SENSE OF CONGRESS THAT EVERY CITIZEN IS ENCOURAGED TO DISPLAY THE FLAG

Mrs. EMERSON. Mr. Speaker. I ask unanimous consent that it be in order at any time to consider in the House the concurrent resolution (H. Con. Res. 225) expressing the sense of the Congress that, as a symbol of solidarity following the terrorist attacks on the United States on September 11, 2001, every United States citizen should join together to defend and honor the Nation and its symbols of strength; and

(2) for a period of 30 days after the date on which this resolution is agreed to, each United States citizen and every community in the Nation is encouraged to display the flag of the United States of America at homes, places of work and business, public buildings, and places of worship to remember those individuals who have been lost and to show the solidarity, resolve, and heart that I ask this resolution be brought today to the House floor.

No one will ever forget what happened to this great country on September 11, 2001. As a Nation, we speak with one loud, strong and determined voice in solidarity. We must rise up and stand for what we believe in this great country.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the unanimous consent request just agreed to, I call up the concurrent resolution (H. Con. Res. 225) expressing the sense of the Congress that, as a symbol of solidarity following the terrorist attacks on the United States on September 11, 2001, every United States citizen is encouraged to display the flag of the United States, and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the title of the concurrent resolution.

The text of H. Con. Res. 225 is as follows:

H. CON. RES. 225

Whereas on September 11, 2001, terrorists hijacked and destroyed four commercial aircraft, crashing two of them into the World Trade Center in New York City, and crashing another aircraft into the Pentagon outside Washington, D.C.; and

Whereas thousands of innocent people were killed and injured as a result of those attacks, including the passengers and crew of the four aircraft, workers and visitors in the World Trade Center and the Pentagon, rescue workers, and bystanders: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That it is the sense of the Congress that—

(1) in response to the terrorist attacks on the United States on September 11, 2001, United States citizens should join together to defend and honor the Nation and its symbols of strength; and

(2) for a period of 30 days after the date on which this resolution is agreed to, each United States citizen and every community in the Nation is encouraged to display the flag of the United States of America at homes, places of work and business, public buildings, and places of worship to remember those individuals who have been lost and to show the solidarity, resolve, and heart that we will not abandon them.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the order of the House of today, the gentlewoman from Missouri (Mrs. EMERSON) and the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. SKEELTON) each will control 30 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentlewoman from Missouri (Mrs. EMERSON).

Mrs. EMERSON. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, we have an unbreakable and unwavering spirit in this country and we have an enduring commitment to the preservation of freedom and democracy. No act of terrorism will ever be able to break that.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. SKEELTON. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, we have an unbreakable and unwavering spirit in this country and we have an enduring commitment to the preservation of freedom and democracy. No act of terrorism will ever be able to break that.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Every day when we come into this Chamber, we pledge allegiance to the flag. I pledge allegiance to the flag of the United States of America. Of course, we are also led in a prayer by the Chaplain. This flag symbolizes so much. It has reflected so much goodness and greatness through the years, that in times of stress and sorrow we feel a special need and obligation to rally around it. That is the purpose of this resolution.

This flag was originally flown in a different form, of course, by those in the Revolution, down through the years, the War of 1812, out of which came the story of the poem, later put to music by Francis Scott Key, which became our national anthem. The Star Spangled Banner. Down through the years the challenges and conflicts our country has sustained, our flag has flown high over this free and wonderful land. This is America. This is the history of the American flag. In this past century, we have led with this flag in fighting tyranny, not once but twice.

We now refer to those episodes as the First World War and the Second World War. Since that time, freedom has been challenged and the American flag has held together. Consequently, it is up to us today in this very troubling, difficult time for us, as Americans, to rally around the American flag once more. If nothing else comes out of all of this sadness and turmoil, maybe, Mr. Speaker, there will be an added appreciation for young men and young women who wear the American uniform.

It is they who protect the rights and freedoms of our country and all that the American flag stands for. Our young men and young women are in various camps and posts, not just here in our country, but in far-flung parts of this world, bringing stability, bringing peace, and the American flag is leading the way.

Cicero, the great Roman orator, once said that gratitude is the greatest of all virtues, and this is an opportunity for us as Americans as we fly this flag to remember those Americans, both in New York and those who were wearing the uniform at the Pentagon, who paid such a terrible price for being Americans.

So let us show appreciation for our country, especially for those young men and women who wear the uniforms of the United States of America.

A number of years ago, the famous folk singer Johnny Cash wrote a ballad entitled the “Ragged Old Flag.” I wish to repeat that today as a reminder of the history of our country and the flag that has flown so proudly over our land.

As Johnny Cash penned it, “I walked through a county courthouse square: on a park bench an old man was sitting there. I said, your old courthouse is kinda run down. And he said, no, it will do for our little town.”

“I said, your old flag pole has leaned a little bit and that’s a ragged old flag you got hanging on it.”

“He said, have a seat, and I sat down. ‘Is this the first time you have been to our little town?’ I said, I think it is. And he said, I don’t like to brag but we’re kinda proud of that old ragged flag.

“You see, we got a little hole in that flag there, when Washington took it across the Delaware.”

And it got powder burns the night that Francis Scott Key sat watching and writing, “Say Can You See?” And it got a bad rip in New Orleans, with Packingham and Jackson tuggin’ at its seams.

And it almost fell at the Alamo because the man was there when they turned blood red in World War II, she blew hard on that ragged old flag.

On Flanders Field in World War I, she got a big hole from a Bertha gun. She turned blood red in World War II, she hung limp and low a time or two.

She was in Vietnam. She went where she was sent by her Uncle Sam.

She waved from our ships upon the briny foam, and now they have about quit waving her back here at home.

This old flag is wearing thin, but she’s in good shape for the shape she’s in.

So we raise her up every morning, and we take her down every night.

We don’t let her touch the ground, and we fold her up just right.

On second thought, I do like to brag, ‘cause I’m mighty proud of that ragged old flag.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mrs. EMERSON. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume. I have always loved that song of Johnny Cash, because it so symbolizes the importance of our American flag.

The Speaker today in our conference mentioned something that happened yesterday as he was driving along Rock Creek Parkway and saw an old veteran waving an American flag back and forth, back and forth, for hours on end because the man was there when they left to go and he was there when they returned back to the Capitol. It also reminds me of the time when my late husband Bill had just died and we were driving to the cemetery in Hillsboro and along the way was an old veteran standing on a hill with his military hat on, waving a flag. It was tattered and it was old. My children just gripped my hand and said, “Oh, Mom, look.” And that so symbolized what is right and what is great about our country.

Mr. Speaker, there are no words to describe the sorrow and the heartache, the tragedy that has rocked our Nation over the past several days. We really have been cut to the core and been left shocked and numb and grappling with one question that cannot be answered, the question that my children, who are 19 and 23, and all of my stepchildren ask me, “Why has this happened?” But I think that in spite of the despicable actions and in our most enduring symbol of all, the American flag.

Dr. Stephen Ambrose, who is, as we all know, a noted historian, once said, “In World War II, the biggest army ever assembled was not German, Russian, nor indirectly American. The biggest and greatest army ever assembled was an aroused democracy.” Let each of us as an aroused citizen of this democracy show our solidarity as a Nation by flying the Stars and Stripes from every flagpole, from every business, and school in this great country.

Mr. Speaker, if I might paraphrase Dr. Martin Luther King: as Americans, we must let freedom ring. We must let freedom ring, from coast to coast and border to border by flying our flag and showing the rest of the world our star-spangled banner still waves, over the land of the free, and the home of the brave.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. SKEI. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentlewoman from California (Ms. LOFGREN).

Ms. LOFGREN. Mr. Speaker, I heartily support the matter before us today and join with my colleagues in urging its swift passage.

Here on Thursday in the Capitol, we are busy at work doing the things that need to be done for our Nation. We are meeting with the appropriate officials in the executive branch, both intelligence, military, and law enforcement. The executive branch is doing its job so that the proper response can be taken, both in terms of the military might of our Nation and also in terms of law enforcement to find the perpetrators, those who are America’s enemies and those who have supported America’s enemies. Law enforcement and rescue personnel are at work.

But the American people want to do something in addition to what their government is doing. And I think actually that this important show of American solidarity will be an inspiration not just to all of us here in the United States but to people around the world, who already are in some of the solidarity and the unity of the American people.

We are the most diverse Nation on the face of the Earth. We come, or our parents do, from every part of the world. Yet we have something in common. We become Americans through our idealism, through our love of this country, through our dedication to liberty and the Constitution, and to our loyalty to each other. Flying the American flag is a symbol, but symbols do count.

I have actually been flying my flag at home in San Jose since Tuesday. My children went out with our flag to fly it Tuesday night, we talked on the phone, and my neighbors have done the same. So this is happening spontaneously. I think it is a wonderful thing that the Congress is recognizing the desire of the American people to step forward with a specific symbol, our wonderful flag, to show our unity today.

I would ask a further thing. Not every American has a flag handy, so let us call upon the flag makers of the country and the retailers of the country to make extra special efforts to have flags available so that Americans can take this step and make sure that every American has the opportunity to make the statement by flying their flag. I thank the author of the bill, and I thank the gentlewoman from Missouri (Mrs. EMERSON) for their leadership on this matter.

Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

The tragic attacks on Americans took place on Tuesday, September 11, in New York and here in the Washington area at the Pentagon, the seat of the military of our country. The following evening, the gentleman from Arizona (Mr. STUMP), who is chairman of the Committee on Armed Services and I, as the ranking member, went to the Pentagon for a briefing that we received. Admiral Binkowsky and Mr. Bob Baxley, he had been with me in a boat to Baltimore. The young lawyer who is participating display the flag. It was during the War of 1812, Mr. BACA. Mr. Speaker, I stand in support of this resolution.

Mr. Speaker, I think it is important that we demonstrate to America that we do have the flag. I know that this weekend is very critical to many of us as we begin to celebrate the 16th of September that we carry the flag and show the flag. I know that in my district we have Route 66, where over 80,000 people will carry the flag and show the flag. Some of us have already begun to display it in our offices, as Members and others, in our homes; and hopefully we will have the flag flown throughout the Nation.

So let us, in compliance with the suggestion and urging of this resolution, as Americans fly our flags, let us fly them for 30 days, and let children know as well as all other Americans what this country stands for, and that we shall not be daunted, that we as Americans will remain great and free.

Mrs. EMERSON. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

I want to thank my good friend and colleague the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. Skelton) as well as our leaders, the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. Gerhardt) and the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. Hastert), for sponsoring this resolution with us.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mrs. EMERSON. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

I want to thank my good friend and colleague the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. Skelton) as we as our leaders, the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. Gerhardt) and the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. Hastert), for sponsoring this resolution with us.

Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume. Yes, it happened once again on that poem, written by the young lawyer named Francis Scott Key, is today the national anthem of our country. What we learned from that episode and from that poem and song tells us that we still are the grandest civilization ever known in the history of mankind, and that this American flag still flies, though we have detractors and those who would attack us.

Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume. So let us, in compliance with the suggestion and urging of this resolution, as Americans fly our flags, let us fly them for 30 days, and let children know as well as all other Americans what this country stands for, and that we shall not be daunted, that we as Americans will remain great and free.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mrs. EMERSON. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

I want to thank my good friend and colleague the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. Skelton) as well as our leaders, the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. Gerhardt) and the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. Hastert), for sponsoring this resolution with us.

Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume. We have said that flying the flag, our great and unwavering symbol of freedom, would be something that all of us could do together. It is for that reason that we have asked the nations and something that the American people all understand.

So that we might honor those brave souls who lost their lives in New York, at the Pentagon or in the fields of Pennsylvania, let us honor them by flying our flags for the next 30 days from every village, from every school, from every home across this great Nation.

Ms. ESHOO. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in support of H. Con Res. 225 a resolution expressing the sense of the Congress that, as a symbol of solidarity following the terrorist attacks on the United States on September 11, 2001, every citizen is encouraged to display the flag of the United States.

It is so important; and so many of our constituents around the country have asked us what we can do, what we can do to show our unity and to show our strength of purpose, other than to give blood, for example, or to work or volunteer in search and rescue missions.

We have said that flying the flag, our great and unwavering symbol of freedom, would be something that all of us could do together. It is for that reason that we have asked the nations and something that the American people all understand.

So that we might honor those brave souls who lost their lives in New York, at the Pentagon or in the fields of Pennsylvania, let us honor them by flying our flags for the next 30 days from every village, from every school, from every home across this great Nation.

Mr. Speaker, I encourage everyone to display the flag. Some of us have already begun to display it in our offices, us Members and others, in our homes; and hopefully we will have the flag flown throughout the Nation.

So I support the resolution. I think it is important for all of us to do this.

Mrs. EMERSON. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. GREEN).

Mr. GREEN of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I thank my colleague from Missouri for yielding me time.

Mr. Speaker, I think this is a good effort. Again, we are seeing the people in this country take the lead on this. In fact, I just talked to my district offices, and they are amazed in Houston how many people are taking their own initiative, not just here in Washington, but all across the country.

I think Congress needs to encourage that, because, again, we are all in this together, Democrats and Republicans, urban and rural, North and South. The thing that brings us together is we are Americans.
I thank the sponsors of this resolution.

Mr. FORBES. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of this resolution encouraging our citizens and communities to show their support for the victims of our most recent and most vicious national tragedy by displaying our Nation’s most recognizable symbol of freedom, the American flag.

The terrorist attack earlier this week has brought us together as a nation. From the smallest communities in our country to our nation’s largest cities, Americans have shown their love and respect for one another in many different ways. By giving blood and sending donations, our nation’s people have once again proven we are the greatest nation on the face of this Earth.

I am extremely proud to join the members of this legislative body in asking each of our constituents to display the American flag over the course of the next month. Our unity in flying our nation’s flag at our homes, in our businesses, in our communities, and where we worship will be yet one more way to show the entire world that we are one nation, stronger than we have ever been.

The lives of all United States citizens will be greatly altered because of this national tragedy. We stand here today encouraging American flags be flown in remembrance of those whose lives were lost to show both unity and strength in our nation. Terrorists may be able to destroy airplanes and buildings, but they will never be able to destroy the spirit of the American people. God Bless America.

Mr. HASTERT. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to share my grief and sorrow with the victims and the families of Tuesday’s tragedies in New York, Washington and Western Pennsylvania. As a nation, we must stand strong together to denounce these cowardly acts of War against our people, our nation, and our civilization. As a united people, we must show our colors to those who seek our hearts and minds throughout the world that we will not be deterred.

As Speaker of the United States House of Representatives, I am proud to join Minority Leader (Dick) GEPHARDT, Mrs. (Jo Ann) EMERSON, Mr. SENSENBRENNER, Mr. CAMERON, and Mr. DAYTON in the resolution urging our fellow Americans to fly the American flag for the next thirty days outside their homes, their businesses, public buildings, and places of worship. By doing so, we provide a physical tribute from coast-to-coast and around the globe in memory of those we lost and to show publicly our solidarity, resolve and strength as a Nation that these terrorist actions will not stand.

I know that ever since Tuesday morning our lives and our nation have been changed forever. And from that time forward, many Americans have asked how they can help. No matter where you live, by flying Old Glory on the Main Streets of Geneva, Illinois and Rolla, Missouri to big cities like Seattle, Washington and Miami, Florida, you will be sending a strong signal to millions of people here at home and abroad that the red, white and blue represents freedom and democracy and those ideals will live on.

Mrs. EMERSON. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. LA TOURETTE). All time for debate has expired.

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—HOUSE

September 13, 2001

PROVIDING FOR EXPEDITED PAYMENT OF CERTAIN BENEFITS FOR PUBLIC SAFETY OFFICERS KILLED OR INJURED IN CONNECTION WITH TERRORIST ATTACKS OF SEPTEMBER 11, 2001

SEC. 1. EXPEDITED PAYMENT FOR HEROIC PUBLIC SAFETY OFFICERS.

Notwithstanding the limitations of subsection (b) of section 1201 or the provisions of subsections (c), (d), and (e) of such section or section 1202 of title I of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968 (42 U.S.C. 3796, 3796a), upon certification by a public agency that a public safety officer employed by such agency was killed or suffered a catastrophic injury as a direct and proximate result of a personal injury sustained in the line of duty as described in section 1201(a) of such Act in connection with the rescue or recovery efforts related to the terrorist attacks of September 11, 2001, the Director of the Bureau of Justice Assistance shall authorize payment to qualified beneficiaries, said payment to be made not later than 30 days after receipt of such certification, benefits described under subpart 1 of part L of such Act (42 U.S.C. 3796 et seq.).

SEC. 2. DEFINITIONS.

For purposes of this Act, the terms “catastrophic injury”, “public agency”, and “public safety officer” have the same meanings given such terms in section 1204 of title I of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968 (42 U.S.C. 3796b).

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the order of the House today, the concurrent resolution is considered as having been read for amendment and the previous question is ordered.

The question is on the concurrent resolution.

Pursuant to the order of the House today, the concurrent resolution is considered as having been read for amendment and the previous question is ordered.

The question is on the concurrent resolution.

The concurrent resolution was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mrs. EMERSON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks and include extraneous material on H. Con. Res. 225.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentlewoman from Missouri?

There was no objection.

RECESS

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to clause 12 of rule I, the Chair declares the House in recess subject to the call of the Chair.

Accordingly (at 10 o’clock and 50 minutes a.m.), the House stood in recess subject to the call of the Chair.

AFTER RECESS

The recess having expired, the House was called to order by the Speaker pro tempore (Mr. LA TOURETTE) at 11 o’clock and 24 minutes a.m.

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that H.R. 2882 be ordered to be amended by striking out the entire section and substituting the following:

SEC. 1. EXPEDITED PAYMENT FOR HEROIC PUBLIC SAFETY OFFICERS.

Notwithstanding the limitations of subsection (b) of section 1201 or the provisions of subsections (c), (d), and (e) of such section or section 1202 of title I of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968 (42 U.S.C. 3796, 3796a), upon certification by a public agency that a public safety officer employed by such agency was killed or suffered a catastrophic injury as a direct and proximate result of a personal injury sustained in the line of duty as described in section 1201(a) of such Act in connection with the rescue or recovery efforts related to the terrorist attacks of September 11, 2001, the Director of the Bureau of Justice Assistance shall authorize payment to qualified beneficiaries, said payment to be made not later than 30 days after receipt of such certification, benefits described under subpart 1 of part L of such Act (42 U.S.C. 3796 et seq.).

SEC. 2. DEFINITIONS.

For purposes of this Act, the terms “catastrophic injury”, “public agency”, and “public safety officer” have the same meanings given such terms in section 1204 of title I of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968 (42 U.S.C. 3796b).

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentlewoman from Wisconsin?

There was no objection.

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks on H.R. 2882, the bill currently under consideration.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentlewoman from Wisconsin?

There was no objection.

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, this legislation provides for payments to be made within 30 days
September 13, 2001

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—HOUSE

Let me urge the Governor and legislature of the State of New York that if there does need to be an amendment to the law to allow for appropriate certification, including but not limited to the issuance of an official death certificate, to take prompt action so that these certifications can be made and the payments issued to the families of the police officers and firefighters who perished in the line of duty.

This concern, however, for me, is not limited just to this bill, because there are literally thousands of people who are missing in the fire and collapse of the World Trade Center whose families will be waiting for insurance proceeds even though they are not police officers and firefighters; and there the same type of certification is needed so that the payments can be made to the beneficiaries under those policies. I would certainly hope that the law would be able to respond to this tragedy so that these payments can be made promptly rather than having months or perhaps even years of litigation before a certificate issues and the payment is to be made.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. WEINER. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

First, I offer the thanks of our city to the many Members of the House, particularly the chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary, who has spoken so eloquently. Many of us just returned this morning and more than a few of my constituents commented how heartening and reassuring it was to see Members come to the well yesterday for hours talking about their expressions of sympathy and support.

My colleague, the gentleman from New York (Mr. CROWLEY), and I late last night, and we saw a sight that was at once horrific and frankly heartening. We saw mounds of rubble, maybe the size of this building, that were tombs for some of the bravest New Yorkers and bravest Americans. These were men who perished, many of them my constituents.

Over 100 families in just one small part of my district were where firefighters and police officers had lived.

At the same time people were furiously running downstairs to escape what was described in the newspapers as 1,000 to 2,000 degree heat, heat sufficient to melt the columns of the World Trade Center, to melt through the insulation on the beams. These firefighters and police officers, as the chairman mentioned. Some of them were seen on the 80th floor. And to give my colleagues an idea of what a firefighter carries on his back and on his person when he goes into battle, it does not weigh much less than carrying a human being all the way up those stairs. And they did so not because they were naïve about the dangers that they faced; it is because they recognized the dangers that their fellow New Yorkers faced, and they were going to do everything possible to see them protected.

We say it at times like this, that these are true heroes because they go to the most dangerous jobs without flinching. But to be honest, everywhere in this country, every night as we lay down our heads to buck our children in and we say our evening prayers and we think about what we are going to do the following day, at those very same hours there are men and women all over this country who stay up all night waiting to hear a bell go off, or a siren go off, and then they run to help us. They do not know us.

To see these men now at this site that are digging through this rubble, they are looking for their best friends, looking for their brothers, searching for their fathers in some cases. We lost one of the highest-ranking fire officials in the city. We lost a priest who serviced the men in the fire department when a body fell on him from stories above. These are people who every day do these things on our behalf. Their families send them off to work hoping that they will see them when they come back, and they do incredible work.

Well, now, in New York City, we have over 300 families, by last count, who are not and to see their husbands, their fathers, their children again; and this is a measure that I think is needed in some small way to help expedite the benefits to these families. But make no mistake, my colleagues, the worst is yet to come for those families. We have an ability now, as we must, to try to do what we can to ease the suffering, and then we will go on. Our lives will be put back together again. We will remember those horrific images.

This is a measure of one thing, as Mayor Giuliani told us late last night, and we agree with 100 percent, and I speak for all of my New York colleagues, we are going to rebuild the city. We will be a better and stronger city, and we will be a better and stronger country. But those families have lost someone that they are not going to be able to replace. There is not a day that will go by that they will not remember that. And I also hope there is not a day that goes by that all of those survivors that got out of there, and who saw those men running up the stairs as they were running down, I hope they remember as well the great heroism.

Tonight and nights after, as we retire to bed, let us all pray for the safety and health of our families, let us also say a prayer for those men and women that look over our shoulders every day in communities large and small all throughout this community.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.
Mr. SENSENBERGER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from New York (Mr. KING).

Mr. KING. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time, and I want to totally identify myself with the remarks of my colleague, the gentleman from New York (Mr. WEINER).

The fact is that the firefighters, the police officers in the City of New York have performed heroic service above and beyond any call of duty. And while Tuesday is a day which will live in infamy in this country, the fact is at the same time it showed the great spirit of New York, the great spirit of America, and the particularly great spirit of the men and women of the New York City Police Department and Fire Department. They responded in a way which is unprecedented, unparalleled, and demanded a strong commitment to what they believe in, and that is the safety and welfare of all New Yorkers, all Americans, and all people.

I would say that their courage stands in stark contrast to the behavior of those who attacked our city in such a cowardly fashion. So I think this legislation is absolutely essential. There are many people, and all of us from New York, who know people killed. Certainly Father Judge, the chaplain, was a friend of mine, and another young man, Michael Boyle was a very good friend of mine, and I would say at this time we must commit ourselves to those men who gave their lives.

Mr. WEINER. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from New York (Mr. CROWLEY).

Mr. CROWLEY. Mr. Speaker, I want to thank my colleague from New York, all my colleagues from New York, and my colleagues from around the country.

Mr. Speaker, first let me commend my colleague, the gentleman from New York (Mr. NADLER); the Speaker of the House, the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. HASTERT); the Democratic leader, the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. GEPHARDT), for the leadership displayed here in this House over the past few days and for moving this legislation so expeditiously to the floor.

I rise today to speak with a very heavy heart and a tightened throat. Our Nation has suffered a terrible blow. Yesterday, I, along with my colleague, the gentleman from New York (Mr. WEINER), as mentioned before, visited the epicenter, or ground zero as it has been called, of this monstrous crime. As I stood in a crater of what was once a grand and majestic building, I was looking into the heart of a criminal, of a cold thing and of an awful thing. But I also saw a picture of the American heart, and of the American spirit, that of the New York Police Department, Fire Department, and emergency rescue technicians.

These men, who did not and have not faltered for even one second, were and continue to fight tirelessly to find any person who may have been lost and is still alive. And my cousin John Moran, who I spoke of not too long ago on this floor, is one of those men.

John is an amazing man. He is a battalion chief, a lawyer, and a second generation fireman. His father, my uncle, was also a fireman. His brother Michael is a fireman. John is a wonderful husband and the father of two small children, beautiful boys. He understands the risks, and he understands what he might be losing, yet he continues to put his life in harm’s way to save others day in and day out.

This past Tuesday, while trying to rescue others at ground zero, my cousin became one of the missing. He was one of more than 300 firemen and police office who have been confirmed dead or are missing that day. We have also lost Reverend Michael Judge, a personal friend of mine, who was the chaplain of the fire department; Chief of the New York Fire Department’s Special Operations Command, who was my cousin’s immediate superior, Ray Downey; Bill Feehan, first deputy commissioner of the fire department, a wonderful man; and Peter Ganci, chief of the New York City Fire Department.

In Woodside, the area I represent, we lost two firefighters on Father’s Day from Rescue Company 4, and we add to that people who are missing, seven individuals, some of whom are my friends: Captain Brian Hickey, Lieutenant Kevin Dowdell, Lieutenant Terrance Farrrell, Firefighter Peter Nelson, Firefighter Peter Brennan, Firefighter William Mahoney, Firefighter Durell Persall, Rescues 1, 2, 3, and 5 also sustained casualties. I also have friends who are missing: Firefighter Ronald Anderson is that Firefighter Mike Weinberg from my neighborhood has been found. Another friend, from the Rockaways, Walter Heinz, is also missing.

The Bible says, “Be brave, my child; the Lord of heaven and earth grant you joy in place of this sorrow of yours.” And so this is our solace. But I ask all Americans to honor those whose bravery, so great, cost them all their earthly pleasures by caring for those they have left behind. We have lost.

This bill provides an expedited payment of $151,000 to the families of the brave men and women who lost their lives in the line of duty. It is one small way that we can help families cope with this loss, by providing families with the financial assistance to pay for colleges, to continue paying their mortgages and to continue on.

Let us create a legacy for those brave men and women who stepped forward risking, and indeed sacrificing, their own lives to rescue and save their fellow Americans.

The stories we have heard from our colleagues today are only the beginning. Thousands and thousands of families are suffering, not knowing. This is just the beginning.

Mr. Speaker, first let me commend my colleague, the gentleman from New York (Mrs. LOWEY), the Speaker of the House, the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. HOEVT), the Democratic leader, the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. GEPHARDT), for the leadership displayed here in this House over the past few days and for moving this legislation so expeditiously to the floor.

Yesterday, the Governor of New York asked a fireman why he would risk his life, and the firefighter told him, “Why else do I expect? I’m a New Yorker.” God bless America, the land of the free, and the home of the bravest and the finest.

Mr. WEINER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from New York (Mrs. LOWEY).

Mrs. LOWEY. My colleagues, we have experienced this week some of the darkest moments in our Nation’s history, and yet in the midst of this horrible and unspeakable loss that our Nation suffered, thousands of brave men and women stepped forward risking, and indeed sacrificing, their own lives to rescue and save their fellow Americans.

The stories we have heard from our colleagues today are only the beginning. Thousands and thousands of families are suffering, not knowing. This is just the beginning.

So today, colleagues, we have the opportunity to offer one small gesture of thanks, to let the families of the firefighters, police officers, and rescue workers who gave their lives know that the American people and the United States Congress are profoundly grateful for their sacrifice.

The gentleman from New York (Mr. NADLER), who is on his way to the Capitol, had this horror occur in his district in New York City. He has introduced this legislation to provide for the expedited payments of benefits for public safety officers who were killed or who have suffered catastrophic injuries in the line of duty while responding to the terrorist attacks of September 11. It is simply unconscionable that the families of men and women who gave so much at such a difficult and horrific time should now have to struggle to receive government benefits that are so obviously due.

Even as we mourn and grieve today, we must appreciate that Americans did not and did not nor did we cower in the face of adversity and brutal assault. Rather, we banded together and worked feverishly to save every life that could be saved. While thousands of Americans donated blood and food and shelter to the victims of these attacks, no American gave more than the public safety officers who this legislation would benefit.

In the face of the unthinkable, there is only so much that we can do to the families of the firefighters, police officers, and rescue workers. This legislation is only a start and cannot compare to the loss of life for their families, but it is an important one. I urge my colleagues to join me in passing this legislation honoring our Nation’s bravest heroes.
September 13, 2001

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—HOUSE

16935

Mr. WEINER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from New York (Mr. HINCEY).

Mr. HINCEY. Mr. Speaker, I want to thank the chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary, the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. SENSENBERGER), for expediting this legislation and bringing it to the floor so quickly.

As we all know, on Tuesday morning we witnessed the greatest assault on the Nation in our history. But since then, we have also seen examples of some of the greatest bravery and some of the most compassionate people that we have seen also in the history of our great country.

With this legislation, we begin the process that we will be involved in as a Congress in participating in the healing that must take place both for the city of New York and for the people who live there. With this legislation, we recognize the great bravery and heroism that was displayed by the municipal officers of that city, police officers, fire officers, port authority policemen and others.

Mr. Speaker, it is appropriate, obviously, that we do so; and in this small way, with a small gesture, we provide some of the financial support that their families who were left behind justly deserve.

Mr. WEINER. Mr. Speaker, how much time remains on our side?

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. LAFOURTELLE). The gentleman has seventeen and one-half minutes.

Mr. WEINER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from California (Ms. WATSON).

Ms. WATSON of California. Mr. Speaker, I commend the gentleman from New York (Mr. NADLER) for bringing this bill to the floor and join my colleagues from New York and other places in the extensions of sympathy. Over the past four days, many of us have spoken up to commend public safety personnel across the country for their bravery, to thank them for their tireless efforts, and to offer our condolences for the loss of their colleagues. Their courage in the face of danger and the ongoing struggle under the burden of great fatigue has given our Nation hope in otherwise bleak circumstances.

It indeed was a 911 emergency call. But words cannot match the sacrifices of the police, fire and rescue personnel who have paid the dearest price for their valor. We owe it to them and to their families that we provide the injury and survivor benefits promised to them, in the quickest and most efficient manner possible.

By passing this bill, we will in Congress match our words of thanks with real actions to support the men and women on the front lines of their struggle.

Mr. Speaker, I urge my colleagues to pass this bill without delay.

Mr. WEINER. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. STUPAK), the head of the Law Enforcement Caucus here in Congress.

Mr. STUPAK. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of this legislation to expedite the benefits for the public safety officers who were killed or injured as a result of the horrific events of September 11. I commend the members of the Committee on the Judiciary, the chairman and the ranking member on this side for bringing this legislation forward.

As the founder and the co-chair of the Law Enforcement Caucus, we are constantly reminded, and having been members of the Law Enforcement Caucus, we are constantly reminded, and having been members of the Congress, we in the Law Enforcement Caucus, remind the people throughout our great country of the most compassionate people that we have ever seen and in the history of our great country of the most compassionate people that we have ever seen.

With this legislation, we begin the process that we will be involved in as a Congress in participating in the healing that must take place both for the city of New York and for the people who live there. With this legislation, we recognize the great bravery and heroism that was displayed by the municipal officers of that city, police officers, fire officers, port authority policemen and others.

Mr. Speaker, I believe it is appropriate, obviously, that we do so; and in this small way, with a small gesture, we provide some of the financial support that their families who were left behind justly deserve.

Mr. Speaker, how much time remains on our side?

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. LAFOURTELLE). The gentleman has seventeen and one-half minutes.

Mr. WEINER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from California (Ms. WATSON).

Ms. WATSON of California. Mr. Speaker, I commend the gentleman...
When a public safety officer dies in the line of duty, his or her family receives a one-time benefit payment. The paperwork involved, unfortunately, is often long, arduous and time consuming. Just as our public safety officers stand up for us, we must now stand up for them in this time of tragedy. This legislation directs the Department of Justice to expedite the payment process for the families of those affected by Tuesday's events. Expediting assistance is one small way we can help families cope with this tragic loss and take advantage of this important benefit without undue burdens or delays. Of course, much more needs to be done in response to Tuesday's events. I stand ready to work with all of my colleagues to address this crisis in a timely and comprehensive manner. I urge all my colleagues to vote for this legislation as well. We will take other steps. This country will make the criminals who committed this act of war against the United States and against civilization rue the day they were born. But this is our first step. I thank my colleagues.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. SENSENBERN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from New York (Mr. OWENS). Mr. OWENS. Mr. Speaker, I would like to urge all of my colleagues to join us in taking this step that Members of Congress can take. There are a lot of things we cannot do. I am proud of the fact that so many Americans have responded to doing the things that they can do. They can give blood, and they are giving blood from all over the country. You can do that.

There are some things that we can do in Congress without having additional information, without a great deal of planning. We can authorize for the first time those who have paid the supreme price, for the families of those who have paid the supreme price, to at least know certain things are taken care of while they contend with their own grieving.

The stories are numerous of eyewitness accounts. One that stands out in my mind most is the one, and I have been riveted to the television and heard many of them, the account of the young man on the 85th floor who came down the steps. He said that the biggest difficulty they encountered was at the 34th floor where they encountered firemen who were coming up and who were so exhausted because of the gear they were carrying until one of them passed out. They stopped to help the firemen. They were going out. And I think that those who gave those accounts got out safely, but I am certain that the firemen they encountered were among those firemen who perished that day.

That kind of heroism, we should all salute and support by taking the steps that we can take here in Congress to

United States Tuesday than any other single event in modern history. Expediting assistance is one small way we can help families cope with this loss and take advantage of this benefit without undue burden or delays. Without question, more needs to be done in response to Tuesday's cataclysmic events, but this is a good first step in helping some of the victims' families; and I urge my colleagues to unanimously support this legislation.

Mr. SENSENBERN. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I am not a New Yorker, but what happened at the World Trade Center in New York could have happened anyplace in the country, because terrorism knows no boundaries. It could have happened in Milwaukee or San Francisco or Atlanta or anyplace else.

Americans throughout our land, as well as people around the world, witnessed in horror what unfolded on Tuesday morning. First one building was hit, then a second building was hit, then both of the buildings collapsed, and there were hundreds or thousands of people who were in them.

But over and above everything, the public safety officers in New York, the firefighters and the police officers, were unflinching in doing their duty, which was to try to save lives and to protect property. Over 200 of them are now reported as missing and presumed dead. We could be talking about the Milwaukee police and fire department or San Francisco police and fire department or the police and fire department of any community in the country, but New York was the city that was hit.

It is our responsibility to make sure that the families of the fallen receive the benefits that the Federal Government has extended to them for over 30 years as quickly and as promptly as possible. They will suffer enough pain with the loss of their loved ones. They should not be financially strapped because paperwork does not get done quickly.

This bill is the right thing to do. It is the right thing to do for New York today, and it would be the right thing to do for public safety officers who perish in large numbers as a result of a tragedy anywhere else in the country at any time in the future.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. WEINER. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I reiterate my thanks to the chairman, the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. SENSENBERN), and all of the Members of this body who have demonstrated their support, and to all of those who offer their condolences to this country who have been deluging New Yorkers with their demonstrations of support. The stand we take here on behalf of firefighters is done so on behalf of all Americans.

Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to yield the balance of my time to the gentleman from New York (Mr. NADLER), the sponsor of the bill, for the purpose of allocating time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. LAFOURCHE). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

Mr. NADLER. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. SENSENBERN) and the gentleman from New York (Mr. WEINER). I have just returned from spending time with my fellow New Yorkers to introduce this legislation.

I must say, when I was going up to New York from Washington, going up by train, usually the first thing I see 20 miles away is the World Trade Center, the twin towers, and it gives me a good feeling, like a welcome home. This morning, going from 20 miles away, no twin towers, no World Trade Center, only a huge plume of smoke stretching down the Jersey shore, and my guts felt like they were being torn out.

I take no pride in introducing this legislation, and if ever there were a bill I drafted I wish were not needed, this would be it.

Like so many Americans, I wait to hear from friends and colleagues who were in lower Manhattan when tragedy struck early Tuesday morning. With each passing hour, hope wanes; and we cannot help but feel more empty inside.

But through all of this death and destruction, there are some glimmers of hope. All across this country, men, women and children are coming together, to volunteer their services, to donate supplies, and to donate their blood, and even in many countries abroad. Even more moving are the numerous accounts witnesses have relayed of the heroic and fearless actions of the region's firefighters and police officers as they rushed up to the inferno that the World Trade Center had become as thousands of civilians rushed out. Putting the safety and well-being of others well above their own, public safety officers performed the most courageous acts; but, sadly, probably about 300 New York City firefighters and EMS workers and EMT volunteers and people paid with their lives as well as 60 or 70 New York City and Port Authority police officers.

According to the International Association of Firefighters, more public safety officers were lost in this attack on the United States than any other single event of that type in our Nation's history. In New York City, we normally lose four to five firefighters in a year. On one day, on Tuesday, we lost about 300.
make life as easy as possible for their families.

Mr. NADLER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. PASCRELL).

Mr. PASCRELL. Mr. Speaker, in what may very well be remembered as our Nation's most deplorable tragedy, our American family has stood firm. Amid the carnage and the destruction, amongst the pain and the anguish, our public safety officers performed their duties the way no fictional hero in Hollywood could dare imagine. Our police officers and firefighters, EMTs, along with countless other Americans in support roles are always there for us. Let us make sure that we, as their family, are there for them. Fire officials have said that over 300 firefighters are currently missing or dead. Dozens of police officers and other emergency workers are still unaccounted for. The Port Authority of New York and New Jersey has said it has lost so many employees.

To my buddies in the New York fire department and to my friends in the New York police department, we share in your grief. God only knows what else we will hear in the days ahead. God only knows how many children will arrive home only to discover that their brave mother or father has perished while serving their country. Let us make sure that these families are served by us, not only with our undying admiration and appreciation but also with our tangible support.

I implore my colleagues to support the gentleman from New York's bill. Payment to the families of public safety officers lost in the line of duty, our first defenders, should be mandatory. Now is not the time for long and time-consuming paperwork. Now is not the time for these families in their time of crisis and need to worry about their finances. Let us do right by our American family. Let us ensure that the Public Safety Officer Program operates effectively and efficiently.

On behalf of all of my colleagues, Mr. Speaker, I want to say thank you to all of those who have served on this most solemn of tragedies. We are with you. We are with America, our family.

Mr. NADLER. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself the balance of my time.

Mr. Speaker, I urge the passage of H.R. 2882. This legislation ensures that these stateless of those fallen public safety officers continue to selflessly endure in the ultimate sacrifice of their comrades never be forgotten. We pray for the safety of our public safety officers and the safe return of their fellow officers who remain missing. I urge my colleagues to fully support this bill.

Thirdly, Mr. Speaker, I want to express my confidence that the Department of Justice and the Department of the Treasury will join the Congress in treating the families of these heroic public servants, these heroic police officers, and emergency medical technicians and so forth, in treating their families with the respect they are due from a grateful Nation and will speed the help that they need and deserve as quickly and as painlessly as possible.

Having said that, Mr. Speaker, let me again simply say that I regret that I was not on the floor yesterday to speak or vote on the resolution. I was up in New York in my district which includes the World Trade Center dealing with some of the problems, some of the people, and touring the site. It is a gut-wrenching site. But let me express my confidence that New York and the United States will recover.

Mr. Speaker, I urge the passage of this bill. I thank the body.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself the balance of my time.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to commend the gentleman from New York (Mr. NADLER) for recognizing this paperwork problem and drafting legislation to cut the red tape and to make sure that these payments are made to the appropriate beneficiaries in the earliest possible manner.

Let me tell the Justice and Treasury Departments that if I hear of any delay in expediting these payments, I am going to be all over their back just as the gentleman from New York and other Members of this House will be on their back as well. This has to be a priority, and this Congress is stating that this has to be a priority through the passage of this bill today.

I am very pleased to support the efforts of the gentleman from New York (Mr. NADLER). And I am supporting it because I am an American and because this is the right thing to do.

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I rise in the utmost support of H.R. 2882. This legislation is designed to assure expedited payments of benefits to public safety officers who were killed or suffered injuries in the line of duty while responding to the terrorist attacks of September 11, 2001.

It is centrally important that this nation proceed hand in hand with the rule of law while confronting this catastrophe. We must assure, above all else, that our actions are not those of a vengeful nation. Instead, we must act with the conviction and certainty that the laws created under our Constitution allow.

In order to accomplish this goal, we must make sure that we pay adequate attention to the human issues involved in this tragedy. By assuring that the officers whom we have praised for their selflessness and contributions to stability receive the benefits they deserve in the most expedient manner possible, we demonstrate our deep gratitude for their efforts.

The legislature respects the rule of law by facilitating the civility of the Federal government toward those citizens we rely on in times of crisis. H.R. 2882 also pays homage to the legacies of those fallen public safety officers by making it easier for their spouses and family members to collect the benefits they are entitled to.

Many of the brave men and women who were first to respond to the events at the World Trade Center are no longer here to witness the cheers of citizens urging service personnel to find their friends and loved ones. They are not among us to hear the pronouncements and salutations worldwide that have provided recognizing their supreme sacrifice. This legislation ensures that these statements are not empty gestures. It places the priority of these fallen citizens—to provide safety and security for their families and friends—at the forefront of our remembrance.

Mr. Speaker, I am proud to support this legislation and I am proud that this Congress has chosen to move so quickly to assure these families receive the support they deserve.

Mr. TOWNS. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of H.R. 2882, the Public Safety Officer Benefit Bill.

Several hundred fire, police and rescue personnel lost their lives on Tuesday, September 11th simply doing their jobs: protecting the lives of New Yorkers. This legislation, today, will enable us to provide the families of these heroes with some small compensation for the loss of their loved one. While we can never give them back the sister, or husband or brother or son that they lost, at least we can spare them the indignity of having to produce mountains of paperwork in order to obtain this benefit.

Today's bill is an excellent improvement to current law, and I urge my colleagues to wholeheartedly support it.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in full support of H.R. 2882 expediting payments to the families of the brave public safety officers killed or injured in the line of duty during the heinous acts of terrorism against the United States which occurred on September 11, 2001. Our nation owes these heroic men and women our deepest gratitude and we extend to their families our sincerest and heartfelt sorrow. As our nation comes to grips with the shocking enormity of these attacks, our brave public safety officers remain on the front line of the massive search and rescue efforts underway. They are leading the tireless search for our fellow citizens and for their fallen comrades. At this time of national tragedy, let us acknowledge the ongoing sacrifices that our Nation's brave public safety officers continue to selflessly endure in the name of freedom and humanity. And may the ultimate sacrifice of their comrades never be forgotten. We pray for the safety of our public safety officers and the safe return of their fellow officers who remain missing. I urge my colleagues to fully support this bill.
Mr. FORBES. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of this important legislation that will provide much needed assistance to the brave men and women who have been leading our search and rescue efforts.

The tragic violence of two days ago has been a test of our resolve and our determination as a nation. We have more than met this test—we have passed it with flying colors, showing our enemies that we will not succumb to their messages of hatred, of violence, and of fear. All across America, we have witnessed proud displays of patriotism, courage, and compassion at prayer vigils and blood drives, through words of encouragement and individual acts of heroism.

No one has displayed this incredible bravery and selflessness like the fire, rescue, and police personnel that have put their lives on the line in the hopes of saving those who were the victims of these heinous attacks. From all corners of our great nation, volunteers are pouring into Pennsylvania, New York City, and Arlington, Virginia to aid their fellow public safety workers and to keep the rescue efforts going around the clock. Regrettably, many of these same men and women are among the lists of those that we have lost or that are missing. Our hearts go out to their families, who have made a tremendous sacrifice so that others might live.

Mr. Speaker, we can and should do all that we can to provide aid and comfort to these heroes and to the families that have suffered loss in the line of duty. H.R. 2882 is the very least we can do for them. It will expedite the payment of those that are killed or suffered a catastrophic illness as a result of their actions here. It cannot replace the father, son, or husband that is killed; it cannot mend the extraordinary physical and mental harm they endure; but it can ease at least one aspect of this horrible experience.

Our first responders are our front line defense to violence on our shores. These brave men and women have made us all proud and lifted our hearts during this trying time. Their heroic example and the sacrifice they paid is vibrant and strong. I am proud to do my part to support them today. I urge my colleagues to make passage of this legislation unanimous.

Mrs. McCARTHY of New York. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of this resolution offered by the gentleman of New York, Mr. NANDLER.

As this week's horrific events unfolded, I watched brave firefighters, law enforcement and rescue personnel risking their lives to save others.

I watched hospitals prepare for the wounded and our armed forces go on high alert.

I watched a stricken nation respond by rushing help to the injured. These are acts of honor and bravery that no barbaric act of violence can penetrate.

Unfortunately, many of our brave rescue personnel perished in the line of duty.

My condolences and prayers go out to the families for the loss of their loved ones.

To those people, let me say I've witnessed firsthand how communities can come together during a moment of crisis, and I can assure you the country will be there for you in your time of need.

That is why I urge members to support this important resolution and help families cope with their tragic loss, and take advantage of the Federal Public Safety Officer Benefit program without delay.

These families deserve no less in their time of grief.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of the bill, H.R. 2882.

The Nation's first responders—the firefighters, emergency medical personnel, and police—are the first to arrive at the scene, and the last to leave.

As the Nation mourns the deaths of hundreds, and probably thousands, of our fellow citizens, as we take stock of the destruction caused by Tuesday's terrorist attacks, we should also pause for a moment to reflect on the brave men and women who put their lives on the line every day, in every small town and suburb and big city across the country.

In passing H.R. 2882, we help ease the burden the families of these fallen heroes deserve. These brave men and women gave their lives in the line of duty in one of the most tragic events in our Nation's history. It has been reported that over 250 New York firefighters, emergency medical personnel, and police officers may have perished at the World Trade Center.

We cannot bring these people back, but we can ensure that those who survive them do not have to endure excessive paperwork to receive the benefits they deserve through the selflessness and sacrifice of their loved ones.

Many people would not be alive today if it were not for the bravery and sacrifice of these first responders. In one of the country's darkest hours, they kept faith with their colleagues, with those in need, with their country, and for that they paid the ultimate price. We have an obligation to ensure that their families get the support they need, and quickly, so that they can pick up the threads of their lives.

The Nation's first responders represent the very best of America, and we owe them and their families a debt of profound gratitude. Passing H.R. 2882 is the least we can do to bring some comfort to the families of these fallen heroes. I urge my colleagues to support this bill.

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. LA TOURETTE). Pursuant to the order of the House of today, the bill is considered read for amendment, and the previous question is ordered.

The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, and was read the third time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the passage of the bill.

The question was taken; and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Mr. Speaker, on that I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—yeas 413, nays 0, not voting 17, as follows:

[Table of votes not provided]
CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—HOUSE 16939

September 13, 2001

Mr. BECERRA and Mr. STARK changed their vote from "nay" to "yea."

So the bill was passed.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

Mr. TAYLOR of North Carolina. Mr. Speaker, I was not present for the vote on H.R. 2882. Had I been able to return from the Pentagon, I would have voted in strong support for H.R. 2882, to expedite relief for the families of law enforcement officers lost in this terrible tragedy.

Mr. MCKEON. Mr. Speaker, on rollcall No. 339 I was unavoidably detained. Had I been present, I would have voted "yea."

YES VOTE ON HOUSE JOINT RESOLUTION 61, CONDEMNING THE TERRORIST ATTACKS ON SEPTEMBER 11, 2001

Mr. CROWLEY asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.

Mr. CROWLEY. Mr. Speaker, on Rollcall 338, which occurred on September 12, 2001, unfortunately, due to circumstances beyond my control, I was unable to be here to vote on this important resolution. I would like to take this opportunity to state for the Record that had I been here, I would have voted "yea" on House Joint Resolution 61, condemning the cowardly terrorist attacks which took place on September 11.

I spent part of yesterday visiting the rescue operation team at the World Trade Center in their attempt to find more survivors within the rubble. I still find it difficult to recount the horrors that I witnessed, but I assure my colleagues that what I saw is unprecedented in the history of our country. It reaffirms my faith, though, in America and in this Congress that has moved so quickly, with such force and unity, to condemn these attacks and has guaranteed the support of the people of the United States for New York City, for Washington, D.C., and for all the victims of this vicious, vicious attack.

RECESS

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. LATOURETTE). Pursuant to clause 12 of rule I, the Chair declares the House in recess subject to the call of the Chair. Accordingly (at 12 o’clock and 40 minutes p.m.), the House stood in recess subject to the call of the Chair.

NOT VOTING—17

Mr. BECERRA and Mr. STARK changed their vote from "nay" to "yea."

VICTIMS OF TERRORISM RELIEF ACT OF 2001

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that it be in order at any time without intervention of any point of order to consider in the House the bill (H.R. 2884) to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to provide tax relief for victims of the terrorist attacks against the United States on September 11, 2001, and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The text of H.R. 2884 is as follows:

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the “Victims of Terrorism Relief Act of 2001”.

SEC. 2. INCOME TAXES OF MEMBERS OF TERRORIST ATTACKS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 692 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (relating to income taxes of members of Armed Forces on death) is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

“(1) in the first sentence by inserting “(a) IN GENERAL.—In the case of any individual who dies as a result of wounds or injury incurred as a result of the terrorist attacks against the United States on September 11, 2001, any tax imposed by this subtitle shall not apply—”;

“(A) with respect to the taxable year in which falls the date of such individual’s death, and

“(B) with respect to any prior taxable year in the period beginning with the last taxable year ending before the taxable year in which the wounds or injury were incurred.

“(2) Exception.—Paragraph (1) shall not apply to an individual whom the Secretary determines was a perpetrator of any such terrorist attack.”;

(b) CONFORMING AND CLERICAL AMENDMENTS.—

(1) The heading of section 692 of such Code is amended to read as follows:

“§ 692. INCOME TAXES OF MEMBERS OF ARMED FORCES ON DEATH AND VICTIMS OF CERTAIN TERRORIST ATTACKS.”;

(2) The item relating to section 692 in the table of sections for part II of subchapter J of chapter 1 of such Code is amended to read as follows:

“Sec. 692. Income taxes of members of Armed Forces on death and victims of certain terrorist attacks.”;

(3) Section 5(b)(1) of such Code is amended by inserting “and victims of certain terrorist attacks” after “on death”;

(4) Section 6013(f)(2)(B) of such Code is amended by inserting “and victims of certain terrorist attacks” after “on death”;

(5) Section 692(c)(2) of such Code is amended by inserting “and victims of certain terrorist attacks” after “on death”;

(c) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to taxable years ending on or after September 11, 2001.

RELIEF FROM ADDITIONAL ESTATE TAX.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 2201 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 is amended—

(1) in the first sentence by inserting “(a) IN GENERAL.—” before “The additional estate tax; and

(2) by adding at the end the following:
"(b) Victims of Certain Terrorist Attacks.—The additional estate tax shall not apply to the taxable estate of any individual who dies as a result of wounds or injury incurred as a result of the terrorist attacks against the United States on September 11, 2001. The preceding sentence shall not apply with respect to any individual whom the Secretary determines was a perpetrator of any such terrorist attack."

"(c) Effective Date.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to estates of decedents dying on or after September 11, 2001."

The Speaker pro tempore. Pursuant to the order of the House of today, the gentleman from California (Mr. Thomas) and the gentleman from New York (Mr. McNulty) each will control 30 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from California (Mr. Thomas).

Mr. Thomas. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Thomas. Mr. Speaker, as we continue to mourn the victims and as the rescue operation turns to recovery, one of the things that I think the American people perceived fairly early, and that its elected leaders are beginning to come to consensus on, is that this was an act of war.

Although we have not formally declared war, the mental framework of dealing in a wartime situation is one that will serve this country well, one, in terms of pursuing the perpetrators as combatants in a war and using military rules of engagement, but, secondly, on the home front, understanding that what occurred in New York and what occurred in the Pentagon and, to a lesser extent, in Pennsylvania were acts of war.

It would be ironic if we did not have this bill in front of us today, because what this bill basically does is take those provisions of the Tax Code already on the books which apply to the military and combat zones overseas or to private citizens who are attacked or are the subjects of terrorist attacks overseas and apply clearly. Newly enacted areas, the Pentagon, the Washington area, were combat zones, and that, therefore, it seems entirely appropriate that those provisions of the Tax Code which relieve tax responsibilities for individuals who are reasonable ought to be brought here to our shores, and that, not just figuratively but literally in the Tax Code, the terrorist victims should be considered as though they were in a combat zone, which they were, and that they were subject to terrorist attacks, which they were. That basically was the genesis of the bill.

It provides, then, specifically a reduction in the estate tax similar to what happens to members of the armed services, who are killed while serving in a combat zone die as a result of injuries suffered while serving in a combat zone. And, in addition, there is a Tax Code provision, as I said, that exempts Federal military and civilian employees from paying Federal income taxes in the year of their deaths based upon their condition of dying. That should be extended to the victims of the September 11 attacks as well.

In addition, there are technical clarifications, which I believe are very important to make sure that there are no tax consequences for any awards provided by third entities such as airlines or others. And, in addition to that, I want to make sure that, as the President declares these areas disaster areas, that anyone who avails themselves of the tax consequences by virtue of that designation of a disaster area does not later find out that they have tax consequences as a result of their decision to avail themselves of loans to rebuild property, dollar amounts to bury loved ones, or other financial inducements available by virtue of the declaration by the President of a disaster area.

It is the least that we can do before we adjourn for this week to put on record that Members of the House of Representatives, in a bipartisan way, believe that those victims of those attacks on September 11 were in a combat zone and should be afforded the privileges and protections that are in law for our military and for civilian personnel because, clearly, this is the first, I believe, substantive reflection of the fact that we are at war.

Therefore, I want to thank my friends on the other side of the aisle for the kindness that they provided to us to move legislation relatively quickly. While it is as much a gesture and an indication of our desire to help these people, it was as much a gesture and an indication of our desire to help these people in a small way, it certainly will not be the last. But people who are now going through the emotional suffering that they are going through should not also have to face the consequences of an insensitive government not looking at the fact that what we provide to people overseas, we would not provide to people here at home. I believe this bill rectifies that.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. McNulty. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. McNulty. Also, Mr. Speaker, that the cosponsor of this legislation is the gentleman from New York (Mr. Rangel), the ranking member of the Committee on Ways and Means.

Mr. English. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman not only for giving me

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—HOUSE

September 13, 2001
the opportunity to speak but also for preparing on short notice this legislation.

Mr. Speaker, the evil people who perpetrated the acts of terror this week made no distinction between civilian and military targets and casualties. Under these circumstances, neither should the Tax Code. As many have noted on the floor of the House, the United States is clearly at war; but, Mr. Speaker, this is a new kind of war, one that treats civilian buildings the same way as previous combatants treated military targets. In this war, civilian targets are not avoided by our enemies but are in fact sought out.

We already have provisions in the Tax Code which recognize the special risks that our military personnel face in time of war. What this bill does is extend the same tax treatment to civilian victims of Tuesday's attacks. As with military personnel killed in the line of duty, under this legislation we will exempt all individuals who are killed as a result of a military or terrorist act from Federal income taxes. Likewise, we will reduce estate taxes for civilians killed in Tuesday's attacks, just as we do for military personnel.

Finally, we will exempt from Federal taxation any compensation or assistance payments victims' families receive from either the airlines or from the Federal Emergency Management Agency.

Mr. Speaker, this is the right thing to do, and this is the least we can do at this moment. In the days and weeks ahead, this House will be called upon to do even more to bind the Nation's wounds, but today we make a good start with this crucial additional assistance to our friends and neighbors whose lives were decimated by Tuesday's attack.

Mr. McNULTY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to my friend, the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. LEVIN), a member of the Committee on Ways and Means.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. Speaker, I stand here not in the front in part because we come here with such heavy hearts and also with humility. Our hearts are growing heavier by the minute, by the minute. The tragic human face is coming into clearer and clearer focus. The images of family, of relatives on TV, are almost too hard for those of us to look at, though we are not directly involved, having no family member who lost his or her life.

We see the sense of humility. We know that whatever we do here is just a small step. It is difficult, as a result, to take them because we realize how inadequate any action of ours can be.

This Committee on Ways and Means stands here today to give this enormous, we realize today in this circumstance has very little; but we are doing whatever we can.

There was an act of war, that was clear; and we need to approach this in that regard in every respect. So I am glad the chairman of the committee and my colleague from New York (Mr. McNULTY) and the gentleman from New York (Mr. RANGEL), who has been in New York and is here in spirit and soon will be here in body, we all want to support this legislation, to simply make sure that if we can diminish the pain just a bit, that we will do so; that those who are victims in this act of war, that they will be treated fully as such.

So I rise in support of this legislation. I urge that we pass it unanimously; and then we go on to take whatever further steps, I hope somewhat larger ones, to respond to this human national tragedy.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. Speaker, it is my privilege to yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. CRANE), a senior member of the Committee on Ways and Means.

Mr. CRANE. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of the Victims' Tax Relief Act and am pleased to be an original cosponsor of this important legislation.

We have witnessed the most horrendous attack on American soil by a foreign invader in our Nation's history. The death toll will reach well beyond the 2,400 brave Americans who were killed at Pearl Harbor. The victims include not only civilians trapped in the World Trade Center buildings, but brave firefighters and police officers who gave their lives so that others might be saved. Likewise, hundreds of soldiers and civilian employees were killed in our own backyard when the terrorists crashed a plane into the Pentagon. Finally, we must not forget those on the four planes that were crashed.

Given the level of tragedy that has occurred during the last 4 days, we must do all we can to help those affected by these attacks. While we are unable to relieve the burden shouldered by those who have suffered, while we cannot resurrect those who are lost, we can and should do everything in our power as Members of Congress to make sure that their government is reaching out a hand to be Mr. Speaker.

I commend my colleague, the gentleman from California (Mr. THOMAS), for his foresight and ability to put this package together in an expeditious manner; and I look forward to its speedy passage through this esteemed body.

Mr. McNULTY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to my very distinguished friend, the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. KLEczka), a member of the Committee on Ways and Means.

Mr. KLEczKA. Mr. Speaker, first of all I would like to urge all my colleagues to give their unanimous approval to this legislation before us. I would like to thank and recognize the chairman of the committee, the gentleman from California (Mr. THOMAS), for his speed and hard work he has put into this legislation to bring it to the floor today.

Two days ago, untold numbers of civilians in New York City alone, with large numbers of our servicemen and women who served at the Pentagon, were killed in an act of terrorism against the United States. This bill will treat all of the victims of this atrocious attack as equals by giving the surviving families of the civilians who died in the buildings that were hit, as well as those on board the airplanes, the same tax treatment as those who perished while serving in our Armed Forces. This terrorist attack did not distinguish between military and civilian loss of life, and our tax laws should not either. The bill consists of four major parts. Currently members of the military who are killed while serving in combat or who die of injuries suffered while serving in a combat zone are given a sizable reduction in their estate tax liability. The bill before us would extend this same estate tax treatment to people who are killed as a result of Tuesday's terrorist attack.

Secondly, the law also exempts Federal military and civilian employees from paying Federal income taxes in the year of their death if they die as a result of a military or terrorist attack outside the United States. This measure would extend this relief to individuals who died in Tuesday's attack.

Thirdly, the bill would clarify that the $25,000 per passenger payments made by United Airlines to the victims' families will be exempt from Federal income taxes. Any payments made by American Airlines would also receive this benefit.

Lastly, the proposal would ensure that any assistance provided by the Federal Emergency Management Agency is also exempt from Federal income taxes.

Mr. Speaker, this bill is an important first step in the long road to recovering from this tragedy, and it is the least we can do at this time of national grieving. I ask that all my colleagues support this bill.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. Speaker, it is my privilege to yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from Florida (Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN).

Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN. Mr. Speaker, I thank the chairman for working through the night to bring this bill to the floor so quickly.

Mr. Speaker, Lady Liberty's torch has been called "the lamp beside the golden door." Despite Tuesday's terrorist attacks, the glinting hope of democracy still stands, almost defiant, in New York's harbor, sending a clear message to our enemies that this Nation will not on behalf of the development of the Victims’ Tax Relief Act, but his compassionate action in this matter; and I rise in strong support of the Victims’ Tax Relief Act as a proud and humble cosponsor.

The President called our present circumstances the first war of the 21st century; and, as the gentleman from California (Chairman THOMAS) has recognized in this proposal, the victims of these tragic events in New York and in our Nation’s Capital are casualties of war. Accordingly, we in this Chamber, Mr. Speaker, are called to action, action far afield of Washington, D.C.; but we are also called to mourn with those who mourn, as though we ourselves were suffering the same ordeal.

Currently the Tax Code provides an estate tax reduction for members of the Armed Forces who are killed while serving in combat. This bill reduces estate tax liability more than half. The proposal before us today would extend the same estate tax treatment to individuals who were killed as a result of Tuesday’s terrorist attacks, and well we should.

Similarly, Federal military and civilian employees are exempted from paying income taxes in the year of their death in the service of their country, and this measure would extend the same Federal income tax relief to individuals who died at the hands of terrorists.

It is imperative that we support the necessary action in this Chamber by our President in deploying our military. But it is also, in my humble opinion, important that we do justice, love, kindness, and adopt this important legislation.

Mr. McNULTY. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume to recognize a colleague from my home State of New York now. I spoke in my opening remarks about the gentleman from New York (Mr. CROWLEY.) He knows firsthand what is going on. He just returned to Washington today, and he knows of the tremendous loss that we have suffered.

The gentleman’s cousin, a firefighter hero, John Moran, is missing in action; but sure my colleagues remember the visions that we all saw on television over the last couple of days, when people were running from those buildings. John Moran and the other firefighters were running toward the buildings, into those buildings, up the stairs, putting their lives on the line for their fellow citizens.

Mr. Speaker, it is my honor to yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from New York (Mr. McNULTY), my colleague, for his kind words and for yielding me this time.

I want to rise in strong and full support of the Victims’ Tax Relief Act of 2001. This is just, I think, the beginning of what we are going to have to do to help provide for many of the victims of this terrible tragedy. In first blush, looking at it, I would prefer to see that there is no tax at all for these people, their families included, for whatever income they make.

Mr. Speaker, this is certainly something that we should all support. These people are going through incredible, incredible tragedy right now.

I received word that the HAZMAT unit in New York, which is located in my district, is right now missing nineteen members of that particular unit. So the fire department alone is going to have to rebuild, and I do not know if we will ever know exactly what it will take to do that.

But these families are going to have to rebuild. Whatever little we can do to support their efforts is what we should do. But by half of what it is and exempting the income in the taxable year of their death for military, Federal, military and civilian employees from paying Federal income tax I think is the least that we can do in support and solidarity with the victims of this atrocity.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I would tell the gentleman that this legislation is meant to be inclusive and not exclusive, and the initial response is to take those provisions already in the Tax Code applying to combat situations and terrorist attacks overseas, and bringing them home. That was the very least in the short time that we had that I thought would be at least a minimum appropriate response. As the gentleman indicated, we will have additional responses as we move forward.

It is clear that whatever folks think about New York in terms of its role, importance, significance, et cetera, there is no question that the City of New York and the surrounding area took it on the chin for the rest of the United States, and I think we will find that there will be additional ongoing responses to make sure that not just the victims, but those who by their own decisions in carrying out heroic acts and became accidental victims, are going to be taken care of. All of us want the gentleman to know that we share the concern, not just as Americans, but as people who have been brought to the scene in no physical way, but certainly in mental ways, by the horrible scenes that have been broadcast to us.

Mr. CROWLEY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. THOMAS. I yield to the gentleman from New York.
form, or means wanted to come across as though I do not appreciate what the gentleman is doing, because I certainly do. If my colleagues will please forgive me, most of me is back in New York right now and only about half of me is here, so I appreciate the words of the chairman and I look forward to working with the gentleman.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for his courtesy. He is today and tomorrow is tomorrow, and we will move forward.

Mr. Speaker, it is my privilege to yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. RYAN), a member of the committee.

Mr. RYAN of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

This is a quick response and an appropriate response. What we want to make sure happens is that for those victims of this terrorist act, they are afforded the same kind of benefits in the Tax Code that victims of terrorism abroad in the military or civilian, are entitled to.

We want to make sure that if any of the benefits that are being given through an airline, through FEMA, that at the end of the year, their family members are not hit with some kind of unexpected tax bill.

We want to make sure that the victims have an estate that is not taxed to the government, but that can go to their remaining loved ones, because we know that the people who experienced this tragedy did not have any estate planning, did not have an ability to set their affairs in order. This came as a surprise.

We want to make sure that with respect to the Federal Tax Code, that they are given any entitlement and ability to be treated just like a fallen soldier in battle abroad or a civilian abroad.

I want to thank the gentleman from California (Mr. THOMAS), the chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means, for bringing this together on such short notice. I think it is very appropriate. I think we all know that this is only the beginning of many pieces of legislation that we are going to have to pass in this body, whether it be to equip FEMA with resources for rescue missions or the military with the resources they need.

I think also it is going to have to be a work in progress of this committee to do what we can to assure that our economy continues to grow and that the American spirit, not only in patriotism but also in the way that we have continues on, so that we can continue to fuel what we need in this country from a patriotic standpoint, from an economic standpoint, from a moral standpoint. This is the beginning of those kinds of works that we are about to pass in this Congress.

I thank the chairman and the ranking member for what they have been doing.
to reduce (or eliminate) the amount of the estate tax payable.

Specifically, the reduction in Federal estate taxes under section 2201 is equal in amount to the “additional estate tax,” as defined in section 2011(d), with respect to the estate of decedents dying before January 1, 2005. Section 2011(d) provides in relevant part that the additional estate tax shall be the difference between the Federal estate tax imposed under section 2001 and 150% of the minimum state death tax credit determined under section 2011(b). With respect to the estates of decedents dying after December 31, 2004, section 2201 provides that the additional estate tax shall be the difference between the Federal tax imposed by section 2001 and 125% of the maximum state death tax credit determined under section 2011(b).

Present law provides that individuals generally must file their Federal income tax returns by April 15 of the year following the close of a taxable year (sec. 6072). Present law also provides that the Secretary may grant extensions of time for filing returns to persons who are entitled to extensions of time for performing various acts under the Internal Revenue Code, such as filing tax returns, and for the payment of estimated taxes.

Individuals may, if they choose, perform any of these acts during the period of suspension.

II. DESCRIPTION OF THE BILL

The bill treats individuals who die as a result of wounds or injury which were incurred as a result of the terrorist attacks that occurred on September 11, 2001, in the same manner as if: (1) they were a military or civilian employee of the United States dying as a result of terrorist or military activity outside the United States for purposes of section 692(c) of the Internal Revenue Code, and (2) they were a member of the Armed Forces of the United States in active service killed in action while serving in a combat zone or as a result of wounds, disease, or injury suffered while serving in a combat zone for purposes of section 2201 of the Code. Consequently, these individuals (whether killed on the four airplanes or on the ground, whether as victims or in rescue or recovery operations) are eligible for the exemption from income tax and the reduction in estate tax provided by these two provisions. Perpetrators of these terrorist attacks are not eligible for these special rules. The determination as to which individuals are perpetrators is to be made by the Secretary of the Treasury (or the Secretary’s delegate), in consultation with appropriate authorities.

In general, individuals who are wounded or injured as a result of the terrorist attack that occurred on September 11, 2001, and who die as a result of their wounds or injury in a later taxable year are eligible for the exemption from income taxes for all the taxable years beginning with the year prior to the year of the wounds or injury and ending with the year of death.

In the past, the IRS has exempted from income certain disaster payments made by government agencies that provide for promotion of general welfare, such as certain disaster payments made by the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA). The Congress expects that the IRS will consistently apply this policy in this situation and in the future.

Some have inquired as to the tax treatment of insurance proceeds initiated by the airlines to the families of victims on the four hijacked airplanes. These payments are advances to the families of the victims to help meet the immediate needs. Section 104 of the Internal Revenue Code excludes from income damages received on account of personal physical injury. Accordingly, no additional special provision is necessary to exclude such payments.

The chairperson pointed out, this is one small gesture of support for the survivors of the victims of this terrible, terrible tragedy, and our hearts continue to go out to all the victims, their families, all of those affected, and I especially draw attention again to the public safety personnel, the firefighters, the police officers, the doctors, the nurses, the ambulance attendants and drivers and everyone who is helping out in this situation.

We should always remember when we get up in the morning to be grateful for everyone putting their lives on the line the 365 days a year for us and for our families, in New York and in Washington this week we saw the tremendous price that many of them paid.

We hope and pray that the gentleman from New York’s (Mr. Crowley) cousin, Jack Moran, can be found alive.

I also would reiterate what the President has said over the past couple of days, that we are united in this country in our resolve to track down the cowards who committed these acts, I remind people again that terrorists by definition are cowards. They cannot get what they want by the power of persuasion, and therefore, they resort to attacking and killing innocent men, women and children.

I am particularly grateful for the part of the President’s statement the other night where he indicated that we will make no distinction between the terrorists and those who harbor them.

So on behalf of the gentleman from New York (Mr. Engel), who could not be here because he is still up in New York helping his constituents, and on behalf of all of the victims in New York and in Washington and Virginia and Pennsylvania, I say on his behalf, this is a united country and the forces of evil shall not prevail.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

I thank the gentleman from New York (Mr. McNulty) for his statement, and I do thank our colleagues on the other side of the aisle, beginning with the gentleman from New York (Mr. Rangel) who was in the epicenter, the ranking member, and all of the other Members who are currently carrying out their directed activities in assistance, and what we are seeing is a societal response to a societal attack. It is all for one and one for all, and it is a curious aspect of America’s nature that it does sometimes surface kinds of very tragic events to get us to set aside some of the secondary issues that preoccupy us.

This is not just America’s fight. This is the civilized world’s fight. As we enter into other engagements involved with anti-democratic forces around the world in previous generations, we are once again engaged in a struggle to protect freedom. It is not against any particular individuals. It is not against any particular groups. It is not against any particular religion. It is not against any particular country.
It is against all of those who would harbor individuals, who believe that barbaric acts against individuals somehow further their interests and causes. To do nothing is to reinforce that belief.

One of the reasons that I thought it would be appropriate to structure this immediate response in taking what we already provide to combatants overseas and to victims of terror overseas, in bringing it home, is to underscore the message that a number of us have repeated, and that is, we are at war.

It is as though we have declared war, and that our society needs to respond on a wartime footing. The benefits that folks get in combat zones are now available through this legislation here at home. Make no mistake about it, we are at war. When we are at war, it requires societal mobilization.

It means that, yes, in terms of a moral resolve, which this Nation has clearly indicated; yes, in terms of a military resolve, which we will be moving additional legislation to clearly indicate that we are ready for; but probably first and foremost, a mental wartime condition is that this society will do what is necessary to win this fight we did not choose.

It means first and foremost, that the society needs to be strong, but it needs to be strong in a number of ways. One of the ways we need to be strong is economic. We will continue to examine measures or options available to us to make us strong.

The infrastructure of the financial structure of this country was struck a significant blow, given the role and the importance of lower Manhattan to the financial institutions of this country. They were struck a significant blow, but clearly, not a mortal blow. We will overcome this, as we have overcome other adversities.

However, I believe it is appropriate and incumbent upon the people's government to examine ways in which we can assist our overcoming these difficulties, not just in terms of a moral position, not just in terms of a victims' tax provision, but also a societal response to make sure that the economy is strong.

We will pursue the combatants. We will be strong. We will show through our resolve that this kind of effort, as in the past, will be unsuccessful.

So for a very, very small portion of the outpouring of support this bill is offered in terms of terror overseas, in its timely context and also in terms of its content, it is the beginning to let people know that if we are at war we will respond, not just in terms of a combatant response for the military engagement, team, or indeed, any country that has been a part of the enablement that allowed that terrorist act to occur; but that this society is ready to face whatever obstructions necessary, and we will overcome them, so that people who dedicate themselves to the kind of democratic and libertarian philosophy of allowing people to choose the way in which they wish to live in peace and freedom will be reinforced. This is a very small token in the ongoing gesture of this society.

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H.R. 2884. This legislation will absolve the taxes of those public service officers who lost their lives in the line of duty on September 11, 2001.

If an armed services officer loses his life in the line of duty, that individual is not required to pay estate taxes or income taxes for the year in which they expired. This is central to the way we proceed in times of war, for this procedure recognizes the reality that soldiers are also citizens with families, debts, and obligations.

The events of September 11, 2001 have complicated this policy. The recent acts that occurred on American soil certainly constitute an act of war against this nation. Over 200 uniformed public service personnel lost their lives in the line of duty on this day. Because this act of war did not involve armed services personnel, the brave men and women who responded without thought of their own safety will not receive this exemption from the Federal government.

H.R. 2884 will forgive the tax burdens of the brave men and women we now know to be both civil servants and soldiers. This country moved into a new era as a result of the horrors of September 11, 2001. So too must the rule of law conform to the pragmatic realities of facing a headless enemy on our home soil. We honor these patriots by enacting this legislation to ease the financial burdens on the loved ones and families they leave behind. This legislation recognizes that for now and evermore, the service personnel who died in the line of duty here, on American soil, have paid their debts to this nation.

Though the means have changed forever, the commitment this country demonstrates to those who serve and protect its citizens must be unbroken. H.R. 2884 guarantees this will not happen, and I am proud to give this legislation my full support.

Mr. LARSON of Connecticut. Mr. Speaker, I rise today as an original co-sponsor of H.R. 2884, the Victims' Tax Relief Act, and to ask my colleagues to give this legislation my full support.

Mr. Speaker, no American will ever forget September 11, 2001. We will never forget the horrible images that we have seen. We will never forget the heroism and dedication displayed by the many firefighters, police officers, and all other emergency workers fighting to save the lives of our fellow Americans.

We would be performing a disservice to the families of these heroes and the innocent victims of these cowardly attacks by adding economic hardship to their incredible loss. This bill is the beginning to let people know that our society is strong.

We, as Americans, know that our lives will never be the same. We will never walk down our streets with the same feeling of freedom and safety that we have enjoyed for so long. We will have to answer the questions of our children; they will have to put the broken pieces of their lives back together. What is worse is that these families will have to worry about the future financial ability for these victims. Presently, these exemptions and reductions are reserved for members of the Armed Services who are killed in a combat zone. In addition, this bill would exempt the payments made to families of the 266 passengers by United Airlines and American Airlines from Federal income tax. And it would ensure that Federal Emergency Relief payments are exempt from Federal income tax.

Although these victims were not serving in the Armed Services, they were in the combat zone and because of this, there is no reason why we should treat them any differently than those who have formally enlisted into our military. The actions of this week were acts of war, and the victims of these acts of war should be treated as casualties of war.

Mr. Speaker, I rise today as an original co-sponsor of H.R. 2884, the Victims' Tax Relief Act, and to ask my colleagues to give this legislation my full support.

Mr. Speaker, I rise today as an original co-sponsor of H.R. 2884, the Victims' Tax Relief Act, and to ask my colleagues to give this legislation my full support.

September 13, 2001
to come. Therefore, I urge my colleagues to join me in voting in favor of H.R. 2884.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of this legislation to provide a tax relief package for the victims of Tuesday’s terrorist attacks in New York and Washington DC. I urge my colleagues to join in supporting this appropriate and necessary measure.

Mr. Speaker, on Tuesday our Nation suffered an unprecedented terrorist attack in both the scope of its depravity, and in the magnitude of the resulting destruction of both life and property. At this time, the full extent of the number of casualties from the attack on the World Trade Center in New York remains unknown. Not only did thousands of people perish in the fires and subsequent collapse of the twin towers, but hundreds of brave New York firefighters and police officers lost their lives in attempting to rescue those trapped in the towers.

There was a similar simultaneous disaster at the Pentagon where the fire resulting from the attacking airplane burned for more than 24 hours. The process of retrieving the dead has only just started at the Pentagon site.

Mr. Speaker, we in the Congress will never be able to fully recompense the loss suffered by the thousands of families of those who perished. Moreover, we can never hope to repay the heroic sacrifices made by those brave rescue workers who selflessly laid down their lives in an attempt to rescue the victims.

We do, however, have the ability to offer a small measure of our appreciation to ensure that these families are not burdened by any unexpected liability when tax-filing season comes around next spring. If we do nothing, the cruel irony is that many families will face an unexpected and unpleasant burden next April.

This legislation extends the estate tax reduction provisions established for members of the Armed Forces who are killed or die from injuries received while serving in a combat zone to those killed or die from injuries received while serving in a combat zone to those killed or die from injuries received while serving in a combat zone to those killed or die from injuries received while serving in a combat zone to those killed in Tuesday’s attack.

Mr. THOMAS, Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. MILLER of Florida) at 2 o’clock called the House to order by the Speaker pro tempore, and there were—yeas 418, nays 0, which the yeas and nays are ordered.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—yes 418, nays 0, not voting 12, as follows:

The recess having expired, the House proceeded to consider H.R. 2884, the Victims’ Tax Relief Package, on which the question was taken; and the passage of the bill, H.R. 2884, on which the yeas and nays are ordered.

The Clerk read the title of the bill. The Speaker pro tempore. The question is on the passage of the bill on which the yeas and nays are ordered.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—yeas 418, nays 0, not voting 12, as follows:

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The pending business is the question of the passage of the bill, H.R. 2884, on which further proceedings were postponed earlier today.

The Clerk read the title of the bill. The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the passage of the bill on which the yeas and nays are ordered.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—yeas 418, nays 0, not voting 12, as follows:

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The pending business is the question of the passage of the bill, H.R. 2884, on which further proceedings were postponed earlier today.

The Clerk read the title of the bill. The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the passage of the bill on which the yeas and nays are ordered.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—yeas 418, nays 0, not voting 12, as follows:
Congressional Record—House

September 13, 2001

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A message from the Senate by Mr. Monahan, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate has passed without amendment a concurrent resolution of the House of the following title: H. Con. Res. 233. Concurrent resolution permitting the use of the Rotunda of the Capitol for a prayer vigil in memory of those who lost their lives in the events of September 11, 2002.

COMMUNICATION FROM THE STAFF ASSISTANT TO COMMITTEE ON VETERANS’ AFFAIRS

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. Miller, George (FL)) laid before the House the following communication from Gregory R. Carmichael, staff assistant to Committee on Veterans’ Affairs:

Dear Mr. SPEAKER: This is to notify you formally, pursuant to Rule VIII of the Rules of the House of Representatives, that I have been served with a subpoena for testimony issued by the Superior Court of the District of Columbia.

After consultation with the Office of General Counsel, I have determined that compliance with the subpoena is consistent with the privileges and rights of the House.

Sincerely,

Gregory R. Carmichael, Staff Assistant.

LEGISLATIVE PROGRAM

Mr. ARMY asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.

Mr. ARMY. Mr. Speaker, I would like to announce to the Members that we are about to adjourn subject to the call of the Chair. I am announcing that at 4:30 p.m. there will be a Floor of this House a Members-only national security briefing and all Members are requested to attend.

The briefings will be given by people from the White House and the administration.

Mr. Speaker, soon after that briefing, it is our expectation that we will be able to resume legislative business in order to consider the emergency supplemental appropriations act and a resolution authorizing the use of force in regard to the terrorist attacks on the United States.

Mr. Speaker, I should emphasize that bipartisan and bicameral discussions are going on with respect to both of these very important pieces of legislation, and it is our hope to finish both measures today if at all possible. However, Mr. Speaker, Members are advised that votes are possible tomorrow in order to finish this important business before the Congress.

I want to thank the Members of this body for their cooperation and their patience as we work these things out together, Republicans and Democrats, Members of this body. Members of the other body from both parties, working hard. The timetable I know should be more exacting than it is, but it is as exacting as we can give you. I can assure Members with all full confidence that by the normal departure time of 2 o’clock Friday, we should have been able to complete both of these important pieces of legislation and have completed our legislative week. I thank the Members for their patience.

RECESS

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. Sweeney). Pursuant to clause 12 of rule I, the Chair declares the House in recess subject to the call of the Chair.

Accordingly (at 3 o’clock and 2 minutes p.m.), the House stood in recess subject to the call of the Chair.

REPORT ON RESOLUTION WAIVING REQUIREMENT OF CLAUSE 6(a) OF RULE XIII WITH RESPECT TO CONSIDERATION OF CERTAIN RESOLUTIONS

Mrs. MYRICK, from the Committee on Rules, submitted a privileged report (Rept. No. 107–205) on the resolution (H. Res. 237) waiving a requirement of clause 6(a) of rule XIII with respect to consideration of certain resolutions reported from the Committee on Rules, which was referred to the House Calendar and ordered to be printed.

CORRECTION TO THE CONGRESSIONAL RECORD OF TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 11, 2001, PAGE H5493

LEAVE OF ABSENCE

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted to:

Mr. Davis of Illinois (at the request of Mr. Gephardt) for today on account of official business.

Ms. Kilpatrick (at the request of Mr. Gephardt) for today on account of the 16948

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—HOUSE

shutdown of the National Air Space System.
Mr. LINDER (at the request of Mr.
ARMEY) from 6 p.m. today and for the balance of the week on account of personal business.
Mrs. MALONEY of New York (at the request of Mr. GEPHARDT) for today on account of official business in the district.
Mr. SAXTON (at the request of Mr.
ARMEY) for today on account of the death of his father.
f

SENATE ENROLLED JOINT RESOLUTION SIGNED
The SPEAKER announced his signature to enrolled a joint resolution of the Senate of the following title: S.J. Res. 22. A joint resolution expressing the sense of the Senate and House of Representatives regarding the terrorist attacks launched against the United States on September 11, 2001.
f

ADJOURNMENT
Mrs. MYRICK. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.
The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 11 o’clock and 25 minutes p.m.), the House adjourned until tomorrow, Friday, September 14, 2001, at 9 a.m.
f

OATH FOR ACCESS TO CLASSIFIED
INFORMATION
Under clause 13 of rule XXIII, the following Members executed the oath for access to classified information:
Neil Abercrombie, Anı́bal AcevedoVilá, Gary L. Ackerman, Robert B.
Aderholt, W. Todd Akin, Thomas H.
Allen, Robert E. Andrews, Richard K.
Armey, Joe Baca, Spencer Bachus,
Brian Baird, Richard H. Baker, John
Elias E. Baldacci, Tammy Baldwin,
Cass Ballenger, James A. Barcia, Bob
Barr, Thomas M. Barrett, Roscoe G.
Bartlett, Joe Barton, Charles F. Bass,
Xavier Becerra, Ken Bentsen, Doug Bereuter, Shelley Berkley, Howard L.
Berman, Marion Berry, Judy Biggert, Michael Bilirakis, Sanford D. Bishop,
Jr.,
Rod
R.
Blagojevich,
Earl
Blumenauer, Roy Blunt, Sherwood L.
Boehlert, John A. Boehner, Henry
Bonilla, David E. Bonior, Mary Bono,
Robert A. Borski, Leonard L. Boswell,
Rick Boucher, Allen Boyd, Kevin
Brady, Robert A. Brady, Corrine
Brown, Sherrod Brown, Henry E.
Brown, Jr., Ed Bryant, Richard Burr,
Dan Burton, Steve Buyer, Sonny Callahan, Ken Calvert, Dave Camp, Chris Cannon, Eric Cantor, Shelley Moore
Capito,
Lois
Capps, Michael
E.
Capuano, Benjamin L. Cardin, Brad
Carson, Julia Carson, Michael N. Castle, Steve Chabot, Saxby Chambliss, Donna M. Christensen, Wm. Lacy Clay,
Eva M. Clayton, Bob Clement, James
E. Clyburn, Howard Coble, Mac Collins,

Larry Combest, Gary A. Condit, John
Cooksey, Jerry F. Costello, Christopher
Cox, William J. Coyne, Robert E. (Bud)
Cramer, Jr., Philip P. Crane, Ander
Crenshaw, Joseph Crowley, Barbara
Cubin, John Abney Culberson, Elijah E.
Cummings,
Randy
‘‘Duke’’
Cunningham, Danny K. Davis, Jim
Davis, Jo Ann Davis, Susan A. Davis,
Thomas M. Davis, Nathan Deal, Peter
A. DeFazio, Diana DeGette, William D.
Delahunt, Rosa L. DeLauro, Tom DeLay, Jim DeMint, Peter Deutsch,
Lincoln Diaz-Balart, Norman D. Dicks,
John D. Dingell, Lloyd Doggett, Calvin
M. Dooley, John T. Doolittle, Michael
F. Doyle, David Dreier, John J. Duncan, Jr., Jennifer Dunn, Chet Edwards, Vernon J. Ehlers, Robert L. Ehrlich,
Jr., Jo Ann Emerson, Eliot L. Engel,
Phil English, Anna G. Eshoo, Bob
Etheridge, Lane Evans, Terry Everett,
Eni F. H. Faleomavaega, Sam Farr,
Chaka Fattah, Mike Ferguson, Bob Filner, Jeff Flake, Ernie Fletcher, Mark
Foley, J. Randy Forbes, Harold E.
Ford, Jr., Vito Fossella, Barney Frank,
Rodney P. Frelinghuysen, Martin
Frost, Elton Gallegly, Greg Ganske,
George W. Gekas, Richard A. Gephardt,
Jim Gibbons, Wayne T. Gilchrest, Paul
E. Gillmor, Benjamin A. Gilman,
Charles A. Gonzalez, Virgil H. Goode,
Jr., Bob Goodlatte, Bart Gordon, Porter J. Goss, Lindsey O. Graham, Kay Granger, Sam Graves, Gene Green,
Mark Green, James C. Greenwood,
Felix J. Grucci, Jr., Luis Gutierrez, Gil Gutknecht, Ralph M. Hall, Tony P.
Hall, James V. Hansen, Jane Harman,
Melissa A. Hart, J. Dennis Hastert,
Alcee L. Hastings, Doc Hastings, Robin
Hayes, J. D. Hayworth, Joel Hefley,
Wally Herger, Baron P. Hill, Van
Hilleary, Earl F. Hilliard, Maurice D.
Hinchey, Rubén Hinojosa, David L.
Hobson, Joseph M. Hoeffel, Peter Hoekstra, Tim Holden, Rush D. Holt, Michael M. Honda, Darlene Hooley, Stephen Horn, John N. Hostettler, Amo
Houghton, Steny H. Hoyer, Kenny C.
Hulshof, Duncan Hunter, Asa Hutchinson, Henry J. Hyde, Jay Inslee, Johnny Isakson, Steve Israel, Darrell E.
Issa, Ernest J. Istook, Jr., Jesse L.
Jackson, Jr., Sheila Jackson-Lee, William J. Jefferson, William L. Jenkins, Christopher John, Eddie Bernice Johnson, Nancy L. Johnson, Sam Johnson, Timothy V. Johnson, Stephanie Tubbs
Jones, Walter B. Jones, Paul E. Kanjorski, Marcy Kaptur, Ric Keller, Sue
W. Kelly, Mark R. Kennedy, Patrick J.
Kennedy, Brian D. Kerns, Dale E. Kildee, Carolyn C. Kilpatrick, Ron Kind, Peter T. King, Jack Kingston, Mark
Steven Kirk, Gerald D. Kleczka, Joe Knollenberg, Jim Kolbe, Dennis J.
Kucinich, John J. LaFalce, Ray
LaHood, Nick Lampson, James R.
Langevin, Tom Lantos, Steve Largent,
Rick Larsen, John B. Larson, Tom
Latham, Steven C. LaTourette, James
A. Leach, Barbara Lee, Sander M.
Levin, Jerry Lewis, John Lewis, Ron

September 13, 2001

Lewis, John Linder, William O. Lipinski, Frank A. LoBiondo, Zoe Lofgren, Nita M. Lowey, Frank D. Lucas, Ken
Lucas,
Bill
Luther,
Carolyn
B.
Maloney, James H. Maloney, Donald A.
Manzullo, Edward J. Markey, Frank Mascara, Jim Matheson, Robert T.
Matsui, Carolyn McCarthy, Karen McCarthy,
Betty McCollum,
Jim
McCrery, James P. McGovern, John
McHugh, Scott McInnis, Mike McIntyre, Howard P. McKeon, Cynthia A.
McKinney, Michael R. McNulty, Martin T. Meehan, Carrie P. Meek, Gregory
W. Meeks, Robert Menendez, John L.
Mica, Juanita Millender-McDonald,
Dan Miller, Gary G. Miller, George Miller, Patsy T. Mink, John Joseph Moakley, Alan B. Mollohan, Dennis Moore,
James P. Moran, Jerry Moran, Constance A. Morella, John P. Murtha, Sue Wilkins Myrick, Jerrold Nadler, Grace
F. Napolitano, Richard E. Neal, George
R. Nethercutt, Jr., Robert W. Ney,
Anne M. Northup, Eleanor Holmes Norton, Charlie Norwood, Jim Nussle, James L. Oberstar, David R. Obey,
John W. Olver, Solomon P. Ortiz, Tom
Osborne, Doug Ose, C. L. Otter, Major
R. Owens, Michael G. Oxley, Frank
Pallone, Jr., Bill Pascrell, Jr., Ed Pastor, Ron Paul, Donald M. Payne, Nancy Pelosi, Mike Pence, Collin C. Peterson,
John E. Peterson, Thomas E. Petri,
David D. Phelps, Charles W. Pickering,
Joseph R. Pitts, Todd Russell Platts,
Richard W. Pombo, Earl Pomeroy, Rob
Portman, David E. Price, Deborah Pryce, Adam H. Putnam, Jack Quinn,
George Radanovich, Nick J. Rahall, II,
Jim Ramstad, Charles B. Rangel, Ralph
Regula, Dennis R. Rehberg, Silvestre
Reyes, Thomas M. Reynolds, Bob
Riley, Lynn N. Rivers, Ciro D.
Rodriguez, Tim Roemer, Harold Rogers, Mike Rogers, Dana Rohrabacher, Ileana Ros-Lehtinen, Mike Ross, Steven R. Rothman, Marge Roukema, Lucille Roybal-Allard, Edward R. Royce, Bobby L. Rush, Paul Ryan, Jim Ryun,
Martin Olav Sabo, Loretta Sanchez,
Bernard Sanders, Max Sandlin, Tom
Sawyer, Jim Saxton, Joe Scarborough,
Bob Schaffer, Janice D. Schakowsky,
Adam B. Schiff, Edward L. Schrock,
Robert C. Scott, F. James Sensenbrenner, Jr., José E. Serrano, Pete Sessions, John B. Shadegg, E. Clay Shaw, Jr., Christopher Shays, Brad Sherman,
Don Sherwood, John Shimkus, Ronnie
Shows, Bill Shuster, Rob Simmons, Michael K. Simpson, Norman Sisisky, Joe Skeen, Ike Skelton, Louise McIntosh
Slaughter, Adam Smith, Christopher
H. Smith, Lamar S. Smith, Nick
Smith, Vic Snyder, Hilda L. Solis,
Mark E. Souder, Floyd Spence, John N.
Spratt, Jr., Cliff Stearns, Charles W.
Stenholm, Ted Strickland, Bob Stump,
Bart Stupak, John E. Sununu, John E.
Sweeney, Thomas G. Tancredo, John S.
Tanner, Ellen O. Tauscher, W. J. (Billy)
Tauzin, Charles H. Taylor, Gene Taylor, Lee Terry, William M. Thomas, Bennie G. Thompson, Mike Thompson,


PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 2 of rule XII, public bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred, as follows:

By Mr. NADLER (for himself, Mr. SENGREN, Mr. CONYERS, Mr. MORA of Virginia, Mr. ACKERMAN, Mr. CROWLEY, Mr. ENGEL, Mr. HINCHY, Mr. KING, Mrs. LOWEY, Mrs. MALONEY of New York, Mrs. MCCARTHY of New York, Mr. MCNULTY, Mr. MEERS of New York, Mr. QUINN, Mr. RANGEL, Mr. SERRANO, Mrs. SCHAFFER, Mr. TOWNS, Mr. WALSH, Mr. BRADY of Pennsylvania, Mr. DAVIS of Florida, Mr. DELAHUNT, Mr. HOLDEN, Mrs. JOHNSON of Connecticut, Mr. KAPTUR, Mr. ISRAEL, Mr. McGovern, Mr. PASCRELL, Mr. SCHIFF, Mrs. TAUCHER, and Mrs. JO ANN DAVIS of Virginia). Referred to the House Calendar.

H.R. 2882. A bill to provide for the expedited payment of certain benefits for a public safety officer who was killed or suffered a catastrophic injury as a direct proximate result of a personal injury sustained in the line of duty in connection with the terrorist attacks of September 11, 2001; to the Committee on Ways and Means. Considered and passed.

By Mr. GOSS:

H.R. 2883. A bill to authorize appropriations for fiscal year 2011 and for intelligence and intelligence-related activities of the United States Government, the Community Management Account, and the Central Intelligence Agency Retirement and Disability System, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Intelligence (Permanent Select).

By Mr. THOMAS (for himself, Mr. RANGEL, Mr. SCHAKOE, Mr. STARK, Mr. SHAH, Mr. MATSU, Mrs. JOHNSON of Connecticut, Mr. COYNE, Mr. HOUTCHEN, Mr. HEREFORD, Mr. LEVIN, Mr. MCDERMOTT, Mr. MCDERMOTT, Mr. RUSSELL, Mr. LEWIS of Georgia, Mr. SAM JOHNSON of Texas, Mr. CASTOR of Florida, Mr. DIAMOND of Massachusetts, Mr. DUNN, Mr. MCNULTY, Mr. COLLINS, Mr. JEFFERSON, Mr. PORTMAN, Mr. TANNER, Mr. ENGLISH, Mr. BECERRA, Mr. WATKINS, Mrs. THURMAN, Mr. HAYWORTH, Mr. WELLER, Mr. DOGGETT, Mr. HULSHOF, Mr. POMEROY, Mr. MCINNIS, Mr. LEWIS of Kentucky, Mr. FOLEY, Mr. BRADY of Texas, Mr. RYAN of Wisconsin, Mr. HASTERT, Mr. GEPHARDT, Mr. ARMY, Mr. DELATAY, Mr. WATTS of Oklahoma, Ms. PRYCE of Ohio, Mrs. CUNIN, Mr. BOHLEIERT, Mr. GILMAN, Mr. FOSSELLA, Mrs. MCCARTHY of New York, Mr. KING, Mr. REYNOLDS, Mr. NADLER, Mr. HINCHY, Mr. CROWLEY, Mr. SWEENEY, Mrs. KELLY, Mr. ISRAEL, Mrs. SCHAFFER, Mrs. MALONEY of New York, Mrs. LOWEY, Mr. QUINN, Mrs. PORTMAN, Mr. SATXON, Mr. PALOOKIN, Mr. McKRON, Mr. RYUN of Kansas, Mr. TAUZIN, Mr. CALVET, Mr. GIBBONS, Mr. NADLER, Mr. FRELINGHUYSEN, Mr. LOBIONDO, Mrs. ROUKEMA, Mr. BALLINGER, Mr. MILLER of Florida, Mr. HORBON, Mrs. MYRICK, Mr. NETTHERCUTT, Mr. EVERETT, Mr. BASS, Mrs. BIGGERT, Mr. SHAYS, Mr. WALDEN of Oregon, Ms. DE LAURO, Mr. HINOJOSA, Ms. SOLIS, Mr. SCHAPPFER, Mr. PETTSONER of California, Mrs. JO ANN DAVIS of Virginia, Mr. BROWN of South Carolina, Mr. TANCREDO, Mr. CHENSHAW, Mr. CANTOR, Mr. HOREKSTRA, Mr. PENCER, Mr. FORBES, Mr. WINKINS, Mr. HORN, Mr. SCHROCK, Mr. PUTNAM, Mr. JONES of North Carolina, Mr. ROGERS of Michigan, Mr. GARY G. MILLER of California, Mr. CHANDLER, Mr. GREENWOOD, Mr. TOOMEY, Mr. GREEN of Wisconsin, Mr. HILLAREY of Indiana, Mr. ROTHMAN, Mr. CULBERSON, Mr. PASCRELL, Mr. TIAHRT, Mr. LARGENT, Mr. SHUSTER, Mr. KENNEDY of Minnesota, Mr. JENKINS, Ms. HART, Mr. LARSON of Connecticut, Mr. MENENDEZ, Mr. SMITH of New Jersey, Mr. SIMMONS, Mr. SHADEG, Mr. MALONEY of Connecticut, Mr. FERGUSON, and Mr. KELLER).

H.R. 2884. A bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to provide tax relief for victims of the terrorist attacks against the United States on September 11, 2001; to the Committee on Ways and Means. Considered and passed.

By Mr. DEUTSCH:

H.R. 2885. A bill to provide for the transfer of certain real property by the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development; to the Committee on Government Reform.

By Mr. NADLER (for himself, Mr. SKELETON, Mr. HOYER, Mr. MORA of Virginia, and Mr. WYN); to the Committee on Armed Services.

By Mr. GREENWOOD (for himself, Ms. ESHOO, Mr. UPTON, Mr. WYN, Mr. BUYER, Mr. RUSH, Mr. BRADY of Pennsylvania, Mr. ROYALL-ALLARD, and Ms. LOFREN). Considered and agreed to.

H.R. 2887. A bill to amend the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act to improve the safety and efficacy of pharmaceuticals for children; to the Committee on Energy and Commerce.

By Mr. BARR of Georgia (for himself, Mr. GEPHARDT, Mr. JONES of North Carolina, Mr. DEAL of Georgia, Mr. SESSIONS, Mr. TANCREDO, Mr. SCHAPPFER, and Mr. SOUDER). Considered and agreed to.

H.J. Res. 62. Joint resolution declaring a state of war between the United States and international terrorists and their sponsors; to the Committee on International Relations.

By Mr. WELDON of Pennsylvania (for himself, Mr. SCHAPPFER, Mr. PETTSONER of Pennsylvania, Mr. GILMAN, and Mr. BARTLETT). Considered and agreed to.

H.J. Res. 63. Joint resolution declaring that a state of war exists between the United States and any entity determined by the President to have planned, carried out, or otherwise supported the attacks against the United States on September 11, 2001, and authorizing the President to use United States Armed Forces and such other necessary resources of the United States Government against any such entity in order to bring the conflict to a successful termination; to the Committee on International Relations.

