I traveled all over Central America in those days, knew Negroponte and members of his staff and have no illusions about anyone who was involved in those brush-fire wars. So upon learning that both sides in the same of national security—from the Sandinistas to wholesale massacres. It was quite literally a bloody mess, and Negroponte was in it.

Just how deep we don’t know because Negroponte’s involvement in covert U.S. activities in Honduras has never been fully revealed. In 1985, the Mexican government protested Negroponte’s 1989 appointment to run the U.S. embassy there. Former Mexican President Carlos Salinas de Gortari wanted NAFTA so badly that he may have interrogated Carney. Carney personally had interrogated Carney. Carney’s body has not been found, and the people responsible for his death have never been identified. Whether any U.S. agents or officials were involved in his disappearance remains an open question.

Congress needs to revisit before punching Secretary of State Colin Powell’s ticket on the important role of the Bush administration and the U.S. in Central America.

In a section with repeated references to the capture and execution of Jose Maria Reyes Mata, the political leader of the group, the CIA inspector general’s report cited a source whose name has been blacked out who “believes that the embassy country team in Washington. Yet their annual human-rights reports to Congress did not reflect what they knew was going on all around them. In just one of the less egregious cases (no one was killed), the 1982 year-end report to Congress asserted there had been “no incident of official interference with human rights.” Yet in June 1982, Negroponte had personally intervened with the Hondurans to free a prominent journalist, Oscar Reyes, who had been arrested and tortured by Battalion 316 for a week. The ambassador did so at the behest of his embassy’s press spokesman, who warned Negroponte: “We cannot let this guy burn... It would be a disaster for our policy.”

The Sun series should be reread by every member of the Senate before Negroponte comes before them for confirmation later this spring. Better yet, the Foreign Affairs Committee should move beyond what one chairwoman, Senator Barbara Boxer, called “a correspondent: Central America. And if you loved how the Bushies tossed those alleged Russian spies out of the country, wait until you see what’s for dessert. Warmed over Contras!

Or, to be more precise, a warmed-over Contra paymaster. John D. Negroponte, who has been nominated to be ambassador to the United Nations.

You remember the Contras—the CIA-funded guerrillas who waged a futile war to overthrow the revolutionary Sandinista government in Nicaragua, until the Nicaraguan people simply voted the Sandinistas out of power. Even those poor Central Americans, it turned out, knew how democracy works. But more on the Contras later.

It is no longer news that most of the men (doesn’t National Security Advisor Condoleezza Rice know any women she can suggest for some of these jobs?) President Bush wants to put in key positions on his foreign policy team are Cold Warriors from the days of the Cold War and the days of the Bush First. But some of the guys being hauled out of cold storage have worrisome histories that Congress needs to revisit before puching these tickets on the Negroponte bandwagon.

Among other things, Congress insisted that before a small nation like Honduras received massive increases in military aid (from $4 million a year to $77 million during Negroponte’s tenure alone) that the U.S. Embassy there had to verify that the notoriously corrupt Honduran army would use the money properly. The Honduran security forces were not, for instance, to use the money to finance illegal kidnappings or otherwise violate the human rights of their fellow citizens. Congress even required annual human rights reports on Honduras to ensure that its mandate was being carried out.

The human rights reports that Negroponte signed on to during his tenure in Honduras need to be carefully reviewed by the Senate. While he routinely reported few violations by the Honduran government, it has since become public record, through declassified government documents and reputable reports in the U.S. and Honduran press, that the Honduran military was indeed engaged in some very brutal activities in support of the Contras and U.S. policy.

Honduran officials have documented the disappearance of as many as 184 Honduran citizens, not just political dissidents but innocent people who may have had nothing to do with the Contras. Most of these disappearances took place during that period. Some of those kidnappings and murders were carried out by a secret, CIA-trained Honduran death squad known as Battalion 316. The group was captured by the Honduran military during the Contra war. The Contra war was an ugly and inconclusive affair—but brush-fire wars usually are. And no one is suggesting that Negroponte bears all, or even most, of the blame for whatever excesses may have taken place in Honduras. But he had a legal obligation to personally have interrogated Carney. Carney’s body has not been found, and the people responsible for his death have never been identified. Whether any U.S. agents or officials were involved in his disappearance remains an open question.

Call me parochial, but what has me shivering is that before a small nation like Honduras received massive increases in military aid (from $4 million a year to $77 million during Negroponte’s tenure alone) that the U.S. Embassy there had to verify that the notoriously corrupt Honduran army would use the money properly. Honduras wanted reports on subjects such as this to be benign to avoid Congress looking over its shoulder. The embassy seemed particularly sensitive to reports about the operation in which the two U.S. citizens disappeared, the report said, quoting another source as saying, "a discussion . . . circa 1983 wherein the latter indicated that unspecified individuals at the embassy did not want information concerning human rights abuses . . . to be disseminated because it was viewed as an internal Honduran matter."

This is corroborated by an Aug. 19, 1985, handwritten memo declassified by the State Department. "Fr. Carney case . . . is dead. Front office does not want the case active. . . . We aren't telling that to the family."

The CIA report cites another person whose name has been deleted as explaining "the basis for no further reporting on the prisoner executions—the event had been reported previously and there was concern on the part of Negroponte that an admission of an unwarranted human rights problem for Honduras."

Among his conclusions, the CIA inspector general states: "The ambassador was particularly sensitive regarding the issue and was concerned that earlier CIA reporting on the same topic might create a human rights problem for Honduras. Based on the ambassador's reported concerns, [blacked out] actively discouraged [blacked out] from following up the information reported [blacked out] source."

It was up to members of Congress to determine whether Honduras had a human rights problem. But Negroponte denied the facts needed for their judgment.

IN FROM THE COLD WAR; BUSH'S PICK FOR U.N. AMBASSADOR HAS SOME STUPID STUFF ON HIS RESUME

(By Terry J. Allen)

Like spooks from an abandoned B-Movie gravytrain, the Reagan administration was crammed into the tiny country with U.S. bases and troops. It was run out of Washington, but much of the on-the-ground logistics for the deployment of intelligence, arms and soldiers was run out of Honduras. U.S. military aid to Honduras jumped from $3.9 million in 1983 to $77.4 million by 1984. So crammed was the tiny country with U.S. bases and troops that it was dubbed the USS Honduras, as if it were simply an offshore staging ground.

The captain of this ship, Negroponte was in charge for six years when, according to a 1995 four-part series in the Baltimore Sun, hundreds of Hondurans were kidnapped, tortured and killed by Battalion 316, a secret army intelligence unit trained and supported by the Central Intelligence Agency. As Gary Cohn and Ginger Thompson wrote in the series, Battalion 316 used "shock and suffocation devices in interrogations. Prisoners often were kept naked and, when no longer useful, killed and buried in unmarked graves. Members of Battalion 316 were trained in surveillance at a secret location in the United States and by the CIA at bases in Honduras. Gen. Gustavo Alvarez Martinez, the chief of the Honduran armed forces, was well aware of Battalion 316, also trained in the United States at the School of the Americas."

Negroponte tried to distance himself from the pattern of abuses, even after a flood of declassified documents exposed the extent of U.S. involvement with Battalion 316. In a segment of the 1998 CNN mini-series Cold War, Negroponte said that "some of the retrospective effort to try and suggest that we were supportive of, or condoned the actions of, human rights violators is really revisionistic."

By the time Negroponte was appointed ambassador by President Reagan in 1981, human rights activists in Honduras were vocally denouncing abuses. Former Honduran congressmen Efrain Diaz Arrivillage pleaded with Negroponte and other U.S. officials to stop the abuses committed by the U.S.-controlled military. "The only way to avoid one of tolerance and silence," Diaz said the Sun, "is to deal with human rights violations in the most unambiguous way."

Negroponte ignored such protests, and annulled State Department reports from Honduras that gave the impression that the Honduran military respected human rights. But in an interview with The Times, Negroponte's predecessor as ambassador, Carter appointee Jack Binns, tells a different story: "Negroponte would have had to deliberately blind not to know about human rights violations. . . . One of the things a departing ambassador does is prepare a briefing book, and one of those issues we included [in our briefing book] was how to deal with the escalation of human rights issues."

Binns considered the U.S. support for Alvarez and Battalion 316 "counterproductive" to the declared objective of "establishing a rule of law." This lack of enthusiasm, Binns says, is believed to have contributed to the failure of the Reagan administration, which he served, for several months before Negroponte took over.

In the summer of 1981, Binns recalls, "I was called out of the blue by Tom Enders, the assistant secretary of state. He asked me to stop reporting human rights violations through official State Department channels and to use back channels because they were afraid of leaks."

As Binns explains, back-channel messages "don't officially exist. The message is transmitted over CIA channels, decrypted, and hand-carried from Langley, one copy only. No record."

Binns did not agree to use back channels and when he returned to Honduras, he received no further reports of human rights violations from the CIA. "I was deliberately lied to," says Binns, who later found out that Reagan administration had been working behind his back.

Honduras was only one of many hot spots where Negroponte served. He spent four years as ambassador in Nicaragua and the FMLN rebels in 1981; Jose Francisco Rivera Miranda, October 1, 1983; Pedro Jose Amador Meza, January 22, 1983; Dolores Geraldina Garcia Zelaya, February 17, 1983; Melba Caceres Mondragon, March 15, 1983; Jose Martinez Vasquez, March 17, 1983; Filiberto Flores Zuniga, April 13, 1983; Victor Manuel Torres Lopez, April 13, 1983; Luis Alonso Romero Ortiz, April 24, 1983; Daniel Velasquez Nunez, May 4, 1983; Jose Eloy Torres Barahona, June 1, 1983; Victor Manuel Ramos, June 10, 1983; Jose Amilcar Mardiaga, July 1, 1983; Marco Antonio Marin Aguilar, August, 1983; Ramon Adolfo Bustillo Jimenez, September 9, 1983; Roberto Munguia, September 28, 1983; Jose Mejia Mateo, October 1, 1983; Jose Melanio Valle Alvarado, October 1, 1983; Juan Francisco Carvajal (Patricio Guzman), December 1983; Juan Batista Canales H., December 15, 1983.

BRUCE COLE, OF INDIANA, TO BE CHAIRPERSON OF THE NATIONAL ENDOWMENT FOR THE HUMANITIES FOR A TERM OF FOUR YEARS.

NATIONAL FOUNDATION FOR THE ARTS AND THE HUMANITIES

JOHN W. GILLIS, OF CALIFORNIA, TO BE DIRECTOR OF THE OFFICE OF VICTIMS OF CRIME.
The House met at 9 a.m.

The Chaplain, the Reverend Daniel P. Coughlin, offered the following prayer:

O Lord, open my lips, and my mouth will declare Your praise. On this national day of prayer and remembrance, moved by the exhortation of President Bush and the tragic events of Tuesday, we gather first to pray and then be about the work of Congress.

Ever mindful of the many victims, we pray, O Lord, in solidarity with their families, all who have come to their assistance, and with friends around the world. Circumstances such as Tuesday's horror shake us to new awareness and the need to pray, but prayer itself originates in You, O Lord. By Your own spirit in us we are moved, act, and have our being. Weeping and groaning deep within us the spirit cries out Abba, Father. Your spirit animates us as we struggle to find words to express all the sentiments of the heart.

As each of us searches the depths of our own being in his or her own way, we know it is You alone who can change human hearts. You alone, through dialogue with You, can give us the right words and the right thing to do, if only we would listen and enter into the silence of Your presence. You alone can reshape perspective and bring to focus determined goals based on the truth that removes illusion. You alone can move hearts to repentance for evil perpetrated on others. You alone can take stony hearts and recreate them by Your Holy Spirit into fleshy hearts, hearts which are moved beyond self to respond to the pain of brothers and sisters in the human family.

You, Lord, can make us one, heal our wounds, forgive our sins, and bring us to a new level of peace and freedom, where all people of faith can find expression, moved by Your spirit. And with Your help, together, we can create a truly pluralistic world where we can live in peace and unity, promised by Your kingdom, Thy kingdom come.

Borne out of pain, moved by compassion, strengthened by the diversity of others, we know it is You, Lord God, who brings us to pray and declare Your praise, now and forever. Amen.

pledge of allegiance

The SPEAKER. Will the gentleman from Texas (Mr. THORNBERY) come forward and lead the House in the Pledge of Allegiance.

Mr. THORNBERY led the Pledge of Allegiance as follows:

I pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America, and to the Republic for which it stands, one nation under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.

The Speaker. The Chair will entertain 1-minute requests at a later time today.

making in order at any time consideration of H.R. 2888, 2001 emergency supplemental appropriations act for recovery from and response to terrorist attacks on the United States

Mr. YOUNG of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that it be in order at any time without interval of any point of order to consider in the House the bill (H.R. 2888) making emergency supplemental appropriations for fiscal year 2001 for additional disaster assistance, for anti-terrorism initiatives, and for assistance in the recovery from the tragedy that occurred on September 11, 2001, and for other purposes; that the bill be considered as read for amendment; and that the previous question be considered as ordered on the bill to final passage without intervening motion except: One, one hour of debate equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Appropriations; and, two, one motion to recommit.

The Speaker pro tempore (Mr. THORNBERY). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Florida? There was no objection.

Mr. YOUNG of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to dispose and extend their remarks on H.R. 2888, and that I may include tabular and extraneous material. The Speaker pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Florida? There was no objection.

2001 emergency supplemental appropriations act for recovery from and response to terrorist attacks on the United States

Mr. YOUNG of Florida. Mr. Speaker, pursuant to the order just adopted, I call up the bill (H.R. 2888) making emergency supplemental appropriations for fiscal year 2001 for additional disaster assistance, for anti-terrorism initiatives, and for assistance in the recovery from the tragedy that occurred on September 11, 2001, and for other purposes, and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the following sums are appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to provide emergency supplemental appropriations for fiscal year 2001, namely:

Executive Office of the President and Funds Appropriated to the President emergency response fund

(including transfers of funds)

For emergency expenses to respond to the terrorist attacks on the United States that occurred on September 11, 2001, to provide assistance to the victims of the attacks, and to deal with other consequences of the attacks, $40,000,000,000, to remain available until expended, including for the costs of (1) providing Federal, State, and local preparedness for investigating and attacking attacks, (2) providing support to counter, investigate, or prosecute domestic or international terrorism, (3) providing increased transportation security, (4) repairing public facilities and transportation systems damaged by the attacks, and (5) supporting national security; Provided, That these funds may be transferred to any authorized Federal Government activity to meet the purposes of this Act: Provided further, That the Congress designates the entire amount as an emergency requirement pursuant to section 251(b)(2)(A) of the Balanced Budget and Emergency Deficit Control Act of 1985: Provided further, That $40,000,000,000 shall be available only to the extent that an official budget request, that includes designation of the $40,000,000,000 as an emergency requirement as defined in the Balanced Budget and Emergency Deficit Control Act of 1985, is transmitted by the President to the Congress; Provided further, That the President shall consult with the chairmen and ranking minority members of the Committees on Appropriations prior to the transfer of these funds: Provided further, That the $40,000,000,000 made available herein, $10,000,000,000 shall not be available for transfer to any Department or Agency until 15 days after the Director of the Office of Management and Budget has submitted to

Mr. Speaker, the bill that we present today, H.R. 2888, is an emergency supplemental appropriations bill that basically provides $40 billion to be available as needed by the President and as agreed to by the Congress, in order to mobilize this Nation to fight this fight, to eliminate the threat of terrorism from the United States and from the civilized world.

We are going to move this bill quickly today, and we are going to have this mobilization underway. I think that the world will be impressed, and I believe that fear should be in the hearts of the terrorists because our people will not live in fear. We will not allow that to happen.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 14 minutes.

Mr. Speaker, this bill is a response to the worst attack on U.S. soil in the history of our republic. That attack requires a response which is focused, strong, mature, and lasting. That attack requires a response that is based on solid unity, and that unity must be based upon the recognition of and the overcoming of our differences, not in the ignoring or the papering over of our differences. That is the only way to provide true unity over the long haul.

Very frankly, twice in the last 2 days I was concerned that that unity would not come about. This morning I can tell every Member of this House without question that those divisions have been overcome during negotiations on this bill, and I think it is important that some Members who have some misgivings understand the history of this bill.

During negotiations on this bill, money has never been an object. Make no mistake about it, this committee, the Appropriations, will provide whatever resources are needed to respond to this challenge, not just today, not just tomorrow, but for as long as it takes; but it is crucial in our rush to a response that we preserve and protect the institutional arrangements that have been the very foundation of our liberty since the Constitution was first written.

Mr. Speaker, the Congress has essentially only two powers that mean anything in the scheme of things. The first is the War Power; the second is the power of the purse. Very frankly, I am sad to say because of the nature of the times that we live in, the nature of technology and our own history over the last 30 years, the Congress’ power to determine when we go to war has substantially eroded.

Today, except in the most extraordinary circumstances, it is, frankly, the President who decides whether we will pull the trigger. But that means that Members of Congress, under the oath that we all took, to maintain the power of the purse. And we do not do that for turf reasons; we do it because that is the fundamental power that Congress has, to preserve liberty for every American.

Let me give some practical examples. These are not examples, they are data, they go to the core of the relationship between branches of government.

The World Trade Center in New York. I have no idea how that is going to finally be rebuilt, but at some point I think it is safe to say there may be a question about whether the Federal Government plays a role in funding that. I do not know what the outcome of that will be, but I do know that Congress as an institution has a right to be involved in those decisions. This is not a decision that can just be made by one branch of government unilaterally.

The subway damage in New York. Decisions about the shape and nature of Federal involvement in repairing the subway must be made on a collaborative basis between the two branches of government.

Public safety at airports. That is our first line of defense against terrorism and that failed this week. We are going to have major decisions made about how safety at airports are upgraded. The Congress must be able to take advantage of the expertise that people in this body have, people like the chairman of the subcommittee, the gentleman from Kentucky (Mr. ROGERS), the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. OBERSTAR), and others who know a great deal about this.

That expertise can be brought to bear only by congressional participation in those decisions. These are just some fairly mundane examples, but they are important in the long-term scheme of things.

The first package that was presented to us was, frankly, a blank check; and to the credit of the people involved, that approach was rejected. This is going to be a long fight. We are going to have major decisions made about how that money is going to be spent, and I want to describe what it means to improving and enhancing security.

Mr. Speaker, we are in day three of a new world. As a past President indicated a long time ago, we are entering into a long twilight struggle against terrorism. This is going to be a very nasty enterprise. Our country for its entire history has been shielded by two oceans from this kind of threat. Today with modern technology, with modern transportation, it is not only the economy that is global, we also have a global capability of people to take out their hatred on those that they do not like.

There is no question America paid a price for world leadership. If it proves to be that the people who perpetrated this act are those we suspect, it will demonstrate a price for the world's failure to find a resolution to the Middle East problems. We have also paid a price for a long period of underfunding a number of critical public service items, including airport security.

This is going to be a long fight. We need to be able to stick together for the duration. That means we are going to have to be able to trust each other implicitly. We are going to have to be able to trust each other's word. And we are going to have to have a respectful relationship between the two branches of government. Because it is very easy, once the getting goes tough on an issue like this, for people to bail out. The only thing that will keep us together is conscience and unity built on honest agreement.

I want to thank a few people. I want to thank Senator BYRD who in my view was fierce in defense of the institutional prerogatives that we must hold dear. These prerogatives are important, not because they make us powerful but because they are the only tools that enable us to protect the liberty of each and every American that we represent. I want to thank Senator STEVENS for overcoming his differences and working with all of us, I want to thank Chairman YOUNG. BILLY YOUNG and I have a long relationship. We are friends, we are sometimes adversaries, but in all instances we are partners, and we will be partners for a long time to come as we deal with these issues. I want to thank the minority leader, Mr. GEPhardt, because he intervened on three separate and crucial occasions in order to convey a seriousness of purpose on both ends of the avenue that was necessary to overcome our differences. I want to thank our Speaker. Yesterday on at least two occasions he demonstrated what leadership is all about. And I think it is safe to say that, more than almost anyone, he recognized the need for true unity yesterday and he recognized, as I said earlier, that unity needed to be based upon the overcoming of our differences rather than the papering over of our differences.

I also want to thank our staff on both sides of the aisle. Many people sitting here this morning have been working for days on this, but I especially want to single out Scott Lilly, the staff director on our side of the aisle, and Jim Dyer on the Republican side of the aisle. As usual, they have helped us to bridge differences and they have helped us protect the prerogatives and the needs of this institution. And the way they do it on a daily basis is a constant demonstration of the day-to-day actions that constitute true patriotism. I am profound in my admiration for them and all of those who work with them.

I want to say to the people of New York, there is not a district in this country that is more different from New York than mine. But every person in my district today stands as one with the people of New York. They have experienced a tragedy which is unparalleled. Our hearts go out to every single family who has lost anyone. I want to express our solidarity with those folks at the Pentagon, those folks who work there. They defend our country abroad and at home. Some of them paid the ultimate price and we will not forget. I want to thank those that were on the various airplanes that crashed who gave us fragmentary information about what happened and, at least on several occasions, obviously engaged in struggles which may have preserved the existence of the very building in which we work today. We owe them a lot. And we owe to each other efforts to build a new relationship and a new sense of cooperation in this town, in fact, meet the responsibilities that we were elected to perform.

I urge support for this bill.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. YOUNG of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 1 minute.
Mr. Speaker, when America is attacked, when any American is attacked, when any of our places is attacked, all of our country is attacked. America was attacked on last Tuesday. The New York delegation took place in New York City and on our Defense Department here in northern Virginia. The gentleman from Wisconsin just eloquently referred to that. The New York delegation has been very strong in supporting whatever efforts need to be done to help the recovery in New York. The Governor of the State, Governor Pataki, the mayor of the city, Mayor Giuliani, all of the officials, the police, the firefighters, the emergency medical technicians, the doctors, the nurses, the civilians who volunteered, everyone has just responded in such a tremendous way, an outpouring of support and unity. It is just amazing to watch this response.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from New York (Mr. WALSH), one of the leaders of his Congressional delegation and also a leader on the Committee on Appropriations. He and other members of the delegation spoke to us eloquently yesterday at a meeting that we held with them.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Speaker, it has often been said that America is great because it is good. This bill exemplifies the goodness of our Nation. I would like to begin by thanking the President of the United States who has been a pillar of strength throughout this incredible period of time. When I watched him yesterday, I saw tears welling up in his eyes. I saw his chin quiver. All of us have felt that since this incident occurred. But at the same time it was a velvet surface on a solid steel interior, and I think that is the way everyone has approached this tragedy.

I am so proud of this Nation. I am so proud of my colleagues here in the Congress. The way people came together to resolve this, partisanship aside, bicameral differences aside, would make this country and should make this country proud. The generosity of the American people is reflected in its representation here in the Congress, and this bill is the epitome of that generosity, $40 billion. But the point is the first thing the President said to the mayor and to the Governor of New York was, “Whatever it takes.” When I spoke with Chairman YOUNG, he said, “We’re going to provide whatever it takes.” Ranking Member OBEY, “Whatever it takes.” There was no issue of money anywhere along the line. I want to express my thanks to them.

Yesterday, I had the occasion to visit the Pentagon and to see the courage and bravery and the professional demeanor of the men and women who are working there. It inspires great strength in my heart and in my soul. The people of FEMA, the men and women over whom my subcommittee has oversight, are leading the efforts in both locations. Director Albaugh is in New York City doing his job. And he is proud to do it. We will be providing funds through this bill to FEMA. FEMA has already allocated approximately $65 million for the response in both locations. The estimates from FEMA at this point, and they are preliminary estimates, are that the costs for the clean-up and reconstruction of this site in New York alone will be in the neighborhood of $9 to $10 billion. Those are only estimates. There are other estimates that are much higher. But clearly this is a proper, appropriate response to the initial damage that was done.

The promise that this bill provides from getting our city and our Pentagon back on track to tracking down the perpetrators of this incredible mass murder, is that the necessary resources will be there, because everyone, right down the line, including our Speaker, was promised to provide whatever it takes.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 4 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. MURTHA), the distinguished ranking member on the Subcommittee on Defense of the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. MURTHA. Mr. Speaker, I want to compliment the leadership in protecting the prerogatives of the Congress but protecting the prerogatives of the people of this great Nation with the largest supplemental that I have ever seen since I have been in Congress. I think it is a well thought out and carefully drawn bill.

But what I wanted to really talk about was in my district, the tragedy that unfolded there. When we sat in the Capitol, when Jerry Lewis and I sat in the Capitol and heard that a plane was headed towards the Capitol, we evacuated, we listened to the various stories of it. We didn’t think it was the Pentagon. Then I traveled back to the district. I listened to the people who saw the airplane crash. I listened to the people in the tower in Johnstown, Pennsylvania, who explained to me they had a notification from Cleveland center about 10 minutes before the plane went over. It went over Johnstown airport at about 6,000 feet. I recognized, with all my years of experience listening to reports on terrorism, that the plane was struggling, that whole time. The plane started to disintegrate, apparently, four or five miles from the site where it landed.

When a reporter has asked me, why I stayed here, they think of the people who are working the 18094 in Johnstown, Pennsylvania, well, as proud as I am of our district, there is no question in my mind the Capitol of the United States is a symbol of freedom worldwide. There is no question in my mind that this attack was directed towards the Capitol and it would have been disastrous with the loss of life and the symbolism that it would have presented to the perpetrators of this tragedy.

I am convinced they struggled. They fought. They missed a school by about four or five miles from the site where it hit. They missed the airport by a couple of miles. They missed the airport by a couple of miles. But when I say a couple of miles, I am talking about seconds. This plane was traveling at just under the speed of sound. I am not sure anyone, any of those people that saw it crash into the ground said it was upside down when it hit. I have seen tragedy in Beirut the day after the bombing. I have been to Somalia and Bosnia and Vietnam. I have never seen anything as horrendous as this crash. It apparently came straight in, avoided all the land, all the houses, the structures and so forth, and their purpose was consummated.

As a matter of fact, a number of people and I agree with this, recommended we should put a small monument out there at the location where this plane hit. We are going to do that. We are going to also put a plaque with all the names at the Johnstown airport, because I consider these folks as real heroes. If anything came out of that, it shows the strength of America. These folks decided in their own mind, and having been a combat veteran myself, I understand the tough decisions you have to make when your life is threatened. These folks made the decision that they were not going to let this plane hit a populated area.

I want to commend them. I want to console the families. As tragic and sorrowful as this is, the fact that they have saved so many lives, if there is any bright spot at all in this terrible tragedy, it is the fact that these people gave their lives to protect the Capitol of the United States, which is the symbol of freedom throughout the world.

Mr. YOUNG of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from New York (Mr. SWEEENEY), another distinguished member of the New York delegation, who is also a member of the Committee on Appropriations, and was very instrumental in helping us to resolve this appropriations bill today.

Mr. SWEEENEY. Mr. Speaker, I thank the chairman for yielding me the time. Mr. Speaker, we have seen extraordinary efforts in bravery throughout America in the last several days; and as a New Yorker, yesterday I saw extraordinary efforts in recognition by a number of people. As a New Yorker, I wanted to convey to those back home so it is understood, first, obviously, the President of the United States in recognizing the devastation and the deep hurt that was affecting all of us. Second, Mr. Speaker, I watched my chairman, the gentleman from Florida (Chairman YOUNG), recognize, understand and
Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the distinguished gentleman from Missouri (Mr. SKELTON), the distinguished ranking member of the Committee on Armed Services.

Mr. SKELTON. I certainly thank the gentleman for yielding me time.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of this supplemental appropriation bill. We are here because there has been an outrage to decency, to American decency, by the attacks of September 11. We today are reflecting by our debate and by our votes the outrage of all Americans.

I realize that the words of condolences and the words of anger and outrage have nearly all been said, but we are here to act today. We are here to act by considering this legislation and passing it, hopefully unanimously, so that we can support the staggering loss of life and the symbols of American prowess in the world that have been damaged or destroyed. We are saddened for that.

But never let there be a doubt that we as Americans will retaliate, and that those who perpetrated this or harbored those who perpetrated it will long remember that they should never touch America again.

Mr. YOUNG of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 30 seconds.

Mr. Speaker, I do so to say that in addition to the security of the Nation that we talk about with respect to our uniformed services and our military personnel and those who are at war at any given time and those who serve this Nation so well, who are all volunteers, by the way, Mr. Speaker, intelligence is an important part of our Nation's security.

We have a very distinguished leader as chairman of our Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence, a friend of mine for a long time, a colleague, I had the privilege of serving on the Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence for 14 years. The gentleman from Florida (Mr. GOSSS) is a former intelligence officer himself and has done a great job leading the Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence. Most of the time the work that the gentleman and the folks who deal with national defense do not get much exposure, because much of that work must be done in secret.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Florida (Mr. Goss), the distinguished chairman of the Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence.

Mr. GOSSS. Mr. Speaker, I am much obliged to my good friend and colleague and very distinguished former member of the committee, whose wisdom we still enjoy on the committee, my friend, the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations, the gentleman from Florida (Mr. YOUNG),

We are equally blessed to have as the chairman of the Subcommittee on Defense the gentleman from California (Mr. LEWIS), who has also served on committee with great distinction. I do not think this country realizes how lucky we have people like the gentleman from California (Mr. LEWIS), the gentleman from Florida (Mr. YOUNG), the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. MURTHA), and the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. OBEY), who understand the sensitivity and the necessity of the business that we deal with.

We do have some necessary business I need to bring up, and I would like to engage in a colloquy, if I may. I think as Members of the House are aware, the National Security Act requires a specific authorization for each dollar spent by the United States Government on intelligence and intelligence-related activities. This is a safeguard for Americans. In cases such as this, when an emergency spending bill is passed by Congress that includes funds for intelligence, it is customary to include a provisional authorization in the bill for those intelligence dollars.

I would like to seek the assurance of my good friends from Florida and California that although there is a provisional authorization for intelligence funds, it is their intent and the intent of the legislation that the administration will provide the appropriate congressional committees with a detailed accounting for all intelligence spending in this bill.

Mr. LEWIS of California. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GOSS. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. LEWIS of California. Mr. Chairman, I can assure the gentleman that when it comes to intelligence funding that may be in this bill, it is indeed the intent of this legislation that the administration will provide Congress with specific spending plans as funds are obligated as well as detailed records of expenditures actually made.

Mr. Speaker, further, the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. MURTHA) and I have just signed a letter to the director of the agency to make certain that there is a clear understanding of that very point that the gentleman makes.

Mr. Speaker, regrading (inaudible), Mr. Speaker, reclaiming my time, I thank my colleague. I also definitely look forward to continuing to work closely with the gentleman and his committee to ensure that the money in this bill and all future intelligence-related tools have people there to strengthen and improve our intelligence capabilities, near term and long term. Is that accurate?

Mr. LEWIS of California. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman will yield further, that is correct.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the distinguished gentleman from California (Ms. PELOSI), the ranking member on the Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence. Ms. PELOSI. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding, and commend the leadership and all those who participated in bringing this bill to the floor today.

I want to associate myself with the concern expressed by our distinguished chairman of the Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence about having some idea of how this money will be spent before it is. Then I would like to, of course, express my deep condolences to the people of New York and to our military for the tragedy that has befallen our country this week.

Our great President said it was a day that will live in infamy, of another tragic day in our history, and the distinguished chairman mentioned, he also said the only thing we have to fear is fear itself.

It is on that point I would like to just say that fear is the goal of terrorists. They have succeeded when they can frighten a country or frighten a people into the panic that would ensue. They have never met the New Yorkers, who are a fearless lot. The indomitable spirit of New York, I know, will lead the country to the recovery that we must and will have.

But make no mistake, make no mistake, they place no value on human life, these terrorists, so the number of people dead is no victory to them. The structures coming down mean nothing to them, their goal. We must join with New York in its effort to, like the Phoenix, rise from the ashes and give them the defeat, the terrorists the defeat, that they deserve.

Mr. YOUNG of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Kentucky (Mr. ROGERS), the distinguished chairman of the Committee on Appropriations Subcommittee on Transportation, who has a great responsibility; and one of his responsibilities is airline safety and security.

Mr. ROGERS of Kentucky. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

I rise in support of the bill. I want to commend the leadership of the Speaker; of the gentleman from Florida (Mr. YOUNG), the chairman of this committee; the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. OBEY), the ranking member; and the bipartisan leadership for bringing this bill up and bringing it forward.

Mr. Speaker, I have never reflected on the meaning of America’s motto before, but it says it all, I think, and that motto, of course, is “E Pluribus Unum,” Out of Many, One.

America is united now as I have not seen in my adult lifetime. It is heartening to see this morning riding into work Americans with flags flying from the windows of the skyscrapers and the offices of buildings throughout this city and, I am sure, all across America. In the wake of the despicable attack of September 11, Americans are in mourning. They are angry, but they are resolved; they take decisive action against these perpetrators, or those who harbor them. This raw emotion that Americans feel and the anger felt by us all will not easily yield to time, nor should it.

Yesterday, the Congress expressed its sorrow and its resolve. Today, we begin to act. In this bill, we give the President the extraordinary authority and resources to provide relief to the victims suffering so severely, to prosecute efforts that will allow retaliation against our enemies that ensure the safety of our people and to instill public confidence in our public facilities and services. Of paramount concern, of course, is the safety and soundness of our aviation system. We must, and we will, work with the President, the Secretary of Transportation, and the FAA to take immediate medium-term and long-term measures that prevent civilians and commercial aircraft from falling prey to terrorists.

This will be a complex and expensive task. It will require the cooperation of the Congress, Federal transportation officials, the intelligence community, the airline industry, airports, pilots, controllers, all of us. It will require creative thinking and some dramatic changes. But the aviation system is a critical component of this economy. To ensure its viability, the Congress must be convinced and the public must be satisfied that it is a safe system.

We are pleased we have put provisions that have been taken so far by the Secretary of Transportation, but there are many more steps that should be taken. We have to secure the cockpit, we have to have an armed guard on these planes, and we have to greatly enhance the screening capabilities we have to keep out terrorists from the passenger lists and on the tarmac.

So, Mr. Speaker, this bill will go a long way toward that. We have a long ways yet to go, and we will be back here in that respect.

But I support this bill, and I commend our leadership for putting it together in a bipartisan fashion.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. FATTAH), a member of the committee.

Mr. FATTAH. Mr. Speaker, I thank the ranking member and I thank the chairman of the full committee for their work on this matter.

I rise to speak in favor of the supplemental and to also indicate that it is my hope that as we go about seeking to aid those who were victims of this tragedy, that we do not separate out in any way those who were victims in New York from those who were victims here in the District area. That is, I say that I believe that all of those who were killed because of this incident really should be treated as if they died in service to this country, and that a comparable level of remuneration should be provided for even those who were not part of military service, and that a parity of benefits be accomplished through the dollars provided in this supplemental.

Those who went to work at the World Trade Center, just like those who went to work at the Pentagon on September 11, were targeted out and killed because they were citizens of this country and doing a vital service to this Nation, and I think they should be treated equally in that regard.

Mr. Speaker. Mr. WOLF. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Northern Virginia (Mr. WOLF), who represents the area that includes the Defense Department and the Pentagon, a member of the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. WOLF. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of this supplemental. I want to thank the leadership on both sides; I want to thank the gentleman from Florida (Mr. YOUNG) and the gentleman from Connecticut (Mr. OBEY) for moving so fast on this issue. This issue has hit the area that I represent. I also want to say my heart goes out to those families in this area and in New York and in New Jersey, in just watching the pain and the suffering and the agony of those who are looking for their loved ones and to let them know how much we care.

Also, I want to thank the rescue workers in my area, in New York City, and the people who have come together. I think this is just the beginning. I believe we should do whatever it takes and make sure that they know that we have the resolve to carry this through to make sure that we root out terrorism.

Lastly, I want to commend the President. We had an opportunity yesterday, and he met with the delegation. He was strong, he was confident. He is committed. And we will resolve this issue, and we will bring victory over terrorism.

I rise in strong support of this supplemental.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the distinguished gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. OBEY), the ranking member, for the fantastic job they did of protecting the prerogatives of this committee. I want to commend them also for the prompt response to this tragic event in our country’s history. Our hearts do go out to the people of New York and the people at the Pentagon who have lost loved ones. This is truly the greatest tragedy in the history of the country.

I rise today just to urge our colleagues, as we think about this problem and prepare for the future, to recognize that we are going to have to strengthen not only our intelligence capability, but our military capability as well. For a number of years, we have been understaffing the Defense Department in terms of procurement and new weapons systems. I mean it has been at a tragic level. Now if we want to retain our military capability, if we want to have the kind of national security that we need for the future, we are going to have to make significant investments beyond those that we are making here today. This will help in some respects, but there still is a lot more that needs to be done.

Again, congratulations to everyone who worked on this. This is a good bill that deserves our support.

Mr. YOUNG of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. PETERSON), another distinguished member of the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. PETERSON of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, today I rise to support this legislation. I rise with all of my colleagues; and I want to commend my colleagues that have brought this all together, because we are here today supporting freedom, preserving freedom, not only here, but around the world. We that supplies freedom to all. This country is the beacon, the artery; and they went for the jugular.

I also am here supporting the heroes, the heroes in New York that gave their lives to get people out. Heroes not mentioned. There were 2,000 Federal employees in buildings 6 and 7, and they got them all out but one because they carried out their plan so well. The passengers on the flight that came down in Pennsylvania. Building 71, as far as all, and we are here supporting them.

If there is something good out of this, because I said in speeches for years that we often in Washington get off of our number one priority. The Federal Government is to preserve freedom, is to protect this country, is to keep us safe and provide safety and freedom around the world. Oftentimes, we have been off on lots of debates and I think this will be spent on the number one role of this government: preserving and fighting for freedom and making sure that the young people in this country understand that it does not just happen, it does not just keep going on; that we have to fight for it, that we have to preserve it, that it has to forever be the number one pri-

Mr. Speaker, I commend all of those that are leading us, including the President, in the direction to do that.

Mrs. LOWEY. Mr. Speaker, I first want to thank the gentleman from Florida (Mr. YOUNG), the chairman of the committee, and the ranking member for their extraordinary work in making this package possible.

In my district today, children grieve for the fathers and mothers who did not come home from work on Tuesday. So many families are grieving. Mr. Speaker. By now we have all heard of the men and women trapped in the World Trade Center calling their spouses saying good-bye. Our hearts and prayers are with all who are still waiting for a loved one to come home. Our arms are around you and America is with you.

As we speak on this floor, hundreds of brave men and women risk their lives minute by minute shifting carefully through the rubble and the twisted steel, searching against hope that they will find survivors in the wreckage of what was once my city’s greatest building. Their heroism has moved us to our very core.

They are ordinary people engaged in the most extraordinary of acts. Each one is a hero and deserves our deepest thanks and praise. And they are not alone. New Yorkers and Americans have responded by the thousands, wait-

Governor Pataki and Mayor Giuliani have made clear that they need funds now to take care of immediate needs: search and rescue, recovery of the victims, support for survivors and victims’ families, and restoration of security and basic services to lower Manhattan. This legislation sends a clear signal that the Nation stands shoulder-to-shoulder with New York as we proceed with our rescue and recovery efforts.

Our priority, and our singular focus, must be finding survivors, healing the injured, and comforting the bereaved. But when the urgent humanitarian needs have been met, we will be faced with the daunting task of starting anew. And we will find that what took seconds to destroy will take years to rebuild.

The package we pass today is merely a downpayment toward what will prove to be the largest recovery effort in our Nation’s history—rough estimates total in the tens of billions of dollars. We will need to clear thousands of tons of debris from the streets. We will need to reconstruct every single one of those air-lanes. We will need to restore the infrastructure of the heart of the world’s financial markets, and we will need to rebuild the economic backbone of the New York area. The ripple effects of this tragedy will be severe—they will be felt across the country, and around the world.

As we embark on this long and torturous journey, I pledge today to my fellow New Yorkers and to all Americans that Congress will be with you every step of the way.

I urge an unanimous passage of this bill.

Mr. YOUNG of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from California (Mr. DREIER), the great chairman of the Committee on Rules.

Mr. DREIER. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time. I want to congratulate the gentleman from Florida (Mr. YOUNG) and his entire team, and the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. OBEY) and, of course, the gentleman from Florida (Mr. Goss) and my friend and the great leader of the Committee on Intelligence, who also serves on the Committee on Rules.

I would like to take just a moment to say that as we express appreciation to all of our colleagues, I would like to express my appreciation to my colleagues on the Committee on Rules who, every night, have been ready and prepared to put together this very important legislation in support of it in a bipartisan way. I want to thank the gentleman from Texas (Mr. Foxx) and those members of the minority as well.

I am very privileged to represent California; and we have all appropriately stood here to focus on New York, Pennsylvania, and the Washington, D.C. metropolitan area. Mr. Speaker, even though we were one of those Manhattan planes that took off from Boston, Newark, Dulles, were headed to my State of California.

I would like to simply express for a moment my heartfelt condolences to the families and the loved ones of those people all the way on the other side of the country who have been horribly impacted by this tragedy. The sense of loss that we have to deal with this is overwhelming, and our great President put it perfectly when he said, “Nothing will diminish the spirit of our country.”

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the distinguished gentleman from New York (Mr. WEINER), who has been on the scene in New York and who gave one of the most moving statements in caucus yesterday that I have heard in the years that I have been in this institution.

Mr. WEINER. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Wisconsin for his remarks.

In my district in Rockaway, in St. Frances DeSales, over 30 families of firefighters today that their loved ones will be returned home. In their prayers, they might not be saying the name of the gentleman from Florida (Chairman YOUNG), but on their behalf I want to offer my thanks for the great work that the chairman has done on behalf of all of those families.

And on behalf of the literally hundreds of men and women who are on the bucket brigade by hand removing what is estimated to be 500,000 tons of debris trying to find survivors, on behalf of those people and others, I thank the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. OBEY) for how disciplined he has been and we have all been in trying to solve this problem quickly.

On behalf of all of the families of those who have been lost, I express my great thanks to all the Members of this body. Their words are indeed comforting to them.

But let us not misunderstand. This was not a successful attack on our country. Our financial services industry is going to be rebuilt stronger than ever. The physical structures in New York City are going to rise up. Our families are going to rise up.

On behalf of our entire country, I say to the terrorists, they have not been successful, and today demonstrates that.

Mr. YOUNG of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the distinguished gentleman from Florida (Mr. MEEK).

Mrs. MEEK of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me.

To my illustrious colleagues on the Committee on Appropriations, I come to this well today to thank them for having shown the highest value that an Appropriations Committee could do. That is what it is all about to be a Member. They have risen to their highest glory today, because they have shown that through their wiles they have been able to bring to the hurt and harm to people in this country the resources of the United States government. That is what we should be about, to be able to act quickly and resolutely to what our problems are. I want to thank the Members for it.

I was around during World War II. I have been a member of the Committee on Appropriations. I know that military preparedness is all about. So do not worry about it, we are doing the right thing. Our young President is doing the right thing. We have to stand behind him. We have to unify, as Americans always do.

I am thankful to be here, having spanned all that time, to come back today to thank God for America.

Mr. YOUNG of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Florida (Mr. SHAW).

Mr. SHAW. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me. I want to compliment the gentleman from Florida (Chairman YOUNG) and the entire Committee on Appropriations and, of course, the ranking member, the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. OBEY), for bringing us together and bringing us together so quickly, which is very difficult, and for giving the President the discretion that he desperately needs in order to really be the true leader.

I think it is also wonderful to note all across this country how we all are gathering and surrounding the President and recognizing the good work that is going to be necessary in order to rebuild and to retaliate.

There is no way that anybody on the face of this Earth can get away with this. I happen to think that we have had just across the Potomac in Virginia, and the awful tragedy that we had in New York, and, of course, that plane full of heroes that crashed in Pennsylvania.

It takes a tragedy like this to bring out the best in us, but I think the best in us has come out across all across this country.

I support this legislation, and urge a unanimous vote from this House of Representatives.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the distinguished gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. OBERTAR), the ranking member of the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure, and one of the House’s resident experts on aviation safety.

Mr. OBERTAR. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me and for those kind words. Let me return the compliment to the leader on our side whose persistence, hard work, and enormous energy have carried the day for us. I thank the chairman for his leadership, the gentleman from Florida (Mr. YOUNG).

The plethora of concerns addressed in this legislative package, I want to signal out the first line of attack in this terrorist incident; that is

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—HOUSE

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the distinguished gentleman from New York (Mr. CROWLEY), who has at this moment, as I understand it, a member of his own family missing in New York.

Mr. CROWLEY. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Florida (Chairman YOUNG) for all his work and the ranking member, the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. OBEY). I want to thank the President for unifying this country. I want to thank the New York delegation for the bipartisan effort that has been taking place in making sure this bill came about.

It makes me proud of the support this Congress has provided, support that has crossed partisan lines to assist New York over the last few days. Right now, my city and our entire Nation are reeling. We are digging out, optimistically searching for survivors, and regrettably, also finding dead.

We have basic infrastructure problems that need to be addressed immediately, and this bill is the downpayment to fund these operations.

Furthermore, this legislation allows our Nation to take the first steps toward preparing our Nation to proactively battle terrorism against our citizens here and abroad.

This bill sends a signal to the people of New York, Virginia, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, and Connecticut, and Americans everywhere that their government will not let them go it alone in times of crisis or emergency; that we are in fact one Nation, under God, indivisible.

I shed tears on this floor yesterday, and hope it is the last time I do. Those were tears not of fear but of pride in our Nation and in my city and of all Americans.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 40 seconds to the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. MORAN), who represents the area devastated by the act on the Pentagon.

Mr. MORAN of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, as of yesterday, over at the Pentagon there were 196 people still missing from the Army, the Navy, and a number of contractors.

In addition to the 64 airline passengers, there were 21 from the Army, 47 Army civilians, six contractors, 33 Navy military personnel, 10 Navy civilians, 5 Navy civilians, and 5 Navy civilians who lost their lives at the Pentagon.

But, Mr. Speaker, our people have responded in a way that makes us so proud to be Americans. The Arlington County Fire Department and Police Department were the first on the scene. They have coordinated. They have no idea how much to ask for reimbursement because it did not matter to them. They have not kept any record. Volunteers poured in so fast it would have mattered. They did not care about checking in. They cared about doing their job. They did their job.
The burning of the Capitol itself in 1812, the Civil War. I think we need to remember the words of President Lyndon Johnson when he stood at that podium and addressed this Congress on civil rights after the death of Martin Luther King: we shall overcome.

Mr. YOUNG of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself the balance of the time. Mr. Speaker, what will the gentleman yield to me for a question?

Mr. YOUNG of Florida. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. REGULA. Mr. Speaker, we have heard a lot about the great American experience. They were all heroes, but I want to mention the Centers for Disease Control. They are unsung heroes because they are protecting us from bioterrorism, chemical, biological weapons. We are to have a briefing in the Subcommittee on Labor, Health and Human Services and Education at 1 o’clock on that subject.

My question is will the funding here be available to deal with bioterrorism as well as other forms of terrorist attacks?

Mr. YOUNG of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I would say to the gentleman that the answer is yes, the President has tremendous leeway in how to use these funds for the immediate response to whatever the attack was or will be. The Congress will play a very important constitutional role in whatever that effort might be; but yes, the President does have the ability to use those funds for that purpose.

Mr. Speaker, once again, I would like to express on behalf of the House, as we close this debate, sympathy for the families of those who lost their lives in Washington, DC, and Stonington, Connecticut. Their young grandsons, Josh Piver, my daughter’s friend and classmate, had a new and exciting job on the 105th floor of the World Trade Center. He was energetic and intelligent, living the American dream in the “Big Apple.” He is missing, like many others from eastern Connecticut. I found that the most important thing I could do as a Member of Congress was to keep working. To get to work on Wednesday and demonstrate that the nation’s work will go on, and that no matter how badly we hurt, our democracy remains as strong as ever.

And it is here the House floor where the work—vital work—continues. Today we are taking the first step toward providing the President the necessary tools to rebuild what has been destroyed, restore what has been taken and react to those who have inflicted such unspeakable damage on our great nation. Republicans and Democrats have stood side-by-side in an unprecedented manner to craft a bill that will provide $40 billion in emergency spending for the recovery from the recent terrorist attacks and for providing the long overdue resources for the investigation that will enhance our national security.

Specifically, the bill appropriates $10 billion immediately to the Emergency Response Fund for federal activities such as preparedness for mitigating and responding to the attacks; support to counter, investigate and prosecute domestic and international terrorism; increased national transportation security; repairing public facilities and transportation systems damaged by the explosions; and supporting national security.

Additionally, the bill makes another $10 billion available 15 days after a Presidential declaration of a national emergency under which the entire $20 billion will be made available through the normal appropriations process. These are the first installments of a long-term recovery plan for the disaster areas.

I want to thank the Speaker of the House, the Minority Leader, the Appropriations Committee for coming together during these trying times and putting forth a bill that will immediately respond to this determination to lead this effort, to support our President as we move towards victory over those who would perpetrate terrorism and bring fear and anxiety to the world. We will not go to war, just not going to allow that to happen.

I urge the passage of the bill.

Mr. SIMMONS. Mr. Speaker, I rise today, in strong support of H.R. 2888, an immediate congressional response to one of the most despicable acts of terrorism this country has seen. Tuesday’s attacks were just the beginning of a new and lethal terror campaign against the United States. Thousands of mothers and fathers; husband and wives; sons and daughters of all faiths and diverse nationalities; murdered. No warning, no explanation, no cause. On September 11, Americans from every walk of life were taken from us by an act of terrorism. An act of murder. An act of war.

This tragedy event dramatically changed the lives of many close to home. On Tuesday night my wife spent the evening watching television with neighbors in my hometown of Stonington, Connecticut. Their young grandsons, Josh Piver, my daughter’s friend and classmate, had a new and exciting job on the 105th floor of the World Trade Center. He was energetic and intelligent, living the American dream in the “Big Apple.” He is missing, like many others from eastern Connecticut. I want to thank the Speaker of the House, the Minority Leader, the Appropriations Committee for coming together during these trying times and putting forth a bill that will immediately respond to this week’s terrible events. These are times that try our souls. But America is strong and flexible. We will survive this latest test of our freedom, our values and our democracy. I am proud that we are reaching out to each other in these times of need and proud to be a Member of this legislative body.

Mr. MENENDEZ. Mr. Speaker, there could be no spending bill more important than the one before us today. We need the full resources of our government behind the challenges that lie ahead. And this has to be a multi-front effort. We need to be relentlessly pursuing and punishing those who committed these crimes. As the Representative of New Jersey’s 13th Congressional District—right across the river from Manhattan—I can tell you my constituents are going through enormous hardships.

About 50 percent of the people who worked in the Twin Towers live in New Jersey. Families who have just lost their sole breadwinner may now face losing their homes; people who survived 9/11 may find themselves nowhere in New York. These acts of terrorism against New York and against our country are one and the same. But the attack we experienced on American soil three days ago.

It is critical that while we fight our enemies abroad, we make sure that all the needed funding and attention also goes to the families in crisis here at home.

Mr. ENGEL. Mr. Speaker, I am humbled today by the outpouring of support from across our Nation for the people of my home, New York City. I want to thank Mayor Giuliani and Governor Pataki. Their strong leadership has made getting through this much, much easier. Here on the floor today, the Congress is doing its part. The leadership of the Congress, in a non-partisan way has come together to respond swiftly and powerfully. Also, I want to thank the President as well for his quick, strong support for this bill.

The bill, though simple, is very powerful. The bill provides $20 billion to begin the rebuilding of New York. It also provides $20 billion to ramp up our efforts at counter-terrorism. All of this is so obviously needed. I want again to recognize the incredible heroism of the emergency response personnel who have put themselves in harm’s way without regard for their own safety. You are all amazing. I am truly astounded. I also want to say to the families of the victims of this tragedy, that I and every other American grieve with you. We cannot express in words what is in our hearts. You are in our prayers and thoughts. These acts of terrorism against New York and the American people will not deter us. Mr. Speaker, our city is not going to rebuild our city. We will rebuild the Pentagon. We will go on. We stand united. We are Americans.

Ms. KILPATRICK. Mr. Speaker, America is a diverse nation. Despite our diversity, America, in times like these, call us together. Nowhere is that fact made manifest than in this chamber today. Republicans, Democrats and Independents all gather here today to begin the first steps in pulling our nation out from under the rubble that befell New York and the Pentagon on Tuesday, September 11.

Mr. Speaker, I want to commend our leadership for working cooperatively and effectively with the Speaker of the House and the leaders on the other side of the Capitol. The supplemental appropriations bill, H.R. 2888, that we consider today is a down payment for responding to the attack we experienced on American soil three days ago.

The money contained in this bill will help restore downtown Manhattan to greater glory and reconstruct the largest office building in the world, the Pentagon. But the money will be used for more than just the rebuilding effort. It will be used to strengthen and make more secure the National Airspace System. Americans must feel safe in the nation’s skies if the business of this country is going to proceed unimpeded. This bill will add more capability to the intelligence functions of our government, so we can be more vigilant of those who pose a threat to the safety and security of our nation. More fundamentally, this bill will assist us in our pursuit of those countries, organizations or individual enemies that would seek to destroy our country, our countrymen, our姐妹, our governments, our economy, and our government and, in short, our very soul as a nation.

I congratulate the leadership of this House and leadership of the Appropriations Committee for acting swiftly in bringing this money bill for action today, and I thank them for permitting me to express my support for this bill.

Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, I will be very brief this morning, because a lot of people have already spoken very eloquently about the barbaric attack of September 11th—about how it has changed America and the world, and about the war against terror it has started. Mr. Speaker, make no mistake, those terrorist acts of September 11th and the innocent people were murdered in a cowardly, heinous assault on America and the civilized world. Since then, all of us in the Congress—regardless of ideology or party affiliation—have repeatedly pledged to work together in a bipartisan manner to respond.

Today, the United States Congress begins making good on that pledge. This $40 billion bill makes a down payment on the campaign to bring aid to our suffering countrymen, to punish the terrorists who have declared war on us and our allies, and to continue our recovery efforts, to rebuild our damaged structures, and to seek out and punish those who have committed these heinous acts of violence upon our nation.

Years ago, President Franklin Delano Roosevelt said, “We, and all others who believe in freedom as deeply as we do, would rather die on our feet than live on our knees.” The enemies of freedom who attacked our nation and our people on Tuesday used a weapon that represents the newest in warfare—terror. They win when they bring us to our knees and we cower in fear. They derive their power from making us change our way of life and making us dependent upon one world leader.

We will not let them win. We will not give them that satisfaction. Today’s legislation ensures this will be true. The funding we appropriate today is but a down payment. We will not rest until we have assisted all Americans who bore the brunt of Tuesday’s terror. We will not rest until we have rebuilt the City of New York, and rebuilt the nation’s defense fortress at the Pentagon, and restored the pastoral beauty of Western Pennsylvania. And, in rebuilding these structures, we will strengthen America and its allies.

Finally, Mr. Speaker—and let this be absolutely clear to those who seek to harm the United States, its people, and its allies—we will not rest until we have fought out, found, and vanquished those who perpetrate this evil. We will remain standing tall and proud in our eventual victory.

I am proud to stand with my colleagues and my President to support this important legislation, and I urge a resounding and unanimous vote.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support for this $40 billion Emergency Supplemental Appropriations Act for disaster assistance, for anti-terrorism initiatives, for assistance in the recovery from the horrific tragedy that occurred on Tuesday, September 11, 2001.

We have all experienced the distressing scenes of Tuesday’s disasters. We have shared in the shock and sadness felt by our entire Nation. It is now up to us in Congress to provide swift, positive support to our President in order to make certain that the events of Tuesday will never happen again.

The approval of this supplemental bill will provide $40 billion for five specific needs: The Federal, State and local response; terrorism investigations and intelligence operations; transit security; public building and transportation repair; and national security. This funding will be made available through the end of fiscal year 2001 and into fiscal year 2002; until fully expended.

Approving this measure is the first and an important step toward ending the evil of terrorism, an evil which exists solely for the purpose of disseminating terror and ending freedom throughout the world.

I urge all of my colleagues to support this important emergency funding initiative.

Mr. BENTSEN. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of H.R. 2888, a $40 billion emergency supplemental appropriations bill that will provide the administration with the critical tools to defend and protect our great Nation and support efforts to recover from this week’s egregious terrorist attacks.

As the dust begins to settle in New York, Pennsylvania, and right here in our Nation’s Capital, my thoughts and prayers are with the victims’ families and those who are still waiting to hear from missing loved ones. On this day of national prayer and reflection, we come together as Americans in a great showing of unity that transcends the bounds of religious, race, or ethnic origin. The surface of America is not found in her structures; it is rooted in the spirit of her people.

This measure immediately provides the President with $10 billion to fund the costs of Federal, state, and local preparedness efforts to prevent and respond to terrorist attacks. Additionally, this legislation enhances our law enforcement resources to prosecute international and domestic terrorism and air travel security.

At least half of the funding will be dedicated to helping those affected recover from this tragedy.

This emergency expenditure is an unequivocal display of this Congress’ support for the President’s efforts to fortify our Nation. Let this action show, the leaders of this land speak with one voice in our resolve to restore peace in America and bring justice to the innocent victims.

Today, the statue of Freedom stands watch atop the Capitol dome and in the shadow of the devastation in Manhattan, Lady Liberty continues to hold her torch high, reminding us that freedom does not come without cost. Time and time again, the strength and unity of Americans has been tested; the rubble of September 11 will sprout a new era of brotherhood in these United States.

Mr. HASTERT. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of this supplemental spending measure and I urge all of my colleagues to support it as well.

When a poet said that these are the times that try men’s souls, he could have been describing the scene before us today.

We have thousands of people lost, thousands more injured, and symbols of the strength and vitality of our democracy—the World Trade Center and the Pentagon—destroyed and damaged.

We have a sworn enemy that dares not to confront us in the open.

This evil shrouded in the shadows, hastes with an unnatural passion, and practices political fanaticism that glorifies violent death and condemns innocent life.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H.R. 2888, a supplemental appropriation designated to assist our nation’s response to the September 11, 2001 terrorist attack against the people of America.

We must defeat this enemy once and for all. The Constitution of the United States of America, the document that protects the freedoms of all Americans, gives us in the Congress certain responsibilities.

Article I Section 8 of the Constitution says that the Congress shall have power to provide for the common defense, and the power to declare war.

With this supplemental spending measure, the Congress is exercising its responsibility to provide for the common defense.

In a later resolution, we will address the issue of authorizing the President to use force.

The money we provide today—$40 billion—could very well be the down payment for our ultimate investment in this great endeavor.

And what a great endeavor it is.

To make America and the world a safer place by defeating once and for all these sworn enemies of common decency and the American way of life.

No payment that we make today can really make up for the loss of life that occurred on September 11, 2001.

Those poor innocent souls, those husbands and wives, and brothers and sisters, parents and children will not be coming back from the treachery of our enemy.

But we can start the process of rebuilding, of healing, and of preparing our nation for this greatest cause of this newest century.

We must eliminate the scourge of terrorism.

The American people have faced great challenges in the past.

On July 4, 1776, our founding fathers decided to challenge tyranny. After we won our freedom, we constructed the world’s greatest Constitution and created a stable and thriving democracy.

We faced dark days when our nation was torn asunder in a civil war. We came together after that War Between the States to become the savior of Europe in the First World War. The Empire of Japan deliberately attacked us on December 7, 1941, and we emerged as the greatest defender of the free world.

We faced communism in a painful cold war and emerged as the world’s sole superpower.

And now, after this greatest of American tragedies, we face the greatest of challenges.

I am comforted by the work of the President and his team. They are assembling a world-wide coalition of civilized nations. These nations look to the United States for leadership and want to join us on this great crusade.

We will provide that leadership.

We have a job to do in this Congress, and this supplemental spending bill is an important part of that responsibility.

I ask my colleagues to join me in supporting our President, in supporting our Constitution, and in supporting the American way of life.

Vote for the supplemental spending bill and do your job as a representative of the American people.

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H.R. 2888, a supplemental appropriation designated to assist our nation’s response to the September 11, 2001 terrorist attack against the people of America.

Mr. Speaker, this supplemental appropriation is quite different from any other supplemental appropriation that members of this body will ever consider. Recovery operations are well underway at the Pentagon and the World Trade Center sites and this process is expensive.

I am pleased that the House and the Senate have come together again, in a bipartisan fashion, to provide the necessary funds to pay for the equipment and man hours deployed by federal and state agencies in order to start the healing process. Additionally the legislation includes the instructions of consultation with and review by the U.S. Congress.

As we debate this supplemental appropriation, thousands of rescue workers have been deployed to remove debris, investigate crimes, and most importantly provide medical and other forms of assistance for the human suffering that will remain etched in our minds for days to come.

Mr. Speaker this supplemental provides $40 billion immediately to help our country reinforce the confidence in its great democracy which has weathered other storms. Although it may take some time, we, as a nation, will make sure this point is heard.

No price is too great to pay, Mr. Speaker, when it comes to doing what is necessary to let the cowards of this world know that America will not be shaken spiritually or financially by individuals who have permitted hate to control their hearts and minds.

I want to point out, Mr. Speaker, that the children of this nation have been greatly impacted by those cowardly acts that took place in New York City and at the Pentagon. Many parents will never return home to their children and as a result, we in this body must make sure that we provide the necessary support to help our children adjust.

I hope that the President will use his discretion to spend the funds provided under H.R. 2888 in a manner that places a high priority on children and their special needs during these difficult times.

Also, the funds that we provide through this supplemental appropriations will be provided to the state and affected local governments in New York, Virginia and Pennsylvania to remove debris, to conduct emergency services related to the disaster, and to replace public facilities damaged by the explosions and fires.

Also, these funds will be used to investigate, to prosecute domestic or international terrorism.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. All time for debate has expired.

Pursuant to the order of the House of today, the bill is considered read for amendment and the previous question is ordered.

The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, and was read the third time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on passage of the bill.

Pursuant to clause 8 of rule XX, the yeses and nays are on record.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—yes 422, nays 0, not voting 9, as follows:
The result of the vote was announced as above recorded. A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A message from the Senate by Mr. Monahan, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate has passed without amendment a bill and concurrent resolution of the House of the following titles:

H.R. 2892. An act to provide for the expedited payment of certain benefits for a public safety officer who was killed or suffered a catastrophic injury as a direct and proximate result of a personal injury sustained in the line of duty in connection with the terrorist attacks of September 11, 2001.

H. Con. Res. 226. Concurrent Resolution expressing the sense of Congress that, as a symbol of solidarity following the terrorist attacks on the United States on September 11, 2001, every United States citizen is encouraged to display the flag of the United States.

The message also announced that the Senate has passed bills and joint resolutions of the following titles in which the concurrence of the House is requested:

S. 856. An act to reauthorize the Small Business Technology Transfer Program, and for other purposes.

S. 1244. An act to amend the Immigration and Nationality Act to provide permanent authority for the admission of “S” visas for scientists, engineers, students, and researchers.

S.J. Res. 19. Joint resolution providing for the reappointment of Anne d’Harnoncourt as a citizen regent of the Board of Regents of the Smithsonian Institution.

S.J. Res. 20. Joint resolution to authorize the use of United States Armed Forces against those responsible for the recent attacks launched against the United States.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. Cooper) (for the Chair). The Chair has an announcement.

The Chair announces that the electronic system is temporarially inoperative. The vote will be held open until all Members are recorded. The Clerk will retrieve the names of all Members already recorded electronically from the board. The Chair will then combine these votes that have been recorded electronically with the tally cards being signed by the Members. Together this will constitute a valid vote. Members are encouraged to confirm their vote by filling out a ballot card.

The vote will proceed.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. Ose). Under the Speaker’s announced policy of January 3, 2001, and under a previous order of the House, the following Members will be recognized for 5 minutes each.

SPECIAL ORDERS

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. Ose). Under the Speaker’s policy of January 3, 2001, and under a previous order of the House, the following Members will be recognized for 5 minutes each.

ACTING RESPONSIBLY AND WISELY

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. Sensenbrenner) is recognized for 5 minutes.
Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Mr. Speaker, as President Bush has said, Tuesday's attack on the World Trade Center and the Pentagon are nothing short of acts of war. No less than the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor, they were a premeditated, secret, and carefully orchestrated assault on the American people and the great symbols of American power and influence in world affairs. These attacks will not be unanswered.

Since this dastardly attack, there has been a flurry of efforts in the House and Senate, proposed legislation, calls for hearings and oversight to find out what went wrong and what improvements can and should be made. While this is certainly understandable, any action by the Congress should not be taken in haste and should be coordinated, not piecemeal.

The timing of action is most important for another reason. In a time of war, the executive branch, and in particular the President, must be allowed to focus solely on identifying, finding, and punishing those responsible. Therefore, I call on my colleagues, Members and committee chairmen in both the House and the Senate, to refrain from piecemeal legislation and oversight during this crisis and to support the President fully in addressing the challenges ahead.

As chairman of the House Committee on the Judiciary and entrusted with oversight responsibility for all Federal law enforcement, I am compelled to remind my colleagues, Members and committee chairmen in both the House and the Senate, to refrain from piecemeal legislation and oversight during this crisis and to support the President fully in addressing the challenges ahead.

I have therefore written the President to ask him to identify what law enforcement and investigative resources, including additional funding and legal authority, are needed to prosecute this effort. I have pledged to review those requests on an expedited basis.

I am also concerned about the multiple and duplicative briefings requested of law enforcement, which may have the unintended consequences of impeding, impairing, or distracting law enforcement from its core mission. At the same time, I recognize that Congress needs to be fully informed on the progress of the investigation.

I suggest, therefore, that there be organized, coordinated, and non-duplicative briefings that will allow law enforcement to carry on its critical mandate without undue interference from Congress. I intend to work with the Speaker, the Attorney General, and the FBI Director to provide regular law enforcement briefings to Members on the investigation.

These briefings will provide Members with the information they need to carry out their own responsibilities without jeopardizing the criminal investigation. The investigation may very well provide insight into how the attackers evaded our intelligence and security networks. There will certainly be ample time for Congress to address those issues later. I have been informed that we may be assured that the Federal Government's law enforcement and intelligence officials are already taking steps to prevent future attacks.

I intend to work with the gentleman from Illinois (Speaker HASTERT) to discourage House committees from holding premature hearings in the middle of a Federal criminal investigation of these attacks. Such hearings are likely to distract Federal resources from the immediate needs of a full investigation.

Right now, it should be Congress' priority to support President Bush's efforts to make an appropriate response. Regular briefings and restraints will permit Congress to be fully informed about the developments, provide information for consideration at the appropriate time, but, most importantly, will allow the President the latitude he needs to prosecute the campaign against those who carried out these outrageous attacks on our country and its citizens.

This Congress must rise to the occasion and act responsibly and wisely. History will judge us favorably from our prudence.

Mr. Speaker, I insert in the RECORD a letter written by myself; Senator LEAHY, the chairman of the Judiciary Committee; and the ranking members, the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. CONYERS) and Senator HATCH, to the President of the United States.

WASHINGTON, DC, September 13, 2001.

Dear Mr. President: We write regarding the investigation of the horrific terrorist attacks that occurred on September 11, 2001. This tragedy has resulted in a massive worldwide investigation that is without parallel even that ever undertaken by the Federal Government. The Department of Justice has mobilized thousands of federal and state personnel and is coordinating myriad federal and state agencies, a task that will utilize tremendous resources. We commend the efforts of all the men and women of the Department of Justice and all Federal and state agencies investigating this horrific event.

We wish to make sure that the Department of Justice, the FBI, and all Federal law enforcement agencies involved in this investigation have all the resources and authority needed to investigate these incidents and would like to know whether additional resources or legal authorities are needed to complete this mission successfully. The investigation may very well provide insight into how the attackers evaded our intelligence and security networks. There will certainly be ample time for Congress to address those issues later.

Sincerely,

JOHN CONYERS, Jr.,
Chairman, House Committee on the Judiciary.

ORRIN HATCH,
Ranking Minority Member, Senate Committee on the Judiciary.

PATRICK LEAHY,
Chairman, Senate Committee on the Judiciary.

P. JAMES SENSENBRENNER, Jr.,
Chairman, House Committee on the Judiciary.

Congressional Record—House, September 14, 2001

Authorization of U.S. Military Force in Response to Terrorist Attacks

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Oregon (Mr. DeFazio) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. DeFazio. Mr. Speaker, the senseless human tragedy caused by the heinous terrorist acts of September 11, 2001, weigh heavily on our minds and will do so for many days, months, and years to come.

Many have said our Nation will never be the same. I agree. Our Nation is stronger, more united, and prouder than possibly at any time in our history. The outpouring of grief and offers of assistance, both here and abroad, have been comforting. The terrorists may have collapsed our buildings; but in response, we are building a stronger America.

Our thoughts are with those who have lost loved ones and with those whose loved ones are still missing. Our thoughts are with those who have undertaken the difficult, dangerous, and heroic task of rescuing and treating the wounded and recovering the bodies of those who were killed.

As the gravity of the situation sinks in, our thoughts have also turned to those responsible for these atrocities. Our Nation must take action against those responsible, including those who provide safe havens and financial support for terrorists. U.S. actions to exact justice must be deliberate, decisive, and effective.

However, the United States must be careful not to indiscriminately attack civilian populations in other nations, which will only further the cause of the terrorists and perpetuate a cycle of violence.

Decisions on war and peace are the most profound decisions Members of Congress can ever be required to make. This is the second time in my career I have been confronted by such a decision, something I hoped would never come.

In our desire to show support for the President, we must be careful not to cede our constitutional duties now or set a precedent for doing so in the future.

Article I section 8 of the Constitution grants Congress the authority "to declare war." This right was recognized by the earliest leaders of our Nation. In 1793, President Washington, when considering how to protect inhabitants of the American frontier, instructed his administration that "no offensive expedition of importance can be undertaken until after Congress have deliberated upon the subject, and authorized such a measure.

In 1801, President Thomas Jefferson sent a small squadron of frigates to the Mediterranean to protect against possible attacks by the Barbary pirates. He told Congress that he was "unauthorized by the Constitution, without the sanction of Congress, to go beyond the limits of that power." He further noted that it was up to Congress to authorize "measures of offense also."

I believe maintaining this solemn congressional prerogative to send our young men and women into battle, is critical to protecting the delicate balance of power between the legislative and executive branches. This balance of power was carefully crafted by our founders in Philadelphia more than 2 centuries ago and has allowed the United States to remain one of the most stable and enduring democracies in the world.

There was a time when such a power was threatened. Congress enacted the War Powers Resolution of 1973 in response to the military activities of successive Presidents while waging war in Korea and Vietnam. The War Powers Resolution reaffirmed the prerogative of Congress to declare war, as the Constitution requires, and confirmed the President's authority to commit our Armed Forces to hostilities and declare war.

I had strong reservations about earlier drafts of the proposed resolution that authorized the use of force in an unprecedented, open-ended manner. far beyond that necessary to respond to the terrorist acts on our people, even far beyond that ceded to FDR in World War II. This is not a partisan issue for me. I would have opposed similar resolution language under a President of my own party.

This is an institutional concern for me. The earlier drafts ceded too much authority to the executive branch. In fact, one of the earlier drafts had provisions nearly identical to the Gulf of Tonkin Resolution, which had led to the unaccountable use of U.S. military forces in Vietnam.

But it is important to recognize that President Bush already has the authority to respond to the attacks.

The War Powers Resolution in section 2(c) recognizes the constitutional power of the President as Commander in Chief to introduce U.S. Armed Forces into hostile situations under certain circumstances.

Section 2(c) of the War Powers Resolution provides the President can introduce U.S. Armed Forces into hostile situations pursuant to a declaration of war, specific statutory obligations or, in this case, a national emergency created by an attack upon the United States territories, possessions, or its Armed Forces. Two of those conditions have been met.

The President has the authority he needs to respond to the current crisis without setting the precedent of ceding additional war power authority.

Given his existing authority to respond in the event of an attack upon the United States or Armed Forces, we must be careful in granting further or ceding further constitutional powers.

The use of force resolution before us today is not exactly as I would have written it. However, for the most part, it restates the authority I already believe was granted to the President under section 2(c)(3) of the War Powers Resolution.

The reference in the resolution to section 5(b) of the War Powers Resolution I believe creates a little confusion, but it is my reading of the resolution that nothing in this act supersedes congressional authority under the War Powers Resolution. The President will still be bound by the reporting and consultation requirements. Congress will reserve the right to review those actions, as it should be under the Constitution.

Make no mistake, Congress will stand united behind our young men and women who may well be put soon in harm's way, and the President of the United States as Commander in Chief. We pray that he uses the awesome power of the United States with great deliberateness and wisdom.

ORDER OF BUSINESS

Mr. FOLEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to speak out of order, and take my Special Order at this point.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Florida?

There was no objection.

STICKING TOGETHER IN THESE DIFFICULT TIMES

Mr. FOLEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to speak out of order, and take my Special Order at this point.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Florida (Mr. FOLEY) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. FOLEY. Mr. Speaker, it has been a very painful week for all Americans. Turning on the TV set, opening the newspaper, reading the伤心 news of lives lost and hearts ache for those who have suffered and are still suffering.

I want to associate my comments today with that of the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. SENSENBRENNER), the chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary, because I have heard the last 24 hours concerns from Members that they are not being briefed enough and they are not being told enough and they are not in the loop enough; and obviously we all need answers and we have to pursue answers. But it seems to me right now those very trained individuals need to be looking at who caused this and how we find our way out of this, rather than second guessing.

We have heard complaints about the eloquence of our President and his stature and whether they were imagining the need to move safely to places around this country, and those commentaries may at some time be warranted, but not now.

Our Nation needs to remain solidly together to fight evil forces. Watching the ceremony at the National Cathedral with Presidents past and present in attendance brought us to a point where we recognize that collectively we have such great promise. If we divide ourselves and characterize our leaders with less than flattering remarks, we give credence to those who seek to undermine our credibility in our Nation's strength. The world is watching us and obviously not on the floor, but what they see on the TV broadcasts. Any indication of weakness gives them some strength.

When I watch the heroes of men and women in uniform, I watch the heroes of firefighters and paramedics, I watch average citizens step out of their common everyday life to extend their unbounded energy to the pursuit of rescuing victims, my heart and my soul soar like an eagle, knowing that this country's promise is yet ahead and yet the dark days are still engulfing our memories.

The President did a phenomenal job today in the National Cathedral, calling for calm, deliberation and pursuing those who played a role in this activity. Jumping to conclusions by politicians based on a whim or a notion or an individual moment of frustration is not in the character of this deliberative body.

I wanted to be in Congress since the age of five. I met a man, Paul Rogers, who represented Palm Beach County and thought what a wonderful man he was, and how skillfully and capably he represented our District; and some people who played a role in this activity.

So I pray with the Nation today; and I ask my colleagues to take a moment, a deep breath, and suggest we are safe.
here in our Nation’s Capital. We are alive and we are breathing. Every moment you speak ill of anyone else or anyone’s actions or motives, take a minute to reflect on those wounded and those dead under the rubble of the World Trade towers. Think of what their lives are like and what their families are enduring. They cannot find their loved ones, and we are demanding more briefings.

They cannot find their cherished possessions, and we are interested in more acrimony. America rises to the challenge, and God bless us as we do. We have heard about indiscriminate actions of people going after and pursuing Muslims and those of faith who are here in our Nation and who have a right to be here and who are law-abiding citizens, but because of their ethnicity or religious origins, they are being held accountable for crimes that they had nothing to do with; and we should ask God to bless us that we do not allow ourselves to succumb to the same kind of mean-spiritedness that brought us to the point on Tuesday at 8:50-something in the morning where evil acts perpetrated disastrous deeds against our population.

I know God will bless us abundantly, not only because we prayed in church today, but because our Nation revolves around collective goodwill and spirit. I pray today as we move forward that we think clearly and mindfully about how we rectify this egregious behavior of others without injuring innocent people in our quest for justice. I pray we come to the conclusions, today or tomorrow, that we are a Nation of free men and we recognize the deed ahead of us is, in fact, great and it is complicated. I thank my colleagues for loving our country as much as we all do.

THE ROLE OF CONGRESS IN ESTABLISHING WARTIME POLICY

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. OSE). Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from California (Mr. SHERMAN) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. Speaker, I want to join with my colleague in echoing his remarks. (Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN asked and was granted permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Mr. Speaker, today we approved an emergency appropriations and will soon consider a bill regarding the use of force to respond to the deplorable terrorist acts committed against the people of our Nation, and against the principles that our country represents: freedom, liberty, democracy and respect for the law.

As our government works to develop a comprehensive and decisive response to this challenge, I am reminded of the Reagan doctrine of peace through strength and the principles of deterrence. It took one kind of military force to deter an attack when the United States possessed overwhelmingly and unparalleled military power. However, it takes another kind, now that our enemy is cowardly and elusive, refusing to show its face, hiding in the shadows of the misery and terror it has created.

This is a different world. Our defenses must be based on recognition and awareness of the methods, weapons, tactics and behavior of this new enemy. Our security depends on being prepared to meet these new threats head-on, threats that have turned the Continental United States into a new theater of conflict.

As former President Ronald Reagan once said, “We have a rendezvous with destiny. We will preserve for our children, the last best hope of man on Earth. If we fail, at least let our children and our children’s children say of us, we justified our brief moment here. We did all that could be done.”

ORDER OF BUSINESS

Mr. KIRK. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to swap my place with the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. EHlers) at this time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois?

There was no objection.

LEGISLATION TO UPDATE THE STATE DEPARTMENT REWARDS PROGRAM

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. KIRK) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. KIRK. Mr. Speaker, a few hours ago I received a phone call from Captain Clay Fearnow, my former commanding officer in the Navy during the Kosovo conflict. Clay told me of a terrible loss we had suffered in the Navy family as part of the Pentagon disaster. Most of the Navy Command Center was hit, including the Chief of Naval Operations Intelligence plot offices. It is a point of intense personal loss for me and my family because of that information. My wife and I worked in that office. We know many people there. We want to offer our sympathy and support to the families of the victims in the Naval Intelligence Community that suffered this loss on Tuesday.

Mr. Speaker, we can do something about this, and work to offer one suggestion in the form of legislation that we will be offering later on today.

In a previous life as a congressional staffer, I worked on legislation concerning the State Department Rewards Program offered for information leading to the arrest of individuals who lead terrorist attacks against Americans and American targets. This has been a very successful program, one until recently, where up to $1 million was offered for the apprehension of these international criminals. Mr. Kansi that led the attack against people outside the CIA was one of the criminals caught by this program.

We had to update this program 2 years ago because the awards offered had become outdated and, in legislation lead by the gentleman from New York (Mr. GILMAN) of the Committee on International Relations, we raised that amount to $5 million. The program has grown and it has led to things like the arrests of war criminals.

After the Africa embassy bombings, the State Department was able to produce posters like this, and I want to publicize today that under current U.S. law and authorities available, there is a $5 million reward offered for the arrest of Osama bin Laden for a previous[column 2] paragraph.

DEDICATION TO THE VICTIMS OF THE KOSOVO CONFLICT

We had to update this program 2 years ago because the awards offered had become outdated and, in legislation lead by the gentleman from New York (Mr. GILMAN) of the Committee on International Relations, we raised that amount to $5 million. The program has grown and it has led to things like the arrests of war criminals.

After the Africa embassy bombings, the State Department was able to produce posters like this, and I want to publicize today that under current U.S. law and authorities available, there is a $5 million reward offered for the arrest of Osama bin Laden for a previous terrorist attack against U.S. embassies in Africa. These rewards are offered up to $5 million for attackers against American embassies, bases, and American individuals, and for the arrest of United Nations war criminals. I will say in the former Yugoslav Republic of Bosnia, over two dozen war criminals have been apprehended, including now the most famous, the former Serbian President, Slobodan Milosevic.

At the end of this day today, we will be offering legislation to increase the reward amount for terrorists that lead attacks against Americans to $25 million, and we will authorize up to $50 million in the rewards account. We need additional dollars because of the changing enemy we face. Probably for the first time in our history, we now know that many of the enemies we face are very wealthy individuals. It is also likely that they have the backing of governments, and higher awards are needed to spark the imagination of the public and press in other countries. I want to commend the leaders of this effort that have already agreed to join us, such as the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. HYDE) and the gentleman from California (Mr. LANTOS), a real leader in catching war criminals and for the arrest of people who lead terrorist attacks against individuals.

I also want to thank Chairman Smith who oversees the State Department accounts and the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. BLUNT) and many others who have agreed to sign on to this legislation. For other Members interested in signing on, we will be leaving the books open for sponsors until the close of business today.

I think this is one of the many aspects of the battle that we are yet to face, but with an increased awards account, I think we can show everyone the seriousness of our effort and help energize the investigation which is now ongoing.

NATIONAL DAY OF UNITY AND PRAYER

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentlewoman from Texas (Ms. JACKSON-LEE) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. Mr. Speaker, today we join the President of the United States in a national day of unity and prayer. I was moved by his citing of the words of Franklin Delano Roosevelt expressing the fact that warm courage exhibits national unity.

I want to offer in particular today a message to my colleagues from New York and the Washington and Virginia area, and, of course, in Pennsylvania.

Our eyes have been riveted on the good citizens of New York, the valor that they have shown, the spirit of comfort and unity that they have given to each other. Might I add that the President of the United States stands with them, behind them, and alongside of them.

Might I also say to the fallen men and women, the emergency workers, police and fire, coming from Houston, Texas, let me say to them on behalf of all of our citizens and the State of Texas, we mourn with them and we celebrate the lives of those who gave their lives.

But I come today to discuss very briefly another loss, another constituency of loss; that is, our children, the children of those fallen, either in the tragedy of their parent or a guardian being on those terrible planes, civilian airplanes being used as weapons, or those fallen in the World Trade Building.

We realize, along with our military personnel, that they are part of families and they are loved. I believe it is important as we debate today the resolution to go forward and to assist the President and consult with the President on how we will address these terrorist acts, let us not forget our children.

At the end of the day, I expect to offer and file a resolution that will help and encourage to expedite any benefits that are due and owing to children who have lost a guardian, a parent, or parents.

I am reminded of a story told by one of my staffers from New York. His sister attends a school just a few blocks away from the World Trade Buildings. I still believe that those buildings stand in spirit. She acknowledged to him that one of the youngsters that was her classmate saw two parents go off to work that morning, and has yet to see them as of today.

There will be many stories like that. Many of our children will need someone other than the parent or guardian to love them and to nourish them. Let us not have bureaucracy stand in the way of providing these children with their immediate needs, the monetary needs, as we embrace them to provide the nurturing needs, the medical assistance, the foster care assistance, the psychological needs. Let us wash away the entanglement of red tape, work with our State and local agencies, and push forward the needs of our children.

This concurrent resolution will have the Congress on record that we are helping our children in meeting their needs. I would ask my colleagues to join me. This is already a bipartisan resolution, and I thank those who have agreed to work with me, the gentleman from New York (Mr. GILMAN), the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. EEKEL), the gentleman from Connecticut (Mr. LARSON), and the gentleman from New York (Mr. MEEEKS), and many others I would hope will join us in ensuring that we move forward on behalf of our children.

I close by simply saying that we will soon engage this Congress in a very important debate on how we proceed, whether in war or conflict. We must do it in a rational and a firm way with the facts. We must lead this country in a way that upholds our valor and our courage so that we ascribe to better angels and higher angels, and that in fact, that we believe in our freedom in a way that encourages peace and deliberation.

Yes, we will give retribution, but we will be firm and factual and studied. We will do it together, the President in consultation with Congress.

TERRORIST BOMBING

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. Ose). Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. EHLERS) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. EHLERS. Mr. Speaker, many of us have been quiet about what has happened this week, but many of us also feel the need to speak. What I say is not in the mold of reviewing it or denouncing anything that has happened, but I just want to express some personal feelings about it and also a few opinions.

I will not dwell in self-misery, although it is tempting to do so, but at least I want to share my experience with my colleagues and the American people.

Tuesday morning, as I was listening to the morning news, I heard about the airplanes hitting the first tower. It was described as a two-engine plane, and since I am a former pilot, I assumed it was some amateur who had gotten off course, or some kook who was trying to do some damage with a small twin-engine plane.

I immediately turned on the television just in time to see the second plane approach, and immediately I knew it was terrorism, because it was obviously a large commercial airliner, and no large commercial airliner would be off course or score a direct hit in clear weather such as that.

I immediately headed for the Capitol. In doing so, I drove past the Pentagon. It had just been hit. That confirmed that indeed it was a very serious case of terrorism. The smoke was beginning to billow out. I drove to the Capitol; and at that time, a decision was made to evacuate it. I turned and headed back.

It was as I was driving back across the Potomac River and I crested the hill on the bridge, I saw the Pentagon with smoke billowing out of it that it hit me with full force. My immediate response was: what are they doing to my country? What are they doing to our country? It was with horror, disbelief, and shock.

It took more than a day for that to turn to anger, although anger was present at the beginning. But this has happened to all the Members of Congress and similarly, from the people that American people realize how deeply we feel their anguish, how deeply we feel their pain, and how much some of us have cried; how we hug each other out of a sense of this disaster. It has really hit us hard.

Why did this happen? Everyone is asking that. Why? It is very hard to believe, because Americans are good people. They try to do good things in the world. People hate us. Why do they hate us? We cannot comprehend that, but they do hate us. That is why they do these terrible things to us.

How can this be? Why do they hate us? Partly because they are enemies of freedom. They cannot stand the fact we are a free country, and there are some dictators in this world and many terrorists who want to rule in an absolute way. They cannot stand to see the success that we enjoy.

There are other reasons, of course, other types of enmities that peoples of other nations may have to us, but it does not match the hate and anger that these terrorists have.

On the positive side, let me note how much I and all the Members of Congress have been heartened by the reaction of the American people, the greatest outpouring of loyalty and patriotism that I have seen since World War II. There have been people in the streets wanting to do something good, and contributions are pouring in to those who have suffered. There is generosity. People are saying, as the President said this morning during the service of prayer and remembrance, there are people driving from Dallas with skin grafts to help the wounded in the state of Texas, and many families in Michigan, and I believe from my hometown of Grand Rapids, driving in because they cannot fly in, driving in with skin grafts so people can be treated and heal.

What comes next? We must have retribution. Just in the name of justice, we must have retribution. But let me caution the American people, this takes time. We have a faceless, nameless enemy. The first task is to identify who did this.

This has been compared in many ways to Pearl Harbor, but it is very different in one sense. The enemy was clearly identified, and we proceeded for several years to arm to resolve that dispute.

This will take an equal amount of time, I am convinced, because it is not just one person. It is not just one terrorist camp, it is a network. I am convinced, that is lodged in a number of places. It may simply knock out one and think we have solved the problem. We are going to have to deal with the entire problem.

WHAT WE CAN DO AS AMERICANS

I hope and pray that God will be with us. I hope and pray that our allies will continue to help us, and that, indeed, we will be able to have justice, we will have retribution and the world will once again enjoy peace.

September 14, 2001

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentlewoman from Ohio (Ms. KAPTUR) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Ms. KAPTUR. Mr. Speaker, every time that I have the privilege of addressing this House, I am reminded of indeed what a privilege it is to represent constituents from my own State of Ohio and to vote on laws affecting our Nation and the world.

This week in particular the magnitude of this privilege has come home to me again. I rise as a free citizen in the freest Nation on Earth, given the opportunity under our freedom of speech to speak my peace, but in a representative government.

As I think about what happened to America this week, I think about the forces of the world that are outside of governments and have no representative decision-making in the way that the civilized world understands. I am reminded of what happens to the world when that kind of force is allowed to work its evil in our country and other places.

As Members of Congress, we are given the privilege of traveling to many places. A few years ago, I remember going to one of the newly emerging nations of the world. During a session with the citizenry, I was asked, "Congresswoman KAPTUR, what makes you feel like a nation?" And I remember stepping back from the microphone for a moment and pondering that, and trying to answer the question that I was asked, why do your people feel like a nation?

This week, we have had many indicators of how deep our nationhood runs: the enormity of the valor that we have seen coast-to-coast, the thousands of acts of kindness and of decency that have accompanied this great tragedy that our entire Nation has suffered, and so many families have suffered so personally.

The decision as we sat at the prayer service and then stood for the posting of our colors, and I looked at all the battle-flag ribbons that walked into the church, and I thought about all the blood that had been shed, all the families, including ours, that had been affected by prior wars and prior engagements, I thought about the red in our flag, and I thought about the enormity of sacrifice that has maintained this Republic over our existence.

Many Americans have been writing me, my own constituents and others. We have been receiving letters from all over the world yesterday. I wish to enter into the record a letter of condolence and support from the Nation of Ukraine through the Ambassador from Ukraine. Indeed, as an American, through us, can understand the weight of public opinion and the weight of support that is on the side of justice as we move forward and try to eliminate and bring to justice those who would have caused such horror on our shores.

I had one senior citizen who wrote me: “Congresswoman KAPTUR, I am elderly, I am disabled, I am too weak, I cannot give blood. What can I do?” I wrote her back, “You certainly can put a little flag in your front window.” I am sure she does not have much money, but I suggested she might make a small donation to the scholarship fund that the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. WELDON) have put in the form of a bill for all the families in New York and Pennsylvania, other places in our country, and Virginia, that have been affected, for their children.

I was thinking, during World War II, we had a massive savings bond campaign. I think every American can buy a savings bond. Every American can strengthen our country even more in meeting what lies ahead. So I would urge the President, in the additional funds the Congress has appropriated, to consider expanding some of the savings bond operations across this country; to work with our banks, our private institutions, the Internet, and allow the American people, at whatever level of support they might be able to give, to strengthen our Nation as we seek to meet the enemy.

Let me also say that I would encourage many of our young people as they are considering their futures to think about enlistment in our Armed Forces, in our Reserves, in our guard forces across this country. Each of us in our own hearts, I know the Members of Congress, we know we are soldiers of freedom, too. We ask the American people to lend the kind of support that we will need to carry out the activities of a free people under a representative government.

I ask people to consider joining our intelligence services.

And, finally, let me say to the American people and to our youth in particular, study in your classes the roots of rage and the roots of those who would seek to harm the harbingers of freedom not just here at home but abroad. Take the time to learn America, indeed, will surmount this latest crisis.

AMERICA’S RESPONSE TO TERRORIST ATTACK

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Connecticut (Mr. LARSON) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. LARSON of Connecticut. Mr. Speaker, the events of this past week have clearly brought us together. And listening to my colleagues step forward and address the body today, I cannot help but reflect on the events of this past week, in so many ways surreal in terms of the stunning build-up to the revelation of what unfolded. Indeed, my resolve, like the resolve of the American people, has only been stiffened. And I re- solve, like the resolve of the American people, as we have witnessed this horror, has only been stiffened. And I

Last Wednesday evening, at about 11:10 p.m., I came to the well of this House, like so many Members of this institution, to state my outrage over what had happened on Tuesday morning beginning at about 8:45. I pledged on that occasion my support for President Bush during this national crisis; and at this grave moment in our history, I think I at that time spoke for all Americans when I said we stood together in support of our commander in chief just as we did on behalf of those brave firemen, policemen and policewomen, and the citizenry of New York and Washington, DC, and our military forces as well.

I call attention to that simply to point out that in the strongest possible terms I condemned the unimaginable and unprecedented terrorist attacks that had taken place in New York City and Washington, DC on that morning. In the wonderful epic that de Tocqueville wrote, simply entitled “America,” he asked what it was that had set the American people apart from the rest of the world. And he suggested, after having difficulty coming up with a term, it was simply a habit of the heart.

In what has represented the most serious act of aggression on American soil, a nameless and faceless enemy launched an assault on the very foundation of our society and, indeed, upon the manner in which we live. There is no body in America that is more representative than this institution of its people. It was my belief then and my belief now, as I had rallied to President Bush, Sr.’s support, President Clinton’s support in perilous moments, now the time to rally to the support of President Bush, the Republican and Democratic leadership in this institution, as we sought and continue to seek to reassure the American people about events of the last few days and, indeed, just as importantly, over events of the next few weeks, months, and, I frankly believe, years.

These are moments when we come to the conclusion that old quotation that America offers unity without uniformity; free to be of different backgrounds and religions and persuasions and hold strong and differing political views. But on occasions like this we stand firm in our resolve to support our President and the brave men and women of the United States Armed Forces as they prepare, with our support, a clear and decisive response against those who perpetrated these unspeakable acts.

Those are the comments that I offered on Wednesday night, and there is nothing that has happened during these 48 hours that would have caused me to change my mind. And again, I have attempted many times to offer measured comments here based upon what I feel strongly about.
CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—HOUSE

would suggest that all Americans, regardless of political philosophy, political party, or political persuasion intend to stand shoulder to shoulder in our effort to seek out those who would cause such destruction, anguish, and pain upon a free people.

There will be plenty of time in weeks and months and years again down the road to review the decisions that we have made during these days; but let no one mistake the resolve that I feel as a Member of this body, or as a citizen of this Nation, or those who stand with me in this institution in our support of President Bush and, again, our military as we seek answers across the globe.

RECESS

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to clause 12 of rule I, the Chair declares the House recess subject to the call of the Chair.

Accordingly, at 3 o’clock and 11 minutes p.m., the House stood in recess subject to the call of the Chair.

AFTER RECESS

The recess having expired, the House was called to order by the Speaker pro tempore (Mr. Shimkus) at 5 o’clock and 45 minutes p.m.

COMMUNICATION FROM THE CLERK OF THE HOUSE

The SPEAKER pro tempore laid before the House the following communication from the Clerk of the House of Representatives:

OFFICE OF THE CLERK, HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

Hon. J. Dennis Hastert,
The Speaker, House of Representatives,
Washington, DC.

Dear Mr. Speaker: Pursuant to the permission granted in Clause 2(h) of Rule II of the Rules of the U.S. House of Representatives, the Clerk received the following message from the Secretary of the Senate on September 14, 2001 at 3:37 p.m.

That the Senate passed without amendment H.R. 2888.

With best wishes,

Sincerely,

JEFF TRANDahl,
Clerk of the House.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to clause 4 of rule I, the Chair desires to announce that the Speaker signed the following enrolled bills during the recess today:

H.R. 2133, to establish a commission for the purpose of encouraging and providing for the commemoration of the 50th anniversary of the Supreme Court decision in Brown v. Board of Education;

H.R. 2882, to provide for the expedited payment of certain benefits for a public safety officer who was killed or suffered a catastrophic injury as a direct and proximate result of a personal injury sustained in line of duty in connection with the terrorist attacks of September 11, 2001;

AUTHORIZING USE OF UNITED STATES ARMED FORCES AGAINST THOSE RESPONSIBLE FOR RECENT ATTACKS AGAINST THE UNITED STATES

Mr. Diaz-Balart. Mr. Speaker, at this historic moment when Congress and the American people stand united behind the President, our Commander in Chief, as America prepares to reclaim its security and punish the murderers who struck our Nation this week, I ask unanimous consent that it shall be in order at any time without intervention of any point of order to consider in the House, House Joint Resolution 64, to authorize the use of United States Armed Forces against those responsible for the recent attacks launched against the United States;

The joint resolution shall be considered as read; the previous question shall be considered as ordered on the joint resolution to final passage without intervening motion except, one, 5 hours of debate on the joint resolution, equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on International Relations; and two, one motion to recommit; and, upon passage of the joint resolution, the House shall be considered to have passed Senate Joint Resolution 23.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Florida?

There was no objection.

Mr. Hyde. Mr. Speaker, pursuant to the previous order of the House, I call up the joint resolution (H.J. Res. 64) to authorize the use of United States Armed Forces against those responsible for the recent attacks launched against the United States, and ask for its immediate consideration in the House.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. HASTERT).

Mr. HASTERT. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. HYDE), the distinguished Speaker of the House of Representatives.

Mr. HYDE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks and include extraneous material on the legislation under consideration.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois?

There was no objection.

Mr. HYDE. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. HASTERT), the distinguished Speaker of the House of Representatives.

Mr. HASTERT. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Illinois for yielding time to me.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of this resolution, which authorizes the President to use all necessary and appropriate force to deter and prevent acts of international terrorism against the United States.

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This joint resolution may be cited as the “Authorization for Use of Military Force.”

SEC. 2. AUTHORIZATION FOR USE OF UNITED STATES ARMED FORCES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—That the President is authorized to use all necessary and appropriate force against those nations, organizations, or persons he determines planned, authorized, committed, or aided the terrorist attacks that occurred on September 11, 2001, or harbored such organizations or persons, in order to prevent any future acts of international terrorism against the United States by such nations, organizations, or persons.

(b) WAR POWERS RESOLUTION REQUIREMENTS.—

(1) SPECIFIC STATUTORY AUTHORIZATION.—Consistent with section 8(a)(1) of the War Powers Resolution, the Congress declares that this section is intended to constitute specific statutory authorization within the meaning of section 5(b) of the War Powers Resolution.

(2) APPLICABILITY OF OTHER REQUIREMENTS.—Nothing in this resolution supersedes any requirement of the War Powers Resolution.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Illinois (Mr. HYDE) and the gentleman from California (Mr. LANTOS) each will control 2½ hours.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. HYDE).

Mr. HYDE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks and include extraneous material on the legislation under consideration.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois?

There was no objection.

Mr. HYDE. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. HASTERT), the distinguished Speaker of the House of Representatives.
freedoms of all Americans, gives the Congress certain responsibilities. Article 1, Section 8 of the Constitution says the Congress shall have power to provide for the common defense and the power to declare war.

Earlier today, the Congress exercised its responsibility to provide for the common defense by passing the supplemental spending legislation. Now we give the President the congressional authority to use all necessary force to bring to justice those who attacked our Nation.

This is the most solemn responsibility that this Congress can undertake. We do not do so gladly or with a bitter sense of revenge. We do so because we must in order to preserve freedom and democracy in this Nation.

These are the times that try men’s souls. On September 11, we lost thousands of people, with thousands more injured, and with two symbols of the strength and vitality of our democracy, the World Trade Center and the Pentagon, destroyed or badly damaged.

A sworn enemy that dares not confront us in the open attacked us in the most cowardly way, by targeting innocent citizens of this great Nation. This enemy operates in the shadows, hates with an unnatural passion, and practices political fanaticism that glorifies violent death and condemns innocent life.

For too long, this enemy has been protected and supported and sheltered by rogue nations. The friends of our enemies are also our enemies, and they will bear equal responsibility. We must defend our Nation. We must defeat these enemies once and for all. We must eliminate the scourge of terrorism.

This will be the great challenge for our generation. It may take years. It may change the lives of all of us. It may require greater sacrifices for our citizens. But great challenges have made us stronger in the past. On July 4, 1776, our Founding Fathers decided to challenge tyranny. After we won our freedom, we wrote a new Constitution, and created a stable, thriving democracy.

We faced dark days when our Nation was torn asunder in the Civil War, and we came together after that war between the States to become the savior of Europe in the First World War.

The empire of Japan deliberately attacked us on December 7, 1941, and we emerged as the greatest defender of the free world.

We must now defeat communism in a painful Cold War and emerged as the world’s sole superpower.

Now, after this greatest of American tragedies that we have faced here on American soil, we face the greatest of challenges.

I am comforted by the work of the President and his team. They are assembling a worldwide coalition of civilized nations. These nations look to the United States for leadership, and they want to join us in this great crusade. We will provide that leadership.

We have a job to do in this Congress and this authorization for the use of force is an important part of that responsibility.

I ask my colleagues to vote for this authorization and to join with me in supporting our President, in supporting our Constitution, and in supporting the American way of life.

Mr. HYDE. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, this is a fateful moment in our Nation’s history and in the history of this Chamber. Once again, we have been awakened to the reality that we have mortal enemies. They do not desire compromise. They are not interested in negotiation. Our suffering does not give them human pause. Indeed, they celebrated. They do not seek our mere defeat. They are intent on our destruction.

The demonic horror of these deliberate attacks remains inconceivable, but we have no choice except to accept that it is real nonetheless. Our enemies’ message was stark and inescapable. They will make war on all of us wherever we exist for as long as we exist.

The orchestrators would not have ordered these actions if they did not believe that they themselves would survive, that they would celebrate in triumph. I fear they have judged our failure to render justice for their past atrocities as weakness and an invitation to even greater assaults. We must correct this misperception, not with words but with acts.

No creed which revels in the slaughter of innocents can be included in the human community. No cause which alliances with evil can be allowed to exist among us. Tolerance of such things not only invites our own destruction, it is a mortal sin.

Those who hate us believe that a free people cannot defend themselves. They assure themselves that we will fail in the difficult task before us. Our self-proclaimed enemies will seize upon any weakness of resolve on our part. As long as they believe that there are divisions among us, as long as they expect not give them reason to believe we are indecisive and incomplete, they will have hope of success.

We must deny them that hope. Our forefathers, who won our liberty, bequeathed it to us in the knowledge that to keep it we would have to prove ourselves worthy of it. They were confident that we would not shrink from the measures necessary to defend it. All who have gone before us, all who have given their lives for their country and their freedom, are witnesses to us here today. That is why I ask my colleagues to put aside any measure of the United States, to make war on our enemy, to destroy their ability to harm us and to defend our beloved country.

In an earlier hour of trial for our Nation, Julia Ward Howe was inspired to write the words that became known as the Battle Hymn of the Republic. We ask God once again to “loose the faithful lightning of his terrible swift sword” against the enemies of our country and of mankind.

America has always triumphed over her enemies; and with God’s help, we will do so again.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

During the Civil War, Abraham Lincoln reminded his countrymen of their responsibility with these words: “We cannot escape history. The fiery trial through which we pass will light us down, in honor or dishonor, to the latest generation.”

It is a profound thing that a free people go to war. That is why we, the Nation’s elected representatives assemble as Congress, meet today, for we share with the President the responsibility for ensuring that our country is protected, that our people remain safe.

Therefore, we as Members of Congress now have a duty to perform. We must grant the President the fullest authority to employ all of the resources of the United States, to make war on our enemy, to destroy their ability to harm us and to defend our beloved country.

The President currently has many powers to deter and prevent international terrorism, including diplomatic pressure, economic measures, military action to stop imminent threats to the people of the United States. Our resolution arms the President with the certain knowledge that he has the full support of the United Congress and the American people in exercising these powers.

Mr. Speaker, the historic nature of this occasion cannot be overstated. Precious few times in our 225 years as a Nation have we been faced with such a grave and momentous decision. One need only look at the devastation, the broil, the destruction caused by the wake of Tuesday’s monstrous terrorist attacks to grasp the awesome responsibility before us.
Mr. Speaker, the world is watching these deliberations and is asking: Is the United States up to the challenge? Are we, as a Nation, blessed for so much of our history with peace and prosperity, capable of mounting a costly and concerted campaign against international terrorism? Let us today answer those doubts with a resounding affirmation.

In committing to this fight, let us not delude ourselves. We are embarking on a long and difficult struggle, like none other in our Nation’s history. It will demand resolve. It will demand patience. It will demand sacrifice. It will also demand that we draw upon the strength of each and every American.

I am deeply concerned, Mr. Speaker, by reports of violence directed at Arab-Americans and Muslim-Americans, some within my own district. This is not a clash of civilizations or a war between the Western and the Islamic world, as some would have it. It is a struggle for the survival of civilization itself against barbarism.

In this struggle, Mr. Speaker, we are not alone. All Americans deeply appreciate the many expressions of sympathy and support from our friends and allies across the globe. We trust that these words will be followed by actions—actions that may prove painful, costly and dangerous. But in the fight against international terrorism, there can be no neutrals. Those who are not with us are against us.

Today’s debate is a sign of the unity and vitality of our democracy. All among us are united in our outrage by the tragic events of this week. All among us are united in our commitment to defeat international terrorism. On this we stand undivided and indivisible. If we are to defeat international terrorism, as we must, we must provide our commander in chief with the power this resolution entails.

In granting the President this power, Congress is not abdicating its prerogatives. We do not weaken our role by approving this measure. By signaling our solidarity with the President and by trusting him with this power, we take our place at his side as full partners in this fight.

The President has a solemn responsibility to use this power wisely and not to consult with and report to the Congress throughout the long struggle ahead. We in Congress also have an ongoing responsibility: to contribute to these efforts, monitoring the crisis, investing in our national defense, gathering expert insights, and doing all in our power to ensure that these terrible events are never repeated.

Mr. Speaker, I am an American not by birth but by choice. Following the Second World War, I fled my native Hungary for the United States. The land of the free and the home of the brave. I chose to become a citizen of the Nation that saved my homeland and the entire world from international fascism and, later, from international communism. Today, I proudly reaffirm my allegiance and resolve in the new struggle to save this Nation and the world from international terrorism.

I have never been prouder to serve in the United States Congress than I have during this week. The many words spoken on the floor of this Chamber echo the world over and testify to America’s resilience in the face of adversity. All of my colleagues who join this debate do honor to this institution and to the American people, whom we all serve.

But the time for words has passed, Mr. Speaker, and the time for action is upon us. We must now make our rhetorical reality. We must now stand united and pursue a group that is not to flinch in the face of terror. Let us go forth, certain in our knowledge that this fight.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. HYDE. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 1 minute to the learned gentleman from Texas (Mr. PAUL), but would like to first congratulate the distinguished minority leader of this committee, the gentleman from California (Mr. LANTOS), for his usual superb remarks.

Mr. PAUL. Mr. Speaker, I thank the chairman for yielding me this time.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of this resolution. Sadly, we find ourselves today dealing with a responsibility to provide national security under the most difficult of circumstances. To declare war against a group that is not a country makes the clear declaration of war more complex.

The best tool the framers of the Constitution provided under these circumstances, as I must, we must provide to our commander in chief the power to prevent any future acts of international terrorism against the United States. In other words, we are not just engaging in an act of retaliation or revenge, as satisfying as that will be, but we are taking action to prevent this from happening again to save the lives of Americans.

The use of force that we authorize today must be used swiftly and surely and smartly. It has been said that this force should be used ferociously. And that is a strong word but an appropriate word under these circumstances. We need to punish the perpetrators of this terrorist activity. We must prevent the recurrence, and we must protect America.

It may be we do not need to grant this authority. Under the War Powers Act, the President has the ability to use force when America is attacked, as we have seen this week. But it is good for Congress to add our voice of support and to specifically grant this authority to the President.

Without defining the enemy there is no way to know our precise goal nor to know when the war is over. Inadvertent or casual acceptance of course, or even to war, as we must, we must provide national security under the most difficult of circumstances. To declare war against a group that is not a country makes the clear declaration of war more complex.

The best tool the framers of the Constitution provided under these circumstances, as I must, we must provide to our commander in chief the power to prevent any future acts of international terrorism against the United States. We must be targeted and accurate. We must spare innocent civilians, but we must act and act firmly. We must also be ready to use diplomacy, to build alliances, to combat terrorism, to lead the charge, to unite the democratic governments that oppose terrorism and those authoritarian governments that also oppose terrorism. We need to provide that leadership. We need to be ready to use all means to combat terrorism.

We need to make sure that we fight the terrorists and not the Islamic world. Most of the Islamic world agrees with us in opposition to terrorism. If we are creative and sensible, this can be the beginning of the end of international terrorism.

Mr. HYDE. Mr. Speaker, I am honored to yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Florida (Mr. DIAZ-BALART), a distinguished member of the Committee on Rules.

Mr. DIAZ-BALART. Mr. Speaker, this great Nation is a Nation made from many origins but with a national identity and a national cohesion, a nationhood, which is almost unparalleled in the history of the world. Yet American patriotism is not threatening to others. Americans seek to do no harm to the rest of the world. Quite the contrary. Repeatedly, Americans have gone to the aid of others whose sovereignty and freedom have been kidnapped by tyrants.

America is a peaceful and free Nation; and we intend to pass on that peace and freedom to our children so that they, in turn, may bequeath it to their children. America is free and secure because each generation has made certain to preserve our freedom and our security for the next generation. There can be no freedom without security, just as security without freedom is the essence of dictatorship, something that this Nation, thanks be to God, has never known, will not become a hallmark. It is now this generation’s turn, Mr. Speaker, this generation’s responsibility to preserve freedom and security for our posterity, and our commander in chief, our Armed Forces, and this entire Nation will not fail.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Oregon (Mr. BLUMENAUER), a distinguished member of the Committee on International Relations.