By Mr. HASTERT (for himself, Mr. GEPHARDT, Mrs. EMERSON, Mr. SKELETON, Mr. GREENWOOD, Mr. TOOMEY, Mr. RYUN of Kansas, Ms. DUNN, Mr. ARMY, Mr. LAFAUL, Mr. CUMMINGS, Mr. TANNER, Mr. PITTS, Mr. BUHR of North Carolina, Mr. DAVIS of Florida, Mr. SIMON of New York, Mrs. CUBIN, Ms. KAPTUR, Mr. PICKERING, Mr. BLUNT, Mr. GRAVES, Mr. BROWN of South Carolina, Mr. CHENSHAW, Mr. TING of North Carolina, Mr. LAHOOD, Mr. UPTON, Mr. GUTKNIGHT, Mr. HASTINGS of Washington, Mr. PAUL, Ms. PRICE of Ohio, Mrs. WILSON, Mr. JENKINS, Mr. MILLER of Florida, Mr. CALLAHAN, Mr. EVERETT, Mrs. BHOINSERT, Mr. WATTS of Oklahoma, Mr. HOREKSTRA, Mr. LOBIONDO, Mr. SAXTON, Mr. GILCHRIST, Mr. HUNTER, Mr. SIMPSON, Mr. FLAKE, Mr. WALDEN of Oregon, Mr. SCHROCK, Mr. ISAKSON, Mr. SHERWOOD, Mr. CANTOR, Mr. CAMP, Mr. REKULA, Mr. FERGUSON, Mr. KIRK, Mr. GIBBONS, Mr. PUTNAM, Mr. FRELINGHUYSEN, Mrs. ROUKEMA, Mr. BERRETER, Mr. GARY G. MILLER of California, Mr. McKON, Mr. GRUCCI, Mrs. MYRICK, Mr. PORTMAN, Mr. WELLER, Mr. HORN, Mr. SHAW, Mr. BOEHLEIERT, Mr. REYNOLDS, Mr. TAUTIN, Mr. JOHNSON of Oklahoma, Mr. FOLKY, Mr. HOBSON, Mr. GEE of Wisconsin, Mr. KELLER, Mr. PENCE, Mr. PLATTS, Mr. OSBORNE, Mr. CUMMINGS, Mr. JONES of North Carolina, Mr. SHUSTER, Mr. VITTER, Mr. NETTHERCUTT, Mr. LUCAS of Oklahoma, Mr. ADERHOLT, Mr. SMITH of Michigan, Mr. DEMINT, Mr. SWEENEY, Mr. CHAMBLISS, Mr. SIMMONS, Mr. BRYANT, Mr. CHABOT, Mr. FORBES, Mr. WALSH, Mr. HOUGHTON, Mr. GROSS, Mr. BUIRKHARD, and Mr. KEVIN, Ms. SLAUGHTER, Ms. MCCARTHY of Missouri, Ms. CARSON of Indiana, Mr. GILMAN, Mr. HASTINGS of Florida, Mr. MCNULTY, Mrs. MCCARTHY of New York, Mr. McINTYRE, Mr. POMEROY, Mr. FROST, Mr. SCOTT, Mr. SAWYER, Mr. EDWARDS, Mr. KILDER, Ms. SOLIS, Mr. ANDREWS, Mrs. CAPPS, Mr. PAIR of California, Mrs. CHRISTENSEN, Mr. GREEN of Texas, Mr. MEHAN, Mr. ETHERIDGE, Mr. OLVER, Mr. JACKSON of Texas, Mr. McHOLT, Mr. BARKETT, Mr. STENHOLM, Mr. BOYD, Mrs. THURMAN, Mr. REYES, Mr. PASCRELL, Mr. LANGERVIN, Mr. SCHIFF, Mr. MCCOLLUM, Mr. LUCAS of Kentucky, Ms. DE LAURO, Mr. LAMPSON, Mr. VISCLOSKY, Mr. NADLER, Mr. HINCHY, Mr. MCGRoven, Mr. HOLDEN, Mrs. Napolitano, Mr. COSTELLO, and Mrs. JOHNSON of Connecticut): to the Committee on Armed Services.

H. Con. Res. 225. Concurrent resolution expressing the sense of the Congress that, as a symbol of solidarity following the terrorist attacks on the United States on September 11, 2001, every United States citizen is encouraged to display the flag of the United States; to the Committee on the Judiciary; considered and agreed to.

By Mr. FROST (for himself, Mrs. BHOINSERT, and Mr. KOLBER). Considered and agreed to.

H. Con. Res. 226. Concurrent resolution expressing the sense of the Congress that a postage stamp should be issued in honor of Melvin Jones; to the Committee on Government Reform.

ADDITIONAL SPONSORS TO PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 7 of rule XII, sponsors were added to public bills and resolutions as follows:
September 13, 2001

ROYBAL-ALLARD, Mr. DIAZ-BALART, Ms. MCKINNEY, Ms. PELOSI, Mr. OLVER, Mrs. LOWEY, and Mr. DOYLE.
H. R. 1906: Mr. ROGERS of Kentucky.
H. R. 1913: Mrs. WILSON.
H. R. 1930: Mr. MATHESON.
H. R. 1949: Mr. PRICE of North Carolina, Mr. BACA, and Mr. BLUMENAUER.
H. R. 2071: Mr. UPTON.
H. R. 2074: Mr. FROST.
H. R. 2223: Mr. OWENS.
H. R. 2250: Mr. SMITH of Michigan and Mr. TANCREDO.
H. R. 2253: Mr. SOUDER, Mr. DOOLITTLE, Mr. PENCE, Mr. SESSIONS, Mr. TANCREDO, Mr. RILEY, Mr. SCHFAFFER, and Mr. GOODE.
H. R. 2339: Mr. HYDE.
H. R. 2346: Ms. WOOLSEY, Mr. CLYBURN, Mr. NADLER, and Mr. MATHESON.
H. R. 2374: Mr. TERRY.
H. R. 2380: Ms. ROYBAL-ALLARD, Mr. SHOWS, Mr. GEORGE MILLER of California, Mr. CONYERS, Mr. LATOURETTE, Mr. KENNEDY of Rhode Island, and Mr. FINKER.
H. R. 2417: Mr. MATHESON.
H. R. 2423: Mr. KENNEDY of Minnesota, Mr. BARCIA, Mr. PENCE, and Mr. SCHFAFFER.
H. R. 2449: Mr. PAUL.
H. R. 2485: Mr. SCHFAFFER and Mr. RYNOLDS.
H. R. 2529: Mr. FILNER and Mr. OLVER.
H. R. 2623: Mr. QUINN.
H. R. 2638: Mr. SANDERS.
H. R. 2667: Mr. GOODE.
H. R. 2768: Mr. PORTMAN and Mr. ABERCROMBIE.
H. R. 2767: Mr. WYNN, Mr. MATHESON, Mr. GREEN of Texas, Mrs. THURMAN, and Mrs. CHRISTENSEN.
H. R. 2825: Mr. TANCREDO and Mr. SCHFAFFER.
H. R. 2828: Ms. HOOLEY of Oregon and Mr. SCHFAFFER.
H. R. 2863: Mr. LANGEVIN, Mr. SANDLIN, Mr. WYNN, Mr. ABERCROMBIE, Mr. STARK, and Mr. KLECEKA.
H. Con. Res. 185: Mrs. LOWEY, Mr. McGOVERN, Mr. EVANS, Mr. STARK, Mr. LANTOS, Mrs. JONES of Ohio, Ms. WOOLSEY, Mr. OLVER, Mr. THOMPSON of California, Mr. DOYLE, Mr. OWENS, Mr. KLECEKA, Mr. DUNCAN, Ms. SCHAKOWSKY, Mr. UDALL of Colorado, and Mr. BLUMENAUER.
H. Con. Res. 186: Mr. TOOMEY and Mr. MATHESON.
H. Res. 52: Mr. HASTINGS of Florida and Mr. TOM DAVIS of Virginia.

AMENDMENTS

Under clause 8 of rule XVIII, proposed amendments were submitted as follows:

H. R. 2546
OFFERED BY MR. TRAFICANT
AMENDMENT NO. 1: At the end of title IX (page 1537, after line 34), insert the following section:

SEC. ___. COMPLIANCE WITH BUY AMERICAN ACT AND SENSE OF CONGRESS REGARDING PURCHASE OF AMERICAN-MADE EQUIPMENT, PRODUCTS, AND SERVICES USING FUNDS PROVIDED UNDER THIS ACT.

(a) COMPLIANCE WITH BUY AMERICAN ACT.—No funds made available under this Act, whether directly using funds of the Commodity Credit Corporation or pursuant to an authorization of appropriations contained in this Act, may be provided to a producer or other person or entity unless the producer, person, or entity agrees to comply with the Buy American Act (41 U.S.C. 10a–10c) in the expenditure of the funds.

(b) SENSE OF CONGRESS.—In the case of any equipment, products, or services that may be authorized to be purchased using funds provided under this Act, it is the sense of Congress that producers and other recipients of such funds should, in expending the funds, purchase only American-made equipment, products, and services.

(c) NOTICE TO RECIPIENTS OF FUNDS.—In providing payments or other assistance under this Act, the Secretary of Agriculture shall provide to each recipient of the funds a notice describing the requirements of subsection (a) and the statement made in subsection (b) by Congress.
The Senate met at 9:30 a.m. and was called to order by the Honorable Daniel K. Akaka, a Senator from the State of Hawaii.

PRAYER

The Chaplain, Dr. Lloyd John Ogilvie, offered the following prayer:

Faithful Father, Your words to Joshua so long ago sound in our souls as Your encouragement to us today: “I will not leave you nor forsake you. Be strong and of good courage.”—Joshua 1:5,6. Thank You for Your faithfulness. Your love and guidance are not an on-again, off-again thing. We can depend on You for a steady flow of strength. Just to know that You are with us in all the ups and downs of political life is a great source of confidence. We can dare to be strong in the convictions You have honed in our hearts and courageous in the application of them in our work in government.

Grant the Senators a renewed sense of how much You have invested in them and how much You desire to do through them in the onward movement of this Nation. It is for Your name’s sake, Your glory, and Your vision that You bless them. Guide and inspire them as leaders now in this time of crisis in our Nation. Your word for the day is, “Be not afraid, I am with you!” Amen.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE

The Honorable Harry Reid, a Senator from the State of Nevada, led the Pledge of Allegiance, as follows:

I pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America and to the Republic for which it stands, one nation under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.

APPOINTMENT OF ACTING PRESIDENT PRO TEMPORE

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will please read a communication from the Senate to the President pro tempore (Mr. Byrd).

The legislative clerk read the following letter:

U.S. SENATE, PRESIDENT PRO TEMPORE, Washington, DC, September 13, 2001, To the Senate:

Under the provisions of rule I, paragraph 3, of the Standing Rules of the Senate, I hereby appoint the Honorable Daniel K. Akaka, a Senator from the State of Hawaii, to perform the duties of the Chair.

ROBERT C. BYRD, President pro tempore.

Mr. AKAKA thereupon assumed the chair as Acting President pro tempore.

RESERVATION OF LEADER TIME

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Under the previous order, the leadership time is reserved.

RECOGNITION OF THE ACTING MAJORITY LEADER

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Nevada.

Mr. REID. I thank the Chair.

SCHEDULE

Mr. REID. Mr. President, today the Senate will be in a period of morning business until approximately 11 a.m., with Senators, as the Chair has announced, permitted to speak up to 1 minute each regarding S.J. Res. 22. Last night, there was a unanimous consent order entered that the following be the order of speakers today: Bond, Lincoln, Smith of New Hampshire, Stabenow, Collins, Graham, Murkowski, and Byrd. If there is not one of the Senators here on time, it will go back to the other side.

At 11 a.m. or thereabouts, the Senate will resume consideration of Commerce-State-Justice Appropriations Act, and it is every hope that with the two leaders we can complete action on that CSJ Appropriations Act early today. There likely will be rollcall votes throughout the day’s session. We may be in recess from 12:30 p.m. until 2:15 p.m. today. We are awaiting further word from Senator Daschle on that matter.

MORNING BUSINESS

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Under the previous order, there will now be a period for the transaction of morning business for not to extend beyond the hour of 11 a.m., with Senators permitted to speak with respect to S.J. Res. 22 for up to 5 minutes each. Under the previous order, the Senator from Missouri, Mr. Bond, is recognized to speak for up to 5 minutes.

TERRORIST ATTACKS AGAINST THE UNITED STATES

Mr. BOND. Mr. President, September 11, 2001, will forever be burned into American history as a day of horror without precedent.

Our hearts and prayers are with survivors and families of those who were murdered in New York City, the Pentagon, and in the hijacked airplanes.

Although still appalled by the damage, the United States is in the process of recovering from these attacks. Fate has written many painful chapters in America’s history. Each is sharply engraved into our collective memory. Most are battles and wars: Gettysburg, Pearl Harbor, Iwo Jima, Pork Chop Hill. Others were acts of madness such as the bombing of the Oklahoma City Federal building and the slaying of our Presidents Lincoln, McKinley, and John F. Kennedy.

The magnitude of Tuesday’s attack defies understanding. It is the scale of what happened that day that freezes the mind in horror. The wrenching sights of passenger planes deliberately flown into the largest symbol of America’s economic and military strength was an assault on how we think of ourselves, our Nation and our role in the world and in history.

Vehicles of peaceful domestic travel were bent horrifically into missiles of death shot into the heart of our economy—into all of our hearts. The blasts we watched in real-time and in slow-motion reruns in our collective mind’s eye have buried splinters deep into our souls.

As shock gives way to action, recovery and the identification of those responsible, we must remember this is not the first time the American people have been tested. History has probed the limits of our strength and patience many times, over many generations of Americans.

As the realization of what has happened continues to sink into our national consciousness, we must never forget that each time our Nation is tested, each time we have survived—as we will again.

And while it seems impossible to believe today, barely days after this horrific attack upon our soil, we must draw strength from the knowledge that each test has failed to diminish our Nation. Just the opposite. America’s history is written by a people who rise to every challenge, and history has shown we will prevail.

We are the greatest and most powerful nation today precisely because we have met and triumphed over adversity. This is our national identity. This is what it means to be an American. This is the strength of character that built this Nation over the last four centuries.

Americans do not face challenges. We surmount them. And we grow stronger as a result.

I am confident that we are already seeing this in the days after the disaster. We see it in the faces of the New York firemen and police officers, the dedicated men and women who fought to protect and recover and who have
September 13, 2001

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—SENATE

16953

I hope those considering scheduling sporting events will realize this is part of our national culture. These should go forward. I ask we not be so terrorized by the terrorists that we forget what we do in this country and why we are strong.

I believe the President has indicated the war against terrorism will be conducted with great vigor, with no terrorism or subterfuge. Our Nation is never dealing a similar blow, we must give the President the authority, support him and give him the resources and provide him the freedom to act, to preempt the acts of terrorism.

Tuesday’s attacks have shaken us. But the bedrock beliefs and principles of the United States remain strong. We will show the terrorists.

In the longer run, we must recognize that these attacks demand an appropriate response from the United States.

I know the man who is the President of the United States. I know this man. And I am confident that he will throw the full weight of the U.S. Government behind the task of identifying and destroying those responsible for the attacks. The President should also have the power to take appropriate steps to prevent a recrudescence. And I know that he has the support of both political parties in the U.S. Congress. And more importantly, he has the full support of the American people.

Our Nation must not rest until those behind the attacks are destroyed. Our unyielding anger will span the world and reach the terrorists wherever they may try to hide. This world is not big enough to offer them the concealment they seek. We will find them, we will get them, and we will make them pay for what happened Tuesday.

Any nation that seeks to provide protection or cover for the terrorists ought to think twice before doing so. The President is correct to make no distinction between the terrorists and those nations that shelter them. The price of doing so will be very high.

Let us not make it impossible to travel by airline. There is not the evidence collected approached the standards required by a court of law. I believe that to have been a mistake.

The war against terrorism—and its war against us—is just that, war. And we must be free to respond in kind. Not only after that fact, but I believe the President’s hands ought not to be tied. To ensure our Nation is never dealt a similar blow, we must give the President the authority and freedom to act. And to preempt such acts. That he must be able to strike terrorists before they strike.

For many years the prevailing trend has been to shackle our intelligence agencies and to err on the side of doing too little rather than doing too much. We must continue to be strong as Americans. There are things we can do. Giving blood is one thing that is readily available. I ask all my constituents to listen to their radios and televisions and contact the local blood donor stations.

I ask citizens not to panic. We have seen panic in the buying of gasoline with 30-car-long lines. Do not horde. Do not buy at high price gouging. This country will be strong. We will have our economy back on track if we behave rationally and responsibly. Let us not be crippled by potential terrorism. Let us not put up barriers that are impossible to overcome.

I have talked with people in the airline industry. Our airline industry is suffering billions of dollars of losses. We must have a better airline security system. But let us be smart about it. Let us not make it impossible to travel by airplane.

We are beginning the process of taking down the extraordinary security items around this Capitol. This is the people’s place of business. We want people to be able to visit. Normally on Thursday mornings I have an open house for Missourians. They could not get here. I had a tough enough time getting here myself. We are going to go back to business in this Capitol. We need the services of the men and women who lost their lives in this cowardly attack against the United States of America.

I, as so many others, am overcome by the magnitude of this horrific act, a cowardly act against innocent people. It is hard to understand what would motivate people to do such a thing. But now I think we understand our hearts must go out to the victims, to their families, and all who have suffered at the hands of this evil that struck this greatest nation on Earth.

May God be with those who have passed and those who are suffering.
Words, I know, are of little solace in a terrible tragedy such as this in dealing with the shock and pain. I know words may ring hollow compared to the pain and disbelief that the families must be feeling. I want those families to know we are as one nation under God. We are united in our resolve. To see justice done on behalf of the lives lost so senselessly.

We must unite and comfort our fellow Americans in these difficult days. Their grief is immeasurable and they need our support. They will have it.

My State lost many citizens in this tragedy, including Thomas McGuinness of Batesville who was the copilot of American Airlines Flight 11. I knew Tom personally. He was a fine man. His family and the families of all those who have lost loved ones are devastated by this tragedy. They need our prayers.

I commend the efforts also of the brave men and women who are working around the clock, risking their own lives to rescue those still trapped in both the Pentagon and at the World Trade Center. We stand behind them and pray for their success. As each hour goes by, we hope to see another survivor and another family member united.

I also commend President Bush and Senator DASCHLE and DOTR and the leadership in the House for returning to this city and getting back to business, letting these people know we will not tolerate this interruption in our system, and demonstrating we will not be cowed by the actions of these despicable people.

The American people understand an act of war was committed against the United States of America. Make no mistake about it, it was an act of war. You can say it is the Pearl Harbor of the new millennium, but it is far worse than Pearl Harbor. I might add, we responded to Pearl Harbor and we will respond to this. Make no mistake, the United States of America will respond to this heinous act with overwhelming force. We will find those responsible and those who supported these evil acts. They will be eradicated. This is not a question of bringing criminals to justice. This is an act of war, and it will be responded to as an act of war.

After we win—and win we will—we do have some serious questions we will have to answer. What went wrong? Why didn't we have the intelligence assets we needed? How can we protect ourselves in the future without giving up the circumspection we need to combat terrorism? Where are our priorities? These are all important questions which need serious attention and honest answers.

We must never forget the magnitude of this loss and its effect on our way of life. September 11, 2001, will always remain where we were. In the past, we have not decisively acted against some of these terrorist attacks and threats. This will not stand any longer.

Some talk about multilateral efforts to combat terrorism; that is fine. I am here today to say to the American people: we will act unilaterally, if necessary, to protect our people. We need to send a clear message to terrorists and those countries that harbor them that there is no distinction as the President has said, between the terrorists and the country that harbors them; we will decisively act against this cowardly aggression, and they will pay the full price for what they did.

As our President said, America will hunt down and punish those responsible. President Bush will have my support and the support of every American to do just that. We must be on the offensive against terrorists and those states that harbor them. The policies of the past must change. We are at war and this is a war that we will win.

God bless America.

The Acting President pro tempore. Under the previous order, the Senator from Arkansas is recognized to speak for up to 5 minutes.

Mrs. Lincoln. Mr. President, on Tuesday a series of terrorist attacks on the United States shook our Nation and left thousands suffering or dead. Nor will any family who supports them. The policies of the past must change. We are at war and this is a war that we will win.

I rise today to offer my continued prayers and condolences to the victims and their families. And I rise to add my voice to those condemning the atrocities committed against the United States of America Tuesday morning, September 11, 2001. The acts of terror, and the deliberate terrorist attacks on the World Trade Center and the Pentagon, are an outrage against our nation and against human decency. I support the President in his pledge to devote all of our country's resources to the task of determining who is responsible for these acts and of holding them accountable.

In the days to come, we will need to reflect on Tuesday's events to determine what we will take from them and how we will respond.

To begin with, it appears certain that these attacks will force us to re-define our national defense priorities. According to many reports, the hijackers of the airplanes were armed only with box cutters and boarding knives. This detail underscores the reality that the greatest threats against our national security and our well-being may no longer be missiles or tanks or armies. The greatest threat is terrorists or rogue nations armed with simple weapons and a dangerous resolve.

It is time that we demonstrate the same resolve in preventing and, when necessary—as now—responding to acts of terror. We need to reconsider how our security apparatus, our intelligence network, and our channels of communication can be strengthened and more effectively employed to ensure that these attacks are never duplicated. Let us begin a new dialogue about our national security that accounts for this changed and changing reality. Let us devote all our resolve to tracking down and destroying these agents of terror.

We need to recognize also that Tuesday's events must, by necessity, call us out of our complacency. For too many years, our national character has too often been focused inward.

Tuesday's tragedy should remind us of our duty to not only our families and our immediate circles, but of our duty to our neighbors, our communities and our nation.

Still, the reports that we have heard suggest that these terrible attacks have brought out much of the best in the American character—the courage of the search and rescue team members, the commitment of our law enforcement officers, the generosity of those who have given their support to these efforts, and the sympathy and caring that all Americans have extended to the suffering.

I am deeply disturbed, however, by some other reports that are coming to light. Arkansas newspapers reported Wednesday morning that rumors of oil shortages have forced a run on gas stations in the American heartland, and that some station owners have raised prices to exploit this fear. I am pleased that the Attorney General of Arkansas, Mark Pryor, has pledged to investigate the actions of these profiteers. Those who attempt to profit from these events should know that their actions will not be tolerated. If it is necessary, they will face prosecution for their actions. I ask my colleagues to join me in denouncing this sort of profiteering from tragedy.

Foremost in my mind is the human dimension of Tuesday's events. It will likely be several days before we have a clear sense of how many lives were lost, but there is no doubt that the total will be in the thousands. Numbers of this magnitude will ensure that the horrific acts of these horrific acts will be felt by all Americans.

We now know that Sara Low, a native of Batesville, AK, and a flight attendant on American Airlines Flight 11, was killed when her plane struck the World Trade Center. Sara was a 1991 graduate of Batesville High School and a graduate of the University of Arkansas. Our deepest sympathy and our prayers are with her parents, Mike and Bobbie Low, and her family and friends as they grapple with this horrible tragedy.

It is a horrible and saddening reminder of how the shock waves of these events are felt throughout our nation, far beyond New York and Washington. As a daughter, as a wife, as a mother and as an American, I am deeply pained by our suffering today.

It has now been over 48 hours since the first plane struck the World Trade Center, and even now it is possible that there are scores of people trapped in the debris and rubble in New York and in Virginia. Our prayers are with them, their families, and it is my great hope that, if there are survivors, they are rescued soon and reunited with their loved ones.

We also extend our prayers and sympathy to the families of those who were killed in Pennsylvania, where United Airlines Flight 93 was forced into a crash landing.

Tuesday morning, these terrorists made their statement, at a great and unprecedented cost of American lives. Let our statement to them be that this was an act of war, and from this point forward, the United States of America is at war against these kinds of actions.

Let them know that although they may strike at the United States, they cannot strike at the freedom and resolve that make our nation great.

I join my colleagues in letting these terrorists and anyone else who would take such actions against this great Nation know, it will not be tolerated.

I yield the floor.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Arkansas yields the floor.

The Senator from Alaska, Mr. MURKOWSKI, is recognized to speak for up to 5 minutes.

Mr. MURKOWSKI. Mr. President, I join my colleagues and all Americans—those from my State of Alaska and throughout the world—in prayer, prayer for the families who have lost lives last Tuesday and for those who are even now fighting for their lives in the rubble associated with the tragedy in New York and possibly still at the Pentagon.

The inhumanity of this act will live in infamy. We weep in heartfelt sorrow for the families of those injured, those lost. We all join together in support of our President and to assert our resolve to endure the evil wrought Tuesday, to ensure that evil is countered, and that that evil is destroyed.

The hunt for those responsible has begun. The terror they have sought to inspire will not stand. So let’s be very clear, recognizing the great and enduring values on which our liberty, our tolerance, our fairness. These are the very values which the terrorists trampled upon in pursuit of their misguided quest. These will not save those responsible for these crimes. We recognize our adversaries, first and foremost, our resolve to protect those values is absolutely unshaken. We should not, as we follow the tracks of the killers to the lairs of their leaders, presume to know their identity with certainty. Neither can we begin to know their motivations for committing the most grievous of criminal acts—killing innocent people.

If the killers believed that they, through this act, would enter the Kingdom of Heaven, they now realize the real destination to which Satan has guided them.

But to the children of America I say: Have faith; your parents, your teachers, your Government are all working hard to protect you, to protect you from this horror. Your responsibility is to grow, to learn, to play—and many adults are working to bring those responsible to justice, to ensure that they and those who helped them never commit this kind of a crime again.

To the terrorists who have sought to bring fear to the United States, I say to you: You have failed. It is you who should be afraid, afraid of the sense of justice of the American people, afraid of your fate at the hand of God, afraid of what you have unleashed.

As we shared, along with Members of the House, on the steps the other evening “God Bless America,” let me also mention the dimension of this which we all relate to in our own lives. I stand here as one who recalls as a child the “Day of Infamy” December 7, 1941. I noticed a piece that indicated the deaths from that surprise attack on Pearl Harbor. It was 2,403. Clearly, this tragic set of circumstances brings the death toll to many times that amount.

We have the realization for the first time that an aircraft has been used as a weapon by terrorists. How do we protect the public? What change is it going to make in transportation? It has taken some of the foundations and symbols of our Nation—our buildings—which represent prosperity in our economy. It has not shaken the resolve to recover nor the resolve to pursue those responsible. We are prepared to move heaven and Earth to bring to justice those who are responsible for this carnage.

But everything did change Tuesday. Things will be different in this country. We still do not know the extent of the threat, although we do know that we all must be vigilant.

I join with my colleagues in an expression of faith and an expression of hope and an expression of conviction that America will overcome this tragedy. America will never forget this tragedy.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mrs. LINCOLN). Under the previous order, the Senator from Florida is recognized to speak for up to 5 minutes.

Mr. GRAHAM. Thank you, Madam President. I wish to commend you and Senator SMITH for the eloquent remarks you have just delivered to the American people.

We all are shocked by what occurred on September 11, and we recognize that that will be a dark day in the history of America. It will be a date upon which we will recognize our loss of innocence and the new reality of our vulnerability. Not since the Civil War has there been a conflict of such violence committed on the territory of the United States as we experienced on Tuesday.

As with Pearl Harbor and the assassination of President John Kennedy, all Americans will forever remember where they were and what was in their mind as they heard of the tragic events of last Tuesday. Today our prayers are with the victims in New York and here in the Pentagon and with their families.

Our admiration and good wishes go to the brave firefighters, policemen, doctors, nurses, and all the other emergency personnel who are working so hard to find the survivors and to deal with the pain. We pray for our Nation as well. We have entered a new phase in history, one that will unfortunately be marked by a pervasive sense of insecurity.

I am fortunate to be a grandfather of 10 beautiful boys and girls. Their mothers called me Tuesday evening to tell me how frightened the grandchildren were and that they were wondering whether their neighborhood, whether their school, and whether their own brothers, sisters, mothers, fathers, and friends would be subject to the same thing they had just seen on television.

Every time we take a trip, particularly by airline, we are likely to be reminded of Tuesday’s incident. We will also face increased security, particularly at airports and seaports. Our borders will be reinforced. But all of these are necessary changes. Frankly, I believe the vast majority of Americans will agree that there will be reasonable, new restrictions in light of the new period of American history in which we will now be living.

To honor the lives of the victims, we must take steps to assure that other Americans will not be subject to the same fate. A first step in that honoring will be to support the President of the United States of America. He will have some extremely difficult decisions to make in the next few days.

Clearly, we are not going to allow this horrific act to go unanswered. As has been the case in so many other instances of conflict, we owe this commitment to see that those who have committed these deeds will be brought to justice with great enthusiasm. The real test will be whether we are prepared to make the long march that we must to root out the many cells of terrorists around the world that represent a continuing threat to our security. The President will need our support then even more than now. We also need to rebuild some of our institutions that will be on the front lines to assure the security of America. One of those with which I feel a particular responsibility is our national intelligence capability. To deal with terrorism, there is no alternative but to have the most effective capabilities to anticipate what the motivations and capabilities of our particular adversaries are and then to be able to interdict those capabilities before they can be put into action.

We have seen over the past several years a degradation in some important areas of our intelligence capabilities. We will know in the next few weeks whether those shortfalls bear a part of the responsibility for what happened on Tuesday.

Illustrative of the areas in which we are going to need to pay renewed attention and additional new resources will be rebuilding our human intelligence. For a long period during the cold war we became increasingly dependent upon technology as the means of gathering information. That played a critical role. But in this new era there is going to be no substitute for having well-trained, diverse in background and language skills, and technologically competent persons who can represent the interests of the United States in getting inside these organizations so that we will have a level of understanding that will allow us to prepare for and to avoid incidents such as Tuesday’s tragedy.

We also must make some investments in some of our technological areas, particularly the National Security Agency, which for many years had been our prime means of gathering information by essentially eavesdropping on our adversaries. That capability, which was developed to a very high level during the cold war when most of those communications were over the air, has been degraded as countries, in despair deepened as two full days passed after its founding, the agency started growing into a juggernaut that would put listening posts around the globe, spy ships and submarines out to sea, and reconnaissance planes and satellites in the heavens.

The NSA rose to dominance in what were, in telecommunication terms, simpler times. Radio signals and microwaves were ripe for the taking as they bounced off the ionosphere or traveled straight down to space; to intercept them, one simply needed to get in their path. And the NSA did this better than anyone else, using everything from portable receivers receiving vibrations off windowpanes to geosynchronous satellites 22,000 miles above Earth.

The NSA then revealed the presence of Soviet offensive missiles in Cuba in 1962. It was the NSA that first warned of the Tet offensive—five days before the attacks commenced across South Vietnam in January 1968. All told, the NSA broke the codes of 40 nations during the Cold War and, through an operation code-named Gamma Guppy, intercepted personal conversations of Soviet Premier Leonid Brezhnev. In 1986, President Ronald Reagan went so far as to bomb Col. Moammar Gaddafi’s Tripoli headquarters while in a terrorist attack on a Berlin discotheque that had killed two U.S. servicemen and a Turkish woman.

Making and breaking codes requires absolute secrecy, and the NSA took secrecy to extremes. Most Americans had never even heard of the agency for decades after it was established. In 1975, a select committee headed by Sen. Frank Church revealed that the NSA had far exceeded the foreign intelligence mission envisioned by Truman and had been spying domestically on the likes of Jane Fonda, Joan Baez, Benjamin Spock and the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr.

The revelations led to laws and regulations that strictly prohibit the NSA from spying... on U.S. soil—laws and regulations, agency officials say, they now strictly follow. But the agency has never provided a precise definition of its espionage mission. Even after the church committee's revelations, it was still an open question at Fort Meade that NSA stood for No Such Agency or Never Such a Thing. In 1968, author James Bamford was writing his groundbreaking first book about the agency, The Puzzle Palace, the Reagan administration threatened to prosecute him for espionage if he did not return sensitive documents he had obtained through the Freedom of Information Act. The administration ultimately backed down, but its treatment of Bamford was a sign of how secretive and arrogant the NSA had become. (By contrast, Hayden cooperated with Bamford on his second book about the NSA, Secrets, which was published in May.)

The agency's high opinion of itself was backed up by its success throughout the Cold War, success that rested on three pillars: massive budgets, superior technology and the luxury of having a single main adversary—the Soviet Union—that enjoyed neither of these advantages.

Now, all those pillars have crumbled. The NSA is still one of the largest employers in the state of Maryland, but it lost 30 percent of its budget in one fell swoop and an equivalent of its workforce during the 1990s. And instead of one backward adversary, the agency found itself trying to deploy against elusive terrorist groups, fractured cartels and rogue states, in addition to a full slate of traditional targets ranging from Russia to China to India to Pakistan. In 1980, the NSA focused 40 percent of its budget on the Soviet Union. By 1993, less than 15 percent was fixed on Russia.

But if the end of the Cold War was hard on the NSA, the onset of the digital age was harder. More and more communications were being carried by fiber-optic cable. More and more were encoded with powerful encryption software. The capacity of the world's computers to process data had grown exponentially, making virtually impossible to break. By the late 1990s, NSA officials had given up a futile effort to limit the spread of encryption software, because it was impossible to control. The agency's capabilities could wither if, say, Microsoft started building powerful encryption algorithms into its operating systems.

More immediately, the NSA had to confront the exploding volume of global communications. In the 1950s, there were 5,000 computers in the world and not a single fax machine or cell phone. Today, there are more than 100 million hosts on the Internet serving hundreds of millions of networked computers, not to mention 650 million cell phones in use worldwide. And with broadband fiber-optic cable being laid around the world at the rate of hundreds of miles an hour (yes, that was sound), the explosion of computing power for moving digital data down these slender pipes more than doubles annually—faster even than computing power, which doubles every year and a half.

With more and more digital data moving across the Internet and bouncing off communications satellites, SIGINT has become more important than ever. An unbreakable and interceptible data stream has threatened to drown the NSA's analysts in a rolling sea of 1s and 0s.

In this new context, private industry suddenly controls the technology that the NSA needs to keep pace. But the NSA has been isolated from the dynamism of the market by its own cult of secrecy. The agency has fallen farther and farther behind, unable to sort through a torrent of information streaming back into Fort Meade's computers from the phone companies and banks. And its Cold War troops trained in radio intercepts and Russian with Internet engineers and Arabic speakers.

In 1999, the Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence declared that the NSA was “in serious trouble,” desperately short of capital and leadership. Civil libertarians, Internet privacy groups, and entrepreneurs—not to mention the European Parliament and thousands, perhaps millions, of ordinary Europeans—question the continuing need for such an agency, describing the NSA as an “extreme threat to the privacy of people all over the world.” In the words of an American Civil Liberties Union Web site.

But the U.S. government considers SIGINT so essential that one senior intelligence official recently called the NSA's possible demise the greatest single threat to U.S. national security. So, three years ago, when the House and Senate intelligence committees began sounding the alarm, the director of national intelligence and overall call-out search for somebody to fill the NSA's leadership void. George Tenet turned to a man who lacked the innate spookiness normally associated with spies. A small man with a crew cut and a bald pate. A man with a scholarly interest in history. A man who would show no fear of either the public or the agency he would have to over haul.

Michael Hayden, 56, grew up in an era when the backbone of America's industrial might was the steel mills of Western Pennsylvania. He grew up in a neighborhood on Pittsburgh's North Side where men carried lunch buckets to work and proudly traced their ancestors to County Galway.

His father, Harry Hayden Sr., was a welder at Allis-Chalmers, a plant that made giant electrical transformers. Harry worked the steel shift and would leave the house to pick up Sadie, to raise their three children almost by herself. But he remembers how, when he would awake before dawn and walk to the neighborhood junkyard, the telephone would ring. It was Michael's room at 5:30 in the morning. The boy was studying.

Michael was a standout student, and an admiring math teacher would tell the Hayden family about Michael," says Harry, now 81. "Everybody else was.

As early as grade school, Michael showed a talent for impressing talent spotters. His football coach at the St. Peter's parochial schools says Hayden clearly had "the smarts" to play quarterback—no small judgment, coming as it does from Dan Rooney, the president of the Pittsburgh Steelers and now the franchise's president. In time, however, Hayden distinguished himself not on the football field but in the lecture hall. "He knew the top of his class at North Catholic High School," says Tighe, a former classmate. "He wanted us to see the temples, the rice paddies, go shopping in Hong Kong. He took a vested interest in making you feel important."

After his stint in the Air Force, Hayden attended the Strategic Air Command at Offutt Air Force Base in Nebraska. Harry Hayden Jr. figures his older brother joined the service because he had read everything he could about the most important history and wanted to start participating.

A decade into his Air Force career, Michael held the rank of major and was chief of intelligence at the Strategic Air Command in South Korea. The director of operations, Col. Chuck Link, a fighter pilot, detected the same leadership qualities Dan Rooney had recognized years earlier. So did Hayden's men. Gene Tighe, a young intelligence officer, remembers Hayden more as a mentor than a commanding officer. "He thought it was a great thing to be out and about and getting this opportunity overseas," Tighe recalls. "He wanted us to see the temples, the rice paddies, go shopping in Hong Kong. He took a vested interest in making you feel important."

Two years later, he came home without a new assignment, but Lindsey had obtained through the Freedom of Information Act." He had informed the operational intelligence that the general was making idle threats. As an intelligence officer, he had to go down to the National Security Council and see two men, an Air Force general and an arms-control expert. Hayden brought those two men to lunch in a restaurant. They noticed Hayden's ability to think conceptually and put his thoughts down on paper.

"He's got the soul of a historian, he really does," Hayden says. "He thinks things through in a way that is explainable on the basis of how things have been. It's a scholarly bent, combined with an exceptional sensitivity to human behavior."

One day in the summer of 1989, Boyd told Hayden to go down to the National Security Council and see two men, an Air Force general and an arms-control expert. "I think that was a great thing to be out and about and getting this opportunity overseas," Tighe recalls. He wanted us to see the temples, the rice paddies, go shopping in Hong Kong. He took a vested interest in making you feel important."

After his stint in the Air Force, Hayden attended the Strategic Air Command at Offutt Air Force Base in Nebraska. Hayden Jr. figures his older brother joined the service because he had read everything he could about the most important history and wanted to start participating.

A decade into his Air Force career, Michael held the rank of major and was chief of intelligence at the Strategic Air Command in South Korea. The director of operations, Col. Chuck Link, a fighter pilot, detected the same leadership qualities Dan Rooney had recognized years earlier. So did Hayden's men. Gene Tighe, a young intelligence officer, remembers Hayden more as a mentor than a commanding officer. "He thought it was a great thing to be out and about and getting this opportunity overseas," Tighe recalls. "He wanted us to see the temples, the rice paddies, go shopping in Hong Kong. He took a vested interest in making you feel important."

Two years later, he came home without a new assignment, but Lindsey had obtained through the Freedom of Information Act." He had informed the operational intelligence that the general was making idle threats. As an intelligence officer, he had to go down to the National Security Council and see two men, an Air Force general and an arms-control expert. Hayden brought those two men to lunch in a restaurant. They noticed Hayden's ability to think conceptually and put his thoughts down on paper.

"He's got the soul of a historian, he really does," Hayden says. "He thinks things through in a way that is explainable on the basis of how things have been. It's a scholarly bent, combined with an exceptional sensitivity to human behavior."

One day in the summer of 1989, Boyd told Hayden to go down to the National Security Council and see two men, an Air Force general and an arms-control expert. Hayden brought those two men to lunch in a restaurant. They noticed Hayden's ability to think conceptually and put his thoughts down on paper.

"He's got the soul of a historian, he really does," Hayden says. "He thinks things through in a way that is explainable on the basis of how things have been. It's a scholarly bent, combined with an exceptional sensitivity to human behavior."

One day in the summer of 1989, Boyd told Hayden to go down to the National Security Council and see two men, an Air Force general and an arms-control expert. Hayden brought those two men to lunch in a restaurant. They noticed Hayden's ability to think conceptually and put his thoughts down on paper.
The lawmakers’ suspicions that the NSA was stealing European companies’ secrets and monitored the calls of European competitors, a practice NSA officials say they do not engage in.

Beyond industrial espionage, the Euro-} nsa's deputy di- rector for technology, called to say that he needed to talk to Hayden “secure.” Hayden called back on a secure line as soon as he got home.

The system had been dysfunctional for more than 72 hours. It was back up to about 25 percent capacity. Stevens said, but he didn’t think the techies were on the right path. He wanted permission to take the en- tire communications system back online again.

By then, a team of NSA engineers and contractors had pinpointed an outdated routing protocol as the cause of the failure. With the system completely shut down, they began installing a massive hardware and software upgrade.

And by Friday morning, the system was coming back to life, node by node. Deeply relieved, Tenet drove over to Fort Meade that night and personally shook the hands of dozens of disheveled, unshaven techies, many of whom hadn’t been home since Monday.

Feeling much better, the following afternoon, went cross-country skiing with his wife on the Fort Meade golf course. Soon, he noticed that he was being shadowed by an NSA surveillance plane gliding through the snow, an officer asked Hayden to take off his skis and come with him back to the operations center. George Tenet needed to talk to him—ABC News had the story.

Tenet told Hayden to talk to the reporter, John McWethy, on the record so he would get the story right. Hayden said fine. He knew McWethy, and knew where he was based—the Pentagon. The leak had come from there, not Fort Meade. “You told the story right.” Hayden later told his own people—“You kept it secret while it had to be se- cret.”

But with Hayden’s relief came a realization. Given the large scale of the operation, the price he would pay for moving too cautiously would greatly exceed whatever he would pay for being too bold.

Hayden’s internal coup began with an in-ocuous act: He hired a chief financial officer. Without one, he had no way of making strategic decisions based on how much money was being spent across the entire agency on line items like research and development, information technology, and security. So Hayden hired Beverly L. Wright, a Wellesley College graduate with an MBA from the Harvard Business School and a reputation as one of the Cold Baltimore investment bank of Alex. Brown.

For an agency that had always promoted its own and promised lifetime employment, hiring from the outside was a radical act. Hayden’s internal coup began with an innocuous act: He hired a chief financial officer. Without one, he had no way of making strategic decisions based on how much money was being spent across the entire agency on line items like research and development, information technology, and security. So Hayden hired Beverly L. Wright, a Wellesley College graduate with an MBA from the Harvard Business School and a reputation as one of the Cold Baltimore investment bank of Alex. Brown.

For an agency that had always promoted its own and promised lifetime employment, hiring from the outside was a radical act. Hayden’s internal coup began with an innocuous act: He hired a chief financial officer. Without one, he had no way of making strategic decisions based on how much money was being spent across the entire agency on line items like research and development, information technology, and security. So Hayden hired Beverly L. Wright, a Wellesley College graduate with an MBA from the Harvard Business School and a reputation as one of the Cold Baltimore investment bank of Alex. Brown.

For an agency that had always promoted its own and promised lifetime employment, hiring from the outside was a radical act. Hayden’s internal coup began with an innocuous act: He hired a chief financial officer. Without one, he had no way of making strategic decisions based on how much money was being spent across the entire agency on line items like research and development, information technology, and security. So Hayden hired Beverly L. Wright, a Wellesley College graduate with an MBA from the Harvard Business School and a reputation as one of the Cold Baltimore investment bank of Alex. Brown.
embrace the innovative, flexible, entrepreneur spirit that had come to define the digital age. "We can no longer pretend that America what we need to do so isolated from America," he says. "To end the isolation, America needs to know us better.

And as the cleaning began, Hayden also launched an openness campaign, appearing in April 2000 at a rare public session of the House Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence, in the European Parliament continuing its Echelon investigation and the American Civil Liberties Union voicing similar concerns, Hayden told the committee that NSA employees took great care "to make sure that we are always on the correct side of the Fourth Amendment." "Let me put it this way," Hayden testified. "If, as we are speaking here this afternoon, Osama bin Laden is walking across the bridge from Niagara Falls, Ontario, to Niagara, New York, and the joint to the New York side, he is an American person. And my agency must respect his rights against unreasonable search and seizure." Rep. Tim Roemer (D-Ind.) pressed Hayden on this point. "Does NSA spy on the lawful activities of Americans?" she asked. "No. The answer is we do not," Hayden said. "Do you inadvertently collect information on U.S. citizens?" asked Rep. Heather Wilson (R-N.M.) pressed Hayden. "Yes, Hayden replied. But, he said, "if it is not necessary to understand the foreign intelligence value of the information collected, it is not reported, it is destroyed. And it is destroyed as quickly as we can do that."

Back at Fort Meade, Hayden's grand plan for rebuilding the agency for the digital age was slowed by his inability to pick a deputy. He had departed from tradition again, appointing a search committee instead of simply anointing one of his own nominees. He was intrigued by the notion of picking an outsider, even though retired Adm. Bobby Ray Inman, a legendary past NSA director whom Hayden frequently called for advice, strongly objected. "What I thought he couldn't do was go to somebody who didn't know the business," Inman recalls. "The learning curve is too long, and you'd get waited out.

Ultimately, Hayden resolved the conflict by picking an insider who had worked as an outsider. Hayden had spotted an up-and-coming econometrician running some of the agency's spookiest operations before retiring in 1997 and going to work for Science Applications International Corp. He was, by training, yet another Russian linguist. But Black had served a tour as chief of an elite unit focused on Russian communications. More important, he had run the NSA-CIA operation that works out of foreign embassies and fuss the talents of human spies and ultra-tech eavesdroppers to get very chi-chi difficult targets.

Most telling was Black's final NSA assignment: special assistance to the director for information warfare. In that role, he had established the government's preemptive cyberwarfare unit—and alienated many NSA bureaucrats by poaching on their cherished turf that resignation was his only viable choice. "Sorry, I don't know the business," Inman recalls. "Exactly—convinced Hayden that he had his deputy.

With Black onboard, Hayden was ready to move. Last October, he rolled out his reorganew spooks. Seventeen hundred people registered in advance—and hundreds of walk-ins dressed as five-star generals and waitined in a line that snaked through the parking lot.
Hayden’s openness initiative was paying dividends.

Soon, Hayden, who is the first major push to involve the private sector in development of new SIGINT technology with an initiative it called Trailblazer. A total of three contracts, worth about $10 million apiece, were awarded to corporations that included Lockheed Martin Corp. and TRW’s systems and information technology group.

Skeptics wonder whether it will all be enough. They’re at that point in an organization that is moving. They also question whether is enough top technical talent still left at the NSA to manage complex relationships with the outside world. The Federal Aviation Administration, after all, hired IBM in the late 1980s to design a new air traffic control system—and ended up abandoning the project at a cost of $500 million.

But analysts on Capitol Hill and other close to their private sector counterparts, Hayden, Black, Baginski and company appear to be getting their message across that the NSA must take risks if it is ever to—own the virtual,” as one industry analyst put it. Randall Sample’s boss, Rep. Porter J. Goss (R-Maine), Ms. COLLINS, is recognized to speak for up to 5 minutes.

Ms. COLLINS. Madam President, it is very difficult to wrap one’s mind around the terrible tragedy that our Nation has suffered. It is still harder to comprehend what must have been in the hearts and minds of people willing to commit such atrocities against their fellow human beings. It is very difficult to even find the right words to speak about the attack on America.

But speaking about it is something we must do. The American people and the Government of the United States of America must speak forcefully and with crystalline clarity. The families and friends of those killed or wounded in these awful terrorist attacks must know that the prayers of every American and of millions upon millions of people around the world are with them now.

The heroic firefighters, police officers, rescue workers, National Guard-dem, doctors, nurses, members of the clergy, and the citizens who are volunteering, who are even now struggling to save the lives of the surviving victims and to help grieving families, must know that our hearts and our deepest sympathies are with them in their vital work.

Our Commander in Chief and all the men and women of the Armed Forces, our law enforcement community, and our intelligence agencies must know that we are with them, as we have never been in my lifetime, as they set about with grim resolution to ensure that justice is done to those responsible.

And the evil people who planned and committed these atrocities—and all of those who may have aided and abetted them—must know that far from paralyzing the American people and dividing us fearfully against one another, what they have done is instead is instantly to unite all of us into one people. We stand united in the solidarity of our grief and committed to our fellow citizens and utterly single minded in our determination to remain unbowed and to see justice done.

In fact, this is my fifth year in the Senate, and never have I seen the Senate more unified and more determined than we are now.

These, then, are the messages we must send—and that we must keep sending with relentless determination. America may have lost a measure of our innocence, a degree of that special separateness that has helped us to keep our land of liberty safe from some of the storms that have long battered other peoples in an often turbulent world; we clearly are not as separate or as secure once was. But no one—one—no one—should doubt our resolve and our resilience. It is in moments such as these that the special character of America can and should shine through with particular brilliance. It shines through in our sacrifices in helping fellow citizens in terribly trying times. It shines through in the sacrifices of those brave and heroic passengers who were on the jet that did not make it to the intended target. It shines through in our commitment, even in adversity, to the bedrock values that make our system of government worth protecting, even as those values draw the murderous ire of twisted souls whose only answer to the discourse of liberty is a vocabulary of vioence, terror, and death.

As we care for survivors and comfort those who have lost loved ones, we also will set about finding those responsible. We must respond to these horrors in a way befitting our voices as free and united people. But let there be no doubt, respond we should and respond we will.

As difficult as it is to find a voice to talk about the horrors we have expericenced, I believe by finding our voices amid such shock, rage, and pain we reaffirm our most cherished principles as citizens of the United States of America.

With God’s help, we shall persevere, we shall find comfort in our grief, we shall find strength in the days ahead, and we shall hold those responsible for these attacks on America responsible for their actions.

Madam President, seeing no one seeking recognition, I suggest the absence of a question. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceded to call the roll.

Mr. REID. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.
September 13, 2001

ORDER FOR RECESS

Mr. REID. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate stand in recess from 12:30 today until 2:15 this afternoon.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. REID. Madam President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mrs. HUTCHISON. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

(Read by Mrs. HUTCHISON pertaining to the introduction of S. 1421 and Joint Resolutions.)

Mr. BURNS. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate stand before my fellow Senators in full support of the resolution on which we voted yesterday. A stunned world and Nation is struggling to come to grips with the horrifying violence of September 11, 2001, and the President’s efforts to marshal the resources of our intelligence, law enforcement, diplomatic, and military apparatus to bring about justice and to do so as swiftly as possible.

I call on any Nation known to be harboring terrorists to fully cooperate with the United States and stem the rising tide of conflict. I believe people around the world are in equal measure demanding justice for these horrendous crimes and anxieties for the world to settle its disputes in a rational and civilized manner.

We must cling to the hope that this is possible, even while we recognize that on this Earth there exists people capable of unbelievable barbarism. This is a time of overwhelming sadness, and I join my colleagues in support of S.J. Res. 22.

Madam President, I yield the floor.

Mrs. HUTCHISON. Madam President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BURNS. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BURNS. Madam President, I assume we are still in morning business and offering statements with regard to the incidents of Tuesday.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is correct.

Mr. BURNS. Madam President, ironically, on September 11 of this year, I was involved in a press conference looking at a report card to Congress on the deployment of the nation’s emergency number. Last year, we passed that bill and the President signed it, with now the deployment of enhanced 911, which tells wireless phone operators that when you dial 911 on your voice phone, you will get the nearest first responder rather than some other area, maybe your home area, even though you may be in roam, and I do not spell that R-o-m-e.

How ironic that started at 9 o’clock in the morning. It is one of those pieces of legislation that goes unnoticed. Yet it has a lot to do with public safety, especially in rural areas where we rely on wireless. It also nationalizes 911 as the emergency number across the Nation.

I made the statement at that time that we are dealing with a different world. Not only do we have to deal with our own little family emergencies, we also have to deal with this world of terrorism. So 911 and the ability to communicate becomes very important. As we walked out of that press conference, we were notified that an airplane had hit the World Trade Center in New York.

Not only did I stand still but the world has stood still. We were shocked; we were outraged at an unprovoked act of violence committed against thousands and thousands of innocent Americans.

Immediately, our President and Commander in Chief, George Bush, ordered the Federal Government to assist the victims of the violence, investigate these acts of terror, and to take the steps to bring those responsible for these tragedies to justice.

I fully support the President’s actions and will do everything I can as an individual to help him and our country in this time of need.

Terrorism, which has been condemned around the world, cannot and will not be tolerated in this country. I know the President will take all measures necessary to seek out and to punish those who viciously attacked innocent and defenseless Americans.

We, as Americans, are a strong and resilient people. We will heal, and we will persevere. We will continue to work. The strength and spirit of our Republic and the democracy it represents will shine through. We will not simply endure; we shall prevail. And we will send a sharp message to those cowards saying that terror acts will not be tolerated or condoned. They will never be able to destroy the spirit of a free people, the freedom we enjoy, and our way of life.

Our thoughts and our prayers go out to those who tragically lost their lives and to the victims and families who lost their loved ones. This is far more than a tragedy to them. It is an outrageous act of terrorism that killed and injured so many innocent and decent citizens of our country. Nothing I can say to express my sympathy for those suffering is enough. My outrage of those who cowardly act remains unavailing.

For now, we must mourn those who have passed on and care for those who were injured. We must let the President, our law enforcement people, military and the intelligence community work. As a law-abiding nation—and we are a nation of laws—we must be sure to place the blame on the guilty. Taking independent action against innocents and guests of our country has to be guarded against.

The anger I feel inside has to be tempered because decisions made while in this state are usually not good decisions. Many are filled with that same anger and an unyielding desire for revenge. I realize we must remain calm and focused. In the heat of passion, fired by outrageous, despicable acts of those who are guilty, our leaders must be calm and dispassionate in determining who is responsible. It can be they, and how we must deal with them.

Have no doubt, America, we will find those responsible. I say to those who are responsible: You cannot hide. You can run, but you cannot hide. Justice will be served. It will be swift, and it will be harsh.

September 11—9–11–2001, will live a long time in the memory of many of us.

I was almost 7 years old on that Sunday, December 7, 1941. I remember that day, and I can remember being a small lad growing up on a farm. My folks talked to each other differently and so did the neighbors on Monday morning. They talked to each other differently than any of us had ever heard before. I can remember when my mother yelled out of the house, because we had an old battery radio and didn’t have electricity in those days—Dad and I were on the barn chores. Mother said that the Japanese had bombed Pearl Harbor. My dad looked down at me and he said: “Where is Pearl Harbor?” We didn’t even know. Next, the pictures came out of Pearl Harbor of the belowing smoke from the Arizona and of the California lying half on its side. It remained in our minds for a long time.

I fear that the pictures of the World Trade Center and the damage done there will live in the minds of young folks as Pearl Harbor did with us. Tuesday’s acts represented a well-planned, well-financed attack on our freedom by a faceless, gutless enemy.

I also want to warn the American people that this cannot be called by another name. So I stand firmly and proudly behind my Commander in Chief, the President of the United States. There is no doubt about our unity and resolve to track down, root out, and relentlessly pursue terrorists and the states that harbor them. I stand by to support our military and intelligence community and
CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—SENATE

September 13, 2001

Mr. NELSON of Florida. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

Mr. NELSON of Florida. Madam President, I come to the Chamber with a heavy heart because of the tragedy so many people have experienced. It has touched all of our lives in one way or another. So, too, I have had a personal experience just in the last few minutes. The tragedy has touched the life of my wife and me, for one of the passengers on the airliner that crashed into the World Trade Center was a personal friend of our family, Sonia Fuopolo of Boston and Miami.

I come to the Chamber to share this experience because the grief that so many across this Nation have felt is shared by all of us—of talking to Sonia’s husband Dominic and to her daughter Tita, who are so full of life and so upbeat and effervescent, talking to them in this condition where they still have the presence of mind in the midst of their unbelievable grief to be able to remember the good times, and Dominic telling me about the 49-some years he had the privilege of knowing his wife and the 37 years of marriage, where he met her in Puerto Rico and where it was planned he was going to be on the same flight and how she had insisted, no, she was going to Los Angeles so that she could be with their son by herself and enjoy her son since Dominic had already been in Los Angeles with their son.

This is the part of tragedy that puts a human face on the tragedy, but for Florida and Floridians it does not end there. A few minutes thereafter, I spoke to a courageous Fort Myers policeman, Officer Lyles, who has now gathered with his family in another part of Florida because it was his wife, Cee Cee Lyles, on the airliner that crashed in Pennsylvania, who was on her annual leave for Washington and another target, perhaps this building; that she was able to get through to her husband by cell phone and he could hear the screams in the background. She told him they had been hijacked, and she told him she loved him and loved their children.

I yield the floor and suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. NELSON of Florida. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from Florida, Mr. NELSON.

Mr. NELSON of Florida. Madam President, I come to the Chamber with a very heavy heart because of the tragedy so many people have experienced. It has touched all of our lives in one way or another. So, too, I have had a personal experience just in the last few minutes. The tragedy has touched the life of my wife and me, for one of the passengers on the airliner that crashed into the World Trade Center was a personal friend of our family, Sonia Fuopolo of Boston and Miami.

I come to the Chamber to share this experience because the grief that so many across this Nation have felt is shared by all of us—of talking to Sonia’s husband Dominic and to her daughter Tita, who are so full of life and so upbeat and effervescent, talking to them in this condition where they still have the presence of mind in the midst of their unbelievable grief to be able to remember the good times, and Dominic telling me about the 49-some years he had the privilege of knowing his wife and the 37 years of marriage, where he met her in Puerto Rico and where it was planned he was going to be on the same flight and how she had insisted, no, she was going to Los Angeles so that she could be with their son by herself and enjoy her son since Dominic had already been in Los Angeles with their son.

This is the part of tragedy that puts a human face on the tragedy, but for Florida and Floridians it does not end there. A few minutes thereafter, I spoke to a courageous Fort Myers policeman, Officer Lyles, who has now gathered with his family in another part of Florida because it was his wife, Cee Cee Lyles, on the airliner that crashed in Pennsylvania, who was on her annual leave for Washington and another target, perhaps this building; that she was able to get through to her husband by cell phone and he could hear the screams in the background. She told him they had been hijacked, and she told him she loved him and loved their children.

I yield the floor and suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. NELSON of Florida. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

Mr. NELSON of Florida. Madam President, I come to the Chamber with a very heavy heart because of the tragedy so many people have experienced. It has touched all of our lives in one way or another. So, too, I have had a personal experience just in the last few minutes. The tragedy has touched the life of my wife and me, for one of the passengers on the airliner that crashed into the World Trade Center was a personal friend of our family, Sonia Fuopolo of Boston and Miami.

I come to the Chamber to share this experience because the grief that so many across this Nation have felt is shared by all of us—of talking to Sonia’s husband Dominic and to her daughter Tita, who are so full of life and so upbeat and effervescent, talking to them in this condition where they still have the presence of mind in the midst of their unbelievable grief to be able to remember the good times, and Dominic telling me about the 49-some years he had the privilege of knowing his wife and the 37 years of marriage, where he met her in Puerto Rico and where it was planned he was going to be on the same flight and how she had insisted, no, she was going to Los Angeles so that she could be with their son by herself and enjoy her son since Dominic had already been in Los Angeles with their son.

This is the part of tragedy that puts a human face on the tragedy, but for Florida and Floridians it does not end there. A few minutes thereafter, I spoke to a courageous Fort Myers policeman, Officer Lyles, who has now gathered with his family in another part of Florida because it was his wife, Cee Cee Lyles, on the airliner that crashed in Pennsylvania, who was on her annual leave for Washington and another target, perhaps this building; that she was able to get through to her husband by cell phone and he could hear the screams in the background. She told him they had been hijacked, and she told him she loved him and loved their children.

This is the part of the grieving process that is necessary for us to all go through, but it is also a poignant story of two lives that are touching the state of Florida even more; of why we are going to find the perpetrators, we are going to hunt them down, and they are going to be brought to justice.

I have seen America in this situation—and in my lifetime I have seen it several times—but the one I remember so vividly is the time of national tragedy when the symbol of our technological prowess, the space shuttle Challenger, in January of 1986, exploded in front of our eyes. I recall that event because there was something from the experience of that tragedy for the American people that was instructive to the rest of the world. That is, that Americans overcome. Americans persevere. When we are knocked down, we are not knocked out; we get up and we respond.

That has happened over and over in our history. It is part of our character as an American people that we overcome. We saw it in the Revolutionary War. We have seen it in every war America has ever fought. We have seen it in the space race. We have seen it in the Korean War. We have seen it in the Vietnam War. We have seen it in the national tragedy of the Challenger explosion, and we are seeing it again in the national tragedy of this terrorist attack.

In the process of overcoming and persevering, we make right that which is wrong. And so, too, the American people are unified in our commitment that we will find the perpetrators and they will be dealt with.

This is not a time for revenge. We are a forgiving people. That is part of our Scriptural heritage. We are a forgiving people. That is part of our Scriptural heritage. That is part of our character as Americans. That is part of our character as a nation blessed by God over and over and that God is protecting us. America will not only survive, America will do as she has so often done: America and Americans will overcome.

Ms. STABENOW. Mr. President, our national will is being tested as it never has before. On the clear, sunny morning of September 11, we were attacked from out of the shadows. There are no words to fully describe the depth of our grief. And not enough terms to properly mourn the innocent lives so cruelly taken.

Thousands of families are grieving today over loved ones lost in this senseless attack on our nation and all of us mourn with them and keep them in our prayers.

But from within the depths of this horror, we saw and honor the heroism of our police and firefighters, many of whom gave their lives trying to rescue the missing. We thank our law enforcement and our first responders, our State and local officials who are working tirelessly trying to save lives.

While our enemy is still uncertain, our resolve must be unflinching. Those who thought they could bring us to our knees must instead see us standing tall, united, and resolved to see that justice is done.

We stand firmly behind President Bush and his diplomatic and military efforts to discover who is behind these attacks and hold them accountable. The United States will respond decisively and forcefully against those who have perpetrated this atrocity and those who offer them safe harbor and assistance.

I am also outraged by reports of price gouging at gasoline stations around the Nation. Those who would profit in our time of grief are not only conscienceless; they are self-indulgent. The Michigan Attorney General has asked me to direct complaints to their regional offices. Our Nation will come through this crisis even stronger than before. Those who attack from the shadows will see that we do not surrender to fear, but rather will go forward united in steady purpose and iron resolve. Even as we mourn, it is important that we carry with us the immediate priority being to fully think in. The horror is so unimaginable, the devastation so great and the suffering it leaves in its wake is almost beyond our comprehension. We feel we have all, personally, been dealt a great blow, no matter where we live, whether or not we knew any of the victims. Our hearts go out to the many, many families who are suffering, and in a very real sense, America should be deeply grateful to even our own lives. I believe that all of even thousands of people, and maybe saved the lives of many hundreds or hijackers had in mind, but we can be the plane was prevented from coming to family members that several pas-can only surmise from their last words that flight, realizing that the hijackers from phone calls from passengers on other great act of heroism—the crashing of United Airlines Flight 93 in we are seeing a picture emerge of an-people were just found alive today. adrenaline from the news that three we are watching rescue workers who rushing up the stricken towers in their trying disabled colleagues down 80 back for friends, office workers car-heroism that come flooding out of this also comforted by the stories of great shaken but we are not bowed. We are may get back to work as soon as posgram funding levels within the Committee's any immediate changes to statutes or pro-measures to save lives and restore safety and order as quickly as possible.
Thank you for your resolve and determina-true to our history, Vermonters are quick to offer their help. As more information comes to light, numbers to help. All over the State, Vermont Air Guard has already flown the contributions to the relief effort that American resolve will remain firm no matter how long or how difficult this fight.
In closing, I would like to recognize the contributions to the relief effort from our small State of Vermont. The Vermont Air National Guard flew many hours of additional missions as part of the effort to maintain security over American airspace. Vermont doctors, nurses, firefighters, and rescue workers have volunteered in great numbers to help. All over the State, people have lined up to give blood. True to their history, Vermonters are quick to offer their help.
I see this strength replicated all across America. This makes me, and all Americans, proud.

CONCLUSION OF MORNING BUSINESS

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Ms. Stabenow). Morning business is closed.

DEPARTMENTS OF COMMERCE, JUSTICE, AND STATE, THE JUDICIARY, AND RELATED AGENCIES APPROPRIATIONS ACT, 2002

Ms. Stabenow. Under the previous order, the Senate will now resume considmanagement. And then in the afternoon, we closed the session with the Director of the CIA, George Tenet; the FBI Director, Judge Louis Freeh, and VADM Thomas Wilson.

We were trying our best to lay the groundwork for better coordination of our effort on counterterrorism. I ask unanimous consent to have the statement by President Bush, dated May 8, printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

PRESIDENT GEORGE W. BUSH,

STATEMENT BY THE PRESIDENT
DOMESTIC PREPAREDNESS AGAINST WEAPONS OF MASS DESTRUCTION

Protecting America's homeland and citizens from the threat of weapons of mass destuction is one of our Nation's most pressing national security challenges. Today, more nations possess chemical, biological, or nuclear weapons than ever before. Still others seek to acquire these weapons. The list of these countries includes some of the world's least-responsible states—states for whom terror and blackmail are a way of life.
Some of these nations have demonstrated an interest in acquiring weapons of mass destruction.

Against this backdrop, it is clear that the threat of chemical, biological, or nuclear weapons being used against the United States—while not immediate—is very real.
That is why our Nation actively seeks to deny chemical, biological, and nuclear weapons to those seeking to acquire them. That is why, together with our allies, we seek to deter anyone who would contemplate their use. And that is also why we must ensure that our Nation is prepared to defend against the harm they can inflict.

Our challenge is to reduce the threat to our country from weapons of mass destruction less than fully successful, prudence dictates that the United States be fully prepared to deal effectively with the consequences of such a weapon being used here on our soil.

Today, numerous Federal departments and agencies are involved in efforts to deal with the consequences of a potential use of a chemical, biological, radiological, or nuclear weapon in the United States. Many of these Federal programs offer training, planning, and assistance to state and local governments. But to maximize their effectiveness, these efforts need to be seamlessly integrated, harmonious, and comprehensive.

Therefore, I have asked Vice President
Cheney to oversee the development of a coordinated national effort so that we may do the very best job of protecting our people from catastrophic harm. I have also asked Joe Allbaugh, the Director of the Federal Emergency Management Agency, to create an Office of National Preparedness. This Office will be responsible for implementing the results of those parts of the national effort overseen by Vice President Cheney that deal with emergency management. Specifically, it will coordinate all Federal programs dealing with weapons of mass destruction consequence management within the Departments of Energy, Defense, Health and Human Services, Justice, and the EPA, and other Federal agencies.

Today, numerous Federal departments and agencies are involved in efforts to deal with the consequences of a potential use of a chemical,
biological, radiological, or nuclear weapon
in the United States. Many of these Federal programs offer training, planning, and assistance to state and local governments. But to maximize their effectiveness, these efforts need to be seamlessly integrated, harmonious, and comprehensive.

Therefore, I have asked Vice President
Cheney to oversee the development of a coordinated national effort so that we may do
the very best job of protecting our people from catastrophic harm. I have also asked Joe Allbaugh, the Director of the Federal Emergency Management Agency, to create an Office of National Preparedness. This Office will be responsible for implementing the results of those parts of the national effort overseen by Vice President Cheney that deal with emergency management. Specifically, it will coordinate all Federal programs dealing with weapons of mass destruction
consequence management within the Departments of Energy, Defense, Health and Human Services, Justice, and the EPA, and other Federal agencies. The Office of National Preparedness will work closely with state and local governments to ensure their planning, training,
We used to read all these articles about how difficult intelligence work was. It is not an easy thing, where you just call to find something out. On the contrary, it was so.

Our friend Tom Clancy just momentarily said, of the 20,000 employees there at the CIA, we only have about 800 in covert operations. And to quote General Schwarzkopf after Desert Storm—In will never forget a briefing we had at the Appropriations Committee Defense Subcommittee—he said he could not depend on intelligence from the CIA, that it was mush.

The reason he called it mush was he said it was so overanalyzed, the corners were cut, the edges were rounded, and everything else of that kind. I found out at that time they had 864 intelligence analyzers at the CIA. Cold, hard facts are analyzed, analyzed, and analyzed. Someone wants to protect their backsides, so in analyzing, you are giving yourself a grade, you are not giving the cold, hard, intelligence fact. That is what General Schwarzkopf called it—mush. He said he had to depend on his pilots in Desert Storm.

Obviously, the problem persists with a massive attack upon the United States in such a coordinated and deliberate fashion, and we have not an inkling. We know about Mogadishu; we know about the barracks in Saudi Arabia; we know about the Embassy in Kenya; we know about the Embassy in Tanzania; we know about the U.S.S. Cole, we know about the prior attack on the World Trade Towers. The leader of all that continues to say he is really going to pull off an attack on the United States of America. And when it occurs, we say we wonder who did it.

We are hard learners. We have to get going and get serious about this war we are in. That is why yesterday don't the FBI in a closed hearing ahead of time so that we will know exactly what is needed and what the threat is.

Eliminating the curbside inspection option as part of new federal security standards, we believe it will not fully address our security problems. After all, luggage checked curbside or at the desk both have to go through some type of scanner.

Unless and until we federalize the security of our cars, trains, buses, and airports, we won't be able to get a better result than the present one. And that is folks who are privately hired by the airlines working for minimum wage, staying for an average of three months or so.

My wife had two knee replacements. She has titanium knees. We know the metal detector is going to sound. I am trying to explain to the employees there and they do not understand. We need trained professionals working in airport security.

Heightened security measures on airplanes are also needed. The airplane cabins need to be secure, so no one can get to the pilots. The door has to be made more stable and solid. There is no reason to open the door. Tell pilots to bring a box lunch. They can communiicate, if there is an emergency, and if they identify it as an emergency. But if a terrorist starts taking over the crew, they have communications. They can land the plane and save, hopefully, some of the individuals. But terrorists ought to know up front that they are not going to turn a domestic flight into a weapon of mass destruction and just run it into a building. That has to stop immediately.

I would like to be able to talk at length about what needs to be done. But that is enough. I think perhaps the last talk should be about better orchestration, coordination, and action quietly. That is really what is needed at this particular time.

I ask colleagues if they have an amendment to please come to the floor immediately. Let's present it, debate it, and have a vote on it. Otherwise, we will make up that list of amendments. I will soon be joined by the Senator from New Hampshire.

Credit should go to the Senator from New Hampshire who set up these hearings. In May, he had everyone in the administration come, as you can tell from this hearing record. It is the most comprehensive look-see the Government has had with respect to terrorism this year.

We think we have to fix some responsibility, and we have to appropriate for it.

There is some $364 million for the various offices that you might see on page 46 of the Committee report where you have hazardous activities to combat terrorism: Management and Administration, $8 million; Center for Domestic Prepar-dedness, Fort McClelland, AL, $30 million; for consortium members, $58 million; National Energetic Materials Research and Testing Center, New Mexico, $7 million; National Emergency Response and Rescue Training Center at Texas A&M, $7 million; National Center for Bio-Med Research and Training, Louisiana State University, $7 million; U.S. Army Research, Development, and Engineering Center at Aberdeen Proving Grounds, $7 million; Domestic Preparedness Equipment Grants, $175 million; Domestic Preparedness Exercise Grants and Exercise Support Funds, $20 million; TOPPF II, $1 million; Annual Exercise Program, $5 million; Improved Response Program, $3 million; another training, $35 million; technical assistance, $8 million; prepositioned equipment, $8 million; and Web Site Pilot, $2 million. It adds up to around $364 million.

That really was a result of the Oklahoma bombing. We went in every direction possible. But that is our problem. We are still going in every direction. We are not coordinating. The responsibility is not fixed. Someone ought to be at that Cabinet table—the Attorney General with his assistants talking with the President, who, of course, has the prime responsibility.

Let me say, so far so good. The coun-cry has responded admirably. I think our Government is up and well and doing good.

There is a wonderful element of bipartisanship.

During the August break, I was on a trip in Australia, and up around Thailand, Cambodia, Vietnam, and China in the Pacific area. Everywhere I went, the Ambassador would get into the budget, and I would tell them how we were running a heck of a deficit. I told them there wasn't any surplus. Now everybody will admit to it. The law in Section 201 of the Social Security Act of 1935 says that if there's a surplus in the Social Security trust fund, then we must invest that in government notes. We take the money, but we don't give it to Social Security.

Under Section 13–301 of the Budget Act, it says you shall not use that money. Follow section 21 of the Green- span report of 1983, which concurs. It says you shall not use this money against the deficit, or in the general revenues to account for lowering the deficit. But we do. We have done it since President Johnson's time. Up to President Johnson's time, we never did. But President Johnson didn't do it. He had a surplus in 1968–1969 without the use of Social Security funds.

In any event, I said to each one of these Ambassadors that our problem back in the States is that we need some national purpose. We are just running around with courthouse politics. It is a shameful thing. We can't do that anymore. And we are responsible for the deficit, or who is going to invade the trust fund, or stem cell research. The country is really asleep. The leadership is in all directions. What we really need is a national purpose.

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—SENATE

September 13, 2001

up their life for a cause, we will call them the enemy. But they call them heroes.

Let’s depict this properly. It is the leadership. And I commend the President for saying we are not only going to hold those responsible, but the countries that harbor them. I think he is right on target.

But that is the whole idea now. We are in this war together. We are working together. I think that has helped this particular bill along. We are going to try to get a finite list of amendments.

Now, with my ranking member here, I yield to Senator Gregg.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Hampshire.

Mr. GREGG. Madam President, I thank the chairman for yielding to me. I appreciate his courtesy in my arriving in this--and the little bit of a beginning of this work, as a group of us were in a meeting on how we are going to handle this bill and move it along, I hope.

I congratulate the chairman of the committee for this bill, which is a soothing bill really. Long before the events of the day before yesterday, which were so horrific and which reflected the threat of terrorism to our Nation, our committee aggressively pursued the issue of how to try to prepare for such an act.

We have held innumerable hearings over the last 4 or 5 years. One of the lines that has flowed through all those hearings has been the fact that our intelligence community—our communities focused on domestic intelligence and our communities focused on international intelligence—had concluded that it was more than likely, it was a probability, that a terrorist event would occur in the United States and that it was in significant proportions. And it has occurred.

How have we tried to ready for this? Well, a lot of the response you saw in New York—which has been overwhelming and incredibly professional, and heroic beyond description, which has taken the lives of many firefighters and police officers and just citizens who went to help—a lot of that response was coordinated as a result of initiatives that came out of the hearings in the Chamber and the question of first responders, and how we get the people who are first there up to speed as to how to handle this type of event. So in that area at least there has been some solace.

But the real issue remains, How do you deal with an enemy who, as the chairman just related, is willing to pursue and use their life in a way to aggravate the situation? And that is, do we have the capability to handle this bill and move it along, I hope.

We have held innumerable hearings over the last 4 or 5 years. One of the lines that has flowed through all those hearings has been the fact that our intelligence community—our communities focused on domestic intelligence and our communities focused on international intelligence—had concluded that it was more than likely, it was a probability, that a terrorist event would occur in the United States and that it was in significant proportions. And it has occurred.

How have we tried to ready for this? Well, a lot of the response you saw in New York—which has been overwhelming and incredibly professional, and heroic beyond description, which has taken the lives of many firefighters and police officers and just citizens who went to help—a lot of that response was coordinated as a result of initiatives that came out of the hearings in the Chamber and the question of first responders, and how we get the people who are first there up to speed as to how to handle this type of event. So in that area at least there has been some solace.

But the real issue remains, How do you deal with an enemy who, as the chairman just related, is willing to give their life to make their point and who has, as their source of support, religious fervor, in most instances—and I suspect this is going to be proved true in this instance—a religious fervor which gives them a community of support and praise which causes them to be willing to proceed in the way that they did, which is to use their life to take other innocent lives?

First, how do you identify those individuals because they function as a fairly small-skim group, and it is mostly familial. It involves families. It involves sects which are very insular and very hard to penetrate.

But equally important, when you are trying to deal with that type of a personality and that type of a culture, which basically seeks martyrdom as its cause, as its purpose for life, and sees martyrdom as part of its process for getting to an afterlife in terms of their religious belief—how do you deal with that culture and group of individuals without creating more problems, without creating more people who are willing to take up the banner of hatred and willing to pursue and use their life in a way to aggravate the situation?

I think we as a committee have concluded that the first thing you have to do is have a huge new commitment to intelligence. And we have made this point. We have dramatically expanded the overseas efforts of the FBI as an outreach of this effort. But it involves more than that.

We have to set aside our natural inclination as a democracy to limit the type of people we deal with in the area of human intelligence. Unfortunately, the CIA in the 1990s was essentially limited and defanged, for all intents and purposes, in the area of human intelligence gathering because the directives and the policies did not allow us, as a nation, to direct our key intelligence community to basically go out and employ and use people who were individuals who could give us the information we needed. Because of our reticence as a democracy to use people who themselves may be violent and criminal, we have been making it a sightless when it came to individual intelligence.

So we have to recognize that in a period of war, which is what I think everyone characterizes this as, and which it truly is, we are, as a nation, going to have to be willing to be more aggressive in the use of human intelligence, and we are going to have to allow our agencies in the international community to be more aggressive.

Equally important, we must recognize that because of our natural inclination and our very legitimate rules relative to search and seizure and invasion of privacy, have been very reticent to give our intelligence communities the technical capability to address specifically encoding mechanisms.

The sophistication of encoding mechanisms has become overwhelming. I asked Director Freeh at one hearing when he was Director of the FBI—and I remember this rather vividly because I didn’t expect this response at all—what was the most significant problem the FBI faced as they went forward. He pretty much said it was the encryption capability of the people who have an intention to hurt America, whether it happened to be the drug lords or whoever it happened to be terrorist activity.

It used to be that we had the capability to break most codes because of our sophistication. This has always been something in which we, as a nation, specialized. We have a number of agencies that are dedicated to it. But the quantum leap that has occurred in the past to encrypt information—from telephone conversation to telephone conversation, to say nothing of data—has gotten to a point where even our most sophisticated capability runs into very serious limitations.

So we need to have cooperation. This is what is key. We need to have the cooperation of the manufacturing community to intercept the communications that are active in the commercial world. These are folks who have as much risk as we have as a nation, and they should understand, as a matter of citizenship, they have an obligation to allow us to have, under the scrutiny of the search and seizure clauses, which still require that you have an adequate probable cause and that you have court oversight—under that scrutiny, to have our people have the technical capability to get the keys to the basic encryption activity.

This has not happened. This simply has not happened. The manufacturing sector in this area has refused to do this. And it has been for a myriad of reasons, most of them competitive. But the fact is, is this something on which we need international cooperation and on which we need to have movement in order to get the information that allows us to anticipate an event similar to what occurred in New York and Washington, D.C.

The only way you can stop that type of a terrorist event is to have the information beforehand as to who is committing the act and their targets. And there are two key ways you do that. One is through people on the ground, on which we need to substantially increase the effort—and this bill attempts to do that in many ways through the FBI—and the other way is through having the technical capability to intercept communications and activities and to track the various funding activities of the organizations. That requires the cooperation of the commercial world and the people who are active in the commercial world. That call must go forth, in my opinion. But this is something which is extremely positive and which, again, regrettable anticipated the event, is to say that within our own Federal Government we are not doing a very good job of coordinating our exercise.

There are 42 different agencies that are responsible for intelligence activity and for counterterrorism activity.
They overlap in responsibility. In many instances, they compete in responsibility.

Turf is the most significant inhibitor of effective Federal action between agencies. Although there is a sincere effort to avoid turf, and in my opinion, in working with a lot of these agencies, I have been incredibly impressed by a willingness of the various leaders of these agencies both under the Clinton administration and under the Bush administration, to set aside this endemic problem of protection of one’s prerogatives and allow parties to communicate across agency lines and to put aside the stovepipes. Even though there is that commitment, the systems do not allow it to occur in many instances.

This bill, under the leadership of the chairman, includes language which has attempted to bring more focus and structure cross-agency activities. One of the specific proposals in the bill, which may not be the last approach taken and probably won't be but is an attempt to move the issue down the field, is to set up a Deputy Attorney General whose purpose is to oversee counterterrorism activity and coordinate it across agencies and who is the repository of the authority to do that. There is no such person today in the Federal Government. Of these 42 agencies, everybody reports to their own agency head. Nobody reports across agency lines. There is virtually no one who can stand up and say, other than the President, “get this done.”

The purpose of the Deputy Attorney General is to accomplish that, at least within the law enforcement area and within much of the consequence manager's area, especially the crime area, although it is understood that this individual will work in concert with the head of FEMA, the purpose of which is to oversee the disaster relief efforts and the disaster relief efforts that occur as a result of an event such as New York or where you have these huge efforts committed.

That type of coordination is so critical. Would it have abated the New York and Washington situation? No, it wouldn't have. But it is important we pass this legislation.

Of course, when you get to the end of the line—we have talked about all the technical things we can do as a government and all the important things we can do to try to restructure ourselves and commit the resources in order to improve our capacity to address this, but in the end it comes down to a commitment of our people, understanding that we are confronting a fundamental evil, an evil of proportions equal to any that we have confronted as a nation and that we as a nation cannot allow those who are behind this evil to undermine our way of life and our commitment to democracy.

We must make every effort, leave no stone unturned—regrettably, these people live under stones to a large degree—to find these people who are responsible and to bring them to justice. But we also must make every effort to recognize that in doing that, we cannot callously disregard our basic rights and the commitment to openness as a society and a democracy. Then they would be successful, if we were to do that.

So as we rededicate ourselves, as we all continue to see the image of those buildings collapsing and the horror that followed—and we all obviously want retribution and we are all angered by it—we have to react in the context of a democracy. We have to pursue this in the context of what has made us great, which is that we are a people who unite when we confront such a threat. We unite and we focus our energies on defeating that threat. But we don't allow that threat to win by undermining our basic rights and our openness as a society.

In summary, I appreciate all the efforts of the chairman of the committee to bring forward a bill which, regrettably, understood that this type of work is not something we can bulldoze our way to address it even before it did. Now I think it is important we pass this legislation. It does empower key agencies within the Government who have a responsibility to address the issue of counterterrorism not only with the dollars but with the policies they need in order to be more successful in their efforts.

There is still a great deal to do. There is still a lot of changes we need to make, a lot of changes in the law we should make in order to empower these agencies—Pompeo has proven even more effective. Certainly there is going to be a great deal more funds that have to be committed than what are in this bill in order to give these agencies—the FBI and the State Department—the resources they need to be strong and be successful in pursuing the people who committed this horrific act and in protecting Americans around the world and especially protecting our freedoms and liberties here in the United States.

This bill is clearly a step in the right direction. I congratulate the chairman for bringing it forward.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from South Carolina.

Mr. HOLLINGS. Madam President, I thank the distinguished Senator. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The senior assistant bill clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. CONRAD. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

(The remarks of Mr. CONRAD are printed in today's Record under Morning Business.)

Mr. CONRAD. I thank the Chair and yield the floor.

Mr. HOLLINGS. Madam President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. REID. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. REID. Madam President, we have two of the finest managers in the Senate working this bill—the Senator from South Carolina and the Senator from New Hampshire. We need to move this bill along. We need help from the membership of this Senate. Staff has worked hard to work down the amendments, and they have a fairly finite list now. But there is talk now that there are some issues still unresolved by Members of the Senate.

We are going to have a recess, by virtue of a previous order, at 12:30. I am going to recommend to Senator DUNCAN and Senator HOLLINGS when we reconvene, we reconvene at 2:35—or whatever time it is—that we move beyond this point of people having disagreements with certain parts of this bill. If people are going to be in disagreement, let them come out here and tell us what is wrong with the bill.

We need to move forward. This is a very important piece of legislation. It is our sixth appropriations bill. When we finish, we still have seven to go. We haven’t had conferences on the ones we passed. This country is in a state of emergency. We need to do the work of the Congress, and the work of the Congress at this stage, nearing the end of the appropriations season, is to finish these bills by the end of the fiscal year.

That is looking very dubious at this time. So we have to move forward.

I repeat, the two managers are the best we have, or as good as we have; that is for certain. We have to move this bill along.

Mr. HOLLINGS. Madam President, the distinguished Senator—other than his ranking member—is on target. We have a bill that was passed not only unanimously out of subcommittee but the full committee. It has been before the Senate last week and this week. Everyone knows the provisions within the bill. I was just told by a colleague who had served previously in the House—he said the reading clerk reads each section as they go through each section, and you have to be there and propose your amendment. After that, the amendment is passed out of debate and they go to the next section. You cannot offer an amendment to one that has already been read and passed upon.

We have to devise some other way. We are sitting around here in charge of the business of the Senate pleading. We should not be pleading. I do not want to be like Al Haig—"I’m in charge"—but I can make a motion for third reading and they can defeat the motion or otherwise, the managers of the bill will have to come on the floor and do the business of the Senate. That is not the way it should be.

Mr. HOLLINGS. I thank the distinguished leader.

I immediately give credit to the ranking member, the Senator from New Hampshire, who as chairman had the vision that it was necessary we have a comprehensive review of the problem of terrorism and how to respond to it. It was under his leadership that we have these sections in the bill. Now we are ready to move. We are ready to go to third reading, and we are ready to pass it. The two leaders are here.

I again suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. NELSON of Florida). The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I appreciate the Senator from New Hampshire serving in the House, as the Senator from New Hampshire served in the House. When you have a section in a bill in the House and you are not ready to offer your amendment, you are the only one out of luck; it is tough luck. Here we wait around begging people to come to the floor and do the business of the Senate. That is not the way it should be.

Mr. HOLLINGS. Will that be in morning business?

Mr. REID. Mr. President, we were scheduled to recess at 12:30. I ask unanimous consent we extend the time for a quorum call. As the Senator from New York has a very important message to deliver to the Senate.

Mr. GREGG. Will that be in morning business?

Mr. REID. Yes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from North Dakota.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, I have heard the discussions about the bill on the floor, the Commerce-Justice-State appropriations bill. As the chairman and ranking member know, I have offered two amendments, one of which is fairly controversial. My position would be that I withdrawal that amendment. I will chat about it for 1 minute. I understand from discussions we have had that the chairman and ranking member would approve my second amendment by a voice vote, and I propose I be allowed to withdraw the amendment dealing with eliminating funding for TV Marti and using that money instead to enhance enforcement and compliance in international trade.

I will ask consent to do that in a moment. Things have changed very substantially and now is not the time for this discussion. That doesn’t mean I don’t believe during this appropriations process this year, either in conference or in some other way, we ought not do what I propose in my amendment. I believe very strongly in my amendment that identified $10 to $11 million of tragic waste of the tax-payers money and identified an area that cries out in a desperate need: our trading partners like compliance of enforcement of our trade laws dealing with China, Japan, Europe, Mexico, and Canada.

Although I ask consent to withdraw the TV Marti amendment if we have reached agreement on the other amendment, I want everyone to understand that this is not necessarily the end of that discussion this year. But I think it is probably better not to continue the discussion at this time.

Mr. HOLLINGS. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, I am happy to yield.

Mr. HOLLINGS. I appreciate the Senator understanding and willingness to withdraw the first amendment. I will see if we have an understanding.

Mr. GREGG. My understanding is we reached agreement with the Senator.

Mr. HOLLINGS. Let’s agree to the amendment now.

Mr. GREGG. Have the yeas and nays been requested on either amendment?
Mr. DORGAN. No.

Mr. HOLLINGS. Can we call that amendment up?

AMENDMENT NO. 154

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The small business amendment is the pending question.

Mr. HOLLINGS. I urge the adoption of the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment (No. 154) of the Senator from North Dakota.

The amendment (No. 154) was agreed to.

AMENDMENT NO. 154, WITHDRAWN

Mr. DORGAN. I ask consent to be allowed to withdraw the amendment I offered dealing with funding for TV Marti and trade compliance.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. DORGAN. I thank the President.

Mr. HOLLINGS. I thank the distinguished Senator from North Dakota very much.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, let me just say again that while I have withdrawn that particular amendment, I believe very strongly that we need to revisit this as we go along in this process. I think this is the time to do that. I have talked to the Senator from South Carolina, who I know has some feelings about this as well. We will revisit this later in this process.

Let me say how much I appreciate the work of the Senators from South Carolina and New Hampshire; they have done so much work on this bill.

Mr. HOLLINGS. I thank the Senator very much.

NATIONAL SUPPORT FOR NEW YORK

Mrs. CLINTON. Mr. President, I wanted to take just a few minutes of morning business to report to my colleagues about my visit, along with Senator SCHUMER, to New York yesterday, to convey the appreciation that New Yorkers feel, starting with our Governor and our mayor but going down through the people whom I saw—whether they were a firefighter, or police officer, or emergency medical technician, or someone standing on the street—for the unified and extraordinary support that has been demonstrated by our entire country, starting with our President.

Senator SCHUMER and I flew to New York on a military plane from Andrews and flew to LaGuardia where we got into helicopters. The helicopters flew us to the tip of Manhattan where we circled from the East River toward the Hudson and were close enough in to see the burned buildings, to see the wreckage, the crumpled destruction of the buildings that had once stood there—a sight that the only comparable basis I think most living Americans would have, such as our distinguished Senator INOUYE, is what war was like in World War II, or Korea, or Vietnam.

We took another pass so we could get in a little bit closer. As we did, we saw dozens and dozens of people running away from the site. We later learned that the continuing danger from these structurally damaged and unsafe buildings had driven our rescue workers out.

We landed at the heliport on the East Side and went in to meet with the mayor and the Governor. We had some time to talk with the press, where everyone expressed the solidarity and unity that the people of New York are certainly feeling between and among themselves.

For the support that our President, our Congress, our entire Government, and people have given New York.

We then went in a convoy down to the site. We visited one of my colleagues could have been with us, because the streets were lined with people holding American flags and signs expressing their gratitude and their thanks to the many workers and volunteers who had come to help, and a real sense of resolve and demonstration of support for our Nation.

Because of the difficulties with the buildings, we were not able to go in as close as we had originally planned. So we stopped at a place about twenty blocks from the immediate area that one could approach and still not interfere with the search and rescue mission or be in danger. We put on our masks because the acrid smell of the still burning debris is extraordinary. We got a briefing on the spot from some of the people who were directly in charge of the work that is being done.

I felt as though I were on the edge of hell. I watched the smoke rising, I could see the twisted wreckage, and I had a much clearer visual image because of my helicopter view. I saw the people who have been there hour after hour since this vicious attack occurred coming toward me. Their shift was over. They were seeking some respite—firefighters in their uniforms covered from head to toe with dust and debris, exhausted, and dragging their fire axes with them.

The impression and feeling that one gets from actually being even as close as I was is so much greater with respect to the devastation than we see on our television screens. The television in a sense contains a miniaturized view of what has happened in New York.

When we then stood there for a few minutes—and that is all we were able to spend there—we visited with people who were looking for their lost loved ones. One mother in particular had just come down to the area hoping against hope to hear something about her son. Residents who had lost their apartments, their offices, and their businesses were standing on the side of a familiar street in a totally awful, inexplicable new circumstance.

We then went to the police academy which has been set up to be the command center since the city’s command center was lost in the collapse of one of the ancillary buildings to the two towers, and we had a very long and very informative briefing from the mayor, from the Governor, and from all of the people on the front lines—the police commissioner and others who talked about where they were in the struggle that they are engaged in against this massive mountain of debris.

Just that night they had moved out more than 120 dump trucks filled with debris. The estimate from the Army Corps of Engineers is that there will be at least 500,000 tons of debris.

In addition to the immediate search and rescue and cleanup work that has to go on, the power situation, the loss of energy and telephone and communication services, has meant that the New York Stock Exchange could not open for business yesterday. It has meant that there are still many offices of our major financial institutions unable to reopen.

The humanitarian needs are enormous. There is an armory down on Lexington Avenue at about 25th or 26th Street that will be open for those whose family members and loved ones and friends are missing so that they can go in and find out and have the information that may be required for identification.

The overall impression that I certainly take from this experience yesterday is of the pride I feel in the work that is being done, of the leadership given by our mayor and our Governor, of our police and fire and emergency personnel, the extraordinary readiness of our hospitals to care for the injured, the tragedies—there are not as many injured as they had expected—and the realization that we have a very big job ahead of us, a job of cleaning up and rebuilding and reconstructing.

I asked for some time from the mayor and the Governor as to what we were looking at because this is something for which we have to plan. They were obviously unable to say what the total estimate would be of the costs that have already been incurred and will necessarily have to be incurred in the future, but they know that they could immediately explain and justify $20 billion of direct costs. We will be asking our colleagues for a show of support, as a way of recognizing that the epicenter of this attack on our country occurred in New York City.

September 13, 2001

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—SENATE

16969
I took a late train back last night because I needed to be here to work with my colleagues on not only the further understanding of the level of devastation and how we can help them, but also to answer questions and to be available as we continue to try to sort out what kind of national response is required.

I am very pleased that the President will be going to New York tomorrow afternoon. I will ask and salute him for that decision. I know it was a difficult decision because of the security issues that surround the movement of any President. I personally, on behalf of my constituents, thank him.

I will be meeting, along with Senator Schumer, and others, at the White House this afternoon with the President, where I will personally not only convey my appreciation for his leadership, his commitment, and his visit tomorrow, but also the specific requests that the Governor and the mayor have made for additional and specific Federal assistance.

In addition, I introduced legislation earlier today that will be cosponsored by many colleagues on both sides of the aisle. It has an identical companion bill in the House. It is S. 1422, which will expedite the process by which the Federal Government provides benefits to the families of public safety officers, firefighters, police officers, emergency service personnel, and others who lost their lives in the line of duty.

I am very pleased, once again, that the President, in his video-phone conversation with the mayor and the Governor, stated his strong support for this legislation.

It has been said that more public safety officers lost their lives in the terrorist attack against the United States on September 11 than in any other single event in modern history. We have exactly how many rescuers gave the ultimate sacrifice yet, but I was told by the acting Commissioner yesterday that they are missing 300 firefighters.

I just was handed a note that is a very good piece of news, that they have just found two firefighters and one citizen still alive, which is why the search and rescue mission has to continue. We cannot give up. We know from cell phone communication and from the experience and intuition of our first responders and rescue personnel on the scene that it is still possible—as we just learned—for people to be alive buried under that rubble. We will not give up until we find every single person.

Yet, as good as the first responders on the front lines, it is not me carrying the ax. It is not me as one of the ironworkers who rushed down to volunteer their services to help remove some of the debris. It is not me as a police officer who risked his life to prevent people from entering the building. It is these men and women who have made the sacrifice to protect us, and to respond as they would have at a time of battle.

And, in effect, when this act of war took place, they were our front-line soldiers.

The Federal Government provides a one-time benefit payment to the families of public safety officers lost in the line of duty through the public safety officer benefit program. Unfortunately, these benefits are often delayed for long periods of time because of very bureaucratic Pentagon regulations.

In fact, I stood in this Chamber back in May to commend the sacrifice of brave New York City firefighters who lost their lives in a Father's Day blaze in Queens. Their families are still struggling to complete the application process. They fill it out and they are told they need more information.

It is imperative that we take action now to ensure that the family members of those brave men and women who lost their lives in this terrorist attack are not confronted with the same onerous process.

So the legislation that I have introduced today would direct the Department of Justice to expedite the process for these families of those who lost their lives while responding at the World Trade Center in New York City, the Pentagon in Virginia, or in Stonycreek Township, PA.

Given what I heard on television from the President, and the extraordinarily broad support that I have for this already in the Senate, I do not think this will be a controversial piece of legislation. But I hope it can be considered as soon as possible to send a tangible message to our firefighters, our police officers, and our emergency personnel that we are with them and that they are not in vain.

Finally, Mr. President, we are just realizing the full depth of the humanitarian crisis and grief and loss that has occurred. For the children who have now been orphaned, the husbands and wives who have now lost their partners who are facing what no parent or their daughter—there are no words adequately to describe or express our sense of loss as a society.

I am very grateful that the city, the State, and FEMA will be on the ground with grief counseling, with psychological help, with mental health services because having been to more disasters in my life than I wished, I know that those who do not hear any visible injuries or scars carry deep and lasting wounds.

We will, as a nation, not only seek out the enemy wherever he may be, but we will also care for the grieving and the wounded, and we will do everything required to provide whatever help and assistance we can as a nation.

I also hope that for those who were far away from any of the attacks on September 11, they, too, will talk with one another and comfort each other.

I was very grateful and proud to see Laura Bush, Mrs. Bush, on television today talking about the need to have an open conversation with our children, depending upon their ages, to reassure and comfort them because the sad news is that this has gone far beyond lower Manhattan, or Arlington, VA.

We have all been stricken by this cowardly act of terrorism, but I am confident that we will respond with the same resolve that has defined us as a nation, with the same compassion that marks us as a people, and with the same resolve to not only defend ourselves wherever and whenever that is necessary, but to rebuild and reconstruct the human spirit and the physical terrain of America.

Thank you, Mr. President.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the senior Senator from New York will be recognized for 7 minutes.

Mr. SCHUMER. Thank you, Mr. President.

Mr. President, I join with my colleagues in speaking of our trip that we took to New York and in what we are seeking to do here.

I fly home to New York every week. The sight I see is usually a friendly sight: first over Staten Island and the Verrazano Bridge, and then Prospect Park and my home which is on Prospect Park in Brooklyn, then the Statue of Liberty and those two tall towers that stand as symbols of New York.

We flew back with FEMA Administrator Joe Allbaugh last night. Those towers were gone. I felt violated. My city, the city we all love, had been violated.

To hear the people talk about looking for their loved ones, to go down there and see a war zone, to fly in the sky and see those two tall towers gone—unbelievable.

Two things get us through this: First, the resilience of New Yorkers—I talked about that yesterday—and second, the words of not only sympathy but also offers of help from the President,ornadoes and the words of not only sympathy but also offers of help from the President, Members of both sides of this body, from all regions and, in addition, from the other body.

We have talked to the mayor and Governor. We have put together a plan. We are going to ask our colleagues for help. We are going to ask them for $20 billion in addition to the appropriation that will come forward now. It seems like a huge sum of money, but let me catalog some of the problems.

Mayor and Governor are compiling a list. We want to move this bill quickly so that list will not be complete and this will not be a complete inventory of our needs. We will certainly have to come back.

Reconstruction will cost $10 billion, according to the mayor. The subway that has collapsed under the World Trade Center Towers will cost $1 to $3 billion to fix. We have lost 20 million square feet of office space; 100,000 people, those who went to work in the morning innately. This is not a usual tragedy for a usual response. We need help. We need large help.

The President told me when I spoke with him that he would do anything he could to help. We are so glad he is coming to New York tomorrow. The mayor and Governor have expressed that, and so do we. But we need, of course, more than just expressions of sympathy and solidarity, as deeply as those are appreciated. Our financial markets are crippled. Our electricity market, our phone system, all of this is in huge trouble.

We are putting forward, Senator Clinton and myself, a proposal. We will bring it in broad outline before our colleagues in a few minutes. We will then work on language, and hopefully it can be incorporated into the bill.

Let me just say, these are the most difficult times I have faced as an elected official. I now understand, during our valiant struggles—whether it be the Revolutionary War, World War II—how brave our soldiers were to just go on despite the heavy burdens pressed upon them. I feel that a little bit myself. It is hard to get up in the morning having not slept or having had nightmares of those planes going through the towers. There are too many things to do in the day, but every one of them is essential. And go on we must.

To my colleagues and the Nation, New York desperately needs your help. We have come before you as people who contribute greatly to our Nation in so many different ways. Now we need you. Please be there for us.

RECESS

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair thanks the Senators from New York.

Under the previous order, the Senate stands in recess until 2:15 p.m.

Thereupon, the Senate, at 12:54 p.m., recessed until 2:15 p.m. and reassembled when called to order by the Presiding Officer (Mr. Edwards).

DEPARTMENTS OF COMMERCE, JUSTICE, AND STATE, THE JUDICIARY, AND RELATED AGENCIES APPROPRIATIONS ACT, 2002—Continued

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nevada is recognized.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I understand we are very close to working out something on the filing of amendments. The managers are working on that at this time. Awaiting their arrival, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Ms. COLLINS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Ms. COLLINS. Mr. President, I rise to add my support for the managers of this bill, Senators Hollings and Gregg, for focusing on a problem that simply has not received the attention it deserves in recent years. I am referring to the disturbing lack of Immigration and Naturalization Service inspectors at the land ports of entry that line our borders with Canada and Mexico. Based on an analysis of workload and workforce needs, the INS estimates that our 104 land ports of entry are staffed at a mere 49 percent of their optimal level, leading to long lines and exhausted, overworked inspectors.

The situation in my home State of Maine is even more alarming. Maine’s 12 land ports of entry are staffed, on average, at 41 percent of their optimal level. This means that INS inspectors must perform the work of 174 men and women. To put the problem in perspective, I point out that, last year, Maine’s 71 INS border staff inspected approximately 6.75 million people who passed through our land border ports of entry in 3 million passenger vehicles, 400,000 commercial trucks, and thousands of buses and trains.

Moreover, many of these inspections are far from routine. Since 1996, the Portland, ME district of the INS—which includes 14 land border points of entry in Vermont and one in New Hampshire—has confiscated over 2,500 fraudulent documents and apprehended hundreds of narcotics and alien smugglers, over 8,000 criminal aliens, and approximately 4,000 aliens who were the subject of lookouts by the INS and other agencies. Last year alone, the Portland district office apprehended 44 terrorists.

These figures underscore the critical need for additional land border inspectors to protect the integrity of our borders and the safety of those who currently man them. This latter point is perhaps best illustrated by the situation at the border port of entry in Coburn Gore, Maine. Coburn Gore should be staffed by 12 INS inspectors. Instead, it has two. Together with two Customs Service inspectors, they man the port of entry 24 hours per day, 7 days per week. Most of the time, Coburn Gore is manned by only one inspector. Think about that. A single inspector must not only keep traffic moving but must also decide when and whether to conduct a time-consuming secondary inspection when suspicion is raised. Not surprisingly, traffic some- times backs up to the Canadian border. And when assistance is needed, a call must be placed to the State Police barracks in Skowhegan, the nearest sheriff’s office in Farmington, the nearest Border Patrol office in Jackman, each of which is located at least an hour’s drive away.

The INS and Customs Service inspectors on our northern border work hard and long to protect our safety. It is disturbing to learn how often they encounter terrorists and other criminals attempting to gain entry into the United States. Yet it is comforting to know how often these criminals are apprehended before they can accomplish their goals.

As skilled and as vigilant as they are, our border inspectors need more help, and that is why I commend the Senator from New Hampshire and the Senator from South Carolina for their work. I strongly support the provisions in this bill that will put more inspectors where they are urgently needed on our borders.

Thank you, Mr. President.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered. The Senator from Nevada.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent the Senator from Michigan, Ms. Stabenow, be recognized as in morning business for 5 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nevada.

Ms. STABENOW. Mr. President, yesterday and this morning, one by one Members of the Senate came to the Chamber offering their thoughts on the events... that occurred on September 11. There were words of condolence to the terrorism victims and their families. There have been words of praise for firefighters and police officers, many of whom gave their lives attempting to help others.

There were words of anger and warning at the perpetrators of these terrorist attacks, and there were words of concern and outrage the United States is not doing enough to prevent and combat terrorism from rearing its ugly head on our shores.

During my own remarks, I noted that General Holland, the U.S. Air Force commander in chief of the Special Operations Command at MacDill Air Force Base in Florida, who directs our counterterrorism efforts on behalf of the U.S. military, does not have a direct civilian counterpart. I reiterate what I and several other of our colleagues said yesterday: We should have one.

I find it almost ironic, while the terrorists were attacking our innocent civilians and our democratic freedoms, we in the Chamber of democracy’s most deliberative body were considering a bill that takes a significant step to provide such a civilian counterpart to the military point person on counterterrorism.

This bill before the Senate today contains language to create the position of Deputy Attorney General for Combating Terrorism.

When I spoke this morning, I commended the two managers of this bill. Senator Hollings said he was glad to participate, but the original idea came from the Senator from New Hampshire. Mr. Gregg. The Deputy Attorney General for Combating Terrorism would not only oversee the counterterrorism activities within the Department of Justice but would also provide much needed leadership throughout the Federal Government for counterterrorism prevention, preparedness, crisis management, and consequence management.

This Deputy AG would be appointed by the President of the United States, confirmed by this Senate, and would have the authority and access to resources, coordinate, and oversee the full range of programs throughout the Federal Government to combat terrorism.

This Deputy Attorney General would also make recommendations to the Congress and the President for developing a strategy preventing, preparing, and responding to terrorism.

Moreover, this Attorney General would play the central role in reviewing the budgets of all the agencies and departments within the Federal Government to determine whether they are adequately funded to implement our national strategy against terrorism, and when General Holland or some other person who follows in his footsteps would want to talk to his civilian counterpart, he would have some place to go and not have to go to the FBI, the Department of Justice, the Immigration and Naturalization Service, or the Department of State: there would be one place for the military counterpart to go.

As Senator Gregg stated earlier today, this proposal may not and should not be the last word in how we respond to terrorism in this country and abroad.

Given the barbaric and uncivilized events of Tuesday, we need action on the part of this Congress and we need it now. We have a bill before us today that addresses many of our concerns. For the fourth or fifth time today, I commend Chairman Hollings and Senator Gregg for their leadership and their vision in including this language in this bill that was written well before the tragic events of Tuesday. I pledge my assistance to them in retaining this language as we move forward in the conference committee on this legislation.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Hampshire.

Mr. GREGG. I thank the Senator from Nevada for his generous comments about the efforts of Senator Hollings and myself in this area and his support of these initiatives in this bill to accomplish some focus on counterterrorism, although, as he mentioned, it is not going to change what happened in New York. It may appear to us too little too late. It is actually in anticipation of trying to get ready for the next round of what is clearly going to be a long and difficult struggle for our Nation. It is part of that effort. It is not as comprehensive, but it is an important element of it. I certainly thank him for his support as he is a significant leader within the Senate, and his support is welcome and will give this proposal a little bit more credibility.

I thank the Senator from Nevada.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from South Carolina.

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, I appreciate the cooperation and leadership of Senator Gregg and the leadership on both sides of the aisle in helping us with this finite list.

They said not to send up the matter of the conferences at this particular time, but that is the same list. The list, Mr. President, is agreed to on both sides and this list is already ruled. I only ask that some of these Senators come forward so we can debate and vote.

I want to confer with my ranking member to see what we can have brought up and what we can eliminate and bring this conference committee list because this one is pretty long.

I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.
September 13, 2001

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from Iowa. The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I want to address a moment on one of the issues we are going to be confronting both on our committees and I am sure in the Chambers of the House and the Senate in the not-too-distant future as a result of the tragic events of this week, and that is the issue of airline safety and what we can do in the future to prevent this tragedy from ever happening again or prevent any kind of hijacking of airliners in the future.

It occurred to me as I began thinking about this—and I have been a pilot all my life. I have flown since I have been about 20 years old, both as a military pilot and a civilian pilot. I have my commercial license. So having flown all those years, I am quite aware of the different steps that need to be taken to provide for aircraft security.

It occurred to me, while I was thinking about all of this, that over the last several years I have been to Israel on more than one occasion—two or three times—and with all of the terrorist activity that the Israelis have had to put up with over all these years, they have yet to lose an El Al airliner. Having gone through the procedure of flying on El Al as I have done in the past, I know they have a system in place in which you are very certain that no one is going to hijack that airplane. It seems to me we could learn a lot from how the Israelis have done that.

I am hopeful our Secretary of Transportation, Mr. Mineta, as he looks at this issue, will call upon our friends in Israel and those who run El Al airlines and international air service. Our luck was that whenever you go out of this country and you come back into this country and you go through immigration, you show them your passport. That immigration officer sits in the back of that little desk and swipes your passport through with your photograph and your numbers. They do it for everyone coming through. I am told they have a list of suspected terrorists, suspected criminals, those who have a record, and that list is readily accessible to what I am calling the front line—the INS, the Border Patrol, the flight engineers are in the cockpit, they lock the door and you cannot get in. You cannot kick it in. The only way to unlock it is from the other side. We do lock our doors on our planes in this country, but, quite frankly, they are not very secure doors. I believe that is another item we ought to look at in terms of making sure that no one can breach cabin security.

Last night, I spoke with Senator Stevens, both of us being pilots of old vintage. We were talking about the old days. We always had an IFF, identification friend or foe, we had a device, that identified a specific aircraft that would be blown up and it will not be hijacked. That photograph is matched with your ID and you pass, you have to show them a photo ID. But once you get the boarding pass, you can get on that plane. There is a breakdown there.

Every time I walk into a 7-Eleven store or up to an ATM machine to draw out money, a picture is taken. When you walk into a 7-Eleven store, there is a photograph taken of you in that store. There is a record kept of that. It seems to me a simple matter to put in place that when you walk up to get your ticket, a photograph is taken. That photograph is matched with your identification. When you go to board the airplane, they take your boarding pass and put it through the electronics, your picture pops up alongside the boarding pass so they know you are the exact person who bought that ticket.

It seems to me these are simple, technological means we can use to ensure those who buy tickets are the same people who get on the plane and make sure the baggage checked is yours. This method might sharply simplify the process of assuring that checked packaging being placed on a plane matches those that get on board that plane.

However, great a system is, redundancy is essential. So, we also need to think about increasing safety on the aircraft itself.

There has been talk of putting sky marshals on appropriate flights. I got a report from a friend of mine who is in the Navy. Larry Durbin retired as an airline captain from United Airlines. He faxed one sentence: Tom, why don’t you hire retired airline captains as sky marshals? I thought to myself, that might be a pretty good suggestion. We have a lot of retired airline captains and they do not have to do much more of flying. They might be interested in this type of occupation. I think that is something we ought to consider. Obviously, they know about flying; they know what it takes. I believe they could help us immensely.

I believe I told EL Al told our friends that they put solid doors in their airplane cabins. Once the pilot, the copilots, and the flight engineers are in the cockpit, they lock the door and you cannot get in. You cannot kick it in. The only way to unlock it is from the other side. We do lock our doors on our planes in this country, but, quite frankly, they are not very secure doors. I believe that is another item we ought to look at in terms of making sure that no one can breach cabin security.

In other words, these people got on and somehow they knew how to turn the transponder off. Once they did that, it was very hard to keep track of the airliner. But with an IFF system that identified a specific aircraft that would be on all the time, that could never happen again.

These are some of the things we are going to have to discuss on the Senate floor and in our committees. Many different measures we have been very lax about. We have been very lucky in this country, very lucky in our domestic and international air service. Our luck has run out. I think now is the time to take a hard look at all of the security measures we need to ensure airline passengers have the absolute assurance once they get on that airplane it will not be blown up and it will not be hijacked.

These are just some of the measures I have been thinking about that I am hopeful the Congress will take action on soon, in coordination with the Secretary of Transportation and the administration. Many improvements are already being implemented. But, other ideas need to be discussed and be implemented. These and perhaps whatever measures are advisable.

Some cases, our airlines now have the responsibility, we probably want to shift those important safety considerations to the Government.

Mr. HOLLINGS. I thank the distinguished Senator from Iowa for giving us a very cogent overview of our needs. It struck this Senator in a similar fashion. I don’t have the expert knowledge that the Senator from Iowa has as an active pilot. However, everyone should know, we immediately set up a hearing with the Secretary of Transportation. The first thing that was about back from the Rosh Hashanah holiday, Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday, we set it up for 9:30, on Thursday morning before the Commerce, Space, Science, and Technology Subcommittee where we have jurisdiction of the Federal Aviation Administration. Along with that, we have a bill from Senator Hutchison of Texas with respect to air marshals.

I have been at a news conference and one system was mentioned in detail, which I agree with. Otherwise, the only one you may have left out was a matter of professionalizing the scanners and screeners. The present system now is to leave it to the private airlines. They hire, at the minimum wage level, folks who are totally ill-equipped, not properly trained, and not professional, and they only stay on the job until they can get a paying job, so to speak.

I have mentioned that for several years because in Europe they are all government employees. Governments in the various countries will not allow it to be done except through those professionals. I think we can get that done, and any other suggestions that the distinguished Senator has, I appreciate his leadership on this score. We want to hear from him. The Senator is welcome to come to the hearing next week at 9:30 on Thursday morning.

Mr. HARKIN. I appreciate that. This is the chairman's jurisdiction and I know of his intense interest. I did not know about the hearing. I applaud the Senator for that and congratulate the Senator for moving aggressively in this area. I say to my friend, better training of those individuals doing the checking is on my list; I just didn't read it. I didn't want to take all afternoon.

Mr. HOLLINGS. That is what everyone suggested. Everyone realizes it is inadequate.

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. HARKIN. I might add that this ought to be a governmental function.

Mr. HOLLINGS. Those doors have to be solid metal doors.

Mr. HARKIN. I think it should be. It is in Europe.

Mr. HARKIN. So we could have them well trained and they know what they are looking for.

I share with my friend from South Carolina something that happened to me in August which gave me pause for concern, but you move on in life.

I was making something; I had to get a 2-inch tube. I got it in cardboard tube from a package store and put it in the tube and taped it over. I thought to myself, boy, am I going to have trouble when that goes through the x-ray machine, 32½ inches long, galvanized, heavy pipe, into which I drilled holes.

So I go through the x-ray machine and it went through. I set it there and thought, I have all my Senate ID and everything to show them I am a Senator and they can trust me. I could open it up and show them it is just a plain piece of pipe with some holes drilled in it.

It went through the x-ray machine and they didn't say anything, nothing. I could not believe it. I thought to myself, what if that had been filled with dynamite? What if it was not me and they just took it right on board with a fuse?

I thought to myself, something has to change. For something like that to go through an x-ray machine and they did not even pick it up, a pipe this long, that rough, and probably about a quarter inch thick—and they did not pick it up? It should have been changed many years ago.

Mr. HOLLINGS. The main thing is we have to secure that door immediately. You cannot use a domestic flight as a weapon of mass destruction. That has to be done in the next 3 weeks. We ought to get an FAA order out, not about the bags at the check-in, but I mean everybody ought to know they might go down themselves but they are not going to do like they did at the Pentagon or the World Trade Center.

Mr. HARKIN. Those doors have to be solid metal doors.

Mr. HOLLINGS. Locked from the inside, and with a rule not to open them on cross-country flights.

I just flew from Honolulu to Sydney, Australia, and I never saw those pilots come back once. The wind wasn't good; it was 11½ hours. So they can hold tight for 4 hours on a cross-country flight.

Mr. HARKIN. I thank the chairman for his diligence, moving forward rapidly on this matter. I look forward to the hearing. If my schedule permits, I would like to sit in on the hearing. I appreciate his offer.

Mr. HOLLINGS. I would appreciate if you would come, and I would appreciate if you will help this afternoon, getting rid of this other bill.

Mr. HARKIN. I will do what I can. I yield the floor.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I join with the Senator from South Carolina in hoping Senators who have amendments will bring them to the floor. The Senator from Iowa has mentioned one amendment. In the context of what happened in the last 2 days, the passage of this bill is obviously not an Earth-shattering event, but it is an important element getting our house in order, showing we are doing the business of the Government.

Ironically, a great deal of this bill is directed at assisting the FBI, which has a huge responsibility now, and assisting the Justice Department, which is really the lead agency in the present effort to track down the people who have committed this despicable act, and assisting the State Department, which has been under tremendous pressure. These agencies need to have the reassurance that we as a Senate are going to act and support them. I hope my colleague has commented about how this bill is structured and wish to amend it will bring those concerns to the floor.

In the short term, I know the Senator from South Carolina mentioned the opportunity to go to third reading. We do have a list of amendments. We wish to give those folks the opportunity to bring them forward. They have the right to bring them forward. But this bill is also important. This legislation needs to be passed. I hope people will come to the floor and make their amendments known.

I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, we now have a unanimous consent agreement that is in effect that limits amendments. We have spoken on this side of the aisle to a number of Senators. There are only a few who have given some indication that they want to offer amendments.

I say this with the full understanding that this has been cleared by the manager of the bill. There is going to come a time this afternoon when Senator HOLLINGS and the ranking member are going to move to third reading. The fact that they have amendments listed does not mean they can hold up this bill. If people want to offer these amendments, they have to come over here and offer them. Otherwise, the two Senators will move to third reading, and we will have final passage on the bill.

Is that a fair statement?

Mr. HOLLINGS. This is a fair statement. That should be represented to all Senators who have amendments and an interest in these proceedings.

Right to the point, on the other side of the aisle I think this is an important amendment by Senator HATCH and Senator Kyl. They will momentarily come to the floor. Other than that, we are all cleared on the other side as well. Within the next hour, I would be prepared to move to third reading, unless, of course, my colleague comes down and wants to offer his amendment.

I appreciate the Senator is doing. I give notice. Come on down and let us hear from you. We welcome you offering any amendment. But we have to...
CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—SENATE

September 13, 2001

get on because leaders on both sides have an important emergency authorization bill of $20 billion for the President, plus some other matters that the President wishes us to take up, plus an appointment or two. We are wasting valuable time by not moving along with an amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Hampshire.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I second what the Senator from South Carolina said. We are at a critical period in our Nation, and we are treading water. That is inappropriate. This bill has a lot of important elements which are very apropos and necessary for assisting agencies that are in the middle of the fight against terrorism today. We should move it. I agree with the statement by the Senator from South Carolina and the other members will offer their amendments. If not, I would support going to third reading.

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

AMENDMENT NO. 1558

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, I send to the desk a managers’ amendment. It has been gone over with the ranking member and the other side.

Let me yield on that score.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Hampshire.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, we have reviewed the managers’ amendment and support the managers’ amendment.

Mr. HOLLINGS. I urge its adoption.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the amendment.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from South Carolina (Mr. HOLLINGS), for himself and Mr. GREGG, proposed an amendment numbered 1558.

(The text of the amendment is printed in the RECORD under “Amendments Submitted.”)

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there further debate on the amendment?

If not, the question is on agreeing to amendment No. 1558.

The amendment (No. 1558) was agreed to.

Mr. HOLLINGS. I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. GREGG. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BOND. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BOND. Mr. President, I have been listed as potentially having an amendment today. I want to add to the subject. I discussed this at our bipartisan caucus luncheon today because this is one of the many serious aftermaths of the tragedy of September 11.

We have talked a great deal, as we should—properly so—about the tremendous search and rescue efforts that are going forward. We are going to move expeditiously to make sure we find those who may be alive, and today as we watch the news, we see very gratifying stories of people being found alive. As I have said before, a search and rescue unit is there from central Missouri where I live. They are working hard.

I also mentioned, in addition to the deaths, the damage, and the destruction that the terrorists have caused directly, they will be successful to the extent they are able to cripple this country psychologically or destroy our economy. We all have a responsibility to work with, to encourage, to respond to the needs of our citizens so they can move forward and not be paralyzed by fear so we can get this country working again.

We have a responsibility as well to make sure that our economy is not crippled.

The situation was brought to my attention today about the two airlines whose airliners were hijacked by these terrorists who are conducting their own form of war against the United States.

They captured airplanes and used helpless passengers as human bombs to destroy the two towers of the World Trade Center, to destroy a section of the Pentagon, and, with sorrow but without as great a damage, to down one plant.

Two of the airlines involved are major airline carriers, American Airlines and United Airlines. They have lost airplanes. More important, they have lost valued employees and their priceless cargo, the passengers.

At this point, the entire airline industry in America is facing a crisis. They have been grounded. Their expenses go on, but their revenues are not coming in. For all of these airlines, we must consider a number of ways to assist them, and we should work on that very quickly to make sure we do not lose airline service because if we were, as a result of this action, to see commercial airline traffic cut off in the United States, our economy would be crippled.

United Airlines and American Airlines face a very unusual circumstance where because their planes were involved, there is a potential for lawsuits by victims. If you believe you were killed, the crew that was killed, and potentially even the innocent victims on the ground, which we do not know the final total but we expect it is past the 4,000 mark, and we fear greatly that it may go significantly higher.

I look today to and pray for providing some means of keeping these airlines from being put out of business by the potential liability. It is not just the lawsuits that they might face in the future that could force these airlines out of business. The potential of the lawsuits has the likelihood of making it impossible for them to continue normal financing operations. In other words, if they were to go to a bank and say: We need to keep our cash flow intact so we have the cash to run our airlines, to purchase the jet fuel, to pay our employees, to buy the supplies, a bank might look at them and say: If you are exposed to lawsuits of wrongful death for untold thousands of people, we cannot lend you money. In which case one could easily see the end of these two great airlines, with the tremendous impact this would have on our economy, not just our traveling public but the entire economic structure that depends upon good airline service.

I raised the question of limiting liability at lunch today with a number of colleagues. One of the concerns that came back from them was, okay, who will compensate these unfortunate victims? We have talked with legislative counsel. We are working with the Congressional Research Service. We do not have ready the amendment I had hoped to be able to present to this bill, but the amendment we are considering would provide compensation for all of these victims under the Federal Tort Claims Act. That means the victims would be compensated in the appropriate manner to the extent that would establish the basis for compensation. It would mean the Federal Government would pay the claims. The important impact would be this would take that one potentially crippling liability off the financial balance sheets of the two airlines.

I am concerned if we do not do that, the airlines will not be able to secure normal financing or extraordinary financing that will now be required to get them back into the air to continue the service that is vital not only for those of us in the traveling public but for the entire economy which depends upon good commercial airline service, not only for passengers but for delivery of other commodities by mail.

We have heard stories about organ donations. Organs being transported for implantation purposes cannot be handled because there is no airline service. There are many aspects of this economy which depend very much on the effective continuation of airline service.

I ask my colleagues to join me in attempting to find a way where we can be fair and equitable to those innocent victims and their surviving families and still not cripple our economy.
As I said earlier this morning, the terrorists have struck a mortal blow against our fellow citizens, against Americans, against the buildings in New York but the Pentagon, and elsewhere. We must deny them a victory because what they really want to do is cripple us economically and psychologically. There will be many more steps we must take to make sure our economy is not crippled, and there will be concerns coming out of the financial community as well, which is where many firms have suffered great losses. But this particular concern is one where I ask the leaders and members of all committees involved to consider very carefully how we can expeditiously provide an alternative means for compensating the victims that does not put the future of two of our major airlines at risk.

This is not something we can talk about in the next couple of months and act on at the end of this year, the first of next year. This is a question which is imminent, which must be resolved within a matter of days, not even a matter of weeks.

I do not have an amendment at the desk, but I will ask that my name be removed from the rolls of those who proposed to offer an amendment so that the managers of the bill can go about passing this very important Commerce-Justice-State appropriations bill which has many other important elements. I invite the thoughts, the discussion, and the constructive suggestions of my colleagues.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has the right.

Mr. BOND. Mr. President, I thank the Chair and I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from South Carolina is recognized.

Mr. HOLLINGS. The first urge would be not to sue, not to respond, but in deference to one of the best Senators I have served with over my 34 years, I know the Senator from Missouri is genuine, he is sincere, and he is concerned about the economy and the future of these airlines.

I heard about this a little while ago. Let us have hearings. There is nothing to avoid that. We are going to have hearings, first of all, with respect to safety so we can get the airlines back up and running.

I am an old-time trial lawyer. With respect to any kind of claims, if there are indeed claims, they would not be filed for months. It appears to me as an act of war they might define some negligence, but that as it may, the FBI is going to do some of the best investigating for us.

That will take months. If you filed a summons and complaint in the next hour, you would not get to court before the end of this year, and if you waited until the end of next year, I can tell you you would not get to court before the end of this year, and if you waited until the end of next year, I can tell you you would not get to court before the end of this year, and if you waited until the end of next year, I can tell you you would not get to court before the end of this year, and if you waited until the end of next year, I can tell you you would not get to court before the end of this year, and if you waited until the end of next year, I can tell you you would not get to court before the end of this year.

As to compensation, we are going to have to get to that later in hearings. I do appreciate the Senator from Missouri raising this particular question and the fact that he will set it aside now so that we can move on this bill this afternoon. I yield the floor.

I suggest the absence of a quorum. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll. The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll. The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, as the chairman of the subcommittee and the manager of the appropriations bill, in September 1999 the Department of Justice sued the tobacco industry to recover federal costs associated with diseases caused by smoking. The suit alleges that the tobacco companies engaged in a campaign since 1953 to defraud and deceive the American public regarding the dangers of smoking disease and death, despite the fact that the companies were aware of these health effects.

This case continues to be pending before the courts. Last year, a U.S. District Court judge dismissed some counts of the lawsuit but upheld the government’s right to sue the tobacco industry under the Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act. That portion of the case is still pending. Discovery is underway, and the judge has set a trial date for the year 2003.

There were a number of press reports that indicated some uncertainty of the Department of Justice about this lawsuit. The Attorney General has indicated that he was going to personally review the lawsuit and determine whether or not to vigorously pursue it.

Just last week, the Acting Assistant Attorney General for the Civil Division at the Department of Justice testified before the Senate Judiciary Committee that the suit is proceeding as planned. I presided over that testimony.

I inquire of the chairman of the subcommittee, the manager of this important appropriations bill, whether it is his intent and understanding that amounts provided for the Department of Justice in this appropriations bill are available for conducting this lawsuit against the tobacco industry.

Mr. HOLLINGS. In response to the distinguished Senator, there is nothing specifically providing for funds. Actually the bill itself is silent.

Section 109, which was used by the previous administration to charge the various other Departments of the Government that would be compensated as a result of a successful lawsuit, is still in existence and is available to the Attorney General. I have discussed that with the Attorney General myself. There is a real difference with respect to my colleagues on the other side of the aisle. As the Senator from Illinois knows, we have had a couple of votes on this. In any event, we figured that that was a fact for the record. But I say affirmatively, section 109 and what was available to the previous administration is available to this administration to continue with the suit.

Mr. DURBIN. I thank the chairman on this important appropriations bill. So there is nothing in this appropriations bill which in any way inhibits the vigorous pursuit of this lawsuit?
Mr. HOLLINGS. There is nothing.
Mr. DURBIN. I thank the Senator and yield the floor and suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

AMENDMENT NO. 1559

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, I send a managers’ amendment to the desk, that has been checked on both sides, and ask for its consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the amendment.

The bill clerk read as follows:

The Senator from South Carolina [Mr. HOLLINGS], for himself and Mr. GREGG, proposes an amendment numbered 1559.

Mr. HOLLINGS. I ask unanimous consent reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 12, line 10, strike ‘‘an in effect on June 30, 2003.’’

On page 17, line 20, after the colon insert the following: ‘‘Provided further, That, of the amount appropriated under this heading, $37,000,000 shall be transferred to the Immigration Services and Infrastructure Improvements Account under section 204 of the Immigration Services and Infrastructure Improvements Act of 2000 (8 U.S.C. 1573), to be used for the same purposes for which funds in such account may be used and to remain available until expended:’’.

On page 24, strike lines 19, 20, and 21, and insert ‘‘$79,625,000 shall be for discretionary grants under the Edward Byrne Memorial State and Local Law Enforcement Assistance Programs, including $1,500,000 for the Standing Agenda Global Exploitation (SAGE) Project, Inc.’’.

On page 76, line 6, strike ‘‘$3,063,305,000’’ and insert ‘‘$3,061,665,000’’.

On page 25, after line 21 insert the following:

(d) $200,000 for the Attorney General to conduct a study and prepare a report to be submitted to the Subcommittee on Commerce, Justice and State Appropriation of the Senate and House of Representatives Appropriations Committees on the response of local law enforcement agencies to emergency calls involving domestic violence.

On page 115, after line 25, add the following:

SEC. 623. Clause (1) of section 621(5)(A) of the Communications Satellite Act of 1962 (47 U.S.C. 763(5)(A)) is amended by striking ‘‘on or about October 1, 2000,’’ and all that follows through the end and inserting ‘‘not later than December 31, 2001, except that the Commission may extend this deadline to not later than June 30, 2003.’’

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, I urge adoption of the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there further debate on the amendment?

If not, the question is on agreeing to amendment No. 1559.

The amendment (No. 1559) was agreed to.
Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that a vote occur on this amendment at 5:20 and that there be no amendments allowed on the bill prior to the 5:20 vote, and the time be divided between Senators HATCH and HARKIN during the approximately 25 minutes remaining.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I offer this amendment on behalf of myself and Senator HATCH of Utah, and other cosponsors are Senator REID and Senator LEAHY, chairman of the Judiciary Committee, and Senator FEINGOLD wanted to be added as cosponsors.

The entire Nation has been shocked and dismayed at what transpired earlier this week in New York and at the Pentagon in Northern Virginia and in Pennsylvania. These were attacks on the American values of liberty, diversity, and tolerance; the terrorists hate us for what we are and what we believe in. As we mourn our dead and pursue the attackers, we must strive to protect not only the American people, but also our American values.

I am truly saddened when I hear of malicious and sometimes criminal acts that have been committed all around the country in the last couple of days against Americans who may be from the Middle East, or whose ancestors may have been from the Middle East, who may be of Arabic dissent, or of the Islamic faith—but who had nothing at all to do with these attacks.

Arab Americans and American Muslims have faced a terrible rash of hate crimes each day since Tuesday morning:

On Wednesday, police turned back 300 people who tried to march on a mosque in Bridgeview, IL, a southwest Chicago suburb, waving American flags and shouting “U.S.A., U.S.A.”

I would like to read a quote from Governor Ryan of Illinois, who said:

“The terrorists who committed these horrible acts would like nothing better than to see us tear at the fiber of our democracy and to travel on the rights of other Americans.”

I think Governor Ryan had it right when he was responding to those marching on this mosque in a suburb of Chicago.

Up to six shots were fired at an Islamic center in Irvine, TX, a suburb of Dallas. A Molotov cocktail was tossed at an Arab American community center in Chicago.

In Huntington, NY, a drunk 75-year-old man tried to run over an American Pakistani woman in a parking lot, then followed her into a store and threatened to kill her for “destroying my country.”

Two bricks with notes were thrown through the window of an Islamic bookstore right here in Alexandria, a suburb of Washington, DC. One note addressed to “Arab murderers.” The other opened with an obscenity and said, “You come to this country and kill. You must die as well.”

Members of the Islamic community center in Sterling, VA, came to the center to find it drenched in blood for the victims of the terrorists acts. When they arrived, they found their hallway spray-painted with black letters, several feet tall, saying, ‘Die, pigs,’ and “Muslims burn forever.”

Other mosques and community centers have been vandalized, splattered with blood, and received hate messages, and more.

These acts are attacks both on Americans and on our American values of liberty, diversity, and tolerance. They are acts of hate, as Governor Ryan said, that tear at the fabric of American society. We cannot accept them or let them go unanswered.

It is especially ironic that these acts of hate have occurred despite strong Arab, Arab American, and American Muslim support for our country in the wake of the terrorist acts. Heads of state in Saudi Arabia, Egypt, Jordan, Kuwait, Pakistan, and other predominantly Muslim countries have strongly condemned the terrorist attacks and the senseless loss of innocent lives. American Muslims have lined up to give blood for those injured in the attacks, waiting in line for hours, along with so many other Americans. They are as saddened, sickened, and outraged at what happened as other Americans.

The terrorist attacks were heinous crimes, and we will bring to justice and hold those responsible, and those who aided or harbored them. But we must make sure that when we train our sights on the enemy, we do not harm innocent people in the crossfire. Again, I quote from Cardinal McCarrick, the Archbishop of Washington, speaking at a mass on Tuesday:

“We must resist the temptation to strike out in vengeance and revenge and, in a special way, not to label any ethnic group or community for this action, which certainly is just the work of a few madmen. We must seek the guilty and not strike out against the innocent, or we become like them who are without distinction.”

These outbursts of hate, this misplaced blame and labeling of an entire group, is not an inevitable response. When 168 people died in the bombing of the Federal building in Oklahoma City in 1995, some people immediately falsely assumed that terrorists had done it, and the same kind of vandalism and hate speech occurred. Later, when we found out that the main perpetrator was Timothy McVeigh, nobody said all Christians are to blame.

Not all Christian churches were attacked. No acts of hate against American Irish followed the bombing in Oklahoma City. We brought the perpetrator to justice, but we did not attack others simply because they may have looked like, or belonged to the same faith as, or had the same ethnic background as Timothy McVeigh.

We should not paint with a broad brush those who may look the same, or have the same ethnic background or religion, as those who perpetrated these heinous acts on Tuesday.

In Arabic, Islam means peace, and in the Koran it says:

“Whoever kills a soul unjustly, it will be written in his book of deeds as though he killed all humanity.”

Chapter 5, verse 32 of the Koran.

Those who are using the Islamic faith as some justification for the wholesale killing of innocent people are simply trying to cloak their murderous activities with the cloak of religion and the Islamic faith.

The Islamic faith is a religion of compassion and mercy, of tolerance and justice, and we should not paint those terrorists, those who kill innocent people, try to make the Islamic faith into something it is not.

This amendment that Senator HATCH and I and others have sent to the desk expresses the sense of the Senate condemning the vicious backlash against our Arab Americans and American Muslims. The resolution also affirms the important role that American Muslims have played in America and in our world culture, and affirms the American values of religious freedom, rule of law, and civil rights.

I hope this will be adopted unanimously as a strong statement of our enduring support for our constitutional framework of tolerance, civil rights, human rights, and diversity.

In this time of national trial, we must come together with resolution, determination, and unity. We cannot afford hate, divisiveness, or prejudice, or we become like the terrorists.

I urge all my colleagues, I urge all Americans to celebrate our diversity, to reaffirm the contributions and civil liberties of all Americans, including Arab Americans and American Muslims.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Mr. Johnson. The Senator from Utah.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I commend the distinguished Senator from Iowa for his work on this amendment. I am very pleased to join with him in this amendment. As a former chairman of the Judiciary Committee and the current ranking member, I commend him, the good senator from Iowa, for preparing an amendment that demonstrates America’s inherent principles of justice and fairness for Americans of all backgrounds.

American values require that we choose our enemies specifically and never do by ethnic or racial identities. That is just the way our country
The Middle East as well. Yet the incidents my distinguished friend from Iowa has recounted, of which I am aware, really indicate there are people out there who fail to recognize that there are wonderful Arab Americans and people of the Islamic faith who are just as patriotic and just as devoted to our country as anybody in this body, and there is little or no excuse for the kind of prejudice we have seen.

The purpose of this sense-of-the-Senate resolution is to have the Senate on record to let people know that we do not believe in prejudicial activities against any American citizen. All Americans should be free from discrimination, including Arab Americans and persons of the Islamic faith.

We all know decent, dedicated and patriotic people among the Arab-American and Muslim communities of this country. These people, in the finest tradition of the immigrant contribution to the American tapestry, have made and are making contributions in their communities and to our country.

We are important to this, it is for us to stand together against tyranny and prejudice. We all know that it is important for the Members of the Senate to be on record against these type of prejudicial activities.

We oppose terrorists, not ethnic groups. We oppose the people who have done these horrendous, horrific acts, not U.S. citizens who are devoted to our country and who are just as horrified as any other American.

We are going to do something about these terrorists. I believe that soon we will have sufficient identifications to be able to take very strong action against those who have committed these atrocities and against those who are harboring those who commit these types of atrocities. And the whole world, I believe, will be with us.

It would be a tragedy if we as Americans allow this to continue. It is important for all of us to embrace each other, to stand together against tyranny, to stand together against terrorism throughout this world, and some of the most vociferous antagonists of terrorism are Arab Americans and members of the Islamic faith.

I know that my fellow Americans are all outraged at the events of last Tuesday. No one has an edge on outrage. No one, it seems to me, is more pure than anybody else when it comes to this. But it is simply unacceptable, immoral and illegal to take it out on people who are honorable, decent U.S. citizens or on people who support us throughout the rest of the world and especially in the Middle East as well.

I commend my colleague for his initiative. He is doing the Senate and the country an important service. I consider it an honor to cosponsor this resolution with my dear friend, Senator HARKIN and I hope everybody will vote aye on this particular sense-of-the-Senate resolution.

Mr. President, I yield my remaining time to the distinguished Senator from Pennsylvania.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Pennsylvania.

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, I thank my distinguished colleague from Utah. I commend the Senator from Utah and the Senator from Iowa on their comments that there should be a clear-cut distinction between those who are responsible for terrorism and impugning any motives to any other Americans whatever may be their descent.

We are a nation of immigrants. My parents were both Native Americans. There are Native Americans, but by and large this is a country of immigrants and ethnicity. Making judgments about people should not be based on their descent.

When we talk about terrorism, we are talking about specific individuals who have committed specific acts subject to proof and not anyone else.

I have sought recognition principally to have a discussion with my distinguished colleague from Idaho about the International Criminal Court. There was an amendment accepted by voice vote earlier which prohibited the use of any funds for the Preparatory Commission of the International Criminal Court. The matter will have to be resolved in conference.

The House of Representatives has a different provision, and I want to discuss the matter briefly. I regret if I have caused any delay here.

Mr. HOLLINGS. If the distinguished Senator from Iowa wants for the yeas and nays his amendment. Can we do that?

Mr. SPECTER. The Senator from Iowa wants me to yield for that purpose?

Mr. HOLLINGS. And not lose the floor.

Mr. SPECTER. I do that for the Senator from Iowa.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Is there a sufficient second?

There appears to be a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. HOLLINGS. I thank the distinguished Senator.

Mr. SPECTER. I was about to say I regret if I have caused any delay, although I do not know that I have. I was in The Hague talking to Carla Del Ponte, the Prosecutor General of the International Criminal Court. There was a riot outside the U.S. Embassy in Honduras involving some individuals whom the United States wanted to extradite to the United States. Again, an example of what might have been handled by an international criminal court. As to hijackers and terrorists, the thought then was that countries might cede custody of these individuals to an international criminal court, whereas they would not give custody to the United States because of national sovereignty and issues of ideology. Since the mid-1980s when a lot of impetus was made for an international criminal court, of which Senator DODD and I were the principal co-sponsors on resolutions—which I shall not burden the Record with at this time because we are getting close to the time of a vote—the International Court has turned in a very different way with the War Crimes Tribunal. The War Crimes Tribunal has been effective in bringing home for those who were hijackers and others who were war criminals on charges of crimes against humanity, and there has also been a similar tribunal in Rwanda.

There has arisen a very difficult issue about the court asserting jurisdiction over U.S. military personnel and U.S. citizens based on what are essentially governmental decisions.

When I was in The Hague talking to the War Crimes Tribunal prosecutor Carla Del Ponte, I was surprised to hear from her that she had given consideration to a possible indictment of NATO Commander General Wesley Clarke at the urging of Russia and Yugoslavia. Carla Del Ponte considered possible prosecution of General Clarke for targeting civilians or for using unreasonable force because the targeting of military installations resulted in injury to civilians.

It seemed to me, and I said this to Carla Del Ponte, that the authority given to the prosecutor of the War Crimes Tribunal, or the prosecutor of an international criminal court, goes too far. Having had substantial experience as a district attorney, it should be determined whether indictment is going to be a fact question or a question of law, and that is the role of the prosecutor. This should be considered when indicting someone of the standing of General Clarke, who is carrying out governmental decisions by NATO. I thought his indictment hardly fit what we conceived generally to be the jurisdiction of an international criminal court.

It is my judgment the United States cannot be a party to an international criminal court which would consider an indictment illustratively of General Wesley Clarke. If the President takes action against terrorists under a resolution authorized by the U.S. Congress, who knows if that governmental decision is going to be subject to a prosecutor’s judgment? That action would be outside of the range of what is considered a criminal act or what is considered traditionally, as a crime against humanity.

All of this brings me to a concern that I have about the honorary nature of the amendment offered by the distinguished Senator from Idaho, which limits any funding to the Preparatory Commission. My view is the United States should participate in the Preparatory Commission in an effort to try to establish in the world community what makes sense and is consistent with our principles. If we do participate in the Preparatory Commission, I am sure that we can affect the ultimate jurisdiction of the International Criminal Court. If we participate, I have a sense that the United States will be able to structure an international criminal court targeted in a realistic way and involving traditional criminal concepts as opposed to governmental decisions. There is no doubt possible—there is a certainty, but a possibility—that the International Criminal Court can be so structured.

I am concerned that an international criminal court which does not have input from the United States will come into existence. Input from the U.S. could correct problems that may arise if the international criminal court seeks to exercise jurisdiction over Americans at a later date, even if we are not a member of the criminal court.

International criminal law has taken a very expansive turn in modern times through efforts to prosecute people such as former U.S. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger and former Chilean President General Augusto Pinochet, and with courts in other countries exercising previously unheard of jurisdiction.

It is my hope that in conference we can structure an arrangement where the funding is not denied to the U.S. Government so that it can participate in the Preparatory Commission. U.S. participation in this commission would allow this country to work out these issues so that American citizens and citizens of other countries will not be subject to runaway jurisdiction, and so that we will not have Secretary Kissinger subject to prosecution again. General Pinochet of Chile is another matter, but I would rather be inside the tent than outside it when trying to deal with these issues.

I yield to my distinguished colleague from Idaho.

Mr. CRAIG. I thank the Senator from Pennsylvania for yielding. I must say, in all respect to him, I have always appreciated the Senator’s legal mind and the way he works through very difficult processes, and it does not differ here.

He and I are extremely concerned about the very broad authority that appears to give new court if it becomes ratified. That is why early this week I moved to deny our participation in it.

It is arguable, by those to whom I have listened, that even a preparatory commission’s involvement is not going to allow us to change the jurisdiction as prescribed by the Rome Treaty. The Senator has every right to be concerned about this broadened authority and efforts internationally to go after some of our officials for their responsible actions based on our public policy.

The issue is that 30-some-odd nations have already ratified it. It takes 60 with or without our approval. It could become an operative court. It has an independent prosecutor who legitimately, by its actions, could go after anyone 18 years of age or older anywhere in the world. In other words, our sovereignty, our ability to protect our citizens, might only rest within our borders. It was not long ago that Henry Kissinger was in France and our Secretary of State had to intervene to protect him because a French judge was after him, trying to arrest him. This happened less than a few months ago. I think the Senator is right to be concerned at a time when our President is rallying internationally a coalition of nations to develop a strategy to go after international terrorism, that somehow down the road that President might be brought to account by an international body, even though he had the express permission of this Nation and our people to protect this Nation and our people, and would choose to do so in an extraterritorial way.

There are still some concerns. I do not know that our presence at the table can make the difference because it is my understanding we cannot change the basic premise or the intent of the Rome Treaty.

I yield to a colleague from Pennsylvania that I will work with him in conference. Clearly, this has to be defined in a way that does not allow an arbitrary approach. I am concerned our presence at the Preparatory Commission in some way gives to the world an idea that we might be subliminally endorsing this concept. It must be clear we do not.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. All time on the pending amendment has expired. The question is on agreeing to the amendment. The yeas and nays have been ordered. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. REID. I announce that the Senator from Connecticut (Mr. DODD) is necessarily absent.

Mr. NICKLES. I announce that the Senator from Ohio (Mr. VONNOVICH) is necessarily absent.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. REED). Are there any other Senators in the Chamber desiring to vote?

The result was announced—yeas 98, nays 0, as follows:

[Rollcall Vote No. 278 Leg.]

YEAS—98

Akaka        Durbin        Lugar
Allard       Edwards        McCain
Allen        Ensign        McConnel
Baucus       Enzi          Mikulski
Bayh         Feingold       Miller
Baynes       Feinstein       Murphy
Biden        Fitzgerald      Murray
Bingaman     Frist          Nelson (FL)
Bond          Graham         Nelson (NM)
Boxer         Gramm         Nickles
Brownback     Graniry       Reed
Bunning      Hagel          Reed
Burks        Harkin        Roberts
Byrd          Hatch          Rockefeller
Campbell     Helms          Santorum
Cantwell     Hollings       Sarbanes
Carnahan     Hutchinson     Schumer
Carper        Huston         Sessions
Chafee       Inhofe         Shelby
Cleland      Inouye         Smith (NH)
Clinton       Jeffords       Smith (OK)
Collins      Johnson         Somalia
Conrad        Kennedy       Specter
Corzine      Kerry          Stabeno
Craig         Kohl           Stevens
Crapo        Kyl            Thomas Daschle       Landrieu       Thompson
Daschle       Leahy          Torricelli
Dayton        Levin          Warner
DeWine        Lieberman      Webb
Domenici      Lincoln       Wellstone
Dorgan        Lott           Wyden

NOT VOTING—2

Dodd        Voinovich

The amendment (No. 1560) was agreed to.

Mr. HOLLINGs. Mr. President, we have been very patient and very understanding. I am ready for the amendment or amendments that the distinguished Senator from Arizona has. But it has to be forthcoming or we will just move to third reading. If they don’t want a vote for third reading, then we will move on to see the amendments and they are held up. It takes actually less time to work them out. So I am not all antsy that we have to be moving and voting every second. In fact, that is what we have been doing all afternoon. We have had a good afternoon working them out.

But when the Senator from Arizona has been put on notice, I understand that he is still trying to reconcile an amendment that some would agree to and then some would not agree to; and others are saying: Look, wait a minute. This is what is wrong with an appropriations bill; it covers the jurisdiction of several committees; it deserves to be heard before voted upon.

I do not know that the point of order would be made of legislation on an appropriations bill. But I say this publicly so everybody is on notice. I do not want to say that we just abruptly moved for it. I do not have to get third reading. I have other work to do.

I yield the distinguished Senator.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, I wonder if the Senator from South Carolina would yield for a question.

Mr. HOLLINGS. I am delighted to yield.

Mr. DORGAN. I share his sentiments in trying to move this bill and complete it. I wonder what would prevent us from going to third reading. Is there an objection to doing that?

Frankly, when a bill has been on the floor a long period of time, and people are on notice, it seems to me they have some responsibility to be here to offer amendments.

So I ask the Senator, what would prevent us from going to third reading at this point?

Mr. HOLLINGS. It would be the will of the Senate whether they want to continue or not. It would be an up-or-down vote. It would not be a unanimous consent.

Mr. DORGAN. If I might inquire further, obviously no one wants to short-change the opportunity of any Senator to offer any amendment at any point.

Mr. HOLLINGS. Good.

Mr. DORGAN. But there comes a time, it seems to me, that when, if you have an amendment, you have a responsibility to come and offer it, and let the Senate decide.

If there are those who have amendments, I hope they will come to this Chamber. I know the Senator from South Carolina and the Senator from New Hampshire have been in this Chamber literally begging for people to come and get these amendments to the floor.

Mr. HOLLINGS. And on this particular amendment, my understanding is that there are serious misgivings about the overall process. I believe there must take authorization, a tremendous authorization bill affecting the intelligence activities and the different departments and the different committees involved there. And the committee chairman, I understand, would not know whether two or three Senators who say they are going to oppose any amendment that involves legislation on an appropriations bill.

So I am saying this publicly so no one will think that I am presumptuous or truculent in any sense that I just cut somebody off. They are just cutting off the real work of the Senate because everybody is ready to vote on final passage of this measure.

I see the distinguished chairman of the Judiciary Committee is in the Chamber. Maybe he can enlighten us as to where we are headed and that we should wait. I will, along with the chairman of the Judiciary.

Mr. DORGAN. One final point, if I might, if the Senator from South Carolina will yield.

I would encourage the Senator to consider going to third reading on this bill, or at some point there needs to come a time when the Senate says it is time to go to third reading if people are not going to be here to offer amendments.

Mr. HOLLINGS. The distinguished Senator from Vermont, Mr. President, has been waiting patiently for 5 or 10 minutes to get this amendment on the floor. And then we will come back on to this bill. So I ask unanimous consent that he be recognized for 10 minutes.

Mr. REID. Will the Senator yield for a brief moment?

Mr. JEFFORDS. I am happy to yield.

Mr. REID. I say to my friend from South Carolina and my friend from New Hampshire, there are negotiations going on in the hall now. I have been told that within less than 10 minutes they will come in and report to the two managers of the bill as to what progress has been made. They feel confident they will have something to offer. So we shall see.

Mr. HOLLINGS. Good.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from Vermont is recognized.

(The remarks of Mr. JEFFORDS are printed in today's RECORD under "Morning Business.")

MODIFICATION TO AMENDMENT NO. 1559

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from South Carolina, Mr. HOLLINGS; Mr. President, I send a technical amendment to modify amendment No. 1559 to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the amendment is to be so modified.

The modification is as follows:

On page 24, line 19, strike "$83,125,000" and insert "$84,625,000."

On page 24, line 21, before the "", insert the following: "...of which $1,500,000 shall be for..."

Mr. HOLLINGS. I thank the distinguished Chair. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. REID. I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. DAYTON). Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, the Senator from Utah is going to offer an amendment on his behalf and others. I ask unanimous consent this amendment be the only first-degree amendment in order to this bill, of course, with appropriate second-degree amendments.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

AMENDMENT NO. 1562

(Purpose: To enhance the capability of the United States to deter, prevent, and thwart domestic and international acts of terrorism against United States nationals and interests)

Mr. HATCH. I send an amendment to the desk on behalf of Senators.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Utah [Mr. HATCH], for Mr. FEINSTEIN, for herself, Mr. HATCH, and Mr. KYL, proposes an amendment numbered 1562.

Mr. HATCH. I ask unanimous consent reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

(The text of the amendment is printed in today's RECORD under "Amendments Submitted and Proposed."

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I think we are all interested in moving forward to support this funding bill, and we broke through the barrier where this is the last pending amendment. We are also even more concerned that the Government have the right tools to hunt down and find the cowardly terrorists who wreaked such havoc 2 days ago. For this reason, I believe it is important to make available important tools to those investigating this and related matters. This amendment, in my opinion, is critical and should pass this evening.

I have been working with my colleagues, Senators FEINSTEIN, KYL, and SCHUMER, on a package of reforms that can aid these investigations. I will highlight a few of the provisions to this bill.

As the tragic events of this week have shown, one of the most essential tasks our Federal Government faces in the post-cold-war era is that of protecting our Nation and our citizens from the unprovoked acts of terrorism. In the aftermath of Tuesday's devastating attacks on the World Trade Center and the Pentagon, we, as law enforcement, must take the necessary steps to ensure, in addition to adequate financial resources, that the law enforcement community has the proper investigative tools at its disposal to track down the participants in this evil conspiracy and to bring them to justice.

One of the most effective investigative tools at the disposal of law enforcement agencies is the ability to go to a Federal judge and get wiretapping authority. It is critical in matters such as this. That is the ability to intercept oral or electronic conversations involving the subject of a criminal investigation. The legislative scheme that provides this authority, and at the same time protects the individual liberties of American citizens to be secure against unwarranted government surveillance, is referred to in the criminal code as Title III. Among the protections inherent in Title III is that only the investigations of certain criminal offenses, those judged to be sufficiently serious to warrant the use of this potent crime-fighting weapon, are eligible for wiretapping orders. The law lays out a number of crimes deemed by Congress to be serious enough to warrant allowing the FBI to intercept electronic and oral communications.

Title III currently allows interception of communications in connection with the investigation of such crimes as mail fraud, wire fraud, and the interstate transportation of stolen property.

Inexplicably, however, the Federal terrorism statutes are not currently included in Title III. I have been complaining about this for a long time and this is the time to correct it.

Let me repeat that, Title III currently allows interception of communications in connection with the investigation of such crimes as mail fraud, wire fraud, and the interstate transportation of stolen property—important issues.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will please suspend. The Senate will be in order. Senators will kindly take their conversations off the floor.

The Senator from Utah.

Mr. HATCH. It takes care of those crimes as mail fraud, wire fraud, and the interstate transportation of stolen property, however the Federal terrorism statutes are not currently included in Title III. As a result, Federal investigators are often hampered in the use of this powerful tool when investigating terrorist incidents. We have to remedy that, and we should not let a day go by without remedying it. We should not let a day go by without remedying it. We have to remedy that, and we should not let a day go by without remedying it. We should not let a day go by without remedying it. We have to remedy that, and we should not let a day go by without remedying it.

Second, cybercrime is one of the fastest growing areas of criminal activities. Terrorists, criminals, and hostile governments are using computers as tools to shatter communications and to target computer networks to perpetrate acts of terror that, until this week, would have been unimaginable on American soil. Millions of dollars are lost annually as a direct result of this criminal behavior, and it is no longer a fantasy that thousands of lives could be lost in future terrorist incidents.

The FBI is devoting an increasing share of its resources to combat cybercrime. It is up to us as lawmakers to ensure that, in addition to adequate resources, the FBI has the proper tools at its disposal to meet this new challenge.

Title III allows the Department of Justice to get to a Federal judge and get authority to intercept oral or electronic conversations in connection with the investigation of criminal activity. The law lists a number of crimes deemed by Congress as serious enough to warrant allowing the FBI to get wiretap authority. Themotivating factor is that cybercrime is a relatively recent development, the Federal cybercrime statute is not currently included in Title III. As a result, Federal investigators could not use this powerful tool when investigating cybercrime offenses.

Tuesday’s despicable attack on the World Trade Center and the Pentagon must serve as a wake-up call that we are vulnerable to attack in ways we have never imagined. A computer-based attack on our criminal justice infrastructure remains a very real possibility. I urge all my colleagues to agree to this amendment to provide our law enforcement authorities with the tools they need to effectively combat this new menace to the security of our society.

There are other important tools this amendment will provide, tools that those investigating the terrorist acts committed earlier this week will be using to get the facts in preparation for action in the future. We put up with an awful lot of mistaken arguments around here throughout all these years that made it very difficult to put human intelligence to work in the interests of the protection of our people, and it is inexusable, under these circumstances, to allow that to continue.

As you know, in some cases, when dealing with human intelligence assets, sometimes you have to deal with unsavory characters because they are the only ones who can get inside and help us assess the motivations of some of the people who are about to do terrorist acts. It is pretty pathetic that we cannot get our law enforcement people the ability to get wiretap authority against terrorists because they are not included in title III, unless there is some underlying criminal reason for doing so. We have to stop that. If we wait any longer, it seems to me, it is a big, big mistake, with the way people are afraid in this country, with what happened this week, and with the threat that continues to surround us throughout the world.

I have a lot more to say on this, but I think, if I can, I would like to yield the floor to my colleague from Arizona, if he cares to take the floor, and he can talk about further aspects of this bill. Let me be very clear about the intent of this legislation. This country has just suffered the worst terrorist attack in its history. All of us are focused on the victims. We are focused on the terrible devastation and the individual lives impacted. But, as policymakers, we have also been asked some hard questions by our constituents and talk about further aspects of this bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. KYL. Mr. President, it is my intention to be very brief, unless there is some objection to what we are doing, because I think all of us would like to get on with the adoption of this piece of legislation so we can conclude work on this bill. But just to ensure there is an adequate description of it, I would like to take a minute.

I also ask unanimous consent that Senators D EWINE, S ESSIONS, and THOMPSON be added as original cosponsors.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. KYL. I believe Senator SCHUMER will have some things to say in a moment. He may ask as well to be added.

Let me be very clear about the intent of this legislation. This country has just suffered the worst terrorist attack in its history. All of us are focused on the victims. We are focused on the terrible devastation and the individual lives impacted. But, as policymakers, we have also been asked some hard questions by our constituents and talk about further aspects of this bill.

As policymakers, we have to respond to that. We have such an opportunity. I use that word advisedly because in the course of our lives, what we do today, that word seems hardly appropriate. But we do have an opportunity, given the fact we are here doing business on behalf of the American people, and that part of that business is to ensure that the legislation that becomes the law of the Justice Department, the funding for that Justice Department, and the fact that the bill before us, in fact, even includes some revisions in the law with respect to the authority to deal with terrorism. It sets up a special new office in the Attorney General's office, a Deputy Assistant Attorney General, to deal specifically with terrorism, and in other ways deals with terrorism. Therefore, there is an ability for us today to focus on some additional improvements that can be made in our law to deal with terrorism.

I hasten to say that this is not "the answer" to the problem of terrorism. In the first place, I do not think there is a silver bullet. There is no single answer. We already know that there are a whole lot of things we are going to have to do to improve our ability to detect it, to predict it, to stop it, and to enforce whatever action is appropriate after the fact.

I am sure we will be creating commission reports relating to legislation. In fact, we are going to be passing an appropriations bill to begin to fund some of the cleanup of this in the very near future, I hope.

There are a lot of things that we have to do. One set of things experts in terrorism have been telling us for a long time and the Director of the FBI has been telling us has to do with a few changes in the law that make it easier for our law enforcement people to do their job.

I have a copy of just one of the three major commissions that have reported on terrorism. This is a report called "Countering the Changing Threat of International Terrorism," a report from the National Commission on Terrorism. This was chaired by former Ambassador Bremer and Maurice Sonnenberg, both of whom testified before the Terrorism Subcommittee of the Judiciary Committee, which I chaired at the time. In fact, all of these commissions have been the subject of hearings before our subcommittee, as well as numerous other hearings dealing with the subject.

In addition to that, we have had a lot of testimony from the Director of the FBI and other U.S. Government officials all imploring us to do some things to help in this battle against terrorism. We took a run at some of these things. In fact, we incorporated some of the provisions of these commission recommendations in the bill that passed the Senate a year and a half ago.

It is hard to put a percentage on it, but maybe half of the amendment before us tonight embodies those same recommendations. So we have already voted on a lot of the things that are in this amendment. Some of the others have come later.

The point is that we dealt with these issues. There has been legislation dealing with these issues. There have been numerous hearings about these issues. We were in effect lying on the table waiting for us to deal with them. Unfortunately, it is the case that even though from time to time we have put some of these ideas out, there has always been a reason not to do it, to wait, to defer, to hold off on that, and that we have been looking at this or whatever it might be. We have to set our priorities around here.

But those of us who sit on the terrorism committee—the Intelligence Committee and other committees of jurisdiction—have become increasingly restless because we keep getting briefed on the potential for terrorist threats, and we keep imploring our colleagues to please let us act on these things.

Finally, we have an event that is so horrendous and so deplorable that all of America is asking us to declare war on terrorism. Indeed, that should be our attitude, in effect. So we are now faced with a challenge from our congressional colleagues: What is the right thing to do? Of course, the first question they have been asking us is, What have you been doing about it? My answer is there are a whole lot of things you are going to see us doing that we need to do.

We can start tonight with a few substantive changes in the law that will make an impact on our ability to fight these crimes of terrorism. Some of this bill calls for analysis and reports about some additional things that we might want to do. It will give us the factual basis for acting in the future. Some of the provisions are actual operative provisions that will take effect the minute the President signs the bill to begin to give our law enforcement and intelligence agencies the tools they need to better fight these kinds of crimes.

The former chairman of the Judiciary Committee has just talked about a couple of these provisions—the so-called "spade, spade, spade." It is incredible our law enforcement agencies have to begin investigating crimes of terrorism under the auspices of looking into other crimes. Maybe there is computer fraud or credit card fraud and we will use that as we look to investigate crimes which are really crimes of terrorism. With this, we call a spade a spade, and say we are investigating terrorism. That is what we expect is the case. That gives us the legal authority to go to the judge and get the warrant or authority to move forward.

In addition, we have an odd thing which crept into our policy that we change. It made sense when it was applied to somebody else; but, and we are not going to recruit people to spy on other governments guilty of crimes or human rights abuses. That is a policy. I don't think we were thinking about terrorism because it is pretty clear that if you go after a spade a spade, and say we are investigating terrorism, you are addressing is the recruitment of those people cannot have in their background human rights abuses. They cannot have that kind of background.

That is a principle policy if you are recruiting somebody to spy on some other government. But when you are trying to infiltrate a terrorist organization, you are probably going to have to talk to people who themselves have pretty checkered backgrounds. If you could use those people—whatever their motivation; maybe they do it for money, or for some other reason—but if they are willing to give you information based upon their ability to find out what a terrorist organization is doing, then it is very valuable.

As the distinguished chairman knows, our ability to collect information on these groups is very limited. Almost everybody in the community talks about the need for better human intelligence. Unless we are able to recruit the kind of people who could provide that intelligence, it is going to be pretty difficult for us to get it.

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, the Senator has the right to make his whole speech, and I do not want to interfere with that. Unfortunately, because this is something that we have had no hearings on, we haven't had the discussions
There are a lot of other changes that we make in this amendment. Let me just illustrate the nature of the things we do. I think almost all of them are going to be straightforward. You go to a court, get an order based upon cause, and then you tap into the phone line. But with regard to computer attacks, whether it be a hacker—and even hackers can cause a lot of problems, but what you want to do, hopefully in real time, is trace the attack back to its source, so you can stop it or you can prosecute the perpetrators. And if it is a terrorist attack, you want to get to it immediately.

The problem is, these people are very clever. Someone, let’s say in Afghanistan, will electronically hook into somebody in New Delhi. And then through that computer they hook into somebody at the University of California in San Francisco. And through that computer they hook into AT&T in Chicago. And through that computer they hook into the Pentagon.

It is well known that you can do this. It is not apparently that difficult to do. Unfortunately, under the law, when the Pentagon starts getting hit, first you get a court order in Virginia. Then you go to Illinois and you get a court order there. Then you go to San Francisco and you get a court order there. And then you go to New Delhi. But I don’t know what you do in New Delhi. But the bottom line is, we need to have one place where you go get your court order, just like you do for a wiretap.

That is what the FBI Director, on numerous occasions, asked us to provide, the authority to be able to do that. I can quote you page after page of his testimony asking for this. I will not do that in the interest of time.

These are the kinds of things that law enforcement has asked us for. This is what we could do. And in comparison with the kind of terrorist attack we have just suffered. Clearly, there are a whole range of actions that we are going to need to take, but the benefit of it is they have all been the subject of hearings or reports by these commissions. They are clearly the kinds of steps that we need to begin to take. And we can do that tonight on a bill which clearly relates to the subject and at least begin the process of assuring American people that we are doing what we can do to stop these horrible events.

The PROVISION. The Senator from New Hampshire.

Mr. GREGG, Mr. President, I have been consulting with the chairman of the committee, and we are hopeful to get a vote on this amendment and a vote on final passage. We do intend, according to our leadership, to do that tonight.

In the interest of time, I was wondering if we could reach a time agreement on this amendment. Obviously, the proponents of the amendment have just spoken, by my estimate, for about a half an hour. I was wondering if we could reach a time agreement where anybody rising in opposition would be able to claim a half an hour, and then there would be a final 10 minutes which would be equally divided. We would have a vote on this amendment sometime around 8:45. I ask unanimous consent if people would agree to that.

Mr. LEAHY. I reserve the right to object; actually I will.
September 13, 2001

I say to my distinguished friend from New Hampshire, I would be delighted to discuss that. I am still reading this amendment. We have, for example, the requirement for full release of President. It sounds like a good idea for people who are.

Mr. GREGG. I ask the Senator, is there a time agreement the Senator would be comfortable with?

Mr. LEAHY. I will be happy to discuss it with him. I thought it might be a little easier if I could get some of the questions I have answered.

Mr. GREGG. I withdraw my request, then, and yield the floor.

Mr. LEAHY. There is——

Mr. GREGG. The Senator might want to seek recognition.

I yield the floor.

Mr. LEAHY. I wonder if the proponents of the legislation could tell me, how much—am I not going to say we should not do this, but we have professional liability insurance, as it looks to me, for several thousands of people.

Do we have any idea how much that would cost? Are we talking about $50 million, $100 million, $200 million? Can any of the proponents of the legislation tell me that?

Let’s say it is $200 million. We will just write that down. It is easy enough to say $200 million. We have something that has been put together in the last few minutes.

So we have a requirement, notwithstanding any other provision of law. In other words, notwithstanding whatever other limits are in here, we shall reimburse for professional liability insurance for what appears to be several thousands of people.

Heck, I would like to add to that maybe we could all get ours paid for at the same time. I know mine costs several hundred dollars a year.

This might be a fine thing, but if we ask the CIA and the Justice Department to do that, it has to come out of their budget. They are all strapped for money to spend on fighting terrorism and whatnot. Are they willing to take a $200 or $300 million cut from their budget? I just ask the question. I have not heard an answer.

Mr. HATCH. If the Senator will yield?

Mr. LEAHY. Of course. I yield without losing my right to the floor.

Mr. HATCH. I am not sure we know the exact amount, but what justification is there for these heroic law enforcement people who are doing the people’s business to have to pay for their own liability insurance in case they get sued by a voracious trial lawyer who would——

Mr. LEAHY. It seems to me the distinguished Senator from Utah misstated by what I said. I happen to be in favor of people who are going to be out there for our country getting their insurance paid for if they are in a situation where they do not come under the normal provisions that insulate them from suit.

I know millions of dollars were spent by people from all the investigations that the Congress and others had against government employees, investigations that resulted in nothing in the end, except for the millions of dollars these people paid out of their own pocket. Sure, I think they should have insurance for that. I just ask the question: How much? And will this money come out of their other budget? If it is going to be $200 million or $300 million, let’s have a line item for that. I will vote for such a line item.

In here it says, on wiretapping, pen registers, trap and trace devices, if the court finds that a State investigator or law enforcement officer—it could just as well be a local, if they certify to the court that the information is relevant, if they just came in and said: Your Honor, I certify this is going to be relevant; I am a State investigator; I am the deputy sheriff of East Washutub—I apologize to anybody if there is such a town, East Washutub. Let’s say I am a deputy sheriff on weekends and a mechanic the rest of the time, and I certify we need this, a State officer. Does that mean a Federal judge is going to stop things and give them the order?

I have worked with some very good deputy sheriffs in my time. I am not sure that even with the best—some of them were darned good when I was a prosecutor—any of them are going to go into Federal court and say: I want to certify I need this wiretap or this pen register, trap and trace.

I think we ought to at least know what that is, going into people’s computers. Maybe that will make us feel safer. Maybe. And maybe what the terrorists do is going to make us feel less safe. Maybe they have in-grown Big Brother in this country.

Does anybody want to tell me what that means? I thought we were here to give help to our law enforcement and not to insulate them from the terror acts of those insane people. I thought we were here to try to finish up a bill that the Senator from South Carolina and the Senator from New Hampshire have worked on very closely—and the Senator from West Virginia and the Senator from Alaska—that would give money to our law enforcement agencies so we could go ahead and work and try to get the money which the city of New York and the State of New York desperately need after the horrific, murders as terrorist acts in that city. I thought that was what we were here for.

I will not reread what I said, but to do something that nobody here on the floor can understand or explain, including the people who introduced the amendment.

Now maybe somewhere there is a press release in there. Why don’t we all send out a press release, a generic one that says we are against terrorists? No Member of the Senate is for terrorists. Why don’t we say we are against murder? Of course we are. But then why don’t we say what we are doing here? We are going to amend our wiretap laws so we can look into anybody’s computers.

If we are going to change all these things, if we are going to direct the Director of the CIA and, in effect, direct the President to change the rules of the CIA, something the President could have them do just like that, if the President really wants to—if we are going to do all that here, with no hearing, what does this do to help the men and women who were killed in the Pentagon—and their families? What does this do to help the men and women in New York and their families and those children who were orphans in an instant, a horrible instant? Hundreds, perhaps thousands, of children become orphans instantaneously. What does that do for them?

Somewhere we ought to ask ourselves: Do we totally ignore the normal way of doing things, if we are going to change the rules of the CIA, something the President could have them do just like that, if the President really wants to—if we are going to do all that here, with no hearing, what does this do to help the men and women who were killed in the Pentagon—and their families? What does this do to help the men and women in New York and their families and those children who were orphans in an instant, a horrible instant? Hundreds, perhaps thousands, of children become orphans instantaneously. What does that do for them?
Countering the Changing Threat of International Terrorism,” the report of the National Commission on Terrorism. By the way, every one of these principles in this amendment, the Justice Department wants to do it badly, so that they can do their job to protect American citizens.

This National Commission on Terrorism says, just to go back to the original point:

- By recent statute, a Federal agency must reimburse up to one-half of the cost of personal liability insurance to law enforcement officers and managers or supervisors.

Here is their recommendation, and it is not a bunch of obfuscation; it is pretty darn straight:

Recommendation: Congress should amend the statute to mandate full reimbursement of the cost of personal liability insurance for Federal Bureau of Investigation special agents and Central Intelligence Agency analysts in the field who are combating terrorism.

As I understand it, CIA officers do have this. So it is not something that hasn’t been considered or discussed by the top echelons of people who are knowledgeable about terrorism.

To get back to the provisions that we are considering, a lot of people in this country don’t realize that you cannot tap the lines of the terrorists without some predicate reason for doing so. They are not in Title III of our code. This corrects that. It doesn’t give law enforcement agents carte blanche to go out and do wiretaps. You still have to go to a judge. You still have to get the requisite authority. You have to present persuasive evidence to a judge to obtain wire-tapping authority.

But this is a tool that absolutely has to be had now, not a month or two from now. Let me go just a little bit further. This statute does not change the standard for tap and trace. It only adds emergency authority for the U.S. attorney. All trap and trace applications are approved by a Federal judge. You have to make your case before a federal judge. It isn’t some wild-eyed breach of personal privacy. It gives us some tools to go get the terrorists. Local sheriffs cannot apply for trap and trace under these new provisions. Only U.S. attorneys can. I get a little tired of that type of talk. I have heard the suggestion that anybody can go in, and anytime some local sheriff wants to, he can tap a computer. That is unmitigated bull.

Let’s talk about the computer situation. Currently, a judge’s order applies only in the jurisdiction where it is issued. So if people go from computer to computer, leaving a trail that law enforcement has to follow. Investigators must go from jurisdiction to jurisdiction obtaining a trap and trace in every jurisdiction in order to accomplish it. Usually those are in terms of a terrorist who happens to go in all 50 States. That means that, in order to investigate, law enforcement has to go in every State in the Union to a Federal judge and get authority to do what ought to be done overnight in front of a single federal judge. Under this amendment we are proposing, it can be done overnight by going to a single federal judge.

These are the kinds of things that bother me. This is what this amendment will do.

Mr. REID. Will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. HATCH. I will be happy to sit down soon because I know we are ready to vote soon.

The chairman of the Judiciary Committee suggested that a prosecutor could get a wiretap for anything they wanted under our amendment. With all due respect, under Title III, a prosecutor must still go to a judge, just as he or she would when investigating wire fraud or interstate transport of stolen property. If this amendment is passed, the only change would be that a prosecutor could get wiretapping authority with respect to a terrorism or cyberterrorism offense.

Is terrorism or cyberterrorism as important as that? Will a judge apply a different standard in issuing authority for those wiretaps? You and I know a Federal judge will not do that. I think the answer is obvious. Why should we do when we know that these tools will help? The FBI are the Justice Department strongly support for these important reforms. Let us adopt them now, and fight these problems now. We are not altering the Constitution or taking away the people’s rights. We are helping to give the tools to our law enforcement community to stop terrorism. We are helping law enforcement help us to be safe and to investigate the crimes like those committed this week.

There is a lot more I could say. I understand we are ready to vote. I wanted to set the record clear.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Vermont is recognized.

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, I will respond only because my name was mentioned in this last debate and the implication was made as to what my position was. Let me state my position to be accurate on the RECORD, I read this to say: If the court finds that the State investigative or law enforcement officer—obviously two entirely different things—has certified to the court that the information likely to be obtained by such installation is relevant to an ongoing criminal investigation, then the judge has much choice. We do it to fight terrorism on computers. How is a terrorist defined? We know what terrorism was at the trade towers. Is a terrorist somebody who comes in and says: I want to come in armed and make a statement, carrying a legally registered, licensed weapon and make a statement? Shall I have an easier time to carry my guns? Some people may feel terrorized. In my State, it would be routine. Is it terrorist activity if somebody blocks a contractor who wants to tear down trees and make a development? And have sent e-mails to their friends about this? Is that terrorist activity? It is easy to define terrorism. It says, however, if you come in from wherever and say you are the private investigator hired by the contractor, you say: Hey, I certify this, give me the order, and you get it. Fine, if that is what we want. I would be a little bit concerned about our own rights as Americans.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, I have one question I want to ask, perhaps, of my friend from Arizona.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Arizona.

Mr. LEVIN. I have not had a chance to read this language until tonight. I guess that is part of the problem. It also is clear this is going to be adopted. I want to ask one question for the record.

This amendment goes beyond changes in the wiretap law as it relates to terrorism; is that correct? The language is "any ongoing criminal investigation.

Mr. HATCH. That is correct. Mr. LEVIN. So it is broader than terrorism. I am not debating merits plus or minus. I am trying to understand what is in it since it came to me for the first time tonight. I want to be very clear, at least the way I read this that this is not something that is just limited to counterterrorism, about which I think all of us would have a passion.

Mr. HATCH. Will the Senator yield? Mr. LEVIN. Yes.

Mr. HATCH. The wiretapping provision is a broad investigational authority. It is not limited just to terrorism, but, currently, terrorism is not included in that authority. It is one of the defects in our system. All we are trying to do is get it included so we can find these people, and we can do it. Even so, before being granted wiretapping authority, you have to make a case, before a Federal judge, that you have probable cause to believe that the subject of the wire-tapping order has committed a serious criminal offense.

Mr. LEVIN. If my friend will yield further, I understand we want to make sure terrorism is included in our statutes.

Mr. HATCH. Right.

Mr. LEVIN. This amends, though, our statutes. I am not arguing the pros and cons. It just terminology. Has it amended the wiretap law and all criminal activity, including terrorism; is that correct?

Mr. HATCH. It adds terrorism to Title III. In addition, it upgrades wiretap laws to include computer terrorism, cyberterrorism, even right down to making statements. Mr. LEVIN. But it does not relate. Mr. HATCH. Because those offenses are not currently covered in Title III, and we need to correct that defect or we cannot verify these problems with regard to terrorism.

Mr. LEVIN. I tend to agree with our friends that we need to strengthen the law on that point. I want to be clear on one point: We are not adding terrorism to make sure we are covered. We are applying these new standards to all criminal activity, not just terrorism.

Mr. HATCH. That is correct, but keep in mind, our current laws are anachronistic laws based upon telephones, where now we are in the area of cyberterrorism, and we must upgrade the laws to take care of that.

Mr. LEVIN. I make one request of my good friend from Vermont, the chairman. I hope he has raised some important questions about making sure we take the time to know what we are doing. We are not going to have that time tonight. That is obvious. I express the hope, given the kind of points that have been made here, that it would be possible, before this comes back in the form of a conference report, for there to be some review of some of these provisions by the Judiciary Committee.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Vermont.

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, we will try our best. We are, of course, under the same limitation as everybody else trying to get a lot of work done. I had planned in the next week or so to do a number of judicial hearings. I suppose we can spend the time doing this. It probably would make some sense.

We do not define terrorism, but we say we are adding that. I guess some kid who is in his room on his computer could be a terrorist and you could go through the kid's house, his parents' business or anything else under this language; it is that broad.

Again, the Senate can vote for whatever it wants. I certainly hope we would put in, and I will support the money for the liability insurance. The problem, I suspect, is with several hundred million dollars. But if that is what we want, we should do it. Let us make sure we are getting the time for people to work on this during the next couple of weeks to try to answer the questions.

The Senator from Michigan asks a legitimate one. We will set aside virtual challenges of the Judiciary Committee to get an answer. Had I or our staff been asked about this, we probably could have had those answers, but I saw it about 30 minutes ago, about the same time the Senator from Michigan did.

I tell my friend from New Hampshire who asked a question earlier, I have no objection to voting any time the Senator from New Hampshire desires to vote.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nevada.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, we have had a very good debate on this amendment. We have had two people who feel very strongly about the issue explain very well their respective positions, and the chairman of the Judiciary Committee indicated he will hold further hearings on this. He is concerned about the way this amendment arrived.

The fact is, a lot of times legislation, as the Senator from Utah and the Senator from Vermont know better than I, they both having served here longer than I, sometimes ends up this way.

I hope we can get rid of this amendment at the earliest possible date. If it is my understanding the proponents of the amendment have agreed to accept a voice vote. It is clear this amendment will be agreed to. When this bill goes to conference, the two veteran legislators who are managing this bill will be able to deal with some of the problems that have been raised tonight.

Mr. HATCH. Will the Senator yield? I ask unanimous consent that Senator Helms be added as a cosponsor of the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If there is no further debate on the amendment, the question is on agreeing to amendment No. 1562.

The amendment (No. 1562) was agreed to.

Mr. HATCH. I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. STEVENS. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

SATELLITE HOME VIEWER IMPROVEMENT ACT

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, when Congress enacted the Satellite Home Viewer Improvement Act (SHVIA) in 1999, I well remember, as ranking member of the Judiciary Committee, that we amended the Copyright Act to authorize satellites to carry local channels into local markets. We knew at that time, however, that satellites would be unable to carry local TV stations on a must-carry basis.

To address this limitation, we did two things. First, we delayed implementation of a full must-carry obligation until January 1, 2002, so as to give the industry time to upgrade their satellites to handle more channels. I regret that the satellite industry has challenged the must-carry requirement on constitutional grounds, but also observe that a federal court recently threw out their lawsuit. Second we directed the FCC to make "final determinations" regarding license for alternative technologies that could deliver local channels on must-carry basis to markets that the satellites would not be able to serve.
I know my friend from New Hampshire shared my interest in this issue, as we both hail from states with television markets that are considered too small to receive local channels via satellite. Could my friend refresh for the record what last year's appropriations bill for the FCC had to say about this matter?

Mr. GREGG. I thank my friend from Vermont for raising this. As the Senator stated, the SHVIA gave the FCC 1 year from the date of enactment, or November 29, 2000, to make a final determination regarding licenses which had been filed at the FCC in January 1999. Thus, Congress effectively gave the FCC nearly two years to make a "thumbs-up-or-thumbs-down" decision on these applications.

As we were putting together last year's CJS appropriations bill, it became apparent to us that the FCC was not going to follow that statutory directive by acting on the license applications. Accordingly, we inserted report language into the conference report reiterating and clarifying the SHVIA directive. Specifically, we wrote that the FCC "shall take all actions necessary to complete the processing of applications for licenses."

When the November 29, 2000, deadline was reached, however, the FCC did not fully satisfy the directive. I would ask my good friend from Hawaii, who, as a senior member of the CJS Appropriations Subcommittee and as the Chairman of the Commerce Subcommittee on Communications, is uniquely qualified to share his expertise on this FCC matter.

Mr. INOUYE. I thank my friends from New Hampshire and Vermont for their interest in this issue. The satellite "local-into-local" problem is indeed a problem in our states, but we are far from a solution. A new watchdog group, Equal Airways Right Now!, or EARN, recently released a study which projected that DBS carriers will not carry any local TV stations in 17 states next January, when the must-carry obligation takes effect. Ten more states will find that less than a quarter of their stations are carried by DBS. All told, 80 percent of all television markets will not have any local TV service via satellite.

This is indeed a problem that the FCC should address as soon as possible. So I will concur with the sentiments of my colleagues and reiterate once again to the FCC that we expect the agency to make a determination on these long-pending license applications before the year is out.

Only one company has satisfied the statutory directive to demonstrate through independent testing that its terrestrial service will not cause harmful interference to DBS. Thus, on this ground alone, it would appear that the FCC cannot hold a spectrum auction, because, with only one qualified applicant, there can be no finding of mutual exclusivity. I'm also concerned about any further postponement of the deployment of this service that would deny consumers the immediate savings that would come about with the entry of a new competitor in the marketplace, which some have estimated will total $1 billion.

For all of these reasons, I think it is more than realistic for the FCC to issue licenses for this new service by the end of this year without resorting to an unnecessary and inappropriate auction.

I believe the ranking member of the Appropriations Committee would also like to add some comments. He is particularly well qualified on this as he is also a member of the Commerce Committee, which like the Judiciary Committee, had jurisdiction over the SHVIA.

Mr. STEVENS. I thank the gentleman from Hawaii. He and my colleagues from Vermont and New Hampshire have correctly recited the legislative history and I agree that the FCC did not fully satisfy either the SHVIA directive or the CJS clarifying directive. That said, I do want to commend the FCC for advancing the ball forward, so to speak, by establishing a Multi-channel Video Distribution and Data Service (MVDDS), after having concluded that it is technologically feasible for the terrestrial license applicants to share spectrum with satellite providers.

I would also remind my colleagues that last year's appropriations bill for the FCC also required applicants who applied to share spectrum with DBS operators, to pursue an independent testing, that their terrestrial systems can safely share spectrum with satellites. It is my understanding that only one applicant, Northpoint Technology, submitted its transmission equipment to the MITRE corporation for the required independent test. The MITRE report confirmed the FCC's earlier determination that terrestrial-satellite spectrum sharing is feasible.

The FCC's comment period for the independent test was statutorily limited to 30 days. The opponents of this new service could contest the findings forever, if we let them. We must insist that the FCC respect that deadline by promptly making a final determination on the Northpoint applications. It is time for the FCC to make good on the original statutory directive and, better late than never, finally issue the license. It has now been over 2 years since Northpoint filed its license applications, and we need the FCC to complete action on these applications now so that this new service can enter the marketplace in a matter of months, not years.

HYDRO PLANTS

Mr. SMITH of New Hampshire. Mr. President, I thank Senator GREGG and Senator HOLLINGS for their help. As Senator GREGG knows, American Tissue has closed its mills in Berlin and Gorham with only a few employees left to keep the hydroelectric dam running. These employees are not being paid. The mills have supported these communities for 150 years and are the largest employers in the north country. In addition to people being out of work, American Tissue owes the towns millions of dollars in back taxes and water bills. The EDA has visited the area and has seen first hand how desperate the situation is and I would like to encourage them to do whatever they can to provide these communities with additional help.

Mr. GREGG. I, too, have visited the region and they are truly in need of assistance. I would like to thank Senator SMITH for bringing this to the attention of the Administration and work with my colleague to ensure this area receives the necessary help.

Mr. HOLLINGS. The situation does indeed sound severe. Hopefully we can provide some assistance.

COASTAL SALMON FUNDING

Mr. SMITH of Oregon. Mr. President, I would like to clarify with my colleagues on the Appropriations Committee the disposition of certain funds earmarked by the Senate report language for the Commerce, Justice, and State, the Judiciary and related agencies appropriations bill for fiscal year 2002. This earmark, for $1 million within the Pacific Coastal Salmon Recovery Fund, addresses natural threats to the southern Oregon/northern California coho salmon in the Klamath River. I would like to clarify that since this earmark is out of the funds provided for the State of Oregon, these funds are to be spent within the State of Oregon.

I would like to encourage my colleagues that there are such overwhelming needs related to water quality and the Pacific Coastal Salmon Recovery Fund, addresses natural threats to the Klamath River system overall. Is that correct?

Mr. WYDEN. It certainly is. I believe it is imperative that, since these funds are allocated to the State of Oregon, they be spent for those type of activities within Oregon. These funds will be an important component of the near-term solutions that the Oregon delegation is trying to put together, literally as we speak, in order to assure more stability in the operation of the Federal Klamath Project.

Mr. HOLLINGS. I think that is certainly appropriate, and I have no problem agreeing to such a clarification, provided it is agreeable to my colleagues.

Mr. GREGG. That is agreeable to me as the ranking member on the Appropriations Subcommittee on Commerce.
September 13, 2001

Mr. SMITH. I appreciate that clarification on this issue of such importance to the State of Oregon.

MCKELENBURG COUNTY, NC

Mr. HELMS. I appreciate that it would be helpful if Senator EDWARDS and I can discuss, for the record, with the distinguished Chairman of the Commerce, Justice, State and the Judiciary Appropriations subcommittee, two matters of considerable importance to the citizens of Mecklenburg County, NC.

Mr. HOLLINGS. I will be delighted to discuss these matters with the distinguished Senators from North Carolina.

Mr. HELMS. I thank the able Senator. Mr. President, I would be remiss if I did not start by thanking the chairman and the ranking member, Senator Judd Gregg of New Hampshire, as well as their outstanding staffs, for all of their hard work in putting this bill together. I know that all involved have invested long hours and that you have made many difficult decisions. Senator EDWARDS and I are grateful for the support that is provided for several initiatives in North Carolina that are intended to improve public and officer safety.

In particular, I am grateful for the willingness of the committee to agree to our request for $500,000 to help equip the new Sex Offender Registration Unit at the Mecklenburg County Sheriff’s Office. Tragically, sex offenders are, at once, among the most difficult criminals to convict of their crimes and among the most likely to commit new offenses.

North Carolina law requires convicted sex offenders to register with local law enforcement and to notify the police of their change of address. The safety of the public in general, and the safety of our children in particular, is placed in jeopardy when a convicted sex offender fails to comply with N.C. registration laws. Statewide, approximately one in ten convicted sex offenders does fail to register.

North Carolina’s largest county in terms of population, it is perhaps not surprising that Mecklenburg is also the leader in the number of registered sex offenders. Over the past few years, there have been at least 15 separate instances where offenders that were required to register were later apprehended and convicted of subsequent charges of molestation or the rape of a minor child. Ever one such case is one too many.

The abhorrent nature of these crimes demands that we do everything we can to ensure that sex offenders are not able to victimize others when they return to our communities. This $500,000 will help the Mecklenburg County Sheriff’s Office to property identify, register, and consistent with North Carolina law, track these heinous offenders after their release from prison.

Mr. HOLLINGS. I thank the Senator from North Carolina for his remarks. He is correct about the high rate of recidivism among sexual offenders. We were delighted to be able to accommodate the request of the Senators from North Carolina.

Mr. HELMS. I thank the chairman. In addition to the $500,000 provided for the Sex Offender Registration Unit, there is one other matter involving the county that I would like to address. Senator EDWARDS and I combined our efforts in support of the county’s request for $3,000,000 from the COPS Technology Program for the Criminal Justice Information System. Upon receiving the committee’s report, we were pleased to note that the money requested for CJIS was included but we also noted that the reference to Mecklenburg as the intended recipient was inadvertently omitted. If the chairman would be so kind as to clarify the committee’s intent and to include these funds, then I would be most grateful.

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, I am glad to be able to address this matter. The committee was impressed by the fact that Mecklenburg County has already committed $5,500,000 to upgrade its criminal justice history information systems and intends that the $3,000,000 designated for CJIS be used by the county to assist in their ongoing efforts.

Mr. HELMS. I again thank the chairman and my good friend, Senator Judd Gregg, for their vital support on these projects. I would also like to recognize the efforts of Senator EDWARDS and his staff who worked diligently to promote these initiatives.

Mr. EDWARDS. Mr. President, one of the greatest challenges facing the criminal justice system is the question of how we ensure that convicted criminals do not repeat their crimes when they are released from prison. In my State of North Carolina, there are State laws that attempt to address this issue in order to make our communities safer places to live and work. These laws require sex offenders to register with law enforcement whenever they move into a new county in the State, and require law enforcement agencies to locate and arrest sex offenders who fail to comply with any part of the registration laws. The establishment of a Sex Offender Registration Unit at the Mecklenburg County Sheriff’s Office will enable the Sheriff to better track of offenders that move into the County, and to identify sex offenders who do not comply with registration laws. Funding for the Unit is critical toward ensuring that the State’s laws can be enforced to keep our communities safe from individuals who intend to repeat their crimes and prey on some of the most vulnerable members of our society—our children. I greatly appreciate the support of Senators HOLLINGS and Gregg for this important project.

Also, as my distinguished colleagues indicated, the committee report appropriated $3 million for the Mecklenburg County Criminal Justice Information System. The demands of modern, large, urban law enforcement systems, such as Mecklenburg County’s, are numerous. That is why the CJIS project is so important. CJIS will help local law enforcement agencies and court services to manage and compile information about their cases and to share electronically maintained subject and case data in real time. The end result will mean increased efficiency and effectiveness of the criminal justice system in Mecklenburg County and the surrounding region.

Again, I thank Senators HOLLINGS and Gregg for their generous support of these projects. I also thank Senator HELMS for his tireless efforts on these and the many other appropriations projects that we have worked so closely on together.

Mr. HOLLINGS. I understand that Missouri is waging quite a battle against Methamphetamines.

Mrs. CARNAHAN. The Senator from South Carolina is correct. The rural nature of Missouri and its location in the middle of the country have led to a sharp increase in methamphetamine production and trafficking. In fact, I am sorry to say that Missouri now ranks second in the nation in clandestine meth lab seizures.

Mr. HOLLINGS. In order to combat that problem, we are including $1,100,000 in Fiscal Year 2002 funding for the Missouri Drug Eradication Initiative.

Mrs. CARNAHAN. Those funds will go a long way to enabling Missouri’s hard-working law enforcement officers to combat this epidemic. I would like to spell out exactly how these funds will be distributed in order to maximize their effectiveness.

$130,000 will go to the Southeast Missouri Narcotics Task Force to implement a coordinated, cooperative enforcement effort to reduce, disrupt, and dismantle the narcotics trade in a four county area.

$10,000 will be for the Joplin Crime Lab for new equipment and staff salaries to analyze and assist law enforcement in fighting methamphetamine and other illegal drugs.

$10,000 will provide the Southeast Missouri State University Crime Lab in Cape Girardeau with funding to upgrade equipment and staff salaries to analyze and assist law enforcement agencies and court services to manage and compile information about their cases and to share electronically maintained subject and case data in real time.
enforcement in fighting methamphetamine and other illegal drugs.

$110,000 will help the North Central Missouri Drug Task Force to implement a coordinated, cooperative enforcement effort to reduce, disrupt, and dismantle the narcotics trade in a seven county area.

$100,000 will support the West Central Missouri Drug Task Force’s mission to combat meth drug interdiction within a nine county area.

$145,000 will go to the Combined Ozarks Multi-jurisdictional Enforcement Team (COMET) to aggressively investigate and seek reduction of drug violations that occur within the area.

The Mid-MO Unified Strike Team and Narcotics Group—MUSTANG—will receive $100,000 to support its efforts to combat meth and other illegal drugs.

The South Central MO Drug Task Force report was silent on this point. There was never any intention of zeroing out the new Alaska Center. We will work with the Senator from Alaska to include language clarifying this issue in the statement of managers when we meet in conference with the House to work out the differences between the two versions of the bill.

WASHINGTON STATE METHAMPHETAMINE PROGRAM

Mrs. MURRAY. Mr. President, methamphetamine production and use has had a devastating effect on many communities across our country, and tackling this problem has been very challenging to law enforcement.

Meth has a particularly large impact on my state. The number two in the nation in meth production and use. Last year, local law enforcement raid five times the number of meth labs than they did the year before in Washington.

The impact on our health and the environment are extensive. The byproducts of meth production are highly toxic and hazardous and pose serious threats to the public at large. Meth is produced with toxic chemicals and generates dangerous byproducts. Because manufacturing can take place in the basements of homes and other populated areas, innocent neighbors are often placed in danger by meth production. There are serious safety issues due to the risk of fire and explosion associated with the chemicals involved. Furthermore, the toxins that are used and discarded as a part of meth production have serious and long term impacts on the environment, and the clean-up cost are substantial.

The use of this drug can also have a severe impact on families and children. People who use and make meth put children and their families at risk of hazardous contamination and often live in unsanitary conditions. Meth users also tend to emotionally and physically abuse those around them.

With that, I yield to my colleague from Washington, a member of the Judiciary Committee, Senator CANTWELL.

Ms. CANTWELL. I thank Chairman HOLLINGS and my colleague, Senator MURRAY, for their tremendous work on this bill. I am particularly grateful to the Chairman for his clear understanding of the complicated law enforcement and natural resource issues facing the western states and wish to thank him for his attention to those matters in this bill.

I believe that we are facing an epidemic in this nation that has the potential to be every bit as devastating as the crack cocaine epidemic of the early 1990s. That epidemic was the rapidly spreading abuse of the drug methamphetamine. Unlike crack cocaine, meth will not devastate our inner cities—it will instead primarily devastate our rural communities.

I am sure that the Chairman is aware that rural areas are uniquely hospitable to meth production, and the paranoid users of meth seek out rural areas because they know that our law enforcement officers are spread thin, and that they lack the manpower and the resources to constantly find and destroy new labs. A study by the National Center for Addiction and Substance Abuse at Columbia found that eighth graders living in rural America are 104 percent more likely to use amphetamines than eighth graders in urban areas.

This is the reason that we are intent on ensuring that local law enforcement agencies have as much assistance as possible in fighting the further spread of the drug. I hope that the Chairman and the members of the Subcommittee can work closely with those of us on the Judiciary Committee as we work to assess the local need for federal resources in the months to come. Again, I thank the Chairman and yield back to my colleague from Washington.

Mrs. MURRAY. The Commerce, Justice, State and Judiciary Appropriations Subcommittee, of which Senator HOLLINGS is Chairman and I am a member, has responded to this problem by providing resources to combat methamphetamine production and use. In this year’s bill, we have provided a good number of resources to provide money under the Community Oriented Policing Services Program to help local communities and law enforcement combat meth production and use. In this year’s bill, we have provided an earmark for the Washington State Methamphetamine Program.

Is it the intent of the Appropriations Committee that the money provided for the Washington State Methamphetamine Program be spread among the participating counties in Washington State, which include the counties of King, Benton, Snohomish, Kitsap, Spokane, Thurston, Pierce, Lewis, Grays Harbor, Mason, Cowlitz, Clark, Grant, Chelan and Yakima?

Mr. HOLLINGS. The Committee has long recognized the problems associated with the use and production of Methamphetamines, and we have provided real money to help local communities combat this problem. It is the intent of this Committee that the money provided under the Washington State Methamphetamine Program be spread among the counties that you have identified. I do look forward to continuing to work with the Senators from Washington on this issue in the future.
PACIFIC COASTAL SALMON RECOVERY FUND

Mrs. MURRAY. Mr. President, I ask Senator HOLLINGS, am I correct in my understanding that the Manager’s Amendment to the Department of Commerce, Justice, and State, the Judiciary, and Related Agencies Appropriations bill for Fiscal Year 2002 includes an additional $1,000,000 for Washington State’s share under the Pacific Coastal Salmon Recovery Fund, raising the total for Washington State to $24,150,000 and the total for this account to $74,000,000?

Mr. HOLLINGS. The Senator from Washington State is correct.

Mrs. MURRAY. I thank the Senator. I appreciate his assistance in this matter.

COASTAL PROTECTION AND RESTORATION PROJECTS

Ms. LANDENBERGER. It is my understanding that the $31 million provided for “Coastal Protection and Restoration Project” in the National Ocean Service Account of the Senate Committee Report of the Commerce, Justice, State Appropriations Bill for fiscal year 2002, $15 million is to be provided to the State of Alabama for coastal impact assistance. This funding is to be allocated to and used by the States of Alabama and Louisiana in accordance with the coastal impact assistance program authorized in the Commerce, Justice, State Appropriations Bill, fiscal year 2001.

Mr. HOLLINGS. The Senator from Louisiana is correct.

OREGON GROUNDFISH

Mr. WYDEN. Mr. President, I thank my colleague, Chairman HOLLINGS, for accepting the amendment I sponsored to provide funding to aid Oregon groundfish fishers and their families. I also want to thank Chairman HOLLINGS for providing me the opportunity to clarify, for the record, how the money provided by this amendment should be spent.

This amendment provides $2,000,000 in additional National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration funds for Cooperative Research on West Coast groundfish. It also provides $3,000,000 in additional NOAA funds for emergency assistance for the Oregon groundfish fishers suffering from the groundfish fishery disaster resulting in more than a 40 percent drop in income since 1995.

The $2,000,000 for cooperative research surveys will be used by the National Marine Fisheries Service to put currently out-of-work groundfish fishing vessel owners in touch with potential new groundfish surveys in Oregon, as well as to provide work for displaced Oregon groundfish fishers. I further understand that the economic assistance money is intended for vessel owners to tide them over these difficult times. I appreciate the Senator bringing this important issue to light and I am happy to have been able to help his constituents on this important issue.

NEW TECHNOLOGY TO AID FBI’S INNOCENT IMAGES INITIATIVE

Mr. GREGG. As the distinguished Chairman of the State, Justice, Commerce Appropriations Subcommittee knows, we have provided substantial funds for Cooperative Research on West Coast groundfish. It also provides $3,000,000 in additional NOAA funds for emergency assistance for the Oregon groundfish fishers suffering from the groundfish fishery disaster resulting in more than a 40 percent drop in income since 1995. The $2,000,000 for cooperative research surveys will be used by the National Marine Fisheries Service to put currently out-of-work groundfish fishing vessel owners in touch with potential new groundfish surveys in Oregon, as well as to provide work for displaced Oregon groundfish fishers. I further understand that the economic assistance money is intended for vessel owners to tide them over these difficult times. I appreciate the Senator bringing this important issue to light and I am happy to have been able to help his constituents on this important issue.