Mr. BLUMENAUER. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

Last Tuesday, war was declared, not just on the United States but on civilized people everywhere. The American people were instantly united and resolved around this challenge. This resolution this evening is another step in the long struggle for the American people to see that their Nation’s leadership is equal to this challenge.

While I am one who believes that the American President has these powers and more, there is a chance here to jointly define the challenge. There is an opportunity for Congress and the administration, people in both parties, to work very closely together. This challenge is and what we are going to do.

Our Nation has never quite undertaken this issue in quite the same way. We can avoid the problems of the past. We said in the Spanish-American War we had terrorism cause for the wrong war. During World War II, we saw our government commit, sadly, acts against the civil liberties of Japanese-American citizens. I think we have learned from those experiences in the past.

I am hopeful this resolution will be the first step for more direct actions that will be inclusive, inclusive here on Capitol Hill, inclusive of citizens around the country inclusive with our friends and allies abroad, and, indeed, with some countries with whom we may not have the warmest of relations: but we are all united in this effort to protect the rights of many men and women in civilized countries everywhere.

I hope this is a beginning of an effort to show that we Americans are equal to the challenge and that we are going to lead in a way that is going to help spare other people around the world from the terror of these dark and sinister forces.

Mr. HYDE. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the distinguished gentleman from Georgia (Mr. NORWOOD).

Mr. NORWOOD. Mr. Speaker, I rise tonight to fully endorse and authorize the use of force as directed by the President of this great Nation.

Now is the time to lead the most extensive campaign against terrorism this world has ever seen, to annihilate those sources of hatred and terror, to break them, to cleanse the Earth of those sources of hatred and terror and the terrorists and not the Islamic world as we have seen in the past.

We must be targeted and accurate. It must be comprehensive. We must be diligent and the American people must be patient. This is a very difficult and it is very different than the forces of power we have authorized in the past where many times enemies were clear. Here there are subtleties and complexities and organizational complexities that defy much of our thinking. We will have some successes and some failures. But we must do this because we must understand that the enemy here made a conscious and intentional decision to slaughter innocent people.

They put people randomly, randomly in harm’s way and killed them in a most arbitrary of fashions, in a manner which overwhelmed our senses and stunned our Nation. We must understand we have an obligation to the American people to take that action.

I would hope as we do that, the people in this country would have patience with one another; that they would recognize that when the airplane slammed into those buildings, it killed Muslims and Christians and Jews and Asians and Europeans and Africans and all the rest. It killed the landscape of the American society. When we do this, we must understand that we cannot lose that national character, which is truly our liberties and freedoms that are the beacon of the light that goes out from this building to those people in those nations that yearn for them and do not have them.

I wish our President well. I wish our armed services well in this effort, and I ask the American people to understand in the complex nature of the force we are authorizing here today.

Mr. HYDE. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the distinguished gentleman from California (Mr. MILLER), the ranking member of the Committee on Education and the Workforce.

Mr. GEORGE MILLER of California. Mr. Speaker, the other night I had the honor of joining you at the prayer service in the rotunda of this great building, this great monument of our democracy and our freedoms to the world. As I sat there, I thought about the fact that this building may very well have been a target on that sad day.

As I looked around, I thought what a tragedy it would be if this building had been leveled by that terrorist act. Then I thought more as I listened to those who spoke so eloquently from both sides of the aisle and our religious leaders. I thought it is really not about buildings. It is really not about monuments. It is about the American people.

The action that was taken by these terrorists against the American people must be responded to and it must be responded to in the most comprehensive fashion. It cannot be a symbolic act. It cannot be a one-time action. It must be comprehensive. We must be diligent and the American people must be patient.

This is very difficult and it is very different than the forces of power we have authorized in the past where many times enemies were clear. Here there are subtleties and complexities and organizational complexities that defy much of our thinking. We will have some successes and some failures. But we must do this because we must understand that the enemy here made a conscious and intentional decision to slaughter innocent people.

They put people randomly, randomly in harm’s way and killed them in a most arbitrary of fashions, in a manner which overwhelmed our senses and stunned our Nation. We must understand we have an obligation to the American people to take that action.

I wish our President well. I wish our armed services well in this effort, and I ask the American people to understand in the complex nature of the force we are authorizing here today.

Mr. HYDE. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the distinguished gentleman from California (Mr. MILLER), the ranking member of the Committee on Education and the Workforce.
the vote that I cast in 1991 to support then President George Bush in our Gulf War. Now we are at another grave moment of decision for our Nation. This is a moment of unadulterated proportions. We grieve for all of those who have been affected by this horror.

After Abraham Lincoln was assassinated, Melville wrote a poem that expresses as best we can the force of our emotion in the wake of this horror. He wrote, "There is a sobbing of the strong, and a pall upon the land. But the people in their weeping bare the iron hand. Beware the people weeping when they bare the iron hand."

The cowards who planned and executed the attack and any state that harbors them should be aware and beware of our iron hand, because they will pay.

As a Congress we will lock arms, we will rally behind our President and we will confront terror as one, because freedom will prevail.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Florida (Mr. DAVIS).

Mr. DAVIS of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of this resolution authorizing the President to use military force against those responsible for the horrific acts committed on Tuesday of this week.

Mr. President, we are wholeheartedly entrusting you with the most powerful military the world has ever known. We are doing so because we trust him to use this force with certainty, with swiftness, with judiciousness, and firmly, to make it perfectly clear that this nation and the world will not tolerate again what happened on Tuesday.

Mr. President, I want to encourage you to continue to work closely with Congress. This is not just your travails you face, these are our travails. These are the travails of the entire country. Mr. President, we will work together with you to help you succeed because your success will be our success as a country.

There are Members of Congress, Democrat and Republican, who are anxious to work with you to address the very difficult details in terms of the military issues, the diplomatic issues, the economic issues, the judicial issues we all face as we launch into this new stage in fighting terrorism.

Mr. President, we support you this evening, and we look forward to continuing to work closely with you.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER

The SPEAKER. The Chair would advise all Members to address the Chair and not the President directly.

Mr. HYDE. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. CANTOR).

Mr. CANTOR. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in support of this resolution. On Tuesday, unspeakable acts of violence were committed against innocent Americans. As we mourn the loss of those Americans, we stand united behind our President. I send my condolences to the families that are suffering.

I am inspired by those who have given of themselves to assist the victims of this attack. Civilized society has long sought to end the use of violence, but the perpetrators of terrorism and states that harbor them are the enemies of civilized society. They only understand the use of force, and the time has come to speak to them on their terms.

Today we will authorize the United States to strike out against this enemy. It will be a determined effort, sustained over time with the full support and resources of this Nation. Let our enemies know that we stand together, one Nation under God, prepared to pay the price to bring terrorism to its knees.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentlewoman from the District of Columbia (Ms. NORTON).

Ms. NORTON. Mr. Speaker, I have always opposed the wholesale use of our mighty military power except with a scalpel. However, I have always assumed that my country would never be attacked where we live and that my constituents and neighbors would never be innocent victims.

Mr. Speaker, the language before us is limited only by the slim anchorage of its September 11 reference, but allows war against any and all prospective persons and entities. This resolution shows that the challenges presented by terrorism as war have already begun with language before there is any action.

The point is to give the President the authority to do what he has to do, not whatever he wants to do. But the truth is that under our Constitution and existing law, if an attack is attacked, the President’s power is almost limitless.

In supporting his constitutional authority to protect our great country, Congress must remain vigilant to ensure that his power is always sufficient but never unchecked.

Mr. HYDE. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. BLUNT).

Mr. BLUNT. Mr. Speaker, as I listened to the other day to my colleagues respond on their own, away from this building, to what had happened, I noticed two overriding themes. One was in a free society that stands as a symbol for freedom of the world, we are always going to be faced with cowardly acts that happened this week.

The second was that our only real safeguard against those kinds of acts, no matter how much we might attempt with funding of our efforts to see that they never occur, the only true safeguard was to make certain that the people who planned, who perpetrated, who helped finance, who sheltered those who did any of those things, paid such an incredible price that they would not be willing to disrupt the freedom of the United States of America.

This resolution ensures that the President has the support of the Congress as he does everything possible to see that that price would be paid. It is a price that must be paid. We must move forward. I urge my colleagues to vote for the resolution.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from California (Mr. SHERMAN), a distinguished member of the Committee on International Relations.

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. Speaker I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

Mr. Speaker, in certain foreign cities there were those who danced in the streets believing that the terrorists’ ability to kill thousands of American civilians showed the terrorists’ strength. America’s strength is not our ability to kill civilians, but our great strength is that we do everything possible to avoid killing civilians.

We must remember that our conflict is not with Islam and not with Muslims. The last three military campaigns of the United States were to protect Muslim people in Bosnia, in Kosovo and in Kuwait.

For years we have urged our allies to join us in curtailing investments and aid to countries that support terrorism. Now we must insist that they join us in this effort. Those who claim to be America’s friends can no longer do business as usual with countries that support terrorism, nor can we allow European bank secrecy laws to stand in our way of tracing the money that was spent on this horrendous action.

We must wage a war against all of the well-organized, well-financed terrorist groups who have dedicated themselves to killing Americans. Chief among this group is the one headed by Osama bin Laden. He is probably responsible for some of those that happened, but as long as we have allowed him and others to sit there in safety, launching attack after attack against America, some of those attacks will be successful. We must demand that the Taliban government hand over Osama bin Laden and his henchmen over to us now and stop harboring terrorists. If they refuse, then we must initiate hostilities. We will prevail by aligning ourselves with the Northern...
Alliance. Hostilities with the Taliban may involve American casualties, but failure to act will involve thousands and tens of thousands of American casualties.

Mr. HYDE. Mr. Speaker, I am very pleased to yield 1 minute to the distinguished gentleman from Alabama (Mr. CALLAHAN).

Mr. CALLAHAN. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the authorization for the use of military force. There are no words to describe the anguish we and all Americans feel. Our national spirit has been dampened but not extinguished by the despicable acts of September 11. President Bush has reassured Americans that while those who detest freedom may destroy brick and mortar, they cannot destroy the American will. We can take comfort and confidence in our national resolve and depend on that to help us overcome this temporary setback.

Clearly, we must rally around our President. We must support his efforts and make crystal clear the fact that the American people are united and resolute that we will take a stand against attacks on our sovereignty and that we will avenge this grievous act. It is an American characteristic to unify in times of crisis. It is important to stand behind our President by authorizing the use of military force against those forces of evil. I am comforted to know that this body will pass this use of force resolution, probably unanimously, later today.

I am sure that the entire membership of this body joins me in praying for God to guide us and our President.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 1 minute to my valued colleague, the gentlewoman from California (Ms. LEE), a member of the Committee on International Relations.

Ms. LEE. Mr. Speaker, I want to thank our ranking member and my friend for yielding time.

Mr. Speaker, I rise today really with a very heavy heart, one that is filled with sorrow for the families and the loved ones who were killed and injured this week. Only the most foolish and the most callous would not understand the grief that has really gripped our people and millions across the world.

This unspeakable act on the United States has forced me, however, to rely on my moral compass, my conscience, and my God for direction. September 11 changed the worst and deepest fears now haunt us. Yet I am convinced that military action will not prevent further acts of international terrorism against the United States. This is a very complex and complicated matter. This will pass, although we all know that the President can wage a war even without it. However difficult this vote may be, some of us must urge the use of restraint. Our country is in a state of mourning. Some of us must say, let us step back for a moment. Let us just pause for a minute and think through the implications of our actions today so that this does not spiral out of control.

I have agonized over this vote, but I came to grips with it today and I came to grips with opposing this resolution during the very painful yet very beautiful memorial service. As a member of the clergy so eloquently said, "As we act, let us not become the evil that we deplore."

Mr. HYDE. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Indiana (Mr. KERNS).

Mr. KERNS. I thank the gentleman from Illinois for yielding time.

Mr. Speaker, I rise today in strong support of this resolution to use force. Earlier this week, war was declared this week, war on America. Out of the horror and carnage, America has risen united, resolved to bring justice to all those responsible for this evil act. The resolution before us today authorizes the use of force against those who planned, authorized, committed or aided the deadliest attack ever on U.S. soil.

While I strongly support today's resolution in response to the specific attacks that occurred on September 11, I believe that we will have to take additional action to address future threats. This must only be the beginning of a comprehensive war on terrorism.

In 1795, British statesman Edmund Burke said, "All that is necessary for evil to triumph is for good men to do nothing." The same holds true today. The free nations of the world must seize this opportunity and work together to end the evil of terrorism. As the rock of freedom in the world, America must lead the charge.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 1 minute to the gentlewoman from California (Mrs. NAPOLITANO), a distinguished member of the Committee on International Relations.

Mrs. NAPOLITANO. Mr. Speaker, I thank my good friend for yielding time, and I join my colleagues in support of this resolution authorizing the use of military force. Our American public and the free world look to us today for leadership and swift action. We cannot and we will not fail them. The sheer horror of the events that transpired in New York and the Pentagon are unprecedented in our history and they demand strong, decisive and united action. Our response is an abrogation of our responsibility as congressional leaders and would be interpreted by those who have utter disdain for our country, for our institutions, and for our people as a failure of resolve and the ultimate sign of weakness.

Our enemies, whoever and wherever they are, and those who harbor them, must clearly understand that we will never tolerate the acts of terrorism, acts of war, that have been perpetrated upon us and they must understand that there is no escape from American justice.

Inaction is capitulation. Of one thing I certainly am, we as Americans will never capitulate to terrorism or to any interest that looks to destroy our Nation. There comes a time when action and force become an absolute necessity. The families of those who died in this unspeakable horror, mothers, fathers, children, old and young, deserve to know that they did not die in vain. From this day forward we are a wiser, changed people, stronger, more united, firm in our commitment to our government, our country, our freedom, and to justice. Fear must not be allowed to rule us.

God bless America.

Mr. HYDE. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 1 minute to the learned gentleman from Georgia (Mr. ISAKSON).

Mr. ISAKSON. I thank the distinguished chairman for yielding time.

Mr. Speaker, the book of Ecclesiastes tells us that for everything there is a time; a time for love, a time for hate. On Tuesday morning, an expression of hate, unbelievable and unparalleled in all of our lifetimes, took place as Americans were used as instruments against Americans in a horrible toll of life and tragedy. On behalf of the sixth district of the State of Georgia and the United States of America, I rise in support of a resolution to give our President the full authority to respond and act to this act of hate and violence.

Mr. Speaker, the last thing I did before I walked to this Chamber was to call Brandi Unger, 13 years old, in Roswell, Georgia, to thank her for the letter she sent to me and the President and the handful of dollars she raised this past week to help America to fight this evil.

Mr. Speaker, when my father's generation, America's greatest generation, fought and defeated the evil of the 1940s, they did it for us; and we have enjoyed peace and prosperity. Today, we do it for the Brandi Ungers of the next generation, for a free, a safe America.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 1 minute to the gentleman from California (Mr. BERMAN), a valued senior member of the Committee on International Relations.

Mr. BERMAN. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of this resolution. There are many facets of it, but I would only like to focus on one.

Mr. Speaker, the letter I received from California (Mr. BERMAN), a valued senior member of the Committee on International Relations.
terrorism, we must eliminate the entire infrastructure that sustains these organizations. This will involve getting tough with governments that aid and harbor enemies.

Syria allows Hezbollah to operate freely in southern Lebanon. Iran recently hosted a terrorist summit and routinely provides arms and ammunition and other assistance to Hezbollah and other radical groups. Bin Laden is a guest of the Taliban regime. The suicide bombers of Islamic Jihad and Hamas are nurtured by the Palestinian Authority.

The time has come for these and other governments to make a fundamental choice: Will they continue to support those responsible for taking the lives of thousands of innocent men, women, and children? Or will they realize the error of their ways and end their financing, the facilitating, the harboring of terrorists and their organizational infrastructures and their state-sponsored incitement of terrorist attacks? For if they choose to continue their present course, they are not states of concern, they are not rogue states, they are America's enemies.

I applaud the administration's efforts to assemble an international coalition to fight terrorism. We have a real opportunity to make the world safer for freedom and democracy.

Mr. HYDE. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 1 minute to the distinguished gentleman from Louisiana (Mr. TAUZIN).

Mr. TAUZIN. Mr. Speaker, this is the second time in my tenure in this body that we are called upon to vote to commit the sons and daughters in the uniform of this country to war, to put their lives on the line for this country again, and this is indeed a profound moment in the history of this Chamber.

We should ask ourselves carefully why we do this. Do we do it just in anger, just for revenge? No greater authority than St. Thomas Aquinas taught me as a young lad the meaning and the understanding, the definition of self-defense. Our greatest duty under the Constitution is to protect and defend the citizens of this country from all enemies, both foreign and domestic. It is for that reason we rise in support of this resolution.

We have literally in this world allowed terrorism to exist too long. We have been on the defensive too long. We have taken too many body blows. It is time civilized man goes on the offensive.

Today, we go on the offensive. And we commit our sons and daughters to that enormous chore. This week, a reporter caught a citizen in New York taking dust off a car and putting it into a jar and he asked, "Is that your car?" The citizen said, "No. These are my friends. We have lost our friends."

...car?" The citizen said, "No. These are taking dust off a car and putting it into a jar and he asked, "Is that your..." The citizen said, "No. These are..." The citizen said, "No. These are..."

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 1½ minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Texas (Mr. HINOJOSA).

Mr. HINOJOSA. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of this resolution. War has been declared on this country. Today we must answer. Without warning or provocation on September 11, a deliberate attack was launched, using hijacked planes with innocent American civilians to kill innocent American civilians and military personnel.

Unlike the terrorists who attacked the innocent, our response will be against the guilty. The U.S. Constitution carefully divides the power to wage war between Congress and the President. I am confident that the resolution before us today strikes the appropriate balance between the President and Congress. It gives the President flexibility as Commander in Chief to conduct military operations as he sees fit, but it also requires the President to consult and report to Congress.

It retains the important day limit on military action without further congressional approval.

Make no mistake, this Congress and the American people are committed to seeing this war through to the end. We realize that we are in for a long fight, but Congress needs to take seriously its responsibility to authorize the continued use of force and not give up its rights to the President. Our Founding Fathers created this separation of powers for an important reason, and their ideals have served us well for the last 230 years.

Today, we join together in a day of mourning and remembrance for those we have lost. We pledge our best effort to hold down those responsible. We owe no less to those whose blood has been shed again for the cause of freedom.

I urge my colleagues to support this resolution.

Mr. HYDE. Mr. Speaker, I am honored to yield 1 minute to the distinguished gentleman from California (Mr. HUNTER).

Mr. HUNTER. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me time.

Mr. Speaker, we are giving the President the power to conduct a war. We need to also give him, along with that power, the resources to conduct not only a war that could take a short period of time, but a war that could be enduring.

Right now, our military forces badly need equipment, spare parts, munitions and intelligence resources to win this war. So along with this resolution, Mr. Speaker, let us resolve that, over the coming months and years, we will give our troops and our commander in chief what it takes to get the job done.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I am delighted to yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. SKELTON), the ranking member of the Committee on Armed Services.

Mr. SKELTON. Mr. Speaker, it is fitting this national day of mourning and remembrance that we take the first steps in healing our Nation and bringing those responsible for Tuesday's heinous acts to justice. We have condemned the unspeakable aggression visited upon our cities, we have united the Nation behind the great symbol of our American flag, and we have appropriated emergency funds to help States and communities to respond and to rebuild.

Now we face the hard task of going forward, of responding soberly and deliberately, but with great focus and conviction, and with the full strength and righteous fury of the United States Armed Forces. In this, we are in unchartered territory. We have fought great aggression before, our means of authorizing action today fit only imperfectly.

When Congress responded to Franklin Roosevelt's call in 1941 by declaring war against the Japanese Empire, it could do so with full knowledge. We knew who had attacked us. We knew that we would fight against another sovereign nation in a traditional war that would involve the full range of our military forces. We knew what victory would mean, and we were committed to meeting that goal and we did.

The current circumstances leave us with great uncertainty. We do not yet know who committed these unspeakable acts or where we may find them. We do not know the scale and scope of what bringing the perpetrators to justice may mean, and we do not know how long it may take.

Yet there are some things we do know. First, the Congress, having constitutional duty to partner with the President in undertaking military action. We fulfill that duty here with this resolution. While our actions here may be imperfect, they are an essential first step to show the unity of our Nation behind our President and our commitment to stand with our Armed Forces.

We also know that we will not be alone. The world is behind us. Our NATO allies, so long our partners and friends, are all ready to stand with us. They have acted upon the principle that many throughout the world have come to realize, that an attack on one peace-loving country is an attack upon all.

We also know that our response to these attacks will require great sacrifice. Our troops, who have long earned our respect and admiration, will be called again into harm's way and will need our unwavering support. Ordinary Americans, already sacrificing in the least of love and in their commitment to supporting our Nation, will be called upon to sacrifice still more. This battle will be long and difficult, and it will require concerted resolve from all Americans.

For us in Congress, we must continue to work with the President, recognizing that the actions of the weeks and months ahead will require both branches of government to execute their constitutional duties. We must improve our intelligence capabilities and assess the ability of our government to respond to unthinkable possibilities. After Tuesday, we know we must think about them strategically and thoroughly.

Mr. Speaker, let us stand together and pass this resolution.

Mr. HYDE. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield such time as she may consume to the gentlewoman from New Jersey (Mrs. ROUKEMA).

Mrs. ROUKEMA. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of the resolution, so that, in the words of Lincoln, “this Nation, of the people, by the people and for the people, shall not perish from the Earth.”

Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of H. Res. 64—a resolution authorizing the use of the armed forces of the United States against those responsible for this week’s attack on our American homeland.

Our community has been devastated. Families in each and every town, village and borough in northern New Jersey are in pain. We pray for them and promise that we will do all in our power to find the villains who perpetrated this crime against them, against our nation, and against the free people of the world.

We must be firm. Our investigation must be quick and retaliation must be certain.

Yes, this is retaliation.

But these are not singularly the objectives of our use of force. The defense of our democracy—and our loyal hardworking citizens. The principle that we will stand tall for the world to see and defend the rule of law—our law and international law.

And on the basis of these recognized standards supported by most governments—including many European, Asian and Muslim nations—and every international group—the United Nations, NATO, the European Union—as well. They are standing tall and supporting our defense of liberty and national sovereignty to “use all necessary and appropriate force against nations, person or entities, as clearly designated by the President,” as required in the Authorization for Use of Military Force of September 14, 2001.

I stand in strong support of action and am confident there will be overwhelming support—if not a unanimous vote—for this resolution.

We must stand tall and firmly state—with the hammer of force if necessary—to protect innocent Americans. In the words of Lincoln “that this nation—of the people, by the people, for the people, shall not perish from the earth.”

Abraham Lincoln

We must continue to work together to heal each other and affirm the solidarity so many Americans have shown over the last few days. May God comfort those families who have been devastated by this atrocity.

And may God bless the United States of America.

Mr. HYDE. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 1 minute to the distinguished gentleman from Arizona (Mr. KOLBE),

Mr. KOLBE. Mr. Speaker, on Tuesday, September 11, the United States sustained, but heroically withstood, a terrorist attack of unprecedented magnitude. Make no mistake about it: this was not only an attack committed against this Nation as the leader of the free world, but was also an assault against all of humanity, against our very civilization as we know it.

Today, the President must authorize the use of force to repel this attack on the people of the United States. As we take this step, we should be conscious of the magnitude of the undertaking. This is not a resolution expressing our outrage. It is nothing less than a declaration of war. Success will be measured by eradicating the individuals and the networks of those responsible for this act of war.

Given the tactics that we know of terrorists, this task will be arduous and difficult, but we can and we must be victorious. To all those who cherish freedom and democracy around the world, let there be no doubt: your way of life, your aspirations for the future, the security of your family, have also been attacked. The devastation in New York, Pennsylvania, and Washington is not limited to the United States. It stretches to your countries, to your streets, indeed to your homes.

You too must stand and be counted in the fight against the perpetrators of this crime as well as threats from other terrorist acts. After this authorization, Congress and the President will need to re-visit the threat of terrorism.

We will have to develop a new comprehensive strategy to combat terrorism at home and around the world. In that endeavor, we will prevail. Today’s legislation marks the beginning of that effort.

Mr. Speaker, in this effort, we will prevail, and today’s legislation marks the beginning of that effort.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 1 minute to the distinguished gentleman from Ohio (Mr. KUCINICH).

Mr. KUCINICH. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me time.

Mr. Speaker, whatever form of action we choose must reflect our democratic principles and distinguish us from the mentality of terrorists and destructive violence.

Our actions must pursue a path towards reducing violence, not escalating violence. Launching weapons of mass destruction or collateral attacks against innocent civilians would be no different than the terror we already have had brought upon us. An eye-for-an-eye mentality is unacceptable. We are a Nation of civil and moral values, and we must show the world that.

These terrorist attacks were clearly a crime against humanity. What does a democracy do to punish criminals? We put them on trial. If found guilty, we imprison them. If necessary, any action should be centered on arresting the responsible parties and the Government placing the suspects on trial.

That is how we win this. This is how we should show the world that we are a humane and democratic Nation. That is what gives us the moral high ground.

That is what we need to do to help prevent future attacks.

Future attacks will not be prevented because terrorists fear our military. To kill them does not scare them. It is an honor for them to be killed. But for our democracy it is important to rise above their violent attacks and punish them with unquestionable moral superiority. That will vindicate our highest principles.

Violence is reciprocal in nature. Peace is also reciprocal. The direction we take will speak volumes about our democracy. We must and will defend our country, and we must and will pursue and arrest these criminals. We must do so in a manner that upholds democratic principles.

Mr. HYDE. Mr. Speaker, I am honored to yield 1 minute to the distinguished gentleman from Texas (Mr. SAM JOHNSON).

Mr. SAM JOHNSON of Texas. Mr. Speaker, America is strong. America is united, and America will prevail over evil. The terrorist attacks against us have failed; and they have only made us more determined, more focused, more resolute.

Mr. Speaker, the President will, at the appropriate time, use the full force of the United States to stop those who are opposed to freedom and the American way of life.

Do you remember our Declaration of Independence? “We mutually pledge to each other our lives, our fortunes and our sacred honor.” These words should remind anyone who tries to destroy our freedoms that Americans always stand together.

Mr. Speaker, I fought in a couple of wars myself; and this is a war, and I am ready to do it. That is why we remain the greatest, most powerful country on Earth. Let us go to war for freedom.

God bless America.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 1 minute to the distinguished gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. KLECZKA).

Mr. KLECZKA. Mr. Speaker, almost 60 years ago the United States suffered massive casualties in a surprise attack on one of our military bases. On Tuesday, September 11, Americans were forced to relive the terror of another brutal and malicious attack on our citizens.

Then, just as now, our Nation rose up and we responded to a horror and threat with steadfast determination to defend ourselves and to find and punish the aggressors. The resolution before us gives the President authority to use all necessary and appropriate force against those nations, organizations or persons he determines planned, authorized, committed, or aided in these terrorist attacks. Make no mistake about
Mr. Speaker, our national resolve expressed in the resolution before us is equally determined, and those responsible for these depraved attacks have every reason to fear it.

Under the authority granted by Article I of the Constitution, Congress has declared war only 11 times. We do not make a formal declaration of war today. However, in fulfillment of our constitutional duty and as a response to the attacks of September 11, we must authorize the President to use all necessary and appropriate force against those nations, organizations or persons who planned, authorized, committed or aided these horrific attacks.

Importantly, Mr. Speaker, we also authorize the President to use all necessary and appropriate force against those who have harbored such organizations and persons.

A generation ago, one of this Nation's greatest friends, whose mother helped save our city in 1900, was lost in the attack on the World Trade Center. Today, we are fighting this war to honor his memory and to protect the future generations of Americans, men, women and children.

We do so with the devastation of Tuesday's attacks fresh in our minds. New York Mayor Giuliani reported that nearly 5,000 people have been reported missing. At the Pentagon, over 100 are dead or still missing. We must not forget those innocent people aboard the planes, or nearly 200 killed. If these estimates hold true, they would amount to twice as many casualties as those suffered in the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor.

Today, Mr. Speaker, we must act. America must act deliberately and strongly against those nations and organizations responsible for Tuesday's destruction. It is our responsibility, our duty, to empower our President to act and act decisively.

Mr. HYDE. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 1 minute to the distinguished ranking member of the Committee on House Administration.

Mr. HOYER. Mr. Speaker, I thank the ranking member for yielding me time.

Mr. Speaker, centuries from now, when future generations look back, they will see that September 11, 2001, was a day like no other in our history. A bright, late summer morning on our Nation's East Coast was shattered by unspeakable acts of war against all Americans and all freedom-loving people.

We fear that these cowardly attacks have claimed more than 5,000 innocent men, women and children, making this the deadliest day ever on American soil.

At Pearl Harbor, 2,500 perished; at Antietam, 4,000 fell in a day; and during our entire 8-year struggle for independence, 4,500 patriots gave their lives for freedom.

After the attack on Pearl Harbor, the Japanese in a bipartisan display of treachery remarked, "I fear all we have done is awaken a sleeping giant and filled him with terrible resolve."

Mr. Speaker, our national resolve expressed in the resolution before us is equally determined, and those responsible for these depraved attacks have every reason to fear it.
I support this resolution, but this Congress and the American people must understand that we are embarking on a very dangerous mission whose duration is unknown and whose consequences are beyond our control. Our enemies in this war hide in the shadows and retreat to the far reaches of the Earth. Our enemies do not have the courage to face us in open combat so our military leaders will need to adapt a new approach to win this war. But I strongly support this resolution because America must stand up once and for all and state to the world: no one with the means and the will to threaten the American people will be tolerated—anywhere on the face of the Earth.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from California (Mr. SCHIFF), a member of the Committee on International Relations.

Mr. SCHIFF. Mr. Speaker, tonight we authorize the President to use all necessary and appropriate military force against any nation, organization or person responsible for the terrible attacks of September 11, or anyone who harbors such individuals. Make no mistake; it is a broad delegation of authority to make war on those who have attacked us. We do not do so lightly or without consideration for the weighty consequences of our act.

After the attacks of this week, many Americans recalled Pearl Harbor. I thought of the Battle of Britain and Hitler’s indiscriminate bombings of London, Churchill’s words still so powerfully resonant: “He hopes by killing so many numbers of civilians and women and children that he will terrorize and cow the people of this mighty imperial city. Little does he know the spirit of the British nation or the tough fiber of the Londoners who have been bred to value freedom above their own lives.”

So too, America. Little do these petty tyrants and murderers know the spirit of the American people or the tough fiber of the New Yorkers, our defense workers, or the civilians who spared further casualties by taking down the hijackers and their own plane over Pennsylvania.

The face of this tyrant is new and yet not so new. Like others before him, he abhors a free society and democratic institutions. He is willing to kill innocent men, women and children to further his perversive aims. He does not realize this is our fight. He thinks we are weak because we do not tell our citizens what to think, how to act, whom to vote for, or who we tolerate dissent. He does not realize this is our strength, and he has awoken the sleeping giant.

“What he has done,” as Churchill has said, “is to kindle a fire in hearts here and there, a fire which, when once lighted, spreads along after all traces of the conflagrations he has caused have been removed.”

What these petty tyrants do not understand and have never understood is that for all of our rough-and-tumble public discourse, we are one people, whose desire for freedom unites us. The price of freedom is too high, and Americans have always paid it.” President Kennedy said. We pay it still.

This is the battle of America. The enemy may be new, but the fight has always been the same. Our government, our democracy, is premised on basic human freedoms, on the right of the governed to control their own national destiny. The Civil War tested whether any Nation so conceived could long survive as a Union. This is the battle of September 11, 2001, terrorizing and cowing the people of this country.

We are about to make what, for most of us, will be the single greatest vote in our time as Members of Congress. Authorizing the use of force is a monumental event, and its significance should not be minimized. This resolution is about our will to wage war against an enemy that is actively seeking to kill innocent citizens and destroy our way of life.

We are not naive. The use of force has many risks, but we risk more by doing nothing. This resolution acknowledges that the world is a different place today, but we have the ability and the will to win a war against terrorism. The security of American lives requires us to succeed. I urge adoption of this resolution.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Nevada (Ms. BERKLEY), a member of the Committee on International Relations.

Ms. BERKLEY. Mr. Speaker, I rise to offer my strongest support for this resolution authorizing the President to use all necessary and appropriate force against those responsible for the September 11, 2001, terrorist attacks.

Today I stand in solidarity with my colleagues, with the administration, and with our President, to authorize the President to use all necessary and appropriate force against those responsible for the terrorist attack of September 11, 2001.

Today I stand in solidarity with my colleagues, with the administration, and with our President, to authorize the President to use all necessary and appropriate force against those responsible for the terrorist attack of September 11, 2001.

I urge adoption of this resolution.
New York or Washington, but Brussels or London. We have the responsibility and the power to bring these terrorists to justice.

Mr. Speaker, the challenge has been issued and now it is up to us to decide whether we will rise to the occasion. Supporting the President is our duty to the victims and to the world.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 1 minute to the distinguished gentleman from California (Mrs. CAPPS), my distinguished colleague.

Mrs. CAPPS. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of this resolution.

Tuesday was the darkest day in American history. Our grief for the victims knows no bounds. Our compassion for their families fills our hearts. Our pride in the rescuers, medical personnel, and volunteers is endless.

In the aftermath of this terrible assault, our Nation now faces tremendous challenges. We have no greater challenge than to protect our citizens and our institutions against further acts of terrorism. Never before has our Nation faced such an extraordinary threat to our security and to our way of life.

By passing this resolution, Congress stands united with the President in what may be a long and costly fight against these forces of darkness and evil. But make no mistake. We will prevail.

Mr. HYDE. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 1 minute to the distinguished gentleman from Indiana (Mr. PENCE).

Mr. PENCE. Mr. Speaker, at 10 a.m. on September 11, I stood on the east lawn of the Capitol, smoke billowing from the Pentagon behind the Capitol dome, F-16s coursing through the air. The stuff on my feet shook with a secondary explosion at the Pentagon.

I was filled, Mr. Speaker, with a deep and resolve anger that this would not stand; that America would respond. That is altogether fitting. The butchers who carried out these attacks see themselves as warriors, and it would be wrong of us to deal with them otherwise.

What they are about to learn is that America’s fighting men are the most powerful warriors in the history of the world. Tonight I will speak for our American servicemen and women, for our American spirit.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 1 minute to our distinguished colleague, the gentleman from Hawaii (Mrs. MINK).

Mrs. MINK of Hawaii. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman very much for yielding me time.

Mr. Speaker, I served in the Congress during the heated debates about President Bush to take such powers and such actions as may be necessary in order to find a way to punish, to retaliate against those who caused all this damage on the soil of America, and we join the President in our eagerness to give him that authority.

But I want to make sure that I understand this resolution. I have read it a dozen times over, because I want to make sure that the War Powers Act as we understand it that the conflagration in Vietnam is not in any way jeopardized.

I think we have to call attention to those sections which say “Nothing in this resolution supersedes the war powers resolution.” On that basis, I support the passage of this resolution tonight.

Mr. BEREUTER. Mr. Speaker, it is my pleasure to yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. PITTS), a member of the Committee.

Mr. PITTS. Mr. Speaker, we must pass this resolution and give the President all the power he needs to stop the slaughter of innocent Americans from happening again. The evil men who orchestrated this attack have shown that they will stop at nothing. Their goal is to kill as many Americans as they can. If they ever get their hands on chemical, biological, or even nuclear weapons, they will use them. Let no one doubt it. We are at war, to save innocent Americans from the specter of grisly death by the weapons of mass destruction.

But it is not a war against Muslims or against Arabs. Many of our Arab and Muslim Americans came to the United States to get away from the very same type of extremists as those who attacked our country. In the past few days, my office has received an outpouring of deeply sympathetic support and condolences from people in many Islamic countries around the world.

As our great Nation pulls together, let us be careful not to turn to hate or dreading injustice must and will be carried out, but it will be against those who deserve it, the savage radical terrorists, not against our fellow Arab and Muslim citizens and friends here and around the world.

In that spirit, I urge my colleagues to pass this resolution unanimously.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 1 minute to my distinguished colleague, the gentleman from Florida (Mrs. MEEK).

Mrs. MEEK of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of the joint resolution. By passing this resolution we say, never again. We stand shoulder to shoulder with President Bush to take such powers and authorize the President to use all necessary force to banish those who carried out these attacks see the United States of America will not.

The United States of America will not.

The butchery of innocent Americans from the specter of terrorism, whether we will rise to the occasion.

Mr. Speaker, as I noted yesterday, Americans have always known that freedom is not free. It often comes with a tremendous cost, and often imposes a tremendous responsibility. Throughout our history, Pearl Harbor, Gettysburg, from the founding of our constitutional democracy, our citizens have always been willing to pay that price. We are ready to pay that price, Mr. Speaker. We will never forget the sacrifices of all the victims of terror. We will honor their sacrifices by waging and winning the war against terrorism.

Sixty years ago, after he learned of the attack on Pearl Harbor, Winston Churchill quoted a remark made to him: “The United States is like a giantic boiler. Once the fire is lighted under it, there is no limit to the power we can generate. It will be generated.” Mr. BEREUTER. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Texas (Mr. DELAY), the majority whip.

Mr. DELAY. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me.

Mr. Speaker, Members should support this resolution because it affirms the President’s authority to firmly defend freedom. It will solidify America as a nation that is strong, that is dedicated to our country.

We must have firm support of this resolution and give the President all the power he needs to stop the slaughter of innocent Americans from happening again.

Mr. Speaker, we stand shoulder to shoulder with President Bush to take such powers and authorize the President to use all necessary force to banish those who carried out these attacks see the United States of America will not.

at home. They should expect casualties as we take the battle to our enemies. But they should take pride and draw confidence from the great reservoir of American resolve and resolve. Those who have served make a promise to the Constitution, laws or ideals. While September 11, 2001, has caused great pain and agony for the Nation, it has not and will not defeat our resolve or our commitment to freedom and democracy.

The fight may be long, it may be tough and costly, but we will know from tonight forward that it will be right.

Mr. BEREUTER. Mr. Speaker, it is my pleasure to yield 1 minute to the distinguished gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. KENNEDY).

Mr. KENNEDY of Minnesota. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of this bill. President Kennedy once said in his inaugural address that: "In the long history of the world, only a few generations have been granted the role of defending freedom in its hour of maximum danger. I do not shrink from that responsibility. I welcome it."

We are once again called upon to defend freedom in an hour of maximum danger. My son, Charles, in a recent college application essay, noted that Americans have always risen to the challenge, from settling this rugged land and gaining independence until today.

Freedom again is challenged. We owe it to my son, Charles, and all our children to rise to this challenge so that they can live in a land where freedom is safe.

We have a responsibility and we will not shrink from that responsibility. We welcome it.

It is my hope that, again quoting JFK, "The energy, the faith, the devotion that we bring to this challenge can light our country and all who serve it and the glow from that fire can truly light the world."

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 1 minute to the distinguished colleague from Texas Mr. KENNEDY of Minnesota. Mr. Speaker, this resolution rallyed our Nation behind the President, and I ask the Members to support it.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 1 minute to the distinguished gentleman from Texas Mr. KENNEDY of Minnesota. Mr. Speaker, this resolution rallyed our Nation behind the President, and I ask the Members to support it.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 1 minute to my distinguished colleague, the gentlewoman from California (Ms. WOOLSEY).

Ms. WOOLSEY. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of this resolution. Like my constituents in Marin and Sonoma counties, I feel a combination of outrage and sorrow over Tuesday’s tragic events. I share my constituent’s wide-ranging conflicting emotions about what should come next. No doubt the events of September 11 have changed us forever; but as I stated Tuesday, our Nation’s response to these attacks will also leave an indelible mark on the American people.

Yes, we are united in our disgust for the violence that was perpetrated in New York City and Washington, D.C., against our democracy and against our freedoms. We know that we must bring those responsible for the attacks to justice, but my constituents also ask, do we know what means are appropriate to accomplish that? They are pleading with me and with you that we temper our absolute resolve with wisdom.

Our conscience and our memory reminds us that a hasty response to Tuesday’s attacks, just for the sake of retribution, could mean killing even more innocent people. That is why my constituents beg me and I beg this body, please, do not respond to evil with evil.

Mr. BEREUTER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentlewoman from California (Ms. BONO).

Mrs. BONO. I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in very strong support of this resolution. As sons and daughters of what has been called the "Greatest Generation," many of us grew up in awe of those giants of the 20th century, common citizens who performed uncommon deeds of valor and gallantry that secured our Nation and the world’s freedom. We thought bravery of this kind was found only in our history books and in the memories of our veterans. This week, our generation confronts our own challenge, and it is a challenge of enormous consequence.

Now our generation will be given the chance to rise to the occasion and make the "Greatest Generation" proud.
We confront an enemy that is a threat to the civilized people of our times. Once our Nation rose to stave off tyranny. Now we must employ all our resources to stave off terror and fanaticism. We will answer this duty, and we will not go quietly and softly into the good night.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 1½ minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Oklahoma (Mr. BACA), the gentleman from California (Mr. BACA).

Mr. BACA. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of this resolution to authorize the President to take necessary actions against terrorist nations, organizations or persons. And in authorizing the President this power, we must ensure that we protect innocent people and nations and that we, as a Nation, do not use this authority to go back in time against innocent Americans.

It is time to end this barbaric cowardly act on our country and Nation. What happened on September 11 was clearly an act of war that has landed on our shores. It has touched the lives of our country and Nation and many individuals, individuals such as Cora Holland, mother of three and grandmother of two from my district; Navy Yeoman Second Class Melissa Rose Barnes, who remains unaccounted for at the Pentagon; Navy Yeoman Second Class Melissa Rose Barnes, who remains unaccounted for at the Pentagon; and many innocent civilians at the World Trade Center and the Pentagon, as well as those who were on the flights who were used to commit this evil horrible act.

We as a Nation will pull together and build our courage and strength for we are united and our faith will guide the President and Congress in dealing with this horrible act. When America is attacked, we respond with one voice, with the full force of our Nation.

I urge support of this resolution. God bless America.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 1½ minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Oklahoma (Mr. LARGENT).

Mr. LARGENT. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of this joint resolution between the Senate and the House. As I have sat here and have witnessed my colleagues, I have seen great resolve uttered in this Chamber and the swarming display of courage.

I can share with my colleagues, as a veteran of the Gulf War, that war may be glorious in verse or prose, but in reality it is not. We are about to send America’s finest, and that means men and women will die. It will be a noble cause, but we must remember the responsibility of this war it is chaotic. Not everything is going to go right. We cannot be 400 and 500 generals between the House and the Senate.

The solidarity and resolve we have at this moment we have to remember at times when it gets tough, when we have to stand with a constituent in a lonely place at a burial service. We must make sure that we take care of the loved ones afterwards. And taking care of them means we resource them and we are patient and we are in this for the long haul.

We cannot have the bravado of today and then run at the first sound of the guns. We have to stay the course and see it through. Please, when it gets hard, remember that day.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 1½ minutes to my friend and colleague, the gentleman from California (Mr. BACA).

Mr. BACA. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of this resolution to authorize the President to take necessary actions against terrorist nations, organizations or persons. And in authorizing the President this power, we must ensure that we protect innocent people and nations and that we, as a Nation, do not use this authority to go back in time against innocent Americans.

It is time to end this barbaric cowardly act on our country and Nation. What happened on September 11 was clearly an act of war that has landed on our shores. It has touched the lives of our country and Nation and many individuals, individuals such as Cora Holland, mother of three and grandmother of two from my district; Navy Yeoman Second Class Melissa Rose Barnes, who remains unaccounted for at the Pentagon; and many innocent civilians at the World Trade Center and the Pentagon, as well as those who were on the flights who were used to commit this evil horrible act.

We as a Nation will pull together and build our courage and strength for we are united and our faith will guide the President and Congress in dealing with this horrible act. When America is attacked, we respond with one voice, with the full force of our Nation.

I urge support of this resolution. God bless America.
September 14, 2001

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—HOUSE

Mr. DeFazio. Mr. Speaker, the senseless human tragedy caused by the craven terrorist acts of September 11, 2001 weigh heavily on our minds and will do so for days, months, and years to come.

Many have said our Nation will never be the same. I agree. Our Nation is stronger, more united, more proud than possibly any time in our history. The outpouring of grief and support, both here and around the world has been comforting. The terrorists may have collapsed our buildings, but in response, we are building a stronger America.

America is based on a Constitution and our laws. Under Section 202(c)(3) of the War Powers Act, the President already has the ability to use the military to respond to an attack upon our country and our Armed Forces. Nothing in this resolution supersedes any requirement of the War Powers Act. The President has authority to respond against those who perpetrated the acts on September 11.

Under the resolution of force pending today, Congress will reserve the right to review the President’s plans and actions. But make no mistake, this Congress will stand behind our young men and women in uniform who may be put in harm’s way and we will stand with President Bush as Commander in Chief.

I hope and pray the President will use the awesome force of the United States with great deliberation and wisdom.

Mr. Bereuter. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Florida (Mr. Putnam).

Mr. Putnam. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to give a speech I never imagined I would give; that of support for an authorization of force, a 21st century declaration of war.

As a member of a generation largely shielded from the horrors of war, I accept this responsibility with no small amount of respect and humility.

Today we undoubtedly will approve the mobilization of our Nation’s sons and daughters to combat, to injury, pain, sacrifice and death. There is no glory in our vote this evening, only duty.

We have a solemn duty to protect our shores, our countrymen, and our liberties. We step away from the rhetoric of this dark September night to commit ourselves to a national sacrifice with this vote to a sustained commitment of lives, liberties, and provisions necessary to preserve those things we here subscribe.

Mr. DeFazio. Mr. Speaker, the men and women in the service of our Nation are in the springtime of their lives. But to many in my generation, Pearl Harbor was an exam question, Korea a backdrop for a TV rerun, and Vietnam a blurry scene blotted out by Hollywood and an oldies radio station. To many Americans, the Gulf War seemed like a sustained video game write larger in ticker... taped parades, precision bombs, and talk of future bloodless wars.

Mr. Speaker, the future is here and this war is bloody indeed. Our Nation is ready. Our forces are prepared. The public is supportive and Congress stands together as one. Godspeed to the President and God bless America.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the distinguished gentleman from Texas (Mr. ORTIZ).

Mr. ORTIZ. Mr. Speaker, I stand in strong support of this resolution.

There is no question that we are strongly united. I have been in this House for almost 20 years, and I have not seen so much unity, not only among the House Members, but throughout this great country.

We have to realize that 2 days ago, the dreams and hopes of many young men and women and people of this country were destroyed by the acts of these terrorists.

I had a chance to go visit the Pentagon yesterday. I could see the civilian agencies locally, nationally, our military working and singing from the same page. It is distressing to see that many families lost their fathers, mothers, uncles and many families.

The best thing I can say to those terrorists is do not mess with the U.S.A. God bless America.

I rise in support of the resolution, the first step this Congress will take to exact retribution for the act of war committed upon this nation, striking at the heart of our financial and military centers and taking dead aim at our political center.

Let Congress's message ring very loud to those responsible for this act of war: we recognize it as such—and the people's representatives act in kind.

We have been hit hard, and we have lost family, friends, children, mothers, fathers, and many dreams died.

We put in innocence to a large degree; and the number of people we lost exceeds the casualties of Pearl Harbor.

This resolution respects the Constitutional power to declare war, the most awesome responsibility of Congress.

Since we have yet to discover definitive proof of all those responsible—including nations which gave Osama bin Laden safe harbor—we must give the administration the authority to pursue these international criminals until we have the information we need to declare war.

I have seen the morale of the emergency workers at the Pentagon and seen the looks of grim determination on the faces of those who work there every day.

They are now helping clean up the mess and recover the bodies of their comrades in arms.

Their morale is very high.

The morale of the nation is very high. This is a hard decision for Congress to make—usually.

Today the decision is not so difficult. These terrorists brought their destruction to bear inside our borders.

As the Ranking Democrat on the Armed Services Readiness Subcommittee, let me offer my advice to my colleagues.

We must not telegraph our punches.

Here's what that means: we don't tell the enemy how we will conduct our campaign, nor what kind of force to expect.

It will be swift, overwhelming and deadly, but let that be all we tell bin Laden and his bunch.

Let us give our military the money they need and send them to do what they do best: fight and win wars.

Our armed services have some of the most talented people in the nation, capable of doing whatever mission we need done.

Most importantly, let them utilize the element of surprise, which, as we all know is a brutally effective part of the arsenal.

Finally, a word to the people who perpetrated this act of war.

I want to explain to you why your efforts to damage our nation—or undermine our democracy—are futile.

We are a nation of laws, not people.

It is our ideas and our commitment to liberties and democracy that bind us together under our Constitution.

Washington is not where the power is; that power lies with the people of this nation.

Nothing illustrates that better than on Tuesday when the House Call Center redirected all incoming House calls to our district offices, scattered across the country when we evacuated.

Our meeting place here in this building is where we come to do the people's business, but we are temporary employees of the people who elect us.

If a member of our government is lost, another is elected.

Our power is in the people who populate this nation, and the ideas that bind us together.

Your power is in hate and war.

We will win.

The last thing you will see is the mighty power of the United States military.

May God—and Allah—have mercy on your soul, and all who harbor you.

Mr. BEREUTER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the distinguished gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. ENGLISH).

Mr. ENGLISH. Mr. Speaker, Psalm 71:1 says, “Bring to a shameful end those who attack me. Cover with contempt and scorn those who seek my ruin.”

On Tuesday, September 11, war was declared on the United States without provocation. Tonight we rise to accept that challenge which we did not seek, but to which we respond with resolution. We are prepared to defend our soil, our institutions and our peaceful communities.

We did not seek this conflict, but we stand fully prepared to fight it and re-double our efforts. To do this, we are prepared to place in the hands of the military and the President the resources that have been called on.

We as a Nation have not bent in the face of adversity, but we have bristled at the challenge to our freedoms. We cannot allow this challenge to go unanswered.

I urge my colleagues to fully support, without qualification, the President and the men and women of our Armed Forces prepare to defend our liberty, knowing that we realize we are asking them to sacrifice much and are confident that they are up to this daunting task.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the distinguished gentleman from Arizona (Mr. PASTOR).

Mr. PASTOR. Mr. Speaker, Americans are now standing at the crossroads of history. We must rise to the challenge.

Will we scurry back to where we came, or will we hold our heads high and proud and march forward to battle those who threaten our way of life? With this resolution, we have answered the question.

We will answer senseless slaughter with the necessary aggression to bring about its end. We will answer wanting killing with the belief that we are right in our belief and our love for freedom. We will answer hatred with the determination to preserve humanity. It will be a long and difficult struggle. But with the passage of this resolution, let no one doubt our firmness in defending ourselves.

We are a united Congress. We are a united government. We are a united people. We will succeed. I support this resolution and ask my colleagues to support it.

Mr. BEREUTER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. SHIMKUS) with whom I share an armoire.

Mr. SHIMKUS. Mr. Speaker, our military is now standing at the crossroads of history. We must rise to the challenge.

What a sobering responsibility to send our young men and women into battle. To our Nation I say stand firm, do not waiver, see it through. To my colleagues I say, stand firm, do not waiver, see it through. May God bless America.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from North Carolina (Mr. PRICE).

Mr. PRICE of North Carolina. Mr. Speaker, I stand in support of this resolution. Tuesday's terrorist attacks are unparalleled in our history, costing thousands of lives in one terrible day, more than the carnage at Antietam, more than Pearl Harbor. This was a carefully planned and skillfully executed act of war; and we must answer it with unity and resolve, apprehending and punishing those responsible, and any who harbored them or gave them aid.

In responding as swiftly and surely as our military might permits, we must do our utmost to protect innocent civilians, a principle that stands in stark contrast to the practice of our brutal adversaries. We must carry out military action within the parameters of the Constitution and the War Powers Act, as this resolution provides. We must punish those heinous acts of Tuesday, acts as close to absolute evil as any of us will ever witness, and we must prevent anything like this from ever happening again—rooting out terrorism even as we renew our Nation’s commitment to alleviating the world’s suffering and injustice and serving as a beacon of hope to all humankind.

Mr. BERGER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Alabama (Mr. RILEY), a distinguished member of the Committee on Armed Services.

Mr. RILEY. Mr. Speaker, there are defining moments in each of our lives. There are also defining moments in the life of a nation. September 11 was one of these defining moments. That was the moment our Nation remembered the sacrifice of our fathers and understood our responsibility to our children. At that moment, our Nation was galvanized by what it means to be an American. And now this resolution will show those who supported this act of hate the full meaning of American resolve.

Mr. Speaker, I offer my full support of this resolution and to the destruction of evil wherever it resides in this world.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1½ minutes to the gentlewoman from California (Ms. WATERS).

Ms. WATERS. Mr. Speaker, I rise with a great deal of uncertainty and apprehension.

To the President of the United States, I will be asked by my constituents did we give you the power to declare war? Many in Congress will argue that we are not giving you the power to declare war. Others will argue that we are giving you the power to do anything from assassinate an individual, to declare war on an entire country.

Mr. President, I am going to vote yes on this resolution because I believe the terrorist acts of September 11, 2001 were in fact a declaration of war against the United States of America. However, I vote yes with great reservations.

To be honest, Mr. President, I do not know what this means. The language of this resolution can be interpreted in different ways.

Mr. President, you have the awesome responsibility of leading this Nation and making the best possible decision for the people of this country. Mr. President, do not misuse this authority. Mr. President, do not abuse this awesome power. Mr. President, I plead with you to use this authority with great care and great wisdom.

Mr. President, with this power, the decisions you will make will determine the future of this Nation and perhaps the world. May God bless you with restraint and compassion to make wise decisions, and may God have mercy on your soul if you do not understand the awesome power that you have been afforded by the Members of Congress who are placing our trust in you on behalf of the American people.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER

The SPEAKER. The Chair advises Members that all remarks should be addressed to the Chair.

Mr. BERGER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. Wolf).

Mr. WOLF. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of this resolution authorizing the use of force against those responsible for the acts. I wanted to be here to be part of history, to make sure I was there when this took place.

I have no eloquent words to say tonight like so many others than to say this: I want us to pray for the President; to pray for our leaders on both sides of the aisle; to pray for those in the Cabinet who are going to be part of this decisionmaking; to pray for the military because few, if any, of us will actually go into combat; to pray for the men and women who go into combat; to pray for wisdom, protection, and guidance; and lastly, to pray for our country.

Mr. Speaker, I offer my full support of this resolution and to the destruction of evil wherever it resides in this world.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I am delighted to yield 1 minute to my good friend, the distinguished gentleman from Tennessee (Mr. TANNER).

Mr. TANNER. Mr. Speaker, Tuesday’s events were an attack on the United States, but they were more than that. They were an attack on humanity and civilization itself. This resolution tonight represents a policy change in our country, a big policy change, a monumental policy change, because we are declaring war not against any nation, not against any individual, not against any religion. We are declaring war against a policy inhuman behavior called terrorism, wherever it exists on Earth. That is a monumental step for this country.

This country needs to take that step in my opinion, though, because we are the leader in freedom and democracy and human rights in the world. And so on behalf of humanity and on behalf of civilization, on behalf of our children and grandchildren’s future, we take this burden on tonight. We did not seek it. But, ladies and gentlemen, we have seen the face of evil and we must crush it.

We are filled with grief, yet buoyed by pride. Like all Americans, I want to right this wrong and to avenge these cold, calculated killings. While this might seem a forgone conclusion to the overwhelming majorities here and abroad watching and awaiting our decision, this is the single most difficult obligation for a Member of this House to fulfill. In approving this measure, one is reaffirming one’s support for our nation, our President, our military leaders, and expressing our collective outrage and defiance on behalf of the thousands of American families that have been torn apart.

In this respect, this is an easy decision. But, as Members of Congress, we do not have the luxury of reacting solely on emotion.

Ultimately, the weight of this awesome responsibility and the consequences of this decision falls on each of us. Thus, as members of this institution, are required to divorce ourselves from the emotions, consider the interests of our nation, and consider the very real prospects, or one might say, the inevitable consequences of our choice. One cannot avoid the probability that the action we consider here tonight will likely bring additional loss of American life. As such, the exercise of this Constitutional obligation is never easy, regardless of the relative merits or personal convictions with respect to the course prescribed.

Moreover, tonight each Member has the additional burden of knowing that in approving this measure we are not only responding to this action, but we will be embracing a monumental change in U.S. policy. With this resolution, we declare that we will no longer draw any distinctions, limiting our response to those individuals who materially participate in an act of hatred and cowardice against the United States and its citizens. We are clearly at a point of demarcation in U.S. foreign policy. From this point forward, we say to the world, choose sides. Either you join us in the singular purpose of rooting out and destroying these perpetrators or you will be subject to the same fate as the perpetrators.

Again, this seemingly simple adjustment is no insignificant matter. This is a major policy shift which presents numerous challenges. This resolution will change the tone and tenor forever. This was an attack on civility and as such it will require a monumental effort. It will require us to have the fortitude and strength of character to carry out this action, without regard for the unavoidable unpleasantnesses. We must stay the course. To deviate or to shy away would surely risk exposing our nation, our citizens and life as we know it to far greater dangers.

America is the embodiment of freedom, the beacon of hope and in a very real sense, the guardians of justice—a justice shaped and honored by our values and morals. From this point forward, we will surely have our morality and values tested. We must strive to seek that delicate balance between accomplishing our objectives and ridding the world of these vessels of hate, while showing utmost care not to allow it to lead to a decay of our appreciation of humanity. We must not allow our anger to burn so deep that we become like those we condemn. In our zeal to right the wrongs we must not neglect that in dom or diminish the sacrifice of those who have given their lives to promote, protect and preserve this great democracy.

This was not just an attack on New York City, the Pentagon or even America, but rather an attack on civilization. It marks an escalations which cannot be ignored. We must join the other nations in an all out fight against these enemies of society. I applaud President Bush and Secretary Powell’s efforts to reach out and build international support. We must spare no efforts to seek the full support and cooperation of allies, as well as friends and foe in the Arab world. This effort will certainly require an unprecedented level of diplomatic cohesion and demonstration of political sensibility. Failure to gain the support and cooperation of the international community will surely limit our effectiveness and expose this nation to grave dangers. We can ill afford to become isolated in this pursuit.

As a nation, America has slumbered in the naive belief inherent in our decisive military might, superior technology and the safe labor provided by the great expanse of open ocean. Heretofore, we have been afforded the luxury of remaining unsoiled by the dirty business of hatred so common in a majority of the world today. On Tuesday, we were rudely awakened, our naive sense of security shattered by the ugly realities of terror.

We did not choose this course of our own volition, but having seen evil’s face we must be resolved to join the fight with everything we can muster.

I stand in support of this resolution. May we proceed wisely.

Mr. BEREUTER. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 1 minute to the distinguished gentleman from Georgia (Mr. BARR).

Mr. BARR of Georgia. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Nebraska for yielding time.

Mr. Speaker, I support this resolution. I support this legislation. However, we ought to be here this evening debating a declaration of war. Somebody once said that if it walks like a duck, if it quacks like a duck, if it looks like a duck, then it is a duck.

This is war. The President has said it is war. The Secretary of State has said it is war. The Secretary of Defense has said it is war. Former government officials have said it is war. The American people know it is war. There is one way and one way only, Mr. Speaker, to respond to acts of war, and that is to declare war. Give the President the tools, the authority he needs under international law and the Hague Convention to ferret these people out wherever they are, however he finds them, and get it done as quickly as possible. We need a declaration of war.

I understand Mr. BARR to mean an ex-mind and to support a declaration of war above and beyond this power that we will give the President this evening.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 1 minute to the distinguished gentleman from Ohio (Mrs. JONES).

Mrs. JONES of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I am angry, as I am sure most Americans are. And words cannot express our anger. But I have an 18-year-old son named Mervyn. And I always tell Mervyn, “Mervyn, anger is the ill wind that blows out the light of reason.”

I stand firmly in support of the United States, the United States Constitution, our President and this Congress, I just trust that we will be as deliberate as they were, as precise as they were, but we must not let our anger blow out our light of reason.

Mr. BEREUTER. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 1 minute to the distinguished gentleman from South Dakota (Mr. THUNE).

Mr. THUNE. I thank the gentleman for yielding time.

Mr. Speaker, this is serious business. Tonight, we authorize the use of force. But we really have no choice, because a bunch of murderous thugs have extinguished the life from thousands of innocent Americans.

This weekend in my home State of South Dakota in the State capital of Pierre, veterans of World War II are going to gather and celebrate the achievements of what has been called our greatest generation. My father will be among them. He and the patriots of his day knew that American justice demanded that they rid the world of fascism and genocide. Their generation fought and defeated the evil of their day, and together our generation must fight and defeat the evil of ours.

I believe I speak for every South Dakotan in saying that these terrorists have messed with the wrong country. They have picked on the wrong kid. They have murdered innocent brothers and sisters. And we will make it right. There will be justice. I know that every South Dakotan stands ready to support our President, to defend and protect American citizens and American freedoms. The world will know that America is strong and there will be a reckoning.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 1 minute to the distinguished gentleman from North Carolina (Mr. WATT).

Mr. WATT of North Carolina. Mr. Speaker, as I read the War Powers Act, the President actually has the authority to do what we are asking him and giving him the authority to do in this resolution will not nullify the international law and the Hague Convention to ferret these people out wherever they are, however he finds them, and get it done as quickly as possible. We need a declaration of war.

I understand Mr. BARR to mean an ex-

I guess the events of Tuesday brought us a lot closer to understanding what could occur. We see where freedom is challenged by another nation if it may be a nation, which it is not but a group of people who have some funny attitudes.

Today, I had the opportunity of going over to the Pentagon and standing there and looking at what occurred. Apparently, there were two people standing there as that plane went over their heads. They actually felt they had to duck as it went over their heads, standing right outside of the Pentagon. They said that at that point that they throttled up, as we used to say in the Navy, we two-blocked the throttle, and went in. Imagine that tonnage of airplane hitting that Pentagon at that speed.

A lot of people died; a very painful situation. But this thing can be made right. And it should be, and these people will be ferreted out. And I am confident they will be destroyed. That is what I would say:

Freedom has a taste to it and we better learn to understand it.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 1 minute to the distinguished gentleman from Guam (Mr. UNDERWOOD).

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding time.

Mr. Speaker, on behalf of the people of Guam, I rise in support of the resolution to authorize the use of military force by the President against persons, nations, and organizations which were connected with the despicable acts on American soil on Tuesday, September 11.

A formal authorization to pursue the criminals and their cohorts who committed these inhumane and incomprehensible acts is our collective statement about our national will. It is a will that reflects a national crusade that will inevitably prevail. I have no doubt that the world should be mindful that our national will should not be displayed with anger; it should be pursued in the name of justice. We do not take this step in the name of vengeance. We take it in the full confidence that we are a special people, called upon to safeguard freedom and democracy.

It is a mark of our strength that we do not use military strength lightly. It is a mark of our democracy that we take this step now and in the future together with the President. It is a mark of our people that we are marshaling resources, the courage and the wisdom to prevail, not to assay our anger but to make the world safe for everyone.

Support the resolution. Support the President. Support our men and women who are working around the clock to defend us all.

Mr. BERETUER. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 1 minute to the distinguished gentleman from Texas (Mr. SMITH).

Mr. SMITH of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I want to thank my good friend from Nebraska for yielding me time.

Mr. Speaker, this joint resolution is well intended, but it does not go far enough. I regret the President did not get all the support he needed or wanted. This resolution should have authorized the President to attack, apprehend, and punish terrorists whenever it is in the best interests of America to do so. Instead, the resolution limits the President to using force only against those responsible for the terrorist attacks last Tuesday. This is a significant restraint on the President’s ability to root out terrorism wherever it may be found.

Terrorism is not confined to a single organization or a single group or a specific sect. All terrorists, even those not directly connected to this week’s attacks, are a deadly threat and must be neutralized. We cannot win the war against international terrorism unless we fight it together. This joint resolution, while helpful in some ways, ties the President’s hands and allows only the pursuit of one individual and his followers and supporters. I am disappointed that this limited resolution does not respond adequately to the need to protect the lives of freedom-loving people around the world.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 1½ minutes to my good friend, the distinguished gentleman from Texas (Mr. DOGGETT).

Mr. DOGGETT. Mr. Speaker, this time of great peril has brought forth the best in our people, from those who rescue and heal and protect at ground zero, to those who across America raise flags, light candles, and pray. But times of peril can also cause our well-justified anger and desire for immediate action to overwhelm democratic safeguards erected over the last two centuries. The tension that we face tonight is an echo of the tension that our forebears faced. But times of peril can also cause our well-justified anger and desire for immediate action to overwhelm democratic safeguards erected over the last two centuries. The tension that we face tonight is an echo of the tension that our forebears faced.

As we vote for this important resolution with the lives of so many at stake in this important endeavor against terrorism, we cannot let the executive branch become the exclusive branch. Our approach must not get us there and ultimately ending the terrorist threat requires the strongest medicine of all. It is time to take the gloves off. This resolution urges the President to use all necessary and appropriate force against those who were in any way responsible for or who aided the terrorists and to prevent further acts of terrorism against the United States.

The resolution is not a blank check. We do this with our eyes open and in fervent prayer, especially the prayer that President Bush and his national security team will be lavished with wisdom from God above to use only that force which is truly necessary and only that force which is truly appropriate.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, we need to take heed from the ageless wisdom in Psalm 37, where David writes:

“For evil men will be cut off, but those who hope in the Lord will inherit the land. . . . The wicked plot against the righteous and gnash their teeth at them; but the Lord laughs at the wicked, for he knows their day is coming. The wicked draw the sword and bend the bow to bring down the poor and needy, to slay those who are upright. But their swords will pierce their own hearts, and the bows will be broken . . . for the power of the wicked will be broken. . . . The days of the blameless are known to the Lord . . . In times of disaster they will not wither . . . but the wicked will perish. I have seen a wicked and ruthless man flourishing like a green tree in its native soil, but he soon passed away and was no more; though I looked for him, he could not be found.

“The salvation of the righteous comes from the Lord; he is their stronghold in time of trouble. The Lord helps them and delivers them; he delivers them from the wicked and saves them, because they take refuge in him.”

This is not just our fight. It is the Lord’s fight as well.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 1 minute to the distinguished gentleman from Indiana (Mr. ROEMER).

Mr. ROEMER. Mr. Speaker, I thank my good friend from California for yielding me time.

This morning as we sang the “Battle Hymn of the Republic,” one line has indelibly burned into my mind as I contemplated this vote: “As he died to make men holy, let us die to make them free.”

We have had unprecedented death and grief in our country: firefighters bringing down a plane in Pennsylvania so that we in this building might brace ourselves for our duties, and sorrow.

Today, it is all too clear that our initiatives have fallen short. And now, we must use all necessary and appropriate force against those who were in any way responsible for or who aided the terrorists and to prevent further acts of terrorism against the United States.

Psalm 37, where David writes:

Mr. DOGGETT. Mr. Speaker, this time of great peril has brought forth the best in our people, from those who rescue and heal and protect at ground zero, to those who across America raise flags, light candles, and pray. But times of peril can also cause our well-justified anger and desire for immediate action to overwhelm democratic safeguards erected over the last two centuries. The tension that we face tonight is an echo of the tension that our forebears faced. But times of peril can also cause our well-justified anger and desire for immediate action to overwhelm democratic safeguards erected over the last two centuries. The tension that we face tonight is an echo of the tension that our forebears faced.
Mr. BERGER. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 1 minute to the distinguished gentleman from North Carolina (Mr. HAYES), a member of the Committee on Armed Services.

Mr. HAYES. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me time.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of this resolution. On Tuesday, our Nation suffered the most horrific act of terrorism the world has ever seen. A hostile act of this magnitude should be viewed as an act of war against our Nation.

Just as our country and the world changed in the wake of Pearl Harbor 60 years ago, our future was set on a new course with Tuesday's senseless attack on our citizens. This horrifying act has united us in a way that has not been seen in decades. It has inspired the world to act against terrorism and strike back.

It is the duty of all of us to honor the victims of this tragedy by using this international spirit to do everything possible to stop the scourge of terrorism. Our President has shown leadership, prudence, wisdom, and courage in his response to the crisis. This resolution empowers our President and our men and women in uniform to win this war against terrorism and ensure freedom for our country and the world.

As President Bush said, we will respond appropriately, at the proper time and the place of our choosing.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 1½ minutes to the distinguished gentlewoman from Georgia (Ms. MCKINNEY).

Ms. MCKINNEY. Mr. Speaker, the horrendous tragedies of this week warrant a strong and judicious response. However, I am concerned that the language of this resolution could result in dangerous foreign policy.

The perpetrators of this crime must be dealt with. However, we must ensure that when we strike back, we deliver a massive blow against those truly responsible for this terrible crime.

As a Nation stand for the rule of law. Perpetrators of crimes, no matter their size or scope, are afforded a trial through a judicial process. That means no targeted assassinations and no death squads. In the aftermath of this horrendous act, let us not forget that real security and real peace come through justice.

I, too, feel extreme pain and outrage at the attack on America, but our Nation must respond with a commitment to justice, or else we become all that we abhor.

The United States confronted this very same decision at the close of World War II, that is, the struggle for justice in the face of tyranny. There were those who called for widespread executions of Nazis, Japanese leadership and their civilians. On the other hand, were those who urged reason and a return to the rule of law. Supreme Court Justice Robert Jackson, who led the prosecution at Nuremberg, said it best: "That four great nations flushed with victory and stung with the injury, stay the hand of vengeance and voluntary submission to the judgment of the law, is one of the most significant tributes that power has ever paid to reason."

Mr. BERGER. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 1 minute to the distinguished gentleman from Florida (Mr. FOLEY).

Mr. FOLEY. Mr. Speaker, I am sad it took Tuesday's events to bring out the patriotism in our country and the need for military security.

My father's generation, who served in World War II, has long expressed to us the need to be ever vigilant, to protect our society from the evils of tyranny. We learned all too well on Tuesday that that is indeed our mission here in this Congress. We execute today with great deliberation.

I was proud of my President and our George Bush, today in New York; I was proud of him in the National Cathedral; and I am proud of our country. The terrorists may have taken a bite out of the Big Apple on Tuesday, but they are the ones that are rotten to the core.

While we seek not retribution, we seek justice, and I ask my colleagues once again, the third time today, to urge our communities not to take retribution on those who may be of similar faith and similar nationalities. Let us reserve our vengeance for those who caused the crime, and not by guilt by association.

I love this country. I am proud of our Congress, and I am proud of our President.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 1 minute to my friend, the gentleman from American Samoa (Mr. FALEOMAVAEGA).

Mr. FALEOMAVAEGA. Mr. Speaker, like our President, we as Members of this great institution all took a solemn oath to defend and support the Constitution of the United States against all enemies, both here and abroad. As copartners in this endeavor, our adoption of this resolution will join us with the Senate in sending an unequivocal message that the United States Congress firmly supports our President in taking all necessary and appropriate action, including the use of military force, to pursue and punish the persons and organizations who treacherously murdered thousands of innocent Americans this past Tuesday.

Mr. Speaker, I have seen my share of blood spilled in Vietnam, and it is always a most difficult decision for me to support this authorization to send our men and women in military uniform into harm's way. Given the terrorist attacks on thousands of innocent Americans this past Tuesday, I have no reservations that the President must be given this authorization to wage war against international terrorism.

Mr. Speaker, it is absolutely critical that the President is successful in this endeavor. I fear that the next perpetrator of terrorism will be even more horrific and will likely involve weapons of mass destruction, such as nuclear weapons and biological and chemical agents, which long have been available in the international black market.

For the protection of our Nation and our way of life, I urge my colleagues to support the President by adoption of this resolution.

Mr. BERGER. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 1 minute to the distinguished gentleman from Georgia (Mr. KINGSTON), a member of the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. KINGSTON. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me time.

Yesterday I had the grim task of going to the Pentagon and looking at the rubble and seeing the grave, the unexpected grave, of almost 200 of our citizens buried beneath all the bricks and mortar and concrete. In this collection of dust, one of the workers who had been there for some time asked me, he said, "Tell me, we have been isolated here, we have been on premises, we don't have access to TV and radio; what are the American people saying, what are they thinking, what are you folks, members of Congress, hearing from back home?"

I said to him, "The people back home are resolved. They are behind the President. They are united as an American people to exact a revenge and retaliate, not for an act that we chose, but for one that we must respond to. Otherwise, all Americans, in the airways, on the highways or in the office spaces, are at danger. We must complete the task in front of us."

This legislation gives us that opportunity. It is essential.

When I said that to this worker, he was somewhat relieved. He joined hands with me and said, "Praise the Lord. We must do this."

So, Mr. Speaker, I think this legislation is appropriate, and I hope that my colleagues will support it overwhelmingly.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 1½ minutes to the distinguished gentleman from the State of Washington (Mr. MCDERMOTT).

Mr. MCDERMOTT. Mr. Speaker, there is an old Arab adage, "Vengeance is best served cold." The procedure we are engaging with this legislation is appropriate.

Our history is replete with chaos created by our government going off half-cocked. I was involved in the Vietnam War. I saw the casualties. I was on the floor here when we went to war against international terrorism. I heard the feeling here today, as I listen to it, is that most people think that Osama bin Laden is involved in this. Now, if we kill him, will the threat from the other operatives be over? Sadly, I am afraid not.

We want to have an appropriate response, a cold, carefully planned and calculated response. In the art of warfare, there is something you must learn from your enemy. That particular enemy in this case did not undertake this mission on the spur of the moment. Their plan evolved over months and months and months.

Let me make an important point here: I strongly believe that America should respond and severely punish those responsible for these heinous acts. But we must move carefully. Bin Laden, if he is the one, used his brains, not his strength. We, too, should use our brains, not just our strength and power. Your brains must be your strength.

Think about it for a minute. Watch who kills the most prey, the bull or the lion. Because the lion is quiet and watchful, he means he is asleep. I will support this, but I will also reserve the right as Gaylord Nelson and Ernest Gruening and Wayne Morse did, the right to vote against funding if the President is not careful and does not plan carefully.

Mr. BEREUTER. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 1 minute to the distinguished gentleman from Virginia (Mr. SCHROCK), a member of the Committee on Armed Services.

Mr. SCHROCK. Mr. Speaker, as the representative of our Nation’s largest naval installation and home of the Nation’s highest concentration of active duty and retired military, I stand today in support of this resolution. The decision to use force against any and all terrorists will require that many families in the district I represent will sacrifice time away from their loved ones. In some cases, even the lives of their loved ones will be lost in pursuit of our goal to rid the world of terrorists, their supporters and those who harbor them.

This is very humbling to me; but terrorists declared war against our Nation, and, as they have for more than 2 centuries, the people of Hampton Roads, Virginia, stand ready to defend our country, to seek out terrorists and ensure they pay the ultimate penalty for their acts of evil.

We are a peaceful, freedom-loving Nation; but we have the right to self-defense. We will defend and protect our country and its allies by eradicating our planet of this evil.

God bless America.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 1½ minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Florida (Mr. BOYD).

Mr. BOYD. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of this resolution. I come here today in a sobering mood.

This is a somber and solemn moment for our Nation. We are about to take an action which will put our Nation’s finest in harm’s way, but we know what we have to do to prevent additional loss of life and to protect our freedoms.

Mr. Speaker, when I was carrying a rifle in the jungles of Vietnam, I prayed every day that never again would American young people have to go to a foreign soil to fight in combat. But we know what we must do to prevent additional loss of life and to protect our freedoms.

Mr. Speaker, we are angry, but we must not react in anger. We must be calm. We must be patient. Our reaction must be measured, it must be calculated and responsible, and it will be effective.

In our 225-year history, Mr. Speaker, thousands of Americans have given their lives to defend freedom. Each generation has learned that freedom is not free. This is something about America that these thugs do not understand, but they will understand when we complete our mission. May God grant wisdom to the President of the United States and may he grant his protection and blessing to the young, great Americans that have to carry out this mission.

Mr. BEREUTER. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 1 minute to the distinguished gentleman from Idaho (Mr. OTTER).

Mr. OTTER. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

Mr. Speaker, during the dawning days of this great Republic, one of our founding architects uttered these words:

That these were the days that try men’s souls. The summer soldier and the sunshine patriot will in this crisis shrink in the service of their country, but he that stands it now deserves the love and the thanks of every man and woman in this country.

Those things which we obtain too easily we esteem too lightly. So it would seem strange, indeed, Mr. Speaker, if so celestial an article as freedom were not highly prized.

Mr. Speaker, I offer that tonight as it be as applicable on this resolution as it was on the resolution that Thomas Paine wrote it for.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 1 minute to the distinguished gentleman from Texas (Mr. GREEN).

Mr. GREEN of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of H.J. Res. 64. Today, as Members of Congress, we use words as our weapons. Tomorrow these words must be followed through. The hard work begins.

As Americans, we pride ourselves in our diversity. We come in all shapes and sizes and colors. We come with many religious beliefs: Protestant, Catholic, Jewish, Muslim. But in our differences we are family. We are different and proud; but attack us, kill us, harm us, we are Americans first and we respond as family.

The gloves are now coming off with respect to all of the terrorists and their organizations and the governments who choose to harbor them. With the passage of this resolution, the President of the United States will have the authority to apply all the military force he deems necessary to terminate terrorist threats against this country. America has stood strong in the face of adversity and has never bowed down to enemies and will not start now.

Justice will come in many forms for the people involved in this attack. We have yet to see even the tip of the iceberg when it comes to the retribution we will exact from the leaders of this bombing.

Mr. Speaker, I have never been prouder to be an American. God bless America.

Mr. BEREUTER. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 1 minute to the distinguished gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. GEKAS).

Mr. GEKAS. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

Mr. Speaker, everyone knows that the President of the United States is granted vast powers under the Constitution and under the consent of his fellow Americans: the power to guide domestic affairs, to deal with domestic crises, to present legislation; all the things with which we are familiar; and he also has the vast power that is granted to him to declare and to enforce and to execute foreign policy. It is there that a slight demarcation occurs.

When foreign policy is the question, Americans almost unanimously swoop behind the President and support him and send a fax to the betterment of our own Nation’s policies. And he is, of course, the Commander in Chief.

I rise in support of this resolution because he is the chief of state for domestic policy, because he is the architect of foreign policy, and because he is the Commander in Chief. And as the Commander in Chief, he should and does have the power to put our American force to the best use possible across the world.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 1 minute to the distinguished gentleman from Texas (Mr. REYES), my good friend.

Mr. REYES. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me time.

Mr. Speaker, today we are authorizing the use of the U.S. military against those responsible for the recent attacks launched against us. We are simply at war. We did not seek this war, but make no mistake, we will respond. We will finish the conflict on our terms, but only after we determine that our enemies have been defeated.
CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—HOUSE

September 14, 2001

The coming days, weeks and months will continue to test us. We will hear heart-breaking stories, see tragic images. We will continue to say good-bye to America’s children as they head off to defend us against terror and those who hate America, those who hate everything that America stands for: freedom of speech, freedom of religion and freedom of democracy.

As President John F. Kennedy once said, “Let every Nation know, whether it wishes us ill or well, that we will pay any price, bear any burden, meet any hardship, support any friend, oppose any foe, in order to assure the survival and the success of liberty.” We will persevere. We will be victorious.

God bless our great country.

Mr. BEREUTER. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 1 minute to the distinguished gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. PLATTS).

Mr. PLATTS. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

I rise in support of this resolution authorizing our Commander in Chief to bring the full weight and fury of our armed services against the evil parties responsible for the heinous attacks against our citizens.

Just off the rotunda here in the Capitol Building stands a statue, a fellow Pennsylvanian by the name of John Muhrenberg. In January 1776, this 29-year-old Lutheran minister gave a sermon about the fight for independence in which he quoted Ecclesiastes: “There is an appointed time for everything. And there is a time for every event under heaven; a time for war and a time for peace.” Pastor Muhrenberg then donned his sermon by casting off his clerical robes to reveal the uniform of a Continental Army officer.

Mr. Speaker, as in the founding days of our great Nation, the time for war is upon us. God bless our Nation, and God watch over our citizens who will be going into harm’s way.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from New York (Mr. CROWLEY). We all feel anguish, but none as powerfully as John, who lost his first cousin, age 42, in this outrage.

Mr. CROWLEY. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from California, my friend, for yielding me this time.

Mr. Speaker, I rise this evening to speak again about the heinous crime committed against the American people, people all over the land, living here in the United States, and against our great Nation.

On Tuesday, September 11, the lives of all Americans changed forever. As a Nation, we have grieved and we have joined our hearts together in prayer. We have watched as our lives have been put on hold so that we may honor the dead and the missing. We keep hope alive for the brave men and women who continue to work around the clock to search for life and survivors.

I spoke yesterday about my dear cousin, Battalion Chief John Moran, who so bravely dedicated his life to the saving of the lives of others at the site of this attack. My cousin, like so many others who are heroes, has not been found.

Mr. Speaker, we will all be rebuilding emotionally and physically for some time. What the country stands for, no matter how long it takes, is we God to sustain us and permit us to be the worthy defenders of peace and freedom.

Mr. BEREUER. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 1 minute to the distinguished gentleman from New Hampshire (Mr. SUNUNU), a member of the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. SUNUNU. Mr. Speaker, when America’s freedom is threatened, Americans respond. And in the hours that have followed the horrific attacks of September 11th, we have done just that, and done it in ways that bring forth deep emotions of patriotism and gratitude and humility. Humanitarian assistance has poured forth from across the country, thousands have enlisted as volunteers, and funds have been made available to help recover and to help rebuild.

Tonight we take the next step in responding to this great challenge. The resolution before us will place a unified Congress behind the Commander in Chief and send a clear message to America’s enemies.

We must authorize and we must employ all necessary force to protect our Nation against this terrorist threat and to destroy the capability of those who would wage future attacks. We know the challenge is great, but the cause of preserving our freedom demands no less.

In doing so, we ensure that although our Nation never sought this conflict, we will end it in a way and in an hour of our choosing.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Florida (Mr. WEXLER), a member of the Committee on International Relations.

Mr. WEXLER. Mr. Speaker, when I put my 8-year-old son to sleep on Tuesday night, he told me his whole body felt like crying. Today, the whole body of America is crying.

As we internalize the depth of the pain and horror inflicted on our people, we cherish life, we cherish freedom, we cherish America. And that is why we must authorize military force to rid the world of the insidious scourge of terrorism. Whatever the cost, no matter how long it takes. I beg God to sustain us and permit us to be the worthy defenders of peace and freedom.

Mr. BEREUTER. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 1 minute to the distinguished gentleman from New Hampshire (Mr. SUNUNU), a member of the Committee on Appropriations.

Our physical symbols have been destroyed and thousands of lives are feared lost, but our values and ideals of freedom and democracy stand stronger than ever. These values shared by all Americans of all religions and backgrounds is what causes such hatred and jealousy in the hearts and the minds of our enemies.

I recently saw a photograph of the New York City skyline which had in its midst the image of a new skyscraper where the towers of the World Trade Center once stood, and the caption on top said, “we will rebuild.”

Mr. Speaker, we will rebuild. While we honor those who have lost their lives and try to absorb the terrible losses of the last several days and try in our own individual and collective ways to move forward, we cannot forget the perpetrators of this reprehensible crime; those who planned, authorized, aided and abetted these attacks. They must not and they will not go unpunished. But, Mr. Speaker, make no mistake; the response of the United States, the House of Representatives, has been carefully considered.

We have all taken a deep breath and searched our hearts and souls for an appropriate and just response.

I myself have just come back from visiting ground zero with our President in New York. I stood with him surrounded by firefighters, police officers, and rescue workers who have worked since Tuesday tirelessly searching for bodies, praying to find anyone who survived this horrific attack.

Mr. Speaker, I was proud to stand there with my President, with my colleagues, and with these brave men and women. And for the first time this week, I felt a glimmer of hope and a whole lot of pride, pride for our Nation that takes care of itself for making a difference that has men and women like the ones I saw and met today and this week who have put themselves in harm’s way to save the lives of others; proud that despite the destruction of physical symbols, that it is the undying principles that endure.

Tonight we consider another measure, this one to enable the President, our Commander in Chief, to use whatever means required to bring this crime to justice. For the memory of those who were served and the memory of those innocent lives taken so very prematurely, it is the very least we can do.

Americans by nature are not a vengeful people, but we need to respond to these attacks so as to ensure that this does not happen again.

As the Commander in Chief, the President must provide for the common defense and promote the general welfare of our people, this resolution permits our Commander in Chief to do just that.

I support this resolution, not lightly but without hesitation. This resolution and the authority it contains allows... for the protection of our American way of life for generations to come.

Mr. BERREUTER. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

The gentleman can be assured that all of us in this House share in his concern, his grief, and his pride in the courage and relentless efforts of New Yorkers and others who have come to their aid.

Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Arizona (Mr. SHADEGG).

Mr. SHADEGG. Mr. Speaker, on behalf of the people that I have the privilege of representing in this House, I rise in strong support of this use of force resolution. Unfortunately, I am concerned that it may not go far enough. It does not go as far as the President requested or may need.

On Tuesday, America sustained a cowardly, premeditated, and barbaric act of war. Mr. Speaker, the American people are a peaceful people. We are slow to anger. But we have been viciously attacked, and the attack was unlike any ever known in this world and in its history.

It will require a very different response. We must focus our anger and carefully plan, calibrate, and execute our response. It must be worldwide and comprehensive in scope, as well as massive in magnitude. We must target and destroy every terrorist and every terrorist group that aided or supported the attackers or sympathizers with their cause.

We must destroy their will to fight, not out of revenge, but as a matter of self-defense. Because terrorists do not defend territory or populations, they cannot be confronted or defeated using traditional means. We cannot expect easy or quick solutions. We must be prepared for a protracted effort to eradicate these cowardly terrorists.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 1 minute to my neighbor and good friend, the distinguished colleague, the gentlewoman from California (Ms. ESHOO).

Ms. ESHOO. Mr. Speaker, I thank my friend, my colleague, and my congressional neighbor, the gentleman from California (Mr. LANTOS), for yielding time to me.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in full support of this resolution. I do it with a heavy heart because of what has been imposed on our Nation. We did not seek this, but we must act.

I do not believe that we act, and I know that I do not, in taking this vote, out of revenge. We do it because the American people are good and they are decent. They are loving, and they have once again exhibited this face and this character this week in one of the most tragic and challenging moments in our Nation’s history.

I believe that this resolution is consistent with the War Powers Act, and that it reiterates the President’s authority under the Constitution to take action to deter and prevent acts of international terrorism against the United States of America.

I know this will be long and difficult. I pledge my allegiance to the magnificent people of our country, and I say to the constituents of my magnificent congressional district that we will move ahead united and do what we must in the name of those that gave their lives this week.

I ask God to bless our Nation and to guide our President.

Mr. GALLEGELY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Arizona (Mr. HAYWORTH).

Mr. HAYWORTH. Mr. Speaker, I crossed the aisle tonight to offer these remarks, not for priority of party but for the needs of our Nation.

The men and women in uniform we are about to send into battle will not wear insignia of party identification; they will be there as Americans. So Mr. Speaker, tonight in this place, at this hour, I stand in strong support of this resolution as the people of Arizona and the people of America go forth united in what will prove to be a difficult and perhaps even a protracted struggle, but a fight we cannot afford to postpone.

Support the resolution. Support our Nation and our way of life. We are Americans first. Vote for the resolution.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I am honored to yield as much time as he might request or may need.

Mr. Speaker, I am honored to yield to Mr. GEPHARDT. Mr. Speaker, first, I thank you and your colleagues for working so hard with all of us to present a completely united front to our friends and neighbors around the world in this time of grave emergency in our country.

I rise to address my colleagues, though today we all know we are more than that. Today, we are all American brothers and sisters, because the family of America has been attacked, and we have gathered together to begin the process of healing and then defending our American family, our beloved Nation.

What was the purpose of Tuesday’s attack? Terrorism’s simple goal is that it is embedded in the word “terrorism” itself. It is to create terror. That was the real goal of Tuesday’s attack. Well, we can report to the world that we are fighting and winning the battle against terror in America.

In America today, there is a strong, clear, cold conviction. We will punish those who committed these acts, and we will make our Nation safe again. America is as united as it has been in its history. This was how President Franklin D. Roosevelt reacted in 1939 to the act of terror and inhumanity that produced American heroism that few people have witnessed in their lifetimes. Before our very eyes in the last 3 days we have seen another generation rise to the moral challenge of our time.

Jeremy Glick, on the United flight which crashed in Pennsylvania, called his wife on a cell phone to say his plane had hijacked, and three of us, he said, are going to fight. His wife told him about the attack on the World Trade Center. We have credible reason to believe that he and other passengers brought down their plane so that others could live another day.

New York City Fire Chief Peter Ganci stood with a multichannel radio at the foot of One World Trade Center, and with smoke swirling around his head, trying amid the chaos to organize the rescue effort, the building collapsed.

New York City Fire Department Chaplain Mychal Judge went to the tower to minister to victims. He was hit by debris in the head. He died.

More than 250 firefighters ran into the building that others were running out of so that they could try to get up the steps to save others. They are all missing.

Yesterday, when I went to the Pentagon with Members here, a general told of how a woman found one person passed out with fumes in the aftermath of the attack. She lifted the person up, he said, threw her from the window and then saved the person’s life and then threw herself out the window to save her own life.

New Yorkers line streets in Manhattan holding signs and flags in celebration of our rescue workers going off to rescue other Americans. Americans descended on emergency centers, set up by workers from the Red Cross, stood in line so they could give their blood so life could be pumped into the lives of the wounded.

There was a story this morning on the radio of a volunteer rescue worker who said he was in New York digging through rubble in search for survivors because, he said, we are digging for freedom.

Our people, the wonderful, good, decent people of this country are responding in heroic ways, and they are fighting back against this absolute evil that visited itself on our great country on Tuesday. They are rising to this challenge just as earlier generations have met challenges that confronted them.

Congress debates this historic resolution in their spirit and with them for our inspiration and as our guide. We literally and figuratively tonight are following the lead of the American people. Humanity at its best.
ceases to be good, America will cease to be great.

Everything that is happening today is happening because Americans are still good and America is still great.

Finally, we must recognize and understand a fundamental truth. Our foes caused enormous death and destruction, but their greater goal is to instill fear in the heart of every American.

We will conquer that foe. We will not be defeated. We will not succumb. We will not fear. We will always rise up, as we have through our history, and we will face fear down.

Our challenge is to draw on the goodness, the decency, the bravery, and the humanity that has always defined this great country. I know in my heart we will prevail. We will face this foe, and we will not adopt the characteristics of those who attack us. We will not forget the civil liberties of our people. We will not discriminate. We will not use prejudice. We will not succumb to hatred in fighting this foe. We will not be divided.

Two months ago, the Foreign Minister in Germany told me that what he found so impressive about America was that he had never known such a powerful Nation to use its power so responsibly, with faith in ourselves, in our fellow human beings; and I have faith in God to see us through. I am guided in my belief by my faith, which is best expressed in the hymn, "Be Not Afraid." "Be not afraid. I go before you always. Come, follow me, and I will give you rest."

Our people have courage, our military will defend, our President will have our support and our trust to bring our foes to justice; and with God's help, we will be free and our people will be healed.

Mr. GALLEGLY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from New York (Mr. BOEHLEIT), the chairman of the Committee on Science.

Mr. BOEHLEIT. Mr. Speaker, Shaw said, "Some men see things as they are and ask why, I dream things that never were and ask why not." My dream, the collective dream of all Americans, is a world at peace, a world in which equal freedom, in remembrance of those who have lost loved ones as well at the Pentagon, we know the resolve of the American people. I supported the Iraqi incursion a decade ago in one of the most difficult votes in this House. Tonight, this vote is not easy either, knowing as well that when the days grow very difficult, it will require the strength of all the American people. But tonight let us resolve to proceed with vigor, not vengeance, in remembrance of those who have been lost over the last 3 tragic days.

The same comments I offered on Wednesday night I offer tonight: strength to the American people and wisdom to President Bush and this Congress.

Mr. GALLEGLY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from California (Mr. ROYCE).

Mr. ROYCE. Mr. Speaker, the horrendous attack on the World Trade Center and the Pentagon will have suffered and our national response will prove to be a pivotal event in world history. Our Nation is now embarked on a fight for freedom. Some nations will stand up and be with us, and we may even be surprised by who our friends are. We will have many allies, but others will be against us.

Secretary Powell and others are working the phones now making key determinations. I think we all understand that we can only act decisively. There can be no pinprick strikes. Terrorism will only get worse unless we act to eradicate it now.

Several years ago, during a hearing on Afghanistan, Members of Congress, including myself, warned that the war-torn country of Afghanistan was rapidly evolving into a serious threat to national security. Many rang the bell. It went unanswered. We will now have to act, as we should have acted before, to root out this dangerous enemy, and destroy their infrastructure, including destroying any governments supporting them.

President Bush spoke eloquently to the American people today from the National Cathedral. I believe that Americans are willing to follow his leadership and make the sacrifices needed to win and survive as the country we know and love.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 1 minute to my good friend and colleague, the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. PAYNE), a distinguished member of the Committee on International Relations.

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Speaker, I had the opportunity to travel with the President to New York today, with other colleagues from the region, to view the devastation left in the aftermath of Tuesday's tragic events and to meet with the volunteers and professionals who have made such a heroic effort to help the victims and their families.

President Bush's every word was a message to the world that we will rise above this senseless act; that we will not let the actions of a group of fanatics destroy our spirit. As we move to give the President the authority to use all necessary and appropriate force in responding to these unprovoked attacks, let us be sure that we remain true to our American principles by enacting a plan which protects the American people and strengthens the bonds with our allies.

However, as we raise our powerful swift sword, let us be mindful of the fact that the overriding majority of people who live in these rogue nations are themselves victims of their governments. They are being oppressed by their leaders.

I stand committed to working together to build an effective anti-terrorism policy which will make our country and our world safer so that we will never have a recurrence of the nightmare we experienced last Tuesday again.

Mr. GALLEGLY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. REGULA), a member of the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. REGULA. Mr. Speaker, events of the past week have given all of us great pride in America, great pride in the people of this Nation and the way in which they responded to our crisis. But tonight we also have a moment of pride, and that is that we are a Nation of laws; that we are a Nation that follows the rule of law; and that in this action, in this resolution, we are respecting the Constitution of the United States.

The Constitution says that the Congress shall have the power to lay and collect taxes and to provide for the common defense and general welfare of the United States, to declare war, to provide calling forth the militia to repel invasion. That is what we are doing. But it also provides that the President shall be commander in chief of the forces of this Nation.
I think this resolution says eloquently that we are a Nation of laws; that we respond in a measured way, as provided in the Constitution of the United States; and that we can take pride in our response along with the people in their response to the events of this week.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 3 minutes to my good friend and colleague, the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. MENENDEZ), the vice chair of the Democratic Caucus.

Mr. MENENDEZ. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

In times of tragedy, America pulls together and America gets stronger. We defeated the forces of evil in World War II, we turned economic crisis into economic opportunities and beat the Great Depression, and we can and will defeat the enemies of civilization.

Every war is different. No challenge is the same. This will be a battle unlike any other, fought with new tools and methods; fought with intelligence and brute force, rooting out the enemies among us and those outside our borders. This war may be different, but we have the capabilities to win; and we will not rest until we have wiped the evil of terrorism from the face of the Earth.

There is nowhere they can hide where we will not hunt them. There is nowhere they will be safe from our wrath. We will consider any person or nation who harbors them or aids them or authorizes their activities to be just as guilty. If you harbor our enemy, then you are our enemy. If you help our enemy, then you are our enemy. Our resolve has no end. Our commitment is total.

In times of tragedy, America pulls together and America gets stronger. That is who we are here to do today: to stand united, to say to the world there are no partisans here, only patriots. There is no difference between Democrats and Republicans, between the Congress and the President. We are speaking with one voice.

The resolution we are supporting tonight authorizes the President to use the full range of force available from our military not only to respond to the terrorist acts on Tuesday but also to prevent future acts. And we will not be alone in our battle. The enormous evil of these acts is uniting the civilized world behind a common cause because the attacks on the World Trade Center and on the Pentagon were attacks not just against our country but against humanity itself.

The civilized world is uniting in this common fight because there are only two sides in it: right or wrong, good or evil. You are with us or against us. No civilized nation can be allowed to sit on the fence. I just came back from the site of the tragedy in New York City with my colleagues. I saw the horrendous results of the terrorists’ unspeakable deeds. And as I stood at ground zero, I was reminded of the scenes of devastation from World War II. But what cannot be seen in that rubble are the broken families and the fatherless and motherless children left in its wake. We will not let this stand, because to let this stand would be to let civil unions from World War II. But what cannot be seen in that rubble are the broken families and the fatherless and motherless children left in its wake. We will not let this stand, because to let this stand would be to let evil stand. We will not let this stand, because to let this stand would be to let evil prevail. To let this stand would be to lay down our values of liberty, justice, and freedom. It has been said that in the long history of the world only a few generations have been granted the role of defending freedom in its hour of maximum danger. Tonight, we do not shrink from this responsibility, we embrace it, and in doing so we send a beacon of light to the rest of the world.

Mr. GALLEGLY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. DEAL).

Mr. DEAL of Georgia. Mr. Speaker, by the adoption of this resolution tonight, let us send one very clear message to the world: we are the United States of America. We are the United States. We are united.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. TURNER), the ranking Democrat on the terrorism panel of the Committee on Armed Services.

Mr. TURNER. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the resolution authorizing the President to use all necessary and appropriate force against those nations, organizations, and individuals that planned, authorized, or committed the terrorist acts or that continue to support them.

Tonight, every Member of this House and every American stand united.

We want to thank the President for his leadership in this time of national tragedy and national testing of our will. We stand with him against the forces of darkness that have broken our hearts but emboldened our spirits.

We know this war will require our patience, our perseverance, our unwavering courage and commitment. Our only timetable is to stay the course until the job is finished. The future of liberty, freedom. And human dignity hang in the balance and our Nation will not be found wanting.

May God’s wisdom and judgment guide our steps and may God bless America.

Mr. GALLEGLY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the distinguished gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. ANDREWS).

Mr. ANDREWS. Mr. Speaker, tonight with the passage of this resolution, it is time that we move from words to deeds. We must identify and destroy all those who perpetrated the horror on our country on Tuesday. We must then move swiftly to cut off their financing network, their infrastructure network, and all those who would aid and abet and support them.

Then we must embark on the long struggle of making the nations choose between obedience to terrorism or subscription to the rule of law and international cooperation.

There has been much eloquence in this Chamber in recent days from all sides, and I applaud it. But the American people will not be satisfied with our eloquence. They want us to stand with our Armed Forces, stand with our allies around the world, and swiftly, swiftly settle the debt owed to us by those who brought harm upon this country on Tuesday.

I just came back from the site of the tragedy in New York City with my colleagues. I saw the horrendous results of the terrorists’ unspeakable deeds. deaths of our fellow Americans, the destruction of our sovereign land, and this act of war against all Americans cannot and will not go unanswered.

Mr. CHABOT, a member of the Committee on International Relations, spoke to the world today from the National Cathedral. "This Nation is peaceful but fierce when stirred to anger. This conflict was begun on the timing and terms of others. It will end in a way and in an hour of our own choosing."

Mr. Speaker, whether the hour be near or far, we stand united with our President and with the men and women of our Armed Forces.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the distinguished gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. FATTAH).

Mr. FATTAH. Mr. Speaker, there were some very bright young people from the district, here in Washington, who because of their excellent school work and other qualities, were accepted into the cadet program and some of these cadets were some very bright young people who were killed on September 11.

Along with thousands of others they were the casualties of this act that was perpetrated.

Today we take this step, and I rise in support of this resolution, and I rise specifically on behalf of these children, for it is our responsibility to provide for their protection, to provide for their promise and their potential.

Whatever the perceived real grievance is of those who took this action, attacking innocent children and thousands of other innocent Americans is unacceptable.

We must respond. We know not what the tactics or strategy or play of this engagement will be, but we must act.

Mr. Speaker, I stand and I support this resolution.

Mr. GALLEGLY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. CHABOT), a member of the Committee on International Relations.

Mr. CHABOT. Mr. Speaker, tonight we stand with our President as our Nation prepares to do battle with those who seek to destroy the American way of life. Tonight we vote to give our President full authority to use America's full military might against those responsible for this week's despicable attacks against the United States and its people.

A strong response to the deplorable attacks on the United States is essential. The terrorist infrastructure must be destroyed, and the message must go out to all who seek to harm us in the future that America will respond to cowardly acts of violence against our people quickly and decisively.

Those terrorists who now challenge the will and values of this generation of Americans will soon find out that the awesome power of our military might will be matched only by our tenacious national unity in defending Americans' life and liberty.

In this vote and in our prayers, we in Congress speak for the American people, that will bring honor to the memory. May they rest in peace.

Mr. EDWARDS. Mr. Speaker, with this vote of resolve and unity, we began the dark days. Mr. Speaker, this vote will succeed because it is our responsibility to provide for their promise and their potential.

Yes, we are walking on holy ground, and as we proceed in discussing the use of force, we must proceed in a manner that will bring honor to those who have died. We must bring honor to their memory. May they rest in peace.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. EDWARDS).

Yes, we are walking on holy ground, and as we proceed in discussing the use of force, we must proceed in a manner that will bring honor to those who have died. We must bring honor to their memory. May they rest in peace.

Today a new President and a new generation are handed the torch of liberty that has been kept alight by the untold sacrifices of past generations of Americans.

Those terrorists who now challenge the will and values of this generation of Americans will soon find out that the awesome power of our military might will be matched only by our tenacious national unity in defending Americans' life and liberty.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the distinguished gentleman from California (Ms. PELOSI).

Ms. PELOSI. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

Tonight we are walking on holy ground. We are prayerfully mourning the loss of thousands of Americans who have lost their lives. We are trying a way to comfort their families and give them peace.

At the same time, we are discussing a resolution on the use of force to bring the cowardly terrorists to justice and to make sure that we never have to suffer this horror again. To this end, I support this resolution because it clearly states that nothing in this resolution supersedes the requirements of the War Powers Act.

Mr. Speaker, many of my colleagues have quoted President Roosevelt of another horrible day in our country's life, that this day will live in infamy. I want to also quote his wisdom when he said, "We have nothing to fear but fear itself," because that is the goal of the terrorist, to instill fear in the American people. That would be their greatest victory.

society is based upon: the sanctity of human life.

I pray for our President. Mr. Speaker, I hope we shall overcome someday.

Mr. GALLEGLY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. TOM DAVIS).

Mr. TOM DAVIS of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in strong support of S.J. Res. 23. With the passage of this joint resolution, Congress stands united with the President and the brave men and women in uniform ready to wage war on global terrorism. Although S.J. Res. 23 is not a formal declaration of war, the resolution gives the President full authority to use force against these terrorists and is similar to the war on terrorism authorizing military operations during the Persian Gulf conflict in 1991.

Of course, a key to making this work is the continued willingness of the executive to continue to consult with legislators. I am confident the President will do just that. Make no mistake, failure to act in unison at home and abroad will be interpreted by our enemies as weakness and an invitation to commit further atrocities. We have to put aside our differences, quiet our rhetoric and act decisively now.

Mr. Speaker, today I read Leonard Pitts’ column in the Miami Herald. Addressing his words to the faceless cowards responsible for Tuesday’s attacks he wrote:

“It occurs to me that maybe you just wanted us to know the depths of your hatred. If that’s the case, consider the message received. And take this message in exchange: You don’t know my people. You don’t know what we’re capable of. You don’t know what you just started. But you’re about to learn.”

I urge all my colleagues to support S.J. Res. 23.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 1 minute to my good friend and colleague, the gentlewoman from Connecticut (Ms. DELAURO), a member of the Democratic leadership. Ms. DELAURO. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of this legislation. This week America suffered the worst attack in our Nation’s history. It was an assault on the American people and a threat to the fundamental freedom that is the strength and the spirit of our strong Nation. There is no reasonable justification for the vicious attack that has taken such a toll on the American people.

Each day our intelligence officials obtain more information of the facts surrounding the events of September 11, 2001. It is clear that this was a carefully crafted plan for tremendous destruction. The criminals wanted to create a constant state of fear in American citizens across our great country. But the American people will not be bullied. They will not be cowed. Mr. Speaker, our citizens are joined together in prayer, giving of their time, their love, their resources. There has never been a greater demonstration of unity.

With this resolution, our government also takes a stand. It reaffirms Congress’ support for the President. It protects the independence of the Congress. Our Commander in Chief and the Congress will work together to bring to justice and to punish those responsible for trying to bring the United States to its knees.

We stand tall. We stand proud. We stand ready to protect our freedom, our justice, and our liberty.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 1 minute to my distinguished friend and colleague, the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. CUMMINGS).

Mr. CUMMINGS. Mr. Speaker, a great atrocity has been leveled against this Nation and its citizens. We must now seek justice for our Nation, the American people and our humanity. But justice comes in many forms and the scales of justice must be carefully balanced.

On one side, we place our commitment to spare no effort in eradicating terrorism and punishing those responsible for these deplorable crimes. On the other, we balance the responsibility to hold true to our Nation’s principles, to be cognizant of innocent life, and to use military force only when necessary. This is a difficult scale to balance, but I believe that we have a duty to reach the appropriate equilibrium that justice requires.

I strongly support the will of this President, Congress, and our citizenry to defend ourselves against our enemies with unrelenting force. It is my only hope that such force will be balanced and guarantees the justice we all deserve. May God bless America.

Mr. GALLEGLY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. SHERWOOD).

Mr. SHERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, we owe it to our people, we owe it to our history, we owe it to the folks that made us where we are. We owe it to those firefighters in New York. We owe it to our military personnel in the Pentagon. We owe it to those New Yorkers that have had their world brought down around their ears.

This resolution is good. It sets out what we are about to do, and I am in strong support of it. We owe it to the world to show the world that democracy will stand and that an isolated terrorist cannot hurt America permanently.

Mr. Speaker, we will send that message. We will send it with overwhelming force. God bless America.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 1 minute to my distinguished colleague, the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. WYNN).

Mr. WYNN. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding time.

Secretary of State Powell had it correctly when he said, terrorism is a scourge upon our civilization. I am pleased to stand in support of this call, this call of our military might to thwart the forces of terrorism. I am pleased because we must bring these terrorists not just to justice but to a punishment that will not soon be forgotten.

But I also want to call up tonight our most important weapon, our national will. We must have the will to send a clear signal that our fight is with terrorists, not with the Muslim world. We must have the will in the face of gas lines, in the face of inconveniences, in the face of checkpoints. We must have the will to fight over the long haul. And we have that will. We must have that will, and the resolve to make it clear that while we will make adjustments in our life-styles, we will not surrender our fundamental freedoms.

In the final analysis, I believe the terrorists think we are too soft, that we are the soft, materialistic infidel. I think, as in World War II, we will show them they are wrong, because the message from our national will will be clear and simple. We will not yield. God bless America.

Mr. GALLEGLY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to my good friend, the gentleman from New York (Mr. HOUGHTON).

Mr. HOUGHTON. Mr. Speaker, tonight we talk patriotism, and we should. And we talk sacrifice, and we should. And we talk courage. We talk all those things about humanity and we should. But I do think it is important for the American people to realize that this is going to be a very arduous, difficult, nasty, drawn-out struggle. One of the great characteristics and many times it is unsung, but it is there, is perseverance. Just keeping on going. It is so important that we as a public and citizens understand that, because this is not going to be something which brave words will conquer. It is only our perseverance.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 1 minute to my good friend, the gentlewoman from Illinois (Ms. SCHAROWSKY).

Ms. SCHAROWSKY. I thank the gentleman for yielding time.

Mr. Speaker, along with all of my colleagues and all Americans, I believe that the United States of America must respond effectively and appropriately to this unprecedented attack on our people and our Nation. This resolution gives awesome responsibility to the President of the United States, but it should not be interpreted as unlimited power to use force or commit crimes abroad.