NEW TECHNOLOGY TO AID FBI’S INNOCENT IMAGES INITIATIVE

Mr. GREGG. As the distinguished Chairman of the State, Justice, Commerce Appropriations Subcommittee knows, we have provided substantial funds for Cooperative Research on West Coast groundfish. It also provides $3,000,000 in additional NOAA funds for emergency assistance for the Oregon groundfish fishers suffering from the groundfish fishery disaster resulting in more than a 40 percent drop in income since 1995. The $2,000,000 for cooperative research surveys will be used by the National Marine Fisheries Service to put currently out-of-work groundfish fishing vessel owners in touch with potential new groundfish surveys in Oregon, as well as to provide work for displaced Oregon groundfish fishers. I further understand that the economic assistance money is intended for vessel owners to tide them over these difficult times. I appreciate the Senator bringing this important issue to light and I am happy to have been able to help his constituents on this important issue.

NEW TECHNOLOGY TO AID FBI’S INNOCENT IMAGES INITIATIVE

Mr. GREGG. As the distinguished Chairman of the State, Justice, Commerce Appropriations Subcommittee knows, we have provided substantial funds for Cooperative Research on West Coast groundfish. It also provides $3,000,000 in additional NOAA funds for emergency assistance for the Oregon groundfish fishers suffering from the groundfish fishery disaster resulting in more than a 40 percent drop in income since 1995. The $2,000,000 for cooperative research surveys will be used by the National Marine Fisheries Service to put currently out-of-work groundfish fishing vessel owners in touch with potential new groundfish surveys in Oregon, as well as to provide work for displaced Oregon groundfish fishers. I further understand that the economic assistance money is intended for vessel owners to tide them over these difficult times. I appreciate the Senator bringing this important issue to light and I am happy to have been able to help his constituents on this important issue.

NEW TECHNOLOGY TO AID FBI’S INNOCENT IMAGES INITIATIVE

Mr. GREGG. As the distinguished Chairman of the State, Justice, Commerce Appropriations Subcommittee knows, we have provided substantial funds for Cooperative Research on West Coast groundfish. It also provides $3,000,000 in additional NOAA funds for emergency assistance for the Oregon groundfish fishers suffering from the groundfish fishery disaster resulting in more than a 40 percent drop in income since 1995. The $2,000,000 for cooperative research surveys will be used by the National Marine Fisheries Service to put currently out-of-work groundfish fishing vessel owners in touch with potential new groundfish surveys in Oregon, as well as to provide work for displaced Oregon groundfish fishers. I further understand that the economic assistance money is intended for vessel owners to tide them over these difficult times. I appreciate the Senator bringing this important issue to light and I am happy to have been able to help his constituents on this important issue.
I understand that the area serviced by the Fort Smith INS office has experienced tremendous growth in its Hispanic population and needs this designation in order to efficiently administer and enforce our nation’s immigration laws.

Mr. HUTCHINSON. That’s absolutely correct. As you know, according to the 2000 Census, Arkansas’ Hispanic population grew by 337 percent over the course of the past decade, a rate of growth which is believed to be the fastest in the nation. In the Third Congressional District, where the Fort Smith office is located, Hispanics now comprise 5.7 percent of the total population. This phenomenal growth is shown even more poignantly when one considers that the Northwest Arkansas county which is home to the University of Arkansas, Washington County, experienced a 629 percent increase in its Hispanic population. Needless to say, this influx of new immigrants is putting a significant strain on the provision of basic immigration services.

Mr. GREGG. Can you give me an example of how a Sub-office designation would reduce that strain?

Mr. HUTCHINSON. Currently, the staff of the Fort Smith office are processing a significantly greater number of cases than was originally planned and doing so without a corresponding increase in staff. Thus, it is common for a person’s work permit or travel document to be unnecessarily delayed due to the fact that the Fort Smith office simply does not have the resources necessary to locally process the application. A Sub-office designation, and the Officer-in-Charge that would accompany it, would allow the Fort Smith office to administer oaths of naturalization, authorize arrest warrants, issue intentions to fine, and process less restrictive immigration matters.

Mr. HOLLINGS. I appreciate your bringing this matter to our attention and we will look into this situation in conference.

FY02 SCAAP FUNDING

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. Mr. President, I rise with a number of my colleagues and the Chairman of the Commerce, Justice, State Subcommittee, the Senator from South Carolina, to discuss funding for the State Criminal Alien Assistance Program, popularly known as SCAAP.

As the Senator knows, States and localities across the nation, especially those with high immigration populations, face extraordinary costs associated with incarcerating criminal aliens.

The burden continues to grow, for high impact States like California, for example. In February 1997, there were 17,904 undocumented felons in the California prison system. The Immigration and Naturalization Service holds. By the end of February 2001, there were 20,937 illegal alien inmates in the system with INS holds. California taxpayers can expect to spend $571.2 million this year to cover these costs.

Over the past few years, the SCAAP program has reimbursed roughly 33 percent of the costs incurred by State and local governments. Since 1997, the authorization level for SCAAP has been $650 million. Funding for the program peaked at $685 million in FY 1999, and dropped to $565 million in FY 2000.

Given the rising costs associated with criminal alien incarceration, the legislation my colleagues and I had hoped that Congress would see fit to fully fund this important program at the authorized level of $650 million.

I am concerned that the bill reported by the committee makes dramatic cuts in federal funding for SCAAP, reducing the level of funding by 33 percent to only $265 million.

Given the urgency of the need and the fact that all 50 States, the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico and more than 360 localities received SCAAP funding in the most recent reimbursement period, I would like to inquire of my friend from South Carolina if there is something that can be done to increase funding for this bill for SCAAP to a more appropriate level.

Mr. KYL. Mr. President, I wish to associate myself with the remarks my good friend, the Senator from California, and also look forward to working with the Chairman and Ranking Member of the subcommittee to resolve the funding disparity in the State Criminal Alien Assistance Program (SCAAP).

Before I begin my comments about this important program and the level of funding in the Senate Commerce-Justice-State Appropriations bill, I want to state my full support for the $565 million that was appropriated for SCAAP in the House FY 2002 bill. Through the Crime Control Act of 1994, the Congress created SCAAP to reimburse states and localities for the costs they incur incarcerating criminal illegal aliens. Such costs, it has been made clear, are the responsibility of the federal government. SCAAP has been authorized at $650 million, although total expenditures of the states and localities exceed $1.6 billion per year. Though the financial burden to process and incarcerate criminal illegal aliens overwhelms the budgets of many states and localities, SCAAP has never been allocated its full authorization. Over the past five years, SCAAP has usually been funded at $565 million and $600 million, which has provided states and localities reimbursement of about 30 cents for each dollar spent on incarceration.

The Congress would be doing the right thing if it allocated $1.6 billion. In FY 2001, the State of Arizona and its localities incurred costs of well over $30 million to incarcerate criminal illegali-
When the Federal government fails in its responsibility to control our nation’s borders, local taxpay ers should not have to foot the bill for incarcerating criminal aliens in State and local jails.

I will work closely with my colleagues in both bodies during the weeks to come to insure that this bill adequately funds SCAAP.

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, obviously the highest priority as a nation is addressing every aspect of the terrorist attacks that took place in our country earlier this week. That is now and should be in the foreseeable future our primary concern as a Senate, a Congress and as a county. Part of responding to that concern includes demonstrating to ourselves and the world that we can carry on the very important business of our country. That business includes election reform.

I now address the issue that will become increasingly important as our Nation and our deliberations in Congress return to normal. This is the issue of funding for election reform. I appreciate this opportunity to include an amendment as part of the managers’ amendment to H.R. 2500 (S. 1215). This bill contains appropriations for the Department of Commerce, Justice, and State, the Judiciary, and related agencies for the fiscal year 2002. My amendment provides a $2 million placeholder for election reform in fiscal year 2002. These Federal dollars would be used to fund a Federal grant program administered by the Department of Justice to States and localities for election reform improvements nationwide.

The amendment that I have crafted is identical to the provision inserted in S. 1398, the Treasury-Postal appropriations bill. The Committee on Appropriations has created a $2 million placeholder in the Federal Election Commission appropriation for administering a program to award Federal matching grants to States and localities to improve election systems and election administration for fiscal year 2002. The report to accompany that bill, S. Report 107–57, notes the intent of the committee that “once such a program is enacted into law, the funds should be available to immediately begin the new program.”

My provision mirrors this language. Legislation ordered reported by the Rules Committee on August 2, 2001, S. 565 provides for a Federal grant program to the States and localities to fund election reforms. It includes grants to meet minimum national requirements for voting systems standards and technology, provisional voting, and distribution of sample ballots, with voting instructions and voting rights.

This legislation would provide the funding through the Department of Justice. The Senate will debate this legislation later this fall. This amendment preserves the ability of the Senate to fund reform through either the Department of Justice, the Federal Election Commission, or both.

I firmly believe that it is the obligation of the Congress to provide both the leadership and the resources for election reform. The reforms are necessary to provide guidance to States on election administration and technology to restore and public confidence in our elections system. Similarly, the financial resources are essential to support States and localities in implementing, maintaining and weaving those vital election reforms into the fabric of our American democracy.

My amendment for a $2 million placeholder is at the same level of support that is currently included in the Treasury-Postal appropriations bill for election reform.

I urge my colleagues on both sides of the aisle to support this amendment. It is essential that we include the $2 million placeholder now to preserve our ability to negotiate actual funding levels for election reform in conference.

Further, I also urge my colleagues to support the companion provision for election reform in the Treasury-Postal appropriations bill when it is debated on the Senate floor in the near future.

I will support both provisions.

Mr. FEINGOLD. Mr. President, I want to thank the managers of this bill, Chairman HOLLINGS and Senator GREGG, for accepting this amendment, and to thank Senators DURBIN and DEWINE and Congressmen HALL and WOLF for their leadership on this issue.

I also want to recognize the NGOs that have worked so hard on this bill, and to recognize the diamond industry itself, which has come forward to work with the advocates and with Congress.

I now serve as the chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee’s Subcommittee on African Affairs. I have been to the Democratic Republic of the Congo. I have been to Angola. And, most recently, in February I traveled to Sierra Leone.

In each of these places, I have met amputees, refugees, widows and widowers and orphans. I have seen the tragic consequences of the near total disruption of a society—the malnourishment, the disillusionment, the desperation. And each time, I have been sickened by the knowledge that some people are getting rich as a result of this misery.

I believe that our national values demand that the United States disassociate itself from the trade in conflict diamonds.

But over the years that I have served on the Africa Subcommittee, I have also worked on issues relating to countries like South Africa and Botswana. The diamond industry has been a legitimate diamond industries to fuel economic growth and development. It is critical to distinguish between the entirely legitimate diamond exports of a country like Botswana, and the diamond trade that has helped the RUF and UNITA to sustain bloody wars.

This legislation provides the momentum behind the multilateral efforts currently underway to regulate the diamond trade and to create a “clean stream” for the legitimate diamond industry and consumers to rely upon. It is my hope that the action we take today will encourage all governmental authorities, advocacy groups and industry representatives gathering in London to work toward a multilateral solution. They must take decisive action to implement a rigorous regulatory regime, not retreat into half-hearted calls for self-regulation.

It is equally important to be honest about the fact that stopping the trade in conflict diamonds is not the silver bullet that will stop the conflicts in West Africa or the D.R.C. or Angola. These complex crises require focused and multi-faceted policy responses. But this one element—de-legitimizing the trade in conflict diamonds—will make it more difficult, and less lucrative, for some of the most odious actors on the international stage to continue pursuing their violent and abusive agendas. It is unquestionably a step worth taking.

Mr. KERRY. Mr. President, today the Senate voted in favor of an amendment I offered with Senators BOND and COLINS to increase funding for the Small Business Administration’s Women’s Business Centers program from $12 million to $13.7 million, by using some additional funds from the Agency’s Salaries and Expenses account. I thank all of the colleagues for their support of this important resource for women around the country who are working for economic independence and working to provide jobs and opportunities for others in their communities.

Today is not the first time the Women’s Business Centers have been supported from both sides of the aisle. On April 6th, the full Senate agreed by voice vote to a similar amendment Senator BOND and I offered to the Senate Budget Resolution. Like today’s amendment, that amendment, Amendment No. 133, increased the funding for Women’s Business Centers from $12 million to $13.7 million.

I am encouraged by our ability to work together and reinforce the good work of the Women’s Business Centers. When Senator BOND and I introduced this amendment, she knows how to approach a lender for a loan, knows how to manage her business, and understands the hows and whys of marketing.

Let me give you two examples of women who sought assistance from the Women’s Business Center in the Governor, the Center for Women & Enterprise.

Nancy Engel went from struggling to raise her family on public assistance to... owning her own mail order and catalog company and creating four jobs. She not only helped herself, but has shared her better fortune by employing other mothers, who have the flexibility to make it home in time to meet their kids at the school bus.

And then there's Sarah Byrne—a computer specialist who lost her job. Fed up with being at the mercy of a big company, she launched her own computer company, Complete Communications. With the help of CWE, Sarah has grown her company in Wakefield, Massachusetts, to about 14 employees.

I think it's remarkable that the program opened its first 12 centers in 1989 and today women have access to training and counseling at almost 100 sites. I also think it's remarkable that over the past decade the number of women-owned businesses operating in this country has grown by 103 percent to an estimated 9.1 million firms, generating $3.6 trillion in sales annually, while employing more than 27.5 million workers. I want to encourage this trend.

In closing, I want to thank Senator Hollings and his staff for all of their help and support of not only this amendment but for the Small Business Administration in general. Again, I thank all my colleagues for voting in favor of this amendment, and Senators Bond and Collins for offering this amendment with me. I ask unanimous consent that the amendment be included in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the amendment was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

In the appropriate place in the bill regarding appropriations for Salaries and Expenses of the Small Business Administration, insert the following after the phrase “by section 21 of the Small Business Act, as amended”: “Provided further, That $3,700,000 shall be available in fiscal year 2002 to fund grants as authorized by section 29 of the Small Business Act.”

Mr. CRAIG. I rise today to express my extreme concern about developments in the Republic of Korea that have far reaching negative implications for United States semiconductor companies.

I am referring to the massive and unjustified government bailout that the South Korean government is providing to Hyundai Electronics, now known as Hynix.

Today, I am offering a sense-of-the-Senate amendment on this issue. I am joined by my colleague from Idaho, Senator Craig, and other Members of this body, as well as Ambassador Zoellick, Secretary Evans and Secretary O'Neill, that the Korean government will stop giving these subsidies to Hynix—subsidies that clearly violate our international trade agreements.

Now, the Korean government seems poised to violate these assurances completely, destroying the U.S. semiconductor industry in the process.

The Sense of the Senate resolution I am offering outlines these facts and calls upon the Secretary of the Treasury, the Secretary of Commerce, and the United States Trade Representative to request consultations with the Republic of Korea under Article 4 and Article 7 of the Agreement on Subsidies and Countervailing Measures of the World Trade Organization.

This amendment further asks that the Administration take any other actions that are necessary to assure that the substantial investments made by the Republic of Korea is stopped, and its effects fully offset or reversed.

I hope my colleagues will support this sense-of-the-Senate amendment and will join me in calling on the Korean government-owned banks to give Hynix over $5 billion in loans and other types of financing which carry the guarantee of the government of Korea. This is a subsidy pure and simple.

Now the Korean government is planning on giving Hynix additional loans to keep them solvent.

In the year 2000, Hynix was the world's largest producer of dynamic random access memory—or D–RAM—an important type of memory semiconductors. Hynix is particularly good at making these memory semiconductor chips, but because it borrowed excessively and built up enormous capacity.

Last year, Hynix became unable to service its debt. Hynix lost over $2 billion in 2000, and is expected to lose over $3 billion this year on sales of a little over $3 billion.

By any reckoning, this company would have failed were it not for government assistance.

Now, Hynix is broke and cannot repay the loans it took out to finance its expansion. Verging on bankruptcy, Hynix has been kept alive by the South Korean government through infusions of new cash.

From solving the company's problems, however, these government subsidies are just plunging Hynix deeper into debt.

This behavior circumvents normal market forces and has very severe implications for the companies in the U.S. and the rest of the world that are forced to compete with Hynix's illegally subsidized products.

Over the past several months, the Korean government has given assurances to me, to my colleague Senator Hollings, and other Members of this body, as well as Ambassador Zoellick, Secretary Evans and Secretary O'Neill, that the Korean government will stop giving these subsidies to Hynix—subsidies that clearly violate our international trade agreements.

Now, the Korean government seems poised to violate these assurances completely, destroying the U.S. semiconductor industry in the process.

The Sense of the Senate resolution I am offering outlines these facts and calls upon the Secretary of the Treasury, the Secretary of Commerce, and the United States Trade Representative to request consultations with the Republic of Korea under Article 4 and Article 7 of the Agreement on Subsidies and Countervailing Measures of the World Trade Organization.

This amendment further asks that the Administration take any other actions that are necessary to assure that the substantial investments made by the Republic of Korea is stopped, and its effects fully offset or reversed.

I hope my colleagues will support this sense-of-the-Senate amendment and will join me in calling on the Korean government-owned banks to give Hynix over $5 billion in loans and other types of financing which carry the guarantee of the government of Korea. This is a subsidy pure and simple.

Now the Korean government is planning on giving Hynix additional loans to keep them solvent.
CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—SENATE

September 13, 2001

benefits of the Act to eligible veterans for reasons that are beyond their control. Let us fulfill the intent of the Act we passed last year and ensure that these veterans and their families receive the benefits they are due.

Mr. ALLEN. Mr. President, I congratulate Chairman HOLLINGS and Senator GREGG for including in this appropriations measure a grant of $500,000 to the National Capital Area Council of the Boy Scouts of America for its “Learning for Life” program that serves 20,000 students in Washington, D.C., Virginia and Maryland. This is not a new program; the Congress has funded it for the past two years. By continuing to fund “Learning for Life” for another year, thousands of young people in the Washington metropolitan area will be able to participate in an innovative program that helps them develop life skills, assist in their character development, and helps them formulate positive personal values.

“Learning for Life” is designed to support our schools in their efforts to prepare youth to successfully handle the complexities of contemporary society and to enhance their self-confidence and motivation. It prepares youth to make ethical decisions that will help them achieve their full potential.

At a time when drugs and gangs are ravaging our schools and communities, this program is a catalyst to help stop this trend. Teachers use age-appropriate, grade-specific lesson plans that give the boys and girls in our schools the skills and information that helps them cope with the complexities of today’s society. By making academic learning fun and relevant to real-life situations, the core values and skills learned by the students participating in this program prepare them to participate in and provide leadership in American society.

Senators HOLLINGS and GREGG have been, and continue to be, strong supporters of efforts to enhance educational opportunities for the youth of our country. The thousands of boys and girls who participate in this program join me in expressing our gratitude for the continued leadership of Senators HOLLINGS and GREGG.

I am also grateful for the support of Senators THURMOND and SESSIONS who joined me in working to continue funding for “Learning for Life.”

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I rise to address two important international trade issues included in this bill: trade in conflict diamonds and trade adjustment assistance.

I thank Senator GREGG and Senator DURBIN for taking on the important issue of so-called “conflict diamonds.” As we have all seen reported in the press, the struggle for control of diamond mining areas in Africa by various rebel groups have led to the commission of some terrible atrocities against unarmed civilians.

My colleagues Senator GREGG and Senator DURBIN have both introduced bills this year to halt the flow of conflict diamonds. I applaud them for their efforts.

The appropriations measure that we are considering today includes language that would implement S. 1084, Senator DURBIN’s bill to halt U.S. imports of conflict diamonds. Some of the measures used in this legislation to respond to the conflict diamond problem will fall within the jurisdiction of the Finance Committee. Therefore, the preferred method for considering this measure would be to hold a hearing and mark up the bill in the Finance Committee.

In this case, however, there is a certain urgency to taking action on the issue of conflict diamonds in order to halt the atrocities that continue to take place in Africa and restore the confidence of the diamond-buying public in the United States. In addition, Senator GREGG and Senator DURBIN have worked closely with me and with each other to make sure that the substance of this provision is acceptable to all concerned.

Based on this close cooperation and the urgency of the issue, I have decided not to raise a jurisdictional objection. I therefore support the inclusion of S. 1084 in the bill before us.

I will now say a few brief words about Trade Adjustment Assistance. The TAA program has been on the books since 1962 and has historically received bipartisan support. The purpose of the program is to help workers and firms that experience layoffs due to import competition.

The portion of the Trade Adjustment Assistance program which assists trade-displaced businesses operates out of the Department of Commerce and its budget is included in the Commerce, Justice, and State appropriations bill. This program helps small- and medium-sized businesses that are facing layoffs due to import competition to get access to technical support and develop business plans that help them adjust to import competition, become more competitive, and maintain or increase employment.

The TAA for Firms program operates on a shoestring. Historically, the TAA for Firms program creates or preserves one job for every $361 spent. This is a bargain we cannot afford to pass up. In recognition of this program’s track record, the Senate Appropriations Committee has attempted to increase funding for this program in the CJS appropriations bill. Last year the amount that passed the Senate was about $24 million. Every year, the number gets reduced in committee markup, but certainly not a reason to give up. This year, however, much to my chagrin, the bill before us does not include any increase in funding for this program over the current level, so there is no basis even to go to conference on this issue.

There is no doubt that the current funding level for the Trade Adjustment Assistance for Firms program is sorely inadequate. Every year more firms are certified eligible than there is money to provide even the most modest technical assistance. The result is that many qualified and deserving firms do not get the technical support they need to get back on their feet and keep jobs in their communities.

For example, right now in Montana ten companies have 25 approved but unfunded projects for a total shortfall of over $551,000. This includes several companies that have been forced to severely reduce operations due to imports of dumped and subsidized softwood lumber from Canada. The communities where these businesses are located often do not offer many opportunities for alternate employment and it is important that we help companies and communities like these to get back on their feet.

In conclusion, Mr. President, I want to express my profound disappointment that we in the Senate have not even made the attempt to provide a more adequate funding level for this valuable program in FY 2002, despite its extremely modest cost and proven benefits. I will certainly work to see that this mistake is not repeated next year. I will also work to see what solutions are available to this continuing problem when we mark up a bill to reauthorize the Trade Adjustment Assistance program this year in the Finance Committee.

Mr. LUGAR. Mr. President, I appreciate the good work the committee and the managers have done with respect to the fiscal year 2002 appropriations bill for the Departments of Commerce, Justice, and State. However, there is one area in which the bill is deficient; namely, embassy security.

The Department of State is requesting a total of $1.3 billion for worldwide security upgrade activities in fiscal year 2002, a 22 percent increase over the fiscal year 2001 level of $1.07 billion. This funding is to be used to maintain extensive security enhancements; address other domestic and overseas vulnerabilities; construct modern, secure facilities; and correct perimeter security weaknesses.

Over the past 3 years, the Department has invested $1.2 billion in extensive improvements in systems and facilities as well as security staffing to protect U.S. diplomats, employees, and dependents around the world. The $1.3 billion requested in the fiscal year 2002 budget includes $650 million to maintain these programs at their current levels. Examples include continued funding for approximately 6,000 guards and surveillance specialists; maintenance of 490 explosives detection devices, 877 walk-through metal detectors, and 263 x-ray machines; and maintenance of almost 1,000 armored vehicles.

The fiscal year 2002 budget request also includes $64 million to reinforce defenses against cyberterrorism, technical and electronic intelligence-gathering efforts, and penetration of our domestic facilities. Included in this effort is the addition of 186 positions, 86 agents, and 100 other security professionals, not only to support expanded programs but to reduce the burden on current personnel and to ensure that sufficient agents are always available to address any serious threat or emergency.

The budget request also includes a total of $665 million for seven security-driven construction projects that will replace less secure embassies or consulates and U.S. AID facilities. The request also includes $211 million to address significant vulnerabilities in systems and equipment that monitor perimeters and control access to U.S. facilities. These funds will continue perimeter security improvements and extend the installation of protective measures to additional posts.

I am disappointed that the committee mark does not fully fund the Department’s priority personnel increases for improved diplomatic readiness and worldwide security upgrades. The Department’s initial request had about $95 million to provide for the hiring of 360 new employees to support Diplomatic Readiness requirements. However, the committee’s mark only supports about 40 percent of this new hiring.

In order to have the right people in the right place at the right time with the right skills to advance American interests, the Department has put forward an aggressive plan to bring in over a 3-year period some 1,100 new employees and improve security. Focusing on the full 360 employees is one of the Department of State’s highest priorities and is supported by the authorization marks of both the House International Relations Committee and the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, as well as by the House appropriators on the Commerce-State-Justice bill.

Moreover, the hiring of 186 additional diplomatic security professionals, 86 diplomatic security agents, 9 security engineers, 10 security technicians, and 81 civil service infrastructure support employees, is critical to the Department’s efforts to improve the security of our overseas personnel, facilities, and national security information.

Finally, the reductions to the Department’s overseas construction account, $219 million and applying $154 million in prior year construction balances to fiscal year 2002 requirements, will make it more difficult to meet the very ambitious buildings program that the Secretary of State has planned.

I understand that the committee has maintained funding for embassy security in the diplomatic and consular programs and embassy security, construction, and maintenance accounts at approximately last year’s levels. However, the failure by the committee to provide the administration’s requested increases for additional security personnel and construction could severely undermine the Department of State’s multiyear effort to improve security for American personnel serving in our embassies overseas. For example, within the funds that the committee provides for construction, funding is earmarked for projects not on the list of the most urgent, security-driven projects for fiscal year 2002, which will make it more difficult for the Department to meet its security-improvement goals.

I am also concerned that the funding allocated by the committee does not appear to extend to the protection of U.S. AID employees, an oversight that should be quickly addressed.

We cannot in good conscience leave the manifestations of the American presence abroad, namely, our embassies and consulates, inadequately protected. The terrorist attacks on New York and the Pentagon were preceded, it should be remembered, by attacks on American embassies in two African countries some short years ago. The U.S. embassy security abroad deserves the same degree of attention by authorizers and appropriators as homeland defense.

I would urge the managers of the bill to revisit this issue in the conference with their House counterparts and, at minimum, agree to the administration’s request with respect to the embassy security account. Indeed, in light of the recent acts of war perpetrated against America, I would believe it would only be prudent, in my judgment, for the conference to consider a major increase over the administration’s request.

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, I want to thank Chairman HOLLINGS and Senator GREGG for working with other senators and me to accept an amendment that will ensure that eligible beneficiaries may receive compensation under the Radiation Exposure Compensation Act, as amended. Over a year ago, Senator HATCH and I worked together to update RECA to ensure it took into account the latest scientific evidence and to extend benefits to new groups of workers, including uranium miners and millers, transporters. In addition, we extended eligibility for compensation beyond the group of five States identified in the original law, to additional States where uranium mining occurred, including South Dakota.

Due to the concerns about the amount of funding available for this program, language was included in both the fiscal year 2001 and fiscal year 2002 Commerce, Justice and State Appropriations bill limiting the payment of compensation to the original RECA beneficiaries. While concerns about the limited amount of funding available, I cannot support this approach to the problem. Those added to RECA in 2000 are now legally entitled to compensation and should have their cases heard along with original beneficiaries.

We simply must do a better job of funding RECA in the future. Last year, many beneficiaries received IOUs from the Federal Government because inadequate funding was available to pay their claims. To ensure adequate funding over the long term, I already have cosponsored legislation to make funding for RECA mandatory. I am committed to working with my colleagues to ensure the passage of this legislation in the near future.

I appreciate the willingness of the chairman and ranking member to accept my amendment. I also want to thank Senators BINGAMAN, DOMENICI, HATCH, and REID for their support of this amendment.

Mr. MCCAIN. Mr. President, I had intended to offer an amendment to the Commerce, Justice, and State appropriation bill regarding the Title XI Loan Guarantee Program. However, in light of the events of the last several days, I believe the Senate needs to quickly move onto the consideration of legislation that will aid our Government in addressing issues resulting from the devastating attacks on our Nation earlier this week. Therefore, I am going to reserve the amendment for another time.

I am very concerned that the Title XI Loan Guarantee Program is in fiscal peril due to recent loan defaults and ongoing construction problems with other guaranteed projects that could soon lead to further defaults that will cost the American taxpayers billions of dollars. I encourage all my colleagues to review the merits and cost of this and all programs which provide taxpayer-funded support to special interests. We should carefully weigh the needs of those interests against the needs of our Nation as a whole. We are going to have to make some very difficult budget choices in the weeks ahead and I hope that we can come together to ensure those choices are in the best interest of all Americans.

Mr. BREAUX. First, I’d like to thank Senator HOLLINGS and Senator GREGG for their help over the last four years in trying to establish a strong NOAA presence in Lafayette, Louisiana. Their efforts are most appreciated by me and by the State of Louisiana.

Many of my colleagues may not realize that Congress appropriated close to $14 million in the 1991 Commerce, Justice, State appropriations bill to build
CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—SENATE

September 13, 2001

September 13, 2001

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—SENATE

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, for the interest of all Senators, we are about to have final passage on this bill. I congratulate our two managers. This has been quite an ordeal. I congratulate them on their successful completion of the bill.

We have a number of nominees I want to be able to consider and, if necessary, have votes on the nominations. During this vote, we are going to be consulting with certain Senators about whatever requirements there may be on a couple of these nominations. If necessary, I would like to have these votes tonight if they are going to be required, but we will be able to make that announcement shortly after the vote, or perhaps during the vote, for those who are interested.

The other outstanding piece of business I would like to be able to complete before the end of the week is, of course, the supplemental appropriations bill. If the House acts, we will then be in a position to act on this side. I do not know yet the status of that particular piece of legislation. That may require a vote tomorrow morning.

As I said in our joint caucus this afternoon, my hope is that we can avoid having votes after the memorial service tomorrow afternoon. That is not only my hope, my expectation, with the caveat, of course, we have been able to resolve these matters successfully.

I urge colleagues not to leave after this vote until we are absolutely certain that no rollcall votes are going to be required on the nominees that I would like to consider yet tonight. I yield the floor.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore of the Senate. The question is on the engrossment of the amendment and third reading of the bill.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time.

Mr. HOLLINGS. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore of the Senate. Is there a sufficient second?

There is a sufficient second.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore of the Senate. The bill having been read the third time, the question is, Shall the bill pass? The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. REID. I announce that the Senator from Connecticut (Mr. DODD), the Senator from Massachusetts (Mr. KENNEDY), and the Senator from Maryland (Ms. MUKLSKI) are necessarily absent.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore of the Senate. Are there any other Senators in the Chamber desiring to vote?

The result was announced—yeas 97, nays 0, as follows:

YEAS—97

[Names of Senators voting aye]

NAYS—0

[Names of Senators voting nay]

The bill (H.R. 2500), as amended, was passed.

(The bill will be printed in a future edition of the RECORD.)
Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. GREGG. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the Senate insists on its amendments and requests a conference with the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses and appoints the following conferees on the part of the Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. DAYTON) appointed Mr. HOLLINGS, Mr. INOUYE, Ms. MUKULSKI, Mr. LEAHY, Mr. KOHL, Mrs. MURRAY, Mr. REED, Mr. BYRD, Mr. GREGG, Mr. STEVENS, Mr. DOMENICI, Mr. MCCONNELL, Mrs. HUTCHISON, Mr. CAMPBELL, and Mr. COCHRAN conferees on the part of the Senate.

AMENDMENT NO. 1563

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that it be in order, after passage of H.R. 2500, for the Senate to consider a Collins amendment, which is at the desk: that the amendment be considered agreed to, and the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Without objection, it is so ordered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the amendment by number.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from New Hampshire (Mr. GREGG), for Ms. COLLINS, proposes an amendment numbered 1563.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the amendment is agreed to.

The amendment (No. 1563) was agreed to, as follows:

(Purpose: To provide funding for the Rapid Response Program in Washington and Hancock Counties, Maine.

On page 34, line 5, after “Act” insert “, of which $250,000 shall be for a grant to the Rapid Response Program in Washington and Hancock Counties, Maine”.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I thank the chairman of the committee for the tremendous effort he has done on this bill and for his very courteous approach to the Republican membership as we brought this bill forward.

I thank his staff, led by Lila Helms, who did a superb job. I especially thank my staff who worked hours, nights and days in many instances, led by Jim Morhard, who has done an extraordinary job to bring this bill to its present status. It is an excellent bill.

I appreciate the support of the Senate. I thank the Members who supported this bill.

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, let me thank the distinguished Senator from New Hampshire, we could not have advanced this bill without his leadership and without his cooperation, and particularly without his vision with respect to terrorism. The Senator from New Hampshire was our chairman back in May. He held 3 days of hearings that got this comprehensive provision in the particular State-Justice-Commerce appropriations measure.

Let me also thank his staff: Jim Morhard, Kevin Linsky, Katherine Hennessey, and Nancy Perkins; and, of course, my own staff: Lila Helms, Jill Shapiro Long, Dereck Orr, and Luke Nachbar.

I thank particularly the staff that really gets it done: Lula Davis, Marty Paione, Peter Arapis, Gary Myrick, and Tim Mitchell; the distinguished majority leader; and, most of all, the distinguished assistant majority leader who has been working around the clock. He is still working. I want him to hear my words of praise because HARRY REID of Nevada really got us moving and got these things accomplished. I couldn’t feel more personally indebted to him for his leadership.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Virginia is recognized.

MEETING WITH THE PRESIDENT

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, I was at the White House today with the President discussing all aspects of this present crisis. In the course of the conversations, he specifically referred to the fact that America must be understanding of those of Arab dissent, especially those who are American citizens, and indeed others who are here for various reasons. This terrible crisis should not reflect across the board on that culture. For it, I think, will eventually be seen as a very small fraction. I commend the President for our meeting today.

I have for over 40 years had the privilege and the opportunity to be in the Oval Office. I started with President Eisenhower as a young person in the White House. I have been in that office with every successive President on a variety of matters. Our President, in the brief meeting of about 20 minutes or so with the two Senators from New York, my colleague, GEORGE ALLEN, myself, Condoleezza Rice, and Andrew Card, his chief, was absolutely calm. He was comfortable. He was knowledgeable. You got the feeling that he is a President who knew precisely what was going on and what has to be done. He was resolute and spoke with clarity about how he will take certain steps to right the criminal wrongs that have been done against our country in due time. He had all of his own timetable—nobody will pressure him—when he has the facts in hand to hold those accountable for these crimes against our country.

I am very proud of our President. In decisions that this is going to take time. It might not be one; it might be two; who knows how many actions we will have to take. But let there be no doubt that this country is resolute in its determination, and that our citizens will be proud of the manner in which men and women of the Armed Forces and all other portions of our Government will respond to this crisis and do whatever we can to see that it doesn’t happen again.

I thank the Chair. I yield the floor.

A DAY OF EMOTIONS

Mr. NELSON of Florida. Mr. President, as we winds up this extraordinary day, it has been a day of tremendous emotional swings. Earlier this morning, I came to this floor grief stricken having just talked to a family from Florida who had lost one of their members. Later on in the day, I talked to a police officer, now a widower, of the flight attendant on the airliner that crashed in Pennsylvania who called her husband telling him that it had been hijacked and that she wanted to tell him that she loved him and that she wanted their boys to know that she loved them. That is the flight that we have heard so many reports was targeted coming into Washington. It had made a 180-degree turn, having left Newark, westbound, and was headed to Washington. In fact, we have heard so many stories of other cellular telephone calls from the airplane that would indicate that the passengers, who were the real heroes, had indicated they knew that the hijackers were intent on harm to the passengers, and they were going to overcome the hijackers. In fact, they did—at their own peril, at their own demise, but being tremendous heroes to this country.

So it has been that kind of day. We have gone from the swings of the emotion of the lows, with those kinds of grief-stricken experiences, to the highs of where we have never seen this place so unified. We have never seen both sides of the aisle come together as they have in recent American political history. We have never seen the unity of the legislative branch of Government and the executive branch.

So it has been an extraordinary day. It has been an extraordinary 3 days. I am just grateful to be one participant, along with my colleague from Minnesota, who is the Presiding Officer.

I will defer to the great leader we have from the State of Nevada, a man who is the glue that pulls us all together, who gives the support that is the right hand to our great majority leader. It is my privilege to relinquish the floor so he might speak.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nevada.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I express my appreciation to my friend from Florida for those flattering words.

MORNING BUSINESS

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate now proceed to a period of morning business with Senators allowed to speak therein for a period not to exceed 5 minutes each.

Mr. CONRAD. Madam President, when the Pentagon was attacked and F-16s were scrambled from Langley Air Force Base, those fighter planes were the 119th Fighter Wing of the North Dakota National Guard. I didn’t know that myself when I saw those planes flying. I can tell you, they made an awful lot of us feel much more secure when we saw F-16 fighter planes in the air protecting Washington, DC. So imagine my surprise and my pride when I learned that those were North Dakota’s own fighter planes.

This is the group we affectionately call in North Dakota the Happy Hooligans. The Happy Hooligans are America’s best. The Happy Hooligans have been called the best fighter unit on the planet Earth. They have been called that because the Happy Hooligans have been recognized in competition after competition as America’s best. Not only have they won the competitions—the William Tell award, for example—as the best active fighting unit in the United States, but they have not only been in competition with other National Guard units but the regular Air Force. The Happy Hooligans come out No. 1.

So not only are we incredibly proud in North Dakota that a key part of this Nation’s defense at this time of tragedy and attack was from North Dakota but that we sent our very best and that our very best are America’s very best.

GROWING PROBLEM OF PIRACY AT SEA

Mr. AKAKA. Mr. President, I rise today to call attention to the growing problem of piracy at sea. The days of Blackbeard and Captain Kidd may be gone, but pirates are still with us.

In February 2001 the International Maritime Bureau, IMB, of the International Chamber of Commerce reported that piracy attacks jumped 57 percent from 1999 to 2000. The IMB reported a total of 469 attacks on ships either at sea, at anchor, or in port. Today’s pirates prowl the sea in speedboats, armed with automatic weapons, satellite phones, and global positioning devices. They are often backed by organized crime syndicates, making use of forged registration documents and bills of lading to offload hijacked cargo. Rarely are hijacked ships recovered or pirates arrested.

We should be concerned with this because U.S. trade and national security depend upon maritime transportation. Ninety percent of the world’s cargo is carried over the seas. In addition to its role in foreign commerce, our Nation’s merchant shipping fleet provides vital national security sealift in the event of war or natural disaster. Attacks are becoming commonplace, and cargo ships are coming under increasing attack from pirates. Through violence or the threat of force, pirates are boarding vessels and looting cargo. Last year, there were 72 reported deaths of mariners and 99 injuries due to pirate attacks.

Maritime crime, in general, can take many forms including low-level assaults, thefts, armed robbery, organized hijacking, environmental crimes, and smuggling of humans or contraband. Criminals use violence or the threat of violence to target seafarers, cargo, and ships. Attacks may occur while at dock, in territorial waters, or on the high seas. Piracy can result in immediate loss of life and property and may present a threat to navigational safety.

Under international law, piracy is defined as theft or other illegal acts of violence committed on the high seas for private gain by the crew of a private ship against another ship, or the persons or property on board. The phrase “on the high seas” is a legal term of art. It is any area not within the territorial sea, or sovereignty, of another state. Under the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea, a state’s territorial sea extends 12 nautical miles from its coastline. Piracy on the high seas is considered a crime against all nations. Accordingly, under international law every state has the right to seize pirate ships on the high seas and arrest pirates who are subject to the jurisdiction of the courts of the state which carried out the arrest.

The true scope of the piracy problem, however, is not known. Despite numerous press reports, current statistics are incomplete. There is no consensus among reporting organizations on what constitutes a reportable piracy attack. Although the definition under international law requires that the attack occur on the high seas, some organizations include attacks at port. In addition, it appears that instances of piracy among noncommercial vessels such as yachts and regional fishermen may be significantly underreported.

Although the risk of attack on U.S. flag ships is not significant, piracy is a problem for our trading partners in Asia. The nations of this region account for more than $455 billion in trade and are located in regions of the world that are not other region in the world. Approximately 98 percent of this commerce moves by sea. The Malacca Straits, separating the Malay Peninsula with the island of Sumatra, is one of the busiest shipping lanes in the world. Surrounded by the nations of Indonesia, Malaysia, and Singapore, it is the shortest route between the Indian Ocean and the South China Sea. Asian allies, dependent on oil imports from the Arabian Gulf, rely upon ships passing safely through the straits. It also happens to be a pirate hot spot.

The piracy problem in Southeast Asia has resulted in several regional responses. In July 2000 Indonesia set up a special court to try piracy cases. In November 2000 the Philippines deployed a coast guard vessel to India and Malaysia to participate in joint exercises. In January 2001 Malaysia launched an operation to reduce piracy in the Malacca Straits in cooperation with Indonesia, Singapore, and Thailand. In June 2001 the Japanese Coast Guard announced that it is planning to send patrol boats to the region periodically to participate in joint training exercises.

The U.S. has also responded to this issue through the U.S. Coast Guard. The Coast Guard’s Deepwater Program is responsible for conducting operations 50 miles or more out to sea. The Coast Guard is leveraging its maritime law enforcement expertise by providing training to foreign maritime law enforcement agencies to combat sea piracy. For example, in June 2001 the USCG led a cooperation afloat readiness and training, CARAT, exercise on maritime law enforcement techniques with the Royal Thai Navy. CARAT is an annual series of bilateral exercises between the American military and that of several Asian nations including Indonesia, Malaysia, Singapore, the Philippines, and Brunei. Although well-suited for this mission the Coast Guard is currently ill-equipped. It is in the process of modernizing its aging fleet to carry out more deepwater missions. The current plan calls for the replacement of approximately 100 cutters and more than 200 aircraft in the Deepwater Program.

The rise in the number and seriousness of pirate attacks has drawn the attention of the United Nations’ International Maritime Organization, IMO. The IMO encourages cooperation among governments in the area of regulations and standards concerning maritime safety. Since 1998, the IMO has sponsored a series of seminars around the world to study the piracy problem and heighten awareness. At a June 2001 meeting the IMO renewed its call for all governments and industry to intensify their efforts to eradicate sea piracy and encouraged regional agreements supported by appropriate national piracy laws and adequate enforcement and prosecutorial capabilities. The IMO also approved a draft resolution for submission to the U.N. General Assembly session in November 2001.

As the Bush administration reviews its policy on the issue of sea piracy, I strongly encourage consideration of the following points: (1) We need better statistics on pirate attacks to assess the national security risks. More detailed reporting and analysis is needed.
to determine the appropriate response to this problem. (2) The U.S. should commend those nations in the region that are attempting to police the waters within their jurisdiction and reduce the number of pirate attacks. (3) The U.S. should encourage further regional cooperation, such as the recent agreement between Japan and South-east Asian nations regarding joint training exercises. (4) Finally, the U.S. should continue to support the actions of the United Nations in addressing the issue of sea piracy. This would include determining the scope of the problem, whether regional actions are adequate, whether further legislation is needed in some countries, and how the U.N. can be of assistance in drafting these new laws and encouraging more effective enforcement capabilities.

Modern-day piracy must be stopped, and the United States can and should be an active partner in the fight against pirate attacks.

LOCAL LAW ENFORCEMENT ACT OF 2001

Mr. SMITH of Oregon. Mr. President, I rise today to speak about hate crimes legislation I introduced with Senator Kennedy in March of this year. The Local Law Enforcement Act of 2001 would add new categories to current hate crimes legislation sending a signal that violence of any kind is unacceptable in our society.

I would like to describe a terrible crime that occurred August 26, 2001, in Portland, OR. Lorenzo Okaruru, according to detectives, died after being savagely beaten about the head and face with a blunt instrument, most likely by a man who picked up someone he thought was a woman and was angered to find out Okaruru was a man. Law enforcement officials have said they believe Okaruru was killed based on sexual orientation or gender identity. The Washington County Sheriff's Office last week classified Okaruru’s August 26 beating as a hate crime. Later, Nancy served as a Congressional Liaison Officer and a Department of Defense Legislative Detallee in the offices of Senator SUSAN COLLINS and former Virginia Congressman Norman Sisisky.

After a time in the private sector, Nancy returned to public service as a member of my staff. She has been a tremendous asset to me as she brought her integrity and professionalism to every task she undertook. All of the members of my staff join me in wishing her every success in the next chapter of her career.

ADDITIONAL STATEMENTS

TRIBUTE TO ALBUQUERQUE COOPERATIVE STUDIES PROGRAM CLINICAL RESEARCH PHARMACY COORDINATING COUNCIL CENTER

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, I rise today to recognize the Cooperative Studies Program Clinical Research Pharmacy Coordinating Council Center in Albuquerque, NM. This center will soon be awarded the Robert W. Carey Quality Award by the Department of Veterans’ Affairs. This award is VA’s highest recognition for quality achievement. The Carey Award honors VA offices that demonstrate organizational effectiveness and high-quality service to our Nation’s veterans. The award encourages efficient management by prominently honoring the VA’s highest performing offices.

The Albuquerque Coordinating Council Center is an outstanding center that stands as an example of the strength of the VA’s research enterprise. The Albuquerque Coordinating Council Center deserves this great honor. The center was founded in 1972 as a part of VA’s Cooperative Services Program. This program is responsible for planning and conducting the large multicenter clinical trials managed by VA. The Albuquerque Coordinating Council Center manages all of the pharmaceutical aspects of these trials. The center plays a critical role in planning VA’s clinical trials, packaging clinical trial materials, and monitoring the implementation of clinical trials. These trials have benefitted not only our Nation’s veterans, but have improved the health of our entire Nation, by contributing to the rapidly increasing body of medical knowledge.

The center has a staff of over 60 highly trained and experienced pharmacy and management professionals and technicians. Through the efforts of these outstanding employees and under the excellent leadership of Director Dr. Mike Sather, the center has developed a solid reputation within the medical research community. In fact, the center has contributed to ground-breaking medical research in developing treatments for a wide range of diseases from cancer to heart disease to mental illness. The center has also demonstrated its proficiency in its successful collaborations with such institutions as the National Institutes of Health, specifically the National Heart, Lung and Blood Institute and the National Institute of Mental Health, as well as the centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

The recognition of the Albuquerque center by the VA should come as no surprise to anyone familiar with its history. In fact, the center has previously been recognized for its achievements by Quality New Mexico and has recently been awarded the Pharmacy Coordinating Council Award and the Piñon Award. I congratulate the exceptional leadership and the devoted staff of the Albuquerque Pharmacy Coordinating Council Center on this fine achievement, and I look forward to their future accomplishments in improving the health of our Nation and demonstrating our continued commitment to our Nation’s veterans.

MESSAGES FROM THE HOUSE

At 2:15 p.m., a message from the President of the Senate was delivered. Ms. Noland, one of its reading clerks, announced that the House has passed the following joint resolution, without amendment:

S.J. Res. 22. Joint resolution expressing the sense of the Senate and House of Representatives regarding the terrorist attacks launched against the United States on September 11, 2001.

At 9:35 a.m., a message from the House of Representatives, delivered by Ms. Noland, one of its reading clerks, announced that the House has passed the following joint resolution, without amendment:

S. Res. 22. Joint resolution expressing the sense of the Senate and House of Representatives regarding the terrorist attacks launched against the United States on September 11, 2001.
The message also announced that the House has agreed to the following concurrent resolution, in which it requests the concurrence of the Senate:

H. Con. Res. 225. Concurrent resolution expressing the sense of Congress that, as a symbol of solidarity following the terrorist attacks on the United States on September 11, 2001, every United States citizen is encouraged to display the flag of the United States.

At 4:36 p.m., a message from the House of Representatives, delivered by Mr. Hays, one of its reading clerks, announced that the House has passed the following bill, in which it requests the concurrence of the Senate:

H.R. 3584. An act to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to provide tax relief for victims of the terrorist attacks against the United States on September 11, 2001.

MEASURES REFERRED

The following bill was read the first time and the second times by unanimous consent, and referred as indicated:

EC–3825. A communication from the Acting Director of the Office of Management and Budget, Executive Office of the President, transmitting, a report relative to the Crop Year 2001 Agricultural Economic Assistance Act; to the Committee on Finance.

EC–3826. A communication from the Director of the Office of Regulations Management, Veterans Benefits Administration, Department of Veterans Affairs, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Certification for Eligibility for Adaptive Equipment for Automobiles or Other Conveyance” received on August 25, 2001, to the Committee on Veterans’ Affairs.

MEASURES READ THE FIRST TIME

The following bills were read the first time:

H.R. 2383. An act to promote freedom and democracy in Viet Nam.

H.R. 2291. An act to extend the authorization of the Drug-Free Communities Support Program for an additional 5 years, to authorize a National Community Antidrug Coalition Institute, and for other purposes.

EXECUTIVE AND OTHER COMMUNICATIONS

The following communications were laid before the Senate, together with accompanying papers, reports, and documents, which were referred as indicated:

EC–3827. A communication from the Assistant Secretary of Legislative Affairs, Department of State, transmitting, pursuant to law, a report relative to the designation of a twenty-five percent danger pay allowance for the Gaza Strips of the Former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia; to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

EC–3828. A communication from the Assistant Secretary for Treaty Affairs, Department of State, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a list of agreements and backgrounds statements concerning international agreements treaties; to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

EC–3829. A communication from the Chief of the Regulations Division, Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, Department of the Treasury, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Exportation of Tobacco Products and Cigarette Papers and Tubes; Without Payment of Tax, or With Drawback of Tax; Recodification of Regulations” (RIN15512–AC47) received on September 7, 2001, to the Committee on Finance.

EC–3830. A communication from the Chief of the Regulations Unit, Internal Revenue Service, Department of the Treasury, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Domestic Asset/Liability and Investment Yield Percentages” (Rev. Proc. 2001–24) received on September 7, 2001, to the Committee on Finance.

EC–3831. A communication from the Regulations Coordinator, Center for Medicare and Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Medicare Program; Payments for New Medical Services and New Technologies under the Acute Care Hospital Inpatient Prospective Payment System” (RIN09389–AL09) received on September 7, 2001, to the Committee on Finance.

EC–3832. A communication from the Chairman of the Defense Nuclear Facilities Safety Board, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of the Annual Report on Commercial Activities for 2000; to the Committee on Governmental Affairs.

EC–3833. A communication from the Acting Director of the Office of Resource Management, Federal Housing Finance Board, transmitting, pursuant to law, a report relative to commercial activities inventory; to the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs.

EC–3834. A communication from the Executive Director of the Committee for Purchase from People Who are Blind or Severely Disabled, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of additions to the procurement list received on September 7, 2001, to the Committee on Governmental Affairs.

EC–3835. A communication from the Acting Chairman of the National Credit Union Administration, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of the Inventory of Commercial Activities for 2001; to the Committee on Governmental Affairs.

EC–3836. A communication from the Acting Administrator, Rural Utilities Service, Department of Agriculture, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “7 CFR Part 1755, Telecommunications System Construction Contract and Specifications” (RIN E409–AH11) received on September 7, 2001; to the Committee on Agriculture, Nutrition, and Forestry.

EC–3837. A communication from the Congressional Review Coordinator, Animal and Plant Inspection Service, Department of Agriculture, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Committed Travel Periods: Overtime Services Relating to Imports and Exports” (Doc. No. 00–017–1) received on September 7, 2001; to the Committee on Agriculture, Nutrition, and Forestry.

EC–3838. A communication from the Acting Administrator, Rural Utilities Services, Department of Agriculture, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “7 CFR Part 1755, RUS Standard for Service Installations at Customer Access Locations” received on September 7, 2001; to the Committee on Agriculture, Nutrition, and Forestry.

EC–3839. A communication from the General Counsel of the National Credit Union Administration, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “12 CFR Section 709.12 Prepayment Fees to Federal Home Loan Bank” received on September 7, 2001, to the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs.

EC–3840. A communication from the General Counsel, National Credit Union Administration, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “12 CFR Part 749 Records Preservation Program and Record Retention Appendix” received on September 7, 2001, to the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs.

EC–3841. A communication from the General Counsel, Federal Emergency Management Agency, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Changes in Flood Elevation Determinations” (Doc. No. FEMA–B–7419) received on September 7, 2001, to the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs.

EC–3842. A communication from the General Counsel, National Credit Union Administration, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “12 CFR Part 721–Incidental Powers” received on September 7, 2001, to the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs.

EC–3843. A communication from the General Counsel, National Credit Union Administration, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “12 CFR Section 709.12–Prepayment Fees to Federal Home Loan Bank” received on September 7, 2001; to the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs.

EC–3844. A communication from the General Counsel, National Credit Union Administration, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Credit Union Service Organizations” received on September 7, 2001; to the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs.

EC–3845. A communication from the Acting Chairman of the National Credit Union Administration, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of the Inventory of Commercial Activities for 2001; to the Committee on Governmental Affairs.
EC-3846. A communication from the Principal Deputy Associate Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Approval and Promulgation of Air Quality Implementation Plans; State of Colorado; Denver I-Hour Ozone Redesignation of Attainment of Air Quality Planning Purposes, and Approval of Related Revisions” (FRL7044-8) received on September 5, 2001; to the Committee on Environment and Public Works.

EC-3847. A communication from the Principal Deputy Associate Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Approval of Budgeting Authority” (RIN2010–AD33) received on September 5, 2001; to the Committee on Environment and Public Works.

EC-3848. A communication from the Principal Deputy Associate Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Revisions to the California State Implementation Plan, Bay Area Air Quality Management District and South Coast Air Quality Management District” (FRL7052-7) received on September 5, 2001; to the Committee on Environment and Public Works.

EC-3850. A communication from the Assistant Secretary of the Army, Office of the Secretary, Department of the Army, transmitting, pursuant to law, a report relative to appropriations for the Brigantine Inlet to Great Egg Harbor Inlet, Brigantine Island, New Jersey; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-3851. A communication from the Chief of the Programs and Legislation Division, Office of Legislative Liaison, Department of the Air Force, transmitting, pursuant to law, a report relative to the United States Air Force Academy; to the Committee on Armed Services.

EC-3852. A communication from the Chief of the Programs and Legislation Division, Office of Legislative Liaison, Department of Commerce, transmitting, pursuant to law, a report relative to the United States Air Force Academy; to the Committee on Armed Services.

EC-3853. A communication from the Chief of the Programs and Legislation Division, Office of Legislative Liaison, Department of Commerce, transmitting, pursuant to law, a report relative to the United States Air Force Academy; to the Committee on Armed Services.

EC-3854. A communication from the Director of Defense Procurement, Department of Defense, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Approval and Promulgation of Air Quality Implementation Plans; State of Colorado; Denver I-Hour Ozone Redesignation of Attainment of Air Quality Planning Purposes, and Approval of Related Revisions” (FRL7044-8) received on September 5, 2001; to the Committee on Environment and Public Works.

EC-3855. A communication from the Director of Defense Procurement, Department of Defense, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “DoD Pilot Mentor-Protege Program” (DFARS Case 2001–D006) received on September 6, 2001; to the Committee on Armed Services.

EC-3856. A communication from the Director of Defense Procurement, Office of the Secretary, Department of Defense, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Regatta Safety/Security Zone Regulations; Port Huron Tall Ship Celebration. St. Clair River, MI” (RIN2115–AA97/2001–0097) received on September 7, 2001; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-3857. A communication from the Chief of Regulations and Administrative Law, United States Coast Guard, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Safety/Security Zone Regulations; Port Huron Tall Ship Celebration. St. Clair River, MI” (RIN2115–AA97/2001–0097) received on September 7, 2001; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-3858. A communication from the Chief of Regulations and Administrative Law, United States Coast Guard, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Regatta Safety/Security Zone Regulations; Port Huron Tall Ship Celebration. St. Clair River, MI” (RIN2115–AA97/2001–0097) received on September 7, 2001; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-3859. A communication from the Chief of Regulations and Administrative Law, United States Coast Guard, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Safety/Security Zone Regulations; Port Huron Tall Ship Celebration. St. Clair River, MI” (RIN2115–AA97/2001–0097) received on September 7, 2001; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-3862. A communication from the Chief of Regulations and Administrative Law, United States Coast Guard, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Safety/Security Zone Regulations; Algoma Shanty Days 2001, Algoma Harbor, Wisconsin” (RIN2111–LA97/2001–0100) received on September 7, 2001; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-3863. A communication from the Chief of Regulations and Administrative Law, United States Coast Guard, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Regatta Safety/Security Zone Regulations; Port Huron Tall Ship Celebration. St. Clair River, MI” (RIN2115–AA97/2001–0097) received on September 7, 2001; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-3864. A communication from the Chief of Regulations and Administrative Law, United States Coast Guard, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Regatta Safety/Security Zone Regulations; Port Huron Tall Ship Celebration. St. Clair River, MI” (RIN2115–AA97/2001–0097) received on September 7, 2001; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-3865. A communication from the Chief of Regulations and Administrative Law, United States Coast Guard, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Regatta Safety/Security Zone Regulations; Port Huron Tall Ship Celebration. St. Clair River, MI” (RIN2115–AA97/2001–0097) received on September 7, 2001; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-3866. A communication from the Chief of Regulations and Administrative Law, United States Coast Guard, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Regatta Safety/Security Zone Regulations; Port Huron Tall Ship Celebration. St. Clair River, MI” (RIN2115–AA97/2001–0097) received on September 7, 2001; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-3867. A communication from the Chief of Regulations and Administrative Law, United States Coast Guard, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Regatta Safety/Security Zone Regulations; Port Huron Tall Ship Celebration. St. Clair River, MI” (RIN2115–AA97/2001–0097) received on September 7, 2001; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-3868. A communication from the Chief of Regulations and Administrative Law, United States Coast Guard, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Regatta Safety/Security Zone Regulations; Port Huron Tall Ship Celebration. St. Clair River, MI” (RIN2115–AA97/2001–0097) received on September 7, 2001; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-3869. A communication from the Chief of Regulations and Administrative Law, United States Coast Guard, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Regatta Safety/Security Zone Regulations; Port Huron Tall Ship Celebration. St. Clair River, MI” (RIN2115–AA97/2001–0097) received on September 7, 2001; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-3870. A communication from the Chief of Regulations and Administrative Law, United States Coast Guard, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Regatta Safety/Security Zone Regulations; Port Huron Tall Ship Celebration. St. Clair River, MI” (RIN2115–AA97/2001–0097) received on September 7, 2001; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-3871. A communication from the Chief of Regulations and Administrative Law, United States Coast Guard, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Regatta Safety/Security Zone Regulations; Port Huron Tall Ship Celebration. St. Clair River, MI” (RIN2115–AA97/2001–0097) received on September 7, 2001; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-3872. A communication from the Chief of Regulations and Administrative Law, United States Coast Guard, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Regatta Safety/Security Zone Regulations; Port Huron Tall Ship Celebration. St. Clair River, MI” (RIN2115–AA97/2001–0097) received on September 7, 2001; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-3873. A communication from the Chief of Regulations and Administrative Law, United States Coast Guard, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Regatta Safety/Security Zone Regulations; Port Huron Tall Ship Celebration. St. Clair River, MI” (RIN2115–AA97/2001–0097) received on September 7, 2001; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.
EC-3874. A communication from the Chief of Regulations and Administrative Law, United States Coast Guard, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Safety/Security Zone Regulations; Milwaukee Home Run 2001 Hog Rally Fireworks, Milwaukee, WI” ((RIN2115–AA97)(2001–0083)) received on September 7, 2001; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-3875. A communication from the Chief of Regulations and Administrative Law, United States Coast Guard, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Airworthiness Directives: McDonnell Douglas Model MD-11 Series Airplanes” ((RIN2120–AA64)(2001–0485)) received on September 7, 2001; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-3876. A communication from the Chief of Regulations and Administrative Law, United States Coast Guard, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Safety/Security Zone Regulations; San Diego Bay” ((RIN2120–AA66)(2001–0169)) received on September 7, 2001; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-3877. A communication from the Paralegal Specialist of the Federal Aviation Administration, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Airworthiness Directives: McDonnell Douglas Model DC–10 and MD–10 Series Airplanes” ((RIN2120–AA64)(2001–0489)) received on September 7, 2001; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-3878. A communication from the Paralegal Specialist of the Federal Aviation Administration, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Safety/Security Zone Regulations; San Diego Bay” ((RIN2120–AA66)(2001–0149)) received on September 7, 2001; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-3879. A communication from the Paralegal Specialist of the Federal Aviation Administration, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Airworthiness Directives: B737–100, –200, and –300 Series Airplanes” ((RIN2120–AA64)(2001–0481)) received on September 7, 2001; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-3880. A communication from the Paralegal Specialist of the Federal Aviation Administration, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Airworthiness Directives: recapitulation of the 01–0883” ((RIN2120–AA64)(2001–0481)) received on September 7, 2001; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-3881. A communication from the Paralegal Specialist of the Federal Aviation Administration, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Airworthiness Directives: B737–100, –200, and –300 Series Airplanes” ((RIN2120–AA64)(2001–0481)) received on September 7, 2001; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-3882. A communication from the Paralegal Specialist of the Federal Aviation Administration, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Airworthiness Directives: Boeing Model 757 Series Airplanes” ((RIN2120–AA66)(2001–0477)) received on September 7, 2001; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC–3910. A communication from the Acting Director of the Office of Sustainable Fisheries, National Marine Fisheries Service, Department of Commerce, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Fisheries of the Exclusive Economic Zone Off Alaska—Closed Hook-and-Line Gear Groundfish, Gulf of Alaska” received on September 6, 2001; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC–3911. A communication from the Acting Director of the Office of Sustainable Fisheries, National Marine Fisheries Service, Department of Commerce, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Fisheries of the Exclusive Economic Zone Off Alaska—Closed Hook-and-Line Gear Groundfish, Gulf of Alaska” received on September 6, 2001; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EXECUTIVE REPORTS OF COMMITTEES

The following executive reports were submitted:

By Mr. KENNEDY for the Committee on Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions.

By Mr. LEAHY for the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. McNTUL for the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

By Mr. SENEN for the Committee on Transportation and Hazardous Materials.

By Mr. WHEATS for the Committee on Foreign Relations.
CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—SENATE

September 13, 2001

17005

(The following is a list of all members of my immediate family and their spouses. I have asked each of these persons to inform me of the pertinent contributions made by them. To the best of my knowledge, the information contained in this report is complete and accurate.)

Nominee: John D. Negroponte.

Post: Permanent Representative to the United Nations.

Contributions, Amount, Date, and Donee: 1. Self: $1,000.00, 1999, G.W. Bush Exploratory Committee; 200.00, 1998, Matt Fong for Senate.

2. Spouse: $1,000.00, 1999, G.W. Bush Exploratory Committee; 290.00, 2000, RNC Victory 2000; 100.00, 2000, Bush Cheney Recount; 520.00, 2000, McCain 2000.

3. Children: None, contributions.

4. Parents: Carmen Negroponte, Deceased; Michel Negroponte, Deceased.

5. Grandparents: John Negroponte, Deceased; Helen Negroponte, Deceased.

6. Brothers and Spouses: George Negroponte, $50.00, 1997, DNC; 100.00, 1998, DNC; 100.00, 1997, Friends for the American Way; Hope Igehardt (George’s spouse), no contributions.

Contributions, Amount, Date, and Donee: 1. Self: $2,000.00, 1999, G.W. Bush Exploratory Committee.

2. Spouses: $25.00, 2000, Crawford for Congress; 25.00, 2000, Terry for Congress; 85.00, 1995, Concord Coalition.

3. Parents: John and Mary Wahba, Deceased.

5. Family: Parents: Carmen & Michel Wahba, None.

Self: None.

Post: Permanent Representative to the United Nations.

Contributions, Amount, Date, and Donee: 1. Self: $1,000.00, 1999, G.W. Bush Exploratory Committee; 200.00, 1998, Matt Fong for Senate.

2. Spouse: $1,000.00, 1999, G.W. Bush Exploratory Committee; 290.00, 2000, RNC Victory 2000; 100.00, 2000, Bush Cheney Recount; 520.00, 2000, McCain 2000.

3. Children: None, contributions.

4. Parents: Carmen Negroponte, Deceased; Michel Negroponte, Deceased.

5. Grandparents: John Negroponte, Deceased; Helen Negroponte, Deceased.

6. Brothers and Spouses: George Negroponte, $50.00, 1997, DNC; 100.00, 1998, DNC; 100.00, 1997, Friends for the American Way; Hope Igehardt (George’s spouse), no contributions.

8. Nomination was reported with recommendation to be confirmed by the Senate.

INTRODUCTION OF BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS

The following bills and joint resolutions were introduced, read the first and second times by unanimous consent, and referred as indicated:

By Mrs. HUTCHISON (for herself, Mr. SPECTER, and Mr. WARNER):

S. 1421. A bill to direct the Federal Aviation Administration to re-implement the sky marshal program within 30 days; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

By Mr. CLINTON (for herself, Mr. SCHUMER, Mr. LEAHY, Mr. HATCH, Mr. SPECTER, Mr. WARREN, Mr. SARRANIS, Mr. ALLEN, Mr. DASCHLE, Mr. NICKLES, Ms. MIKULSKI, Mr. ENOHOE, and Mr. BYRD):

S. 1422. A bill to expedite the payment of certain benefits for a public safety officer who was killed or suffered a catastrophic injury as a direct and proximate result of a personal injury sustained in the line of duty in connection with the terrorist attacks of September 11, 2001; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. BROWNBACK, Mr. LEAHY, Mr. HATCH, and Mr. DURBIN:

S. 1423. A bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to provide tax relief for military or civilian employees of the United States who are victims of terrorist attacks against the United States; to the Committee on Finance.

By Mr. KENNEDY (for himself, Mr. BROWNBACK, Mr. LEAHY, Mr. HATCH, and Mr. DURBIN):

S. 1424. A bill to amend the Immigration and Nationality Act to provide permanent residence for qualified immigrants; to the Committee on Finance.

ADDITIONAL COSPONSORS

S. 492

At the request of Mr. THOMPSON, the name of the Senator from Utah (Mr. BENNETT) was added as a cosponsor of S. 492, a bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to repeal the alternative minimum tax on individuals.

S. 497

At the request of Mr. LEAHY, the name of the Senator from New Jersey (Mr. CORZINE) was added as a cosponsor of S. 497, a bill to amend the Social Security Act, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Finance.

At the request of Mr. SESSIONS, the name of the Senator from Oregon (Mr. SMITH) was added as a cosponsor of S. 567, a bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to provide capital gain treatment under section 623(b) of such Code for outright sales of timber by landowners.

S. 634

At the request of Ms. COLLINS, the name of the Senator from New Mexico (Mr. BINGAMAN) was added as a cosponsor of S. 634, a bill to amend section 207 of the Social Security Act to provide grant funding for additional Enterprise Communities, and for other purposes.

S. 649

At the request of Mr. COCHRAN, his name was added as a cosponsor of S. 460, a bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to include wireless telecommunications equipment in the definition of qualified technological equipment for purposes of determining the depreciation treatment of such equipment.

S. 922

At the request of Mr. GRAHAM, the name of the Senator from Louisiana (Ms. LANDRIEU) was added as a cosponsor of S. 942, a bill to authorize the supplemental grant for population increases in certain states under the temporary assistance to needy families program for fiscal year 2002.

S. 942

At the request of Mr. LOTT, the name of the Senator from Mississippi (Mr. COCHRAN) was added as a cosponsor of S. 948, a bill to amend title 23, United States Code, to require the Secretary of Transportation to carry out a grant program for railroad line relocation, and to authorize a National Community Antidrug Coalition Institute, and for other purposes.

S. 948

At the request of Mr. HAGEL, the name of the Senator from Illinois (Mr. DURBIN) was added as a cosponsor of S. 1006, a bill to provide for the energy security of the United States and promote environmental quality by enhancing the use of motor vehicle fuels from renewable sources, and for other purposes.

S. 1006

At the request of Mr. WARNER, the name of the Senator from South Dakota (Mr. JOHNSON) was added as a cosponsor of S. 1022, a bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to allow Federal civilian and military retirees to pay health insurance premiums on a pretax basis and to allow a deduction for TRICARE supplemental premiums.

S. 1022

At the request of Mr. GRASSLEY, the name of the Senator from Utah (Mr. HATCH) was added as a cosponsor of S. 1075, a bill to extend and modify the Drug-Free Communities Support Program, to authorize a National Community Antidrug Coalition Institute, and for other purposes.

S. 1075

At the request of Mr. HATCH, the name of the Senator from Mississippi (Mr. LOTTY) was added as a cosponsor of S. 1149, a bill to amend chapter 1 of title 9, United States Code, to provide for greater fairness in the arbitration process relating to motor vehicle franchise contracts.

S. 1149

At the request of Mr. REID, the name of the Senator from Vermont (Mr. JEFFORDS) was added as a cosponsor of S. 1149, a bill to amend the Immigration and Nationality Act to establish a new nonimmigrant category for chefs and individuals in related occupations.

S. 1149

At the request of Mr. CRAIG, the names of the Senator from Nebraska (Mr. HAGEL), the Senator from New Hampshire (Mr. GREGG), the Senator from Colorado (Mr. ALLARD), and the Senator from Ohio (Mr. Voinovich) were added as cosponsors of S. 1181, a bill to amend the Immigration and Nationality Act to streamline procedures for the admission and extension of stay of nonimmigrant agricultural workers; to provide a stable, legal, agricultural work force; to extend basic legal protections and better working conditions to nonimmigrant agricultural workers; and for other purposes.

S. 1181

At the request of Mr. Sessions, the name of the Senator from Arkansas (Mr. HUTCHISON) was added as a cosponsor of S. 1346, a bill to amend the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act with regard to new animal drugs, and for other purposes.

S. 1346

At the request of Mr. GRASSLEY, the name of the Senator from Kentucky (Mr. CONROY) was added as a cosponsor of S. 1397, a bill to ensure availability of the mail to transmit shipments of day-old poultry.

S. 1397

At the request of Mrs. FEINSTEIN, the name of the Senator from Indiana (Mr. Bayh) was added as a cosponsor of S. 1409, a bill to impose sanctions against the PLO or the Palestinian Authority if the President determines that those entities have failed to substantially comply with commitments made to the State of Israel.

S. 1409

At the request of Mr. GRASSLEY, the name of the Senator from Pennsylvania (Mr. SPECTER) was added as a cosponsor of S. Res. 139, a resolution designating September 24, 2001, as "Family Day—A Day to Eat Dinner with Your Children".

S. RES. 139

At the request of Mr. BIDEN, the names of the Senator from Georgia (Mr. MILLER), the Senator from North Dakota (Mr. DORGAN) and the Senator from Washington (Mrs. MURRAY) were added as cosponsors of S. Res. 139, supra.

AMENDMENT NO. 1539

At the request of Mr. WELLSTONE, the name of the Senator from Rhode Island (Mr. REED) was added as a cosponsor of amendment No. 1539 intended to be proposed to H.R. 2600, a bill making appropriations for the Departments of Commerce, Justice, and State, the Judiciary, and related agencies for the fiscal year ending September 30, 2002, and for other purposes.

STATEMENTS ON INTRODUCED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS

By Mrs. HUTCHISON (for herself, Mr. SPECTER, and Mr. WARNER): S. 1421. A bill to direct the Federal Aviation Administration to re-implement the sky marshals program within 30 days; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

Mrs. HUTCHISON. Madam President, the bill I am introducing today, and for which I will soon be bringing because I want everyone to have the opportunity to join me in this effort, will address one part of our aviation security issue. It is not the only one that I will look for us to address in the long term.

I do want the flying public to know that we have a safe and secure aviation system. However, last Tuesday, the terrorists who perpetrated this heinous crime found a vulnerability in that system. There are several things we will be able to do to correct this situation.

I was Vice Chairman of the National Transportation Safety Board. I have been dealing with aviation security for a long time. Today I am the ranking member of the Aviation Subcommittee of the Commerce Committee. This is my area of interest.

The bill I am introducing today would order the FAA to implement and augment within 30 days a sky marshal program that would allow for peace officers to be put in random airplane flights for domestic commercial air passenger flights and for international flights that would be coming into or out of America on U.S.-based airlines.

What I am trying to do is provide an extra measure of security which today is the responsibility of pilots. Many people may not realize it, but it is the pilot and the copilot who are responsible for dealing with unruly passengers, or with any kind of security threat to the people on an airplane.

We can no longer afford to allow pilots to have the dual responsibility of keeping the plane safe in the air and at the same time be responsible for handling disruptions in the cabin.

The FAA, which is a very limited program, can train people on how to handle a breach of the peace in an airplane. It is a unique kind of training. It is not like military training certainly. It is not like a U.S. marshal on the ground. It is a different set of circumstances. An air marshal must be able to disarm a threat to the aircraft while operating in the confined space of the cabin.

No longer can any passenger carry on even the smallest knife. The FAA has issued a ruling that not even a penknife will be allowed on an airplane by a passenger or in any kind of carry-on baggage. Our passengers will be disarmed. We want to make sure they are protected in some way.

I am introducing this legislation, which will be a temporary program for 1 year. Then the FAA will report to Congress to determine if they believe it has been successful, if it should be continued, or if it is no longer necessary.

I am allowing the FAA Administrator to assess up to $1 per passenger ticket for every segment of the flight.
I talked to the FAA Administrator this morning. I told her that I wanted her to have the discretion to implement this program to deal with the security threat facing our passenger aviation system. I do not expect her to charge the full $1 if she does not feel that it is necessary. I do not expect her to do it for every leg of the flight if she does not think it is necessary. I do think we need to act quickly and there needs to be a resource.

I cannot imagine any airline passenger who would object to the payment of $1 for this kind of onboard security. This would be required to be put in place within the next 30 days. We need swift action to assure the flying public that we will do everything possible to make them secure in the air. The Administrator, Jane Garvey, told me this morning that she has already talked to the airlines and it does not require the possibility of sky marshals. My bill requires the airlines to provide a seat for the sky marshal regardless of availability. She said the airlines have already said that this is fine with them.

I am very hopeful that we will be able to enact this common-sense measure on an expedited basis. I want the people of our country to know that we are not going to leave any stone unturned to protect the public.

Having said that, I also want to say that this is not the end. This is a beginning. It is only one part of what I believe Congress and the President need to accomplish, working together to assure the safety of the people of our country. Clearly, this hijacking operation that was so well orchestrated is one facet of domestic terrorism. It highlighted a weakness in our aviation security, and we are going to clamp down in every way to assure the security of our flying public and the security of everyone in America who would be attacked by a weapon of mass destruction, which, in this case, was an airplane.

They found a vulnerability and they exploited it. We must assure that we have addressed every such vulnerability for our citizens, not only for the aviation security of our country, but we need to look at the public works in our country, the water systems, the tunnel systems we have for highways and trains linked to the airlines and our subway systems. We need to be ever vigilant over the public works of our country.

Secondly, we need to establish a missile defense system for our country. We must not forget Korea. I believe that now we have addressed the issues of domestic terrorism within our own public works systems or our infrastructure but we would be vulnerable to an incoming ballistic missile. This should be part of our domestic terrorism effort.

I appreciate the opportunity to take this first step. I hope it is one of many.

I know my colleagues will work with me, with the President, all of us working together, Democrats and Republicans, to take the extra steps that our people need to be sure everyone in the world knows that we are committed to freedom and nobody is going to dash the spirit of America.

Madam President, these tragedies have stunned the nation. Moreover, they revealed that our passenger air system was vulnerable to this cowardly attack. Preliminary reports indicate that the hijackers were armed with nothing more than knives. Horrifically, these simple weapons were apparently used to murder members of the flight crew as they bravely attempted to alert the FAA, and even change the course of at least one of the doomed flights, taking it away from population centers and our priceless national symbols.

From these early reports, it is clear that the men and women who struggled to provide this information performed heroic feats while certainly knowing that they would not survive. We stand in awe of their deeds, but we lament that it was necessary. I also want to commend the Federal Aviation Administration for somehow managing to quickly ground thousands of airborne flights to remove any further threats to our Nation. Now, our attention must turn to finding those responsible for this act of war and making sure that we do everything in our power to prevent such a tragedy from occurring again. Airline passengers should not be called upon to make the ultimate sacrifice in order to avert an even greater tragedy.

Since the hijacking of TWA flight 847 in June 1985, the FAA has been authorized to train and deploy sky marshals. There is already in place a training facility at Atlantic City, New Jersey. However, the FAA has never revealed the number or identity of the marshals, the details of their training, nor the routes that they fly. We appreciate the need for secrecy in this program, but clearly, the sky marshal deployment needs to be substantially expanded.

Toward that end, I am introducing the Emergency Aviation Security Act of 2001. The bill will require an increased random deployment of sky marshals on both domestic and international flights. These peace officers will be hired and trained under guidelines set by the FAA, but, at a minimum, they will undergo thorough background checks and be trained to deal with situations such as the ones onboard the four hijacked aircraft.

The program may, at the FAA’s discretion, be paid for with a ticket fee of not more than one dollar on every domestic flight. Congress shall not apply the transfer of the tax revenue to the FAA; the Secretary of Treasury is directed to distribute these revenues to the FAA. The program may, at the FAA’s discretion, be paid for with a ticket fee of not more than one dollar on every domestic flight. Congress shall not apply the transfer of the tax revenue to the FAA; the Secretary of Treasury is directed to distribute these revenues to the FAA.

Mr. Bunning. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 1423
Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. INCOME TAXES OF UNITED STATES MILITARY AND CIVILIAN EMPLOYEES WHO ARE VICTIMS OF TERRORIST ATTACKS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 692(c) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (relating to income taxes of military or civilian employees of the United States who are victims of terrorist attacks against the United States; to the Committee on Finance.

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—The heading of section 692(c) of such Code is amended by striking “outside the United States”.

(c) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to taxable years ending on or after September 11, 2001.

SEC. 2. RELIEF FROM ADDITIONAL ESTATE TAX.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 2201 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 amended—

(1) in the first sentence by inserting “(a) IN GENERAL,—” before “The additional estate tax”, and

(2) by adding at the end the following:

“(b) UNITED STATES MILITARY OR CIVILIAN EMPLOYEES WHO ARE VICTIMS OF CERTAIN TERRORIST ATTACKS.—The additional estate tax shall not apply to the transfer of the taxable estate of any individual dying while in
By Mr. KENNEDY (for himself, Mr. BROWNBACK, Mr. LEAHY, Mr. HATCH, and Mr. DURKIN):

S. 1424. A bill to amend the Immigration and Nationality Act to provide permanent authority for the admission of “S” visa non-immigrants; considered and passed.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President I ask unanimous consent that the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 1424

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. PERMANENT AUTHORITY FOR ADMISSION OF “S” VISA NONIMMIGRANTS.

Section 214(k) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (8 U.S.C. 1184(k)) is amended—

(1) by striking (2);

(2) by redesignating paragraphs (3), (4), and (5) as paragraphs (2), (3), and (4), respectively; and

(3) in paragraph (4)(E) (as redesignated), by striking “paragraph (4)” and inserting “paragraph (3)”.

By Mr. WYDEN:

S. 1425. A bill to establish hospice demonstration projects and a hospice grant program for beneficiaries under the Medicare program under title XVIII of the Social Security Act, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. WYDEN. Mr. President, today I am introducing the Medicare Hospice Improvement Act, which is supported by the National Hospice and Palliative Care Organization. The purpose of this bill is to provide for at least three demonstration projects within Medicare to improve the delivery of the hospice benefit to seniors. This legislation would allow us to find new ways to: (1) Allow people to enroll in hospice even though they may want to continue trying curative treatment for a limited time; (2) modify the requirements to decrease the strain on rural hospice providers; and (3) revise reimbursement rates to more adequately cover comfort care. In addition, this bill would provide a grant program to help defray the costs of providing education of the public, the medical community and patients about hospice care.

The Medicare hospice benefit has not been revised since it was first created nearly two decades ago. Too often patients and their families are unaware of the Medicare hospice benefit or they seek hospice care too late to get the full benefit of hospice services. This legislation is important because it would help us find ways to assure that the Medicare hospice benefit is better integrated into medical care, as well as improve patient access to the pain and symptom management, counseling, and other comfort care services provided by hospice.

AMENDMENTS SUBMITTED AND PROPOSED

SA 1551. Mr. DE WINE submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill H.R. 2500, supra, which was ordered to lie on the table.

SA 1552. Ms. SNOWE (for herself and Ms. COLLINS) submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by her to the bill H.R. 2500, supra, which was ordered to lie on the table.

SA 1553. Ms. SNOWE (for herself and Ms. COLLINS) submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by her to the bill H.R. 2500, supra, which was ordered to lie on the table.

SA 1554. Ms. LANDRIEU submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by her to the bill H.R. 2500, supra, which was ordered to lie on the table.

SA 1555. Ms. LANDRIEU submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by her to the bill H.R. 2500, supra, which was ordered to lie on the table.

SA 1556. Ms. LANDRIEU submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by her to the bill H.R. 2500, supra, which was ordered to lie on the table.

SA 1557. Mr. HARKIN (for himself, Mr. HATCH, Mr. LEAHY, Mr. REID, Mr. HOLLINGS, Mr. HUNOLD, Mr. DURBIN, Mr. MURRAY, Ms. CANTWELL, Ms. SASKIEW, and Mr. LIEBERMAN) proposed an amendment to the bill H.R. 2500, supra.

SA 1558. Mr. HATCH submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill S. 1422, to provide for the expedited payment of certain benefits for a public safety officer who was killed or suffered a catastrophic injury as a direct and proximate result of a personal injury sustained in the line of duty in connection with the terrorist attacks on September 11, 2001; which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

SA 1562. Mr. HATCH (for himself, Mrs. FEINSTEIN, Mr. KYL, Mr. DE WINE, Mr. SEDEN, Mr. THOMPSON, Mr. THURMOND, and Mr. MCCAIN) proposed an amendment to the bill H.R. 2500, making appropriations for the Departments of Commerce, Justice, and the Judiciary, and related agencies for the fiscal year ending September 30, 2002, and for other purposes.

SA 1566. Ms. COLLINS proposed an amendment to the bill H.R. 2500, supra, which was ordered to be printed in the RECORD.

SA 1564. Mr. HATCH submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill H.R. 2500, supra, which was ordered to lie on the table.

SA 1565. Mr. HATCH submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill H.R. 2500, supra, which was ordered to lie on the table.

SA 1566. Mr. HATCH submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill H.R. 2500, supra, which was ordered to lie on the table.

SA 1567. Mr. HATCH submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill H.R. 2500, supra, which was ordered to lie on the table.

SA 1568. Mr. RYAN (for Mr. KERRY (for himself and Mr. BOND)) proposed an amendment to the bill S. 856, to reauthorize the Small Business Technology Transfer Program, and for other purposes.

TEXT OF AMENDMENTS

SA 1551. Mr. DE WINE submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill H.R. 2500, making appropriations for the Department of Commerce, Justice, and State, the Judiciary, and related agencies for the fiscal year ending September 30, 2002, and for other purposes, which was ordered to lie on the table.

SA 1552. Ms. SNOWE (for herself and Ms. COLLINS) submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by her to the bill H.R. 2500, supra, which was ordered to lie on the table.

SA 1553. Ms. SNOWE (for herself and Ms. COLLINS) submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by her to the bill H.R. 2500, supra, which was ordered to lie on the table.

SA 1554. Ms. LANDRIEU submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by her to the bill H.R. 2500, supra, which was ordered to lie on the table.

SA 1555. Ms. LANDRIEU submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by her to the bill H.R. 2500, supra, which was ordered to lie on the table.

SA 1556. Ms. LANDRIEU submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by her to the bill H.R. 2500, supra, which was ordered to lie on the table.

SA 1557. Mr. HARKIN (for himself, Mr. HATCH, Mr. LEAHY, Mr. REID, Mr. HOLLINGS, Mr. HUNOLD, Mr. DURBIN, Mr. MURRAY, Ms. CANTWELL, Ms. SASKIEW, and Mr. LIEBERMAN) proposed an amendment to the bill H.R. 2500, supra.

SA 1558. Mr. HOLLINGS (for himself and Mr. GREIG) proposed an amendment to the bill H.R. 2500, supra.

The amendments made by this section shall take effect on the earlier of—

(1) the date of enactment of this Act; or

(2) November 15, 2001.

SA 1552. Ms. SNOWE (for herself and Ms. COLLINS) submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by her to the bill H.R. 2500, making appropriations for the Departments of Commerce, Justice, and State, the Judiciary, and related agencies for the fiscal year ending September 30, 2002, and for other purposes; which was ordered to lie on the table; as follows:

On page 31, line 18, after “program,” insert “of which $8,800,000 shall be for the Maine State Police, and $500,000 shall be for the Maine State Justice Information Systems for technology enhancements to improve the communications infrastructure of the system.”.

SA 1553. Ms. SNOWE (for herself and Ms. COLLINS) submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by her to the bill H.R. 2500, making appropriations for the Department of Commerce, Justice, and State, the Judiciary, and related agencies for the fiscal year ending September 30, 2002, and for other purposes; which was ordered to lie on the table; as follows:

On page 41, line 22 and 23, insert the following:

SEC. 112. (a) ENHANCEMENT OF GRANT PROGRAM TO ENCOURAGE ARREST POLICIES AND ENFORCEMENT OF PROTECTION ORDERS.—Section 2012 of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968 (42 U.S.C. 3796h–1) is amended—

(1) by redesignating subsection (c) as subsection (d); and

(2) by inserting after subsection (b) the following new subsection (c):

(“c) ADDITIONAL PRIORITIES.—In awarding grants under this part, the Attorney General shall also give a priority to States, Indian tribal governments, and units of local government that afford the same priority in responses to emergency calls involving domestic violence as is afforded to responses to emergency calls involving other life threatening circumstances.”.

(b) REPORT ON RESPONSE OF LOCAL LAW ENFORCEMENT TO EMERGENCY CALLS INVOLVING DOMESTIC VIOLENCE.—Not later than March 31, 2002, the Attorney General shall submit to the Committees on the Judiciary of the Senate and House of Representatives a report on the response of local law enforcement agencies to emergencies calls involving domestic violence.

(1) The report shall include the following:

(A) An analysis of the response of local law enforcement agencies throughout the United States to emergency calls involving domestic violence.

(B) A description of the manner in which local law enforcement agencies and their dispatch units (including 911 dispatch units) coordinate, establish priorities for, and respond to emergency calls involving domestic violence.

SA 1554. Mr. SPECTER submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill H.R. 2500, making appropriations for the Departments of Commerce, Justice, and State, the Judiciary, and related agencies for the fiscal year ending September 30, 2002, and for other purposes; which was ordered to lie on the table; as follows:

At the appropriate, strike “$1,000,000 for the Elwin Project in Pennsylvania to reduce placement in institutions of mentally ill youth.”

At the appropriate, insert: “$500,000 for the Elwyn Project in Pennsylvania to reduce placement in institutions of mentally ill youth”; “$400,000 for the Center for Corrections Education at Indiana University of Pennsylvania to develop and establish a program to train educators within correctional institutions throughout the United States”; and, “$100,000 to replicate a witness relocation program in Pennsylvania.”

SA 1555. Ms. LANDRIEU submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by her to the bill H.R. 2500, making appropriations for the Departments of Commerce, Justice, and State, the Judiciary, and related agencies for the fiscal year ending September 30, 2002, and for other purposes; which was ordered to lie on the table; as follows:

On page 23, line 2, strike “$2,089,990,000” and insert “$2,090,990,000”.

On page 24, line 16, strike “$578,125,000” and insert “$579,125,000”.

On page 24, line 19, strike “$76,125,000” and insert “$79,125,000”.

On page 24, line 21, before the semicolon insert “, of which $1,000,000 shall be for a grant to the Joint Emergency Services Training Center in Baton Rouge, Louisiana: Provided, That any amount provided in this Act for the Office of Victims of Crime is reduced by $1,000,000.”.

SA 1556. Ms. LANDRIEU submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by her to the bill H.R. 2500, making appropriations for the Departments of Commerce, Justice, and State, the Judiciary, and related agencies for the fiscal year ending September 30, 2002, and for other purposes; which was ordered to lie on the table; as follows:

On page 31, line 18, after “program,” insert “of which $300,000 shall be available for the ‘Proximity’ light program in Charleston, South Carolina.”.

On page 31, line 22, after “program,” insert “Provided further, That $1,500,000 shall be available only for the New Jersey State Police Law Enforcement Training Center.”.

On page 32, line 24, before the “,” insert “of which $300,000 shall be available only for a variable and Eurasian milfoil education and prevention program in New Hampshire and $300,000 shall be available only for the Connecticut River Partnership.”.

On page 20, line 14, after the “,” insert “of which $3,000,000 shall be for a grant to the Law Enforcement Innovative Center at the University of Tennessee.”

On page 32, line 5, after the “,” insert “of which $1,500,000 shall be available only for in-car cameras for Arkansas State Police cruisers.”

On page 32, line 10, after the first “,” insert “of which $3,000,000 shall be for a grant to the Law Enforcement Innovative Center at the University of Tennessee.”

On page 32, line 21, strike “$9,962,000 shall be available for partial site and planning for the U.S. P. Northeast-North mid-Atlantic facility to be located in Berea, New Hampshire.”

On page 31, line 18, after “program,” insert the following: “of which $1,500,000 shall be available only for in-car cameras for Arkansas State Police cruisers.”

On page 31, line 18, after “program,” insert the following: “of which $3,000,000 will be for a grant to the Jersey City Police Department’s Crime Identification System to upgrade communications systems.”

On page 30, line 24, after the third “,” insert the following: “including $1,500,000 for a computer forensic lab in Ohio.”

On page 23, line 23, insert “That” the following: “from such funds $15,000,000 shall be used to carry out the Kids 2000 Act (Public Law 106–313; 114 Stat. 1260): Provided further, That”.

On page 30, line 24, insert after “laboratories” the following: “of which $1,000,000 shall be available to the Mecklenburg County, North Carolina Sheriff’s Office for a Sex Offender Registration Unit.”

On page 41, line 22, insert the following:

SEC. 112. Section 6 of the Hmong Veterans’ Naturalization Act of 2000 (Public Law 106–207; 8 U.S.C. 1423 note) (as amended by Public Law 106–415) is amended by striking “18 months” each place such term appears and inserting “36 months.”

Insert at the appropriate place the following:

SEC. 112. SENSE OF THE SENATE REGARDING THE REPUBLIC OF KOREA’S IMPROPER BAIOULT OF HYNIX SEMICONDUCTOR.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress finds that—

(1) the Government of the Republic of Korea over many years has supplied aid to the Korean semiconductor industry enabling that industry to be the Republic of Korea’s leading exporter;

(2) this assistance has occurred through a coordinated series of government programs and policies, consisting of preferential access to credit, low-interest loans, government grants, preferential access to export credit and export insurance, government inducement of private loans, tariff reductions, and other measures;

(3) in December 1997, the United States, the International Monetary Fund (IMF), other foreign government entities, and a group of international financial institutions assembled an unprecedented $50,000,000,000 financial package to save the Korean economy from declaring bankruptcy; (4) as part of that rescue package, the Republic of Korea agreed to put an end to corporate violations, and to overhaul the banking and financial sectors; (5) Korea also pledged to permit and require banks to run on market principles, to allow for realistic bank recapitalizations and workouts to occur rather than bailouts, and to end subsidies; (6) the Republic of Korea agreed to all of these provisions in the Stand-by Arrangement with the IMF dated December 3, 1997; (7) section 602 of the Foreign Operations, Export Financing, and Related Agencies Appropriations Act, 1999, as enacted by section 101(d) of Division A of the Omnibus Consolidated and Emergency Supplemental Appropriations Act, 1999, and July 2, 1999 that the Stand-by Arrangement was being adhered to, and assured that the $50,000,000,000 would not authorize further IMF payments to Korea unless the Secretary of the Treasury certified that the provisions of the IMF Stand-by Arrangement were adhered to, and assured Congress that consultations had been held with the Republic of the Government of Korea in connection with the certifications; (8) the Republic of Korea has been adhered to the World Trade Organization, and to the Agreement on Subsidies and Countervailing Measures (as defined in section 101(d)(12) of the World Trade Organization, and to the Republic of Korea in connection with the certifications; with the Government of the Republic of Korea under Article 4 and Article 7 of the IMF Agreement with Korea to the United States; and with its commitments to the IMF and to the World Trade Organization; (9) the Secretary of the Treasury certified to Congress on December 11, 1998, April 5, 1999, and July 2, 1999 that the Stand-by Arrangement was being adhered to, and assured Congress that consultations had been held with the Government of the Republic of Korea in connection with the certifications; (10) the Republic of Korea has adhered to the World Trade Organization, and to the Agreement on Subsidies and Countervailing Measures (as defined in section 101(d)(12) of the Uruguay Round Agreement on Subsidies and Countervailing Measures); (11) Hyundai Semiconductor is a major exporter of semiconductor products from the Republic of Korea to the United States; and (12) the Republic of Korea has now engaged in a massive $5,000,000,000 bailout of Hyundai Semiconductor which contravenes the commitments immediately such other actions as are necessary to assure that the improper bailout by the Republic of Korea is stopped, and its effects fully offset or reversed; (2) the agreement between the United States and Republic of Korea has been and will continue to be harmed significantly by the bailout of a major exporter of products from Korea to the United States; and (3) the Republic of Korea should end immediately the bailout of Hyundai Semiconductor; (4) the Republic of Korea should comply immediately with its commitments to the IMF, with its trade agreements, and with the assurances it made to the Secretary of the Treasury; and (5) the United States Trade Representative and the Secretary of Commerce should monitor and report to Congress on steps that have been taken to end this bailout and reverse its impact on the Korean economy from declaring bankruptcy;
September 13, 2001

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—SENATE 17011

State Department, Justice Department, and other Government officials concerning the immigration provisions of the Violence Against Women Act:"

On page 52, line 23, strike "$2,288,305,000 to remain available until expended" and insert "$2,273,305,000 to remain available until expended", of which $2,000,000 shall be for West Coast Groundfish Cooperative Research and $3,000,000 shall be for Oregon Groundfish Disaster Assistance.'.

On page 31, line 18 after the ";", insert the following:

"of which $1,000,000 is to the National...multi-state information sharing demonstration project.",

On page 56, on line 18, before the colon, insert:

"of which $2,500,000 is for coastal land acquisition at Rocky Point in Warwick, Rhode Island".

On page 34, line 5, before the colon, insert the following:

"of which $500,000 for the Elwyn Project in Pennsylvania to reduce placement in institutions of mentally ill youth; $400,000 for the Center for Corrections Education at the University of Pennsylvania to develop and establish a program to train educators within corrections institutions throughout the United States; and, "$100,000 for the criminal alien and witness relocation program in Pennsylvania".

On page 57, line 25 strike "$39,610,000" and insert "$37,120,000".

On page 44, line 5 strike "$66,820,000" and insert "$67,320,000".

On page 115, after line 15, insert the following:

SEC. 623. Section 2002 of the Victims of Trafficking and Violence Protection Act of 2000 (Public Law 106-388; 114 Stat. 1424) is amended—

(1) in subsection (a)(2)(A)—

(A) by striking "or" at the end of clause (i); and

(B) in clause (ii)—

(i) by striking "February 17, 1999," and inserting "May 17, 1999, May 7, 1997, February 17, 1999, October 22, 1999,"; and

(ii) by inserting "October 22, 1999," after "February 17, 1999;"; and

(iii) by striking the semicolon at the end and inserting "."

(C) by adding at the end the following new clause:

"(iii) a member of the plaintiff class in Case Nos. 00CV110010/ESG in the United States District Court for the District of Columbia;"; and

(2) in subsection (b)(2)—

(A) by redesignating subparagraphs (A), and (B) as clauses (i) and (ii), respectively;

(B) by inserting "(A)" before "For purposes"; and

(C) by adding at the end the following:

"(B) For any judgment rendered in Case Number 1:00CV03110(ESG) in the United States District Court for the District of Columbia, the amounts available under subsection (a), the Secretary of the Treasury shall make such further payment as necessary to satisfy the judgment by—

(i) liquidating those assets without; third party interest of those countries designated as state sponsors of terrorism, under section 40(b) of the Arms Control Act or section 601 of the International Trade Administration Act of 1972, held or blocked by the United States; and

(ii) in the event the judgment remains not fully satisfied after such liquidation, using other available means collect from Iran, with one-third of any amount collected by these other means to be remitted to the Treasury of the United States.,"

On page 30, line 10, strike "$1,019,874,000" and insert "$1,044,874,000".

On page 30, line 11, strike "$519,962,000" and insert "$175,962,000".

On page 30, line 24, insert after the third ";" the following:

"of which $25,000,000 shall be transferred to the Immigrant Services and Infrastructure Improvement Account under section 204 of the Immigration and Nationality Act (8 U.S.C. 1382b) to be used for the purpose of funding for in such account may be used and to remain available until expended":

On page 24, strike lines 19, 20, and 21, and insert:

"$79,625,000 shall be for discretionary grants under the Edward Byrne Memorial State and Local Law Enforcement Assistance Account under section 204 of the Immigration Services and Infrastructure Improvement Account under section 204 of the Immigration and Nationality Act (8 U.S.C. 1382b) to be used for the purpose of funding for in such account may be used and to remain available until expended":

On page 25, after line 21 insert the following:

"(d) $200,000 for the Attorney General to conduct a study and prepare a report to be submitted to the Subcommittee on Commerce, Justice and State Appropriations of the Senate and the House of Representatives Appropriations Committee on the response of local law enforcement agencies to emergency calls involving domestic violence.

On page 115, after line 23, add the following:

SEC. 623. Clause (ii) of section 621(h)(A) of the Communications Satellite Act of 1962 (47 U.S.C. 763(h)(A)) is amended by striking "on or about October 1, 2000," and all that follows through the end and inserting "not later than December 31, 2001, except that the Commission may extend this deadline to not later than June 30, 2003.".

SA 1559. Mr. HOLLINGS (for himself and Mr. GRIGG) proposed an amendment to the bill H.R. 2500, making appropriations for the Departments of Commerce, Justice, and State, the Judiciary, and related agencies for the fiscal year ending September 30, 2002, and for other purposes; as follows:

On page 53, line 11 strike "$3,061,805,000" and insert "$3,063,805,000".

On page 28, line 10, strike "$5,060,305,000" and insert "$3,063,805,000".

On page 25, after line 21 insert the following:

"(a) of the amount appropriated under this heading, "$1,500,000 for the Standing Against Global Exploitation (SAGE) Project, Inc.".

(b) The Senate—

(1) declares that in the quest to identify, bring to justice, and punish the perpetrators and sponsors of the terrorist attacks on the United States on September 11, 2001, that the civil rights and civil liberties of all Americans, including Arab-Americans and American Muslims, should be protected; and

(2) condemns any acts of violence or discrimination against any Americans, including Arab-Americans and American Muslims.

SA 1561. Mr. HATCH submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill S. 1422, to provide for the expedited payment of certain benefits for public safety officer who was killed or suffered a catastrophic injury as a direct and proximate result of a personal injury sustained in the line of duty in connection with the terrorist attacks of September 11, 2001, which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary; as follows:

On page 2, at line 8, delete "shall pay to qualified beneficiaries, not later than 30 days" and insert "Shall authorize payment to qualified beneficiaries, not later than 30 days".

SA 1562. Mr. HATCH (for himself, Mr. FEINGOLD, Mr. KYL, Mr. DURBIN, Mr. SESSIONS, Mr. THOMPSON, Mr. THURMOND, and Mr. MCCAIN) proposed an amendment to the bill H.R. 2500, making appropriations for the Departments of Commerce, Justice, and State, the Judiciary, and related agencies for the fiscal year ending September 30, 2002, and for other purposes; as follows:

On page 116, between lines 9 and 10, insert the following:

TITLE VIII—TERRORISM

SEC. 801. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the "Combating Terrorism Act of 2001".

SEC. 812. ASSESSMENT OF NATIONAL GUARD CAPABILITIES TO PREEMPTIVELY DISRUPT DOMESTIC TERRORIST ATTACKS INVOLVING WEAPONS OF MASS DESTRUCTION.

(a) REPORT.—Not later than 60 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Comptroller General shall submit to Congress a report containing an assessment of the capabilities of the National Guard to preemptively disrupt a terrorist attack within the United States involving weapons of mass destruction, and to respond to such an attack.

(b) ELEMENTS.—The report required under subsection (a) shall include:

(1) an assessment of the legal restrictions on the use of the National Guard to contain and capture weapons of mass destruction materials that are discovered by law enforcement agencies within the United States;

(2) an assessment of the physical readiness of the National Guard to carry out a mission to contain and capture such materials;

(3) a description of the modifications in the structure of the National Guard, and in law enforcement intelligence dissemination capabilities, that are necessary to effect a credible, preemptive strike capability for the National Guard against a terrorist attack within the United States involving a weapon of mass destruction; and

(4) an identification of the Federal agency best suited to carry out a preemptive strike against organizations possessing weapons of mass destruction materials in the United States.

SEC. 813. LONG-TERM RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT TO ADDRESS CATASTROPHIC TERRORIST ATTACKS.

(a) SENSE OF CONGRESS.—It is the sense of Congress that—

(1) there has not been sufficient emphasis on long-term research and development with respect to technologies useful in fighting terrorism; and

(2) the United States should make better use of its considerable accomplishments in science and technology to prevent or address terrorist attacks in the future, particularly attacks involving chemical, biological, or nuclear agents.

(b) ESTABLISHMENT OF PROGRAM.—(1) Not later than six months after the date of the enactment of this Act, the President shall establish a comprehensive program of long-term research and development with respect to science and technology necessary to prevent, preempt, detect, disrupt, and respond to catastrophic terrorist attacks.

(2) In establishing the program, the President shall—

(A) establish a comprehensive set of requirements for the program; and

(B) either—

(i) establish in an appropriate Federal agency an element with responsibility for the program; or

(ii) assign to a current element of a Federal agency responsibility for the program.

(c) REPORT ON PROPOSED PROGRAM.—Not later than 60 days before the commencement of the program required by subsection (b), the President shall submit to Congress a report on the proposed program. The report shall set forth the element of the Federal Government proposed to be established or assigned responsibility under subsection (b)(2)(B), including the proposed organization and responsibilities of the element for purposes of the program.

(d) CATASTROPHIC TERRORIST ATTACK DEFINED.—In this section, the term “catastrophic terrorist attack” means a terrorist attack against the United States perpetrated by a state, substate, or nonstate actor that involves mass casualties or the use of a weapon of mass destruction.

SEC. 814. REVIEW OF AUTHORITY OF FEDERAL AGENCIES TO ADDRESS CATASTROPHIC TERRORIST ATTACKS.

(a) REVIEW REQUIRED.—The Attorney General shall conduct a review of the legal authority of the agencies of the Federal Government, including the Department of Defense, the Department of Justice, or any other Federal agency, to preempt, detect, and interdict, catastrophic terrorist attacks.

(b) REPORT.—Not later than six months after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Attorney General shall submit to Congress a report on the review conducted under subsection (a). The report shall include any recommendations that the Attorney General considers appropriate, including recommendations as to whether additional legal authority for any particular Federal agency is advisable in order to enhance the capability of the Federal Government to respond to, and to prevent, preempt, detect, and interdict, catastrophic terrorist attacks.

(c) CATASTROPHIC TERRORIST ATTACK DEFINED.—In this section, the term “catastrophic terrorist attack” means a terrorist attack against the United States perpetrated by a state, substate, or nonstate actor that involves mass casualties or the use of a weapon of mass destruction.

SEC. 815. GUIDELINES FOR DESTRUCTION OF TERRORIST INFORMANTS.

The Director of Central Intelligence shall rescind the provisions of the 1995 Central Intelligence Agency guidelines on recruitment of terrorist informants that relate to the recruitment of persons who have access to intelligence related terrorist plans, intentions and capabilities.

SEC. 816. DISCLOSURE BY LAW ENFORCEMENT AGENCIES OF CERTAIN INTELLIGENCE OBTAINED BY INTERCEPTION OF COMMUNICATIONS.

(a) REPORT ON AUTHORITIES RELATING TO SHARING OF CRIMINAL WIRETAP INFORMATION.—Not later than 60 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the President shall submit to Congress a report on the legal authorities govern the sharing of criminal wiretap information under applicable Federal laws, including section 104 of the National Security Act of 1947 (50 U.S.C. 403-4).

(b) ELEMENTS.—The report under subsection (a) shall include—

(1) a description of the type of information that the Department of Justice, or other law enforcement agencies, share with other elements of the intelligence community; and

(2) any recommendations that the President considers appropriate, including a proposal for legislation to implement such recommendations, to improve the capability of the Department of Justice, or other law enforcement agencies, to share foreign intelligence information or counterintelligence information with other elements of the intelligence community on matters such as counterterrorism.

(c) DEFINITIONS.—In this section:

(1) FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE, COUNTERINTELLIGENCE.—The terms “foreign intelligence” and “counterintelligence” have the meanings given those terms in section 3 of the National Security Act of 1947 (50 U.S.C. 401a). The intelligence community.

(2) ELEMENT OF THE INTELLIGENCE COMMUNITY.—The term “element of the intelligence community” means any element of the intelligence community specified or designated under section 3(4) of the National Security Act of 1947.

SEC. 817. JOINT TASK FORCE ON TERRORIST FUNDRAISING.

(a) SENSE OF CONGRESS.—It is the sense of Congress that—

(1) many terrorist groups secretly solicit and exploit the resources of international nongovernmental organizations, companies, and wealthy individuals; and

(2) the Federal Government is not fully utilizing all the tools available to it to prevent the flow of funds to or for the benefit of international terrorist organizations, and it should do so.

SEC. 818. IMPROVEMENT OF CONTROLS ON PATHOGENS AND EQUIPMENT FOR PRODUCTION OF BIOLOGICAL WEAPONS.

(a) REPORT ON IMPROVEMENT OF CONTROLS.—Not later than 60 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Attorney General shall submit to Congress a report on the means of improving United States controls of biological pathogens and the equipment necessary to develop, produce, or deliver biological weapons.

(b) Recommendations, if any, for legislation to make illegal the possession of the equipment identified under subparagraph (A), for other than a legitimate purpose, including attempts and conspiracies to do so.

(c) Recommendations, if any, for legislation to control the domestic sale and transfer of the equipment identified under subparagraph (A).

(d) PROVED SECURITY OF FACILITIES.—(1) Commencing not later than 60 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the President shall undertake appropriate actions to enhance the standards for the protection and security of the biological pathogens described in subsection (a) at the research laboratories and other government and private facilities and sites that create, possess, handle, store, or transport such pathogens in order to protect against the theft or other wrongful diversion of such pathogens.

(2) Not later than six months after the date of the enactment of this Act, the President shall submit to Congress a report on the actions undertaken under paragraph (1).

SEC. 819. REIMBURSEMENT OF PERSONNEL PERFORMING COUNTERTEERRORISM DUTIES FOR PROFESSIONAL LIABILITY INSURANCE.

(a) REQUIREMENT FOR FULL REIMBURSEMENT.—(1) Notwithstanding any other provision of law and subject to paragraph (2), the head of an agency employing a qualified employee shall reimburse the qualified employee for the costs incurred by the employee for professional liability insurance.

(2) Reimbursement of a qualified employee under paragraph (1) shall be contingent on the submission by the qualified employee to the head of the agency concerned of such information or documentation as the head of the agency concerned shall require.

(3) Amounts for reimbursements under paragraph (1) shall be derived from amounts available to the agency concerned for salaries and expenses.
SEC. 831. LAUNDERING OF PROCEEDS OF TERRORISM.

Section 1956(c)(17)(D) of title 18, United States Code, is amended—
(a) by redesignating paragraph (p), as so redesignated, by striking ‘‘or applied, or any Deputy Assistant Attorney General,’’ and inserting ‘‘any Deputy Assistant Attorney General, or any United States Attorney,’’.
(b) by inserting after paragraph (q) the following new subparagraphs:
‘‘(1) any criminal violation of sections 2332, 2332a, 2332b, 2339A, or 2339B of this title (relating to terrorism); or’’.
(c) by striking ‘‘(q) any criminal violation of sections 2332, 2332a, 2332b, 2332d, 2339A, or 2339B of this title (relating to terrorism); or’’.

SA 1563. Ms. COLLINS proposed an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill H.R. 2500, making appropriations for the Departments of Commerce, Justice, and State, the Judiciary, and related agencies for the fiscal year ending September 30, 2002, and for other purposes; which was ordered to lie on the table; as follows:

At the appropriate place, insert the following:

SECTION 1. AUTHORITY TO INTERCEPT WIRE, ORAL, AND ELECTRONIC COMMUNICATIONS RELATING TO TERRORISM OFFENSES.

Section 2516(1) of title 18, United States Code, is amended—
(1) by redesignating paragraph (p), as so redesignated, by striking ‘‘section 1341 (relating to mail fraud),’’ and inserting ‘‘section 1341 (relating to mail fraud), and section 2339B, 2332, 2332b, 2332d, 2339A, or 2339B of this title (relating to terrorism); or’’.

SA 1565. Mr. HATCH submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill H.R. 2500, making appropriations for the Departments of Commerce, Justice, and State, the Judiciary, and related agencies for the fiscal year ending September 30, 2002, and for other purposes; which was ordered to lie on the table; as follows:

At the appropriate place, insert the following:

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—SENATE 17013
(1) by inserting “or trap and trace device” after “pen register”;
(2) by inserting “, routing, addressing,” after “dialing”; and
(3) by striking “call processing” and inserting “the processing and transmitting of wire and electronic communications”.

(b) ISSUANCE OF ORDERS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Subsection (a) of section 3123 of this title is amended to read as follows:

“(a) In General.—(1) Upon an application made under section 3122(a)(1) of this title, the court shall enter an ex parte order authorizing the installation and use of a pen register or trap and trace device if the court finds that the attorney for the Government has certified to the court that the information likely to be obtained by such installation and use is relevant to an ongoing criminal investigation. The order shall, upon service of the order, apply to any entity providing wire or electronic communication service in the United States whose assistance is required by effectuate the order.

(2) Upon an application made under section 3122(a)(2) of this title, the court shall enter an ex parte order authorizing the installation and use of a pen register or trap and trace device within the jurisdiction of the court if the court finds that the State law enforcement or investigative officer has certified to the court that the information likely to be obtained by such installation and use is relevant to an ongoing criminal investigation.”.

(2) CONTENTS OF ORDER.—Subsection (b)(1) of that section is amended—

(A) in subparagraph (A)—

(i) by inserting “or other facility” after “telephone line”; and

(ii) by inserting before the semicolon at the end “or applied”; and

(B) by striking subparagraph (C) and inserting the following new subparagraph (C):

“(C) a description of the communications to which the order applies, including the number or other identifier and, if known, the location of the telephone line or other facility to which the pen register or trap and trace device is to be attached or applied, and, in the case of an order authorizing installation and use of a pen register or trap and trace device under subsection (a)(2), the geographic limits of the order; and”.

(3) NonDisclosure Requirements.—Subsection (c)(6) of that section is amended—

(A) by inserting “or other facility” after “the line”; and

(B) by striking “or who has been ordered by the court” and inserting “or applied or who is obligated by the order”.

(c) EMERGENCY INSTALLATION.—Section 3125(a)(1) of this title is amended—

(1) in subparagraph (A), by striking “or” after “the line”; and

(2) in subparagraph (B), by striking the comma at the end and inserting a semicolon and

(3) by inserting after subparagraph (B) the following new subparagraphs:

“(C) immediate threat to public health or safety; or

(1) Court of Competent Jurisdiction.—Paragraph (2) of section 3127 of that title is amended by striking subparagraph (A) and inserting the following new subparagraph (A):

“(A) any district court of the United States (including a magistrate judge of such a court) or any United States Court of Appeals having jurisdiction over the offense being investigated; or”.

(2) Pen Register.—Paragraph (3) of that section is amended—

(A) by striking “electronic or other impulses” and all that follows through “is attached” and inserting “inserting “dialing, routing, addressing, or signaling information transmitted by an instrument or facility from which a wire or electronic communication is transmitted”; and

(B) by striking “or process” after “device” each place it appears.

(3) Trap and Trace Device.—Paragraph (4) of that section is amended—

(A) by inserting “or process” after “a device”; and

(B) by striking “an instrument” and all that follows through the end and inserting “or other dialing, routing, addressing, and signaling information relevant to identifying the source of a wire or electronic communication”;

SA 1566. Mr. HATCH submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill H.R. 2500, making appropriations for the Departments of Commerce, Justice, and State, the Judiciary, and related agencies for the fiscal year ending September 30, 2002, and for other purposes; which was ordered to lie on the table; as follows:

SEC. 1. AUTHORITY TO INTERCEPT WIRE, ORAL, AND ELECTRONIC COMMUNICATIONS; REPEAL OF COMPUTER FRAUD AND ABUSE.

Section 2516(b)(1)(c) of title 18, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by striking “and” at the end and inserting “, and shorter or longer periods of time to be approved at the discretion of the awarding agency where appropriate for a particular project”;

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by subsection (a) shall be effective beginning in fiscal year 2004.

SEC. 4. AGENCY OUTREACH.

Section 9(o) of the Small Business Act (15 U.S.C. 638(o)) is amended—

(1) in paragraph (12), by striking “and” at the end;

(2) in paragraph (13), by striking the period at the end and inserting a semicolon; and

(3) by adding at the end the following:

“(14) implement an outreach program to research institutions and small business concerns for the purpose of enforcing its SBIR program, in conjunction with any such outreach done for purposes of the SBIR program; and”.
SEC. 5. POLICY DIRECTIVE MODIFICATIONS.

Section 9(p) of the Small Business Act (15 U.S.C. 638(o)) is amended by adding at the end the following:

“(3) MODIFICATIONS.—Not later than 120 days after the date of enactment of this paragraph and subsection to clarify that the rights provided for under paragraph (2)(B)(v) apply to all Federal funding awards under this section, including the first phase (as described in subsection (e)(6)(A)), the second phase (as described in subsection (e)(6)(B)), and the third phase (as described in subsection (e)(6)(C)).”

SEC. 6. STTR PROGRAM DATA COLLECTION.

(a) In General.—Section 9(o) of the Small Business Act (15 U.S.C. 638(o)), as amended by this Act, is amended by adding at the end the following:

“(15) collect, and maintain in a common format in accordance with subsection (v), such information from awardees as is necessary for the Administrator under subsection (w) as the Federal funding awards under this section, small business concerns under each of the SBIR and STTR programs, including standards regarding each of the contractor’s data, and other interested parties the opportunity to submit written comments.”

(b) Adoption of Model Agreement by Federal Agencies.—Section 9(o)(11) of the Small Business Act (15 U.S.C. 638(o)(11)) is amended by adding at the end ‘‘(v) STTR Model Agreement for Intellectual Property Rights.’’

“(w) STTR Model Agreement for Intellectual Property Rights.—(1) In the event the Administrator shall promulgate regulations establishing a single model agreement for use in the STTR program that allocates between small business concerns and the research institutions of intellectual property rights and rights, if any, to carry out follow-on research, development, or commercialization. ‘‘(2) Open for Comment.—In promulgating regulations under paragraph (1), the Administrator shall provide for the affected agencies, small business concerns, research institutions, and other interested parties the opportunity to submit written comments.”

SEC. 7. STTR PROGRAM-WIDE MODEL AGREEMENT FOR INTELLECTUAL PROPERTY RIGHTS.

(a) Development of Model Agreement.—Section 9 of the Small Business Act (15 U.S.C. 638) is amended by adding at the end the following:

“(w) STTR Model Agreement for Intellectual Property Rights.—(1) In the event the Administrator shall promulgate regulations establishing a single model agreement for use in the STTR program that allocates between small business concerns and research institutions intellectual property rights and rights, if any, to carry out follow-on research, development, or commercialization. ‘‘(2) Open for Comment.—In promulgating regulations under paragraph (1), the Administrator shall provide for the affected agencies, small business concerns, research institutions, and other interested parties the opportunity to submit written comments.”

(b) Adoption of Model Agreement by Federal Agencies.—Section 9(o)(11) of the Small Business Act (15 U.S.C. 638(o)(11)) is amended by adding at the end ‘‘(v) STTR Model Agreement for Intellectual Property Rights.’’

(c) Simplified Reporting Requirements.—Section 34(c)(2)(B) of the Small Business Act (15 U.S.C. 657d(c)(2)(B)) is amended by adding at the end ‘‘(v) STTR” after ‘‘SBIR” each place it appears.

SEC. 8. FAST TRACKING IN RESEARCH TO WOMEN-OWNED AND MINORITY-OWNED SMALL BUSINESS CONCERNS AND CONCERNS IN AREAS NOT PARTICIPATING IN SBIR AND STTR.

(a) Selection Consideration.—Section 34(c)(2)(B) of the Small Business Act (15 U.S.C. 657d(c)(2)(B)) is amended—

(1) in clause (i), by striking ‘‘and’’ at the end;

(2) in clause (v), by striking the period at the end and inserting ‘‘and’’; and

(3) by adding at the end the following new clause:

“(vi) whether the proposal addresses the needs of small business concerns,

(1) owned and controlled by women;

(2) owned and controlled by minorities; and

(3) located in areas that have historically not participated in the SBIR and STTR programs.”

(b) Regulations.—Section 34(c)(4) of the Small Business Act (15 U.S.C. 657d(c)(4)) is amended by adding at the end the following:

“The Administrator shall promulgate regulations establishing standards for the consideration of proposals under paragraph (2), including standards regarding each of the considerations identified in paragraph (2)(B).”

AUTHORITY FOR COMMITTEES TO MEET

COMMITTEE ON ARMED SERVICES

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Armed Services be authorized to meet during the session of the Senate on Thursday, September 13, 2001 at 2:30 p.m., in open session to consider the nomination of General Richard B. Myers, U.S.A.F., for reappointment in the grade of general for appointment as the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

COMMITTEE ON FOREIGN RELATIONS

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Foreign Relations be authorized to meet during the session of the Senate on Thursday, September 13, 2001 at 11 a.m. to hold a nomination hearing.

To be introduced by The Honorable Ted Stevens, United States Senate, Washington, DC; the Honorable John McCain, United States Senate, Washington, DC; and the Honorable Richard Holbrooke Counselor, Council on Foreign Relations, New York, NY.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

COMMITTEE ON FOREIGN RELATIONS

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Foreign Relations be authorized to meet during the session of the Senate on Thursday, September 13, 2001 at 5:00 p.m. to hold a nomination hearing.

Nominees:

The Honorable Patrick Kennedy, of Illinois, to be Representative of the United States of America to the United Nations for U.N. Management and Reform, with the rank of Ambassador.

Mrs. Laura Kennedy, of New York, to be Ambassador to Turkmenistan.

The Honorable Ronald Neumann, of Virginia, to be Ambassador to the State of Bahrain.

Mrs. Marcelle Wahba, of California, to be Ambassador to the United Arab Emirates.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

COMMITTEE ON HEALTH, EDUCATION, LABOR, AND PENSIONS

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions be authorized to meet for a hearing on Protecting Against Genetic Discrimination: The Limits Of Existing Laws during the session of the Senate on Thursday, September 13, 2001, at 10:00 a.m.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.
Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions be authorized to meet in executive session during the session of the Senate on Thursday, September 13, 2001.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

COMMITTEE ON THE JUDICIARY

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on the Judiciary be authorized to meet to conduct a nominations hearing on Thursday, September 13, 2001 at 2:00 p.m. in Dirksen 226.

I. Unfinished business:

S. 754, the Drug Competition Act of 2001 [Leahy/Kohl/Schumer/Durbin/Feingold/Cantwell/Grassley].

S. 1140, the Motor Vehicle Franchise Contract Arbitration Fairness Act of 2001 [Hatch/Feingold/Grassley/Leahy].

II. Nominations:

To Be United States Attorney:

Michael G. Heavican—District of Nebraska; Paul J. McNulty—Eastern District of Virginia; Colm F. Connolly—District of Delaware; Roscoe C. Howard, Jr.—District of the District of Columbia; Michael J. Sullivan—District of Massachusetts; Joseph S. Van Bokkelen—Northern District of Indiana; Stephen B. Pence—Western District of Kentucky; Gregory F. Van Tatenhove—Eastern District of Kentucky; Thomas B. Heffelfinger—District of Minnesota; Patrick L. Meehan—Eastern District of Pennsylvania; Mary Beth Buchanan—Western District of Pennsylvania; Peter W. Hall—District of Vermont.

III. Bills:

S. 1315, The Judicial Improvement and Integrity Act of 2001 [Leahy/Hatch].

S. Res. 159, Designating the Week Beginning September 16, 2001 as “National Historically Black Colleges and Universities Week.” [Thurmond].

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

COMMITTEE ON THE JUDICIARY

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on the Judiciary be authorized to meet to conduct a nominations hearing on Thursday, September 13, 2001 at 2:00 p.m. in Dirksen 226.

Panel I: Senator Thad Cochran (R-MS); Senator Christopher Dodd (D-CT); Senator Joseph Lieberman (D-CT); Senator Trent Lott (R-MS); Senator Diane Feinstein (D-CA); Senator Chuck Hagel (R-NE); Senator Hillary Clinton (D-NY); Senator Ben Nelson (D-NE).

Panel II: Barrington D. Parker, Jr., to be United States Circuit Judge for the District of Nebraska; Michael P. Mills, to be United States District Judge for the Northern District of Mississippi.

Panel IV: John W. Gillis, to be Director of the Office of Victims of Crime.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

SUBCOMMITTEE ON FISHERIES, WILDLIFE, AND WATER

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Environment and Public Works, Subcommittee on Fisheries, Wildlife, and Water be authorized to meet on Thursday, September 13, 2001 at 10:00 a.m. to conduct a hearing on improving the utilization of available water and wasting water infrastructure funding. The hearing will be held in the Rm. SD-406.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

SUBCOMMITTEE ON PUBLIC HEALTH

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Environment and Public Works, Subcommittee on Public Health, be authorized to meet for a hearing on Revitalizing Protections for Humans Subjects in Research during the session of the Senate on Thursday, September 13, 2001 at 2:00 p.m.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

SUBCOMMITTEE ON TECHNOLOGY AND SPACE

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Subcommittee on Technology and Space of the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation be authorized to meet on Thursday, September 13, 2001, at 2:00 p.m. on Digital Divide.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

PRIVILEGES OF THE FLOOR

Mr. GREGG. I ask unanimous consent that Rebecca Farmer and Casey McGinley, members of Senator KYL's staff, be granted the privilege of the floor during the pending debate on H.R. 2500.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the following staff members be granted the privilege of the floor for purposes of debate on this bill: Jeff Kuhnreich, John Barth, Joe Lozano, and Jeff Taylor of Senator HATCH's staff.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

JOINT REFERRAL OF NOMINATION

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the nomination of Harold Craig Manson, of Colorado, to be Assistant Secretary for Fish and Wildlife, be considered read, passed, and the motions to reconsider be laid upon the table, en bloc; that any statements relating to these resolutions be printed in the RECORD; further, that the consideration of these items appear separately in the RECORD, with the above occurring with no intervening action.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

REAPPOINTMENT OF ANNE D'HARNONCOURT AS A CITIZEN REGENT OF THE BOARD OF REGENTS OF THE SMITHSONIAN INSTITUTION

The joint resolution (S.J. Res. 19), providing for the reappointment of Anne d'Harnoncourt as a citizen regent of the Board of Regents of the Smithsonian Institution, which had been reported from the Committee on Rules and Administration, was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

S.J. Res. 19

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

That, in accordance with section 5581 of the Revised Statutes of the United States (20 U.S.C. 43), the vacancy on the Board of Regents of the Smithsonian Institution, in the class other than Members of Congress, occurring by reason of the expiration of the term of Anne d'Harnoncourt of Pennsylvania, is filled by reappointment of the incumbent for a term of 6 years. The reappointment shall take effect on December 29, 2001.
AMENDING THE IMMIGRATION AND NATIONALITY ACT

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the immediate consideration of S. 1424, introduced earlier today by Senator KENNEDY.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the bill by title.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the immediate consideration of S. 1424, introduced earlier today by Senator KENNEDY.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 1424) to amend the Immigration and Nationality Act to provide permanent authority for the admission of "S" visa non-immigrants.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to the consideration of the bill.

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, in this time of tragedy, there are a few things Congress can do to provide immediate assistance. Passage of this legislation is one of them.

This bill restores the 'S' visa, which Congress created as part of the 1994 Violent Crime Control Act. The visa allows foreign nationals with critical information about criminal cases, especially events of terrorism, to remain in the United States legally for the purpose of cooperating with law enforcement.

The provision authorizing the 'S' visa expired yesterday, so without this legislation, law enforcement will be unable to take advantage of it. The State and Justice Departments have requested that we reinstate the 'S' visa. I urge the Senate to grant this request and to give law enforcement the support it needs in this area.

This is a limited program, but it serves an important purpose. The number of 'S' visas granted in a year is limited to 200 for those providing information about crimes and an additional 50 specifically devoted to those who can provide information about terrorism.

Our law enforcement officials face a terrible responsibility in seeking out the perpetrators of these evil acts. I am pleased to co-sponsor this legislation, and hope that it helps in this search.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the bill be read a third time and passed, the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table, and that any statements relating to the bill be printed in the RECORD.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the immediate consideration of S. 1424, introduced earlier today by Senator KENNEDY.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 1424) to reauthorize the Small Business Technology Transfer Program, and for other purposes.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to the consideration of the bill.

AMENDMENT NO. 1569

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the immediate consideration of S. 1424, introduced earlier today by Senator KENNEDY.

The clerks will report the bill by title.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 1424) to reauthorize the Small Business Technology Transfer Program, and for other purposes.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to the consideration of the bill.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the immediate consideration of S. 1424, introduced earlier today by Senator KENNEDY.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 1424) to reauthorize the Small Business Technology Transfer Program, and for other purposes.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to the consideration of the bill.

AMENDMENT NO. 1569

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the immediate consideration of S. 1424, introduced earlier today by Senator KENNEDY.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 1424) to reauthorize the Small Business Technology Transfer Program, and for other purposes.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to the consideration of the bill.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the immediate consideration of S. 1424, introduced earlier today by Senator KENNEDY.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 1424) to reauthorize the Small Business Technology Transfer Program, and for other purposes.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to the consideration of the bill.

AMENDMENT NO. 1569

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the immediate consideration of S. 1424, introduced earlier today by Senator KENNEDY.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 1424) to reauthorize the Small Business Technology Transfer Program, and for other purposes.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to the consideration of the bill.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the immediate consideration of S. 1424, introduced earlier today by Senator KENNEDY.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 1424) to reauthorize the Small Business Technology Transfer Program, and for other purposes.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to the consideration of the bill.

AMENDMENT NO. 1569

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the immediate consideration of S. 1424, introduced earlier today by Senator KENNEDY.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 1424) to reauthorize the Small Business Technology Transfer Program, and for other purposes.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to the consideration of the bill.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the immediate consideration of S. 1424, introduced earlier today by Senator KENNEDY.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 1424) to reauthorize the Small Business Technology Transfer Program, and for other purposes.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to the consideration of the bill.

AMENDMENT NO. 1569

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the immediate consideration of S. 1424, introduced earlier today by Senator KENNEDY.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 1424) to reauthorize the Small Business Technology Transfer Program, and for other purposes.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to the consideration of the bill.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the immediate consideration of S. 1424, introduced earlier today by Senator KENNEDY.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 1424) to reauthorize the Small Business Technology Transfer Program, and for other purposes.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to the consideration of the bill.

AMENDMENT NO. 1569

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the immediate consideration of S. 1424, introduced earlier today by Senator KENNEDY.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 1424) to reauthorize the Small Business Technology Transfer Program, and for other purposes.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to the consideration of the bill.

AMENDMENT NO. 1569

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the immediate consideration of S. 1424, introduced earlier today by Senator KENNEDY.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 1424) to reauthorize the Small Business Technology Transfer Program, and for other purposes.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to the consideration of the bill.
CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—SENATE
September 13, 2001

17018

"(iv) how the proceeds from commercialization or sale of technology resulting from each small STTR project were allocated (by percentage) between the small business concern and the research institution; and

(2) in paragraph (2)—

(A) by striking "or an STTR program pursuant to subsection (n)(1)" after "(n)(1)";

(B) by striking "solely for SBIR" and inserting "and STTR" after "SBIR"; and

(C) in subparagraph (A)(ii), by inserting "and STTR" after "SBIR"; and

(D) in subparagraph (D), by inserting "or STTR" after "SBIR."

(c) S I M P L I F I E D R E P O R T I N G R E Q U I R E M E N T S.—Section 9(n)(1)(B) of the Small Business Act (15 U.S.C. 638(n)(1)) is amended by inserting "or STTR" after "SBIR" each place it appears.

(d) R E P O R T S T O C O N G R E S S.—Section 9(b)(7)(C) of the Small Business Act (15 U.S.C. 657d(c)(2)(B)) is amended—

(1) by striking "solely for SBIR" and inserting "exclusively for SBIR and STTR"; and

(2) in paragraph (2)—

(A) by striking "the Administration shall provide to affected agencies, small business concerns, research institutions, and other interested parties the opportunity to submit written comments."; and

(B) by striking "the Administrator shall provide to affected agencies, small business concerns, research institutions, and other interested parties the opportunity to submit written comments."; and

(II) owned and controlled by minorities;

(I) owned and controlled by women; and

(III) located in areas that have historically not participated in the SBIR and STTR programs.

SEC. 7. SMALL BUSINESS-FEDERAL AGENCY PROGRAM-WIDE MODEL AGREEMENT FOR INTELLECTUAL PROPERTY RIGHTS.

(1) by striking "solely for SBIR" and inserting "exclusively for SBIR and STTR"; and

(2) in paragraph (2)—

(A) by inserting "or an STTR program pursuant to subsection (n)(1)" after "(n)(1)";

(B) by striking "solely for SBIR" and inserting "and STTR" after "SBIR"; and

(c) S I M P L I F I E D R E P O R T I N G R E Q U I R E M E N T S.—Section 9(n)(1)(B) of the Small Business Act (15 U.S.C. 638(n)(1)) is amended by inserting "or STTR" after "SBIR" each place it appears.

(d) R E P O R T S T O C O N G R E S S.—Section 9(b)(7)(C) of the Small Business Act (15 U.S.C. 657d(c)(2)(B)) is amended—

(1) by striking "solely for SBIR" and inserting "exclusively for SBIR and STTR"; and

(2) in paragraph (2)—

(A) by striking "the Administration shall provide to affected agencies, small business concerns, research institutions, and other interested parties the opportunity to submit written comments."; and

(B) by striking "the Administrator shall provide to affected agencies, small business concerns, research institutions, and other interested parties the opportunity to submit written comments."; and

(II) owned and controlled by minorities;

(I) owned and controlled by women; and

(III) located in areas that have historically not participated in the SBIR and STTR programs.

SEC. 8. F A S T P R O G R A M A S S I S T A N C E T O W O M E N-OWNED AND MINORITY-OWNED SMALL BUSINESS CONCERNS AND CONCERNS LOCATED IN AREAS NOT ELIGIBLE FOR SBIR AND STTR.

(a) S E L E C T I O N C O N S I D E R A T I O N.—Section 34(c)(2)(B) of the Small Business Act (15 U.S.C. 677c(c)(2)(B)) is amended—

(1) in clause (iv), by striking "and" at the end; and

(2) in clause (v), by striking the period at the end and inserting "; and"; and

(3) by adding at the end the following new clause:

"(vi) whether the proposal addresses the needs of small business concerns;

"(II) owned and controlled by minorities; and

"(III) located in areas that have historically not participated in the SBIR and STTR programs."
CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—SENATE

S. 856 also strengthens the data rights protection for companies and research institutions that conduct STTR projects. The change in data rights is important because that in the past STTR companies, like SBIR companies, retain the data rights to their technology through all phases of a STTR project. Unfortunately some agencies have been interpreting the law to the effect that companies only retain their data rights through Phases I and II.

This clarification helps protect STTR companies from losing control of their research so that they have a greater chance of commercializing their technology themselves. This clarification is important because the Committee has learned some agencies are providing the data to bigger contractors for development, thereby cutting out the small business. This unfortunate situation not only robs small businesses of revenues, but it also results in expensive legal costs for small businesses to protect their data rights.

As last year’s legislation did for the SBIR program, this bill strengthens the data collection requirements regarding awards and the data rights for companies and research institutions that conduct STTR projects. The goal is to collect better information about the companies doing the projects, as well as the relevant development, so we can measure success and track technologies. The Manager’s amendment expands the reporting requirements to include reporting on HUBzones small businesses under the SBIR and STTR programs. The amendment also requires the SBA and the agencies to develop a model agreement for intellectual property rights. Finally, the Manager’s amendment includes a provision that requires SBA, NASA, and DOD to consider the recently enacted Federal and State Technology Partnership Program (FAST), to consider whether the proposals address the needs of small business concerns: (I) owned and controlled by women; (II) owned and controlled by minorities; and (III) concerns located in areas that have historically not participated in the SBIR and STTR Programs.

This bill will ensure that this successful program is continued and expanded. It will also provide Congress with important information and data on the program and encourage more outreach to small businesses and research institutions.

Mr. President, I urge my colleagues to learn about this program, to find out the benefits to their state’s hi-tech small business, research universities and labs, and to join me in passing this legislation in the Senate.

To improve it, Senator BOND, I want to thank you and your staff for working with me and my staff to build this country’s technological progress. I especially want to thank one member of Senator BOND’s staff, David Bohley. Dave has worked tirelessly and effectively for the technology and small business community. He is leaving the Committee, and we will all miss working with him. I wish him well in his new job at the Federal National Mortgage Association (FNMA). I also want to thank all of the Members and staff of the Committee for their hard work on this legislation and for helping small business. All 19 members of the Committee voted for and supported this legislation.

Mr. President, I urge the Senate to pass S. 856, as amended.

Mr. BOND. Mr. President, I rise to lend my strong support to S. 856, the Small Business Technology Transfer Program Reauthorization Act of 2001. The Committee on Small Business and Entrepreneurship has closely reviewed the STTR program this year and found the STTR program to be highly successful. This important bill acknowledges that success by expanding the program.

This bill, like most bills considered by the Small Business and Entrepreneurship Committee, was crafted in a bipartisan manner and approved by a unanimous vote. I would like to thank Senator KERRY, and chairman of the committee, for his leadership and cooperation in this effort. I am pleased to have worked closely with him on this bill and, I trust our colleagues will overwhelmingly support this legislation.

The STTR Program was created in 1992 to stimulate technology transfer from research institutions to small firms while, at the same time, accommodating the Federal business community’s research and development goals. The program is designed to convert the billions of dollars invested in research and development at our nation’s universities, federal laboratories and nonprofit research institutions, into commercial technologies. It does this by joining the ideas and resources of research institutions with the commercialization experience of small companies.

To receive an award under the STTR Program, a research institution and a small firm jointly submit a proposal to conduct research on a topic that reflects an agency’s mission and research and development needs. The proposals are then peer-reviewed and judged on their scientific, technical and commercial merit.

Numerous benefits result from the Federal government fostering collaborations between research institutions and small firms. Small firms have shown themselves to be excellent at commercializing research when they are provided the opportunity to take advantage of the expertise and resources that reside in our nation’s universities.

September 13, 2001

These companies had approximately $132 million in sales and $53 million in additional funding. These STTR winners expect additional sales of more than $90 million dollars by 2005. Putting this into perspective, the Government’s total awards to these companies were less than $60 million, less than half of the sales to date and about five percent of the expected sales by 2005.

While S. 856 was reported, the Committee has put the program for nine years, the Manager’s amendment reduces this to eight years. This was done in order to reach consensus promptly and enable the bill to pass both houses—before the expiration date of the program.

In FY2001 and thereafter the bill increases from .15 to .3 percent of Federal extramural research and development funds going to this program. Recently the program was made $65 million annually for STTR awards. Based on that amount, increasing the percentage to .3 percent would make $130 million available annually for small business technology transfer. The Committee originally reported language that would have increased the percentage to 5 percent in 2007. In order to reach consensus, we agreed to delete the final incremental increase from the bill until we have more experience and information.

The bill also raises the Phase II grant award amount from $500,000 to $750,000. This change was intended to address concerns by the small businesses and the research institutions that $500,000 typically is no longer enough for this stage of research and development. As Dr. Pirri of Northeastern said at the hearing, “By expanding the STTR program, funding levels will become more adequate to take technologies through the prototype stage and increase their probability of commercial success.” Raising STTR awards to $750,000 makes them consistent with the Small Business Innovation Research (SBIR) program’s Phase II awards.

GAO reported that only about 250 universities have participated in the program so far. The Committee believes, and GAO concurs, that there is tremendous potential to involve more universities in partnering with small businesses to convert research into new technology for STTR awards. One of the goals of the STTR program is to create economic development around universities, Federal laboratories and non-profit research institutions across the country are attempting to duplicate the successful model of research along Massachusetts’ Route 128 and in California’s Silicon Valley. In order to increase participation by a larger number of universities, S. 856 includes a provision encouraging the STTR agencies to take active steps to raise awareness of the program and to provide information to their faculty members.
CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—SENATE
September 13, 2001

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the consideration of H.R. 2882, just received from the House.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment (No. 1569) was agreed to.

The bill (S. 856), as amended, was read the third time and passed.

PROVIDING FOR THE EXPEDITED PAYMENT OF CERTAIN BENEFITS

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the consideration of S. 1422. I applaud Congressman NADLER and Congressman SENSENBERNEN for their work on H.R. 2882, which we are passing today.

Earlier today, I received a call from Congressman SENSENBERNER, Chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, who asked me if the Senate would consider and pass H.R. 2882 without delay. I thank our leaders, Senator DASCHLE and Senator LOTT, for bringing this legislation before the Senate so quickly, and urge the Senate to support it.

We have before us a unique opportunity to provide much-needed relief for the families of the brave men and women who sacrificed their own lives for their fellow Americans. Senator CLINTON and a number of other members of the Senate and House have proposed this bill to amend the Public Safety Officers' Benefits Act of 1976 for catastrophic injury as a direct and proximate result of a personal injury sustained in the line of duty in connection with the terrorist attacks of September 11, 2001. There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill.

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, I commend the Senators from New York for their leadership on this legislation to streamline the Public Safety Officers' Benefits Act and ensure that the family members of fire fighters, emergency medical technicians and rescue workers who perished or suffered great injury in the aftermath of the tragic terrorist events of this week. I am proud to be an original cosponsor of S.1422. I applaud Congressman NADLER and Congressman SENSENBERNER for their work on H.R. 2882, which we are passing today.

A good example of the benefits that the STTR Program provides to small firms both with and without university partners. When these firms do not have university partners, their rate of return is 14 percent. When a collaboration is formed between universities and small firms, however, the rate of return jumps to 44 percent. By contrast, the rate of return only increases to 30 percent when large firms and universities collaborate.

Moreover, partnerships between small firms and universities have led to world-class high-technology economic development. Numerous studies cite the emergence of Silicon Valley and the Route 128 corridor in Massachusetts as directly resulting from the partnerships and technology transfer that occurred, and are still occurring, among small firms, Stanford University and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. The same collaboration between industry and these universities has strengthened considerably our economic competitiveness in the world.

The STTR Program seeks to foster this same type of economic development in the hundreds of communities around the country that contain universities and federal laboratories. Further, the STTR Program has proven to be immensely successful at growing small firms from these types of partnerships.

In a Committee hearing this year on the STTR Program, the General Accounting Office (GAO) reported on the commercial success of small firms participating in the STTR program between 1995 and 1997. The GAO’s findings are truly remarkable. Of the 102 projects surveyed in that time-frame over 53 percent had either resulted in sales or follow-on developmental funding for the technology. Through 2000, these projects had resulted in $132 million from sales and $53 million in additional funding from large firms. Moreover, the GAO reported that the companies that received the STTR awards are projecting an additional $135 million in sales in 2001 and an estimated additional $900 million in sales by 2005. These numbers are even more outstanding since it typically takes between 7 to 10 years to commercialize new technologies successfully.

In addition to proving to be an amazing commercial success, the STTR Program has also provided high-quality research to the Federal government. The GAO has reported in the past that Federal agencies give high ratings to the technical quality of STTR research proposals. The Department of Energy, for example, found that 98.8 percent of the proposals reviewed in the top ten percent of all research funded by the Department.

A good example of the benefits that the STTR Program provides to small firms both with and without university partners is the experience of Engineering Software Research and Development, Inc. in St. Louis, Missouri. The chairman and founder of that company, Dr. Barna Szabo, testified on the STTR program before the Committee in July of this year. Engineering Software, in partnership with Washington University in St. Louis, received a phase two award from the Air Force to develop an innovative method of analyzing the stresses placed on composite materials. While this technology is currently used in the aeronautics industry, it has many other practical applications.

The STTR Program permitted Dr. Szabo, who had originated an algorithm he developed at Washington University, to transfer the technology to Engineering Software, which had the software infrastructure to transition the technology from an academic to a practical commercial application. According to Dr. Szabo, Engineering Software has received an estimated $1.35 million in sales and follow-on development funding resulting from the technology funded by the STTR award and that the STTR Program was of great assistance in transferring the technology from an academic environment to actual use and application.

Based on the proven success of the STTR Program to date this legislation increases the funds allocated for the program from 15 percent to 3 percent of an agency’s extramural research and development budget. This increase will not require any additional appropriations but merely will reallocate funds in the participating agencies to this successful program. I thank Senators LEVIN and Senator WARNER on the Armed Services Committee for working closely with Senator KERRY and me to make such an increase possible. When a program is working as well as the STTR Program, it would be a mistake if Congress did not build on its success.

This is especially true for Federal investment in small business research and development. Despite report after report demonstrating that small businesses innovate at a greater rate that large firms, small businesses receive less than four percent of all Federal research and development dollars. This number has remained essentially unchanged for the past 22 years. Increasing funds for the STTR Program sends a strong message that the Federal government acknowledges the contributions that small businesses have made and will continue to make to government research and development efforts and to our nation’s economy.

Mr. President, Senator KERRY and I have worked together to produce a sound, bipartisan bill. This legislation is important to the small business high-technology community and will ensure that our Federal research and development needs are well met in the next decade. I trust that the bill will receive the overwhelming support of my colleagues.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the substitute amendment be agreed to, the bill, as amended, be considered read a third time and passed, the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table, and that any further printed matter relating to the bill be printed in the RECORD.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment (No. 1569) was agreed to.

The bill (S. 856), as amended, was read the third time and passed.
Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the bill be read three times, passed, the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table, and that any statements relating thereto be printed in the RECORD, with no intervening action or debate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The bill (H.R. 2882) was read the third time and passed.

EXPRESSING THE SENSE OF THE CONGRESS THAT AS A SYMBOL OF SOLIDARITY U.S. CITIZENS ARE ENCOURAGED TO DISPLAY THE AMERICAN FLAG

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the consideration of H. Con. Res. 225, just received from the House.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

A concurrent resolution (H. Con. Res. 225) expressing the sense of the Congress that as a symbol of solidarity following terrorist attacks on the United States on September 11, 2001, every U.S. citizen is encouraged to display the flag of the United States.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the concurrent resolution.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the resolution and preamble be agreed to, the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table, and that any statements relating thereto be printed in the RECORD as if given, with no intervening action or debate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The concurrent resolution (H. Con. Res. 225) was agreed to.

The preamble was agreed to.

MEASURE READ THE FIRST TIME—H.R. 2833

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I understand that H.R. 2833, received from the House, is at the desk. I ask for its first reading.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (H.R. 2833) to promote freedom and democracy in Vietnam.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I now ask for its second reading and object to my own request.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is heard. The bill will be read for the second time on the next legislative day.

MEASURE READ THE FIRST TIME—H.R. 2291

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I understand that H.R. 2291, just received from the House, is at the desk. I ask for its first reading.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (H.R. 2291) to extend the authorization of the Drug-Free Communities Support Program for an additional 5 years, to authorize a National Community Antidrug Coalition Institute, and for other purposes.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I now ask for its second reading but object to my own request.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is heard. The bill will be read for the second reading on the next legislative day.

ORDERS FOR FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 14, 2001

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that when the Senate completes its business today, it adjourn until the hour of 9 o’clock tomorrow morning. Friday, September 14. I further ask that on Friday, immediately following the prayer and the pledge, the Journal of proceedings be approved to date, the morning hour be deemed to have expired, and the time for the two leaders be reserved for their use later in the day.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

PROGRAM

Mr. REID. Mr. President, on tomorrow, the Senate will convene at 9 a.m. Senators are advised that there will be a 9:15 Democratic conference. We expect to consider the Supplemental Appropriations Act during the day.

ADJOURNMENT UNTIL 9 A.M. TOMORROW

Mr. REID. Having said that, believing that we have accomplished a lot today, I announce that we have no further business to come before the Senate. Therefore, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate stand in adjournment under the previous order.

There being no objection, the Senate, at 9:28 p.m., adjourned until Friday, September 14, 2001, at 9 a.m.
HONORING CAPT. THOMAS ANDERSON (RET.)

HON. SCOTT McINNIS
OF COLORADO
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, September 13, 2001

Mr. McINNIS. Mr. Speaker, I would like to take the opportunity to honor Mr. Thomas Anderson for his service to our great Nation during World War II. Captain Anderson’s achievements during World War II and throughout his life deserves recognition. It is my pleasure to pay tribute to an individual who put his life on the line sacrificing his well-being to the broader interests of the United States of America.

As a lieutenant, Thomas Anderson first saw action in Germany during the latter half of World War II. As a brave young pilot, Lieutenant Anderson flew a number of missions in his Northrup P–61 Black Widow Night Fighter. One of Lieutenant Anderson’s most notable accomplishments was being the last pilot on a combat assignment in the air in the European theater of operations. Moreover, Mr. Anderson flew the final air combat mission of World War II through treacherous weather that caused his entire aircraft to entirely freeze over. Captain Anderson nearly lost his life and plane, but managed to land the aircraft safely where crewmembers had to use ice picks in order to remove Thomas from the cockpit.

After a trying tour in Europe, Captain Anderson was reactivated during the Korean War where his experience and leadership were imperative to the United States campaign in the region. Captain Anderson is a respectable, humble, and honorable citizen-soldier. It is our duty as Americans to acknowledge Thomas Anderson’s accomplishments and recognize the honor, pride and valor in which he served our Nation.

Mr. Speaker, it is with great pleasure that I honor and recognize Captain Thomas Anderson (Retired) for the courage and heroism that he displayed while serving in World War II and Korea. Our Nation owes Captain Anderson a debt of gratitude and his actions will never be forgotten. I commend citizen-soldier, Thomas Anderson for his honorable and distinguished service to the State of Colorado and our great Nation.

TRIBUTE TO MARVIN R. HOHENSTEIN

HON. ROBERT L. EHRlich, JR.
OF MARYLAND
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, September 13, 2001

Mr. EHRlich. Mr. Speaker, I would like to take this opportunity to congratulate Mr. Marvin R. Hohenstein on his retirement from the U.S. Army Edgewood Chemical Biological Center located in Edgewood, Maryland after 32 years of dedicated service to our country. During his tenure with the Federal Civil Service, Mr. Hohenstein was recognized as the resident expert in the Army Acquisition Process. He is to be commended for his exceptional service and significant achievements in the chemical and biological defense development and production area. His pattern of career excellence has contributed to accomplishments that significantly enhanced the ability of our armed forces on the battlefield.

Mr. Hohenstein’s personnel initiative and leadership qualities, as well as his work ethic, have done much to enhance employee morale and to develop our future leaders. Mr. Hohenstein deserves the thanks and praise of this grateful Nation he has faithfully served for so long. I know the Members of the House will join me in wishing him all the best in the years ahead.

PHIL SAAL: 2001 JOHNS LABOR LEADER OF THE YEAR

HON. BOB FILNER
OF CALIFORNIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, September 13, 2001

Mr. FILNER. Mr. Speaker and colleagues, I rise today to recognize Phil Saal, as he is honored by the San Diego Labor Community at the 19th Annual John S. Lyons Memorial Banquet with the 2001 “Labor Leader of the Year” Award.

Phil Saal was born and raised in Goshen, Indiana, a small Amish-Mennonite community where he graduated from Goshen High School in 1961. After attending a trade school in Chicago he decided to move to San Diego and join the U.S. Navy. Phil was honorably discharged after his service to our Nation, which included three tours in Vietnam.

Phil began working for United Parcel Service (UPS) in 1966 and became a member of Teamsters Local 542. He served as a Shop Steward for his union over the next twenty years at UPS.

In 1986, Phil went to work as a full time Business Agent for Teamster Local 542, and during the next nine years, Phil administered and negotiated its contracts, with his primary responsibility being the UPS contract. In August 1995, Phil became the Secretary-Treasurer of Teamster Local 542, representing over 5,000 members, and since this time he has organized twenty-one new companies with nearly 800 new members. Phil now serves as a Trustee of Teamsters Joint Council 42, Health and Welfare Trusts, Pension Trusts, and as an Executive Board Member of the San Diego-Imperial Counties Labor Council.

Actively committed to labor’s involvement in our communities, Phil continues efforts to establish a scholarship fund for children of Teamsters Local 542’s members, which will enable them to continue their education in college or trade school.

My congratulations go to Phil Saal for his significant contributions to organized labor and our community. Phil’s commitment to Labor speaks for itself; he is highly deserving of the 2001 JOHNS “Labor Leader of the Year” Award.

PAYING TRIBUTE TO CHARYL STOCKWELL

HON. MIKE ROGERS
OF MICHIGAN
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, September 13, 2001

Mr. ROGERS of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to Charyl Stockwell, a young lady whose brave fight for her life has touched countless lives. I am honored to be a part of the Livingston Developmental Academy, a local public school academy in Hartland, Michigan, as they announce the dedication of their building as The Charyl Stockwell Academy.

Mr. Speaker, Charyl’s inspiration for the founding of the school included the celebration.
September 13, 2001

of her unique gifts of artistry, dance and creative writing. It is because the Livingston Developmental Academy focuses on the uniqueness of each child and provides special attention and love to every student that the school has been so successful.

Indeed, Charyl was a young lady who always made others smile. This act of kindness must not go without recognition. Therefore, Mr. Speaker, I respectfully ask my colleagues to join me in paying tribute to Charyl Stockwell and to her family as the Livingston Developmental Academy honors her in dedicating their new building in her name. May the school forever carry the spirit and enthusiasm of Charyl Stockwell.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

HON. CAROLYN C. KILPATRICK
OF MICHIGAN
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, September 13, 2001

Ms. KILPATRICK. Mr. Speaker, due to the shutdown of the National Air Space System, I am unable to return to Washington; therefore I respectfully request a leave of absence from business for Wednesday, September 12. Had I been present, I would have voted "aye" on H.J. Res. 61, the resolution condemning terrorist attacks launched against the United States on September 11, 2001, Rollcall No. 338.

HONORING PHILIP EILEBRECHT

HON. SCOTT McNINIS
OF COLORADO
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, September 13, 2001

Mr. McNINIS. Mr. Speaker, I would like to take a moment to recognize the courage and patriotism of Mr. Philip Eilebrecht. Now 83, Mr. Eilebrecht was one of the brave Americans who fought for our great country during the D-Day invasion at Normandy on June 6, 1944.

Mr. Eilebrecht's life was changed forever on January 29, 1942 when he left his father's ranch in Gunnison, Colorado at 24 years of age and was stationed within the ranks of the 102nd Cavalry Reconnaissance Squadron in Fort Riley, Kansas. He was sent there because of his knowledge of horses but was soon transferred to Columbia, South Carolina where his unit turned in their horses for "grayhound" armored cars. Only a few months later he found himself maneuvering his armored car along the sandy shores below the cliffs at Omaha Beach. He and thousands of other American soldiers bullied their way through the German forces that had held earlier forces at bay. Mr. Eilebrecht returned to Colorado with the Bronze Arrowhead Medal where he has remained and eventually retired after 25 years as a brand inspector.

Mr. Speaker, Philip Eilebrecht displayed his willingness to make the ultimate sacrifice for his country by fighting in one of the most legendary and bloody victories in the history of the United States. I would like to honor Philip Eilebrecht for his valor in the face of such immense danger and destruction. The United States appreciates his patriotism and recognizes him as a truly heroic American.

EXTENSIONS OF REMARKS

MEMORIAL TRIBUTE TO DEPUTY JAKE KUREDJIAN

HON. HOWARD P. "BUCK" MCKEON
OF CALIFORNIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, September 13, 2001

Mr. MCKEON. Mr. Speaker, it grieves me to speak of a senseless tragedy that recently occurred in my district. On August 31st, a Santa Clarita sheriff's deputy lost his life in the line of duty. Deputy Hapog "Jake" Kuredjian was killed as he assisted agents from the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms. As they attempted to serve a search warrant at the home of a person suspected of impersonating a federal agent and for stockpiling weapons, the suspect mortally wounded Jake.

A native of Aleppo, Syria, Jake immigrated with his mother and two brothers to Michigan in the 1970's after the untimely death of his father. He became a citizen of the United States at the age of 21. Jake felt his job was his calling and proudly wore badge #4144 when the Los Angeles County Sheriff's Department hired him in 1984.

Jake was a courageous deputy who worked diligently to make our community a better place to live. He was awarded the sheriff's Gold Meritorious Conduct medal in 1988 for rescuing a woman from the side of a cliff. Shortly before his death, Jake finally realized his long held dream of becoming a motorcycle officer.

Deputy Kuredjian was a hero in the true sense of the word. He willingly put his life on the line when he put a badge on his uniform. Yet he was more than a deputy; he was a good neighbor and a good friend who attempted to make a positive impact on the Santa Clarita Valley. He readily gave his time to volunteer for the SCV Special Olympics and to help organize events such as the Downed Officers Support Ride. Jake was an eternal optimist, a devout Christian and a positive role model for our youth.

Jake is survived by his mother, Anahid Kuredjian, his two brothers, Garo and Raffi Kuredjian, and his fiancée, Theresa Richardson. He left many friends and coworkers who will miss, but never forget him.

There are no words to express the magnitude of our sorrow nor the depth of our gratitude. We can only say a simple and heartfelt thank you to Jake Kuredjian and to all the men and women who courageously protect and serve the citizens of America.

EXPRESSING SENSE OF SENATE AND HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES REGARDING TERRORIST ATTACKS LAUNCHED AGAINST UNITED STATES

SPEECH OF

HON. ROBERT L. EHRlich, JR.
OF MARYLAND
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, September 11, 2001

Mr. EHRlich. Mr. Speaker, on Tuesday, September 11, 2001, the history of our great nation was altered forever. Four jumbo-jet airliners carrying hundreds of Americans were used as missiles to end the lives of thousands of friends, neighbors, and loved ones. The terrorists controlling these aircraft completely destroyed New York's World Trade Center and devastated the Pentagon. These images are indelibly scarred in our national psyche, the swift and deadly work of cowards.

Now is the time to rescue those alive and trapped, aid those whose lives have been torn apart, and help those who have lost friends and loved ones. All of us can help by donating blood and money to the Red Cross and to keep those involved in your thoughts and prayers. Mayor Rudy Giuliani, speaking for the citizens of New York City, is deeply grateful for the outpouring of support, donations, and volunteers. Secretary of Defense Donald Rumsfeld and Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff General Harry H. Shelton have pledged that the Pentagon remains functional and American military might is prepared and ready to respond when so ordered.

Civilized nations and people of the world have been unwilling participants in a war of terrorism. Whether fueled by religious extremism, cultural bias, or political philosophy—thugs, cowards, and opportunists have waged a war against innocent civilians. These enemies of good have struck out against symbols of America's political, military, and financial might. The full array of America's will and power will now be brought into this unconventional, yet nonetheless real, war. In the process, the U.S. will no longer make a distinction between those who commit these acts and those who provide them safe harbor, whether they are nations or individuals. The goal of this barbaric act was to destroy American morale and unity. Their mission has failed. Americans now are filled with a sense of violation and an unwavering resolve.

The President, his Cabinet, and Congress are now focused on aiding those in need, understanding how these events occurred, taking action to prevent similar acts, and restoring confidence in our safety. I ask every American to fully and completely support of our nation's leadership in these efforts and future action necessary to exact swift, lethal, and measured response to these acts of war.
After school, Hal went to work for IBM and led the team which developed IBM's banking system. Upon leaving IBM, he founded his own computer company, Computer Planning Corporation (CPC). Among its many accomplishments, CPC developed the first real-time business system.

CPC was acquired by TRACOR, Inc., and after serving as a board member for TRACOR, Hal left to form the Industrial Development Corporation, which remains his flag-ship company. Hal got involved in real estate and in 1978, helped found Palomar Grading and Paving, Inc. It is one of the largest operations of its kind, and employs many skilled tradesmen and women.

Beyond success in the business world, Hal has remained committed to helping people in need. In 1980, aware that Native Americans face enormous challenges in their own country, he developed programs to assist Native American businessmen and help reservations with economic self-sufficiency.

Hal joined the Board of American Indian Services, which provides over 1200 college scholarships each year to Native Americans, and serves as Chair of its California Chapter and its Economic Development Committee.

Hal’s achievements are both extraordinary and broad. He has chaired the Navajo Nation National Advisory Board and has participated in the drafting and amending of tribal constitutions. He is a member of the Haskell University Advisory Board. He served as Chairman of the I–15 Design review Board, and has been commended on a number of occasions by Israeli institutions for his good work.

My congratulations go to Hal Jensen for his significant contributions to our community, our nation and the world. Hal’s commitment to all of humanity is evident by his actions, and I am pleased that he is the recipient of the 2001 “JOHNS Fellowship” Award.

PAYING TRIBUTE TO THE UNIVERSITY OF MICHIGAN CLASS OF 2001

HON. MIKE ROGERS
OF MICHIGAN

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, September 13, 2001

Mr. ROGERS of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, today I rise to pay tribute to the 2001 graduating class of the University of Michigan. Due to their hard work and dedication, they are now prepared to make significant contributions to the State of Michigan and the United States of America.

As graduates from one of the most prestigious public institutions in the United States, whatever endeavors the University of Michigan class of 2001 may pursue, success is certain to follow:

Therefore, Mr. Speaker, I respectfully ask my colleagues to join me in recognizing the University of Michigan Class of 2001. May this only be the beginning of the great accomplishments they will achieve in their lifetime.

ELOUISE COBELL’S NOBEL EFFORTS TO FIX THE INDIAN TRUST FUND MESS

HON. DENNIS R. REHBERG OF MONTANA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, September 13, 2001

Mr. REHBERG. Mr. Speaker, for over 100 years the Federal Government has grossly mismanaged Indian Trust Funds derived from grazing, minerals and other natural resources revenues. Eloise Cobell of the Blackfeet Tribe in Montana, who after years of getting stonewalled in her efforts to get an accurate accounting of Indian Trust Funds, filed the monumental lawsuit Cobell v. Babbitt in 1996. Federal Judge Royce Lambeth has ruled in favor of Eloise and other plaintiffs on numerous occasions. In a December 1999 civil contempt ruling, he stated “The Federal Government here did not just stub its toe. It abused the rights of these plaintiffs to obtain these trust documents, and it engaged in a shocking pattern of deception of the court. I have never seen more egregious conduct by the Federal Government.”

I urge my colleagues to read the following article from the September 2001 issue of Parade Magazine focusing on Eloise Cobell’s noble efforts to fix the Indian Trust Fund mess.
On the wall next to Elouise Cobell’s desk is a blown-up reproduction of a famous Peanuts cartoon strip in which Lucy assuages Charlie Brown. “Trust me,” she once again snatches away the football he’s about kick, and he ends up flinging it on his back.

“I decided to stop being Charlie Brown,” Cobell told me. For her, “Lucy” is 5 feet 4, a wife and mother. Cobell is a member of the Blackfeet, an Indian tribe headquartered in the northwest corner of Montana. As a result of a lawsuit she filed on behalf of her fellow Native Americans, they finally are about to collect a share of money—as much as $4 billion—from Washington.

“It’s not as if we’re taking money from the government,” she explained, a steely edge creeping into her normally soft-spoken voice. “It’s our money that was taken from us.” Indeed, a federal judge declared, “I have never seen more egregious misconduct by the federal government than what we were not for Elouise Cobell, it would still be going on.

What she finally could not take anymore was the betrayal for more than a century—”a shocking deception,” as the court put it—regarding the property rights of the Blackfeet and many other Native American tribes. This betrayal began in 1887, when Congress previously established tribal reservations to white settlers. As a result, Indians could not lease or sell their property without government approval. In return, individual Indians were granted grazing and quarrying rights to 320 acres. But they were judged to be incapable of managing their own affairs, so the federal government decided to do it for them.

As a result, Indians could not lease or sell their property without government approval. This included grazing and quarrying rights as well as leases for timber, agriculture, oil, natural gas and minerals. The government would make all the deals. The income would be held in trust and distributed to each Indian family. The Bureau of Indian Affairs (BIA) in the Department of the Interior was to be in charge, and the Treasury Department would send out the checks. But the Indians never got what was owed them.

At one of the endless meetings she attended to try to rectify matters, Cobell actually heard a department head admit that millions and millions of Indian dollars were being forwarded by the Department of the Interior with no instructions. “So we just put it in the general fund,” said the official.

Cobell made a daring move to the nearest city, Great Falls, to enroll in a two-year business college, where she specialized in accounting. “I wanted to learn more and to help out at home,” she recalled. “My dream was to buy my mother a new dress.”

Cobell cut short her double major at Montana State University in 1968 to return home and care for her mother, who had terminal cancer. Then her father died.

Because of her accounting background, the Blackfeet Tribal Council appointed Cobell the tribe’s treasurer in 1976. “I remembered, as a little girl,” she said, “the elders would come to my father’s house and wonder where the money was. You lived with it all the time. But they didn’t know what to ask. They had no information, and the Bureau of Indian Affairs was something to be feared. You felt so powerless.”

She already had seen the local office of the BIA in action in a college work-study program. “I was people treated very badly,” she recalled. “People sitting all day on hard benches, with no rest rooms. Some were begging for money, for food, for clothes for their children. I would tell my mother, and she’d say, ‘Don’t make waves.’ ”

Under the BIA’s management of the so-called Individual Indian Money trust funds, Native Americans never were informed who had leased their land or for what purpose, how much the lease was for or how long the lease was to run. On occasion, the Treasury Department would mail checks to individuals for a pittance, with no accounting or explanation of any kind. (In addition to the Individual Indian Money trust, the government manages a separate trust fund covering more than 300 tribes.)

“As the tribe’s treasurer,” Cobell said, “I tried to get a handle on everything. I found that the BIA’s investment of Blackfeet tribal trust funds was accruing negative interest. How could this be? Under the law, this money was only supposed to be invested in the safest government securities. But when I asked about this at a meeting with the BIA supervisor, he just stared at me and said, ‘Why don’t you learn how to read a statement?’ ”

“Later—a lot later—I discovered what had happened. The BIA had taken a big chunk of money from the Blackfeet, loaned it to another department, and didn’t bother to replace it. After all, it was not their money, and we were just dumb Indians.”

After getting nowhere at local and regional BIA offices, Cobell tried the Interior Department in Washington, D.C. And still got nowhere. “I did spreadsheets,” she said, “and saw huge gaps where our gas companies that had leased out land weren’t paying anything. There was no accounting system in place, so the Interior Department had no idea who was paying and who wasn’t. They didn’t care.”

Then, in 1989. Rep. Mike Synar—an Oklahoma Democrat with a large Native American constituency—helped to arrange a meeting at the White House under the first Bush Administration with officials of the Office of Management and Budget. Cobell was invited, as well as some outside experts, including a prominent attorney named Dennis Gingold. Very little came out of it, except that Cobell remembered Gingold acutely saying at one point to the government men, “Stop playing games with me.”

In 1994, Synar got Congress to authorize the Presidential appointment of a special trustee to provide a full accounting of money owed to the Blackfeet, Cherokee, Apaches, Winnebagos and other tribes located west of the Mississippi. But the new Secretary of the Interior in the Clinton Administration, Bruce Babbitt, so hindered in accounting, just sat on the appointment. Gingold, a banking executive named Paul Homan, that Homan finally quit in disgust in 1999, accusing Babbitt of stripping him of the authority he’d been promised.

And, despite repeated attempts to see Babbit herself, Cobell never did. “He wouldn’t meet with me,” she said. “I was told he didn’t have the time. All I got were empty assurances that mismanagement of our trust funds was a top priority.”

Cobell already had reached the breaking point after meeting Attorney General Janet Reno at a conference where Reno was the main speaker. Cobell sketched out what she was going through, and Reno invited her to Washington. But when Cobell arrived in February 1996 with high hopes, Reno also declined to see her and relegated her to a back room. She was people treated very badly,” Cobell told me, that “a lawsuit was the only option I had left.”

She went back to Dennis Gingold and asked him to take her case. He did. He agreed, telling her, “We cannot allow this to happen. Our government can’t operate like this.” But Gingold warned her that she could be expected to tell him she’d get the money somehow. And she did, pleading her cause to private foundation after foundation, eventually raising nearly $8 million. During this period of her enrichment, she received a John D. MacArthur “genius award” and immediately threw the $8 million into the pot.

The class-action suit representing 500,000 Native Americans was filed in the District of Columbia on June 10, 1986. The Justice Department, representing the Interior and Treasury Departments, declined to enter into settlement talks. The presiding federal district judge, Royce Lamberth, twice ordered Interior and Treasury to produce documents involving the Individual Indian Money trust fund. Despite promises to do so, a special investigator appointed by Judge Lamberth discovered that, during the course of the proceedings, Interior had in fact been destroying documents. What’s more, Treasury officials had shredded 162 cartons of ledgers listing Indian recipients plus records of uncashcd checks—some 100 years old—that never reached their intended Indian recipients.

On Aug. 10, 1999, after holding Interior Secretary Babbitt and Treasury Secretary Robert Rubin in contempt of court, Judge Lamberth fined them a total of $625,000, which the U.S. paid with our tax dollars.

On Dec. 21, 1999, Judge Lamberth ruled that the government had breached its sacred trust duties across the board. He ordered the Interior and Treasury Departments to file quarterly reports detailing efforts to reform the trust system and decreed court supervision of these efforts. The Justic Department appealed on the grounds that the judge had overstepped his authority. But a federal appeals panel of judges unanimously upheld Lamberth’s ruling.

This May, the Bush Administration abandoned an appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court. What remains now, in the second phase of a 10-month delay, is to determine the Native American plaintiffs who will receive. Some estimates range from $20 billion to as much as $40 billion.

While the government will continue the battle or begin serious settlement talks remains up in the air. In June, the House Appropriations Committee said it had no interd in funding more litigation, which so far has cost the U.S. more than $31 million.
Meanwhile, Elouise Cobell has dedicated herself to helping Native Americans achieve economic self-sufficiency. She is the founder and current chairperson of the Blackfeet National Bank—the first bank in the nation owned by Indians.

In Montana, when Cobell drives from her ranch to her bank office in the woebegone town of Browning, with an unemployment rate as high as 70 percent, she passes a sign. It marks the site of the government's first Indian office on the Blackfeet reservation, under agent John Young. It says that this is where, in the terrible winter of 1884, 500 Blackfeet Indians died of starvation.

"The truth is," Cobell told me, "that agent Young kept the rations he had on hand for white people." She pointed to a ridge opposite the sign, where a trench was dug to bury the Blackfeet bodies, "We call it Ghost Ridge," she said, "I think of those souls every day. I'm fighting for them too."

HONORING THE GATEWAY/UNAWEEP VOLUNTEER FIRE DEPARTMENT

HON. SCOTT McINNIS
OF COLORADO
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, September 13, 2001

Mr. McINNIS. Mr. Speaker, fire fighters place their lives on the line every time they battle a blaze. This challenge requires serious training, dedication and compassion for other human beings. The Gateway/Unaweep Volunteer Fire Department in Colorado was experiencing difficulties until a team of individuals collaborated to rekindle the spirit of the department and enable it to become a reliable emergency response unit once again. Due to this unwavering persistence, the Gateway/Unaweep Volunteer Fire Department has been able to once again become a viable community resource and I would like to acknowledge and congratulate the efforts of the members of the department for all that they have done.

Fire fighting in this area of Colorado did not always have the benefit of modern tools. This basic level of equipment did not deter Dean Rickman, a web site designer from Chicago, from relocating and joining the department. After being inspired by Oprah's Angel network, Angela Morgan decided she would help others through involvement in the fire department. Shane Burton has tackled the position of being the assistant fire chief in charge of all the other duties. Through numerous hours of coordination and examination, these and other members patched the fire department back together and have created a sustainable plan to ensure its vitality. Currently they are seeking ways to make it more financially stable and have recently launched a new program called Project Human Touch to make certain that victims have access to supportive resources.

The Gateway/Unaweep Volunteer Fire Department persists diligently for the benefit of their community. Through their hard work, the members have been able to increase the department's fleet size and upgrade the coverage area.

Mr. Speaker, the services these volunteers provide are priceless in any community. Although such a role always requires a sacrifice, the fire fighters at the Gateway/Unaweep Volunteer Fire Department have gone above and beyond the call of duty to resurrect this fire department and sustain operations once again. I would like to take this opportunity to recognize the sincere sacrifices the members of the department have made and extend my best wishes to them in many years to come.

HONORING TERRY LYNCH
HON. TERRY EVERETT OF ALABAMA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, September 13, 2001

Mr. EVERETT. Mr. Speaker, the devastation our country has suffered became profoundly personal when my staff and I learned that a former member of our delegation staff was among those who were murdered by terrorists when a hijacked plane hit the Pentagon Tuesday morning.

Terry Lynch was from Youngstown, Ohio, and got his master's degree from Youngstown State University, where he met his wife, Jackie. He became an adopted Alabamian when he went to work for Senator Richard Shelby of Alabama from 1983 to 1995. During those years, Terry worked closely with many of us on military projects for all of Alabama and in particular, the Army Aviation Center at Fort Rucker, Alabama, and Maxwell-Gunter AFB, Montgomery, Alabama, both of which are in my 2nd District.

Terry was a kind and knowledgeable person who was dependable and dedicated to doing his job and doing it well. He was well liked by his colleagues on both sides of the aisle and in both the House and in the Senate. Terry worked tirelessly on behalf of his adopted state.

At home in the Mount Vernon area of Fairfax County, he was known as a kind and considerate neighbor, coach for his daughters, Tiffany and Ashley's T-ball and softball teams; and all around good friend.

Terry Lynch is indelibly etched in the hearts and minds of all Alabamians. Our hearts go out to Jackie, Tiffany, and Ashley during this great time of sadness for all of us.

EXPRESSIONS OF REMARKS

As a nation, we must focus our attention toward proving our resolve and joining our fellow neighbors in healing our country. We are strong, proud and free country and our government will fight to protect all those ideals that make us such a strong nation.

We must now give of ourselves to our community. I urge you to remember that there are many heroes who have given selflessly to our neighbors at this time of tragedy. Fire, rescue, police personnel and countless others have put their lives in danger to save those victims of this terrible crime. For that courage, we must thank them and remember that these people give their lives daily to protect our freedom.

The leaders of our country will now focus on ensuring that justice is served. We should be rational about our strategy, we will focus on protecting our future and promise to uphold your freedom and your liberty.

Pray for those who are grieving. Stand proud of our great country. Know that your government will vigorously pursue those guilty with all available resources.

HONORING DAVE SANGER UPON HIS RETIREMENT
HON. SCOTT McINNIS
OF COLORADO
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, September 13, 2001

Mr. McINNIS. Mr. Speaker, Dave Sanger helped to shape and open the minds of students at Salida High School in Colorado and after 30 years of teaching, has announced his retirement. It is with great pleasure that I recognize the tremendous contributions Dave has made to the future of our country and to the lives of those students he has taught.

Dave began teaching at Salida High School in 1973, after attending graduate school at the University of Colorado in Boulder where he was pursuing a master's degree in history. While at Salida High School, he taught history for twenty-eight years. While Dave had no intention of teaching at Salida for this length of time, he has received much joy out of seeing his students blossom intellectually and challenge their future. Mr. Sanger has been recognized for his energetic and insightful lectures, even to the extent that students who have graduated have returned to experience another Sanger lecture.

While teaching requires enormous dedication, Dave found time to serve his community in other ways as well. He helped to establish the soccer program in Salida and continues to track its success. Furthermore, he served on the Democratic Central Committee and was a judge for a mock congressional hearing for high school students. His wife Nancy and he opened a bookstore called Senator's Books that thrived during a rough economic time between 1985 and 1991. Dave and Nancy have both also served as lay ministers at St. Joseph Church.

Throughout all of his efforts, Dave Sanger has opened doors for all students. His teaching will live in the hearts and minds of all those who have been in his classroom. He has truly been an integral and respected... member of his community. Upon his retirement as a history teacher, I would like to honor his dedication and years of service and extend my warmest regard to Dave and his family.

HON. DENNIS MOORE
OF KANSAS
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, September 13, 2001

Mr. MOORE. Mr. Speaker, yesterday, the world was different. Today and tomorrow and forever our America is changed.

Today, there are no Republicans, no Democrats.

Today, we all are Americans.

May God hold in His arms the victims and their families who suffered these terrorist attacks.

Buildings and bodies may be destroyed. But freedom will survive. Because freedom burns in the heart of every American. And freedom burns in the hearts of freedom loving people throughout the world.

May God bless those who fight for freedom, and may God bless our United States of America.

INDISCRIMINATE ATTACKS ON SIKHS MUST STOP; SIKHISM IS VERY DIFFERENT FROM ISLAM

HON. DAN BURTON OF INDIANA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, September 13, 2001

Mr. BURTON of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, on Tuesday, a despicable terrorist attack was carried out on the United States of America. I am pleased to see how all of us, Republican and Democrat, liberal and conservative, are pulling together in support of our nation. That is inspiring and it shows the greatness of America.

At the same time, it is very unfortunate that some Americans have been made targets of violence simply because of the way they look and the way they dress. That is unacceptable. Despite the anger that we all share against those responsible for the terrorists attacks, we must not sink to their level and become a people who extract revenge indiscriminately. It appears that there have been several attacks on Sikhs, largely in the New York area but elsewhere as well, including a beating of an elderly Sikh man with baseball bats. Apparently, some Sikhs are being singled out for attacks because their turbans and beards resemble the terrorist chief Osama bin Laden. Other Sikhs are being mistaken for Muslims. Attacking innocent American Muslims is wrong, and we should stand together in condemning attacks on them. However, it must be emphasized that Sikhs are not Muslims. Sikhism must not be mistaken for Islam, Hinduism, or any other religion. Every Sikh is required to wear a turban; it is part of the religion. Very few Muslims wear turbans. Osama bin Laden is one of the few Muslims who does. The style in which a turban is worn by a Sikh is quite different from the style that is worn by some Muslims. In addition, Sikhs can be identified by the kirpans (small ceremonial swords) that they carry and the bracelets they wear. These are two of the five things that identify a practicing Sikh. Tragically, some people, who are ignorant of Islam and Sikhism, have targeted innocent Sikh-Americans for violence. It must be made clear that Sikhs do not hold any ill will toward America. Sikhs from around the world have always looked toward the United States as a beacon of freedom to be emulated, not a nation to be destroyed.

Mr. Speaker, attacks against Sikhs must stop. I am calling for an end to this violence against Sikhs, and I am calling on any faith who was not involved in the terrorist attack on our country, I call on our nation's leaders to speak our forcefully against these attacks. I also believe that it is the responsibility of the media to expose these attacks and denounce them. All Americans are justified in being very angry about what happened on September 11, but that does not justify acts of violence against innocent Americans.

VERMONT HIGH SCHOOL STUDENT CONGRESSIONAL TOWN MEETING

HON. BERNARD SANDERS OF VERMONT
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, September 13, 2001

Mr. SANDERS. Mr. Speaker, today I recognize the outstanding work done by participants in my Student Congressional Town Meeting held this summer. These participants were part of a group of Vermont and New England students from around Vermont who testified about the concerns they have as teenagers, and about what they would like to see government do regarding these concerns.

TRIBUTE TO CHIEF JUSTICE BENJAMIN J.F. CRUZ

HON. ROBERT A. UNDERWOOD OF GUAM
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, September 13, 2001

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, I would like to take this occasion to commend and congratulate a distinguished public servant, Chief Justice Benjamin J.F. Cruz, upon his retirement from the Supreme Court of Guam. A highly regarded jurist, Chief Justice Cruz is well known and respected for his commitment to Guam's judiciary and the important decisions he rendered as a judge in the island's court system.

Widely known on the island as "B.J.,” Chief Justice Cruz was born in Guam to Juan Quenga Cruz and Antonia Cruz Franqueze on March 3, 1951. A successful businessman and a respected leader, B.J.’s father was elected as commissioner of the village of Piti. Upon the death of B.J.’s father in 1956, his mother moved the family to California and later married Vicente Cruz Guerrero.

On Guam, young B.J. attended Saint Francis School in Yona. He later graduated from St. John Bosco Senior High School in Bellflower, California. B.J. received a Bachelor of Arts degree in Political Science and Economics from Claremont Men's College where he wrote his senior thesis on the constitutional and legal history of Guam. In 1972, B.J. attended the University of Santa Clara School of Law. He spent the summer of 1973 working as a law clerk for both the Federal District Court and the Superior Court of Guam. He was awarded his Juris Doctorate in May 1975.

Upon graduation, B.J. commenced a long and distinguished career in government service. He initially served as the Assistant Consumer Counsel in the Office of the Attorney General of Guam and, shortly thereafter, joined the first administration of Governor Ricardo J. Bordallo as its legal counsel. B.J. served in this capacity until January 1979, when he went into private practice. Within this period, he also served as minority legal counsel to the Democratic Senators of the 15th and 16th Guam Legislatures. B.J. remained active in the promotion of cultural and political rights working as an incorporator and legal counsel for a number of indigenous rights organizations and the Nuclear Free Micronesia organization. During Governor Bordallo’s second term, B.J. was chosen to head the newly established Governor’s Washington Liaison Office in Washington, D.C.—a post he held until his appointment as a Superior Court Judge in 1984.

As a judge, B.J. was known for his fair and impartial decisions. His reputation is one of fairness, firmness, and compassion. For over thirteen years, he served as a trial court judge with Superior Court of Guam—the first nine years of which he spent with the Family Juvenile Court. First appointed to the Guam Supreme Court in 1997, he began his term as Chief Justice on April 21, 1999.

Outside the courtroom, Chief Justice Cruz has always been involved with community events and organizations. Having previously served as vice president and treasurer of the Guam National Olympic Committee, he now serves as the organization’s secretary general. His tenure in the Family Juvenile Court undoubtedly led him to serve as President of the Board of Directors for Sanctuary, Inc., an organization dedicated to the island’s troubled youth and their families. In addition, he has been actively involved with civic and community associations such as the Guam Chapter of the American Cancer Society, the Miss Guam World Association, and the Guam Beauty Association.

Upon his retirement in August 21, 2001, Chief Justice Cruz left a legacy of achievements and accomplishments. The decades of service he dedicated to the people of Guam has truly earned him a place in our hearts. On behalf of the people of Guam, I congratulate him on his well earned retirement and thank him for his service to the island and its people. Si Yu’os Ma’ase’, Chief Justice Cruz.
JUDGE JAMES H. LINCOLN: A HARBOR BEACH LEGEND

HON. JAMES A. BARCIA
OF MICHIGAN

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, September 13, 2001

Mr. BARCIA. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to my dear friend, Judge James H. Lincoln, for his myriad achievements in the law and politics, and especially for his life-long commitment and devotion to the state of Michigan, the residents of his native Harbor Beach and to the entire nation.

Judge Lincoln’s storied legal career and his apprenticeship and special relationship with Harbor Beach’s other famous native son, former Governor and U.S. Supreme Court Justice Frank Murphy, are well-known. In fact, he is the last surviving pall bearer of Frank Murphy. Jim also worked hand-in-hand with some of the other more notable names in our state’s history, including Governor G. Mennen Williams, Lieutenant Governor Martha Griffiths and U.S. Senator Blair Moody. Moreover, Jim earned a place of honor in historical annals as a champion of justice during tenures on the Detroit City Council, the Wayne County Board of Supervisors and as a probate judge.

Impressively, Judge Lincoln is one of only two people in the state of Michigan to have a courthouse named after them. In his case, it is the James H. Lincoln Hall of Juvenile Justice in Detroit. The other person so honored is Jim’s mentor, Frank Murphy.

A personal highlight of my own career began when Jim and I worked closely together to secure funds to help the city of Harbor Beach to acquire the Murphy homestead to establish a museum to honor Governor Murphy. We secured a grant for $125,000 and Judge Lincoln raised another $125,000 in matching funds to preserve the home and exhibit objects associated with the life and times of Frank Murphy.

Of course, Judge Lincoln depended greatly on the loving support of his wife, Kim, and children, David, Eddie, Janet and Linda. He is credited to them as instrumental to his success, and we applaud them as well. He also is justly proud of a woman whose adoption he granted under difficult circumstances. His decision led to the city of Harbor Beach to acquire the Murphy homestead to establish a museum to honor Governor Murphy. We secured a grant for $125,000 and Judge Lincoln raised another $125,000 in matching funds to preserve the home and exhibit objects associated with the life and times of Frank Murphy.

Extensions of Remarks

Mr. Speaker, I rise today to lend my thoughts and prayers, along with those of my colleagues, fellow Americans, and all our friends around the world, to the victims of these terrorist assaults and their families, a number of whom come from New Hampshire. But even as we recover from these attacks—to bury the dead, to comfort the survivors and families, and to rebuild—we must turn our attention to the future.

In the days and weeks ahead we will of course take steps to increase the security and safety of Americans in travel and in their places of work and to bring those responsible to justice. We must remember, however, that no system of security is invincible. So long as terrorists are able to organize, finance, communicate, train, and execute such operations, this country and our allies will always be at risk.

The time has now come to recognize that a new defining doctrine must be embraced: that no safe harbor can be allowed for terrorists. No country can be allowed to tolerate the presence of terrorists or their supporters or assets within their borders. Such states must be held to the same level of account as the terrorists themselves, and we must use every means necessary to drive home this point to them.

With no place to hide, no place to train and organize, no place to keep their assets, the power of terrorists will be critically undermined. This doctrine of no safe harbor will be the greatest legacy for the victims of these terrorist attacks; that truly everything will be done to ensure that we are never so vulnerable again.

A LONG-AGO RESCUE SENDS US COURAGE FOR TODAY

HON. BETTY MCCOLLUM OF MINNESOTA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, September 13, 2001

Ms. MCCOLLUM. Mr. Speaker, much is being made these days—and justifiably so—of the courage of America’s “Greatest Generation” of men and women who fought and won World War II.

Like his fellow veterans of the European Theater, former U.S. Army Staff Sgt. Alden T. Johnson vividly remembers witnessing countless acts of courage and devotion amongst falling bombs, raging fires and an often terrified civilian populace.

However, until very recently, Mr. Johnson—who grew up in the northwestern Minnesota communities of Karlstad, Shelly and Hammla and who now resides in Red Wing—never realized that his own act of courage years before that war had been recorded on the front page of the Karlstad Advocate on May 17, 1923:

Alden’s sister, Millie Peterson’s—a long time aid to Minnesota Attorneys General Warren Spannaus and Hubert Humphrey III—discovered the article at the Minnesota Historical Society.

I commend the place to my colleagues not only because it is the dead and the disappeared—and to those who at this very hour cling to life, horribly trapped under concrete, jagged glass and steel.
Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentlemen from New Jersey and California for their leadership on this important issue.

Mr. Speaker, we must now bury our fallen, and with heavy hearts, prayerful lips, but a firm belief that our lost are with our Creator and have joined in a celestial song to march us into the battle which we now willingly engage.

May the very God, whose existence these terrorists deny, grant them sufficient time on this Earth to have these horrors visited on them.

Let's note for the record, Mr. Speaker, that although Americans chose neither the time nor the place for this, but that those soul-less terrorists who have made their choice known by these acts, have grossly underestimated the sterling resolve that historically visits this Nation during our time of need.

Mr. Speaker, we must now bury our fallen, and with heavy hearts, prayerful lips, but a firm belief that our lost are with our Creator and have joined in a celestial song to march us into the battle which we now willingly engage.

May the very God, whose existence these terrorists deny, grant them sufficient time on this Earth to have these horrors visited on them.

Let's note for the record, Mr. Speaker, that although Americans chose neither the time nor the place for this, but that those soul-less terrorists who have made their choice known by these acts, have grossly underestimated the sterling resolve that historically visits this Nation during our time of need.

Mr. Speaker, we must now bury our fallen, and with heavy hearts, prayerful lips, but a firm belief that our lost are with our Creator and have joined in a celestial song to march us into the battle which we now willingly engage.

May the very God, whose existence these terrorists deny, grant them sufficient time on this Earth to have these horrors visited on them.

Let's note for the record, Mr. Speaker, that although Americans chose neither the time nor the place for this, but that those soul-less terrorists who have made their choice known by these acts, have grossly underestimated the sterling resolve that historically visits this Nation during our time of need.

Mr. Speaker, we must now bury our fallen, and with heavy hearts, prayerful lips, but a firm belief that our lost are with our Creator and have joined in a celestial song to march us into the battle which we now willingly engage.

May the very God, whose existence these terrorists deny, grant them sufficient time on this Earth to have these horrors visited on them.
IN REMEMBRANCE OF THE VICTIMS OF THE KATYN FOREST MASSACRE

HON. ROBERT MENENDEZ OF NEW JERSEY IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, September 13, 2001

Mr. MENENDEZ. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor the victims of the Katyn Forest Massacre, sixty-two years after the horrible tragedy. Memorial Services will be held on September 16, 2001, at the Katyn Monument site in Jersey City, New Jersey.

Following Nazi Germany’s unprovoked attack on Poland on September 1, 1939, Polish troops stood up to a better-equipped and larger army, eventually succumbing to the incredible odds several weeks after Soviet troops viciously attacked from the East. While Polish forces were vastly outnumbered and overextended, they fought vigorously and valiantly on two fronts. So Phó is defeat, Soviet and Nazi victors immediately placed Poland under their harsh and brutal occupation.

In the Spring of 1940, Soviet-led forces brutally killed and tortured over fifteen thousand Polish men, women, and children. One of the sites of these barbaric and inhumane acts was the Katyn Forest, where four thousand bodies were later discovered.

Today, I honor the victims of the Katyn Forest Massacre. I commend their courage and sacrifice. They stood strong in the face of genocide and appalling brutality.

I ask that my colleagues join me in remembering the victims of the Katyn Forest Massacre, and I ask that we honor their sacrifice for freedom.

EXPRESSING SENSE OF SENATE AND HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES REGARDING TERRORIST ATTACKS LAUNCHED AGAINST UNITED STATES

HON. WILLIAM L. JENKINS OF TENNESSEE IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES Tuesday, September 11, 2001

Mr. JENKINS. Mr. Speaker, on September 11, 2001, an act of terrorism took the lives of thousands of innocent Americans. No American is exempt from the pain and anger that resulted. I know I speak for everybody in the First Congressional District of Tennessee when I send their thoughts and prayers to the families and friends of those who are casualties of this act of terror. Our thoughts and prayers also go to the thousands of individuals who have responded to the scene and are working non-stop in the rescue and recovery efforts.

It is important that we take the appropriate steps to deal with this matter. The government is functioning and providing the necessary resources to recover and rebuild, as well as the resources that will be needed to provide the appropriate responses to the perpetrators of this crime. We will use these resources to find those responsible and to see that justice is served.

As difficult as it is at this time, we must move forward. We cannot give in to the demands of terrorism. The American resolve is stronger than ever. It is a mistake of terrorists to believe that they will divide us. They have brought us together in ways that many people did not believe could happen. It is a mistake of terrorists to believe that we will cower in fear as a result of their actions. They have only strengthened the willpower, purpose, and determination of all Americans.

One of the most cherished freedoms in this country is the right to disagree. Honorable citizens have the right to voice their disagreements with each other without fear of reprisal. Quite often, Members of Congress find themselves engaging in quarrelsome debate over a variety of issues, which now pale in comparison to the matter that we must deal with in the upcoming days and weeks. Despite these disagreements, the U.S. has always stood for what is right in the world—freedom and democracy. The terrorists believe our ability to disagree is a weakness, and that they can exploit this. They are wrong.

The final casualty numbers will be high—too high to reasonably comprehend. Despite this tragic loss and the crumbling of America’s buildings, America’s foundation is strong. The history of this great nation proves that when the U.S. is roused—the U.S. fights—and the U.S. wins. We will stand together, outraged and resolute, and we will go to any length to bring these criminals, and those who aid and abet them, to justice. We will have not properly paid our respects to those who have died until their killers are brought to justice.

From this point forward, the rest of the world, and particularly those who harbor hatred and resentment against the United States, will learn that our strength and courage will not tolerate the acts of terrorists. We may never know the specific message these terrorist groups were trying to send to America. I do know that they will ultimately receive a response from America that will be loud and clear. God bless the United States of America.
Mr. BACA. Mr. Speaker, it is with regret and deep sadness that I rise to honor Cora Holland, a former constituent from San Bernardino, who passed away on September 11, 2001, when her plane was hijacked and collided with the north tower of the World Trade Center Building in New York, New York as part of an evil terrorist act.

Throughout the years, Cora was a true humanitarian. She loved her family and followed the Christian teaching of loving our fellow man. I believe that the well-being of our Nation’s peoples depends on all our dedication and efforts to invest in the present and the future.

They say a person is measured by the lives he or she touches. Through the grace of God, Cora touched many lives.

Cora was, and will continue to be eternally, the mother of three children and the grandmother of two. Her children Stephanie, Jessica, and Nathan received constant attention from what family and friends alike call “an incredibly dedicated mother.” Cora left two grandchildren behind, Drew and Amelia.

Cora Holland grew up in San Bernardino around K and 14th Streets. She graduated from San Bernardino High and worked at the County Hospital when it was in San Bernardino. It was while working in the hospital that Cora Hidalgo met her future husband, Steve Holland.

Cora was, according to her family, the center of the family. The family would often wait for her arrival so that she would coordinate what they would do. Her strong and loving spirit also extended to her involvement with feeding the homeless. Cora, a homemaker, spent countless hours using her knowledge of Spanish to help feed the homeless.

May God protect the soul of this wonderful woman. Cora was something that is in short supply in the world, a decent human being. Kind and selfless as seen in her community activism. Caring as seen in her devotion to her family. Her soul is one of the many departed on that fateful day, but the impact of her death is a deep well of sorrow in itself. I wish to extend to her brothers Gonzalez and Ernie, her children, her husband, and the rest of her family my most heartfelt condolences.

I cannot ever come to comprehend what her loss means to her family, but I am saddened and I mourn with them. Let us take comfort in the fact that she is now guarded by our Lord. Cora you are loved by many, you are a hero in every sense of the word, and will not be forgotten.

Cora’s family had nothing but praise for her. Describing her as a dedicated mother, wife and humanitarian. So in giving this honor, we are honoring her this day.

A devoted wife to Steve Holland, she lived in Sudbury, Massachusetts. Cora has three children: Stephanie, Jessica, and Nathan.

In short, she was a model of excellence we can all follow, at home and in our community.
confront even more discrimination and harass-ment than men.

Officially, discrimination based on caste has already been banned in India. But another delegate from Tamil Nadu, Joseph Raj, notes that changing the laws has not changed the system. “In the documents, Constitution and the law, they prohibited discrimination,” he says. “But in practice it is there. We have mechanisms within our country, but it has failed to protect our rights.”

Mr. Raj is pleased with the amount of popular support he and his colleagues are getting in Durban. He points to the large number of non-Indians roaming the conference grounds wearing headbands, jackets and buttons supporting their cause.

He and other campaigners want the Indian Government to address the issue at the U.N.-sponsored conference, which began Friday. And they want India to put an end to caste discrimination for good.

U.N. Secretary-General Kofi Annan briefly touched on the matter during the meeting of non-governmental organizations. He said the delegates at the U.N. conference will need to address discrimination based on caste but he failed to use that word to describe it. He simply referred to discrimination based on origin or work, which is commonly seen as a euphemism for caste.

An activist pressed him further on the matter, but Mr. Annan did not respond. That prompted an angry outcry from some members of the audience.

Getting public support for the Dalits’ cause in India may not translate into a solution for caste discrimination. But it seems clear that the activists have accomplished at least one of their goals. They have put the issue in the public eye on a global scale.

---

EXTENSIONS OF REMARKS

September 13, 2001

Rhonda served our nation proudly, raised four wonderful and dedicated children, and was loving wife. Although she, her husband, and her children had to move often due to her work, she managed to raise four wonderful children. Three of her children are in college and the fourth is a Forestry Department firefighter in Washington state.

May God protect the soul of this wonderful woman. In a time when decent people are in short supply, she was a model and example to her children and her community. Selfless as seen in her commitment to the safety of our nation. Caring as seen in her devotion to her family. Her soul is one of the many departed on that fateful day, but the impact of her death is a deep well of sorrow in itself. I wish to extend to her children, husband, and the rest of her family my most heartfelt condolences.

I cannot ever come to comprehend what her loss means to her family, but I am saddened and I mourn with them. Let us take comfort in the fact that she is now guarded by our Lord. Rhonda you are loved by many, you served your nation well, you are a hero, and will not be forgotten.

A devoted wife to Floyd Rusmussen, Rhonda lived in Virginia during her work at the Pentagon. Rhonda has four children: Nathan, T.J., Jeremiah and Becky.

Rhonda Rusmussen is a model of excellence we can all follow. Rhonda will be missed by family and friends alike. She touched us all with her kind deeds and leadership in her community.

---

TRIBUTE TO ROBERTA R. GOLDMAN

OF MASSACHUSETTS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 13, 2001

Mr. McGovern. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to the Honorable Raymond V. Mariano, Mayor of the City of Worcester, Massachusetts. Mayor Mariano has been selected to receive an award from the Grafton Democratic Town Committee.

Mayor Mariano has a long distinguished record of public service. He served on the Worcester School Committee from 1977 until 1981 when he was elected to the Worcester City Council. In 1993, he was first elected to serve as the Mayor of the City of Worcester. He was re-elected in 1995 and 1997 by the largest percentage of any Mayor in Worcester’s history, and is now serving his fourth term in office after successfully winning re-election in 1999.

During his tenure as the Mayor of the City of Worcester, Mayor Mariano has had many accomplishments. In order to recognize and respond to the challenges facing the city’s young people, Mayor Mariano created a city-wide youth group to work directly with the mayor’s office. The mayor also initiated a summer job program that has created over 2,000 jobs for the city’s youth. Mayor Mariano has also recognized the need for development in the City of Worcester. He helped to secure federal grants for the renovation of Union Station and was the driving force behind the building of a new convention center that is open today. Perhaps Mayor Mariano’s greatest success has been the ability to connect with the city’s residents. Mayor Mariano has made himself available to hear the citizens’ concerns through the community meetings and the “Mayor’s Walks” through the neighborhoods.

Mayor Mariano has been active in many political campaigns on the local, state, and regional levels. He has demonstrated his belief in and the dedication to our political system by working tirelessly on Presidential, U.S. Senate, Gubernatorial and Congressional campaigns and referenda.

I would like to commend the Mayor, who makes his home with his wife Antonia and their three children, Gina Marie, Raymond Jr., and Anthony on his achievements and congratulate him for this well-deserved award. I ask my colleagues to join me in paying tribute to The Honorable Raymond V. Mariano for his outstanding record of public service.

---

TRIBUTE TO THE LATE RHONDA RASMUSSEN

HON. JOE BACA

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 13, 2001

Mr. BACA. Mr. Speaker, it is with regret and deep sadness that I rise to honor Rhonda Sue Rasmussen, former constituent from San Bernardino, who passed away on September 11, 2001, when a hijacked plane collided with a section of the Pentagon where she worked. She was one of the many American heroes who perished that day from an evil terrorist attack.

Throughout the years, Rhonda was a true visionary. She loved her family. I believe that the well-being of our peoples depends on all of our dedication and efforts to invest in the present and the future.

Mr. Speaker, Rhonda served as an auditor for the army. She was one of the many faceless men and women that support our military forces and keep our Nation safe. She was a dedicated worker, one who always makes sure that citizens come first. She was extremely strong, brave and dedicated to her work. She had a sense of fun about her, even though she approached her duties with great seriousness and duty. They say a person is measured by the lives he or she touched. Through the grace of God, Rhonda touched many lives.

Rhonda’s family had nothing but praise for her, describing her as a dedicated and great hero that on Tuesday put herself in harm’s way. So in giving this honor, we are honoring her this day.