This resolution has been carefully drafted to restrict our response to those we know to be responsible for this atrocity. It is not a carte blanche for the use of force. This resolution requires compliance with the war powers resolution which directs the President to report to the Congress and to conduct whenever possible. These requirements and this power must not be taken lightly. I have thought long and hard about this vote. I do not want to regret it. I want to be able to tell my grandchildren that I voted this night to make the world safer. I pray that in supporting this resolution, we are making the right decision, and I pray that the President will make the right decisions.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 1 minute to my good friend and distinguished colleague, the gentleman from Rhode Island (Mr. Langevin).

Mr. Langevin. Mr. Speaker, tonight I rise in support of the resolution authorizing the use of force to combat the terrorist attacks of September 11, 2001.

Mr. Speaker, the terrorist acts of cruelty and inhumanity committed 3 days ago have not weakened our Nation. Instead, the American people have forged stronger bonds and have demonstrated the compassion and concern that make our Nation great. United in our resolve, the United States is prepared to take action against those who have threatened us. America has the determination, strength and courage to combat the scourge of terrorism. We will identify the people, powers, and organizations that have contributed to terrorism, we will hold them accountable for their inhumanity, and we will absolutely not stop.

In the coming weeks, the men and women in our military and intelligence communities will be called upon to serve their Nation. I commend them for their service and their sacrifice. And I also call upon the American people to maintain the solidarity demonstrated in recent days and to focus on the true enemy instead of targeting innocent people because of skin color or customs or beliefs. Americans of all faiths, races, and backgrounds join in condemnation of terrorism and together we shall prove victorious.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield such time as she may consume to the distinguished gentlewoman from Oregon (Ms. Hooley).

Ms. HOOLEY of Oregon. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the resolution.

Mr. Speaker, every fourth of July, we celebrate our national independence. It's a day when nearly all of us have the day off from work, a day when we can gather with our families for a cook out, and maybe attend the local parade or spend the day lounging by the pool. It's a day when we can see the latest Hollywood blockbuster films. This past Thursday, September 13, Pearl Harbor, a movie based on what, until this past Tuesday, was the most horrible attack ever on American soil.

Because vacation days are so hard to come by, many of us base our vacations around the 4th. This isn't necessarily for the sake of the holiday, but to simply save a vacation day. For nothing wrong with any of the above practices, time and prosperity have mellowed the significance of our national birthday, as they have Memorial Day and Veterans Day.

Mr. Speaker, that's unfortunate for the simple reason that on nights like this one, we're reminded that no one gave us our freedom. No one gave us our liberty. And while their underlying principles were germinated in peaceful venues and distributed on pamphlets or word of mouth, ultimately they were borne through battle.

Maybe our children don't understand, but the United Nations wasn't there to let our forefathers conduct a plebiscite on whether the 13 colonies should remain part of England. Maybe we've become so used to living side-by-side with those who weren't there when we weren't multi-national force willing to die by the tens of thousands to free their ancestors from slavery. And maybe we've grown so used to violence as entertainment the grainy images of Pearl Harbor don't affect us any more—now we need a Hollywood movie to convey the importance of a national tragedy.

Mr. Speaker, as we consider this resolution tonight, remember this: our freedom, our unity, our very way of life exist because previous generations of Americans have time and time again been willing to place a higher value on our freedom than on their own lives.

As much as I disdain the notion that taking human life is a decision for politicians to make—events of this week have placed us in a position where, as previous members of this body have done before, we must ask our fellow citizens to once again fight those who test all we stand for.

To all my colleagues assembled here tonight, understand this: there will be Americans who will not survive the fighting to come. There will be casualties, both physical and psychological. There will be parents and their children, those who lose their only children. There will be spouses who lose their soulmates, and children who will be orphaned. There will be small towns who will lose the child who sang the best in the church choir, and big city neighborhoods who see young person always playing basketball come home without legs, or without arms. We will find those who were volunteering. And while there was sadness in their eyes, there was a determination in their movement, in their step, and in their actions.

There was a commitment on their part to hold together and to band together and to do what needs to be done in that Herculean effort in trying to move the tons of rubble and steel to look for the precious body that still may be gasping for air and waiting for survival of those to come to help them. I stood with those who were working, and I understood their pain in their heart and the sadness in their face but the determination that they have to make sure that those who perpetrators of this crime never do it again, not to us but not to anyone in the world.

Mr. Speaker, I rise to support this resolution tonight. But, more than that, I rise as a proud American with all of my colleagues here in this House and all Americans throughout this country. We will find those who have done this and bring them to justice.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 1 minute to the distinguished gentleman from New York (Mr. Israel).

Mr. ISRAEL. I thank the gentleman for yielding time.

Mr. Speaker, today I also join the President of the United States and Democrats and Republicans from this House in a place of war and a place of honor in the wake of the World Trade Center. As we stand in a place of war and a place of honor in the wake of the World Trade Center, we saw the signs of war, twisted steel, shattered windows, smoking ruins. But, Mr. Speaker, amidst the devastation we saw the signs of America: small flags planted in the ground, every day. People weary from digging to save lives, yet still able to raise their hands high over their heads and chant "USA, USA" when our President arrived.

I met with Long Islanders, my constituents, on one form those ships, the other from Huntington Station, who had been on the scene tirelessly since this calamity in a heroic effort to save lives and rebuild our city. I salute them and all of our unsung heroes who continue the efforts to provide comfort in a time of tragedy and save lives in a time of war.

Mr. SANDERS. Mr. Speaker, we did not choose this fight. It chose us; and now we have no choice but to stand back in the defense of our lives, to defend our way of life, and to remember throughout the ordeal to come what this fight is about, the lives that were lost and the freedoms and liberties that we preserve.

Mr. GALLEGLY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from New York (Mr. GILMAN), the chairman emeritus.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me time.

Mr. Speaker, I am in strong support of this joint resolution authorizing the just use of force against those who have attacked our Nation.

Our Constitution places the Congress at the center of any decision to use force over any extended period of time. It is time for us to carefully weigh and support this important decision.

It is long past due for armed action against those who have barbarically attacked our Nation. The individuals and nations involved in this terrorism deserve to feel the full wrath of our great Nation, and I am confident they will feel the wrath of the entire civilized world. The American people will lead that worldwide effort, united behind our commander in chief.

Earlier today I had the honor, along with my colleagues, to accompany President Bush to my home city of New York, witnessing firsthand the incredible abominable destruction at the World Trade Center. The President moved among those workers dedicated to rescuing the missing.

America is united behind our President, behind our Armed Forces, and behind all those who will join in our war against terrorism. And our Nation will not stand alone. We are all moved by the many manifestations of solidarity and sympathy that have come from leaders throughout the world.

Mr. Speaker, our people have borne the deep pain and sorrow of this ruthless attack. We are beginning our recovery, and, by this legislation, for which I urge support, we are ready to defeat terrorism.

God bless America, and may God bless the American people.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Vermont (Mr. SANDERS).

Mr. SANDERS. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me time.

Mr. Speaker, as you know, under the authority of the Act the President already has the legal right to use force if this country is attacked—as was the case on Tuesday when some 5,000 Americans were killed in an unspeakable act of terrorism. So, in an important respect, this debate is more symbolic than legally necessary.

Americans have prayed in churches, synagogues, mosques, and other places of worship over the last four days. They have prayed for strength, for courage, for an end to this horror, and for peace. They have heard sermons that spoke of love being stronger than hate, of the forces of good triumphing over evil. I will vote for this resolution because I believe that the use of force is one tool that we have at our disposal to fight against the horror of terrorism and mass murder. One tool but it is not our only tool, and it is something that must be used wisely...and with great discretion. I believe that we must work with other nations to root out, capture and eliminate the terrorists who have caused such terrible suffering in our country and elsewhere. But we must also understand that widespread and indiscriminate force could lead to more violence and more anti-Americanism.

Mr. Speaker, the people of the developing world must know that we do not hate them, but only the terrorists who hide in their midsts and control their lives. By word and deed, we must show those people that we are on their side, rather than the terrorists who exploit them.

Mr. Speaker, the President has an enormous responsibility. I pray that he uses it well and that Congress provides him with effective guidance.

Mr. EVANS. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of the resolution authorizing the President to use military force against the terrorist threat facing our Nation.

The events of this week will be forever seared into the memory of this Nation. The sheer scale of this tragedy is almost unthinkably large. In a single day, we lost more Americans than some of our bloodiest battles of our history, and it happened on our soil.

The shock and horror of these unconscionable acts have quickly turned into anger and rage. However, we must put this all into perspective. By passing the resolution before us today, we will show that America will act forcefully and decisively in the face of unspeakable evil. The resolution will empower the President and the armed services to take the steps necessary to defeat the forces of terrorism and punish the culprits who are responsible for these heinous acts.

Mr. GALLEGLY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Connecticut (Mr. SHAYS), the chairman of the Subcommittee on National Security of the Committee on Government Reform.

Mr. SHAYS. Mr. Speaker, I have prepared remarks, but I would just like to speak from my heart that when you go to the Pentagon and when you go to see ground zero in New York, you see an incredible contrast, the carnage of the buildings and the hope and vitality of the people.

Mr. Speaker, Bush was there today and he stood up to speak to some of the rescue workers, some of them could not hear, and they yelled out, "We can't hear you." And he turned around to them and said, "But we can hear you. The whole world can hear you." I was moved by one of those who committed this dastardly, cowardly act, will hear from us.

I am voting for this resolution so that they will hear from us. If I have one regret, it is that we did not give a President, our President, this power a few years ago to respond to terrorism when it first struck.

Mr. Speaker, on behalf of the people I represent, I rise in strong support of authorizing the use of our Armed Forces against those responsible for the carnage in New York, Pennsylvania, and Washington.

Acts of war have been committed against innocent men, women, and children going about the daily business and routines that are part of their lives. A decade of peace, we are reminded in the harshest way that the United States has violent and cowardly enemies—that while the cold war is over, the world is a more dangerous place.

A decade ago, Congress considered a resolution authorizing another President George Bush to use all means necessary to liberate Kuwait, a resolution I strongly supported. To this day, I consider the vote on that measure to have been the most important vote I cast during my service in the House.

Today, we face a far more daunting task. This time, our enemy is faceless. It hides in the shadows. Its mission is morally and spiritually bankrupt. It's united only in its hatred for our democratic ideals and peaceful way of life. A path that lies ahead is a dangerous one. Defeating this enemy won't be easy, and it won't come quickly. Yet I am confident that authorizing force will save lives by preventing future acts of terrorism, and so I cast my vote without reservation.

Mr. Speaker, this is a defining moment for our nation. After consoling the families who have lost loved ones and after healing the wounded, our duty as a free people is to support, with all the resources available to us, the many men and women waging the war against terrorism.

I pray for the wisdom of our leaders, the courage of our Armed Forces, and that we will prevail over the evil that attacked us this week.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 1 minute to the distinguished gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. BARRETT).

Mr. BARRETT of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, America stands united tonight.

We stand united with our President, and we support him.

We stand united as a people, so the world will know we cannot and will not permit these terrorists to rob us of our loved ones.

We stand united to defeat any attempts of terrorists to rob us of our freedom. We shall never surrender that freedom.

We stand united in support of the men and women who serve us in the Armed Forces and who will help us achieve justice.

We shall respond, and we will never forget the victims of this horrific attack.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I am delighted to yield 1 minute to the distinguished gentlewoman from Texas (Ms. JACKSON-LEE).

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. Mr. Speaker, it is obvious that America will respond, and we will respond in a unified, factual and deliberate and committed manner, we will act out of resolve and out of faith. So, I rise to support this resolution.

We are today giving the President the authority to go after the people involved in these terrorist acts. However, there is a dual responsibility of the Congress and the President to work together in times of aggression against those who would do harm to the United States. It must be done with the administration, the President of the United States, in consultation with Congress.

I am prepared to support this resolution. I know there are others in this country who are fearful of entering into hostilities and war; but I do believe that, in consultation under the War Powers Act of 1973, we are headed in the right direction, for that act ensures that the collective judgment of both the Congress and the President will apply to the introduction of United States Armed Forces into hostilities or into situations where imminent involvement in hostilities or into situations where imminent involvement in hostilities is attacked, he assumes the obligations of commander in chief. When America is attacked, he assumes the obligations of the commander in chief. When America is attacked, he assumes the obligations of the commander in chief.

This resolution authorizes the use of force by America. As a matter of law, the War Powers Act may not even require this resolution. The President likely already has the legal authority needed.

But this afternoon most of us prayed together at the National Cathedral. At the end of the service, we stood together and we sang “The Battle Hymn of the Republic.” As we sang, I could not help but recall that the words of the “Battle Hymn of the Republic” were written. Our country was divided, and it was the last time on American soil when massive numbers of Americans died in war, until this Tuesday. At the end of the song, we sang, “As He died to make men holy, let us die to make men free.”

While this resolution may not be legally required, it is important to show that we are united; that when America is attacked, Americans stand together. Those who died on Tuesday will have died to make us free.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. CARDIN).

Mr. CARDIN. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of Senate Joint Resolution 23, a resolution to authorize the use of United States Armed Forces against those responsible for the recent attacks launched against the United States and its citizens. September 11, 2001, will be a date that will live forever in the hearts and minds of freedom loving people. On that date our country was attacked by terrorists in a way thought impossible. Thousands of innocent men, women, and children were murdered. It has touched the lives of thousands of families and of all Americans. It was an attack on our people and our freedom. The resolution before us authorizes the President to take the appropriate action including if needed the use of our military against those nations, organizations or people who planned, authorized, committed, or aided the terrorist attacks that occurred on September 11, 2001. The resolution specifically directs that such action be targeted to prevent any future acts of international terrorism against the United States by such entities.

Mr. Speaker, we have an obligation to protect the safety of our citizens, particularly those within our own country. This resolution helps us carry out that responsibility. Our military force must only be used when it is clearly justified. This resolution limits that use to responding to the September 11 attack on our Nation. It is not only justified, but there is no more legitimate use of military than to defend one’s country from acts of foreign attack. The resolution recognizes the role and responsibility of Congress in authorizing and committing our military to hostile action. The Constitution provides that the Congress has the power to "provide for the common defense" and the power to "declare war". The resolution strikes the right balance between the President and Congress and is in compliance with the War Powers Act, making it clear of the President's obligations to consult with and inform Congress. This is the time for Congress to act. Let those who were responsible for these horrible deeds know that the Congress and the President and the American People are united and are resolved to bring the perpetrators to justice and to prevent such acts from ever happening again on our shores.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 1 minute to the distinguished gentleman from Illinois (Mr. DAVIS). Mr. DAVIS of Illinois, Mr. Speaker, I join you in your words in support of this resolution authorizing the President to use military force against those responsible for the September 11, 2001, attack on America.

In addition, Mr. Speaker, to all of those who have lost their lives and loved ones or been injured, on behalf of the people of the Seventh District of Illinois, we extend to them our heartfelt condolences.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, we commend all of those who have committed tremendous acts of bravery, who have given of themselves during this period, who have given even their lives so that others might live. We thank them for their acts of heroism, and we shall stand together.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. FROST), the distinguished Chair of the Democratic Caucus.

Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, today we debate the gravest and most important matter that ever comes before the Congress, the use of military force.

Mr. Speaker, the cowardly, barbaric attack of September 11 was an assault on America, on humanity and on the civilized world. It was the cold-blooded calculated murder of untold thousands of innocent Americans. It was nothing less than evil, plain and simple.

Mr. Speaker, September 11 changed much about America and the world, but I am proud to say that it has not perverted our democratic system. That is because the Congress and the President, as coequal branches of government, have worked together, consulting closely throughout the process. As a result, we have agreed to this resolution.

So we speak with one voice tonight, Mr. Speaker, and the House will overwhelmingly vote to authorize the President to use military force to respond to the terrorist acts of September 11.

Mr. Speaker, the United States is united in its commitment to bringing to justice those who perpetrated this assault on our people. But make no mistake, this campaign may be long and it may be difficult.

As we take this action tonight, let us pray for the men and women of our armed services as they undertake this assignment for our Nation.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from New Mexico (Mr. ACKERMAN), a senior member of the Committee on International Relations.

Mr. ACKERMAN. Mr. Speaker, along with President, I, too, have just returned from ground zero, the site of the greatest single human tragedy in our Nation's history. The towering pyramid of wreckage upon whose perimeter in New York City I have just walked hours ago is a monument, staggering in its dimensions and horrifying in its implications.

In that massive tomb, Mr. Speaker, lie the remains of a still-unknown number of my fellow New Yorkers and our fellow Americans. The terrorists who murdered these people conceive of themselves as the hand of God and have executed their wicked judgment against our people. And what were our countrymen's crimes? Their crime was to go to work in a free Nation. Their crime was to get on an airplane. Their crime was to visit one of the greatest cities in the world. And, in many cases, Mr. Speaker, their crime was to attempt to save the lives of other human beings.

Mr. Speaker, the kind of havoc, murder and carnage which the terrorists have inflicted upon our Nation can only be compared to war. And war, Mr. Speaker, is what we will give them back. We know which neighborhoods these people live in. We know who their landlords are. We will find out where they get their paychecks. We will hunt them down, not only the most visible of their public leaders, but also the most hidden of their private supporters.

Tonight, Mr. Speaker, evil again is on the march, and we must respond. And respond we will. We will respond to the terror that lives in the shadows and that hides in the dark.

We know, Mr. Speaker, that we have not borne our final pain; but America is embarking on a great campaign, one which will not be easy, one which will take some time. Like the beginning of the Cold War, we may not be able to foresee the end of this conflict; but, Mr. Speaker, we can be certain of who the winner will be.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 1 minute to the distinguished gentleman from Michigan (Mr. KILDEE).

Mr. KILDEE. Mr. Speaker, unimaginable evil has been perpetrated against our free country. We must authorize our President to take all necessary actions to prevent those responsible for these dastardly acts from again inflicting such cowardly malice against our way of life.

Today our Congress reflects the resolve and unity of the American people in supporting our President in restoring peace and security to our peace-loving country. The Commander in Chief of our Armed Forces has an awesome responsibility. Let us unite behind him as he carries out his duty to our people.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 1 minute to the distinguished gentleman from California (Mr. THOMPSON).

Mr. THOMPSON of California. Mr. Speaker, tonight I will vote to support our efforts to stop terrorism.

This is going to be a difficult vote for me. I would have made the same decision early in 1970, when I stepped off an airplane in Vietnam and joined my infantry unit, it has been my dream and it has been my prayer that no American would ever again have to shed their blood nor give their life on foreign soil. As a Member of Congress, I never dreamed of voting to send our American men and women into combat, but then I never dreamed I would be calling the mother and the father of a young man from Eureka, California, in my district, who was on board one of those hijacked airplanes on September 11.

This past Tuesday, terrorists attacked America and they attacked the American people. They murdered thousands of Americans, and we must ensure that we do all in our power to end terrorism and to stop the terrorists from striking again. Our country is great because the people of our country are great, and we will, we will, with resolve, stand together to protect our freedom.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 1 minute to the distinguished gentleman from New Mexico (Mr. UDALL).

Mr. UDALL of New Mexico. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

Mr. Speaker, when I swore my oath to preserve, protect, and defend the Constitution of the United States, I never imagined that this country or I would be where we are today. We each swear our allegiance to one another and to our country, yet the magnitude of our oath is only understood when we face situations like we face today. During trying times such as these, the American spirit is tested most intensely and we find within ourselves the ability to overcome challenges once thought unthinkable and unimaginable.

The cowardly terrorists perpetrating these unspeakable acts may think they have won, but they better think again, because they have united us. A united America will overcome this evil.
congressional record—house

united America will continue to be a beacon for freedom-loving people, and a united America will prevail in the end.

Mr. Speaker, I urge support of this resolution.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 1 minute to the distinguished gentleman from Ohio (Mr. STRICKLAND).

Mr. STRICKLAND. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of this resolution.

Mr. Speaker, a previous speaker expressed disappointment that this resolution is not an explicit declaration of war. Let me reassure the gentleman. The recipient of America's forthcoming sword of justice will not be able to recognize the difference.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 1 minute to the distinguished gentleman from Washington (Mr. INSLEE).

Mr. INSLEE. Mr. Speaker, as I walked down here, I saw in the cloakroom NBC News reported that from cell phones they could tell that the people on the Pennsylvania flight fought the hijackers, and that that flight was likely targeted for the building where we stand. The vision of the World Trade Center and the vision of the Citadel, symbol of democracy for this globe, leads me to know in my heart and in my gut, this is the right thing for our Nation to do.

Our enemy does not understand our national family. He perceives our freedom of religion as weakness. He perceives our freedom of speech as lack of discipline. He is about to discover that he is wrong on all counts.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 1 minute to the gentlewoman from Ohio (Ms. KAPTUR), our distinguished colleague and my good friend.

Ms. KAPTUR. Mr. Speaker, I thank the distinguished gentleman (Mr. LANTOS) for yielding me this time.

I rise tonight in strong support of this resolution to grant unprecedented authority to our President for the first time in U.S. history to deploy our Armed Forces against organizations and persons that are not nation states, as well as those that are nation states. We take this step with the certain knowledge that our first duty is to protect and defend our Nation against all enemies, foreign and domestic. Never have we been more united in our cause.

We also take this step understanding the character of U.S. foreign policy for the last century has also yielded levels of hate against our Nation, by omission or commission, that demand deep and immediate reevaluation. We pray for our people who have had thrust upon them such unjust suffering. May God bless America and our allies with wisdom. Our unyielding causes are freedom and justice.

Mr. GALLEGLY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from South Carolina (Mr. GRAHAM).

Mr. GRAHAM. Mr. Speaker, I too join the choir here of support for our President. This is an historic moment in our country, a sad moment. But I would just like to express a thought for the future.

We are kidding ourselves if we think this will be easy, and I do not believe anybody understands it to be easy. We are going to call up thousands of reservists soon, and we are going to put men and women in harm's way soon. This will not be a 100-hour ground campaign; this will not be an air war we watch on TV. This will affect every American family even deeper than it has now, but it is worth it.

This is the right thing to do. Let us end it now. Let us stand behind our President and go after the organizations from top to bottom who perpetrated such a heinous act. We can do it as a family, we can do it together and keep the spirit of September 11 alive. Do not give in to terrorism.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield such time as he or she may consume to the gentlewoman from the Virgin Islands (Mrs. CHRISTENSEN).

Mrs. CHRISTENSEN. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of this resolution.

Mr. Speaker, I rise with a heavy, heavy heart, to join my colleagues to authorize our President, to use the necessary and appropriate force against those who will be identified as the perpetrators of the terrorists act of Tuesday, September 11, 2001, that killed so many of our loved ones, in a diabolical attempt to strike fear in the hearts of our Nation's leaders and all Americans.

Yes, we must vindicate those thousands of lives, like Sgt. Mauldin White of my district, so that their dying will not be in vain.

But, Mr. Speaker, I stand here humbled by the heavy responsibility that is ours—the specific authority to declare war that is bestowed by the Constitution, on us as Members of this body.

And though I stand here with my colleagues, in this awesome time of decision, I do so as one who is not afforded the opportunity to cast a vote. At many other times, I have felt the sting of not being fully able to participate in our democracy, but never more than tonight. For tonight we authorize our President to send our constituents, like all others to a war unlike any other before, and perhaps to die for this country, which we love.

But we must, because now we fight a war, a war of opinions and work, at school, at church, and anywhere—are at risk, as was so clearly and tragically shown this week. And so, while many of us harbor reservations about the breadth of the powers bestowed, we must stand by our President, and for our fellow Americans, I pray for God's wisdom, and guidance, as he carries out the heavy weight of his office.

Mr. Speaker, if there was ever a time when decisive and immediate decisive military action would be required as soon as certain information became available. But both yesterday at the Pentagon and today I flew with my colleagues to New York to visit Ground Zero, my military colleagues and my congressmen who have been killed and are missing in what can only be called an act of war.

So we have no choice but to respond to these acts with “all necessary and appropriate force.” In the names of the dead and of the missing, we can do no less. God bless America.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I am delighted to yield 1 minute to the gentlewoman from New York (Mrs. LOWEY), the ranking Democrat on the Committee on Foreign Operations.

Mrs. LOWEY. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of this resolution.

America stands at a threshold. Behind us lies our sense of security, now shattered by intentional and brutal acts of war. Before us lies our solemn obligation. Our steps over this threshold must be deliberate, they must be firm, and they must be brave.

Today, Congress invokes our authority, derived from our Constitution and the War Powers Resolution, to authorize the use of force against enemies of the United States. Our object is not to extract vengeance; mere retribution will not make Americans safe, nor will it purge terrorism from this world.

The battles ahead will be against an enemy who knows no boundaries and has no shame, an enemy with no flag and no official military, who lurks in the shadows of the world, cloaked in malevolent ideology and attacks us indiscriminately. These will be battles unlike any we have ever known and we must stand united with our President, our allies, and each other as we navigate the coming storm. The coming days and weeks will give us a clear picture of who stands on the side of justice and who does not.

Those who stand against us, actively, by organizing, financing, or executing terrorism, or passively, by sheltering terrorists and their allies, or implicitly, by teaching hatred to children or justifying violence against innocents, will know the full fury of a just and gentle America aroused. We will not rest until the world is free at last from the grave threat that struck so hard at our Nation’s heart.

Since the end of the Cold War, this Nation has taken much for granted: our freedom, our liberty, our safety. These days are over, I say to my colleagues. Today, at this moment, a new generation is being called upon to defend our way of life and protect our citizens. A new war is upon our shores. Its first innocent casualties have already fallen. Let us meet this test with all the unity and will we can muster, and may God bless America.

Mr. CLEMENT. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 1 minute to the gentlewoman from California (Mrs. DAVIS).

Mrs. DAVIS of California. Mr. Speaker, as a new Member of Congress, I hardly expected to have to take this extraordinary step, but I do it with the grave seriousness with which it is intended.

Last May I stood on this floor and I welcomed my first new grandchild, and I said at that time that for many of us the issues that we deal with today, we need to think about how they affect our children and our grandchildren. I would submit to my colleagues today that that is what I am thinking about, because what we are doing today is securing for them our American way of life.

Our American way of life reflects that fragile balance between our individual freedom and the security of our Nation, because that is the cornerstone of our democracy and to which our children are born. And to our foes: You have never seen it. It falls upon us to assure that that justice and that freedom flourishes throughout our land.

Mr. GALLEGLY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. LINDER).

Mr. LINDER. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me.

Mr. Speaker, not one Member of this body ran for election to go to war. We seek peace. But in the last century, America has spent the lives of our young men and women in major conflicts on five occasions on other shores to restore peace, and now war comes to us.

We did not invite this, but we will not shirk from it. A band of thugs has visited upon this Nation and upon innocent American citizens death and destruction, the likes of which the world has never seen. It falls upon us to ensure that not only can it not succeed on our soil, but that it should not be tolerated in any corner of the globe.

This resolution gives to our President the tools to begin a long and arduous campaign to quash this terrorism. It will not end with the punishment of one man or group or even one nation sympathetic to their cause. It will end with a victory so brutal and decisive that no one or group, no matter how much they hate freedom, will dare to risk repeating the terror they have put the world through for the last 30 years. No nation state, no matter how much they hate America as the world’s most conspicuous example of freedom, will find it in their nation’s interest to attempt to surreptitiously support them.

This will not be quick or easy, but this is a united Congress, this is a dedicated President, the American people are fully committed to our goal, and we will succeed.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 1 minute to our colleagues, the gentlewoman from New York (Ms. VELAZQUEZ).

Ms. VELAZQUEZ. Mr. Speaker, I strongly support this resolution on behalf of my constituents and all New York. Those who wear the uniforms of firefighters, paramedics, nurses, and doctors are our soldiers. We will not let their courage, big heart, and hard work to rebuild our city amid the rubble be forgotten.

We are facing a different kind of war requiring a different kind of response. We will need more vigilance at home and more cooperation abroad. Flexibility and creativity are required to prevent further assaults. We must be smarter and faster than our foe.

We support this action because our cause is just. There is no conceivable justification for shedding the blood of innocents. We do not seek vengeance, for Americans are not a vengeful people. Americans cherish justice, and that is what we seek here.

This resolution would allow us to pursue, prosecute, and punish these criminals. We do this because civilized nations prove again and again that terrorists have no legitimacy among them.

With the sustained and inalterable will demonstrated here tonight, and the cooperation of peace-loving people around the world, we will prevail. I strongly support this resolution.

Mr. MICA. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 1 minute to our colleagues, the gentleman from New Jersey, Mr. HOLT.
Mr. HOLT. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me.

Mr. Speaker, today, even as we bind the wounds of thousands of brave Americans who still work to free those who are trapped, to care for those who are injured, to recover those who are lost, Congress, on behalf of our good and brave people, must act.

Mr. Speaker, this is the time for our Nation to lead the world in the fight against terror, to strike a blow for future generations for all people against those who would try to achieve their goals through violence, terror, and bloodshed. While these cowardly acts have shaken buildings, they cannot shake the strong foundations of our nation's, our peoples' spirit, our great democracy.

Today we show that we are Americans united, united for our foes to see and for our friends to see. Today we show the world that in which we respond illustrates what makes America great and shows America to the world.

I join with all of my colleagues in Congress in expressing our Nation's sorrow and outrage against this evil event; even more, our firm resolve to root out terrorism. It will require a long, hard effort, and a full measure of wisdom and courage. Those cowards failed. Our freedom is not our vulnerability, it is our greatest strength.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 1 minute to our distinguished colleague, the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. STUPAK).

Mr. STUPAK. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of this resolution. I suspect most Members will support it. As we have heard from voices throughout the land, people are looking for swift, resolute action from our Armed Forces.

In my own district, my own constituents are mourning the death of Army Major Rip Taylor, who died in Tuesday's attack on the Pentagon. I am sure we all want swift retribution, but I am reminded of the old saying that revenge is a dish best served cold.

This resolution authorizes the President to strike, and to strike hard. But let us make sure we identify our targets carefully. Today as we gathered at the National Cathedral on this day of prayer and remembrance, we sang the Battle Hymn of the Republic.

We sang those words that we hope will send a chill through our enemies: "He hath loosed the faithful lightning of his terrible swift sword."

Mr. Speaker, the sword we loosen tonight is indeed terrible. May its aim be swift and true in bringing us justice and peace.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I yield as much time as he might consume to our distinguished Democratic whip, the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. Bonior).

Mr. BONIOR. Mr. Speaker, I thank my colleague, the gentleman from California (Mr. LANTOS), for managing the time today on this most important resolution and for his contributions, as well as the distinguished gentleman from Illinois (Mr. HYDE).

Mr. Speaker, together we mourn our Nation's terrible, terrible losses and our hearts ache; and we know that the days ahead will not be very easy. But in these past difficult days, America has once again shown the world and perhaps even ourselves, Mr. Speaker, just who we are, a land of courage and generosity and extraordinary quiet heroism; a people of many colors, faiths, backgrounds; a people who stand united, not just in defense of our Nation but of our most cherished ideals, freedom, tolerance, diversity, and democracy.

When the world watched our national prayer service earlier today they heard the healing words of many faiths. A Muslim prayer leader, a Jewish rabbi, and Christian clergy.

These Americans, like the rest of the world, all worship God in their own way. But the common faith they share, what we have witnessed in the torrent of goodness this week as neighbors help neighbors and strangers help strangers, is that hate can never conquer our national spirit.

We must prepare ourselves for the uncertain months and perhaps years ahead. Every one of us will be asked to give more, to do more, to help pull the plow of freedom forward.

With this resolution, we commit ourselves to that endeavor, to bring those who attacked us on September 11 to justice and to build a safer world. We draw strength from our unity of purpose in the unwavering support of friends and allies around the world.

Today, we join together not as Democrats nor Republicans, but Mr. Speaker, proud Americans prepared to defend freedom as our forebears did before us.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Before yielding back the balance of my time, Mr. Speaker, I would like to thank the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. HYDE) for yielding me this time, and I thank both him and the gentleman from California (Mr. LANTOS) for your leadership on the floor during this debate.

I would like to thank, Mr. Speaker, all my colleagues, all these Members of the United States House of Representatives. Today I have had a rare opportunity. I had an opportunity to listen to most of the speeches, and it was a good debate about a serious subject. Mr. Speaker, this is a serious moment for each and every one of us, and you can see it weighing in our hearts.

Every now and then, Mr. Speaker, we are called upon to understand and reach deep into our hearts and minds to understand who we are as a Nation. I have seen it before my eyes in all the scenes we have seen described here tonight and the horror of the attack and the splendor of our heroic response. Even in the most brief circumstances, with our hearts broken, we reached out to help others across this land.

Mr. Speaker, there is one phrase from our sacred documents that tells us who we are, why we are here, why did we come to this land from all other this world, with all our different creeds, denominations, Nations of origin, nationalities.

We came here in search of one thing. We came here to secure the blessings of liberty for ourselves and our posterity. That is what we wanted. We have had to struggle too many times, Mr. Speaker, in the history of this great world as we have tried to play out that wonderful drama as a marvelous experiment in the history of the world. We have had to struggle against our own imperfections and there has been hurt; and we tried to overcome that hurt and to bring to another to be as we fought with one another, and just about lost the greatness of this Nation and we brought it back together.

But for the most part, Mr. Speaker, we have had to spend our young men and women in the defense of freedom for other people, and I always admired us so much for that.

What Nation ever in the history of the world has so much loved freedom that they spent their own peace to defend the freedom of people other than themselves? That is to be known, that is to be respected, that is to be cherished, that is to be understood.

And now we are challenged again. Why do they challenge us? What do they seek to achieve? Are they wanting to change our commitment to freedom across the globe? Do they think we are going to suppress other people and deny them their rights? A great Nation does not change the course of its policies towards other nations and other people because of the cruel, inhumane acts of terrorism by barbaric people who do not understand respect. We will not change who we are and what we stand for in this world and who we have been and what we have stood for in this world because of this.

I am told that in some instances, with some of these people, they hate our religion. We only ask that we all gather together and give respect for one another in our religious beliefs. We try to do that for others, and I believe as a Nation we do it well. Not perfect, but well. And we work so hard at doing that for others we require that it be the same for us.

Tonight, we have gathered here to discuss something, and I have heard so many of my colleagues in this body say it, it is something we do not want to do, to join again in authorization with our Primary purpose and for the security of the United States of America, to commit our young men and women in uniform to the field of danger in the defense of freedom. A simple thing, done over and over and over again.

We have been reminded by others, some of us, of the costs we might expect these young men and women to pay, the costs that have been paid by the heroes we have talked about in this debate. This will not come cheap. There will be mamans and daddies with broken hearts. There will be love and precious gift the good Lord has ever given them: their children.

But when mothers and fathers in this great land lend their children to the cause of freedom, they do just that. We do not commit our children for frivolous reasons to fields of danger. This is not about revenge. It is not in our heart. We are a good Nation. We are a kind Nation. We will forgive our enemies in victory; we struggle to forgive our imperfections first. And we forgive; but we do not commit our children to acts of vengeance.

We do not cheapen the heroism of our great American heroes with the quest of territory or the thought of dominance of other people. We will spend our heroes only for freedom, decency and respect; for the right to live an ordinary mundane everyday life, to go to work and be left alone, to do our bit and share with others, to hold our children and put them to bed at night in a very simple little kiss on the cheek and a very soft little assurance: sleep safely, my darling, for you are in America and you are free and you are safe and our heroes have made it so for you.

Mr. Speaker, let us vote for this resolution. Let us take this harsh task. Let us ask our young men and women once more in America to go out and be the sensational heroes at risk that they never wanted to be and, bless our hearts, that we never wanted them to have to be. Let us get this done. Let us remove this blight on the world. And, Mr. Speaker, let us have the blessings of liberty for ourselves, but oh so much more importantly, for our posterity.

Mr. NADLER. Mr. Speaker, the World Trade Center is in my district, and I just this moment returned from traveling in the district with the President, walking through the ruins of the World Trade Center, where there are thousands of bodies buried.

I have spent much of my career speaking out against the use of military force when I believed it was unwarranted. In many ways, my political awakening began with my active opposition to the war in Vietnam. But, Mr. Speaker, those of my colleagues who are rightly skeptical of the use of military force must understand the threat and the stake if we fail to act.

Many have said that the events of Tuesday changed the world forever. The world has not changed. The people who carried out this murderous attack on our Nation, the organizations which recruited, trained, and supplied them, the governments which gave them shelter and support are still there. We now know without any doubt what the price of inaction, of appeasement, of willful blindness will be.

The world has not changed, but I believe the American people have. Our Nation is now ready to recognize that we have been in a war for many years. Our people now recognize that if we do not defend ourselves in that war from those for whom our lives, our children, and our way of life are a daily affront, we will not survive as a Nation. We must now exercise the right under the United Nations Charter to collective self-defense.

I wish we had a choice, but the charged rubble and the thousands of dead Americans lying just blocks from my office in Manhattan, and the hundreds more a stone’s throw from that very building, demonstrate that we do not have a choice.

Mr. ENGEL. Mr. Speaker, I, too, have just come back from New York with the President, and I must say that I still have the mud all over me. Being a New Yorker, born and bred, I was not prepared for what I saw at ground zero.

Ten years ago, Mr. Speaker, I stood in the well and was one of the Democrats who crossed party lines to support the first President Bush in the Persian Gulf War to do what he needed to do as our commander in chief, and I now do the same 10 years later with President Bush.

This is a very difficult time for all Americans. We need to band together to deal with this scourge of terrorism, and I think we know it now more than ever before. I have never been more proud to be an American. I have never been more proud to be a New Yorker, to see the firemen, the policemen, the iron workers, everyone else working together to try to find more survivors, to try to do whatever they can to help each other.
This is going to be a long prolonged fight. As our President said, it is a war, a war on terrorism, but a war that we will win. I am very, very proud; proud of this body and proud to be an American. God bless America.

Mr. FERGUSON. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of this resolution. I, too, came back from ground zero in New York, the site of so much wreckage and destruction. And for those who say that this was done by cowardly, faceless villains, yes, they were cowardly; but the face that we see is the face of evil and hatred in our world today.

We contrasted that evil with the hope and the determination and the courage of the firefighters and police officers and rescue squad personnel working with the glimmer of hope of finding additional survivors. For these individuals, who labored in the toughest of circumstances for 3 days, it was incredible to see their faces light up with words of encouragement from our President.

There was so much noise and machinery. There was a firefighter in the back who yelled, "Mr. President, we can't hear you." And the President responded with, "But I can hear you, and all of America can hear you. And for those who took down those buildings, they are going to hear from us."

Tonight's resolution represents our opportunity to make sure that they do hear from us. Tonight, we have an opportunity to stop this evil. We do not seek revenge; we seek justice. We know that this is not going to be a short-term project. We need to bear down and have perseverance for the long haul. We will root out those who were responsible for that massacre, and America will stare down the face of evil and hatred.

To those who have endured so much suffering, we will not let you down.

Mr. UDALL of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, I am voting for this resolution with a heavy heart, but without hesitation.

Like the hearts of all Americans, my heart is heavy with grief for all those killed and injured in this week's despicable attacks. It is weighted with sympathy for all their families and friends, and with concern for what may lie ahead for our country and for other people around the world.

But however heavy our hearts, we in the Congress and throughout America know we must not lose heart.

We know we must not hesitate to fulfill our responsibilities to our fellow citizens and to our country.

We know that if we do, we will be giving way to terror and giving victory to those who seek to terrorize America.

And all Americans—Christians, Jews, Muslims, and all others, too—know that we cannot let these criminal deeds go unanswered.

This resolution is a key part of the answer. It says the President can use force in a "nec-essential and appropriate" response directed at those who "planned, authorized, committed, or aided the terrorist attacks on September 11, 2001," as well as those who harbored the perpetrators, so they will not commit new offenses. It is broad, but it is not unlimited. It covers the culpable but it is not aimed at anyone else.

In other words, in voting for this resolution, I am voting not for vengeance but for justice.

I think it is the duty of all civilized people to insist on meting out justice to those who are guilty, including those who have aided and abetted the perpetrators—and we must not hesitate to carry out that duty.

But we have another duty as well—a duty to ourselves and to the things we hold most dear.

To paraphrase Churchill, this week may prove to be only the end of the beginning of events that will challenge us all. Those events likely will test our resolve in persisting through a long and unsettling struggle. And they definitely will test our dedication to our own principles. We have made America what it is and so have made us hate those who hate those principles.

We must not waiver in defending those principles. We must not weaken in our determination to maintain our Constitution and democracy. And we must not surrender or reduce the basic freedoms and the rights of all Americans—because, if we do any of those things we will have lost the struggle, whatever the results of the use of force authorized by this resolution.

Mr. LEACH. Mr. Speaker, American governance today is confronted with an unprecedented challenge. A concerted terrorist attack has been perpetrated against our institutions, people, and way of life. As legislators we are obligated to look to our constitutional heritage to craft an appropriate response. What is clear is the imperative to act. What is less clear is the methodology to pursue.

Terrorism is neither easily understood nor combatted. The assaults on the World Trade Center and the Pentagon represent perhaps more a conspiracy of hatred than a traditionally understood enemy. It is the rationale for an international police action led response by U.S. Armed Forces must be rooted in traditional just war doctrine.

There is in the Western tradition a hallowed just war doctrine developed by ecclesiastics and jurists, followed by statesmen, instinctively accepted by the peoples of many countries. Briefly, it holds that for war to be considered just, it must be animated by a just cause and informed by righteous intention, that it be undertaken by a lawful political authority and only as a last resort, that any necessary actions be proportionate to the wrongs committed.

With this resolution Congress is obligated to lay forth an intent to hold accountable to the bar of justice perpetrators of a crime against civilized values. We do this, however, with no intent to hasten or precipitate breaches between the Moslem and Judeo-Christian worlds. Indeed, we act out of a desire to emphasize what unites rather than divides the three great monotheistic religions.

All moral communities are structured by religious convictions—What is the standard of judgement—that we all see through a glass darkly—parallels Mohamed's directive "follow not that of which you have not the knowledge. . . do not go about in the land exultingly, for you cannot cut through the earth nor reach the mountains in height."

These parallels are important in this discussion because as we contemplate the use of force, we the representatives of the American people have an obligation to emphasize the commonality of our values. We respect Islam and Islamic nations. The only brief we hold is against anyone who manipulates hatred and employ tactics of terror.

Here, to return to just war doctrine, a central tenet is proportionality. Care must be taken in any military action to limit to the maximum extent possible collateral damage and seek instead individual accountability. We must in the American tradition pay a decent respect to the opinions of mankind. Otherwise, we will not only create more terrorists than we root out and cause a world currently sympathetic to our dilemma to turn against us, however righteous our cause. Fanaticism, in other words, should be matched by a commitment to right or wrong, not counter-fanaticism. The fundamental goal of the policy we sanction this evening must be prevention, not revenge.

Finally, a note about historical parallels. The Gulf of Tonkin Resolution is not proper precedent. Tonkin, after all, involved an unconfirmed rifle attack from a wooden boat against a U.S. naval vessel in a combat zone off the shores of Vietnam. No one was killed or injured; no damage was inflicted. In this case, an unprovoked, cowardly attack was launched against American citizens and military personnel on American territory. The Congress, in conformity with the War Powers Res-solution which resulted from the lack of constitutional clarity that engulled our involvement in Vietnam, has no choice except to authorize executive discretion. What this debate must frame, however, is both the discretion that is appropriately delegated to the President or underscored under the Constitution and the limits or nature of judgement that must be applied to the circumstance. In this regard, this Member simply wishes to place in the Record a concern for the need for international cooperation and proportionality of response. Fundamentally, at this stage, the crimes that have been committed are of a few against two symbolic bastions of civilization. The goal should be some of us who say, let's step back for a moment and think through the implications of our actions today—let us more fully understand its consequences.

We are not dealing with a conventional war.
We cannot respond in a conventional manner.
I do not want to see this spiral out of control.
This crisis involves issues of national security, foreign policy, public safety, intelligence gathering, economics, and murder. Our response must be equally multi-faceted.

We must not rush to judgment. Far too many innocent people have already died. Our country is in mourning. If we rush to launch a counter-attack, we run too great a risk that women, children, and other non-combatants will be caught in the crossfire.

Nor can we let our justified anger over these outrageous acts by vicious murderers inflame prejudice against all Arab Americans, Muslims, Southeast Asians, or any other people because of their race, religion, or ethnicity.

Finally, we must be careful not to embark on an open-ended war with neither an exit strategy nor a focused target. We cannot repeat past mistakes.

In 1964, Congress gave President Lyndon Johnson the power to “take all necessary force” to repel attacks and prevent further aggression.
In so doing, this House abandon its own constitutional responsibilities and launched our country into years of undeclared war in Vietnam.

At that time, Senator Wayne Morse, one of two lone votes against the Tonkin Gulf Resolution, declared, “I believe that history will record that we have made a grave mistake in subverting and undermining the Constitution of the United States. . . . I believe that within the next century, future generations will look with dismay and great disappointment upon a Congress which is now about to make such a historic mistake.”

Senator Morse was correct, and I fear we make the same mistake today. And I fear the consequences.

I have agonized over this vote. But I came to grips with it in the very painful yet beautiful memorial service today at the National Cathedral. As a member of the clergy so eloquently said: “As we vote, let us not become the evil that we deplore.”

Mr. PORTMAN. Mr. Speaker, I rise tonight in strong support of this resolution. What we are doing tonight is authorizing the use of our Armed Forces for war. It is a war we did not start and it is a war we did not start. But the primary responsibility of any government must be the protection of its citizens, and so Tuesday’s attacks on the citizens of the United States have left us with no choice. The perpetrators of these heinous crimes must be found, and then they must suffer the consequences of their deeds.

I take this vote tonight knowing there will be challenges ahead. There will be danger. And there will be sacrifice. But this is a war we must win. For us as Americans, and for the world.

Terrorists use fear as a weapon. But we will tot be surrender to fear. Because they are not just facing the best-trained and best-equipped military the world has ever known; they are closing the fierce determination and the quiet anger of the American people. The attacks on Tuesday were designed to bring chaos to the United States, but it has done just the opposite. We stand together as one nation. We understand there will be challenges ahead. And we know what must be done. And that is why we are here tonight and authorizing the President to use all necessary force to destroy these terrorist organizations. September 11th is a day we will always remember, and I believe it is a day the enemies of freedom will live to regret.

Mr. WU. Mr. Speaker, as brave Americans continue working to rescue and treat those trapped under the remains of the World Trade Center and the damaged Pentagon, my heart and prayers continue to be with those who have lost loved ones and those with loved ones still to be found.

Mr. Speaker, I have seen Americans in our finest hour. We have experienced the deepest of loss, sadness, despair, and anger.
But Americans have joined together to help each other, and I am proud.

We Americans demand that individuals, organizations, or countries responsible for this monstrous act be brought to justice. Our actions must be deliberate, decisive, and effective.

We will not deliberately attack innocent civilians and become like our attackers.

Article 2, section 9 of the Constitution gants to Congress the authority “To declare War.”

This is one of the most profound of powers.
The Founders recognized that the power to send our sons and daughters to war is the most important decision a nation can make.

They invested this power in Congress, the intitutions closest to the people.

I believe this solemn congressional responsibility is critical to protecting the delicate balance of power between the legislative and excutive branch of government. The Founders was carefully crafted and has allowed the United States to remain one of the most stable and enduring democracies in the world.
I would have strong reservations about a resolution authorizing the use of force in an open ended manner reaching far beyond responding to this specific terrorist attack on America.

This resolution restates the authority I believe Congress already granted to the President under Section 2(c)(3) of the War Powers Resolution. My reading is that nothing in this resolution supersedes congressional authority under the Constitution or War Powers Resolution and the President would continue to be bound by the reporting and consultation requirements. Under this resolution, Congress reserves the right to review the President's plans and actions.

The purpose of our restatement, of this use of force resolution, is to demonstrate that America stands united. I pray that President Bush will use the awesome powers of the United States with wisdom.

Mr. HILLEARY. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of this next tier. If we were to allow the perpetrators to go unpunished, or even lightly punished. But we won't. America is a peaceful nation, but when our freedom and security are challenged as they are now, we will do whatever it takes to protect our way of life.

I do not take this decision lightly. This war is going to be an extensive and costly one. This vote will result in the likely loss of life for a good number of American servicemen, and the certain upheaval of many American families. We will find those barbarians, we will hunt down those who harbor them, and we will make an example of them. We did not start this. But we will finish it.

God bless the victims and their families, God bless our brave soldiers, sailors, airmen, and marines. And God bless America.

Mrs. CLAYTON. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the Joint War Powers Resolution, but not without reservation. Clearly, the terrorist attacks on September 11th caused unprecedented death, destruction and despair in our nation. The attacks struck a blow not only to our citizens and buildings, but also against our values of life, liberty and American freedom.

I urge my colleagues to vote unanimously in support of this resolution. God bless the United States.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Mr. speaker, on September 11th, America came face to face with the mountains of evil. We did not know what the enemies of America perceive as weakness, we celebrate as strength—freedom, tolerance, democratic governance. No enemy can ever take these things from us, because they are ingrained in our institutions, our way of life, and our very character.

In times of trial, these principles give America the strength and resolve to meet any challenge, no matter how great. We will rise to this challenge as we have done countless times before. As we mourn our dead, we prepare for our future, and our very character. We do not seek war, and waging war is something we do neither with relish nor with joy. But waging war we must, with all the ferocity and all the necessary power to defend those things we hold dear.
the commitment of a Nation roused to righteous anger. Whether it takes weeks, months, or years, we will prevail.

To those who have spilled the blood of America and those who have harbored them, our message is a simple one: You can run, but you can’t hide. America will track you down, and for what you have done, you will pay. You will pay. God bless this House, and God bless America.

Mr. ROSSI of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, Tuesday, September 11, 2001, is a day that none of us in this Chamber—none of us in this country—will forget. It is a day when our nation experienced an attack unlike we have ever seen. Thousands of lives in our nation were lost and many, many more were forever changed because of the despicable and deliberate acts of terrorists. As we observe this National Day of Prayer and Remembrance for this terrible tragedy, our hearts are with all the victims and their families, and our thoughts and prayers are with those who are both left to grieve and to re-build, and hopefully find additional survivors.

We can no longer think of these terrorist attacks as something that we see on television that happen only in far away lands. The threat to our national security is evident, and our response to the attacks at the World Trade Center and the Pentagon is critical. It must be strong, it must be carefully calculated, and it must be swift.

The time has come for the United States to make a full force effort to eliminate the terrorist networks across the globe, and I urge my colleagues to support this resolution authorizing the President to use such necessary and appropriate force against those responsible for the terrorist attacks on September 11 and anyone or any country who assisted them.

This is no easy task, but our troops are ready, and our government stands united, Democrats and Republicans alike, in our resolve to end terrorism in the United States.

Yes, Tuesday was dark day for America. But, Mr. Speaker, it was not nearly as dark as the days that LBJ led us for the evil perpetrators who masterminded these attacks. The American spirit is alive and well, and our commitment to seek out and take action against those who would commit such heinous and cowardly acts is unwavering. We will not allow these terrorists to alter the kind of world that our children and grandchildren grow up in.

Mr. STEARNS. Mr. Speaker, I rise to join my colleagues in strong support of this resolution. All American’s have been reminded that freedom comes at a price. The citizens of the United States working so hard to sustain the right to remain free, engaging in major conflicts from our birth during the Revolutionary War, to the War of 1812, the Mexican War, Civil War, Spanish-American War, World War I and II, Korea, Vietnam, and finally the Gulf war.

Each conflict cost precious lives, but those men and women gave their lives so that future generations would continue to live under the blanket of freedom. We all feel the tremendous loss of life—loved ones, friends, colleagues, and those who were not just the victims, their families, and those brave souls who are risking their lives at this very moment in search and rescue operations.

My colleagues, we are about to vote on a course of action that again pits hope against terror—and—freedom against oppression. Our enemies will never know freedom, because they are punished by hate—and for that—they have already lost.

As we stand united behind our President and with our fellow Americans, I offer the following reflection: After the attack on Pearl Harbor, Japanese Admiral Yamamoto lamented that his country’s action had “awakened a sleeping giant.” My colleagues, that giant has awakened again.

For the Lord is my light and my salvation— whom shall I fear? The Lord is the stronghold of my life—of whom shall I be afraid? When evil men advance against me to devour my flesh, when my enemies and my foes attack me, they will stumble and fall.

Mr. ROYBAL-ALLARD of California. Mr. Speaker, I join my colleagues in the House and Senate in support of H.J. Res. 64, to authorize the use of our Armed Forces against those responsible for the recent terrorist attacks against the United States. Passing this resolution and sanctioning the use of our courageous armed forces is not something we do lightly, hastily, or in pursuit of vengeance. Putting the men and women of our military in harm’s way is a grave decision that should only be resorted to when no other course of action is appropriate.

This resolution is a deliberate, well-considered, and I believe proper response to the deplorable acts of terror committed against our country, our people, and indeed, the entire civilized world.

Passing this resolution demonstrates to our country and to all the nations of the world our united resolve to punish those responsible for these heinous acts, and more importantly, ensures that perpetrators of terror are not allowed to continue their campaign of violence against innocent persons both here and abroad.

Mr. Speaker, by passing this resolution we send this critical message to our military: We stand behind you as you prepare to defend our country, our people, our ideals, and the American democracy, for our citizens and the world community.

Mr. OXLEY of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I have heard this plea from my constituents in the fourth congressional district in these numbing days following the unconscionable terrorist attack on the World Trade Center and Pentagon: Find those who did this. Make them answer for their evil. Defend the ideals that our predecessors fought for, to make this a safer and more peaceful world for generations to come.

I was in this House a decade ago when we debated a resolution to support our President, George Bush, when he went to war against Saddam Hussein. I hoped never to have to speak to a military challenge of that magnitude again. But on September 11, America was attacked at home by an enemy that hides in shadows and kills without conscience.

By authorizing the use of all necessary and appropriate force against those responsible for terrorist attacks, this Congress shows that it is committed to defeating the American people stands behind our President, George W. Bush, and civilized society.

While it is not a technical declaration of war, for all practical purposes the United States is at war with those who want to harm our people, disrupt our economy, shatter our security, and destroy our democratic values. All nations in the world who profess the values of liberty, freedom, and peace over fanaticism and violence. Our response is just, and our cause will prevail.

Ms. McCOULUM of Florida. Mr. Speaker, tonight, I vote to support the use of America’s military force against the terrorist organizations that plotted to attack our peaceful Nation. This will likely be the most important vote I take as a Member of Congress. With this vote, I put my trust in our President, the men and women of our Armed Forces, and my fellow Americans. We will overcome this tremendous challenge with honor, dignity, and justice.

Mr. JONES of North Carolina. Mr. Speaker, I rise tonight with a heavy heart.

The floor we stand on here is the centerpiece of American democracy. It has been the site of weighty debates, presidential addresses, and critical votes. I have witnessed and participated in many of these since I was first elected to represent the people of North Carolina’s 3rd District in 1994. As a servant of the people, these events are all humbling.

However the vote we are poised to take today is one of my most significant votes in my congressional career—and the most important type of vote that Congress ever takes.

Today we vote to authorize the Commander-in-Chief to send our brave men and women in uniform into harm’s way.

This is not a vote to be taken lightly. We do so with righteous cause—to respond to the desperate acts of war committed against the American people and the very freedoms and ideals for which our Nation stands. And we do so with the solemn understanding that some of the men and women that we send to fight this new war may not return. They may be from districts around the country—they may be from my own.

But the action we take tonight is absolutely necessary.

Today the Nation was violated, our democracy threatened. Justice must be delivered—the victims of this tragedy deserve it and the American people demand it.

This resolution will demonstrate to the world—and most importantly those who committed these horrendous crimes—that the United States will respond. And when she does, it will be with the full weight and support of the President, this Congress, and the American people.

Let me be clear—this is not just a vote about the use of force or even terrorism. This is a vote to protect the freedoms of the people of the United States of America. I urge my colleagues to join me in that effort by supporting this important resolution.

God bless our President, God bless the men and women in uniform who will carry out this conflict, and God bless our great Nation.
Mr. BORSKI. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of H.J. Res. 64 to authorize the President to use whatever means necessary to respond to the heinous, barbaric terrorist acts of September 11. I am proud for many generations in unity with my Democratic and Republican colleagues in support of our President, our Armed Forces, our law enforcement personnel, and our entire great nation, as we seek justice for these horrible atrocities.

On September 11, we were violently attacked in an act of war. It was not a war of our choosing. Indeed, Americans are by their nature a good people, and we seek to settle our differences through peaceful means. But when we are violently attacked, we respond with tremendous resolve. This is not a war of our choosing. But we must choose today to forcefully respond to this cowardly act to ensure that it never happens again.

Ten years ago, I was proud to stand in this chamber as we debated a similar resolution to address the actions that we will authorize against Saddam Hussein. We had principled differences over the use of force, but when we finished our debate and passed the resolution, we all stood united behind our President. Because we are a strong, healthy democracy, we know when to put our differences aside for the greater good of peace, prosperity, and security.

Today we are confronted with an even greater challenge to the future of our democracy. But I believe our courage, resolve, and unity today has never been stronger. Only a week ago, we were passionately debating the budget. [Laughter.] Those issues, important as they are, now pale in comparison to the challenge before us. Today we cast aside our labels of Democrat and Republican, and we stand as one America.

The perpetrators of these heinous acts will be found, their terrorist networks will be eradicated, and justice will be served. This will not happen overnight. Every American should be prepared for a long campaign. But we will succeed. When America’s spirit is moved, it is unbreakable. It is a timeless and true American quality.

The terrorists who committed these atrocities will never understand the power of American freedom, and they will always underestimate American resolve. That is because they live in fear of a world that embraces our ideals of freedom, democracy, and equality. While terrorists plot behind closed doors to destroy human lives, compassionate and courageous Americans risk their lives to save lives—as our firefighters and other rescuers heroically demonstrated in the past few days.

The Administration authorizes today will likely result in lives lost—a reality not of our choosing but forced upon us by the events of September 11. But the eradication of terrorist networks that threaten America, and the punishment of nations that harbor these criminals, will produce the kind of results we desire. We have no options to come—not just of Americans, but of all people in the world who cherish freedom and democracy as a way of life. We must use the full might of America and its allies to create a secure world for all of us to live in.

Our nation faces a threat with one swift, despicable act of terrorism. We will never be able to return to the world that existed before September 11. But America has the tremendous resilience to heal, recover and grow stronger after great periods of tragedy. We will meet this new challenge, and rebuild a society that embraces even more vigorously the ideals of freedom and democracy.

Mr. Speaker, I am proud to support H.J. Res. 64 to give the President the unwavering support he needs to successfully execute America’s mission. Eradicating this terrorist threat is a daunting—but achievable—challenge. Americans will prevail, because their cause is just. Freedom will endure, because America is its protector.

Mr. JACKSON of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I’ve been in Congress for nearly six years. Never have I been so torn over a vote. Even though I am going to vote for this legislation, I have deep concerns and grave reservations about it.

First, it is too narrow. We need a comprehensive anti-terrorist approach. This legislation does not represent such a comprehensive strategy and war against terrorism around the world. It only pertains to the terrorism associated with the events surrounding September 11, 2001. This legislation looks backward, not forward. This legislation fails to develop a strategy to combat and prevent potential or future acts of terrorism.

Second, and paradoxically, it is too broad. The literal language of this legislation can be read as broadly as executive interpreters want it to read it, which gives the President awesome and undefined power. As written, the resolution could be interpreted, if read literally, to give the President the authority to deploy or use our armed forces domestically.

Earlier today I voted to support $40 billion in supplemental spending for a fight against terrorism and public social spending for New York’s recovery. Tonight I would have preferred to support a vote to reaffirm the authority of the President under the War Powers Act, which gives the President all the authority he currently needs to fight terrorism and protect the citizens of the United States. That would give all Americans more time—60 or 90 days—between the President and congressional leaders more about all of the issues and facts involved on September 11.

I support the President’s commitment to investigate, capture, and punish all of those responsible for this horrible and inhumane deed. This was not only an assault on our nation and our people, but an indiscriminate attack on civilian life. Thus, I also support and approve removing the sanctions and support systems of terrorists. I urge all governments to unite to investigate this crime, to prevent its recurrence, and to bring to justice those who are responsible. I support doing whatever is constitutionally lawful and necessary to isolate those nations who sponsor and harbor terrorists. But I am not voting to give the President new authority—in the words of Deputy Secretary of State Richard Armitage—to “end states who sponsor terrorism.” We need to operate within traditional constitutional constraints.

I would have preferred to have voted to reaffirm the War Powers Act because it, after 60 or 90 days, President Bush returned with a request and a rationale for new and expanded presidential authority, I felt— and would have been willing to vote to grant him that as well—but not now.

In private meetings all day yesterday, Members raised serious questions and concerns that troubled me greatly.

Some Members raised the similarity to the open-endedness of this resolution to the Tonkin Gulf Resolution. We know the consequences of the vote, which was based on insufficient information and, in that instance, we now know, deception. Senators Wayne Morse of Oregon and Ernest Gruening of Alaska voted “No” on August 7, 1964, and they are seen as wise and heroic today. I am not voting “Yes” on September 14, 2001, for an open-ended Tonkin Gulf-type Resolution. I do not want a repeat of the Johnson administration—which used it to provide dubious legal cover for an unwinnable war in Vietnam—for either a similar domestic or foreign overreach against terrorism. I’m not willing to give President Bush carte blanche authority to fight terrorism. We need to agree to fight it together within traditional constitutional boundaries.

Another Member asked, “By voting for this resolution, are we granting the President new authority to conduct extra-legal and extra-constitutional assassinations?” If we are, we are becoming like the terrorists we despise. What does killing people already willing to die really accomplish? It will only create martyrs and multiply terrorists.

We must not become like those who believe that the end justifies any means in the struggle against terrorism. That is the logic of the terrorists. We must respond to this outrage, but we must not validate this logic. We must respond to this outrage effectively by eliminating the underlying grievances that is motivating the terrorism in the first place. What we must do is affirm the principles that came under attack on September 11—respect for innocent life, the rule of law. That is how to rob the terrorists of victory.

Recently President Bush said the United States “will make no distinction between the terrorists who committed these acts and those who harbored them.” But we must make distinctions. In the words of Human Rights Watch, we must distinguish “between the guilty and the innocent; between those who commit atrocities and those who may simply share their religious beliefs, ethnicity, or national origin. People committed to justice and law and human rights must never ascend to the level of the perpetrators of such acts. That is the most important distinction of all.”

Another Member said we needed to show national unity. A vote to reaffirm the War Powers Act would have given us the national unity we need. I voted for H.J. Res. 64 to 90 days to investigate this matter more fully and see more clearly what we are actually looking at.

Another Member said she had been in Congress for 19 years, but never had been asked to make a decision and cast a vote with so little information. In light of one Senator’s breach of trust, the administration is now withholding information from Members of Congress. We are voting huge sums of money... and granting virtual unlimited authority to the President with little actual information.

Other Members expressed a concern that if we are going to conduct a “comprehensive and sustained terrorism” that eliminates terrorists and terrorism root and branch” that we must give Americans an understanding of why there are so many people in the world who hate us. We must explore and learn why people are willing to give their lives in suicidal missions; and why their supporters dance and celebrate in the streets when these terrorists inhumanely succeed to destroying American lives and our symbols of economic power and military might.

I have raised the concern that we need more time to explain to the American people that this is a new kind of protracted war. This is not the kind of war former President Bush fought in the Persian Gulf that ended in just a month. This is a war that will be fought in public places on our shores and within our borders. This is a war fought in our public buildings; in our subways, in our airports, in our train stations, in our colleges and universities, at our sporting events, and possibly with chemical and biological weapons. The War Powers Act would have allowed us at least 60 to 90 days to better understand and inform the American people about the nature of the war that today they are so anxious to fight.

I too am deeply hurt, distraught, in mourning, fearful, and angry. But we must resist the temptation to allow ourselves to become like those we today so despise. Terrorist violence must be halted, but the pain and suffering that result must be heard and addressed. Human beings become terrorists in an ocean of despair. Therefore, any comprehensive approach to ending terrorism must address the waves of pain and injustice of the ocean. The most effective anti-terrorist campaign is one that replaces the despair and hopelessness of the terrorist’s supporters with a policy that brings dignity, respect, and justice to every person, neighborhood, community, and nation in the world.

Ms. WATSON of California. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the resolution authorizing the use of force against those persons responsible for recent acts of terrorism against the United States. The resolution is balanced and seeks to ensure that the Congress will be included in the consultative process when and if U.S. troops are introduced into hostilities. I strongly believe that the resolution will continue to enjoy strong bipartisan support only if the Executive, in good faith, consults with and informs the Congress in a timely manner.

I share the reluctance of this resolution is not a carte blanche endorsement for the use of force against any suspected terrorist group anywhere in the world, but is more narrowly crafted to endorse all necessary and appropriate use of force against nations, organizations, and persons who committed or participated in the acts that occurred on September 11.

Mr. Speaker, although I support the resolution, I am mindful of the gravity and seriousness of putting U.S. troops and other governmental personnel in harms way. It is highly probable that U.S. lives will be lost as we struggle to fight the enemy. Lives will be saved as we strive to protect the American people.

I believe that the resolution is not the right tool for the job that lies ahead. It will not be an easy fight, and it will not be a short one. But it is a confrontation that we will meet head on, united by the memory of those lost and the political and freedom we hold so dearly. And we will be victorious.

Mr. Speaker, tonight we send a clear message to the world that we are prepared to respond to the forces of hate as previous generations have done before us. I am confident that the compassion and resolve that has come to define the American spirit will see us through this most trying time. I urge my colleagues to support this resolution.

Mr. MALONEY of Connecticut. Mr. Speaker, I come to the floor today to address the necessity, imposed on us by unspeakable acts of terrorism, for the United States to respond to the killing and injuring of thousands of our fellow citizens, almost all innocent civilians.

This Nation has the right and obligation to both respond to and defend itself from the vicious and malicious attacks that America and our Liberty. Those persons and/or entities that were either directly involved in or provided any assistance to the acts of September 11 pose a clear and present danger to the lives of our people and to our very national security. We will find those responsible and make certain that they, and anyone who helped them, are fully punished.

This attack on America and its people will not stand. Moreover, as we cannot rule out future attacks on U.S. soil or to American interests overseas, we must take a comprehensive approach to this challenge. Appropriately, we will utilize the first rate capabilities of our Armed Forces to ensure the personal security of each and every one of us, at home and abroad. To that end, we commit ourselves by the resolution before us, to root out terrorism wherever it is found around the world.

It will not be an easy task to defeat terrorism. It will require considerable resources and patience. There is no quick solution. I am confident, however, that the President and the Congress, working together, will find the right methods to root out terrorism. As a member of the Armed Service Committee, IAlong with my colleagues in Congress, I will work to provide our military the necessary resources to deter and defeat the threat of terrorism. I know that our fellow Americans will not stand.

There is yet considerable work to be done in the days and months ahead. I am confident that our Nation, and our Armed Forces called upon to defend all Americans, will meet the challenges that lie ahead—just as we have from Concord and Lexington through the war in the Persian Gulf. I strongly urge passage of the resolution.

Mr. COYNE. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in support of this resolution authorizing the President to use military force against the nations, organizations, and individuals involved in the September 11 terrorist attacks on the citizens of the United States.

These were reprehensible attacks against innocent men, women, and children. Anyone who was involved in planning or carrying out these attacks must be punished swiftly and severely.

Moreover, since it is logical to assume that the parties which planned and provided support for the battle that lies ahead. It will not be an easy fight, and it will not be a short one. But it is a confrontation that we will meet head on, united by the memory of those lost and the political and freedom we hold so dearly. And we will be victorious.
logistical support for Tuesday’s terrible attacks are interested in—and capable of—carrying out similar attacks in the future, it is imperative that the United States use whatever means are necessary to prevent them from doing so.

Finally, it is important to recognize that the United States has aggressively pursued legal and diplomatic measures over the last 30 years to curb terrorism—and that it is logical to conclude from this experience that such measures will not be effective enough to deal with the threat that terrorism poses today.

For these reasons, I support this resolution. I believe that the United States Government has no choice but to utilize military force to punish the organizers of the September 11 attacks and protect the people of this nation from future terrorist threats.

Mr. EVERETT. Mr. Speaker, today was one of the saddest days in the history of our beloved country. It is impossible to watch the events caused by evil unfold before our eyes without shedding tears of sorrow and great anger.

We will never forget the sorrow we collectively feel as a nation. Mr. Speaker, we will also never forget the anger and fury we feel toward those who have hurt and killed so many innocent Americans. I pledge my fortune and honor to my power to bring justice on all those who have so injured this country and its citizens as we pass this resolution.

However, today was a day of prayer and I was moved by the prayer service at the National Cathedral here in our Nation’s Capital. I was very touched by the comments of our President at that service, Mr. Speaker, and now make them a part of this RECORD as we put on the shoulders of our President a burden no one man can possibly bear without the help of God.

Mr. Speaker, the President’s words today: We are here in the middle hour of our grief. So many have suffered so great a loss, and today we express our nation’s sorrow. We come before God to pray for the missing and the dead, for all who loved them.

On Tuesday, our country was attacked with deliberate and massive cruelty. We have seen the images of fire and ashes and bent steel.

Now come the names, the list of casualties we are only beginning. They are the names of men and women who began their day at a desk or in an airport, busy with life. They are the names of people who faced death and in their last moments called home to say, be brave and I love you.

They are the names of passengers who defied their murderers and prevented the murder of others on the ground. They are the names of men and women who wore the uniform of the United States and died at their posts.

They are the names of rescuers—the ones whom we have found running up the stairs and into the fires to help others. We will read all these names. We will linger over them and learn their stories, and many Americans will weep.

To the children and parents and spouses and families and friends of the lost, we offer the deepest sympathy of the nation. And I assure you all, we will mourn, and the promise of a life to come.

This nation is a mixture, but fierce when stirred to anger. This conflict was begun on the timing and terms of others; it will end in a way and at an hour of our choosing.

Our purpose as a nation is firm and yet our wounds as a people are recent and unhealed and lead us to pray. In many of our prayers this week, there’s a searching and an honest cry. At St. Patrick’s Cathedral in N.Y., on Tuesday, a woman said, “I pray to God to give us a sign that he’s still here.”

There are prayers that help us last through the day or endure the night. There are prayers of friends and strangers that give us strength for the journey, and there are prayers that yield our will to a will greater than our own.

This world He created is of moral design. Grief and tragedy and hatred are only for a time. Goodness, remembrance and love have no end, and the Lord of life holds all who die and all who mourn.

It is said that adversity introduces us to ourselves. This is true of a nation as well. In this trial, we have been reminded and the world has seen that our fellow Americans are generous and kind, resourceful and brave.

We see our national character in rescuers working past exhaustion, in long lines of blood donors, in thousands of citizens who have asked to work and serve in any way possible. And we have seen our national character in eloquent acts of sacrifice. Inside the World Trade Center, one man who could have saved himself stayed until the end and at the side of his quadriplegic friend. A beloved priest died giving the last rites to a firefighter. Two office workers, finding a disabled stranger, carried her down 88 floors to safety.

A group of men drove through the night from Dallas to Washington to bring skin grafts for burned victims. In these acts and many others, Americans showed a deep commitment to one another and in an abiding love for our country.

Today, we feel what Franklin Roosevelt called, “the warm courage of national unity.” This is a unity of every faith and every background. This has joined together political parties and both houses of Congress. It is evident in services of prayer and candlelight vigils and American flags, which are displayed in pride and waved in defiance. Our resolve is not to be intimidated. Our resolve is not to prevail against our enemies. And this unity against terror is now extending across the world.

America is a nation full of good fortune, with so much to be grateful for, but we are not spared from suffering. In every generation, the world has produced enemies of human freedom. They have attacked America because we are freedom’s home and defender, and the commitment of our fathers is to maintain the bipartisan support for this undertaking.

We know military action alone will never defeat terrorism. Last Tuesday, we saw the consequences of raw hate. It has no logic. It has no respect for human life or dignity. It holds no promise for the future. It has no single base or leader. We can, however, begin to address some of the underlying problems that can lead to terror.

We can continue our leadership to help negotiate and lasting solutions to the world’s many conflicts, including in the Middle East. We can renew our engagement with the international community to find solutions to the global challenges of our times: the environment, weapons proliferation, disease and intolerance.

Our country is unified. We can respond effectively to the horror of September 11th.
can break the links between terrorists. We can contribute to a world that is not only secure from the threat of terrorism, but also free of the poverty and oppression that are its breeding grounds. We must exercise the political will to make this happen.

This resolution helps us begin to achieve these goals, and I urge its adoption.

Mr. STUMP. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in strong support of this resolution. Since the terrible and tragic events of Tuesday, this country and the rest of the world have witnessed the determination of the American people to come together, to rally around our President, and to transcend the tragedy that fell our great Nation. America’s anger at those who planned and perpetrated these terrorist acts is palpable. This Congress has stood as one in expressing our grief over the tragic loss of life, our pride in those who continue the rescue and recovery efforts, and our determination to ensure that those who support the use of terror are severely punished. Now, we must express our unified support for the President to take all necessary and appropriate actions to ensure that the terrorists and their supporters do not win in their effort to undermine our way of life.

Mr. Speaker, the President has been forceful and direct—freedom and democracy are under attack by a determined enemy. This battle will take time and resolve, he stated, but we will win. In our effort to root out the evil that is terrorism, we will once again call upon the dedicated men and women who voluntarily serve our country. It is their greatness that gives us confidence in our ultimate victory.

The fight against terrorism will be a long and difficult campaign. It requires a serious commitment. But the President must know that the Congress supports him by providing him with the tools he needs to prosecute this battle. The Congress has already agreed to provide significant additional funds for the war on terrorism. Now, in this decisive moment, we must stand behind our troops and send a clear signal to our enemies that the President’s actions have our unanimous support.

Passage of this resolution will send that signal.

Mr. Speaker, I urge my colleagues to support this resolution, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. BALDACCI. Mr. Speaker, America was changed forever on Tuesday morning. Every one of us has been deeply affected by the terror attack on our Nation. Virtually all of us know someone or know of someone who were directly impacted. Yesterday, I visited the Pentagon and saw first-hand the destruction that was inflicted on that building and its occupants. I am not able to find words to adequately convey just how chilling a scene it was, and I will never forget those grisly images that the President’s actions have our unanimous support.

Law enforcement officials are moving swiftly to identify those who were responsible for this heinous crime. Soon it will be clear who committed these unspeakable acts, and those who supported and protected them. And once it is clear the United States will respond.

We respond not simply out of revenge. We act because war has been declared upon America. We act because our world must be rid of terrorists who think nothing of destroying innocent lives. We act in the name of thousands of innocent victims.

This was not just an attack on four planes, or two buildings, or one nation. Rather, it was an attack on democracy and freedom around the globe. America and our allies will rise to the occasion and fight this scourge just as we have risen to defeat past threats to civilization and democracy.

To that end, today I will vote to authorize President Bush to use all necessary and appropriate force to respond to the terror attacks on our nation. This resolution conveys the resolve of the Congress and the American people that those responsible for this heinous crime will be identified and punished.

Mr. COLLINS. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of President George W. Bush, by agreeing to grant him the authorization to use the resources of the United States to eradicate the evil forces that perpetuate terrorism, through the power he holds as our Commander in Chief.

The barbaric, heinous attacks launched against the civilian and military population of this great nation on September 11, 2001 must not, and will not be tolerated, nor go unpunished.

I ask the people of this great nation, and our allies around the world, to stand with President Bush and support him with their voices, their continued heroic deeds and volunteerism, and most importantly, with their prayers.

I ask the people of this Nation to pray for forgiveness for the immorality in this country that has become so widespread and which has contributed to the fragmentation of religious thought.

I ask the people of this nation to thank God for the many blessings which have been so generously bestowed upon this nation.

God be with those who have paid the ultimate price for liberty and freedom, and with those who will do so in the future in the effort to restore security and peace for all of us.

God bless this great land, the United States of America.

Mr. RYAN of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of this resolution. We must ensure that our Commander in Chief can bring the full power of the United States Armed Forces to bear against the villains who struck our nation so cruelly the morning of September 11th. We act not out of wrath, but with the solemn realization that evil must not go unchecked, that our security must be defended, and that our liberty must be upheld.

We stand together tonight united in our resolve to fight the scourge of terrorism and protect our nation and its people. We understand that it will not be easy and that it will require sustained action, commitment, and vigilance. We must steel ourselves for the months ahead and bear in mind the words inscribed on the base of the Marine War Memorial: "In the Field of Battle, We Owe Each Other the Duty of Common Virtue." They remind us of the character and courage of those who serve in our Armed Forces, and I think they also apply to all who put their own lives on the line in an effort to save lives during and after Tuesday’s terrible attacks. Now is the time for valor for all Americans.

Mr. STARK. Mr. Speaker, in the aftermath of the recent terrorist attacks on the United States, Americans have responded to the cries of their fellow citizens. From the many emergency personnel who arrived moments after the first impact, to the volunteers from all over the country arriving to help or donate blood, to the United States Congress, who has appropriated $40 billion help pay for recovery efforts, we have responded. Now it is time to plan the next part of our response: how to punish the perpetrators of this attack and how we will protect ourselves in the future.

Our country has come together to get through this time of great tragedy. Members on both sides of the aisle have appropriately put aside partisan politics and present a unified front against terrorism.

Most Americans feel that we should strike back at the individuals, groups, or nations that were involved in these atrocities. I, too, think we should respond to this heinous attack, bring those involved to justice, and put an end to global terrorism. That said, however, I do not believe—even in times of extreme crisis—that the Congress should turn over our constitutional responsibilities to the President. The resolution we are debating today, I fear, begins to do just that.

When writing the Constitution, our Founding Fathers created a balance of powers between the three branches of government to prevent one branch from inappropriately dominating another. Although the Constitution empowers the President as Commander in Chief, it gives the Congress the sole power of declaring war. This resolution gives the President the power to conduct a war without reporting to or consulting with Congress. Frankly stated, it cedes congressional authority to the President.

I have real reservations about the resolution we are considering today. It should contain explicit language ensuring that the President reports to Congress and consults with us in planning and executing a military response. But it does not.

That being said, this resolution is better than earlier versions that were considered. It now makes clear that nothing supersedes the War Powers Act, which requires the President to report and consult with Congress.

Given those facts, I will support the resolution before us today. However, I will continue to insist that the President make Congress an integral part of our nation’s response to these attacks. To do otherwise goes against the best interest of the people we represent and the democracy we seek to protect.

Mr. GALLEGLY. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of this resolution granting authority to the President to use force to respond to the attack on the United States on September 11, 2001.

Our country was the target of an unprompted, cowardly and vicious attack on Tuesday morning. This act of war committed against our people must not go unanswered. Our Constitution grants the President to use authority to prevent and deter any aggression against our country. It is the Constitution and the President we must defend. Our job is to conduct a war in a way aligned with our constitutional responsibilities to the President.

We believe that the President must have the power to respond to our nation’s enemies. It is our belief that we must support this resolution to ensure our nation’s security.

The United States will respond. This is a resolutio
This must be seen as a monstrous attack aimed at the security and way of life of freedom-loving people throughout the world.

Mr. Speaker, words cannot adequately describe my feelings or the feelings of Americans with regard to the attack on New York and Washington. However, I know that through the sadness and anger will grow an unbending determination not to be intimidated by the forces of terror and death. America is a great and a good country. We are also now a united people with a common purpose—to seek out and crush the terrorists and their supporters. I urge support for this resolution, for our President and for the people of the United States.

Ms. BALDWIN. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in support of this resolution. Our nation was viciously attacked on Tuesday, September 11, 2001, leaving children without fathers and mothers, parents mourning their missing children, husbands and wives experiencing terrible emptiness and loss. All Americans feel the horror, shock, and fear, and anger. The country has been attacked, and as Commander-in-Chief, the President has the power to act to defend the United States of America. Congress recognized this nearly thirty years ago in the War Powers Resolution.

Yet by recognizing the authority our President already possesses under the War Power Resolution, we send a strong statement of national unity. By approving this resolution today, we stand united, as one nation, stating clearly to the perpetrators of this crime, and those who would attack our country in the future, that we will protect our citizens and ensure the guilty are punished.

The horrible crisis is also an opportunity. It is an opportunity for the United States to once again demonstrate to the world the sources of its strength and greatness. I am not speaking of our military might, although it is powerful. We will demonstrate our greatness by the way we seek justice and the way we promote freedom. We will determine with certainty who is culpable for these crimes and those who aided them, rather than let our rage lash out indiscriminately.

Community leaders in my district have produced a statement expressing their outrage and sorrow. Wisely they noted that the victims of this attack reflect the diversity of America. They wrote in fact that: “the backgrounds of this attack reflect the diversity of America. The victims are representative of the America. The struggle ahead may be a long one. Ultimately, we will triumph. We will preserve freedom for future generations. We will guarantee hope remains for all mankind. My colleagues please join me in voting for this resolution. God bless America.”

Mr. MARKEY. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the resolution. In his Funeral Oration, the great Athenian leader Pericles said “heroes have the whole earth for their tomb; and in lands far from their own, where the column with its epitaph declares it, there is enshrined in every breast a record written with no tablet to preserve it, except that of the heart.”

The terrible events of the last few days already have produced many heroes, from the firemen and the police officers who gave their lives to rescue others, to the airline passengers who appear to have sacrificed themselves to save their fellow citizens. And like the heroes of ancient times, our heroes also have the whole earth for their tomb; foreshadowed in every breast a record written with no tablet to preserve it, except that of the heart.

And, I feel confident that the American people will stand with those heroes day in and day out until our enemies have been vanquished. I am overwhelmed with an enormous sense of pride and patriotism at the selflessness that so many Americans have shown in recent days in supporting the brave public safety workers and in consoling the bereaved. That indefatigable spirit will sustain us in any battle against any evil.

In closing, Mr. Speaker, I ask my colleagues to remember the words of our President Dwight D. Eisenhower in his Second Inaugural Address to the nation as we to pass this important resolution:

“Before all else, we seek, upon our common highway, the blessings of Almighty God. And the hopes in our hearts fashion the deepest prayers of our whole people. May we pursue the right—without self-righteousness. May we know unity—without conformity. May we grow in strength—without pride in self. May we, in all our dealings with all the peoples of the earth, ever speak truth and serve justice. And so shall America—in the sight of all men of good will—prove true to the honorable purposes that bind and rule us as a people in all this time of trial through which we pass.

May God bless this mighty nation and shed his grace and blessings upon the men and women of America’s armed forces.

Mr. MARKEY. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the resolution. In his Second Inaugural Address, the great Athenian leader Pericles said “heroes have the whole earth for their tomb; and in lands far from their own, where the column with its epitaph declares it, there is enshrined in every breast a record written with no tablet to preserve it, except that of the heart.”

The terrible events of the last few days already have produced many heroes, from the firemen and the police officers who gave their lives to rescue others, to the airline passengers who appear to have sacrificed themselves to save their fellow citizens. And like the heroes of ancient times, our heroes also have the whole earth for their tomb; for enshrined in every breast is a record of their deeds that we will carry forever with us.

We will never forget what happened on September 11, 2001. And we must resolve ourselves that these lives of those who perished in this tragedy will not have been sacrificed in vain—that out of their deaths will arise a new commitment to preserve and defend our American freedom.

We must now go about the grim task of identifying the monsters responsible for this atrocity and those who may be harboring them; assuring that they pay a very heavy price for their actions.

In closing, Mr. Speaker, I ask my colleagues to remember the words of our President Dwight D. Eisenhower in his Second Inaugural Address to the nation as we to pass this important resolution:

“Before all else, we seek, upon our common highway, the blessings of Almighty God. And the hopes in our hearts fashion the deepest prayers of our whole people. May we pursue the right—without self-righteousness. May we know unity—without conformity. May we grow in strength—without pride in self. May we, in all our dealings with all the peoples of the earth, ever speak truth and serve justice. And so shall America—in the sight of all men of good will—prove true to the honorable purposes that bind and rule us as a people in all this time of trial through which we pass.”
pay dearly for the crimes they have committed against humanity.

The resolution before us provides the President with a specific authorization, consistent with the War Powers Resolution, to use force against those responsible for the September 11th terrorist attack.

I do not view this as an open-ended authorization for this or any future President to wage war on any one at any time. It is, instead, in the words of the resolution, an authority to use force against "those nations, organizations, or persons he determines planned, authorized, committed, or aided the terrorist attacks that occurred on September 11, 2001, or harbored such organizations or persons, in order to prevent any future acts of international terrorism against the United States by such nations, organizations or persons."

All Americans stand behind our President, his advisers, and the brave men and women of our Armed Forces who will be asked to carry out this mission. Our thoughts and prayers will be with them in the days and months ahead.

We know their task will not be easy. But they should go forward armed with the knowledge that they have the support of all Americans—as expressed by the unanimous vote of their elected representatives.

That is what this resolution signifies, and I urge its adoption.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Speaker, I want to start by expressing my sorrow and outrage at Tuesday's cowardly attack. Tuesday's savagery tore our national fabric, but the tragedy also united the Nation. Our immediate priorities are treating survivors, supporting victims' families, restoring essential services, protecting our civil liberties, healing the national psyche and finding and judging anyone who participated in the terrorist attacks in the horridous act. We all share these imperatives and will do all that we can to help. We all support the President in these endeavors. This is the indomitable strength of our country.

But our eyes also turn to the future with three critical questions, each of which calls for a measured response. First, how can we strengthen our intelligence and law enforcement? Second, how can we better collect intelligence, tighten security and to preempt their plots before they begin. We have probably neglected this aspect of intelligence gathering, preferring instead to rely on the latest technology. This must change.

But as we take bold steps to ensure our security, we must be equally vigilant to protect our liberties. On Tuesday, one TV network commentator, during an interview, flatly asked if our civil liberties should be cut back for certain groups in this country. There is always tension between public safety and liberty, a tension that we have tested each time we faced a new threat.

Americans are proud of our commitment to protecting citizens from foreign and domestic threats without abandoning the Constitution's guarantee of civil liberties. There has been backsliding, to be sure, such as the relocation of innocent Japanese-American families in the postPearl Harbor panic. While the Supreme Court later upheld the constitutionality of that action in the Korematsu v. United States case, most scholars regard it as one of the modern Court's most shameful decisions. Eventually, the U.S. Government apologized to the surviving victims and provided compensation. Thus, history demonstrates that we must periodically review the delicate balance between our national security and our civil liberties, and that when the balance is readjusted it should be done cautiously, with great care and with an eye beyond today's headlines. Just as terrorism can destroy lives and property, so can it destroy us from within, causing us to turn our back on our most cherished freedoms.

PREVENTING SCAGEGOATING

Times of great stress also spawn scapegoating. These are very stressful times for America, and signs of scapegoating have already surfaced. The twenty-first century has taught us the terrible consequences of directing hostility toward an entire group of people. America has a long history of struggling to overcome discrimination simply on the basis of religion, ethnicity, and race. Now, we must guard against turning diffuse feelings of anger against a whole group of Americans such as Muslims or Arabs, if a handful of their members are accused of Tuesday's murders. Already, shops and businesses owned by Americans of Arab descent—or I emphasize "Americans"—have been trashed and in some cases burned. Individuals have been attacked. These hate crimes must be stopped immediately. Federal, state and local officials should use their powers of persuasion and publicity to stop it and, if necessary, vigorously enforce every applicable law. I will ask the authorities in Detroit to convene a city-wide conference to address this danger and to explain the need for New York's leadership. I have also introduced a sense of the Congress resolution condemning these hate crimes.

PREVENTING SCAPEGOATING

There is one point that I should not have to make. Regrettably it appears that I do. If there ever were a time when all Americans should show a spirit of cooperation, collaboration, and mutual concern surely this tragedy is it. Yet there are credible reports of price gouging, profiteering, and other despicable efforts to exploit the situation. Fuel prices have soared in parts of the Midwest have jumped alarmingly. The prices of New York's rivals to war grocers and other merchants against raising prices as customers seek to stock up in the face of uncertainty. This selfish behavior is intolerable. I am calling on the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission and the Federal Trade Commission to immediately establish a joint task force to police and pursue any abrupt price hikes in energy fuels.

I also commend my state's Attorney General, Jennifer Granholm, for taking legal action against nine Michigan gas stations accused of price gouging. In notice of intended action served yesterday and today, Granholm accuses each station of charging prices for gas that are "grossly in excess" of the market-based price at which gasoline would normally be sold. The Michigan Consumer Protection Act expressly prohibits such sales practices as unfair and unconscionable under the law. Next, I will turn to the specific language of this resolution.
force. Not only does Congress have the constitutional duty to oversee the President’s use of our men and women in uniform, if has every expectation of revisiting the President’s need for the use of our Armed Forces during his pursuit of the terrorists. Should Congress later determine that the President needs more or less authority than he has been given, we will act accordingly.

Finally, this resolution implicitly requires that the President comply with section 4(a) of the War Powers Resolution. That section requires the President to report to Congress whenever U.S. Armed Forces are introduced into hostilities, into foreign territories while equipped for combat, or into foreign territories to substantially enlarge an existing force. These reports will allow Congress to ensure that the needs of the President and the Armed Forces are being met during this on-going crisis.

Mr. Speaker, let us grieve for the victims. Let us restore the destruction. But let us also rededicate ourselves to preserving those very principles that have been the ultimate source of America’s strength.

Ms. KILPATRICK. Mr. Speaker, this week my emotions have run the gamut. On one hand I have seen my son take a step closer to becoming the youngest mayor in the history of Detroit. Yet, my joy has been destroyed by the hands that inflicted the worst attack against the United States since Pearl Harbor. I share the pain of Tuesday’s attack with millions of Americans who have witnessed the subsequent carnage. My emotions cry out for retribution; yet my head tells me that while we must be resolute, we must also be deliberate and circumspect.

For now, as nation, we stand at the edge of the abyss. We are poised to make the leap that our nation has rarely been called on to make; yet when called to do so. Today, our determination to prevail over terrorism must be resolute and undeterred. It is with a heavy heart that I stand before the American people prepared to wage war against innocent men, women and children. There is no place to hide from our enemies.

I applaud the administration’s efforts to assemble an international coalition to fight terrorism. With our allies and other nations concerned about this scourge, we have a real opportunity to make the world safer for freedom and democracy.

Ms. SANCHEZ. Mr. Speaker, I will miss the rollcall vote on H.J. Res. 64, which will formally authorize the use of military force against the perpetrators of the terrorist attacks which occurred on September 11, 2001.

I have scheduled very important meetings in California over the weekend and Monday with city council district employers and employees to discuss the defense budget and other matters of national security. These meetings have been scheduled for some time, and cannot be easily reconfigured. Therefore, during the vote I will be unable to be present in the House. Last night both bodies of Congress passed a supplemental aid package to assist the President in providing necessary aid and support in the wake of these tragedies. Now, Congress should give the President the authority to find and punish those responsible for these crimes against humanity.

If the goal of these attacks was to demoralize or scare America and other peace loving nations, let me be clear in saying that these terrorists failed their mission. I say to them, your ungodly actions will be punished. We are a strong and united America.

The deplorable events that occurred on the morning of Tuesday, September 11, 2001, were undeniably an act of war. There are no other way to classify the murder of defenseless, innocent civilians. I urge my colleagues to join me in supporting this resolution, giving the President our support to reinforce that the use of terror as a weapon will never be tolerated.

Mr. Speaker, let us grieve for the victims. Let us restore the destruction. But let us also rededicate ourselves to preserving those very principles that have been the ultimate source of America’s strength.

Mr. Speaker, we must do whatever it takes, including the use of military force, to track down bin Laden and destroy his organization. But this isn’t just about bin Laden. There are other radical groups that engage in international terrorism, including Hezbollah, Hamas, and Islamic Jihad. To win the war against terrorism, we must eliminate the entire infrastructure that sustains these organizations.

This will involve getting tough with governments that aid and harbor terrorists. Syria allows Hezbollah to operate freely in Southern Lebanon. Iran recently hosted a terrorist “summit,” and routinely provides arms and other assistance to Hezbollah and other radical groups. Bin Laden is a “guest” of the Taliban regime in Afghanistan. The suicide bombers of Islamic Jihad and Hamas are nurtured by the Palestinian Authority.

The time has come for these and other governments to make a fundamental choice: Will they continue to support those responsible for taking the lives of thousands of innocent men, women and children? Or will they realize the error of their ways and end their financing, facilitating and harboring of terrorists and their organizational infrastructure, and their state-sponsored incitement of terrorist acts? For if they choose to continue their present course they are not states of concern, they are our enemies.

The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the joint resolution.

The joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, and was read the third time.

N (b) SENSE OF CONGRESS.—It is the sense of Congress that, in addition to complying with subsequent reporting and consultation requirements under applicable provisions of law, including sections 3 and 4 of the War Powers Resolution.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. Tierney) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. TIERNEY. Mr. Speaker, I join all of our colleagues and all Americans in our sorrow for Tuesday’s victims and in our outrage for the despicable acts of cowardice which have so changed our lives. Tonight, we show our unity; and by so doing we serve notice that we, as a Nation, are resolved to hold accountable those responsible for Tuesday’s terrorism.

As we go forward, I do not think this Congress wants to purposely abdicate its constitutional obligations and responsibilities. It seems unlikely that this Congress would knowingly deny itself full information that may well be necessary in the future in order to intelligently carry out its work with the President in meeting their shared responsibilities in the area of national security. Yet if we pass the resolution tonight, without first adding the language of this motion to recommit, I am concerned that that is precisely what might occur.

As written, the joint resolution refers to the War Powers Resolution but could arguably be read not to require more than periodic reports to Congress, if any reports at all. Even the periodic reports could mean at least 6-month intervals could pass without adequate knowledge by which Congress could carry out its responsibilities.

Moreover, Mr. Speaker, successive executives have historically challenged the constitutionality of the War Powers Resolution. By passing this motion to recommit, we can cure that ambiguity and join the record.

In 1991, then President George H. W. Bush asked Congress to authorize his use of force, and he signed a joint resolution that included a requirement that the President submit to Congress at least once every 60 days a summary on the status of his efforts.

There is no reason why this Congress should ask for less as we join with this President, and no reason why in the spirit of unity, and consistent with the Constitution and the precedent set by his own father, that this President would not sign a resolution containing similar language.

So I move now to recommit the joint resolution to the Committee on International Relations with instructions to report the same back to the House forthwith in its amended form.

This is a straightforward and a simple amendment, Mr. Speaker. It will not delay our action here tonight. It continues to unite us in support of the President’s existing authority to act to prevent future acts of terrorism and to locate and deal appropriately with those responsible for the tragic events of September 11. But it does clarify that the President report the status of his efforts to carry out this resolution. It does express our sense that as parties with a shared constitutional responsibility, the President comply with the statutory authority by consulting regularly with Congress and reporting every 60 days.

Whenever there exists a national emergency created by attack upon the United States, the Constitution empowers the President, as Commander in Chief, to introduce United States Armed Forces into hostilities or into situations where imminent involvement in hostilities is clearly indicated by the circumstances.

This joint resolution reaffirms that power.

Congress and the American people want the President to be able to act to prevent future acts of terrorism; and so it is no surprise that the Constitution allows for such authority and no surprise that Congress acts to restate it tonight.

We should remember that national security is a shared responsibility. Mr. Speaker, requiring joint efforts and mutual respect by Congress and the President. Congress is a co-equal branch of government, specifically empowered by the Constitution, with the power to declare war and to make all laws which will be necessary and proper for the carrying into execution of that power.

So while we specifically have not declared war tonight, we do make a law by which the President may engage United States Armed Forces in action against others.

The responsibilities of Congress. I believe, Mr. Speaker, obligate us to remain informed and to have consultation with the President concerning any action under this resolution. Our continued ability to act in concert as co-equal branches of government demands no less, and our obligation to American citizens everywhere demands at least that much.

We want to act in unison and we need the President’s cooperation to do that. As a matter of mutual respect and as a sign of unity, as well as an act of constitutional statutory compliance, Mr. Speaker, I ask that we all vote to recommit and have it come back forthwith as amended.

Mr. HYDE. Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to the motion of the gentleman from Massachusetts to recommit the pending joint resolution.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. HYDE. Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to the motion of the President from Massachusetts to recommit the pending joint resolution.

This is illogical because the whole point of the joint resolution we are considering this evening is to clear away legal underbrush that might otherwise interfere with the ability of our President to respond to the treacherous attack on our Nation that took place 3 days ago. Most importantly, we are stripping away the restrictions of the War Powers Resolution.

It hardly makes sense to reimpose on the President the restrictions of the War Powers Resolution, if our larger purpose is to make it easier for the President to respond to terrorism.

In any other case, I might understand and sympathize with the interest of the gentleman in keeping the President on a short leash as he goes about exercising the authority we give him tonight. But this is not any other case. This is a situation in which our Nation has been attacked by a sinister enemy, and thousands of our fellow citizens have been killed.

If, for one, do not want to restrain our President as he goes about responding to this heinous attack. Many have compared the attack on Tuesday on our Nation to Pearl Harbor. After Pearl Harbor Congress declared war on Japan. We did not declare war subject to the requirement that President Roosevelt consult with Congress before sending our Armed Forces into action and periodically submit reports to Congress on how he was dealing with Japan.

More Americans died on Tuesday than died at Pearl Harbor. Congress should not restrain the response of President Bush to this act of aggression any more than President Roosevelt was restrained in his conduct of World War II.

I urge my colleagues to defeat the motion to recommit.

Mr. Speaker, I arise in opposition to the gentleman’s motion to recommit the pending joint resolution.

If adopted, the motion would seek to reimpose on the President the restrictions of the War Powers Resolution with regard to consultation with Congress and will impose new reporting requirements that go well beyond those contained in the War Powers Resolution.

This is illogical because the whole point of the joint resolution we are considering this evening is to clear away legal underbrush that might otherwise interfere with the ability of our President to respond to the treacherous attack on our Nation that took place three days ago. Most importantly, we are stripping away the restrictions of the War Powers Resolution.

This motion makes no sense to reimpose on the President the restrictions of the War Powers Resolution if our larger objective is to make it easier for the President to respond to terrorism.

In any other case I might understand and sympathize with the gentleman’s interest in keeping the President on a short leash as he goes about exercising the authority we give him tonight. But this is not any other case; this is a situation in which our nation has been attacked by a sinister enemy and thousands of our fellow citizens have been killed.

I urge my colleagues to defeat the motion to recommit.

Mr. HYDE. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground that a quorum appeared to have it.

Mr. PETRI. Mr. Speaker, on rollcall No. 342 I was unavoidably detained. Had I been present, I would have voted "yea."

The SPEAKER. Pursuant to the order of the House of earlier today, Senate Joint Resolution 23 is passed.

Without objection, a motion to reconsider Senate Joint Resolution 23 is laid on the table, and House Joint Resolution 64 is laid on the table.

There was no objection.

Mr. PETRI. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw it.

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. Momentarily I withdraw it, if the Speaker asks me to. You are the Speaker.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair is asking you to momentarily withdraw it.

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. I have got that.

Mr. Speaker, I hope that we can pass this resolution by unanimous consent.

Mr. SAWYER. Mr. Speaker, continuing to reserve the right to object, I yield further to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. BARTON).

Mr. BARTON of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I hope we can pass this resolution by unanimous consent.

discharged from further consideration of the resolution (H. Res. 238) condemning any price gouging with respect to motor fuels during the hours and days after the terrorist acts of September 11, 2001, and ask for its immediate consideration in the House.

The Clerk read the title of the resolution.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

Mr. SAWYER. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I do not intend to object, but yield to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. BARTON) to explain his request.

Mr. BARTON of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, we also want to thank the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. DINGELL), the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. BUSH) and all the members of the minority party for working with the majority on this resolution.

Mr. Speaker, this resolution puts the House on record in condemning any acts of price gouging in gasoline or other motor fuels occurring after Tuesday’s tragic events. Since Tuesday, there have been widespread media reports about gas stations in some parts of the country jacking up gas prices to as much as $6 a gallon, more than a 300 percent increase.

While America sat stunned and friends and relatives wondered about the well-being of their loved ones, while parts of the country struggled to evacuate government buildings and tourist attractions, our Nation’s emergency response crews mobilized, some vendors were trying to line their own pockets. If this activity is not illegal, it is certainly disgraceful.

This resolution, on a bipartisan fashion, condemns wherever it exists. Although prices may have returned to normal, and in most cases prices never escalated, the fact is, the potential remains for consumer abuse. This type of behavior undermines consumer confidence and contributes to public uncertainty during times of crisis, and must not be tolerated.

This resolution calls on State and Federal agencies to investigate allegations of price gouging and to prosecute to the fullest extent of the law any violation of the law. There has been no disruption in our Nation’s fuel supply. Production is up, stocks are full, and distribution is operating at normal levels. There is no reason, I repeat, there is no reason that gas stations and other retailers will not get through this crisis intact, and America will be stronger than ever.

Tuesday, September 11, was a day of decision. International terrorists decided to test America’s will, and Americans decide that their will will not be broken, and for all. This is not a time to let deceptive gasoline dealers double-deal the American people.

Whereas price gouging is detrimental to consumer confidence and the economy of the United States, and was particularly detrimental during the hours and days after the terrorist acts of September 11, 2001: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the House of Representatives—

(1) condemns any price gouging with respect to motor fuels during the hours and days after the terrorist acts of September 11, 2001; and

(2) urges the appropriate Federal and State agencies to investigate any incidents of price gouging with respect to motor fuels during the hours and days after the terrorist acts of September 11, 2001, and to prosecute any violations of law discovered as a result of the investigations.

The resolution was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

PRESERVING VIABILITY OF UNITED STATES AIR TRANSPORTATION SYSTEM

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure and the Committee on Ways and Means be discharged from further consideration of the bill (H.R. 2891) to preserve the continued viability of the United States air transportation system, and ask for its immediate consideration in the House.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Alaska?

Mr. OBERSTAR. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I yield to the gentleman from Alaska (Mr. YOUNG), the chairman of the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure for a brief explanation of the pending legislation.

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. Mr. Speaker, I thank my good friend, the ranking member on the committee, for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, on September 11, 2001, the FAA grounded every air carrier in this country within a 2-hour period. This is absolutely necessary for the safety and protection of our country and our people. Remember, September 11, this tragic incident, but the aviation industry immediately and voluntarily obeyed the order, without any resistance or debate. As private industries, they put the welfare of the American people above their own profit and their own welfare.

Unfortunately, we are now facing a serious crisis that may result in a severe reduction in our air transportation system.

We will be, in the very near future, facing layoffs of the airline industry, reductions in flights. And those in Texas will not fly; may you walk and may you die in the desert. There will be reduced capacity and other significant effects, because the air industry in this Nation is one of the most important parts of our commercial fleet.

The ripple effect on our economy will be enormous. We are an economy built on the ability to move goods and people at a reasonable cost. The purpose of H.R. 2891 is to keep our U.S. air transportation system alive and able to serve its important functions for our country, because we shut down the industry.

The bill will provide an immediate ability to the President to provide loans and other assistance to U.S. air carriers, and also to compensate those carriers who can document direct losses because of the actions of our government to protect our national security. This authority would only be for 6 months. For 6 months, ride your horses. It is to provide short-term assistance. Any claim for losses has to be documented and proven. The current crisis requires this action be taken as quickly as possible to preserve not only the financial viability of the airlines, but also to protect the general public welfare.

May I suggest, those that may object to this, understand one thing: rail, road, ship and air. I am the chairman of the Committee on Transportation, and if my colleagues decide not to support this bill, then my colleagues suffer the facts, because my colleagues will not be able to fly. And I said, ride your horses, paddle your canoes, and go where you think you may go. But the airline industry, and I am the chairman of this committee, is in serious trouble. Not because of today, necessarily, not because of the past, but because this tragedy was not their doing. And to have someone object to this means that they say no longer is air transportation important. And let me tell my colleagues, those that want to fly, fly; but do not do it just with wings from the airplanes, fly with yourself. Try flapping your arms; you are not going to get there. You are not going to get there. And that includes the gentleman from Florida (Mr. YOUNG).

My colleagues have to understand what I am saying. That is not about corporations, it is not about Social Security, it is not about the financial institution about the economy of this country. I studied this, and the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. OBERSTAR) studied it in his time.

Mr. OBERSTAR. Mr. Speaker, further to the objection. The events of Tuesday, as the chairman has already expressed, have thrown the airline industry, as the first line of target of terrorism, into an absolute tailspin. The industry has been shut down. It has no revenue streaming in. It has costs going out. It has to pay its pilots, its flight attendants, its mechanics, baggage handlers, and other personnel. They are under contract to do so. They have no revenue coming in. When air travel does resume, two revenue streams have already been denied the airlines: mail and cargo aboard passenger aircraft. Airlines are collectively losing some $340 million to $400 million a day. They have already lost over $1 billion, and over this weekend will accumulate losses of up to $5 billion. The industry could be in complete financial liquidation within a week or two.

What we have proposed in this legislation is an authorization from, listen to the language, from funds made available in subsequent acts. This is not money coming out of the appropriation we approved earlier in the day. It will have to be approved in subsequent acts, and as the chairman has already said, the airlines will have to submit specific showing of losses to the President of the United States, resulting from events that occurred on the 11th of September, and subsequently, and will have to demonstrate that their losses also resulted from the ground stop on aviation service ordered by the Secretary of Transportation.

The reach of this disaster is nationwide, and this is a $600 billion sector of our national economy. It underpins all the rest of the national economy. It gives us the greatest mobility in the world. Two-thirds of all the world’s air travel occurs in the United States’ airspace. Airlines today cannot get access to the lines of credit that they have lines of credit at financial institutions because the draw and the demand on those financial institutions is so great that they are reluctant to release the dollars available to them in lines of credit.

Secondly, financial institutions have put all the airlines on credit watch. Third, their insurance, their liability insurance, has doubled overnight, and they carry insurance against such tragedies.

Fourth, when the terrorists struck, airlines had $35 billion in aircraft and aircraft engine orders, positioned with Boeing, Pratt & Whitney, and GE. They are going to cancel those orders and the effect is going to ripple throughout the whole national economy, with layoffs from the East Coast to the West Coast and from the north and to the south.

What we are proposing to do tonight is to get an authorization in place so that when financial markets open on Monday, airline stocks do not tank and airlines do not go under and they shut down forever. That is what this is about.

Yes, it is on short notice; no, we did not go through the hearing process. We did not have time. We consulted with all that we could in the very short period of time. We are facing an airline crisis and the airlines need some recognition that Congress will act to prevent a financial liquidation of the airline industry.

Mr. Speaker, further reserving the right to object, I yield to the gentleman from Hawaii (Mr. ABERCROMBIE).

Mr. ABERCROMBIE. Mr. Speaker, I say to my colleagues, please, because I know there is some question about objection. I am pleading with my colleagues, I am making a plea to my colleagues, one Member to another. Every one of my colleagues know me here, some longer than others. Every one of us are colleagues here. Every one of us understands that if another Member asks something of someone, that something is fundamental to the very well-being of the respondents. Please give the benefit of the doubt.

That is what this is about tonight. I realize, as both the chairman and as the ranking member have made clear, I am sure there are a myriad of difficulties associated with this proposition, but there is good and sufficient time subsequent to tonight to deal with all of those. I am sure the chairman would agree and that the ranking member would agree.

I am here to tell Members that the State of Hawaii is at risk of bankruptcy if there is not confidence in the people of this country being able to fly. I am not trying to deal with hyperbole, I am not trying to deal in rhetorical flights, I am saying the basic, fundamental, fiscal facts of life for my State.

I am pleading with the gentleman. Surely none of us are sufficiently filled with wisdom to understand the ramifications of every nuance of this legislation, but we have to have enough confidence and trust in one another to give ourselves the opportunity to come to grips with these various problems, including, Mr. Speaker, the most fundamental one.

What terrorists seek to do is not necessarily to kill people. If that happens, from their point of view, well and good. But they seek to instill fear and discord and anxiety and loss of confidence. That is what this is all about. We cannot succumb to that or they win.

There is not a person in here, Mr. Speaker, Tuesday, that has cast a vote with which they were completely at ease. I do not believe that a single Member here has been completely at ease, or maybe even mostly at ease with every vote.

But have with any Member who is thinking of objecting tonight, please do not do it. Please give us the opportunity to act as colleagues. Please do not put at risk millions of jobs, not tens of thousands, millions of jobs. Do not forget that most of the foodstuffs in this country travel by air. The exports from the State, it is not just a road, it is in the air.

So we must not take a chance that the legislation that has been crafted and the money associated with it will be dealt with anything other than in the best interest of the industry in which the greatest possible care will be taken when it comes to the floor after conference.

Mr. OBERSTAR. Further reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from New York (Mr. LA FalCHe).

Mr. LA FalCHe. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding to me.

Yesterday I stood up within the Democratic Caucus and I said, “It is going to be necessary, in my judgment, to continue the importance of the airplane industry of the United States.” I said that I believe that our financial institution and our regulators stand ready to use all the powers that they have under law to do that.

I was a bit dumbfounded today when, in the caucus at approximately 4:30, the Democratic Caucus, I found out for the first time that we might be considering a bill that was intended or that we consider a bill authorizing up to $15 billion, $12.5 billion in loans or loan guarantees, and $2.5 billion for compensation, grants for direct losses.

I expressed some concerns in our caucus about that, rather strong concerns. I went back to my office, and I discussed it with my staff. My staff said, this is already being reported in The Washington Post. It is a virtual certainty that we are going to consider a bill tonight that the President already has the authority to do, in my judgment, what we are doing in this bill. I suppose Members could argue that, but we have always interpreted it broadly. Okay. That is what we will do.

But there is another issue. I have been concerned about insurance. I have been concerned with whether or not insurance policies which cover businesses might be interpreted by insurance companies to cover terrorism, as called for, because there are exceptions, acts of war, and they might argue.

So I talked with the superintendent of insurance of New York, and he said to his knowledge all the domestic insurers that he has talked to, and the reinsurers, are being forthcoming, saying immediately, “We are going to pay for these acts of terrorism. We are not even going to argue that there is a possibility that there was an act of war. We are paying for it.”

I suspect but do not know, and maybe Members could educate me, that every airline has property and casualty insurance, but do not have full insurance for their losses, or insurance for their business interruption, but most businesses I know do have adequate property and casualty insurance and reinsurance, and do, in fact, have business interruption insurance. But I do not know this. The point is, we need to look into this. I do not know whether they do or do not have full insurance for their losses, or insurance for their business interruption, but most businesses I know do have adequate property and casualty insurance and reinsurance, and do, in fact, have business interruption insurance.

Mr. OBERSTAR. Mr. Speaker, reclaiming my time, I just want to make the point that airlines do not have business interruption insurance as a matter of course of business for damage to the plane, and reinsurance; and secondly, business interruption insurance. But I do not know this.

The point is, we need to look into this. I do not know whether they do or do not have full insurance for their losses, or insurance for their business interruption, but most businesses I know do have adequate property and casualty insurance and reinsurance, and do, in fact, have business interruption insurance.

Mr. OBERSTAR. Mr. Speaker, further reserving the right to object, I yield to the gentleman from New York (Mr. LA FalCHe).

Mr. LA FalCHe. Mr. Speaker, I ask the gentleman, why not?

Mr. OBERSTAR. Mr. Speaker, this is the not the time to debate why not.

Mr. LA FalCHe. Mr. Speaker, the last point I want to make is we have to be very careful when we pass loan guarantee legislation that we establish conditionality. I mean banks establish conditionality. The World Bank, the IMF established conditionality. We established conditionality with the Chrysler loan guarantee bill. We got some warrants for it, too. We made money on it. We establish conditionality with New York City. If we are going to do this, and if by some chance this passes tonight, we ought not to come back with a conference report up here. All these questions are raised under the strongest possible conditions.

Having said that, I thank the gentleman.

Mr. OBERSTAR. Mr. Speaker, further reserving the right to object.

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. I appreciate the gentleman’s comments.
CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—HOUSE

September 14, 2001

Mr. OBERSTAR. Mr. Speaker, I yield.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. Shimkus). The gentleman from Alaska will yield.

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. Mr. Speaker, I understand that.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Alaska will suspend. The time is being controlled right now by the gentleman from Minnesota.

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. Mr. Speaker, I thought he did that.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. He has not. The gentleman from Minnesota.

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. Mr. Speaker, I am amazed. You are a little slow.

Mr. OBERSTAR. Mr. Speaker, I am happy to yield to the Chairman.

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. Do not shake your head, Mr. Speaker. I am also a Member, just as you are.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Alaska will suspend. The time is controlled by the gentleman from Minnesota.

Mr. OBERSTAR. Mr. Speaker, further reserving the right to object, I yield to our chairman, the gentleman from Alaska.

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman, and out of respect, he is quick when it comes to picking up when the gentleman yielded to me.

I would also say just one thing. What bothers me most about this debate is what we are thinking about is the time frame. If we do not do something tonight and the market opens up Monday, I want everybody to think about this, we are hoping and I am praying because I have been through about four of these and some of you have not, being but the seniors Members of this House. When most of the American people come back and, in fact, believe in America and the faith of America and will not drop the stock market. I have watched this. Check the Gulf War. Check World War II. Check the Korean war and the Vietnam. I have been all through them.

I believe the American people will, in fact, stand up and say yes we are willing to invest; but I will tell you what will happen. We have airline industry on the verge of collapse, and if we do not lay down a mark in the sand and say, yes, we are willing, because of action of our government to back up these airline industries to allow some moneys, they will start going down and every one will start following it. Keep that in mind. Keep in mind what I am saying here.

I may be wrong. I hope I am wrong, but if you do not pass this tonight, and Thursday, you have created it that those who object to this understand what I am saying because you have created it.

Mr. OBERSTAR. Mr. Speaker, reigning my time, and I respect the gentleman’s heartfelt comments. I yield under my reservation to the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. OBEY).

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding, and let me say I do not think anyone who is raising questions tonight is trying to do anything except meet our constitutional responsibility to let people know we are doing before we spend taxpayers’ money.

Now, the gentleman from Alaska is a good friend of all of ours; and he has conveyed to us a sense of urgency and he has also conveyed the message that somehow if we do not do what he wants, do it on the basis of almost no explanation and something bad happens, it is our fault.

I would suggest I would like to have fewer threats and more information. How about less rhetoric and more information. I would like to ask some questions. I would like to ask some questions if the gentleman would yield.

We have had no hearings on this. We have had no statement of position from the administration. My staff was told by some proponents of this proposition that OMB was in fact recommending it. When we called OMB, they indicated that while they had a person in the room, that person was there for observation purposes and as a resource only; that they did not have a position.

Not a single person from the administration has contacted, to my knowledge, any member of the Committee on Appropriations when we were in the conference last night arranging the dollars which the gentleman now is seeking to spend, or at least was originally. I do not think a single person from the industry talked to any of the conferences last night to explain why this was needed to be turned into an appropriation.

I do not have any answer to the question of what authority the Federal Reserve has in this situation. I have been given the impression today that the Federal Reserve had some authority to establish a fund to provide loan guarantees. I would like to know what authority the Federal Reserve has. If they have not exercised that authority, I would like to know why people think they have not by now.

These are all reasonable questions that every Member, Republican or Democrat alike, has the right to have an answer to.

I would also like to note if it is being proposed, why is it not being proposed as a mandatory under those pay-go rules rather than adding to our discretionary spending? The supplemental that we passed earlier today grew in 2 days from $5 billion to $20 billion to $40 billion, and now people want to spend an additional $1.5 billion. That is enough to give Topsy a bad name.
Mr. OBERSTAR. Reclaiming my time, Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for his observations, and we will attempt to get the resolution to the question about the Federal Reserve; but I do not know of a situation where the Federal Reserve comes in to provide the help as the gentleman has suggested.

Mr. OBEY. Would the gentleman from Minnesota consider yielding to the gentleman from South Carolina to answer the question about the Federal Reserve?

Mr. SPRATT. Mr. Speaker, the Federal Reserve used to have a regulation called Regulation V, for V loans. It dated back to the war but was carried over from the war and renewed each year in the Defense Production Act.

The last entity that I know which qualified for a Reg V loan was the Penn Central. They were to have obtained a $400 million V loan in the early 1970s, until the Reagan administration reversed course and decided against it on the day of closing. I know, because I was working in the Pentagon then. I was tangentially involved with it.

I do not know whether the V loan authority is still on the books, but it applied to transportation nexuses. Where significant transportation nexuses in this country were at risk, it is my recollection it was applicable to those circumstances.

Mr. OBERSTAR. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for that clarification, and I thank the gentleman from Wisconsin.

Further reserving the right to object, I yield to the gentleman from Arizona (Mr. SHADEGG).

Mr. SHADEGG. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding to me. I would address my colleagues and point out that this has been an extraordinary week. It has been a week in which we have come together. It has been a week when we have stood united, not Republican and Democrat but American. It has been a week in which the debate on this floor has been characterized by immense unity, where we have worked together. I do not want the debate tonight to change that tone. This is a Defense situation. I understand the reservations and the concerns of everybody on each side. I understand the passion of the chairman on Transportation and Infrastructure. I understand the concerns of the others, and I would simply argue that we stop and reflect. We are being asked tonight to do something extraordinary, but these are extraordinary times.

I would say that those who have expressed the concerns, fiscal concerns, appropriators such as the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. OBEY), who is the ranking member of that committee, has legitimate concerns here and they ought to be considered. But, again, I would argue these are extraordinary times.

The markets will open Monday morning, and the questions we send on this floor are vitally important. It seems to me it is clear nothing will become law as a result of what we do tonight. We must await the action of the Senate. But we can send a signal tonight on this piece of legislation that will be sent on the very last piece of legislation. We can send a signal that says the United States Congress understands that the airline industry has been massively damaged by what has happened in the last week and that colleagues like the gentleman from Hawaii (Mr. ABERCROMBIE) are suffering dire consequences as a result of that.

I would like to just draw a quick analogy. As we watched in horror on Tuesday when the World Trade Center collapsed, that collapse, if you talk to an engineer, was because one floor collapsed on the other and that floor was not designed to carry the weight of two. So those two collapsed on a third. And when those two collapsed on the third, that floor was not designed to carry the weight of three, and on and on and on. So we saw the collapse straight down to the ground of the entire building.

Our enemies did not seek just to destroy the World Trade Center or the Pentagon; they seek to destroy our economy, and we had better be sure that we do not let them do that. Their goal is not merely, as the gentleman from Alaska (Mr. YOUNG) suggested, to kill individuals; it is to instill terror and fear and to cause us to freeze as a Nation. We must get our airlines back in the air; we must as individuals get back on those airlines. We must fly on the very last piece of legislation. We must fly.

And this is one minor step we could take. I understand that there have been assurances from the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure that they will abide by the negotiated language tonight. I hope that the gentleman from Florida (Mr. YOUNG), the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations, is going to express his view that that language is critical and they must agree to live with that language in the conference committee.

But if they do, I would hope that those who have a desire to object tonight, and who are thinking about objecting as a result of the fact that this is happening in extraordinary procedure, would consider the extraordinary times that we are in.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. OBERSTAR. Mr. Speaker, let me yield under my reservation further to the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. OBEY), then the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. KANJORSKI), and then the gentleman from Florida (Mr. YOUNG).

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Speaker, two additional loan guarantees for airlines, but scoring for loan guarantees was 100 percent. If that is the case, in this instance we are looking at a $15½ billion package here.

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. OBERSTAR. Does the gentleman from Wisconsin have a further question?

Mr. OBEY. Those are the two.

Mr. OBERSTAR. I yield to the chairman, the gentleman from Alaska for a response.

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. I thank the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. OBERSTAR). The administration was in the meeting. They have no objection to this legislation. That has been made clear to me. They were very cognizant of the problem we have facing us today.

Mr. OBEY. Are they willing to ask for it so we know they have run the trap lines and think this is fiscally sound?

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. Unfortunately, the trap lines today are a little bit fogged and a little bit cluttered with other things in our minds, but my information as they were sitting in our meeting with members of the leadership, the White House was there, and they had no objection at the time, and then in fact said we believe this is a go.

Mr. OBEY. That is contrary to the information from my staff.

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. I do not have a letter in my hand right now. We started this at 4 o'clock this afternoon.

Mr. DOGGETT. That is the whole problem. You started at 4 o'clock.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. SHIMkus). The gentleman from Texas (Mr. DOGGETT) will suspend. The time is being controlled by the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. OBERSTAR).

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. OBERSTAR. I yield further to the chairman.

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. Mr. Speaker, I want to say for those who are out of order, and they are out of order, this has been going on for 3 days. Do not tell me 4 o'clock in the afternoon. The ranking member and I have been working. We have tried to figure it out. We know the danger. We know what is going to happen. So do not anybody start them out like somebody at a circus and say in fact it started at 4 o'clock this afternoon.
Mr. OBERSTAR. Further reserving the right to object, I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. KANJORSKI).

Mr. KANJORSKI. Mr. Speaker, I have a great deal of respect for the chairman and ranking member. I think we are in a contest here that can be easily resolved. What we are trying to do is send a message to the stock market one that I think that is a reasonable thing to do.

Why do we not pass tonight a sense of the House resolution that this Congress intends to establish an emergency finance administration to take care of not only the airline industry, but potentially the insurance industry, the banking industry, or any part of our industry that may suffer as a result of the disaster of September 11.

That will take care of the message. That will give us the 4 days between now and Wednesday when we return to have sufficient consultation to see whether or not this is sufficient, whether it should be enlarged on, whether it would encompass other companies, other industries and other problems. It should not be done at the 12th hour, when we are about to recess, when we all know the Senate has already recessed until next Wednesday. Nothing can be done.

In reality we are trying to send a message to the American people and to the American markets. We can accomplish that by a House resolution expressing the intent of Congress to respond. But it is a fair objection to any Member of this House not knowing what the particularities and the effects and consequences of this piece of legislation will have because we have not had the opportunity to study it. By Wednesday we can stay in town and craft a piece of legislation that will cover all those contingencies and send a broader message to the American people and the American markets that the Congress of the United States and the American government is going to see that the economy of the United States survives.

Mr. OBERSTAR. I appreciate the suggestion of the gentleman, but I respectfully observe that the airlines cannot take a resolution of Congress to the bank.

Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. GREEN).

Mr. GREEN of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I thank my colleague for yielding.

I know the concern for my colleagues about the lack of the language and the concern that we have not had the time to look at this, but also know the devil is in the details. By the time we go back home and next Thursday when we come back in, it is not just Hawaii. It is not just Chicago. It is every major city in the country. The airlines cannot do this, cannot sustain this. That is what concerns me.

If we are willing to stand here and say I am going to object because it was not brought up to me because of my committee, then I would hope that between now and next Thursday when we see the layoffs and we see what happens, the airlines, rather than continue to pay people when you are only running 25 to 30 percent of your load, I do not care what kind of business you are in. So that is what worries me. This Congress has to be flexible enough in thought and business acumen to make sure that we have the safety net for our infrastructure, and our airlines are an important part of the infrastructure. Thank you for allowing me to speak.

Mr. OBERSTAR. I thank the gentleman. I would be happy to yield to the chairman who sought recognition earlier.

Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Alaska?

Mr. YOUNG of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the right to object, I do so because I have some questions that I would like to have answered by my friend and colleague from Alaska.

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Alaska and the chairman of the authorizing committee made the point that this is not an appropriations issue. I disagree with that. This is an appropriations issue. In fact, the first language I saw, which was about 7:30 tonight, would have taken this $15 billion from this supplemental emergency that we passed today to help recovery in New York and in Pennsylvania and in Virginia. I did not like that because we struggled to get that bill in the condition that we got it and voted for, which we all did. So I suggested some different language, and I believe that this new resolution or this new bill includes the language that I suggested, which was that any money coming from this bill would be subject to a subsequent appropriations bill. Am I correct?

Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Alaska (Mr. YOUNG).

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman is correct. You prevailed.

Mr. YOUNG of Florida. Good. Now what I want to make sure is that because we do not have any information, as the gentleman from New York (Mr. LAFALCE) pointed out, as we had in the Chrysler loan guarantees or the New York loan guarantees, we do not have any information like that. So we do not know where we are. We quickly became aware of this cost about $15 billion. We used to have a little bit of information before we commit ourselves to $15 billion.

So what I am asking for, and I believe the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. OBEY) asked a similar question, I want a commitment from my friend from Alaska, as chairman, will control that money. If the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. OBERSTAR) and my friend, the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. OBERSTAR) that the language, if you ever come back from conference, that that language will be protected to guarantee that none of this money will come out of the supplemental that we passed today for the recovery from the terrible terrorist activities.

Mr. Speaker, I want a commitment on the gentleman's part, and we will not object if we can get that commitment, that the gentleman will not present a conference report here that will allow that money to come from the supplemental; that it would not, in fact, be subject to a subsequent appropriations action.

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. YOUNG of Florida. I yield to the gentleman from Alaska.

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. Mr. Speaker, it is my intention, as I explained to the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. OBEY), that is exactly what we are trying to do.

Mr. YOUNG of Florida. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman says "trying to do." I want a commitment. The gentleman from Alaska will have control over this conference.

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. Mr. Speaker, I am sure the gentleman from Florida will be involved with it. I am sure the gentleman will be sitting beside me.

Mr. YOUNG of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I doubt that the gentleman from Alaska (Mr. YOUNG) would suggest that I be appointed as a conferee of his conference.

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. If the gentleman would continue to yield, I am trying to say that we will do everything we can to protect the request of the funds, but it is not what he wants it to be.

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. YOUNG of Florida. I yield to the gentleman from Alaska.

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. Mr. Speaker, by the time we go to conference, if our airlines are not flying, it does not mean anything. By the time we go to conference, we will know whether this system works. That is what I am suggesting. This is an emergency. My friends, this is not every day.

Mr. Speaker, I have followed this industry from the bottom of my heart for more than 10 years, and we are in serious trouble. If my colleagues do not understand where we are today, we have serious problems. I will commit as the chairman, if they are viable, everything is working well, then we have a commitment to make sure that they achieve the goals of having the commerce capability.

I am not trying to take money out of an appropriation. I never have.

Mr. YOUNG of Florida. I take back my time. The gentleman raised a sore point here. On TEA-21 and AIR-21, you took discretionary money and you put it into mandatory accounts and you created a problem for our Members who wanted programs in our transportation bill. You took that money into those programs and you took the amount of discretionary money available, and then in the few dollars we had left when the gentleman from Kentucky (Mr. ROGERS) brought a transportation appropriations bill on the floor here this year with some Members' projects in it, you sat right there and you, by a point of order, struck all of those projects. Do not tell me what you have done to appropriations bills.

Mr. Speaker, I yield to my friend, the gentleman from Kentucky (Mr. ROGERS), who is chairman of the Subcommittee on Transportation of the Appropriations Committee.

Mr. ROGERS of Kentucky. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Let me ask the gentleman a question, or anyone here. Is there anything that would prevent the transportation authorization committee recommending to the floor and the floor passing this amount of money as a mandatory account immediately? Is there anything wrong with doing that? Why can we not do that?

Mr. YOUNG of Florida. I made that suggestion several times today and was rejected several times today.

Mr. ROGERS of Kentucky. I wonder, if the gentleman will yield further, if the chairman of the authorizing committee would agree. Let us just pass the bill out of mandatory accounts, doing exactly what you are talking about.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. YOUNG of Florida. I yield to the gentleman from California, the very distinguished chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means.

Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding.

My understanding is that there was a language change in which the language in the bill in front of us says, "Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the President is authorized from funds made available in subsequent acts," which would protect the gentleman in terms of his concerns about the act passed today. I believe the gentleman's concern is that it may go over to the Senate and that language may not remain. It seems to me the appropriate commitment, if the chairman of transportation is willing to make it is, that this is the language that they commit to and that if it comes back differently, then they will not push it.

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. And I agree. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman, I support that language. I offered that language today during a compromise session, and I agree with that language. I just want to make sure that is the language we will vote on when it comes back from conference. That is all I am trying to get.

Mr. THOMAS. If the gentleman will yield further, and if the commitment from the chairman of the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure is that he will not support the bill if that language is not in the bill coming back from conference, if he agrees to that, is that a comfort level?

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. I agree with that. I have been saying that for the last 15 minutes.

Mr. YOUNG of Florida. For the last 15 minutes the gentleman has said "if this" and "if that" and "maybe."

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. He clarified it.

Mr. YOUNG of Florida. Wait just a minute. Coming back from conference and opposing a bill is one thing, but refusing to close the conference unless you like the language, that is something else. And you, as chairman, will control that.

Mr. ROGERS of Kentucky. If the gentleman will yield further, I did not hear an answer to my earlier question. Why can we not just pass a bill on the floor getting these monies out of the mandatory account? Why would we object to that. I would like an answer. Maybe there is an answer to this. Why not pass a mandatory account suballocation as we have been discussing?

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. If the gentleman will yield further, without getting myself in trouble, I have agreed to your language.

Mr. YOUNG of Florida. But they have already given me an answer to that several times. They are not going to do it, but they could, and they are not going to block this. We are trying work it out, but we need some cooperation from the people who say they want this.

Mr. YOUNG of Florida. I gave you an answer. I agree with your language. We support your language. We talked about this today. The gentleman from Florida knows me. I have never backed out of my word. I may take your money, but I will do it up front. I am not going to take it behind you.

Mr. YOUNG of Florida. You did not take it behind me, but you sure took it.

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. You beat me. You will do it again. But I am going to suggest one thing on this thing. What he suggested, that means a new piece of legislation. I go back to what I have said again and again. I will say it again. We are looking at a time frame. I will admit, the Senate is not going to act, but that stock market opens Monday. If we do not have an assurance that these airlines are going to be taken care of in the sense they lost because we tell them they had to sit down, they are going down and the stock market will go down with them.

Let us talk about legislation later on, but let us think about tonight. Let us not think about 3 weeks down there, 4 weeks down there, but tonight and Monday. After Monday, we have got Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, and the Senate goes back in. If they do not want to do this, fine. But let us give them some line that the House of the people is backing it up and not going to let these airlines go down. And they will go down if we do not do this.

Mr. YOUNG of Florida. I got as much of an answer as I am going to get.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. YOUNG of Florida. I yield to the gentleman from Wisconsin.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding. My problem with this is that every time we ask a question about what, we get an answer about why. We understand why the gentleman thinks it is necessary to proceed. What we are trying to do is work with him honestly and earnestly in order to find out what the best way is to proceed.

Now, the gentleman from Kentucky asked a question. He deserves to have an answer.

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. And I told him if you want a new piece of legislation, go for it. But you cannot do it tonight. And we are going to recess tonight.

Mr. OBEY. With all due respect, if the gentleman will yield further, we still have not heard an answer to the gentleman from Kentucky's question. It does not mean that we have to go that way, but we would like to know why that option was rejected when he has proposed it and the gentleman from Florida has proposed it.

I have two other questions I would like to get out here because we are trying to work this out. We are not trying to block this. We are trying work it out, but we need some cooperation from the people who say they want this.

Other questions I have, I still do not understand why the position of the administration is, and I need to know from them. I would ask the gentleman from Missouri or anyone else who might know. We are being asked to spend what could be up to $15.5 billion. Goodness, by 10 years at the end of the road. Our Members are backing it up and not going to do this until we get an answer.

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. Cut that out.

Mr. OBEY. That may be perfectly reasonable because this country cannot operate without a functioning airline system. We understand that. But we want to know whether or not the administration is in support of this or not. Secondly, I want a clear response that if the language that the gentleman from Florida is referring to is not retained in conference, that that conference will not be brought back to this House floor, period. We need answers to those two questions.

And then there is a very troubling provision which has yet to be explained in this bill. On page 5, line 2, it refers to suspension, delay or modification of any quarterly payment or other Federal financial obligations to the United States by the air carriers. Does that mean that they are delaying payroll taxes? What taxes to the U.S. government are they delaying? We are supposed to be defending taxpayers' money. We have to have answers about what that means for taxpayers' money. I have not decided what I am going to do yet. But I would like some answers before we have to decide.

Mr. YOUNG of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I thank the Speaker for the courtesies this evening. I support the language we are talking about. I hope we can keep this evening. I support the language we have before us to decide.

Mr. DOGGETT. Mr. Speaker, rezerving the right to object, I think it was only a week ago, well, maybe not a week ago at this time, at 12:20 in the morning, but about a week ago that individuals in this House of both parties expressed concern about our budget, our financial situation, about whether or not it would be necessary with the budgetary pressures that we have to reach into those monies that are payroll taxes, that businesses and individuals have paid in for their Social Security, and use that for other purposes.

In the tragic week that has transpired since that time, the world has been turned upside down for families in New York, in Washington, across the country. Certainly our situation with regard to the budget has been turned upside down as well. But it is not one that has made our situation better. It has made the pressures on our budget worse.

Last night this House, with no explanation as to the specific purposes for which the monies would be spent, voted to approve the expenditure of $40 billion out of what are basically Social Security monies. That number went up from $60 billion in the morning to $80 billion at night.

Perhaps there were those that were watching the success of the growth of those funds, because now, tonight, before all the bodies are removed, before the dust has settled, before perhaps all the fires are extinguished, there are those counting up here at the Capitol door, at the public treasury, asking that they receive some public subsidy, right out of the Social Security money. That perhaps that subsidy is well justified. I may vote for it myself because it is so. But if it is so compelling, it will be as compelling in the bright light of day as it is with insults and threats at midnight.

I feel that the taxpayers of this country are owed a better explanation than to hear about a bill at 4, with promises and and’s, if’s, or’s and but’s, that is going to take perhaps not just $2.5 billion, but perhaps $15 billion out of that Social Security money, that they are entitled to know a little more about it.

If it is so desperate and if it is so essential that we be accomplished before Monday, then I suggest we stay and work on it. I am prepared to do that. I suggest that we stay and have a hearing. If the gentleman has so much wisdom and insight on this, I suggest he convey it to us in the course of an ordinary hearing.

I have been asked tonight what it is that I want. I do not want anything special. I simply want the same consideration I would want for any expenditure of $15 billion out of the Social Security monies, and that is a fair chance to ask some questions about it, to see if it deliberated, to get a little investigation to question whether there is business interruption insurance, to question whether or not there are other resources, to question those who say if we do not get all this approved by Monday, people would be laid off. What guarantee is there that they will still be hired on Monday if it is approved? To ask if it is so very, very important that we act here after the midnight hour, why the President of the United States has not found it sufficiently important to call for it in some kind of proclamation.

So, for all of those reasons, I object to doing this tonight. I certainly would have no objection to the kind of resolution the gentleman from Pennsylvania has talked about, or some other way of expressing our concern about this; but I object to this bill coming up, if it has even been filed. I suppose in the last few minutes it has.

I object to coming up in this fashion, in this manner. It sends a signal to others who will stand at the door of the Treasury and ask for their subsidy.

Mr. Speaker, I object.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Objection is heard.

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRY

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. Speaker, I have a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. Speaker, did the gentleman from Texas misspeak? Did he in fact ask to continue to reserve?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Objection was heard from the gentleman from Texas.

CONDEMN-BIGOTRY AND VIOLENCE AGAINST ARAB-AMERICANS, AMERICAN MUSLIMS, AND AMERICANS FROM SOUTH ASIA

Mr. GEKAS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on the Judiciary be discharged from further consideration of the concurrent resolution (H. Con. Res 227) condemning bigotry and violence against Arab-Americans, American Muslims, and Americans from South Asia in the wake of terrorist attacks in New York City, New York, and Washington D.C., on September 11, 2001, and ask for its immediate consideration in the House. The Clerk read the title of the concurrent resolution.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

Mr. BONIOR. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, first of all, I would like to thank the gentleman from Pennsylvania and the leadership in this House for bringing this resolution up. Particularly, I would like to thank the Speaker; the majority leader, the gentleman from Texas (Mr. ARMET); the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. DAVIS), who has been so active; the gentleman from California (Mr. DEERE); and others. We appreciate the opportunity to have this resolution come before us this evening.

Mr. Speaker, I do not intend to object to this, but I think there are Members who would like to speak on this important resolution.

I will yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. GEKAS) and then to the distinguished majority leader.

Mr. GEKAS. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, the gentleman is correct, this is a resolution which has been approved by everyone in sight and is very apropos at this moment in our Nation's history, considering the events of this past week.

The only comment I want to make before the gentleman from Texas (Mr. ARMET) will be elucidating on the subject is that we do not want to repeat as a Nation the insidious events that took place after Pearl Harbor with respect to the treatment of Japanese-American citizens, who had to suffer the indignities which are so well chronicled and which were so noted by this Congress in recent years.

So when we talk about treating Arab-Americans in the light of what happened this past week in similar ways, this resolution goes to the heart of that series of events.

Mr. BONIOR. Mr. Speaker, continuing my reservation, I yield to the
Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding under his reservation.

I want to say that I strongly support this resolution. I want to thank the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. DAVIS) and the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. BONIOR) for the leadership that they have shown on this very important issue.

There are few things that outrage me more than the kind of discrimination that was just outlined by the gentleman from Virginia that has taken place. The graffiti that has come up in the wake of Tuesday’s tragedy is just horrible, and we need to do everything that we can to ensure that that does not happen. I believe that this resolution should send a very strong signal about the leadership that the United States is going to take in ensuring that this kind of discrimination does not take place.

Just a little more than 12 hours ago, Mr. Speaker, Dr. Muzammil Siddiqi, the leader of the North American Islamic Society, gave the opening prayer at the very moving service that most of the Members of this body attended. I believe that his presence at that service that we attended was a very strong signal from President Bush and other leaders in this country that we are not going to tolerate that kind of discrimination which has been described already here and which, frankly, is of concern to me and to others.

Attempts to bring about generalization is something that is very tempting for a lot of people, and I will simply say that we need to caution the American people against that. That is why I chose to stay here when the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. DAVIS) first mentioned to me the prospect of this resolution. I wanted to voice my very strong support for it.

Mr. BONIOR. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman. Before I yield to the gentleman from California (Mr. RÀHALL), my good friend who is of Lebanese descent, I want to just say a few words, if the gentleman would permit me.

Like all Americans, Arab Americans, Muslims in America, Sikhs, they have strongly condemned these heinous and outrageous acts that have been perpetuated against America and its people. And like their fellow citizens of all faiths, they have joined in efforts to give blood; they have been parts of vigils around this country; they have conducted their own religious services. They are very proud of the police that were involved in trying to rescue people in New York City. They are part of what we all are grieving and suffering from so painfully in these last 3 days, 4 days.

I would say tonight that in the wake of this attack, it is really most unfortunate and sad and outrageous that the Arab American community and the Muslim American community and the South Asian community, the Sikhs particularly, have been targeted with this bigotry that the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. Davis) alluded to and violence.

Near Chicago, bigots tossed a fire bomb at an Arab American community center. In old town Alexandria, vandals attacked an Islamic bookstore, as the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. Davis) said, and two Virginia mosques received threatening phone calls. In New York, a man tried to run over a Pakistani woman in the parking lot of a shopping mall, accusing her of destroying my country, and the list goes on and on. Many of the children in the schools are fearful because of their religion or because of where their ancestors or families may have come from. Women, Muslim women are fearful about wearing their head coverings in public, as well are Sikhs who have expressed that same concern to me today. It is a serious problem.

I think not only did Muzammil Siddiqui speak today at the service, but Cardinal Theodore McCarrick, the Archbishop of Washington, spoke as well.

He reminded us. He said this. He reminded all Americans in prayer that: “We must seek the guilty and not strike out against the innocent, or we become like them who are without moral guidance or direction.” So I hope and pray in the days ahead that people will remember that.

When I was at the White House on Wednesday, the day after the tragedies, I had occasion to speak with the President and the Cabinet and the other leaders of the Congress. We talked about this issue. We raised this issue. There was agreement throughout the room that we would keep this issue in mind and in the forefront of our discussions as we proceeded in the weeks and months ahead.

So I want to commend the President, because he soon thereafter condemned this bigotry on national television, and so did the Attorney General, John Ashcroft, and so did Mayor Giuliani, with quite a bit of force in New York City.

Today, we in the Congress lend our voices to this chorus for American tolerance, Mr. Speaker, and diversity and for the rights of every American of every heritage and faith to live and worship with safety and confidence and pride.

It is very heartening to see Members on both sides of the aisle stand up in support of what this resolution says.

Mr. Speaker, I yield to my friend, the gentleman from West Virginia (Mr. Rahall), who has always been, for the 25 years he has been in the House, a leader on these issues.

Mr. RAHALL. Mr. Speaker, I thank my good friend from Michigan for yielding; and I want to commend him for bringing this to the floor this evening, as well as the gentleman from Pennsylvania, and to thank the gentleman from Michigan for his leadership on other relevant issues in this arena as well, and most particularly, his sponsorship and fight for the secret evidence legislation.

Mr. Speaker, we are all justifiably angered by the events of 9/11 last week. We, often, in our rage, in our fits of anger, say, and do things that, upon reflection, we perhaps regret. But the instances that have been referred to by previous speakers, including the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. Bonior), go beyond those just temporary slips of judgment or temporary slips of the tongue. They go to what is basic about our American society, and it is really an attack upon what is basic about our military society.

Let us not forget that Arab Americans, Muslim Americans, South Asian Americans, are Americans first. They chose to come to this country in order to seek a better way of life for themselves and their families. They pay taxes. They vote. They donate to various charitable causes within their communities. They have become well respected, and they have contributed in so many walks of life, whether it be the medical profession, the legal profession, whether it be teachers, lawyers, whether it be teachers, whether it be laborers in our factories, they have contributed so much to our American way of life.

Let us not forget as well that there were members of these communities that were in those Twin Towers that lost their lives, as well. Let us not forget that fact.

So I guess the best way to describe these attacks against Arab Americans, Muslim Americans, South Asians, is, as my hometown newspaper described it today, to paraphrase my hometown paper in Beckley, West Virginia, these are yahoos that are making these attacks, yahoos who happen to pose as great a threat to our American society, to our freedoms, and to our way of life as those perpetrators of those heinous crimes against our country last Tuesday.

They are ignorant, those who espouse these attacks, not the majority of Americans. No, they are a small and, fortunately, these attacks are not as prominent today as they were in past occasions, like the Gulf War or the Oklahoma City bombing. That because more recognition is coming to the communities represented by Arab Americans, Muslim Americans, South Asians, because of their contributions to our American way of life.

As the gentleman from Michigan has mentioned, they have all, to the group, condemned, highly condemned, the acts of last Tuesday. They have organized themselves into blood donation drives, they are contributing their money, they are praying as hard as each of us for the victims of these crimes to find comfort and solace and for the hopes of their families and their futures.

So I commend the gentleman from Michigan and the gentleman from Pennsylvania for bringing this resolution to the floor and urge its unanimous passage.

Mr. BONIOR. I thank my colleague.

Continuing to reserve, Mr. Speaker, I yield to the distinguished gentlewoman from Illinois (Ms. Schakowsky), who has not only spoken out against this kind of bigotry, but has actually organized in her own district.

Ms. SCHAKOWSKY. Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the gentleman yielding to me, and the efforts and leadership of my colleague, the gentleman from Michigan, to end this kind of bigotry and discrimination.

In the face of this unspeakable assault on the American people, we have so many reasons to be proud this week. We look at the firefighters, the police, the other emergency workers who went into harm’s way, and so we are celebrating as an American family an opportunity to embrace each other, even as we grieve, and congratulate those who have worked so hard to end the suffering.

At the same time there has been this other note, and that is, that these are those who have used this occasion to commit acts of bigotry and even violence against people who want to join with us as Americans, as residents of this country, as people offended by this terrorism and the perpetrators being the victim. It is hard for me to even imagine people who are feeling so hurt by what happened and then themselves go out in the street and find themselves to be harassed as somehow to blame for this event when they were completely innocent.

I have a district that is so diverse, all kinds of people, every race and religion and ethnic origin; and we are going to take a walk down Divine Avenue this Sunday, a street in my district, that has shops, a booming commercial district of Muslims and Indians, Pakistanis, Bangladeshis, Orthodox Jews, Jewish people. And we are going to walk from one end of the street to the other, just take a walk together, hand in hand, arm in arm to express our solidarity.

That is the kind of thing that we need to be doing in this hour of need in this country to help heal each other and not turn against each other, and that is the essence of this resolution that I hope everyone will support.

Mr. BONIOR. Mr. Speaker, further reserving the right to object, I think it is a beautiful idea and I hope it is emulated around the country. I yield to the gentlewoman from Texas (Ms. Jackson-Lee).
In my community, there is a situation going on that preceded this tragedy. A Pakistani woman lost her life through some unfortunate incident in a store. We can go out together with that community because we want justice. We respect civil rights, but we want to find out what happened to that woman. We are going to continue that fight and that unity.

In Houston, Texas, I believe we are going to share on Sunday afternoon as well with a community forum to have people come together and talk about how we are united and not how we are divided. So I again want to thank the distinguished gentleman from Michigan, and I also want to acknowledge the ranking member of the Committee on the Judiciary, one of the original cosponsors, the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. Conyers), who likewise offers very strong support for this resolution.

It is important that we pass this tonight. I am sorry that it is at 5 or 10 minutes to 1 a.m., but what this resolution will allow us to do is to go back and encourage and push our local fathers and mothers to ensure that the governments of our communities, the people of our community understand what being American is all about. I thank the gentleman again for his leadership on this. Each of us must be soldiers and, with this message, go back to convey to our communities that we will not accept this kind of intolerance.

Mr. BONIOR. Mr. Speaker, before I yield to my two colleagues from California, who have done very good work in this area, I want to yield, under my reservation of objection, to one of the leaders of the Congressional Asian Pacific American Caucus, Mr. Wu (Mr. Wu).

Mr. WU. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Oregon (Mr. Wu).

Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from California (Mr. Rohrabacher), who I have worked with on a number of these issues over the years.

Mr. ROHRABACHER. Mr. Speaker, I think it speaks loudly of all of us in this body and of our country that today, as we get to the business of designing our counterattack against savagery that has been unleashed against our countrymen, that we take this time to ensure that the rage that is felt throughout our country does not take us in the same evil direction that we plan to fight.

It is very easy to do. We understand that. Because as we are fighting a group of fanatics overseas, it is very easy for Americans to lose sight that people who perhaps are Muslim in their faith, and those people who are responsible for the attack may well and probably were Muslims, to generalize in that all Muslims would be just a crime against our own citizens and against innocent people.

Our greatest strength as a Nation is that we are a people who recognize that we are of all races and of all religions. And that was what the National Cathedral we had all faiths represented there, including Islam. And if we break that strength, we are actually weakening ourselves. We as a people do not want to compromise that policy and that strength of our country, which is that we are of all races and all religions. We are bound together by a love of liberty and a commitment to each other.

Just one thought. And I will be very quick because I know other people want to express this. Bin Laden wants us to alienate all the Muslims of the world, and especially to alienate our fellow Muslim Americans. That is part of this terrorist plot. Their strategy is that we, as Americans, will be so enraged, and we have a right to be enraged and angry, that we will strike out blindly and, without thinking, will alienate all of the Muslims of the world against us, including those Muslims who live as Americans next door to us.

We cannot be stupid enough to fall for his strategy. We must proceed in seeking revenge for those people, our fellow citizens who have lost their lives; and we must do it in a smart way and make sure that we do not alienate those Muslims. Instead, we need to recruit and reach out to Muslims throughout the world who are good and decent people, who are freedom-loving people, who will join us in a crusade to see that a new standard of morality is set for all of mankind. And that standard is that no noncombatants will ever, no people will ever tolerate an attack and murder of noncombatants in order to achieve their ends. In this goal we can enlist the Muslim community and we should try to do so.

It would be a crime against our own goals if we in some way fell to bin Laden’s strategy and tried to strike out with all of us in this body and of our country that today, as we get to the business of designing our counterattack against savagery that has been unleashed against our countrymen, that we take this time to ensure that the rage that is felt throughout our country does not take us in the same evil direction that we plan to fight.

It is very easy to do. We understand that. Because as we are fighting a group of fanatics overseas, it is very easy for Americans to lose sight that people who perhaps are Muslim in their faith, and those people who are responsible for the attack may well and probably were Muslims, to generalize in that all Muslims would be just a crime against our own citizens and against innocent people.

Our greatest strength as a Nation is that we are a people who recognize that we are of all races and of all religions. And if we break that strength, we are actually weakening ourselves. We as a people do not want to compromise that policy and that strength of our country, which is that we are of all races and all religions. We are bound together by a love of liberty and a commitment to each other. U.S., United States. That means us, and us now includes many Muslim fellow citizens. And they are heartbroken, as we are what has happened.

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—HOUSE 17167
Mr. ISSA. Mr. Speaker, it is beyond my possible understanding how in America, such isolated incidents that have happened, could happen if we really view what those same people would like to have us do. We do not know who perpetrated this crime for sure. We think it may be Osama bin Laden or his allies. We do not know if Osama bin Laden is backed completely by Iraq or by other groups. We are not sure where the money comes from.

It is my personal wish, and I believe this body’s wish, to find out; and once we find out, to eradicate the capability of those people who struck us so viciously once and for all. That is a reasonable response, and I believe America wants to make that response.

But we cannot make that response with clean hands if in fact we use the opportunity of this disaster to seek revenge against others in our society.

Mr. Speaker, I cannot explain hate, and I would not try. What I would like to do for a moment is just share something from my own youth.

When I was in high school, I worked for Rabbi Kasen in Cleveland Heights. I was in a predominantly Jewish neighborhood, which is not bad for an Arab kid from Cleveland, and I got one of the best jobs a kid could get, I was doing his little shop. He didn’t know much about the rabbit, but over the years as I would return the car at the end of the evening back to his home rather than where I picked up the poultry, I would learn a little more and a little more about him.

By the time I was done working for him, I had discovered that his entire family had been wiped out in the Holocaust. He bore a tattoo on his arm, and he was a Holocaust survivor. But I discovered something else, something more important that I think everyone in America has to understand when we look at these acts of violence.

He was a man of God because he bore hatred towards no one, including those who had so terribly disrupted his and his family’s life. Instead, he felt pity for them because they would know no salvation, they would know no rest. They would be the recipients of only evil forever after, while he would go on doing his little duty of running a small shop in Cleveland Heights. He would run a little shop and he would raise his children.

That lesson is a lesson America has to understand. We cannot let our grievances, no matter how great, turn into a demonstration of violence. America has a right to respond to those who would hurt us and prevent them from doing it in the future, but we can only do that with our heads held high if we in America take the lead that Rabbi Kasen taught me as a boy, and do not seek to strike out against those who have done wrong; but rather, in fact, do not do what they did because only by, as Christians say, turning the other cheek, will we have clean hands to seek the proper outcome. That outcome, I think is justice for the acts done against us.

Mr. BONIOR. Mr. Speaker, continuing my reservation of objection, I yield to the gentleman from California (Mr. BONIOR).

Mr. BONIOR. Mr. Speaker, continuing my reservation of objection, I yield to the gentleman from California (Mr. BONIOR).

Mr. BONIOR. Mr. Speaker, continuing my reservation of objection, I yield to the gentleman from California (Mr. BONIOR).

Mr. BONIOR. Mr. Speaker, continuing my reservation of objection, I yield to the gentleman from California (Mr. BONIOR).

Mr. BECERRA. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding. And this is a fitting time to say it. In the 9 years I have been in this Chamber, I have never seen the gentleman from Michigan take on a task, an assignment, an issue with the commitment and his conviction. And I think all of us stand very proudly with the gentleman from Michigan in this case because oftentimes there are populations in this country that do not have people standing for them.

Mr. Speaker, I am very pleased to stand with the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. BONIOR) and all of my colleagues who have taken the time after a very long week to say to all of our American brothers and sisters, we stand together with clean hands because that is what we will do as a nation, and we will prove to them when they decided to come to America, they were right.
Mr. BONIOR. Mr. Speaker, continuing my reservation of objection, I yield to the gentleman from Washington (Mr. INSLEE).

Mr. DELAHUNT. Mr. Speaker, I have a special responsibility to speak tonight. I represent Bainbridge Island just west of Seattle. It is full of great people, and it is a great place to live. In early 1942, the United States Government herded up some of America's citizens of Bainbridge Island and marched them down to a dock and put them on a ferry boat and put them in camps.

I think the Congressman from that district owes it to the people now who are feeling the human passion and anger that is very understandable, to urge this country not to repeat, or even its private citizens, to repeat those kinds of mistakes.

I also have a responsibility tonight to speak in favor of this, because in my district some knuckle-head defaced a mosque in Lynnwood, Washington. Near my district, an armed man was arrested yesterday threatening to burn down a mosque. The child of my staffer's sister had to be taken out of day-care because somebody phoned in a bomb threat due to the heritage of the folks at the day-care center. I do not think those acts are American.

Mr. Speaker, let me tell the American act. Today I asked one of my staff to go to that mosque in Lynnwood, Washington and talk to the people. By happenstance, when he drove up to the mosque, there were about 50 cars that drove up loaded with foodstuffs and flowers and Christians who had come from their churches to tell that mosque that that was not an American way and not consistent with religious liberty and our brotherhood in this country. That was an American thing to do.

Mr. Speaker, I want to say I am proud of some things that are going on in my district, too. Let us tell the people who are angry about this, and I understand anger. Tomorrow morning I am going to call two of my constituents whose son was lost in the Pentagon. I understand passion and sorrow and anger.

But those who have it, let us tell them that if you want to have an effective strategy to win this war against terrorism, let us let the Muslim people of the world know that we stand against terrorism and for brotherhood and respect for all religious faiths.

Mr. DELAHUNT. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. DELAHUNT).

Mr. DELAHUNT. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding. The hour is late. There probably are very few of us here tonight. But I am very glad you are watching us tonight. But I think this is one of those truly great moments in the history of this institution, tonight.

Let me echo the sentiments expressed earlier by the gentleman from California about the sponsor of this legislation, the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. GOODLATTE). I have not been here for some 5 years, there is no one that has advocated for justice, for human rights as the gentleman who will be sorely missed in this institution.

It is clear that across the Nation, the anguish and the grief runs so deep. And the events of this week have saddened us all, all Americans. It has really seared the hearts of the Members in this institution and Americans everywhere. Our pain has given rise to a profound anger. And as the gentleman from Washington indicated, it is a righteous anger. It is a righteous anger, almost in the Biblical sense of that term. Our challenge now, and truly I suggest the test of our democracy and to respond in a manner that is firm that is clear, that is resolute and is just, and that befits a great Nation. And that not just merely respects our ideals but honors our ideals. I believe that we are doing that right now.

I have never been as proud of serving in this Chamber as I am at this very moment. So many Members have stayed, and we are all tired. We are all weary. It has been an extraordinarily emotional week for all of us. But this is truly a proud moment. Now I think it is critical that we remind ourselves and our fellow citizens that we must never confuse that righteous anger with hate. They are different.

Earlier tonight, both the majority leader, the gentleman from Texas, and the Democratic leader, the gentleman from Missouri, observed with great eloquence that America is great because America is good. That is true. We rightfully classify in the family of nations. That is why, despite the imperfections that were alluded to by the gentleman from Texas in his remarks earlier, America represents the hopes and dreams of a world that truly yearns for peace, for freedom and for justice. Hatred has no place in America. Hatred had no place in America in the aftermath of the outbreak of World War II. And it has no place in America tonight. Hatred is an attack on and an insult to our values and our moral authority. Those who committed the atrocities that stunned the Nation represent the face of hatred. We can never yield to hate. For if we do, they will have robbed us, not just of our innocence but our values and our ideals and everything that this country is about.

Mr. BONIOR. I thank my colleague for a beautiful statement.

Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Michigan for yielding and for his leadership in bringing forth this resolution which I strongly support, and I do so for several reasons. First, I represent a district from rural areas and smaller cities. We do not live in large numbers of Arab Americans in my district. But perhaps that is all the more reason to support it. Imagine living in an area where you have come to experience the freedom and democracy and economic opportunity and live there, and there are few other people with whom you might identify based upon your religion or your ethnic heritage. It is all the more important that we strike a blow for that very freedom, that very principle in all parts of our country. Second, this is the founding principle upon which our country was founded. People fled all parts of the world to come here to experience religious freedom and freedom from tyranny. And so many of the people who have come here from Middle Eastern lands and other lands with a Muslim heritage have done so because others in those lands have mistreated them and have not lived by the principles that we espouse in this country.

Finally, and perhaps most importantly, I believe that the very success of the endeavor that we are now undertaking, which I think will be a long-term endeavor, to root out terrorism and to respond to those who have caused this hateful, devastating, despicable disaster that has taken place in this country. If we are truly going to be successful, we have to send the message that we are not directing this at anybody because of their religious beliefs or because of their ethnic heritage, we are directing this against terrorists. If we do not have that message, not only with Arab Americans in this country but with those of that background across the entire world, we will face a far greater maelstrom as we go forward.

We must convince the people of the world that we are directing this as peace-loving people against those who would take away that peace and that freedom from us. If we do not convey that message, then we will be all the longer in struggling with the crisis that we face today. So I am very, very strongly resolved with the President and with every Member of this body that we are going to very forcefully respond to the terrorists who caused this despicable act. I also think we have to at the same time send forth a message that we are doing this as freedom-loving Americans who respect all other Americans and are not doing this directed at anybody from anywhere in the world simply because of their heritage or religious beliefs.
Mr. KUCINICH. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Michigan, and I want to say what an honor it has been to work with the gentleman through my tenure on so many concerns relating to this issue which is before us. The gentleman and I share many common beliefs, values, and constituencies.

I am privileged to have one of the largest constituencies of Arab-Americans and Muslims and Arab-Christians and Asian-Indian constituencies in the United States; and I know, as has been recited tonight, that we are talking about Americans, our brothers and sisters, individuals whose sons and daughters serve this country; individuals who have built many of our communities; individuals who provide jobs for many of our families; individuals who own and operate many of our small businesses; and individuals who are stalwarts in our community; individuals who believe in our Constitution; individuals who believe in our way of life; individuals who help defend the enemies of our Nation, to defend the freedom of our friends and our allies around the world; and we are here with the resolve that is necessary to move forward.

Now, the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. Bonior) has been in this House much longer than I have, but I will say, as someone who has had the privilege of serving in this House for almost 5 years now, every day that I come into this Chamber and I walk along this corridor, I see carved in the cornerstone, the words, "Peace," and behind it, "Justice," and right around the corner, the words, "Tolerance." Behind me, the word "Freedom," and then next to it, a lot of candles in the darkness. Those candles were held to send out the light of hope in the darkness of despair.

We know that light always shines in the darkness. That is the promise of so many scriptures, of so many hymns, of so many melodies. We know the light of justice shines through the darkness of hatred. We know the light of liberty shines through the dark hold of emotional, spiritual, and physical chains. We know the light of peace shines through the darkness of terrorism. We know the light of union shines through the darkness of division.

My country ties of thee, sweet land of liberty, of thee I sing; long may our land be bright, with freedom's holy light, protect us by thy might, Great God, our king.

Mr. BONIOR. Mr. Speaker, further reserving the right to object, I yield to the gentleman from American Samoa (Mr. Faleomavaega).

Mr. FALEOMAVAEG. Mr. Speaker, I certainly want to commend our majority leader, and especially the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. Bonior), our minority whip, for his sponsorship of this important resolution, House Concurrent Resolution 227, now before this body for consideration.

Mr. Speaker, I realize it is 1:30 in the morning, but this is certainly a very important issue that must be addressed by this institution. Certainly not taking anything away from the thrust of all the energies and the efforts that are made, not only by our President but by the Congress, concerning the tragedy that has just taken place in the past couple of days, but I must say that the United States Congress must express its firm opposition and strong condemnation of those in our country who advocate hatred, bigotry and racism against our fellow Americans whose cultural roots are from the Middle East, from South Asia, and especially our fellow American citizens who are members of the Muslim faith.

In my desire in echoing the sentiments of my friend from Massachusetts (Mr. Gephardt), I would like to express my sincere appreciation and commendation to you, our minority whip, for your leadership and certainly the outstanding service that you have rendered to our Nation. I, too, will always remember the gentleman as a true warrior, who has always stood by freedom and truly means, the principles of human rights, and certainly the rights of working men and women all over America and their struggles and efforts in making ends meet and providing for their children.

I thank the gentleman.

Now, tonight all across America people stood outside their homes and held candles in the darkness. Those candles were held to send out the light of hope in the darkness of despair.

The previous night, many thousands of people surrounded the Reflecting Pool between the Washington Monument and the Lincoln Memorial, and a ring of light framed the water, reflecting the stars above.

sent them to Europe, which they did, they went to Europe.

I want to share with my colleagues the results of their value and the courage they showed in defending this flag, despite the fact that their parents and their brothers and sisters were being placed in concentration camps throughout America. Mr. Speaker, 18,000 individual declarations were given to these men who died and fought for America, the Japanese Americans. Over 9,000 Purple Hearts were awarded. The 100th Battalion was sometimes known as the Purple Heart Battalion.

Mr. Speaker, 314 percent, the casualty percentage of those Japanese Americans who fought so bravely on behalf of our Nation. Some 562 Silver Stars, medals, were honored. Ironically, only one Medal of Honor was given to these Japanese Americans and, true to form, this did not change until 1996 when Senator COCHRAN introduced a bill to review this. The whole efforts of why only one Medal of Honor was given, despite the fact that some 52 Distinguished Service Crosses were given to these Japanese Americans.

But in view of the recent review that was made, and for which I am very grateful, the record has now been changed to 21 Medals of Honor were given to these Japanese Americans, including the distinguished Senator from Hawaii, Senator Inouye.

I want to share this with my colleagues because I do not know if I would have been able to do what they did in World War II. Put yourself in their shoes. After spilling your guts out and being wounded and all that you have done for your country and you had to come back from Europe looking for your parents and brothers and sisters in a concentration camp. I do not know if I could do that, Mr. Speaker. But these men did to defend the honor of our Nation.

I say this with sincerity, because I want my colleagues to know that we are now at the shadow of getting the same type of attitude, the same type of concern of hatred and bigotry towards people who are totally innocent from what has happened. So just because it was the Japanese military that bombed Pearl Harbor, I sincerely hope, and I am sure that my colleagues will agree with me, that this should not be the broad brush.

I want to share with you that as I look in the faces of some of those who have spoken on this resolution, I say to the gentleman, keep hammering this in, that our country was founded on fairness and freedom that has been so eloquently expressed here tonight.

I thank the gentleman for doing something good and right for the people of this country.

Mr. BONIOR. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Michigan for this very eloquent and passionate statement. I appreciate it.

Mr. Speaker, further reserving the right to object, I yield to the gentleman from Washington (Mr. BAIRD).

Mr. BAIRD. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Michigan for yielding me this time. I thank those who have spoken so eloquently tonight on this matter.

Mr. Speaker, in the immediate aftermath of the collision of those jets with the World Trade Center, the President of the United States addressed the people of this great country and he said, America is being tested, and he assured us that we would pass the test. We will pass that test. But we will pass it only if we pass it with compassion and unity and strength of all our diverse peoples, from all faiths, all national origins, all ethnicities, all united as one united people in this great United States of America.

These acts of hatred, because we can only conquer terrorism with unity, and ultimately with love for our fellow human beings.

I rise in profound support, and I thank the gentleman from Michigan for this very important and critical resolution. I just wanted to reflect for a second. I know the hour is late, but I will be brief.

When the hostages were taken in Iran, I can remember clearly there were elected officials that began to want to introduce resolutions to ask students because they were from Iran, Iranian Americans, to actually not be able to be teaching assistants or to leave the country and that whole fever erupted across the country. I can remember a scene in a restaurant where there were Iranian Americans, and in fact, it was in Ohio at the time, that people were saying, why do you not go home? These people were home. That type of fever prevailed.

Now we have amongst us over 1 million Iranian Americans that live in the United States and live in neighborhoods, and people who know them, and people look back with embarrassment and shame about what happened. We do not want to see that happen again. So the feelings and thoughts have to be I think for us to realize that we need to learn our lesson and look back from what happened at that time.

Also, I just wanted to reflect on the heartbreak to see that hate of people of Arab American descent and some of the comments that are made to them. It is incumbent upon us, and that is what we are doing tonight to spread this word, and to ask Americans that feel this passion for fairness to talk to other Americans when they make a comment that is a broad brush.

I want to close by saying that I lived in Iran in 1978. I have been on the other side of this type of situation, and I was there during the turbulence during the fall of the Shah. At that time I remember Iranians who told other Iranians to not make the comments because we were obviously American in our look. I want to thank those people that helped thousands of us to not have the harassment. I have been in those shoes, in a sense, and we have to just I think as Americans, Mr. Speaker, put ourselves in the shoes of these Americans of Arab descent, and I think this message will go out. I hope the media are aware. I say to the gentleman, keep hammering this in, that our country was founded on fairness and freedom that has been so eloquently expressed here tonight.

I thank the gentleman for doing something good and right for the people of this country.

Mr. BONIOR. Mr. Speaker, I thank my colleague for his initiative and for all of those who have spoken on this resolution.

Mr. NEY. Mr. Speaker, I too want to stand to thank the gentleman for introducing what I think is a very important and critical resolution. I just wanted to reflect for a second. I know the hour is late, but I will be brief.

peoples and tribes so that you may come to know one another,” so that we may come to know one another.

As leaders and as Members of Congress, let us convey the message that we articulated so well this evening and spread that throughout our country over these next days and weeks and months. I think we will have done a good service. When the world will watch our national prayer service earlier today, as many alluded to in their speeches on the floor today, they heard the healing words of many faiths: a Muslim Imann, a Jewish rabbi, and Christian clergy, Mr. Speaker.

These Americans, like the rest of the world, all worship God in their own way, but the common faith they share, what we have witnessed in the torrent of goodness this week, the neighbors helping neighbors, strangers helping strangers, is that hate can never conquer our Nation’s spirit. That is the common faith that they share, that hate can never conquer our Nation’s spirit.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Speaker, this week, thousands of people in New York and Washington lost their lives in a brutal assault on our Nation that was a calculated strike at the heart of our freedom and national unity. Millions of Arab Americans, South Asian Americans and American Muslims around the country have shared our sorrow and outrage at Tuesday’s terrorist attacks. They have donated their blood, their money, their food and their time to the rescue and recovery efforts at the World Trade Center and the Pentagon.

Now these same individuals who have mourned and prayed with us have come under suspicion by their neighbors and the threat of additional violence in the form of hate crimes at their homes, schools, community centers and mosques. As a part of our effort to protect America from violence, we must unequivocally condemn the attacks against these groups and pledge to protect their civil rights and civil liberties.

My district is home to one of the largest Arab and Muslim communities in the country. It is vital that we distinguish the beliefs of these Americans from the perpetrators of Tuesday’s violence, and recognize that American Muslims share our values and contribute significantly to our communities. If we fail to do so, then we will have seriously undermined freedom—the same principle we find our selves vigorously defending in the wake of Tuesday’s attacks.

All Members should stand to condem any acts of bigotry, violence or discrimination against Arab Americans, South Asians and American Muslims and call upon Americans of every faith and heritage to stand together in this time of national crisis. We must pledge that in our pursuit of national security government agencies will work to avoid activities that encroach upon the civil rights and civil liberties of citizens or legal residents of the United States.

As we should have learned from the shameful history of internment of Japanese-Americans during World War II, the civil rights and civil liberties of discrete groups of minorities should be specially considered during times of domestic and international turmoil. Our sense of community with fellow Americans of Arab and South Asian descent and those of the Muslim faith should not be counted as another casualty of Tuesday’s senseless violence.

Mr. BONIOR. Mr. Speaker, I thank my colleagues for their time this evening, and I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The Speaker pro tempore (Mr. SHIMkus). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the concurrent resolution, as follows:

H. Con. Res. 227

Whereas all Americans are united in condemning, in the strongest possible terms, the terrorists who planned and carried out the attacks against the United States on September 11, 2001, and in pursuing all those responsible for these attacks and their sponsors until they are brought to justice and punished;

Whereas the Arab-American, South Asian-American, and American Muslim communities are a vital part of the Nation;

Whereas on September 12, 2001, in a mass for the Nation and the victims of the terrorist hijackings and attacks, Cardinal Theodore McCarrick, the Archbishop of Washington, D.C., reminded all Americans in prayer that “we must seek the guilty and not strike out against the innocent or we become like them who are without moral guidance or direction”;

Whereas the States of several Arab and predominantly Muslim countries have condemned the terrorist attacks on the United States and the senseless loss of innocent lives; and

Whereas vengeful threats and incidents of violence directed at law-abiding, patriotic Americans of Arab or South Asian descent, particularly the Muslim community, and elements of the Islamic faith have already occurred; Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That the Congress—

(1) declares that in the quest to identify, bring to justice, and punish the perpetrators and sponsors of the terrorist attacks on the United States on September 11, 2001, that the civil rights and civil liberties of all Americans, including Arab-Americans, American Muslims, and Americans from South Asia, should be protected; and

(2) condemns any acts of violence or discrimination against any Americans, including Arab-Americans, American Muslims, and Americans from South Asia.

The concurrent resolution was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

AMENDING IMMIGRATION AND NATIONALITY ACT TO PROVIDE PERMANENT AUTHORITY FOR ADMISSION OF "S" VISA NON-IMMIGRANTS

Mr. GEKAS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker’s table the Senate bill (S. 1424) to amend the Immigration and Nationality Act to provide permanent authority for the admission of “S” visa non-immigrants, and ask for its immediate consideration in the Senate.

The Clerk read the title of the Senate bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, and I will not object, I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. GEKAS) for a comment on the bill.

Mr. GEKAS. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentlewoman for yielding to me.

Mr. Speaker, this issue comes before us at a very appropriate time. It was about 2 days ago, maybe 3 days ago now considering the time is after midnight, authority ran out for our government, through the Attorney General, to be able to bring in alien witnesses for cases involving terrorists, of all things; meaning that when the Attorney General, the Justice Department, and the intelligence communities of our government were able to mount a case against terrorists, so appropriate in view of the events of the past week, that they could bring in people with special information under what was called the “S” visa, a special program to permit aliens to come in for the specific purpose of providing information and testifying, as it were, in these cases constructed by our Justice Department against terrorists.

The authority had run out, and it ran out almost immediately after the events took place in the Pentagon and in New York. So we have to restate it as fast as possible. That is why we are here tonight, because now it becomes even more urgent that we be in a position to be able to authorize the Attorney General to continue building the cases against these new terrorists now and others yet to come, we hope not, which we will do everything we can to prevent, but we must reinstate the authority for these special visas, these “S” visas that would permit this extra arm of law enforcement to work its will.

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. Continuing to reserve my reservation of objection, Mr. Speaker, let me thank the gentleman for bringing this important initiative to the floor of the House tonight, particularly with the great need that we have. It is obvious that we are in a time deep of sorrow, and Congress continues and will continue to seek all possible avenues which would help provide assistance to the American public in our time of need.

This legislation, as the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. Gekas), the chairman has indicated, is appropriate as the U.S. attorney and the Attorney General are looking to bring solution to the heinous acts that occurred this week.

The Violent Crime Control Act of 1994 created the "S" nonimmigrant visa classification. We need to restore this visa which expired on September 12, 2001. Without this legislation, law enforcement will not be able to bring in foreign nationals who may be able to provide their needed information. It is well known that the search for the perpetrators of the heinous acts that occurred on September 11, 2001, is an international search.

Right now, the number of visas to bring individuals are limited. 200 visas are for those who provide critical information about crimes. Fifty visas are specifically devoted to those who can provide critical information about terrorism. An application for the visa must be made by a Federal, State or local law enforcement agency or by a court, and once an individual enters on an "S" visa, he or she is admitted for the purpose of cooperating with law enforcement.

This is crucial inasmuch as our Attorney General and all of the additional officials are looking to bring some resolution, great resolution to this enormous tragedy. These visas are particularly necessary because many of these people are in danger in their home countries after they have cooperated with an investigation or testified in a criminal proceeding.

There is much that this Nation has to do to, ultimately, in our future to bring closure to the terrible loss of life. In order to do this expeditiously, we need the insight of these individuals around the world who will come and testify and bring evidence so that we can put an end to these evil acts.

This legislation, I believe, is important, and so the objection that I have expressed is one that I am willingly now prepared to withdraw and ask that my colleagues do support this legislation so that we can move expeditiously in what we need to do to solve the terrible and that occurred this week.

Mr. Speaker. I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. Shimkus). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

Mr. Gekas. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks and include extraneous material on S. 1424, the Senate bill just passed.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

TERRORIST VICTIMS FLAG MEMORIAL RESOLUTION OF 2001

Mr. Ney. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on House Administration be discharged from further consideration of the resolution (H.Res. 239), providing Capitol-flown flags to each surviving victim, and the family of each deceased victim of the terrorist attacks which occurred on September 11, 2001, and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the title of the resolution.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

Mr. Baird. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I yield to the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. Ney) for an explanation of the resolution.

Mr. Ney. Mr. Speaker, I want to thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, this bill is here on behalf of the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. Hooyer), the ranking member of the Committee on House Administration, and myself.

This resolution would authorize funds for the provisions of flags that have been flown over the great Capitol to the surviving victims and the families of those who lost their lives in the tragic events of September 11, 2001.

Pursuant to this resolution, those who were injured or lost a loved one in these hideous attacks would be entitled to receive, at no cost, the United States flag. I believe all Members will agree that provisions of the flag what we believe in the symbol of our country and to give that is the least we can do to show our support for those tragically affected by these barbaric acts.

Mr. Speaker, as we stand here tonight, behind you is our flag, which is the greatest symbol of our country. And as we have the energetic give and take of public debate on the floor of this Chamber to do our duty, to represent freedom, to represent our constituents and our very American way of life, we recognize, I know, that we could not be here to have our debates and our agreements and our disagreements if it were not for the veterans of our country, who from the beginning of our revolution up through today, as our military stands ready always, as our troops are overseas in situations that put them in harm's way, and we always know through all of this that the colors do not run on that flag and neither have our veterans.

I mention the veterans because they are so important to us. Mr. Speaker, I believe also we should mention that we realize that somewhere in this tragic amount of individuals who lost their lives, there are veterans; but we also recognize in fact that there are nonveterans that have also in fact lost their lives. And it is fitting that those targeted, whether veterans or nonveterans, should receive in tribute the symbol of our great Nation, the American flag, that has been flown across the United States Capitol, the structure that houses our great institutions of democracy.

Tragically, the victims of this savage attack are numerous. Though there are many victims, each should be honored. Every single one of them. This resolution will permit Members to show that they, this Congress, and our country mourn the loss deeply of our fellow citizens and we are in solidarity with those that have had the ultimate price of their lives taken away from them and we are in deepest sympathy with their families.

It has long been the law of this Nation that those lives that were taken away were in the line of duty and it is right that those that have had the ultimate price of their lives taken away from them should be recognized as such. I hope all Members will join me in passing this resolution.

Mr. Baird. Reclaiming my time, Mr. Speaker, I want to thank the distinguished gentleman from Ohio and the gentleman from Maryland for introducing this legislation. And, parthenetically, I would like to thank them both for their support of recent efforts to counsel the staff and other Members of this body to help them deal with the events surrounding the tragedy of Tuesday.

Mr. Speaker, on Tuesday, two great symbols of the United States were attacked along with thousands of our countrymen. When the symbols of the World Trade Center took with it the lives of thousands of innocent men, women, young children, and senior citizens. We have grieved since that time, and in our grief other symbols have risen up to demonstrate our solidarity with the victims, and those symbols are those familiar stars and stripes of this American flag. As those symbols have risen, they have lifted the human spirits of our population.

It is one of the tragedies of events like this that the fire and the degree of destruction will tragically not leave remains even for the loved ones who are left behind. They will be left with memories. They will be left with horrifying images, with photographs; but they will not have even the bodies, in many cases, of their loved ones to cherish. But this body today has an opportunity to give at least something to the survivors and the families, and that something is something very precious. It is an American flag. It is a flag that will have been flown over this Capitol that stands for the entire world as a symbol itself, a symbol of freedom.

As we look up each day in the weeks to come and we see the flags symbolizing that freedom over this building, we can know, and the families of the victims can know, that those flags stand for them, they stand for future generations, and they stand for the best this country has to offer.

With this resolution, the Congress is authorizing the giving of those flags to the survivors’ families from this terrible accident; and it is our hope, however small the gesture may seem, that in some small way those flags can lift the spirits of the families as they have lifted the spirits of the Nation for many years past and for years to come.

I commend the authors of this legislation. I encourage all Americans to fly their own flags over their homes and businesses, and I hope that in some small way those flags can lift the spirits of the Nation for many years past and for years to come.

Mr. NEY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BAIIRD. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. SHIMKUS). Is there objection to the resolution of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

The Clerk reads the resolution, as follows:

Resolved.

SEC. 1. SHORT TITLE. This resolution may be cited as the “Terrorist Victims Flag Memorial Resolution of 2001.”

SEC. 2. CAPITOL-FLOWN FLAGS FOR VICTIMS OF THE SEPTEMBER 11, 2001, TERRORIST ATTACKS.

(a) AUTHORITY.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—At the request of a surviving victim, or the family of a deceased victim, of the terrorist attacks which occurred on September 11, 2001, the Representative of such victim or family may provide the victim or family with a Capitol-flown flag, not to exceed one flag per victim or family, consistent with the certificate described in paragraph (4).

(2) EFFECTIVE DATE.—Paragraph (1) shall take effect on the date on which the Committee on House Administration approves the regulations issued by the Clerk of the House of Representatives under subsection (b).

(3) COST.—Flags shall be provided at no cost to the victims or their families. Such funds as may be necessary for the administration of this program, including the purchase, storage, and delivery of flags provided pursuant to this resolution, are hereby authorized to be appropriated from the applicable accounts of the House of Representatives.

(4) CERTIFICATE DESCRIBED.—The certificate described in this paragraph is a certificate which is signed by the Speaker of the House of Representatives and the Representative providing the flag, and which reads as follows: “This flag has been flown over the United States Capitol, in memory of those who perished, and those who were injured, as a result of the terrorist attacks which occurred on September 11, 2001. It is presented to the surviving victims, and the families of their loved ones, with profound sorrow on behalf of the United States House of Representatives.”

(b) REGULATIONS AND PROCEDURES.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 30 days after the date of adoption of this resolution, the Clerk shall issue regulations for carrying out this resolution, including regulations to establish procedures (including any appropriate forms, guidelines, and accompanying certificates) for requesting a Capitol-flown flag.

(2) APPROVAL BY COMMITTEE ON HOUSE ADMINISTRATION.—The regulations issued by the Clerk under paragraph (1) shall take effect upon approval by the Committee on House Administration.

(c) APPLICABILITY.—This resolution shall only apply to victims of the terrorist attacks which occurred in the United States on September 11, 2001.

(d) DEFINITIONS.—In this resolution:

(1) the term “Capitol-flown flag” means a United States flag flown over the United States Capitol in honor of the deceased or surviving victim for whom such flag is requested;

(2) the term “Representative” includes a Delegate or Resident Commissioner to the Congress; and

(3) the term “victim” means a person who lost his or her life in, or due to, the attacks of September 11, 2001, or who sustained physical injury due to the attacks, but does not include the aircraft hijackers and any other person determined to have taken part in those attacks.

The resolution was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

EXPRESSING SENSE OF CONGRESS THAT EVERY CITIZEN IS ENCOURAGED TO DISPLAY THE FLAG

SPEECH OF
HON. BENJAMIN A. GILMAN
OF NEW YORK
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, September 12, 2001

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of this resolution, H. Con. Res. 225, and commend the gentle lady from Missouri, Congresswoman EMERSON, for drafting this measure.

I extend my condolences to the thousands of victims and their families throughout our Nation who have suffered from these terrorist attacks, and, particularly, to my colleague from New York, Mr. CROWLEY, who lost his cousin, John Moran, a New York City fire fighter, who died on Tuesday at the tragedy at the World Trade Center. Our prayers are with you and your family, and we commend your cousin John for paying the ultimate price for those in need. Our Nation’s fire fighters, law enforcement, and emergency personnel are the pillars of our community. Our entire Nation mourns when we lose any brother or sister in uniform.

Following the barbaric terrorist attacks on our great Nation, earlier this week, thousands of Americans joined together to donate their time, services, and blood to the victims of this tragic day. These charitable acts reflect the compassion of the American spirit and the respect for life we share as a nation.

This resolution further calls on our American citizenry, to raise up the flag of our Nation as a symbolic gesture of the solidarity of our Nation and as a proclamation to the cowards who perpetrated these heinous attacks that we, as a nation, continue to stand as the beacon of freedom in this world. Their attempt to bring chaos and terror to the hearts of Americans has only brought forth the great sense of patriotism, liberty, and kindness which stands as the cornerstone of our Nation.

I proudly join the Members of this House and millions of Americans in supporting this measure and calling for all our neighbors to display, with pride, resilience, and solidarity, the stars and stripes of the United States of America.

God bless the American people and the United States.

PRAYER FOR WORLD TRADE CENTER DISASTER

HON. LAMAR S. SMITH
OF TEXAS
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Friday, September 14, 2001

Mr. SMITH of Texas. Mr. Speaker, the following prayer is from the website spirituality.com. It can inspire us all.

PRAYER FOR MY BROTHER
(By Laura Matthews)

At the moment I write this, I’ve just heard that one of the World Trade Center buildings has collapsed. My brother works in that building, and there’s been no word. I’ve been in touch with my family around the country, and we’re all praying. This is my prayer for my brother.

Where can my heart go when there is no news, and perhaps no hope? I must go to the one almighty God. I must know His almighty presence.

I dig deep into what I know to be true. There is only one God, divine Life, holy Love. The God that my brother loves and serves is the God that connects us all—terrorist and victim alike. My thought now is echoing with God, that oneness that fills all space, in offices, stairwells, plazas, airplanes. I refuse to conceive of any space that is not filled with God. I place my brother in that space, wholeheartedly. He can’t leave that space, it surrounds him and upholds him and guides him.

I see my brother continuing to walk through life, as he has every day until now and will forever, with the glory of God shining through him. I’m not seeing his life as something that can end. I’m seeing it as eternal, as full, complete, ideal. I’m clinging to this, because the thought that there may be death to deal with in my family’s future cannot be the final word. The final word must be: Life. It must be God.

God is there, in New York, in Jerusalem, in Washington, in Baghdad. God is here with me in Boston. It’s not a bunch of gods scattered all about, but the one God, literally filling all space, blanketing all creation. I touch that one God in thought and I’m touching all creation. And that God is holding my brother close, with all the others—all of them. It’s not only my brother or our family. It’s entire buildings, entire cities, entire countries. I’m putting it all in the divine space, everyone, every action, every life-span. That space contains nothing but Love and glory. The pain, fear and confusion are nothing within that holy place.

My brother and all the people involved are in that holy place. I am holding them there in thought. It is the structure of Love that surrounds them, and it cannot be destroyed.

(Later the author got word that her brother was five minutes away from his office when the building was hit.)

HONORING THE HEROISM OF AIRLINE PILOT JASON DAHL

HON. SCOTT McINNIS
OF COLORADO
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Friday, September 14, 2001

Mr. McINNIS. Mr. Speaker, on September 11, 2001, we experienced the most vicious and horrific terrorist attack on our soil in America’s history. This deliberate and systematic assault on innocent American civilians resulted in numerous fatalities. One of the hijacked planes, United Airlines Flight 93, en route from Newark to San Francisco, crashed into Stoney Creek Township in Pennsylvania. Jason Dahl—a resident of Ken Caryl, Colorado—was the pilot of that plane. While three other hijacked aircraft made it to their intended targets including the World Trade Center and the Pentagon, this aircraft did not. While we may never know exactly what transpired on that aircraft and particularly in the cockpit of flight 93, Jason Dahl, in one manner or another, gathered the courage and bravery to resist the attack and avoid another massive strike on America. Due to his selfless act of sacrifice, Mr. Speaker, I would like to pay tribute to Jason Dahl today and recognize him as a hero worthy of this body.

Last week, Jason floated an e-mail to his colleagues requesting a switch in flights because he wanted to spend more time with his family. Since no one was able to take the flight from Newark to San Francisco, Jason fulfilled his responsibility and as a result he, his co-pilot, 38 passengers and five flight attendants were led to their death by the terrorists on-board.

Jason Dahl resided in the Ken Caryl Ranch area in Colorado. He was well respected and liked by his neighbors. By his very act shying away from the opportunity to extend a helping hand, Jason was a dedicated husband to Sandy, father to Matt, his son, and friend to many. Furthermore, he was a “standards” captain for United Airlines. This special role allowed Jason to not only fly aircraft, but also provided... the opportunity to teach and test other pilots. Many of his counterparts recognized Jason as a very capable and skilled captain.

Mr. Speaker, the wishes of the terrorists aboard United Flight 93 may never be understood, but we can deduce that something went wrong in the pursuit of their ultimate objective. Jason was probably the reason behind the failure of their mission, and in so doing, he saved American lives. While many people died in this tragedy, we must recognize the greater triumph of the situation and the battle against terrorism that was claimed in this particular moment. Mr. Speaker, Jason Dahl emerged as a national hero on September 11 and I would like to acknowledge his patriotic sacrifice. My warmest regards and deepest sympathy are extended toward his family at this time of remembrance. Jason Dahl will be remembered as a hero who gave his life to America and we will all miss him dearly.

EXTENSIONS OF REMARKS

HON. PETE SESSIONS
OF TEXAS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Friday, September 14, 2001

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. Speaker, Tuesday morning the American people were viciously and deliberately attacked by terrorists in what I consider to be an act of war.

We have entered into a new era in world history. Terrorists have now begun to flout international law and standards of common decency. They target the American people because we are strong and because they are weak. Some say that we cannot and should not be the world’s policeman. But we will serve justice and we will punish those who are responsible.

This battle is a new kind of war, and we must be prudent in how we prosecute it. All nations who harbor, who train, who support, who fund these terrorist groups, bear equal responsibility for the actions of these terrorists.

We must dedicate the proper resources to deal with them in the appropriate way. Terrorists may be able to run, but they cannot hide from America’s determination and justice.

Many of those who died were dedicated public servants. They were members of our armed forces, firefighters, and police officers. They were people dedicated to serving and protecting America. Others were citizens dedicating to living the American dream, who had wives or husbands or children or parents who loved them and who will miss them.

These people were innocent victims in a war conducted against America by terrorists who attacked unsuspecting civilian targets. It is now time we begin to fight back.

On behalf of myself and the Fifth District of Texas, I would like to express my deepest condolences the families of the victims. May God protect them in this time of trouble.

HONORING MACLOVIO “JOE” LOPEZ JR.

HON. SCOTT McINNIS
OF COLORADO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Friday, September 14, 2001

Mr. McINNIS. Mr. Speaker, It is with profound sadness that I pay tribute to Maclovio “Joe” Lopez who passed away on September 11, 2001. Joe, 41 years old, was a native of Pueblo, Colorado and was traveling from Boston to Los Angeles on business when his United Airlines Flight 175 was hijacked and crashed into the World Trade Center in New York City.

Joe Lopez was born and reared in Colorado, the second oldest of seven children to Maclovio and Martha Lopez. Joe graduated from Pueblo County High School prior to pursuing a career that would ultimately require him to frequently travel from Los Angeles to Colorado. Joe’s commute landed into the evil hands of cowardly terrorists who horrified our nation by attacking innocent American citizens.
The events that took place on September 11, 2001 will never be forgotten. It is the duty of our nation not only to remember that day, but also to honor those individuals whose lives were so quickly lost. Joe Lopez was a loving and honorable man. My heart and prayers go out to Joe’s friends and family during this time of mourning. They can rest assured that we will come together as a Nation to see that the proper course of action is taken against these criminals and their sympathizers. Joe was an outstanding member of his community and a heroic role model for others. I would like to extend my deepest sympathy and warmest regards to Maclovio “Joe” Lopez’s family and my thoughts and prayers along with those of our Nation are with them.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

HON. CAROLYN C. KILPATRICK
OF MICHIGAN
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Friday, September 14, 2001
Ms. KILPATRICK. Mr. Speaker, due to official functions scheduled in the 15th Congressional District of Michigan, I am unable to return to Washington; therefore I respectfully request a leave of absence from business for Friday, September 14. Had I been present, I would have voted “aye” on H.R. 2888, the bill providing emergency supplemental appropriations, Rollcall No. 341.

AMERICAN VETERANS COMMITTEE (AVC) INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS PLATFORM AND RESOLUTIONS

HON. ALBERT RUSSELL WYNN OF MARYLAND
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Friday, September 14, 2001
Mr. WYNN. Mr. Speaker, today I recognize the American Veterans Committee (AVC). The American Veterans Committee is an outstanding organization of American veterans with ongoing concerns and interest in our foreign policy and international affairs. I submit for the RECORD their International Affairs Platform and Resolutions, as prepared by the American Veterans Committee, International Affairs Commission and adopted by the American Veterans Committee (AVC) National Board at the National Board Meeting, Tuesday, August 26, 1997, with appropriate changes as of August 2001.

AMERICAN VETERANS COMMITTEE (AVC) INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS PLATFORM

We, the members of the American Veterans Committee (AVC), believe that in international affairs the objective of the United States of America (US) is the maintenance of peace with justice for all. The world must avoid the holocaust of nuclear war. The restoration of diplomatic relations with the People’s Republic of China, the end of the Cold War, the dissolution of the Soviet Union, and the fall of the Berlin Wall brought much hope of the avoidance of nuclear war—at least among the major powers—in the foreseeable future. Many international problems remain including the threat of international terrorism. The United States and the US has been active—along with the United Nations—in dealing with hostilities in the Middle East and the Balkan States, Central and Southeast Asia, such African states as Somalia, Rwanda and Zaire (now the Democratic Republic of the Congo), and in Central America and the Caribbean. The work of the US has aided in establishing and restoring elective governments wherever possible.

EXTENSIONS OF REMARKS

September 14, 2001
Within that framework, US foreign policy, like US domestic policy, must seek always to advance social justice and the welfare of the individual, in all classes and without regard to race, religion, ethnicity, language, gender, sexual orientation, or age. Our policies must strive for real salvation of the world envisioned in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, a world in which all might eat and sleep in safety, live under and vote in an effective government, with realistic hope and opportunity of attaining their reasonable aspirations.

I. THE UNITED NATIONS AND WORLD GOVERNANCE

The United Nations, in spite of the recognized areas which require strengthening, continues to be the best hope for peace in the world. American support of the UN must be an essential part of our foreign policy. The authority of the UN can be strengthened in a process in which selected elements of national sovereignty will be progressively transferred, that will enhance the fundamental freedoms and the well-being of all the peoples of the world. AVC supports the following principles, reforms and programs for a strengthened UN:

1. International law governing disputes and conduct of UN member states, and other states, with one another should be improved, clarified, codified, and obeyed. The US and all member states should work within the UN for the development of clear, well-understood and respected international law. All member states should accept the jurisdiction of the International Court of Justice (ICJ) to interpret and implement international law.

2. Debtor states must pay their UN past and current dues and assessments.

3. The effectiveness of the UN must be improved through better financing, including such mechanisms that will bring in appropriate revenue from developed nations of the world.

4. The UN structures for dispute mediation and conflict prevention and resolution must be strengthened.

5. Further international cooperation for peace and sustainable development should be enhanced.

6. Movement should be made toward a genuine career UN civil service.

7. The influence of civil society at the UN should be strengthened.

8. The integrity and independence of the Office of the Secretary General, as expressed in the UN Charter, are crucial to the strength and effectiveness of the UN. The US should oppose any attempt to weaken the powers of this office. AVC commends the leadership of the present Secretary General, Kofi Annan, in making the organization work more effectively . . . and extends its very best wishes to him on his election to a well deserved second five-year term.

II. WORLD VETERANS FEDERATION (WVF)

AVC points with pride to and pledges continuing support for the World Veterans Federation (WVF), a worldwide organization of former combatants whose activities are a remarkable example of the kind of productive international cooperation on which lasting world peace and justice can be built. AVC thus is proud to have been one of those veterans’ organizations formed to establish WVF more than a half century ago, and took part in the recognition of the WVF 50th Anniversary, and looks forward to the 25th General Assembly in South Africa in 2001.

III. THE RIGHTS OF AND RESPECT FOR WOMEN

leaders. AVC in its Platform is guided by the 1995 Beijing Conference and its “Platform for Action,” which set forth the UN’s and OAU’s Declaration of Principles on New Partnership for Africa’s Economic Development, during the last half decade. In 1996, the UN convened the Fourth World Conference on Women in Beijing, China. The Conference was the first to allow the participation of women from all countries and the “Platform for Action,” the definitive statement of women’s agenda for empowerment world-wide. Since that time, the “Platform for Action” has been the basis for evaluating the international community’s progress in meeting the goals set forth in that document. This has been done during the yearly UN Committee on the Status of Women since 1996.

A Special session of the UN General Assembly was called in the year 2000, “Beijing + 5,” which looked at how far the goals of this Platform have been achieved. That Session reaffirmed the principles and commitments expressed in the “Platform for Action.” Further, it formed a Post-Beijing Declaration which called upon all nations to take further actions and initiatives to implement the Platform. It also urged a greater role for women in all decision processes related to the furthering of new ground, “Beijing + 5” introduced new focal points of concern for women: HIV/AIDS and racial discrimination. Both of these issues were integral to the discussions of the new UN Commission on the status of Women in 2001. Now in 2001 and looking forward to subsequent years in this decade, AVC reaffirms its support for the rights of and respect for women.

IV. NUCLEAR TESTING AND DISARMAMENT AND THE TREATY BANNING CHEMICAL WEAPONS

Complete elimination of nuclear weapons testing and the adoption of international controls on this most dangerous technology must be the goal of American foreign policy. Our world finds itself in the unique and unenviable position where one generation can make life on Earth unlivable for later generations.

The adoption by the UN of a Comprehensive Test Ban Treaty in September 1996 is a unique and unenviable position where one technology must be the goal of American testing and the establishment of international control over the use of this Earth.

The anti-personnel land mines, and the ban on testing of these weapons, provides a new opportunity to forge the weapons of tomorrow. By making this decision, the US must continue to allocate so high a percentage of its membership. Its continued organization and operation should reflect the changing purpose. AVC is clearly aware of the division with respect to the issue of expansion of the current discussions of NATO and Russia, with respect to a broader membership, while at the same time being aware of the concern of Russia with respect to broad membership that may also include former Soviet republics. Finally, very careful consideration should be given to the possibility of NATO actually becoming a part of the UN.

In Latin America we must make every effort to erase the image of the US as a prospector, patronizing, and paternalistic benefactor or intervener in the economic and political development of those nations. It should be the objective of the US foreign policy to create instead an image of a US that wants to be a good partner as well as a good neighbor. It is only in this way that Latin America will respect our own destiny.

The US should, at every turn, encourage the UN or the Organization of American States (OAS) to be the forum in which to resolve differences and disagreements among or with our Latin American neighbors. We must show that we have no desire to impose our own form of government or way of life upon any country of Latin America. The US nevertheless continues to believe in the effectiveness of a democratic form of government for all people at the very least to enjoy adequate food and shelter, and education and health.

VI. THE UNITED STATES AND THE WORLD

At the beginning of the second millennium, the US must continue to be willing to help the developing nations of Africa, Asia, and Latin America to direct their own destinies. The US, as the largest of the developed nations. And the services of the UN specialized agencies, for example, the World Health Organization (WHO) and the many NGOs that work on the needs of the developing nations. Thus, every consideration must be given to the problem of AIDS, especially in the developing countries. Thus, especially with respect to the developing nations, the US as well as other developed nations must make every effort to provide pharmaceutical supplies to combat the AIDS epidemic at a cost reasonable to be met in the developing nations.

The gap between the social and economic bases of the developed countries and those of the developing countries to widen. The decline in relative socioeconomic position of developing nations, accompanied as it is by a population explosion (now being recently abundant) and the shift of capital from the developing to the developed world, has led to dangerous tension and the outbreak of violence and disorder in many areas of the world. Africa faces particularly difficult problems. African institutions, such as the Organization of African Unity (OAU), have confronted these problems and deserve the continuing support of the US and other nations in the region.

Acknowledging that the ability of the US to underwrite services in assistance of all foreign countries is limited, its efforts to aid developing countries have been limited to areas of greatest potential for success. Priority should be given to those countries which can make the most rational and productive use of such aid, humanitarian considerations aside under conditions of famine and natural disasters. In evaluating the effectiveness of US aid, due weight should be given not only to economic considerations but also to the strengthening of democratic institutions and the consolidation of efforts on a regional basis.

Only when and only when it is clear that armed force is necessary to thwart a take-over by powers iminical to the survival of a nation and developing nations should the US furnish military assistance. Even then, it should with the approval of the UN and support of the regional organizations.

VIII. ISRAEL AND THE ARAB STATES

AVC strongly supports the efforts of the US to achieve the peace process begun at Camp David in 1979, continued at Madrid in 1991, further affirmed at Oslo in 1993, reflected further in the Wye Memorandum. The agreements flowing from Camp David in 2000, and now the services of a US representative. As long as the US should be set, the ultimate goal of peace with security for Israel should be the fulfillment of the UN Security Council Resolution 242 (1967); that Resolution requires that Israel evacuate the territory occupied in that year in return for recognition by Arab countries of Israel’s right to exist in a place to live would be a result of new monetary and financial direction. In reviewing the historic and almost legendary Bretton Woods Conference and succeeding meetings on global financial structure, AVC reflects on the one hand what the World Bank and the IMF have accomplished and at the same time what the two structures have failed to attain. The brave new world of global financial institutions, translational corporations, and free trade, while having benefited some people, has also given far more attention to the substantial reduction of the ever widening distance between the rich and the poor.

(NAFTA) have the support of those who point out that new jobs are created and the world is moving in the direction of bon-programmes; at the same time, those who oppose both focus on the loss of jobs in the US, the erosion of labor and environmental standards. AVC favors continuing the ongoing public discussion of WTO and NAFTA.

X. GLOBALISM, REGIONS, AND SUB-REGIONS

As the world is and has been organized, AVC has already confirmed its support for the UN and the realization of the direction of world trade. At the same time, we note such other organizational as (1) nations brought together in the Helsinki Accord, 1975; (2) the European Union; (3) the OAU, that is, the Organization of African Unity; (4) the nations in Southern Asia brought together in a pact more than a score of years ago; and (5) the OAS, that is, the Organization of American States.

With respect to subregions, AVC notes the Stability Pact of Southeastern Balkan nations—Bosnia-Herzegovina, Croatia, Macedo-ния, Slovenia, and of late Yugoslav Serbia, as well as Albania, Bulgaria, Hungary, and Romania—that have seen civil and other strife during, for instance, the 22nd General Assembly of the WVP, the conference approved the establishment of the Standing Committee on Women of Asia and the Pacific (SCOW-Asia/Pacific) of other Standing Committees for other world regions.

Again with respect to the OAU, AVC notes the reassuring meeting of the OAU Ministers of State 8–10 July 2000 and the subsequent meeting of OAU Heads of State 10–12 July 2000 . . . and the agreements with respect to economic, political, education, and health problems and issues in the nations that met in Rome, Togo, West Africa.

INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS RESOLUTIONS

1. THE UNITED NATIONS—SUPPORT WITH REFORM

Recognizing that the American Veterans Committee (AVC) has been a steady supporter of the United Nations (UN) since its inception in 1945 and has taken a very active role in the World Veterans Federation (WVF), AVC is pleased to have in the capacity of a non-governmental organization (NGO) at the UN.

Recognizing further and commending the UN for the UN War Crimes Tribunal, now embracing Yugoslavia and Rwanda, and noting that in carrying out the objectives of the UN position Slobodan Milosevic has been before the War Crimes Tribunal for crimes against humanity;

Recognizing nevertheless that time as brought the need for reform of a number of the systems and activities of the UN and those of some of its member states; and observing further that some member states and even our own country, the US, have failed to meet their financial obligations as dues-paying members in the UN.

Resolved by AVC:

1. THAT debtor states should pay their dues in full to fulfill their treaty obligations; that stringent consequences for continued non-payment must be instituted.

2. THAT the implementation of the UN must be improved through better financing. Careful consideration must be given to such proposals as the following: (a) a treaty among members to establish partial self-financing of UN peace-keeping and other programs through a worldwide tax on airline tickets and the value of ocean freight; (b) a surcharge on international postage items; (c) a surcharge on international postage items; (d) national legislation within member states to ease the way to voluntary individual contributions; (e) sale of UN bonds to private individuals and of extra premium postage stamps; (f) support for UN structures for dispute mediation and conflict prevention and resolution be strengthened through the establishment of a UN Peace Observation Corps of 10,000 high-trained professionals, observers, and mediators to assist the Security Council and Secretary General—backed by a competent research and analysis unit—to track potential crisis situations and, further, to identify the most successful approaches to conflict prevention and resolution from past crises.

3. THAT UN peacekeeping capability be improved through such means as (a) predesignation of peace-keeping units in their own forces by member states with provision for joint training of such designated units to be financed either through voluntary contributions or regular peace-keeping expenditures; (b) a task force established by the Security Council to investigate practical detail of a small UN Readiness Force, to be placed at the disposal of the Security Council—10,000 troops composed of volunteers contributed by small units (companies or battalions) . . . and with the purpose of intervention in the early stages of the possible conflict before it expands to widespread fighting and, when not engaged in peace-keeping operations to train peace-keeping personnel of interested member states; (c) a second task force established by the Security Council to investigate practical steps to revitalize the Military Staff Committee (foreseen in the UN Charter) with responsibility for enforcement, peace-keeping operation, and disarmament.

4. THAT the Security Council become more responsible to the concerns of the General Assembly through arranging for regular presentations of the Council and discussion by the latter of the views of the General Assembly, as reflected in the Assembly Resolutions, with the President of the Assembly serving on the Council, and through continued study of the representative qualities of the UNSC membership.

5. THAT the rule of law among nations be strengthened through (a) a movement toward universal acceptance of the jurisdiction of the International Court of Justice (ICJ) by introducing a procedure where the Security Council would decide, in cases where continuing bilateral disputes threaten world security, to require the UN member states involved (including Security Council members) either to present themselves to conciliation proceedings or to take the dispute to the ICJ; (b) General Assembly authorization of the Secretary General to Article 96 of the Charter, to turn to the ICJ for advisory opinions; and (c) provision that individuals or groups who consider that their rights have not been respected may petition the UN High Commissioner for Human Rights for reaction and then, if the issue is not resolved, to petition the General Assembly for a hearing.

6. THAT the Security Council for peace and substantial development be enhanced through the establishment of a UN Economic Security Council to take the place of the current Economic Development Council.

7. THAT enabling the establishment of a partial self-financing program for the UN Development Program to balance the interests of citizens, nations, and corporations in an increasingly globalized economy and, in particular, to improve coordination on economic and social programs within the UN system;

8. THAT movement be made toward a genuine career UN civil service, with training of UNEs at all levels to include the recognition of diversity of cultures. And further, with the elimination of political appointments, level-by-level over a period of years, new functions in the UN with the exception of the Secretary General and his immediate staff being held only by those who have passed the UN entry examination or满足 other well-established professional criteria including maintenance of a high-level of performance.

9. THAT the influence of civil society at the UN be strengthened through measures such as a biennial Citizens’ Assembly at the UN representing all non-governmental organizations (NGOs). The Citizens’ Assembly would develop concepts and proposals for transmittal to and discussion by the General Assembly with widest possible participation through all UN conferences. AVC, it might be noted, has always made its contribution to the UN operation by serving as an NGO.

10. THAT isolationism within the US be fought in all its forms, as the US with about five percent of the world’s population needs the assurance of a necessary and vital bridge to the rest of the world.

11. THAT funding of the UN Trusteeship Council should end inasmuch as there are no international trust territories remaining, eliminating a stark example of bureaucratic waste within the UN itself and setting a precedent for other comparable action as warranted.

II. US RATIFICATION OF UNITED NATIONS HUMAN RIGHTS COVENANTS

Supporting since the adoption by the UN nearly a half-century ago of the “Universal Declaration of Human Rights” philosophy and concept of human rights for all people all over the globe;

Supporting further the US Human Rights Covenants on Economic, Social, and Cultural Rights—as well as the UN Human Rights Covenants on Civil and Political Rights;

Noting that more than 150 nations of the world have ratified the UN Human Rights Covenants;

Supporting further that the US become a signatory to the UN Human Rights Covenants during the administration of President Jimmy Carter;

AVC respectfully urges the President of the United States to take all immediate and reasonable steps to move the US not only as a signatory but also as a nation ratifying both UN Human Rights Covenants (a) Economic, Social, and Cultural as well as (b) Civil and Political Rights.

III. US RATIFICATION OF RELEVANT CONVENTIONS, PROTOCOLS AND TREATIES ON WOMEN’S RIGHTS

Recognizing the importance of the UN Conventions on the Elimination of Discrimination Against Women; other international conventions and treaties which promote the human rights of women and their desire for full equality with men in all pursuits of life;

AVC calls for the US Senate (a) to endorse the CEDAW which would make the US a signatory to the CEDAW and (b) to support international conventions and treaties promoting the rights and interests of women;

AVC affirms the preposition spelled out in Platform For Action that human rights are universal and equally applicable to women; the inherent and indivisible rights of women must be affirmed by the inter-national community, and support the Misa Statement from Beijing that “equality between women and men is a matter of human rights and a condition for social justice and peace.”
N.B. The previous statement flows from the UN 4th International Conference on Women, held in Beijing, China, September, 1995.

IV. THE UNITED NATIONS ASSOCIATION/US and THE WORLD FEDERALIST ASSOCIATION
Recognizing for decades that the World Federalist Association (WFA) in the US and World Federalism elsewhere in the world have appropriately emphasized the global nature of the Earth and our life on therein;
Recognizing further that the work of the UN Association (UNA-US) in its support of the UN itself has similarly reflected an understanding of the global nature of the world;
Observing that both of these organizations have emphasized the great need of peoples to work together for a better world while their governments work together in the UN for peace and security;
Having members of AVC also in positions of leadership in the UNA-US and WFA and likewise in positions of leadership in the UNA-US;
Believing today that the WFA position is still sound and that its national and regional meetings are productive, having produced recent leadership in advancing the international criminal court, the Hague Appeal for Peace, a UN readiness force, and adequate UN funding . . . likewise noting the effectiveness and value of the results achieved by the national and regional assemblies of the UNA-US;
AVC finds that both the work of the UNA-US and the World Federalist Association have goals and programs that lead to a stronger and more productive relationship of the peoples in the nations of the world; and, therefore, AVC supports both of these organizations.

V. US SUPPORT FOR THE REPORT ON THE IMPACT OF ARMED CONFLICT ON CHILDREN
Noting with satisfaction the release of the important study of the “Impact Of Armed Conflict On Children” by the WVF;
Reaffirming AVC’s traditional support for strict adherence to international humanitarian laws and human rights standards in situations of armed conflict;
Reaffirming further our support for the implementation of the Convention of the Rights of the Child;
Feesed that the WVF is a part of the Coalition Against the Use of Child Soldiers and the findings of the Report “Impact Of Armed Conflict On Children.” AVC also (a) urges upon the International community to offer special care and protection of referred and internally placed children and (b) urges international support for the findings of the Report, including calling upon governments to prevent the recruitment and demobilization of children under the age of 18.

VI. BAN ON “ANTI-PERSONNEL” MINE
Noting that the US used the phrase “global humanitarian tragedy caused by the indiscriminate use of anti-personnel land mines”;
Reviewing the long-standing position of AVC in support of the total ban of land mines, or anti-personnel mines;
Noting at the same time that generals of the US Armed Forces established that land mines hurt the US more than they helped our Armed Forces;
Continuing to observe that around the world children and women and other civilians have sustained injuries and even death from land mines;
AVC continues respectfully to urge the President of the United States to adopt a strong position with the goal of eliminating land mines, or anti-personnel mines, from our global life.

VII. WORLD VETERANS FEDERATION—A HALF CENTURY OF AVC SUPPORT
Reviewing with gratification the more than half century history of the WVF and the continuing support of AVC in WVF in 1950 as well as the continuing AVC membership now in 2001;
Reviewing also the long and consistent support of WVF in behalf of veterans as well as those who have suffered on account of war—the WVF program always including support of the UN;
Recalling the guidance of WVF by the CREDO created by the late UN Undersecretary General Ralph J. Bunche . . . the CREDO having the celebrated phase “None can speak more eloquently of peace than those who have fought in war”;
Noting that WVF has consistently brought the veterans of the world to its General Assemblies, Council meetings, and such special meetings as the the 1990 Conference on the Mediterranean held in Malta, and observing that it planned its 23rd General Assembly (Paris 2000):
Taking pride in the fifty-year leadership of WVF Presidents and Secretaries General;
The American Veterans Committee continues to support without reservation the World Veterans Federation and looks forward to continuing membership and contributions.

VIII. THE SOUTHEAST BALKAN STATES
Having goals of peace, security, and development in the Balkans and well aware that what was once Yugoslavia is now Yugoslavia, Serbia (including Montenegro), Bosnia-Herzegovina, Croatia, Macedonia, and Slovenia and further recognizing that this European sub-region also includes such nations as Albania, Bulgaria, Hungary, Romania, and Turkey;
Noting with appreciation that the World Veterans Federation (WVF) brought together its member organizations from its 1970 International Conference, Luxembourg, 5-7 May 1996) to arrive at “principles to be followed and measures to be taken” for attainment of those goals . . . and that the Luxembourg International Conference carefully took into account the position adopted in Dayton (Ohio/USA) with respect to Bosnia-Herzegovina;
Aware that peoples of different ethnic, religious, and historical background do have differences, sometimes substantial almost insurmountable differences;
Noting further that the Stability Pact includes a “Coordinator,” a citizen of a nation not among those of the Eastern Balkans;
Supporting the Stability Pact and the elections of a democratic state and urging the peoples to support the results of the elections wherever in the Balkan States;
Also supporting the position that individuals accused of “war crimes or crimes against humanity” must be brought before the appropriate court;
Believing that conflict of the totality of the Balkan States that “recognition by every State in the region of all the other States in the region and renunciation of all forms of national chauvinism in the formation of ‘greater State,’ ethnocentrism, xenophobia, and intolerance toward minorities”;
Continuing to respect the final act of Helsinki, which emphasizes the security and cooperation in Europe.

The American Veterans Committee continues to adopt the position that mediation and discussion, together with (a) peace-keeping, economic, and infrastructural support from NATO and the UN, including in both instances the US, and (b) vital governing provisions of Bosnia-Herzegovina and other Balkan States will lead to a state of multi-ethnic, multi-culture, and multi-denomination with full respect for the rights of all the people concerned.

IX. ISRAEL AND THE MIDDLE EAST
Applauding in the early days of AVC the establishment of the nation of Israel;
Supporting the leadership of President Jimmy Carter in bringing together Prime Minister Menachem Begin of Israel and Egypt’s leader Anwar Sadat;
Noting with satisfaction the further movement toward conciliation, reconciliation, and peace formulated by Palestinian Authority and the present and immediate past Prime Ministers of Israel;
Urging the leaders of Israel and Palestine today to continue using mediation in arriving at agreements, including an agreement with respect to East Jerusalem;
AVC continues to support the right of Israel to peace and economic and sociocultural development and the use of the instruments of discussion and mediation in the consideration of all elements and aspects of difference and conflict between Israel and its neighboring peoples and nations—whether they be Palestine, Jordan, Syria, Lebanon, or any other nation state. AVC in supporting the above stated development in Israel in no way implies that it does not support similar development of Palestine as well as all other nations as they too seek peace and improvement of the quality of life for their peoples.

X. CUBA
Observing that Fidel Castro has been in power in Cuba for more than forty years and that all efforts to remove him and change his regime have been and continue to be futile;
Recalling that the US has resumed relations with Germany, Japan, and Vietnam in no way implies that it does not support the above stated development in Cuba for more than forty years and that all efforts to remove him and change his regime have been and continue to be futile;
Believing that the Helms-Burton Act has not been and will not be effective in achieving its stated goals, and further noting that this Act of Congress has only created conflict between us and our close allies;
AVC believes that the US appropriate to the present times should establish diplomatic relations, permit commercial relations, continue to provide humanitarian aid, and end the application of sanctions that adversely affect Cuba and our allies.

HONORING RICHARD “AL” SEAGLER
HON. SCOTT McNINNS
COLORADO
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Friday, September 14, 2001
Mr. McNINNS. Mr. Speaker, I would like to take this opportunity to honor Richard “Al” Seagler for his service to our great nation in World War II. Anticipating that he would get drafted, Al courageously enlisted with the Navy. It is my pleasure to pay tribute to Mr. Seagler for the sacrifices he made in preserving the freedom of our nation.
Mr. Seagler experienced many sleepless nights as Japanese forces made countless attacks on his construction battalion that was located on the island of Guadalcanal. The campaign at Guadalcanal cost America a great number of lives before the United States decisively took the island and changed the course of the Pacific Theater in World War II forever. Mr. Seagler played a vital role in America’s course of action by directing a construction battalion whose job included providing a workable infrastructure for American troops and maintaining open supply lines in Guadalcanal.

These important construction battalions were known as “Seabees,” but their name and recognition have since disappeared from our national memory. Mr. Seagler sweated his days away in order to sustain the American operations in the region. In addition, Al accomplished many great feats in the construction battalion while dodging the enemy’s bullets, living in a disease-infested jungle, and laying down to sleep to the sound of the Japanese fighter planes bombing the Guadalcanal coast.

Mr. Speaker, Mr. Seagler showed great courage and heroism as a soldier in World War II. Therefore, it is my privilege to acknowledge his honor and pride for our great Nation. Al is still an active citizen in Montrose, Colorado where he has served as a role model for both young and old. I commend Mr. Seagler for his distinguished service to the state of Colorado and our great Nation.

STATEMENT ON HOWARD AND RIETA PARK CIRCumnavigating the Globe

HON. ROB SIMMONS
OF CONNECTICUT
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Friday, September 14, 2001

Mr. SIMMONS. Mr. Speaker, I rise to recognize Howard and Rieta Park, a couple from my hometown of Stonington, CT, who, on June 10, 2001, concluded a 31,000-mile sailing journey around the world.

Traveling on their 53-foot Sparrman and Stevens yawl, named COMET, the Park’s odyssey took them across the Caribbean, through the Panama Canal to the Galapagos Islands, across the Pacific to the French Marquesas, the Cooke Islands, Tonga, Fiji, New Zealand, and New Caledonia.

They continued to the Great Barrier Reef along the Australian coast, across the Indian Ocean, around the tip of South Africa’s Cape of Good Hope and through the southern Atlantic Ocean on their way to St. John, the U.S. Virgin Islands. The Parks finally came home to Stonington, where they began their journey in November 1998.

To plan to undertake such a daunting journey is impressive enough—to complete the journey is truly remarkable. The trip was not without danger. Howard Park spoke of one day when he saw what he believed to be a whale alongside their craft. As COMET neared the submerged figure it rolled and dove under the boat, lifting the entire vessel out of the water for a moment.

EXPRESSIONS OF REMARKS

As the tail of the creature rose behind the yawl’s rear, Howard Park did not see a whale’s tail but the back fin of a shark. The 60-foot beast was a shy, basking shark, and the silently moving boat had startled it. Howard Park said the image of this giant tail rising out of the water would remain with him forever.

There were also sites of extraordinary beauty. The Parks had not seen land for 19 days when they approached the Marquesas Islands. They waited until dusk to pull into port, giving them the opportunity to watch the sunrise over the volcanic peaks of Hiva Oa. Describing what they saw, Howard Park said, “There were high, high mountain peaks and indescribably beautiful vegetation.”

Why undertake such an intimidating journey? The answer lies within the heart and soul of mankind. We are inquisitive, and we dream. Throughout history men have sought to find out what lies beyond the next hill—what waits to be discovered beyond the horizon, and they have followed their dreams into reality.