The last time her family saw her was during a barbeque earlier this year. It was at this barbeque, hosted by her mother who suffers from cancer, that she told her family that she would not come to California. Regrettfully, that day will never come. A family will never be reunited, and we grieve for the loss of this wonderful soul.

Rhonda served our nation proudly, raised four wonderful and dedicated children, and was loving wife. Although she, her husband, and her children had to move often due to her work, she managed to raise four wonderful children. Three of her children are in college and the fourth is a Forestry Department firefighter in Washington state.

May God protect the soul of this wonderful woman. In a time when decent people are in short supply, she was a model and example to her children and her community. Selfless as seen in her commitment to the safety of our nation. Caring as seen in her devotion to her family. Her soul is one of the many departed on that fateful day, but the impact of her death is a deep well of sorrow in itself. I wish to extend to her children, husband, and the rest of her family my most heartfelt condolences.

I cannot ever come to comprehend what her loss means to her family, but I am saddened and I mourn with them. Let us take comfort in the fact that she is now guarded by our Lord. Rhonda you are loved by many, you served your nation well, you are a hero, and will not be forgotten.

A devoted wife to Floyd Rusmussen, Rhonda lived in Virginia during her work at the Pentagon. Rhonda has four children: Nathan, T.J., Jeremiah and Becky.

Rhonda Rusmussen is a model of excellence we can all follow. Rhonda will be missed by family and friends alike. She touched us all with her kind deeds and leadership in her community.

---

TRIBUTE TO ROBERTA R. GOLDMAN

HON. JAMES P. McGovern

OF MASSACHUSETTS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 13, 2001

Mr. McGovern. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to Roberta R. Goldman of Shrewsbury, Massachusetts. She has been selected to receive an award from the Grafton Democratic Town Committee on Sunday, September 16, 2001 in Grafton, Massachusetts.

Following graduation, she moved to Shrewsbury to raise her family and became involved in numerous civic and political activities. She served in the Massachusetts House of Representatives where she helped pass the Education Reform Act of 1985. She also served as Director of Educational Reform in the Office of Education Affairs under Governor Dukakis.

As a member of the Democratic State Committee since 1988, Roberta has served on the Rules Committee and on the Host Committee for four Democratic State Conventions held in Worcester. She has been a delegate to five Democratic National Conventions and last year was elected as an Elector to the Electoral College. Her campaigning for candidates at every level, from local office holders to Presidential candidates is legend. She is Co-Vice Chair of the Shrewsbury Town Democratic Committee, and chairs the bi-annual Eleanor Roosevelt Humanitarian Award event.

As a social studies teacher at Shrewsbury High School, she has worked to build an appreciation of involvement in the political process. Through the Political Action Group for
September 13, 2001

EXTENSIONS OF REMARKS

Mr. SANDERS. Mr. Speaker, today I recognize the outstanding work done by participants in my Student Congressional Town Meeting held this summer. These participants were part of a group of high school students from around Vermont who testified about the concerns they have as teenagers, and about what they would like to see government do regarding their concerns. I am asking that these statements be printed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, as I believe that the views of these young persons will benefit my colleagues.

On Behalf of Kevin Decausemacker Regarding Gun Control, May 7, 2001

Kevin Decausemacker. Thank you for this opportunity. It is a really great thing you let the youth of Vermont come and express their opinions.

Kevin Decausemacker. The year was 1938. Kevin Decausemacker. Your full name.

Kevin Decausemacker. I'm sorry. I'm a little tired. I'm a Second Amendment statesperson. A little hard to pronounce. The year was 1938, one year before the invasion of Poland. It was now that Adolf Hitler implemented the first example of gun control. He prohibited the Jewish people from owning firearms, and by doing so took substantial power away from the people. He made it easier to commence genocide with little resistance from his victims. This is what a government can do with too much power. Whatever it wants. Our government has created three different branches to limit the power it possesses. The United States promotes a government of the people, by the people, and for the people. The more we constrict the rights of the Second Amendment states we have, the more power is taken away from the people and given to the government. I feel that the more power the government has, the more advantage of by it. Why implement gun control then? Solely for safety. However, if safety is the main concern, in England and Australia, firearm laws, there have been rising breaking-and-entry and burglary numbers. So what gun control has done there has only made the criminals bolder, they gave them knowledge that their victims are unarmed. Now, compare these countries with Switzerland, where nearly every home has a firearm. In Switzerland there is a significant decrease in crime, perhaps because the criminals are afraid. Why, then, would any country want to make criminals bolder, despite the fact that power would be taken away from the people? Criminals would operate with little fear? Anti-gun legislation, at least under the Clinton administration, has progressed. The Brady bill is an example of anti-gun legislation and that was put into effect during Clinton's eight years. The Brady bill has prevented many, many gun purchases. But there hasn't been a noticeable decline in violent crimes due to the Brady bill alone. Why is it there then? The registering of firearms is rather pointless. The sole purpose behind the control argument is to protect the people. But how will registering firearms help if criminals don't have to register them? The Haynes Supreme Court decision held that criminals are exempt from federal anti-gun laws regarding registration because it violates their Fifth Amendment protection against self-incrimination. In other words, people who are not criminals can be prosecuted for failing to register a firearm or being in possession of an unregistered firearm. An anti-gun law would do nothing to deter criminals from committing heinous deeds with the aid of a firearm. Criminals don't obey laws as it is. Why would the Constitution law be stricter? Anti-gun laws would only give criminals the same freedom Hitler had, to leave his victims defenseless, at his mercy. Even if a criminal can't obtain a gun, he can still commit a murder or violent crime without a gun; they could use a knife, a chain, a blunt object. Even a shoe lace can be used as a garotte. Why focus on guns? When things happen, the object the criminal uses shouldn't be attacked. What we should do is focus on preventing the criminals from spreading further harm by means of rehabilitation in correctional facilities. Anti-gun legislation needs to be put at rest, and people need to be more educated about gun safety. If educated on gun safety, the number of accidents would decline dramatically. I myself have been exposed to firearms in a safe environment and understand their danger. I know how to operate and store a firearm safely and responsibly. We can coexist with firearms safely, and all we need is some education.

On Behalf of Jory Hurst, Robby Short, Emily Wright, and Kerry McIntosh Regarding, School Standards, Tracking in Schools, May 7, 2001

Jory Hurst. On the program, I think it listed just the student body, but there are students, and often the groups of students, often they do have similar interests, but they are just always together. And integration is important, because then you can work with the same group of friends, then allows for no variety, and you don't really get to see other perspectives. Like a student coming from a different area from you. And also, some of the academic class systems can lead to generalizations that can go through nonacademic categories, such as with social things with friends and/or into sports, and this isn’t good. And often kids are grouped and branded into certain classes. Like if a student is grouped as a B student, then this can be a self-fulfilling prophesy, and they will never really want to succeed because they will think that they can’t, because they’re not in honors, and people don’t look at them with the same respect. But we just need to look at everybody as an individual, and then this problem will really go away. And have more school unity. And teachers and students alike need to keep in mind that there is more to a person than their academic ranking.
The Senate met at 9 a.m., and was called to order by the Honorable Jon S. Corzine, a Senator from the State of New Jersey.

PRAYER

The Chaplain, Dr. Lloyd John Ogilvie, offered the following prayer:

Almighty God, as we seek Your grace as healing for our grief-filled hearts, we reaffirm some very powerful presuppositions about You and Your providential care for Your creation. Strengthen our conviction that You do not cause tragedies. We dismiss that false question, “Where was God in the midst of the tragic terrorist attack?” You were with us giving us courage and hope. You created humankind: to know, to love, and to serve You. We reverently reflect on what must have been Your most crucial decision when You created humankind: You gave us freedom of choice, knowing that there can be no response of love without choice, but also that humankind would abuse this freedom. There is an objective force of evil in the world that often has been expressed through people, and movements, and nations. Heinous acts happen. You are not dissuaded. You suffer with us, and, with ways we could not plan, bring good out of evil. Not even death can separate us from You. This life is but a small part of the whole of eternity. In the midst of our anguish over those who died in Tuesday’s tragedies, remind us of the shortness of time and the length of eternity. Make us communicators of love and strength to those who continue to suffer in the grim aftermath of terrorism. Bless the Senators and the entire Senate family with a fresh gift of faith to trust You and a renewed assurance that, “though the wrong seems oft so strong, You are the ruler yet!” Amen.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE

The Honorable Jon S. Corzine led the Pledge of Allegiance, as follows:

I pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America and to the Republic for which it stands, one nation under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.

APPOINTMENT OF ACTING PRESIDENT PRO TEMPORE

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will please read a communication to the Senate from the President pro tempore (Mr. Byrd).

The legislative clerk read the following letter:

U.S. Senate, President pro tempore, Washington, DC, September 14, 2001.

To the Senate:

Under the provisions of rule I, paragraph 3 of the Standing Rules of the Senate, I hereby appoint the Honorable Jon S. Corzine, a Senator from the State of New Jersey, to perform the duties of the Chair.

Robert C. Byrd, President pro tempore.

Mr. Corzine thereupon assumed the chair as Acting President pro tempore.

RESERVATION OF LEADER TIME

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Under the previous order, the leadership time is reserved.

RECOGNITION OF THE MAJORITY LEADER

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The majority leader.

Mr. Daschle. I thank the Chair.

SCHEDULE

Mr. Daschle. Mr. President, for the information of all Senators, there will be caucuses held by both parties at 9:15 a.m. today. As soon as the caucuses have completed their deliberations, we will enter into morning business for a period of time. My hope and my expectation is that we will take up both the supplemental appropriations bill, as well as the resolution having to do with the circumstances we are facing in providing the President with additional authority. That resolution, as well as the supplemental appropriations bill, will be the subject of deliberation and debate today, perhaps tomorrow. The House of Representatives has indicated they will be in session tomorrow to take up the resolution.

It is my hope that perhaps we might be able to complete our work today, but until I have had the opportunity to consult more with the Republican leadership, I am unable to make any more definitive judgment about the time it will take to complete our work on both of these matters. We were negotiating late into the evening last night, I thank all of those who participated.

We concluded our work successfully after midnight last night. We will now be in a position to take up the supplemental appropriations bill. I will consult with the chairman of the Appropriations Committee, the ranking member, as well as the Republican leader, as we consider just what the sequence will be throughout the day.

There will be rollcalls. We are unclear about the timing of those rollcalls or whether or not a Saturday session may be required. I call attention to that expectation.

I also remind Senators that there is a memorial service at the National Cathedral at noon. While the more optimistic view is that we could perhaps begin boarding buses as early as 10 o’clock to accommodate logistics and security, it may be that we will be boarding a little later than that in order to accommodate whatever other considerations in the schedule there will be this morning.

I remind Senators that there will be a need to board buses sometime, I would say, at least prior to 11 o’clock, but we will make more definitive announcements with regard to boarding the buses as well as scheduling any specific schedule in the time ahead.

BABY GRACE

Also, Mr. President, in what has been a very dark hour for this country and for this institution, it is hard to find anything for which we can celebrate, but we can celebrate this morning. Senator Dodd and his wife Jackie had a baby girl last night. Her name is Grace. She is 7 pounds. They are doing well. I congratulate Senator Dodd, Jackie, and welcome Grace into this world of ours.

MEASURES PLACED ON THE CALENDAR—H.R. 2291 AND H.R. 2833

Mr. Daschle. Mr. President, I understand that the following bills are at the desk, having been read the first time: H.R. 2291 and H.R. 2833. I ask unanimous consent that it be in order, en bloc, for these two bills to receive a second reading, and I would then object to any further consideration.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered. The bills will be placed on the calendar.

Mr. Daschle. I yield the floor.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Minnesota.

Mr. Wellstone. Mr. President, I ask the majority leader, am I correct that after the caucuses, there will be a short period of time for morning business, or do we know for sure?

Mr. Daschle. I respond to the Senator from Minnesota, there probably will be some time, but we will be in morning business at least for another 15 minutes.

Mr. Wellstone. This morning.

Mr. Daschle. This morning.

Mr. Wellstone. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that I have 5 minutes—I do not intend to take any more than that—in morning business.
The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

MINNESOTANS MOBILIZE

Mr. WELLSSTONE. Mr. President, I thank the Chair. My congratulations to Chris and Jackie on the birth of their daughter.

Mr. President, there are many times to speak in this Chamber. Today I speak from the Senate floor to make the remarks of one Senator from Minnesota part of our historical record. The Senator from South Dakota is right, it is a very somber time. The unthinkable happened.

We have witnessed the slaughter of parents and their kids. I want to talk about this in the following way: First of all, it sounds so political to do this, but I want to say the people of Minnesota for mobilizing the way they have mobilized: the blood banks, the offers of assistance, the prayers. Nothing could be more important.

As a Senator from New Jersey, as someone who worked in the World Trade Center, the Chair has probably a more direct understanding of the agony and the hell of so many families, but I am very proud that the people of Minnesota, in every way possible, are there for support.

This represents the best in our country. I say this because I want to say, drawing on the Minnesota example, that I do not want to let these terrorists ever take away from us as Americans the greatness of our country, including the values by which we live. I am talking about the civil liberties of Americans, and I am talking about the freedom that is so important to each and every one of us.

I say this also well because unlike these terrorists who slaughtered parents and kids, let us be clear, as we pass a resolution and move forward, that when we respond, our intention is to target the people that are responsible for this. Unlike these terrorists and what they did to Americans, we care about innocent civilians. We care about parents and kids.

Our effort must be focused on the people who are responsible, their network, their organizations. Our greatness, as I want to thank the people of Minnesota for mobilizing, is always to do everything we can to make sure innocent people do not lose their lives.

These are our values. This is what we are about. Whether it be how we now conduct ourselves as a nation, or the kind of military action that we are going to be taking, we will never let these terrorists take away from us what has made our country great.

As the son of a Jewish immigrant who fled persecution from Russia, I have always cherished our freedoms, and I always will. I hold that dear, and I believe that Americans hold it dear.

As the son of a Jewish immigrant who fled persecution from Russia, I have always believed the greatness of our country is the value we place on human life. I am not responding to anybody’s particular comments. But of course we will always care and make sure that to the maximum extent possible there will not be loss of lives of innocent people, wherever they live. That is what we are about.

Our effort is going to be targeted to these terrorists, targeted to their organization, targeted to their infrastructure. As many people have written in the papers, as Tom Friedman said today in the New York Times, which was right on the mark, and as I think Secretary Powell has been trying to say, our efforts will not be a single action, and may not be done right away. It is going to be a long, difficult struggle. I believe people in our country, I believe people in Minnesota are united in this, but we need to do this the smart way. We need to do this the right way.

I yield the floor.

I suggest the absence of a quorum.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

RECESS SUBJECT TO THE CALL OF THE CHAIR

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I move that the Senate stand in recess subject to the call of the Chair.

The motion was agreed to, and at 9:16 a.m. the Senate recessed subject to the call of the Chair and reassembled at 10:16 a.m. when called to order by the President pro tempore. The clerk will call the roll.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

ORDER OF BUSINESS

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, as I think certainly everyone on the floor knows, but for those who may be viewing our proceedings and should know, our colleagues have been meeting for the last hour to review the work which has been done by colleagues on both sides of the aisle in concert with the administration and with the House of Representatives. This work has been ongoing now for several days. The Appropriations Committee, through the leadership of Senator Byrd and Senator Stevens, on the use of force resolution, through the leadership of many of our colleagues on both sides, again in concert with the White House, have given their reports to the caucuses.

I am about to propose a unanimous consent request that would allow us to vote on both the use of force resolution and the appropriations supplemental. We would hold open the Record for purposes of additional comment. I will read the unanimous consent request. Let me say, before I do read the request, how much I appreciate, once again, the leadership of our Republican leader. As he has throughout the week, he has been remarkable. We could not be where we are today, this country or this institution, without the strong partnership and leadership he has shown. I commend him, and I thank all of our colleagues for their remarkable participation during this difficult week.

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, if Senator Daschle will yield, I thank him for his remarks and I will respond in kind appropriately, but I will wait until after the unanimous consent is reached.

UNANIMOUS CONSENT AGREEMENT—S. 1426 AND S.J. RES. 23

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate now proceed to consideration of S. 1426, the supplemental appropriations bill; that upon its reporting, it be laid aside and the Senate proceed to the consideration of S.J. Res. 23, the use of force legislation; that the Senate vote on final passage of the appropriations bill, to occur immediately: that the vote on final passage of the use of force resolution occur immediately upon the disposition of the appropriations bill; that no amendments or motions be in order to either bill; that the preamble to the joint resolution be agreed to; and that when the Senate receives from the House its supplemental appropriations bill, it be read a third time and agreed to, provided that it is identical to the bill which the Senate has passed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from Mississippi.

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, I thank my colleagues on both sides of the aisle for agreeing to this request. I, too, want to thank Senator Daschle, Senator Reid, the leadership on the Democratic side of the aisle, and Senators Nickles, Gramm, Domenici, Stevens, and Warner who have worked on these resolutions, and many others.

I realize this is a dramatic action in both cases. That is what is called for.

I have never seen a better example of Members standing together, working together, swallowing our legislative desires and our budgetary restraint feelings, and saying we must have got to act decisively. The American people expect it of us and they will accept nothing less. We are doing that. We are moving today to provide humanitarain funds to assist in the cleanup, disaster assistance, and military action that is necessary.

In a perfect world, maybe we would do it differently—with more money,
September 14, 2001

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—SENATE 17037

less money, more language, less language—but the world has changed, and we are acting appropriately.

With regard to the use of force language, I think it has been worked on by Democrats, Republicans, and the administration. If you look at it carefully, I think it does the job without putting us at risk. Senator Daschle said the conference was ready to go to do these things. I think this is the right thing, and I commend both conferences for this decisive action.

Thank you for your leadership.

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, I ask that Senators, again, vote from their desks.

2001 EMERGENCY SUPPLEMENTAL APPROPRIATIONS ACT FOR RECOVERY FROM AND RESPONSE TO TERRORIST ATTACKS ON THE UNITED STATES

AUTHORIZATION FOR USE OF MILITARY FORCE

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will first report the Senate bill.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 1426) making supplemental appropriations for fiscal year 2001 for additional disaster assistance, for antiterrorist initiatives, and for assistance in the recovery from the tragedy that occurred on September 11, 2001, and for other purposes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The yeas and nays were ordered.

There is a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

AIRPORT AND AIRLINE SECURITY

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, the Senator from California on the importance of increasing airport and airline security to prevent our Nation from experiencing a tragedy like this. In my opinion, funds in this bill could be for air marshals and airport security personnel.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, the agreement reached in this body provides $10 billion to respond to the attacks in New York and Washington, and the plane crash in Pennsylvania, as follows: $10 billion available immediately for the President to utilize; $10 billion available 15 days after the President submits a plan; $20 billion available for allocation in subsequent acts.

This compromise provides the initial $20 billion sought by the President with virtually no restriction, and provides a second $20 billion pursuant to the President to adopt additional measures to secure and strengthen our national security.

The President can use any of the funds for national security purposes—but of the total of $40 billion, not less than $30 billion is only available for the domestic recovery effort.

As context, Congress initially provided $15 billion for the Gulf War effort; nearly $10 billion for the California earthquakes. All of the funds are available until expended, to ensure there is no rush to obligate prematurely.

The arrangement fulfills the President’s commitment to New York, Virginia, and Pennsylvania for the families of those on board the hijacked aircraft, and ensure adequate funds are available for any initial military or intelligence requirements, without a competition for funds between those two needs.

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, Ernest Hemingway observed that “life breaks us all, and afterward many are strong at the broken places.”

America’s heart is broken. What happened on Tuesday was not simply an attack against America. It was a crime against democracy, against decency itself.

The more we learn, the more we grieve for the innocent victims of these unconscionable attacks; the people of New York, and those of New Jersey, Connecticut, and all who were in and around World Trade Center at the time of these attacks; our men and women serving at the Pentagon; and, the passengers and crew of American Airlines flights 11 and 175, and United Airlines flights 93 and 175.

Today, with the passage of this supplemental bill, we take a step toward healing, and we begin the process of growing stronger at the broken places. It has been an extraordinary few days here in Congress. As we come together to consider how we can act, how we can help, how we can serve, we forget to consider those things that once divided us.

Today, we are not Democrats or Republicans. We are Americans.

We stand together as one Congress, one people. And we say together, with one voice, we will do whatever needs to be done to care for the victims, to comfort the families, to address this threat to our homeland, and to let our enemies know: We will find them. And we will have justice.

This bill we are considering provides 40 billion dollars to provide aid to the victims of the attacks, and to deal with the consequences of those attacks. The money will be used to: repair the horrific damage caused by these attacks, and help begin the process of recovery; improve attack and disaster preparedness; enhance our counterterrorism efforts; make our planes and other systems of transportation safer and more secure; and strengthen our national security.

But we need to remember: in the end, this isn’t about money, because money is only a means. This is a statement of our commitment to help our fellow Americans in their time of need, to protect our Nation from the most insidious of threats, and to ensure that those who had a hand in these evil acts are held accountable.

This is a first step. It is the first of many. Because we will do whatever it takes. And, ultimately, we will grow strong in the broken places.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, in the aftermath of Tuesday’s tragic events, security has necessarily been tightened at all our borders. This includes the border crossings at the Port of Detroit, including the Ambassador Bridge, the Detroit-Windsor Tunnel, and the Blue Water Bridge in Port Huron. The U.S. Customs Service is inspecting every vehicle and almost every truck crossing into the United States at these ports of entry, which is what should be the case after such a terrible breach of our Nation’s security.

These ports of entry are important commercial routes for the transport of the just-in-time delivery auto parts to American auto manufacturing plants which are supplied from Canada and elsewhere. Just-in-time delivery means an industry must have the ability to move its products quickly from point to point. An unfortunate side effect of the tightened security is that significant delays of up to 12 hours in some cases have occurred at the bridges and tunnel. This has meant that the just-in-time delivery system that the automobile manufacturers rely on have broken down. As a result, automobile assembly plants in the United States do not have the necessary parts and many have shut down. Others may have to shut down soon for lack of parts.

This backup at our northern border during these extraordinary times highlights and aggravates an existing and chronic problem of under-staffing of Customs inspection and INS personnel at the Port of Detroit and along the Northern border in general. Congress was already beginning to address this shortfall before Tuesday's tragedy exacerbated the problem.

As we pass an emergency supplemental bill today that will provide $40 billion in disaster relief and humanitarian aid to help respond to the destruction caused by Tuesday's tragedy, we should not forget the security needs at our borders. Specifically, we need to be sensitive to the economic impact and additional security measures have on industries that depend on just-in-time delivery of product from Canada and elsewhere. This doesn't mean that we should be any less vigilant in inspection at the border. To the contrary, it means we should be sure that we commit the resources necessary to perform these inspections without hurting our economy in the process.

The simple solution would be to direct a portion of the $40 billion to increase Customs and INS staffing levels at our northern border and at the Port of Detroit in particular where this need has been most clearly demonstrated. It makes good domestic security sense and it makes good economic sense.

Mr. JOHNSON. Mr. President, I want to express my strong support for S. 1426, the Emergency Supplemental Appropriations bill for assistance in the recovery from the tragedy that occurred on September 11, 2001, and for S. J. Resolution 23, which authorizes the use of force against those responsible for the attacks launched against the United States. On this day of remembrance in our country, we must also face the need to respond and rebuild.

As we are faced with another critical moment in our Nation's history, I am proud to be a member of the United States Senate and the Senate Appropriations Committee, as we work in a nonpartisan way to provide support to the victims of the terrorist attacks on the World Trade Center and the Pentagon. The Senate approved this critically important funding legislation of $40 billion by a vote of 96-0 earlier today. The United States Congress and the President have worked together to ensure the Nation's resolve in the coming days, months, and years.

It is important that we also stand as one America against any example of violence against people based on their religion or ethnicity. We will have lost this war against terrorism if our country's diversity becomes threatened.

We will remember those we've lost. We will respond against those responsible. And we will rebuild our Nation's confidence and security.

Mr. KOHL. Mr. President, today the Senate took an important step toward a new kind of war. Congress has resolved that military force may be necessary to end the scourge of terrorism. Today we took a solemn vow that we will strike back at those who have killed thousands of American citizens. Those responsible for the attack on the World Trade Center, the Pentagon, and the crash of an airliner in Pennsylvania will now face the full fury and capability of this great Nation.

But the United States will not react blindly. We do not want revenge, we want justice and security. We act today to defend America and punish our enemies. Unnecessary violence will do nothing to erase the losses suffered by the American people.

Part of what we are fighting to protect, is the Constitution and the role of Congress in a crisis. This resolution faithfully and responsibly executes our duty under the Constitution. We have the courage and determination of the United States Senate and the President. Congress remains a co-equal branch and a partner with the President in this struggle.

Innocent Americans were killed at the hands of our enemies. Our Nation grieves their loss and remembers an innocence now lost. Now, it is time to act decisively against those who planned, authorized, committed, or aided the terrorist attacks in order to prevent future aggression against Americans at home and abroad.

The war declared by these terrorists is a new kind of conflict. Unlike wars of the past, the attack was not made by one military against another, battling over borders. Instead, the attacks came from a faceless source and focused on innocent civilians. Their aim was to undermine our Nation's freedom, our liberties, and to destroy us from within through fear, hatred, and rage. We must not and will not allow terrorists to ultimately win this war.

I think about the families of those who have lost their colleagues, children who are now orphans, and those who still await word on the missing. We hold them in our hearts and keep them in our prayers. As the parent of a son in the U.S. Army, I also share the pride felt by those currently serving our Nation and protecting our freedoms in the military and in our communities as police and firefighters.

The coming weeks and months will be trying, and we must stand with one voice in support of these brave men and women.

We will remember those we've lost. We will respond against those responsible. And we will rebuild our Nation's confidence and security.

Mr. KYL. Mr. President, I rise at this time to lend my full support to S. 1426 the emergency supplemental appropriations bill.

The United States is engaged in war against terrorism. We have been engaged in that war for a long time, but seldom has it tread upon our Nation's soil. On September 11, it did, in a most horrific way.

Last night, this body took a great step in its fight against terrorism. We passed legislation that will significantly improve the effectiveness of our intelligence and legal apparatus.

The measure before us will provide much needed funds to the President to help heal the wounded, repair the broken and enable our Nation's military, justice, and intelligence agencies to carry out the arduous duties that lay before them. The threat will not soon go away. The missions of the agencies we provide for with the funds from this bill will continue long past the day when these funds will run out.

It is up to us, our colleagues in the House and the President and his administration to determine the plan and provide the resources to the men and women who will carry out the necessary steps to prevent what happened 3 days ago from ever happening again. It is up to us to promote and insure the Nation's resolve in the coming days, months, and years.

So, I support emergency supplemental legislation.

Mr. MIKULSKI. Mr. President, this Tuesday, September 11, 2001, the United States of America suffered devastating attacks.

What happened Tuesday was not only an attack against America. It was a crime against democracy, and decency. It was a crime against humanity.

Our hearts and prayers go out to the many who lost their lives. To the thousands who are injured and suffering. To the families of all the victims. And to the rescue workers and medical personnel who continue to work around the clock to save lives.

At the Pentagon yesterday, I saw the horror and devastation. I saw the courage and determination of the Montgomery County Urban Search and Rescue Team and many others working to shore up the structure and search the rent and burned symbol of America's might and power. I was inspired by the two Chaplains who bless the remains as each victim is found and removed.

The physical impact of these attacks hit New York City, at the Pentagon, and in Pennsylvania. But the real impact is on all of America, on all of the free world.
CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—SENATE

September 14, 2001

The direct victims were passengers on domestic flights, civilians and members of our Armed Forces working at the Pentagon, people working at or visiting the World Trade Center, and rescue workers. But all Americans share the pain of those who lost loved ones. We feel this as an attack on each and every one of us, and on our way of life.

I am so proud of the way Americans are responding to this national tragedy. We are united. We are helping each other. We are steadfast. We are strong.

Today, the Senate is taking action. We are doing our part as representatives of the American people. I am proud to join in the unanimous support for emergency supplemental appropriations and a resolution authorizing the use of force.

I have pledged to provide President Bush the resources for rescue, response and recovery, to investigate these attacks, and to improve security. Today, we are appropriating $40 billion to do that.

We are making resources available immediately to support Federal, State and local search, recovery and rebuilding efforts. To investigate, and prosecute domestic and international terrorism. To increase transportation security. To repair public buildings. And to support national security readiness. The President has tremendous flexibility, consulting appropriately with Congress, to use these funds.

We can and will prevail over terrorism. But we must also take strong action against those who attacked our Nation. Today, we are also adopting a resolution authorizing the President to use "all necessary and appropriate force."

The resolution specifically targets "those nations, organizations, or persons determined, planned, authorized, committed, or aided the terrorist attacks that occurred on September 11, 2001, or harbored such organizations. . ." Moreover, the resolution only authorizes action "in order to prevent any future acts of international terrorism against the United States. . ." The requirements of the War Powers Resolution remain in force. Congress may decide to give the President further authorization once we have discovered with greater certainty who is responsible for these barbaric acts.

America's law enforcement and intelligence agencies are vigorously pursuing their investigations to find all those responsible. Whoever they are, they must now know America is committed to rooting them out and exacting a severe price for their barbarity. And America's friends and allies are rightly joined to us.

Much work remains for the Senate, for our Congress, for our government, for our Nation, to respond and recover and rebuild. Today we are taking critical steps to sustain the recovery efforts and take appropriate action against terrorism.

We will not sacrifice our ideals in pursuit of the monsters who carried out these attacks. We will not compromise the principles for which so many Americans have fought and died. But we will root out those who committed these atrocities. We will have justice. And we will move forward, as a stronger nation than before.

At our prayer service in the Rotunda on Wednesday evening, I asked God to give us the courage and wisdom to respond rightly to these attacks on America. I believe we are doing so today.

The PRESIDENTIAL OFFICER.

The question is on the third reading and passage of the bill.

The bill was ordered to a third reading and was read the third time.

The PRESIDENTIAL OFFICER.

The bill having been read the third time, the question is, Shall the bill pass?

The yeas and nays have been ordered. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. REID. I announce that the Senator from Vermont (Mr. JEFFORDS) is necessarily absent.

Mr. NICKLES. I announce that the Senator from Ohio (Mr. VOINOVICH), the Senator from Idaho (Mr. CRAIG), and the Senator from North Carolina (Mr. HELMS) are necessarily absent.

I further announce that if present and voting the Senator from Ohio (Mr. VOINOVICH) and the Senator from North Carolina (Mr. HELMS) would each vote "yea."

The PRESIDENTIAL OFFICER (Mr. BAVIN). Are there any other Senators in the Chamber desiring to vote?

The result was announced—yeas 96, nays 0, as follows:

[Rollcall Vote No. 280 Leg.]

YEAS—96

Akaka
Aliot
Allen
Baucus
Bayh
Bennett Biden Bingaman
Bond
Boxer Breaux
Brownback
Burns
Byrd
Campbell
Cantwell
Garnahan
Carper
Chafee
Cleland
Clinton
Cochran
Collins
Cornyn
Corzine
Crapo
Daschle
Dayton
DeWine
Domenici
Dodd
DeWine
Douglas Dayton
Daschle
Cochran
Clinton
Cleland
Chafee
Carper Carnahan
Caesar
Cochran
Collins
Cornyn
Corzine
Crapo
Daschle
Dayton
DeWine
Domenici

Lugar
McCaskill
McCaskill
McCaskill
Markowski
Murray
Nelson (FL)
Nelson (NE)
Nickles
Reed
Reid
Sanctorum
Sarbanes Sessions
Shelby
Sachs
Specter Stabenow Stevens
Thomas
Thompson
Thomas
Thurmond
Terricelli
Warner
Weidener

Provided further, That the following sums shall be available for transfer to any authorized Federal, State, and local preparedness for mitigating and responding to the attacks, (2) providing support to counter, investigate, or prosecute domestic or international terrorism, (3) providing increased transportation security, (4) repairing public facilities and transportation systems damaged by the attacks, and (5) supporting national security: Provided, That these funds may be transferred to any authorized Federal Government activity to meet the purposes specified in this Act. Provided further, That the Congress designates the entire amount as an emergency requirement pursuant to section 251(b)(2)(A) of the Balanced Budget and Emergency Deficit Control Act of 1985; Provided further, That $40,000,000,000 shall be available only to the extent that an official budget request, that includes designation of the $40,000,000,000 as an emergency requirement as defined in the balanced Budget and Emergency Deficit Control Act of 1985, is transmitted by the President to the Congress; Provided further, That the President shall consult with the chairmen and ranking minority members of the Committees on Appropriations prior to the transfer of these funds; Provided further, That the sum of $40,000,000,000 made available herein, $10,000,000,000 shall not be available for transfer to any Department or Agency until 15 days after the Director of the Office of Management and Budget has submitted to the House and Senate Committees on Appropriations a proposed allocation and plan for use of the funds for that Department or Agency; Provided further, That the President shall transmit an amended budget request proposing an allocation of funds: Provided further, That not less than one-half of the $40,000,000,000 shall be for disaster recovery activities and assistance related to the terrorist acts in New York, Virginia and Pennsylvania on September 11, 2001; Provided further, That the Director of the Office of Management and Budget shall provide quarterly reports to the Committees on Appropriations on the amount of funds expended under this Act, and shall thereafter transmit a report to the Committees as soon as practicable detailing requests to meet any further funding requirements for the purposes specified in this Act.

NOT VOTING—4

Craig
Jeffords
Helm
Voinovich

The bill (S. 1426) was passed, as follows:

S. 1426

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the following sums are appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to provide emergency supplemental appropriations for fiscal year 2001, namely:

EXECUTIVE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT AND OTHER AGENCIES

APPROPRIATED TO THE PRESIDENT

EMERGENCY RESPONSE FUND (INCLUDING TRANSFER OF FUNDS)

For emergency expenses to respond to the terrorist attacks on the United States that occurred on September 11, 2001, to provide assistance to the victims of the attacks, and to deal with other consequences of the attacks, $40,000,000,000, to remain available until expended including for the purposes of this Act:

Provided further, That $40,000,000,000 shall be available only to the extent that an official budget request, that includes designation of the $40,000,000,000 as an emergency requirement as defined in the balanced Budget and Emergency Deficit Control Act of 1985, is transmitted by the President to the Congress; Provided further, That the President shall consult with the chairmen and ranking minority members of the Committees on Appropriations prior to the transfer of these funds; Provided further, That the sum of $40,000,000,000 made available herein, $10,000,000,000 shall not be available for transfer to any Department or Agency until 15 days after the Director of the Office of Management and Budget has submitted to the House and Senate Committees on Appropriations a proposed allocation and plan for use of the funds for that Department or Agency; $20,000,000,000 may be obligated only when enacted in a subsequent emergency appropriation bill, in response to the terrorist attacks on September 11, 2001; Provided further, That the President shall transmit an amended budget request proposing an allocation of funds: Provided further, That not less than one-half of the $40,000,000,000 shall be for disaster recovery activities and assistance related to the terrorist acts in New York, Virginia and Pennsylvania on September 11, 2001; Provided further, That the Director of the Office of Management and Budget shall provide quarterly reports to the Committees on Appropriations on the amount of funds expended under this Act, and shall thereafter transmit a report to the Committees as soon as practicable detailing requests to meet any further funding requirements for the purposes specified in this Act.
Mr. BYRD. Reserving the right to object, and, of course, I will not, Mr. President, may I say to the distinguished majority leader—if I may have a minute?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from West Virginia.

Mr. BYRD. There will be no necessity to worry about a Presiding Officer. We will be in later in the day for Senators who may wish to vote and move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, again, I ask Senators be limited to 5 minutes on this very momentous vote we are about to take.

For the information of all Senators, we want to get on the buses just as quickly as possible after this vote. For those who are going to be attending the memorial service, they will be right down in front of the steps. So we can accommodate all Senators by quickly going, as soon as the vote has been completed, to the buses for transportation to the National Cathedral.

Mrs. HUTCHISON. Mr. President, I inquire of the distinguished majority leader if the Senate will be able to stay in session until noon for Senators to accommodate their loved ones to cope, and determinately getting on with the effort to build that which was lost. The $40 billion supplemental appropriations bill that we just passed unanimously demonstrates our determination to assist in the recovery and rebuilding process. We will honor the unfinished business that needs to be attended to today.

In the aftermath of the treacherous terrorist attack on the United States and its citizens on September 11, I believe that it is extraordinarily important that the Congress speak with one voice to authorize the President to use force. In doing so, we will send a strong message of unity before the world.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, we will need some help in presiding. There are many people going to the memorial service, so some people will not be in this Chamber. So we will need some cooperation with the presiding officer.

Mr. DASCHLE. With an understanding we may be shorthanded with Presiding Officers, my intention was for those who were unable to attend the memorial service, we would stay in session until noon for Senators to speak for up to 5 minutes. We will resume then, following the memorial service, for Senators who may wish to come back and express themselves on the two matters on which we will have voted this morning—or other issues. And we will be in later in the day for purposes of confirming a number of nominees that are prepared for consideration as well.

We will come back after the memorial service.

Mr. LOTT. Did you propound a UC on the time for the 5 minutes?

Mr. DASCHLE. I did not.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent Senators be limited to 5 minutes as in morning business, following the vote, up until noon today.

Mr. BYRD. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from West Virginia.

Mr. BYRD. There will be no necessity to worry about a Presiding Officer. We will be in later in the day for Senators who may wish to vote and move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent Senators be permitted to speak for up to 5 minutes as in morning business until the hour of 12 o'clock noon.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. DASCHLE. I thank the Chair and thank all Senators.

Mr. President, I also announce that this will be the last vote of the day and we will not have any votes Monday, Tuesday, or Wednesday of next week.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, I rise to express my strong support for S.J. Res. 23, the joint resolution for use of military force.

As we consider this legislation, our fellow Americans in New York and at the Pentagon—indeed throughout this great country, are recovering those who are still lost, assisting their loved ones to cope, and determinately getting on with the effort to build that which was lost.

For the information of all Senators, we want to get on the buses just as quickly as possible after this vote. For those who are going to be attending the memorial service, they will be right down in front of the steps. So we can accommodate all Senators by quickly going, as soon as the vote has been completed, to the buses for transportation to the National Cathedral.

Mrs. HUTCHISON. Mr. President, I inquire of the distinguished majority leader if the Senate will be able to stay in session until noon for Senators to accommodate their loved ones to cope, and determinately getting on with the effort to build that which was lost. The $40 billion supplemental appropriations bill that we just passed unanimously demonstrates our determination to assist in the recovery and rebuilding process. We will honor the unfinished business that needs to be attended to today.

In the aftermath of the treacherous terrorist attack on the United States and its citizens on September 11, I believe that it is extraordinarily important that the Congress speak with one voice to authorize the President to use force. In doing so, we will send a strong message of unity before the world.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, we will need some help in presiding. There are many people going to the memorial service, so some people will not be in this Chamber. So we will need some cooperation with the presiding officer.

Mr. DASCHLE. With an understanding we may be shorthanded with Presiding Officers, my intention was for those who were unable to attend the memorial service, we would stay in session until noon for Senators to speak for up to 5 minutes. We will resume then, following the memorial service, for Senators who may wish to come back and express themselves on the two matters on which we will have voted this morning—or other issues. And we will be in later in the day for purposes of confirming a number of nominees that are prepared for consideration as well.

We will come back after the memorial service.

Mr. LOTT. Did you propound a UC on the time for the 5 minutes?

Mr. DASCHLE. I did not.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent Senators be limited to 5 minutes as in morning business, following the vote, up until noon today.

Mr. BYRD. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from West Virginia.

Mr. BYRD. There will be no necessity to worry about a Presiding Officer. We will be in later in the day for Senators who may wish to vote and move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent Senators be permitted to speak for up to 5 minutes as in morning business until the hour of 12 o'clock noon.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. DASCHLE. I thank the Chair and thank all Senators.

Mr. President, I also announce that this will be the last vote of the day and we will not have any votes Monday, Tuesday, or Wednesday of next week.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, I rise to express my strong support for S.J. Res. 23, the joint resolution for use of military force.

As we consider this legislation, our fellow Americans in New York and at the Pentagon—indeed throughout this great country, are recovering those who are still lost, assisting their loved ones to cope, and determinately getting on with the effort to build that which was lost.

For the information of all Senators, we want to get on the buses just as quickly as possible after this vote. For those who are going to be attending the memorial service, they will be right down in front of the steps. So we can accommodate all Senators by quickly going, as soon as the vote has been completed, to the buses for transportation to the National Cathedral.

Mrs. HUTCHISON. Mr. President, I inquire of the distinguished majority leader if the Senate will be able to stay in session until noon for Senators to accommodate their loved ones to cope, and determinately getting on with the effort to build that which was lost. The $40 billion supplemental appropriations bill that we just passed unanimously demonstrates our determination to assist in the recovery and rebuilding process. We will honor the unfinished business that needs to be attended to today.

In the aftermath of the treacherous terrorist attack on the United States and its citizens on September 11, I believe that it is extraordinarily important that the Congress speak with one voice to authorize the President to use force. In doing so, we will send a strong message of unity before the world.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, we will need some help in presiding. There are many people going to the memorial service, so some people will not be in this Chamber. So we will need some cooperation with the presiding officer.

Mr. DASCHLE. With an understanding we may be shorthanded with Presiding Officers, my intention was for those who were unable to attend the memorial service, we would stay in session until noon for Senators to speak for up to 5 minutes. We will resume then, following the memorial service, for Senators who may wish to come back and express themselves on the two matters on which we will have voted this morning—or other issues. And we will be in later in the day for purposes of confirming a number of nominees that are prepared for consideration as well.

We will come back after the memorial service.

Mr. LOTT. Did you propound a UC on the time for the 5 minutes?

Mr. DASCHLE. I did not.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent Senators be limited to 5 minutes as in morning business, following the vote, up until noon today.

Mr. BYRD. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from West Virginia.

Mr. BYRD. There will be no necessity to worry about a Presiding Officer. We will be in later in the day for Senators who may wish to vote and move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent Senators be permitted to speak for up to 5 minutes as in morning business until the hour of 12 o'clock noon.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. DASCHLE. I thank the Chair and thank all Senators.

Mr. President, I also announce that this will be the last vote of the day and we will not have any votes Monday, Tuesday, or Wednesday of next week.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, I rise to express my strong support for S.J. Res. 23, the joint resolution for use of military force.

As we consider this legislation, our fellow Americans in New York and at the Pentagon—indeed throughout this great country, are recovering those who are still lost, assisting their loved ones to cope, and determinately getting on with the effort to build that which was lost.

For the information of all Senators, we want to get on the buses just as quickly as possible after this vote. For those who are going to be attending the memorial service, they will be right down in front of the steps. So we can accommodate all Senators by quickly going, as soon as the vote has been completed, to the buses for transportation to the National Cathedral.

Mrs. HUTCHISON. Mr. President, I inquire of the distinguished majority leader if the Senate will be able to stay in session until noon for Senators to accommodate their loved ones to cope, and determinately getting on with the effort to build that which was lost. The $40 billion supplemental appropriations bill that we just passed unanimously demonstrates our determination to assist in the recovery and rebuilding process. We will honor the unfinished business that needs to be attended to today.

In the aftermath of the treacherous terrorist attack on the United States and its citizens on September 11, I believe that it is extraordinarily important that the Congress speak with one voice to authorize the President to use force. In doing so, we will send a strong message of unity before the world.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, we will need some help in presiding. There are many people going to the memorial service, so some people will not be in this Chamber. So we will need some cooperation with the presiding officer.

Mr. DASCHLE. With an understanding we may be shorthanded with Presiding Officers, my intention was for those who were unable to attend the memorial service, we would stay in session until noon for Senators to speak for up to 5 minutes. We will resume then, following the memorial service, for Senators who may wish to come back and express themselves on the two matters on which we will have voted this morning—or other issues. And we will be in later in the day for purposes of confirming a number of nominees that are prepared for consideration as well.

We will come back after the memorial service.

Mr. LOTT. Did you propound a UC on the time for the 5 minutes?

Mr. DASCHLE. I did not.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent Senators be limited to 5 minutes as in morning business, following the vote, up until noon today.
the imminent prospect of war against a great power. We face instead a threat more insidious, one that will require the best of America to defeat: the reality of catastrophic terrorism in our midst.

No longer do we perceive the only great threat to our security in the hostile maneuvers of foreign armies; no longer do vast oceans protect us from the plots and violence of the Old World; no longer do we sit in splendid isolation, flush with prosperity and naivete with peace.

A new day has come, a new test of the values upon which our Nation was founded. It calls us to a national mission unlike any we have known. Our Founding Fathers would well understand the nature of this challenge, for they prevailed against even greater odds in defending the American experiment. But from their example, and courage in their cause, as we protect the legacy they built.

We must destroy this international network of terror in all its guises, and deprive its architects, executioners, and sponsors of safe harbor anywhere in this world. We will find the enemy, and they will suffer the full, awesome measure of our justice.

These were not just crimes of mass murder against the United States; they are acts of war. The American people now know that we are at war. They will make the sacrifices and show the resolve necessary to prevail.

To see this mission through, Congress should encourage the President to use all necessary means to overcome and destroy this enemy, in what will be a long and trying campaign for freedom. Under the Constitution, the President already possesses this authority, but it is enhanced, and our cause strengthened, by the support of the Congress.

History will judge us for our support of this resolution, just as the 102nd Congress is judged for its resolution authorizing military action against Iraq. When faintness of heart carries the day, history’s judgment is cruel. This resolution leaves no doubt that the Congress is united in full support of the President. We have given the President the authority that he needs to respond to this unprecedented attack on our citizens on U.S. soil. This resolution allows the President to use all necessary and appropriate force against those nations, organizations, or individuals who are responsible for this attack and against those who harbor or support them.

Those who have seen war do not seek it lightly. But war has been thrown upon us, and the stakes couldn’t be higher.

The era of procrastination and half-measures has ended. The “post-Cold War era,” the prosperity and peace that all enjoyed, is history. We now have a higher purpose. Like other turning points in American history, when our founding principles were put at grave risk, we today rise proudly to the challenge.

American resolve is not in doubt. Let us give our Commander in Chief all necessary and appropriate power behind our purpose, in the name of our sacred heritage of freedom, and the glory of all whose sacrifice has preserved it.

Two years before Britain’s appeasement of Germany, at Munich, Winston Churchill called not for a policy of half-measures to tame the foreign threat, but a posture of peace through strength to prepare for victory over it. Britain’s freedom required no less. In Churchill’s words: “The inheritance in our possession represents the prolonged achievement of the centuries... There is not one of our simple uncounted rights today for which better men than we will not defend the battlefields of the world. We have not only a great treasure; we have a great cause.

America’s freedom, and the values that protect us in the face of evil, are our great and glorious cause. We re-affirm our nation’s day to our country, a prolonged achievement of the centuries, with humble pride and righteous fury, as we seek to make of this world a better, safer place for all.

Mr. KERRY. Mr. President, we cannot undo the grave events that took place on Tuesday or bring back the loved ones that so many families have lost or quickly restore the sense of security that Americans took for granted. But with resolve and determination we can take actions to root out those who perpetrated these disasters and heretofore unimaginable events.

There should be no question in the minds of those who are responsible for these attacks, or in the minds of those who have aided and abetted them, that the United States will take all necessary and appropriate steps to respond and to prevent them from undertaking additional attacks against our country. In keeping with our very values that were under attack this week, we must respond rationally and judiciously, not out of anger and sadness.

This resolution leaves no doubt that the Congress is united in full support of the President. We have given the President the authority that he needs to respond to this unprecedented attack on our citizens on U.S. soil. This resolution allows the President to use all necessary and appropriate force against those nations, organizations, or individuals who are responsible for this attack and against those who harbor or support them. It does not give the President a blanket approval to take military action against others under the guise of fighting international terrorism. It is not an open-ended authorization to use force in an unending war. It is a resolution like the one we face today. Under the Constitution, the President has the authority to act if there is an imminent attack on the United States. That authority is recognized in this resolution.

The tragedy our Nation experienced this week brought home to every American the reality of terrorism. Now we must respond. That response must be forceful and unequivocal. I am confident it will be.

Mr. FEINGOLD. Mr. President, the attack on the United States this week leaves all of us jolted and angered. To respond to this terror is both our fate and our challenge. Our response to that attack must reflect our national character. As a great Nation, we must respond powerfully. But our response must be guided by justice and by our right to self defense, not by vengeance. We must act to hold accountable those responsible for these terrorist attacks. But to be true to our traditions and our Founders, we must act within the confines of the Constitution and the law. I believe that the resolution before us achieves that goal.

The War Powers Resolution of 1973 explicitly recognizes the President’s authority to take immediate action as Commander in Chief of the United States Armed Forces to respond to this unprovoked attack on the United States. As such, there is no reason to suggest that the action we take here today is required in advance of any immediate military response by the President. In the interest of demonstrating our national resolve to act firmly and decisively, however, and as a demonstration of our commitment to working in close cooperation with our Commander in Chief to respond to this aggression, we act today to authorize the use of force, as required by the War Powers Resolution.

I commend the President and his administration for seeking the resolution before us today, for working with the Congress, and for recognizing the requirement under the Constitution and the law for joint authorization. As we do not contain a broad grant of executive power, we do not consent to a broad grant of power; rather it is merely a statement that the President has existing constitutional powers. I am gratified that in the body of this resolution, the Congress does not contain a broad grant of powers, but is appropriately limited to those entities involved in the attacks that occurred on September 11. And I am particularly gratified that this resolution explicitly abides by and invokes the War Powers Resolution.

In taking this action today, we are not responding to a distant threat to international peace and security; we are responding to a direct attack on the United States. This is not a humanitarian response to a foreign crisis, but a defensive action to protect the lives of Americans here at home.

At the same time, we must recognize that this war will be unlike any other we have fought in the past. Our enemy is not a state with clearly defined borders. We must respond instead to what is quite likely a loose network of terrorists that do not function according to a strict hierarchy. We must respond to a highly mobile, diffuse enemy that operates largely beyond the reach of our conventional war-fighting techniques.

Given the immense difficulties involved in identifying our enemies, we must take great care to guard against making mistakes as we pursue them across the obscure terrain to eliminate not only the enemy but also to protect the innocent under our command. We must not act on misguided prejudices or incomplete information. We must not cause needless harm to innocent bystanders. Our response will be judged by friends and foes, by history, and by ourselves. It must stand up to the highest level of scrutiny: It must be appropriate and constitutional.

Within this confusing scenario, it will be easy to point fingers at an ever increasing number of enemies, to believe that the "enemy" is all around us, that the enemy may even be our neighbor. The target can seem to grow larger and larger every day, before the first strike even occurs. And this of course, is exactly what the terrorists want. They seek to inflate their numbers and their influence by retreat ing into the shadows. They seek to turn us against each other, and to turn us against our friends and allies across the world, but we will not allow this to happen.

We must also take great care to maintain a careful distinction between those organizations or states that have knowingly harbored or assisted terrorists, and those that have acted carelessly in providing unintended aid or shelter. We must punish those who have knowingly supported our enemy, we must strengthen the capacity of all others to respond appropriately. We must invite those who have unilaterally harbored terrorists to work with us and organize the battle against them, to renounce them, and to begin a process of disengagement. The whole world must participate in this process if we are to locate them, to eliminate them, to renounce them, and to begin a process of disengagement.

Our fight against a faceless, shadowy enemy is not unlike another day or another hour. There can be no peace in such an environment. There must be a lasting and discernible peace. We should consider this in determining the frequency and duration of consultations between the Congress and the President over the conduct and status of this demanding struggle.

We enthusiastically support our President as he leads our country in response to this unparalleled attack. The President has two paths open to him, as any President would under the Constitution. On the one hand, he may act using his powers as Commander in Chief, while remaining subject to the terms of the War Powers Resolution for any sustained action. Or on the other hand, he may seek a declaration of war under Article I of the Constitution.

If this is indeed to be a war, then the President should seek a declaration of war. We cannot allow our cherished Constitution to become a dead letter. And it should go without saying that to declare a war, he must identify our adversary. If there is to be a war, it will be something short of a war in the broadest sense, then it is proper that we will pass a resolution that gives such broad powers to the President that he could thereby conduct a full-scale war across the globe without the consent of Congress. This would, as well, fly in the face of the structure that our Constitution sets up.

The drafters of the War Powers Resolution sought to fulfill the intent of the Framers of the Constitution and to ensure that the executive judgment of both the Congress and the President would apply to the introduction of U.S. Armed Forces into hostilities. In today's world, when candor and cooperation between co-equal branches of government seem paramount, the War Powers Resolution has become a bit like the family relative that nobody wants to talk about. But we need to talk about it. Our legislative horizons need to move beyond the era when a President is able to deploy thousands of troops in Cold War struggles outside of the view of a television camera.

There is only one circumstance in which a President may act without statutory authorization, and that is to respond to legitimate emergencies. None among us doubt that we confront such an emergency today, and that it may grow into a sustained struggle.

The Constitution foresaw and history has demonstrated that there will continue to be events to which the President must respond in the defense of the country, or in response to urgent and vital interests abroad. Congress owns the war power. But by its very nature, this will not permit the President in this emergency. In so doing, we demonstrate our respect and confidence in both our Commander in Chief and our Constitution.

Emergencies can well demand a re- sponsibility that Congress cannot or should not delegate. And if Congress decides that it is appropriate and constitutional, the President should act. Our tradition is to respect the President in such cases, and to treat his actions as appropriate. We have made clear that the President may act unilaterally without turn ing our back on who wields the war power under the Constitution, and that the Constitution permits if it does not require that the President turn to Congress to legitimize his actions as appropriate. We have made clear that Congress has the continuing support of the representatives of the people. It is the framework for a continuing consensus and communicates support to our President in this emergency.

We enthusiastically support our President as he prepares the response of such decisiveness, secrecy, or confidence in both our Commander in Chief and our Constitution. Unfortunately, there have been too many cases in which we have been too many cases in which we have been asked to make loans of the war power in other than emergency situations. As many of our colleagues said during the 1994 debate regarding Haiti, it is not new to look to the presidency to be directed by the U.S. Security Council or of a regional alliance like the OAS or NATO only then to ignore the role, the central role, of the United States Congress. I also recognize that power-of-the-purse legislation relating to the commitment of U.S. armed forces is an available remedy, but not an ideal model. The distinguished President Pro Tempore, SenatorByrd, in testimony before the Foreign Relations Committee in February 1994, likened the power of the purse to a watering hole in the forest to which all the animals eventually must come to drink. I agree with that distinguished president Pro Tempore’s characterization; the power of the purse is an excellent and effective tool in most matters for which we appropriate public funds.

But I worry, nonetheless, about how close we would come to a constitutional crisis if we were to rely on such measures as a last resort in a war powers struggle with the President. In a way, it illustrates our level of urgency about preserving our constitutional war power responsibilities, and they risk infringement upon the President’s equally valid constitutional responsibilities as Commander in Chief.

The War Powers Resolution is as relevant today as it was enacted in 1973. It is all too apparent that the post-Cold War environment has ushered in an era of threats unforeseen by the founders. These threats reinforce the need for the Congress to make its will known when our troops are to be deployed in potentially dangerous situations.

While I believe that the heinous acts perpetrated against the United States by-still-unidentified terrorists on September 11, 2001, could justify U.S. and allied military action, I believe that any such actions, if they are to be sustained, must be properly authorized by the Congress.

Since coming to the Senate in 1993, I have encouraged discussion and vigorous congressional debate regarding the situations in Haiti, Bosnia, and Kosovo because of my conviction that Congress has both a right and a duty to express or withhold the wisdom of committing our troops to a potential conflict. Many of these instances were not adequately considered and did not follow an appropriate Congressional authorization.

That same conviction makes it essential that the Congress should make its will known. We must not abridge our responsibility to the victims of September 11, and to the mothers and fathers, the wives and husbands of our servicemen and women, who for us will be the point of the sword of justice.

Moreover, abiding by the constitutional and statutory scheme in this case is not only the right thing to do as a matter of law, but it is also the most efficient thing to do. Because it follows the constitutionally and statutorily prescribed procedures, this resolution will strengthen our nation’s efforts. Our careful and deliberate acts in this Congress are the manifestation of the will of the American people, and we will marshal that mighty force behind our President and our military. When we abide by our Constitution and law, we are as strong as we possibly can be, and we are far stronger than the malevolent force that we soon will engage.

Mr. KYL. Mr. President, I rise today in full support of S.J. Res. 23, authorizing the use of the U.S. Armed Forces against those responsible for the recent attacks launched against the United States.

As the President and many of my colleagues have asserted since the heinous acts of Tuesday past, we are at war. In fact, we are at war against terrorists for a long time, but seldom has it touched our shores. The time has come for us, and for our allies, to act with all appropriate force to remove the threat of similar acts occurring on our soil, or the soil of other free nations.

As the President has stated, America is the primary target because we are the shining beacon of freedom and democracy. In recent days, our allies have recommitted themselves to the support of those ideals, and they have pledged their support for the actions that must be taken in response to the murderous crimes of September 11.

With so much to be done, there will never be a better time for us to make a concerted effort to rid ourselves of the threat of terrorism. Today we have put partisan politics behind us and created a joint resolution that authorizes the President to use “all necessary and appropriate force” against the terrorists who perpetrated these acts and the countries of organizations that supported, aided and harbored them.

We stand united in our resolve to take whatever actions are deemed necessary by the President to defeat the enemy—terrorism.

Ms. SNOWE. Mr. President, I rise in support of the joint resolution authorizing the use of U.S. Armed Forces against those responsible for the recent act of war against this Nation, to deter future attacks, and to disable the machinery of terrorism.

With the advent of the cold war came the hope of even greater prosperity and freedom for people the world over. That promise has been threatened and attacked in the most vicious and monstrous way on American soil, ever. But make no mistake, it has not been squelched. The forces of evil have had their day. Now, we will have ours.

It is no exaggeration to say that this is a defining moment not only for the United States, but for the principles and ideals for which it stands. It comes down to this: Either you stand with those principles and ideals, or you stand against them. Unlike almost any other issue we debate on this floor, this matter is that simple.

Either we move to crush those who disregard human life on a massive scale, or we surrender humanity to the hands of madmen. Either we send the message that the world will not be a hostage to terror, or we submit to an infinite cycle of hopeless victimization. That is our choice. It is that simple.

But just because the choice is simple does not mean the decision is easy. To the contrary, there is nothing more difficult than committing our troops to a dangerous mission. While we do not yet know what form that mission will take, we know it will require tremendous sacrifice. This is the one vote that not a single one of us ever wants to make, but now we must make.

I well remember being in the White House in January of 1991, at a meeting in the Cabinet room to discuss the use of force in the Persian Gulf. During the meeting, the President excused himself to take a call from the Secretary of State on the progress of the talks with the Iraqi foreign minister. When he returned, the look on his face told me the talks had failed. Force would have to be used. I will never forget that moment. I will never forget this moment—none of us will.

Winston Churchill, in preparing his nation for the full onslaught of the Axis blitzkrieg, told his fellow countrymen, “Let us therefore brace ourselves to our duty.” All of us—here in Washington and throughout the country—must brace ourselves for the duty before us. There will be weeks, months, and days of tears. But in the end, we know that our cause is just, and we know we will prevail.

Whoever is responsible for this heinous act against humanity must know the full force of our fury. How tragic it is that we must return suffering for suffering, but we know from the history of human experience that it is a price we must be prepared to pay in defense of liberty. Sadly, from all we know about these faceless cowards, it is the only dialogue they and others like them understand. For them, the language of violence is the only language they speak. For them, the taking of life is the apex of human expression. That is not the life we want for our children.

Terrorism is quite literally a cancer in the body politic, elusive by its nature, insidious in its stealth, and requiring the most early detection and elimination possible. And that is what we intend to do. Either that, or terrorism will destroy the rule of law from the inside out, along with the... basic tenets by which we are able to live together and thrive and enjoy "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness" in a civilized society.

We should remember that this unprovoked attack was on soil that is American, against ideals that are global. Indeed, two of the very targets themselves, the twin towers of the World Trade Center, were international buildings in U.S. ground. The lives that were lost—American, Australian, British, and countless others—are in a way symbolic of the freedom that was lost not only in the United States, but in countless nations across every hemisphere of the globe.

So while we may lead the charge, we do not stand alone. The North Atlantic Treaty Organization to which we have pledged our unyielding support, as well as many other nations beyond those we traditionally consider our closest allies, will now be there in support of our mission, a mission that ultimately is larger than any one Republic, any one people.

In this particular instance, right now, we know not against whom we aim. For that reason, it is all the more important we give the President broad latitude to take whatever action is necessary to punish the perpetrators and help ensure that such a catastrophe never reoccurs. This Joint Resolution grants the President discretion in destroying the soul of whatever organization has jabbed at the heart of democracy. It is a resolution born of necessity, and rooted in precedent.

In 1962, when Cuba posed the threat of spreading communism and endangering the security of the United States, Congress approved a joint resolution stating that the United States will use force if necessary to halt the spread of communism in this hemisphere. Now, in determining whether the United States was determined to prevent, by whatever means necessary, including the use of arms, the Marxist Leninist regime in Cuba from extending, by force or the threat of force, its aggressive or subversive activities to any part of this hemisphere, and to prevent in Cuba the creation or use of an externally supported military capability endangering the security of the United States.

On January 12, 1991, in the wake of the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait, both houses of Congress passed the "Authorization for Use of Military Force Against Iraq Resolution", which I supported. The resolution authorized the President to use the U.S. Armed Forces, and pursuant to U.N. Security Council Resolution 678 to achieve implementation of the earlier Security Council resolutions calling for the repulsion of Iraq from Kuwait.

On September 18, former President Bush made the determination required by the Resolution that diplomatic means had not and would not compel Iraq to withdraw from Kuwait. On January 18, he reported to Congress "consistent with the War Powers Resolution" that he had directed U.S. forces to commence operations.

Now, we are faced with the bloodiest attack ever on American soil, the first of this magnitude in this history of the continental United States. This resolution states that the President is "authorized, necessary and appropriate force against those nations, organizations, or persons he determines planned, authorized, committed, or aided the terrorist attacks that occurred on September 11, or harbored such organization or persons, in order to prevent any future acts of international terrorism against the United States by such nations, organizations or persons."

This resolution, consistent with the War Powers Resolution, is precisely the right course for the Congress to take at this momentous juncture in American history. Our thoughts and prayers are with all the men and women of our Armed Services, who will be at the vanguard of our struggle against whatever evil force has darkened the world.

We cannot allow these forces of darkness to take root in the fertile soil of this new century. Rather, the time has come to eradicate terror at its roots. We have no choice if we are to remain the authors of our own destiny, a destiny that has no room for those who would shackle freedom with the twin specters of fear and violence. It is time to unleash the full resources and force and determination of this great nation against this unimaginable evil. This atrocity cannot stand, and let history one day record that it did not stand.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I strongly support the bipartisan resolution to increase and improve the emergency supplemental appropriation to help our nation recover and respond to this vicious terrorist atrocity.

The use-of-force resolution authorizes the President to use force against any nations, organizations, or persons involved in the terrorist attacks last Tuesday and to take all appropriate steps to prevent future acts of terrorism against the United States. This is an appropriate and needed response to the vicious and horrifying recent attacks on America.

Those who murder American citizens must find no hiding place, and those who harbor terrorists must pay the price. The time to act is now. Congress must be decisive and effective in apprehending terrorists and identifying and punishing those who give them support.

Our Government is working hard to find the perpetrators of this crime, and we have the support of our allies around the world, agents are pursuing thousands of leads about the suspected perpetrators and supporters of these terrorist acts.

FBI Director Robert Mueller has expressed a total, unwavering commitment to the country. We are committed to providing full resources to it and all other federal law enforcement agencies involved in this investigation. We will do whatever it takes.

At the same time, we all agree that our response must not be indiscriminate. We should only act when we are certain who the perpetrators of these atrocities are. The shameful attacks demonstrated America's vulnerability to terrorist attacks, and an effective and appropriate response is essential. Despite our efforts to prevent terrorism, a vast international network of terrorists has been organized to work against America's interests at home and abroad. We cannot permit these terrorists to succeed.

These atrocities have strengthened our resolve to root out the terrorist network and protect the safety of American citizens at home and abroad. Our resolve is strong to defend and uphold democracy and freedom, the founding principles that have made our nation great. We should spare no resources to protect these profound values.

The need for extra resources cannot be understated. The devastation caused by the attacks in New York and at the Pentagon have already dwarfed the largest recent catastrophe, Hurricane Andrew, where losses were estimated at over $18 billion.

This emergency supplemental appropriations bill provides $40 billion for the full range of response, recovery, relief, and repair efforts to help Federal, State, and local governments to support counterterrorism activities to carry out the investigations and eventual prosecution of those who committed these acts and to guarantee increased security for our nation's airports.

These funds will enable America's law enforcement agencies to continue their urgent efforts to identify all persons who were involved in these atrocities. Our Government and the Federal Bureau of Investigation has launched the largest investigation in its history, involving more than 4,000 special agents and 3,000 support personnel. At the crime scenes in New York, Virginia, and Pennsylvania FBI agents are sifting through the wreckage to identify the terrorists and their victims, and to locate weapons, flight recorders, and other items that will enable us to understand how these crimes occurred. Across the nation and around the world, agents are pursuing thousands of leads about the suspected perpetrators and supporters of these terrorist acts.

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—SENATE 17044
September 14, 2001

207x713
domestic flights. Funding should also be allocated to effective baggage screening technologies, airport personnel training, and background checks.

Additional resources are clearly needed to win this all-important battle against terrorism. All of our counterterrorism assets must be strengthened—in the military, in our intelligence community, and in our public health infrastructure including needed steps to counter the threat of biological weapons in the hands of terrorists.

This week’s devastating attacks in New York and at the Pentagon are a call for action not only to respond forcefully against the perpetrators of these outrages, but also to strengthen our defenses against future attacks. A central part of this effort must be to improve the Nation’s preparedness against biological terrorism. The Office of Emergency Preparedness estimates that 40 million Americans could die if a terrorist released smallpox into the American population; Anthrax could kill 10 million.

We must strengthen our national capacity to prevent such attacks, and also to detect, monitor, and contain any plague released by a bioterrorist attack. The troops in the front line of the battle against bioterrorism will be medical and public health workers. We must give them the weapons they need to win that battle.

Finally, in the aftermath of this week’s attacks, as we reach out and come together as a nation, we must also deal with the profound psychological impact of these events on the victims and their families, on the many emergency personnel who responded so courageously to this crisis, and on the large number of children across the country who have also been affected. It is my hope that a high priority of the resources being appropriated by this legislation will be used to make post-trauma services and support widely available to all those who need them.

Again, I commend President Bush for his strong commitment to win the ongoing battle against terrorism, and I commend as well, the strong bipartisan spirit in which Congress has joined in this all-important commitment. America will be a stronger nation because of this attack.

The joint resolution (S.J. Res. 23) was passed.

The preamble was agreed to.

The joint resolution, with its preamble, reads as follows:

WHEREAS, on September 11, 2001, acts of treacherous violence were committed against the United States and its citizens; and

WHEREAS, such acts render it both necessary and appropriate that the United States exercise its rights to self-defense and to protect United States citizens both at home and abroad.

WHEREAS, in light of the threat to the national security and foreign policy of the United States posed by these grave acts of violence, and

WHEREAS, such acts continue to pose an unusual and extraordinary threat to the national security and foreign policy of the United States,

WHEREAS, the President has authority under the Constitution to take action to deter and prevent acts of international terrorism against the United States,

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled:

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE: This joint resolution may be cited as the “Authorization for Use of Military Force”.

SEC. 2. AUTHORIZATION FOR USE OF UNITED STATES ARMED FORCES.

(a) That the President is authorized to use all necessary and appropriate force against those nations, organizations, or persons he determines planned, authorized, committed, or aided such terrorist attacks that occurred on September 11, 2001, or harbored such organizations or persons, in order to prevent any future acts of international terrorism against the United States by such nations, organizations or persons.

(b) WAR POWERS RESOLUTION REQUIREMENTS.—

(1) SPECIFIC STATUTORY AUTHORIZATION.—

Contemporaneous to the enactment of this War Powers Resolution, the Congress declares that this section is intended to constitute specific statutory authorization within the meaning of section 5(b) of the War Powers Resolution.

(2) APPLICABILITY OF OTHER REQUIREMENTS.—Nothing in this resolution supersedes any requirement of the War Powers Resolution.

THREE IN 29 YEARS

Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, as of today, during my nearly 29 years in the Senate, I have missed a total of three votes because of “traffic jams.” The first was during my 4th year in the Senate. The other two occurred this morning when I was unable to get to the Senate Chamber in time to cast my affirmative votes for H.R. 2888 and S.J. Res. 23, both of which were approved without a dissenting vote.

Needless to say, I deeply regret I was unable to reach the Senate Chamber in time to vote for the two critical measures approved by the Senate today.

The enormity of Tuesday’s terrorist attacks is proving more apparent every day. It is obvious that the lives of all Americans have changed as a result of these heinous crimes against the United States and, indeed, all civilization.

Needless to say, I strongly support the Senate’s giving President Bush the authority to root out and destroy the heinous terrorists responsible for such brutality and also, of course, the governments harboring them. Needless to say, I support the necessary funding to enable the President to begin this solemn responsibility. I commend the Senate, of course, for its responsible and appropriate actions to provide sufficient funding to help the recovery effort in New York, Washington, D.C. and elsewhere.

This is only the beginning of the resources Congress must provide to eradicate the terrorists that perpetrated such horrific violence against America and the American people.

Mrs. Helms and I join our fellow Americans in mourning the victims and praying for their loved ones, and we also share the resolve to fight terrorism in any form, by any available means, unless and until we are confident that America will never again have a day like Tuesday, September 11, 2001.
MORNING BUSINESS
ORDER OF PROCEDURE
The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Texas is recognized.

Mrs. HUTCHISON. Mr. President, a number of Senators wish to speak.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Texas will suspend until the Senate is ordered. The Chair, as President pro tempore, designates the senior Senator from Alaska, Mr. STEVENS, to take the Chair and, after a period of time, designates in open session that Mr. BATH will resume the Chair.

The Senator from Texas.

(Mr. STEVENS assumed the chair.)

Mrs. HUTCHISON. Mr. President, I know a number of Members want to speak. I want to propose that we go back and forth across the aisle and set an order for those who are here and wish to speak. I ask unanimous consent that we be allowed to do that, and I would like to be on the list as soon as possible.

Mr. INHOFE. Reserving the right to object, Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that I be recognized for up to 10 minutes. I know that we are talking about 5-minute intervals. I will make that request now and then we will worry about what order we go.

Mrs. HUTCHISON. Mr. President, I just ask that if the Senator wants to speak for 10 minutes, could he then wait until others who are trying to go to the National Cathedral, let them have 5 minutes and then perhaps take his 10 minutes?

Mr. INHOFE. I am glad to wait until approximately 11:30, if necessary.

Mrs. HUTCHISON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that I be allowed to speak for up to 5 minutes.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator has the floor. The Senator is recognized pursuant to a previous order.

Mr. KERRY. Mr. President, is my understanding correct that we will go back and forth, side to side?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. That has not been ordered.

Mr. KERRY. I ask unanimous consent that we speak alternatively, from side to side.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from Texas is recognized.

A UNITED RESPONSE

Mrs. HUTCHISON. Mr. President, there is a time to talk and there is a time to act. The Senate today has unanimously acted with force, with resolve, and with unanimity. We spoke for the people of our country about the heinous situation in which we find ourselves, and also about the resolve to keep this from happening again.

We have passed a resolution giving the President of the United States our support and authorization for the use of military force against any person or any country that is helping the people who did the despicable acts of September 11. I heard a young woman on television the other night who was lost in one of the World Trade Center Towers. The young woman was asked what she thought the response of the United States should be. She said, "I don't really want to go to war. I just don't want anyone to have to suffer what I am suffering today." I just want to say to that young woman, and to all of the other families of the victims of September 11, 2001, that it is exactly what we did today that will prevent other people in the future from suffering what she is suffering.

If we do not respond with force, we will put American lives in jeopardy, and we will not be doing our job of protecting the people of our country whom we were elected to protect.

No one would ever have the United States move before we had absolute evidence about who perpetrated this atrocity, but when we have that evidence, we are going to move.

The Senate is speaking today in support of the President to take military action against those who have attacked our country, our people, our way of life, our very freedom.

The most important responsibility I believe I have as a Senator is to keep the freedom that so many have died for in past years for our country. We are the beacon of freedom in the world. We are a democracy that has proven that, through our voting capabilities, we can become the strongest nation on Earth. It is freedom that is the foundation of the democracy and our way of life.

To make sure we keep the freedom we have known—our mothers, fathers, grandmothers, and grandfathers have known—for our children and grandchildren, we need to act decisively when an act of war has been perpetrated on innocent people of our country.

As to the act that occurred on September 11—a day we will never forget in our lifetime, nor will our children or grandchildren ever forget—the only way we can respond to that kind of attack on our people and our freedom is to say we will fight, not just today or next month or 2 months from now, but the American people, to take action, to say we will fight, not just today, anyplace, anytime, Mr. President; you have to just go. We operated as our Founders, who were not naive people, people who believed that the United States move before we had absolute evidence about who perpetrated the act against us, we did not pell-mell just say: Go do anything, anytime, anywhere, Mr. President; you have to just go. We operated as our Founders, who were not naive people, who believed that other people care about what they are going through. It amazes me that you can draw strength from that.

I think what we are doing and the Nation is doing is the right thing. Most important, what we did today should be noted is not likely to occur in any other country in the world, and that is, that we just a few moments ago operated under the rule of law.

In all our anger, all our frustration, all our feelings, very bluntly, of hatred that exists now for those who perpetrated the act against us, we did not pell-mell just say: Go do anything, anytime, anywhere, Mr. President; you have to just go. We operated as our Founders, who were not naive people, people who believed that other people care about what they are going through. It amazes me that you can draw strength from that.

As to the act that occurred on September 14, 2001— ambitiously and with the determination, we can move this country forward. If we do not respond to that kind of attack on our people and our freedom is to say we will fight, not just today or next month or 2 months from now, but we are in this for the long haul, and we are going to be real with the world of the despots who believe they can prey on innocent citizens against freedom-loving people in the world.

I am proud of the Senate. I am proud that we did not dillydally around to say we will fight, not just today or next month or 2 months from now, but we are in this for the long haul, and we are going to be real with the world of the despots who believe they can prey on innocent citizens against freedom-loving people in the world.
CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—SENATE 17047

BYRD, knows and what the experienced Senator from Alaska knows. My friend from Oklahoma is the only one in this place who can fully understand. I suspect, along with his Oklahoma colleague, what our friends from New Jersey, New York, Virginia, the District, and Maryland are going through. He understands it. He has internalized it. He knows it.

I believe it is fairly remarkable that, in spite of the reasons for the attack on us and our way of life, we adhered to the rule of law; that even in this calamity, we acted with dispatch but under the law, under the Constitution.

The resolution provides the President clear authority “to use all necessary and appropriate force against those nations, organizations, or persons that he determines planned, authorized, committed, or aided the terrorist attacks that occurred on September 11.” It says, however, that the resolution is not to “authorize, commit, or aid the terrorist attacks of September 11. The President’s lawyers directed only at using force abroad to prevent terrorism. Further, the President has the authority under the Constitution to use force to pre-empt an imminent attack, including a terrorist attack, against the United States. The final whereas clause reflects these recognized powers of the President.

I suggest what others have said, and that is, the President of the United States has our prayers, he has our good wishes, and he has our commitment under the Constitution now to support him in what action he takes as defined by the authority he has. That is a big deal. It is a big deal. It is worth noting.

Lastly, I compliment the President on his patience, on his resolve, and his understanding of the need of certitude because the worst thing we can do, as he is uniting the world, is to act prematurely. It must meet our instinct for response immediately. I compliment him. I compliment his Secretary of State for the way he is handling this situation.

I conclude by saying that I do not see what happened on the 11th as the beginning of the end of our way of life. I see it as the beginning of the end of terrorism as it has been able to be spawned over the last three decades. The world has come face to face with the reality that nation states, no matter what their ideological disposition are all in jeopardy. We are united in understanding that we cannot allow these networks to be spawned.

I thank my colleagues for allowing me to speak at this moment. Again, I compliment them all, Democrat and Republican, in the way we have stood united.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Texas is recognized.

Mr. President, today, in a bipartisan unanimous vote, we gave the President the money and the power to make war on those who have made war on us.

We are down, it seems to me, to a stark and bitter choice: We can hunt down those who made war on us and make war on them where they live, or we can allow them to make war on us where we live. We can either change our lifestyle, limit our freedom, reduce our prosperity, or we can change the lifestyle of those who have made war on us. I am indifferent to that choice. I subscribe to the thesis that when our enemies are on the run, they cannot have the resources and the com- plications to carry out the kind of terrorist war they carried out against the Pentagon and against the World Trade Center.

We have to be aware and we have to accept up front that if we go too far in helping our freedom or our prosperity in trying to fight this war, then we are ceding the very thing the war is about. So I believe very strongly this money and this vast commitment of authority and power is meant to go after our enemies and to pursue them to the end of the earth and to never let up in that pursuit.

I do not believe this is going to be an easy war to fight, and I believe it is going to be a costly war to fight.

Our enemies have a hate for capitalism and for democracy that we cannot comprehend or understand. I believe until they are hunted down, captured, or killed we can never reestablish the safety we felt prior to last Tuesday.

I also want to make it clear that I believe we have to choose sides in this conflict. Those countries that harbor or abet or tolerate the actions of terrorists on their soil are making war against the United States of America, and I believe that we have to hold them accountable.

Finally, I want to thank our leaders. I want to thank Senator BYRD, for working to come up with a responsible appropriation. I think it is clear that under these circumstances, the Congress would literally be willing to pass any appropriations bill and spend any amount of money. As this conflict lengthens, as other priorities emerge, as we need more resources, as we ultimately will in this conflict, we will wish we had been responsible. I think we took an important and responsible first step today. I personally believe we should set up a joint bipartisan committee with the job of overseeing these expenditures, just as the Truman Commission oversaw the expenditures of World War II. The job of this commission would not be to determine how the money is spent but to simply see it is being spent as we appropriate it; to see we are not being gouged in terms of prices when there is no competitive bidding; and to see that you are doing things on an emergency basis; to try and see that we are being good stewards of the taxpayers’ money and getting the return on that money in comforting people who have been hurt, helping those who have lost loved ones, rebuilding things that have been destroyed, and prosecuting this war against our enemies.

It should be a joint bipartisan committee or commission to work with the GAO to see the money is well spent, to see it is spent for the purposes we provided it, to see we are being charged reasonable prices, and to hold people accountable for things they do under emergency situations in terms of prices and ensuring that you are not being gouged.

World War II. Harry Truman did an excellent job, and the country benefitted from it.

It should obviously not be something on the scale of what we did in World War II, but something similar to that would be helpful. I intend next week, when we come back, to talk about it. I hope my colleagues will look at that idea, look back at what Harry Truman did in his committee in terms of following the expenditures on the war and how well the money was being spent and holding people accountable.

I am proud of the Senate today, and I think we have a right to be proud. I believe the American people are proud.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from West Virginia.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent for a unanimous consent request?

Mr. BYRD. Absolutely.

Mr. INHOFE. I ask unanimous consent that at the conclusion of the remarks of the distinguished Senator from West Virginia, I be recognized for up to 15 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I thank the distinguished Senator from Oklahoma, his courtesy toward me. He was prepared to speak before I speak, I offered to wait and have him go ahead but he said no, so I thank him.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that I be permitted to speak for not to exceed 7 minutes, and I ask the Chair indicate when I have 1 minute left.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BYRD. I thank the Chair.

Today, the Senate passed, the fiscal year 2001 Emergency Supplemental Appropriations Act for Recovery from and Response to Terrorist Attacks on the United States.

Mr. President, the emergency supplemental appropriations bill adopted earlier today is an extraordinary response to extraordinary events. It sends a strong and unmistakable message to the world that the United States is prepared to move swiftly on all fronts to respond to the horrific attacks on our citizens on its own soil. The unity and determination that have propelled this bill through Congress 72 hours after the assault on America speaks volumes about the strength and resiliency of our system of government.

The supplement provides $40 billion, to remain available until expended, to respond to the terrorist events of September 11, 2001. This is an extraordinary bill that responds to extraordinary events. The President has not presented Congress with any detailed estimates of agency needs in response to these terrorist acts. This is not a criticism. Federal Government agencies, such as the Federal Emergency Management Agency, the Department of Transportation, the Corps of Engineers, are on the ground, focusing all of their attention on responding to the crisis.

Initially, the administration requested authority to spend any amount of money for any purpose. The Constitution gives the power of the purse to the Congress. It is the Congress that has the responsibility to make sure that the needs of our people are met. This left my good friend Senator Stevens and me with a dilemma. How do we meet the clear and immediate need for funding without protecting the prerogatives of Congress?

On Wednesday, Senator Stevens and I joined with our Senate leaders and the House leaders at a meeting with the President to discuss our response to these evil terrorist acts. At that meeting, I laid out four goals for funding the Federal response. First, we must appropriate a specific amount for particular purposes, not a blank check, not a Gulf of Tonkin Resolution, with ill-defined goals. Second, to reinforce bi-partisan unity, we must all have trust and candor on the use of these funds. Third, the President must consult with the Congress in the allocation of the funds. Finally, there must be regular reporting to the Congress.

Mr. President, the supplemental bill that the Senate approved today meets each of those goals. The bill provides $40 billion, all designated by the Congress as an emergency, and is contingent on the President designating the full amount as an emergency.

Funds are available to: (1) provide Federal, State and local preparedness for mitigating and responding to the attacks; (2) provide support to counter, investigate, or prosecute domestic or international terrorism; (3) provide increased transportation security; (4) repair public facilities and transportation systems damaged by the attacks; and (5) support national security.

Not less than $20 billion of the $40 billion is for disaster assistance and disaster recovery activities in New York, Virginia, Pennsylvania and elsewhere.

Funds are available in three segments.

The President has $10 billion available to him after consultation with the Chairmen and Ranking Members of the Appropriations Committees.

The President has a second $10 billion available to him after consultation with the Director of the Office of Management and Budget has submitted to the House and Senate Committees on Appropriations a proposed allocation and plan for the use of the funds, and he then must wait 15 days before either he or the Committees can review the President’s plans and make suggestions—possibly enter into some negotiations with the President or his Office of Management and Budget Director.

The President has an additional $20 billion available only when the amounts are allocated to specific programs in a subsequent emergency appropriations bill.

Mr. President, I stress that this bill of money is not a blank check for Congress. This bill deals with what has already happened but does not fully deal with it. Of course, even as scores of rescue workers continue to sift the rubble of the World Trade Center and search for victims in the shattered wing of the Pentagon, we in Congress must work together, forward. We must take steps now—today, tomorrow, next week—to re-double our efforts to intercept would-be terrorists before they can launch an attack.

As most Americans, I am amazed by the sophistication, organization, and complexity of Tuesday’s attacks on the United States. This was not a casual effort or the work of a lone madman. These attacks took elaborate planning, significant manpower, and detailed knowledge of U.S. aircraft and aviation systems. I have great admiration for our nation’s intelligence agencies. I believe that they provide tremendous service to our nation with the resources they have, and I know that we must focus our efforts on improving our intelligence gathering systems so that we have a chance to thwart a terrorist plot before it can be executed, before innocent lives can be lost. The stunning attack on the heart of America’s military, financial, and transportation centers has exposed our vulnerabilities.

As we move quickly to provide assistance to the victims of these horrible acts, to improve security at our airports, to rebuild the Pentagon, and to repair the devastation our nation’s financial district, so we must move to rebuild our intelligence capabilities. This emergency supplemental appropriations bill is the first step in a long road that will not end in my lifetime. We must guard against being side-tracked by politics or partisanship.

There will still be politics. We have other things to do along with these matters. There will still be some politics and some partisanship, but we must not be sidetracked by politics or partisanship. Congress and the President have demonstrated this week that in times of crisis there is no center aisle. There is no aisle between us. We can overcome our political differences, if we all work together. We must take about it, we are in a time of crisis, and it is a time of suspended crisis. We will weather this crisis, but it will last a long time. We will emerge stronger. We must work together to achieve that goal.

I close by commending Senator Ted Stevens, former chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee, a very... valued Member of this body, for his tireless strength and dedication and patriotism. I commend Representative BILL YOUNG of Florida for his dedication to this cooperation, for his characteristic courtesy to those actross the Capitol and across the aisle.
I commend Representative DAVID OBEY for his tenacity and determination, his patriotism, his dedication to the separation of powers in this great country of ours—all of these people for their outstanding contribution to this exttraordinary bill. I could not sit down without commending, also, the Spea-er of the House, our two leaders, in particular, Mr. DASCHLE and Mr. LOTT, and our excellent staffs who have worked long hours and rendered invaluable assistance, without whom we could not succeed in this mighty effort.
I yield the floor.
The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Oklahoma is recognized under the previous order for 15 minutes.
Mr. INHOFE. Mr. President, I will identify myself with the remarks of the previous speaker, the distinguished Senator from West Virginia. He is a very wise man. He has thought this through. We have heard a lot of wisdom in the last few days in this Chamber.
Sometimes a child has an innocent wisdom that is more wisdom than anything we hear in this Chamber. My wife and I have four children and nine grandchildren. I can recall when my
No. 2 son, who is now a hand surgeon, was very small, I was teaching him how to ride a bicycle. We have all had this experience, running beside them, and finally they are balanced and they make the first trip around the block.
He came up the hill panting away. He looked at me and said: Daddy, I wish the whole world was downhill.
We know the whole world is not downhill. We think about these things.
I had a phone call from my daughter,
Molly, on Tuesday after this tragedy happened. She is a professor at the University of Arkansas, and a very accomplished one. She has four children—three boys and a little girl. In fact, the little girl she just adopted from Ethiopia. Her older boys are Jason, age 5; the next one is Luke, who is 3 years old. She was taking him to kindergarten.
On the way to kindergarten, they were listening to the radio. It is Ed Koch speaking from New York. He said—I believe she told me—three times in a row: We need to kill bin Laden, We need to kill bin Laden. We need to kill bin Laden.
Little 5-year old Jason looked at up and said: Mommy, who is bin Laden?
She said: bin Laden is a very evil, bad man.
He said this. He said: Instead of killing
Mr. bin Laden, why don't we do a powerful prayer, and we will build a powerful shield around him so that he cannot hear the voices of the devil. He will only hear the voice of God, and God will be in his heart.
I thought, that is the real intellect in America.
I believe that God is in the hearts of more Americans today than perhaps ever before. People realize that there is something bigger than what has been happening. Someone was very critical of me recently—yesterday, I believe—because I have a hold on one of our President's nominations. He nominated someone to be the Customs Commissioner.
I have to share a frustration with you. When I was in the House in 1988, when they had the Pan Am 103 disaster, JIM OBERSTAR, a Democrat, came with me as a Republican to Europe to test certain types of detection technologies out there that were better than what we had been thinking about.
We have to do something to have better detection technology used to pro-protect American travelers and the American public.
We found several. We came back, and we were unable to get anything approved, accepted, or even tried by Customs. They were locked into old technology. They weren't going to move from that technology.
I didn't do anything until 1995 and Oklahoma City, which is the site of the worst domestic, devastating attack by a terrorist in the history of this country—until this past week. I decided, again, after that, let's see what we can do to try to get some new technology.
We discovered a technology called pulsed fast neutron analysis. It is called PFNA. This is a technology that not only shows through something, but for the first time it shows a threediimensional view of what is inside. They can detect what substances are inside.
They can detect the chemical composition from within.
This is a possibility. I am not saying there is a great likelihood that if we had this technology on Tuesday the tragedy might not have happened because we would have been able to detect things we could not otherwise detect.
We thought that this was worthwhile; let's go ahead and authorize it and ask the Director of Customs to have a side-by-side competition or technology competition. So we put that in, some report language. Nothing happened. They didn't do it.
I spoke to the previous—I will not mention by name—Customs Commissioner in my office. I said: Will you commit to having this competition in the budget?
He said: Absolutely. I will.
And he didn't do it. I couldn't figure out why.
It wasn't until this happened Tues-aday that I thought I couldn't wait any longer. That is when I put a hold on this man because I wanted a commitment that this person who would be does the Commissioner of Customs would obey the law and have the competition. In fact, we actually put it in. It is in the appropriations bill over in the House. It has $3 million for the conduct of this competition down in El Paso, TX, and directs them to do it.

The language is very clear. I have talked to Senator Dorgan and others over here. They agree that this should be a part of it. I think Senator Stevens would agree with that, as well as the President.

I will leave that as the commitment that we are going to try that. As technology advances, we have to advance with it.

Getting back to Oklahoma, Senator Biden said something a few minutes ago. He said that I am probably the only one here—prior to Tuesday—who really understands the pain that goes with losing a daughter. I think that, Mr. President, it reminded me of the need for detection devices.

I wouldn't expect that the next terrorist attack on America—there will be more—would come in the form of a 767 or 757. I don't think that is going to happen. But we can still have that technology in place.

I can remember at that time—I was reminded of this last night. Last night, I went to the Pentagon. There are 194— I believe at the last count—lives lost at the Pentagon, and 168 in Oklahoma in 1995. It is very analogous. I stood there. I had tears in my eyes remembering 1995. I happened to be there right after it happened and hearing the thundering march of the volunteer firemen going into the Murrah Federal Office Building because it was under siege and coming out with bits of body parts: there were hands stuck in the wall; there was a lady, a doctor went in and heroically amputated her leg so she could be pulled from the rubble. She is alive today.

I talked to Cindy Rice yesterday who lives in Oklahoma City. Her son, David, who we assume is dead today, called her. He was on the 104th floor of one of the two towers. I am not sure which one, a disaster. My point is in the sense of joy, saying: "Mother, don't worry about this. I'm going to be well taken care of." Here is a guy calling, knowing he is about to die in the implosion of that building.

So our priorities are out there, and we have heard so many of them. I think we all have such a seriousness in our hearts for what happened, but I would like to say this: People ask the question, Should we declare war? There is all this talk about war. On whom do you declare war?

We need to stand back and look and see. Yes, we think we know that Osama bin Laden was involved in this. It is not clear cut.

I remember so well, as I am sure the President pro tempore remembers, back in June of 1986, in a discotheque in Germany, there was a terrorist attack that ended up injuring many American soldiers and killing another. At that time President Reagan was the President of the United States, and we determined that Muammar Qadhafi did it. In a matter of hours after that took place, he dispatched, in addition to other planes, the first real use of our first stealth plane, the F–III, to Libya. And they took them out. They bombed the headquarters of the Gaddafi regime from Qadhafi since then. That was 15 years ago. This is not that easy. We do not have the target out there. But we need to act just as decisively when that time comes. It would be a disservice to the American people and to our system and to America to do that before we know.

But lastly, and this is the most significant thing I want to visit with—I do not say this critically of the previous administration—I am saying that during the Clinton administration the priorities were different than they were during the Reagan administration and the Bush administration before him. He did not have the emphasis on defending America and building a strong defense.

Now, as evidence of that, I have a couple of charts I have made for this purpose. If you took the fiscal year 1993 budget, and you took all of the money that was appropriated in that budget for Labor, Health and Human Services, and Education, in a way to say, he, he could be right at this point shown on the chart. Eight years after that, if you took the normal CPI, or any inflation figure you want to use—this is the index we use—and added for inflation, then what he would have appropriated for Labor, HHS, and Education would be this red line shown on the chart. However, this is what he did as shown on the green line. So at the end of 8 years he ended up successfully asking for the appropriation of $350 billion above the inflation rate.

If you took Defense and you used that same model, and you started with fiscal year 1993, and took the amount that was appropriated at that time, if you added for inflation, this is where it would be today shown on the chart with the red line. However, the green line shows us the actual budget. So in that 8-year period, his request for appropriations, I say to Senator Stevens, was $375 billion below the inflation rate.

Those were his priorities, and he was elected President. I do not have a problem with that. But I can tell you, we were saying all along we were getting into a very serious problem.

I began to end every speech in 1995 with this phrase, I said: We, in America, are in the most impaired and threatened position today than we have ever been in the history of America.

It was not until 1998, when the Director of Central Intelligence happened to be present, that I said this same thing in a meeting that was broadcast live on C-SPAN, when I was chairing the Readiness Subcommittee of the Armed Services Committee. I said: Mr. Director, I have been saying we are in the most threatened position today that we have ever been in in the history of America.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent for 5 additional minutes.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. INHOFE, I thank the Chair.

And he said: You are absolutely right.

So this is the Director of Central Intelligence. Now it comes in three forms. First of all, our conventional capabilities are one-half of what they were in terms of force strength today. And the President pro tempore knows this in terms of the number of Army divisions, tactical air wings, ships dropping from 800 down to 300.

No. 2, we have had all these deployments that have taken these rare assets and put them in the position where they are no longer usable.

No. 3—this is what I am getting to right now—we were on schedule to have deployed a limited national missile defense system by fiscal year 1998. We would have done that except for the vetoes of President Clinton.

I carry with me his veto message of the 1993 Defense authorization bill when I say to Senator STEVENS on behalf of the American people and to our system and to America to do that before we know.

And he said: I will continue to veto any bill that has money in it for a national missile defense system because the threat isn’t there.

What people do not understand is, when you take down our military, you are taking down our intelligence at the same time because the intelligence budget is tied to the Defense budget. So our quality of intelligence has deteriorated to the extent that in 1998, on August 24, when I had been asking for a response to a question—how many years will it be when North Korea has a multiple-stage rocket capability?—the answer came in a letter from General Shelton. It was dated August 24, 1998. It said it will be between 5 and 10 years. A week later, on August 30, 1998, they deployed from North Korea a multiple-stage rocket. I say that not to criticize General Shelton, but the quality of our intelligence is not good.

What is the ultimate weapon of a terrorist? The ultimate weapon of a terrorist is a missile with a nuclear warhead. I really appreciated the editorial in this morning's Wall Street Journal. I will read one paragraph out of it in just a minute. But I want to say this: We have an opportunity now to take advantage of the fact that the No. 1 priority of America should be to defend ourselves against an incoming missile.

Now they might argue, they might say: Only China and Russia and North Korea have a missile that will reach the U.S. of A. Or America from halfway around the world. I think that may be true. On the other hand, we do know that Iraq, Iran, Libya, Pakistan—all these countries—have weapons of mass destruction and have at least intermediate-range missiles. So that threat is there today. So I only say that we need to get this done and get it done today. I am going to read just the first paragraph and one of the last sentences of an editorial in this morning's Wall Street Journal:

"Can anyone doubt that if the terrorists behind Tuesday's attacks had had access to a ballistic missile, they would have used it? Why settle for toppling the World Trade Center if you can destroy all of New York in an instant, without having to go to the trouble of sneaking a crew over the border and arranging for pilot training in Florida? . . . The President's plan for missile defense could be done and get it done today."

I would say this, and ask it in a different way: Is there any doubt in anyone's mind in America that if an individual is willing to fly a 767 into the towers in New York City, he would not be willing to deploy a missile at the United States of America? When I remember that screen, Mr. President—and you saw it, too—of New York City, the skyline, and those two buildings imploding, if that had been a nuclear bomb there would be nothing but a cinder, and it would not be 10,000 or 20,000 deaths; it would be millions.

I think this is an opportunity for us to make America strong again. I yield to the gentleman from Oklahoma just said because we have really not addressed the need for the changes in our national defense and national security apparatus. We will do that in time. I believe we may have heard for the last time our people ask us, as we are talking about spending money to restore our national defense capability, "What is the threat?"

In past years, I have constantly been asked what the threat is. I have tried to articulate that we didn't have one single threat coming at us from a monolithic empire, the Soviet Union, but that we had asymmetrical threats that were hard to conceive. We witnessed some of those as our massive new aircraft were turned into bombs by those who are terrorists. And, obviously, as the distinguished President pro tempore said, we witnessed probably the most destructive singular command and control operation by a terrorist organization in the world. This was the September 11 attacks.

I don't think it is over, Mr. President. That is why today I am proud I have been able to work with the President pro tempore and our colleagues in the House, Congressmen YOUNG and NIXON, on this supplemental appropriations bill so that it starts the process of recovery and the process of being prepared—or trying to be prepared—for future attacks against this country. But more than that, the resolution we now have gives the President all the necessary and appropriate authority to use force against the persons or organizations that he determines planned, authorized, committed, or aided in the terrorist attacks that occurred on September 11.

Some people say that is a broad change in authorization to the Commander in Chief of this country. It is not. It is a very limited concept of giving him the authority to pursue those who have harbored them or assisted them and conspired with them in any way. I am delighted that the resolution says that "he determines," that the Commander in Chief is in control, in charge, to find a way to react against those people who have brought this destruction to our shores.

Mr. President, I commend you and those whom I am honored to work with on Appropriations for having the courage to proceed. I have to say, we were talking about $20 billion. The President met with the Representatives of New York and New Jersey and Virginia and decided that wasn't enough. He sent word to us that he wanted $40 billion. That, in the past, might have made all of us stumble a little bit. But I am delighted to see that all of us unanimously have said, yes, if he says he needs that much money, he should know he has that much money. We are going to review his plans and the requests of individual agencies, but we have committed $40 billion.

Mr. President, I have to say that nations have defining moments. We had at least two in the 20th century—at the time when we entered World War I and Pearl Harbor. This is really the first defining moment of this country in this millennium, and I am proud of the Congress.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The junior Senator from Alaska is recognized.

Mr. MURKOWSKI, Mr. President, I join my colleague at this momentous time. I again recognize the President pro tempore and my senior Senator for the role they have played in bringing together the Congress and the appropriate authorization of funding to meet this crisis in our Nation.

Mr. President, on Tuesday, I think we all learned the reality that the decade of peace we have known as the post-Cold-War era probably has officially ended. Things will not be the same. During the Cold War, the map of the world could perhaps be divided into two; you were either a friend or a foe.

In the 10 years after the Cold War, the map became much more difficult to read. As we look back to Tuesday, the smoke rising from the devastation, the map is again becoming clear. We are learning, with horrifying swiftness, who our enemies in this new era will be.

Now we are faced with a task of, once again, dividing the world into two and asking the question: Are you friend or foe?

As we look at the decision that was made a short time ago by this body to authorize the use of force against those responsible for the recent attacks against the United States, we have to consider the consequences. We can only guess what they might be. Some say that if we get to bin Laden—if indeed he is the responsible individual—is with ground troops. When people are speaking of having the stomach to do
Mr. President, in peace, American leadership has not been easy. This past century saw this great country become the world’s only superpower through the grit and sheer determination of the American people—generations of American people who were called into service to lead the world back from the brink of chaos, to save civilizations and vanquish darkness to rip out the roots of terror, and the systems that breed terror, we face an elusive and deadly enemy. Our friends, our allies, and those not as committed to this fight as we are will challenge our leadership. We heed them at our peril. Leadership can be a lonely business.

My own State of Alaska, far from the battleground of this fight, far from New York City, far from Washington, DC, is going to play an important role. Elmendorf, Eielson, Ft. Wainwright, Ft. Richardson and surrounding communities will no doubt play a key role in winning this war. Located just 8 hours from New York, the Mideast, and the Asian subcontinent, Alaska has been a strategic keystone in our nation’s defense for the last 50 years. Alaska will now be an offensive key. The original commanders of this Operation Northern Watch, the Air National Guard and Air Force Reserve units of the 18th Wing, that operate out of Elmendorf AFB, Ft. Wainwright and Eielson AFB, and Fort Richardson work 24/7 to ensure that the mastermind of this latest tragedy, the al Qaeda network, does not find safe haven in the middle of the Pacific.

Today’s resolution approving the use of force is the call to arms against our foe in this new, uncertain era. Our enemies have unleashed upon themselves the dogs of war.

Mr. President, in peace, American leadership has not always been appreciated by our fellow nations. We have been dismissed as naive, frivolous, and wasteful. We have been ridiculed for leading in peace, and we will face much greater challenges leading in a war. As we hunt down the murderers, the terrorists, as we go to the heart of darkness to rip out the roots of terror, and the systems that breed terror, we face an elusive and deadly enemy. Our friends, our allies, and those not as committed to this fight as we are will challenge our leadership. We heed them at our peril. Leadership can be a lonely business.

Yesterday, the War Powers Act on the Senate floor. Senator Bob Kerik, the former Commissioner of the New York Police Department, described the power and capacity that the terrorists had. More than just a simple operation in Afghanistan to get to bin Laden. To get any troops to Afghanistan, you have to go through Pakistan or down from the north. Would they let us? We don’t know. You don’t know. Would it be a ground war from Pakistan first? We don’t know. Will other Islamic nations just stand by? We don’t know.

I think you can see where I am going. We are flirting with a world war between Islam and the West and the unknown consequences. We can only guess what bin Laden’s program is. Is this exactly what he wants? Is that how he did this, if indeed he did? Well, we can read his speeches and statements. It seems to be all right there. It seems that he really believes Islam will beat the West. He figures if he can polarize the world into Islam and the West, he has a billion soldiers.

If the West takes military action against an Islamic nation, would in fact bin Laden welcome that? What could be better from bin Laden’s point of view? This would be a war that could last for years and millions would die—not just theirs but ours. Who has the stomach for that? We know bin Laden does. But is there really what we want? Discretion is often the better part of valor, even if our stomachs hunger for more.

American leadership has not been easy. This past century saw this great country become the world’s only superpower through the grit and sheer determination of the American people—generations of American people who were called into service to lead the world back from the brink of chaos, to save civilizations and vanquish darkness to rip out the roots of terror, and the systems that breed terror, we face an elusive and deadly enemy. Our friends, our allies, and those not as committed to this fight as we are will challenge our leadership. We heed them at our peril. Leadership can be a lonely business.

Today’s resolution approving the use of force is the call to arms against our foe in this new, uncertain era. Our enemies have unleashed upon themselves the dogs of war.

Mr. President, in peace, American leadership has not always been appreciated by our fellow nations. We have been dismissed as naive, frivolous, and wasteful. We have been ridiculed for our championship of human rights, tolerance, and freedom. We are criticized for leading in peace, and we will face much greater challenges leading in a war. As we hunt down the murderers, the terrorists, as we go to the heart of darkness to rip out the roots of terror, and the systems that breed terror, we face an elusive and deadly enemy. Our friends, our allies, and those not as committed to this fight as we are will challenge our leadership. We heed them at our peril. Leadership can be a lonely business. will permit Israelis and Palestinians to live in peace. Only with peace will we be able to prevent the emergence of another generation of terrorists imbued with a burning hatred of the United States.

REIMBURSEMENT FOR NEW JERSEY

Mr. TORRICELLI. Mr. President, I want to thank the President and the leadership of the Congress for their support and immediate response to the tragic situation that has transpired over the past few days. While the attack on the World Trade Center physically occurred in New York City, the emotional physical, and financial tolls will be felt throughout the Metropolitan area but especially in northern New Jersey.

I have heard estimates that over 50 percent of the people employed at the World Trade Centers were New Jersey residents.

The Port Authority which is headquartered at the centers is a joint, bi-State New York/New Jersey agency that coordinates infrastructure needs for the airspace, mass transit, and commuter needs of our area. When the port rebuilds, it will rebuild as a joint entity.

Fire, medical and emergency personnel and equipment, as well as trades workers and their heavy equipment, hospitals and triage centers as well as transportation equipment shuttling the wounded and rescuers all have emanated from New Jersey communities.

Let me share with my colleagues a few examples.

Six hundred wounded were transferred to New Jersey hospitals for treatment. Jersey City Medical treated 150 people; 21 were admitted overnight; St. Francis Hospital/St. Mary’s in Jersey City treated 50 people and UMDNJ in Newark treated and released 17 victims.

The New Jersey State Police mobilized 40 boats to ferry victims across the Hudson River and State Troopers have been sent to sort through rubble. New York Waterway has put all 24 of its ferries into service, transferring free of charge an estimated 200,000 people.

The New Jersey National Guard established a field hospital at Liberty State Park that evaluated 2,600 people. At the Meadowlands, a makeshift hospital with hundreds of ambulances and 50 surgeons was created.

The Jersey City Fire Department sent 4 fire trucks and Union County has sent 24 fire trucks and over 100 firefighters. Trenton in Mercer County sent 19 ambulance/paramedic teams. Middlesex County sent 42 ambulances, 20 fire trucks and 70 police officers. Burlington County in southern New Jersey sent 20 ambulances.

The New Jersey Urban Rescue Team which specializes in confined spaces rescue has been there from day one on 24-hour rotating duty because the heroic New York City teams were wiped out in the first minutes. The cost of this effort has already reached $150,000.

Regular fire personnel from Elizabeth have been dispatched to Staten Island to free Staten Island Fire personnel to go to the World Trade Center site to help.

The Sheriff’s and Prosecutor’s Office in Hudson County which is directly across from New York City has conservatively incurred $50,000 in expenses. In Jersey City there are 60 officers working full time and countless numbers of fire fighters and equipment making a major supply effort to New York via the Jersey City waterfront.

The North Hudson Regional Fire Co. has spent over $150,000 on overtime, personnel, and equipment.

Mr. BYRD. There are many more examples of the selflessness and sacrifice taking place, not just from New Jersey but across the country.

I appreciate that the physical attack did not occur on New Jersey soil and that is why New Jersey is not referenced in this emergency appropriation as a location where the terrorist attack occurred as New York, Virginia, and Pennsylvania are listed.

However, it is important to acknowledge and fully appreciate the human and financial expenses being incurred by the neighboring areas and that these areas be able to apply directly to the Federal Government for reimbursement.

Mr. President, it is my understanding that the specific State listings in the supplemental specifically refer only to the physical locations where the attacks occurred and do not establish an exclusive list of areas eligible for financial assistance from this Federal aid package.

Mr. CORZINE. I want to first associate myself with the remarks of my colleague from New Jersey and I would further appreciate the opportunity to clarify one additional point with my colleague from West Virginia. I understand that New Jersey was not listed because an attack did not physically occur there; however as my colleague, Senator TORRICELLI has stated, our State and communities have incurred significant human and financial costs in responding to this disaster.

I would appreciate your acknowledgement that the State of New Jersey and its local communities who have incurred expenses in the relief effort, will be able to apply directly to the Federal Government for the assistance provided under this aid package.

Mr. BYRD. It is my understanding that New Jersey is eligible to apply for any authorized disaster relief program in the same manner and under the same conditions as New York, Connecticut, Virginia, and other affected States.

Mr. TORRICELLI. I appreciate Senator BYRD’s statement clarifying this concern, as well as all his work.

MOMENT OF SILENCE

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senate will stand in recess awaiting the call of the Chair.

Thereupon, the Senate, at 12:02 p.m., recessed subject to the call of the Chair and reassembled at 12:10 p.m., when called to order by the Presiding Officer (Mr. JEFFORDS).

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

A UNITED RESPONSE

Mr. BROWNBACK. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that there be a period for morning business, with Senators allowed to speak for up to 5 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate will now, in memory of those whose lives have been lost and those who still live but who suffer from the loss of loved ones and friends, entertain a moment of silence.

(Moment of silence.)

RECESS SUBJECT TO THE CALL OF THE CHAIR

The PRO Tempore. The Senate will stand in recess awaiting the call of the Chair.

MORNING BUSINESS

Mr. BROWNBACK. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that there be a period for morning business, with Senators allowed to speak for up to 5 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

A UNITED RESPONSE

Mr. BROWNBACK. Mr. President, this morning the Senate passed a historic resolution. The resolution passed granting the President broad authority and power to prosecute a war against terrorism and those who house terrorists.

It is important we talk about that from the standpoint that this is a war as no other we have been in where the enemy is one who can attack and has attacked on our soil, who will use means and methods of terror, which is the tool of choice for the terrorists, and try to debilitate us by fear.

We should not succumb to fear. We should not allow fear to take over but, rather, have faith in our system and faith in God above that we will prosper and persevere.

Many terrorists have networks that are headquartered throughout central Asia, South Asia, and the Middle East. It is wise for us to go after these terrorist organizations. It is absolutely right for us to do so.

We need to build alliances with people throughout these regions, and they are available to us if we move wisely and successfully. The State Department has done a nice job thus far, and I congratulate Secretary Colin Powell and Rich Armitage, the No. 2 person in the Department, and others, for reaching out to many countries in that part of the world and saying: Look, it is time to stand up and be counted. You are either with us or against us, and we want to know what it is, and there will be consequences that will flow from that decision.

It appears a number of these countries are standing up and saying: We are with you; this global scourge of terrorism hits us on a daily basis as it just hit you with such a devastating force on September 11.

I think it would be wise for us to look at this very seriously, that before we move forward, we build these alliances with a number of nations that are willing to stand up with us and be heard. That is very possible for us to do.

We need to look to nations such as Uzbekistan, Kazakhstan, nations that are not in the common lexicon perhaps of geography of the American student or maybe even the American political student. These are countries formed out of the fall of the Soviet Union, and they sit in direct proximity to Afghanistan, which has been the headquarters for some period of time of Osama bin Laden.

If these nations want to work with the United States, we ought to work with them. It requires us to look at them with a new set of eyes and say: OK, we put a lot of demands and pressures on you at different points, and now we have one singular focus, and that is to deal with terrorism; we want to work with you on that. I think we will get their cooperation.

They also will say: We want the United States to work with us, building the economies and abilities of our people, going to be a change and a push back and forth that, in many ways, will help strengthen our standing and our relationship with many of these nations.

We have recently been on a diplomatic trip to Africa. That is proper and good and should continue. There are sanctions that need to be lifted in this region. Pakistan is going to be a key country, as we have already seen, and discussions are taking place already. Pakistan will be a key country.

We have gone to them and said: OK, stand up and be counted with us or be counted with the other side.

We believe Pakistan will strongly be a key country, as we have already seen. This is not familiar to most people, but the American political student of geography of the American student of the Middle East.

I want to point out some history regarding Afghanistan. Some suggest we go in and start bombing. There have been a number of nations, great nations, and hoping we get it done. This is going to take some period of time to build the alliances we will need.

We have a number of nations, great nations, and hoping we get it done. This is going to take some period of time to build the alliances we will need.

We have a number of nations, great nations, and hoping we get it done. This is going to take some period of time to build the alliances we will need.

It is a different alliance than we have formed in the past, as an alliance to put the tools in place, the human intelligence, the ability to get at these dens of iniquity, these evil groups that would perpetrate these crimes on this country and across the world.

At the beginning of a new administration, we have had our share of differences, certainly after the cold war. Pakistan was there with us in bringing the Soviet Union down when the Soviet Union was engaged in Afghanistan. I think Pakistan will be with us again. We have to look at how we work with them. They are going to say: OK, there are a series of sanctions you have on us; we want to talk about that as well.

We should engage those discussions. Hopefully, we will build these nations together. That would be a good and appropriate thing to do.

I want to speak out some history regarding Afghanistan. Some suggest we go in and start bombing. There have been a number of nations, great nations, and hoping we get it done. This is going to take some period of time to build the alliances we will need.

As I say: OK, there are a series of sanctions with us again. We have to look at how we are going to deal with these terrorist organizations that are headquartered in Afghanistan.

This is going to take some time, and I hope we get cognizant of those lessons of history and are cognizant of what we are dealing with. This may take some time, planning, and thoughtfulness as we build the alliances with countries in that region, as we do the give-and-take to get them on our side and with them saying: OK, we need you to work with us as we build up our nations as well and as we plot long-term strategy to be able to get at these terrorist groups that are headquartered in a very difficult nation.

This is not the sort of thing we are going to do from 30,000 feet in the air, dropping bombs or launching cruise missiles and hop we get it done. This is going to take some period of time to build the alliances we will need.

It is a different alliance than we have formed in the past, as an alliance to put the tools in place, the human intelligence, the ability to get at these dens of iniquity, these evil groups that would perpetrate these crimes on this country and across the world.

Then we are going to have to go in and dig them out one at a time. This is not the Persian Gulf war or any other war in which we have been. If done properly and well focused, we can be very successful in this effort. It is going to require time, focus, prudence, and determination, and the mettle of this country will be tested. But we are going to be successful in the long run.

We could be here for some period of time talking about this.

Mr. President, I wanted to rise to say that because the resolution we passed this morning was quite broad based. It was an expression of the people of the United States, and I think a good expression of the desires of the people of the United States.

I do not want people to think this will be done later this year and we are finished with it. This will take a long period of time. These terrorist organizations operate in a number of countries, and they have substantial assets in at least 10 different nations. We could well be going at that for some period of time.

NATIONAL DAY OF PRAYER AND REMEMBRANCE

Mr. BROWNBACK. Mr. President, the National Day of Prayer and Remembrance was held at Washington National Cathedral. What a beautiful service to recognize and remember those who lost their lives and the families who mourn them and those who are still missing. We ended it by singing the Battle Hymn of the Republic, with which everybody is familiar.

Most people are familiar with the first verse, maybe the last verse, but not some of the rest of the text. Remember, this is the great hymn of the Republic during the time of strife between the States and where we had a war between ourselves, brother against brother, in this land. This was the fight song.

As we sang that song, it was as if we were sending our Nation off to war. I want to read the words to the middle verse, the third verse of this hymn that is not familiar to most people, but the words are so strong and striking.

I have read a fiery gospel writ in burnish'd rows of steel; as ye deal with My contemners, so with you My grace shall deal; let the Hero, born of woman, crush the serpent with His heel; since God is marching on. I have read a fiery gospel writ in burnish'd rows of steel. I hope that our enemies, the terrorists in the world, read that writ we have issued today written in burnish'd rows of steel.

We are resolved. We are united. We will win. We will win. I will win. It takes to win, while our God is marching on.

I yield the floor.

I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerks will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent the order for the quorum called be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

2001 EMERGENCY SUPPLEMENTAL APPROPRIATIONS ACT FOR RECOVERY FROM AND RESPONSE TO TERRORIST ATTACKS ON THE UNITED STATES

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, H.R. 2888, just received from the House, is read a third time.

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the motion to reconsider is laid upon the table.

The bill (H.R. 2888) was read the third time and passed.
of the Office of Victims of Crime.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the HELP Committee be discharged from further consideration of the nominations of Ellen G. Engelman to be Administrator of the Research and Special Programs Administration at the Department of Transportation, and Kirk Van Tine the General Counsel of the Department of Transportation, and they be placed on the Executive Calendar.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

NOMINATION OF JOHN W. GILLIS, OF CALIFORNIA, TO BE DIRECTOR OF THE OFFICE OF VICTIMS OF CRIME

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the HELP Committee be discharged from further consideration of the nomination of Bruce Cole to be the Chairperson of the National Endowment for the Humanities and that the Judiciary Committee be discharged from the consideration of the nomination of John W. Gillis to be Director of the Office of Victims of Crime; that the nominations be considered and confirmed, and that they be laid upon the table, the President be immediately notified of the Senate’s action, and any statements therein be printed in the RECORD.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The nominations considered and confirmed are as follows:

NATIONAL ENDOWMENT FOR THE HUMANITIES
Bruce Cole, of Indiana, to be Chairperson of the National Endowment for the Humanities for a term of four years.

JUDICIARY
John W. Gillis, of California, to be Director of the Office of Victims of Crime.

NOMINATION OF JOHN GILLIS

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, yesterday the Judiciary Committee conducted confirmation hearings that included the President’s nomination of John Gillis to direct the Office for Victims of Crime at the Department of Justice. These hearings had been scheduled long before the tragic events of Tuesday, September 11, 2001. This was the first hearing of the committee since the terrorism Tuesday morning that prompted the postponement of hearings on Tuesday and Wednesday.

Mr. Gillis had come from California before air traffic was suspended on Tuesday. Also included in the hearing were judicial nominees from New York and Connecticut, who were able to drive to Washington in order to participate in the hearing. I thank Senator MCCONNELL for serving as the Ranking Republican.

Mr. Gillis detailed his background in law enforcement as a police officer with the Los Angeles Police Department and his work with the New York Port Authority. We also heard first hand of the tragic loss of his daughter and of his work on behalf of homicide victims and other victims of crime.

We discussed the outstanding staff of the Office for Victims of Crime, the important work in which they are engaged, and the incredible challenges that Mr. Gillis and the Office have faced.

I have worked closely with Mr. Gillis, my predecessor in the Office for Victims of Crime for several years. With Aileen Adams, I worked on victims legislation to assist in our response to the bombing of the Alfred P. Murrah Building in Oklahoma City in April of 1995. Indeed, I sponsored the Victims of Terrorism Act amendment when the Senate considered anti-terrorism legislation in June 1995 and I continued working to ensure that legislation remained part of the Anti-Terrorism and Effective Death Penalty Act, which was finally enacted on April 24, 1996.

Thereafter, we worked on special appropriations to assist the victims of the Oklahoma bombing and special legislation to ensure their rights in connection with the trial. Last year, working with Katherine Turman, we were able to enact improvements to our 1995 legislative framework in order to double the cap on the Victims of Crime Act emergency reserve fund to $100 million and provide greater flexibility to the Office for Victims of Crime to use the emergency reserve in changing the programs that assist victims of terrorism and mass violence.

In addition, over the years I have worked with Senator SPECTER and others on a series of legislative actions to provide financial and educational benefits to federal and state public safety officers killed or injured in the line of duty, including educational benefits for their dependents.

We will be reviewing all of these provisions in the days and weeks ahead in the wake of the devastation of Tuesday.

Although nominees to head the Office for Victims of Crime traditionally have not always participated in a confirmation hearing, I consider it important to have Mr. Gillis at a Senate hearing to highlight the importance of the work of this Office, the critical importance of crime victims’ rights, and the assistance and compensation provided by the Federal Government.

Along with other Senators strongly committed to assisting crime victims and protecting their rights, I reintroduced the Crime Victims Assistance Act of 2001 in April of this year. In preparing our bill, we consulted closely with a number of victims organizations and with the Office for Victims of Crime. That legislation, which enhances the rights and protections of victims of crime, establishes innovative new programs to help promote compliance with State victim’s rights laws and improves the manner in which the Crime Victims Fund is managed and preserved, is an important matter and a high priority for me. I was heartened when Mr. Gillis pledged to work with us on this initiative.

Toward the end of yesterday’s hearing, I suggested that I would try to clear the nomination of John Gillis to be Director of the Office for Victims of Crime on an extraordinary and expedited basis. I noted that Attorney General Ashcroft had, on the eve of the nomination hearing, called me at home in support of this nomination. Yesterday I requested that the Majority Leader proceed to the Executive Calendar and that the Senate confirm John Gillis. I thank the Majority Leader for taking action and I want to thank all Democratic Members of the Senate and my colleague from Vermont for approving that request. In these difficult days, confirming Mr. Gillis to head the Office for Victims of Crime so that he may lend his hand to the efforts of those working so diligently in that Office and in State and local government and private efforts in New York, Virginia and around the country, is a small but significant step that the Senate can and should take.

I am gratified that overnight what may have been a number of concerns had threatened to delay Senate action on this nomination has been resolved. I thank all Senators for their willingness to move forward under these extraordinary circumstances to confirm John Gillis to be Director of the Office for Victims of Crime in particular. I thank the senior Senator from Oklahoma (Mr. NICKLES) for his effort to clear this nomination for expedited Senate action today. His personal intervention helped make this possible. I have had the privilege of working over the years with Senator NICKLES on victims legislation. He has shown again today his commitment to the interests of victims of crime and terrorism.

EXECUTIVE CALENDAR

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the following nominations be considered for expedited Senate action today: Nos. 363 through 383; that the nominations be confirmed, the motions to reconsider be laid upon the table, the President be immediately notified of the Senate’s action, and the Senate then proceed to the Executive Calendar.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.
The nominations considered and conformed en bloc are as follows:

DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE
Richard E. Niederkof, of Texas, to be Director of the Federal Justice Assistance.

DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION
Brian Jones, of California, to be General Counsel, Department of Education.

DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE
Paul J. McNulty, of Virginia, to be United States Attorney for the Eastern District of Virginia for the term of four years.

Patrick Leo Meehan, of Pennsylvania, to be United States Attorney for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania for the term of four years.

Stephen Beville Pence, of Kentucky, to be United States Attorney for the Western District of Kentucky for the term of four years.

Michael J. Sullivan, of Massachusetts, to be United States Attorney for the District of Massachusetts for the term of four years.

Joseph S. Van Bokkelen, of Indiana, to be United States Attorney for the Northern District of Indiana for the term of four years.

Gregory F. Van Tatenhove, of Kentucky, to be United States Attorney for the Eastern District of Kentucky for the term of four years.

Coim F. Connolly, of Delaware, to be United States Attorney for the District of Delaware for the term of four years.

Michael G. Heavican, of Nebraska, to be United States Attorney for the District of Nebraska for the term of four years.

Thomas B. Heffelfinger, of Minnesota, to be United States Attorney for the District of Minnesota for the term of four years.

Rossford Howard, Jr., of the District of Columbia, to be United States Attorney for the District of Columbia for the term of four years.

Mary Beth Buchanan, of Pennsylvania, to be United States Attorney for the Western District of Pennsylvania for the term of four years.

Peter W. Hall, of Vermont, to be United States Attorney for the District of Vermont for the term of four years.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE
John D. Negroponte, of the District of Columbia, to be a Representative of the United States of America to the United Nations, with the rank and status of Ambassador Extraordinary and Plenipotentiary, and the Representative of the United States of America in the Security Council of the United Nations.

John D. Negroponte, of the District of Columbia, to be a Representative of the United States of America to the Sessions of the General Assembly of the United Nations during his tenure of service as Representative of the United States of America to the United Nations.

Laura E. Kennedy, of New York, a Career
Member of the Senior Foreign Service, Class of Counselor, to be Ambassador Extraordinary and Plenipotentiary of the United States of America to Turkmenistan.

Marelle M. Wahba, of California, a Career
Member of the Senior Foreign Service, Class of Minister-Counselor, to be Ambassador Extraordinary and Plenipotentiary of the United States of America to the United Arab Emirate.

Ronald E. Neumann, of Virginia, a Career
Member of the Senior Foreign Service, Class of Minister-Counselor, to be Ambassador Extraordinary and Plenipotentiary of the United States of America to the State of Bahrain.

Patrick Francis Kennedy, of Illinois, a Career Member of the Foreign Service, Class of Career Minister, to be a Representative of the United States of America to the United Nations for the U.N. Management and Reform, with the rank of Ambassador.

The following named officer for appointment was the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff and appointment to the grade indicated while serving in a position of impecance and responsibility under title 10, U.S.C., sections 601 and 152:

To be general
Gen. Richard B. Myers, 0000.

NOMINATION OF JOHN NEGROPONTE
Mr. DODD. Mr. President, yesterday the Foreign Relations Committee held a hearing to consider the nomination of John Negroponte to be the U.S. Permanent Representative to the United Nations. I was unable to attend yesterday's hearing because I was with my wife Jackie, attending the birth of our daughter Grace.

I believe that it was very important yesterday that the Committee hearing focused in part on a careful review of new information that has come to light related to Ambassador Negroponte's tenure in Honduras during 1981-85 to see whether Congress had been kept fully informed about all aspects of U.S. policy with respect to Honduras during his watch.

I recognize, that this is not a normal week for the Senate or for the American people. President Bush has indicated that he wants the United States to be represented by an Ambassador at the United Nations as quickly as possible, particularly in light of this week's	ragic events. I don't disagree with that view.

However, the Foreign Relations Committee did have a responsibility to review the questions raised in connection with this nomination. They discharged that responsibility yesterday. The Committee has proceeded expeditiously, professionally and fairly with Ambassador Negroponte's nomination.
It requested and receive documents from the State Department and CIA.
Those documents were reviewed, consisting of several thousand pages, the committee proceeded with the hearing yesterday and today the Senate is ready to act. There have been no undue delays.

Let's review the time line of this nomination to date. The President announced his intent to nominate Ambassador Negroponte for the U.N. post on March 6. The nomination was not submitted to the Senate, however, until May 14, nearly four months into the administration. By contrast, Madeleine Albright was nominated for the U.N.
post on January 20, 1993 and confirmed six days later.

On May 8, over a week before a nomination was submitted, the Committee Democrats wrote the President to request that the Administration provide documents to the Committee so it could review issues related to Negroponte's tenure in Honduras. On May 8, Committee staff submitted a list of requested documents to representatives of the White House and the State Department. The last document responsive to the original request of May 8 was not provided, however, until late July. The Committee staff reviewed several thousand pages of documents responsive to the request and determined that a number of documents which were still classified contained important information on questions raised about Ambassador Negroponte's tenure in Honduras.

The chairman of the committee then requested that the State Department and CIA undertake a review of documents within the committee's possession that remained with a goal of making public as much information as possible in order to shed additional light on what role if any the United States played in the human rights abuses that were perpetrated against the Honduran people in the first half of the 1980s, particularly what knowledge or involvement the United States Ambassador, at the time
Mr. Negroponte, had in those abuses.
The committee also offered to begin hearings prior to the August recess on U.N. issues, with another hearing orning to follow in September on issues related to Negroponte's service in Honduras.
The administration chose to wait until September to begin the hearing procress. So we are talking about a period of approximately fourteen weeks of working days of the Senate from the time the nomination was submitted until today. This compares quite favorably when compared to the Holbrooke nomination which took from February 1999 to August 1999.

Some conservative columnists have suggested that I and others are trying to re-fight the Central America con-ict of the 1980's. Nothing could be further from the truth. Rather, I would argue that there is an effort underway in some quarters to rewrite the history of U.S. involvement in that conflict and rewriting the events of the last 14 years in such a way as to rewrite the history of the U.S. role in that conflict.

In the early 1980's, the Congress and the American people were told that the United States had no involvement in using Honduras as a staging for a covert Contra program to overthrow Nicaragua's Sandinista government. Later, when the so called second Boland amendment cutting off assistance to the Contra was passed we were told that the United States was not violating that provision of law.
That of course proved to be untruth as the United States had no involvement in using Honduras as a staging ground for a covert Contra program to overthrow Nicaragua's Sandinista
government. Later, when the so called second Boland amendment cutting off assistance to the Contra was passed we were told that the United States was not violating that provision of law.
That of course proved to be untruth as the United States had no involvement in using Honduras as a staging ground for a covert Contra program to overthrow Nicaragua's Sandinista
government. Later, when the so called second Boland amendment cutting off assistance to the Contra was passed we were told that the United States was not violating that provision of law.
That of course proved to be untruth as the United States had no involvement in using Honduras as a staging ground for a covert Contra program to overthrow Nicaragua's Sandinista
government. Later, when the so called second Boland amendment cutting off assistance to the Contra was passed we were told that the United States was not violating that provision of law.
September 14, 2001

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—SENATE

17057

of the American church women or the Jesuit priests. Of course we now know that none of that was in fact true. It is indisputable that this fabric of untruths and half truths caused deep fissures in the Congressional-Executive branch relationship and in the trust of the American people in their government. Those fissures will only be fully healed if there is honesty and full candor between the Executive and the Congress.

Our policy was also controversial throughout Central America. Tens of thousands of Central Americans lost their lives during the 1980’s, many at the hands of their own governments. Tens of thousands more had their lives permanently marred by losses of loved ones. Fortunately, in 1987 Central American leaders took their fate into their own hands and crafted the Central American Peace Agreement. These agreements created a basis for prosperity and a chance to come to terms with the past. We have been fortunate to see some of the promises of the agreement fulfilled.

I am deeply concerned by the conduct of U.S. policy and the decisions of the key players in the Central American arena. I am concerned by the apparent willingness of American leaders to ignore human rights abuses when there appeared to be other things of greater concern. I am concerned by the lack of accountability for the deaths and disappearances that occurred in Honduras in the eighties. I have heard testimony by former and current officials in the U.S. government that they did not know about these abuses or were unable to stop them. I have heard testimony by former and current officials in the Honduran government that they do not want to bring up the past.

I am concerned by the conduct of U.S. government officials in the 1980’s and by the state of U.S. relations with Latin American countries today. It is clear that U.S. policy in Latin America has been ineffective and that it is time for a new approach. I believe that the United States should work with other countries to promote human rights and democracy in the region. I believe that the United States should be a leader in the fight against poverty and inequality. I believe that the United States should be a partner in the fight against terrorism.

The picture that emerges in analyzing this new information is a troubling one. Some of the key facts that the Committee put on public record during yesterday’s hearing thanks to the cooperation of the State Department and CIA are the following: One, during 1980-84, the Honduran military committed most of the hundreds of human rights abuses reported in Honduras. These abuses were often politically motivated and officially sanctioned. Two, the military units were trained by the U.S.—members of these units have been linked to death squad activities such as killings, disappearances, and other human rights abuses; three, the CIA’s reporting of human rights abuses was inconsistent. Reporting inadequacies precluded CIA headquarters from understanding the scope of human rights abuses; four, the responsibility for monitoring and taking action against domestic subversion in Honduras was first the responsibility of a special unit of the Public Security Forces, FUSEP; five, at the recommendation of a joint U.S./Honduran military seminar, this responsibility was transferred in early 1984 to a new unit (which came to be known as Battalion 316) under the supervision of the Military Intelligence Division of the Armed Forces General Staff; and six, the FUSEP special unit and Battalion 316 counter terrorist tactics included torture, rape and assassination against perceived threats to be involved in support of the Salvadoran guerrillas or part of the Honduran leftist movement; seven, as many as 250 instances of human rights abuses in Honduras are officially documented, including disappearances, torture, extra judicial killings; and eight, at least one death squad was known to have operated during 1980-84. This death squad was called ELACH, The Honduran Anti-Communist Liberation Army. There is information that suggests that a leader of the ELACH led to the chief of the National Intelligence Directorate of the Honduran Public Security Forces.

When Ambassador Negroponte came before the committee in 1989 in the hearings on his nomination, he had no knowledge of Battalion 316 or the ELACH. He stated that he did not know about the death squad, nor did he believe the evidence that pointed to the involvement of the United States in the death squad. He stated that he did not believe the evidence, nor do I believe now, that those abuses were part of a deliberate government policy.”
The InterAmerican Court of Human Rights had no such reluctance in assigning blame to the Honduran government during its adjudication of a case brought against the Government of Honduras by the InterAmerican Commission on Human Rights in 1987. In deciding the case of Honduran citizen Velasquez Rodriguez the Court found that "a practice of disappearances carried on by Honduran officials existed between 1981–84." And, as I mentioned earlier, based upon an extensive review of U.S. intelligence information by the CIA Working Group in 1986, the CIA is prepared to stipulate that "during the 1980–84 period, the Honduran military committed most of the hundreds of human rights abuses reported in Honduras. These abuses were often politically motivated and officially sanctioned."

Moreover, Negroponte should have been forewarned to look for signs of government-sponsored human rights abuses in light of concerns that his predecessor Ambassador Jack Binns, a career foreign service officer, had raised with the State Department concerning the mind set of the architect of Honduras' domestic countersubversion program with respect to a willingness to extrajudicial means in the context of such programs. Ambassador Binns was speaking about General Gustavo Alvarez who became Commander in Chief of the Honduran Armed Forces in 1982, and who had been Commander of Honduran Public Security Forces, FUSEP, from 1980–82.

Based upon the Committee's review of State Department and CIA documents, it would seem that Ambassador Negroponte knew far more about government perpetrated human rights abuses than he chose to share with the committee in 1989 or in Embassy contributions by Honduran officials for annual State Department Human Rights reports. For example, a Negroponte cable summarizing meetings between Congressman Solarz and Honduran government officials in January 1985 makes note of a Honduran official's concerns about future human rights abuses due to "fears that there might still be some "secret operating cells" left from the Alvarez era," here referring to General Alvarez who had headed the Honduran armed forces until he was removed in 1984 by his fellow officers. I don't quite know the difference between a "death squad" and "secret operating cells", but since Ambassador Negroponte is officially on record as saying that such squads existed in Honduras during his tenure, there must be some difference.

There are also discrepancies with respect to when he became aware of certain cases where Honduran authorities were secretly detaining and torturing Hondurans suspected of subversion. And how he chose to report those cases to Washington. The case of dual national Ines Consuelo Murillo comes most readily to mind. Her detention and torture was described in detail on April 15, 1995 in the Baltimore Sun.

There are but a few examples. There were others which taken together, paint a very mixed picture of whether the U.S. embassy was doing much to discourage Honduran government practices or how comprehensively it was looking for such human rights abuses. Having said that, there were no "smoking guns" in the documents that have been provided to the Committee.

I know that this week is not just any week. I also know that the President is anxious to have an ambassador at the United Nations is a high priority, particularly in light of recent events. I will not stand in the way of the Senate moving forward with this nomination. I believe that yesterday's decision by the Committee on Foreign Relations to put on the public record all the additional declassified information that it has compiled in reviewing this nomination will contribute to the healing and reconciliation that is still ongoing in Honduras.

Finally I would say a word of caution to other career foreign service officers, particularly junior officers, that they not consider this nominee's lack of candor before the committee as a model to be emulated. A United States Ambassador is a representative of the United States Government and ultimately works for the American people. That means that our ambassadors have an obligation to be truthful and forthcoming in relations with Congress as we are the people's representatives. If they are under instruction to withhold information as a matter of policy they should say so. Then, we can take it up with their superiors if we choose to do so. In my estimation, Mr. Negroponte did neither in his dealings with the Congress. I am deeply saddened to come to that judgement. Having said that Ambassador Negroponte has had a distinguished career and on balance has discharged his responsibilities ably and honorably. For that reason, I intend to give him the benefit of the doubt in light of how extremely polarized relations between the Congress and the Executive were over U.S. policy in Central America when he was serving as Ambassador in Honduras. I will therefore support his nomination to the position of the U.S. Permanent Representative to the United Nations.

LEGISLATIVE SESSION

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the Senate will now resume legislative session.

NATIONAL HISTORICALLY BLACK COLLEGES AND UNIVERSITIES WEEK

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent the Judiciary Committee be discharged from consideration of S. Res. 159, and the Senate then proceed to its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered. The clerk will report the resolution by title.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

A resolution (S. Res. 159) designating the week beginning September 16, 2001, as "National Historically Black Colleges and Universities Week."

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to the consideration of the resolution.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent the resolution and preamble be agreed to en bloc and that the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table, without intervening action.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The resolution (S. Res. 159) was agreed to.

The preamble was agreed to.

The resolution, with its preamble, reads as follows: S. Res. 159

Whereas there are 105 historically black colleges and universities in the United States;

Whereas black colleges and universities provide the quality education so essential to full participation in a complex, highly technological society;

Whereas black colleges and universities have a rich heritage and have played a prominent role in American history;

Whereas black colleges and universities have provided many underprivileged students to attain their full potential through higher education; and

Whereas the achievements and goals of historically black colleges and universities are deserving of national recognition: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, SECTION 1. DESIGNATION OF NATIONAL HISTORICALLY BLACK COLLEGES AND UNIVERSITIES WEEK.

The Senate—

(1) designates the week beginning September 16, 2001, as "National Historically Black Colleges and Universities Week"; and

(2) requests that the President of the United States issue a proclamation calling on the people of the United States and interested groups to observe the week with appropriate ceremonies, activities, and programs to demonstrate support for historically black colleges and universities in the United States.

ORDER THE RECORD REMAIN OPEN UNTIL 3:30 P.M.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the RECORD remain open today until 3:30 for statements and introduction of bills.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

MEASURE INDEFINITELY POSTPONED—S. 1426

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that once H.R. 2888, the
September 14, 2001

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—SENATE

emergency supplemental appropriations bill, is enacted into law, action on S. 1426 be vitiated and the bill then be indefinitely postponed. The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, on behalf of Senator DASCHLE, I would like to extend my appreciation to everyone who allowed us to complete these nominations.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, on behalf of myself and Senator WARNER, pursuant to section 3(b) of S. Res. 400 of the 94th Congress, we ask unanimous consent that S. 1426, the Intelligence Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2002, be sequentially referred to the Committee on Armed Services for a period not to exceed 30 days.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

TRIBUTE TO TERRY LYNCH

Mr. SHELBY. Mr. President, I rise today in remembrance of a long-time former employee of mine, Terry Michael Lynch. Terry was killed Tuesday morning at the Pentagon in the tragic and senseless events of a day that will never be forgotten in America. Terry worked for me for over 15 years, both in the House of Representatives and the U.S. Senate, and I would like to take this opportunity to reflect on the life of a dedicated family man and a true patriot.

Terry was born in 1952 in Youngstown, Ohio. Terry grew up as the son of a steel-factory administrator. He graduated from high school in Youngstown, and received both his bachelor's and master's degrees in history from Youngstown State. It was there that Terry met his wife of 24 years, Jackie.

Terry worked on Capitol Hill as an aide to former Alabama Republican Congressman Albert Lee Smith. Some of you might remember the Congressman. He began working for me in 1983, when I was a Member of the U.S. House of Representatives. When I entered the race for the United States Senate in 1986, Terry was one of the first volunteers to take personal time away from his family here in Virginia and travel throughout Alabama doing any task that was needed. Terry came over to the U.S. Senate with me as my Legislative Assistant assigned to the Armed Services Committee and continued in that position from 1987 through 1994. In 1994, Terry became a professional staff member of the Senate Intelligence Committee and for two years brought his expertise to the Intelligence Community. Subsequently, he was a member of the professional staff of the Senate Veterans’ Affairs Committee chaired by Senator SPECTER. Terry was most recently employed by the consulting firm of Booz Allen and Hamilton.

To say and give you all of this background does not touch the essence of Terry Lynch. He was one of the most loyal, caring, unpretentious, and compassionate human beings I have ever had the privilege of knowing. Terry was a person who passed legislation of stability for everyone that knew and loved him. He was the kindest soul and the most dedicated and loving father to his two daughters, Tiffany and Ashley. Terry’s passion for helping others, especially those in uniform with which he so closely worked, was always evident over the course of his career. This week, former staff members have called from all over the world to express their deep grief. And, particularly the men and women in uniform of the intelligence community who worked with him and knew him in the Senate, and who worked with him and knew him in the Pentagon where he died.

We are all, I believe, better people for having known Terry Michael Lynch. Terry was an intelligent man with a heart of gold. He was also a great American. His life should not have ended in this unfortunate and premature manner, because he had so much ahead of him. But I promise you I will do everything in my power to ensure that Terry’s life, and the lives of all Americans affected by this terrible tragedy, did not end in vain.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

LOCAL LAW ENFORCEMENT ACT OF 2001

Mr. SMITH of Oregon. Mr. President, I rise today to speak about hate crimes legislation I introduced with Senator KENNEDY in March of this year. The Local Law Enforcement Act of 2001 would add new categories to current hate crimes legislation sending a signal that violence of any kind is unacceptable in our society.

I would like to describe a terrible crime that occurred December 19, 1997 in Stockton, CA. A high school student was allegedly beaten by a group of youths who believed he was gay. Two youths, ages 16 and 17, were charged with civil rights violations.

I believe that government’s first duty is to defend its citizens, to defend them against the harms that come out of hate. The Local Law Enforcement Enhancement Act of 2001 is now a symbol that can become substance. I believe that by passing this legislation, America can change hearts and minds as well.

Mr. MCCAIN. Mr. President, I want to thank the managers of this bill for their hard work in putting forth this legislation which provides federal funding for numerous vital programs.

This bill provides funding for fighting crime, enhancing drug enforcement, and responding to threats of terrorism. It further addresses the shortcomings of the immigration process, funds the operation of the judicial process, facilitates commerce threatened without the United States, and supports the needs of the State Department and various other agencies.

Regrettably, this bill spends at a level 4.4 percent higher than the level enacted in fiscal year 2001 which is greater than the 4 percent increase in discretionary spending than the President wanted to adhere to.

In real dollars, this is $720 million in additional spending above the amount requested by the President, and a $1.7 billion increase in spending from last year. So far this year, with just five appropriations bills already passed, spending levels have already exceeded the President’s budget request by more than $6 billion.

A good amount of this increase is in the form of parochial spending for unrequested projects. In this bill, I have identified approximately 600 earmarks totaling $2 billion, which is greater than the 470 earmarks, totaling $1.5 billion, in the bill passed last year.

There are hundreds of millions of dollars in pork-barrel spending and legislative riders that are riddled throughout this bill. The multitude of unrequested earmarks buried in this measure will undoubtedly further burden the American taxpayers. While the amounts associated with each individual earmark may not seem extravagant, taken together, they represent a serious diversion of taxpayers’ hard-earned dollars at the expense of numerous programs that have undergone the appropriate merit-based selection process.

For example, under funding for the Department of Justice, some examples of the more than 6,000 earmarks include: $5 million for the University of California to fund the Prison Health Research Project; $3 million for a grant to the Clearwater, Idaho EDA for the Lewis and Clark Bi-Centennial Bi-State Public Safety Project; $1 million for a grant to the Alaska Native Justice Center Restorative Justice programs; $1.6 million for the Montana Highway Patrol for computer upgrades; and $725,000 for the City of Jackson, Mississippi, for their public safety automated technologies system.

Under funding for the Department of Commerce, some of the earmarks include: $500,000 for the Central California Ozone Study; $500,000 for the International Pacific Research Center; $6.6 million for the Naval Pacific War Center at the University of Hawaii; $1.25 million for the Alaska Near Shore Fisheries; $350,000 for the South Carolina Taxonomic Center; $1.75 million for the Alaska Fisheries Development Foundation; $910,000 for federal transmitters in Wyoming; $4 million for the Institute for Politics at Harvard University; and $6 million for the Thayer...
School of Engineering at Dartmouth University for the nanocrystalline materials and biomass research initiative.

There are many more projects on the list that are compiled, which will be available on my Senate Web site.

Mr. President, I must once again draw attention to the more questionable ways in which Americans' tax dollars serve the otherwise noble cause of U.S. diplomacy around the world as part of the State Department appropriations portion of this bill. As usual, several organizations and universities have received earmarked funds for international exchanges. Five particularly parochial earmarks deserve mention: the Joiner Fellowships in War, the Padnos International Center, the UNI-Cedar Falls Russo-American Exchange, the UNLV Global Business Exchange, and the UNR International Business Innovation, especially $100,000 earmark, to the surprise of, among others, officials of the State Department, who not only did not request funding for these programs, but in several cases were unaware they even existed.

Among other beneficiaries this year of unrequested spending that seems to serve primarily the interests of its patrons, Pacific salmon stand out: this bill appropriates $45,419,000, or nearly twice the $22 million requested by the Department of State, to implement the 1999 Pacific Salmon Treaty. Included in this figure is $20 million above the Administration's request to capitalize the National Salmon Reserves. The Committee report also takes it upon itself to absolve the State of Alaska of further harvest reductions under the 1999 Pacific Salmon Treaty.

Traveling dance and music troupes and Internet entrepreneurs are also being shown the money as a result of the Committee report's generous provision of $750,000 to their cause, on the grounds that, in the Committee's words, "Performances by touring U.S. dance and music troupes have afforded our diplomats unusual access to oftentimes elusive senior policy-makers in Africa. At the same time, the lure of technology exchange each, respectively, the explosion of the Internet, afford American educators and entrepreneurs a rare opportunity to develop lasting links with African elites." Our relations with African nations are important, especially the countries torn by suffering poverty, famine, disease, civil unrest, and open warfare could use our help. I like a good dance performance as much as anyone, but I'm not positive this funding is the best way to help our friends or advance American interests in Africa.

For many years now I have opposed the Advanced Technology Program at the Department of Commerce on grounds that it is "corporate pork." For many years, any of the Nation's leading companies have reaped the benefits of this grant program for research ideas that they could and should have pursued under their corporate budgets. Proponents of the program have cited that the program funds high-risk projects. Several years ago, on the Senate Commerce Committee, we reviewed many of the funded projects under the program and found that many of the projects were not high-risk at all, but rather evolutionary or incremental development of existing technologies.

The President has stated that the future of the program would be subject to a Commerce Department's review. The fiscal year 2002 budget request has essentially eliminated funding for ATP. The budget has provided funding of $201 million for fiscal year 2002, $191 million above the President's request. Furthermore, to ensure that this funding is awarded in a timely manner, the Appropriations Committee, in report language, has prohibited obligations of any funds under the Department's Departmental Management account, which funds salaries and other expenses, until a plan on how timely awards are to be made. That is equivalent to saying make ATP awards or we will shut down the Department.

In closing, I urge my colleagues to curb our habit of directing hard-earned taxpayer dollars to locality-specific special interests and our inclusion of legislative riders which thwart the very process that is needed to ensure our laws address the concerns and interests of all Americans, not just a few who seek special protection or advantage.

Mr. SMITH of New Hampshire. Mr. President, I rise to raise an issue regarding the meaning and effect of amendment No. 1538 to H.R. 2500. I am proud to have joined in sponsoring this amendment with Senators HARKIN, WARNER, INHOFE, COCHRAN, ALLARD, CAMPBELL, and JOHNSON.

Mr. HARKIN. It is the understanding of the Senator from New Hampshire that the proper meaning of that amendment would bar the State and Justice Departments from filing any statement of interest or in any manner intervening to oppose any civil action brought by a former prisoner of war against a corporation of the type referenced in the amendment.

Mr. SMITH of New Hampshire. Yes. This is the intent of the amendment which passed this body by voice vote after a motion to table failed.

Mr. HARKIN. This is my understanding as well.

Mr. CRAPO. Mr. President, I rise today in support of a provision that has been included in the Commerce, Justice, State, and Judiciary Appropriations Subcommittee manager's amendment to H.R. 2500 that is absolutely crucial to recovering threatened and endangered species, while also protecting people and the economies of areas where these species are present. I would like to thank the esteemed Chairman and Ranking Member of the Subcommittee and the Ranking Member of the Appropriations Committee for recognizing the critical nature of this issue and including it in the manager's amendment.

The Endangered Species Act, ESA, requires Federal agencies to avoid actions that are likely to "jeopardize" the continued existence of threatened or endangered species or destroy or adversely modify designated critical habitat. Agencies must "consult" with the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service or the National Marine Fisheries Service, who issue a biological opinion at the conclusion of consultation to assist the Federal agency to meet its substantive no-jeopardy obligation. Legislation to avoid jeopardy rests upon the Federal "action agency," not on the Services. These actions may include the construction of a highway or bridge, a stream restoration project to benefit listed fish species, a forest health activity such as thinning or prescribed fire to reduce the risk of catastrophic wildfire, or the operation of hydroelectric projects.

In the West, we have seen countless projects held up for inordinate amounts of time. They have caused economic hardship and job loss, while also draining the resources of the Federal Government. What is so significant about these resources being consumed by the consultation process is that in nearly all of these cases, projects did not jeopardize threatened or endangered species. In nearly every case, neither the species nor their habitats were at risk. In every case, this was a matter of status quo. The concern is that is required by the regulatory process. And, in no case, did this process do anything to increase a species chances of survival or improve habitat for that species on-the-ground.

In 1986, the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service and the National Marine Fisheries Service issued joint regulations that divided consultations into "informal" and "formal." "Informal consultations occur for actions that "may affect" a listed species. If the consulting Service finds that adverse affect on the species is likely, then formal consultation begins and the service will issue a formal biological opinion.

Since 1986, the consultation process has mushroomed into a lengthy and expensive process. Eight hundred and twenty two new species have been listed since then, including 21 new salmon listings in the past five years. Between 1987 and 1995 Federal agencies were required to complete more than 186,000
The regulations do not contain the “may affect” consultation threshold. As a matter of fact, the ESA has not a consultation threshold at all. The “may affect” threshold in the regulations is so far removed from the substantive no-jeopardy requirement in the ESA that large volumes of unnecessary consultations were virtually guaranteed to occur.

Other sections of the regulations also compel large numbers of unnecessary consultations: consultation is required on any action authorized, funded, or carried out “in part” by a federal agency, even if the Federal involvement is minor or secondary to private or state action; consultation is required for agency actions that are intended to benefit species; consultation is required for agency regulations that will streamline the consultation process to ensure that, one, all forms of consultation are completed within the deadlines provided in section 7 of the ESA; two, the requirements for initiating consultation and for any information generated by the consultation process, are met, and three, the consultation process is conducted in an efficient and useful manner to meet the purpose of section 7. Section 7(b) of the ESA imposes a 90-day deadline, subject to certain extensions to which each agency must agree. If there is a permit applicant involved, consultation may not exceed 150 days without the applicant’s consent. The review would consider the best scientific and commercial information available or which can be obtained during the consultation for an action agency to initiate a consultation to ensure that consultation is among the ESA’s procedural safeguards intended “to avoid needlessly burdening private citizens dependent on a project with a potential to violate the ESA.”

The delays also cause millions of dollars for elaborate consultations on projects that pose no significant threat to species. Each of these consultations requires extensive studies and reports by the Federal action agency and one or both of the Services, and extends for months or years before ending with the inevitable no-jeopardy finding that was obvious from the start. The Services have increased their staffs every year for the past decade in order to complete more and more of these unnecessary consultations that have no value for protected species.

These project delays further drain the Federal Treasury by increasing the ultimate costs of the stalled projects. The delays also cause millions of dollars for elaborate consultations on projects that pose no significant threat to species. Each of these consultations requires extensive studies and reports by the Federal action agency and one or both of the Services, and extends for months or years before ending with the inevitable no-jeopardy finding that was obvious from the start. The Services have increased their staffs every year for the past decade in order to complete more and more of these unnecessary consultations that have no value for protected species.

This out-of-control consultation process is contrary to Congress’ intent in enacting the Endangered Species Act. The Supreme Court has observed that consultation is among the ESA’s procedural safeguards intended “to avoid needlessly burdening private citizens dependent on a project with a potential to violate the ESA.”

The delays also cause millions of dollars for elaborate consultations on projects that pose no significant threat to species. Each of these consultations requires extensive studies and reports by the Federal action agency and one or both of the Services, and extends for months or years before ending with the inevitable no-jeopardy finding that was obvious from the start. The Services have increased their staffs every year for the past decade in order to complete more and more of these unnecessary consultations that have no value for protected species.

This out-of-control consultation process is contrary to Congress’ intent in enacting the Endangered Species Act. The Supreme Court has observed that consultation is among the ESA’s procedural safeguards intended “to avoid needlessly burdening private citizens dependent on a project with a potential to violate the ESA.”

The regulations do not contain the “may affect” consultation threshold. As a matter of fact, the ESA has not a consultation threshold at all. The “may affect” threshold in the regulations is so far removed from the substantive no-jeopardy requirement in the ESA that large volumes of unnecessary consultations were virtually guaranteed to occur.

Other sections of the regulations also compel large numbers of unnecessary consultations: consultation is required on any action authorized, funded, or carried out “in part” by a federal agency, even if the Federal involvement is minor or secondary to private or state action; consultation is required for agency actions that are intended to benefit species; consultation is required for agency regulations that will streamline the consultation process to ensure that, one, all forms of consultation are completed within the deadlines provided in section 7 of the ESA; two, the requirements for initiating consultation and for any information generated by the consultation process, are met, and three, the consultation process is conducted in an efficient and useful manner to meet the purpose of section 7. Section 7(b) of the ESA imposes a 90-day deadline, subject to certain extensions to which each agency must agree. If there is a permit applicant involved, consultation may not exceed 150 days without the applicant’s consent. The review would consider the best scientific and commercial information available or which can be obtained during the consultation for an action agency to initiate a consultation to ensure that consultation is among the ESA’s procedural safeguards intended “to avoid needlessly burdening private citizens dependent on a project with a potential to violate the ESA.”

The delays also cause millions of dollars for elaborate consultations on projects that pose no significant threat to species. Each of these consultations requires extensive studies and reports by the Federal action agency and one or both of the Services, and extends for months or years before ending with the inevitable no-jeopardy finding that was obvious from the start. The Services have increased their staffs every year for the past decade in order to complete more and more of these unnecessary consultations that have no value for protected species.

This out-of-control consultation process is contrary to Congress’ intent in enacting the Endangered Species Act. The Supreme Court has observed that consultation is among the ESA’s procedural safeguards intended “to avoid needlessly burdening private citizens dependent on a project with a potential to violate the ESA.”

The delays also cause millions of dollars for elaborate consultations on projects that pose no significant threat to species. Each of these consultations requires extensive studies and reports by the Federal action agency and one or both of the Services, and extends for months or years before ending with the inevitable no-jeopardy finding that was obvious from the start. The Services have increased their staffs every year for the past decade in order to complete more and more of these unnecessary consultations that have no value for protected species.

This out-of-control consultation process is contrary to Congress’ intent in enacting the Endangered Species Act. The Supreme Court has observed that consultation is among the ESA’s procedural safeguards intended “to avoid needlessly burdening private citizens dependent on a project with a potential to violate the ESA.”

The delays also cause millions of dollars for elaborate consultations on projects that pose no significant threat to species. Each of these consultations requires extensive studies and reports by the Federal action agency and one or both of the Services, and extends for months or years before ending with the inevitable no-jeopardy finding that was obvious from the start. The Services have increased their staffs every year for the past decade in order to complete more and more of these unnecessary consultations that have no value for protected species.
The Endangered Species Act is besieged with problems that must be solved in order to adequately protected listed species and recover them. At the same time, Native American communities feel that they have been assaulted by the ESA in the last two decades. Win-win solutions often evade us as policymakers when it comes to issues that are as contentious as the Endangered Species Act. But this is truly a win-win for species AND people. Again, my sincere thanks to the chairman and Ranking Member of the Commerce Appropriations Subcommittee for their assistance in finding solutions to this troubling issue.

Mr. BREAUX. Mr. President, last year this Committee and Congress passed legislation to privatize INMARSAT [International Maritime Satellite Organization]. As part of the privatization, INMARSAT is required to hold an initial public offering [IPO]. INMARSAT's IPO deadline is set for December 31 of this year. Since the IPO market continues to be in bad shape, INMARSAT and its investment advisors would like time to see if the market improves.

INMARSAT was established in 1979 to improve maritime communications especially for distress and safety signals. Over the past two decades, INMARSAT has branched out to serve both maritime markets and, increasingly, any markets requiring mobility—shipping, oil and gas exploration and the FAA.

Since the IPO market has nosedived, INMARSAT has been waiting for conditions to improve. All of the extensions available to INMARSAT have now been used and the FCC has no more discretion to extend the deadline. The dilemma is that if INMARSAT does not hold the IPO it will be in violation of the rules, and if it does hold the IPO, they could be found in breach of its fiduciary responsibility to its shareholders, possibly subjecting itself to shareholder lawsuits.

My amendment would simply give the FCC the ability to extend the deadline an additional 18 months to see if the IPO market improves. A large number of U.S. companies have pulled their IPOs off the market given market conditions. We are trying to privatize INMARSAT and we should allow them to act like a company.

IN SUPPORT OF THE BROADCASTING BOARD OF GOVERNORS' NEW MIDDLE EAST RADIO NETWORK

Mr. INOUYE. Mr. President, I rise today to express my support for a proposal by the Broadcasting Board of Governors to enhance and expand services to the Middle East. The Broadcasting Board of Governors has proposed a new station, the Middle East Radio Network.

Would Senator BOXER care to enlighten us on the current U.S. Government-sponsored Arabic language broadcasting in the Middle East?

Mrs. BOXER. Yes, I would and I thank the Senator for this opportunity to describe the important results of the board's most recent Language Service Review. This review found that our current broadcasting efforts in the Middle East only reach approximately 2 percent of the population. The board's 2001 Language Service Review highlighted the importance of revitalizing and improving programs in order to offset local Arabic radio broadcasts that often serve to incite violence in the region. An alternative must be offered to the hate radio that too often incites the population to violence.

In February, Broadcasting Board of Governors' representatives traveled throughout the Middle East to gather facts, to talk to government and media officials, and to begin to build a concept for success. The research emphasized the need for a greater U.S. media presence and increased local content to U.S. broadcasts. The researchers found that in spite of widespread opposition to the U.S. policies, there is a strong attraction to the American values of freedom and individualism. In addition, the Arab public would like information about U.S. businesses, technology and advances in medicine. I believe my colleague from Nebraska would like to discuss the Broadcasting Board of Governors' plans to address the shortcomings in our broadcasting services to the Middle East.

Mr. HAGEL. I thank the Senator for the opportunity to speak about the new broadcast service proposed by the Broadcasting Board of Governors for fiscal year 2002. The goal is to provide broadcasts that will appeal to a broad Arabic-speaking audience by providing news and information about events in the region. The working name for this station is "Al Aman." It would be a 24-hour per day, 7 days per week Arabic-language station to be delivered via a combination of local MW and FM, and shortwave to areas where local delivery is not possible. Programming will include news, music, talk, and interactive programs with listener participation. The Broadcasting Board of Governors plans to feature reliable news and discussion of issues relevant to the audience in a format that is attractive to young adults and to news-seekers of all ages. The programs will embody two important themes: individual choice and respect for others.

In a region where more than half of the population is under 25, a successful station must appeal to young people who are the best hope to end the cycle of violence that has ravaged the region.

I know my colleague from Washington would like to discuss the delivery of this new service in the Middle East, and I invite her to comment.

Mrs. MURRAY. The expansion and enhancement of our radio programming in the Middle East are critical to the success of our policies in the region. The proposed service would reach audiences in the West Bank and Gaza, the Gulf, Egypt, Iraq, Jordan, and Sudan in the most popular media of AM, FM and satellite program delivery. This is an area where we cannot afford to deliver our message through a third party broadcaster, and we must deliver accurate information about events occurring in the region. We must be an accessible voice in the region with a program and format that will attract a broader audience. This expanded service will also provide the region with increased exposure to news and information and Western journalistic standards of a free press. This provision of information will help counter the existing regional broadcasts which are often censored or under state control.

I am confident this increased information will help us further our policy goals of establishing peace and stability in the region. In light of the terrible events of this week, I appreciate the opportunity to register my support for this program and our international broadcasting efforts. I would also add that I concur with the comments of my colleagues.

Mrs. BOXER. I also concur with the remarks of my colleagues.

Mr. HAGEL. I also concur with my colleagues and would like to thank the Senator INOUYE to provide his final comments.

Mr. INOUYE. I concur in the comments of my colleagues about the importance of the enhanced programming in the Middle East proposed by the Broadcasting Board of Governors. It is my hope that the proposed service will help disseminate news and information throughout the region. I am pleased that the Broadcasting Board of Governors has committed to providing this much-needed service and look forward to working with my colleagues to support the Middle East Radio Network.

ADDITIONAL STATEMENTS

STEPFAMILY DAY

Ms. STABENOW. Mr. President, I rise today to recognize National Stepfamily Day, a day that reminds us that families don’t need to be bound by biology to be grounded in love and respect.

The Stepfamily Association of America and 38 States recognize September
September 14, 2001
CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—SENATE 17063

Tribute to Pete Suazo

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I rise to pay tribute to Eluid Pete Suazo, a distinguished Utah State Senator whose untimely death in August has had a tremendous impact—not only on his family and close friends, but also on the entire state of Utah.

At the time of his death, Senator Suazo represented Salt Lake City's multi-cultural west side, and he also served as the Assistant minority whip. Pete was heralded for his unfailing determination and advocacy for his constituents. Indeed, his integrity and absolute dedication won Senator Suazo respect from his colleagues on both sides of the aisle.

As the only Hispanic member of the Utah Legislature, Pete felt a strong sense of responsibility to honor and help Utah's growing Hispanic and minority populations. He was a top leader of the Hispanic community, who was also able to cross Utah's ethnic and political lines to effect policies benefitting the entire community. I remember how Pete's wife, Alicia, fondly recalled the day her husband decided to run for office. He passionately stated, "The Chicano boy is going to be a senator, not in New Mexico, but in Utah where the world is going to be doubly happy and the victory glorious." This optimism showed in Pete's face, for he was always smiling.

Pete fought for the underdog and the less privileged. For those who sought his assistance, he always had a helping hand and a listening ear. He worked tirelessly to improve the lives of the youth in his neighborhood. He organized graffiti removal teams, baseball and soccer leagues, summer work programs, and provided so many other opportunities to strengthen the characters of countless young men and women.

Over the past few years, Pete helped reinvigorate amateur boxing in Utah and participated as a referee to ensure safety in the sport. The Senator undertook these and many other volunteer efforts to help the less fortunate, always giving hope to those who needed it so much.

Senator Suazo's work ethic was extraordinary and was developed at a very young age. He took great pride in whatever he was doing—from selling popcorn at a charity carnival in his youth to serving as a leading state senator. Throughout his life, he used his tremendous energy and his capacity for hard work to champion the causes in which he so fervently believed.

While serving in the Utah legislature, Senator Suazo was not afraid of the tough battles. In recent years, his work to adopt a more pro-active and stronger hate crimes law defined Pete Suazo's leadership and determination. He never gave up, and through his efforts this issue rose to the forefront of the legislature's attention.

Mr. President, Utah has lost a true hero. Senator Pete Suazo was a man with great integrity, strong personal conviction, and a humble heart. His life was an example of dedicated public service and utmost love for his community and fellow man. I hope my colleagues will join me in sending our heartfelt thoughts and prayers to the Suazo family—his wife, Alicia, and their children Travis, Abel, Emilio and Julio, his parents Pat and Lilly, his siblings Kathy, Becky, Georgia, Anna, Ellie and Andy—and also to the many, many friends and neighbors of Pete who will deeply miss him. My hope is that future generations of Utahans will have the desire to follow in this good man's footsteps, and continue his legacy of work for the people of Utah. In so many instances Pete did not only dream the impossible dream, he strove for and attained it.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

At 2:21 p.m., a message from the House of Representatives, delivered by Mr. Hay, one of its reading clerks, announced that the House has passed the following bill, in which it requests the concurrence of the Senate:

H.R. 2888. An act making emergency supplemental appropriations for fiscal year 2001 for additional disaster assistance, for anti-terrorism initiatives, and for assistance in the recovery from the tragedy that occurred on September 11, 2001, and for other purposes.

EXEcUTIVE MESSAGES REFERRED

As in executive session the President Officer laid before the Senate messages from the President of the United States submitting sundry nominations which were referred to the appropriate committees.

(The nominations received today are printed at the end of the Senate proceedings.)

REPORT ON THE DECLARATION OF NATIONAL EMERGENCY BY REASON OF CERTAIN TERRORIST ATTACKS—MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT—PM 40

The Presiding Officer laid before the Senate the following message from the President of the United States, together with an accompanying report; which was referred to the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs.

To the Congress of the United States:

Pursuant to section 201 of the National Emergencies Act (50 U.S.C. 1621), I hereby report that I have exercised my authority to declare a national emergency by reason of the terrorist attacks at the World Trade Center, New York, New York, and the Pentagon, and the continuing and immediate threat of further attacks on the United States. A copy of my proclama-

Further, I have authorized, pursuant to section 12302 of title 10, United States Code, the Secretary of Defense, and the Secretary of Transportation with respect to the Coast Guard when it is not operating as a service within the Department of the Navy, to order to active duty units and individual members not assigned to units of the Ready Reserve to perform such missions the Secretary of Defense may determine necessary. The deployment of United States forces to conduct operational missions in connection with the World Trade Center and Pentagon attacks necessitates this action. A copy of my Executive Order implementing this action is attached.

GEORGE W. BUSH.
EXECUTIVE AND OTHER COMMUNICATIONS

The following communications were laid before the Senate, together with accompanying papers, reports, and documents, which were referred as indicated:

EC-3912. A communication from the Assistant General Counsel for Regulatory Law, Office of Procurement and Assistance Policy, Department of Energy, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “FAR Class Deviation Addressing Service Contract Act Requirements for Subcontracts for Certain Services” (RIN7776–7767) received on August 21, 2001; to the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources.

EC-3913. A communication from the General Counsel, Federal Emergency Management Agency, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Suspension of Community Eligibility” (Doc. No. FEMA–EC–3913) received on September 10, 2001; to the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs.

EC-3914. A communication from the Deputy Secretary of Defense, transmitting, pursuant to law, a report relative to Strategic and Competitive Sourcing Programs and Workforce Savings Report Year 2000; to the Committee on Armed Services.

EC-3917. A communication from the Principal Deputy Associate Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Listed Chemicals: Establishment of Non-Regulated Transaction in Anhydrous Hydrogen Chloride” (RIN1117–AA43) received on September 5, 2001; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

EC-3918. A communication from the Director of Policy Directive and Instructions Branch, Immigration and Naturalization Service, Department of Justice, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Listed Chemicals: Establishment of Non-Regulated Transaction in Anhydrous Hydrogen Chloride” (RIN1117–AA43) received on September 5, 2001; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

EC-3920. A communication from the Deputy Assistant Administrator of the Office of Division Control, Drug Enforcement Administration, Department of Justice, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Schedule of Controlled Substances: Placement of Dichloralphenazone Into Schedule III” (RIN1117–AA44) received on September 6, 2001; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

EC-3921. A communication from the Deputy Secretary of Commerce, transmitting, pursuant to law, the Annual Statement of Assurance for Fiscal Year 2000; to the Committee on Governmental Affairs.

EC-3922. A communication from the Secretary, Administrative Committee of the Federal Register Director, National Archives and Records Administration, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Prices and Availability of Federal Register Publications” (RIN3095–ZA03) received on September 6, 2001; to the Committee on Governmental Affairs.

EC-3923. A communication from the Chief of the Regulations Unit, Internal Revenue Service, Department of the Treasury, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Schedule of Controlled Substances: Placement of Dichloralphenazone Into Schedule III” (RIN1117–AA44) received on September 6, 2001; to the Committee on Finance.

EC-3924. A communication from the Chief of the Regulations Unit, Internal Revenue Service, Department of the Treasury, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Sample Plan Amendments Resulting from EGTRRA” (Notice 2001–57) received on September 4, 2001; to the Committee on Finance.

EC-3925. A communication from the Chief of the Regulations Division, Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms, Department of the Treasury, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Implementation of Public Laws 106–476 and 106–554, Relating to Tobacco Importation Restrictions, Markings, Repackaging, and Destruction of Forfeited Tobacco Products” (RIN1512–AC35) received on September 4, 2001; to the Committee on Finance.

EC-3926. A communication from the Chief of the Regulations Division, Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, Department of the Treasury, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Revocation of Hazardous Waste Placement Requirements: Amendments to Title 40, Code of Federal Regulations, Parts 266, 268, 291, and 299” (RIN1512–AC34) received on September 7, 2001; to the Committee on Finance.

EC-3927. A communication from the Chief of the Regulations Unit, Internal Revenue Service, Department of the Treasury, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “2001 Marginal Production Rates” (Notice 2001–53) received on September 10, 2001; to the Committee on Finance.

EC-3928. A communication from the Chief of the Regulations Unit, Internal Revenue Service, Department of the Treasury, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “2001 Marginal Production Rates” (Notice 2001–53) received on September 10, 2001; to the Committee on Finance.

EC-3929. A communication from the Chief of the Regulations Unit, Internal Revenue Service, Department of the Treasury, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Implementation of Public Laws 106–476 and 106–554, Relating to Tobacco Importation Restrictions, Markings, Repackaging, and Destruction of Forfeited Tobacco Products” (RIN1512–AC35) received on September 4, 2001; to the Committee on Finance.

EC-3930. A communication from the Chief of the Regulations Unit, Internal Revenue Service, Department of the Treasury, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Section 43 Inflation Adjustment” (Notice 2001–54) received on September 10, 2001; to the Committee on Finance.

EC-3931. A communication from the Principal Deputy Associate Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Air Quality Implementation Plans; Maryland; Revisions to the Control of Iron and Steel Production Installations (FRL7040–4) received on September 7, 2001; to the Committee on Environment and Public Works.

EC-3932. A communication from the Principal Deputy Associate Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “District of Columbia; Final Authorization of State Hazardous Waste Management Program Arizona Department of Environmental Quality” (FRL7051–3) received on September 10, 2001; to the Committee on Environment and Public Works.

EC-3933. A communication from the Principal Deputy Associate Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Approval and Promulgation of Hazardous Waste Management Plan, Arizona Department of Environmental Quality” (FRL7050–4) received on September 10, 2001; to the Committee on Environment and Public Works.

EC-3934. A communication from the Principal Deputy Associate Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “National Priorities List for Uncontrolled Hazardous Waste Sites” (FRL7064–9) received on September 10, 2001; to the Committee on Environment and Public Works.

EC-3935. A communication from the Principal Deputy Associate Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Revisions to the Arizona State Implementation Plan, Arizona Department of Environmental Quality” (FRL7053–4) received on September 10, 2001; to the Committee on Environment and Public Works.

EC-3936. A communication from the Principal Deputy Associate Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Approval and Promulgation of Implementation Plans: Idaho” (FRL7063–9) received on September 10, 2001; to the Committee on Environment and Public Works.

EC-3937. A communication from the Principal Deputy Associate Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Approval and Promulgation of Implementation Plans: Indiana” (FRL7061–4) received on September 10, 2001; to the Committee on Environment and Public Works.

EC-3938. A communication from the Secretary of Health and Human Services, transmitting, pursuant to law, a report relative to the Community Food and Nutrition Program for Fiscal Years 1998 and 1999; to the Committee on Finance.

EC-3939. A communication from the Secretary of Health and Human Services, transmitting, pursuant to law, a report relative to the Community Food and Nutrition Program for Fiscal Years 1998 and 1999; to the Committee on Finance.

EC-3940. A communication from the Secretary of Health and Human Services, transmitting, pursuant to law, a report relative to the Community Food and Nutrition Program for Fiscal Years 1998 and 1999; to the Committee on Finance.

EC-3941. A communication from the Secretary of Health and Human Services, transmitting, pursuant to law, a report relative to the Community Food and Nutrition Program for Fiscal Years 1998 and 1999; to the Committee on Finance.

EC-3942. A communication from the Secretary of Health and Human Services, transmitting, pursuant to law, a report relative to the Community Food and Nutrition Program for Fiscal Years 1998 and 1999; to the Committee on Finance.

EC-3943. A communication from the Secretary of Health and Human Services, transmitting, pursuant to law, a report relative to the Community Food and Nutrition Program for Fiscal Years 1998 and 1999; to the Committee on Finance.
EC-3941. A communication from the Inspector General, United States Railroad Retirement Board, transmitting, pursuant to law, the budget request for Fiscal Year 2003; to the Committee on Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions.

EC-3952. A communication from the Railroad Retirement Board, transmitting, pursuant to law, the budget request report for Fiscal Year 2003; to the Committee on Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES

The following reports of committees were submitted:

By Mr. GRAHAM, from the Select Committee on Intelligence, without amendment:
S. 1428: An original bill to authorize appropriations for fiscal year 2002 for intelligence and intelligence-related activities of the United States Government, the Community Management Account of the Director of Central Intelligence, and the Central Intelligence Agency Retirement and Disability System, and for other purposes; from the Select Committee on Intelligence; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

By Mr. EDWARDS:
S. 1429. A bill to provide for the improvement of security at airports and seaports; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

By Mr. JOHNSON:
S. 1430. A bill to authorize the issuance of Unity Bonds in response to the acts of terrorism perpetrated against the United States on September 11, 2001, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs.

By Mr. McCONNELL (for himself and Mr. BURNS):
S. 1431. A bill to authorize the Secretary of the Treasury to issue War Bonds in support of recovery and response efforts relating to the September 11, 2001 hijackings and attacks on the Pentagon and the World Trade Center, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs.

By Mr. SMITH of Oregon:
S. 1432. A bill to authorize the issuance of United States Defense of Freedom Bonds to aid in funding of the war against terrorism, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs.

By Mr. DASCHLE (for himself and Mr. LOTTY):
S.J. Res. 23. A joint resolution to authorize the use of United States Armed Forces against those responsible for the recent attacks launched against the United States; considered and passed.

ADDITIONAL COSPONSORS
S. 212
At the request of Mr. CAMPBELL, the name of the Senator from South Dakota (Mr. DASCHLE) was added as a cosponsor of S. 212, a bill to amend the Indian Health Care Improvement Act to revise and extend such Act.

S. 344
At the request of Mr. CAMPBELL, the name of the Senator from North Dakota (Mr. DORGAN) was added as a cosponsor of S. 344, a bill to amend the Transportation Equity Act for the 21st Century to make certain amendments with respect to Indian tribes.

S. 697
At the request of Mr. HATCH, the name of the Senator from Missouri (Mr. BOND) was added as a cosponsor of S. 697, a bill to modernize the financing of the railroad retirement system and to provide enhanced benefits to employees and beneficiaries.

S. 756
At the request of Mr. GRASSLEY, the name of the Senator from Minnesota (Mr. DAYTON) was added as a cosponsor of S. 756, a bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to extend and modify the credit for electricity produced from biomass, and for other purposes.

S. 805
At the request of Mr. WELLSSTONE, the name of the Senator from Connecticut (Mr. DODD) was added as a cosponsor of S. 805, a bill to amend the Public Health Service Act to provide for research with respect to various forms of muscular dystrophy, including Duchenne, Becker, limb girdle, congenital, facioscapulohumeral, myotonic, oculopharyngeal, distal, and emery-dreifuss muscular dystrophies.

At the request of Mr. ROCKEFELLER, the name of the Senator from Iowa (Mr. HARKIN) was added as a cosponsor of S. 827, a bill to amend the Social Security Act to guarantee comprehensive health care coverage for all children born after 2001.

S. 839
At the request of Mrs. HUTCHISON, the names of the Senator from Hawaii (Mr. INOUYE) and the Senator from Oregon (Mr. SMITH) were added as cosponsors of S. 839, a bill to amend title XVIII of the Social Security Act to increase the amount of payment for inpatient hospital services under the medicare program and to freeze the reduction in payments to hospitals for indirect costs of medical education.

S. 875
At the request of Mr. BREAX, the name of the Senator from Idaho (Mr. CRAPO) was added as a cosponsor of S. 875, a bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to allow a credit against income tax for taxpayers owning certain commercial power takeoff vehicles.

S. 905
At the request of Mr. HARKIN, the names of the Senator from Washington (Mrs. MURRAY) and the Senator from New Mexico (Mr. BINGAMAN) were added as cosponsors of S. 905, a bill to provide incentives for school construction, and for other purposes.

S. 929
At the request of Mr. BREAX, the name of the Senator from Illinois (Mr. DURBIN) was added as a cosponsor of S. 929, a bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to provide a credit against income tax to individuals who rehabilitate historic homes or who are the first purchasers of rehabilitated historic homes for use as a principal residence.

S. 1064
At the request of Mr. KOHL, the name of the Senator from West Virginia (Mr. ROCKEFELLER) and the Senator from Massachusetts (Mr. KERRY) were added as cosponsors of S. 1064, a bill to amend titles XVIII and XIX of the Social Security Act to prevent abuse of recipients of long-term care services under the Medicare and Medicaid programs.

S. 1083
At the request of Ms. MIKULSKI, the name of the Senator from Oregon (Mr. WYDEN) was added as a cosponsor of S. 1083, a bill to amend title XVIII of the Social Security Act to exclude clinical social worker services from coverage under the medicare skilled nursing facility prospective payment system.

At the request of Mr. Hatch, the names of the Senator from Wyoming (Mr. Enzi) and the Senator from Hawaii (Mr. Nunn) were added as cosponsors of S. 1140, a bill to amend chapter 1 of title 9, United States Code, to provide for greater fairness in the arbitration process relating to motor vehicle franchise contracts.

At the request of Mr. Feingold, the name of the Senator from Oregon (Mr. Smith) was added as a cosponsor of S. 1169, a bill to streamline the regulatory processes applicable to home health agencies under the medicare program under title XVIII of the social security act and the medicaid program under title XIX of such act, and for other purposes.

At the request of Mrs. Feinstein, the name of the Senator from Hawaii (Mr. Inouye) was added as a cosponsor of S. 1256, a bill to provide for the reauthorization of the breast cancer research special postage stamp, and for other purposes.

At the request of Mrs. Feinstein, the name of the Senator from Illinois (Mr. Durbin) was added as a cosponsor of S. 1409, a bill to impose sanctions against the PLO or the Palestinian Authority if the President determines that those entities have failed to substantially comply with commitments made to the State of Israel.

At the request of Mrs. Feinstein, the name of the Senator from Arkansas (Mrs. Lincoln) and the Senator from Montana (Mr. Burns) were added as cosponsors of S. 1421, a bill to direct the Federal Aviation Administration to re-implement the sky marshals program within 30 days.

At the request of Mr. Grassley, the name of the Senator from Utah (Mr. Hatch) was added as a cosponsor of S. Res. 139, a resolution designating September 24, 2001, as "Family Day—A Day to Eat Dinner with Your Children.

AMENDMENT NO. 1562

At the request of Mr. Hatch, the name of the Senator from North Carolina (Mr. Helms) was added as a co-sponsor of amendment No. 1562 proposed to H.R. 2500, a bill making appropriations for the Departments of Commerce, Justice, and State, the Judiciary, and related agencies for the fiscal year ending September 30, 2002, and for other purposes.

STATEMENTS ON INTRODUCED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS

By Mr. Daschle (for himself and Mr. Lott.)

S. 1246. A bill making emergency supplemental appropriations for fiscal year 2001, for emergency responses to the terrorist attacks on the United States that occurred on September 11, 2001, and for other purposes; considered and passed.

Mr. Daschle. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the Record.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the Record, as follows:

S. 1246

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the following sums are appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to provide emergency supplemental appropriations for fiscal year 2001, namely:

EXECUTIVE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT AND FUNDS APPROPRIATED TO THE PRESIDENT

EMERGENCY RESPONSE FUND (INCLUDING TRANSFERS OF FUNDS)

For emergency expenses to respond to the terrorist attacks on the United States that occurred on September 11, 2001, to provide assistance to the victims of the attacks, and to deal with other consequences of the attacks, $40,000,000,000, to remain available until expended, including for the costs of (1) providing Federal, State, and local preparedness for mitigating and responding to the attacks, (2) providing support to counter, investigate, or prosecute domestic or international terrorist or other criminal enterprises, (3) improving increased transportation security, (4) repairing public facilities and transportation systems damaged by the attacks, and (5) supporting national security, defense, and foreign policy; Provided further, That these funds may be transferred to any authorized Federal Government activity to meet the purposes of this Act; Provided further, That the Congress designates the entire amount as an emergency requirement pursuant to section 251(b)(2)(A) of the Balanced Budget and Emergency Deficit Control Act of 1985; Provided further, That $40,000,000,000 shall be available only to the extent that an official budget request, that includes designation of the $40,000,000,000 as an emergency requirement as defined in the Balanced Budget and Emergency Deficit Control Act of 1985, is transmitted by the President to the Congress; Provided further, That the President shall consult with all appropriate entities and the minority members of the Committees on Appropriations prior to the transfer of these funds; Provided further, That of the $40,000,000,000 made available herein, $10,000,000,000 shall not be available for transfer to any Department or Agency until 15 days after the Director of the Office of Management and Budget submits to the House and Senate Committees on Appropriations a proposed allocation and plan for use of the funds for that Department or Agency; Provided further, That $20,000,000,000 shall be obligated only when enacted in a subsequent emergency appropriation bill, in response to the terrorist acts on September 11, 2001, Provided further, That the President shall transmit an amended budget request proposing an allocation of funds:

Provided further: That not less than one-half of the $40,000,000,000 shall be for disaster recovery and assistance related to the terrorists acts in New York, Virginia, and Pennsylvania on September 11, 2001, as authorized by law; Provided further: That the Director of Management and Budget shall provide quarterly reports to the Committees on Appropriations on the use of these funds, beginning later than January 2, 2002.

Provided further: That the President shall submit to the Congress as soon as practicable detailed reports to meet any further funding requirements for the purposes specified in this Act.

GENERAL PROVISIONS

SBC. 1. Funds appropriated by this Act, or made available by the transfer of funds in this Act, for intelligence activities are deemed to be specifically authorized by the Congress for purposes of section 504 of the National Security Act of 1947 (50 U.S.C. 414).

SBC. 2. Funds appropriated by this Act, or made available by the transfer of funds in this Act, may be obligated and spent notwithstanding section 10 of Public Law 91-672, section 313 of the Foreign Relations Authorization Act, fiscal years 1994 and 1995, and section 15 of the State Department Basic Authorities Act of 1956. This Act may be cited as the "2001 Emergency Supplemental Appropriations Act for Recovery from and Response to Terrorist Attacks on the United States."

By Mrs. Hutchison: S. 1427. A bill to amend title 10, United States Code, to authorize disability retirement to be granted posthumously for members of the Armed Forces who die in the line of duty while on active duty, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Armed Services. Mrs. Hutchison. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the Record. There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the Record, as follows:

S. 1427

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. POSTHUMOUS RETIREMENT FOR MEMBERS OF THE ARMED FORCES WHO DIE IN THE LINE OF DUTY WHILE ON ACTIVE DUTY.

(a) AUTHORITY.—Chapter 61 of title 10, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following new section:

"1222. Posthumous retirement: retroactive effective date; related elections

"(a) AUTHORITY.—Upon a determination by the Secretary concerned that it is advantageous for the survivors of a member of the armed forces who dies in the line of duty while on active duty, the Secretary concerned may

"(1) posthumously retire the member under section 1201 of this title effective immediately before the member’s death; and

"(2) make for the deceased member any election with respect to survivor benefits under laws referred to in subsection (c) that the deceased member would have been entitled to make upon being retired under that section except that the deceased member may not make an election under section 1446c(1) or 1458 of this title.

"(b) CONSTRUCTION WITH SECTION 1201 REQUIREMENTS.—Nothing in this section modifies the requirements set forth in section

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—SENATE September 14, 2001
1201 of this title regarding determinations or eligibility.

"(e) ADMINISTRATION OF BENEFITS LAWS.—A retirement and election under subsection (a) shall be effective for the purposes of laws administered by the Secretary of Defense or any Secretary concerned and laws administered by the Secretary of Veterans Affairs.

"(d) NONREVIEWABILITY OF DETERMINATIONS.—A determination or election made by a Secretary concerned under subsection (a) is not subject to judicial review.

(b) CLERICAL AMENDMENT.—The table of sections at the beginning of such chapter is amended by adding at the end the following new item:

"1222. Posthumous retirement: retroactive effective date; related elections.

SEC. 2. SURVIVOR BENEFIT PLAN.

(a) SURVIVING SPOUSE ANNUITY.—Section 1448(d) of title 10, United States Code, is amended by striking paragraph (1) and inserting the following:

"(1) SURVIVING SPOUSE ANNUITY.—The Secretary concerned shall pay an annuity under this subchapter to the surviving spouse of a member who—

"(A) dies in the line of duty while on active duty after—

"(i) becoming eligible to receive retired pay;

"(ii) qualifying for retired pay except that the member has not applied for or been granted that pay; or

"(iii) completing 20 years of active service but before the member is eligible to retire as a commissioned officer because the member has not completed 10 years of active commissioned service; or

"(B) dies in the line of duty while on active duty and is posthumously retired under section 1201 of this title pursuant to section 1222 of this title.

(b) DEPENDENT CHILD ANNUITY.—Paragraph (2) of such section is amended by striking "or if the member's surviving spouse subsequently terminates" and inserting "or if the pay- ment of an annuity to the member's surviving spouse under that paragraph subse- quently terminates".

(c) OPERATION OF SURVIVOR ANNUITY.—Section 1451(c) of title 10, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(5) SERVICE MEMBERS POSTHUMOUSLY RETIRED.—In the case of an annuity provided under section 1448(d)(1)(B) of this title, the retired pay to which the member would have been entitled when the member died shall be determined for purposes of paragraph (1) based upon the retired pay base computed for purposes of section 1451(b) or 1407 of this title as if the member had been retired under section 1201 of this title on the date of the member's death.

(d) CLERICAL AMENDMENT.—Section 1451(c)(3) of such title is amended by striking "section 1448(d)(1)(B) or 1448(d)(1)(C)" and inserting "clause (ii) of (3) of section 1448(d)(1)(A)".

SEC. 3. EFFECTIVE DATE AND APPLICABILITY.

This Act and the amendments made by this Act shall take effect on September 10, 2001, and shall apply with respect to deaths of members of the Armed Forces occurring on or after that date.

By Mr. JOHNSON:

S. 1143. A bill to authorize the Secretary of the Treasury to issue War Bonds in support of recovery and re- response efforts relating to the Sep- tember 11, 2001 hijackings and attacks on the Pentagon and the World Trade Center, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs.

Mr. McCONNELL. Mr. President, no American was spared from the horrific and violent assault. On New York and the Pentagon which shocked us all the morning of September 11, 2001. Yet, even as heroic rescue workers sift through the rubble that remains, our nation is coming together in its resolve to respond to these acts. This indefatigable spirit is a shining symbol of America's resilience and pur- pose.

The United States will undoubtedly meet the challenges which we now face. As President Bush has stated, "Now that war has been declared on us, we will lead the world to victory."

Winning the war against terrorism will require the full support of the American public who stand so anxious and so willing to contribute. Therefore, today I am introducing legislation to direct the Department of the Treasury to establish a special category of U.S. savings bonds designated War Bonds.

These War Bonds will give voice to countless Americans who are looking for opportunities to make a difference in this time of need. By investing in a U.S. War Bond, patriotic citizens will have an opportunity to make a direct contribution to the war against the scourge of terrorism and provide much-needed resources for the effort to rescue the injured, rebuild the broken, and retaliate against the enemy.

America's battle against the evil of terrorism will amount to much more than the immediate steps which are being undertaken in the aftermath of Tuesday's carnage. Unlike previous conflicts when Americans had the luxury of recognizing a precise moment of victory, this battle's success will be as- sured only if our shores never again fall victim to terrorist acts. Thus, by definition, this war will be ongoing. As such, it will be essential for our Gov- ernment to generate consistent public support for its actions.

The national campaign to sell U.S. War Bonds will serve not only to generate revenue, but will provide an opportunity to educate all Americans on the complicated nature of the terrorist threat and the resulting comprehensive response to these acts.

I call on all of my colleagues to join me in supporting this legislation.

By Mr. DASCHLE (for himself and Mr. BURNS): S. Res. 23. A joint resolution to au- thorize the use of United States Armed Forces against those responsible for the recent attacks launched against the United States; considered and passed.

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the text of the joint resolution be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

"The Congress of the United States makes the following resolution: That the use of United States Armed Forces against those responsible for the recent attacks launched against the United States be authorized."

There being no objection, the joint resolution was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S.J. Res. 23.
Whereas, on September 11, 2001, acts of treacherous violence were committed against the United States and its citizens; and

Whereas, such acts render it both necessary and appropriate that the United States exercise its rights to self-defense, and to protect United States citizens both at home and abroad; and

Whereas, in light of the threat to the national security and foreign policy of the United States posed by these grave acts of violence, and

Whereas, such acts continue to pose an unusual and extraordinary threat to the national security and foreign policy of the United States,

Whereas, the President has authority under the Constitution to take action to deter and prevent acts of international terrorism against the United States.

Resolved by the Senate and the House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This joint resolution may be cited as the "Authorization for Use of Military Force".

SEC. 2. AUTHORIZATION FOR USE OF UNITED STATES ARMED FORCES.

(a) That the President is authorized to use all necessary and appropriate force against those nations, organizations, or persons he determines planned, authorized, committed, or aided the terrorist attacks that occurred on September 11, 2001, or harbored such organizations or persons, in order to prevent any future acts of international terrorism against the United States by such nations, organizations or persons.

(b) War Powers Resolution Requirements.—

(1) Specific Statutory Authorization.—Consistent with section 8(a)(1) of the War Powers Resolution, the Congress declares that this section is intended to constitute specific statutory authorization within the meaning of section 5(b) of the War Powers Resolution.

(2) Applicability of Other Requirements.—Nothing in this resolution supersedes any requirement of the War Powers Resolution.

DEPARTMENTS OF COMMERCE, JUSTICE AND STATE, THE JUDICIARY, AND RELATED AGENCIES APPROPRIATIONS ACT, 2002

On September 13, 2001, the Senate amended and passed H.R. 2500, as follows:

Resolved, That the bill from the House of Representatives (H.R. 2500) entitled "An Act making appropriations for the Departments of Commerce, Justice, and the Judiciary, and related agencies for the fiscal year ending September 30, 2002, and for other purposes.", do pass with the following amendment:

Strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

That the following sums are appropriated out of the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, for the fiscal year ending September 30, 2002, and for other purposes, namely:

TITLE I—DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE

GENERAL ADMINISTRATION

SALARIES AND EXPENSES

For expenses necessary for the administration of the Department of Justice, $93,433,000, of which not to exceed $3,317,000 is for the Facilities Program 2000, to remain available until expended; Provided, That $2,539,000 shall be available for equipment and $2,393,000 for construction, of which $648,000 is for the new facility at 200 S. Mariani, $1,091,000 is for the Justice Building, $600,000 is for the Justice Prisoner and Alien Transportation System, and $800,000 is for the U.S. Courthouses; Provided further, That $25,000,000 shall be available for the purpose of providing enhanced security at the White House; Provided further, That the sum herein appropriated for the Capitol Police, the U.S. Park Police, and other law enforcement agencies, to remain available until expended; Provided further, That $10,000,000 to meet unforeseen emergencies of a confidential character, to be expended under the direction of, and to be accounted for solely under the certification of, the Attorney General; and for the acquisition, lease, maintenance, or operation of motor vehicles, without regard to the general purchase price limitation for the current fiscal year.

UNITED STATES PAROLE COMMISSION

SALARIES AND EXPENSES

For necessary expenses of the United States Parole Commission as authorized by law, $8,836,000.

LEGAL ACTIVITIES

SALARIES AND EXPENSES, GENERAL LEGAL ACTIVITIES

For expenses necessary for the legal activities of the Department of Justice, not otherwise provided for, including not to exceed $20,000 for expenses of collecting evidence, to be expended under the direction of, and to be accounted for solely under the certification of the Attorney General; General Legal Activities, and "Salaries and Expenses", General Administration, and "Salaries and Expenses", General Administration, of the United States Attorneys, $47,000,000; of which not to exceed $1,000,000 is for the Antitrust Division, the United States Trustee Program, the Executive Office for Immigration Review, and the Community Relations Service, $34,000,000, to remain available until expended.

NARROWBAND COMMUNICATIONS

For the costs of conversion to narrowband communications, including the cost for operation and maintenance of Land Mobile Radio legacy systems, $204,549,000, to remain available until expended.

PORT SECURITY

For expenses necessary for counter-terrorism, counter-narcotics, and other law enforcement activities at United States seaports, including automated capability to transmit fingerprint and iris image data, $22,500,000, to remain available until expended.

LEGAL ACTIVITIES OFFICE AUTOMATION

For necessary office-automation expenses of organizations authorized as "Salaries and Expenses", General Legal Activities, and "Salaries and Expenses", General Administration, and of the United States Attorneys, the United States Marshals Service, and the Antitrust Division, the United States Trustee Program, the Executive Office for Immigration Review, and the Community Relations Service, $27,940,000, to remain available until expended.

SALARIES AND EXPENSES, ANTITRUST DIVISION

For expenses necessary for the enforcement of antitrust and related laws, $30,791,000: Provided, That, notwithstanding any other provisions of law, not to exceed $40,000 of offsetting collections derived from fees collected for premerger notification filings under the Hart-Scott-Rodino Antitrust Improvements Act of 1976 (15 U.S.C. 18a), regardless of the year of payment, may be available for the expenses of the Antitrust Division, the United States Marshals Service, and the Antitrust Division of the Department of Justice associated with premerger notification filings under the Hart-Scott-Rodino Antitrust Improvements Act of 1976 (15 U.S.C. 18a), regardless of the year of payment, shall be retained and used for necessary expenses in this appropriation, and shall remain available until expended: Provided further, That the sum herein appropriated from the general fund shall be reduced as such offsetting collections are received during fiscal year 2002, so as to result in a final fiscal year 2002 appropriation from the general fund estimated at not more than $0.

SALARIES AND EXPENSES, UNITED STATES ATTORNEYS

For necessary expenses of the Offices of the United States Attorneys, including inter-governmental and cooperative agreements, $1,260,353,000; of which not to exceed $2,500,000 shall be available until September 30, 2003, for: (1) training personnel in debt collection; (2) locating debtors and their property; (3) paying the net costs of selling property; and (4) tracking collections from debtors and from the United States; Provided, That $800,000 shall be available only for grants to develop and conduct programs to train State and local law enforcement and prosecution personnel in the investigation of child pornography and child exploitation crimes: Provided further, That the total amount appropriated, not to exceed $8,000 shall be available for official reception and representation expenses: Provided further, That of the amount made available under this heading, $6,000,000 shall be available only to procure, operate, and maintain surveillance equipment to support gun prosecution initiatives in high crime areas: Provided further, That not to exceed $10,000,000 of those funds available for automated prisoner support contracts shall remain available until expended: Provided further, That, notwithstanding any other provision of law, the Attorney General shall transfer to the Director of the Drug Enforcement Administration, $67,691,000, to be derived from the United States Attorneys’ Funds for law enforcement, and to be accounted for solely under the Drug Enforcement Administration: Provided further, That $53,050,000, to be derived from the United States Attorneys’ Funds for law enforcement, and not to exceed $1,000,000 of funds made available to the Department of Justice in this Act may be transferred to the Federal Bureau of Investigation for necessary expenses, mileage, compensation, and per diems of witnesses, for expenses of contracts for the procurement and supervision of expert witnesses, for private counsel expenses, and for per diems in lieu of subsistence, as authorized by law, including advances, $156,145,000, to remain available until expended; of which not to exceed $5,000,000 may be made available for planning, construction, renovations, maintenance, remodeling, and repair of buildings, and the purchase of equipment incident thereto, for protected witness substations, $10,000,000 of which may be made available for the purchase and maintenance of armored vehicles for transportation of protected witnesses; and of which not to exceed $5,000,000 may be made available for the purchase, installation, and maintenance of secure telecommunications equipment and a secure automated information network to store, retrieve, and protect identities and locations of protected witnesses.

SALARIES AND EXPENSES, COMMUNITY RELATIONS SERVICE

For necessary expenses of the Community Relations Service, $9,269,000 and, in addition, up to $1,000,000 of funds made available to the Department of Justice in this Act may be transferred by the Attorney General to this account.

For expenses authorized by 28 U.S.C. §242(c)(1)(A)(ii), (B), (F), and (G), as amended, $22,949,000, to be derived from the Drug Enforcement Administration, including not to exceed $5,000,000 for automated data processing and telecommunications and technical investigative equipment and not to exceed $1,000,000 for undercover operations shall remain available until expended.

DRUG ENFORCEMENT ADMINISTRATION

SAALARIES AND EXPENSES

For necessary expenses of the Drug Enforcement Administration, including not to exceed $70,000 to meet unforeseen emergencies of a confidential character, to be expended under the direction of, and to be accounted for solely under the certificate of, the Attorney General; for expenses for conducting drug education and training programs, including travel and related expenses for participants in such programs and the distribution of items of token value that promote the goals of such programs; purchase of not to exceed 1,477 passenger motor vehicles, of which 1,354 will be for replacement only, for police-type use without regard to the general purchase price limitation for the current fiscal year, and hire of passenger motor vehicles; acquisition, lease, maintenance, and operation of aircraft other than those aircraft exceed $70,000 to meet unforeseen emergencies of a confidential character, to be expended under the direction of, and to be accounted for solely under the certificate of, the Attorney General, $3,425,041,000; of which not to exceed $50,000,000 for automated data processing and telecommunications and technical investigative equipment and not to exceed $1,000,000 for undercover operations shall remain available until expended.

CONSTRUCTION

For necessary expenses to construct or acquire buildings and sites by purchase, or as otherwise authorized by law (including equipment for such buildings); conversion and extension of federally-owned buildings; and preliminary planning and design of projects; $44,074,000, to remain available until expended.

For necessary expenses of the Drug Enforcement Administration, including not to exceed $70,000 to meet unforeseen emergencies of a confidential character, to be expended under the direction of, and to be accounted for solely under the certificate of, the Attorney General; for expenses for conducting drug education and training programs, including travel and related expenses for participants in such programs and the distribution of items of token value that promote the goals of such programs; purchase of not to exceed 1,477 passenger motor vehicles, of which 1,354 will be for replacement only, for police-type use without regard to the general purchase price limitation for the current fiscal year, and hire of passenger motor vehicles; acquisition, lease, maintenance, and operation of aircraft other than those aircraft exceed $70,000 to meet unforeseen emergencies of a confidential character, to be expended under the direction of, and to be accounted for solely under the certificate of, the Attorney General, $3,425,041,000; of which not to exceed $50,000,000 for automated data processing and telecommunications and technical investigative equipment and not to exceed $1,000,000 for undercover operations shall remain available until expended.