That we might know the unknown we have traveled to the depths of the oceans and have reached far beyond our own globe to the distant stars. It is our nature to dream—and to try and satisfy that dream.

The Parks have experienced the journey of a lifetime. And why not? Life is a finite adventure. There is only one, certain end. We should make our voyage as sweeping, as productive, as positive, and as exhilarating as possible.

Reflecting on life’s adventure, Theodore Roosevelt said, “He must long greatly for the lonely winds that blow across the wilderness and for sunrise and sunset over the rim of the empty world. His heart must thrill for the sad and for the heartstone. The joy of living is his who has the heart to demand it.”

I commend Howard and Rieta Park on their exceptional achievement. As we go through life, may we, like the Parks, treasure images that will remain with us forever. And like Theodore Roosevelt, may we realize that the joy of living is his who has the heart to demand it.

EXPRESSING SENSE OF SENATE AND HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES REGARDING TERRORIST ATTACKS LAUNCHED AGAINST UNITED STATES

SPEECH OF
HON. NICK LAMPSON
OF TEXAS
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, September 11, 2001

Mr. LAMPSON. Mr. Speaker, I rise today with a heavy heart to express for the people of Southeast Texas and myself our sympathy for those who have lost loved ones in the horrible tragedy our country suffered yesterday.

I have received many messages of well wishes and sympathy from constituents and friends around the world. A member of the French parliament, for example, asked me to please transmit his profound sympathies to the U.S. Congress and the American people.

Mr. Speaker, I ask my colleagues to support this resolution, and I ask that God bless America.

Tribute to Joey Bishop

HON. JAMES A. TRAFICANT, JR.
OF OHIO
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Friday, September 14, 2001

Mr. TRAFICANT. Mr. Speaker, Joey Bishop is a great American. He began his work in the boxing industry in 1939 at the Dick Mettee Gym training boxers. In 55 years, Joey Bishop won 250 amateur bouts, 38 senior bouts, and has refereed 3,500 bouts. At the age of 72, his record of 288 wins and 0 losses remained unscathed when he retired after defeating Canadian Welterweight Champion Boysie Phillips. This most impressive victory gave him the Indianapolis Senior Boxing Welterweight Championship belt.

Mr. Speaker, Joey Bishop is not only an excellent athlete, but he is also a Army Veteran. He participated in the Special Services Boxing Unit, and won the Pan American Lightweight belt in 1943, and the Pan Am Welterweight title in 1944. Joey has also served for over 15 years on the Ohio Boxing Commission.

I am calling today to pay tribute to Joey Bishop. It is a privilege and an honor to represent such a fine American, and I will always consider Joe as my friend.
Mr. HALL of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, like my constituents in the Dayton, Ohio, area, and all Americans, I am shocked and horrified by the brutal terrorist attack on our Nation on September 11. I am saddened for the victims and their families.

It was an act of pure evil. And yet even this evil is not so great that it consumes the good which still abounds in our great Nation.

Carl Sandburg wrote, "I see America, not in the setting sun of a black night of despair ahead of us. I see America in the crimson light of a rising sun fresh from the burning, creative hand of God. I see great days ahead, great days possible to men and women of will and vision."

I am profoundly moved by the spirit of the American people who have responded to the crises with a generosity almost unimaginable. I am uplifted by the mood among members of Congress who have abandoned all partisan differences to pass critical legislation. I am deeply proud to see how our leaders are working together around the clock.

In my district, citizens are calling me to ask if they can give money back to the government to assist with an antiterrorist campaign. A company in the Dayton area which manufactures protective equipment for firefighters is donating boots, gloves, and masks to the New York fire department. High schools in my community set up collection barrels at the football games for people to give food and equipment for the rescue effort.

At this darkest hour, all of America is acting as one in a way I've never seen before. In our unity, we are strong—strong enough to rebuild from this attack and strong enough to overcome the terrorists behind it—and to emerge stronger than before.

In one of his fireside chats in 1940, just before America entered World War II, President Franklin Roosevelt said, "We defend and we build a way of life, not for America alone, but for all mankind."

Once again, Americans are called to defend themselves and our civilization itself. I am proud to say that we are up to that challenge.

MUSLIMS LOVE PEACE AS MUCH AS ANYONE

HON. JOSEPH R. PITTS OF PENNSYLVANIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Friday, September 14, 2001

Mr. PITTS. Mr. Speaker, almost 60 years ago during World War II, our Nation imprisoned Japanese Americans in internment camps simply because of their ethnic background. Today, we are all rightly horrified by this action of our own Nation. As we mourn this week's tragedy, we must not repeat this chapter in our history. Arabs and Muslims are NOT all terrorists bent on destroying our Nation. They too desire to live in peace with their families and communities. In fact, millions of Arabs live in this great land—2.2 million of whom are Arab Christians.

Our Arab and Muslim compatriots in our nation also weep with pain and sorrow as they grieve the loss of loved ones. Many of them fied their homes and came to the United States as refugees to get away from the very same types of people as those who attacked our country.

In the past few days, the outpouring of deeply sympathetic support and condolences my office personally has received has come from Islamic nations such as Saudi Arabia, Indonesia, Egypt, Pakistan, Kazakhstan, Western Sahara, and Algeria, and from Palestinian.

As our great nation pulls together, let us not turn to hate and violence, but to the underlying spirit of courage and compassion that has made this country a beacon of freedom and hope for a new life. Justice must and will be implemented—but it will be against those who desire it, the savage terrorists—not our fellow Arab and Muslim citizens and friends here and around the world.

PAYING TRIBUTE TO MIGUEL RAMIREZ

HON. GENE GREEN
OF TEXAS
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Friday, September 14, 2001

Mr. GREEN of Texas. Mr. Speaker, this week, our Nation has experienced much human tragedy. Although my hometown of Houston, Texas was spared the devastation that occurred in New York City and in Washington, D.C., we did suffer from a tremendous loss. Today, I rise to pay tribute to Miguel Ramirez.

On Tuesday, September 11, 2001, Aldine High School lost Miguel Ramirez, one of its most promising ninth grade students. Miguel had been preparing for an afternoon football practice session before he collapsed.

Miguel was new to Aldine High School, but he quickly embraced the school and its traditions. He was an honor student and was enthusiastic about football. Despite the fact that Miguel Ramirez was only fourteen years old, he made a lasting impression on his family, his friends and his teachers.

Recently, the Houston Chronicle reported on the impact Miguel had had on his football teammates. I would like to share the following excerpt: "We had a meeting this morning, and the attitude of the team is that they wanted to go out and win a game for Miguel," said freshman coach Mark Muilenburg. "There really wasn't any hesitation about them wanting to play and we talked about that as a team. Miguel was a guy that was always at practice and a guy that always wanted to play. He just started playing this year, and he was so proud of it, and so proud of the fact that he was on a team."

Mr. Speaker, the loss of any life is sad, but the loss of a young life is truly tragic. Even in death, Miguel will continue to lead through the contributions he has left behind, the relationships he has forged, and the example he has set.

I ask my colleagues in the House of Representatives to join me in expressing our heartfelt condolences to the Miguel Ramirez family, especially to his parents David and Maria, and to his many friends and classmates at Aldine High School.

HONORING FIREFIGHTERS AND POLICE OFFICERS FOR THEIR OUTSTANDING SERVICE TO OUR NATION

HON. ROSA L. DeLAURO
OF CONNECTICUT
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Friday, September 14, 2001

Ms. DeLAURO. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to express my deepest thanks and appreciation to all of the firefighters and law enforcement officials who have volunteered their expertise in the wake of the tragic events of the past several days. Tuesday, September 11, 2001 will live in the hearts and minds of Americans for generations to come. To challenge democracy is to challenge the very core of all that we cherish. Communities across our nation have come together, united by a single truth: the spirit of America, though tested, can never be broken.

The men and women who serve as firefighters and law enforcement officials face risks that few of us can truly comprehend. Each day, they must be ready to perform under intense pressure—literally in life or death situations as we have all witnessed in recent days. Their commitment and dedication cannot be questioned.

Perhaps this is best illustrated in the faces of the many firefighters, police officers, and emergency personnel, who have volunteered their time and efforts throughout the past several days. I speak not only of those directly involved with the rescue efforts in Lower Manhattan, but to the many departments nationwide who have offered assistance with equipment, rescue teams, and various other forms of support. Many of these dedicated men and women have gone to their communities sponsoring blood, clothing, food and water drives. They have been an inspiration to us all and yet when asked why you will always hear the same reply: "It's my job." In my home state of Connecticut, the thousands of men and women who serve our local fire and police departments have continually been on hand—ready and willing to do all that they can for our neighbors and I thank them for their incredible work. I want to especially commend the approximately eighty firefighters from the Third Congressional District of Connecticut who are now directly assisting in the New York rescue effort.

It is with great pride and the deepest admiration that I rise today to pay tribute to these men and women and to thank them for their tremendous efforts on behalf of our communities and our nation. I stand today to urge all Americans to thank their local fire and police departments for all that they do for us every day.
Fourth Pratham Gala

HON. NICK LAMPSON
OF TEXAS
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Friday, September 14, 2001

Mr. LAMPSON. Mr. Speaker, I rise to commend those associated with the fourth Pratham Gala held last month in Houston, Texas. Pratham is affiliated with UNICEF and the Municipal Corporation of Greater Mumbai, with the mission to achieve “Universal Primary Education” in Mumbai by the year 2000.

This mission is now growing in scope and scale. Throughout India, individuals, corporations and the state governments are taking the initiative to further ensure that every child in their respective cities receives a formal education.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to include a recent article from the Indo-American News regarding the recent successful Gala in Houston and again add my congratulations.

[From the Indo-American News, Sept. 13, 2001]

PRATHAM CONTINUES TO BUILD MOMENTUM AND FUNDS

(By Bidisha Roy Banerjee)

Houston—Targeted to reach out to the slum children across India, Pratham has found tremendous amount of success in such a short time. The support Pratham received so far has been overwhelming and much more than anticipated. Since the last gala, Pratham has made great strides in both India and USA.

Not only has Pratham doubled the number of children it reaches (180,000 to date), it has also successfully established programs in 12 cities and nine rural areas with another seven cities targeted this year. Several Pratham chapters have spread in a number of cities and college campuses in America.

The fourth Pratham Gala in Houston served as an evidence that a movement is taking place in India. Chairman of Pratham USA was in-ducted by Meena Dutt as the “man who does not want to speak; a man who contributed to the Fourth Pratham Gala in Houston, Mr. Lampson, said "You are touching the committed community members who have played a key role in the fast expansion of Pratham, Lampson said "You are touching the heart of hundreds. We have missed the industrial revolution of the 19th century because we were not the masters of our own destiny and we were afraid of being taken over. When we woke up, it was impossible to catch up with the revolution. But in the 21st century, we have 20 million qualified individuals, key ingredients to an educational revolution.

Congressman Nick Lampson’s commitment to the South Asian community goes much beyond the duties of his elected office. Pratham was honored to have him grace the event with his presence. Nine years as a teacher, Congressman Lampson believes that “teachers are blessed because they see the future everyday from their students.”

Congressman Lampson cited the example of Parveen Shakil who is a Bridge Course teacher at Zakariya Bandar in Mumbai. Parveen’s dream was to become a teacher. And Pratham gave her that chance, encouraged her to pursue that dream by teaching at Pratham, following a vision. The committed community members who have played a key role in the fast expansion of Pratham, Lampson said “You are touching the life that you donate. Your commitment is giving a person your vision and role.” Congressman expressed his wish to travel to India to see if the same type of program can be initiated in other countries.
Paul Lima of Northwest Mutual Financial Network, the sponsors of the Gala Event spoke about the importance of social responsibility, and the need to share his knowledge with others.

"When I heard about Pratham, I was inspired to give back to the community and help those in need. The organization's dedication to empowering young adults and promoting education is truly admirable."

To My Husband, Our Father and Our Grandfather:

Here's to the man whose warmth and humor have earned him the respect of his friends and family and who makes this world a better place in which to live.

Arlette Gatewood, in the late 1920's, the fourteenth child of fifteen children, Arlette T. Gatewood, was raised by the stern hand of a father and mother: Rashida, and Jelani Summers and Roslyn M. Austin both of Evanston, IL and Rosebud, SD. Arlette has influenced, the advice shared and the strength to hold an unpopular opinion and courage to change his mind. . . .

The gala raised $390,000 with 560 ardent supporters attending the event promising their intention to a cause so great that it can change the life of mankind and the destiny of a country. The current target of Pratham is now $300,000.

TRIBUTE TO ARLETTE T. GATEWOOD

HON. JAMES A. TRAFICANT, JR.
OF OHIO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Friday, September 14, 2001

Mr. TRAFICANT. Mr. Speaker, I submit the following for the RECORD.

THE BIOGRAPHY OF ARLETTE T. GATEWOOD

Born to Mayhue and Ella (Jackson) Gatewood, in the late 1920’s, the fourteenth child of fifteen children, Arlette T. Gatewood began on his journey of life. Raised on the Eastside of Dayton in the Conditioning Yard at the Bucyrus Street Union Boot and Tube Company. A member of Local Union 462, United Steelworkers of America AFL-CIO-CIC, where he served in various capacities as a Local Union Vice President, Treasurer, and Grievance Committee member as well as a member of the Civil Rights Committee, and the Worker’s Compensation Committee. A dedicated trade unionist, he was appointed to the position of Staff Representative January 16, 1978 by Frank Leeseghan, Former Director of District 26. Though retired from work, Arlette continues to fight for the rights of labor and labor relations.

Arlette is a member of Reeds Chapel AME Church where he serves on the Trustees, a member of the Board of Directors of Inpatient Home Maintenance Service, Leadership Youngstown Area Urban League Labor Advisory Committee for Congressman Trabant. He is also a board member of Youngstown Community Action Council, a past board member of the Youngstown Employment and Training Corporation (YETC) where he served as president for 4 years, a member of Citizen Participation Organization (Modal Cities), Mahoning Valley Council of Church Economic Task Force, and Labor-Management Citizens Committee of Youngstown.

Arlette Gatewood was also a 30-year veteran of the U.S. Navy, serving in various capacities as a Local Union Officer; Vice President, and we sincerely hope to be involved in this for many more years in the future."

A vote of thanks was passed by Pratham President Yogit Patel. "Pratham has a very special meaning to me because I can relate to those kids." Patel recollected his own childhood, growing up in a small town in India where his parents were illiterate. There was no formal Pratham in that town but there definitely were people with the Pratham spirit. These were the people who paid for Patel's tuition and books and tickets to USA when he got admitted to Rice at the tender age of 17. And today, due to these generous and compassionate people, he has been able to carry on the spirit through his two daughters, Shivesh Patel, M.D., and Anuja Yogendra Patel, B.A. Double Major. Thanking Dr. Madhav Chauhan, Patel said "You are a modern day architect. You have created a beautiful vehicle." He thanked Mr. Vaghul and Vijay Goradia for their intensive support. He thanked all the donors who paid time and money and made Pratham a success story. "If education has worked for my family and my kids, it sure should change the lives of every individual out there waiting for an opportunity."

After dinner, the program was performed by Uma Mantravadi and her music group.

To My Husband, Our Father and Our Grandfather:

Here’s to the man who knows who he is and where he stands, the man with enough confidence in his own beliefs that he isn’t afraid to let others express theirs . . .

Here’s to the man who doesn’t claim to know the answers until he has tried to understand the questions, the man with the strength to hold an unpopular opinion and the courage to change his mind . . .

Here’s to the man whose warmth and wisdom and humor have earned him the respect of his friends and family and who makes this world a better place in which to live . . .

Arlette, Daddy, Papa, Grandfather.

HERE’S TO YOU!!!

With Love,

THE RETIREMENT OF DR. SARAH HARRIS

HON. TONY P. HALL
OF OHIO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Friday, September 14, 2001

Mr. HALL of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I rise today with a heavy heart. My community of Dayton, Ohio is losing one of its most respected citizens. Fortunately, she is just retiring and moving to Nevada, but it is a loss of Montgomery County nonetheless.

Dr. Sarah E. Harris has been a stalwart of Montgomery County and the Miami Valley of Ohio all of her life. She exemplifies what it means to be a public servant. Her life has been dedicated to serving others and improving the lives of all of her neighbors. She has been the perfect example of a Good Samaritan, always willing to lend a hand and meet a need. Like a good neighbor, Dr. Harris was there.

She is also a good friend and I will miss her a great deal. I have had the pleasure of working with her for many years, in a variety of capacities. She has worn a number of hats in her lifetime and is still retiring early. We thought we had a few more good years left and I am happy that she will return to Dayton to continue her relationships and work on building our community together.

Dr. Harris is a product of the fine education from Dayton’s public schools and Miami University of Ohio. She immediately started her career of public service by becoming first a teacher and then a principal in Dayton. She continued by also working with Central State University and the Dayton Urban League. In 1987, she began her service as Montgomery County Treasurer and continued as one of our three county commissioners from 1990 through 1992.

As she has stated, “nobody likes to lose an election, but I think it catapulted me into different things.” Yet another testament to her commitment to our community is that she did not leave public service, after leaving elected office. She continued her work as the director of our chapter of the National Conference of Christians and Jews, now the National Conference on Community and Justice.

Her recent service as co-chair of the Dayton Dialogue on Race Relations (DDRR) continued her dedication to improving the lives of people from all backgrounds. She has brought all of her energy and enthusiasm to this current initiative. I am pleased that U.S. District Judge Walter Rice, County Commissioner Vicki Pegg and City Commissioner Dean Lovelace will continue their work and be joined by former Common Pleas Judge Adele Riley.

I am particularly touched by Dr. Harris’ tireless work with this latest endeavor. She has volunteered full-time to ensure the success of the DDRR and its signature dialogue groups. These groups meet in people’s homes, with people of all ethnic backgrounds. They have conversations about their personal experiences with issues of race in an informal setting. Instead of just speaking of black and white, people are building relationships that will allow them to think of friends who happen to be of a different race.

The last time I was together with Dr. Harris was on the steps of the United States Capitol. We were there for a conference on “Connecting Communities for Reconciliation and Justice,” sponsored by Initiatives for Change and Honor in the Cities. I was proud to have her introduce me to her fellow participants and glad to have her representing Dayton at this international gathering.
I join with all of the residents of Montgomery County in wishing her and her husband a wonderful retirement. She has truly earned it. I thank her for her selfless service to our community. She is a true public servant and I am honored to count her as a friend.

WORLD TRADE CENTER AND PENTAGON TERRORIST ATTACKS

HON. WM. LACY CLAY
OF MISSOURI
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Friday, September 14, 2001

Mr. CLAY. Mr. Speaker and Members of the House, like most of my fellow Americans, I am at a loss for the appropriate words to express how angry, how appalled and how deeply saddened I am about the violence that was committed against our country this week.

And yet, I see acts of resolve and courage around me—the rescue workers risking and losing their lives, the long lines of blood donors, the American flags waving proudly from houses, from barns, from cars and from schools—I realize that no mere words can make the American commitment to freedom any stronger than it already is.

This country was the target of a faceless, voiceless aggressor who stole the lives of thousands of innocent people but who now lacks the courage to stand up and tell us who they are or why they did what they did.

But let this enemy rest assured that we are not a nation in hiding and have not become the victim of helplessness or fear. Rather, we are a country that is finding tremendous strength from some deep place in our collective spirit, and that strength will take us in the coming days, weeks and months where we as a nation need to go.

As for the thousands of people who lost loved ones in this senseless tragedy, I wish I personally could speak to each one, shake their hands and tell them what heroes they and their loved ones are in this country's eyes. But they probably already know that. If not yet—they will in time.

There is one thing I can say with certainty and that is this: America is on the threshold of change. It will never be the same, and as I personally mourn and grapple with frustration and sift through the rubble of what happened all around me, I am also prouder to be an American that I have ever been in my life.

THE BATTLE OF AMERICA

HON. ADAM B. SCHIFF
OF CALIFORNIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Friday, September 14, 2001

Mr. SCHIFF. Mr. Speaker, a secondary blast at the Pentagon rocked my building as I prepared to leave for the Capitol. I walked down East Capitol while people streamed out of the House Office Buildings and passed me on the street, and Capitol Hill police were cordonning off the area, sirens wailing in the background; no one was permitted further entry and Members of Congress were barred from their own offices. Another hijacked plane was in the air and one presumed destination was another target in the Capitol.

The Members of Congress, gathering at police headquarters, stood and set up makeshift offices, recalled Pearl Harbor. I thought of the Battle of Britain and Hitler's indiscriminate bombings of London. Churchill's words still so powerfully resonate. "He hopes by killing large numbers of civilians and women and children that he will terrify and cow the people of this mighty imperial city . . . . Little does he know the spirit of the British nation or the tough fiber of the Londoners . . . who have been bred to value freedom far above their lives."

So true of America. Little do these petty tyrants and murderers know the spirit of the American people or the tough fiber of the New Yorkers, our defense workers, or the civilians who may have spared further casualties by taking down the hijackers and their own plane above Pennsylvania.

Firefighters and police officers by the hundreds rushing into the collapsing wreckage of the World Trade Center to rescue the victims, many, God bless them, so many, losing their lives in the process. One firefighter, injured and lying in the hospital, telling the Governor of New York: "What d'ya expect? We're New Yorkers." God, they make me proud.

American doctors, nurses, search and rescue teams from all over the country, by car, bus and train, using any means to come to the wounded and offer their help. Citizens all over the country lining up to donate blood, so much blood, in lines up to four hours long. Children outside the federal building in Oklahoma, site of another terrorist attack, putting their Teddy Bears in a box to be sent to the children in New York—now orphaned. "We just want them to know they will be all right," an Oklahoma boys says as he drops his bear in the box.

The face of this tyrant is new, and yet not so new. Like Hitler, he abhors a free society and those who will not genuflect to his perverse aims; there are no means too inhuman, no tactic too appalling to further his ends. He thinks we are weak, because we do not tell our citizens what to think, how to act, whom to worship. Because we tolerate diversity, we are not capable of greater single-mindedness of purpose in times of adversity than any repressive regime. These acts of terror will not divide us. All Americans—youth, old, Democrats, Republicans, men, women, Christians, Moslems and Jews—are united against the common foe.

We will not be turned against each other. We will not tolerate acts of violence against Moslem Americans, many of whom lost their lives, serve as police and firefighters in the rescue effort, and all of whom are equally repelled at these atrocities. We will not relinquish our freedoms of speech, assembly and religion, nor our courage or defense of our right of privacy or way of life. "The price of freedom is high, and Americans have always paid it," President Kennedy said. We pay it still.

This is the Battle of America. The enemy may be new, but the fight has always been the same. Our government, our right to freedom, on the right of the governed to control their own national destiny. The civil war tested whether any nation so conceived could long endure. We have endured. We will go on, with growing confidence that we can fight terrorism wherever we find it, and strengthened by the conviction that the generation of Americans now being tested will not falter or flag.

EXTENSIONS OF REMARKS

September 14, 2001

Providing for expedited payment of certain benefits for public safety officers killed or injured in connection with terrorist attacks of September 11, 2001

SPEECH OF
HON. EDOLPHUS TOWNS
OF NEW YORK
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, September 13, 2001

Mr. TOWNS. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of this President, this nation and this legislation. The devastating and cowardly attack on the World Trade Center, the Pentagon, the American people, and free democratic societies everywhere must be responded to with the swift justice and mighty force of the United States military and our allies. We must continue to stand together to make it through this most difficult time. We must also support the victims' families and the firefighters and rescue teams currently working tirelessly in New York as well as the on-going investigations of these deplorable acts. Yesterday, we voted for the Victims of Terrorism Relief Act of 2001 to provide tax relief for the victims of this heinous attack on our soil. In addition, we passed legislation that will expedite payments of certain benefits to public safety officers. These are just two of the necessary steps to ensure the largest possible benefit to the families of those who have paid the greatest possible price. Today, we must focus on the vast work that remains to be done. None of this, however, will be feasible without significant resources that are dedicated to their intended purpose.

As we enter into a potentially prolonged attack on terrorism and its sponsors throughout the world, we must be prepared for the consequences of this significant decision. We must take steps to ensure that the resources are available to secure our skies and protect our people. These steps must include funding for fortifying our military, upgrading our intelligence and security, and simultaneously supporting those who are suffering from the effects of the devastation of a few short days ago. The supplemental funding that we are voting on will support our military, rebuild our city, and assist those who are suffering. Mr. Speaker, I stand with my colleagues, united with our President and in defiance of those who believe that they can threaten our freedom. I support this legislation and pray for the victims, the rescue workers and all Americans.

TERRORIST ATTACKS

HON. ROBERT E. (BUD) CRAMER, JR. OF ALABAMA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Friday, September 14, 2001

Mr. CRAMER. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to strongly condemn the cowardly act of violence that besieged our nation yesterday. Today, we stand as a nation to continue our way of life. National symbols of power were shaken, but the true strength of the country, our people, remain solid.

We will act swiftly to determine those responsible for this cowardice and retaliate against the perpetrators. We continue to support our Commander in Chief as he leads us through this truly horrible time for our nation. I commend those citizens of all walks of life who became America’s heroes yesterday as they worked to rescue the injured and console families of victims. Our thoughts and prayers are with those who are injured, those who lost their lives, and those who are courageously involved in rescue efforts. We will come together as a nation by giving blood, donating our time and services to help the afflicted, and flying our American flags proudly.

Members of Congress and citizens across the country today refuse to be frightened and demoralized as we attempt to pick up the shattered pieces of our lives and restore some semblance of normalcy to our daily routines.

However, this indeed is a dark time for America, which has generated grave memories that will last forever. What is important now is that we face and learn from this solemn chapter in our history. We must reassess our national security apparatus and come to terms with those lapses in security that allowed these terrorists to take root on U.S. soil. But, make no mistake, the rest of the world should know—and know so resoundingly—that the United States will not tolerate cowardly acts of terrorism.

I agree wholeheartedly with the President that we will make no distinction between those who committed this barbaric act of cowardice and those who harbor and give them sustenance. All of the perpetrators of these dreadfully deeds must come to feel the full force of our power—unleashed in all of its awesome might.

I stand behind the President at this moment of national sorrow. As a nation we are united in our unyielding determination to prevail against terrorism and those who support it.

TRIBUTE TO TERCERA IGLESIA BAUTISTA ESPANOLA

HON. JOSÉ E. SERRANO OF NEW YORK
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Friday, September 14, 2001

Mr. SERRANO. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to Tercera Iglesia Bautista Espanola, a spiritual and Bronx institution and a historic house of worship that celebrated its Centennial anniversary September 15, 2001.

Mr. Speaker, Tercera Iglesia Bautista Espanola was founded between the years of 1900 and 1902. As one of the first Baptist churches of its kind, serving a largely Hispanic congregation, it has become an invaluable part of Hispanic-American history and American history in general. Located on Alexander Avenue, the church stands as a beacon of true beauty in the heart of the south Bronx.

Throughout its 100 years of existence, Tercera Iglesia has been a model of excellence with its numerous and far-reaching community services. Not only are Bronx residents able to come to Tercera Iglesia for spiritual enrichment and fellowship, they can come to the church for assistance with life’s daily trials. The church’s pastor, Reverend Dr. Jose D. Rivera-Tormos serves as a pillar of the community and as an exceptional spiritual guide for his congregation. Reverend Rivera-Tormos is blessed with a dedicated and competent staff of church officials who go beyond the call of duty daily.

Mr. Speaker, beyond Tercera Iglesia’s wealth of community programs and remarkable religious activities, it’s very structure makes it a priceless institution. The building was designed at the turn of the century by architects Ward and Davis who implemented modern techniques in its construction. A delicate balance of elaborate decor in the entrance and simple rustic design throughout other parts of the church make it a unique structure worthy of commemoration.

For the past century, hundreds of thousands of Bronx residents have found solace and aid within the walls of Tercera Iglesia Bautista Espanola. I hope that all of my esteemed colleagues will join me in honoring this sacred and historic institution on its centennial anniversary.

TRIBUTE TO BARRY RASCOVAR

HON. BENJAMIN L. CARDIN OF MARYLAND
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Friday, September 14, 2001

Mr. CARDIN. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay special tribute to Barry Rascovar, one of the most well-respected journalists in Maryland who recently retired from the The Baltimore Sun. For more than 20 years, Barry’s strong editorial voice has reverberated throughout Maryland. His insights and knowledge of Maryland politics and politicians has made him a “must-read” for anyone who cares about Maryland.

Barry graduated with honors from Dickinson College and holds an M.S., with honors, from Columbia University Graduate School of Journalism. He also holds a Doctor of Humane Letters degree from both Towson University and Villa Julie College. Barry started out as a reporter on The Baltimore Sun’s city desk in 1969. He quickly moved to covering the Maryland General Assembly in Annapolis and to news editor of The Baltimore Sun’s Washington bureau. Since 1979, Barry has been deputy editorial page editor of The Baltimore Sun, shaping the voice of Maryland’s largest daily newspaper.

We are fortunate that Barry has many talents. He is the respected author of “The Great Game of Maryland Politics,” and he edited and authored “Marylanders of the Century.” He also has helped the younger generation understand the intricacies of government as an adjunct professor for the Department of Government and Public Administration at the University of Baltimore.

I hope that my colleagues will join me in saluting Barry Rascovar, an award winning journalist who has the respect of those he worked with and those he covered. His 32-year career in journalism helped make The Baltimore Sun a respected and knowledgeable voice in our region. His retirement is a tremendous loss to all those who admire and respect his intelligence and integrity.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

HON. CAROLYN MCCARTHY OF NEW YORK
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Friday, September 14, 2001

Mrs. MCCARTHY of New York. Mr. Speaker, due to the tragic acts of terrorism that occurred in New York, today I joined President Bush, along with the majority of the New York delegation, to view the scene of destruction and witness firsthand the incredible recovery effort. Unfortunately, I was unable to return to Washington to cast my vote for H.R. 2888. Had I been present, I would have supported this important emergency appropriation measure that helps set New York City on the path to restoration.

A LETTER FROM CHRIS JOHNSON

HON. TIMOTHY V. JOHNSON OF ILLINOIS
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Friday, September 14, 2001

Mr. JOHNSON of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, in light of the tragic events of September 11th, I would like to present a letter that my son, Chris Johnson, wrote:

There’s so much to say about the 4 plane crashes on Tuesday, it’s hard to know where to start. First of all, I feel very, very sad about the horrible loss of life in these crashes. I am also feeling very grateful for the courage of many Americans—both on board the airplanes that crashed, and among the rescuers who have volunteered to help in New York, Washington, D.C., and Pennsylvania.

Tuesday’s attacks on our country were sickening acts of evil. They make me feel angry and revengeful and protective of my country. My dad called us from Washington, D.C. right after the third hijacked plane hit the Pentagon building. They had just evacuated the Capitol building and he was calling to say he was OK. I wasn’t worried. I have a lot of confidence in my dad and I know that he is a survivor. I think the citizens of our country should feel the same and remember that our elected officials are working dutifully to do all that they can to help keep our country safe and protected. Our President and our Congressmen, now more than ever before, need our full confidence and support.

My mom’s best friend lives in an apartment building in New York City, right across the street from the World Trade Center. She called my mom Tuesday night to tell her she was alive. She ran outside of her apartment Tuesday morning in her pajamas, to see what was wrong and saw the second plane fly into the tower right over her head. She reported to my mom that she ran for her life down the street and then over the Brooklyn Bridge (barefoot and in her pajamas!) to safety across the bay. She said that the steel and glass was raining down from the sky onto her head and instantly she realized that the glass windows of her apartment building were melting down the side of the building. She has lost everything she owns, but she is alive. We just thank God she is alive.

Many people, thousands, are not alive today. They did not survive this horrible, cruel, evil, inhuman attack on our country. They have mothers and fathers and children who are heartbroken and suffering a horrible loss. While nothing can be done to bring these lives back to their families, justice—and I mean, Justice—must be done! This will not be easy to accomplish, and in the coming weeks and months, it will get harder and harder for us to remain united in our resolve to stand firm as a country, heal together and strive for peace in the world, but we will. Let freedom ring!

TRIBUTE TO LIEUTENANT GENERAL TIMOTHY J. MAUDE

HON. JOHN M. McHUGH
OF NEW YORK
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Friday, September 14, 2001

Mr. McHUGH. Mr. Speaker, today I rise with a heavy heart to salute Lieutenant General Timothy J. Maude, the Army’s deputy chief of staff for personnel, who is among the 74 Army personnel missing and presumed killed in the September 11th attack on the Pentagon.

The horrible violence done to America by the terrorist attack of September 11th hits sharply home when we learn that good Americans, like Lieutenant General Timothy J. Maude, the Army’s deputy chief of staff for personnel, have been lost in this senseless act of terror. Tim, as he invariably introduced himself, was on duty at the Pentagon when a terrorist-piloted aircraft crashed into his office and America’s Army has lost a dedicated professional. A true friend to America’s soldiers is gone. The nation will miss this patriot. I knew General Maude professionally, as he often testified before my Subcommittee on personnel, but I am sure the intensity, creativity, and commitment that marked his professional life were indicators of the quality of his heart and soul, as well. I know he will be deeply missed by the many who called him friend.

From my perspective, when the Army chose him to be its senior military personnel specialist, General Maude was the right man to meet the challenges the Army faced. Then, the future of the all-volunteer Army—active, Reserve, and National Guard—was seriously in question. Army recruiters were struggling to attract sufficient numbers of quality men and women, and recruiting advertising appeared increasingly ineffective. Understaffed Army divisions faced the challenge of having too few people to train properly, and the difficulty of dealing with increasingly more frequent deployments with an insufficient number of personnel. Pay was inadequate, and the Army appeared ill-positioned to effectively recruit America’s future military heroes. Today, that bleak picture is dramatically changing for the better, in large part because Tim Maude found the methods, means, and support within the Army, the Department of Defense, and on Capitol Hill to turn things around.

Throughout his 34-year Army career—from the day he enlisted to when he became the chief of personnel—Tim Maude served in a series of assignments that groomed him to successfully meet the Army’s most complicated personnel challenges. His list of accomplishments is long. His contribution to the Army will be lasting. Quite simply, he made a difference.

There are no words that can lessen the sorrow his family, friends, and colleagues are experiencing. It is always difficult to cope when someone is taken before their time, but the sense of loss is somehow amplified by the tragedy of these horrific circumstances. I hope that his family is comforted by the knowledge that he was admired, respected, and appreciated by all of us who knew him on Capitol Hill. Mr. Speaker, I ask my colleagues to join me in saluting General Maude. We will miss him.

STATEMENT ON H. CON. RES. 225—EXPRESSING SENSE OF CONGRESS THAT EVERY CITIZEN IS ENCOURAGED TO DISPLAY THE FLAG

SPEECH OF
HON. RICHARD A. GEPHARDT
OF MISSOURI
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, September 13, 2001

Mr. GEPHARDT. Mr. Speaker, I ask all Members to vote for this resolution that I co-sponsor with my colleagues urging people to fly the American flag. Tuesday’s act of terrorism is one of the greatest challenges in the history of our country. In times of austerity, in times of uncertainty, and this is the greatest we have ever seen on U.S. soil—it is important to unite, to come together, to comfort, indeed, to ‘rally around the flag.’

In light of the tragedy that has struck directly and thousands of families, we urge people to fly the flag and the vic-tims of this horrible assault on humanity, on the United States. The flag is an enduring symbol of American democracy and American freedom. It is a symbol of the courage and the bravery and the essential human kindness of our people. Its display—especially at times of national tragedy—is yet another in a number of spontaneous and empowering, very human responses that we have witnessed in the last 48 hours.

Let the flags around the country as they fly and are displayed in neighborhoods and on our buildings, send the signal that the United States remains united. We are so sorry and in such sorrow at the horrible loss of life and the unspeakable agony of those affected by this event. We are equally determined to ensure that the perpetrators of this crime will be found and properly punished. We will do everything in our power to make sure that what happened a couple days ago never, ever happens again. Finally, we are determined to adjust and adapt to this new world to give our government and our country and our people and institutions the support and unity which all of us need at this most trying moment for America and the American people.

TO CITY OF KEWAUNEE

SPEECH OF
HON. HENRY A. WAXMAN
OF CALIFORNIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Monday, September 10, 2001

Mr. WAXMAN. Mr. Speaker, H.R. 788 is special legislation which transfers a surplus piece of Federal property to the City of Kewaunee, Wisconsin. This piece of property is no longer needed as an Army Reserve Center nor is it needed for any other federal government purposes.

I would like to thank the Gentleman from Wisconsin, Mr. GREEN, for working with me to address my concerns regarding this piece of legislation. I know it was his desire to have H.R. 788 passed prior to the House breaking for summer recess. However, by waiting until today, we were able to work together over the recess period and produce a stronger bill.

The bill before us is significantly different from the bill as it was originally introduced. I will highlight the differences quickly. The bill specifies that the property must be used and occupied only by the City, or by another local or State government entity approved by the City. In addition, the bill includes a reversionary clause which states that, during the next 20 years, if the property is not used as intended, it will revert to the federal government. Furthermore, the bill states that the property cannot be used for commercial purposes.

In the 1949 Property Act, Congress lays out how surplus federal property is to be disposed. GSA is instructed to sell property for the most profit possible. Monies received are used for a number of things including environmental clean-up and land preservation. However, the Act also listed a number of ways a piece of property can be transferred free of charge under what is called a ‘Public Benefit Conveyance’ exception. Congress decided that the public interest in giving property away for “public benefit” outweighs potential profit from public sale. Included in the 1949

HON. BOB BARR
OF GEORGIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Friday, September 14, 2001

Mr. BARR of Georgia. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to share these thoughts by Mark Helprin in the September 12, 2001 Wall Street Journal to honor his memory. He wrote that if we are to share these thoughts

Act were four such public benefit exceptions: health, education, park and recreation, and historical monuments. Since 1949, the Act has been amended numerous times to add more public benefits. These additions are wildlife refuge, ports, prisons, airports, homeless, self-help housing, and law enforcement/emergency response.

The City of Kewaunee is able to benefit from this property transfer, this bill should not in anyway be seen as setting a precedent for future special legislation. Congress can and should amend the Act if it determines that city halls or other exceptions are needed. The September 12, 2001 work session provided hearings and mark-ups, the Committee on Government Reform may decide that the definition of public purpose should be expanded. It may decide otherwise.

THOUGHTS ON THE WAR AGAINST TERRORISM

HON. BOB BARR
OF GEORGIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Friday, September 14, 2001

Mr. BARR of Georgia. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to share these thoughts by Mark Helprin in the September 12, 2001 Wall Street Journal. His argument makes an excellent case for a total and committed defense of our nation against the elements of international terrorism.

From the Wall Street Journal, Sept. 12, 2001
WE BEAT HITLER—WE CAN VANQUISH THIS FORGERY
(BY MARK HELPRIN)
America, it is said, is slow to awaken, and indeed it is, but once America stirs, its resolve can be matchless and its ferocity a stunning surprise.

The enemy we face today, though barbaric and ingenious, is hardly comparable to the masters of the Third Reich, whose doubts about our ability to persevere we chose to ignore in the 1920s and 1930s. It is not easy to see how we have reduced the ruble. Nor is it comparable to the commanders of the Japanese Empire, whose doubts about our ability to persevere we chose to ignore in the 1940s. It may have been in 1940 that we had reduced to rubble. Nor is it comparable to the Soviet Empire that we faced down patientely over half a century, nor to the great British Empire from which we broke free in a long and tiring struggle that afforded a better picture of our kith and kin than any the world may have today of who we are and of what we are capable.

And today’s enemy, though he is not morally developed enough to comprehend the difference between civilans and combatants, is neither faceless nor without a place in which we can target our attacks. He is Osama bin Laden, he lives in Afghanistan, and his hosts, the Talibhan, bear responsibility for sheltering him; if he is Saddam Hussein, he lives in Baghdad; if he Yasser Arafat, he lives in Gaza; and so on. Our problem is not his anonymity but that we have refused the precise warnings, delivered over more than a decade, by those who understood the nature of what was coming—and of what is yet to come, which will undoubtedly be worse.

The first salvos of any war are seldom the most destructive, and in this recent outrage the damage was done by the combined explosive power of three crashed civilian airliners. As the initial shock wanes off, it will be obvious that this was a demonstration shot intended to extend political concessions and surrender, a call to fix our attention on the prospect of a nuclear detonation or a chemical or biological attack, both of which would exceed what happened yesterday by several orders of magnitude.

We will get worse, but appeasement will make it no better. That we have promised retaliation for decades and then always drawn back, hoping that we could get through if we simply did not provoke the enemy, is appeasement, and it must be quite clear by now even to those who perpetually appease that appeasement simply does not work. Therefore, what must be done? Above all, we must make it clear that this is a declaration of war that is not to be dishonored, and in this we have erred too many times. It is a bipartisan failing and it should never be repeated.

Let this spectacular act of terrorism be the decisive repudiation of the mistaken assumptions that conventional warfare is a thing of the past, that there is a safe window in which we can cut force structure while in vesting in the revolution in military affairs, that bases and infrastructure abroad have become unnecessary, that the day of the infantryman is done, and most importantly that slighting military expenditure and preparedness is anything but an invitation to death and defeat.

Short of a major rebuilding, we cannot now inflict upon Saddam Hussein or Osama bin Laden the great and instantaneous shock with which they should be afflicted. That requires surprisal and force based on air power in the United States, but expeditionary forces with extravagant basing and equipment. It requires not 10 aircraft carrier battle groups but, tot and when and where needed, 20. It requires not only all the infantry divisions, transport, and air wings that we have needlessly given up in the last decades, but many more. It requires special operations forces not of 35,000, but of 100,000.

For the challenge is asymmetrical. Terrorist camps must be raided and destroyed, and their reconstitution continually repressed. Intelligence gathering of all types must be greatly augmented, for by its nature it can never be sufficient to the task, so we must build it and spend upon it until it hurts. The nuclear weapons programs, de pots, and infrastructure of what Madeleine Albright so delicately used to call “states of concern” must, in the long run, be destroyed. As they are scattered around the globe, it cannot be easy. Security and civil defense at home and at American facilities overseas must be strengthened to the point where we are able to fight with due diligence in this war that has been brought to us now so vividly by an alien civilization that so well reflects the history of what others have done.

The course of such a war will bring us greater suffering than it has brought to date, and if we are to fight it as we must we will have to accept many more. But if, as we have so many times before, we rise to the oc casion, we will not enjoy merely the illusions of safety, victory, and honor, but those things themselves. In our history it is clear that never have they come cheap and often they have come late, but always, in the end, they come in flood, and always in the end, the decision is ours.

IN MEMORY OF LINDA M. GEORGE AND CHRISTOPHER ZARBA

HON. JAMES P. MCGOVERN OF MASSACHUSETTS
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Friday, September 14, 2001

Mr. MCGOVERN. Mr. Speaker, earlier in the week I offered remarks on three of my constituents who were lost in Tuesday's tragic attacks. As the days have progressed, I have learned that other people from my district were also killed.

I would like to take just a minute of the House's time to honor two people: Linda M. George and Christopher Zarba.

Linda George, 27, was one of seven employees from the TJX Companies who died on American Airlines Flight 11, which was hijacked and crashed into the World Trade Center.

Linda lived in Westborough, and was planning to get married on October 20 in Worcester. She graduated from St. Peter-Marian and Providence College. She was a passionate worker, a terrific athlete and a great friend to those who knew her.

She leaves behind her parents, Richard and Carolyn, and her fiancé, Jeff Pereira. Christopher Zarba, 47, was from Hopkinton. He was a software engineer for Concor Communications, Inc. He was also killed on American Airlines Flight 11.

His loss has been deeply felt by his family and his colleagues at Concord. Saturday would have been his 48th birthday.

Mr. Speaker, I know all of my colleagues join me in mourning the loss of these and every victim of Tuesday's tragedy. Our deep est sympathies go out to their families at this difficult time.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

URGING TOLERANCE IN THE WAKE OF TUESDAY'S ACTS OF TERRORISM

HON. HILDA L. SOLIS
OF CALIFORNIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Friday, September 14, 2001

Ms. SOLIS. Mr. Speaker, in the wake of the terrorist acts perpetrated in New York City and Washington, DC, I am heartened by the American people's extraordinary display of kindness and cooperation. I have been moved by how our diverse Nation has come together in a united show of support—from our children and adults, Christians and Muslims, Jews and Buddhists, Hindus and Catholics, Latinos and Caucasians, Asian Americans and African Americans.

However, I am concerned about reports of anti-Arab and anti-Muslim acts committed by some in our communities. American Muslims and Arab Americans share our commitment to the American ideals of freedom, justice, and democracy. They live, work, and have established businesses in our communities. Their children attend schools alongside our children. They support our community organizations. They are our neighbors and our friends.

Acts of discrimination only serve to divide our Nation and weaken our strength.

Our Nation is made stronger when we embrace our diversity. We know that any discrimination stands in direct opposition to the ideals our founders set forth in the declaration of Independence, the Constitution, and the Bill of Rights.

Today I joined my Congressional colleagues in cosponsoring a resolution condemning acts of hatred or discrimination against people of Middle Eastern and South Asian descent. The resolution encourages “people of every faith and heritage to stand together in this time of national crisis.”

I urge all United States citizens to reject misguided acts of prejudice and to continue their unwavering support for our Nation and its ideals of freedom and peace.

RECOGNIZING THE 25TH ANNIVERSARY OF THE LAND TRUST OF NAPA COUNTY

HON. MIKE THOMPSON OF CALIFORNIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Friday, September 14, 2001

Mr. THOMPSON of California. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize the tremendous contributions of the Land Trust of Napa County over the past 25 years. The Land Trust has experienced great success since two of its founders, F.S. (Si) and June Foote, realized their hopes of preserving the environmental identity of the Napa Valley.

In 1976, Harry Trammer, Vic Fersho, John Whitridge joined the Footes as founding board members just as other land trust organizations were beginning to have success across the nation. From its humble roots in the Footes’ living room, the Land Trust of Napa County has now become a model for land trusts around the country.

The Land Trust achieved great success because of the hard work of its members and the dedication of people in Napa County to protect and enrich the environment in which they live. The first piece of land donated to the Land Trust was a 640-acre parcel on Mt. George in eastern Napa. Since then, the Land Trust has succeeded in securing over 25,000 acres of land for future generations of residents in the Napa Valley.

At a time when commercial and residential development of land is destroying the natural characteristics of agricultural lands and open space, the Land Trust has been instrumental in preserving the Napa Valley’s unique beauty and heritage. By purchasing land, the Land Trust works to monitor and enforce programs for conservation easements. Its monitoring program, for which it has recently hired an Easement Monitoring Coordinator, is used by organizations in the Bay Area, across California, nationwide to develop a standard monitoring and enforcement process.

Mr. Speaker, on the occasion of the Land Trust of Napa County’s 25th Anniversary, I would like to recognize its outstanding contributions to our generation and future generations in the Napa Valley.

EXTENSIONS OF REMARKS

HOW WILL WE ACT?

HON. NICK SMITH OF MICHIGAN
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Friday, September 14, 2001

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, I would like to share the comments of my Chief of Staff, Kurt Schwartz, which reflects the feelings of many Americans in reacting to the terrorist attack. “Will we forget? Will the sick, sinking feeling fade? Will we once again fail to follow through on fine words and dramatic promises? Or will “Remember the Trade Center” replace “Remember Pearl Harbor”?” We act with resolve, or will we do too little?

As Margaret Thatcher noted at another time of crisis, “This is no time to go wobbly.” We have implacable enemies. We must deal with them implacably. They do not hesitate to spill blood, including their own. We must not hesitate to return their wrath. Anything else is futile.

Democracy is self-absorbed, and can understand threats from abroad. But it can also rouse itself to righteous anger in crisis. Our duty is to direct that anger, give it purpose, use it to defend democracy and freedom. Before forgetfulness seeps in.”

VICTIMS OF TERRORISM RELIEF ACT OF 2001

SPEECH OF
HON. DANNY K. DAVIS OF ILLINOIS
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, September 13, 2001

Mr. DAVIS of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I take this opportunity to offer my support for H.R. 2884, Victims of Terrorism Relief Act of 2001. We have all heard and read stories of the heroic acts of these individuals, which bestows a sense of pride in my heart. We must never forget the innocent lives that were lost. We must hold the thoughts of these victims in our hearts forever.

My prayers go out to the families and friends of the victims of these horrific events. On that day when their freedom was denied and their lives destroyed, we must serve as motivation to restore the very principles for which this country was originally founded. Yet it is certain that this is a very important and difficult issue to resolve. While the administration strategically prepares to protect our country, we must now protect the rights of these victims. We owe this to our citizens. Tax relief for these victims is a must. It now is time to rebuild America to restore the liberty and justice for all.

While the World Trade Center no longer is standing, the Statue of Liberty stands strong for the remembrance of each of you. Mr. Speaker, Justice and human decency will prevail for all allowing us to heal in time.

HONORING EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR OF THE POST OF OAKLAND, CHARLES W. FOSTER, ON HIS RETIREMENT

HON. BARBARA LEE OF CALIFORNIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Friday, September 14, 2001

Ms. LEE. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to a friend and a long valued member of the Oakland and Bay Area community, Chuck Foster, Executive Director of the Port of Oakland who is retiring from the Port after a long and distinguished career.

Mr. Foster arrived in the Bay Area more than thirty years ago, having been stationed there during his service as a Navy aviator. He joined the Naval Reserves upon release from active duty and retired 15 years later with the rank of Captain.

Given Mr. Foster’s substantial aviation training while in the Navy, it is natural that much of his career after leaving the Navy focused on transportation matters, especially those in aviation. He served as the Assistant Director of Aviation at San Jose International Airport before being appointed the Director of Aviation at Oakland International Airport. He held that position for five years, until he was promoted to Deputy Executive Director of the Port. In 1995, the Board of Port Commissioners of the Port of Oakland appointed Mr. Foster Executive Director, responsible for the overall management of the Port’s aviation, maritime and commercial real estate divisions and all aspects of Port administration.

My friend Chuck Foster provided a unique combination of leadership and commitment that has nurtured the growth of the Port of Oakland, and in turn, the Bay Area region. Under his skillful leadership, the Port of Oakland’s three divisions experienced extensive growth and the Port embarked upon an extensive, unprecedented expansion.

During Mr. Foster’s administration, Oakland International Airport has proposed a terminal expansion and reconfiguration project, as well as the development of a light-rail rapid transit link between BART and the airport. Additionally, the Port’s Maritime Division acquired four of the world’s largest Super Panamex cranes, initiated the deepening of Oakland Harbor to 50 feet and converted 530 acres of military land into commercial terminal facilities which serves as a model of base-closure economic conversion. Presently, the Commercial Real Estate Division has begun its project to convert more than 1,000 acres of property into a thriving waterfront neighborhood.

Chuck Foster’s dedication and service to the Bay Area community does not end with his efforts at the Port of Oakland. Throughout his career, he has served on various boards and otherwise been active with numerous business and charitable community organizations. Whether his talents are directed towards his efforts with the Oakland Chamber of Commerce, California Council for International Trade, International House at the University of California, Berkeley or the Summit/Alta Bates Medical Center, he has approached all of these activities with the same dedication, vision and passion.
Over his career, Mr. Foster has traveled extensively throughout the world, and his success in his business dealings for the Port is matched only by his role as an ambassador for the Bay Area and the Nation. He is the best of what America has to offer the world—committed to partnership and sound relations with those who are engaged in the growing world community.

I am most appreciative to Chuck for the way he has attempted to address the needs and concerns of the residents of Oakland, particularly in West Oakland. The presence of residential neighborhoods in areas adjacent to industrial activity will always create tension and Oakland has been no exception. However, Mr. Foster saw to it that community groups had not only a voice, but a role to play in the Port’s various activities and expansion projects. He has always sought to achieve a proper balance between economic growth and community needs. He formed community advisory panels for both the airport and seaport development planning processes and opened a Port office in the West Oakland neighborhood most impacted by the Port’s maritime activity to ensure appropriate community outreach. These efforts have created an atmosphere of more than simply goodwill, but one of cooperation and a sense of community.

Mr. Speaker, as Charles Foster leaves behind a long and rich history at the Port of Oakland, I would ask that Congress join me in expressing our thanks to him for his 15 years of service there and his earlier contributions to the nation in uniformed and civilian life. I am proud to recognize Chuck Foster’s esteemed accomplishments and to extend my best wishes to him in his well-earned retirement.

Providing for expedited payment of certain benefits for public safety officers killed or injured in connection with terrorist attacks of September 11, 2001

Hon. Danny K. Davis
Of Illinois
In the House of Representatives
Thursday, September 13, 2001

Mr. Davis of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I take this opportunity to express my support of H.R. 2882, to ensure that our public safety workers have coverage as a result of the recent terrorist acts. It is my belief that it is our responsibility to redress this situation in a timely fashion.

At the onset of the horror that we experienced on the eleventh day of this month, a victory was won in the hearts of all Americans. These brave individuals are winning the War each and every second. True honor and patriotism shall be bestowed upon them. By now, we have all seen the bravery and extraordinary effort that the Fire Fighters and Police Officers in New York and Washington as well as the rescue workers in these areas. The amount of courage that has been displayed by these individuals is incredible and will forever be remembered. It is now our responsibility in light of the current circumstances to make sure that the families of these public safety workers feel the confidence that the Congress will help ease their burden. I commend each and every one of these workers and their commitment to excellence as shown over these events.

Mr. Speaker, distinguished colleagues, join me in praising our fallen public safety officers for their extraordinary commitment to the community. They have earned and deserve our recognition, respect and praise. We will never forget these workers.

Expressing sense of Congress that every citizen is encouraged to display the flag

Hon. Sheila Jackson-Lee
Of Texas
In the House of Representatives
Thursday, September 13, 2001

Ms. Jackson-Lee of Texas. Mr. Speaker, the September 11, 2001, World Trade Center and Pentagon tragedies, including the aircraft crash in Somerset County, Pennsylvania, will forever scar the face of democracy, freedom, and the circle of human dignity. But as a nation of Americans who have faced the greatest degree of adversity throughout our history, we shall, once again, overcome.

This legislation demonstrates to ourselves and to the world, our collective resolve to overcome this tragedy and to stay the course in our journey to the mountaintop, so that all peoples of the world may one day live free from the tyranny of hopelessness, lawlessness, and apartheid.

In our unified show of support for the sacrifice made in the name of freedom, by those we have lost, we ask all people of this great Nation, regardless of race, color, economic status, or religious denomination, to fly the American flag for the next 30 days.

I urge my colleagues from both sides of the aisle to support this legislation.
The Senate met at 10 a.m. and was called to order by the Honorable DANIEL K. AKAKA, a Senator from the State of Hawaii.

APPOINTMENT OF ACTING PRESIDENT PRO TEMPORE

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will please read a communication to the Senate from the President pro tempore (Mr. BYRD). The legislative clerk read the following letter:

U.S. SENATE,
PRESIDENT PRO TEMPORE,
To the Senate:

Under the provisions of rule I, paragraph 3, of the Standing Rules of the Senate, I hereby appoint the Honorable DANIEL K. AKAKA, a Senator from the State of Hawaii, to perform the duties of the Chair.

ROBERT C. BYRD,
President pro tempore.

Mr. AKAKA thereupon assumed the chair as Acting President pro tempore.

ADJOURNMENT UNTIL WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 19, 2001, AT 10 A.M.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Under the previous order, the Senate will now stand in adjournment until the hour of 10 a.m., on Wednesday, September 19, 2001.

Thereupon, the Senate, at 10 o’clock and 40 seconds a.m., adjourned until Wednesday, September 19, 2001, at 10 a.m.
The House met at noon and was called to order by the Speaker pro tempore (Mr. Culberson).

DESIGNATION OF THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore laid before the House the following communication from the Speaker:

WASHINGTON, DC,
September 17, 2001.

I hereby appoint the Honorable John D. Culberson to act as Speaker pro tempore on this day.

J. DENNIS HASTERT,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.

PRAYER

The Chaplain, the Reverend Daniel P. Coughlin, offered the following prayer:

Blessed be God forever.

Lord God, King of heaven and earth, we praise You and we thank You for gathering the people of this Nation in prayer during these past days. The prayerful Friday of national remembrance, the Sabbath and the celebration of the Lord’s day have strengthened us in Your spirit.

We are grateful for those around the world who are one with us, as we humbly pay tribute to the thousands whose lives were shattered by the terrorist attack on America.

We unite ourselves through prayer with all those of the Jewish faith who begin their holy days this evening.

May the events of this past week be seared into our common memory and forged into our hearts, ever deepening our spiritual awakening.

May our actions which flow from prayer today be determined forthright and just.

Be present to us, Lord, as we return to some routine, knowing that the times demand of us all alertness, courage and renewed commitment to the American way of life.

As we thank You for the freedom to worship across this land, we beg of You the grace to seize every opportunity, to strengthen one another in unity and to be of service to our country.

Blessed be God, both now and forever.

Amen.

THE JOURNAL

Pursuant to clause 1, rule I, the Journal stands approved.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Will the gentleman from California (Mr. Rohrabacher) come forward and lead the House in the Pledge of Allegiance.

Mr. ROHRABACHER led the Pledge of Allegiance as follows:

I pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America, and to the Republic for which it stands, one nation under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to clause 4 of rule I, the Speaker signed the following enrolled joint resolution on Friday, September 14, 2001:

S.J. Res. 23, to authorize the use of United States Armed Forces against those responsible for the recent attacks launched against the United States.

ADJOURNMENT TO WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 19, 2001

Mr. ROHRABACHER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the House adjourns today, it adjourn to meet at noon on Wednesday, September 19, 2001.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

DISPENSING WITH CALENDAR WEDNESDAY BUSINESS ON WEDNESDAY NEXT

Mr. ROHRABACHER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the business in order under the Calendar Wednesday rule be dispensed with on Wednesday next.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

CHALLENGE FACING AMERICA

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under the Speaker’s announced policy of January 3, 2001, the gentleman from California (Mr. Rohrabacher) is recognized for 60 minutes as the designee of the majority leader.

Mr. ROHRABACHER. Mr. Speaker, it is in deep sadness that I rise today to speak to my colleagues and to set down a record that is, I believe, necessary to understand the horrible loss that we have suffered.

During these last few days, most of us have experienced a deep and painful sadness. Now that sadness, rightfully, is turning into anger. It is anger, as it should be, at those who perpetrated this monstrous crime against us and those people who committed this crime will feel the wrath of the American people, a wrath that has not so been unleashed since Pearl Harbor.

We must and we will avenge our countrymen. Anyone with a hand or even a finger in this mass slaughter of innocent Americans will pay the ultimate price. We do this because it is our duty, and nothing will deter us.

One note of warning, Mr. Speaker: we must not permit our rage, and there is rage in my soul and the soul of all of our fellow Americans, but we must not let this rage lead to actions that will strengthen the hand of the fanatic terrorists with whom we now do battle. These monsters are counting on us to strike out blindly and to attack people who are our potential allies and friends, thus alienating them and turning them into enemies.

What bin Laden wants is for the United States, us, to turn this into a battle between us, the United States, and every Muslim in the world. He wants to push the world’s Muslims, into his camp. We must not do that, and, in order not to, we must have a restraint and fortitude on our part so that we can guard against that outcome as we seek our retribution against the terrorists who have committed such a crime against us.

Thus, as we proceed to do our duty, we must recognize that there are Muslims throughout the world who are on our side. These people, too, have been victimized by these terrorists and gangsters. We need to reach out and enlist freedom-loving Muslim people in the world to join us; and especially we must recognize that the many Muslims-Americans, our fellow citizens, are with us and feel even a greater sorrow for the despicable crime that has been committed against us, because they, too, are us, the United States.

Our greatest strength as a Nation is that America is a land of people of all races and religions and ethnic groups. At the prayer service at our National Cathedral, all faiths, including Islam, were represented; and we can be very proud of that. Now is the time for all of us to stand together.

So how is it that this land of liberty, this free and open society, should become the target of such hatred that it led to the slaughter of thousands of helpless, innocent, kind-hearted, working American people? Those folks were at their desks at work before 9 a.m., so why is it that they and we and America is so hated?

Let us not forget that the Nazis knew that the light of freedom from America was a force which would derail their evil plans. Hitler then declared war on us. Similarly, the Japanese militarists of the 1930s knew full well that the only force in the world that stood in their way of ruling Asia and the Pacific with an iron hand was the United States of America; and they, too, attacked us.

The attack on New York was, of course, worse than Pearl Harbor. Then our Navy, our military personnel and their weapons, were the target. What happened in New York was far more cowardly an attack, a ruthless slaughter of civilians, of unarmed and totally innocent men, women and children. A united and powerful, is what happened after Pearl Harbor andrighteously struck down those evil forces that threatened the world at that time.

During the years after the Second World War, it was America that stood tall and faced down the last great totalitarian evil that threatened this planet, communism. Communism, like Nazism, was defeated in a Cold War that sometimes was very hot. Victory was assured by our resolve, by our courage, and by tough decisions made by our leaders, America’s leaders.

I worked in the White House during the years when Ronald Reagan brought an end to the Cold War, culminating with the dismantling of the communist dictatorship that controlled Russia and its puppet states. Essential to that great victory was President Reagan’s support for various people who were fighting to free themselves from communist tyranny.

The bravest and most fierce of these anti-Soviet insurgents were in Afghanistan. The American people can be proud that we provided the Afghan people the weapons they needed to win their own freedom and independence. That Cold War battle was a major factor in breaking the will of the communist bosses in Moscow, thus ending the Cold War, making almost everyone on this planet in these last 10 years, especially in the Western democracies, safer and more prosperous.

Third America rose up. We must begin to understand the grotesque crime that has now been committed against us. One of the common errors found in news reports in these last few days has been the suggestion that those who are fighting in Afghanistan today are the same people who supported in the war against Soviet occupation in Afghanistan back in the 1980s. This, by and large, is wrong.

Yes, some of those currently in power in Kabul are the Pakistanis. But by and large, we are talking about two different groups, two different sets of people. Those who fought the Soviet occupation were called the Mujahedin. During my time at the White House during the 1980s, I had the opportunity to meet and get to know most of their leaders. Their fight against the Taliban leadership does not include any of those wartime leaders.

After I left the White House and was elected to Congress, but before I was sworn into Congress, I knew that I had that lead moments between Taliban and Russia, in January to do things that I could never do once I was elected to Congress. I chose to hike into Afghanistan as part of a small Mujahedin unit and to engage in a battle against the Russian and communist forces near and around the city of Jalalabad.

The Mujahedin I marched with were incredibly brave, but they were not senseless killers. Their religious faith was devout, but they were not fanatics. They prayed daily, but I did not see them joining them in prayer. They faced death, but their dreams were of life.

I will never forget one moment as I hiked in from the Khyber Pass and around to the other side of Jalalabad to join this battle. As we marched forth into the night with the Mujahedin unit, the nights were lit up by, and you could hear the thunder of cannons and see the flash of the cannons in the distance. We knew we were hiking into a battle.

One of the Mujahedin in this unit with which I marched rushed to my side, and he was probably around 16 or 17 years old, with an AK–47 strapped across his back. He talked to me in perfect English saying, I understand that you are in politics in America. I said, yes, I am a political person in America. He said, I need to know, are you a donkey or are you an elephant?

I will never forget that young person. He knew more about our politics, and certainly none of our young people could know that much about what was going on in that part of the world. As he marched into this battle, he told me of his dream to be an architect so that someday he could help rebuild his country, Afghanistan, into a decent place for families and for people to live, and expressed to me how grateful he was to me and all Americans for the help that we were giving them to throw off the Soviet occupation forces that were so brutal to their countrymen. I do not know if that young man ever survived that war.

It was a year later when the Russians retreated from Afghanistan and the Russians left. The United States, which had been providing $1 billion a year to finance that war, we simply walked away. We walked away and left Afghanistan.

After years of death and destruction, we walked away; we left them with no guidance and no resources to even rebuild. We did not even help them clear the landmines which we had personally given the Mujahedin in help them defeat the Russians, much less clear the terrorist landsmines that were still there. We left these brave heroes who helped us end the Cold War; we left them to sleep in the rubble. Most importantly, we left them with no leadership, except that of Pakistan and Saudi Arabia, two countries that have played such a shameful role in Afghanistan over these last 10 years.

After the collapse of the Communist regime in Afghanistan, the Mujahedin factions who fought the Russians, but with no direction from the United States, began bickering and fighting among themselves. This went on for several years. Then, in 1996, a new force appeared, seemingly out of nowhere: the Taliban. These were fresh, well-equipped forces whose leader was a crazy commander named bin Laden. They had been in Pakistan in what they called schools. “Taliban,” by the way, means student, even though most of these are older men who are totally illiterate. All of the money America provided the Mujahedin during the war had to be sent through; that is, the war against Soviet Union occupation, had to be sent through the equivalent of the Pakistani CIA, which is called the ISI. But apparently, the Pakistanis had shipped through off to create a third force, and since the war was over and the other factions had been bled white, they could use this third force to dominate Afghanistan.

Also behind the Taliban is and was Saudi Arabia. During the war against the Russians, the Saudis provided the Afghan resistance with hundreds of millions of dollars. For that we can be grateful. They are one of the few countries that stepped up to the plate during the Cold War and fought the Soviet Union aggression. Unfortunately, however, the Saudis were financing antiewestern as well as AntiCommunist Muslims, and one of those who they financed was bin Laden.

I cannot forget also as I marched with that Mujahedin unit to the battle of Jalalabad and, by the way, that battle was a long-time siege that had been taking place around the city, we at one point in that march came across a camp of tents. They were white tents and you could see them in the distance, and I was told at that point I must not speak English for at least another 3 hours, because the people in those tents were for a crazy commander named bin Laden, and that bin Laden was so crazy that he wanted to kill Americans as much as he wanted to kill Russians. Thus, I must keep my mouth shut or we would be attacked by those forces, by those forces under bin Laden.

Later, much later, after I had become a Congressman, I met with the head of...
Saudi intelligence, the man responsible for providing that money to the Afghans during the war, the $200 million or so, or whatever it was that the Saudis had, the Afghans were under the name of General Turkey. I suggested to General Turkey that what we needed to do now that the Russians had left Afghanistan was to bring back to Afghanistan the exiled king of Afghanistan. It was King Zahir Shah who was overthrown in 1972. It was that overthrow of this king who had been a very good person and a good man, it was his overthrow that started the bloody cycle of events which eventually led to the Soviet Union invasion of 1979 and the subsequent war against Soviet Union occupation.

I suggested to bring back the king of Afghanistan because he was a wonderful person and beloved by his people. He was a king; his government was based on Virtue. He wanted to bring in those five vices: he wanted to end them. In his approach and never killed other people. He, in fact, was truly a moderate and, I might say, pro-western or western oriented, although a devout Muslim. But the Saudis wanted nothing to do with bringing back a moderate good-hearted king from exile. They and their Pakistani allies were in the process of creating a secret third force that I did not know anything about: the Taliban. But during my conversation, it was mentioned that a third force was being created, one that could take over Afghanistan and bring stability, but, of course, one that would do the bidding of their Pakistani and Saudi handlers.

One must wonder why the Saudi Arabians and the Pakistanis are even to this day so involved in Afghanistan. This is an important fact of history that we need to understand. Number one, the type of religious fervor they have and the type of Islam they have in Saudi Arabia is similar to the Islam in Pakistan. However, in Pakistan, they remain free of Taliban domination. As I say, many of whom totally sat out the war against the Russians. They were not interested in coming back to Pakistan and take over their territory. And all too soon, the people of Afghanistan and the rest of the world were to discover that the Pakistanis and the Saudis had created a monster.

The Taliban were and are medieval in their words, in their world view, and their religious view. They are violent, they are intolerant, they are fanatics that are totally out of sync with Muslims throughout the world, even Muslims in their own country, and they are especially out of sync with Muslims living in the western democracies. The Taliban are best known for their horrific treatment of women, but they are violators of human rights across the Muslim world. When a Taliban reporter threatened to execute Christian aid workers. And let us not forget those Christian aid workers who are in Afghanistan being held under arrest as we speak. In fact, they have jailed and threatened to execute those aid workers. People who came there to help their people, for allegedly, allegedly daring to espouse a belief in Jesus Christ. That is enough to get them executed in Afghanistan.

The Taliban have ended all personal freedoms. Freedom of speech and press do not exist under the Taliban. And the Taliban are led by men who have been ruled by fear and force and when they were asked, and I challenged them to have an election so the people of Afghanistan could choose their government and if they chose the Taliban, be it, the Taliban only laughed and stonewalled and refused to even consider permitting the Afghan people to have an election and choose their leaders.

Mr. Speaker, the Taliban are as big an enemy of the United States and, yes, as big an enemy to the Afghan people as they are to the people of the United States. The Talibans believe they have a private line to God, and the rest of us, with our religious constraints are, according to the Taliban, we are not only wrong, but we are evil. That is why they have been willing to give safe haven to the likes of bin Laden, the Saudi terrorist who has been now in Afghanistan for several years. About 5 years he has been in Afghanistan, we have known he has been there, he has been visible. And while he has been there, he has been clearly training terrorists and planning out his attacks. This is nothing new. We have known about that. And oh, yes, bin Laden has an army of several thousand gunmen who he has brought in from various parts of the world, so they are foreigners to the people of Afghanistan, and this group of gunmen have been running around Afghanistan like a pack of mad dogs killing anyone who is an enemy to Taliban power. These foreign religious fanatics have killed thousands of Afghans, so the Taliban and bin Laden are as despised in that country as they are in our country today.

For the last few years, the Taliban, with the support of Saudi Arabia and Pakistan, have captured control of all but a small portion of Afghanistan. Only the Panjshir Valley territory in northeastern Afghanistan and the Shamal Plains north of Kabul are under the control and have been under the control of a legendary and dashing leader named Commander Massoud and they remain free of Taliban domination.

The day before the attack on the world trade towers and the Pentagon, there was an attempt to kill Commander Massoud. Many of us thought he was dead, he was reported dead, but he struggled for life for another 5 days and just died 2 days ago.

However, the attack on Commander Massoud; and I knew him, I had met him, I knew him, and I just say that I have been in and out of Afghanistan several times in these last few years.
The last time I went in was to see Commander Massoud. The attack on the commander told me something terrible was about to happen, something terrible was about to happen, because Massoud was someone that bin Laden understood that if he did something that would make the United States or someone else very angry at him, that Massoud was someone that would be turned immediately by our side to ally with.

So before the attack on the World Trade Towers and on the Pentagon, bin Laden and his terrorists attacked Commander Massoud and, unfortunately, succeeded in killing him and eliminating Commander Massoud from the equation today.

I was so concerned about this, understanding that this was telling us that something horrible was going to happen, that I made an appointment to see the top officials in the White House in the National Security Council. My appointment with the National Security Council at the White House was to warn the Committee on International Relations. It is my job to oversee the State Department. Other people have other committees, and they oversee those agencies and departments. It was my job to get the documents that would prove or disprove my suspicion that the last administration was secretly supporting the Taliban, and I was stonewalled in that respect.

Let me make this clear. I am a senior member of the Committee on International Relations. It is my job to oversee the State Department. Other people have other committees, and they oversee those agencies and departments. It was my job to get the documents that would prove or disprove my suspicion that the last administration was secretly supporting the Taliban, and I was stonewalled in that respect.

The gentleman from New York (Mr. GILMAN) joined me in a request for these. Madeleine Albright, Secretary of State, promised I would have the documents. I wanted the documents pertaining to the development of our government's policy toward the Taliban. Yet, as an elected official, I had unelected officials, executives at the State Department, refusing to grant me the access to understand what our policy was toward the Taliban. I was instead given meaningless documents.

Members will hear in answer to this charge: 'We gave the gentleman from California (Mr. ROHRABACHER) documents that had nothing to do with the development of the Talibani strategy. I never saw any of the documents about how we should approach the Taliban.'

The State Department made a joke out of Congress' right to oversee America's foreign policy, especially towards Afghanistan. I pleaded with my colleagues to back me up in that demand. I will say that several Democrats did back me up in demanding that the previous administration provide me with that documentation.

But why? Why is it that I was stonewalled? Why is it that they never gave me those documents? I have to believe because those documents would show that the previous administration did consciously acquiesce to having the Taliban in power, probably as some kind of agreement with Saudi Arabia and Pakistan that they would be permitted to dominate this country, even though that terrorist network was being set up there and that America was the target of that terrorist network. Americans had already been murdered by that time, in Saudi Arabia, with barracks blown up and so forth.

By the way, in Afghanistan and in that region, it is commonly believed by the people that the United States created the Talibani and that we support the Taliban. There are reasons that they believe that we supported the Taliban.

In 1996, for example, and this is a very poignant example, and I hope people will look at this example very closely, in 1996, the Taliban overpowered the remnants of the government, and their best fighters were captured in northern Afghanistan. The Taliban regime was vulnerable as never before and never since. It was a tremendous opportunity. The Northern Alliance could easily have dealt a knock-out punch to the Taliban.

At that time, I was in personal contact with the leader of the Northern Alliance, and I recommended to them a quick attack and that they bring back the old king, Zahir Shah, and he is in exile in Rome, and that they bring him back until some form of democratic process could be established. Thus, they would have a figurehead government with the old king for a period of time, and then they could establish a democratic process.

This was a turning point. That was doable. It could have been easily accomplished. The Taliban were vulnerable. Who saved the Taliban? Again, please, I am not being partisan when I say this, who saved the Taliban when they were vulnerable? It is my belief that President Bill Clinton saved the Taliban when they were the most vulnerable.

I beg Members, do not dismiss what I say as being partisan. I would not say that, the Northern Alliance was kept out of Congress' right to oversee America's foreign policy, especially towards Afghanistan. I pleaded with my colleagues to back me up in demanding that the previous administration provide me with that documentation.

These two high-level American officials were sent by President Clinton to propose a cease-fire and a supposed arms embargo on all sides. Of course, the minute that the cease-fire went into effect, and of course the Northern Alliance agreed to that, because they thought we were being sincere and they could trust the United States, but the minute that cease-fire went into effect, the Saudis and Pakistanis began a massive rearming and resupply effort to rebuild the Taliban forces in an equivalent to the Berlin airlift, and that was easy to spot. It was easy to see that tons and tons, airplane after airplane was landing at Kabul Airport with military supplies from Saudi Arabia and from Pakistan. I knew about it. Our intelligence services had to know about it. But guess what? The Northern Alliance was kept in the dark until the Taliban were totally restored to their strength. When they were, the Taliban went on the offensive. They drove the Northern Alliance, which had had an arms embargo put in place by the United States, which we enforced, and we convinced people not to give them weapons, they drove the Taliban, drove them out of the country.

For years, I begged the previous administration, our government, to support those resisting the Taliban regime, to support the former King Zahir Shah, and to let him head an interim... government until a more democratic process could be put in place. This was an alternative we had. Instead, the only response that I got from the previous administration was stonewalling, stonewalling that and stonewalling my request to find out what the government’s real policies were.

All the while, bin Laden, had killed American military personnel at that time, had declared war on the United States, and was running around Afghanistan openly, using it as a base of operations, a safe haven for terrorists. This man even tried to organize an attack on the Pope in the Philippines. His terrorists are responsible for the kidnapping there in the southern Philippines, and we have given him a safe haven all these years. We did nothing. We were, in fact, I believe, acquiescing to Taliban control because I believe in the understanding in Afghan, between Saudi Arabia and Pakistan to let them dominate Afghanistan. This understanding was obviously turning into a nightmare. Even if it made sense in the beginning to have such an understanding, we should have seen what was going on, bin Laden come back and dramatically hurt the United States of America. These warnings were ignored over and over again, even while the State Department stonewalled my efforts to get the information.

Mr. Speaker, I include these documents for the RECORD.

The material referred to is as follows:
September 9, 1999—IR Committee Hearing: “I would again alert my fellow members of this committee that what is going on in Afghanistan is as important to America’s National security as what is going on in Iran, because we have a terrorist base camp.”
August 11, 1998—Letter to Nawaz Sharif, Prime Minister Pakistan: “International Terrorists like Osama bin Laden will become the de facto substitute for a central government in Afghanistan. For example, the recent bombings of U.S. embassies in Africa are tied to Osama bin Laden and his thugs.”
May 1998—Letter to Newt Gingrich, Speaker of the House: “As you may know, Afghanistan has become the world’s largest base of terrorism, a center of terrorism, a base for terrorism not only in Central Asia but for the world.”
November 9, 1999—House Floor Debate on Afghanistan: “A terrorist trained in Afghanistan helped blow up a building which housed our military people in Saudi Arabia. There was an assassination attempt on the Pope. They found out that the terrorist who was going to assassinate the Pope was trained in Afghanistan. We can not let this go on, because not only is it immoral to let this go on, but practically speaking, if we do, it will come back and hurt us.”

But why were we not warned then? It was clear something was going on in Afghanistan. Why were we not warned by others of the horrific attack that was about to be launched on us, the American people?

There was a headline in The Washington Post on September 14 suggesting that America’s intelligence services had been conducting a secret war against bin Laden for several years. If that is true, then we need to find out who the leaders of that covert war, because they were responsible for protecting us from this heinous and cowardly gang; and they obviously have dramatically failed.

Instead, they were told the heads of our intelligence organizations were focused on bin Laden. There is a war being conducted against bin Laden, we were focused on him, and he was able to attempt to attack us and slaughter thousands of our people without any warning from these people who were supposedly focused on him.

We spend tens of billions of dollars annually for good intelligence, and we have tens of thousands of people committed to this endeavor. And they totally missed a terrorist operation of this magnitude run by their number one targeted terrorist. This was clearly the worst failure of American intelligence in our history.

I cannot help but remember, in another poignant story, I cannot help but remember a few years ago I was called by a friend who had worked in Afghanistan during the war against the Russians. This man has thousands of friends in Afghanistan because he had been there, and he had helped thousands of Afghans who were his friends and looked at him as a wonderful person. He had kept in touch with them.

He indicated to me that he could pinpoint bin Laden’s location. I passed on his phone number to the CIA. After a week, he had yet to be contacted, so I called them again. For another week there was no response. When I gave them this man’s credentials, I told them, “This is a man who knows about Afghanistan. He has sources that you do not have.” They did not call him for 2 weeks. Another week, no response.

Finally, I contacted the gentleman from Florida (Mr. Goss), the chairman of the Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence here in the Congress. He set up a meeting with me and the bin Laden task force. There they were, the CIA, the NSA, the FBI. Guess what? They, too, left my friend waiting by his phone and did not follow up.

After weeks, finally, a second time when the gentleman from Florida (Mr. Goss) had to call the checkpoint, my friend was at last contacted. He described the agents who talked to him as being somewhat disinterested. That may have been because by the time they got to him, over a month had passed and perhaps the tip-off was a little stale. Or perhaps, as we are learning in the paper today, or not today but yesterday, when there were reports in the paper, that our intelligence services knew about the location of bin Laden several times but were not permitted to attack him. So there are people in the intelligence services who wanted to go forward and did not end and could not because of decisions made by people higher up, or perhaps in their own agencies, people who were incompetent.
To accomplish this, we must be strong and we must be smart. Now, we do not need our troops, the worst thing we could do is just try to send an army into Afghanistan. Yes, people if there are two rules of modern warfare it is you do not march on Moscow and you do not invade Afghanistan. That does not mean, however, that we cannot commit military action. I think this calls for military action.

We should already be dispatching special forces teams and rangers to those countries on the northern border of Afghanistan. Those teams and other military units should establish a system of supply and equip those Afghans friendly to the United States so that they can free themselves, with our help, from Taliban rule. We can then join them. Once Taliban rule has been eliminated in Afghanistan, we can join them in hunting down and killing every member of bin Laden's terrorist gang and hanging their bodies from the gate.

But revenge is not an end in itself. We cannot permit ourselves to strike out blindly, to hurt people who have nothing to do with this. Some people have said, oh, let us bomb Kabul. Kabul is filled with people who hate the Taliban. Afghanistan is filled with people who hate the Taliban. We cannot make enemies out of people who will be our allies.

We must be smart and not just strong. Revenge in itself is not the answer, even though revenge is called for. By killing bin Laden and his gang, it is not just revenge; it is an act also of deterrence, of saving lives. We must keep in mind that our motive is to prevent further terrorist attacks slaughtering our own citizens, and especially by making sure we work with other people in the Muslim world and elsewhere who will join us in this effort, and not just the Muslim world and not just others who are on the periphery.

We need to lead this world, as our President, George W. Bush, is doing, to set a new moral standard. We have to keep to that moral standard as we proceed to seek justice and vengeance for the death of our people. That new moral standard has got to be that noncombatants will not be attacked. We will not kill unarmed innocent people in order to make sure it does not happen again. All of this pounding of our chests and expressing our moral outrage means nothing unless we are willing to do as a Nation.

The new standard should be for this world that we will not tolerate women and children being used as targets or unarmed combatants being used for targets for any reason. First, our dead American soldiers; they will be avenged; but they will be avenged by establishing this new standard. Hopefully, that will deter at least some of those swine who contemplate such attacks in the future. And by affirming that the targeting of unarmed combatants anywhere in the world for whatever reason will not be tolerated, we have taken a major step forward.

We will be building a better world even if it is being built on the ashes of those who are dying to protect us. It is that the bin Ladens of this planet are never again, which is a corollary to this, those people who are committing such terrorist attacks against unarmed people, nowhere will they be given safe haven. And any country that provides safe haven for the terrorists who target these innocents, that will not be tolerated; and they will be held responsible for the terrorist acts that are being committed by people who use their country as a staging area. And those countries which harbor the criminals, those countries which help them launder their money, those countries that give them support, they themselves will pay a heavy price for this criminal disregard for the victims of terrorism. There will and must be an accounting across the board.

At home, those top government executives whose policies protected the Taliban must be held accountable. Those people who stonewalled the Congress' efforts to get that information of what our policy was; those officials who in the Taliban were vulnerable convinced their enemies not to attack. The intelligence officers who were supposed to be protecting us, those people in the State Department who should have been adhering to America's moral and ethical and political standards and supporting those opposed to the Taliban rather than acquiescing to leaving the Taliban in power because of the State Department, those State Department people, those intelligence officers, these are executives, are not political appointees. These are top-level executives who have been there for years. They need to be held accountable.

The American people, those of us who are concerned about the future, the innocent thousands of Americans without any warning.

We had no warning here in Washington, D.C. at all. They could have destroyed this Capitol building. We had no warning. We had no indication, we had no warning, we had no indication like this, and we had no warning. It is incompetence on our side. We have to do that; we have to correct this in order to make sure it does not happen again. All of this pounding of our chests and expressing our moral outrage means nothing unless we are willing to do as a Nation.

Those countries, Afghanistan, Pakistan, Saudi Arabia, they have a price to pay. We will figure out what that is. First and foremost they have to do a reversal on what they are doing to protect the Taliban and protect the terrorists right now. And we will figure out what they have to do to make up for what they have done that led to this crime.

And, finally, the murdering terrorists themselves will pay the ultimate price. They will pay this price. We will have victory over those ghouls who murdered the Soviet Union and锻炼. And it is not easy telling someone, I am sorry you're out of your job because you were incompetent.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. CULBERTSON). Under the Speaker's announced policy of January 3, 2001, the gentleman from California (Mr. Dreier) is recognized for 60 minutes.

Mr. DREIER. Mr. Speaker, I would like to take a few minutes to talk about a number of very important issues, building in many ways on the remarks of my friend from Huntington Beach, who, as he said very appropriately, was one of the key leaders in our effort to ensure that the Soviet Union was extricated from Afghanistan during the 1980s. It was a very troubling time; but, Mr. Speaker, as you recall, there was a tremendous victory, a victory because forcing the Soviets from Afghanistan was critically important to the demise of the Berlin Wall and the Soviet Union. So that is why we should celebrate what it is that we were able to do during the 1980s; but at the same time, we need to look at where we are today and what we need to do as a Nation.

It is very true that over the past several years we have seen a crumbling of our relationship with some countries that had been traditional allies of ours during the war between Afghanistan and the Soviet Union to today. We will have and speak to our friend, the gentleman from (Mr. ROHRABACHER), referred. Today, however, I believe it is very important for us to recognize that General Pervaiz Musharraf, who in fact took the leadership of that country in a coup, has made a choice. And, obviously, we need to do everything that we can to ensure that he made the right choice and that he stands by that. He made a choice between the Taliban and those who were tolerant of what took place a week ago, tomorrow, and not only the United States of America but the civilized world. So I am very pleased that that choice was made.

We also have other so-called moderate Arab countries in the region; and those countries have, I believe, made a correct and appropriate choice. And there are nations with which we have not had any kind of friendly relationship over the past several years that I believe must begin to recognize that it is a civilized world in opposition to the heinous acts which took place last week.

Mr. Speaker, today is a very important day in the history of the United States of America. September 17 is always known as Constitution Day; 214 years ago today the Constitution was ratified. I have the privilege later this afternoon of joining Supreme Court Justice Kennedy in a celebration of Constitution Day. He and I are going to be reciting, in unison, across the country by a hookup, the preamble of our great Constitution. I thought I would take just a moment, since today is Constitution Day, to share that with our colleagues.

The preamble of this inspired document begins: “We the people of the United States, in order to form a more perfect union, establish justice, ensure domestic tranquility, provide for the common defense, promote the general welfare ... do ordain and establish this Constitution for the United States of America.”

Now, Mr. Speaker, as we look at that brilliant preamble, I truly believe that those five words right in the middle of that preamble, and I have stood here many times and recited that as we have talked about our Nation’s defense posture, those five words, which are so important, are “provide for the common defense.” So as we celebrate Constitution Day across the country, I believe it is important for us to underscore that the most important issue that the Federal Government here in Washington, D.C. deals with is to provide for the common defense and the safety and security of the American people and our interests around the world.

On this important day, I think it is great to note that the heinous acts that were committed last Tuesday were not in vain. We will be a stronger Nation as a result of this. We will be a stronger Nation going through this, the worst week in our Nation’s modern history, the largest attack on civilians in the United States in our 214-year history and, as has been pointed out by many, more lives, nearly twice the number of lives lost than were lost at Pearl Harbor.

As we look at the challenges and as we look at where we go from here, it is important to note that this Nation had some incredible heroes last week.

This morning I listened to the radio to my friend Hugh Hewitt who has a great morning program. It is based in Los Angeles. It is syndicated across the country. He shared an account which I would like to share with our colleagues, an Associated Press report that was carried yesterday. This has to do with the tragic crash of flight number 93 that took place near Johnstown, Pennsylvania.

I was moved last week when our colleague, the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. MURTHA), when we were in the midst of debating the supplemental appropriation bill, let me say before I read this Associated Press article, Mr. Speaker, that to me it was very, very moving to see the extraordinary level of bipartisan, not only patriotism across our country, but this extraordinary level of bipartisan that we saw right here in this institution.

People who have been some of the most strident and harshest critics of the man I consider to be our great President, were as enthusiastic in their support of his actions and his demeanor as any of the rest of us who have been longtime friends and supporters of his.

So, Congressman MURTHA told about the accounts that he had received of what took place on flight 93 that was headed to San Francisco and that reportedly the hijackers were going to bring right into this city, possibly into this Capitol dome that is right above where I stand today. This account is a very moving one about one individual.

It begins, quote, “‘Are you guys ready? Let’s roll.’ It is an expression Todd Beamer used whenever his wife and two young sons were leaving their home for a family outing. It was also the expression the 32-year-old businessman and Sunday school teacher used before he and other passengers apparently took action against hijackers aboard United Airlines Flight 93. His wife was told by an operator who talked to Beamer just before the plane crashed in a western Pennsylvania field on Tuesday. “

The plane, which government officials suspect was headed for a high-profile target in Washington, was the fourth to crash in a coordinated terrorist attack that killed thousands, and the only one that did not take lives on American soil. This. We will never forget.

Quote, “‘He was gentle by nature. He was also very competitive, and he would not stand for anyone being hurt.’ said Lisa Beamer, whose account coincides with other crash victims’ relatives who received calls from loved ones aboard the plane.’ Quote.

‘Knowing that three fellow passengers were killed by bringing that plane down, it brings joy to a situation where there is not much to be found.’”

“Todd Beamer placed a call on one of the Boeing 757’s on-board telephones and spoke for 13 minutes with CTE operator, Lisa D. Beamer, Beamer’s wife said. He provided detailed information about the hijacking, and after the operator told him about the morning’s World Trade Center and Pentagon attacks, said he and the others on the plane were planning to act against the terrorists aboard, Lisa Beamer said.

“They may have realized that the hijackers were planning to do the same thing with their plane,” Beamer said. She said she received a telephone message from her Hightstown, New Jersey home. “So they chose to do what they could to prevent other people from being hurt.”

“Before the call ended and with yelling heard in the background, Todd Beamer asked the operator to pray with him. Together they recited the 23rd Psalm which includes the passage, ‘The Lord leadeth me in the paths of righteousness for his name’s sake.’”

“Then he asked Jefferson to promise she would call his wife of 7 years and their two sons, David and Andrew. She is expecting a third child in January. After finally receiving clearance from investigators, Jefferson kept her promise Friday.”

“People asked me if I am upset that I did not speak with him. But I am glad he called Jefferson instead,’ Lisa Beamer said. ‘I would have been helpless and I know what his last words would have been to me anyway. I think that is why he chose the method he did.’

“Beamer said her husband placed the call at 9:45 a.m. Tuesday and told Jefferson that there were three knife-wielding hijackers on board and one had what appeared to be a bomb tied to his chest with a red belt. Two of the hijackers were in the cockpit with the door locked. The pilot and co-pilot were forced out and the man with the apparent bomb stayed in the rear of the aircraft. The jet was bobbing and changed course several times. The passengers knew that they would never land in San Francisco.”

Quote, “‘They realized they were going to die. Todd said he and some other passengers were going to jump on the guy with the bomb,’ Lisa Beamer said.

“Several other passengers made phone calls from the jet just before it crashed southeast of Pittsburgh. Jeremy Dick, 31; Mark Bingham, 31; and Thomas Burnett, 38, all called loved ones. Glick and Burnett said they were going to do something. Quote, ‘Clearly
I was privileged yesterday to be able to, although the long distance, the hook-up never finally worked, but I had my representative there and I got a full report of what I participated in a service at the Claremont Islamic Center at which there were over 700 people who on basically very short notice, one day’s notice, came to have a multi-denominational service.

I was told by the director of my office in California, my field representative, Mark Harmsen, just before he got up to talk about the resolution that we had passed through the Congress condemning discrimination, that a young girl stood and talked about the fact that she had had someone tear off her veil.

I think as we look at these challenges, Mr. Speaker, it is important for us to realize that we cannot allow this kind of discrimination and these kinds of acts against people to take place. So I am very proud that the United States House of Representatives stood unanimously in support of our resolution condemning those acts.

Mr. Speaker, there is a lot of talk about the Muslim faith and whether or not there is widespread support for this kind of action. I know from, of course, knowing these people and having worked with leaders in the Muslim world across this continent, across the world, and here in the United States, many people who are of Arab American descent and love the United States of America as much as anyone.

While the backers and supporters and allies of Osama bin Laden and other terrorists have tried to exude the image that their believers have got to recognize that everyone else is evil, that is just a gross mischaracterization of the faith of Islam.
We are going to be, as I said, stronger because of this. I am convinced, Mr. Speaker, that as the greatest Nation the world has ever known, the United States of America will be able to emerge as an even greater leader for the world than we have been before.

I believe that President Bush was right on target when he, shortly after these tragic acts took place said, "Nothing—nothing—will diminish the spirit of our great country."

Mr. Speaker, I thank you very much for your forbearance. I appreciate the fact that so many of our colleagues have been uniting together for this extraordinarily important cause. I express appreciation to the heroes like the one whom I mentioned, Mr. Beamer, and the firefighters and law enforcement people here in the Washington, D.C. metropolitan area, in Pennsylvania and, of course, in New York City. I hope very much that we are able in the not too distant future to bring about a successful resolution to this horrendous tragedy.

SENATE ENROLLED JOINT RESOLUTION SIGNED

The SPEAKER announced his signature to an enrolled joint resolution of the Senate of the following title:

S.J. Res. 23. A joint resolution to authorize the use of United States Armed Forces against those responsible for the recent attacks launched against the United States.

ADJOURNMENT

Mr. DREIER. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 1 o'clock and 19 minutes p.m.), under its previous order, the House adjourned until Wednesday September 19, 2001, at noon.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS,

ETC.

Under clause 8 of rule XII, executive communications were taken from the Speaker’s table and referred as follows:

3657. A communication from the President of the United States, transmitting a request to make available emergency funding to respond to the consequences of the September 11th terrorist attacks on the United States, pursuant to section 251(b)(2)(A) of the Balanced Budget and Emergency Deficit Control Act of 1985, as amended; (H. Doc. No. 107—119), to the Committee on Appropriations.

3658. A letter from the Director, Congressional Budget Office, transmitting the CBO’s Sequestration Update Report for FY 2002, pursuant to 2 U.S.C. section 904(b); to the Committee on Appropriations.

3659. A letter from the Under Secretary of Defense, Acquisition, Technology and Logistics, Department of Defense, transmitting notification of intent to fund for test projects for inclusion in the Fiscal Year 2002 Foreign Comparative Testing (FCT) Program, pursuant to 10 U.S.C. 2380(a)(g); to the Committee on Armed Services.

3660. A letter from the Deputy Secretary, Department of Defense, transmitting the Department’s report on Portability and Reciprocity of TRICARE Prime Benefits; to the Committee on Armed Services.

3661. A letter from the Acting Chairman, Securities and Exchange Commission, transmitting the annual report of the Securities Investor Protection Corporation for the year 2000, pursuant to 15 U.S.C. 78ggg(c)(2); to the Committee on Financial Services.

A TRIBUTE TO KELLY M. RAMIREZ
HON. STEVE ISRAEL
OF NEW YORK
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Monday, September 17, 2001

Mr. ISRAEL. Mr. Speaker, it is with great pride that I rise today to recognize one of New York’s outstanding young students, Kelly M. Ramirez. On September 20, 2001, the women of Girl Scout Troop 801 will recognize Kelly for receiving her gold award.

Since the beginning of the last century, the Girl Scouts of America have provided thousands of young women each year with the opportunity to make friends, explore new ideas, and develop leadership skills while learning self-reliance and teamwork.

These awards are presented only to those who possess the qualities that make our Nation great: commitment to excellence, hard work, and genuine love of community service. The Gold Award represents the highest awards attainable by junior and high school Girl Scouts.

I ask colleagues to join me in congratulating the recipient of this award, as her activity is indeed worthy of praise. Her leadership benefits our community and she serves as a role model for her peers.

Also, we must not forget the unsung heroes, who continue to devote a large part of their lives to make all this possible. Therefore, I salute the families, scout leaders, and countless others who have given generously of their time and energy in support of scouting.

It is with great pride that I recognize the achievements of Kelly, and bring the attention of Congress to this successful young woman on her day of recognition.

IN RECOGNITION OF THE 75TH ANNIVERSARY OF THE GOLF COURSE SUPERINTENDENTS ASSOCIATION OF AMERICA
HON. DENNIS MOORE OF KANSAS
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Monday, September 17, 2001

Mr. MOORE. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to the Golf Course Superintendents Association of America (GCSAA) on the occasion of its 75th anniversary.

The GCSAA is the professional association for the men and women who manage and maintain golf facilities in the United States and worldwide. From its headquarters in Lawrence, Kansas, the association carries out its mission to serve its members, advance their profession and enhance the enjoyment, growth and vitality of the game of golf.

The GCSAA was founded on September 13, 1926, when a group of 60 visionary greenkeepers met at the Sylvania Country Club in Toledo, Ohio, with the purpose of forming an organization that would inform and educate its membership and strive for a better future for those who manage the playing fields of golf. Originally called the National Association of Greengrocers, the association has grown to more than 21,000 individual members in the United States and 65 other countries. GCSAA and its members are leaders in the golf community.

As in 1926, the advancement of the superintendent profession, and the game and business of golf, are at the heart of everything the GCSAA does today. GCSAA offers numerous educational and informational programs to serve an ever-growing membership—education that spans the scientific, technical, environmental, professional development and resource management aspects of the profession.

In recent years GCSAA has expanded its role so that it not only serves its members, but also the people, organizations and institutions allied to the game of golf. From funding university turfgrass research, to promoting the participation of youth, minorities and persons with disabilities in the game, to being a major participant in the arena of environmental stewardship, GCSAA continues to take an active approach in making golf better. Today the superintendent is recognized as a key to golfer enjoyment and to the economic vitality of the golf course.

GCSAA has spent the last 75 years advancing the golf course superintendent profession and enhancing the game of golf and will only continue these great achievements in the years to come.

Mr. Speaker, I am delighted to congratulate the Golf Course Superintendents Association of America as they celebrate 75 wonderful years of association history and heritage.

IN RECOGNITION OF THE DISTRICT TRANSITIONS CENTER
HON. JAMES H. MALONEY
OF CONNECTICUT
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Friday, September 14, 2001

Mr. MALONEY of Connecticut. Mr. Speaker, I come to the floor today to address the necessity, imposed on us by unspeakable acts of terrorism, for the United States to respond to the killing and injuring of thousands of our fellow citizens, almost all innocent civilians.

This Nation has the right and obligation to both respond to and defend itself from the violent enemies of our freedom and liberty. Those persons and/or entities that were either directly involved in or provided any assistance to the acts of September 11 pose a clear and present danger to the lives of our people and to our very national security. We will find those responsible and make certain that they, and anyone who helped them, are fully punished.

Moreover, as we cannot rule out future attacks on U.S. soil or to American interests overseas, we must take a comprehensive approach to this challenger. Appropriately, we will utilize the first rate capabilities of our Armed Forces to ensure the personal security of each and every one of us, at home or abroad. To that end, we commit ourselves by the resolution before us, to root out terrorism wherever it is found around the world.

It will not be an easy task to defeat terrorism. It will require considerable resources and patience. There is no quick solution. I am confident, however, that the President and the Congress, working together, will find the means and methods to prevail.

As a member of the Armed Services Committee, I along with my committee colleagues will perform our duty in providing U.S. Armed Forces the necessary resources to deter and defeat the threat of terrorism. I know that our colleagues will support our work.

There is yet considerable work to be done in the days and months ahead. I am confident that our Nation, and our Armed Forces called upon to defend all Americans, will meet the challenges that lie ahead—just as we have from Concord and Lexington through the war in the Persian Gulf.

I strongly urge passage of the Resolution.

A VISION FOR SAGINAW INTERMEDIATE SCHOOL DISTRICT
HON. JAMES A. BARcia
OF MICHIGAN
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Monday, September 17, 2001

Mr. BARcia. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to commend Saginaw Intermediate School District Superintendent Richard Lane, Board of Education President Joseph W. Powe, Vice President Ruth A. Coppens and members Leola Wilson, Gerald W. Rustem and Richard F. Burmeister, Jr., upon the occasion of the dedication of the Saginaw Intermediate School District Transitions Center. Their hard work, foresight and initiative in building this center has greatly enhanced the educational potential of the district and will do much to improve the future of all residents.

The Transitions Center, the fifth complex owned and operated by the Saginaw Intermediate School District, will house two school programs, each designed to enable students with various disabilities to learn important and vital life skills. The lessons they learn at the center will provide these students with valuable tools to gain and maintain jobs, live independently and function responsibly long after they leave school. Their efforts also will greatly improve the entire community by unlocking the potential of those whose unique gifts might otherwise have gone untapped.

Throughout the years, the tremendously capable and hard-working leadership and staff of the Saginaw Intermediate District have championed cost-saving and efficient communications among local school districts and sought new and better methods to achieve that goal. To that end, they developed the Saginet Fiber Optic Network at the Transitions Center. This telecommunications network connects local districts with the Intermediate District. Establishing such cost-saving measures has freed valuable local school funds for other needs, giving students and teachers the money for assets they desperately needed.

The facility also includes the Instructional Services Department and Teacher Training Center, which together help local school districts and educators retain and improve proficiency in the development and implementation of curriculum and leads the way in many areas of professional training.

Mr. Speaker, I ask my colleagues to join me in expressing appreciation to Superintendent Lane, Board members and staff of the Saginaw Intermediate School District for their vision and dedication to the educational needs of the entire region. I have faith that their work will serve as a beacon for others and that they will continue to seek, find and implement many more methods for the betterment of schools, teachers and students everywhere.

AUTHORIZING USE OF UNITED STATES ARMED FORCES AGAINST THOSE RESPONSIBLE FOR RECENT ATTACKS AGAINST THE UNITED STATES

SPEECH OF
HON. RANDY “DUKE” CUNNINGHAM OF CALIFORNIA IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES Friday, September 14, 2001

Mr. CUNNINGHAM. Mr. Speaker, I rise to offer my strong, unconditional support for the congressional authorization that will enable our Nation to act swiftly and firmly against those responsible for unleashing the deadliest attack on our Nation in its history. The terrorists’ heinous acts took thousands of innocent lives and caused unprecedented physical destruction. But they have not succeeded in tearing us down or leaving us weak. Out of sorrow has come a soaring of the American spirit; out of destruction has come a restoration of community and political unity; and yes, out of anger, has come a steely determination to hunt down these terrorists and all their enablers, and to ensure that they pay a heavy price for these acts.

We did not seek conflict; terrorists have declared war upon the United States. But we will respond forcefully when our freedoms are threatened and our way of life is under attack. We must take action against our enemies, on our own terms, at a time of our choosing, with moral clarity and unity of purpose. We must deter future aggressors. This resolution will provide the President with the full authority to do just that, and we should join in unanimous support of it.

This resolution is not just authorization for a near-term strike against the perpetrators of the World Trade Center and Pentagon attacks. It is a declaration of war against all terrorists now threatening our Nation, and those who support them. While Congress will continue to consult with the Administration as we progress with this campaign, and play our rightful role if necessary to expand our operations, make no mistake that we will support the President in his quest to eliminate these threats to our society.

I have fought in a conflict that many in this Nation actively opposed, and know how devastating domestic opposition can be to the conduct of war. That should never happen again. Now more than ever, when we are asking our troops to defend our own soil from further attack, we must have solidarity and the continued support of the American people that we will not only provide critical moral support to our President and our troops, but that we will follow through with the financial resources they need to do the job.

This campaign demands that we relook our federal spending, our job creation, and our military needs. We must provide our troops with the current generation assets they need to do their job, and jump start maintenance of equipment that has been ignored for so long. But we must also modernize our forces to ensure their superiority in the 21st century. Perhaps we will revise our focus, reshape our priorities for evolving forms of warfare. But we will not ignore the military’s needs, and our national security will be restored as the top national priority. We will make assets available to protect our homeland, and we will ensure our troops are equipped to do their job and prevail in their mission—now and well into the future.

As President Bush has said, this battle will take time and resolve. But with the continued support of all Americans, we will win, no matter how long it takes. I urge all my colleagues to join in unanimous support of this Nation, our President and our military in this war by voting for this resolution authorizing use of force against the perpetrators of terrorism worldwide.

PRESERVING VIABILITY OF UNITED STATES AIR TRANSPORTATION SYSTEM

SPEECH OF
HON. DONNA M. CHRISTENSEN OF THE VIRGIN ISLANDS IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES Friday, September 14, 2001

Mrs. CHRISTENSEN. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the bill introduced by my colleague Mr. OBERSTAR.

All week, my constituents in the U.S. Virgin Islands have been calling and asking for some kind of a lifeline for our tourism industry. Not only is the travel and tourism industry the largest or second largest industry worldwide, but also it is responsible for 70 percent of the economy of the Virgin Islands.

Mr. Speaker, we have just struggled to bring back our industry after several major hurricanes. We are almost there, and now this.

But this goes beyond just my district, and the people there who depend on tourism, and thus airline travel for their jobs, and to provide for their families. If the airline industry fails, we can see clearly that it would dominocoll all through the national economy.

This bill providing financial support, and a line of credit is critical to this industry, to our economy and to my and many other districts.

We have come through an extraordinary week, and we need to take extraordinary action to secure the future of our nation.

Like many of my other colleagues, I do not support using the social security trust fund, but there is funding in the recently passed tax cut. This is more important and I would respectfully suggest that we use funds set aside for this unnecessary measure to support and sustain our airlines, tourism and the people who depend on them.

A TRIBUTE TO EVAN CHRISTIAN BROWNELL

HON. STEVE ISRAEL OF NEW YORK IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES Monday, September 17, 2001

Mr. ISRAEL. Mr. Speaker, it is with great pride that I rise today to recognize one of New York’s outstanding young students, Evan Christian Brownell. On October 7, 2001, the Boy Scouts of Troop 292 in Brentwood will recognize Evan’s achievements by giving him the Eagle Scout honor.
Since the beginning of this century, the Boy Scouts of America have provided thousands of boys and young men each year with the opportunity to make friends, explore new ideas, and develop leadership skills while learning self-reliance and teamwork.

The Eagle Scout award is presented only to those who possess the qualities that make our nation great: commitment to excellence, hard work, and genuine love of community service. Becoming an Eagle Scout is an extraordinary award with which only the finest Boy Scouts are honored. To earn the award—the highest advancement rank in Scouting—a Boy Scout must demonstrate proficiency in the rigorous areas of leadership, service, and outdoor skills; they must earn a minimum of 23 merit badges as well as contribute at least 100 man-hours toward a community oriented service project.

I ask my colleagues to join me in congratulating the recipient of this award, as his activities are indeed worthy of praise. His leadership benefits our community and he serves as a role model for his peers.

Also, we must not forget the unsung heroes, who continue to devote a large part of their lives to make all this possible. Therefore, I salute the families, scout leaders, and countless others who have given generously of their time and energy in support of scouting.

It is with great pride that I recognize the achievements of Evan and bring the attention of Congress to this successful young man on his day of recognition. Congratulations to Evan and his family.

SENATE COMMITTEE MEETINGS
Title IV of Senate Resolution 4, agreed to by the Senate on February 4, 1977, calls for establishment of a system for a computerized schedule of all meetings and hearings of Senate committees, subcommittees, joint committees, and committees of conference. This title requires all such committees to notify the Office of the Senate Daily Digest—designated by the Rules committee—of the time, place, and purpose of the meetings, when scheduled, and any cancellations or changes in the meetings as they occur.

As an additional procedure along with the computerization of this information, the Office of the Senate Daily Digest will prepare this information for printing in the Extensions of Remarks section of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD on Monday and Wednesday of each week.

Meetings scheduled for Tuesday, September 18, 2001 may be found in the Daily Digest of today’s RECORD.

DESIGNATION OF THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore laid before the House the following communication from the Speaker:

WASHINGTON, DC,
I hereby appoint the Honorable Darrell E. Issa to act as Speaker pro tempore on this day.

J. DENNIS HASTERT, Speaker of the House of Representatives.

PRAYER

The Reverend Campbell Gillon, Georgetown Presbyterian Church, Washington, D.C., offered the following prayer:

Almighty God, before Whom civilizations rise and pass away, we bow before Thee. We are creatures of a day, our lives divinely touched into being; endowed with insight as well as sight, conscience as well as cleverness, spiritual responsiveness as well as physical reflexes. In Thee we exist. Forgive us if in the past, we have denied the “better angels” of our nature, thus denying divine guidance and help.

In the light of the recent act of aggression against this Nation, horror, shock, grief, fear, revenge, and anger struggle within people’s hearts. We sorrow at the loss of life, the families shattered, the injuries sustained, and the horrendous images that rescuers and rescued will forever retain.

We commend all such to the care of the One who alone is the help of the helpless, the healer of the brokenhearted, the strengthener of those bowed down.

Wherever the way forward lies, lead the Representatives of this great Nation by eternal beacons of justice, truth, understanding, and righteousness, to deal firmly with evil and fairly with the rights of all.

Bless them with vision informed by wisdom; wisdom instructed by truth; truth revealed in integrity, and integrity touched by love; all learned in humility before thee, O God, whose children we are called to be.

This we ask in Thy spirit. Amen.

THE JOURNAL

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair has examined the Journal of the last day’s proceedings and announces to the House his approval thereof.

Pursuant to clause 1, rule I, the Journal stands approved.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair will lead the House in the Pledge of Allegiance.

Mr. Issa led the Pledge of Allegiance as follows:

I pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America, and to the Republic for which it stands, one nation under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A message from the Senate by Mr. Moynahan, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate has passed with an amendment in which the concurrence of the House is requested, a bill of the House of the following title:

H.R. 2500. An act making appropriations for the Departments of Commerce, Justice, and State, the Judiciary, and related agencies for the fiscal year ending September 30, 2002, and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the Senate insists upon its amendment to the bill (H.R. 2500) “An Act making appropriations for the Departments of Commerce, Justice, and State, the Judiciary, and related agencies for the fiscal year ending September 30, 2002, and for other purposes,” requests a conference with the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and appoints Mr. Hollings, Mr. Inouye, Ms. Mikulski, Mr. Leahy, Mr. Kohl, Mrs. Murray, Mr. Reed, Mr. Byrd, Mr. Gregg, Mr. Stevens, Mr. Domenici, Mr. McConnell, Mrs. Hutchison, Mr. Campbell, and Mr. Cochran, to be the conference on the part of the Senate.

RECESS

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to clause 12 of rule I, the Chair declares the House in recess subject to the call of the Chair.

Accordingly (at 12 o’clock and 5 minutes p.m.), the House stood in recess subject to the call of the Chair.

□ 1901

AFTER RECESS

The recess having expired, the House was called to order by the Speaker pro tempore (Mr. Army) at 7 o’clock and 1 minute p.m.

MAKING IN ORDER AT ANY TIME

CONSIDERATION OF H.R. 2586, NATIONAL DEFENSE AUTHORIZATION ACT FOR FISCAL YEAR 2002

Mr. Dreier, Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that it be in order at any time for the Speaker, as though pursuant to clause 2(b) of rule XVIII, to declare the House resolved into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for consideration of the bill (H.R. 2586) to authorize appropriations for fiscal year 2002 for military activities of the Department of Defense, to prescribe military personnel strengths for fiscal year 2002, and for other purposes, and that consideration of the bill proceed according to the following order:

The first reading of the bill shall be dispensed with.

All points of order against consideration of the bill are waived.

General debate shall be confined to the bill and shall not exceed 1 hour equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Armed Services.

After general debate the bill shall be considered for amendment under the 5-minute rule.

It shall be in order to consider as an original bill for the purpose of amendment under the 5-minute rule the amendment in the nature of a substitute recommended by the Committee on Armed Services now printed in the bill. The committee amendment in the nature of a substitute shall be considered as read. All points of order against the committee amendment in the nature of a substitute are waived.

No amendment to the committee amendment in the nature of a substitute shall be in order except those that I have placed at the desk and amendments en bloc described in this request.

Except as specified in this request, each such amendment shall be considered only in the order that I have placed at the desk and may be offered only by a Member designated on the amendment or a designee. Each such amendment shall be considered as read, shall not be subject to a demand for division of the question in the House or in the Committee of the Whole, shall be debatable for 10 minutes equally divided and controlled by the proponent and an opponent, and shall not be subject to amendment (except that the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Armed Services each may offer one pro forma amendment for the purpose of further debating any pending amendment.

All points of order against such amendments are waived.

It shall be in order at any time for the chairman of the Committee on Armed Services or his designee to offer amendments en bloc consisting of amendments not earlier disposed of or germane modifications of any such amendment. Amendments en bloc offered pursuant to this request shall be considered as read (except that modifications shall be reported). Debate on each en bloc amendment shall be equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Armed Services or their designees. For the purpose of inclusion in such amendments en bloc, as printed in the form of a motion to strike the form of a germane perfecting amendment to the text originally proposed to be stricken. The original proponent of an amendment included in such amendments en bloc may insert a statement in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD immediately before the disposition of the amendments en bloc.

The Chairman of the Committee of the Whole may recognize for consideration of any amendment out of the order that I have placed at the desk, but not sooner than 1 hour after the chairman of the Committee on Armed Services or a designee announces from the floor a request to that effect.

After disposal of such amendments, the Committee of the Whole shall rise without motion; and no further consideration of the bill shall be in order except pursuant to a subsequent order of the House.

And ordered that the amendments that I have placed at the desk be considered as read for purposes of this request.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the order of amendments.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. HALL of Ohio, page 63, after line 9.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

At the end of title II (page 43, after line 9), insert the following new subtitle:

Subtitle E—Air Force Science and Technology and Development for the 21st Century

SEC. 251. SHORT TITLE.

This subtitle may be cited as the “Air Force Science and Technology for the 21st Century Act.”

SEC. 252. SCIENCE AND TECHNOLOGY INVESTMENT AND DEVELOPMENT PLANNING.

(a) SENSE OF CONGRESS.—It is the sense of Congress that the Secretary of the Air Force should carry out each of the following:

(1) Continue and improve efforts to ensure that—

(A) the Air Force science and technology community is represented, and the recommendations of that community are considered, at all levels of program planning and budgetary decisionmaking within the Air Force;

(B) advocacy for science and technology development is institutionalized across all levels of Air Force management in a manner that is not dependent on individuals; and

(C) the value of Air Force science and technology development is made increasingly apparent to the warfighters, by linking the needs of those warfighters with decisions on science and technology development.

(2) Complete and adopt a policy directive that provides for changes in how the Air Force makes budgetary and nonbudgetary decisions with respect to its science and technology development programs and how it carries out those programs.

(3) At least once every five years, conduct a review of the long-term challenges and short-term objectives of the Air Force science and technology development process required by paragraph (1). The report shall be consistent with the review specified in section 252 of the Floyd D. Spence National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2001 (as enacted into law by Public Law 106-398; 114 Stat. 1654A-46).

(4) Ensure that development and science and technology planning and investment activities are aligned with future space, warfighting systems and for future non-space warfighting systems in an integrated manner.

(5) Elevate the position within the Office of the Secretary of the Air Force that has primary responsibility for budget and policy decisions for science and technology programs.

(b) REINSTATEMENT OF DEVELOPMENT PLANNING.—(1) The Secretary of the Air Force shall reinstate and implement a revised development planning process that provides for the following:

(A) Coordinating the needs of Air Force warfighters with decisions on science and technology development.

(B) Whether the applied technology community is represented, at all levels beneath the senior leadership into the coordination, focus, and content of the science and technology program.

(C) Whether the designation of the commander of the Air Force Materiel Command as the science and technology program lead within the Air Force is effective to assure that an adequate budget top line is set.

(D) Whether the revised development planning process is effective to aid in the coordination of the needs of the Air Force warfighters with decisions on science and technology investments and the establishment of priorities among different science and technology programs.

(E) Whether the implementation of section 252 of the Floyd D. Spence National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2001 (as enacted into law by Public Law 106-398; 114 Stat. 1654A-46) is effective to identify the basis for the appropriate science and technology program top line and investment portfolio.

(c) REPORT.—Not later than 60 days after the date on which the study required by subparagraph (a) is completed, the Secretary of the Air Force shall submit to Congress a report on the implementation of the planning process required by paragraph (1). The report shall include the annual amount that the Secretary considers necessary to carry out paragraph (1).

SEC. 253. STUDY AND REPORT ON EFFECTIVE SCIENCE AND TECHNOLOGY PROGRAM CHANGES.

(a) REQUIREMENT.—The Secretary of the Air Force, in cooperation with the National Science and Technology Council and the National Research Council of the National Academy of Sciences, shall carry out a study to determine how the changes to the Air Force science and technology program implemented during the past two years affect the effectiveness of the capabilities of the Air Force.

(b) MATTERS STUDIED.—(1) The study shall independently review and assess whether such changes as a whole are sufficient to ensure the following:

(A) That the concerns about the management of the science and technology program that have been raised by the Congress, the Defense Science Board, the Air Force Science Advisory Board, and the Air Force Association have been adequately addressed.

(B) That appropriate and sufficient technology is available to ensure the military superiority of the United States and counter future high-risk threats.

(C) That the science and technology investments are balanced to meet the near-, mid-, and long-term needs of the Air Force.

(D) That technologies are made available that can be used to respond flexibly and quickly to a wide range of future threats.

(E) That the Air Force organizational structure provides for a sufficiently senior level advocate of science and technology to develop and implement the science and technology community during the budget and planning process.

(2) In addition, the study shall independently assess the extent to which each specific change to the Air Force science and technology program as follows:

(A) Whether the biannual science and technology reviews provide for budgetary flexibility into, and understanding and appreciation of, the value of the science and technology program to the senior level of Air Force budget decisionmaking.

(B) Whether the applied technology councils are effective in contributing the input of all levels beneath the senior leadership to the coordination, focus, and content of the science and technology program.

(C) Whether the designation of the commander of the Air Force Materiel Command as the science and technology program lead within the Air Force is effective to assure that an adequate budget top line is set.

(D) Whether the revised development planning process is effective to aid in the coordination of the needs of the Air Force warfighters with decisions on science and technology investments and the establishment of priorities among different science and technology programs.

(E) Whether the implementation of section 252 of the Floyd D. Spence National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2001 (as enacted into law by Public Law 106-398; 114 Stat. 1654A-46) is effective to identify the basis for the appropriate science and technology program top line and investment portfolio.

Mr. OSE, page 64, beginning line 20.
(a) CONTINUATION OF DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE PROGRAM FOR FISCAL YEAR 2002.—Of the amounts to be enacted pursuant to section 301 for the purpose of (1) $30,000,000 shall be available only for the purpose of conducting an educational agency assistance to local educational agencies; and (2) $1,000,000 shall be available only for the purpose of making payments to local educational agencies pursuant to the purposes in section 386(d) of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1993 (Public Law 102–484; 20 U.S.C. 7703 note).

(b) NOTIFICATION.—Not later than June 30, 2002, the Secretary of Defense shall notify each local educational agency that is eligible for assistance or a payment under subsection (a) for fiscal year 2002 of:

1. That agency’s eligibility for the assistance or payment;
2. The amount of the assistance or payment for which that agency is eligible.

Mr. Bereuter, page 115, after line 18.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

At the end of subtitle B of title V (page 115, after line 18), insert the following new section:

SEC. 520. PREPARATION FOR, PARTICIPATION IN, AND CONDUCT OF ATHLETIC COMPETITIONS BY THE NATIONAL GUARD AND MEMBERS OF THE NATIONAL GUARD.

(1) ATHLETIC AND SMALL ARMS COMPETITIONS.—Section 504 of title 32, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

“(c) CONDUCT OF AND PARTICIPATION IN CERTAIN COMPETITIONS.—(1) Under regulations prescribed by the Secretary of Defense, members and units of the National Guard may conduct and compete in a qualifying athletic competition or a small arms competition if:

(A) the conduct of, or participation in, the competition does not adversely affect the quality of training or otherwise interfere with the mission or the mission of any part of the National Guard to perform the military functions of the member or unit;

(B) National Guard personnel will enhance the readiness or skill of a unit or a small arms competition if:

(C) the conduct of or participation in the competition will not result in a significant increase in National Guard costs.

(2) Facilities and equipment of the National Guard, including military property and vehicles described in section 508(c) of this title, may be used in connection with the conduct of or participation in a qualifying athletic or a small arms competition following:

(A) availability of funds;

(b) OTHER MATTERS.—Such section is further amended by adding after subsection (c), as added by subsection (a) of this section, the following new subsection:

“(d) AVAILABILITY OF FUNDS.—(1) Subject to paragraph (2) and such limitations as may be enacted in appropriations Acts and such regulations as the Secretary of Defense may prescribe, amounts appropriated for the National Guard may be used to cover:

(A) the cost of conducting or participating in a qualifying athletic competition or a small arms competition under subsection (c); and

(B) the expenses of members of the National Guard under subsection (a)(3), including expenses of attendance and participation fees, travel, per diem, clothing, equipment, and related expenses;

(2) Not more than $2,500,000 may be obligated or expended in any fiscal year under subsection (c).

(3) QUALIFYING ATHLETIC COMPETITION DEFINED.—In this section, the term ‘qualifying athletic competition’ means a competition in athletic events that require skills related to duties or involve aspects of physical fitness that are evaluated by the armed forces in determining whether a member of the National Guard is fit for military duty.

(4) STYLISTIC AMENDMENTS.—Such section is further amended—

(a) in subsection (a), by inserting ‘‘AUTHORIZED ACTIVITIES,’’ after ‘‘(a)’’; and

(b) in subsection (b), by inserting ‘‘AUTHORIZED LOCATIONS,’’ after ‘‘(b)’’.

(5) CONSTRUCTION.—Section 504 of title 32, United States Code, is amended—

(A) in paragraph (1), by striking ‘‘and’’ after the semicolon;

(B) in paragraph (2), by striking ‘‘or’’ and inserting a period; and

(C) by striking paragraph (3).

(6) CONSTRUCTION.—The heading of such section is amended to read as follows:

‘‘504. National Guard schools; small arms competitions; athletic competitions.’’.

Mr. Underwood, page 166, after line 5.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

At the end of section 522 (page 166, after line 5), insert the following new subsection:

(3) The text relating to section 504 in the table of sections at the beginning of chapter 5 of title 10, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

‘‘504. National Guard schools; small arms competitions; athletic competitions.’’.

Mr. Gilchrest, page 187, after line 12.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

At the end of title V (page 187, after line 12), insert the following new section:

SEC. 8. STUDY OF CONTRACT CONSOLIDATIONS.

(a) STUDY.—The Secretary of Defense shall conduct a study of the Secretary’s authority to consolidate programs conducted by the Secretary of a military department.

(b) CONSTRUCTION.—The Secretary may conduct the study in a manner as the Secretary determines to be appropriate.

(c) CONSTRUCTION.—The study shall be submitted to the Secretary of a military department.

Mr. Manzullo, page 248, after line 9.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

At the end of subtitle A of title VIII (page 248, after line 9), insert the following new section:

SEC. 8. STUDY OF CONTRACT CONSOLIDATIONS.

The Secretary of Defense, in consultation with the Comptroller General of the United States, shall develop a database to track contract consolidations which consolidate 2 or more contracts previously awarded by the Department to small business concerns. The database shall contain, at a minimum, the names and addresses of the businesses to which the contracts that were consolidated were previously awarded, the rationale for consolidating the contracts, and the monetary benefit projected to be realized by the contract consolidation. Not later than December 1st of each year, the Secretary of Defense shall submit a report regarding the information contained in such database to the Committees on Armed Services of the House of Representatives and the Senate, the Committee on Small Business of the House of Representatives, and the Committee on Small Business and Entrepreneurship of the Senate.

Mr. LANTOS, page 281, beginning line 6.

The text of the amendment is as follows: Strike section 1041 (page 281 beginning line 6), relating to a sense of the Congress regarding Kwa jelly Atoll.

Mr. SPRATT, page 307, after line 20.

SEC. 10. NAVY SHIPS FOR UNIVERSITY NATIONAL OCEANOGRAPHIC LABORATORY SYSTEM.

Subsection (g) of section 2667 of title 10, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(3) Paragraph (1) does not apply to a renewal or extension of a lease by the Secretary of the Navy of the Naval Vessel for operation of a ship within the United States Code if, under the lease, each of the following applies:

(a) Use of the ship is restricted to federally supported research programs and to non-Federal uses under specific conditions with approval by the Secretary of the Navy.

(b) Because of the anticipated value to the Navy of the oceanographic research and training that will result from the ship's operation, no monetary lease payments are required from the lessee under the initial lease or under any renewal or extension.

(c) The lessee is required to maintain the ship in good state of repair, readiness, and efficient operating condition, conform to all applicable regulatory requirements, and assume full responsibility for the safety of the ship, its crew, and scientific personnel aboard."

Mr. STRAUB, No. 50, page 307, after line 20.

The text of the amendment is as follows: At the end of subtitle E of title X (page 307, after line 20), insert the following new section:

SEC. 1048. ACTION TO PROMOTE NATIONAL DEFENSE.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress finds the following:

(1) The Lafayette Escadrille, an aviation squadron within the French Lafayette Flying Corps, was formed April 16, 1916. (2) The Lafayette Escadrille consisted of aviators from the United States who volunteered to fight for the people of France during World War I. (3) 305 volunteers from the United States served in the Lafayette Flying Corps, completing 3,000 combat sorties and amassing nearly 200 victories. (4) The Lafayette Escadrille won 4 Legions of Honor, 7 Medailles Militaires, and 31 citations, each a Croix de Guerre. (5) In 1918, command of the Lafayette Escadrille was transferred to the United States, where the Lafayette Escadrille became the combat air force of the United States. (6) In 1921, a Franco-American committee was organized to locate a final resting place for the 68 United States aviators who lost their lives flying for France during World War I. (7) The Lafayette Escadrille Memorial was dedicated on July 4, 1928, in honor of all United States aviators who flew for France during World War I. (8) The Lafayette Escadrille Memorial Foundation, located in the United States and in France, was founded by Nelson Cromwell in 1950 and endowed with $1,500,000 to support the maintenance and upkeep of the Lafayette Escadrille Memorial. (9) Environmental conditions have contributed to structural damage to, and the overall degradation of, the Lafayette Escadrille Memorial, preventing the holding of memorial services inside the crypt. (10) The French Government has pledged funds to support a restoration of the Lafayette Escadrille Memorial. (11) The Lafayette Escadrille Memorial should be restored to its original beauty to demonstrate the respect of the United States for the sacrifices made by all Americans who have served our Nation and our allies.

(b) SENSE OF CONGRESS.—It is the sense of Congress that the United States should contribute to the cooperative effort of the United States aviators who lost their lives flying for France during World War I by appropriating sufficient funds to restore the Lafayette Escadrille Memorial in Marnes La-Coguette, France.

LEGISLATIVE PROGRAM

(Mr. DREIER asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. DREIER. Mr. Speaker, tomorrow it is our intent to proceed with consideration of the defense authorization bill. During that time we will be considering 21 amendments. It is our hope that we will be completed at around 5:30 because, as you know, the Speaker of the House and the Senate majority leader extended an invitation to the President of the United States and he will be addressing us here at 9 o’clock tomorrow evening. I just wanted to take this time to explain exactly what it is we are doing.

PERMISSION TO ENTERTAIN MOTIONS TO SUSPEND THE RULES ON THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 20, 2001

Mr. DREIER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Speaker be authorized to entertain a motion to suspend the rules relating to the following measures on the legislative day of Thursday, September 20, 2001: H.R. 1900, H.R. 2061.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California? There was no objection.

JOINT SESSION OF CONGRESS—ADDRESS TO THE NATION BY THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES

Mr. DREIER. Mr. Speaker, I offer a privileged concurrent resolution (H. Con. Res. 231) and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the concurrent resolution, as follows:

H. CON. RES. 231

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That the two Houses of Congress assemble in the Hall of the House of Representatives on Thursday, September 20, 2001, at 9 p.m., for the purpose of receiving such communication as the President of the United States shall be pleased to make to them.

The concurrent resolution was agreed to.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair desires to announce that the practice of reserving seats prior to the joint session by placard will not be allowed. Members may reserve their seats by physical presence only following the security sweep of the Chamber.

The Chaplain, Dr. Lloyd John Ogilvie, offered the following prayer:

Almighty God, Creator, Ruler, our Adonai, sovereign Lord of all life, we pray in the spirit of Rosh Hashana, the days of awe and repentance and the time for reconciliation with You and with one another. Our raw nerves and agitated hearts need this sacred time to repent and return to You with humble and contrite hearts. Jews, Christians, Muslims, and all religions that honor You as God, together seek Your forgiveness for the prejudice, hatred, and toleration of injustice in our world. You have taught us that there is nothing more abhorrent than religious fanaticism that calls evil good or good evil. Sound the shofar in our souls, blow the trumpets, arouse us and call us to spiritual regeneration. Continue to heal our land and strengthen the spiritual awakening which is spreading throughout the Senate family and across the Nation. We celebrate our unity under Your sovereignty and the oneness of our shared commitment to You. Amen.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE

The Honorable JEAN CARNAHAN led the Pledge of Allegiance, as follows:

I pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America, and to the Republic for which it stands, one nation under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.

APPOINTMENT OF ACTING PRESIDENT PRO TEMPORE

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will please read a communication to the Senate from the President pro tempore (Mr. BYRD).

The assistant legislative clerk read the following letter:

U.S. SENATE,
PRESIDING OFFICER,

To the Senate:

Under the provisions of rule 1, paragraph 3, of the Standing Rules of the Senate, I hereby appoint the Honorable JEAN CARNAHAN, a Senator from the State of Missouri, to perform the duties of the Chair.

Mr. ROBERT C. BYRD,
President pro tempore.

Mrs. CARNAHAN thereupon assumed the chair as Acting President pro tempore.

RECOGNITION OF THE ACTING MAJORITY LEADER

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The acting majority leader.

Mr. REID. I thank the Chair.

SCHEDULE

Mr. REID. Today the Senate is going to begin consideration of the Treasury-Postal Appropriations Act. That bill is going to be managed by Senators DORGAN and CAMPBELL. They have every belief it can be finished today. There are some very important measures in the bill.

There will be no rollick votes today or tomorrow. Any rollick votes, the majority leader has indicated, will be held on Friday. So any votes that develop today as a result of the legislation on the floor will deal with Treasury-Postal or perhaps the Defense authorization bill. Those votes will be ordered to occur on Friday because of various things that are happening in the Senate.

IMPACT OF TERRORIST ATTACK ON LAS VEGAS AREA ECONOMY

Mr. REID. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that a memo from John Haycock of Haycock Petroleum, Las Vegas, be printed in the RECORD. This is a memo to his employees. It is one of the best dissertations on our free market system I have seen, and it was done as a result of the events of September 11th.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Date: September 17, 2001.
To: Managers.
From: John Haycock.

The events of Tuesday, September 11th will have an effect on every business in this country. I believe it is the responsibility of senior management to assess our situation and develop plans to mitigate and minimize any negative impact to Haycock Petroleum Company.

The following is a brief summary of what I believe to be the areas of impact to our company and our business routine.

NATIONAL ECONOMY

As I write this memo, the market is down 509 points. While that is a significant loss, it is less than 5%, and certainly not unexpected. If the market closes at around that mark, I believe it will be a positive sign. If the market drops 10%, trading will be stopped.

The Fed dropped interest rates 1/2% this morning in a logical and responsible move which seemed to put a stop to the market drop.

I am a strong believer in the resiliency of a free market.

The National economy is headed for a tough time. There was talk of a recession before the attacks on Tuesday, and those events would seem to make a recessionary period more likely.

LOCAL ECONOMY

There is an immediate hesitancy to travel—especially by air. A significant drop in air travel will hurt our 2 major markets. Las Vegas depends on tourism, and the majority of our visitors arrive by air. Salt Lake depends on air traffic, especially going into the winter months, to feed the skiing industry, which is a huge part of that economy.

My opinion about the down-turn in air travel is that it will be somewhat short lived, assuming there are no more airline tragedies. Time normally heals, and 120 days from now, travel will be somewhat normal.

The Olympics in SLC is a variable. Depending on what happens between now and then, attendance could be significantly affected both by the fear of air travel, and the potential of terrorist attacks on Olympic venues as high profile targets for terrorism.

Meanwhile, it is likely that there could be an increase in local unemployment as affected industries adjust to any drop in business. I don’t believe that a short term drop in travel will have a long term effect on sustained growth in Utah and Nevada.

SUPPLY

Currently, supply does not seem to be an issue. There is a downward trend in the price of distillates, likely due to the glut of jet fuel. Gasoline is moving upward but certainly not abnormally. If there is a move from air travel to travel by car, that would seem to encourage an increase in gasoline.

If however, there is bombing in the Middle East, pricing and supply will be immediately affected. We’ve been there before.

WHAT ABOUT US?

This will undoubtedly have an impact on our business.

Supply volatility is something we know how to deal with if necessary.

A downturn in the general economy will have effects on the demand for the products that we sell, and if necessary we will adjust our infrastructure accordingly.

Credit administration, which is a very big part of our business, should be approached very conservatively even in view of any decrease in demand.

The interest rate cut will help.

Economic conditions are cyclical, and do not last forever.

We can help our own cause within our Company and our communities if we maintain a cautious optimism and do our jobs well.

Again, I believe in the resiliency of a free economy and I have a lot of faith in this country.

This too shall pass.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from New Hampshire.

Mr. GREGG. Madam President, I understand it is the purpose of the leader to go to the Treasury-Postal bill, but I ask unanimous consent that I be allowed to speak as in morning business for 10 minutes.
The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

HOW TO ADDRESS THE THREAT THAT CONFRONTS US TODAY

Mr. GREGG. Madam President, I want to talk a little bit about the issue of how we as a government and how we as a people are going to address what is clearly a threat that confronts us today in the area of terrorism.

Last week, the Commerce-State-Jus tice bill was on the floor, and a number of initiatives in the area of terrorism were included in that bill. I certainly thank the assistant leader for his strong support for that bill, for the elements which were in that bill, and his speaking on behalf of it at that time.

Let me review, so we can put in perspective where we stand as a government, and how we should address it. We need to at least begin by turning the switch and saying we are going to address this is different from what is the traditional law enforcement exercise.

this product or something else they make. I believe we should use the leverage of the American market as a way to say, if you are going to sell this type of product anywhere in the world, and you want to sell something in the United States also, you have an obligation to comply with our needs for our national security under a strict legal judicial structure.

I am before you today to set up a regime that will be fair, that will be subject to the judicial controls necessary to protect the constitutional rights of people who are law-abiding but will also give our intelligence community the access to the information they need when they know there is somebody out there using encryption technology for the purposes of pursuing a terrorist act in the United States. There is no excuse for anybody to be underwriting that type of activity in our country. That is the intelligence level.

The second level, as I mentioned, was the apprehension level. Apprehension is extremely difficult when you are dealing with the terrorist community. There is an entire law enforcement concept in this Nation that says we apprehend after the act occurs. Yet if we wait until after the act occurs in the area of terrorism, the harm is so extreme, as we saw in New York and in Washington, that it becomes very hard to justify allowing the event to occur before we have declared that the individual needs to be apprehended. We have to change our mindset and our approach, and in doing so we have to address our constitutional protections so you do not end up undermining that because it will make the terrorist successful.

The simple fact is we are going to have to adjust our approach in the area of law enforcement to one of apprehending the event approaches rather than after the event.

Second, we are going to have to face the fact that our borders are incredibly porous and we have to set up a new regime for managing our borders which allows the proper flow of individuals back and forth so we can have the access that people, for example, from Mexico wish to have to work in the United States. But we also have to have controls so we know who is coming into our country.

Again, I think the Guest Worker Program discussed in the works is a way to address that. I have some thoughts in that area. This will be a key element of the United States of how we apprehend individuals who are bent on committing acts of terror in our Nation, getting control over our borders.

The third element involved is crisis management and consequence management. There is not only a need to get its act under control. We have 46 agencies responsible for some element of terrorism or counterterrorism. There is tremendous overlap; that is, regrettable, turf issues. There is often indecision and lack of communication of information. In New York, there may have been a specific lack of communication of information. We need a centralized management structure within our Federal Government.

We have proposed in the Commerce-State-Justice bill it be divided for the purposes of domestic terrorist acts—no military but domestic terrorist acts—into two areas. In the Justice Department, appointment of a Deputy Attorney General of Terrorism, with a cross-jurisdiction responsibility. Unless you have budget authority for this individual, there is no point in having such an individual.

The Justice Department for crisis management and the Federal Emergency Management Administration for consequence administration, they would essentially be coordinators of the issue of how we handle domestic terrorist events here in the United States. They would function as co-equals, and would be sequential, however, in their response to an event.

This is just one proposal for how to do it. It is one that passed this Senate and has been strongly supported, for example, by the assistant leader, Senator SENDER. I thank Senator Holdings for his support and Senator WARNER and Senator SHELBY, who participated in the hearings.

As I mentioned, this is just one approach to accomplishing this goal, but we need to accomplish it quickly. The key to accomplishing it, as I mentioned, is whoever is given the responsibility for managing the terrorist portfolio, that individual also has to have the power to do it even across departmental lines because the only way you control things in this Government is if you control the dollars. If you do not control the dollars, you are not going to be able to control the activity. With the drug czar, we saw a complete failure of just naming someone to a position and claiming he has responsibility when he never got the authority to do the job. We cannot afford that on the issue of terrorism.

This will be a public relations event. This must be an individual who has significant power and the responsibility and the capacity to carry out that responsibility because he has the power to do it.

My thought is run out. I know there are other people who want to speak so I will yield the floor, but I do intend to speak further on this issue of how we manage our house on the issue of terrorism. There is a lot we need to do and a great deal that needs to be thought about in this area.

I especially thank the Senator from North Dakota for his courtesy.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Pennsylvania.

Mr. SPECTER. I thank the Chair. (The remarks of Mr. SPECTER pertaining to the introduction of S. 1438 are located in today's RECORD under " Statements on Introduced Bills and Joint Resolutions.") in both Federal and State court, and he is currently a distinguished attorney in private practice in our State.

Mr. Tymkovich is a graduate of the University of Colorado School of law. He was a law clerk for the Chief Justice of the Colorado Supreme Court, and he recently served as cochair of the Colorado Governor's Task Force on Civil Justice Reform.

Today I rise to speak not only of the tremendous qualifications of these three individuals, but to also urge that the Senate move expeditiously to confirm them as Federal judges.

The 10th circuit seat became vacant in October of 1999—nearly 2 years ago. One of the district court seats became vacant in April of 1998—over 3 years ago. The other seat became vacant in May of this year.

Recently, I researched some of the historic appointments to the 10th circuit and one of the things that really jumps out is how quickly Federal judicial vacancies were filled in the past in Colorado.

It was unusual for a seat to remain vacant for a long period of time. I hope we can get back to this tradition.

The Senate should carefully review all nominees, I have taken this responsibility very seriously as a Senator. But when we get qualified candidates that are not controversial, we should confirm them in a timely manner.

That is why I am today asking that the Judiciary Committee begin the process of reviewing these three individuals. I look forward to hearings and confirmation of the Senate.

The 10th circuit seat became vacant in September 30, 2002, and for other purposes.

TREASURY AND GENERAL GOVERNMENT APPROPRIATIONS ACT, 2002

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Under the previous order, the Appropriations Committee is discharged from further consideration of H.R. 2590, and the Senate will now proceed to its consideration.

The clerk will report the bill by title. The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (H.R. 2590) making appropriations for the Treasury Department, the United States Postal Service, the Executive Office of the President, and certain Independent Agencies, for the fiscal year ending September 30, 2002, and for other purposes.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from North Dakota.

Mr. DORGAN. Madam President, I will be joined in the Chamber in a few minutes by my colleague, Senator CAMPBELL from Colorado, who is working on other parts of this legislation.

This legislation is the product of the work of the subcommittee on appropriations dealing with Treasury, Postal and general government accounts.

In the last 2 days, President Bush has indicated it is time for America to go back to work. And we must do that in the Senate.

This appropriations bill contains funding for counterterrorism, for activities to allow us to track down terrorist activity. For example, in the Office of Foreign Assets Control Capital, the Treasury Department we have the financial crimes enforcement network.

We have a counterterrorism fund in the Treasury Department. We fund the Secret Service. We fund the Customs Service. We have a substantial amount of resources in this piece of legislation to deal with the issue of counterterrorism in tracking down those who committed the heinous acts of terror against our country last week.

Although we go back to work in the Senate now, the shadow of the acts of terrorists committed against our country last week remains. We go to work now with a new purpose, a new resolve: to heal, to respond, and then to prevent these kinds of acts of mass murder committed by terrorists from ever happening again in our country or in the world.

Madam President, before I talk about the specific bill, I wish to make some comments generally about these days. I want to repeat some of them about where we are, what all of this means, and what we, as a country, must do.

There are unique moments in history, too often born of tragedy, when Americans stand together with a relentless and fierce determination to try to combat the forces of evil and to reaffirm that our freedom is secure. This is one of those moments in the life of America.

A week ago yesterday cowards struck innocent men, women, and children in New York City, in Washington, DC, on airplanes, including one airplane that went down in Pennsylvania. Their target was not just one airplane and those buildings. Their target was all of America. It was an act of war committed by madmen directed against our country. It deserves, and will get, a fierce, strong, and on-target response.

We must not have no illusions about that. The campaign to rid the world of terrorism will be long and difficult; and our actions must be bold and strong, but not reckless. Now, even as we prepare to respond to terrorism, our country mourns the death of so many innocent Americans.

Shakespeare once wrote: "Grief hath changed me since you saw me last." The terrorist attacks last week in our country have changed all of us. We now carry a heavy burden of grief. We also carry the responsibility to ensure that our response is swift, severe, and just.

But we also have an opportunity today to hold high the freedom, and to say to the world: We are heartbroken about our loss, but America's spirit will not bend.

When I left the Capitol Building late the evening of September 11, and drove past the Pentagon, there were clouds of black and gray smoke billowing from the fire caused by the terrorists. And even today, over a week later, F-16 and F-15 Air Force fighter planes fly routine patrols over the skies of our country's Capital.

When I arrived home from the Capitol the night of the terrorist attacks, as I walked in the front door, my 14-year-old son, at about 11 o'clock in the evening, heard the door close, got out of bed, and came to me, and said: Dad, what happened? And who did this? I told my son: This was an act of evil by deranged madmen. The President and Congress will tell America that we will search for, find, and punish those responsible for these acts of terrorism.

That is our pledge to us, to our children, and to the world: We will not give in to terrorism. We are all Americans; and we will respond with an iron resolve, anchored now by a new unity. That unity, and the basic goodness of the American people, will give us the strength to do what is right. And all Americans who joined the attack on the Pentagon, I joined to all of us in the hours immediately following the attacks, when people were reported to have waited in lines for 4 and 5 hours to give blood.

So many heroes stepped forward and risked their lives to help others who were the victims of these terrorist attacks. And amidst the carnage and the destruction grew a stronger bond among the American people. It is an understanding that we live in America but, more importantly, America lives in us.

So now we begin to wage war on terrorism. And we ask all other countries in the world to join us. Those countries that believe in freedom must join us in our campaign to make the world safe from these acts of mass murder.

Terrorist training camps in foreign lands cannot be allowed to exist. Countries that harbor terrorists must, as the President said, pay a price for harboring those terrorists. We must dedicate ourselves, as a nation, to those tasks.

Last week it was commercial airliners, full of passengers and jet fuel, used as a bomb. In the future it could be a small vial of deadly biological agents or chemical agents that could kill a million people, or it could be a suitcase-sized nuclear bomb placed in the trunk of a rusty car parked at a dock in a major city. If ever we must understand our responsibility for world leadership to try to stop the spread of nuclear weapons, to reduce the threat of the spread of weapons of mass destruction, and to combat terrorism, it must be now. That leadership is our responsibility. That mantle is on our shoulders.

Over a century ago, on the blood-stained ground of Gettysburg, Abraham Lincoln said: "* * * we here high on the necessity of this war; and both are significant challenges.

This morning I met with the President of one of the major airlines. He told me of the tremendous fear and the impact of terrorist acts.

To those who lost their lives, those who loved them—their relatives and friends—we say: Our country grieves with you. Our country reaches out to you. And you are not alone.

Last week, a couple days following the attack on the Pentagon, I joined some colleagues to go to the Pentagon. When I came back from the Pentagon, I mentioned in this Senate Chamber an act by a young Marine that was so inspiring.

A young Marine, as we were looking at the damage to the Pentagon, was hanging by a crane, in a bucket with a steel cable; and I was wondering what he was doing because they had hoisted this young Marine up to this open gash in the Pentagon where the airplane had exploded. The fire had consumed the building; and the building had collapsed.

The cable and the metal basket, and a young man standing in the basket, was dangling from the crane up by the 4th floor. He was trying to get in a position to reach in. He reached in this cavernous hole that had been caused in the Pentagon, and he pulled out a flag—a brilliant red and gold U.S. Marine Corps flag.

The crane then lowered the basket to the ground, and this young Marine got out and proudly carried that flag and walked to where we were standing. As he walked past us, he stopped and said: I am going to give this flag to the Marine Corps Commandant. I saw it in an office.

It was untouched, unburned. It was not something I could understand, that a flag such as this could have survived that fire. But he said to us, as he held this flag: I am going to give this to the Marine Corps Commandant. He said: They couldn't destroy this flag; and they can't destroy our country.

And I thought, in many ways he says it for all of us. I have no idea how that flag survived. But that flag, and that young Marine, I think, said it for all of us: our determination, our resolve, and our endurance.

The road ahead is going to be difficult. The road ahead requires us to do things that we should have been doing all along. It requires us to be creative in our approach to this issue of terrorism.

How does that connect to terrorism? The American people in many circumstances are very leery about getting back into an airplane unless they feel they are safe. We must move quickly to assure the safety of the American people while they are flying. How do we do that?

No. 1, we will move very quickly to include the use of sky marshals in commercial airplanes. Those sky marshals are already being employed. I expect that will dramatically increase.

No. 2, security at American airports must increase in a very substantial way. We will have a discussion about having the Federal Government take responsibility for the airport security apparatus. We must close those gaps that have existed, that we have known for a long while have existed in airport security.

There are a series of other recommendations as well. The Senate Commerce Committee will be holding hearings tomorrow on a range of these issues. Dealing with the security of commercial aviation and the security of our airports is critically important, as well as dealing with the economy generally. They are very much related.

The economy was soft prior to the terrorist attacks; and all indications, from the newspapers this morning and all of this week, are that there will be more and more layoffs. We must act decisively and we must act quickly to forestall the further softening of the economy and give us confidence that the economy can be restored and can be vibrant and can grow once again. There isn't anything much more important than the Congress and the President joining together to do that, to give the American people the confidence this economy can have a strong and vibrant future of public policies that can employ that confidence building in a way that is very constructive. It is critical that we begin that immediately.

Let me turn briefly to this appropriations bill which has elements that deal with not only the Treasury Department, but also the issue of how to instill confidence with respect to the economy. This is an appropriations bill dealing with the Treasury Department. But it is much more than that. About one-half of all Federal law enforcement is in this bill. It deals with the Office of Management and Budget, the White House, the Secret Service, U.S. Customs, GSA, and a whole range of Federal agencies.

I will talk a bit about what this bill does and why it is brought to the floor in the manner we have brought it to the floor.

First, let me again say that central to this bill is the funding of a range of issues that are important to the current discussion we are having about counter terrorism. The counter terrorism fund within the Treasury Department is critical. We have increased that fund in this appropriations bill, as well as the funding for the Office of Foreign Asset Control, which has the capability and the expertise to track terrorists. The Financial Crimes Enforcement Center is the same. It has the important capability of tracking the finances and the banking transactions these terrorists do.

The U.S. Customs Service is a very large agency that has the responsibility of protecting our borders. That is obviously critical to the counter terrorism efforts. If we are not able to have some basic control over our borders, we don't have the capability of keeping terrorists out.

We all understand the role of the Secret Service in protecting the President and vital public officials in our country, the many other duties they perform. So this legislation is important legislation. It is timely. We have brought it to the Senate today hoping we could, in this new spirit of unity, move this legislation as quickly as possible.

The subcommittee has worked on this bill. We brought it to the full Appropriations Committee. That committee has labored over it, and this bill now is a recommendation of the full Appropriations Committee of the Senate. I am pleased to offer it today.

This bill contains a total of $32.3 billion in new budget authority. Of that amount, $15.6 billion is for mandatory accounts. The committee recommendation is within the 302(b) allocations which come from the budget we passed. It strikes a balance between our priorities, the administration's initiatives, and the agencies requirements.

My colleague, Senator Campbell, who will be in the Chamber in a bit, is now working on a range of these things assisted by his staff, Pat Raymond and Lula Edwards, in putting this bill in the condition we now have it, as well as my staff, Chip Walgren, Nicole Rutberg, and Matthew King, who is detailed to our staff. It is a collaborative bipartisan piece of legislation which reflects both congressional and administration priorities.

The bill consists primarily of salaries and expense accounts for a good many agencies. The majority of the increases in this legislation are for agencies to help them to maintain current levels. The initiatives I will highlight are just a few initiatives that are very important.

(Mr. BAYH assumed the chair.)

Mr. DORAN. Mr. President, in this legislation we have doubled the amount of funding to $10 million that the Customs Service would have to combat the issue of forced child labor practices.

All of us understand what is happening with respect to child labor around the world. It is not fair competition. It is not fair for people to use child labor and ship their products to our marketplace in the United States and call it fair trade. We have had testimony of the heartbreak in the Senate in years past of young children, 8, 10, 12 years old, working in carpet factories in some parts of the world, in which those who run the carpet factories have actually taken gunpowder and burned the fingers of these young children. They burn the fingertips of the children in order to create burn scars so that the children who use needles to work on these carpets and rugs will not injure themselves. It won’t hurt because now they are scarred and burned from these deliberate burns caused by their employers.

Is that something we want to allow to happen in this world? I don’t think so. Do we want to buy from people making products by employing 10- and 12-year-old kids whose fingers they have burned so they can sew rugs and ship them to America to be bought in Pittsburgh, Fargo, Minneapolis, and other cities? No. It is not the right thing.

So we double the amount of money to deal with child labor. We need to investigate child labor and prohibit the import of goods from other countries into this country when those goods are made by forced child labor.

We add $25 million in this piece of legislation for a new northern border initiative to hire additional Customs Special Agents, inspectors, and canine enforcement teams to enforce our trade laws and to protect our borders. In light of the tragic events a few weeks ago yesterday, this is merely a down payment, I am sure, on a much larger requirement for the Customs Service with respect to security on all of our borders. But I fully expect many of the concerns that will be addressed by the emergency appropriation we enacted last week.

We are very concerned about the security of America’s borders. We know there are known terrorists around the world. We are very concerned to try to get them off our borders and become part of terrorist cells in our country. We also know that, for example, on New Year’s Eve in the year 1999, as we entered the new millennium, at one of our border points on the northern border in the State of Washington a terrorist was apprehended. He had already set his sights on hijacking planes in Los Angeles. Part of the plot was, as I understand it, to take down significant structures on the west coast. That was foiled by Customs who apprehended this terrorist. That terrorist plot of the wrong border to come across, or at least, the wrong border point.

All terrorists and others who want to bring contraband across our border know that in many locations in this country across the northern border, the only thing that precludes them from moving across the border after 10 o'clock at night, when the border station closes, is an orange rubber cone sitting in the middle of the road. At 10 o'clock the cone is put out, and the next morning they take it in, and they are open for business. The way you get in when there is an orange cone is to simply move the cone. That is the problem at many northern border ports. The ports of entry don't have adequate security, and we must have a northern border initiative to make sure we do something about that.

This bill also funds the Internal Revenue Service. We had a rather disturbing report a while ago by the Inspector General for Tax Administration at the Internal Revenue Service. What it said was this: The Inspector General put together four tax questions and sent people out across the country to ask those questions in taxpayer assistance areas of the IRS. Here is what they found. These are not massively difficult tax questions. The Inspector General sent Federal employees out posing as regular folks to ask questions of the IRS. They found that 73 percent of the time they either got the wrong answer, an incomplete answer, or no answer. In a number of cases, they were treated very rudely. In other cases, they were left to wait and were not waited on.

I read the Inspector General report. It was done last spring. I was so furious. I read it at night at home. I was furious when I finished. If you can't have an agency that gives taxpayer assistance to taxpayers asking for help and get the right answer from the agency that is administering the program, how can you expect American taxpayers to comply? It is wrong. So I put a million dollars in this appropriation bill and I called the IRS Commissioner whom I respect. I think he has the capability to turn this agency around. He has been there now for a bit. He has plans to turn this agency around. He has respect. I think he has the capability and the capability to make a big difference in this agency.

I am going to have the Inspector General do this 12 times beginning in January next year and issue 12 reports. If they are embarrassing—and they are to me, and I hope to you—I want to see an improvement. If we have 12 reports of people going to the IRS offices asking for help and we get wrong answers, in a year then there is something fundamentally wrong with the folks who are running this agency and trying to make this happen.

Again, I have great respect for Commissioner Rossotti. He comes from a business background, and I know he will do a good job. He made the point to me of why this happened and he has taken action to change this. He asked that I defer this monthly investigation to January rather than start it in October. I said that is fine. But we are going to have 12 reports to the Congress, and I am going to read every one of them. If I see reports that say 73 percent of the time people ask for help from the Internal Revenue Service and they get wrong answers, there is going to be hell to pay because we are spending a lot of money to make sure the American people get the service they deserve.

The name of this agency has three words: Internal Revenue Service. If we don't put "service" back in the Internal Revenue Service, how long will we expect the American people to voluntarily comply with this tax system? It is a tiny issue, but it is one about which I feel very strongly. We need to make this work for people. When each of these reports is issued, I will come to the floor and share them with my colleagues. I hope they share—as I am sure they do—my concern about an agency that gets it wrong 73 percent of the time when they are being asked for taxpayer assistance.

We add $5 million for a new program for grants for drug testing and treatment and intervention to State and Tribal governments for people who are drug addicted as they move across, or at least the wrong border. One of our colleagues has put a hold on the President's nominee to head Customs because our colleague objects to a new security detection technology. The Customs Service previously ran, and is now contributing to the Sky Marshal Program. That is up and operating in a skeleton way. The Customs Service is an integral part of counter terrorism. We do not have a Commissioner at the Customs Service. We have a nominee, but there are two holds on the nominee. One has been dropped. In the Senate, there is still, as I understand it, a hold on the nominee. We have a person whom I think is perfectly qualified to run the Customs Service. This is an agency without a head, and we have someone in the Senate who is holding the nomination and will not allow us to confirm him. The result is an agency without an agency head at a time when we clearly need the direction and leadership that agency head can give at this point.

As I understand it, the hold that exists—I will not use the name of my colleague because this is not the time to hold up a nominee who is so critical as the head of the U.S. Customs Service. Let's get this nomination before the Senate and confirm this nominee so this person can be down at the White House and with the President, and we can move the Customs Service fully into this circle of agencies that are going to be critical in combating terrorism. We ought to do that today.

In fact, I say to my colleagues, if there is one person who has been to the White House the one that has been concerned about this and has a hold—I wish that hold can be eliminated so that we can bring this nomination before the Senate. I want to confirm this person. I would like to do it today. It is not my decision to bring it before the Senate, but I hope the committee chair and ranking member will talk to the Senator who is holding up the Customs Service nominee and let’s get that done. The President has selected a good person. If we have some disagreements with him, go ahead and disagree with him on the road on some specific technology issues, but this agency needs a head right now. I hope we can do that, if not today perhaps tomorrow.

Let me mention a couple of other items we have included in this appropriations bill. We direct the General Services Administration to initiate a pilot project to place automated external defibrillators in Federal buildings and provide training for their use to more effectively save lives.

Most of us know what the automated external defibrillators are now. They are now no bigger than the size of a laptop computer. They save many lives and can be operated by someone with almost no training. If we have these in public buildings, and if someone has a heart attack and their heart stops, we can save a large number of lives having these devices available. That has clearly been demonstrated. We are going to have a pilot project with the General Services Administration to do that.

We fully fund the request for the Office of National Drug Control Policy Youth Antidrug Media Campaign. We add $20 million to the High Intensity Drug Trafficking Area Program. That has a total of $226 million.

We add $10 million to the Drug-Free Communities Act, which is a total of $50.6 million.

We fund the courthouse projects that were requested by the President, and we provide funds for an additional six courthouses to continue addressing the significant backlog in courthouse funding in this country.

The projects we have funded fully adhere to the priority list that was developed by OMB, GSA, and the Administrative Offices of the Court. In other words, we have not pulled projects out because someone wanted them. We actually followed the priority list, which we should have.

We maintain current law requiring the provision of contraceptive coverage in the Federal Employees Health Benefits Plan. We make permanent the ongoing project allowing Federal agencies to provide contraceptives for its lower paid employees, and we provide a 4.6-percent pay raise for Federal civilian employees to maintain pay parity between Federal, civilian, and military employees.

Mr. President, it is important to note that in the Treasury Department bill we placed a priority on the Treasury Department’s law enforcement needs, as well as support for State and local law enforcement needs. We provide $33 million for the third and final year of a Secret Service staffing plan to address the Secret Service’s personnel and training problems. They were spending a massive amount of time in overtime compensation because they simply did not have the personnel they needed. We are in the third and final year of the money to restore that.

We increase the administration’s request for the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms to enforce existing gun laws. There are no cuts or deviations in this area from the President’s budget request. We simply have complied with the President’s budget request.

We emphasize in the bill the need for the ATF’s Gang Resistance Education and Training Program, called GREAT, by including $3 million. The GREAT Program, is a wonderful program. I went to a school in Anacostia one day with some ATF folks. They showed me, at the end of the program, what the kids had been through. They had a graduation ceremony for these kids. It is a great program. We have to get to these kids with information, and we can make a big difference.

We increase by $5 million the integrated violence reduction strategy to allow ATF to investigate more comprehensively the National Instant Check System so we make sure felons do not purchase guns. There are a lot of gun debates in this country, but no one in this country wants a gun dealer to sell a gun to a convicted felon. So our effort is to keep guns out of the hands of people who should not have them.

Title II of this legislation is the Postal Service title. We provide $143.7 million for the U.S. Postal Service, as requested by the Administration. We, once again, include language saying to them: Don’t you dare talk about going to 5-day mail delivery service. Through rain, snow, sleet, and so on, we deliver the mail 6 days, including Saturday. Speaking as someone who comes from a rural State, I want that to continue, and we insist it continue. We told the Postal Service in this legislation that they must continue 6-day mail delivery.

The Executive Office of the President is in this legislation in an account called Funds Appropriated to the President. It funds, obviously, the operation of the White House, salaries, and so on. But it also funds the Office of the National Security Council, Office of Management and Budget, Office of National Drug Control Policy, as I mentioned earlier, and certain other programs. We have simply met the request of the President for funding these areas.

We have added money, such as the Federal Election Commission, the General Services Administration, the National Archives, Federal Labor Relations Authority, the Merit Systems Protection Board, Office of Government Ethics, the Office of Special Counsel, Office of Personnel Management—all of these are in this legislation. This describes in broad terms what we are trying to do.

As I close—and my colleague from Colorado, Senator Campbell, is here—let me say how much I enjoyed working with him. I know people view Congress sometimes as an area where there is a great deal of debate, and that is certainly true. I do not think debate is bad for the country. I think it is good. When you get the best of what everyone has to offer, the American people are best served. There are more instances than not where we come together and work with somebody for whom we have great respect, and that is certainly the case with Senator Campbell and myself.

He chaired this subcommittee, and I was happy to work with him and felt the experience was a great experience. I am now chairing the subcommittee and exactly the same is a great experience to be working with my colleague from Colorado, Senator Ben Nighthorse Campbell.

I will make two final points. One, to go back to this issue of terrorism, this country predictably is very concerned at this moment about terrorism. We have been through a frightening ordeal, and we are not yet through it. We must, as the President has indicated, work together; we must achieve national unity. Part of that national unity is to resolve that we will track down and punish those who committed these acts of mass murder against so many American citizens. We must do that thoughtfully, not recklessly. It is very important the way we go about this. Part of it is also to try to make certain we prevent future terrorist acts.

Yesterday, the Attorney General indicated there might be some evidence there were other airplanes that were targeted. He indicated there might be some terrorists who are still not apprehended, and they are searching for them. Even as we, in the middle of this nightmare we have gone through, try to make certain the American people understand everything humanly possible is being done to prevent another terrorist attack, even as we do that, as the President said, we must go back to work. So part of that work is to pass an appropriations bill today.

This bill is also central to the question of counterterrorism and combating terrorism because it includes the counterterrorism account in the Treasury, U.S. Customs, the Secret Service, and the Financial Crimes Enforcement Network which is involved with the FBI in tracking all of the money back and forth. So we have many things in this legislation that directly relate to this need we have as a nation to move aggressively.

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—SENATE 17237

For that reason, my fervent hope is we will not spend a great deal of time with a lot of amendments on this bill, and I ask my colleagues to join me in trying to find a way to agree to pass this legislation today.

Let me describe what I was hoping to do. I have great heartburn about what has been happening with respect to Cuba. The Treasury Department and the Office of Foreign Assets Control—OFAC—have been levying fines against people who travel to Cuba because it was against the law. I will give an example: A retired lady to whom I talked by phone is a bicyclist, and she answered an ad in a cycling magazine with a Canadian company, a travel company, doing a cycling tour. So she joined something like 10 or 12 cyclists through this Canadian travel company, and they went to Cuba, and they bicycled with a retired American woman. They bicycled in Cuba. Then 18 months later she got a letter from OFAC and the Treasury Department levying a $7,650 fine against her for riding a bike with a Canadian travel group in Cuba.

Another fellow I talked to received a $19,020 fine for a weekend visit to Cuba. When he was in the Cayman Islands with some friends, the friends invited him to go to Cuba for the weekend, and he did.

OFAC has begun a new enforcement action against Americans who travel in Cuba. I fully intended to offer an amendment to this bill to stop that. OFAC ought to be about tracking terrorists, not tracking down retired ladies who ride bicycles in Cuba.

However, I am not going to offer that amendment because I do not want slow passage of this bill. And the fact is the House has already included an amendment on this issue in its version of the bill that I fully support. I am going to try my darndest to make sure—and I hope my colleague from Colorado will join me—that we accept the House provision which would suspend the enforcement of the ban on travel to Cuba so that we do not have $7,000 to $19,000 fines being levied against American citizens who have traveled there, some of whom have told me personally that they had no idea this was against the law.

My point is this: I was fully intending to come to the floor to offer that amendment. I know it would be controversial. I know four or five of my colleagues who would want to stand up and oppose that amendment. I think it is not in this bill that we ought to be offering this amendment. I am going to try my darndest to make sure—the House provision which would suspend the enforcement of the ban on travel to Cuba so that we do not have $7,000 to $19,000 fines being levied against American citizens who have traveled there, some of whom have told me personally that they had no idea this was against the law.

Mr. CAMPBELL. Mr. President, I join my colleague, Chairman DORGAN, in placing before the Senate our committee’s recommendations for the fiscal year 2002 funding for the Treasury Department. The Executive Office of the President, and various independent agencies.

I want to associate my comments with the chairman’s comments as they deal with terrorism. Certainly we have had huge changes worldwide in the last week. We are going to be in for the long haul, a very difficult, expensive, and deadly kind of a war that we have never faced before. I know we all want to do our very best in Congress, but I remind my colleagues, as the chairman already has, of the focus of these appropriations bills. As the other senators are in their offices contemplating amendments they might offer to this bill, I remind them there is an emergency supplemental moving through the floor following this. It initiatives to the Executive Office of the President, and various independent agencies.

There are probably better vehicles dealing specifically with the terrorist activities than the TPO bill. In our bill these recommendations include funding for Federal agencies that are now working on the tactical and security needs of our Nation, and have been for years and years. It is clear those needs and others addressed by the funding legislation merit swift consideration.

This bill was crafted by the Subcommittee on Treasury and General Government. It contains a total of $32.4 billion of new budget authority. Of that, $15.7 billion is for mandatory accounts. The committee recommendation is within the 302(b) allocations and strikes a delicate balance between congressional priorities, administration initiatives, and agency requirements. I want to associate my comments with the chairman. DORGAN and his staff for the professional manner in which they prepared this bill in such a short period of time.

This bill allows these Federal agencies to simply maintain current levels. One way or another to get them up and offer that amendment to this bill. Title I provides a total of $14.9 billion for the Department of the Treasury. Of this, $277 million is more than the administration requested. The committee has again placed a priority on Treasury’s law enforcement needs as well as support for efforts by State and local law enforcement agencies.

Let me repeat a couple of highlights the chairman mentioned. We have $230 million to the Customs Service for continued development of the badly needed Automated Commercial Environment computer system called ACE.

It has money to continue emphasis on the need for the Gang Resistance Education and Training program, called the GREAT Program, which has been very successful, by including $3 million more than the administration requested for grants to State and local law enforcement.

It has additional funding for the integrated violence reduction strategy to allow ATF to comprehensively investigated gun trafficking to make sure the felons do not possess guns.

It has $348 million to the IRS for continuing efforts to modernize their computer system.

Title II provides $76.6 million to the U.S. Postal Service and continues to require free mailing for oversees voters and the blind, as well as 6-day delivery, to which Chairman DORGAN has spoken, and prohibits the closing or consolidation of small and rural post offices.

Title III recommends a total of $755.5 million for the Executive Office of the President, which is $23.7 million more than the administration requested. This part of the bill includes the Office of Management and Budget, the Office of National Drug Control Policy, the Federal drug control programs, and funding for the national antidrug media campaign.

A special note: The committee also provided $42 million to the Counternarcotics Technology Assessment Center, a program that transfers technology to State and local law enforcement. I believe since we started the program—it is going into its fourth year—it has been hugely successful. Over 2,500 local police jurisdictions have received grants of equipment they could not afford and for which they do not have the money to do the research and development.

It increases funding to the High-Intensity Drug Trafficking Areas program, the HIDTA program, by $20 million, which supports programs at their current level. It coordinates Federal, State, and local efforts to combat drug use.

It recommends a total of $185 million to the national antidrug media campaign and requires $5 million be spent on the new drug of choice of too many young teenagers called Ecstasy.

Title IV provides funding for the independent agencies, such as the Federal Election Commission, the General Services Administration, and the National Archives, as well as agencies involved in the Federal employment arena, such as the Federal Labor Relations Authority, the Merit Systems Protection Board, the Office of Government Ethics, the Office of Special Counsel, and the Office of Personnel Management. Also included in the title are the mandatory accounts to provide for Federal annuities, retiree health benefits, and life insurance. The committee recommended a total of $16.6 billion for this title.

The administration requested funding for 12 courthouse construction projects. As Senator DORGAN mentioned, we have been able to increase that number of projects to 20. We have provided funding for 12 additional projects such as border stations.

In addition, we have continued an aggressive effort to make sure the Federal agencies maintain properly, by providing $844.8 million for the GSA repairs and alterations account for Federal buildings that are in deterioration.

The funding contained in the bill allows agencies to continue their work. It will not be able to accommodate all Members’ requests, and I remind my colleagues that any funding amendments must be offset. If we have those being contemplated that deal with terrorism, there might be a better vehicle through the supplemental.

I thank Chairman DORGAN and his staff, Chip Walgren, Nicole Rutberg, Matt King, and Nancy Olkewicz, for their courtesy during the preparation of this bill. They have been terrific to work with.

We are focused on these recent attacks, but clearly we have to move forward, as the chairman mentioned, with our work and our various budget proposals as we have prepared them. My support for this committee’s recommendations comes with my understanding that funding needs for some agencies may decrease. I feel certain most of those can be handled through the supplemental appropriation and hope they will.

Additionally, I am particularly pleased that Chairman DORGAN agreed to my request to provide additional funding to the U.S. anti-doping initiative, called the USADA. This funding will be necessary to ensure that our Olympic athletes, our Pan American, and Paraolympic athletes are free from drugs and are taught about the ethics of fair competition. I thank the chairman for including additional help in the Ecstasy program, as I mentioned.

Speaking of the antidrug media campaign, we have provided over $749 million for that campaign since 1998. This year, we have $185 million for the fiscal year 2002. But preliminary findings released by the Office of National Drug Control Policy last year showed that the campaign is having a positive effect.

Unfortunately, more recent information seems to indicate that while this report card may be good, it may have been somewhat premature. While I agree we must take steps to protect youth from the lure of illegal drugs, we cannot make sure too wisely spent in the media campaign and that it is reducing the use of drugs because our resources clearly will be strapped in this new war on terrorism. I see this opportunity to highlight a new international crime initiative in southern Europe and how it relates to law enforcement agencies and funding by the pending Treasury appropriations bill. It comes as no surprise that international terrorism often relies on international crime, particularly through drugs, to finance its campaigns of terrorism. The Southern European Cooperative Initiative, called SECI, is based in Bucharest, Romania, and represents a consortium of 11 countries with a combined population of 135 million people. The members of SECI have pooled their expertise and limited resources in a collaborative effort to combat transnational crime south-eastern Europe. Members include Albania, Bosnia-Herzegovina, Bulgaria, Croatia, Greece, Hungary, Macedonia, Moldova, Romania, Slovenia, and Turkey. Most Senators have visited one or more of those places in the past.

Most in the Senate have two or more jobs. One of my jobs as the chairman of the Helsinki Commission is fighting crime and corruption. It has been a top priority of mine and the Commission in these member countries, as well as throughout all of Europe. As part of this effort, I was pleased when the Foreign Operations Subcommittee included language I requested in the fiscal year 2002 committee report urging the State Department to continue providing advice and support in cooperation with the FBI to SECI. That is in their bill in recognition of the direct and indirect impact of transnational crime on Americans and American businesses at home and abroad. The subcommittee is requesting in the fiscal year 2002 committee report that the State Department designate up to $1 million in technical assistance for SECI. This investment directly helps a number of U.S. law enforcement agencies in their fight against a wide range of transnational crimes.

At least three Justice Department agencies currently are working with SECI: The FBI, the Drug Enforcement Administration, and the Immigration and Naturalization Service. In addition, at least two Treasury Department law enforcement agencies, the U.S. Customs and the U.S. Secret Service, are utilizing resources of SECI to support their efforts.

For example, the Secret Service currently sponsors task forces throughout the United States and across the globe recognizing cooperation among countries, law enforcement agencies, academia, and the private sector, representing the best hope for defeating.
Mr. WYDEN. Mr. President, I come to the floor today to discuss the issue of aviation security. The Senate Commerce Committee, on which I serve, had hearings this week on this issue. I want to take a few minutes this morning to discuss the history of this issue, the history of the debate in Congress about aviation security. I do that with one overriding concern. I do not want to be back on the floor of the Senate in 6 months or a year taking my turn once again. I come with floor speeches about how sorry and upset and how sad the Senate is that another air tragedy has occurred. I think it is important for the Senate to step back and take a look at this issue now so we are not dealing with it again in another 6 months or a year.

Beginning my discussion this morning, I want to talk about the pattern of the past with respect to aviation security. Let’s make no mistake about it. There is a clear pattern. Again and again, there have been air tragedies. Again and again, there is outrage in the Congress and in the country. Again and again, task forces are established and commissions are assigned to make reports and recommendations. Again and again, there has been incremental and ultimately ineffective implementation of changes that simply don’t get the job done when it comes to aviation security.

It would be an enormous disservice to those lives that have been lost and to the many who love them if the only response of this Congress is again to issue more reports, let more commissions go forward, and once again fail to act with respect to putting in place the actual provisions that are going to protect our citizens with respect to terrorism.

The American people deserve quick, decisive, and sweeping aviation security reforms. It is time now to get the job done right.

For a variety of reasons, for more than 20 years, plans to improve aviation security have not been put into practice. What I intend to do this morning is to outline specifically some of those specific proposals, to describe what happened to them, and why they didn’t seem to be acted on.

After the Pan Am Flight 103 bombing over Lockerbie in 1988, and again after the TWA Flight 800 crash in 1996, the GAO recommended an annual report from the Federal Aviation Administration’s accident investigation process for screening companies that operate the airport security x rays. After the 1996 TWA Flight 800 crash, a White House commission said the same thing, and Congress passed legislation calling on the Federal Aviation Administration to get it done. But the Federal Aviation Administration’s rule-making process dragged on for years with multiple rounds of public comment. In June of 2000, the GAO reported that the Federal Aviation Administration was then 2 years behind schedule. As of this morning, the certification process for screening these companies still has not gone into effect.

In 1987, the GAO recommended that the FAA establish a certification program setting performance standards for screening companies that operate the airport security x rays. After the 1996 TWA Flight 800 crash, a White House commission said the same thing, and Congress passed legislation calling on the Federal Aviation Administration to get it done. But the Federal Aviation Administration’s rule-making process dragged on for years with multiple rounds of public comment. In June of 2000, the GAO reported that the Federal Aviation Administration was then 2 years behind schedule. As of this morning, the certification process for screening these companies still has not gone into effect.

In 1988, the GAO reviewed FAA’s progress in implementing a variety of key improvements, including passenger profiling, bag-matching action, and a variety of other initiatives. Their conclusion was:

"Based on FAA’s current schedule and milestones, this whole process for enhancing the Nation’s airport security system will take years to fully implement."

To ensure followthrough on it, the same White House commission recommended an annual report from the Secretary of Transportation on the implementation of new security measures. That report happened exactly once: on the first anniversary of the TWA crash. Once again, the response was nothing.

Under legislation passed in 1990 and 1996, anyone with access to a secured area in an airport is subject to a background check. The White House commission established after the 1996 TWA... crash went further, recommending a full criminal background check and the FBI fingerprint check. However, the inspector general of the Department of Transportation in a 1997 report found that more than 50 percent of the employees were significantly underutilized. The inspector general of the Department of Transportation found that, in his view, ineffective.

First, Federal Aviation Administration regulations required a criminal background check for some employees but not for others. Second, and most incredibly, some serious crimes, such as assault with a deadly weapon, were not on the list of offenses that would disqualify an employee.

Many airports were not complying with the FAA’s rules anyway. For 35 percent of the employee files reviewed by the inspector general, there was no evidence that a complete background check was ever performed.

Let’s reflect on that. In 35 percent of the cases, no criminal background checks were performed. Congress provided funding, and machines were deployed in a variety of locations.

In 1996, the Department of Transportation inspector general reported weaknesses in airport measures to keep unauthorized persons out of restricted areas. A followup review in 1996 found no significant improvement.

In 1999, the inspector general reported that in a test of eight major airports, undercover agents were able to penetrate airport security in 117 out of 173 attempts—a 68-percent success rate. In many of those cases, the test intruder, an individual who was testing the system, was able to actually board an aircraft. Now, the list goes on.

I want to mention just several more in terms of laying out this chronology.

Following the 1988 Pan Am Flight 103 bombing, there was a major effort to develop baggage-screening equipment in order to detect explosives. Technology was advanced, but it was still not widely deployed at the time of the 1996 TWA crash.

The White House commission created in response to that tragedy recommended the widespread deployment of such equipment. Congress provided funding, and machines were deployed in a variety of locations.

But last year—just last year—the Department of Transportation inspector general found that these machines were not being used to screen fewer than 225 bags per day, even though their capacity is 225 bags per hour.

According to a 1999 report by the National Research Council, at some locations the throughput rate has been so low that operators could even lose their skills for operating the equipment.”

The reason I am going through this 15-year chronology is that on September 11, 2001, known vulnerabilities in America’s aviation system remained unaddressed.

Last week’s hijackers knew there were holes. The General Accounting Office, that serves the U.S. Congress, had documented these significant gaps in our system. The terrorists took advantage of those gaps, and the price paid by our country has been far too great.

Now it is time to correct these vulnerabilities. The legislation should include the following four requirements:

First, swift implementation of the specific to-do list that I have outlined this morning should be a top priority. This is a to-do list not made up from some sort of cavalier review by an interested group. This is a to-do list taken from recommendations from the inspector general of the United States Department of Transportation and from the General Accounting Office. These recommendations have accumulated for years. It is time to focus on getting those tasks done rather than just perpetually creating more reports and more lists.

Second, Tuesday’s unprecedented attack points to the need for a number of additional safeguards. As we all know, a number of our colleagues have advocated armed sky marshals onboard many flights. Certainly this is a sensible recommendation, a credible deterrent; and I support that.

I also think there needs to be significantly improved intelligence sharing of threat information. Background checks for airport workers who have criminal convictions.

The technology exists to coordinate efforts between law enforcement and the airline industry, so no more turf battles and no more lack of communication. Focusing on information sharing of the threat and time-to-time intelligence is absolutely key so that the names and faces of those who are apparently unknown to the airline industry but aware to some in the intelligence gathering can be out and available so as to be part of such a vital tier of protection for the public.

Third, and perhaps most important, Congress must fundamentally rethink who should be responsible for carrying out day-to-day functions, such as the screening of baggage and access to restricted areas. A number of forward-thinking Members of the Senate have been after this issue for years, particularly the chairman of the Senate Commerce Committee. He has been suggesting this since 1996 and before.

Obviously, between airlines and airports there have been conflicts in the past, with some wanting security, some wanting to maximize the number of flights and passengers and convenience. Certainly, security and speed and convenience do not always fit perfectly together. But aviation security functions need to be placed in the hands of those without any conflict of law, those whose sole and paramount focus will be the security of the American people.

Finally, it is obvious there will be costs associated with this. If, in fact, the question of airline security becomes a function of the Government—which is something I support, and I believe has bipartisan support in this house to go through the 15-year chronology of inaction with respect to aviation security, it is too great is not an argument but a fact of life.

Let’s look at using existing funds more efficiently, but if that does not do the job, clearly, responding to our constituents and getting the job done, even if it requires some additional charges, will be necessary.

Finally, I think we ought to be especially concerned about smaller, more rural airports. It is clear they are not going to be able to afford some security measures. Let’s be clear to the public that we are not going to allow rural airports to be security-sacrifice zones, in effect, written off by the Congress.

In considering the cost of the mass screening of security check appointments are all going to remember the numbers of last week. It is going to require additional funds to rebuild the Pentagon, to rebuild New York City. To me, to say the cost of improving airline security is too great is not an argument that is acceptable. The country expects us to do what it takes and to work together to get the job done.

Let me conclude this morning with one last point. I came to the Chamber and the Senate earlier this morning, I came to the Chamber and the Senate earlier this morning, and I want to make clear, again, I am not interested in assessing blame. When we look at the various executive branch leaders, when we look at the Congress, when we look at those in the various affected industries, in the airline industry, all of them would now say that if they could do it again, it would be very different. We would not have
Mr. ALLEN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that I be permitted to speak for up to 15 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mrs. CARNAHAN. Mr. President, last Tuesday’s terrorist attack is having an immeasurable effect on our country. We are a nation of heavy and broken hearts devastated by the tremendous loss of life, property, and sense of security. My heart goes out to the victims and their families. We continue to take solace in the heroic deeds of the rescue workers and the patriotic response of Americans across the country.

September 11 was a dark day in our history. But we have had dark days before.

In the midst of World War II, Thornton Wilder wrote: "Every good and worthwhile thing stands moment by moment on the razor edge of danger and must be fought for whether it is a home, or a field, or a country."

We will lead the fight for freedom today. And, as in times past, we will be victorious.

Last week Congress acted with unity and speed to respond to the attack on our people. We are authorized the use of force. We provided $40 billion for the relief effort. We must deal promptly and decisively on another front. The ongoing stability of the aviation industry must be an immediate priority.

First of all, we need to act quickly to lighten security in our airports and on commercial aircraft. We must make Americans feel safe so that they will continue to fly.

Unfortunately, improving security will not be enough. Our Nation’s airlines are clearly suffering as a result of the Federal Aviation Administration’s decision to ground commercial aircraft last week. While most airlines began operating again last Thursday, it is unclear when carriers will be able to resume their full schedules. Moreover, it appears that ticket sales are declining, which will further weaken this already distressed industry.

We must respond to this crisis to ensure that last week’s attackers do not succeed in bringing down our Nation’s airlines. Congress must provide a meaningful economic recovery package to help stabilize the airline industry.

A number of proposals are currently being considered. They include extending credit or guaranteed loans to the airlines and providing direct compensation for losses sustained as a result of last week’s events. I am extremely supportive of these measures.

I also believe that any relief package for the airlines must include an additional component to provide assistance to displaced workers. This Congress must demonstrate that while we stand ready to bolster the airline industry, we are also committed to supporting the men and women who represent its heart and soul.

I fear that even if a stabilization package for the airlines is expeditiously approved, a certain number of layoffs are inevitable.

Midway Airlines has already been forced to suspend all of its flight operations and will lay off its remaining 1,700 employees. Continental Airlines announced that it was furloughing 12,000 of its employees. Airline executives estimate that as many as 100,000 workers could lose their jobs in the next few weeks.

The problems afflicting the airline industry will have a devastating impact on thousands of hard-working men and women. I believe we must enact a meaningful relief package designed to both reinforce the airline industry and provide support for displaced workers.

I am currently crafting a proposal to provide support for displaced workers. We do not know how long these employees will be out of work or indeed if they will ever be able to be employed by the airline industry again. They are going to need financial assistance. They are going to need retraining. And they are going to need health coverage. As with other aspects of the disaster relief effort, the Federal Government needs to take the lead.

Our airline industry needs help. So do its many employees. I am committed to ensuring that assistance for displaced workers is part of the larger airline relief package that we will take up in the days ahead.

I yield the floor and suggest the absence of a quorum.

Mr. MURKOWSKI. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

Mr. MURKOWSKI. Mr. President, let me take the floor to clarify a rumor that is circulating among some of the media that has been drawn to the attention of our office—that somehow the Senator from Alaska is in the process of offering an amendment to the Department of Defense authorization bill proposing the opening of ANWR. That is certainly not the case. It would be inappropriate and in poor taste.

I resent the fact that these rumors are being circulated by some groups that have not even taken the time to... contact our office, let alone contact me personally. Our press department has had several inquiries from members of the media asking if that is our intent. Where these inquiries are generated from, I don’t know. But if I get the opportunity to find out, it is my intention to enter them into the RECORD.

Obviously, the activities of the last several days and the tragedy in New York on the 11th of September brought about the reality that, indeed, as we look at terrorism, we have to look at the sources that fund terrorism in the Middle East. We need to make a determination, as we attempt to hold those responsible, to also address the funding mechanism. It is also appropriate that we address our increased dependence on imported sources of energy relative to the vulnerability of the national security of our Nation.

That somehow we would attempt to propose an ANWR amendment to the Department of Defense appropriations bill is something we have not even contemplated, and I resent certain implications of those who reported that it is the intention of the office of the junior Senator from Alaska.

I hope my statement clarifies the RECORD factually. If there are any inquiries, we will be happy to respond to them directly.

My own contention is that there is a place for the consideration of the matter of domestic energy development, including ANWR. That belongs in the energy bill where it should be debated and evaluated fairly by all individual Members based on its merits and in the interest of national security and the national interest of our Nation.

It is my hope that we can work with the committee chairman, Senator BINGAMAN, to bring forward an energy bill that will address the priorities needed for energy, which is the lifeblood of our national economy, and we can do it in a manner that is within the expedited crisis we have before us relative to energy, national security, and other matters.

I thank the Chair for this opportunity, and I yield the floor.

I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

Mr. CRAIG. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. CRAIG. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that I be allowed to proceed as in morning business for no more than 10 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered. The Senator from Idaho.

REFLECTIONS IN AFTERMATH OF TERRORIST ATTACK

Mr. CRAIG. Mr. President, all of us who come to the floor of the Senate are like most Americans today. In anything we do or approach, we approach it with a heavy heart, recognizing the devastation that has gone on around us that has been inflicted upon some of our friends or some associates we know of as it relates to the devastation the terrorists brought down upon New York City and here in Washington, DC, with our Nation’s military center, the Pentagon.

As we all know, the President asked for support and authority. This Congress responded last week very appropriately. I was not able to be here at that moment. I was en route to my son’s wedding in Washington State.

The difficulty of all of that was that I was not here, but I was also traveling at a very difficult time. Thirty some hours later, and I were able to observe a fine wedding, and we were pleased to be with our family and have our family around us, as I think most Americans would wish they could at a moment of crisis.

I am now, as most public people, wrestling with a variety of decisions that will ultimately be critical to our country and will spell out, in part, our future and the success of this great Nation.

I am confident that the administration is doing everything within its power at this moment to either directly or indirectly deal with the issue and to respond as all Americans and as most freedom-loving people in the world would wish we would.

I submit for the RECORD the story of two Idahoans, one now announced dead, the other still missing as a result of the plane crash into the Pentagon. Their names are Ron Vauk and Brady Howell.

I recommended Ron years ago to his appointment at the Naval Academy. He was an accomplished Naval Reserve officer, a submariner and Academy graduate who was on watch at the Naval Command Center last Tuesday. His family lives in Boise, ID. I talked with his mother this morning.

Brady, on the other hand, was a 26-year-old newlywed from Sugar City, ID. He was a civilian employee at the Pentagon, excited about his job, and starting a family. Our hearts go out to all of them. I visited with his wife last evening.

Many of us are experiencing that kind of a shock of realization as this crisis reaches down and out across America to touch many, if not all, of our citizens in a fairly direct way.

I am always caught in the great resilience of America. While we were bent for a moment from that stronger than ever and more greatly committed to the phenomenal values we, as of last Monday, took for granted.

The freedom of movement, the marvelous sense of human individualness we had in this country, as protected by a Constitution that had provided an ultimate shield of individualism in our country. To have that shaken to its very core on Tuesday, to find out that we were just a little less free and a great deal more concerned about the very freedoms we have. Our challenge now is to be able to find in a responsible, comprehensive and responsible way, to secure and maintain our civil liberties and, at the same time, to be able to draw bright lines that establish a much clearer line and sense of security for our people and in a way to detect and control the kind of environment in which terrorists can live and ultimately prosper. That is going to be the role and responsibility of this Congress.

As most Americans, still stand resolved and optimistic that that can be done. It can be done well. We in the Senate have a role to play in all of that.

Over the weekend, I was struck by the comments made by the former minister of the Taliban Government in response to our comments, that Osama bin Laden be turned over to U.S. authorities. The head of that government stated that it is not consistent with our custom for a host to ask a guest to leave. The guest must leave on his own accord: the President of the Taliban.

This statement confirms what all of us have assumed: that bin Laden is in Afghanistan and they are harboring him even at the risk of their own ruin.

It is equally unfortunate that individuals in the media are already posturing the American people for a no-collateral damage goal in our military objectives against these terrorists. Such posturing is dangerous, as it clearly undermines the support of our President to act both in the short term as well as in the long term to do one very simple but overpowering thing—that is, to secure our Nation’s security and our citizens’ security and our freedom.

I am confident this President will not bow down to the suggestion that there might or there should be no collateral damage. If his mission becomes clear, he already understands his goal.

There is no doubt that many new legislative proposals will be debated here in the Senate in the coming months to address issues of American security and the fight against international terror. One of the things that will be discussed is that of U.S. energy dependence. Clearly, as we watch Americans line up in front of Red Cross centers to give blood to help the wounded, let us remember the very lifeblood of this country’s economy is the energy that drives it.

I am not talking about the energy of the human mind. I am talking about the physical presence of energy—gas, oil, coal, the kinds of things that have fueled the economy that were turned into the phenomenal piece of explosive power we saw last Tuesday be a reality. Now more than ever before Americans recognize that once again the Middle East is the crucible that could spell our success or failure or might dictate to us the character of our economy in the coming decades, for one simple reason: not the politics of the region—that is daunting enough as we know it—but it is what they provide for the economy of the world. They are the oil barrel of the world. From that we ask at least 55 to 60 percent of our use on a daily basis.

We now consume in excess of 700,000 barrels of oil a day from Iraq alone. Is it possible that some of our own oil money is being turned against us in the form of energy? Or could it be that they use it ultimately to bring down the Trade Center and to punch a hole in the side of our Pentagon last Tuesday? Yes, it is possible. It is possible in part because for so many years we have ignored the fact of a growing dependency on foreign oil while we have turned ourselves away from an increased domestic oil production and increased efficiency that ultimately produce the ability for our nation to stand alone, to stand tall, and stand secure in its energy supply.

At least for the last 2 years, Congress has been doing the right thing. We have been struggling mightily with the shaping of a national energy policy. President Bush has established that as one of his top legislative priorities: to create greater energy independence on the part of this country so that now we know more than ever before that we can act with relative independence as we shape new foreign policy, and now, of course, we can read the watch on the arm of someone on the ground. But we cannot read what is in that person’s mind. That is impossible with the technology of today. That comes from the human side of the capability I talk about, which we have been under-investing in, or diverting of, for the last several decades.

Clearly, we must get back into the minds of the citizens of the world—those who would do us damage and view our country or an evil. It is only then that we can use the look-down from 3 miles high to determine where that person is going and when he or she may be there. But we must access the mind as well as observe the movement.

If we can accomplish all of those things—and I believe we can, and I believe our President will ask us to invest in those—then we will all stand in a bipartisan way to support it, because what is at stake here is the very strength of our country and the very freedom of our citizens. I have never once questioned the fact that we will not only stand for the test, but in the end, without question, we will win.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from West Virginia is recognized.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, what question is before the Senate?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. H.R. 2590. Mr. Byrd. Has the pastore rule run its course?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Yes, it has.

Mr. BYRD. I thank the Chair. That being the case, I can speak out of order. Are there any restrictions?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There is none.

Mr. BYRD. I thank the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from West Virginia is recognized.
Or, consider a Senate in which Members served for life—or for just a single year.

How about a system in which the House of Representatives elected the Senate?

Or a Senate in which Members voted as a State block rather than as individuals?

To our modern ear, these options sound preposterous, perhaps, but to the Framers of the Constitution, these proposals deserved serious consideration.

There was nothing inevitable about the Constitution as we now know it. Every word required delicate construction, balancing, and refinement. In cases where the Framers could not fully agree on a particular point, they chose ambiguity—or even silence.

Among that charter’s 55 draftsmen—only 39 actually signed the document—there was a small cadre, variously described as the Connecticut Compromise, which provided proportional representation in the Senate. Benjamin Franklin agreed that each State should have an equal vote in the Senate except in matters concerning money. The Convention’s grant committee reported Franklin’s motion with some modifications to the delegates early in July. Madison led the debates against that measure believing it to be an injustice to the majority of Americans. Some small State delegates were reluctant even to support proportional representation in the House.

On July 16, delegates narrowly adopted the mixed representation plan, the Great Compromise, giving States equal votes in the Senate. That is why we are here. The Presiding Officer would not be sitting where he is sitting today if there had not been a July 16 Great Compromise.

Given these considerations, delegates had a narrow choice regarding the number of Senators. During the Convention, they briefly discussed the advantages of two seats versus three. Gouverneur Morris of Pennsylvania, the man with the pendulum, stated that three Senators would be necessary to form an acceptable quorum, because of the number, but because Luther Martin disagreed with the concept of per capita voting, which gave each Senator, rather than each State, one vote.

Both the Congress under the Articles of Confederation and the Constitutional Convention used a voting method that gave each State one vote. This system of block voting was meant to reinforce State solidarity, but it often frustrated those State delegations divided by controversial issues. The alternative, of course, was for Members to vote as individuals. Those Framers who had served in the State legislatures had ample experience with the per capita system. At the Convention, they spent little time debating the two proposed voting methods. On July 14, Elbridge Gerry of Massachusetts stated that even the per capita vote at the Continental Congress met behind closed doors. The Constitutional Convention, where the Framers gave us this Constitution, met behind closed doors, with sentries at the doors and the windows drawn. We have food for another speech, another day.

Be conscious of the Constitution and this institution (the Senate) and its prerogatives and its precedents, its history. We need partisanship now to be reminded of these things.

A second major issue related to the number of Senators allotted to each State. Once the convention’s delegates established the principle of equal state representation in the Senate, they needed to determine how many Senators a State would be allotted. Few, if any, delegates considered that one Senator per State would be sufficient representation. Lone Senators might leave their State unrepresented in times of illness or other absences, and they would have no colleague to consult with on State-related issues. Additional Senators would make the Senate a more knowledgeable body, perhaps, better able to counter the influence of the House of Representatives.

But, some believed a very large Senate would soon lose its distinctive character, would lack the agility needed to effectively counterbalance the House, and would make it easier for Senators to escape personal responsibility for their actions.

The Continental Congress and would give a national aspect and spirit to the management of business. One week later, Gouverneur Morris and Rufus King of Georgia added the per capita voting clause to their motion designating the number of Senators for each State. As I have already noted, Maryland's Luther Martin objected to the motion. A States' rights advocate, he regarded it as 'amazing violence and turbulence 'from the idea of the States being represented in the second branch.' Consequently, Martin convinced his fellow Maryland delegates to vote against the two-Senator, per capita measure. Supported by every State except Maryland, both the measure's clauses passed on July 23, allowing each State's two Senators to vote as individuals, though still subject to the influence of States, constituents, and party policies.

Because they did not have parties in those days, but I am speaking within the context of the current moment, the Constitution's Framers understood that no matter which method they chose for electing Senators, it would have a significant impact on the Senate's future relationships with the House, the people, and the States.

From the beginning, most delegates dismissed any notion of implementing the British House of Lords' peccary system of hereditary peers and lifetime appointments. This system contradicted the egalitarian notions outlined in the Declaration of Independence. The system set forth in the Virginia Plan received little support, as well. Had this measure passed, the House would have selected Senators from nominations offered by the State legislators. The Senate could not be expected to serve as an effective check on the very institution responsible for its Members' election.

Senators will recall that the Virginia plan was introduced by Gov. Edmund Randolph, a delegate from the State of Virginia, on May 29, 1787. It is easy for me to remember the date of May 29 because it was on that date, 64 years ago, that I married my wife Erma; 64 years ago on May 29.

The convention then considered a revised version of the Virginia Plan, which contained the clause, "the Members of the Second Branch of the National Legislature ought to be chosen by the individual Legislatures." Most delegates easily accepted this election method, regarding it as the most "congenial plan available. Only Pennsylvania, 'the home of the ballot,' rejected the idea. He believed that the State legislative method would "introduce and cherish local interests and local prejudices." The alternative method, elections through popular vote, never gained the adherents it needed to become a viable option.

In Federalist 63, Madison defended the plan of election by State legisla-
As they debated the controversial treaty-making clause, the Constitutional Convention's delegates considered, but did not follow in whole, those precedents with which they were most familiar. In Great Britain, treaties were made by the king and, in certain cases, had to be approved by a majority vote in Parliament. The Continental Congress, the third branch, dispatched agents to negotiate treaties. The treaties only went into effect after two-thirds, 9 out of 13, of the States approved the documents. This inefficient process was further complicated by the States' ability to enter into their own treaties. While the delegates agreed that the States could not continue to make treaties with foreign powers, they disagreed over the manner in which the United States should negotiate, draft and ratify international agreements.

On August 6, the Committee of Detail reported a preliminary Constitution to the full Convention. Article IX, section 3 stated, "The Senate of the United States shall have power to make treaties, and to appoint Ambassadors, and Judges of the Supreme Court." Throughout August and into the month of September, the delegates debated treaty-making as a separate issue from the rest of the clause. Several delegates opposed granting the Senate the sole control over treaty-making. It is a good thing that they did. While some wanted the executive to have that responsibility, others advocated involving both houses of Congress in the process. Small-State delegates, however, were inclined to keep the Committee of Detail's treaty clause because it gave each State an equal say in the admission or ratification of treaties.

On September 4, the Committee of Eleven reported a treaty clause that appealed many of the delegates. This is what it said: "The President by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, shall have power to make Treaties." After further debate, the delegates unanimously approved the clause on September 7. However, the clause was taken up again, this time to add the words, "But no treaty shall be made without the consent of two-thirds of the members present." Shortly thereafter, the Convention passed James Madison's addition, "except in treaties of peace," which would be ratified by a simple majority vote. The next day, the delegates struck out the peace treaty exception and considered dropping the Senate supermajority requirement as well. However, after two delegates cited the Continental Convention's two-thirds of States' example, they voted to keep the two-thirds of the Senate provision.

Although adopted by the Convention, the treaty clause continued to stir debate even in the period before the Constitution's ratification. As one of the clause's strongest proponents, Alexander Hamilton defended the provision. The qualification first came under consideration on August 6 when the Committee of Detail reported its draft of the Constitution. Article V, section 3 stated, "Every member of the Senate shall be at the time of his election, a resident of the state from which he shall be chosen."

Two days later, Roger Sherman moved to strike the word "treaty," from the portion of the clause that related to the House, and insert in its place "inhabitant," a term he considered to be "less liable to misconstruction." Madison seconded the motion, noting that "resident" might exclude people occasionally absent on public or private business. Delegates agreed to the term, "inhabitant," and voted against adding a time period to the requirement. The following day, they amended the Senate qualification to include the word, "inhabitant," and passed the clause by unanimous agreement.

We now turn to the issue of who gets to make executive and judicial nominations. Argued over the course of several weeks, the Constitution's nomination clause split the delegates into two factions. The first faction wanted the executive to have the sole power of appointment. The second wanted the Senate to have that responsibility. The second faction followed precedents that the Articles of Confederation and most of the State constitutions had established favoring legislative appointment. The Massachusetts constitution offered yet another approach. This third way particularly interested the convention delegates. For over 100 years, Massachusetts had divided the appointment responsibilities between its Governor, who made the nominations, and its legislative council, which confirmed the appointments. Rather than use the Massachusetts model immediately, the delegates initially agreed to language that split the responsibility in a different way. The President would appoint executive branch officers, who would serve during his term, and the Senate would appoint members of the judiciary because they would hold their positions for life—a period most likely to exceed the tenure and authority of one President. However, the Framers in favor of a strong executive argued that Senate appointments would lead to government by a "cabal" swayed by the interests of constituents. Other delegates, fearful of monarchies, wanted to remove the President entirely from the appointment process. On September 4, the Committee of Eleven reported an amended appointment clause. Unanimously adopted on September 7, the clause, based on the Massachusetts model, provided that the President "shall appoint" the officers of the United States—certain officers.

The Virginia Plan introduced by Edmund Randolph, on May 29, made no mention of citizenship when it was introduced to the Convention. Two months later, the Committee of Detail reported a draft of the Constitution that included a 4-year citizenship requirement for Senators. On August 9, Governor Morris moved to substitute a 14-year minimum. Later that day, delegates voted against Senate citizenship requirements of 14, 13, and 10 years before settling on 9 years as a residency requirement. The issue of foreign birth was particularly important in the Senate, whose responsibilities would extend to the review of international treaties. While the Framers were not specifically concerned that the Senate, especially, might be subject to foreign influence, they did not wish to offend foreign allies or close the institution to meritorious naturalized citizens. The 9-year provision made the Senate requirement that of the House of Representatives. On August 13, the Convention confirmed the 9-year requirement by a vote of 8 States to 3.

Inhabitation: Although the Parliament of Great Britain repudiated its residency law in 1774, no Convention delegates spoke against a residency requirement for Members of Congress.
in The Federalist 75. Remarkably, given the delegates’ extreme disension over treaty-making, he wrote, the clause “is one of the best digested and unexceptionable parts of the plan.”

Let me pause here to say that we can witness the Convention as it worked. And we know that time after time after time the Convention would vote one way one day, and a few days later vote on the same matter again and vote a different way, and then perhaps vote again before the close of the Convention and arrive at an entirely different conclusion.

If the Convention had been open to the public, the Framers would have been severely restricted and constrained, and would have paused and thought once, twice, and three times, and more, before they would have changed their votes. They might, on a later day, have come to believe that in the earlier vote they had voted the wrong way.

By having the closed Convention, by meeting secretly, they were able to have full discussions of a matter, have a tentative vote, vote one way, perhaps a few days later vote a different way, and in the final analysis, in order to do the right thing, after considerable reflection and after hearing the arguments of others, vote again finally and, perhaps, differently.

That would have been very difficult to do had there been galleries, had there been the media, newspapers, had there been television—which, of course, there could not have been. It would have been difficult.

I say that to say that in some situations voting in executive session, in secret session, may, in the last analysis, be in the best interests of the country.

Early in the Convention, most delegates were inclined to agree that the impeachment provision would help to hold national officers accountable for their actions. Throughout the summer of 1787, committee members reported impeachment plans to the full Convention. The Virginia Plan proposed a supreme tribunal to hear and determine cases including, among other concerns, the “impeachments of any National officers.” On June 13, the Committee of the Whole amended the plan to provide that the President could be “removable by National Legislature at request of majority of State Legislatures.”

You see, they were all over the place.

On August 6, the Committee of Details reported that the House of Representatives “shall have the sole power of impeachment” and the executive “shall be removed from his office by conviction in the Supreme Court, of treason, bribery, or corruption.” Two weeks later, the committee added that “the judges of the supreme court be triable by the senate, on impeachment by the house of representatives.”

Can you imagine what it would be like in this day and time to have a Constitutional Convention with all the doors open, the windows open, the galleries open, the media there? After every vote, Members would rush out the doors to explain and defend their votes. Members would not later be able to easily change their minds and their votes upon more careful thought, upon more considered reflection.

So there are those today who would hem and haw and holter; Oh, we must not do this. We cannot do this. The people are entitled to hear everything we say.

Well, those Framers were very wise men. It was they who wrote the Constitution which I hold in my hand. Of course, there have been some amendments added later, but those men were wise men. And, remember, they were placing their lives, their fortunes, and their sacred honor on the barrethead.

By having the closed Convention, by meeting secretly, they were able to have full discussions of a matter, have a tentative vote, vote one way, perhaps a few days later vote a different way, and in the final analysis, in order to do the right thing, after considerable reflection and after hearing the arguments of others, vote again finally and, perhaps, differently.

That would have been very difficult to do had there been galleries, had there been the media, newspapers, had there been television—which, of course, there could not have been. It would have been difficult.

I say that to say that in some situations voting in executive session, in secret session, may, in the last analysis, be in the best interests of the country.

The constitutional plan then went for review to a committee consisting of one member from every State represented at the Convention. The committee removed the full Supreme Court from the process. The report, influenced by the Massachusetts Constitution of 1780, stated, “The Senate of the U.S. shall have power to try all impeachments [by the House of Representatives]”—naturally—“but no person shall be convicted without the concurrence of two thirds of the members present. Ah, there you have it. Alexander Hamilton, later explained this decision noting that no other institution would be sufficiently dignified—no other institution would be sufficiently dignified—or independent to handle the proceedings. The 1796 Federalist Congress of Sept. 8 and despite Madison’s objection that the executive would become dependent on the legislature, the Convention, thank God, passed the final measure by a vote of eight States to two.

Mr. President, there are, of course, other provisions in the Constitution that guide the operations of the Senate. But, those that I have just discussed serve to stoke our appreciation for this extraordinary charter of government that we are talking about. In closing, let me consider of James Wilson, one of Pennsylvania’s eight delegates to the Convention. Here is what James Wilson told a meeting of Philadelphia citizens several weeks after September 17, 1787:

Perhaps there never was a charge made with less reason, than that which predicts the institution of a baneful aristocracy in the federal Senate. This body branches into two characters, the one legislative, and the other executive. In its legislative character, it can effect no purpose without the co-operation of the House of Representatives: and in its executive character, it can accomplish no object, without the concurrence of the President. Thus fettered, I do not know any act which the Senate can of itself perform, and such dependence necessarily precludes every idea of influence and superiority. But I will confess, that in the organization of this body the framers of the plan proposed for review to a committee consisting of one member from every State represented at the Convention. The committee removed the full Supreme Court from the process. The report, influenced by the Massachusetts Constitution of 1780, stated, “The Senate of the U.S. shall have power to try all impeachments [by the House of Representatives]”—naturally—“but no person shall be convicted without the concurrence of two thirds of the members present. Ah, there you have it. Alexander Hamilton, later explained this decision noting that no other institution would be sufficiently dignified—no other institution would be sufficiently dignified—or independent to handle the proceedings. The 1796 Federalist Congress of Sept. 8 and despite Madison’s objection that the executive would become dependent on the legislature, the Convention, thank God, passed the final measure by a vote of eight States to two.

Mr. President, there are, of course, other provisions in the Constitution that guide the operations of the Senate. But, those that I have just discussed serve to stoke our appreciation for this extraordinary charter of government that we are talking about. In closing, let me consider of James Wilson, one of Pennsylvania’s eight delegates to the Convention. Here is what James Wilson told a meeting of Philadelphia citizens several weeks after September 17, 1787:

Perhaps there never was a charge made with less reason, than that which predicts the institution of a baneful aristocracy in the federal Senate. This body branches into two characters, the one legislative, and the other executive. In its legislative character, it can effect no purpose without the co-operation of the House of Representatives: and in its executive character, it can accomplish no object, without the concurrence of the President. Thus fettered, I do not know any act which the Senate can of itself perform, and such dependence necessarily precludes every idea of influence and superiority. But I will confess, that in the organization of this body the framers of the plan proposed for review to a committee consisting of one member from every State represented at the Convention. of our responsibilities to preserve that great document and to amend it only with great care and after great deliberation.

At this perplexing time in this year of our Lord 2001, we must be ever more on guard that we, as the elected Representatives of a great people, as we go forth, hold in our hands, as it were, the Constitution of the United States; that we resist any temptation because of the demands of the moment, the exigencies of the day, we resist the temptation to put that Constitution aside in order to avoid debate and expedite the business before the Senate. Let's not hesitate to ask questions. Let's look before we leap.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. Nelson of Nebraska). The Senator from Kentucky.

Mr. McConnell. Mr. President, is there an amendment pending?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There is not.

AMENDMENT NO. 1573

Mr. McConnell. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk on behalf of myself and Senator Burns.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk reads as follows: The Senator from Kentucky [Mr. McConnell], for himself and Mr. Burns, proposes an amendment numbered 1573.

Mr. McConnell. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment as follows:

(Purpose: To authorize the Secretary of the Treasury to issue War Bonds in support of recovery and response efforts relating to the September 11, 2001, hijackings and attacks on the Pentagon and the World Trade Center)

At the end of title VI, insert the following:

Sec. . (a) From funds made available by this or any other Act, the Secretary of the Treasury may provide for the administrative costs for the issuance of bonds, to be known as 'War Bonds', under section 3102 of title 31, United States Code, in response to the acts of terrorism perpetrated against the United States on September 11, 2001.

(b) If bonds described in subsection (a) are issued, such bonds shall be in such form and denominations, and shall be subject to such terms and conditions of issue, conversion, redemption, maturation, payment, and rate of interest as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe.

Mr. McConnell. Mr. President, I rise today to offer an amendment which would authorize the Secretary of the Treasury to use such funds as he deems appropriate to establish and make available war bonds for purchase.

I am proud that along with a bill that Senator Burns and I have offered which is pending as this amendment, there are at least four other measures which have been offered that would create a new investment vehicle for Americans to contribute directly to the effort to rebuild the broken and retaliate against the enemy of international terrorism.

Each of the bills which have been introduced are similar. In fact, two of them adopt the language Senator Burns and I originally introduced almost verbatim. It is safe to assume that the goal of each of the sponsors is identical. That goal is to develop a way for patriotic Americans to contribute directly to the effort to rebuild the broken and retaliate against the enemy of international terrorism.

How many times have we heard over the last few days from our constituents: What can I do to help? The war bond is a way to help.

There has been a great deal of wonderful and sorrowing rhetoric on display since the terrible attacks of September 11, 2001. These words have helped our Nation steel its resolve and recognize the imperative of rooting out terrorism wherever it may lurk. As a result, the public is unified in its desire to take decisive action. The legislation that Senator Burns and I are offering today would allow the Secretary of Treasury to channel that and sustain American compassion and unity.

Specifically, we propose allowing the Secretary to establish a new form of U.S. savings bond that would be designated war bonds. The war bonds would be in such form and denominations and be subject to such terms and conditions that the Secretary deemed most appropriate.

Some have pointed out that current economic conditions may argue against the need for war bonds to be used as a tool for funding the war on terrorism. I argue that view misses the most important point. There is no question that America is the most powerful nation economically and militarily on earth. However, what is less certain is the very nature of this effort, and a war bond campaign could be an invaluable tool for the government to explain the complex nature of the threats we face and rally all Americans to help provide necessary responses.

If the Government chooses to engage in this effort, I envision a war bond drive similar to those that were so successful during World War II. Influential Americans could be engaged to lead the charge. Millions of our nation's history, the combined support of our people is needed. By investing in these bonds, Americans are given a way to feel a part of the solution rather than just being a bystander to the one of these terrible events of last week.

Americans are not only demanding action, they are looking for an opportunity to be of service themselves, to demonstrate their commitment to this country and to do it in a meaningful, tangible way. This bill is one answer to that demand and that opportunity.

I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerks will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Additionally some may argue that our use of the term “war bonds” is incendiary or inappropriate. Again, I would differ with this view. There is no question that the attacks of this Tuesday were acts of war. And, there is equally little doubt that America now finds itself in a state of war against the perpetrators of those vile and evil acts.

Additionally, the phrase “war bonds” serves the successful efforts which were undertaken during World War II. And if there is any doubt about how war bonds resonate with the American people, one need only look at the overwhelming response my office has received since introducing this legislation last week. In fact, I have even been contacted by one patriotic American who has reserved the domain name www.warbonds.gov as well as a toll-free number for a war bonds drive.

I now ask unanimous consent that the amendment to the War Bond Amendment of 2001.

This legislation is in response to the many constituents in my state and indeed Americans from all over this country, looking for a tangible opportunity to do something positive in reaction to the despicable acts of cowardice perpetrated upon this nation and its citizens by gutless and faceless cowards.

The act will create an opportunity for ordinary citizens to participate in this country’s recovery and response to those acts and to support the President and our nation in the rebuilding efforts as well as bringing to justice those responsible for the horrific death and destruction of Tuesday, September 11th, 2001.

Throughout this nations history, bonds have been used as a vehicle for our citizens to come to the aid of this nation and now, as much as ever in our nations history, the combined support of our people is needed. By investing in these bonds, Americans are given a way to feel a part of the solution rather than just being a bystander to the one of these terrible events of last week. Americans are not only demanding action, they are looking for an opportunity to be of service themselves, to demonstrate their commitment to this country and to do it in a meaningful, tangible way. This bill is one answer to that demand and that opportunity.

I suggest the absence of a quorum.

THE STARK REALITY OF THE WORLD TRADE CENTER ATTACKS

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. President, in the midst of the disaster we saw in New York, we had a number of images all of us will remember. One that will stick in my mind was as one of those great buildings was collapsing and the smoke and the dust and debris were barreling down the streets and people were running away, one of those people who was running was a fireman. As he got to a certain point, he slowed down, took off his hat and threw it as hard as he possibly could.

That courageous professional at that moment knew hundreds, perhaps thousands, were dying in that building and he could not save them, that many of his friends and brother firemen had been there at the scene closer than he, inside the building, and that they would not make it out.

It was a very poignant scene for me, and having been involved in some of these issues on the Judiciary Committee and as a Member of the Senate, I think it is important for each one of us to remember that in any terrorist attack, any really serious national disaster we have in this country, it will not be the Federal Government that is first on the scene. It will be our police officers and firemen. Hundreds of whom we lost in New York City. And what they were paid to do—respond to the scene, to give aid to those in distress, at the risk of their lives. Certainly the Biblical reference that ‘Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends,’ applies to those people.

We as a nation know we have problems with terrorism. We as a nation have heard people talk for days on television that we could be facing a chemical or a biological attack or even a nuclear attack.

We need to ask ourselves, and we have been asking ourselves in this Senate for some time, and I have been actively involved in this, how are we training first responders who are there to react to that event. Each event is different. This event is different from a biological attack, and a chemical attack would be different from a biological attack, and a nuclear attack would be different. And who knows what else could be conjured up in the minds of these diabolical people.

It is important for this Nation to fulfill our obligation to those people we will be sending out to respond to these events, that they have the very best in equipment and the very best in knowledge and training on how to handle each and every one of these events, each being different from the other.

We have begun to make progress on that. I congratulate Senator Breaux, Senator Judd, and the very best in the relevant subcommittee, Senator Richard Shelby of Alabama, a member of the Appropriations Committee, and others who have over the past few years taken steps to establish programs to train those first responders, those firemen, those policemen, those emergency medical technicians.

I am particularly interested in the Center for Domestic Preparedness at Anniston, AL, a center developed to train the first responders who are training 5,000 first responders from all over the country. That center is in the old Fort McClellan, the military base that was a chemical training school for the U.S. Army that had a cadre of people with expertise in chemical and biological issues, and it had live agent training forces for them. They had the barracks from the closed military base, places to stay, exercise rooms, and classrooms available. It was the perfect location to establish this center. It has done well.

Just a few weeks before this tragedy occurred, I was very pleased to see we had a major increase in funding for that center, taking us now to $30 million for the year. Of the total of the perhaps $20 billion we spend on terrorism, maybe more in this country, it is very small. But that will allow us, if it becomes final law this year—and I hope it will, particularly after this tragic event—to train, instead of 5,000 first responders a year, 10,000 first responders a year. They will be able to deploy them around this country. In fact, many have already been trained.

We have received great references from the people who have completed the training. The chiefs of police and firemen who sent their members to the school have bragged about the training they received. Indeed, New York has sent a lot of people there; 146 of New York police and firefighters have been trained, and 226 in the Washington, DC, metro area have been so trained. We are making progress. I believe it is the right thing to do.

At a time like this, we don’t need to overreact. We don’t need to do things that are not appropriate. But we need to coalesce all the information we have been gathering for a number of years that relates to the kind of attacks this Nation may face, take that information and use it to prepare us to be better prepared. One of the most critical things we can say is every first responder, every fireman, every police-officer, every emergency medical technician in the country needs to have been given by his or her Federal Government the best information we can give them when they are asked to put their lives on the line and respond to an attack.

We have equipment and we need to make sure we can use the equipment to determine if it is a biological agent or chemical agent that may be distressing people in a certain area of town. We need to know that before we go in there. This is a matter about which I feel strongly.

It is appropriate, as so many have, to pay the highest tribute to those people, particularly in New York City, who are at great risk of their lives, and many of whom lost their lives, responded to the care and protection of American citizens. We give great tribute to them. We give them the tools, the information, the training and equipment so they can be even better at protecting our citizens’ lives and even better at protecting their own lives.

I yield the floor and suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, one of our colleagues, Senator McConnell, today offered an amendment. I believe that amendment dealing with the issuance of war bonds is now pending. Another of our colleagues has a proposal in the form of an amendment dealing with what are called unity bonds. That is Senator Johnson from South Dakota. He asked that this be introduced on his behalf, and as manager I will do so.

I ask unanimous consent that we set aside the McConnell amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk offered by Senator Johnson.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from North Dakota [Mr. DOR- GAN], for Mr. Johnson, proposes an amendment numbered 1574.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The amendment is as follows:

At the appropriate place, insert the following:

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.
This Act may be cited as the "Unity Bonds Act of 2001".

SEC. 2. FINDINGS.
Congress finds that—
(1) a national tragedy occurred on September 11, 2001, whereby certain individuals tried to steal America’s freedom;
(2) Americans are looking for a way to resist all attempts to steal their freedom;
(3) united, Americans will be victorious over their enemies, whether known or unknown;
(4) Americans must respond to this tragedy in a spirit not of revenge, but of justice.

SEC. 3. AUTHORIZATION FOR THE ISSUANCE OF UNITY BONDS.
Section 3102 of title 31, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

""(1) In general.—The Secretary shall issue bonds under this section, to be known as 'Unity Bonds', in response to the acts of terrorism perpetrated against the United States on September 11, 2001.

""(2) Use of proceeds.—Proceeds from the issuance of Unity Bonds shall be used to raise funds to assist in recovery and relief operations following the terrorist acts referred to in paragraph (1), including humanitarian assistance, and to combat terrorism.

""(3) Form.—The bonds authorized by paragraph (1) shall be in such form and denomination, and shall be subject to such terms and conditions of issue, conversion, redemption, maturation, payment, and rate of interest as the Secretary may prescribe."

Mr. JOHNSON. Mr. President, I rise today to offer a bill to unite our citizens in this time of great crisis. As Americans, we feel many emotions, from anger to sadness, because of the tragedy of the terrorist attacks this past week.

The American people have responded with incredible acts of heroism, kindness, and generosity. The outpouring of volunteers, blood donors, and contributions of food and money demonstrates that America will unite to provide relief to the victims of these cowardly terrorist acts. This response is the true American spirit our country has always known.

So many of my constituents in South Dakota have called my office this week to ask what they can possibly do to help their fellow Americans who are suffering today. Many have given blood, others have donated to aid organizations, and most have offered prayers for the victims and their families. One woman asked whether she could buy the equivalent of the old war bonds that allowed our citizens to contribute to the war effort back in World War II.

Based on my constituent’s idea, today I am introducing legislation that directs the United States Treasury to issue Unity Bonds. Americans who purchase these savings bonds will be contributing to disaster relief to the victims of Tuesday’s attack and to our Nation’s war against terrorism.