For necessary expenses of the Drug Enforcement Administration, including not to exceed $70,000 to meet unforeseen emergencies of a confidential character, to be expended under the direction of, and to be accounted for solely under the certificate of, the Attorney General; for expenses for conducting drug education and training programs, including travel and related expenses for participants in such programs and the distribution of items of token value that promote the goals of such programs; purchase of not to exceed 1,477 passenger motor vehicles, of which 1,354 will be for replacement only, for police-type use without regard to the general purchase price limitation for the current fiscal year, and hire of passenger motor vehicles; acquisition, lease, maintenance, and operation of aircraft other than those aircraft exceed $70,000 to meet unforeseen emergencies of a confidential character, to be expended under the direction of, and to be accounted for solely under the certificate of, the Attorney General, $3,425,041,000; of which not to exceed $50,000,000 for automated data processing and telecommunications and technical investigative equipment and not to exceed $1,000,000 for undercover operations shall remain available until expended.
IMMIGRATION AND NATURALIZATION SERVICE
SALARIES AND EXPENSES

For expenses, not otherwise provided for, necessary for the administration and enforcement of the laws relating to immigration, naturalization, and the parole and revocation of alien status, the Secretary of Homeland Security is authorized to expend $9,380,000 to meet unforeseen emergencies of a confidential character, to be expended under the direction of, and to be accounted for solely under the direction of, the Attorney General for purchase for police-type use (not less than 3,165 passenger motor vehicles, of which not less than 2,211 are for replacement only), without regard to the general purchase price limitation for the current fiscal year, and hire of passenger motor vehicles; acquisition, lease, maintenance and operation of aircraft; research related to immigration enforcement; for protecting and maintaining the integrity of the borders of the United States including, without limitation, equipping, maintaining, and making improvements to the infrastructure; and for the care and housing of Federal detainees held in the joint Immigration and Naturalization Service and United States Marshals Service’s Buffalo Detention Facility, $3,176,037,000, of which $5,500,000 shall be for the Violence Against Women Act Unit of the Eastern Adjudication Service Center to provide for the processing of immigration self-petitions and U Visas. Appropriations made available to the Department of Justice in the Violence Against Women Act of 2000 (Public Law 106–224, as revised Public Law 106–326) and T Visas under the Victims of Trafficking and Violence Protection Act (Public Law 106–359, out of which $500,000 shall be for the Eastern Adjudication Service Center to provide for the production and distribution of training materials to State Department, Justice Department, and Homeland Security. Appropriations made available to the Department of Justice concerning the immigration provisions of the Violence Against Women Act; of which not to exceed $600,000 for research shall remain available until expended; of which not to exceed $10,000,000 shall be available for costs associated with the training program for basic officer training; of which not to exceed $5,000,000 is for payment to detained or released aliens for reimbursement or reembursable agreements with State and local law enforcement agencies while engaged in cooperative activities related to immigration; of which not to exceed $500,000 is for payment to the parolee’s legal representative and reemburse other Federal agencies for the costs associated with the care, maintenance, and repatriation of smuggled illegal aliens: Provided, That none of the funds provided in this heading shall be available to the Immigration and Naturalization Service shall be available to pay any employee overtime pay in an amount in excess of $1,153 per pay period during the calendar year beginning January 1, 2002: Provided, Further, That uniforms may be purchased without regard to the general purchase price limitation for the current fiscal year: Provided, Further, That not to exceed $45,000 shall be available for official reception and representation expenses: Provided further, Provided, That of the amounts provided for:

CONSTRUCTION

For planning, purchase of construction vehicles, construction, renovation, equipping, and maintenance of buildings and facilities necessary for the administration and enforcement of the laws relating to immigration, naturalization, and alien registration, not otherwise provided for, $295,015,000, to remain available until expended, of which $3,000,000 shall be available only to comply with the National Safety and Health Administration programs.

FEDERAL PRISON SYSTEM
SALARIES AND EXPENSES

For expenses necessary for the administration, operation, and maintenance of Federal penal and correctional institutions, including purchase (not to exceed 665, of which 610 are for replacement only) and hire of law enforcement and passenger motor vehicles, and for the provision of technical assistance and advice on corrections related issues to foreign governments, $3,786,228,000, of which $11,534,000 shall be for the operation of a Federal correctional facility at Atwater, California, and of which $13,323,000 shall be available only for the activation of the facility at Honolulu, Hawaii: Provided, That the Assistant Administrator to the Health Resources and Services Administration such amounts as may be necessary for direct expenditures by that Administration for medical relief for inmates of Federal penal and correctional institutions: Provided further, That the Director of the Federal Prison System (FPS), where necessary, may enter into contracts with a fiscal agent/fiscal intermediary claims processor to determine the amounts payable to persons who, on behalf of FPS, furnish health services to individuals committed to the custody of FPS. Provided further, That, of the amounts provided for health services (not to exceed $5,000,000) shall be available for official reception and representation expenses: Provided further, That not to exceed $50,000,000 shall remain available for necessary operations until September 30, 2003: Provided further, That of the amounts provided for:

BUILDINGS AND FACILITIES

For planning, acquisition of sites and construction of new facilities; purchase and acquisition of facilities and remodeling, and equipping of such facilities for penal and correctional purposes; compensation of employees incident thereto, by contract or force account; and constructing, remodeling, and equipping necessary buildings and facilities at existing penal and correctional institutions; and such amounts as are necessary expenses incident thereto, by contract or force account, $899,797,000, to remain available until expended, of which not to exceed $14,000,000 is for expenses in connection with technical assistance and training materials to State Department, Justice Department, and the Violence Against Women Act Unit of the Immigration and Naturalization Service, Construction,” appropriations account, to be available only for the construction of detention facilities: Provided further, That the Secretary of Homeland Security, in consultation with the Attorney General to the Appropriations Committees on Appropriations of the House of Representatives and the Senate in compliance with provisions set forth in section 605 of this Act.

FEDERAL PRISON INDUSTRIES, INCORPORATED

The Federal Prison Industries, Incorporated, hereby authorized to make such expenditures, within the limits of funds and borrowing authority available, and by any means permitted by law, and to make such contracts and commitments, without regard to fiscal year limitations as provided by section 5014 of title 31, United States Code, to carry out the plan set forth in the budget for the current fiscal year for such corporation, including purchase of (not to exceed five for replacement only) and hire of passenger motor vehicles.

LIMITATION ON ADMINISTRATIVE EXPENSES, FEDERAL PRISON INDUSTRIES, INCORPORATED

Not to exceed $3,429,000 of the funds of the corporation shall be available for its administrative expenses, and for services as authorized by 5 U.S.C. 3109, to be computed on an accrual basis to be determined in accordance with the accounting system of such corporation, and suspended, such amounts shall be exclusive of depreciation, payment of claims, and expenditures which the said accounting system requires to be capitalized or charged to cost of commodities acquired or produced, including selling and shipping expenses, and expenses in connection with acquisition, construction, operation, maintenance, improvement, protection, or disposal of facilities and other property belonging to the corporation or in which it has an interest.

OFFICE OF JUSTICE PROGRAMS

JUSTICE ASSISTANCE

For grants, contracts, cooperative agreements, and other assistance authorized by sections 1061 of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968, as amended ("the 1968 Act"), and the Missing Children’s Assistance Act, as amended, including salaries and expenses in connection therewith, and with the Victims of Crime Act of 1984, as amended, $290,738,000, to remain available until expended, as authorized by section 1061 of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968, as amended by Public Law 102–534 (106 Stat. 3524), of which not to exceed $2,000,000 shall be available for administering grants to States and localities to improve election systems and election administration and for making such grants: Provided, That no funds for the purpose of administering such program or for making such grants shall be available until the date of enactment of a statute authorizing the expenditure of funds for such a purpose.

In addition, for grants, cooperative agreements, and other assistance authorized by sections 419 and 821 of the Antiterrorism and Effective Death Penalty Act of 1996, and other counterterrorism programs, $373,900,000, to remain available until expended, of which $9,800,000 is for an aircraft for counterterrorism and other required activities for the City of New York.
CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—SENATE

STATE AND LOCAL LAW ENFORCEMENT ASSISTANCE

For assistance authorized by the Violent Crime Control and Law Enforcement Act of 1994 (Public Law 103–322), as amended ("the 1994 Act"); the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968, as amended ("the 1968 Act"); and the Jacob Wohl Abuse Act of 1998, as amended ("the 1990 Act"); $2,094,990,000 (including amounts for administrative costs, which shall be transferred to and merged with the "Justice Assistance" account), to remain available until expended as follows:

(1) $400,000,000 for Local Law Enforcement Block Grants, pursuant to H.R. 728 as passed by the House of Representatives on May 8, 1997; and the Senate in accordance with section 605 of the 1994 Act.

For necessary expenses, including salaries and related expenses of the Executive Office for Weed and Seed, to implement "Weed and Seed" program activities, $8,925,000, to remain available until expended, for inter-governmental agreements, including grants, cooperative agreements, and contracts, with State and local law enforcement agencies, non-profit organizations, and agencies of local government, engaged in the investigation and prosecution of violent crimes and drug offenses in "Weed and Seed" designated communities, and for other reimbursements or transfers to appropriation accounts of the Department of Justice and other Federal agencies which authorizes the Attorney General to execute the "Weed and Seed" program strategy: Provided, That funds designated by Congress through language in other Department of Justice appropriation accounts for "Weed and Seed" program activities only after the Attorney General notifies the Committee on the response of local law enforcement to defray the costs of indemnification insurance for law enforcement officers, and of the number of law enforcement officers who perform non-administrative public service, Weed and Seed Program Fund.

For activities authorized by the Violent Crime Control and Law Enforcement Act of 1994, Public Law 103–322 ("the 1994 Act") (including administrative costs), $1,049,659,000, to remain available until expended, for inter-governmental agreements, including grants, cooperative agreements, and contracts, with State and local law enforcement agencies, non-profit organizations, and agencies of local government, engaged in the investigation and prosecution of violent crimes and drug offenses in "Weed and Seed" designated communities, and for other reimbursements or transfers to appropriation accounts of the Department of Justice and other Federal agencies which authorizes the Attorney General to execute the "Weed and Seed" program strategy: Provided, That funds designated by Congress through language in other Department of Justice appropriation accounts for "Weed and Seed" program activities only after the Attorney General notifies the Committee on the response of local law enforcement to defray the costs of indemnification insurance for law enforcement officers, and of the number of law enforcement officers who perform non-administrative public service, Weed and Seed Program Fund.

Provided, that funds made available under this title to increase the number of law enforcement agencies of local government will achieve a net gain in the number of law enforcement officers who perform non-administrative public service, Weed and Seed Program Fund.

Provided, That funds made available under this title to increase the number of law enforcement officers who perform non-administrative public service, Weed and Seed Program Fund.

Provided, that funds made available under this title to increase the number of law enforcement officers who perform non-administrative public service, Weed and Seed Program Fund.

Provided, that funds made available under this title to increase the number of law enforcement officers who perform non-administrative public service, Weed and Seed Program Fund.

Provided, that funds made available under this title to increase the number of law enforcement officers who perform non-administrative public service, Weed and Seed Program Fund.

Provided, that funds made available under this title to increase the number of law enforcement officers who perform non-administrative public service, Weed and Seed Program Fund.

Provided, that funds made available under this title to increase the number of law enforcement officers who perform non-administrative public service, Weed and Seed Program Fund.

Provided, that funds made available under this title to increase the number of law enforcement officers who perform non-administrative public service, Weed and Seed Program Fund.

Provided, that funds made available under this title to increase the number of law enforcement officers who perform non-administrative public service, Weed and Seed Program Fund.

Provided, that funds made available under this title to increase the number of law enforcement officers who perform non-administrative public service, Weed and Seed Program Fund.

Provided, that funds made available under this title to increase the number of law enforcement officers who perform non-administrative public service, Weed and Seed Program Fund.

Provided, that funds made available under this title to increase the number of law enforcement officers who perform non-administrative public service, Weed and Seed Program Fund.

Provided, that funds made available under this title to increase the number of law enforcement officers who perform non-administrative public service, Weed and Seed Program Fund.

Provided, that funds made available under this title to increase the number of law enforcement officers who perform non-administrative public service, Weed and Seed Program Fund.

Provided, that funds made available under this title to increase the number of law enforcement officers who perform non-administrative public service, Weed and Seed Program Fund.

Provided, that funds made available under this title to increase the number of law enforcement officers who perform non-administrative public service, Weed and Seed Program Fund.

Provided, that funds made available under this title to increase the number of law enforcement officers who perform non-administrative public service, Weed and Seed Program Fund.

Provided, that funds made available under this title to increase the number of law enforcement officers who perform non-administrative public service, Weed and Seed Program Fund.

Provided, that funds made available under this title to increase the number of law enforcement officers who perform non-administrative public service, Weed and Seed Program Fund.

Provided, that funds made available under this title to increase the number of law enforcement officers who perform non-administrative public service, Weed and Seed Program Fund.

Provided, that funds made available under this title to increase the number of law enforcement officers who perform non-administrative public service, Weed and Seed Program Fund.

Provided, that funds made available under this title to increase the number of law enforcement officers who perform non-administrative public service, Weed and Seed Program Fund.

Provided, that funds made available under this title to increase the number of law enforcement officers who perform non-administrative public service, Weed and Seed Program Fund.

Provided, that funds made available under this title to increase the number of law enforcement officers who perform non-administrative public service, Weed and Seed Program Fund.

Provided, that funds made available under this title to increase the number of law enforcement officers who perform non-administrative public service, Weed and Seed Program Fund.

Provided, that funds made available under this title to increase the number of law enforcement officers who perform non-administrative public service, Weed and Seed Program Fund.

Provided, that funds made available under this title to increase the number of law enforcement officers who perform non-administrative public service, Weed and Seed Program Fund.

Provided, that funds made available under this title to increase the number of law enforcement officers who perform non-administrative public service, Weed and Seed Program Fund.

Provided, that funds made available under this title to increase the number of law enforcement officers who perform non-administrative public service, Weed and Seed Program Fund.

Provided, that funds made available under this title to increase the number of law enforcement officers who perform non-administrative public service, Weed and Seed Program Fund.

Provided, that funds made available under this title to increase the number of law enforcement officers who perform non-administrative public service, Weed and Seed Program Fund.

Provided, that funds made available under this title to increase the number of law enforcement officers who perform non-administrative public service, Weed and Seed Program Fund.

Provided, that funds made available under this title to increase the number of law enforcement officers who perform non-administrative public service, Weed and Seed Program Fund.

Provided, that funds made available under this title to increase the number of law enforcement officers who perform non-administrative public service, Weed and Seed Program Fund.

Provided, that funds made available under this title to increase the number of law enforcement officers who perform non-administrative public service, Weed and Seed Program Fund.

Provided, that funds made available under this title to increase the number of law enforcement officers who perform non-administrative public service, Weed and Seed Program Fund.

Provided, that funds made available under this title to increase the number of law enforcement officers who perform non-administrative public service, Weed and Seed Program Fund.

Provided, that funds made available under this title to increase the number of law enforcement officers who perform non-administrative public service, Weed and Seed Program Fund.

Provided, that funds made available under this title to increase the number of law enforcement officers who perform non-administrative public service, Weed and Seed Program Fund.

Provided, that funds made available under this title to increase the number of law enforcement officers who perform non-administrative public service, Weed and Seed Program Fund.

Provided, that funds made available under this title to increase the number of law enforcement officers who perform non-administrative public service, Weed and Seed Program Fund.

Provided, that funds made available under this title to increase the number of law enforcement officers who perform non-administrative public service, Weed and Seed Program Fund.

Provided, that funds made available under this title to increase the number of law enforcement officers who perform non-administrative public service, Weed and Seed Program Fund.

Provided, that funds made available under this title to increase the number of law enforcement officers who perform non-administrative public service, Weed and Seed Program Fund.

Provided, that funds made available under this title to increase the number of law enforcement officers who perform non-administrative public service, Weed and Seed Program Fund.

Provided, that funds made available under this title to increase the number of law enforcement officers who perform non-administrative public service, Weed and Seed Program Fund.

Provided, that funds made available under this title to increase the number of law enforcement officers who perform non-administrative public service, Weed and Seed Program Fund.

Provided, that funds made available under this title to increase the number of law enforcement officers who perform non-administrative public service, Weed and Seed Program Fund.

Provided, that funds made available under this title to increase the number of law enforcement officers who perform non-administrative public service, Weed and Seed Program Fund.

Provided, that funds made available under this title to increase the number of law enforcement officers who perform non-administrative public service, Weed and Seed Program Fund.
ARMOR VESTS PURSUANT TO SECTION 2501 OF PART Y OF THE OMNIBUS CRIME CONTROL AND SAFE STREETS ACT OF 1990

For grants, contracts, cooperative agreements, and other assistance authorized by the Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention Act of 1974, subpart D of part B (relating to Technical Assistance Activities), and part G (relating to Mentoring) of title II of the Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention Act of 1974, and to carry out the Attorney General's Program that in the case of a law enforcement-, or mission-related consideration mitigates a person from the prohibition of the sale of alcoholic beverages to minors for local delinquency prevention programs, and not to exceed 5 percent of any assistance made available in this Act, may be transferred between such appropriations, but no such appropriation, except as otherwise specifically provided, shall be increased by more than 10 percent of each such amount may be used for research, evaluation, and statistics activities designed to benefit the programs or activities authorized under this part or title, and not more than 2 percent of each such amount may be used for training and technical assistance activities designed to benefit the programs or activities authorized under that part or title.

For grants, contracts, cooperative agreements, and other assistance authorized by the Victims of Child Abuse Act of 1990, as amended, shall not apply to non-hiring grants made pursuant to part Q of title I thereof (42 U.S.C. 17072 d.d. et seq.).

For grants, contracts, cooperative agreements, and other assistance authorized by the Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention Act of 1974, not to exceed 5 percent of any assistance made available in this Act, may be transferred between such appropriations, but no such appropriation, except as otherwise specifically provided, shall be increased by more than 10 percent of each such amount may be used for research, evaluation, and statistics activities designed to benefit the programs or activities authorized under that part or title, and not more than 2 percent of each such amount may be used for training and technical assistance activities designed to benefit the programs or activities authorized under that part or title.

For grants, contracts, cooperative agreements, and other assistance authorized by the Victims of Child Abuse Act of 1990, as amended, shall not apply to non-hiring grants made pursuant to part Q of title I thereof (42 U.S.C. 17072 d.d. et seq.).

SEC. 104. Not to exceed 5 percent of any assistance made available in this Act, may be transferred between such appropriations, but no such appropriation, except as otherwise specifically provided, shall be increased by more than 10 percent of each such amount may be used for research, evaluation, and statistics activities designed to benefit the programs or activities authorized under that part or title, and not more than 2 percent of each such amount may be used for training and technical assistance activities designed to benefit the programs or activities authorized under that part or title.

SEC. 105. Section 286(q)(1)(A) of the Immigration and Nationality Act of 1952, as amended, is repealed.

SEC. 106. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, not to exceed $10,000,000 of the funds made available in this Act may be used to establish and publicize a program under which public or private organizations, or other entities, may be paid, which shall not be subject to spending limitations contained in sections 3059 and 3072 of title 18, United States Code: Provided, That any amount of $10,000,000 or more, up to a maximum of $2,000,000, may not be made without the personal approval of the President or the Attorney General and such approval may not be delegated.
against obtaining maintenance or repair services from private sector entities for equipment under warranton. The Attorney General is authorized to seek reimbursement from such entities for warranton work performed at Department of Justice facilities and, notwithstanding any other provision of law, to credit any payment made for such work to any appropriation charged therefor.

SEC. 108. Section 280e(e)(1) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (8 U.S.C. 1356(e)(1)) is amended to read as follows:

"(1)(A) Except as provided in subparagraph (B), the Attorney General is authorized to charge and collect the amount of $3.50 for each individual with respect to whom immigra­tion inspection services or preinspection services are provided in connection with the arrival in the United States of such individual as a pas­senger on a commercial vessel, if the passenger's journey originated in any of the following:

"(i) Mexico.

"(ii) Cuba.

"(iii) A State, territory, or possession of the United States.

"(iv) Any adjacent island (within the meaning of section 1001(b)(5)).

"(B) The authority of subparagraph (A) does not apply to immigration inspection services or preinspection services provided at a designated port of entry in connection with the arrival of a passenger by means of a Great Lakes inter­national ferry, or by means of any vessel that transmits the Great Lakes or its connecting waterways, if the ferry or other vessel operates on a regular schedule."

SEC. 109. Section 245(i) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (8 U.S.C. 1255(i)) is amended—

(1) in paragraph (1), by amending the first sentence to read as follows: "Notwithstanding the provisions of subsections (a) and (c) of this section, aliens lawfully present in the United States who—

"(A) entered the United States without inspec­tion; or

"(B) is within one of the classes enumerated in subsection (c) of this section, may apply to the Attorney General for the adjustment of his or her status to that of an alien lawfully admit­ted for permanent residence; and—

(2) by amending paragraph (3)(B) to read as follows:

"(B) One-half of any remaining portion of such fees shall be deposited by the Attorney General into the Immigration Examination Fee Account established under section 280(m), and one-half of any remaining portion of such fees shall be deposited by the Attorney General into the Breached Bond/Detention Fund established under section 280(v)."

SEC. 110. Section 1402(d)(3) of the Victims of Crime Act of 1984 (42 U.S.C. 10601(d)(3)), is amended by striking the period at the end and inserting "and for a Victim Notification Sys­tem."

This title may be cited as the "Department of Justice Appropriations Act, 2002".

TITLE II—DEPARTMENT OF COMMERCE AND RELATED AGENCIES

TRADE AND INFRASTRUCTURE DEVELOPMENT RELATED AGENCIES

OFFICE OF THE UNITED STATES TRADE REPRESENTATIVE

SALARIES AND EXPENSES

For necessary expenses of the Office of the United States Trade Representative, including the hire of passenger motor vehicles and employ­ment of experts and consultants as authorized by 5 U.S.C. 3109, $13,080,000, of which $90,000 shall remain available until expended: Provided, That not to exceed $98,000 shall be available for official representation and reception expenses.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE COMMISSION

SALARIES AND EXPENSES

For necessary expenses of the International Trade Commission, including hire of passenger motor vehicles, and services as authorized by 5 U.S.C. 3109, and not to exceed $2,500 for official representation expenses: $51,140,000, to remain available until expended.

DEPARTMENT OF COMMERCE

INTERNATIONAL TRADE ADMINISTRATION

OPERATIONS AND ADMINISTRATION

For necessary expenses for international trade activities of the Department of Commerce provided for by law, and engaging in trade pro­motion activities abroad, including expenses of grants and cooperative agreements for the pur­pose of promoting exports of United States firms without regard to 44 U.S.C. 3702 and 3703; full medical coverage for dependent members of imme­diate families of employees stationed overseas; travel and transportation of employees of the United States and Foreign Commercial Service between two points abroad, without regard to 49 U.S.C. 1071; employment of Amer­i­cans and aliens by contract for services; rental of space abroad for periods not exceeding 10 years, and expenses of alteration, repair, or improvement; purchase or construction of temporary demount­able exhibition structures for use abroad; pay­ment of tort claims, in the manner authorized in the first paragraph of 28 U.S.C. 2672 when such claims arise in foreign countries; not to exceed $327,000 for official representation expenses abroad; purchase of passenger motor vehicles for official use abroad, not to exceed $30,000 per ve­hicle; obtaining insurance for motor vehicles; and rental of ties lines, $347,090,000, to re­main available until expended.

SALARIES AND EXPENSES

For necessary expenses of administering the economic development assistance programs as provided for by law, $30,557,000: Provided, That these funds may be used to monitor projects ap­proved pursuant to title I of the Public Works Employment Act of 1976, as amended, title II of the Trade Act of 1974, as amended, and the Community Emergency Drought Relief Act of 1977.

MINORITY BUSINESS DEVELOPMENT AGENCY

MINORITY BUSINESS DEVELOPMENT

For necessary expenses of the Department of Commerce in fostering, promoting, and develop­ing minority business enterprise, including ex­penses of grants, contracts, and other agree­ments with public or private organizations, $28,381,000.

ECONOMIC AND INFRASTRUCTURE DEVELOPMENT

ECONOMIC AND STATISTICAL ANALYSIS

SALARIES AND EXPENSES

For necessary expenses for collecting, compil­ing, analyzing, preparing, and publishing statistics, provided for by law, $168,561,000.

PERIODIC CENSUSES AND PROGRAMS

For necessary expenses for collection and publish­ing statistics for periodic censuses and programs provided for by law, $348,529,000, to remain available until expended.

MINORITY BUSINESS DEVELOPMENT AGENCY

MINORITY BUSINESS DEVELOPMENT

For necessary expenses of the Department of Commerce in fostering, promoting, and develop­ing minority business enterprise, including ex­penses of grants, contracts, and other agree­ments with public or private organizations, $28,381,000.

ECONOMIC AND INFRASTRUCTURE DEVELOPMENT

ECONOMIC AND STATISTICAL ANALYSIS

SALARIES AND EXPENSES

For necessary expenses for collecting, compil­ing, analyzing, preparing, and publishing statistics, provided for by law, $168,561,000.
CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—SENATE
September 14, 2001

For grants authorized by section 391 of the Communications Act of 1934, as amended, $43,466,000, to remain available until expended as authorized by section 391 of the Act, as amended: Provided, That not to exceed $2,358,000 shall be available for program administration as authorized by section 391 of the Act: Provided further, That notwithstanding the provisions of section 391 of the Act, the prior year unobligated balances may be available for grants for projects which applications have been submitted and approved during any fiscal year.

INFORMATION INFRASTRUCTURE GRANTS
For grants authorized by section 393 of the Communications Act of 1934, as amended, $15,503,000, to remain available until expended as authorized by section 391 of the Act, as amended: Provided, That not to exceed $3,097,000 shall be available for program administration and other support activities as authorized by section 391: Provided further, That, of the funds appropriated herein, not to exceed 5 percent may be available for telecommunications research activities for projects related directly to the development of a national information infrastructure: Provided further, That, notwithstanding any other provision of law, including section 254(h) of the Act, these funds may be used for the planning and construction of telecommunications networks for the provision of educational, cultural, health care, public information, public safety, or other social services: Provided further, That notwithstanding any other provision of law, no entity that receives telecommunications services at preferential rates under section 254(h) of the Act (47 U.S.C. 254(h)) or receives assistance under the regional telecommunications services at preferential rates shall not be augmented by personnel details, shall not be subject to the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968 (42 U.S.C. 3796) may use funds under this heading to cover any costs of the entity that would otherwise be covered by such preferential rates or such assistance, as the case may be.

PATENT AND TRADEMARK OFFICE
SALES AND EXPENSES
For necessary expenses of the United States Patent and Trademark Office provided for by law, including defense of suits instituted against the Under Secretary of Commerce for Intellectual Property and Director of the United States Patent and Trademark Office, $856,701,000, to remain available until expended, which amount shall be derived from offsetting collections; $111,360,000, to remain available until expended, of which $2,000,000 shall be for the Patent and Trademark Office Post Office, $856,701,000, to remain available until expended, which amount shall be derived from offsetting collections; $111,360,000, to remain available until expended, of which $2,000,000 shall be for the Patent and Trademark Office Post Office, $856,701,000, to remain available until expended, of which $2,000,000 shall be for the Patent and Trademark Office Post Office, $856,701,000, to remain available until expended, of which $2,000,000 shall be for the Patent and Trademark Office Post Office, $856,701,000, to remain available until expended, of which $2,000,000 shall be for the Patent and Trademark Office Post Office, $856,701,000, to remain available until expended, of which $2,000,000 shall be for the Patent and Trademark Office Post Office, $856,701,000, to remain available until expended, of which $2,000,000 shall be for the Patent and Trademark Office Post Office, $856,701,000, to remain available until expended, of which $2,000,000 shall be for the Patent and Trademark Office Post Office, $856,701,000, to remain available until expended, of which $2,000,000 shall be for the Patent and Trademark Office Post Office, $856,701,000, to remain available until expended, of which $2,000,000 shall be for the Patent and Trademark Office Post Office, $856,701,000, to remain available until expended, of which $2,000,000 shall be for the Patent and Trademark Office Post Office, $856,701,000, to remain available until expended, of which $2,000,000 shall be for the Patent and Trademark Office Post Office, $856,701,000, to remain available until expended, of which $2,000,000 shall be for the Patent and Trademark Office Post Office, $856,701,000, to remain available until expended, of which $2,000,000 shall be for the Patent and Trademark Office Post Office, $856,701,000, to remain available until expended, of which $2,000,000 shall be for the Patent and Trademark Office Post Office, $856,701,000, to remain available until expended, of which $2,000,000 shall be for the Patent and Trademark Office Post Office, $856,701,000, to remain available until expended, of which $2,000,000 shall be for the Patent and Trademark Office Post Office, $856,701,000, to remain available until expended, of which $2,000,000 shall be for the Patent and Trademark Office Post Office, $856,701,000, to remain available until expended, of which $2,000,000 shall be for the Patent and Trademark Office Post Office, $856,701,000, to remain available until expended, of which $2,000,000 shall be for the Patent and Trademark Office Post Office, $856,701,000, to remain available until expended, of which $2,000,000 shall be for the Patent and Trademark Office Post Office, $856,701,000, to remain available until expended, of which $2,000,000 shall be for the Patent and Trademark Office Post Office, $856,701,000, to remain available until expended, of which $2,000,000 shall be for the Patent and Trademark Office Post Office, $856,701,000, to remain available until expended, of which $2,000,000 shall be for the Patent and Trademark Office Post Office, $856,701,000, to remain available until expended, of which $2,000,000 shall be for the Patent and Trademark Office Post Office, $856,701,000, to remain available until expended, of which $2,000,000 shall be for the Patent and Trademark Office Post Office, $856,701,000, to remain available until exped...
In addition, there is hereby established the Business Management Fund of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, which shall be available without fiscal year limitation for expense and equipment necessary for the maintenance and operations of such services and programs of the Administrator in connection with the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration. Provided further, That a separate schedule of expenditures and reimbursements, and a statement of the current assets and liabilities of the Business Management Fund as of the close of the fiscal year, shall be prepared each year and submitted to Congress: Provided further, That notwithstanding standing 31 U.S.C. 3302, the Business Management Fund may be credited with advances and reimbursements from applicable appropriations of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration and from funds of other agencies or entities which shall be available without fiscal year limitation: Provided further, That any inventories, equipment, systems, real property and other assets over $25,000, pertaining to the services to be provided by the Business Management Fund shall be available without fiscal year limitation: Provided further, That none of the funds provided in this Act or any other Act under the heading ‘National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, Procurement, Acquisition and Construction’ shall be used to fund the General Services Administration’s standard construction and tenant build-out costs of a facility at the Suitland Federal Center.

PACIFIC COASTAL SALMON RECOVERY

For necessary expenses to carry out the conservation activities defined in section 259(c)(4)(E) of the Endangered Species and Threatened Species Act, and section 102 of the Pacific Salmon Treaty Implementation, $137,940,000, to remain available until expended.

DEPARTMENTAL MANAGEMENT

SALARIES AND EXPENSES

For expenses necessary to carry out the provisions of title IV of Public Law 55–372, not to exceed $952,000, to be derived from receipts collected pursuant to that Act, to remain available until expended.

FISHERIES CONTINGENCY FUND

For carrying out the provisions of title IV of Public Law 55–372, not to exceed $952,000, to be derived from receipts collected pursuant to that Act, to remain available until expended.

FOREIGN FISHING OBSERVER FUND

For expenses necessary to carry out the provisions of the Magnuson Fishery Conservation and Management Act of 1976 (Public Law 94–205), and the Fishery Promotion Act of 1976 (Public Law 94–276), to be derived from payments received in connection with such arrangements, to remain available until expended.

FISHERIES FINANCE PROGRAM ACCOUNT

For the cost of direct loans, $287,000, as authorized by the Merchant Marine Act of 1936, as amended: Provided, That the cost of modifying such loans, shall be as defined in section 302 of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974: Provided further, That none of the funds made available under this heading may be used for direct loans for any new fishing vessel that will increase the harvesting capacity in any United States fishery.

DEPARTMENTAL MANAGEMENT

SALARIES AND EXPENSES

For expenses necessary for the departmental management of the Department of Commerce provided for by law, including not to exceed $1,000,000 for official reception and representation expenses of $722,000, to remain available until expended.

OFFICE OF INSPECTOR GENERAL

GENERAL PROVISIONS—DEPARTMENT OF COMMERCE

SEC. 201. During the current fiscal year, applicable appropriations and funds made available to the Department of Commerce by this Act shall be available for the activities specified in the Appropriations Act of October 26, 1984, as in effect at the time and in the manner prescribed by the Act, and, notwithstanding 31 U.S.C. 3324, may be used for advanced payments not otherwise authorized: Provided, That any amounts made available pursuant to such authorities designated by the Secretary of Commerce that such payments are in the public interest.

SEC. 202. During the current fiscal year, any allotments of funds made available by this Act as salaries and expenses shall be available for hire of passenger motor vehicles as authorized by 31 U.S.C. 1343 and 1944, services as authorized by 5 U.S.C. 3109; and uniforms or allowances therefore, as authorized by law (5 U.S.C. 5910–5902).

SEC. 204. Not to exceed 5 percent of any appropriation made available for the current fiscal year for the Department of Commerce by this Act may be transferred between such appropriations, but no such appropriation shall be increased by more than 10 percent by any such transfer provided: That use of funds to carry out this section shall be treated as a reprogramming of funds under section 605 of this Act and shall not be available for obligation or expendi-

SEC. 205. Any costs incurred by a department or agency funded under this title resulting from personnel actions taken in response to funding reductions included in this title or from actions taken for the care and protection of loan collateral or grant property shall be absorbed within the budgetary resources available for such department or agency: Provided, That the authority to transfer funds between appropriations accounts may be transferred between such accounts provided for in addition in authority included elsewhere in this Act: Provided further, That use of funds to carry out this section shall be treated as a reprogramming of funds under section 605 of this Act and shall not be available for obligation or expenditure except in compliance with the procedures set forth in that section.

SEC. 206. The Secretary of Commerce may award contracts for hydrographic, geodetic, and photogrammetric surveying and mapping services in accordance with the Federal Property and Administrative Services Act of 1949 (40 U.S.C. 541 et seq.).
the total annual income to such fund may be retained in the fund for fiscal year 2002 and each fiscal year thereafter and remain available for obligation and expenditure, to be used for the acquisition of capital equipment, and for the improvement and implementation of departmental financial management, and for support systems of the Department of Commerce to incur costs not previously specified in the report under paragraph (1), the disbursement may not be made until after the date on which such bureau or organization submitted to the Committees on Appropriations of the Senate and House of Representatives a Memorandum of Agreement providing for such bureau or organization to incur costs. Such agreement may not be made until 15 days after the date on which the Appropriations Committees receive the agreement.

§ 390. (4) Any modification of a proposed disbursement from the Working Capital Fund in fiscal year 2002 or any fiscal year thereafter may not exceed $117,000,000.

§ 390. (b) All transfers of funds, functions, or personnel made from the Working Capital Fund in fiscal year 2002 and any fiscal year thereafter shall be subject to section 605.

§ 390. (d)(1) Not later than December 15, 2001, the Secretary of Commerce shall submit to the Committees on Appropriations of the Senate and House of Representatives a report setting forth the proposed disbursements from the Working Capital Fund during fiscal year 2002.

§ 390. (2) If the proposed disbursements in the report under paragraph (1)—

(a) not more than $7,000,000 of the proposed disbursements may be for the Commerce Administrative Management System or support for the Commerce Administrative Management System Support Center; and

(b) none of the proposed disbursements for that System may be from or attributable to the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration.

§ 390. (2) Disbursements from the Working Capital Fund in fiscal year 2002 may not be made until 15 days after the date on which the report is submitted under paragraph (1).

§ 390. (4) Any modification of a proposed disbursement from the Working Capital Fund previously specified in the report under paragraph (1) shall be treated as a reprogramming of funds to which section 605 applies, without regard to the amount of the modification or the purpose of the disbursement, as so modified.

§ 390. (5)(A) If a disbursement from the Working Capital Fund in fiscal year 2002 will require any bureau or organization in the Department of Commerce to incur costs not previously specified in the report under paragraph (1), the disbursement may not be made until 15 days after the date on which such bureau or organization submits to the Committees on Appropriations of the United States, justices and judges retired from office or from regular active service, judges of the United States Courts of Appeals, bankruptcy judges, magistrate judges, and all other officers and employees of the Federal Judiciary not otherwise specifically provided for, shall be reimbursed for court security costs authorized by law, $3,559,012,000 (including the purchase of firearms and ammunition; of which not to exceed $27,817,000 shall remain available until expended for the operation of the Federal Organ Procurement Network, and for the purchase of firearms and ammunition); of which not to exceed $117,000,000 may be made available until September 30, 2001, for the operation of the Federal Organ Procurement Network, and for the purchase of firearms and ammunition; of which not to exceed $27,817,000 shall remain available until expended for the operation of the Federal Organ Procurement Network, and for the purchase of firearms and ammunition).

§ 399. (4) Any modification of a proposed disbursement from the Working Capital Fund in fiscal year 2002 may not be made until 15 days after the date on which the report is submitted under paragraph (1).

§ 399. (b) All transfers of funds, functions, or personnel made from the Working Capital Fund in fiscal year 2002 and any fiscal year thereafter shall be subject to section 605.

§ 399. (d)(1) Not later than December 15, 2001, the Secretary of Commerce shall submit to the Committees on Appropriations of the Senate and House of Representatives a report setting forth the proposed disbursements from the Working Capital Fund during fiscal year 2002.

§ 399. (2) If the proposed disbursements in the report under paragraph (1)—

(a) not more than $7,000,000 of the proposed disbursements may be for the Commerce Administrative Management System or support for the Commerce Administrative Management System Support Center; and

(b) none of the proposed disbursements for that System may be from or attributable to the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration.

§ 399. (2) Disbursements from the Working Capital Fund in fiscal year 2002 may not be made until 15 days after the date on which the report is submitted under paragraph (1).

§ 399. (4) Any modification of a proposed disbursement from the Working Capital Fund previously specified in the report under paragraph (1) shall be treated as a reprogramming of funds to which section 605 applies, without regard to the amount of the modification or the purpose of the disbursement, as so modified.

§ 399. (5)(A) If a disbursement from the Working Capital Fund in fiscal year 2002 will require any bureau or organization in the Department of Commerce to incur costs not previously specified in the report under paragraph (1), the disbursement may not be made until 15 days after the date on which such bureau or organization submits to the Committees on Appropriations of the United States, justices and judges retired from office or from regular active service, judges of the United States Courts of Appeals, bankruptcy judges, magistrate judges, and all other officers and employees of the Federal Judiciary not otherwise specifically provided for, shall be reimbursed for court security costs authorized by law, $3,559,012,000 (including the purchase of firearms and ammunition; of which not to exceed $27,817,000 shall remain available until expended for the operation of the Federal Organ Procurement Network, and for the purchase of firearms and ammunition).
be responsible for administering the Judicial Facility Security Program consistent with standards or criteria prepared by the Director of the Office of the United States Courts and the Attorney General: Provided, That, of the amount made available under this heading, $1,500,000 shall remain available until expended, shall be transferred to, and merged with, funds in the

"Narrowband Communications" appropriations account in title 1 of this Act, to serve authorized by the Department of Justice Wireless Management Office and to be available only for the conversion to narrowband communications and for the operations and maintenance of all related systems.

ADMINISTRATIVE OFFICE OF THE UNITED STATES COURTS

SALARIES AND EXPENSES

For necessary expenses of the Administrative

Office of the United States Courts as authorized by law, including employment of seven clericals, $254,170,000: Provided, That, of this sum, any fees received in excess of $335,000,000 derived from fees collected under the authority of section 933 of this Act, shall be available only for the conversion to narrowband communications and for the operations and maintenance of all related systems.

SEC. 304. Appropriations and authorities

made available under this heading, $6,000,000 to remain available until expended, shall be transferred to, and merged with, funds in the

"Narrowband Communications" appropriations

account in title 1 of this Act, to serve authorized by the Department of Justice Wireless Management Office and to be available only for the conversion to narrowband communications and for the operations and maintenance of all related systems.

JUDICIAL RETIREMENT FUNDS

PAYMENT TO JUDICARY TRUST FUNDS

For payment to the Judicial Officers' Retirement Fund, as authorized by 28 U.S.C. 377(e),

$8,700,000; to the Judicial Survivors' Annuities

Fund, as authorized by 28 U.S.C. 377(c), $8,400,000;

and to the United States Court of Federal Claims' Judges' Retirement Fund, as authorized by 28 U.S.C. 178(b), $1,900,000.

UNITED STATES SENTENCING COMMISSION

SALARIES AND EXPENSES

For the salaries and expenses necessary to carry out the provisions of chapter 58 of title 28, United States Code, $11,327,000, of which not to exceed

$1,000,000 is authorized for official reception and representation expenses.

GENERAL PROVISIONS—THE JUDICIARY

SBC. 301. Appropriations and authorities made available in this title which are available for salaries and expenses shall be available for services

as authorized by 5 U.S.C. 3106.

SBC. 302. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the salaries and expenses appropriation for district courts, courts of appeals, and other judicial services shall be available for official reception and representation expenses of the Judicial Conference of the United States: Provided,

That any fees received in excess of $335,000,000 in fiscal year 2002 shall not be available for obligation and shall be returned to the General Fund of the Treasury: Provided further, That notwithstanding any other provision of law, a citizen of the United States approved by the Department of

State to serve as Deputy Director General of the World Intellectual Property Organization, shall,

while serving in such position, be deemed an employee in a foreign area within the meaning of 5 U.S.C. Section 5923, and qualify for a living quarters allowance as authorized by 5 U.S.C.

5923(c): Provided further, That a citizen of the United States approved by the Department of State to serve as Deputy Director General of the World Intellectual Property Organization, shall,

while serving in such position, be deemed an employee approved for transfer to an international organization within the meaning of 5

U.S.C. Section 5923, and eligible to continue participating in the retirement, health benefit, group life insurance, and other benefit programs as provided in this section: Provided further, That advances for services authorized by 22 U.S.C.

3620(c) may be credited to this account, remain available until expended for such services: Provided further, That no funds may be spent or expended for the export of satellites of United States origin (including commercial satellites and satellite components) to the People's Republic of China, unless, at least 15 days in advance, the Committees on Appropriations of the House of Representatives and the Senate are notified of such proposed action: Provided further, That the amount made available under this heading,

$5,000,000 shall be available only for the reimbursement costs incurred by the State of Hawaii for security expenses relating to the May 2001

APEC Conference: Provided further, That the amount made available under this heading,

$4,519,000 shall only be available to implement the 1998 Pacific Salmon Treaty Agreement, of which $20,000,000 shall be deposited in the Northern Boundary and Transboundary Rivers Restoration and Enhancement Fund, of which $20,000,000 shall be available only for the conversion to narrowband communications and for the operations and maintenance of all related systems.

CITIZEN JUDGES' RETIREMENT FUND

FEDERAL JUDICIAL CENTER

SALARIES AND EXPENSES

For necessary expenses of the Federal Judicial

Center, as authorized by Public Law 90–219,

$19,742,000, of which $1,800,000 shall remain available through September 30, 2002, to provide education and training to Federal court personnel; and of which not to exceed $1,000 is authorized for official reception and representation expenses.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE—GENERAL PROVISIONS

For necessary expenses of the Department of State and the Foreign Service not otherwise provided for, including employment without regard to civil service and classification laws, of persons on a temporary basis (not to exceed $700,000 of this appropriation), as authorized;

representation to certain international organizations in which the United States participates;

pursuant to treaties, ratified pursuant to the advice and consent of the Senate, or specific Acts of Congress; arms control, nonproliferation and disarmament activities as authorized; acquisition by exchange or purchase of passenger motor vehicles as authorized by law; and for ex-depenses in connection with the Office of the High Commissioner for Refugees.

SEC. 306. Pursuant to section 140 of Public

Law 97–92, Justices and judges of the United States are authorized during fiscal year 2002, to receive a salary adjustment in accordance with

28 U.S.C. 461. Provided, That, $8,625,000 is appropriated for salary adjustments pursuant to this section and such funds shall be transferred to and merged with appropriations in title III of this Act.

This title may be cited as this “Judiciary Appropriations Act, 2002.”

TITLE IV—DEVELOPMENT OF STATE AND

RELATED AGENCY

DEPARTMENT OF STATE

ADMINISTRATION OF FOREIGN AFFAIRS

DIPLOMATIC AND CONSULAR PROGRAMS

For necessary expenses of the Department of State and the Foreign Service not otherwise provided for, including employment without regard to civil service and classification laws, of persons on a temporary basis (not to exceed $700,000 of this appropriation), as authorized;

representation to certain international organizations in which the United States participates;

pursuant to treaties, ratified pursuant to the advice

and consent of the Senate, or specific Acts of Congress; arms control, nonproliferation and disarmament activities as authorized; acquisition by exchange or purchase of passenger

motor vehicles as authorized by law; and for ex-depenses in connection with the Office of the High Commissioner for Refugees.

SEC. 306. Pursuant to section 140 of Public

Law 97–92, Justices and judges of the United States are authorized during fiscal year 2002, to receive a salary adjustment in accordance with

28 U.S.C. 461. Provided, That, $8,625,000 is appropriated for salary adjustments pursuant to this section and such funds shall be transferred to and merged with appropriations in title III of this Act.

This title may be cited as this “Judiciary Appropriations Act, 2002.”

FEDERAL JUDICIAL CENTER

SALARIES AND EXPENSES

For necessary expenses of the Federal Judicial

Center, as authorized by Public Law 90–219,

$19,742,000, of which $1,800,000 shall remain available through September 30, 2002, to provide education and training to Federal court personnel; and of which not to exceed $1,000 is authorized for official reception and representation expenses.

JUDICIAL RETIREMENT FUNDS

PAYMENT TO JUDICARY TRUST FUNDS

For payment to the Judicial Officers' Retirement Fund, as authorized by 28 U.S.C. 377(e),

$8,700,000; to the Judicial Survivors' Annuities

Fund, as authorized by 28 U.S.C. 377(c), $8,400,000;

and to the United States Court of Federal Claims' Judges' Retirement Fund, as authorized by 28 U.S.C. 178(b), $1,900,000.

UNITED STATES SENTENCING COMMISSION

SALARIES AND EXPENSES

For the salaries and expenses necessary to carry out the provisions of chapter 58 of title 28, United States Code, $11,327,000, of which not to exceed

$1,000,000 is authorized for official reception and representation expenses.

GENERAL PROVISIONS—THE JUDICIARY

SBC. 301. Appropriations and authorities

made available in this title which are available for salaries and expenses shall be available for services

as authorized by 5 U.S.C. 3106.

SBC. 302. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the salaries and expenses appropriation for district courts, courts of appeals, and other judicial services shall be available for official reception and representation expenses of the Judicial Conference of the United States: Provided, section 209(a)(1) of the Foreign Service Act of 1980, as amended (Public Law 96–465), as it relates to post expenses to:

EDUCATIONAL AND CULTURAL EXCHANGE PROGRAMS

For expenses of educational and cultural exchange programs, as authorized, $242,000,000, to remain available until expended, provided, that not to exceed $800,000, to remain available until expended, may be credited to this appropriation from fees or other payments received from or in connection with English teaching and educational advising and counseling programs as authorized.

REPRESENTATION ALLOWANCES

For representation allowances as authorized, $9,000,000.

PROTECTION OF FOREIGN MISSIONS AND OFFICIALS

For expenses, not otherwise provided for, to enable the Secretary of State to provide for extraordinary protective services, as authorized, $20,780,000: Provided, That none of the funds appropriated herein shall be used to pay any salary or other compensation, or to enter into any contract providing for the payment thereof, in excess of the rate authorized by 5 U.S.C. 5376; or for purposes which are not in accordance with OMB Circulars A–110 (Uniform Administrative Requirements) and A–122 (Cost Principles for Non-profit Organizations), including the reductions on compensation for personal services.

ISRAELI ARAB SCHOLARSHIP PROGRAM

For necessary expenses of the Israeli Arab Scholarship Program as authorized, and not to exceed $39,000 may be used for administrative costs, $14,000,000: Provided, That none of the funds appropriated herein shall be used to pay any salary, or enter into any contract providing for the payment thereof, in excess of the rate authorized by 5 U.S.C. 5376.

NATIONAL ENDOWMENT FOR DEMOCRACY

For grants made by the Department of State to the National Endowment for Democracy as authorized by the National Endowment for Democracy Act, $31,000,000, to remain available until expended.

RELATED AGENCY

Broadcasting Board of Governors

INTERNATIONAL BROADCASTING OPERATIONS

For expenses necessary to carry out international communication activities, $414,752,000, of which not to exceed $16,000 may be used for official receptions within the United States as authorized, not to exceed $35,000 may be used for representation abroad as authorized, and not to exceed $39,000 may be used for special visual and radio programming and representation expenses of Radio Free Europe/Radio Liberty; and in addition, notwithstanding any other provision of law, not to exceed $2,000,000 in receipts from advertising and revenue from business ventures, not to exceed $500,000 in receipts from cooperating international organizations, and not to exceed $1,000,000 in receipts from privatization activities of the International Broadcasting Bureau, to remain available until expended for carrying out authorized purposes.

For necessary expenses to enable the Broadcasting Board of Governors to carry out broadcast to Cuba, including the purchase, rent, construction, and improvement of facilities for radio and television transmission and reception, and purchase and installation of necessary equipment for radio and television transmission and reception, $24,872,000, to remain available until expended.

BROADCASTING CAPITAL IMPROVEMENTS

For the purchase, rent, construction, and improvement of facilities for radio and television transmission and reception, and purchase and installation of necessary equipment for radio and television transmission and reception as authorized, $16,900,000, to remain available until expended, as authorized.

GENERAL PROVISIONS—DEPARTMENT OF STATE AND RELATED AGENCY

SEC. 401. Funds appropriated under this title shall be available, except as otherwise provided, for allowances and differentials as authorized by subchapter 59 of title 5, United States Code; for services as authorized by 5 U.S.C. 3109; and for the hire of passenger transportation pursuant to 31 U.S.C. 1341(a).

SEC. 402. Not to exceed 5 percent of any appropriation made available for the current fiscal year for the Department of State in this Act may be transferred between such appropriations, but no such appropriation, except as otherwise specifically provided, shall be increased by more than 10 percent by any such transfers: Provided, That the 5 percent of any appropriation made available for the current fiscal year for the Broadcasting Board of Governors in this Act may be transferred between such appropriations, but no such appropriation, except as otherwise specifically provided, shall be increased by more than 10 percent by any such transfers: Provided further, That no transfer pursuant to this section shall be treated as a reprogramming of funds under section 605 of this Act and shall not be available for obligation or expenditure except in compliance with the procedures of that section.

SEC. 403. None of the funds made available in this Act may be used by the Department of State or the Broadcasting Board of Governors to provide equipment, technical support, consulting services, or any other form of assistance to the Palestinian Broadcasting Corporation.

SEC. 404. There is hereby enacted into law S. 1984 of the 107th Congress (as enacted on June 21, 2001).

SEC. 405. Hereafter, none of the funds appropriated or otherwise made available for the United Nations may be used by the United Nations for the promotion or enforcement of any treaty, resolution, or regulation authorizing the United Nations, or any of its specialized agencies or affiliated organizations, to tax any aspect of the Internet or international currency transactions.

SEC. 406. None of the funds appropriated or otherwise made available by this Act or any other Act for fiscal year 2002 or any fiscal year thereafter may be obligated or expended for the operation of a United States consulate or diplomatic facility in Jerusalem unless such consulate or diplomatic facility is under the supervision of the United States Ambassador to Israel.

SEC. 407. None of the funds appropriated or otherwise made available by this Act or any other Act for fiscal year 2002 or any fiscal year thereafter may be obligated or expended for the publication of any official Government document which lists countries and their capital cities unless the publication identifies Jerusalem as the capital city of Israel.

SEC. 408. For the purposes of registration of birth, certification of nationality, or issuance of a passport of a United States citizen born in the city of Jerusalem, the Secretary of State shall, upon request of the citizen, record the place of birth as Israel.

This title may be cited as the "Department of State and Related Agency Appropriations Act, 2002".
For necessary expenses of the Securities and Exchange Commission, including services as authorized by 15 U.S.C. 78l, 78q-1, 78q-2, 78q-3, 78q-4, 78q-5, and 78q-6 of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 (15 U.S.C. 78l et seq.), and for the cost of publications developed by the Securities and Exchange Commission, $35,000,000: Provided, That such costs, including the cost of any such loans, shall be as defined in section 502 of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974, as amended: Provided further, That during fiscal year 2002, commitments to guarantee loans under section 503 of the Small Business Investment Act of 1958, as amended, shall not exceed $4,500,000,000, as provided under section 20(b)(1)(B)(vi) of the Small Business Act: Provided further, That the sum herein appropriated for the Small Business Administration, and $4,500,000,000, which may be transferred to and merged with the appropriations for Salaries and Expenses.

For necessary expenses of the Securities and Exchange Commission, $35,000,000: Provided, That such costs, including the cost of any such loans, shall be as defined in section 502 of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974, as amended: Provided further, That during fiscal year 2002, commitments to guarantee loans under section 503 of the Small Business Investment Act of 1958, as amended, shall not exceed $4,500,000,000, as provided under section 20(b)(1)(B)(vi) of the Small Business Act: Provided further, That the sum herein appropriated for the Small Business Administration, and $4,500,000,000, which may be transferred to and merged with the appropriations for Salaries and Expenses.

For necessary expenses of the Securities and Exchange Commission, $35,000,000: Provided, That such costs, including the cost of any such loans, shall be as defined in section 502 of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974, as amended: Provided further, That during fiscal year 2002, commitments to guarantee loans under section 503 of the Small Business Investment Act of 1958, as amended, shall not exceed $4,500,000,000, as provided under section 20(b)(1)(B)(vi) of the Small Business Act: Provided further, That the sum herein appropriated for the Small Business Administration, and $4,500,000,000, which may be transferred to and merged with the appropriations for Salaries and Expenses.
SEC. 601. No part of any appropriation contained in this Act shall be used for publicity or propaganda purposes not authorized by the Congress.

SEC. 602. No part of any appropriation contained in this Act shall remain available for obligation beyond the current fiscal year unless expressly so provided herein.

SEC. 603. The expenditure of any appropriation under this Act for any consulting service through procurement contract, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 3109, shall be limited to those contracts where such expenditures are a matter of public record and are open to public inspection, except where otherwise provided under existing law, or under existing Executive order issued pursuant to existing law.

SEC. 604. (a) The caption for section 504 of title 28, United States Code, is amended by replacing “Attorney” with “Attorneys”.

(b) Section 504 of title 28, United States Code, is amended by inserting after “General” the following, “and a Deputy Attorney General for Combating Domestic Terrorism”.

(c) There is established within the Department of Justice a Deputy Attorney General for Combating Domestic Terrorism, who shall be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate.

(d) Subject to the authority of the Attorney General, the Deputy Attorney General for Combating Domestic Terrorism shall serve as the principal advisor to the Attorney General on, and, with the Director of the Federal Emergency Management Agency, serve as one of two key government officials responsible for domestic counterterrorism and antiterrorism policy.

(e) The Deputy Attorney General for Combating Terrorism together with the Deputy Director of the Federal Emergency Management Agency shall serve as a focal point for interagency coordination of Federal Government resources related to combating terrorism and antiterrorism activities, including:

(1) the development of a National Strategy for Combating Domestic Terrorism that shall establish national policies, objectives, and priorities for preventing, preparing for, and responding to domestic terrorism within the United States;

(2) the coordination of the implementation of the National Strategy for Combating Domestic Terrorism by the departments and agencies of the Federal Government and by State and local entities with responsibilities for combating domestic terrorism; and

(3) the recommendation of changes in the organization and management of Federal departments and agencies and State and local entities engaged in combating domestic terrorism to the Congress, the President, the Vice President, the Attorney General, and Director of the Federal Emergency Management Agency.

(f) Subject to the authority of the Attorney General, the Deputy Attorney General for Combating Domestic Terrorism shall be responsible for State and local preparedness for weapons of mass destruction, security classifications and clearances within the Department of Justice, and contingency operations within the Department of Justice.

(g) For necessary expenses of the Office of the Deputy Attorney General for Combating Domestic Terrorism, not to exceed $23,000,000, to remain available until expended.

(h) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, all authorities, liabilities, funding, personnel, equipment, and responsibilities associated with the Office of State and Local Domestic Preparedness, the National Domestic Preparedness Office, the Executive Office of National Preparedness, and other functions which relate to domestic counterterrorism and antiterrorism activities in the Office of Intelligence Policy and Review as are appropriate shall be transferred to the Deputy Attorney General for Combating Domestic Terrorism not later than 90 days after enactment of this Act.

SEC. 605. (a) None of the funds provided under this Act, or provided under previous appropriations Acts to the agencies funded by this Act that remain available for obligation or expenditure in fiscal year 2002, or provided from any accounts in the Treasury of the United States derived by the collection of fees available to the agencies funded by this Act, shall be available for obligation or expenditure except:

(1) for reprogramming of funds which: (1) creates new programs; (2) eliminates a program, project, or activity; (3) increases funds or personnel by any means for any project or activity for which Congress has not appropriated funds; (4) relocates an office or employees; (5) reorganizes offices, programs, or activities; or (6) contracts out any functions, or activities presently performed by Federal employees; unless the Appropriations Committees of both Houses of Congress are notified 15 days in advance of such reprogramming of funds.

(b) None of the funds provided under this Act, or provided under previous appropriations Acts to the agencies funded by this Act that remain available for obligation or expenditure in fiscal year 2002, or provided from any accounts in the Treasury of the United States derived by the collection of fees available to the agencies funded by this Act, shall be available for obligation or expenditure except:

(1) for reprogramming of funds which: (1) creates new programs; (2) eliminates a program, project, or activity; (3) increases funds or personnel by any means for any project or activity for which Congress has not appropriated funds; (4) relocates an office or employees; (5) reorganizes offices, programs, or activities; or (6) contracts out any functions, or activities presently performed by Federal employees; unless the Appropriations Committees of both Houses of Congress are notified 15 days in advance of such reprogramming of funds.

SEC. 606. Section 286(d) of Public Law 82–414, as amended, is further amended—

(1) in subsection (d), by striking “$6” and inserting “$6.50”;

(2) in subsection (b), by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

“(3) Not less than nine percent of the total amounts deposited under this subsection in a fiscal year shall be available only to automate or otherwise improve the speed, accuracy, or security of the inspection process.”

SEC. 607. None of the funds made available in this Act may be used for the construction, repair (other than emergency repair), overhaul, conversion, or modernization of vessels for the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration. Funds made available in this Act may be used to provide the following amenities or personal comforts in the Federal prison system—

(1) in-cell television viewing except for prisoners who are segregated from the general prison population for their own safety;

(2) the viewing of R, X, and NC-17 rated movies, when such films are presented in the medium presented;

(3) any instruction (live or through broadcasts) or training equipment for boxing, wrestling, judo, karate, or other martial art, or any bodybuilding or weightlifting equipment of any sort;

(4) possession of in-cell coffee pots, hot plates or heating elements; or

(5) the use or possession of any electric or electronic musical instrument.

SEC. 611. (a) None of the funds appropriated or otherwise made available by this Act shall be available for any purpose for which appropriations are prohibited by section 609 of the Department of Commerce, Justice, and State, the Judiciary, and Related Agencies Appropriations Act, 1999.

(b) The requirements in subparagraphs (A) and (B) of section 609 of that Act shall continue to apply during fiscal year 2002.

SEC. 612. Hereafter, none of the funds appropriated or otherwise made available by this Act shall be used for the following amenities or personal comforts in the Federal prison system—

(1) in-cell television viewing except for prisoners who are segregated from the general prison population for their own safety;

(2) the viewing of R, X, and NC-17 rated movies, when such films are presented in the medium presented;

(3) any instruction (live or through broadcasts) or training equipment for boxing, wrestling, judo, karate, or other martial art, or any bodybuilding or weightlifting equipment of any sort;

(4) possession of in-cell coffee pots, hot plates or heating elements; or

(5) the use or possession of any electric or electronic musical instrument.

SEC. 613. Any costs incurred by a department or agency funded under this Act resulting from personnel actions not authorized by such appropriations Acts to the agencies funded by this Act that remain available for obligation or expenditure except:

(1) for reprogramming of funds which: (1) creates new programs; (2) eliminates a program, project, or activity; (3) increases funds or personnel by any means for any project or activity for which Congress has not appropriated funds; (4) relocates an office or employees; (5) reorganizes offices, programs, or activities; or (6) contracts out any functions, or activities presently performed by Federal employees; unless the Appropriations Committees of both Houses of Congress are notified 15 days in advance of such reprogramming of funds.

SEC. 614. Hereafter, none of the funds appropriated or otherwise made available by the Federal Bureau of Prisons may be used to construct or make available any commercially published information or material to a prisoner when such information or material is sexually explicit or features nudity.

SEC. 615. (a) None of the funds appropriated or otherwise made available by this Act shall be available for any purpose for which appropriations are prohibited by section 609 of the Departments of Commerce, Justice, and State, the Judiciary, and Related Agencies Appropriations Act, 1999, as amended.

(b) The requirements in subsections (b) and (c) of section 616 of that Act shall continue to apply during fiscal year 2002.

SEC. 616. None of the funds appropriated pursuant to this Act or any other provision of law may be used for:

(1) the implementation of any tax or fee in connection with the implementation of 18 U.S.C. 922(1); and (2) any system to implement 18 U.S.C. 922(1) that does not ensure and result in the destruction of any identifying information submitted by or on behalf of any person who has been determined not to be prohibited from possessing a firearm.

SEC. 617. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, amounts deposited or available in the Fund established under 42 U.S.C. 16001 in any fiscal year in excess of $576,462,000 shall not be available for obligation until the following fiscal year.

SEC. 618. Hereafter, none of the funds made available to the Department in this Act may be used for the purpose of transporting an individual who is a prisoner pursuant to conviction for crime under State or Federal law and is classified as a high security inmate, other than to a prison or other facility certified by the Federal Bureau of Prisons as appropriately secure for housing such a prisoner.

SEC. 619. None of the funds made available to the Department in this Act may be used for the purpose of transporting an individual who is a prisoner pursuant to conviction for crime under State or Federal law and is classified as a high security inmate, other than to a prison or other facility certified by the Federal Bureau of Prisons as appropriately secure for housing such a prisoner.

SEC. 620. Section 504(b)(16) of the Commerce, Justice, and State, the Judiciary, and Related Agencies Appropriations Act, 1996 (110 Stat. 3251–53; Public Law 104–154) is amended by striking subsection with ‘‘, except that ‘‘ through ‘‘representation’’.

SEC. 621. The requirements of section 312(a)(3) of the Magnuson-Stevens Fishery Conservation and Management Act shall not apply to funds made available by section 2201 of Public Law 106–246.

SEC. 622. (a) Section 201(i) of the Act entitled ‘‘An Act to approve a governing international agreement between the United States and the Republic of Poland, and for other purposes’’, approved November 13, 1998, is amended by striking ‘‘2000’’ and inserting ‘‘2002’’.

(b) Section 203 of such Act, as amended by subsection (a), is further amended by adding at the end the following:

‘‘Sec. 203. Notwithstanding any provision of law, the Pacific State Marine Fisheries Commission shall submit to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation of the Senate and the Committee on Resources of the House of Representatives a report on the health and management of the Dungeness Crab fishery located off the coasts of the States of Washington, Oregon, and California.’’

SEC. 623. None of the funds made available in this Act may be used by the Department of Justice or the Department of State to file a motion in any court opposing a civil action against any corporation or other entity.

SEC. 624. None of the funds appropriated or otherwise made available by this Act shall be available for any program, activity, or assistance to, the International Criminal Court or the Preparatory Commission. This subsection shall not be construed to apply to any other entity outside the Rome treaty.

SEC. 625. PROHIBITION ON SALE OF DISASTER LOANS. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, no amount made available under this Act may be used to sell any disaster loan authorized by section 7(b) of the Small Business Act (15 U.S.C. 136(b)) to any private company or other entity.

SEC. 626. SENSE OF THE SENATE REGARDING THE REPUBLIC OF KOREA’S IMPROPER BAILOUT OF HYNIX SEMICONDUCTOR. (a) FINDINGS.—Congress finds that:

(1) the Republic of Korea over many years has supplied aid to the Korean semiconductor industry enabling that industry to be the Republic of Korea’s leading exporter;

(2) this assistance has occurred through a coordinated series of government programs and policies, consisting of preferential access to credit, low-interest loans, government grants, preferential tax programs, government inducement of private sector loans, tariff reductions, and other measures;

(3) in December 1997, the United States, the International Monetary Fund (IMF), other foreign government entities, and a group of international financial institutions established an unprecedented $58,000,000,000 financial package to prevent the Korean economy from declaring bankruptcy;

(4) as part of that rescue package, the Republic of Korea agreed to an end to corporate cronyism, to work to overhaul the banking and financial sectors;

(5) Korea also pledged to permit and require banks to run on market principles, to allow and encourage foreign or private ownership, to allow mergers rather than bailouts, and to end subsides;

(6) the Republic of Korea agreed to all of these provisions in the Stand-by Arrangement with the IMF dated December 11, 1998, Public Law 105–277; 112 Stat. 2681–220; and the IMF’s 344th meeting of December 11, 1998, 106th Cong., 1st sess., S. Res. 344; (7) section 602 of the Foreign Operations, Export Financing, and Related Agencies Appropriations Act, 1999, as enacted by section 101(d) of the Omnibus Consolidated and Emergency Supplemental Appropriations Act (Public Law 105–277–112 Stat. 2681–220) specified that the United States would not authorize further IMF payments to Korea unless the Secretary of the Treasury certified that the provisions of the IMF Standby Arrangement were adhered to;

(8) the Secretary of the Treasury certified to Congress on December 11, 1998, April 5, 1999, and July 2, 1999, that the Stand-by Arrangement was being adhered to, and assured Congress that consultations had been held with the Government of the Republic of Korea in connection with the certifications;

(b) (A) by redesignating subparagraphs (A) and (B) of paragraph (1) of section 104 of the Trade Act of 1974, as amended by the Uruguay Round Agreements Act; (B) in clause (ii)—

(i) by striking ‘‘February 17, 1999,’’ and inserting ‘‘May 7, 1997, February 17, 1999, December 15, 1999, October 22, 1999, after ‘‘February 17, 1999’’;’’ and

(ii) by striking the semicolon at the end and inserting ‘‘;’’; and

(C) by adding at the end the following new clause:

‘‘(iii) a member of the plaintiff class in Case Number 1:00CV03110(ESG) in the United States District Court for the District of Columbia;’’;

and

(2) in subsection (b)(2)—

(A) by redesigning subparagraphs (A) and (B) as clauses (i) and (ii), respectively;

(B) by inserting ‘‘(A)’’ before ‘‘For purposes’’ and

(C) by adding at the end the following:

‘‘(B) For any judgment rendered in Case Number 1:00CV03110(ESG) in the United States District Court for the District of Columbia, in addition to the amounts available under subsection (a), the Secretary of the Treasury shall make such further payment as necessary to satisfy the judgment by—

‘‘(i) liquidating those assets without third party interest of those countries designated as state sponsors of terrorism, under section 40(d) of the Arms Control Act of 1961, as amended by title II of the United States and

‘‘(ii) in the event the judgment remains not fully satisfied after such liquidation, using any other available means collect from Iran, with the proceeds of such liquidation collected by these other means to be remitted to the Treasury of the United States.’’.

SEC. 627. NOTWITHSTANDING ANY OTHER PROVISION OF LAW, NO AMOUNT MADE AVAILABLE UNDER THIS ACT MAY BE USED TO SELL ANY DISASTER LOAN AUTHORIZED BY SECTION 7(b) OF THE SMALL BUSINESS ACT (15 U.S.C. 636(b)) TO ANY PRIVATE COMPANY OR OTHER ENTITY.

SEC. 628. No funds appropriated by this Act may be used by Federal prisons to purchase cable television services, to rent or purchase videocassettes, videocassette recorders, or other video equipment used primarily for recreational purposes. The preceding sentence does not preclude the renting, maintenance, or purchase of audiovisual or electronic equipment for inmate training, religious, or educational programs.

SEC. 629. Section 202 of the Victims of Trafficking and Violence Protection Act of 2000 (Public Law 106–396; 114 Stat. 1542) is amended—

17082

(1) in subsection (a)(2)(A)—

(A) by striking ‘‘or’’ at the end of clause (i); and

(B) in clause (ii)—

(i) by striking ‘‘February 17, 1999,’’ and inserting ‘‘May 7, 1997, February 17, 1999, December 15, 1999, October 22, 1999, after ‘‘February 17, 1999’’;’’ and

(ii) by striking the semicolon at the end and inserting ‘‘;’’;

and

(C) by adding at the end the following:

‘‘(iii) a member of the plaintiff class in Case Number 1:00CV03110(ESG) in the United States District Court for the District of Columbia;’’;

and

(2) in subsection (b)(2)—

(A) by redesigning subparagraphs (A) and (B) as clauses (i) and (ii), respectively;

(B) by inserting ‘‘(A)’’ before ‘‘For purposes’’ and

(C) by adding at the end the following:

‘‘(B) For any judgment rendered in Case Number 1:00CV03110(ESG) in the United States District Court for the District of Columbia, in addition to the amounts available under subsection (a), the Secretary of the Treasury shall make such further payment as necessary to satisfy the judgment by—

‘‘(i) liquidating those assets without third party interest of those countries designated as state sponsors of terrorism, under section 40(d) of the Arms Control Act of 1961, as amended by title II of the United States and

‘‘(ii) in the event the judgment remains not fully satisfied after such liquidation, using any other available means collect from Iran, with the proceeds of such liquidation collected by these other means to be remitted to the Treasury of the United States.’’."
CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—SENATE

SEC. 811. ASSESSMENT OF NATIONAL GUARD CAPABILITIES TO PREEMPTIVELY DISRUPT DOMESTIC TERRORIST ATTACKS INVOLVING WEAPONS OF MASS DESTRUCTION.

(a) REPORT REQUIREMENTS.—Not later than 60 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Comptroller General shall submit to Congress a report containing an assessment of the capabilities of the National Guard to preemptively disrupt a terrorist attack within the United States involving weapons of mass destruction, and to respond to such an attack.

(b) REPORT.—Not later than six months after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Attorney General shall submit to Congress a report on the capabilities of the Federal Government to respond to, and to prevent, preempt, detect, and interdict, catastrophic terrorist attacks.

(c) CATASTROPHIC TERRORIST ATTACK DEFINED.—In this section, the term ‘catastrophic terrorist attack’ means a terrorist attack against the United States perpetrated by a state, substate, or nonstate actor that involves mass casualties or the use of a weapon of mass destruction.

SEC. 814. GUIDELINES ON RECRUITMENT OF TERRORIST INFORMANTS.

The Attorney General and the heads of the other appropriate Federal agencies, including the Department of Justice, shall—

(a) establish procedures to identify and interview potential terrorist informants;

(b) develop and implement procedures to protect the identity of terrorist informants.

SEC. 815. DISCLOSURE BY LAW ENFORCEMENT AGENCIES OF CONFIDENTIAL INTELLIGENCE OBTAINED BY INTERCEPTION OF COMMUNICATIONS.

The Attorney General and the heads of the other appropriate Federal agencies shall—

(a) establish procedures to disclose to the extent permitted by law communications intelligence information obtained by interception of communications.

(b) develop and implement procedures to protect the identity of terrorist informants.

SEC. 816. JOINING TASK FORCE ON TERRORIST FUNDRAISING.

(a) REPORT TO SHARING OF CRIMINAL WIRETAP INFORMATION.—Not later than 60 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Attorney General shall submit to Congress a report on the legal authorities that govern the sharing of criminal wiretap information under applicable Federal law, including section 104 of the National Security Act of 1947 (50 U.S.C. 403–4).

(b) REPORT ON PREVENTION OF TERRORIST FUNDRAISING.—Not later than 60 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Attorney General shall submit to Congress a report on the adequacy of the United States’ legal authorities to prevent, disrupt, or otherwise affect terrorist fundraising.

(c) REPORT ON IMPROVEMENT OF CONTROLS.—Not later than 60 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Attorney General shall submit to Congress a report on the adequacy of the United States’ legal authorities to prevent, disrupt, or otherwise affect terrorist fundraising.

(d) REPORT ON AUTHORITY RELATING TO SHARING OF CRIMINAL WIRETAP INFORMATION.—Not later than 60 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Attorney General shall submit to Congress a report on the legal authorities that govern the sharing of criminal wiretap information under applicable Federal law, including section 104 of the National Security Act of 1947 (50 U.S.C. 403–4).

SEC. 817. IMPROVEMENT OF CONTROLS ON PATHOGENS AND EQUIPMENT FOR PRODUCTION OF BIOLOGICAL WEAPONS.

(a) REPORT.—Not later than 60 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Attorney General shall submit to Congress a report on the adequacy of the United States’ legal authorities to prevent, disrupt, or otherwise affect terrorist fundraising.

(b) REPORT.—Not later than 60 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Attorney General shall submit to Congress a report on the adequacy of the United States’ legal authorities to prevent, disrupt, or otherwise affect terrorist fundraising.

(c) REPORT.—Not later than 60 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Attorney General shall submit to Congress a report on the adequacy of the United States’ legal authorities to prevent, disrupt, or otherwise affect terrorist fundraising.

(d) REPORT.—Not later than 60 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Attorney General shall submit to Congress a report on the adequacy of the United States’ legal authorities to prevent, disrupt, or otherwise affect terrorist fundraising.

SEC. 818. IMPROVEMENT OF CONTROLS ON PATHOGENS AND EQUIPMENT FOR PRODUCTION OF BIOLOGICAL WEAPONS.

(a) REPORT.—Not later than 60 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Attorney General shall submit to Congress a report on the adequacy of the United States’ legal authorities to prevent, disrupt, or otherwise affect terrorist fundraising.

(b) REPORT.—Not later than 60 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Attorney General shall submit to Congress a report on the adequacy of the United States’ legal authorities to prevent, disrupt, or otherwise affect terrorist fundraising.

(c) REPORT.—Not later than 60 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Attorney General shall submit to Congress a report on the adequacy of the United States’ legal authorities to prevent, disrupt, or otherwise affect terrorist fundraising.

(d) REPORT.—Not later than 60 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Attorney General shall submit to Congress a report on the adequacy of the United States’ legal authorities to prevent, disrupt, or otherwise affect terrorist fundraising.

SEC. 819. IMPROVEMENT OF CONTROLS ON PATHOGENS AND EQUIPMENT FOR PRODUCTION OF BIOLOGICAL WEAPONS.

(a) REPORT.—Not later than 60 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Attorney General shall submit to Congress a report on the adequacy of the United States’ legal authorities to prevent, disrupt, or otherwise affect terrorist fundraising.

(b) REPORT.—Not later than 60 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Attorney General shall submit to Congress a report on the adequacy of the United States’ legal authorities to prevent, disrupt, or otherwise affect terrorist fundraising.

(c) REPORT.—Not later than 60 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Attorney General shall submit to Congress a report on the adequacy of the United States’ legal authorities to prevent, disrupt, or otherwise affect terrorist fundraising.

(d) REPORT.—Not later than 60 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Attorney General shall submit to Congress a report on the adequacy of the United States’ legal authorities to prevent, disrupt, or otherwise affect terrorist fundraising.

SEC. 820. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the ‘Combating Terrorism Act of 2001’.

Subtitle A—Terrorist Policy and Practices

SECTION 821. ASSESSMENT OF NATIONAL GUARD CAPABILITIES TO PREEMPTIVELY DISRUPT DOMESTIC TERRORIST ATTACKS INVOLVING WEAPONS OF MASS DESTRUCTION.

(a) REPORT REQUIREMENTS.—Not later than 60 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Government shall submit to Congress a report containing an assessment of the capabilities of the National Guard to preemptively disrupt a terrorist attack within the United States involving weapons of mass destruction, and to respond to such an attack.

(b) REPORT.—Not later than six months after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Attorney General shall submit to Congress a report on the capabilities of the Federal Government to respond to, and to prevent, preempt, detect, and interdict, catastrophic terrorist attacks.

(c) CATASTROPHIC TERRORIST ATTACK DEFINED.—In this section, the term ‘catastrophic terrorist attack’ means a terrorist attack against the United States perpetrated by a state, substate, or nonstate actor that involves mass casualties or the use of a weapon of mass destruction.
Subtitle B—Criminal Matters

SEC. 831. LAUNDERING OF PROCEEDS OF TERRORISM.

Section 1966(c)(1)(D) of title 18, United States Code, is amended by inserting "or 2339A" after "2339A.

SEC. 832. MODIFICATION OF AUTHORITIES RELATING TO USE OF PEN REGISTERS AND TRAP AND TRACE DEVICES.

(a) GENERAL LIMITATION ON USE BY GOVERNMENT AGENCIES—Section 3122(c) of title 18, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by inserting "or trap and trace device" after "pen register";

(2) by inserting "telephonic", "addressing", after "dialing"; and

(3) by striking "call processing" and inserting "the processing and transmitting of wire and electronic communications";

(b) ISSUANCE OF ORDERS.—

(1) IN GENERAL—Subsection (a) of section 3123 of that title is amended to read as follows:

'(a) IN GENERAL.—(1) Upon an application made under section 3122(a)(1) of this title, the Attorney General of the United States shall enter an ex parte order authorizing the installation and use of a pen register or trap and trace device if the court finds that the attorney for the Government has certified to the court that the information likely to be obtained by such installation and use is relevant to an ongoing criminal investigation. The order shall, upon service of the order, apply to any entity providing electronic communications service in the United States whose assistance is required to effectuate the order.

(2) Upon an application made under section 3122(a)(2) of this title, the Attorney General shall enter an ex parte order authorizing the installation and use of a pen register or trap and trace device within the jurisdiction of the court if the court finds that the Attorney General of the United States, or any Deputy Assistant Attorney General of the United States, has certified to the court that the information likely to be obtained by such installation and use is relevant to an ongoing criminal investigation. The order shall, upon service of the order, apply to any entity providing electronic communications service in the United States whose assistance is required to effectuate the order;

(2) CONTENTS OF ORDER.—Subsection (b)(1) of that section is amended—

(A) in subparagraph (A), by striking "other facility" after "telephone line"; and

(B) by striking subparagraph (B), and inserting the following new subparagraph (B):

(ii) by inserting before the semicolon at the end "or applied"; and

(C) by inserting paragraph (A) after "the information likely to be obtained by such installation and use is relevant to an ongoing criminal investigation.

(3) NONDISCLOSURE REQUIREMENTS.—Subsection (d)(2) of that section is amended—

(A) by inserting "other facility" after "the line"; and

(B) by striking ", or who has been ordered by the court and inserting "or ordered, or who is obligated by the order";

(c) EMERGENCY INSTALLATION.—

(1) AUTHORITY FOR UNITED STATES ATTORNEYS—Section 3122(a) of that title is amended in the matter preceding paragraph (1) by striking "or any Deputy Assistant Attorney General," and inserting "or any Deputy Assistant Attorney General, or any United States Attorney.";

(2) EXPANSION OF EMERGENCY CIRCUMSTANCES—Section 3122(a)(1) of that title is amended—

(A) in subparagraph (A), by striking "or" at the end;

(B) in subparagraph (B), by striking the comma at the end and inserting a semicolon; and

(C) by inserting after subparagraph (B) the following new subparagraphs:

(1) immediate threat to the national security interests of the United States;

(2) immediate threat to public health or safety; or

(3) an attack on the integrity or availability of a protected computer which attack would be an offense punishable under section 1030(c)(2)(C) of this title.

(3) PEN REGISTER.—Paragraph (2) of section 3127 of that title is amended by striking subparagraph (A) and inserting the following new subparagraph (A):

(A) any district court of the United States (including a magistrate judge of such a court) or any United States Court of Appeals having jurisdiction over the offense being investigated; or

(4) TRAP AND TRACE DEVICE.—Paragraph (4) of that section is amended—

(A) by inserting "or process" after "a device"; and

(B) by striking "of an instrument" and all that follows through the end and inserting "or other device, routing, addressing, and signaling information relevant to identifying the source of a wire or electronic communication";

SEC. 833. AUTHORITY TO INTERCEPT WIRE, ORAL, AND ELECTRONIC COMMUNICATIONS RELATING TO TERRORISM OFFENSES.

Section 2516(1) of title 18, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by redesignating paragraph (p), as so redesignated by section 434(2) of the Antiterrorism and Effective Death Penalty Act of 1996 (Public Law 104-132; 110 Stat. 1274), as paragraph (r); and

(2) by inserting after paragraph (p) as so redesignated by section 201(3) of the Illegal Immigration Reform and Immigrant Responsibility Act of 1996 (division C of Public Law 104-208; 110 Stat. 3069-565), the following new paragraph:

'(q) any criminal violation of sections 2332, 2332a, 2332b, 2332d, 2339A, or 2339B of this title (relating to terrorism); or'

SEC. 834. AUTHORITY TO INTERCEPT WIRE, ORAL, AND ELECTRONIC COMMUNICATIONS RELATING TO COMPUTER FRAUD AND ABUSE.

Section 2516(1)(c) of title 18, United States Code, is amended by striking "and section 1341 relating to mail fraud;" and inserting "section 1341 (relating to mail fraud); and"

ORDER OF BUSINESS

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, for the interest of all Senators, we are attempting to propound a unanimous consent request to delay the schedule for next week. We have not been able to get complete agreement on either side at this point, but it should not be too much longer. It would be my desire, once we get that unanimous consent, to go out for the day.

Just as soon as that occurs, we will then be prepared to take final action for the day.

Until that time, I have a couple of remarks in regard to the important legislation that passed this morning.

USE OF FORCE TO DEFEND AMERICA AGAINST TERRORIST ATTACKS

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, we are now learning that the terrorists who attacked our Nation this week may have been planning their hideous crimes for years.

In their evil and painstaking calculations, the terrorists clearly tried to anticipate every possible obstacle they might encounter.

But there is one obstacle they overlooked; that is, the courage of the American people, and our fierce determination to defend the people and values we cherish.

It was that courage and determination that appears to have given the passengers aboard the plane that crashed near Pittsburgh the strength to resist their murderers and prevent an even greater tragedy.

It is that same courage and determination that is at the heart of this resolution we pass today.

Tuesday, from the window of my office in the Capitol, I watched thick black smoke rise from the Pentagon and fill the sky over Arlington Cemetery.

The graves in that hallowed ground remind us that Americans have faced great evil before and defeated it.

By passing this resolution, we are saying we are prepared to confront evil again and to defeat it again.

We ask that the Congress of the United States—Democrats and Republicans stand with the President as our Commander in Chief.

We are authorizing the President to use force against the terrorists who attacked America on September 11, and any nation, organization, or person that aids or harbors them.

As a result of our actions today, we know that our men and women in uniform may be forced to confront a new kind of enemy—an enemy whose actions are constrained neither by conscience, nor the rules of war.

We also know that whatever they are called to do, they will do it well and with honor. And we know this: They will prevail.

This is the gravest responsibility we can undertake as elected leaders.

That is why our Constitution calls on the President and the Congress to act together on decisions to employ our armed forces to defend our Nation.

By passing this resolution, we reaffirm our belief in our Constitution as the foundation and strength of our democracy.

By providing specific statutory authorization and by requiring continuing consultation between the President and the Congress, we also underscore the importance of the War Powers Resolution. Only by standing together, can we stand strong and defeat this threat.

As I have said before, what happened on Tuesday was not simply an attack against America. It was a crime against democracy, and decency. It was a crime against civilization itself.

Americans have been deeply touched this week by the support we have received from friends throughout the world. From the gates of Buckingham Palace, to the halls of the United Nations and NATO, to the streets of Moscow and beyond, the grief displayed by our friends has helped to make our own grief more bearable.

We thank the family of nations for standing with us in these early days of this battle against terrorism. Even more, we thank them for their commitment to stand with us in the days ahead.

I am confident we will continue to stand together, and defeat this most insidious of threats, wherever and whenever it arises.

We will be true to the defense of our ideals. We will make whatever material or physical sacrifice that is required of us to punish those who attacked our nation, and to prevent future attacks.

But we will not sacrifice the ideals that built this nation and have sustained us for more than two centuries.

Just as we are united against the terrorists and their co-conspirators who carried out the attacks on our nation, we must also be united against acts of hate against innocent Arab-Americans and Muslims.

The madmen who carried out these crimes despise our values of liberty and justice for all.

By maintaining our commitment to those ideals now, we send a powerful message to those who committed this evil that they have not won, and they will not win this war. They have broken our hearts, but not our will.

The terrorists hoped to bring us to our knees. Let us defy them by standing together on our feet as one nation, indivisible.

Yes, we saw evil this week. But we have also seen great strength. We have seen it in the heroic men and women working day and night in the wreckage of the World Trade Center and the Pentagon.

We have seen it in the countless Americans in cities across the country who waited hours to donate blood.

And we have seen it in the men and women who may have prevented even greater destruction through their bravery aboard that doomed flight.

That is the strength of America—the one obstacle the terrorists did not anticipate, and the one that will be their undoing.

I yield the floor, and I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

America United

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, at midday today I attended the prayer service at the National Cathedral which President Bush called. It was attended by President Bush and four former Presidents, and many Americans, of course.

And I think millions of Americans watched on television. It was a remarkable, moving, and emotional prayer service.

As I sat in the prayer service, I thought about something that happened yesterday as I toured the damage to the Pentagon with my colleagues, Senator Daschle, Senator Reid, and others.

Yesterday, we were touring the Pentagon where, of course, many Americans died as a result of an airplane, loaded with jet fuel and commercial passengers, which was flown by a terrorist into the Pentagon and caused a fire and collapse and so much damage.

Yesterday, as we were being briefed at the Pentagon about the damage that was caused and the loss of life, my colleague, Senator Reid, will remember that there was a crane near the building.

The crane had a long steel cable attached to it. On the end of the steel cable was one of these little baskets. There was a man standing in the basket in uniform. The crane hauled this basket up to the fourth floor of this gaping wound in the middle of the Pentagon building. This man, who is a soldier, reached around from this basket deep into the hole of the Pentagon building, and from outside of this hole he pulled out a red and gold flag. He put it into this basket, again, dangling from a crane. They brought him back to the ground. It turned out he had pulled out of this gaping hole in this burned-out structure at the Pentagon a U.S. Marine flag that had for some reason not burned. It appeared to be the only thing that could not have possibly burned in that entire area.

This young Marine, who grabbed this U.S. Marine Corps flag—this beautiful gold and red flag—marched over to where we were, and he stopped and said he was taking this flag to the U.S. Marine Corps Commandant.

He said he saw the flag as he looked through the wreckage up on the fourth floor in an office, and miraculously this flag had not burned. He wanted to get to it, so he got somebody to take him up in a crane in a basket, and he retrieved the flag and brought it back.

As he held this flag proudly, on his way to the Commandant of the Marine Corps, he said to us: They couldn’t destroy this flag, and they can’t destroy this country. And I thought, wow, what a thing to say. Perhaps we can never make certain that we will not ever see a terrorist act again. Perhaps we can never do that. We can certainly exert all the energy and all the genius available to all of us in this country to take the steps we think can try to prevent these acts again.

But notwithstanding the challenges and the tragedies, and notwithstanding the common grief that was born of these evil acts, this country will remain a free country. We will remain a country, of which all of us are enormously proud.

There is a spirit about America: A spirit to prevail, a spirit to build, a spirit to come together. It is reflected by our President, who asked for an authorization from Congress, to be able to fight terrorism wherever it exists, and to prevent that happening again.

It is a free country. We are proud of that freedom and liberty. And it is also understood by everyone that we have the risk of acts of terrorism committed in free countries precisely because of the things we do. Perhaps we can never make certain that we will not ever see a terrorist act again. Perhaps we can never do that. We can certainly exert all the energy and all the genius available to all of us in this country to take the steps we think can try to prevent these acts again.

But there is something else that is important for us to understand. The terrorists did something they could never have possibly imagined: They created in this country a togetherness that has not been here for some long while. People want to show the flag these days.

My 8-year-old daughter yesterday said: Dad, let’s put out the flag. People all over this country are putting an American flag out in full view. And people around this country are doing things that we know represent the inherent goodness of people.

Within hours of the terrible tragedy at the World Trade Center—within hours of those evil acts—we had scores of people lining up to give blood in this country. I saw the interview of one person who was in a 5-hour line, and he was asked: Why are you in line 5 hours waiting to give blood? And she said: Because it’s the only thing I can do, and I want to do something today.

The terrorists could not have possibly anticipated what their acts would do to bring Americans together. This country has a common purpose. Yes, it has a great deal of grief and, yes, our heart is broken, but our spirit is not broken.

The common purpose in this country is to grieve together, to pray together, and then understand that we want to—and we must—find those who planned and committed these acts, and those who harbored them, and punish them and at the same time take the kind of precautions we know we must take to prevent that from happening again.

So I do hope people will join together and the ability to come together. It was important to do that. It is important to do that.

At noon, where there isn’t a lot going on, we had a prayer service that I think everyone there was touched. I think everyone there participated with the prayers. Billy Graham gave some remarks. He has been an adviser to many Presidents over the years, and even though his body is frail, his mind certainly is not.

I hope all Americans will realize that the President of the United States needs everyone’s prayers now. There are 535 Members of Congress. I was able to sit with Senator Doocy today at the prayer service at the National Cathedral. We were together. And that is what we legislatures are; we are together; we are always with each other. But the President of the United States is alone. He does not have people to lean on. He has to make decisions by himself.

So I hope that everyone will be involved in praying for this President, recognizing the tremendous burdens he has and the decisions he has to make, decisions that are so vitally important to the virtual freedom of this country, matters dealing with life and death.

So I do hope people will join together and have continual prayers for this country and the President of the United States.

THANKING THE PRESIDING OFFICER

Mr. REID. Mr. President, on behalf of all Senators, I express my appreciation to the Presiding Officer. It is a real sacrifice to be here on a Friday afternoon, where there isn’t a lot going on on the floor, but there were things that had to be done. Of course, the Senator from Vermont is known for his patience. And here is another example of it.

So on behalf of all Senators, thank you very much for your time and for the many hours this afternoon.

UNANIMOUS CONSENT AGREEMENT—H.R. 2590

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that on Wednesday at 10 a.m. the Appropriations Committee be discharged from further consideration of H.R. 2590, the Treasury-Postal Appropriations bill, and that the Senate then proceed to its consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, it is my hope that the Senate will be in a position to consider this authorization bill next week. The majority leader will be consulting with the Republican leader as to its scheduling.
ORDERS FOR MONDAY, SEP- TEMBER 17, AND WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 19, 2001

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that when the Senate completes its business today, it adjourn until 10 a.m. Monday, September 17, for a pro forma session only; further, that when the Senate adjourns on Monday, it stand in adjournment until 10 a.m. Wednesday, September 19. I further ask unanimous consent that on Wednesday, immediately following the prayer and the pledge, the Journal of proceedings be approved to date, the morning hour be deemed to have expired, and the time for the two leaders be reserved for their use later in the day.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

PROGRAM

Mr. REID. Monday, the Senate will convene at 10 a.m. for a pro forma session and adjourn until Wednesday at 10 a.m. On Wednesday, the Senate may consider any available appropriations bills or the Department of Defense authorization bill. No rollcall votes will occur prior to 10 a.m., Thursday, September 20.

ORDER FOR ADJOURNMENT

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate stand in adjournment under the previous order following the remarks of Senator HARKIN.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. REID). Without objection, it is so ordered.

NOMINATION OF JOHN NEGROPONTE TO REPRESENT THE U.S. AT THE UNITED NATIONS

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I rise this afternoon at this late hour on Friday at the close of a terrible week—a week which has seared itself into our very being for the rest of our lives—to object to the approval of John Negroponte to serve as U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations.

I understand an agreement was reached that this nomination be passed on a voice vote today. It has been made, and certainly I will honor and respect the agreement. However, I believe this nomination deserves a full debate on the Senate floor and a full look into the record of this individual who is about to represent all of us in the United Nations.

I understand and I agree that America needs a U.N. ambassador. We do need someone there, especially given the terrorist attacks on our Nation this week, in terms of an international dialogue and international response to this terrorist attack. But I believe it is also important that all Senators be given an opportunity to vote on this controversial nomination and to debate it.

Why is Mr. Negroponte’s nomination so controversial? Why did the Baltimore Sun, in April of this year, devote a five-part series just on this one nominee? Well, I think there are two considerations that stand out in my mind, and I will explain why I oppose his nomination.

First of all, Mr. Negroponte showed a callous disregard for human rights abuses throughout his tenure as U.S. Ambassador to Honduras between 1981 and 1985, during which time I traveled to Honduras and, in fact, went out to one of the contra camps with the Ambassador at that time. Quite frankly, in my conversations at that time in Honduras, and with the later revelations of what was going on with Battalion 316, we were basically trained by our CIA and our military personnel—when a lot of these issues came to light, it became clear to me that during my trip there I was misled and, quite frankly, not given the correct information that I sought.

Secondly, I believe Mr. Negroponte knowingly misinformed the U.S. State Department about gross human rights violations in Honduras and throughout Central America during the height of the so-called contra war in Central America in the 1980s.

That action, in turn, resulted in the Congress being misled as to the scope and nature of gross human rights violations that were being committed by the contras and by the Honduran military and, in particular, Battalion 316 in the Honduran military.

In a letter to The Economist in 1982, then-Ambassador Negroponte wrote:

It is simply untrue that death squads have made appearances in Honduras.

Yet from 1981 to 1984 over 150 people disappeared, including one American priest, Father James Carney, whose body has never been recovered.

All indications are it was Battalion 316 that took custody of and had contact over Father Carney. There had been reports that they interrogated him, that he was severely tortured and killed—he was an American citizen, an American priest—during the time of Mr. Negroponte’s ambassadorship.

I am not saying in any way he was responsible. I do not want anyone to get that wrong. All I am saying is as Ambassador at that time, there is a lot of evidence to show he just turned a blind eye and a deaf ear to the human rights abuses at that time in Honduras.

The 1997 CIA Inspector General’s report and other official records, as well as extensive research published in numerous books and articles, have implicated Mr. Negroponte personally in condoning and covering up egregious human rights violations during his service in Honduras in the 1980s. Read the five-part series that was in the Baltimore Sun in 1995 and later amplified this year. That lays out the case quite clearly.

Is he really the best nominee President Bush could find to represent our Nation at the United Nations? I think not. I guess what bothers me more than anything else is, as we move ahead seeking to get other nations to support our efforts to uphold human rights around the world, he does not bring clean hands to this critically important and senior diplomatic post.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the following articles be printed in the Senate Record:

HARD QUESTIONS FOR U.N. NOMINEE

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I understand agreements were made. I wish we had a fuller debate on this nominee. I want the record to show if, in fact, there was a record vote on this nominee, this Senator from Iowa would have voted no.

I thank the President, and I yield the floor.

[From the Los Angeles Times, Apr. 16, 2001]

HARD QUESTIONS FOR U.N. NOMINEE

Under normal circumstances, President Bush’s nomination of a veteran U.S. diplomat like John D. Negroponte to be ambassador to the United Nations would be a routine matter. Negroponte is well regarded in the State Department and close to Secretary of State Colin L. Powell. Senate approval would be all but certain.

But while Negroponte’s 37-year career in the foreign service has admittedly been an impressive upward arc of increasingly important ambassadorships, it was not routine. It would be a mistake for the Senate, and particularly for the Committee on Foreign Relations, to treat Negroponte with kid gloves.

To be sure, Negroponte’s diplomatic career has been marked by noteworthy accomplishments. He handled sensitive embassy posts quite effectively, most notably Mexico City
CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—SENATE
September 14, 2001
17088
in the years leading up to the North American Free Trade Agreement and Manila following the Philipino junta under Ferdinand Marcos’ regime. But Negroponte’s career also includes some troubling activities that took place in Honduras during his tenure as ambassador there, between 1981 and 1985.

Those were the years when President Ronald Reagan ordered the CIA to launch covert activities against Nicaragua, and many Sandinistas, such as Colonel Gisberto grenade, were being killed or kidnapped in neighboring Nicaragua. The key element of Reagan’s anti-Nicaraguan strategy was a guerrilla war waged by a puppet army based in Honduras and led by a man named Countercosta. It was composed largely of former soldiers of Nicaraguan dictator Anastasio Somoza, whom the Sandinistas had ousted. With such unsavory allies, the Contra war was immediately controversial, and Congress imposed limits on how the CIA could wage it.

Among other things, Congress insisted that before a small nation like Honduras received massive increases in military aid (from $4 million a year to $77 million during Negroponte’s tenure alone) that the U.S. Embassy there had to verify that the notoriously corrupt Honduran army would use the money properly. The Honduran security forces were not, for instance, to use the money to finance illegal kidnappings or otherwise violate the human rights of their fellow citizens. Congress even required annual human rights reports on Honduras to ensure that its mandate was being carried out.

The human rights reports that Negroponte signed on to during his tenure in Honduras need to be carefully reviewed by the Senate. While he routinely reported few violations by the Honduran government, it has since become public record, through declassified government documents and reputable reports in the U.S. and Honduran press, that the Honduran military was indeed engaged in some very brutal activities in support of the Contras and U.S. policy.

Honduran officials have documented the disappearance of as many as 184 Honduran citizens, not just political dissidents but innocent people who may have had nothing to do with the Contras. Most of these disappearances took place during that period. Some of those kidnappings and murders were carried out by a secret, CIA-trained Honduran death squad known as Battalion 316, and other covert operations in support of the Contras and U.S. policy. Negroponte was in it up to his elbows.

During his 37-year career with the State Department, Negroponte has held several sensitive embassy jobs in Asia (Vietnam, during the war, and the Philippines in the 1990s) and Latin America (Mexico, in the years leading up to the North American Free Trade Agreement, and Honduras, during the start of the Contra war in Nicaragua). It is Negroponte’s tenure in Honduras, from 1981 to 1985, that the Senate needs to consider.