We will recover from this week’s attacks. We will rebuild our Nation’s infrastructure, and we will rebuild our Nation’s spirit. But it will take a sustained, long-term effort to stamp out terrorism against the United States and all other liberty-loving nations.

Unity Bonds will allow Americans who want to show their support for this great country to participate in a meaningful way. I urge you to join me in helping to unite our spirits. Mr. President, I think both of my colleagues, Senator MCCONNELL and Senator JOHNSON, have offered constructive ideas. They come at it in a slightly different way, but their amendments are very similar. It is my hope that perhaps they can get together and bring their amendments together, and together offer it today as well.

I don’t know whether we will finish this bill today. My hope is that we can find a way to actually finish this legislation today. I don’t know that we have any requirement for a recorded vote on our side. I don’t know whether they have a requirement on the Republican side.

But my hope is that perhaps if we can finish this bill today, we can have a vote and perhaps seek a rollcall vote on the conference report. We know it is up to members of both caucuses. We will not make that request at this moment. I hope that perhaps other people will consider that. We have a number of amendments that have been discussed. We are now in the process of trying to determine what the list of amendments will be, and we hope to have that at some point. I would like to believe that we can, if we work hard, deal with the amendments we know of on our side and the other side, and try to complete this bill pretty much this evening.

Mr. President, I will wait for a bit. I have a managers’ amendment, a managers’ package that I will send to the desk in a few minutes. It has been cleared by my colleague from Colorado. I know he is working on some other business relating to this bill off the Senate Chamber.

Let me, for a moment, while I am waiting for my colleague to come, and before I offer the managers’ package, speak as in morning business, if I might, for 5 minutes. I ask unanimous consent to speak as in morning business for 5 minutes.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore of the Senate (Mr. JERKOWSKI). Without objection, it is so ordered.

THE AGENDA OF THE SENATE
Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, let me talk, just for a moment, about the agenda in the Senate. Part of that agenda is, of course, what we are doing in this Senate Chamber today; that is, we are working for the President. To the American people, we are getting back to work. It is what we want to have happen in this country.

What happened last week was an un-speakably horrible visitation upon us by terrorists. It took so many thousands of lives of innocent Americans. We speak as in morning business, if I might, for 5 minutes. I ask unanimous consent to speak as in morning business for 5 minutes.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore of the Senate (Mr. JERKOWSKI). Without objection, it is so ordered.

THE AGENDA OF THE SENATE
Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, let me talk, just for a moment, about the agenda in the Senate. Part of that agenda is, of course, what we are doing in this Senate Chamber today; that is, we are working for the President. To the American people, we are getting back to work. It is what we want to have happen in this country. terrorism, as President Bush has indicated. We must do so thoughtfully, not recklessly. We must do so in a vigilant way, every day, in every way, to try to be sure, as the American people, that we retain our freedoms but, at the same time, we try to reduce the risk of terrorist acts.

It is going to cost some money to do so. If we, for example, going to put sky marshals on commercial airplanes flying in the country, that takes manpower, it takes money, it takes resources, yet we do not have much of a choice. If we are going to beef up security at airports so that people who are flying on commercial airplanes in this country have a feeling of safety and that we have substantially tightened security, that is going to require some money, but we do not have much choice.

If we are going to give the opportunity to our intelligence community, and the FBI, the CIA, and the law enforcement community—if we are going to give them the tools they need to try to take down these terrorist cells, and to try to track down the terrorists who committed these acts, and to track down terrorists who might commit future acts and prevent those acts from occurring, it is going to require some money and some resources.

I think all of us in Congress have to be willing to do that. I know there are some recommendations that will be controversial with respect to this war that we wage on terrorism.

The Attorney General made a recommendation the other day that I think all of us in Congress have to be willing to do that. I know there are some recommendations that will be controversial with respect to this war that we wage on terrorism.

It seems to me, as the Attorney General has suggested, that if you have someone who is a suspected terrorist, and you have been able to make that case to a Federal court and are able to get a Federal court order, it ought not just apply to one telephone, it ought to apply to the phone calls made by that suspected terrorist from whatever telephone he or she uses.

That is an example of the kind of policy changes we are going to have to consider, some of which will be controversial, but we do not have much choice if we are going to protect this country.

I do not want America to have to give up a lot of civil liberties in order to meet these protections that we now need, but we also need to understand that we need, as Americans, to be vigilant—a word we hear. It is not only about law enforcement, it is about all of us being vigilant and understanding that if we see something that is unusual, if we see something that we think should offer us concern, that it be reported.

So this war on terrorism is a very serious—a deadly serious—war that will be waged by all of us to try to prevent future terrorist acts in this country.

Even as we focus on that issue—terrorism, counterterrorism, rooting out the terrorists, finding out who did what and when, and then, what was done last week, the awfulness in our country, and punishing them, and trying to prevent future acts—even as we do that, we have a couple of other things that are of paramount importance; and that is, we need to provide some additional vibrancy and restore life to this country’s economy.

Even before the deadly acts last week, our economy was softening, and that softening of the American economy was causing significant problems. What happened last week has caused significant shock to the American economy. As a result of that shock, many of us worry a great deal that the confidence in this country’s economy will suffer, the American people will lose confidence, and that we will see a further spiraling of economic difficulties.

So it is very important for all of us—the President and the Congress, Republicans and Democrats—to work together so we can begin to pump some life into this economy. That means that almost certainly we will have to consider some kind of economic stimulus program, some kind of fiscal policy that matches what the Federal Reserve will do in monetary policy that provides some life and some buoyancy to an economy that has been in trouble.

The most important thing we can do is offer hope to people that in the long term the American economy is one to invest in; this is an economy of hope, optimism, and economic growth in the long term. We go through periods of upturns and downturns. We have contractions and expansions in the American economy. That will never change.

But we were going through a contraction at about the same time we were hit with these disasters last week, and that spells real trouble. All of us need to catch this economy very quickly and try to provide some new life and vibrancy to it. I think the President will find willing hands in Congress, wanting to help him lift the kinds of policies necessary to boost this economy.

Some are talking, I know, about, for example, tax cuts, a capital gains tax cut. Frankly, I do not think we ought to be talking about a tax cut we will see that persuade people to sell stock at the moment. If you substantially create more demand for selling stock at a time that the stock market is moving downward, you are creating exactly the kind of demand that is wrong. The reduction is not, in my judgment, the right medicine; at least it is the wrong medicine for this illness.

I think, for example, investment tax credits might be something that could provide some stimulus. There are a whole series of things you could put in a menu that you could provide that would provide stimulus to this economy. But I think we have to have that discussion. And we have to work with President Bush and the Congress to put something together that says to the American people that this economy has some difficulty. We are going to move quickly and decisively to respond to it, to give you hope that this country’s economy will have a bright future and this country’s economy will continue to grow.

In addition to all of that, what happened in this country ought to remind all of us that there is, in fact, an urgency to write an energy policy for America.

Without energy, this country doesn’t work. Without energy, America’s lights are off. America’s machines are shut down. The American economic engine is stopped. We do not have much of a way that that consumes an enormous amount of energy with a set of energy policies that are very vulnerable to terrorists. We are far too dependent on foreign sources of energy, and we have a system of energy for our country that is far too vulnerable to potential terrorist attacks.

We need a new domestic energy policy, one that says, yes, we are going to produce more, more oil and more natural gas, not necessarily from the most fragile lands in the world. We don’t need to do that. Yes, we are going to produce more. We are going to produce more coal, and we will do that using clean coal technology. We don’t have to sacrifice our environment even as we use more coal.

Importantly, we are also going to begin to conserve. Conservation is a very important ingredient in an energy policy, and we need renewable and limitless sources of energy. It makes good sense for us to start to take the energy from the wind. The new technology wind turbines are remarkable. Why not use that energy from the wind that is limitless and renewable?

It makes good sense to take a drop of alcohol from a keg at a bar. You extend America’s energy supply with that alcohol, and you still have the protein feedstock left from the corn.

It makes good sense to do things in a different way. Yes, we need to produce more, more oil, more coal, and more coal. Yes, we need to do that while we pay attention to this country’s environment. We can and must do that. But also we need conservation. We need more efficiency of appliances, and we need renewable and limitless sources of energy developed in a very significant way.
I say that because when we talk about these three elements of public policy that require an urgency on the part of Congress—dealing with counterterrorism, trying to provide lift to an economy that is in trouble, and writing an energy bill that makes us less vulnerable to terrorist attacks and the shutoff of the supply of oil from the Middle East, all of these represent an urgency that Congress must tackle. We must do this in a way that makes sense. This can’t be business as usual. It can’t be, “The President believes this and we believe that. Let’s have a fight for 5 or 6 months.” It must be taking from the President and from Members of Congress the best of what all have to offer and from that developing a public policy that will strengthen our country, strengthen our country in the area of fighting terrorism, in trying to give our economy the lift it needs at this point and in making us less dependent on a source of energy that is vulnerable.

All of us want an agenda that is critical to our country.

Could I talk about other things? Yes, there are plenty of other things yet to do. We know we need the kinds of things we were debating before the terrorist act last week. We were debating campaign finance reform, a Patients’ Bill of Rights, the cost of prescription drugs. All of those things are important. Some of them have lost their importance in the scheme of trying to do the people’s business in the Congress. But there is an urgency to several of the elements of public policy that we must pay attention to first: terrorism, the economy, and energy.

I, for one, pledge to this President and my fellow Members of the Senate that we must come together in a way that we have never before done—at least in my years—to grab these policy issues and try to find the best that everyone in the Chamber has to offer and work with the President to make the changes necessary to strengthen America.

I yield the floor and suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

AMENDMENT NO. 1575

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, I intend to send to the desk a managers’ package that I have worked together with Senator CAMPBELL to construct. On behalf of Senator CAMPBELL and myself, I send a package to the desk that includes two technical amendments regarding the National Archives; a Campbell for Dorgan amendment regarding a provision in the fiscal year 2001 Treasury appropriations law regarding a road leading to the Columbus, NM, border crossing; a Dorgan for Nelson and Graham amendment transferring a parcel of land in Orlando, FL; an amendment making available certain funds for agency personnel training at the Federal Law Enforcement Training Center at Glynnco, GA; a Dorgan for Byrd technical amendment changing a reporting date for the U.S.-China Security Review Commission; a Dorgan amendment regarding HIDTA; a Dorgan-Campbell amendment regarding the directors of the Presidential libraries; a Dorgan-Campbell amendment for Feinstein regarding extending the printing date of the breast cancer awareness semipostal stamp; a Campbell amendment for Senator SHELBY regarding canine training.

I send the managers’ package to the desk and I ask my colleague from Colorado to comment on it as well. I understand it is cleared.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. CARPER). The Senator from Colorado.

Mr. CAMPBELL. Mr. President, this amendment has been cleared by the managers.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from North Dakota [Mr. Dorgan], for himself and Mr. Campbell, proposes an amendment numbered 1575.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the managers’ amendment be agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment (No. 1575) was agreed to.

Mr. DORGAN. I move to reconsider the vote.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The motion to lay the table was agreed to.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. STEVENS. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

NOMINATION OF ROBERT BONNER

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I rise to urge the Senate to act very swiftly to confirm the nomination of Robert Bonner to be Commissioner of Customs.

I remind my colleagues that Customs is one of the first lines of defense we have in our country. They inspect baggage and the goods of people coming into the United States. They help to assure that we are safe by inspecting any item that might threaten our national security and public welfare. They do a good job.

Last week’s attacks demonstrate how important it is that Customs and all of our agencies have our full support. We must make sure that the agency is as robust as we possibly can.

What is the problem? The problem is that the Finance Committee has reported out Mr. Bonner to be Customs Commissioner, and someone on the Senate floor is holding him up. We cannot put him in place because there are
The Customs Service at this point is right at the center with a range of other agencies having to deal with this terrorist threat. A significant amount of our security enforcement is embedded in the Customs Service. We need good leadership.

The Senator from Montana says the Acting Commissioner is a good guy. I agree with that. I have great confidence in him. But there is nothing quite like having someone there who has been confirmed by the Congress to say: Here is the direction we are going to take with this agency.

It is important this week that we implore our colleagues who are holding nominees up—especially in critical areas—for the sake of this country, to get out of the way and to get the President’s nominees, especially for an agency such as this, in place.

Mr. Bonner is a well-qualified man who will do a great job.

I just wanted to say how much I appreciate the statement by the Senator from Montana.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, if I might, I very much thank my colleague for his statements as well. This Senate, when it is business as usual, probably is not quite as efficient and productive as it could be. I am a firm believer in the basic underpinnings of democracy. We don’t want to be too efficient, because as representatives of our people from different parts of the country, there are different aspirations, different hopes, and different points of view. We want a melting pot kind of basis to work together and pass legislation. But this is not the time for business as usual. We have a national crisis. We are virtually at war. There is a lot of talk of unity and of working together. There has been tremendous cooperation in both Houses, by both parties, on both sides of Pennsylvania Avenue. But on something as vital as this, I just very much hope that whoever the one, or two, or three Senators are who for extraneous, independent, and separate reasons—whatever they may be—are holding up Mr. Bonner, that they will reconsider for the sake of our country, and particularly with an agency as important as this at this time.

I yield the floor. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows: (Purpose: To authorize State, regional, or local transportation authorities that receive Federal Transit Administration assistance or grants, to purchase heavy-duty transit buses through the General Services Administration.)

The amendment would open up that option to other public transit agencies around the country that also receive Federal transit assistance to purchase transit buses through the General Services Administration. The amendment currently only authorizes public transit authorities that receive Federal transit assistance to purchase transit buses through the General Services Administration.

The amendment would open up that option to other public transit agencies around the country that also receive Federal transit assistance to purchase transit buses through the General Services Administration. The amendment currently only authorizes public transit authorities that receive Federal transit assistance to purchase transit buses through the General Services Administration.

Allowing other public transit agencies the option to purchase these buses GSA would result in substantial cost and time savings for these agencies. This would, of course, be especially valuable to some of our smaller communities around the country.

The new authority is limited only to transit buses and does not authorize Federal transit assistance or grants. The General Services Administration currently offers three heavy-duty transit buses on its schedule. GSA selected the three as a result of competitive solicitations, and the companies had to bid attractive terms and prices in order to win those 5-year contracts and get on that list for the General Services Administration.

The amendment was introduced by Senator Dorgan and is limited only to transit buses and does not authorize Federal transit assistance or grants.
We understand GSA is concerned that it may not be able today to adequately implement this new option. Consequently, the amendment directs GSA to notify the committee of jurisdiction if it finds that the program is resulting in unanticipated costs or impacts. We try in the language to give GSA the opportunity to do that if they determine that that is required.

This is a meritorious amendment. It is one I would very much like to see adopted as part of this legislation. I urge my colleagues to support it.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there further debate on the amendment?

If not, the question is on agreeing to amendment No. 1576.

The amendment (No. 1576) was agreed to.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. CARPER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. CARPER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to address the Senate for 5 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

ACTS OF BRAVERY AND KINDNESS FOLLOWING THE TERRORIST ATTACK

Mr. CARPER. Mr. President, during the course of the past week, we have witnessed extraordinary acts of bravery: aboard the aircraft that were hijacked, at the World Trade Center Towers, and at the Pentagon.

In addition, we have witnessed extraordinary acts of kindness by people from all walks of life in this Nation who have reached into their own pockets and hearts and sought to comfort those who have lost loved ones, who sought to donate something of their own, including their blood and money, to assist those who have suffered egregious losses.

Earlier this afternoon, I visited the Dover Air Force Base in the State of Delaware and spent time at the Dover Air Force Base. I want to express on behalf of not just the people of Delaware and those of us in my State who are affected, but people throughout the country who are touched and have lost a relative, a loved one, who will have that sense of closure because of the efforts going on today, yesterday, last week, and the days to follow at the Dover Air Force Base.

We are fortunate in this country to have so many heroes and heroines. As I speak some of them are working in the central part of the second smallest State in America. I yield the floor and I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. CARPER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to address the Senate for 5 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

AMENDMENT NO. 1577

Purpose: To improve the collection of information relating to the introduction of foreign animal disease

On page 26, after line 8 insert the following new section:

A. None of the funds appropriated or made available by this Act may be used for the production of Customs Declarations that do not inquire whether the passenger had been in the proximity of livestock.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote and I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

AMENDMENT NO. 1578

Mr. KOHL. Mr. President, I congratulate Senator DORGAN and Senator CAMPBELL, chairman and ranking member of the Appropriations Subcommittee on Treasury and General Government, for their fine work in crafting the bill now before the Senate. I also thank them for accepting an amendment I have offered to help strengthen this country’s safeguards against the possible introduction of foreign animal disease.

I serve as chairman of the Appropriations Subcommittee on Agriculture, Rural Development and Related Agencies, and we have given substantial attention to the ongoing problems of exotic pests and disease that have been introduced into this country over the years. Attention to concern for this problem has been heightened this past year with reports from the United Kingdom where outbreaks of foot and mouth disease have severely harmed the British economy and, in particular, the British livestock sector. The U.S. livestock sector quickly realized the danger that the spread of foot and mouth disease, and similar infectious diseases, could reach our shores with equally devastating effect.

When Secretary Veneman testified before our subcommittee this spring, she told us that strong measures were in place to reduce the possibility that foreign animal disease would come to America. The fact that to date no such outbreaks have occurred here speaks to the strength of those measures. However, such safeguards are only as strong as their weakest part.

Currently, all passengers coming to the United States on aircraft or by other means are required to complete Customs Declaration form 6059B which poses a set of questions about that individual's activities abroad. Included is a question which asks if the passenger is “bringing fruits, plants, meats, food, soil, birds, snails, other live animals, wildlife products, or have been on a farm or ranch in the U.S.” If the passenger answers this question in the affirmative, he or she is likely to be referred to USDA's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service, APHIS, for further inquiry. Clearly, this question is designed to help provide the Customs Service with adequate information to know if a referral to APHIS is warranted or not.

I have every confidence that APHIS personnel who serve on the front line of this country’s inspection force have the expertise and commitment to ask the right questions and to take the right actions to safeguard against foreign pests and disease, such as Foot and Mouth Disease. However, current practice does not ensure that all overseas travelers who have been in the vicinity of diseased livestock will have received proper referral to the appropriate agencies. If a traveler did not visit a farm or ranch, for example, the Customs Service would not have the information needed to take a proper referral to USDA. Still travelers in rural areas of certain countries, such as the UK may come in close contact with livestock either at county fairs, rural bed and breakfasts, on back country trails, or other settings that may not strike one as a “farm or ranch,” but may in fact pose the same level of risk.

My amendment simply requires that any new Customs declaration forms used for entry into the United States ask a question in a manner to alert the traveler to the fact that simply being in the proximity of livestock needs to be brought to the attention of Customs or USDA personnel due to the high risk of foreign borne disease. My amendment would take the three forms now in use. However, I understand that these forms are now in the process of being redrafted which I believe, makes my amendment doubly timely. It is my further expectation that nothing will be done that that this amendment is actually put in place. Customs Service personnel will be provided guidance to sensitize them to making further verbal inquiry of travelers who have traveled in countries known to have infectious animal disease outbreaks to determine if they may have been in areas where a likelihood of infection was possible.

Again, my amendment is not lengthy, nor does it require much. However, I believe it will help strengthen our Nation’s defense against invasions of foreign animal disease. If the asking of one question prevents an outbreak of a devastating disease in America, it will certainly be a question worth asking.

Ms. COLLINS. Mr. President, I rise to comment the managers of the Treasury, Postal appropriation bill, Chairman DORGAN and Ranking Member CAMPBELL, for including in their bill funding for the number of Customs officers stationed on our northern border. I particularly commend their foresight, which was confirmed by the tragic events of last week, and the suggestion that some of the terrorists may have entered the United States through ports of entry in my home State of Maine.

MR. DORGAN. I thank the Senator from Maine for her kind words. The bill before us does indeed include $25 million to fund a northern border hiring initiative. These funds would be used to hire approximately 265 additional Customs officers for our northern border.

MR. CAMPBELL. Due to dramatic increases in land border traffic and trade with Canada coupled with only token increase in staffing in recent years, our ports of entry are woefully understaffed.

Ms. COLLINS. The situation in Maine is of particular concern to me. Ninety-eight Customs inspectors are currently stationed in my home State. Yet, according to a Customs Service resource allocation analysis based on threat and workload assessments, Maine should have 253 inspectors, or approximately 35 percent more than the number currently there. Maine has 23 land border ports of entry, some of which are manned by a single inspector at any given point in time. Our Customs and Immigration and Naturalization Service inspectors work long and hard to protect the integrity of our border. But they need reinforcements.

I understand that the lack of Customs officials in Maine would not be ameliorated completely by this bill. The dockets in conjunction with the $25 million for additional Immigration and Naturalization Service inspectors included in the Senate-passed Commerce, Justice, State appropriations bill, would take a strong step in the right direction. I fully appreciate the chairman and ranking member to help ensure that Maine receives its fair share of additional inspectors.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, from Maine that the Customs Service will be instructed to pay particular attention to the needs of Maine when assessing where to deploy these officers.

MR. CAMPBELL. We appreciate the Senator bringing Maine’s needs to our attention and fully intend to see those needs met, to the extent possible, through the funds appropriated by this bill.

AMENDMENT NO. 1574, AS MODIFIED

MR. DORGAN. Mr. President, on behalf of Mr. JOHNSON, I ask unanimous consent to modify his amendment, which I offered earlier today on his behalf.

I ask unanimous consent that Senator SMITH of Oregon be added as an original cosponsor of the Johnson amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment (No. 1574), as modified, is as follows:

At the end of title VI, insert the following:

(b) If bonds described in subsection (a) are issued, such bonds shall be in such form and denominations, and shall be subject to such terms and conditions of issue, conversion, re-demption, maturation, payment, and rate of interest as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe.

MR. JOHNSON. Mr. President, I rise today to offer an amendment that authorizes the Secretary of the Treasury to issue Unity Bonds in support of recovery and response efforts relating to the September 11, 2001, hijackings and attacks on the Pentagon and the World Trade Center. This amendment is similar to legislation that I introduced last week, S. 1430. I was pleased that several of my Republican colleagues introduced similar bills because this is an initiative that should and must be bipartisan.

Unity Bonds will allow Americans who want to show their support for this great country to participate in a meaningful way. This amendment deserves full bipartisan support, and I look forward to working in a consensus fashion to make Unity Bonds available to all Americans.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that Senator HUTCHINSON of Arkansas be added as a full bipartisan sponsor to the McConnell amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, the ranking member, Senator CAMPBELL, and I are aware of the thrust of the McConnell and Johnson amendments, both of which were offered this afternoon. We suggest the Senate approve both the Johnson and McConnell amendments. I ask unanimous consent that the Johnson amendment and the McConnell amendment be agreed to at this time. Let me be clear. I am asking consent that the McConnell amendment be agreed to as offered earlier today and that the Johnson amendment be agreed to as modified by the modification I sent to the desk a few moments ago.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?
Mr. CAMPBELL. Mr. President, we have no objection. We support the amendments.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the amendments are agreed to.

The amendments (Nos. 1573 and 1574, as modified) were agreed to.

Mr. DORGAN. I move to reconsider the vote.
Mr. CAMPBELL. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, Senator CAMPBELL and I have been talking about the list we have presented that makes certain amendments in order and available to be offered. It is a very small list. In fact, the expectation of being able to approve a number of items on this list, I believe there are only two Senators remaining who have yet to come to the floor and offer amendments on which they are protected on the list. We ask them to do that. It is now 10 minutes before 7 in the evening. Those Senators would have had notice all day that we have been working on this bill. And, frankly, the Senate has been in a quorum call much of the day.

Senator CAMPBELL and I encourage those Senators who still have amendments they may wish to offer to either come and offer them or perhaps call us and notify us that they will not be offered. The hope is that at some point we could get to third reading.

My understanding from leadership is that we will not be going to a final vote tonight. Perhaps this will require a rollocall vote. It is not certain at this moment. But, in any event, to get to third reading, we need to clear these amendments. I believe there are only two Senators for whom we are waiting.
If they intend to offer the amendments, we hope they are on their way to the floor or that their staffs will find them and get them to the floor of the Senate so they can do that. If they are deciding not to offer those amendments, please notify us. We want to go to third reading.

Mr. CAMPBELL. Mr. President, to our knowledge, we have only two Senators who said they have an amendment they want to offer. We are on the phone now to try to get them down here. But I think if we can get them down here quickly, we will be able to finish this bill by Friday.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, if, in fact, there is a way to get to third reading, and then do a voice vote on final passage, of course we would prefer to do that as well. My expectation is we will have a recorded vote on the conference report when it comes back from the conference, but I do not know that that has yet been cleared. My understanding was that a voice vote had not been cleared some while ago.

In any event, if we can finish the amendments and get to third reading, it will have represented, in my judgment, significant progress. This is a fairly sizeable appropriations bill. The ability to do this bill today on the floor of the Senate would, I think, signal to the American people that this is a new seriousness of purpose in the Senate. We want to obviously do our business, and do it the right way, but we want to express to the American people that we are willing to work together and get things done.

This country suffers from a pretty serious crisis as a result of the terrorist acts. We want to demonstrate to the American people that we can go back to work and we can get this work done in an expeditious way.

Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

MORNING BUSINESS

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

MEASURE READ THE FIRST TIME—S. 1439

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, I understand that S. 1439, the Ballistic Missile Defense Act of 2001, which I introduced a few minutes ago, is at the desk, and I ask for its first reading.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will read the bill by title. The legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 1439) to authorize appropriations for fiscal year 2002 for military activities of the Department of Defense, for military construction, and for defense activities of the Department of Energy, to prescribe personnel strength for such fiscal year for the Armed Forces, and for other purposes.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, I now ask for its second reading.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Virginia.

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, I object. And the reasons for the objection are as follows: That in consultation with the Republican leader, in consultation with the majority whip, and in consultation with the chairman, the chairman is seeking to have this piece of legislation be considered under rule XIV. We have no objection to that, but for technical reasons the objection to the second reading is required. It should not be interpreted—as my objection—as animosity or anything between the chairman and myself. It is just part of the procedure, arcane though it may be.

So I object to second reading.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is heard.

The bill will be read for the second time on the next legislative day.

The Senator from Michigan.

MEASURE READ THE FIRST TIME—S. 1439

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, I understand that S. 1439, the Ballistic Missile Defense Act of 2001, which I introduced a few minutes ago, is at the desk, and I ask for its first reading.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will read the bill by title.

The legislative clerk read as follows: A bill (S. 1439) to provide and revise conditions and requirements for the ballistic missile defense programs, and for other purposes.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, I now ask for its second reading.

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, I object for the same reasons as I stated under S. 1439.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is heard.

The bill will be read for the second time on the next legislative day.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, I yield the floor.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment is as follows: Mr. DORGAN, Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

At the appropriate place in the bill, insert the following:

SEC. 2. REQUIREMENT THAT A SPECIAL COMMEMORATIVE POSTAGE STAMP BE DESIGNED AND ISSUED

(a) In General.—In order to afford the public a direct and tangible way to provide assistance to the families of emergency relief personnel killed or permanently disabled in the line of duty in connection with the terrorist attacks against the United States on September 11, 2001, the United States Postal Service shall issue a semipostal in accordance with sub-section (b).

(b) REQUIREMENTS.—The provisions of section 416 of title 39, United States Code, shall apply as practices with respect to the semipostal described in subsection (a), subject to the following:

(c) RATE OF POSTAGE.—Section 414(b) of title 39, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by striking “of not to exceed 25 percent” and inserting “of not less than 15 percent”;

(2) by adding after the sentence following paragraph (3) the following: “The special rate of postage of an individual stamp under this section shall be an amount that is even divisible by 5.”;

(3) COMMENCEMENT AND TERMINATION DATES.—Stamps under this section shall be issued—

(A) beginning on the earliest date practicable; and

(B) for such period of time as the Postal Service considers necessary and appropriate, but in no event less than 2 years.

(c) For purposes of section 416 (including any regulation prescribed under subsection...
Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, Senator HATCH and I, on behalf of our colleagues, Senator HATCH, send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will state the amendment.

The legislative clerk read as follows:
The Senator from North Dakota [Mr. DORGAN], for Mr. HATCH, proposes an amendment numbered 1584.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, the amendment has been cleared by myself and our colleagues and it has been cleared by the Republican side. I ask the amendment be agreed to.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the adoption of the amendment?

Mr. CAMPBELL. We have no objection.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Hearing no objection, the amendment is agreed to.

The amendment (No. 1583) was agreed to.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, my understanding is we are waiting for Senator HATCH who will be offering an amendment. That amendment is on the way to the floor. We have discussed that amendment. We will be accepting it. I expect it will take just a few moments. And when that amendment is accepted, I think at this point we are ready to go to third reading of the bill. We will see at that point whether we need a recorded vote on the bill. It would be nice to be able to finish this appropriations bill this evening.

As soon as we receive the amendment, it is our intention to accept the amendment and move to third reading.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Colorado.

Mr. CAMPBELL. Mr. President, I concur with the chairman. If we can finish this last amendment, I don’t know that there are any other outstanding issues. If not, we are now checking with the leadership to see if it will be accepted to move this bill tonight.

Mr. DORGAN. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

AMENDMENT NO. 1584

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, Senator HATCH and I, on behalf of our colleagues, Senator HATCH, send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will state the amendment.

The legislative clerk read as follows:
The Senator from North Dakota [Mr. DORGAN], for Mr. HATCH, proposes an amendment numbered 1584.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:
(Purpose: To designate the State of Utah as a High Intensity Drug Trafficking Area)

On page 36, line 7, after the semicolon insert the following: "of which $2,500,000 shall be used for a newly designated HIDTA in the State of Utah."

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on adoption of the amendment.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, we have reviewed the amendment and have no objection on this side.

Mr. CAMPBELL. We have no objection on our side.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. There being no objection to the immediate consideration of the amendment, the amendment is agreed to.

The amendment (No. 1584) was agreed to.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The absence of a quorum has been suggested. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, I believe the amendment we just considered by Senator HATCH is the last amendment to be offered to this bill. I believe on our side there are no further amendments. I believe that is the case on the Republican side.

ISSUANCE OF SEMIPOSTAL STAMPS

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, I would like to enter into a colloquy with the chairman of the Treasury and General Government Appropriations Subcommittee. First, I would like to commend the Chairman for his good work on this bill. I appreciate his leadership and commitment.

I would like to confirm with the chairman my understanding of an amendment offered by the chairman and Senator SCHUMER. The amendment proposes that a special commemorative semipostal stamp be issued to recognize the efforts of the brave emergency relief personnel who were killed in connection with last week’s terrorist attacks.

Existing Postal Service regulations state that the Postal Service will offer only one semipostal stamp for sale at any given time. It is my understanding that it would be consistent with these regulations for the Postal Service to designate a semipostal stamp issued by the amendment on the one semipostal stamp to be offered, pursuant to the said regulations, for the period specified in the amendment, with the exception of the Breast Cancer Research Stamp previously exempted by law.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, the Senator is correct. The Postal Service could choose to designate the emergency relief semipostal as the one semipostal stamp to be offered for the period specified in the amendment, pursuant to Postal Service regulations. Ms. SNOWE. Mr. President, I rise today in support of contraceptive coverage for almost 9 million Federal employees and their dependents who receive their health care coverage through the Federal Employees Health Benefits Program. At a negligible cost, this coverage has been included in the past three Treasury-Postal Service appropriations bills and is in the House passed bill and as well as the legislation before us today.

This provision enjoys broad bipartisan support among members of the Senate as demonstrated by a letter sent by over half of the Members of the Senate to the chairman and the ranking member of the Subcommittee on Treasury, Postal Service and General Government. The contraceptive coverage provision was adapted from legislation I originally authored back in 1997, the bipartisan Equity in Prescription Contraceptive Coverage Act, or EPICC, which currently has 42 cosponsors, and which was the subject of a hearing in the Senate Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions Committee on September 10. Throughout this effort, I have had the good fortune of being joined by Senator REID who has been a partner with me in this effort, and I thank him for his ongoing leadership on this issue. We both agree this is commonsense public policy whose time has long since come.

The facts are not in dispute, contraceptives are an essential part of not only a woman’s health, but that of her children and their future children. The lack of equitable coverage of prescription contraceptives has a very real impact on the lives of women and, therefore, our society as a whole. We took a strong first step towards ending this inequity when, in 1998, we guaranteed access to prescription contraceptive coverage for federal employees.

The inclusion of this coverage in FEHBP has saved female enrollees over $1,000 over the past three years, according to the Alan Guttmacher Institute. Not only has the inclusion of this coverage saved our female employees about $30,000 over the past three years, but it has not cost the Federal government anything either. A January 2001 OPM statement on the cost of this coverage for federal employees under the FEHBP found no effect on premiums whatsoever since implementation in 1998. Since it’s not often that we can say that, let me repeat it, it has had no effect on costs of health care.

In fact, some, like the Alan Guttmacher Institute, argue that improved access to and use of contraceptives nationwide saves insurers and society money by preventing unintended pregnancies, as insurers generally pay pregnancy-related medical costs, which can range anywhere from $5,000 to almost $20,000. In addition, access to contraception would eliminate these costs and would reduce the costs to both employers and insurers.

Whenever we talk about contraceptive coverage, the issue of a "science clause" has continually been raised. I would remind my colleagues that this is a concern we effectively addressed in 1998 and that standard has remained unchanged ever since. I agree that this is a legitimate concern, which is why we found a compromise in order to assure the concerns of our colleagues that felt that there needed to be a "science clause" to allow religious plans to opt out of this coverage if their beliefs and tenets are not consistent with this coverage. Originally, we specifically named five health plans that were excluded from having to provide this coverage and allowed "any other existing or future religious based plans whose religious tenets are in conflict with the requirements" of this coverage. But later, there are only two plans remaining in the FEHBP program which do not provide this coverage. That’s two out of over 245 participating health plans.

While many of my colleagues and I would prefer to have this coverage expanded for all women nationwide, it is essential that we do not rescind this critical health care benefit for women in the FEHBP program. And the proponents of the larger legislation, EPICC, are not allowed access to contraceptive drug plans that were excluded from having to provide this coverage and allowed "any other existing or future religious based plans whose religious tenets are in conflict with the requirements" of this coverage. As recently as June, the U.S. District Court for the Western District of Washington ruled in Erickson v. Bartell Drug Company that an employer’s failure to cover prescription contraceptives in its otherwise comprehensive prescription drug plan constitutes gender discrimination, in violation of title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964. This case was the first of its kind, setting a legal precedent as well as bolstering the case for our broader legislation.

In turn, the foundation for the district court decision was a ruling by the Equal Employment Opportunities Commission, or EEOC, last December that an employer’s decision to exclude coverage of contraceptives in a health plan that covered other prescription drugs, devices and preventive health care services violated title VII of the Civil Rights Act regarding gender discrimination.

Together, these two decisions form a "one-two" punch in favor of the approach we advocate today, an approach that’s already been endorsed by a total of 16 States, including my home State of Maine—that have passed similar laws since 1998. Today, another twenty States have contraceptive coverage legislation pending. That’s a start, but it’s not enough. Not only are these laws limited to state regulated plans, but this piecemeal approach to fairness leaves many American women at the mercy of geography when it comes to the coverage they deserve. Unfortunately, until we can get EPICC passed on its own, you either have to be a member of Congress, a Senator, a Federal employee, or living in one of these states to receive this guaranteed benefit.

We believe that contraceptive coverage not only makes sense in terms of the cost of contraceptives for women, but also as a means of bridging, at least in some small way, the pro-choice pro-life chasm by helping prevent unintended pregnancies and thereby also prevent abortions. The fact of the matter is, we know that there are three million unintended pregnancies every year in the United States. We also know that almost half of those pregnancies result from just three million women who do not use contraceptives, while 39 million contraceptive users account for the other 53 percent of unintended pregnancies, most of which resulted from inconsistent or incorrect use. In other words, when used properly, contraceptives work. We know that they prevent unintended pregnancies and when we have fewer unintended pregnancies, we will have a reduced need for abortions, and that is a goal each of us can support.

I ask my colleagues to continue to support the inclusion of this provision in the Federal Employees Health Benefits Program as contained in the Fiscal Year 2002 Treasury-Postal appropriations bill. It is an important benefit and it is in the best interests of women’s overall health, their children and their future children’s health.

Mr. McCAIN. Mr. President, I thank the managers of this bill for their hard work in putting forth this legislation which provides Federal funding for numerous vital programs in the Treasury Department and the General Government. However, once again, I find myself in the unpleasant position of speaking before my colleagues about parochial projects in another appropriation bill.

This bill spends at a level of 5.9 percent higher than the level enacted in fiscal year 2001, which is greater than the 4 percent increase in discretionary spending than the President wanted to adhere to. In real dollars, this is $238 million in additional spending above the amount requested by the President, and a $1.5 billion increase in spending from last year. So far this year, with just seven appropriations bills already passed including this bill, spending levels have already exceeded the President’s budget request by more than $7.6 billion. I must remind my colleagues that the Administration has urged us to maintain our fiscal discipline to ensure that we will continue to have adequate funds to prosecute our war against terrorism, to aid those in need, and to cover other related costs.

In this bill, I have identified just over $200 million in earmarks, which is less than the cost of the earmarks, totaling $356 million, in the bill passed last year. Therefore, I applaud the efforts of the appropriators in keeping parochial spending to a minimum in this bill but more must be done.

While the amounts associated with each individual earmark may not seem extravagant, taken together, they represent a serious diversion of taxpayers’ hard-earned dollars at the expense of numerous programs that have undergone the appropriate merit-based election process. It is my view that the people who run these programs should be the ones who decide how best to spend the appropriated funds. After all, they know what their most pressing needs are.

For example, under funding for the Department of Treasury, some examples of earmarks include: $1,000,000 for work on joint technology projects with New Mexico State University’s Physical Sciences Laboratory; and $750,000 for the Center for Policy and Trade Studies located at North Dakota State University.

Under funding for the General Government, some of the earmarks include: $2,500,000 for the Native American Digital Telehealth Project and the Upper Great Plains Native American Telehealth Program at the University of North Dakota; and $5,000,000 to help purchase land and facilitate the move of the Odd Fellows Hall to provide for an additional square mile of land for the new courthouse in Salt Lake City, UT.

There are more projects on the list that I have compiled, which will be available on my Senate Web site.

In closing, I urge my colleagues to vote to reduce the amount of hard-earned taxpayer dollars to locality-specific special interests.

POSTAL SERVICE SORTING PRACTICES IN HAWAII

Mr. DORGAN. I understand that as a result of the closure of our nation’s airports, the landside limitations placed on the carriage of cargo on commercial passenger planes, postal service throughout our country was affected. However, the State of Hawaii was impacted most severely. My colleague from Hawaii, Senator INOUYE, has joined me to discuss the bill in Hawaii.

Mr. INOUYE. I thank Senator DORGAN for the opportunity to share with our colleagues the impact of the air service restrictions on the delivery of mail in the State of Hawaii. The recent closure of the State’s air transportation system brought to light a Postal Service practice that I believe should be reevaluated. Hawaii is an island State that is not only geographically isolated from the mainland United States, but that is also geographically divided into seven distinct islands separated by the Pacific Ocean. Hawaii has a population dependent on the air transportation system for the movement of goods and people throughout the State. However, I believe the current Postal Service mail sorting procedure has the potential to exacerbate the harm to my State’s economy from the airport closures, the reduced inter-island travel, and the decline in travel to and from the Islands.

The Postal Service in Hawaii has only one centralized sorting office. While I understand that mail service throughout the United States experienced slow-downs and difficulties as a result of the closure of our air transportation system, mail service in Hawaii came to a virtual standstill. The shut down of our airports resulted in the delivery of mail only on the island of Oahu, where the sorting station is located. My constituents on Maui could not mail letters to one another because a letter originating on Maui and addressed to another location on Maui must first be flown to Honolulu for sorting. This hardship was faced by all of the residents of Oahu’s neighbor islands.

With the threat of war upon us and the possibility of further airport closures, I believe we must study alternatives to the current mail sorting system. The problems faced by the neighbor islands as a result of the airport shutdown are expected to continue as tourism to and within Hawaii declines. Aloha Airlines, one of two island air carriers, has announced a 26-percent reduction in flights that will begin next week. Hawaiian Airlines, the other inter-island air carrier, has also dramatically reduced its flight schedule. Additional flight reductions will likely be eliminated with the expected continued decline in leisure and business travel.

In light of these flight restrictions, I believe the Postal Service should develop a procedure by which mail that originates on the same island to which it is addressed can be kept and sorted on that island. I realize that this would be only a small step toward addressing the many issues resulting from my State’s unique geography, but it would be a start.

Mr. DORGAN. I thank Senator INOUYE for sharing with us the difficulties faced by your State. I agree that the Postal Service should examine the feasibility of implementing procedures that take into account Hawaii’s unique geography. Please be assured that I will work with the Senator to help in this endeavor.

Mr. CONRAD. Mr. President, I rise to offer for the RECORD the Budget Committee’s official scoring for S. 1398, the Treasury, Postal Service, and General Government Appropriations Act for Fiscal Year 2002.

The Senate bill provides $17.118 billion in discretionary budget authority. The Senate bill will result in new outlays in 2002 of $12.528 billion. When outlays from prior-year budget authority are taken into account, discretionary outlays for the Senate bill total $16.183 billion in 2002. The Senate bill is within its Sec- ondary Appropriations Act for budget authority and outlays. Once again, the committee has met its target without the use of any emergency designations.

I again commend Chairman BYRD and Senator STEVENS, as well as Senators DORGAN and CAMPBELL, for their bipartisan effort in moving this and other appropriations bills quickly to make up for the late start in this year’s appropriations process. The tragic events of September 11 demand that this bipartisan parity continue and that the Congress expeditiously complete work on the 13 regular appropriation bills for 2002.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that a table displaying the committee scoring of this bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

For enforcement purposes, the budget committee compares the Senate-reported bill to the Senate Appropriations Act.

NOTES: Details may not add to totals due to rounding. Totals adjusted for consistency with committee scoring templates.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed, and the bill to be read a third time.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill was read the third time.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill having been read the third time, the question is, shall the bill pass?

The bill (H.R. 2590) was passed. (The bill will be printed in a future edition of the RECORD.)

Mr. DORGAN. I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. CAMPBELL. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Under the order previously entered, the Senate insists on its amendment, requests a conference with the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses, and the Chair is authorized to appoint the following conference committee.

The President pro tempore appointed Mr. DORGAN, Ms. MIKULSKI, Ms. LANDRIEU, Mr. REID, Mr. BYRD, Mr. CAMPBELL, Mr. SHELBY, Mr. DEWINE, and Mr. STEVENS.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senate from Colorado.

Mr. CAMPBELL. Mr. President, this bill must have gone through in record fashion. I note for the record this is the first year Senator DORGAN has been chairman of the subcommittee. I have really enjoyed working with him, and I am continually awed by his skills in the Chamber of this great body and his ability to get this bill together in a timely fashion. I thank him and his staff for working so well with us. From my staff, Pat Raymond and Lula Edwards worked hard on our side. I thank them, too, for the record.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from North Dakota.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, let me say again what a pleasure it is to work with Senator CAMPBELL, his staff and my staff who I named previously today. They have done an excellent job. We passed this bill in fairly short order. As I said when we started today, I hope we could perhaps show the American people that we are back at work and trying to do things in a way that allows all of us to work together for the interest of this country, and I believe the passage of this bill in the manner we have done tonight is a demonstration of that.

Again, I thank my colleague and all of our Senate colleagues for cooperating and allowing us to get to the point of passing this important legislation this evening. I yield the floor.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Nevada.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, while the chairman of the full committee is here and two managers of the bill, I congratulate them and you. The appropriations process is moving along, and we should all feel very good about that.

Senator DORGAN and Senator CAMPBELL have done a tremendous job on a
I strongly believe that the missile defense provisions took an appropriate step on an issue of national importance, and I was disappointed that this single area of disagreement led the Republican Members of our committee to vote against this bill that is so important to our national security.

In my view, however, this is the wrong time for divisive debate on issues of national defense. We cannot let issues like this pull us apart and undermine our common sense of national purpose in fighting terrorism. Rather, we should leave this debate to a later time and link arms against our attackers.

When we take up the defense authorization act, I hope that my colleagues will join me in putting controversial issues aside and help us move forward together to pass this bill promptly and indicate our strong and unified support for the national defense with a minimum of divisive debate.

THE HAPPY Hooligans

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, I want to comment for a moment about some fighter pilots who are flying air missions over our nation’s capital.

On Tuesday of last week, following the attack on the World Trade Center and shortly before the Pentagon was hit, a detachment of fighters who were on alert at Langley Air Force Base in Virginia were ordered airborne to protect our nation’s capital. It happens that the detachment of fighters is from North Dakota.

The 119th Tactical Fighter Wing of the North Dakota Air National Guard flies F–16s. They are called the Happy Hooligans. The Happy Hooligans are folks who farm; they run drug stores; they teach school. They do a lot of things in their community, but they also are members of the National Guard who maintain and fly F–16s.

More than that, the Happy Hooligans, the National Air Guard detachment in Fargo, ND, are some of the best fighter pilots in the world. In fact, the Happy Hooligans have won the William Tell Award on several occasions.

The William Tell Award is an award that is given to the fighter units that are the most proficient combat fighter pilots in the world. So this National Guard unit from Fargo, ND, has taken their airplanes to the William Tell contest, and they have flown against the world’s top combat pilots, and they have brought the William Tell Trophy home to Fargo, ND, as proof that they are the best fighter pilots in the world.

For some time, the Happy Hooligans have kept a permanent detachment with four F–16s, pilots, and crews on alert at Langley Air Force Base to provide air defense of the United States.

Last Tuesday morning, the attack on the World Trade Center in New York precipitated an order for those pilots who were on alert to take to the skies. And those F–16s took to the air, but regrettably they were not yet over Washington D.C., and protecting our nation’s capital. And these are, as I said, men and women who belong to the National Guard but who have been awarded the distinction of being the best fighter pilots in the world.

I was enormously proud of them. I called their commander at Langley. I told them how proud I was to have the Happy Hooligans—a wonderful contingent of civilian soldiers; men and women who belong to the National Guard—flying those F–16s, providing air cover during a time of national emergency.

So, for the record, I want to say that all Americans, of course, and proud of our men and women in uniform. We grieve with them for the tragedy visited upon them when the airplane was flown into the Pentagon, just as we do for the thousands of people who have lost their lives at the World Trade Center.

And as there are brave men and women across the country who have stepped forward to say, let it be me—the firemen and the firefighters and police men and women who were climbing the stairs of the World Trade Center to try to rescue people, risking their lives to help others, just as there are so many heroes around this country during a time of need—so, too, were the Happy Hooligans in their cockpit of the F–16s, flying combat air patrols over our Nation’s Capital.

Let me say to the Happy Hooligans: I salute you. I am proud of your work. And this country owes you a great debt of gratitude.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

Mr. ALLEN. Mr. President, I say to my friend and colleague from North Dakota, in relation to his eloquent remarks about the Happy Hooligans, we are glad the Happy Hooligans are on our side. I knew that this training was going on. These Air Guardsmen—and possibly women as well—were very important for us to protect our Nation’s Capital. I know of one of those pilots actually who is from Virginia.

I am not going to get into the details because it is important for national security not to reveal what they were actually doing, but they were very much in harm’s way. I will not get into any more detail other than to say, these pilots—the Happy Hooligans, and any others who were involved in that scrambled mission to protect our Nation’s Capital, who were in the DC area—really were willing to give their lives in a generally undefended position.
So I am glad the Senator saluted the Happy Hooligans. I salute the Happy Hooligans and all those Air Guard pilots who scrambled to our Nation’s defense, with complete risk to their lives, possibly having to give their lives to protect others.

They will be called upon again, undoubtedly, in service to our interests, our freedom, and our allies. We do salute them and their families and their employers, whether they may be in North Dakota, Virginia, Minnesota, Wisconsin, or anywhere else in this country because they are patriots. We have all seen the patriotism that defines our country.

TRIBUTE TO THE PAGES

Mr. DAYTON. Madam President, I rise today to pay tribute to our pages, who are young Americans.

One of our distinguished Senators said it was the first time the Senate floor had been cleared in his 25 years of service. A security guard told me it was the first time in the 33 years of his service that the Senate Chamber had been cleared. Yet that very night our pages were back working as scheduled to conclude the Senate’s business, and they returned again last Friday. Today, they are once again assembled, and are working hard on our behalf.

For people of any age to respond with this kind of courage and dedication in this situation is exemplary. For these young men and women—teenagers who are once again assembled, and are working hard on our behalf.

I ask unanimous consent that their names be printed in the RECORD. I wish to pay tribute on behalf of all the Senate to them for their dedication and their courage. They are truly outstanding young Americans.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

CONFIRMATION OF BRUCE COLE

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I welcome this opportunity to express my strong opposition to the nomination of Bruce Cole to be Chairman of the National Endowment for the Humanities. Dr. Cole is a noted art historian and a distinguished professor at Indiana University. He served as Visiting Professor at Hebrew University in Jerusalem and previously held the Goethe Chair of Excellence at the University of Memphis. Dr. Cole is a former member of the National Council on the Humanities, and he will bring impressive stature and experience to the Humanities Endowment.

We have been fortunate over the past three decades to have many distinguished academics and humanists lead this agency. I believe that Dr. Cole will serve in that tradition and be an impressive leader for this important agency.

In conjunction with the consideration of his nomination by the Committee on Health, Education, Labor and Pensions, I submitted a number of questions to Dr. Cole, and I wanted to share his answers with my colleagues. I ask unanimous consent that they may be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Questions by Senator Kennedy for Dr. Bruce Cole, General Counsel

1. Do you support the mission of the National Endowment for the Humanities and believe that there is a federal role in support of the humanities? Answer: Yes. I believe firmly that the NEH plays a crucial, and necessary role in our democracy. Although the NEH is a small agency, its impact is great. As the only federal program dedicated exclusively to the national dissemination of the humanities, it affirms our government’s support for the humanities. This support is necessary because the humanities make us aware of our shared human condition and enlarge our worldview. The humanities are the principal means of transmitting our shared democratic values to future generations. As a pivotal civilizing force in human life, the humanities are essential to the well-being of any democracy and its citizens.

The importance of the humanities is recognized in the National Foundation on the Arts and Humanities Act establishing the NEH. This act states: “That a high civilization and all its citizenry.

2. Do you believe that there is a federal role in support of the humanities? Answer: Yes.

3. Due to budget cuts and the impact of inflation, the NEH’s spending power is about 30% of what it was in 1989. This decline in funding has reduced the agency’s reach and impacting. How do you view current funding of the agency? Will you advocate for higher spending levels for the humanities? Answer: I cannot answer this question presently because I do not have detailed knowledge of the NEH's current budget and how it supports the agency's missions. However, if I were confirmed as NEH Chairman I shall devote my energies to ensuring that the NEH always has funds sufficient to enable it to disseminate the humanities to all sectors.

4. You bring distinguished academic credentials and considerable experience to the NEH, what is your view of the importance of scholarship in the humanities. How do you feel these programs should balance other agency activities? Answer: As a researcher, author, and teacher I believe strongly that support for the humanities scholarship is one of the Endowment's most important activities. Serious scholarship adds directly to our knowledge and understanding of the humanities, it forms the basis for public humanities programming such as NEH-supported television documentaries and museum exhibitions. Humanities also informs and enriches classroom teaching.

The NEH's broad mandate to support the humanities requires that it maintain a balance between programs and activities— including education, preservation, public programming, research and scholarship, as well as challenge grants and the Federal/State partnerships. I am committed to supporting the best grant proposals in all of the agency's programs.

5. Over the past 20 years, the proportion of NEH appropriations for scholarly activity has declined as a percentage of the budget. Do you feel that this is appropriate? Do you have any views as to this time about programmatic priorities for the agency? Answer: If I have the privilege of serving as the Chairman of the NEH, I will carefully examine the architecture of the activities and determine if scholarly activity is receiving an appropriate level of support. As a professor and department chairman who has worked in the humanities for thirty years and a recipient of an NEH fellowship which was critical for my development as a scholar, I know that NEH is often the sole source of funding for humanities scholarship. NEH funding for individual fellowships and for large-scale collaborative research projects remains a fundamental factor in the growth and development of talented scholars and teachers in the humanities.

6. NEH has been a key national resource for the collection and editing of the papers of American presidents and other important historical and literary figures. What priority would you assign this type of project? Answer: In my view NEH support for these projects is critical because the role the agency plays in creating humanities resources for scholars, students, and citizens alike. NEH’s involvement in projects that are producing scholarly resources is one of the agency’s crowning glories. These projects stand among the most important and long-lasting contributions the NEH can make to the advancement of the humanities and our understanding of our past and present. Providing adequate resources to these and other excellent humanities projects will be one of my priorities if the Senate honors me with confirmation as NEH Chairman.

7. How do you feel that the agency can best support humanities in the higher education community? Answer: Higher education projects supported by the Endowment—notably, the national Institutes for Museum and Library Services and the semiconductor grants to support model projects like those that others can emulate. I understand that the Endowment has also been quite active in recent years in encouraging projects that make use of the Internet and other electronic technologies to teach history, literature, languages, and other humanities subjects. While I expect to continue to encourage humanities projects that employ digital technology, I plan also to consult with NEH staff and with humanities educators to explore other ways humanities might strengthen its work in higher education.

8. Do you think that NEH should strengthen teacher training in the humanities in elementary schools? Answer: Yes. The NEH already does this most effectively through its Seminars and Institutes for School Teachers programs. These programs make school teachers students again for a few weeks as they study a great range of significant humanities topics, such as the history and culture of the American West or the Civil Rights Movement, the theater of Antonio Nuevo Vallejo, Dante’s Divine Comedy, and Indian narratives. Mozart and his Vienna, cultural responses to the Holocaust in America, and so on. These programs help teachers renew and revitalize their understanding of specific areas of the humanities and better communicate them to their students. I think that it is critically important that American elementary and secondary school children be taught by instructors who are well-versed in the subjects they teach. As someone who has helped design humanities programs for schoolteachers, I understand that the humanities in the elementary grades, as well as in other grades, is of paramount importance and worthy of an appropriate level of NEH support.

9. The state humanities councils receive an earmark of about 30% of the agency’s programmatic appropriations. This partnership between the federal and state entities is an effective tool to expand the reach of humanities programs and relatively scarce financial resources. Do you feel that the present distribution of programming funds is appropriate? Answer: I enthusiastically support the state humanities councils. They extend the reach of the NEH to a vast audience through programs tailored to meet local needs, and they strengthen the cultural and educational infrastructure throughout America. These councils are a reflection of the understanding, not only of those who inhabit America’s great cities but also of those who live in the nation’s many small towns. I have followed the work of the National Endowment for the Humanities Council for years and am impressed by its creativity, reach, and impact. The Endowment and the state councils are both very good at what they do; their efforts complement one another. I would like to strengthen and expand this historic partnership, which has fostered progress and excellence in the humanities for the American people. The state councils have my strong backing.

Because I do not know exactly what the funding needs of the state councils are, I cannot give an informed answer to this question until I have an opportunity to study in detail all the budget issues related to the state councils.

10. Do you agree that state humanities councils should also be eligible to compete for other programming funds? Answer: The state humanities councils serve their audiences well and I understand from NEH staff that in recent years state councils have been eligible to compete for funding in other programming areas of the NEH. This has, I am told, resulted in support for a number of excellent projects. As with the previous question on the state council’s overall budget, I cannot give an informed answer to this question until I have had an opportunity to study this policy in detail.

11. Do you see additional roles for the state humanities councils in expanding the scope and reach of the Endowment’s programs? Answer: If confirmed I look forward to concurring with state council chairs and directors and the Endowment’s staff to see if the councils could be even more effective than they now in helping the NEH fulfill its mission. As I said above, I am a strong supporter of the state humanities councils and the excellent work they do.

TRIBUTE TO MAJOR GENERAL T. MICHAEL MOSELEY

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, I would like to take a moment today to recognize one of the finest officers in the United States Air Force, Major General T. Michael “Buzz” Moseley. On August 9th, General Moseley retired from his job as Director of the Air Force Office of Legislative Liaison to become the Commander, Ninth Air ...
Force, Air Combat Command and Command, United States Central Command Air Forces, United States Central Command. During his time in Washington, he worked closely with Members of Congress and staff on various issues. Moseley's work on Capitol Hill, and his service abroad, have proven himself in numerous select command positions. He was the Command, captain in the Air Force, and in the United States Air Force Fighting Force. He served as the commander, first at Holloman Air Force Base, New Mexico, and then serving overseas at Kadena Air Base, Japan. Over his career, General Moseley demonstrated his skill as an aviator in the T-37, T-38, AF-36 and F-15 aircraft, and logged over 2,800 hours of flying time.

From early in his career, General Moseley's exceptional leadership skills were always evident to both superiors and subordinates as he repeatedly proved himself in numerous select command positions. He was the Command of the F-15 Division of the United States Air Force Fighting Force, Nevada, and the Commander of the 33rd Operations Group at Eglin Air Force Base, Florida. When stationed at Nellis Air Force Base a second time, he commanded the 57th Fighter Weapons Wing. With 26 squadrons, consisting of A-10, B-1, B-52, F-15C/D, F-15E Strike Eagle, F-16C/D, HH-60G and the MQ-1 Predator, it is the Air Force's largest, most diverse flying wing. The 57th also included the Air Force Weapons School, Red Flag, Air Force Aggressors, the Air Force Demonstration Squadron "Thunderbirds", Launch Operations Group, Air Force Combatant, 66th Rescue Squadron and the Predator unmanned aerial vehicle operations.

Buzz Moseley also excelled in a variety of staff assignments. These include serving as Deputy Director for Political-Military Affairs for Asia and Middle East on the Joint Staff; Chief of the Air Force General Office Matters Office; Chief of Staff of the Air Force Chair of Joint Operations on the Joint and Combined Warfare at the National War College; and Chief of the Tactical Fighter Branch, Tactical Forces Division, Director of Plans. General Moseley also serves on the Council on Foreign Relations and has been named an Officer of the Order National du Merite by the President of France.

During his service to the 106th and 107th Congress, General Moseley was the Air Force liaison for critical readiness and modernization issues. He was a crucial voice for the Air Force in representing its many programs on the Hill, providing clear, concise and timely information. General Moseley's leadership, professionalism, and expertise enabled him to foster exceptional rapport between the Air Force and the Senate, impressing me with his ability to work with the Congress to address Air Force priorities.

We were all pleased to see that the President recently nominated General Moseley for his third star. It is exceptionally well deserved. I offer my congratulations to him, his wife, Jennie, son, Greg and daughter, Tricia. The Congress and the country applaud the selfless commitment his entire family has made to the Nation in supporting his military career.

I know I speak for all of my colleagues in expressing my heartfelt appreciation to General Moseley. He is a credit to both the Air Force and the United States. We wish our friend the best of luck in his new command.

CHANGES TO THE 2002 APPROPRIATIONS COMMITTEE ALLOCATION AND BUDGETARY AGGREGATES

Mr. CONRAD. Mr. President, section 314 of the Congressional Budget Act, as amended, requires the chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee to adjust the budgetary aggregates and the allocation for the Appropriations Committee by the amount provided to the Internal Revenue Service for its earned income tax credit compliance initiative. The amount of the adjustment is limited to $146 million in budget authority in 2002.

Pursuant to section 302 of the Congressional Budget Act, I hereby revise the 2002 allocation provided to the Senate Appropriations Committee in the concurrent budget resolution in the following amounts.

Pursuant to section 311 of the Congressional Budget Act, I hereby revise the 2002 budget aggregates included in the concurrent budget resolution in the following amounts.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to print table 1 and 2 in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

LOCAL LAW ENFORCEMENT ACT OF 2001

Mr. SMITH of Oregon. Mr. President, I rise today to speak about hate crimes legislation I introduced with Senator Kennedy in March of this year. The Local Law Enforcement Act of 2001 would add new categories to current hate crimes legislation sending a signal that violence of any kind is unacceptable in our society.

I would like to describe a terrible crime that occurred January 4, 1996 in Houston, TX. Fred Mangione, a 46-year-old gay man, was allegedly stabbed to death outside a gay bar. Two men, Daniel Christopher Bean, 19, and his half-brother Ronald Henry Cauthier, 21, members of a new-nazi organization, were charged with a first-degree felony. Cauthier, 23, was sentenced to 10 years' probation for his part in the murder.

I believe that government's first duty is to defend its citizens, to defend them against the harms that come out of hate. The Local Law Enforcement Enhancement Act of 2001 is now a symbol of what can become substance. I believe that by passing this legislation, we can change hearts and minds as well.

TRIBUTE TO PETER MARUDAS

Mr. SARBANES. Mr. President, my longtime Chief of Staff, Peter Marudas, retired recently from public service. It has been both an honor and privilege to work with Peter these many years. He

SOME TOUGH YEARS

Marudas stayed on with Thomas A. D'Alesandro III after McKeldin left the mayoral office. They were tough years for Baltimore, Maryland and national politics. Now, he's bowing out.

The farewells began Wednesday as he celebrated his 64th birthday, basically working in his Washington office, although well-wishers flooded the Sarbanes switchboard with birthday wishes and good-byes.

Friday was his last day at work and the end of his own remarkable chapter in Maryland politics: "It's an existential decision," he says of his retirement. "We got the senator re-elected in the fall and he's now a chairman, which is what we were working for all the years. The Banking Committee really do a lot there, the predatory lending business you know, and just the integrity of the capital markets."

He still had a portrait of Franklin Delano Roosevelt on his office wall yesterday as he got ready to leave. "I got Truman, Roosevelt and Jefferson. And I have a labor union organization picture from the C.I.O., March with CIO to Victory." Well, we [See Marudas, 8D] owned this bar where all these U.A.W. workers came in, when I grew up in Detroit," he says.

As a kid, he spent his summers in Baltimore where his uncle ran a dry-cleaning shop on Light Street in what is now Federal Hill, and he had relatives who lived in Brooklyn. Another uncle ran a restaurant in Curtis Bay...

"The first political event I ever attended was in the 1952 campaign," Marudas says. "The Democratic candidates always kicked off their campaign in Detroit on Labor Day."

Adlai Stevenson was the presidential candidate.

"My cousin and I got up early, 5:30. Our mothers packed our lunches. We took the bus downtown. We sat down on the curb.

had to helicopter [Charles McC] Mathias, then an anti-war member of the House of Representatives, to speak to the students. We had all those demonstrations. We didn’t have what I’d call a normal year until ’71. That’s when D’Alejandro decided not to run for a second term and Marudas went to Washington to work for Sarbanes.

“He brought one outstanding faculty as far as service to me as mayor and I think maybe to Sarbanes as an senator,” D’Aleandro says. “He could sense sincerity or baloney. He was almost like my alter ego. I sort of found in him somebody who thought like I thought. And he sort of read me, in the sense he knew the things I was interested in. He encouraged me in some things and cautioned me in other things. And never had a hidden agenda. You knew you were getting a real honest critique. And if we made a decision against him he went along. He sang the song.

“I don’t ever remember his trying to take credit for anything. Everything was for me as mayor and Sarbanes as a senator. I loved the guy.”

And Sarbanes tells roughly the same story. “When you draw advice and counsel from Peter,” he says, “the bottom line is always do the right thing.”

But right now Marudas plans to go to a wedding in Detroit with his wife, Irene. He’ll listen to a lot of jazz. And he’ll do a lot of dancing. He and Irene love dancing, especially salsa.

OATS, INC., 30th ANNIVERSARY CELEBRATION

Mr. BOND, Mr. President, today I rise to recognize Oats, Inc., and congratulate them on the celebration of their 30th anniversary.

For 30 years Oats, Inc. has provided specialized transportation for the elderly, disabled and rural citizens in Missouri. Rural transportation is a very important piece of our federal transit system, particularly in Missouri and I thank Oats, Inc. for the exemplary job they have done. Oats, Inc. has continually upheld their strong commitment to their mission of providing reliable transportation for transportation disadvantaged Missourians so they can live independently in their own communities.

Oats, Inc., will celebrate their 30th anniversary on September 26, 2001. I would like to extend my appreciation to the volunteers and those attending the celebration for the support they have given to Oats, Inc. I would also like to thank Oats, Inc. for the outstanding services they have provided for the communities in Missouri and it is my sincerest hope that their success extends over the next 30 years.

TRIBUTE TO BRITTANY SANDERS OF KRISTIN’S KIDS CLUB

Mrs. CARNAHAN, Mr. President, I would like to take this opportunity to honor and recognize an outstanding young lady, Brittany Sanders, of Gladstone, MO, founder of Kristin’s Kids Club. Ms. Sanders is truly extraordinary for having the commitment and vision to establish a children’s club in memory of her friend, Kristin Bean, who died of cancer in 1996. This club’s devotion to helping children is an inspiration to us all.

The Kristin’s Kids Club was founded in 1999 in order to help children in need and to keep Kristin’s spirit alive. Although the club was started by one extraordinary young girl, it now has more than 60 members. The club holds various fundraisers in order to raise money to give to charities and other organizations.

Not only do the members of this club raise money to help children, but they also help adults who are in need. They recently organized a variety show to benefit the Gladstone VFV Post 19906 and the County War Memorial Fund. They also raised more than $2,000 to assist the victims of the September 11th terrorist attack.

MESSAGES FROM THE PRESIDENT

I commend Brittany Sanders and the other members of Kristin’s Kids Club for all of their efforts on behalf of Missouri’s children. I thank them for making me proud to be a Missourian.

STATEMENTS ON INTRODUCED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS

By Mr. ALLEN (for himself, Mr. WARNER, Mr. CAMPBELL, and Mr. CRAIG):

S. 1433. A bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to provide tax relief for victims of the terrorist attacks against the United States on September 11, 2001; to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. ALLEN. Mr. President, I rise today to talk about a bill I introduced this morning. The first cosponsor of this measure is my good friend and colleague, Senator JOHN WARNER of Virginia. The bill is the Victims of Terrorism Relief Act of 2001, which would modify current tax policy to provide needed relief and compassion to the victims of the terrorist attacks that occurred on September 11, 2001.

As you well know—and all Americans know—on September 11, 2001, the world was stunned by what may prove to be the most vile, most horrifying act of hate and terror against a nation's people.

While many questions will remain unanswered in the weeks and months to come, what is immediately clear is that we concluded as we, as previously waged by the enemies of the United States, has been suddenly altered. That conduct of war is so different than what we ever imagined as a civilized Nation. This new war does not differentiate between a military and a civilian target. The enemies of liberty and democracy have turned their hatred against a trained soldier and an unarmed child. The Federal Government, and the Congress, have previously recognized, and rightfully so, the special circumstances of some of our citizens who voluntarily serve their country in potentially dangerous regions outside of the United States.

Current law provides a reduction in the death tax liability of the estates of members of the Armed Forces who are killed while serving in a combat zone or die as a result of injuries suffered while serving in a combat zone.

In addition, current law provides an exemption from the Federal income tax, on the income earned in the year of death, by Federal military and civilian employees killed in service to their country, are now inadequate in the face of new threats. These benefits do not extend such relief to civilians who may be likewise killed in enemy attacks now indiscriminately aimed at civilian targets, as well as military installations.

As we recognize that our world and the rules of war, as the terrorists use them, have changed, we, too, must change to accommodate these brave and honorable individuals put their lives on the line for our country. It is only right that we recognize their extraordinary dedication and their sacrifice.

Unfortunately, the advent of a new type of warfare means many provisions in our Tax Code, which were designed to provide tax benefits to military and civilian employees killed in service to their country, are now inadequate in the face of new threats. These benefits do not extend such relief to civilians who may be likewise killed in enemy attacks now indiscriminately aimed at civilian targets, as well as military installations.

As we recognize that our world and the rules of war, as the terrorists use them, have changed, we, too, must change to accommodate these brave and honorable individuals put their lives on the line for our country. It is only right that we recognize their extraordinary dedication and their sacrifice.

To address these inadequacies in the current Tax Code, I introduced the Victims of Terrorism Relief Act of 2001 which would extend and expand current tax law benefits to any individual killed during an enemy attack now indiscriminately aimed at civilian targets, as well as military installations.

We will honor and always remember those victims of the September 11, 2001 terrorist attacks. They are in a time of great grief. That grief will continue until the day they pass from this earth and reunite with their loved ones in heaven.

This is a new war against the United States, the enemy is making all Americans, whether they are military or civilian, young or old, parents, children or spouses, targets for their attacks.

In this effort, the Federal Government must adapt its death benefits to take into consideration this sad truth: that the traditional line between combatants and noncombatants is not always respected. I have told those folks that their husband or their father or their mother is a hero and that they were killed because they were here in America. These grieving families need our assistance as much as do the families of our brave military personnel.

What they do not need in this time of mourning is the added worry of filling out tax forms. It is going to be hard enough for them to get by emotionally, much less financially.

For the Senate to act promptly on this legislation, would be to send a positive, reassuring message to these families: you are not going to have to worry about any of these tax forms, or how to afford new taxes in a time of grief—you are not alone in this. We must let them know we appreciate them as the heroes they are. We will always remember them, their acts of martyrdom and heroism—unifying this Nation like I have never seen it unified in all of our history.

I hope my Senate colleagues, as they all start coming back after the holy days, will rise in applause, and help to ensure that our benefit laws reflect the realities of the new war against civilians, allowing them the same sort of benefits that we provide for our brave military personnel.

I ask unanimous consent that the text of my legislation introduced earlier in the day be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 1433

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.
This Act may be cited as the “Victims of Terrorist Reliefs Act of 2001.”

SEC. 2. INCOME TAXES OF VICTIMS OF TERRORIST ATTACKS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 692 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (relating to income taxes of members of the Armed Forces on death) is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

“(d) VICTIMS OF CERTAIN TERRORIST ATTACKS.—

“(1) in the first sentence by inserting “(a) In General.—” before “The additional estate tax”;

“(2) by adding at the end the following:

“(b) VICTIMS OF CERTAIN TERRORIST ATTACKS.—No tax imposed under this subtitle shall apply to the transfer of the taxable estate of any individual who dies as a result of wounds or injury incurred as a result of the terrorist attacks against the United States on September 11, 2001. The preceding section shall not apply with respect to any individual whom the Secretary determines was a perpetrator of any such terrorist attack.”;

(b) CLERICAL AMENDMENTS.—

(1) The heading of section 2201 of such Code is amended to read as follows:

“SEC. 2201. COMBAT ZONE-RELATED DEATHS OF MEMBERS OF THE ARMED FORCES AND DEATHS OF VICTIMS OF CERTAIN TERRORIST ATTACKS.”;

(2) The item relating to section 2201 in the table of sections for subchapter C of chapter 11 of such Code is amended to read as follows:

“Sec. 2201. Combat zone-related deaths of members of the Armed Forces and deaths of victims of certain terrorist attacks.”;

(c) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to estates of decedents dying on or after September 11, 2001.

By Mr. SPECTER (for himself, Mr. BOND, Mr. BUNNING, Mrs. BOXER, Mr. BURNS, Ms. CANTWELL, Mr. CHAFEE, Mrs. CLINTON, Mr. ENSIGN, Mr. HARKIN, Mr. ALLEN, Mrs. KIRK, Mr. LANDRIEU, Mr. NELSON of Florida, Mr. SCHUMER, Ms. COLLINS, Mr. CRAPO, Mr. DORGAN, Mr. MILLER, Mr. DAYTON, Mr. NELSON of Nebraska, Mr. CORZINE, Mr. MCCAIN, Mr. WELLSTONE, Mr. SANTORUM, Mrs. CARNAHAN, Mrs. FEINSTEIN, and Mr. CONRAD):

S. 1434. A bill to authorize the President to award posthumously the Congressional Gold Medal for the passengers and crew of United Airlines Flight 93 in the aftermath of the terrorist attack on the United States on September 11, 2001; to the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs.

Mr. SPECTER. Madam President, today I have sought recognition to introduce a bill to authorize the President to award posthumously the Congressional Gold Medal for the passengers and crew of United Airlines Flight 93 in the aftermath of the terrorist attack on the United States on September 11, 2001. The bill which I am introducing would authorize the posthumous awarding of a Congressional Gold Medal to each of the crew and passengers of United Airlines Flight 93 which took off from Newark, New Jersey, changed course over Ohio, and crashed in Shanksville, PA, which is located in Somerset County.

On Friday, after the Senate had passed H.R. 2888, a resolution authorizing the use of force and $40 billion for additional disaster assistance, both of which have been requested by the President, Senator SANTORUM and I flew by helicopter to Shanksville, PA, located in Somerset County, which is in southwestern Pennsylvania. There, we took a look at the crash site, participated in a prayer service, and talked to the representatives of the FBI and the National Transportation Safety Board, as well as our constituents and friends in the area.

At that time, we found absolute rubble. The plane had traveled at a speed of approximately 500 miles an hour at a very low level as it passed by the Johnstown, PA airport, which is slightly to the north of the ultimate crash site. The plane hit the ground with an enormous impact, leaving just traces, the debris of people, regrettably, and the plane.

In our conversations with the officials of the National Transportation Safety Board, Senator SANTORUM and I inquired into a rumor which had been circulating that the plane might have been shot down. However, we were assured by the officials from the National Transportation Safety Board that such an event, in fact, had not happened.

Notwithstanding the debris, the officials were able to piece together the four corners of the plane. Had the plane been shot down, there would have been some sign of it prior to the impact and prior to the crash.

While we were at the scene, Senator SANTORUM and I announced our intention to seek the Congressional Gold Medal for the passengers and crew of United Airlines Flight 93. I am introducing this legislation today and, since yesterday, a large number of cosponsors have already signed on to the bill. Therefore, it is being introduced by both of Senator HARKIN, Senator BOXER, Senator BOND, Senator BUNNING, Senator BURNS, Senator CANTWELL, Senator CLINTON, Senator ENSIGN, Senator HELMS, Senator LANDRIEU, Senator NELSON of Florida, and Senator SCHUMER.

The medal has special significance for the Senate, the House of Representatives, and for the Capitol because all indications are that the plane—and this is speculation, because we will never know for certain—but, there are indications that the plane was headed for the U.S. Capitol. That statement was made by Vice President CHENEY on Sunday, September 16 on NBC’s “Meet The Press.” It is speculation. I want to point out that it is speculation because there is no way to be sure. But the speculation is supported by the fact that the plane which hit the Pentagon had been on a direct line to the White House and it veered off at the last moment. The fourth United Airlines Flight 93, appeared to have been headed in a line that could have been to the White House, or even to Camp David, although it is unlikely to have been headed to Camp David since no one was there at the time. Most likely, Flight 93 was headed to the Capitol, the symbol of our Nation.

Wherever the United States is symbolized around the world, it is the Capitol dome that represents the nation. The terrorists intended to strike at us in every way possible; physically, psychologically, emotionally, and at the very Capitol.

So it is with a heavy heart, which is a sentiment shared by Americans all across the land and really, by most people across the globe, that I introduce this bill denominated at the “Honoring the Passengers and Crew of United Airlines Flight 93 Act.”

On September 11, 2001, United Airlines Flight 93 took off at 8:44 a.m. from Newark, New Jersey, destined for San Francisco, California;

The plane was hijacked by 4 terrorists shortly after it took off;

It is widely presumed that the terrorists who took control of United Airlines Flight 93 intended to use the aircraft as a weapon and crash it into the United States Capitol Building in Washington, D.C.;

The passengers and crew of United Airlines Flight 93 learned from cellular phone conversations with their loved ones of the fate of the 3 other aircraft that were hijacked earlier that same day and used as weapons to murder thousands of innocent people and destroy American landmarks;

The passengers and crew of United Airlines Flight 93, recognizing the potential danger that the aircraft they were aboard posed to large numbers of innocent Americans, American institutions, and the symbols of American democracy, took heroic and noble action to ensure that the aircraft they were aboard could not be used as a weapon;

The 40 people in all, 33 passengers and 7 crew of United Airlines Flight 93, in the ultimate act of selfless courage and supreme sacrifice, fought to recapture their flight from the terrorists; and

The struggle of the crew and passengers of United Airlines Flight 93 against the terrorists caused the Boeing 757 to crash down prematurely near Shanksville, Pennsylvania, at 10:10 a.m., September 11, 2001, possibly saving countless lives in the Nation’s Capital.

Congress finds that—

(1) on September 11, 2001, United Airlines Flight 93 took off at 8:44 a.m. from Newark, New Jersey, destined for San Francisco, California;

(2) the plane was hijacked by 4 terrorists shortly after it took off;

(3) it is widely presumed that the terrorists who took control of United Airlines Flight 93 intended to use the aircraft as a weapon and crash it into the United States Capitol Building in Washington, D.C.;

(4) the passengers and crew of United Airlines Flight 93 learned from cellular phone conversations with their loved ones of the fate of the 3 other aircraft that were hijacked earlier that same day and used as weapons to murder thousands of innocent people and destroy American landmarks;

(5) the passengers and crew of United Airlines Flight 93, recognizing the potential danger that the aircraft they were aboard posed to large numbers of innocent Americans, American institutions, and the symbols of American democracy, took heroic and noble action to ensure that the aircraft they were aboard could not be used as a weapon;

(6) the 40 passengers and crew of United Airlines Flight 93, in the ultimate act of selfless courage and supreme sacrifice, fought to recapture their flight from the terrorists and the opportunity to participate in this process.

I regularly visit all 67 counties in Pennsylvania and find it very refreshing to go outside the beltway to find out what people are thinking about in the more rural, remote parts of Pennsylvania. Likewise, my constituents also find it valuable to be able to receive notice that ARLEN SPECTER is coming to town, to listen to a short speech, and spend the majority of meeting time participating in a question and answer session. That way you have participatory democracy.

In July 2001, during Senate floor consideration of the Fiscal Year 2002 Legislative Branch Appropriations bill, Subcommittee Chairman DURBIN and Ranking Minority Member BENNETT accepted my amendment which provides $3 million for the mailing of town meeting notices to their constituents. My legislation authorizes $3 million each year for the next five years for Members to spend the mailing of town meeting notices in counties with populations of less than 50,000.

Town meetings are the best way for Members to inform constituents about our actions in Washington, and town meeting notices are the most effective means we have of advising constituents about these events. Unfortunately, the budgets under which we operate today are very restrictive and do not allow us to properly advise all of our constituents when we will be holding a town meeting in their area. For Pennsylvania alone, it would cost $735,000, one third of my entire office budget, to circulate town meeting notices to each household in Pennsylvania. For this reason, additional funding is necessary to allow Members to send adequate notice to constituents of their visits throughout their States. However, recognizing the fiscal constraints under which we are currently operating, I have limited the scope of my legislation to only counties with smaller populations.

Smaller, rural communities are not always effectively reached by the mass media, which are generally relied upon to deliver news of our legislative activities. For example, if you take the northern tier of Pennsylvania, or the southern tier, where residents do not necessarily get any of the major newspapers and are outside television range, unless you actually go to the county, it is very difficult for Members to communicate with their constituents about what they are doing in Washington. Town meetings are a valuable forum in which Members can share details of our work and in turn hear directly from constituents on a variety of topics. My legislation would ensure that constituents in all parts of a Member’s State are afforded

SEC. 4. STATUS AS NATIONAL MEDALS.
The medals struck under this Act are national medals for the purposes of title 51, United States Code.

SEC. 5. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.
There are authorized to be appropriated for Members of the Senate which may be used by a Member for mailings to provide notice of town meetings; to the Committee on Rules and Administration.

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, I have sought recognition today to introduce legislation which specifically authorizes funding for Senators to mail town meeting notices to their constituents. My legislation authorizes $3 million each year for the next five years for Members to spend the mailing of town meeting notices in counties with populations of less than 50,000.

Mr. SPECTER. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent to be added as a cosponsor to the Senator’s bill.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

By Mr. SPECTER:

S. 1436. A bill to authorize additional funding for Members of the Senate which may be used by a Member for mailings to provide notice of town meetings; to the Committee on Rules and Administration.

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, I have sought recognition today to introduce legislation which specifically authorizes funding for Senators to mail town meeting notices to their constituents. My legislation authorizes $3 million each year for the next five years for Members to spend the mailing of town meeting notices in counties with populations of less than 50,000.

Town meetings are the best way for Members to inform constituents about our actions in Washington, and town meeting notices are the most effective means we have of advising constituents about these events. Unfortunately, the budgets under which we operate today are very restrictive and do not allow us to properly advise all of our constituents when we will be holding a town meeting in their area. For Pennsylvania alone, it would cost $735,000, one third of my entire office budget, to circulate town meeting notices to each household in Pennsylvania. For this reason, additional funding is necessary to allow Members to send adequate notice to constituents of their visits throughout their States. However, recognizing the fiscal constraints under which we are currently operating, I have limited the scope of my legislation to only counties with smaller populations.

Smaller, rural communities are not always effectively reached by the mass media, which are generally relied upon to deliver news of our legislative activities. For example, if you take the northern tier of Pennsylvania, or the southern tier, where residents do not necessarily get any of the major newspapers and are outside television range, unless you actually go to the county, it is very difficult for Members to communicate with their constituents about what they are doing in Washington. Town meetings are a valuable forum in which Members can share details of our work and in turn hear directly from constituents on a variety of topics. My legislation would ensure that constituents in all parts of a Member’s State are afforded the opportunity to participate in this process.

I regularly visit all 67 counties in Pennsylvania and find it very refreshing to go outside the beltway to find out what people are thinking about in the more rural, remote parts of Pennsylvania. Likewise, my constituents also find it valuable to be able to receive notice that ARLEN SPECTER is coming to town, to listen to a short speech, and spend the majority of meeting time participating in a question and answer session. That way you have participatory democracy.

In July 2001, during Senate floor consideration of the Fiscal Year 2002 Legislative Branch Appropriations bill, Subcommittee Chairman DURBIN and Ranking Minority Member BENNETT accepted my amendment which provides $3 million for the mailing of town meeting notices, subject to authorizing legislation. Today I am introducing this authorizing legislation, and urge my colleagues to join me in supporting its timely passage.

By Mr. LEAHY (for himself, Mr. HATCH, and Mr. WYDEN):

S. 1437. A bill to clarify the applicable standards of professional conduct for attorneys for the Government, and for other purposes; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, I have spoken many times over the past two years of the problems caused by the so-called McDade law, 28 U.S.C. 530B, which was slipped into the omnibus appropriations bill at the end of the 106th Congress. The McDade law has delayed important criminal investigations, prevented the use of effective and traditionally-accepted investigative techniques, and served as the basis of litigation to interfere with legitimate Federal law enforcement activities. At a time when we need Federal law enforcement authorities to move quickly to catch those responsible for last year’s terrorist attacks, and to prevent further attacks on our country, we can no longer tolerate the drag on Federal investigations and prosecutions caused by this ill-considered legislation.

The bill that I am introducing today, along with Senators HATCH and WYDEN, will modify the McDade law by establishing a set of rules that clarify the professional standards applicable to government attorneys. I introduced similar legislation in the last Congress, but was unable to get it before the Judiciary Committee for consideration. The House Judiciary Committee and the FBI to monitor the problems caused by the McDade law and to refine this corrective legislation. I hope Congress will make it a top priority as it considers ways to improve Federal law enforcement and combat terrorism.

By way of background, controversy surrounding the application of State ethics rules to Federal prosecutors began over a decade ago, when a Federal appellate court held in United States v. Hammad, that a disciplinary rule prohibiting lawyers from communicating with persons they knew to be represented applied in the investigatory stages of a Federal criminal prosecution. The court also noted that suppression of evidence was an appropriate remedy for a prosecutor’s breach of an ethical rule.

The Department of Justice responded to the Hammad opinion with what became known as the Thornburgh Memorandum, issued on June 8, 1989, the Memorandum asserted that “contact with a represented individual in the course of authorized law enforcement activity does not violate” the ABA’s model “no contact” rule. The Memorandum concluded, “The Department will resist, on Supremacy Clause grounds, local attempts to curb legitimate Federal law enforcement techniques.”

The Federal courts responded negatively to the Department’s position. In general, the Department was unable to persuade the courts of the efficacy of the Attorney General’s policy statement.

Amid mounting criticism of the Thornburgh Memorandum, Attorney General Reno issued regulations in 1994 governing all Justice Department litigators in their communications with persons represented by counsel. These regulations allowed contacts with represented persons in certain circumstances, even if such contacts were at odds with State or local Federal court ethics rules. State disciplinary authorities could sanction a government attorney for willful violation of the regulations, but only upon a finding by the Attorney General that a willful violation had occurred.

The Department’s new regulations shared the fundamental defect of the Thornburgh Memorandum by authorizing Federal prosecutors by the Justice Department instead of by the courts, without valid statutory authority. Not surprisingly, the only court to consider these regulations found them to be invalid.

On May 1, 1996, Representative Joseph McDaniel introduced legislation that sought to resolve the controversy over the Justice Department’s claimed authority to write its own ethics rules. In essence, H.R. 3396 provided that Federal prosecutors were governed by the State’s ethics rules that apply to lawyers generally. A hearing on the bill was held on September 12, 1996, before the Subcommittee on Courts and Intellectual Property, but no further action was taken.

On March 5, 1998, Representative McDade introduced H.R. 3396, a modified version of H.R. 3396. Although the House Judiciary Committee did not hold hearings or act on the bill, language similar to H.R. 3396 was included in the House-passed Commerce-Justice-State appropriations bill for FY1999. Thereafter, without the benefit of any hearings or debate in the Senate, and over the objection of a bipartisan majority of the Senate Judiciary Committee, the same language was enacted as Title VIII of the final omnibus bill, with a six-month delayed effective date.

At a hearing before a Judiciary Subcommittee on March 24, 1999, a number of law enforcement officials lined up to criticize the new law. In particular, they argued that its vague directive to comply with rules in each State where the attorney engages in his or her duties leaves prosecutors unsure about what rule applies to particular conduct. The one certain result of this confusion: Attorneys would refrain from taking critically important investigative steps or would leave law enforcement officers to make their own decisions about whom and how to investigate.

The McDade law went into effect on April 19, 1999. Since then, all of law enforcement's concerns about the McDade law have come to pass.

In floor statements on May 25 and September 14, 2000, I described some of the devastating effects that the McDade law is having on Federal law enforcement efforts across the country. You will recall some of the disturbing facts I described:

In Oregon, Federal prosecutors will no longer authorize undercover operations, and the FBI was forced to shut down its Innocent Images initiative, which targets child pornography and exploitation.

In California, a grand jury investigation into an airline's safety and maintenance practices was stalled for many months because of the McDade law's interference with that State's ethics rules. After about a year of investigation, one of the airline's planes crashed, after experiencing mechanical problems on the first leg of its trip.

In another State, the FBI was stymied in a child murder investigation because of a State Bar ethics rule that went far beyond what is required by established Supreme Court and Federal appellate case law.

There are other recent examples. In one case, the FBI has had to close an investigation into allegations of fraud committed by the officials of a city with regard to FEMA disaster funds after the city's attorney invoked the McDade law to prohibit FBI agents from interviewing city employees.

In another case, counsel for an aviation company has used the McDade law to prevent the FBI from working with company employees who are willing to provide information and evidence concerning allegations that the company has been selling defective aircraft engine parts to military and civilian airlines.

Of more immediate urgency, the McDade law seriously threatens to impede the terrorism investigation into the events of September 11, 2001. In this critical investigation, the McDade law will subject Justice Department attorneys to multiple and different attorney conduct rules, either because the attorneys working on or supervising the investigation are licensed in more than one State, or because they are seeking assistance through court processes, search warrants; material witness warrants; criminal complaints; and grand jury subpoenas, in more than one Federal district court, each of which adopts its own set of attorney conduct rules. How are Justice Department attorneys meant to resolve conflicts in those rules in a manner that is reliable without unduly delaying this critical investigation?

There can no longer be any serious doubt about the need for corrective legislation. We cannot afford to wait until the McDade law impedes the investigation into last Tuesday's attacks before taking action.

Supporters of the McDade law have argued that Federal prosecutors are no worse off than their State counterparts, who have long been subject to State ethics rules. This is simply not the case. State prosecutors practice almost entirely within the bounds of the State in which they are licensed: they do not practice in Federal court. Thus, they are subject to only one set of ethics rules, the rules applied by the courts before which they appear and the rules of the State in which they are licensed are one and the same. This is not true for Federal prosecutors, who are licensed by a State but practice in Federal courts and must comport with local Federal court ethics rules. Thus, Federal prosecutors may subject to at least two sets of potentially conflicting ethics rules.

Additionally, Federal prosecutors frequently work across State lines. This is not true of State prosecutors, whose work is generally confined to a single State. Under the McDade law, Federal prosecutors must comport with the State ethics rules of each State where they engage in their duties, which may be different than the rules of either the licensing State or the local Federal court. This means that Federal prosecutors may be subject to three or more sets of ethics rules with respect to the same conduct, including two or more sets of State ethics rules that may be different and inconsistent.

In any event, even assuming that State Bar rules are causing serious problems for Federal prosecutors as well as Federal prosecutors, that is a matter for the States, not for Congress. Our responsibility is to ensure the effective enforcement of the Federal criminal laws, and that is what my legislation seeks to accomplish.

The Professional Standards for Government Attorneys Act adheres to the basic premise of the McDade law: The Department of Justice does not have the authority it has long claimed to write its own ethics rules. This legislation establishes that Federal law enforcement may not unilaterally exempt Federal trial lawyers from the standards of professional responsibility adopted by the Federal courts. Federal courts are the more appropriate body to establish such standards for lawyers generally, but because the Department lacks the requisite authority.

The first part of this bill embodies the traditional understanding that when lawyers handle cases before a Federal court, they should be subject to the Federal court's standards of professional responsibility, not to the possibly inconsistent standards of other jurisdictions. By incorporating this ordinary choice-of-law principle, the bill preserves the Federal courts' traditional authority to oversee the professional conduct of Federal trial lawyers, including Federal prosecutors. It thus avoids the uncertainties presented by the McDade law, which potentially subjects Federal prosecutors to State laws, rules of criminal procedure, and judicial decisions which differ from existing Federal law.

Another part of the bill specifically addresses the situation in Oregon, where a state court ruling has severely impaired the ability of Federal agents to engage in undercover operations and other covert activities. Such activities are legitimate and essential crimefighting tools. The Professional Standards for Government Attorneys Act ensures that such tools will be available to combat terrorism.

Finally, the bill addresses the most pressing contemporary question of government attorneys' communications with represented persons. It asks the Judicial Conference of the United States to submit to the Supreme Court a proposed uniform national rule to govern this area of professional conduct, and to study the need for additional national rules to govern other areas in which the proliferation of local rules may interfere with effective Federal law enforcement.

The Rules Enabling Act process is the ideal one for developing such rules, both because the Federal judiciary traditionally is responsible for overseeing the conduct of lawyers in Federal court proceedings, and because this process would best provide the Supreme Court an opportunity fully to consider and objectively to weigh all relevant considerations.
The problems posed to Federal law enforcement investigations and prosecutions by the McDade law are real and urgent. The Professional Standards for Government Attorneys Act provides a reasonable and measured alternative: It preserves the traditional role of the State courts in regulating the conduct of attorneys licensed to practice before them, while ensuring that Federal prosecutors and law enforcement agents will be able to use traditional Federal investigative techniques. I urge Congress to move quickly to pass this corrective legislation.

I ask unanimous consent that the bill and a summary of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the additional material ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 1497 Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.
This Act may be cited as the “Professional Standards for Government Attorneys Act of 2001”.

SEC. 2. PROFESSIONAL STANDARDS FOR GOVERNMENT ATTORNEYS.
(a) SECTION 530B of title 28, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

``SEC. 530B. PROFESSIONAL STANDARDS FOR GOVERNMENT ATTORNEYS.
``(a) DEFINITIONS.—In this section:
``(1) GOVERNMENT ATTORNEY.—The term ‘Government attorney’ means the Attorney General; the Deputy Attorney General; the Solicitor General; the Associate Attorney General; the head of, and any attorney employed in, any division, office, bureau, component, or unit of the Department of Justice; any United States Attorney; any Assistant United States Attorney; and Special Assistant to the Attorney General, Special Attorney to the Attorney General, Special United States Attorney, Special Assistant United States Attorney, and any other attorney appointed under section 515; any special assistant United States Attorney appointed under section 543 who is authorized to conduct investigations, and any enforcement attorney, special agent, investigator, or other law enforcement agent by the Department of Justice who is not authorized to represent the United States in criminal or civil law enforcement litigation or to supervise such proceedings.
``(2) STATE.—The term ‘State’ includes a Territory and the District of Columbia.
``(3) ATTORNEY.—Subject to any uniform national rule prescribed by the Supreme Court under chapter 131, the standards of professional responsibility that apply to a Government attorney with respect to the attorney’s work for the Government shall be—
``(I) for conduct in connection with a proceeding in or before a court, the standards of professional responsibility established by the rules and decisions of the court in or before which the proceeding is intended to be brought; and
``(II) for conduct otherwise, the standards of professional responsibility established by the rules and decisions of the Federal district court for the judicial district in which the attorney principally performs his or her official duties.
``(c) LICENSURE.—A Government attorney (except foreign counsel employed in special cases) shall be duly licensed and authorized to practice as an attorney under the laws of a State; and ``(d) COVERT ACTIVITIES.—Notwithstanding any provision of Federal law, including disciplinary rules, statutes, regulations, constitutional provisions, or case law, a Government attorney may, for the purpose of enforcing Federal law, provide legal advice, authorize, supervise, or participate in covert activities, and participate in such activities, even though such activities may require the use of deceitful representations.
``(e) ADMISSIBILITY OF EVIDENCE.—No violation of any disciplinary, ethical, or professional conduct rule shall be construed to permit the exclusion of otherwise admissible evidence in any Federal criminal proceeding.
``(f) RULEMAKING AUTHORITY.—The Attorney General shall make and amend rules of the Department of Justice to ensure compliance with this section.
``(g) TECHNICAL AND CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—The analysis for chapter 31 of title 28, United States Code, is amended in the item relating to section 530B, by striking “Ethical standards for attorneys for the Government” and inserting “Professional standards for Government attorneys”.
``(h) REPORTS.—
``(1) UNIFORM RULE.—In order to encourage the Supreme Court to prescribe, under chapter 131, uniform national rules for Government attorneys with respect to communications with represented parties, not later than 1 year after the date of enactment of this Act, the Judicial Conference of the United States shall submit to the Chief Justice of the United States a report, which shall include recommendations with respect to amending the Federal Rules of Practice and Procedure to provide for such a uniform national rule.
``(2) ACTUAL OR POTENTIAL CONFLICTS.—Not later than 2 years after the date of enactment of this Act, the Judicial Conference of the United States shall submit to the Chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary of the Senate and the Speaker of the House of Representatives a report, which shall include—
``(A) a review of any areas of actual or potential conflict between specific Federal duties related to the investigation and prosecution of violations of Federal law and the responsibilities of Government attorneys as specified by existing standards of professional responsibility; and ``(B) recommendations with respect to amending the Federal Rules of Practice and Procedure to provide for additional rules governing attorney conduct to address any areas of actual or potential conflict identified pursuant to the review under subparagraph (A).
``(i) CONSIDERATIONS.—In carrying out paragraphs (1) and (2), the Judicial Conference of the United States shall take into consideration—
``(A) the needs and circumstances of multijurisdictional litigation;
``(B) the special needs and interests of the United States in investigating and prosecuting violations of Federal criminal and civil law; and ``(C) practices that are approved under Federal statutory or case law that are otherwise consistent with traditional Federal law enforcement techniques.

SUMMARY OF THE “PROFESSIONAL STANDARDS FOR GOVERNMENT ATTORNEYS ACT OF 2001”

I. AMENDMENTS TO 28 U.S.C. §530B
The first part of the bill supersedes the McDade law with a new 28 U.S.C. §530B, consisting of six subsections:

Subsection (a) codifies the definition of government attorney, by reference to the Department of Justice.

Subsection (b) establishes clear choice-of-law rules for government attorneys with respect to disciplinary rules, statutes, regulations, and any other law that is applicable. Subsection (b) is modeled on Rule 5(3)(b) of the ABA’s Model Rules of Professional Conduct. These choice-of-law rules apply only with respect to government attorney conduct that is related to the attorney’s work for the government. Under these rules, an attorney who is handling a case in court would be subject to the professional standards established by the rules and decisions of that court; an attorney who is engaged in conduct reasonably intended to lead to a proceeding in court, such as conduct in connection with a grand jury or civil investigation, would be subject to the professional standards of the court in which the proceeding is intended to be brought; in other circumstances, where no court has clear supervisory authority over particular conduct, an attorney would be subject to the professional standards established by rules and decisions of the United States and Supreme Court in any court of a State that the attorney principally performs his or her official duties.

In the event that the Supreme Court promulgates one or more uniform national rules governing professional conduct of government attorneys practicing before the Federal courts, the terms of the uniform national rule would apply.

Subsection (c) clarifies the law regarding the licensing of government attorneys, an issue that is currently addressed through the appropriations process. Since 1979, appropriations bills for the Department of Justice have incorporated by reference section 3(a) of Pub. L. 96-132, which states: “None of the funds appropriated for the Department of Justice in this Act may be used to pay the compensation of any person employed after the date of enactment of this Act as an attorney (except foreign counsel employed in special cases) unless such person shall be duly licensed and authorized to practice as an attorney under the laws of a State, territory, or the District of Columbia.” Subsection (c) clarifies that this longstanding requirement, and also makes clear that government attorneys need not be licensed under the laws of any state in particular. This clarification is necessary to ensure that local rules regarding state licensure are not applied to federal prosecutors. Cf. United States v. Strub, No. 5:99 Cr. 10 (N.D. W. Va. June 14, 1999) (granting defense motion to disqualify the Assistant United States Attorney because he was not licensed to practice in West Virginia).

Subsection (c) specifically addresses the situation in Oregon, where a state court ruling has seriously impeded the ability of Federal agents to engage in undercover operations or other covert activities. See In re Gatti, 330 Or. 517 (2000). This subsection ensures that such traditional law enforcement tools will be available to federal prosecutors and agents.

Subsection (e) makes clear that violations of professional conduct rules by government attorneys shall not be construed to permit the exclusion of otherwise admissible evidence in any Federal criminal proceeding. Subsection (f), like the McDade law, authorizes the Attorney General to make and amend rules to assure compliance with section 530B.

II. JUDICIAL CONFERENCE REPORT AND RECOMMENDATIONS

The second part of the bill directs the Judicial Conference of the United States to prepare two reports regarding the regulation of government attorney conduct. Both reports would contain recommendations with respect to the advisability of uniform national rules. The first report would address the issue of contacts with represented persons, which has generated the most serious controversy regarding the professional conduct of government attorneys. See, e.g., State v. Miller, 600 N.W.2d 157 (Minn. 1999); United States v. McDonnell Douglas Corp., 132 F.3d 1252 (10th Cir. 1998); United States v. Lopez, 4 F.3d 1455 (9th Cir. 1993); United States v. Hamm, 858 F.2d 834 (2d Cir. 1988).

Rule 4.2 of the ABA’s Model Rules of Professional Conduct and analogous rules adopted by state courts and bar associations place strict limits on when a lawyer may communicate with a person he knows to be represented by another lawyer. These “no contact” rules preserve fairness in the adversarial system and the integrity of the attorney-client relationship by protecting parties, potential parties and witnesses from lawyers who would exploit the disparity in legal skill between the lay people and the lawyers and in the position of the represented person. Courts have given a wide variety of interpretations to these rules, however, creating uncertainty as to how they apply in criminal cases and to government attorneys. For example, courts have disagreed about whether these rules apply to Federal prosecutor contacts with represented persons in non-custodial pre-indictment situations, and in post-indictment situations involving the same or different matters underlying the charges.

Lawyers who practice in federal court—and federal prosecutors in particular—have a legitimate interest in conducting government attorney contacts with represented persons should be respectful of legitimate law enforcement interest as well as the legitimate interests of the represented individual. Congress clearly authorized and expectations for maintaining trustworthy relationships with represented persons, when necessary and under limited circumstances carefully circumscribed by law, to be significantly hampered in its ability to detect and prosecute Federal offenses.

The proposed legislation charges the Judicial Conference with developing a uniform national rule governing government attorney contacts with represented persons. Given the advanced stage of dialogue among the interested groups and the expertise of the Administrative Office of the Courts and the Judicial Conference, the legislation authorizes the Attorney General to promulgate a rule providing for the regulation of government attorney conduct. This report, to be completed within two years, would review any areas of conflict or potential conflict between federal law enforcement techniques and existing standards of professional responsibility, and make recommendations concerning the need for additional national rules.

Mr. WYDEN. Mr. President, I wish to bring to the Senate’s attention a serious legal matter currently impeding Federal criminal investigations in many States, especially Oregon, and legislation that I am joining the Chairman of the Committee, Senator LEAHY, in introducing today to correct this problem.

Enacted at the end of the 105th Congress as Section 801 of the Omnibus Appropriations Bill (Public Law 105-277), the Citizens Protection Act, commonly known as the “McDade law,” has hampered Federal law enforcement efforts aimed at combating child pornography, drug trafficking, and terrorism, particularly in the State of Oregon.

In the Gatti case [Gatti, 330 Or. 517 (2000)] in early 2000, the Oregon Supreme Court held that a private attorney had acted unethically by intentionally misrepresenting his identity to the employees of a medical records review company called Comprehensive Medical Review (CMR). The attorney represented a client who had filed a claim with an insurance company, believed that the insurance company was using CMR to generate fraudulent medical reports that the insurer then used to deny or limit claims. The 1440. A bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to provide tax relief for victims of the terrorist attacks against the United States on September 11, 2001; to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. CRAIG. Mr. President, today I am introducing the Victims of Terrorism Relief Act of 2001, to provide tax relief for the innocent victims of the terrorist attacks against our Nation last September. Last week’s attack was unlike any event in our Nation’s history. It was an act of war committed on U.S. soil, and more, with innocent civilians cold-bloodedly targeted as the principal targets and even strapped to the weapons. I am confident that, under the leadership of our Commander-in-Chief, and with broad and deep support, across our country and, on a bipartisan basis, here in Congress, we will win this war decisively.

A significant part of our response also must be compassion for the survivors of those victims of the first day of this war. Our tax code has long recognized that compassion demands we extend a helping hand by providing relief to our military heroes killed in combat. Today, we recognize the need to extend similar comfort and relief to the families of civilian victims whose lives have been taken.

The other body has already passed emergency legislation along these lines. The bill I am introducing is identical to that legislation. The main provisions of this bill would extend the same relief to individuals killed in last week’s terrorist attack as is currently provided to members of our armed forces, with regard to the death tax, and currently provided for Federal military and civilian employees, with regard to Federal income taxes.

I fully realize that my Senate colleagues, including knowledgeable members of the Senate Finance Committee, will propose additional tax relief provisions to meet additional needs that are still being identified. But I want to add my voice, early and urgently, to emphasize the importance of acting swiftly and decisively to provide this relief to our fellow Americans.

I ask unanimous consent that the text of this bill be printed in the RECORD, as well as a brief summary of its provisions. There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 1440

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the “Victims of Terrorism Relief Act of 2001”.

SEC. 2. INCOME TAXES OF VICTIMS OF TERRORIST ATTACKS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 692 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (relating to income taxes of members of Armed Forces on death) is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

“(d) CERTAIN INDIVIDUALS Dying A As A To DATE OF SUCH INDIVIDUAL’S INJURY OR DEATH.

(1) IN GENERAL.—In the case of any individual who dies as a result of wounds or injury incurred as a result of the terrorist attacks against the United States on September 11, 2001, any tax imposed by this title shall not apply—

“(A) with respect to the taxable year in which falls the date of such individual’s death, and

“(B) with respect to any prior taxable year in which the individual was a member of the Armed Forces and in which the wounds or injury were incurred.

“(2) EXCEPTION.—Paragraph (1) shall not apply to an individual whom the Secretary determines was a perpetrator of any such terrorist attack.”.

(b) CONFORMING AND CLERICAL AMENDMENTS.

(1) The heading of section 692 of such Code is amended to read as follows:

“SEC. 692. INCOME TAXES OF MEMBERS OF ARMED FORCES ON DEATH AND VICTIMS OF CERTAIN TERRORIST ATTACKS.”

(2) The item relating to section 692 in the table of sections for part II of subchapter J of chapter 1 of such Code is amended to read as follows:

“Sec. 692. Income taxes of members of Armed Forces on death and victims of certain terrorist attacks.”

(3) Section 692 of such Code is amended by inserting “and victims of certain terrorist attacks” after “on death”.

(4) Section 6013(r)(2)(B) of such Code is amended by inserting “and victims of certain terrorist attacks” after “on death”.

(c) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to taxable years beginning on December 1, 2001.

SEC. 3. RELIEF FROM ADDITIONAL ESTATE TAX.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 2201 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 is amended—

(1) in the first sentence by inserting “(a) In General—” before “The additional estate tax”;

(2) by adding at the end the following:

“(b) VICTIMS OF CERTAIN TERRORIST ATTACKS.—The additional estate tax shall not apply to the transfer of the taxable estate of any individual who dies as a result of wounds or injury incurred as a result of the terrorist attacks against the United States on September 11, 2001. The preceding sentence shall not apply with respect to any individual whom the Secretary determines was a perpetrator of any such terrorist attack.”.

(b) CLERICAL AMENDMENTS.—

(1) The heading of section 2201 of such Code is amended to read as follows:

“SEC. 2201. COMBAT ZONE-RELATED DEATHS OF MEMBERS OF THE ARMED FORCES AND DEATHS OF VICTIMS OF CERTAIN TERRORIST ATTACKS.”

(2) The item relating to section 2201 in the table of sections for subsection C of chapter 11 of such Code is amended to read as follows:

“Sec. 2201. Combat zone-related deaths of members of the Armed Forces and deaths of victims of certain terrorist attacks.”

(c) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to estates of decedents dying on or after September 11, 2001.

VICTIMS OF TERRORISM RELIEF ACT OF 2001—EXPLANATION OF PROVISIONS

Death Tax Relief.—Section 2201 of the Internal Revenue Code currently provides an estate tax exemption of the armed forces who are killed while serving in a combat zone or who die as a result of injuries suffered while serving in a combat zone. The provision reduces estate tax liability by more than half.

The bill would extend this estate tax treatment to individuals who were killed as a result of the terrorist attacks on September 11 or who die as a result of injuries suffered from that attack.

Income Tax Relief.—Section 692(c) of the Internal Revenue Code currently exempts Federal military and civilian employees from paying Federal income taxes in the year of their death if they die during (or as a result of injuries suffered in a military or terrorist act outside of the United States.

The bill would extend this Federal income tax relief to individuals who died as a result of the September 11 terrorist attacks.

RELIEF FOR AIRLINE PAYMENTS TO PASSENGERS.—The bill will clarify that the $25,000 per passenger payments made by United Airlines will be exempt from Federal income taxes, if such a clarification is needed. Any similar payments made by American Airlines would receive similar treatment.

EXEMPT FEMA ASSISTANCE PAYMENTS FROM TAX.—The bill will ensure that FEMA assistance payments are exempt from federal income tax.

STATEMENTS ON SUBMITTED RESOLUTIONS

Mr. STEVENS (for himself, Mr. CARPER, and Mr. LIEBERMAN) submitted the following concurrent resolution, which was ordered held at the desk.

S. CON. RES. 66

Whereas the Public Safety Officer Medal of Valor Act of 2001 (Public Law 107-12, 115 Stat. 20) allows the President to award, and present in the name of Congress, a Medal of Valor to a public safety officer cited by the Attorney General of the United States, upon the recommendation of the Medal of Valor Review Board, for extraordinary valor above and beyond the call of duty; and

Whereas the Public Safety Officer Medal of Valor Act shall be the highest national award for valor by a public safety officer;

Whereas on September 11, 2001, terrorists hijacked and destroyed 4 civilian aircraft, crashing 2 of the planes into the towers of the World Trade Center in New York City, and a third into the Pentagon in suburban Washington, DC;

Whereas thousands of innocent Americans were killed or injured as a result of these attacks, including rescue workers, police officers, and firefighters at the World Trade Center and at the Pentagon;

Whereas these attacks destroyed both towers of the World Trade Center, as well as adjacent buildings, and seriously damaged the Pentagon;

Whereas police officers, firefighters, public safety officers, and medical response crews were thrown into extraordinarily dangerous situations, responding to these horrendous events and acting heroically, without concern for their own safety, trying to help and save the lives of others as quickly as possible in the impact zones, in spite of the clear danger to their own lives; and

(2) the Medal of Valor Review Board should give strong consideration to the acts of bravery by other public safety officers in responding to these events.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, yesterday Senator INOUYE and I went to New York City to visit the disaster area. It was an experience I shall never forget. We had the cooperation of the New York National Guard, which flew us in a helicopter over the area of the World Trade Center, and then met Mayor Giuliani on the ground and visited the disaster scene.

Today, I have come to this Chamber to introduce a Senate concurrent resolution. This resolution would express the sense of the Congress that the Public Safety Officers Medal of Valor should be awarded to public safety officers killed in the line of duty in the aftermath of the terrorist attacks of September 11, 2001.

It is with a sad heart that I introduce this resolution, for once again America has seen some of our finest go into harm’s way to help those they are sworn to protect and serve. Many of these firefighters, police officers, and public safety officers gave their lives. They made the ultimate sacrifice for our country in the service of their fellow Americans.

Without regard for their own safety, firefighters, police officers, port authority officers, rescue personnel, and others rushed into the World Trade Center and the Pentagon to help in the rescue of workers in those buildings. Senator INOUYE and I visited the Pentagon the day before yesterday to visit that site.

Many of these people gave their lives in helping those they sought to rescue. The truly heroic response of our public servants to these horrible and evil attacks on America, and Americans should not go unnoted, and we all know the acts will not go unpunished.

The Public Service Medal of Valor was created to recognize public safety officers who act with extraordinary valor above and beyond the call of duty, and to recognize the protective service that goes often unnoticed in our daily lives.

In 1998, in the U.S. Capitol, Senators, Congressmen, tourists, and staff were reminded by members of the Armed Forces that officers make every day when Officers Jacob Chestnut and John Gibson gave their lives defending the peace and defending our lives here in the Nation’s Capitol.

Shortly after that tragic event, I introduced the Senate version of the Medal of Valor Act. The law allows for five medals to be awarded a year, but I believe it is important to recognize all those who lost their lives on September 11, 2001, in the horrendous attacks in New York City and the Pentagon. They deserve consideration under this law.

When President Bush signed the Public Safety Medal of Valor Act into law on May 30 of this year, 28 of our colleagues were cosponsors of the Senate version.

It is my hope that they and others in the Senate will join in recognizing the heroic acts of all our public safety officers killed in the line of duty in the aftermath of these terrorist attacks of September 11 of this year by cosponsoring this resolution and helping to get it passed.

I ask the concurrent resolution remain at the desk so those who wish to cosponsor can do so through tomorrow.

Is that request in order, Mr. President?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair is advised that doing so may delay referral of the bill.

Mr. STEVENS. It is my desire to have those who wish to be an original cosponsor have the opportunity to do so, and I ask the cooperation of the Parliamentarian to see how that can be worked out.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

SENATE CONCURRENT RESOLUTION 67—PERMITTING THE CHAIRMAN OF THE COMMITTEE ON RULES AND ADMINISTRATION OF THE SENATE TO DESIGNATE ANOTHER MEMBER OF THE COMMITTEE TO SERVE ON THE JOINT COMMITTEE ON PRINTING IN PLACE OF THE CHAIRMAN

SECTION 1. AMENDMENT TO TITLE 39.
Section 5422(d) of title 39, United States Code, is amended by—
(1) inserting "(1)" after "(d)"; and
(2) inserting at the end the following:
"(2) In the exercise of its authority under paragraph (1), the Postal Service may require any air carrier to accept as mail matter the post office mail permitted by the Postal Service regulations or that the Department of Energy, to prescribe personal strengths for such fiscal year for the Armed Forces, and for other purposes which was ordered to lie on the table.

At the end of the bill, add the following:
DIVISION D—NATIONAL ENERGY SECURITY
SEC. 4001. ENACTMENT OF ENERGY PROVISIONS.
The provisions of H.R. 4 of the 107th Congress, as passed by the House of Representatives on August 2, 2001, are enacted into law.

SA 1581. Mr. INHOFE submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill S. 1416, to authorize appropriations for fiscal year 2002 for military activities of the Department of Defense, for military construction, and for defense activities of the Department of Energy, to prescribe personal strengths for such fiscal year for the Armed Forces, and for other purposes which was ordered to lie on the table.

On page 413, between lines 13 and 14, insert the following:
SEC. 1217. AUTHORITY TO WAIVE SANCTIONS.
(a) AUTHORITY.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the President is authorized to waive any sanction imposed against any foreign country or government (including any agency or instrumentality thereof) or any foreign entity if the President determines that to do so would assist in that comprehensive strategy must be developed to combat this trend, decrease the United States dependence on imported oil supplies and strengthen our national energy security;

(6) this comprehensive energy strategy must be multiform and enhance the use of renewable energy resources (including hydroelectric, solar, wind, geothermal, and biomass), conserve energy resources (including improving energy efficiencies), and increase domestic supplies of conventional energy resources (including oil, natural gas, and coal);

(7) conservation efforts and alternative fuels alone will not enable America to meet this goal as conventional energy sources supply 96 percent of America's power at this time; and

(9) immediate actions must also be taken to mitigate the economic impacts of recent increases in the price of crude oil, natural gas, and electricity and the related impacts on American consumers, including the poor and the elderly.

Mr. INHOFE submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill S. 1416, to authorize appropriations for fiscal year 2002 for military activities of the Department of Defense, for military construction, and for defense activities of the Department of Energy, to prescribe personal strengths for such fiscal year for the Armed Forces, and for other purposes which was ordered to lie on the table.

At the end of the bill, add the following:
DIVISION D—NATIONAL ENERGY SECURITY
SEC. 4001. SHORT TITLE.
This division may be cited as the "National Energy Security Act of 2001".

SEC. 4002. FINDINGS AND PURPOSES.
(a) FINDINGS.—Congress finds that—
(1) increasing dependence on foreign sources of oil causes systemic harm to all sectors of the United States economy, threatens national security, undermines the ability of Federal, State, and local units of government to provide essential services, and undercuts the peace, security, and welfare of the American people;

(2) dependence on imports of foreign oil was 46 percent in 1992, rose to more than 55 percent by the beginning of 2000, and is estimated by the Department of Energy to rise to 65 percent by 2020 unless current policies are altered;

(3) even with increased energy efficiency, energy use in the United States is expected to increase 27 percent by 2020;

(4) the United States lacks a comprehensive national energy policy and has taken actions that limit the availability and capability of the domestic energy sources of oil and gas, coal, nuclear and hydroelectric;

(5) a comprehensive energy strategy must be developed to combat this trend, decrease the United States dependence on imported oil supplies and strengthen our national energy security; with adequate time to review the proposed action and make recommendations to avoid or minimize the adverse effect of the proposed action. The proposing agency shall consider any such recommendations made by the Secretary of Energy. The Secretary of Energy shall ensure that such recommendations are submitted to the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources of the United States Senate and to the appropriate committees of the House of Representatives on all actions brought to their attention, what mitigation or alternatives, if any, were implemented, and what the short-, mid-term, and long-term effect of the final action will likely be on domestic energy resources supply and their development, distribution, or transmission.

SEC. 4102. ANNUAL REPORT ON UNITED STATES ENERGY INDEPENDENCE

(a) REPORT.—Beginning on October 1, 2001, and annually thereafter, the Secretary of Energy, in consultation with the Secretary of Defense and the heads of other relevant Federal agencies, shall submit a report to the President and Congress which evaluates the progress the United States has made toward obtaining the goal of not more than 50 percent dependence on foreign oil sources by 2010.

(b) ALTERNATIVES.—The report shall specify alternative strategies and actions that must be implemented to meet this goal and set forth a range of options and alternatives with a benefit-cost analysis for each option or alternative together with an estimate of the contribution each option or alternative could make to reduce foreign oil imports. The Secretary shall solicit information from the public, information from the Energy Information Agency and other agencies to develop the report. The report shall indicate, in detail, options and alternatives to (1) increase the use of renewable energy resources, including conventional and non-conventional sources such as, but not limited to, increased hydroelectric generation at existing Federal facilities, (2) conserve energy resources, including improving efficiency and reducing consumption, and (3) increase domestic production and use of oil, natural gas, and coal, including any actions necessary to provide access to, and transportation of, these energy resources.

(c) REFINERY CAPACITY.—As part of the reports submitted in 2001, 2005, and 2008, the Secretary shall examine and report on the condition of the domestic refining industry and the extent of domestic storage capacity for various categories of petroleum products and make such recommendations as he believes will enhance domestic capabilities to respond to short-term shortages of various fuels due to climate or supply interruptions and ensure long-term supplies on a reliable and affordable basis.

(d) NOTIFICATION TO CONGRESS.—Whenever the Secretary determines that stocks of petroleum products have declined or are anticipated to decline to levels that would jeopardize national security or threaten supply, he shall immediately notify Congress of this decision and shall then consult with Congress on the legislation, if any, needed to carry out such recommendations for administrative or legislative action as he believes are necessary to alleviate the situation.

SEC. 4103. STRATEGIC PETROLEUM RESERVE STUDY AND REPORT.

The President shall immediately establish an Interagency Panel on the Strategic Petroleum Reserve (referred to in this section as the "Panel") to study oil markets and estimate the extent and frequency of fluctuations in the supply and price of, and demand for crude oil in the future and determine appropriate capacity of and uses for the Strategic Petroleum Reserve. The Panel may recommend changes in existing authorities to strengthen the ability of the Strategic Petroleum Reserve to meet energy requirements. The Panel shall complete its study and submit a report containing its findings and any recommendations to the President not later than 180 days from the date of enactment of this Act.

SEC. 4104. STUDY OF EXISTING RIGHTS-OF-WAY TO DETERMINE CAPABILITY TO SUPPORT NEW PIPELINES OR OTHER TRANSMISSION FACILITIES.

Not later than 1 year after the date of enactment of this Act, the head of each Federal agency that has authorized a right-of-way across Federal lands for transportation of energy supplies or transmission of electricity shall review each such right-of-way and submit a report to the Secretary of Energy and the Chairman of the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission whether the right-of-way can support new or additional capacity and what modifications or other changes, if any, would be necessary to accommodate such additional capacity. In preparing the report each agency shall consult with agencies of State or local units of government as appropriate and consider whether safety or other concerns might preclude the availability of a right-of-way for additional or new transportation or transmission facilities and shall set forth those considerations in the report.

SEC. 4105. USE OF FEDERAL FACILITIES.

(a) The Secretary of the Interior and the Secretary of the Army shall each inventory all dams, impoundments, and other facilities under their jurisdiction.

(b) Based on this inventory and other information, the Secretary of the Interior and the Secretary of the Army shall each submit a report to Congress not later than 180 days after the date of enactment of this Act. Each report shall—

(1) describe, in detail, each facility that is capable, with or without modification, of producing additional hydroelectric power. For each such facility, the report shall state to the full extent possible the technical capability to generate hydroelectric power, whether the facility is currently generating hydroelectric power, and the costs to install, upgrade, modify, or make other changes to enhance hydroelectric generating capacity of the facility.

For each facility that currently has hydroelectric generating equipment, the report shall indicate the condition of such equipment, maintenance requirements, and schedule for any improvements as well as the purposes for which power is generated; and

(2) describe any plans or studies to increase hydroelectric production from facilities under his jurisdiction and shall include any recommendations the Secretary deems advisable to increase such production, reduce costs, and improve efficiency at Federal facilities, including, but not limited to, the use of lease of power privilege or other changes, if any, that the Secretary determines would support such a state of readiness. The report shall also review the status of any such federal proposals for the part of the United States that the potential for increasing nuclear generating capacity and production as part of this Nation's energy mix. The report shall include an assessment of agency readiness to license new advanced reactor designs and discuss the need for confirmatory and anticipatory research activities that would support such a state of readiness. The report shall also review the status of the reprocessing of spent nuclear fuel and high-level radioactive waste, including whether spent fuel should be treated as waste subject to permanent burial or should be considered an energy resource that is needed to meet future energy requirements.

(b) OFFICE OF SPENT NUCLEAR FUEL RESEARCH.—There is hereby established an Office of Spent Nuclear Fuel Research. The Director of the Office of Nuclear Energy Science and Technology, within the Office of Nuclear Energy Science and Technology of the Department of Energy, shall be the office head. The Office of Spent Nuclear Fuel Research shall be responsible for carrying out an integrated research, development, and demonstration program on technologies for treatment, recycling, and disposal of high-level nuclear radioactive waste and spent nuclear fuel, subject to the general supervision of the Secretary. The Associate Director of the Office shall report to the Director of the Office of Nuclear Energy Science and Technology, and compensated at a rate determined by applicable law.

(c) ASSOCIATE DIRECTOR.—The Associate Director of the Office of Spent Nuclear Fuel Research shall be responsible for carrying out an integrated research, development, and demonstration program on technologies for treatment, recycling, and disposal of spent nuclear fuel and high-level radioactive waste.

(1) involve national laboratories, universities, the commercial nuclear industry, and other organizations to investigate technologies for the treatment, recycling, and disposal of spent nuclear fuel and high-level radioactive waste;

(2) develop a research plan to provide recommendations by 2015;

(3) identify technologies for the treatment, recycling, and disposal of spent nuclear fuel and high-level radioactive waste;

(4) conduct research and development activities on such technologies; and

(5) ensure that all activities include as key objectives minimization of proliferation concerns and risk to health of the general public or site workers, as well as development of cost-effective technologies.

(6) require research on both reactor- and accelerator-based transmutation systems;

(7) require research on advanced processing and disposal technologies;

(8) encourage that research efforts include participation of international collaborators; and

(9) be authorized to fund international collaborators when they bring unique capabilities not available in the United States and their host country is unable to provide for their support; and
(10) Sufficient research efforts with the Office are coordinated with research on advanced fuel cycles and reactors conducted within the Office of Nuclear Energy Science and Technology.

(5) REPORT.—The Associate Director of the Office of Spent Nuclear Fuel Research shall annually prepare and submit a report to Congress on the activities and expenditures of the Office, including the progress that has been made to achieve the objectives of subsection (c).

SEC. 4108. STUDY AND REPORT ON STATUS OF DOMESTIC REFINING INDUSTRY AND PRODUCT DISTRIBUTION SYSTEM.

(a) ANNUAL REPORT.—The Secretary of Energy, in consultation with the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency, the States, the National Petroleum Council, and other representatives of the petroleum refining, distribution and retailing industries, shall submit a report to Congress on the condition of the domestic petroleum refining industry and the petroleum product distribution system. The first such report shall be submitted not later than January 1, 2002, and revised annually thereafter.

(b) REPORT.—Each annual report shall include any recommendations that the Secretary believes should be implemented either through legislation or regulation to ensure that there is adequate domestic refining capacity and motor fuel supplies to meet the economic, social, and security requirements of the United States.

(c) PREPARATION.—In preparing each annual report, the Secretary shall—

(1) provide an assessment of the condition of the domestic refining industry and the Nation's motor fuel distribution system, including the ability to make future capital investments necessary to manufacture, transport, and store different petroleum products required by local, State, and Federal statute and regulations;

(2) examine the reliability and cost of feedstock supplies provided to the domestic refining industry as well as the reliability and cost of products manufactured by such industry;

(3) provide an assessment of the collective effect on reliability and cost-effectively supply fuel to the Nation's consumers and businesses;

(B) gasoline (reformulated and conventional) and diesel fuel (on-highway and off-highway) supplies; and

(C) retail motor fuel price volatility;

(4) explore opportunities to streamline permitting and siting decisions and approvals for expanding existing and/or building new domestic refining capacity;

(5) recommend actions that can be taken to reduce supply disruptions and price spikes;

(6) provide an assessment of whether uniform, regional, or national performance-based fuel specifications would reduce supply disruptions and price spikes.

(d) CONFIDENTIALITY OF DATA.—Any information requested by the Secretary to be submitted by industry for purposes of this section and as confidential shall be used only for the preparation of the annual report.

SEC. 4109. STUDY OF FEDERAL ENERGY REGULATORY COMMISSION NATURAL GAS PIPELINE CERTIFICATION PROCEDURE.

The Federal Energy Regulatory Commission shall, in consultation with other appropriate Federal agencies, immediately undertake a comprehensive review of policies, procedures, and regulations including, for example, a review of natural gas pipelines to determine how to reduce the cost and time of obtaining a certificate. The Commission shall report its findings within 180 days after the date of enactment of this Act to the Senate Committee on Energy and Natural Resources and the appropriate committees of the House of Representatives, including any recommendations for legislative changes.

SEC. 4110. ANNUAL REPORT ON AVAILABILITY OF DOMESTIC ENERGY RESOURCES TO MAINTAIN THE ELECTRICITY GRID OF THE UNITED STATES.

(a) Beginning on October 1, 2001, and annually thereafter, the Secretary of Energy, in consultation with the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission and the North American Electric Reliability Council, States, and appropriate regional organizations, shall submit a report to the President and Congress which evaluates the availability and capacity of the Nation's electricity grid and whether they are adequate to maintain the electricity grid in the United States. Specifically, the Secretary shall evaluate each region of the country to determine whether there is a need to avoid peak periods, such as summer, and options for improving grid stability.

(b) The report shall specify specific legislative or administrative actions that could be implemented to improve baseload generation and set forth a range of options and alternatives with a benefit/cost analysis for each option or group of options. The estimate of the contribution each option or alternative could make to reduce foreign oil imports. The report shall indicate, in detail, options and alternatives to (1) increase the use of nonimporting domestic energy sources, including conventional and nonconventional sources such as, but not limited to, increased nuclear energy generation, and (2) conserve energy resources, including improving efficiencies and decreasing fuel consumption.

SEC. 4111. STUDY OF FINANCING FOR NEW TECHNOLOGIES.

(a) The Secretary of Energy shall undertake an independent assessment of innovative financing arrangements that enable construction of new electricity supply technologies with high initial capital costs that might not otherwise be built in a deregulated market.

(b) The assessment shall be conducted by a firm with proven expertise in financing large capital projects or in financial services consulting, and is to be provided to Congress not later than 270 days after the date of enactment of this Act.

(c) The assessment shall include a comprehensive examination of all available techniques to safeguard private investors in high capital technologies—including advanced design power plants not limited to, nuclear—against government-imposed risks that are beyond the investors' control. Such techniques may include (but not be limited to) Federal loan guarantees, Federal price guarantees, special tax considerations, and direct Federal Government investment.

SEC. 4112. REVIEW OF REGULATIONS TO ELIMINATE BARRIERS TO EMERGING ENERGY TECHNOLOGIES.

(a) In GENERAL.—The purpose of the cooperative research program shall be to promote research and development to—

(1) ensure long-term safety, reliability, and service life for existing pipelines;

(2) expand capabilities of internal inspection devices to identify and accurately measure defects and anomalies;

(3) develop inspection techniques for pipelines that cannot accommodate the internal inspection devices available on the date of enactment;

(4) develop innovative techniques to measure the structural integrity of pipelines to prevent pipeline failures;

(5) develop improved materials and coatings for use in pipelines;

(6) improve the capability, reliability, and practicality of external leak detection devices;

(7) identify underground environments that might lead to shortened service life;

(8) enhance safety in pipeline siting and laying; and

(9) minimize the environmental impact of pipelines;

(b) REPORT TO CONGRESS.—Not later than eighteen months from date of enactment of this section, each agency shall provide a report to Congress and the President detailing all regulatory barriers to emerging energy-efficient technologies, along with actions the agency intends to take, or has taken, to remove such barriers.

(c) PERIODIC REVIEW.—Each agency shall subsequently review its regulations and standards in this manner no less frequently than every 5 years, and report their findings to Congress and the President. Such reviews shall include a detailed analysis of all agency actions taken to remove existing barriers to emerging energy technologies.

SEC. 4113. INTERAGENCY AGREEMENT ON ENVIRONMENTAL REVIEW OF INTERSTATE NATURAL GAS PIPELINE PROJECTS.

The Secretary of Energy, in coordination with the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission, shall establish an administrative interagency task force to develop an interagency agreement to expedite and facilitate the environmental review and permitting of interstate natural gas pipeline projects. The task force shall include the Bureau of Land Management and the Fish and Wildlife Service in the Department of the Interior, the United States Army Corps of Engineers, the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission, the Environmental Protection Agency, the Advisory Council on Historic Preservation and such other agencies as the Secretary and the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission deem appropriate. The interagency agreement shall require that agencies complete their review of interstate pipeline projects within a specific period of time after referral of the matter by the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission. The agreement shall be completed within 6 months after the effective date of this section.

SEC. 4114. PIPELINE INTEGRITY, SAFETY, AND RELIABILITY RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary of Transportation, in coordination with the Secretary of Energy, shall implement an accelerated cooperative program of research and development to ensure the integrity of natural gas and hazardous liquid pipeline systems. This research and development program shall include materials inspection techniques, risk assessment methodology, and information system technologies.

(b) PURPOSE.—The purpose of the cooperative research program shall be to promote research and development to—

(1) detect and mitigate defects and anomalies;

(2) develop inspection techniques for pipelines that cannot accommodate the internal inspection devices available on the date of enactment;

(3) develop innovative techniques to measure the structural integrity of pipelines to prevent pipeline failures;

(4) develop improved materials and coatings for use in pipelines;

(5) improve the capability, reliability, and practicality of external leak detection devices;

(6) identify underground environments that might lead to shortened service life;

(7) enhance safety in pipeline siting and laying; and

(8) minimize the environmental impact of pipelines;

(9) demonstrate technologies that improve pipeline safety, reliability, and integrity;

(10) provide a comprehensive review of policies, procedures, and regulations including, for example, a review of natural gas pipelines to determine how to reduce the cost and time of obtaining a certificate. The Commission shall report its findings within 180 days after the date of enactment of this Act to the Senate Committee on Energy and Natural Resources and the appropriate committees of the House of Representatives, including any recommendations for legislative changes.

(b) REPORT TO CONGRESS.—Not later than eighteen months from date of enactment of this section, each agency shall provide a report to Congress and the President detailing all regulatory barriers to emerging energy-efficient technologies, along with actions the agency intends to take, or has taken, to remove such barriers.

(c) PERIODIC REVIEW.—Each agency shall subsequently review its regulations and standards in this manner no less frequently than every 5 years, and report their findings to Congress and the President. Such reviews shall include a detailed analysis of all agency actions taken to remove existing barriers to emerging energy technologies.

SEC. 4113. INTERAGENCY AGREEMENT ON ENVIRONMENTAL REVIEW OF INTERSTATE NATURAL GAS PIPELINE PROJECTS.

The Secretary of Energy, in coordination with the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission, shall establish an administrative interagency task force to develop an interagency agreement to expedite and facilitate the environmental review and permitting of interstate natural gas pipeline projects. The task force shall include the Bureau of Land Management and the Fish and Wildlife Service in the Department of the Interior, the United States Army Corps of Engineers, the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission, the Environmental Protection Agency, the Advisory Council on Historic Preservation and such other agencies as the Secretary and the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission deem appropriate. The interagency agreement shall require that agencies complete their review of interstate pipeline projects within a specific period of time after referral of the matter by the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission. The agreement shall be completed within 6 months after the effective date of this section.

SEC. 4114. PIPELINE INTEGRITY, SAFETY, AND RELIABILITY RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary of Transportation, in coordination with the Secretary of Energy, shall implement an accelerated cooperative program of research and development to ensure the integrity of natural gas and hazardous liquid pipeline systems. This research and development program shall include materials inspection techniques, risk assessment methodology, and information system technologies.

(b) PURPOSE.—The purpose of the cooperative research program shall be to promote research and development to—

(1) detect and mitigate defects and anomalies;

(2) develop inspection techniques for pipelines that cannot accommodate the internal inspection devices available on the date of enactment;

(3) develop innovative techniques to measure the structural integrity of pipelines to prevent pipeline failures;

(4) develop improved materials and coatings for use in pipelines;

(5) improve the capability, reliability, and practicality of external leak detection devices;

(6) identify underground environments that might lead to shortened service life;

PLAN.—Not later than 120 days after the date of ent of this section, the Secretary of Transportion, in coordination with the Secretary of Energy and the Pipeline Integity Technical Advisory Committee, shall prepare and submit to Congress a 5-year program plan to guide activities under this sec-

ion. In preparing the program plan, the Secetary shall consult with the appropriate representatives of the natural gas, crude oil, and petroleum product pipeline industries to select and prioritize appropriate project proposals. The Secretary may also seek the advice of utilities, manufacturers, institutions of higher learning, Federal agencies, the pipeline research institutions, national laboratories, State pipeline safety officials, environmental organizations, pipeline safety advocates, and professional and technical societies.

(e) IMPLEMENTATION.—The Secretary of Transportation shall have primary responsibility for ensuring the 5-year plan provided for in subsection (d) is implemented as intended by this section. In carrying out the research, development, and demonstration activities under this section, the Secretary of Transportation and the Secretary of Energy may use, to the extent authorized under applicable provisions of law, contracts, cooperative agreements, cooperative research and development agreements under the Stevensonmiller Energy Conservation and Production Act of 1980 (15 U.S.C. 3701 et seq.), grants, joint ven-itures, other transactions, and any other form of agreement available to the Secretary consistent with the recommendations of the Advisory Committee.

(f) REPORTS TO CONGRESS.—The Secretary of Transportation shall report to Congress anually on the status and results to date of the implementation of the research and development program plan. The report shall include the activities of the Departments of Transportation and Energy, the national laboratories, universities, and any other research organizations, including industry research organizations.

(g) PIPELINE TECHNICAL ADVIS-

ORY COMMITTEE.—

(1) ESTABLISHMENT.—The Secretary of Transportation shall enter into appropriate arrangements with the National Academy of Sciences to establish and manage the Pipeline Integrity Technical Advisory Committee for the purpose of advising the Secretary of Transportation and the Secretary of Energy on the development and implementation of the 5-year research, development, and demonstration program plan as defined in subsection (d). The Advisory Committee shall have an ongoing role in evaluating the progress and results of the research, development, and demonstration carried out under this section.

(2) MEMBERSHIP.—The National Academy of Sciences shall appoint the members of the pipeline Integrity Technical Advisory Committee after consultation with the Secretary of Transportation and the Secretary of Energy. Members of the Advisory Committee should have the necessary qualifications to provide technical contributions to the purposes of the Advisory Committee.

(h) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—

There are authorized to be appropriated to the Secretary of Transportation and to the Secretary of Energy for carrying out this section such sums as may be necessary for each of the fiscal years 2002 through 2006.

SEC. 4115. RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT FOR NEW NATURAL GAS TECHNOLOGIES.

(a) The Secretary of Energy shall conduct a comprehensive 5-year program for research, development and demonstration to improve the capability, efficiency, safety and integrity of the natural gas transportation and distribution infrastructure and for distributed energy resources (including microturbines, fuel cells, advanced engineneries and performance goals, the Secretary shall arrangements with the National Academy of Sciences to establish and manage the Pipeline Integrity Technical Advisory Committee for the purpose of advising the Secretary of Transportation and the Secretary of Energy on the development and implementation of the 5-year research, development, and demonstration program plan as defined in subsection (d). The Advisory Committee shall have an ongoing role in evaluating the progress and results of the research, development, and demonstration carried out under this section.

(2) MEMBERSHIP.—The National Academy of Sciences shall appoint the members of the pipeline Integrity Technical Advisory Committee after consultation with the Secretary of Transportation and the Secretary of Energy. Members of the Advisory Committee should have the necessary qualifications to provide technical contributions to the purposes of the Advisory Committee.

(b) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—

There are authorized to be appropriated to the Secretary of Transportation and to the Secretary of Energy for carrying out this section such sums as may be necessary for each of the fiscal years 2002 through 2006.

SEC. 4201. PURPOSE.

The purpose of this title is to direct the Secretary of Energy (referred to in this title as the "Secretary") to carry out a program of research on and development of new coal-based technologies for coalfired generating units constructed before the date of enactment of this title.

SEC. 4202. COST AND PERFORMANCE GOALS.

(a) In GENERAL.—The Secretary shall perform an assessment that identifies costs and associated performance of technologies that would permit the continued cost-competitive use of coal for electricity generation, as chemical feedstocks, and as transportation fuel in 2007, 2015, and the years after 2020.

(b) CONSULTATION.—In establishing cost and performance goals, the Secretary shall consult with representatives of—

(1) the United States coal industry;

(2) State coal development agencies;

(3) railroads and other transportation industries;

(4) manufacturers of equipment using advanced coal technologies;

(5) organizations representing workers; and

(6) organizations formed to—

(A) further the goals of environmental protection;

(B) promote the use of coal; or

(C) promote the development and use of advanced coal technologies.

(c) TIMING.—The Secretary shall—

(1) not later than 120 days after the date of enactment of this Act, issue a set of draft cost and performance goals for public commend; and

(2) not later than 180 days after the date of enactment of this Act, and after taking into consideration any public comments received, submit to Congress the final cost and performance goals.

SEC. 4203. STUDY.

(a) In GENERAL.—Not later than 1 year after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary, in cooperation with the Secretary of the Interior and the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency, shall conduct a study to—

(1) identify technologies capable of achieving cost and performance goals, either individually or in various combinations;

(2) assess costs that would be incurred by,

and the period of time that would be required for, the development and demonstration of technologies that contribute, either individually or in various combinations, to the achievement of cost and performance goals; and

(3) develop recommendations for technology development programs, which the Department of Energy could carry out in cooperation with industry, to develop and demonstrate such technologies.

(b) COOPERATION.—In carrying out this section, the Secretary shall give appropriate consideration to the expert advice of representatives from the entities described in section 4111(b).

SEC. 4204. TECHNOLOGY RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT PROGRAM.

(a) In GENERAL.—The Secretary shall carry out a program of research on and development, demonstration, and commercial application of coal-based technologies under—

(1) this division;

(2) the Federal Nonnuclear Research and Development Act of 1974 (42 U.S.C. 5801 et seq.); and

(3) the Energy Reorganization Act of 1974

(42 U.S.C. 5801 et seq.); and

(b) CONDITIONS.—The research, development, demonstration, and commercial application of programs identified in section 4203(a) shall be designed to achieve the cost and performance goals, either individually or in various combinations.

(c) TIMING.—Not later than 18 months after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary shall submit to the President and Congress a report containing—

(1) a description of the programs that, as of the date of the report, are in effect or are to be carried out by the Department of Energy to support technologies that are designed to achieve carbon performance goals; and
(2) recommendations for additional authorities required to achieve the cost and performance goals.

SEC. 4207. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—There is authorized to be appropriated to carry out the provisions of sections 4202, 4203, and 4204, $100,000,000 for each of fiscal years 2002 through 2012, to remain available until expended.

(b) CONDITIONS OF AUTHORIZATION.—The authorization of appropriations under subsection (a)—

(1) shall be in addition to authorizations of appropriations in effect on the date of enactment of this Act; and

(2) shall not be a cap on Department of Energy fossil energy research and development and clean coal technology appropriations.

SEC. 4206. POWER PLANT IMPROVEMENT INITIATIVE.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall carry out a power plant improvement initiative program that will demonstrate commercial application of advanced coal-based technologies applicable to new or existing power plants, including co-production plants, that, either individually or in combination, advance efficiency, environmental performance and cost competitiveness well beyond that which is in operation or has been demonstrated to date.

(b) FUNDING.—Not later than 120 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary shall submit to Congress a plan to carry out subsection (a) that includes a description of—

(1) the program elements and management structure to be used;

(2) the technical milestones to be achieved with respect to each of the advanced coal-based technologies included in the plan; and

(3) the demonstration activities that will benefit new or existing coal-based electric generating units excluding practices that are commercial and at least a 50 megawatt nameplate rating including improvements to allow the units to achieve either—

(A) an overall design efficiency improvement of at least 5 percentage points as compared with the efficiency of the unit as operated on the date of enactment of this title and before any retrofit, repowering, replacement or installation;

(B) a significant improvement in the environmental performance related to the control of sulfur dioxide, nitrogen oxide or mercury in a manner that is well below the cost of technologies that are in operation or have been demonstrated to date; or

(C) a means of recycling or reusing a significant proportion of coal combustion wastes produced by coal-based generating units including practices that are commercially available at the date of enactment.

SEC. 4207. FINANCIAL ASSISTANCE.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 180 days after the date on which the Secretary submits to Congress the plan under section 4206(b), the Secretary shall solicit proposals for projects which serve or benefit new or existing facilities and, either individually or in combination, are designed to achieve the levels of performance set forth in section 4206(b)(3).

(b) PROJECT CRITERIA.—A solicitation under subsection (a) may include solicitation of a proposal to demonstrate, subject to development—

(1) the reduction of emissions of 1 or more pollutants; or

(2) the production of coal combustion byproducts that are capable of obtaining economic values significantly greater than by-products produced on the date of enactment of this title.

(c) FINANCIAL ASSISTANCE.—The Secretary shall provide financial assistance to projects that—

(1) demonstrate overall cost reductions in the use of advanced coal to generate useful forms of energy;

(2) improve the competitiveness of coal among various forms of energy to maintain a diverse energy supply in the United States necessary to meet electricity generation requirements;

(3) achieve in a cost-effective manner, 1 or more of the criteria set out in the solicitation; or

(4) demonstrate technologies that are applicable to 25 percent of the electricity generating facilities that use coal as the primary feedstock on the date of enactment of this title.

(d) FEDERAL SHARE.—The Federal share of the cost of any project funded under this section shall not exceed 50 percent.

(e) EXEMPTION FROM NEW SOURCE REVIEW PROVISIONS.—A project funded under this section shall be new and shall be subject to the review provisions of the Clean Air Act (42 U.S.C. 7401 et seq.).

SEC. 4208. FUNDING.

To carry out sections 4206 and 4207, there are authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary.

SEC. 4209. RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT FOR ADVANCED SAFE AND EFFICIENT COAL MINING TECHNOLOGIES.

(a) The Secretary of Energy shall establish a cooperative research partnership involving appropriate Federal agencies, coal producers, including associations, equipment manufacturers, universities with mining engineering departments, and other relevant entities to develop technologies identified by the Mining Industry of the Future Program and in the National Academy of Sciences report on Mining Technologies, establish a process for joint industry-government research; and expand mining research capabilities at universities.

(b) There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out the requirements of this section, $30,000,000 in fiscal year 2002, $25,000,000 in fiscal year 2003, and $15,000,000 in fiscal year 2004. At least 50 percent of any funds appropriated shall be dedicated to research carried out at universities.

SEC. 4210. RAILROAD EFFICIENCY.

(a) The Secretary shall, in conjunction with the Secretaries of Transportation and Defense, and the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency, establish a public-private research partnership involving the Federal Government, railroad carriers, locomotive manufacturers, and the Association of American Railroads. The goal of the initiative shall include developing and demonstrating new technologies that increase fuel economy, reduce emissions, improve safety, and lower costs.

(b) There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out the requirements of this section, $45,000,000 in fiscal year 2002, $30,000,000 in fiscal year 2003, and $15,000,000 in fiscal year 2004.

TITLE III—OIL AND GAS

Subtitle A—Deepwater and Frontier Royalty Relief

SEC. 4301. SHORT TITLE.

This subtitle may be cited as the ‘‘Outer Continental Shelf Lands Act’’.

SEC. 4302. AMENDMENTS TO THE OUTER CONTINENTAL SHELF LANDS ACT.

(a) Section 8(a)(1)(D) of the Outer Continental Shelf Lands Act (43 U.S.C. 1337(a)(1)(D)) is amended by striking the word ‘‘area’’; and inserting in lieu thereof, ‘‘except in the Arctic areas of Alaska, where the Secretary is authorized to set the net profit share at 16% percent. For purposes of this section, Arctic areas include the Beaufort Sea and Chukchi Sea Planning Areas of Alaska’’.

(b) Section 8(a) of the Outer Continental Shelf Lands Act (43 U.S.C. 1337(a)) is amended by adding at the end the following:

‘‘(9) After an oil and gas lease is granted pursuant to any of the bidding systems of this Act, the Secretary shall reduce any future royalty or rental obligation of the lessee on any lease issued by the Secretary, whichever is greater, pursuant to this Act in Arctic areas of Alaska; and

‘‘(b) an additional 10 percent of the qualified costs of exploratory wells drilled or geophysical work performed on any lease issued by the Secretary, whichever is greater, pursuant to this Act in Arctic areas of Alaska; and’’.

SEC. 4303. REGULATIONS.

The Secretary shall promulgate such rules and regulations as are necessary to implement the provisions of this subtitle not later than 180 days after the date of enactment of this Act.

SEC. 4304. SAVINGS CLAUSE.

Nothing in this subtitle shall be construed to affect any offshore pre-leasing, leasing, or development moratorium, including any moratorium applicable to the Eastern Planning Area of the Gulf of Mexico located off the Gulf Coast of Florida.

Subtitle B—Oil and Gas Royalties in Kind

SEC. 4310. PROGRAM ON OIL AND GAS ROYALTIES IN KIND.

(a) APPLICABILITY OF SECTION.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the provisions of this section shall apply to all royalties in kind accepted by the Secretary of the Interior under any Federal oil or gas lease or permit under section 36 of the Mineral Leasing Act (30 U.S.C. 162) or section 27 of the Outer Continental Shelf Lands Act (43 U.S.C. 1335) or any other mineral leasing law from the date of enactment of this Act through September 30, 2009.

(b) TERMS AND CONDITIONS.—All royalty accruing to the United States under any Federal oil or gas lease or permit under the Mineral Leasing Act (30 U.S.C. 161 et seq.) or the Outer Continental Shelf Lands Act (43 U.S.C. 1331 et seq.) is amended by striking the word ‘‘area’’; and inserting in lieu thereof, ‘‘except in the Arctic areas of Alaska, where the Secretary is authorized to set the net profit share at 16% percent. For purposes of this section, Arctic areas include the Beaufort Sea and Chukchi Sea Planning Areas of Alaska’’.
1331 et seq.) or any other mineral leasing law on demand of the Secretary of the Interior shall be in kind to the Federal Government, as he may determine, in payment of personnel, travel or other Federal Government expenses incurred by the Interior elect to accept the royalty in kind—

(1) delivery by, or on behalf of, the lessee of the royalty in kind and quality at the time and place the Secretary determines the royalty in kind is ready to be transported or processed for delivery; or (2) transportation and processing reimbursements paid to the lessee of the royalty in kind taken in kind from a lease, the Secretary of the Interior shall deduct amounts paid or deducted under paragraphs (b)(3) and (c), and shall adjust such amounts to miscellaneous receipts.

(2) If the Secretary of the Interior allows the lessee to deduct transportation or processing costs under paragraph (c), the Secretary of the Interior may not reduce any payments to recipients of revenues derived from any other natural oil and gas lease as a consequence of that deduction.

(g) Consultation With States.—The Secretary of the Interior will consult with a State prior to conducting a royalty in kind program within the State and may delegate management of any portion of the Federal royalty in kind program to such State except any portion of the Federal royalty in kind program under section 3302 of title 31.

The Secretary shall also consult annually with any State from which Federal royalty in kind program provides revenues to the State greater than or equal to those which would be realized under a comparable royalty in value program.

(h) Provisions for Small Refineries.—

(1) Prior to making disbursements under section 3302 of title 31, United States Code, retain and use a portion of the revenues from the sale of oil and gas royalties taken in kind that otherwise would be deposited in the United States Treasury, without regard to fiscal year limitation, or may use royalty production, to pay the cost of—

(A) transporting the oil or gas;
(B) processing the oil or gas;
(C) disposing of the oil or gas; and

(5) the Secretary may not use revenues from the sale of oil and gas royalties taken in kind to pay for personnel, travel or other administrative costs of the Federal Government.

(c) Reimbursement of Cost.—If the lessee, pursuant to an agreement with the United States or as provided in the lease, processes the gas or delivers the royalty oil or gas at a point not on or adjacent to the lease area, the Secretary of the Interior shall reimburse the lessee for the reasonable costs of transportation (not including gathering) from the lease to the point of delivery or for processing costs, or, at the discretion of the Secretary of the Interior, allow the lessee to deduct such costs from the royalty in kind taken in kind, and provide in reporting and paying royalties in value for other Federal oil and gas leases.

(d) Benefit to the United States.—The Secretary of the Interior may require any person, owning royalty oil or gas in kind only if the Secretary determines that the program is providing benefits to the United States greater than or equal to those which would be realized under a comparable royalty in value program.

Report to Congress.—For every fiscal year, beginning in 2002 through 2006, in which the United States takes oil or gas royalties within any State or from the outer Continental Shelf in kind, excluding royalties from Federal oil and gas leases on the outer Continental Shelf, the Secretary of the Interior shall provide a report to Congress that describes,

(1) the methodology or methodologies used by the Secretary to determine compliance with subsection (b), including performance standards for comparing amounts to account for costs that have been realized or royalties in kind

(2) an explanation of the evaluation that led the Secretary to take royalties in kind from a lease or group of leases, including the expected revenue effect of taking royalties in kind.

(3) Actual amounts realized from taking royalties in kind, and costs and savings associated with taking royalties in kind; and

(4) an evaluation of other relevant public benefits or detriments associated with taking royalties in kind.

SEC. 4331. Definitions.

In this subtitle:

(A) the term ‘application for a permit to drill’ means a drilling plan including design, mechanical, and engineering aspects for drilling operations on Federal land contained in an application for a permit to drill; and

(2) Federal land—

(A) in general.—The term ‘Federal land’ means all land and interests in land owned by the United States that are subject to the mineral leasing laws, including mineral resources or mineral estates reserved to the United States in the conveyance of a surface estate.

(B) exclusion.—The term ‘Federal land’ does not include—

(1) Indian land (as defined in section 3 of the Federal Oil and Gas Royalty Management Act of 1982 (30 U.S.C. 1702)); or

(ii) submerged land on the outer Continental Shelf (43 U.S.C. 1331).

(3) Oil and gas conservation authority.—The term ‘oil and gas conservation authority’ means the agency or agencies in each State responsible for regulating for conservation purposes operations to explore for and produce oil and natural gas.

(4) Project.—The term ‘project’ means an activity by a lessee, an operator, or an operating rights owner for explore for, develop, produce, or transport oil or gas resources.

(5) Secretary.—The term ‘Secretary’ means—

(A) the Secretary of the Interior, with respect to land under the administrative jurisdiction of the Department of the Interior; and

(B) the Secretary of Agriculture, with respect to land under the administrative jurisdiction of the Department of Agriculture.

(6) Surface use plan of operations.—The term ‘surface use plan of operations’ means a plan for surface use, disturbance, and reclamation.

SEC. 4332. Transfer of Authority.

Nothing in this subtitle gives a State a property right or interest in any Federal lease or land.

SEC. 4333. Transfer of authority.

Not before the date that is 180 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the State may notify the Secretary of its intent to accept authority for regulation of oil and gas leases on Federal land.

Nothing in this subtitle gives a State a property right or interest in any Federal lease or land.

Subtitle C—Use of Royalty in Kind Oil To Fill the Strategic Petroleum Reserve

SEC. 4320. Royalty in Kind Oil to Fill the Strategic Petroleum Reserve.

The Secretary of the Interior shall enter into an agreement with the Secretary of Energy to transfer title to the Federal share of crude oil production from Federal lands for use at the discretion of the Secretary of Energy in filling the Strategic Petroleum Reserve during periods of crude oil market instability. The Secretary of Energy may also use the Federal share of crude oil produced from Federal lands for other disposal within the Federal Government, as he may determine, to carry out the energy policy of the United States.

Subtitle D—Improvements to Federal Oil and Gas Lease Management

SEC. 4330. SHORT TITLE.

This subtitle may be cited as the ‘‘Federal Oil and Gas Lease Management Improvement Act of 2000’’.
SEC. 4334. ACTIVITY FOLLOWING TRANSFER OF AUTHORITY.

(a) FEDERAL AGENCIES.—Following the transfer of authority, no Federal agency shall exercise the authority formerly held by the Secretary as to oil and gas lease operations and related operations on Federal land.

(b) STATE AUTHORITY.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Following the transfer of authority, each State shall enforce its own oil and gas conservation laws and requirements pertaining to transferred oil and gas lease operations and related operations with due regard to the national interest in the expeditious and orderly development of oil and gas resources in a manner consistent with oil and gas conservation principles.

(2) APPEALS.—Following a transfer of authority under section 4333, an appeal of any decision respecting oil and gas lease operations and related operations on Federal land pending before the Secretary on the date on which authority is transferred under section 4333 shall be deemed to have been approved.

(c) APPLICATION FOR PERMIT TO DRILL.—The Secretary shall approve an application for permit to drill not later than 30 days after receiving a complete application.

(d) REMOVAL OF UNWARRANTED RESTRICTIONS .—The Secretary may not remove a restriction on surface use operations unless the removal is authorized by applicable law, is necessary to facilitate the orderly and environmentally sound development of oil and gas resources when due regard to the national interest in the expeditious and orderly development of oil and gas resources in a manner consistent with oil and gas conservation principles is exercised.

SEC. 4335. COMPENSATION FOR COSTS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Subject to the availability of appropriations, the Secretary shall compensate any State for costs incurred to carry out the authorities transferred under section 4333.

(b) PAYMENT SCHEDULE.—Payments shall be made not less frequently than every quarter.

(c) COST BREAKDOWN REPORT.—Each State seeking compensation shall report to the Secretary a breakdown for the authorities transferred.

SEC. 4336. APPLICATIONS.

(a) LIMITATION ON COST RECOVERY.—Notwithstanding sections 304 and 504 of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976 (43 U.S.C. 1734, 1764) and section 701 of title 31, United States Code, the Secretary shall not recover the Secretary's costs with respect to applications and other documents pertaining to transferred oil and gas lease operations unless the application is approved.

(b) COMPLETION OF PLANNING DOCUMENTS AND ANALYSES.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall complete any resource management planning documents and analyses not later than 90 days after receiving any offer, application, or request for which a planning document or analysis is required to be prepared.

(2) PREPARATION BY APPLICANT OR LESSEE.—If the Secretary is unable to complete the document or analysis within the time prescribed by paragraph (1), the Secretary shall notify the applicant or lessee of the opportunity to prepare the required document or analysis in accordance with the agency's review and use in decisionmaking.

(c) REMUNERATION FOR COSTS OF NEPA ANALYSES, DOCUMENTATION, AND STUDIES.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Adequate funding is required to enable the Secretary to timely prepare a project-level analysis or other document pursuant to section 4333.

(2) FAILURE TO MEET DEADLINE.—If an offer is not acted upon within the time period prescribed by paragraph (1), the offer shall be deemed to have been rejected.

(d) PENDING APPLICATIONS.—

(2) FAILURE TO MEET DEADLINE.—If an offer is not acted upon within the time period prescribed by paragraph (1), the offer shall be deemed to have been rejected.

(e) ADMINISTRATIVE APPEALS.—

(1) DEADLINE.—The Secretary shall accept or reject an offer to lease not later than 90 days after the filing of the offer.

(2) FAILURE TO MEET DEADLINE.—If an offer is not acted upon within the time period prescribed by paragraph (1), the appeal shall be deemed to have been approved.

(f) APPLICATION FOR PERMIT TO DRILL.—The Secretary shall approve an application for permit to drill not later than 30 days after receiving a complete application.

(g) FAILURE TO MEET DEADLINE.—If the application is not acted upon within the time period prescribed by paragraph (1), the appeal shall be deemed to have been approved.

(h) SURFACE USE PLAN OF OPERATIONS.—The Secretary shall approve or disapprove a surface use plan of operations not later than 30 days after receipt of a complete plan.

(i) ADMINISTRATIVE APPEALS.—

(1) DEADLINE.—From the time that a Federal oil and gas lessee or operator files a notice of administrative appeal of a decision or order of an officer or employee of the Department of the Interior or the Forest Service respecting a Federal oil and gas lease, the Secretary shall have 2 years in which to issue a final decision in the appeal.

(2) FAILURE TO MEET DEADLINE.—If no final decision has been issued within the time prescribed by paragraph (1), the appeal shall be deemed to have been granted.

SEC. 4337. TIMELY ISSUANCE OF DECISIONS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall ensure the timely issuance of decisions respecting oil and gas lease operations and related operations on Federal land.

(b) DEADLINE.—The Secretary shall provide a written, detailed explanation of the reasons the land is unavailable for leasing.

(c) REIMBURSEMENT FOR COSTS OF NEPA ANALYSES, DOCUMENTATION, AND STUDIES.—If—

(1) the lessee, operator, or operating rights owner voluntarily pays for the cost of the required analysis, documentation, or related study;

(2) the Secretary reimburses the lessee, operator, or operating rights owner for its costs through royalty credits attributable to the lease, unit agreement, or project area.

SEC. 4338. ELIMINATION OF UNWARRANTED RESTRICTIONS ON LEASED LAND.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall ensure the expeditious and orderly development of oil and gas resources when due regard to the national interest in the expeditious and orderly development of oil and gas resources in a manner consistent with oil and gas conservation principles is exercised.

(b) LAND DESIGNATED FOR MULTIPLE USE.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Land designated as available for multiple use under Bureau of Land Management resource management plans and Forest Service leasing analyses shall be available for leasing when oil and gas leasing on Federal land is not more stringent than restrictions on surface use and operations imposed under the laws (including regulations) of the State of oil and gas conservation authority of the State in which the lease is located.

(2) TRANSFER OF AUTHORITY.—No Federal agency shall exercise the oil and gas conservation authority of the State in which the lease is located.

(3) TRANSFER OF RESPONSIBILITY.—Before the Secretary exercises the authority formerly held by the Secretary as to oil and gas lease operations and related operations on Federal land, the Secretary shall notify the applicant or lessee of the opportunity to prepare the required document or analysis in accordance with the agency's review and use in decisionmaking.

(4) REMUNERATION FOR COSTS OF NEPA ANALYSES, DOCUMENTATION, AND STUDIES.—If—

(a) APPRAISAL.—Any decision to require a more stringent stipulation shall be administratively appealable and, following a final decision, shall be subject to judicial review.

(b) REJECTION OF OFFER TO LEASE.—(1) IN GENERAL.—If the Secretary rejects an offer to lease on the ground that the land is unavailable for leasing, the Secretary shall provide a written, detailed explanation of the reasons the land is unavailable for leasing.

(2) PREVIOUS RESOURCE MANAGEMENT DECISION.—If the determination of unavailability is based on a previous resource management decision, the explanation shall include a careful assessment of whether the reasons underlying the previous decision are still persuasive.

(c) SEGREGATION OF AVAILABLE LAND FROM UNAVAILABLE LAND.—The Secretary may not reject an offer to lease available for leasing on the ground that the offer includes land not available for leasing. The Secretary shall segregate available land from unavailable land, on the offeror's request following notice by the Secretary, before acting on the offer to lease.

(d) DISAPPROVAL OR REQUIRED MODIFICATION OF SURFACE USE PLAN OF OPERATIONS AND APPLICATION FOR PERMIT TO DRILL.—The Secretary shall provide a written, detailed explanation of the reasons for disapproving or requiring modifications of any surface use plan of operations or application for permit to drill.

(e) EFFECTIVENESS OF DECISION.—A decision of the Secretary respecting an oil and gas lease shall be effective upon the administrative appeal to the appropriate office within the Department of the Interior or the Department of Agriculture unless that office grants a stay in response to a petition satisfying the criteria for a stay established by section 421(b) of title 43, Code of Federal Regulations (or any successor regulation).

SEC. 4339. REPORTS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Not later than March 31, 2002, the Secretaries shall jointly submit to Congress a report explaining the most efficient, effective methods of eliminating jurisdiction, duplication of effort, and inconsistent policymaking and policy implementation as between the Bureau of Land Management and the Forest Service.

(b) RECOMMENDATIONS.—The report shall include recommendations on statutory changes needed to implement the report's conclusions.

Subtitle E—Royalty Reinvestment in America

SEC. 4351. ROYALTY INCENTIVE PROGRAM.

(a) IN GENERAL.—To encourage exploration and development expenditures on Federal lands and the outer Continental Shelf for the development of oil and gas resources when due regard to the national interest in the expeditious and orderly development of oil and gas resources in a manner consistent with oil and gas conservation principles is exercised.

(2) FAILURE TO MEET DEADLINE.—If no final decision has been issued within the time prescribed by paragraph (1), the appeal shall be deemed to have been granted.

SEC. 4338. ELIMINATION OF UNWARRANTED RESTRICTIONS ON LEASED LAND.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall ensure that transferred oil and gas lease issuances and restrictions are eliminated from the administration of oil and gas leasing on Federal land.

(b) LAND DESIGNATED FOR MULTIPLE USE.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Land designated as available for multiple use under Bureau of Land Management resource management plans and Forest Service leasing analyses shall be available for leasing.

(2) FAILURE TO MEET DEADLINE.—If no final decision has been issued within the time prescribed by paragraph (1), the appeal shall be deemed to have been granted.

SEC. 4339. REPORTS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall ensure the expeditious and orderly development of oil and gas resources when due regard to the national interest in the expeditious and orderly development of oil and gas resources in a manner consistent with oil and gas conservation principles is exercised.

(b) LAND DESIGNATED FOR MULTIPLE USE.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Land designated as available for multiple use under Bureau of Land Management resource management plans and Forest Service leasing analyses shall be available for leasing.

(2) FAILURE TO MEET DEADLINE.—If no final decision has been issued within the time prescribed by paragraph (1), the appeal shall be deemed to have been granted.

SEC. 4338. ELIMINATION OF UNWARRANTED RESTRICTIONS ON LEASED LAND.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall ensure that transferred oil and gas lease issuances and restrictions are eliminated from the administration of oil and gas leasing on Federal land.

(b) LAND DESIGNATED FOR MULTIPLE USE.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Land designated as available for multiple use under Bureau of Land Management resource management plans and Forest Service leasing analyses shall be available for leasing.

(2) FAILURE TO MEET DEADLINE.—If no final decision has been issued within the time prescribed by paragraph (1), the appeal shall be deemed to have been granted.

SEC. 4339. REPORTS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Not later than March 31, 2002, the Secretaries shall jointly submit to Congress a report explaining the most efficient, effective methods of eliminating jurisdiction, duplication of effort, and inconsistent policymaking and policy implementation as between the Bureau of Land Management and the Forest Service.

(b) RECOMMENDATIONS.—The report shall include recommendations on statutory changes needed to implement the report's conclusions.

Subtitle E—Royalty Reinvestment in America

SEC. 4351. ROYALTY INCENTIVE PROGRAM.

(a) IN GENERAL.—To encourage exploration and development expenditures on Federal lands and the outer Continental Shelf for the development of oil and gas resources when due regard to the national interest in the expeditious and orderly development of oil and gas resources in a manner consistent with oil and gas conservation principles is exercised.
shall such capital expenditures made on outer Continental Shelf leases be credited against any royalty or rental obligations.

TITLE IV—NUCLEAR

Subtitle A—Price-Anderson Amendments

SEC. 4401. SHORT TITLE.

This subtitle may be cited as the “Price-Anderson Amendments Act of 2001.”

SEC. 4402. DELEGATION OF AUTHORITY.

(a) INDEMNIFICATION OF NRC LICENSEES.—Section 170d. of the Atomic Energy Act of 1954 (42 U.S.C. 2210(c)) is amended by striking “August 1, 2002” each place it appears and inserting “August 1, 2012.”

(b) INDEMNIFICATION OF DOE CONTRACTORS.—Section 170d.(1)(A) of the Atomic Energy Act of 1954 (42 U.S.C. 2210(d)(1)(A)) is amended by striking “. . . until August 1, 2002.”

(c) INDEMNIFICATION OF NONPROFIT EDUCATIONAL INSTITUTIONS.—Section 170d of the Atomic Energy Act of 1954 (42 U.S.C. 2210(d)) is amended by striking “August 1, 2002” each place it appears and inserting “August 1, 2012.”

SEC. 4403. DOE LIABILITY LIMIT.

(a) AGGREGATE LIABILITY LIMIT.—Section 170d. of the Atomic Energy Act of 1954 (42 U.S.C. 2210(d)) is amended by striking paragraph (2) and inserting the following:

““(2) In agreements of indemnification entered into under paragraph (1), the Secretary—

“(A) may require the contractor to provide and maintain financial protection of such a type and in such amounts as the Secretary shall determine to be appropriate to cover public liability arising out of or in connection with the contractual activity; and

“(B) shall indemnify any persons indemnified above the amount of the financial protection required, in the aggregate, for all persons indemnified in the same contract, and for each nuclear incident, including such legal costs of the contractor as are approved by the Secretary.

(b) CONTRACT AMENDMENTS.—Section 170d. of the Atomic Energy Act of 1954 (42 U.S.C. 2210(d)) is further amended by striking paragraph (3) and inserting the following:

“(3) All agreements of indemnification under which the Department of Energy (or its predecessor agencies) may be required to indemnify any person shall be deemed to be necessary for each fiscal year thereafter for a Nuclear Energy Plant Efficiency Program.

SEC. 4404. INCENTIVES OUTSIDE THE UNITED STATES.

(a) AMOUNT OF INDEMNIFICATION.—Section 170d.5 of the Atomic Energy Act of 1954 (42 U.S.C. 2210(d)(5)) is amended by striking “$100,000,000” and inserting “$500,000,000.”

(b) LIABILITY LIMIT.—Section 170e.(4) of the Atomic Energy Act of 1954 (42 U.S.C. 2210(e)(4)) is amended by striking “$100,000,000” and inserting “$500,000,000.”

SEC. 4405. REPORTS.

Section 170p. of the Atomic Energy Act of 1954 (42 U.S.C. 2210(p)) is amended by striking “August 1, 1996” and inserting “August 1, 2008.”

SEC. 4406. INFLATION ADJUSTMENT.

Section 170t. of the Atomic Energy Act of 1954 (42 U.S.C. 2210(t)) is amended—

(1) by removing paragraph (3) as a paragraph (3); and

(2) by adding after paragraph (1) the following:

“(2) The Secretary shall adjust the amount of indemnification provided under an agreement of indemnification under subsection d. not less than once during each 5-year period following the enactment of the Price-Anderson Amendments Act of 2001, in accordance with the aggregate percentage change in the Consumer Price Index since—

“A. such date of enactment, in the case of the first adjustment under this subsection; or

“B. the previous adjustment under this subsection.”

SEC. 4407. CIVIL PENALTIES.

(a) REPEAL OF AUTOMATIC REMISSION.—Section 234A.(b)(2) of the Atomic Energy Act of 1954 (42 U.S.C. 2226a(b)(2)) is amended by striking the last sentence.

(b) LIMITATION FOR NONPROFIT INSTITUTIONS.—Section 234A of the Atomic Energy Act of 1954 (42 U.S.C. 2226a) is further amended by striking sentence (d) and inserting the following:

“d. Notwithstanding subsection a. no contractor, subcontractor, or supplier considered to be non-profitable or charitable under federal law shall be subject to a civil penalty under this section in excess of the amount of any performance fee paid by the Secretary to such contractor, subcontractor, or supplier under the contract under which the violation or violations occurred.”

SEC. 4408. EFFECTIVE DATE.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The amendments made by this title shall become effective on the date of enactment of this Act.

(b) INDEMNIFICATION PROVISIONS.—The amendments made by sections 4403 and 4404 shall not apply to any nuclear incident occurring before the date of enactment of this Act.

(c) CIVIL PENALTY PROVISIONS.—The amendments made by section 4407 to section 234A of the Atomic Energy Act of 1954 (42 U.S.C. 2226a) shall not apply to any violation occurring under a contract entered into before the date of enactment of this Act.

Subtitle B—Funding From the Department of Energy

SEC. 4410. NUCLEAR ENERGY RESEARCH INITIATIVE.

There are authorized to be appropriated $60,000,000 for fiscal year 2002 and such sums as may be necessary for each fiscal year thereafter for a Nuclear Energy Research Initiative to be managed by the Director of the Office of Nuclear Energy, for grants to be competitively awarded and subject to peer review for research relating to nuclear energy.

The Secretary of Energy shall submit to the Committee on Science and the Committee on Appropriations of the Senate, an annual report on the activities of the Nuclear Energy Research Advisory Council. The Secretary of Energy’s Nuclear Energy Research Advisory Council, The Secretary of Energy shall submit to the Committee on Science and the Committee on Appropriations in the House of Representatives, and to the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources and the Committee on Appropriations of the Senate, an annual report on the activities of the Nuclear Energy Plant Optimization Program.

SEC. 4412. NUCLEAR ENERGY TECHNOLOGY DEVELOPMENT PROGRAM.

There are to be appropriated $25,000,000 for each fiscal year 2002 and such sums as are necessary for each fiscal year thereafter for a Nuclear Energy Technology Development Program to be managed by the Director of the Office of Nuclear Energy, for a joint program with industry cost-shared by at least 50 percent and subject to annual review by the Secretary of Energy’s Nuclear Energy Research Advisory Council. The Secretary of Energy shall submit to the Committee on Science and the Committee on Appropriations of the House of Representatives, and to the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources and the Committee on Appropriations of the Senate, an annual report on the activities of the Nuclear Energy Plant Optimization Program.

Subtitle C—Grants for Incentive Payments for Capital Improvements to Increase Efficiency

SEC. 4420. NUCLEAR ENERGY PRODUCTION INCENTIVES.

(a) INCENTIVE PAYMENTS.—For electric energy generated and sold by an existing nuclear energy facility during the incentive period, the Secretary of Energy shall make, subject to the availability of appropriations, incentive payments to the owner or operator of such facility. The amount of such payment may be made to any such owner or operator and may only be made upon receipt by the Secretary of Energy of a guarantee of the reasonable availability of such funds to be used to effectuate such incentive payments.

(b) EXISTING REACTOR.—The term “existing reactor” means any nuclear reactor the construction of which was completed and licensed by the Nuclear Regulatory Commission before the date of enactment of this section.

SEC. 4421. NUCLEAR ENERGY PLANT OPTIMIZATION PROGRAM.

There are authorized to be appropriated $10,000,000 for fiscal year 2002 and such sums as are necessary for each fiscal year thereafter for a Nuclear Energy Plant Optimization Program to be managed by the Director of the Office of Nuclear Energy, for a joint program with industry cost-shared by at least 50 percent and subject to annual review by the Secretary of Energy’s Nuclear Energy Research Advisory Council. The Secretary of Energy shall submit to the Committee on Science and the Committee on Appropriations of the Senate, the House of Representatives, and to the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources and the Committee on Appropriations of the Senate, an annual report on the activities of the Nuclear Energy Plant Optimization Program.
paragraph (1) shall be adjusted for inflation for each fiscal year beginning after calendar year 2001 by applying the provisions of section 202(c)(2)(B) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, except that in applying such provisions, the calendar year 2001 shall be substituted for the calendar year 1979.

(e) SUNSET.—No payment may be made under this section to any nuclear energy facility that would result in the expiration of the period of 20 fiscal years beginning with fiscal year 2001, and no payment may be made under this section to any such facility after a payment has been made with respect to such facility for a period of 15 fiscal years.

(f) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated to the Secretary to carry out the purposes of this section $50,000,000 for each of the fiscal years 2001 through 2015.

SEC. 4501. NUCLEAR ENERGY EFFICIENCY IMPROVEMENT.

(a) INCENTIVE PAYMENTS.—The Secretary of Energy shall make incentive payments to the owners or operators of qualified nuclear energy facilities that have made investments in improvements at the facilities that are directly related to improving the electrical output efficiency of such facilities at least 1 percent.

(b) LIMITATIONS.—(1) Incentive payments under this section shall not exceed 10 percent of the costs of the capital improvements concerned, and not more than 1 payment may be made with respect to improvements at a single facility.

(2) No payments in excess of $1,000,000 in the aggregate may be made with respect to improvements at a single facility.

(c) AUTHORIZATION.—There is authorized to be appropriated to the Secretary to offset the costs of NRC permitting fees for a capital improvement.

(d) Payments may be made by the Department or used by a facility to offset the costs of NRC permitting fees for a capital improvement.

(e) Payments made by the Department to the Nuclear Regulatory Commission for permitting an improvement that can impact multiple facilities are not subject to the limitation in (b)(2).

(f) AUTHORIZATION.—There is authorized to be appropriated to carry out this section $50,000,000 for each of the fiscal years 2001 through 2015.

TITLE V—ARCTIC COASTAL PLAIN DOMES- TIC ENERGY SECURITY ACT OF 2001

SEC. 4502. DEFINITIONS.

When used in this title the terms—

(1) “1002 Area” means that area identified as “Coastal Plain” in the map entitled “Arctic National Wildlife Refuge”, dated August 1968, as referenced in section 1002(b) of the Alaska National Interest Lands Conservation Act of 1980 (16 U.S.C. 3142), comprising approximately 1,549,000 acres; and

(2) “Secretary” as used in this section, means the Secretary of the Interior or the Secretary’s designee.

SEC. 4503. LEASING PROGRAM FOR LANDS WITHIN THE 1002 AREA.

(a) AUTHORIZATION.—Congress hereby authorizes and directs the Secretary, through the Bureau of Land Management in consultation with the Fish and Wildlife Service and other appropriate Federal offices and agencies, to take such actions as are necessary to establish and implement a competitive oil and gas leasing program that will result in an environmentally sound program for the exploration, development, and production of the oil and gas resources of the 1002 Area and to administer the provisions of this title relating to the leasing of lands and to the effects of oil and gas exploration, development, and production, and whenever practicable, on existing operations, and in a manner to ensure the receipt of fair market value by the public for the mineral resources to be leased.

(b) REPEAL.—(1) The provisions of section (b) of this section from, a lease sale; and

(2) Inclusion in, or exclusion (as provided in subsection (c)) from, a lease sale; and

(c) AUTHORIZATION.—Lands may be leased pursuant to the provisions of this title to any person qualified to obtain a lease for development of oil and gas under the Mineral Leasing Act (30 U.S.C. 181 et seq.).

(d) PROCEDURES.—The Secretary shall, by regulation, establish procedures for conducting the leasing program authorized by this title, including procedures for conducting the first lease sale and any subsequent lease sales authorized by this title, and to grant rights-of-way and easements to carry out the purposes of this title.

SEC. 4504. RULES AND REGULATIONS.

(a) PROMULGATION.—The Secretary shall prescribe such rules and regulations as may be necessary to carry out the purposes and provisions of this title, including rules and regulations relating to the amount of oil and gas production from the fish and wildlife, their habitat, subsistence resources, and the environment of the 1002 Area. Such rules and regulations shall be promulgated not later than fourteen months after the date of enactment of this title and all operations related to the leasing, exploration, development and production of oil and gas.

(b) REVOCATION OF REGULATIONS.—The Secretary shall periodically review and, if appropriate, revise the rules and regulations issued under subsection (a) of this section to reflect any significant biological, environmental, or engineering data which come to the Secretary’s attention.

The “Final Legislative Environmental Impact Statement” (April 1987) prepared pursuant to section 1002(c)(2) of the Alaska National Interest Lands Conservation Act of 1980 (16 U.S.C. 3142) and section 102(2)(C) of the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969 (42 U.S.C. 4332(C)) is hereby found by Congress to be adequate to satisfy the legal and procedural requirements of the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969 with respect to actions authorized to be taken by the Secretary to develop and promulgate the regulations for the establishment of the leasing program authorized by this title, to conduct the first lease sale and any subsequent lease sales authorized by this title, and to grant rights-of-way and easements to carry out the purposes of this title.

SEC. 4506. Leases Sales.

(a) LEASE SALES.—Lands may be leased pursuant to the provisions of this title to any person qualified to obtain a lease for development of oil and gas under the Mineral Leasing Act (30 U.S.C. 181 et seq.).

(b) PROCEDURES.—The Secretary shall, by regulation, establish procedures for conducting the first lease sale and any subsequent lease sales for sealing nominations for any area in the 1002 Area for inclusion in, or exclusion (as provided in subsection (c)) from, a lease sale; and

(c) LEASE SALES ON 1002 AREA.—The Secretary shall, by regulation, provide for lease sales of lands on the 1002 Area. When lease sales are to be held, they shall occur after the nomination process provided for in subsection (b) of this section. For the first lease sale, the Secretary shall offer for lease those acres receiving the greatest number of nominations, but no less than 200,000 acres and no more than 300,000 acres shall be offered. If the total acreage nominated is less than 200,000 acres, the Secretary shall include in such sales any other acreage which he believes has the highest resource potential, but in no event shall more than 300,000 acres be offered in such sale. With respect to subsequent lease sales, the Secretary shall offer for lease not less than 200,000 acres, and in no event shall more than 300,000 acres be offered in such sale. With respect to subsequent lease sales, the Secretary shall offer for lease the initial offer for lease of the lands within the boundaries of the 1002 Area. If a lease sale is not held within 20 months of the date of enactment of this title, the Secretary shall offer for lease not less than 200,000 acres, and in no event shall more than 300,000 acres be offered in such sale. With respect to subsequent lease sales, the Secretary shall offer for lease not less than 200,000 acres, and in no event shall more than 300,000 acres be offered in such sale.
SEC. 4507. GRANT OF LEASES BY THE SECRETARY.

(a) In General.—The Secretary is authorized to grant to the highest responsible qualified bidder by sealed competitive cash bonus bid any lands to be leased on the 1002 Area under the terms and conditions of such lease as may be accepted by the Secretary and of such royalty as may be fixed in the lease, which shall be not less than 12 percent in amount or value of the production removed or sold from the lease.

(b) ANTITRUST REVIEW.—Following each notice of lease sale and before the acceptance of bids and the issuance of leases based on such bids, the Secretary shall allow the Attorney General, in consultation with the Trade Representative, 30 days to perform an antitrust review of the results of such lease sale on the likely effects the issuance of such leases would have on competition and the Attorney General may, upon determination that there has been a violation of the antitrust laws, require posting of bond as required by this title.

(c) IMMUNITY.—Nothing in this title shall be deemed to convey to any person, association, corporation, or other business organization an immunity from civil or criminal liability, or to create defenses to actions, under any antitrust law.

SEC. 4508. LEASE TERMS AND CONDITIONS.

An oil or gas lease issued pursuant to this title shall—

(1) be for a tract consisting of a compact area not to exceed 160 acres, or for portions of such tract as may be compact in form as practicable;

(2) be for an initial period of 10 years and shall continue for so long thereafter as oil or gas is produced in paying quantities from lands covered by the lease; and

(3) require the payment of royalty as provided for in section 4507 of this title.

(4) require that exploration activities pursuant to any lease issued or maintained under this title shall be conducted in accordance with an exploration plan or a revision of such plan approved by the Secretary;

(5) require that all development and production pursuant to a lease issued or maintained under this title shall be conducted in accordance with development and production plans approved by the Secretary;

(6) require posting of bond as required by section 4509 of this title;

(7) provide that the Secretary may close, on a seasonal basis, portions of the 1002 Area to exploratory drilling activities as necessary to protect caribou calving areas and other species of fish and wildlife;

(8) contain such provisions relating to rental and other fees as the Secretary may prescribe at the time of offering the area for lease;

(9) provide that the Secretary may direct or consent to the suspension of operations and production on a lease pursuant to the terms of this title in the interest of conservation of the resource or where there is no available system to transport the resource under the terms and conditions of such lease as may be accepted by the Secretary, any payment of rental prescribed by such lease shall be suspended during such period of suspension of operations and production and the term of the lease shall be extended by adding any such suspension period thereto;

(10) provide that whenever the owner of a nonoperating lease fails to comply with any of the provisions of this title, or of any applicable provision of Federal or State environmental law, or of the lease, or of any regulation issued under this title, such lease may be canceled by the Secretary if such default continues for more than thirty days after mailing of notice to the lease owner at the lease owner’s post office address of record;

(11) provide that whenever the owner of any producing lease fails to comply with any of the provisions of this title, or of any applicable provision of Federal or State environmental law, or of the lease, or of any regulation issued under this title, such lease may be forfeited and canceled by any appropriate proceeding brought by the Secretary in any United States district court having jurisdiction under the provisions of this title;

(12) provide that cancellation of a lease under this title shall in no way release the owner of the lease from the obligation to provide for reclamation of the lease site;

(13) allow the lessee, at the discretion of the Secretary, to make written relinquishment of all right under any lease issued pursuant to this title. The Secretary shall accept such relinquishment by the lessee of any lease issued under this title where there has not been surface disturbance on the lands covered by the lease;

(14) provide that for the purpose of conserving the natural resources of any oil or gas pool, field, or like area, or any part thereof, and in order to avoid the unnecessary duplication of facilities, to protect the environment of the 1002 Area, and to protect coastal and ocean areas, the Secretary shall require that, to the greatest extent practicable, lessees unite with each other in collectively adopting and operating under a cooperative or unit plan of development for operation of such pool, field, or like area, or any part thereof, and the Secretary is also authorized and directed to enter into such agreements as are necessary or appropriate for the protection of the United States against drainage;

(15) require that the holder of a lease or leases on lands within the 1002 Area shall be fully responsible and liable for the reclamation of those lands within and any other Federal lands adversely affected in connection with exploration, development, production or transportation activities on a lease within the 1002 Area by the holder of a lease or by any other party, whether a lessee, sublessee, or assignee of a lessee, or by any of the lessee’s subcontractors or agents;

(16) provide that the holder of a lease may not delegate or convey, by contract or otherwise, the reclamation responsibility and liability to another party without the express written approval of the Secretary;

(17) provide that the standard of reclamation for lands required to be reclaimed under this title be, as nearly as practicable, a condition capable of supporting the uses which the lessee was capable of supporting prior to any exploration, development, or production activities, or upon application by the lessee, to a higher or better use as approved by the Secretary;

(18) contain the terms and conditions relating to protection of fish and wildlife, their habitat, and the environment, as required by section 4509 of this title; and

(19) provide that the holder of a lease, its agents, and contractors use best efforts to provide a fair share, as determined by the level of obligation previously agreed to in the 1974 agreement implementing section 29 of the Federal Agreement and Grant of Right of Way for the Operation of the Trans-Alaska Pipeline, of employment and contracting for Alaska Natives and Alaska Native Corporations from throughout the State;

(20) require project agreements to the extent feasible that will ensure productivity and consistency recognizing a national interest in both labor stability and the ability of construction labor and management to meet the higher labor needs of large projects to be developed under leases issued pursuant to this title; and

(21) contain such other provisions as the Secretary shall determine are necessary to ensure compliance with the provisions of this title and the regulations issued under this title.

SEC. 4509. BONDING REQUIREMENTS TO ENSURE FINANCIAL RESPONSIBILITY OF LESSEE AND AVOID FEDERAL LIABILITY.

(a) REQUIREMENT.—The Secretary shall, by rule or regulation, establish such standards for the financial adequacy of the bond, surety, or other financial arrangement as will be established prior to the commencement of surface disturbing activities on any lease, to ensure the complete and timely reclamation of the lease tract, and the restoration of any lands or surface waters adversely affected by lease operations on the 1002 Area by the holder of a lease, or its assignee, sublessee, or transportation activities on a lease within the 1002 Area by the holder of a lease or as otherwise required by this title.

(b) AMOUNT.—The bond, surety, or financial arrangement shall—

(1) be determined by the Secretary to provide for reclamation of the lease site in accordance with an approved or revised exploration or development and production plan; plus

(2) be set by the Secretary consistent with the type of operations proposed, to provide the means for rapid and effective cleanup, and to minimize damages resulting from an oil spill, the escape of gas, refuse, domestic wastewater, hazardous or toxic substances, or fire caused by oil and gas activities, and

(c) ADJUSTMENT.—In the event that an approved exploration or development and production plan is revised, the Secretary may adjust the amount of the bond, surety, or other financial arrangement to conform to such modified plan.

(d) DURATION.—The responsibility and liability of the bond, surety, or other financial arrangement shall continue until such time as the Secretary determines that there has been complete and permanent abandonment of all production and conditions of the lease and all applicable laws.

(e) TERMINATION.—Within 60 days after determining that there has been compliance with the terms and conditions of the leases and all applicable laws, the Secretary, after consultation with affected Federal and State agencies, shall notify the lessee that the period of such deposit under the bond, surety, or other financial arrangement has been terminated.

SEC. 4510. OIL AND GAS INFORMATION.

(a) IN GENERAL.—(1) Any lessee or permittee constructing any pipeline for, or development or production of, oil or gas pursuant to this title shall provide the Secretary access to all data and information from any lease, permit, or other instrument under such title (including processed and analyzed) obtained from such activity and shall provide copies of such data and information as the Secretary may require. Such information shall be provided in accordance with regulations which the Secretary shall prescribe.

(2) If processed and analyzed information provided pursuant to paragraph (1) is provided in good faith by the lessee or permittee, such lessee or permittee shall not be responsible for any consequence of the use or reliance upon such processed and analyzed information.

SEC. 4511. EXPEDITED JUDICIAL REVIEW.

(a) Any complaint seeking judicial review of any provision in this title, or any other provision of law, shall be provided in accordance with regulations which the Secretary shall prescribe to:

(1) ensure that the confidentiality of privileged or proprietary information received by the Secretary under this section will be maintained;

(2) set forth the time periods and conditions under which such information shall be made available to the Secretary.

(b) Actions of the Secretary with respect to which review could have been obtained under this section shall not be subject to judicial review in any civil or criminal proceeding for enforcement.

SEC. 4512. RIGHTS-OF-WAY ACROSS THE 1002 AREA.

Notwithstanding title XI of the Alaska National Interest Lands Conservation Act of 1980 (16 U.S.C. 3161 et seq.), the Secretary is authorized and directed to grant, in accordance with the provisions of subsections (c) through (l) and (v) through (y) of section 28 of the Mineral Leasing Act of 1920 (30 U.S.C. 185), rights-of-way and easements across the 1002 Area for the transmission of oil and gas under such terms and conditions as may be necessary so as not to result in a significant adverse effect on the fish and wildlife, subsistence resources, their habitat, and the environment of the 1002 Area. Such terms and conditions shall include requirements that facilities be sited or modified so as to avoid and minimize disruption of roads and pipelines. The regulations issued as required by section 4504 of this title shall include provisions granting rights-of-way and easements across the 1002 Area.

SEC. 4513. ENFORCEMENT OF SAFETY AND ENVIRONMENTAL REGULATIONS TO ENSURE COMPLIANCE WITH TERMS AND CONDITIONS OF LEASE.

(a) RESPONSIBILITY OF THE SECRETARY.—The Secretary shall diligently enforce all regulations, lease terms, conditions, restrictions, prohibitions, and stipulations promulgated pursuant to this title.

(b) RESPONSIBILITY OF HOLDERS OF LEASE.—It shall be the responsibility of any holder of a lease under this title to:

(1) maintain all operations within such lease area in compliance with regulations intended to protect the property on and off fish and wildlife, their habitat, subsistence resources, and the environment of, the 1002 Area; and

(2) allow prompt access at the site of any operations subject to regulation under this title to any appropriate Federal or State inspector, and to provide such documents and records which are relevant or necessary for the purposes of subsection (a). The Secretary shall pay the reasonable cost of processing and reproducing such documents and information, as the Secretary may request, the Secretary shall pay the reasonable cost of processing and reproducing such documents and information, or the lessee or permittee, in such other form and manner of processing which is utilized by such lessee or permittee in the normal course of business, the Secretary shall pay the reasonable cost of reproducing such data and information; or

(c) ENSURE COMPLIANCE WITH ENVIRONMENTAL REGULATIONS.—The Secretary shall prescribe regulations to:

(1) ensure that the confidentiality of privileged or proprietary information received by the Secretary under this section will be maintained; and

(2) set forth the time periods and conditions under which such information shall be made available to the Secretary.

(b) Actions of the Secretary with respect to which review could have been obtained under this section shall not be subject to judicial review in any civil or criminal proceeding for enforcement.

SEC. 4514. NEW REVENUES.

(a) Authorization of Appropriations.—Section 2602(b) of the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1981 (42 U.S.C. 8621), is amended by striking "$600,000,000" and inserting "$1,000,000,000".

(b) PAYMENTS TO STATES.—Section 2602(d)(2) of the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1981 (42 U.S.C. 8621) is amended by striking "$600,000,000" and inserting "$1,000,000,000".

(c) ENERGY FUNDS.—Section 2602(e) of the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1981 (42 U.S.C. 8621) is amended by striking "$600,000,000" and inserting "$1,000,000,000".

SEC. 4601. EXTENSION OF LOW INCOME HOME ENERGY ASSISTANCE PROGRAM.

(a) Authorization of Appropriations.—Section 2602(b) of the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1981 (42 U.S.C. 8621), is amended by striking "such sums as may be necessary for fiscal years 2000, 2001, and $2,000,000,000 for each of fiscal years 2002 through 2004" and inserting "$3,000,000,000 for each of fiscal years 2000 through 2010".

(b) PAYMENTS TO STATES.—Section 2602(d)(2) of the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1981 (42 U.S.C. 8621) is amended by striking "2004" and inserting "2010".

(c) EMERGENCY FUNDS.—Section 2602(e) of the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1981 (42 U.S.C. 8621) is amended by striking "$600,000,000" and inserting "$1,000,000,000".

SEC. 4602. ENERGY EFFICIENT SCHOOLS PROGRAM.

(a) ESTABLISHMENT.—There is established in the Department of Energy the Energy Efficient Schools Program (referred to in this section as the "Program").

(b) ANNUAL REPORT TO CONGRESS.—The Secretary of Energy shall submit an annual report to the Committee on Appropriations of the United States House of Representatives detailing the use of any expenditures.

(c) GRANTS TO ASSIST SCHOOL DISTRICTS.—Grants under subsection (b)(1) shall be made to provide energy efficient schools for elementary school districts pursuant to this section and to promote participation by school districts in the program established by this section.

(d) ANNUAL REPORT TO CONGRESS.—The Secretary of Energy shall submit an annual report to the Committee on Appropriations of the United States House of Representatives detailing the use of any expenditures.

(e) ENERGY EFFICIENT SCHOOLS PROGRAM.—Grants under this section shall be made to school districts which have—

(1) demonstrated a need for such grants in order to respond appropriately to such enrollments; and

(f) ANNUAL REPORT TO CONGRESS.—The Secretary of Energy shall submit an annual report to the Committee on Appropriations of the United States House of Representatives detailing the use of any expenditures.

(g) GRANTS TO SUPPORT SCHOOL DISTRICTS.—The Secretary of Energy shall submit an annual report to the Committee on Appropriations of the United States House of Representatives detailing the use of any expenditures.

(h) ANNUAL REPORT TO CONGRESS.—The Secretary of Energy shall submit an annual report to the Committee on Appropriations of the United States House of Representatives detailing the use of any expenditures. buildings in accordance with the plan developed and approved pursuant to subsection (e)(1). (d) OTHER GRANTS.— (1) GRANTS FOR ADMINISTRATION.— Grants under subsection (b)(2) shall be used to evaluate compliance by school districts with the requirements of this section and in addition may be used for— (A) distributing information and materials to clear a path and to promote the development of energy efficient school buildings for both new and existing facilities; (B) organizing and conducting programs for school personnel, school district personnel, architects, engineers, and others to advance the concepts of energy efficient school buildings; (C) obtaining technical services and assistance in planning and designing energy efficient school buildings; and (D) collecting and monitoring data and information relating to the energy efficient school building projects. (2) GRANTS TO PROMOTE PARTICIPATION.— Grants under subsection (b)(3) may be used for promoting marketing activities, including facilitating private and public financing, promoting the use of energy service companies, working with school administrations, school boards, and communities, and coordinating public benefit programs. (e) IMPLEMENTATION.— (1) PLANS.—Grants under subsection (b) shall be provided only to school districts that, in consultation with State offices of energy and education, have developed plans that the State energy office determines to be feasible and appropriate in order to achieve the purposes for which such grants were made. (2) SUPPLEMENTING GRANT FUNDS.—The State agency referred to in paragraph (1) shall encourage qualifying school districts to supplement their grant funds with funds from other sources in the implementation of their plans. (f) ALLOCATION OF FUNDS.—Except as provided in subsection (c), funds appropriated for the purposes of this section shall be provided to State energy offices to administer the program of assistance to school districts under this section. (g) PURPOSES.—Except as provided in subsection (c), funds appropriated under this section shall be allocated as follows: (1) Seventy percent shall be used to make grants under subsection (b)(1). (2) Fifteen percent shall be used to make grants under subsection (b)(2). (3) Fifteen percent shall be used to make grants under subsection (b)(3). (h) OTHER FUNDS.—The Secretary of Energy may, through the Program established under subpart (a), retain an amount, not exceed $300,000 per year, to assist State energy offices in coordinating and implementing such Program. Such funds may be used to develop reference materials to further define the principles and criteria to achieve energy efficient school buildings. (i) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—For this section, there are authorized to be appropriated $200,000,000 for each of fiscal years 2002 through 2005, and such sums as may be necessary for each of fiscal years 2006 through 2011. (j) DEFINITIONS.— (1) ELEMENTARY AND SECONDARY SCHOOL.—The term ‘elementary school’ and ‘secondary school’ shall have the same meaning given such terms in paragraphs (14) and (25) of section 14101 of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 (20 U.S.C. 8001(14),(25)). (2) ENERGY EFFICIENT SCHOOL BUILDING.— The term ‘energy efficient school building’ refers to the design, construction, operation, and maintenance of buildings in accordance with the plan developed and approved pursuant to subsection (e)(1) of this section that significantly reduces the cost of energy, from such a base cost established through a methodology set forth in the contract, that would otherwise be utilized in 1 or more federal or federally owned buildings or other federal or federally owned facilities by reason of the construction and operation of 1 or more new buildings or facilities. (3) RENEWABLE ENERGY.—The term ‘renewable energy’ means energy produced by solar, wind, geothermal, hydroelectric power, and biomass power.

SEC. 4603. AMENDMENTS TO WEATHERIZATION ASSISTANCE PROGRAM. (a) ELIGIBILITY.—Section 412(7) of the Energy Conservation and Production Act (42 U.S.C. 6822(7)) is amended— (1) in paragraph (7)(A), by striking ‘‘125’’ and inserting ‘‘150’’; and (2) in paragraph (7)(C), by striking ‘‘125’’ and inserting ‘‘150’’.

(b) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—Section 422(a) of the Energy Conservation and Production Act (42 U.S.C. 6872(a)) is amended— (1) by striking ‘‘$200,000,000’’ and inserting ‘‘$250,000,000’’; and (2) by striking ‘‘July 1, 1991’’ and all that follows through ‘‘1994.’’ and inserting ‘‘2002, $250,000,000 for fiscal year 2003, $400,000,000 for fiscal year 2004, $500,000,000 for fiscal year 2005, and such sums as are necessary for each fiscal year thereafter.’’.

SEC. 4604. AMENDMENTS TO STATE ENERGY PROGRAM. (a) STATE ENERGY CONSERVATION PLANS.—Section 363 of the Energy Policy and Conservation Act (42 U.S.C. 6322) is amended by— (1) redesignating subsection (f) as subsection (g); and (2) inserting after subsection (e) the following: ‘‘(f) The Secretary shall, at least once every 3 years, invite the Governor of each State to review and, if necessary, revise the energy conservation plan of such State submitted under this section. The reviews should consider the energy conservation plans of other States within the region, and identify opportunities and actions currently out in pursuit of common energy conservation goals.’’.

(b) STATE ENERGY EFFICIENCY GOALS.—Section 364 of the Energy Policy and Conservation Act (42 U.S.C. 6324) is amended by— (1) by striking ‘‘October 1, 1991’’ and inserting ‘‘January 1, 2001’’; (2) by striking ‘‘10’’ and inserting ‘‘25’’; and (3) by striking ‘‘2000’’ and inserting ‘‘2010’’.

(c) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—Section 365(f)(1) of the Energy Policy and Conservation Act (42 U.S.C. 6325(f)(1)) is amended by striking ‘‘and all that follows through ‘‘1993.’’ and inserting ‘‘$45,000,000 for fiscal year 1993, $75,000,000 for fiscal year 2002, $100,000,000 for fiscal years 2003 and 2004, $250,000,000 for fiscal year 2005, and such sums as are necessary for each fiscal year thereafter.’’.

SEC. 4605. ENHANCEMENT AND EXPANSION OF AUTHORITY TO ENTER FEDERAL ENERGY SAVINGS PERFORMANCE CONTRACTS. (a) ENERGY SAVINGS THROUGH CONSTRUCTION OF REPLACEMENT FACILITIES.—Section 804 of the National Energy Conservation Policy Act (42 U.S.C. 6327c) is amended— (1) in paragraph (2)— (A) by redesigning subparagraphs (A) and (B) as clauses (i) and (ii), respectively;

SEC. 4606. FEDERAL ENERGY EFFICIENCY REQUIREMENTS. (a) IN GENERAL.—Through cost-effective measures, each agency shall reduce energy. consumption per gross square foot of its facilities by 30 percent by 2010 and 50 percent by 2020 relative to 2000.

(b) IMPLEMENTATION PLAN.—Not later than 1 year after the date of enactment of this section, each agency shall develop and submit to Congress and the President an implementation plan for fulfilling the requirements of this section.

(c) ANNUAL REPORT.—(1) IN GENERAL.—Each agency shall measure and report annually to Congress and the President its progress in meeting the requirements of this section.

(2) GUIDELINES.—The Secretary of Energy, in consultation with the Administrator of the Energy Information Administration, shall develop and issue guidelines for agencies’ preparation of their annual report, including guidance on how to measure energy consumption in Federal facilities.

(d) EXEMPTION OF CERTAIN FACILITIES.—A facility may be deemed exempt when the Secretary determines that compliance with the Energy Policy Act of 1992 is not practical for that particular facility. Not later than 1 year after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary shall, in consultation with the Administrator of the Energy Information Administration, set guidelines for agencies to use in excluding certain facilities to meet the requirements of this section.

(e) APPLICABILITY.—The Department of Defense is subject to this order only to the extent that it does not impair or adversely affect military operations and training (including tactical aircraft, ships, weapons systems, combat training, and border security).

(f) DEFINITIONS.—For the purposes of this section—

(1) “agency” means an executive agency as defined in 5 U.S.C. 105. Military departments, as defined in 5 U.S.C. 102, are covered under the auspices of the Department of Defense.

(2) “facility” means any individual building or collection of buildings, grounds, or structures, as well as any fixture or part thereof, including the associated energy or water-consuming support systems, which is constructed, renovated, or purchased in whole or in part with Federal Government funds. It includes leased facilities where the Federal Government has a purchase option or facility planned for purchase. In the presence of any other public-sector facilities, the term “facility” also includes any building 100 percent leased for use by the Federal Government where the Federal Government makes decisions of its own, or indirectly for the utility costs associated with its leased space, and Government-owned contractor-operated facilities.

SEC. 4607. ENERGY EFFICIENCY SCIENCE INITIATIVE.

There are authorized to be appropriated $25,000,000 for fiscal year 2001 and such sums as are necessary for each fiscal year thereafter, to carry out section 303(b)(3) of title III of this Act, for the Energy Efficiency Science Initiative, including a description of the process used to award the funds and an explanation of how the research relates to energy efficiency.

TITLE VII—ALTERNATIVE FUELS AND USE OF AGREEABLE ENERGY

Subtitle A—Alternative Fuels

SEC. 4701. EXCEPTION TO HOV PASSENGER REQUIREMENTS FOR ALTERNATIVE FUEL VEHICLES.

Section 102a(a)(1) and (a)(2) of title 23, United States Code, is amended by inserting “unless, at the discretion of the State transportation department, the alternative fueled vehicle or is fueled by alternative fuel vehicles defined in section 301 of the Energy Policy Act of 1992 (42 U.S.C. 13211)” after “required”.

SEC. 4702. ALTERNATIVE FUEL VEHICLE CREDITS FOR INSTALLATION OF QUALIFYING INFRASTRUCTURE.

Section 308 of the Energy Policy Act of 1992 (42 U.S.C. 13258) is amended by adding at the end the following:

“(e) CREDIT FOR ACQUISITION OR INSTALLATION OF QUALIFYING INFRASTRUCTURE.—The Secretary shall, in consultation with the Administrator of the Energy Information Administration, set guidelines for agencies to use in determining the annual report required by section 308 of this Act for the acquisition or installation of alternative fuel infrastructure, including the supply and delivery systems, necessary operations and maintenance of alternative fueled vehicle. Such necessary infrastructure shall include—

(1) equipment required to refuel or recharge the alternative fueled vehicle;

(2) facilities or equipment required to maintain, repair or operate the alternative fueled vehicle;

(3) training programs, educational materials or other activities necessary to provide information regarding the operation, maintenance or benefits associated with the alternative fueled vehicle;

(4) such other activity as the Secretary deems an appropriate expenditure in support of the operation, maintenance or further widespread adoption or utilization of the alternative fueled vehicle.

(2) QUALIFYING INFRASTRUCTURE CREDIT.—The term “qualifying infrastructure credit” shall mean—

(1) that equipment or activity defined in subsection (e) above;

(2) be equivalent in cost to the acquisition of an alternative fueled vehicle from which the expenditure on the infrastructure is made.

(3) LIMITATION ON NUMBER OF INFRASTRUCTURE CREDITS ISSUED.—Each fleet or covered person that is required to acquire an alternative fueled vehicle under this title, or each Federal fleet as defined by section 303(b)(3) of title III of this Act, shall be limited in the number of infrastructure credits that may be acquired and used to meet the alternative fueled vehicle requirements of this Act to no more than 25 percent of the alternative fueled vehicles required per annum.

(c) IMPLEMENTATION PLAN.—Not later than 1 year after the date of enactment of this section, each agency shall develop an implementation plan that meets its unique fleet configuration and fleet requirements.

(d) ANNUAL REPORT.—(1) IN GENERAL.—Each agency shall measure and report annually to Congress and the President its progress in meeting the requirements of this section.

(2) GUIDELINES.—The Secretary of Energy, through the Federal Energy Management Program and in consultation with the Administrator of the Energy Information Administration, shall develop and issue guidelines for agencies’ preparation of their annual report, including guidance on how to measure fuel consumption and annual reporting of data to demonstrate compliance with the requirements of this section.

(e) APPLICABILITY.—This order applies to each Federal agency operating 20 or more motor vehicles within the United States.

(f) DEFINITIONS.—In this section:

(1) AGENCY.—The term “agency” means an executive agency as defined in 5 U.S.C. 105. Military departments, as defined in 5 U.S.C. 102, are covered under the auspices of the Department of Defense.

(g) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—Section 400AA of the Energy Policy and Conservation Act (42 U.S.C. 6374) is amended as follows:

(1) in subsection (a)(2), in the period at the end and inserting the following: “solely on alternative fuel”; and

(2) in subsection (g)(4)(B), after the words “solely on alternative fuel”, insert the words “including a 3-wheel enclosed electric vehicle having a VIN number”. "
(a) ESTABLISHMENT.—Within 1 year of date of enactment of this section, the Secretary of Energy shall establish a program for making grants to local governments for covering the incremental costs of qualified alternative fuel motor vehicles.

(b) CRITERIA.—In deciding to whom grants shall be made under this subsection, the Secretary of Energy shall consider the goal of assisting the greatest number of applicants, provided that no grant award shall exceed $1,000,000.

(c) PRIORITIES.—Priority shall be given under this section to those local government fleets where the use of alternative fuels would have a significant beneficial effect on energy security and the environment.

(d) QUALIFIED ALTERNATIVE FUEL MOTOR VEHICLE DEFINED.—For purposes of this section, the term "qualified motor vehicle" means any motor vehicle which is capable of operating only on an alternative fuel.

(e) INCREMENTAL COST.—For purposes of this section, the incremental cost of any qualified alternative fuel motor vehicle is equal to the amount of the excess of the manufacturer's suggested retail price for such vehicle or such equivalent price for a gasoline or diesel motor vehicle of the same model.

(f) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—For the purposes of this section, there are appropriated $100,000,000 annually for each of the fiscal years 2002 through 2006.

Subtitle B—Renewable Energy

SEC. 4710. RESIDENTIAL RENEWABLE ENERGY GRANT PROGRAM

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary of Energy shall develop and implement a grant program to offset a portion of the total cost of certain eligible residential renewable energy systems.

(b) ELIGIBILITY.—Grants may be awarded for—

(1) the new installation of an eligible residential renewable energy system for an existing dwelling unit;

(2) the purchase of an existing dwelling unit which contains an eligible residential renewable energy system that was installed prior to the date of enactment of this section;

(3) the addition or augmentation of an existing eligible residential renewable energy system installed on a dwelling unit prior to the date of enactment of this section, provided that any such addition or augmentation results in additional electricity, heat, or other useful energy; or

(4) the construction of a new home or rental property which includes an eligible residential renewable energy system.

(c) TOTAL COST.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—For purposes of this section, "total cost" means expenditure of funds for—

(A) any equipment whose primary purpose is to provide for the collection, conversion, transfer, distribution, storage or control of electricity or heat generated from renewable energy;

(B) installation charges; and

(C) labor costs properly allocable to the on-site project installation (including, if applicable, original installation of the system) and piping or wiring to interconnect such system to the dwelling unit.

(2) LIMITED SYSTEMS.—In the case of a system that is leased, "total cost" means the principal recovery portion of all lease payments scheduled to be made during the full term of the lease, excluding interest charges and maintenance expenses.

(3) EXISTING SYSTEMS.—In the case of addition to or augmentation of an existing system, "total cost" shall include only those expenditures related to the incremental cost of the addition or augmentation, and not the full cost of the system.

(d) ELIGIBLE SYSTEMS.—Grants provided under this section shall not exceed $3,000 per eligible residential renewable energy system, and shall be limited as follows:

(A) 50 percent of the total cost of the energy system; or

(B) $3.00 per watt of system electricity output or equivalent.

(e) LIMITATIONS.—No grant shall be allowed under this section for an eligible residential renewable energy system unless—

(1) such expenditure is made for property other than a structure or a portion of a structure which is treated as property described in paragraph (a) of 26 U.S.C. 216(b) (other than subparagraph (E) thereof) for the smaller of—

(B) $2.50 per watt of system electricity output; or

(C) $1.50 per watt of system electricity output.

(f) RENEWABLE ENERGY.—

(1) DEFINITIONS.—In this subsection:

(A) FORM OF RENEWABLE ENERGY.—The term "form of renewable energy" means energy produced through the use of—

(i) a solar photovoltaic system;

(ii) a solar water heating system;

(iii) wind;

(iv) biomass; or

(v) a hydroelectric system;

(B) RENEWABLE ENERGY SYSTEM.—The term "renewable energy system" means property that is used or used primarily to generate electricity, heat, or any other form of useful energy.

(g) ANNUAL REPORT.—The Secretary shall submit to Congress an annual report on grants distributed pursuant to this section. The report shall include—

(1) a summary of the eligible residential renewable energy systems receiving grants in the year just concluded;

(2) an estimate of renewable energy generation installed as a result of grants awarded, and its distribution by renewable energy source and geographic location;

(3) evidence that the program is contributing to declining costs for renewable energy technologies; and

(4) description of the methods used to award such grants.

(h) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—For the purposes of this section, there are authorized to be appropriated $30,000,000 for fiscal year 2002 and such sums as are necessary for each fiscal year thereafter, but not to exceed $150,000,000 in any fiscal year.

SEC. 4711. ASSESSMENT OF RENEWABLE ENERGY RESOURCES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Not later than twelve months after the date of enactment of this section, the Secretary of Energy shall submit to Congress an assessment of all renewable energy resources available within the United States.

(b) RESOURCE ASSESSMENT.—Such report shall include a detailed inventory describing the available amount and characteristics of solar, wind, biomass, geothermal, hydroelectric and other renewable energy sources, and an estimate of the costs needed to develop each resource. The report shall also include each other information as the Secretary of Energy believes would be useful in siting renewable energy generation, such as appropriate terrain, population and load centers, existing electric infrastructure, and location of energy and water resources.

(c) AVAILABILITY.—The information and cost estimates in this report shall be updated annually and made available to the public, along with the data used to create the report.

(d) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—For the purposes of carrying out this section, there are authorized to be appropriated $10,000,000 for fiscal years 2002 through 2006.

Subtitle C—Hydroelectric Licensing Reform

SEC. 4721. SHORT TITLE.

This subtitle may be cited as the “Hydroelectric Licensing Process Improvement Act of 2001.”

SEC. 4722. FINDINGS.

Congress finds that—

(1) hydroelectric power is an irreplaceable source of clean, economic, renewable energy with the unique capability of supporting reliable electric service while maintaining environmental quality;

(2) hydroelectric power is the leading renewable energy resource of the United States;

(3) hydroelectric power projects provide multiple benefits to the United States, including recreation, irrigation, flood control, water supply, and fish and wildlife benefits;

(4) in the next 15 years, the bulk of all non-federal hydroelectric power capacity in the United States is due to be relicensed by the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission;

(5) the process of licensing hydroelectric projects by the Commission—

(A) does not produce optimal decisions, because the agencies that participate in the process are not required to consider the full effects of their mandatory and recommended conditions on a license;

(B) is inefficient, in part because agencies do not always submit their mandatory and recommended conditions by a time certain;

(C) is burdened by uncoordinated environmental reviews and duplicative permitting authority; and

(D) is burdensome for all participants and too often results in litigation; and

(6) making other improvements in the licensing process.

SEC. 4723. PURPOSE.

The purpose of this subtitle is to achieve the objective of relicensing hydroelectric power projects to maintain high environmental standards while preserving low cost power by—

(1) requiring agencies to consider the full effects of their mandatory and recommended conditions on a hydroelectric power license and to document the consideration of a broad range of factors;

(2) requiring the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission to impose deadlines by which Federal agencies must submit proposed mandatory and recommended conditions to a license; and

(3) making other improvements in the licensing process.

SEC. 4724. PROCESS FOR CONSIDERATION BY FEDERAL AGENCIES OF CONDITIONS TO LICENSES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Part I of the Federal Power Act (16 U.S.C. 791a et seq.) is amended by adding at the end the following:

“SEC. 33. PROCESS FOR CONSIDERATION BY FEDERAL AGENCIES OF CONDITIONS TO LICENSES.

“(a) DEFINITIONS.—In this section:

“(1) CONDITION.—The term ‘condition’ means—

(A) a condition to a license for a project on a Federal reservation determined by a consulting agency for the purpose of the first proviso of section 4(e); and

(B) a condition relating to the construction, maintenance, or operation of a fishway determined by a consulting agency for the purpose of the first sentence of section 11.

“(2) CONSULTING AGENCY.—The term ‘consulting agency’ means—

(A) in relation to a condition described in paragraph (1)(A), the Federal agency with responsibility for supervising the reservation; and

(B) in relation to a condition described in paragraph (1)(B), the Secretary of the Interior or the Secretary of Commerce, as appropriate.

“(b) FACTORS TO BE CONSIDERED.—

“(1) IN GENERAL.—In generating a condition, a consulting agency shall take into consideration—

(A) the impacts of the condition on—

(i) economic and power values;

(ii) electric generation capacity and system reliability;

(iii) air quality (including consideration of the impacts on greenhouse gas emissions); and

(iv) drinking, flood control, irrigation, navigation, or recreation water supply.

(B) compatibility with other conditions to be included in the license, including mandatory conditions of other agencies, when available; and

(C) means to ensure that the condition addresses only direct project environmental impacts, and does so at the lowest project cost.

“(2) DOCUMENTATION.—

“(A) IN GENERAL.—In the course of the consideration of factors under paragraph (1) and before any review under subsection (e), a consulting agency shall create written documentation detailing, among other pertinent matters, all proposals made, comments received, facts considered, and analyses made regarding each of those factors sufficient to demonstrate that each of the factors was given full consideration in determining the condition to be submitted to the Commission.

“(B) SUBMISSION TO THE COMMISSION.—A consulting agency shall include the documentation under subparagraph (A) in its submission of a condition to the Commission.

“(c) SCIENTIFIC REVIEW.—

“(1) IN GENERAL.—Each condition determined by a consulting agency shall be submitted to appropriately substantiated scientific review.

“(2) DATA.—For the purpose of paragraph (1), a condition shall be considered to have been subjected to appropriately substantiated scientific review if the review—

(A) was based on current empirical data or field-testing; and

(B) was subject to peer review.

“(d) RELATIONSHIP TO IMPACTS ON FEDERAL RESERVATION.—In the case of a condition for the purpose of the first proviso of section 4(e), each condition determined by a consulting agency shall be directly and reasonably related to the impacts of the project with respect to the Federal reservation.

“(e) ADMINISTRATIVE REVIEW.—

“(1) OPPORTUNITY FOR REVIEW.—Before submitting to the Commission a proposed condition, and at least 90 days before a license applicant is required to file a license application with the Commission, a consulting agency shall provide the proposed condition to the license applicant and offer the license applicant an opportunity to obtain expedited review before an administrative law judge or other independent reviewing body of—

(A) the reasonableness of the proposed condition in light of the effect that implementation of the condition will have on the energy and economic values of a project; and

(B) compliance by the consulting agency with the requirements of this section, including the requirement to consider the factors described in subsection (b)(1).

“(2) COMPLETION OF REVIEW.—

“(A) IN GENERAL.—A review under paragraph (1) shall be completed not more than 180 days after the license applicant notifies the consulting agency of the request for review.

“(B) FAILURE TO MAKE TIMELY COMPLETION OF REVIEW.—If a review of a proposed condition is not completed within 180 days after the licencse applicant notifies the consulting agency of the request for review, the administrative law judge or reviewing body may have for the formulation of a condition that would not be found unreasonable; or “(ii) otherwise comply with this section;

“(iii) otherwise comply with this section; and

“(B) include with its submission to the Commission a proposed condition that—

(A) take such action as is necessary to—

(i) withdraw the condition; and

(ii) formulate a condition that follows the recommendation of the administrative law judge or reviewing body;

(iii) comply with this section; and

(B) include with its submission to the Commission a proposed condition that—“(i) the record on administrative review; and “(ii) documentation of any action taken following administrative review.

“(f) SUBMISSION OF FINAL CONDITION.—

“(1) IN GENERAL.—After an applicant files with the Commission an application for a license, the Commission shall set a date by which a consulting agency shall submit to the Commission a final condition.

“(2) LIMITATION.—Except as provided in paragraph (3), the date for submission of a final condition shall be not later than 1 year after the date on which the Commission gives the consulting agency notice that a license application is ready for environmental review.
(3) DEFUALT.—If a consulting agency does not submit a final condition to a license by the deadline set under paragraph (1),—

(A) the consulting agency shall not there- after have authority to recommend or establish a condition to the license; and

(B) the Commission may, but shall not be required to, recommend or establish an appro- priate condition to the license that—

(i) furthers the interest sought to be pro- tected by the provision of law that authorizes the consulting agency to propose or es- tablish a condition to the license; and

(ii) conforms to the requirements of this Act.

(4) EXTENSION.—The Commission may make 1 extension, of not more than 30 days, of a deadline set under paragraph (1).

(c) ANALYSIS BY THE COMMISSION.—

(1) ECONOMIC ANALYSIS.—The Commission shall conduct an economic analysis of each condition submitted by a consulting agency to determine whether the condition would render the project uneconomic.

(2) CONSISTENCY WITH THIS SECTION.—In exercising authority under section 18(j)(2), the Commission shall make a written determination on whether any recommendation submitted under section 18(j)(1) is consistent with the purposes and requirements of subsections (b) and (c) of this section.

(b) COMMISSION DETERMINATION ON EFFECT OF CONDITIONS.—When requested by a license applicant in a request for rehearing, the Commission shall make a written determina- tion on whether a condition submitted by a consulting agency—

(1) is in the public interest, as measured by the impact of the condition on the factors described in subsection (b)(1);

(2) was subjected to scientific review in accordance with subsection (c);

(3) relates to direct project impacts within the reservation, in the case of a condition with the formulation of a condition in ac- cordance with subsection (c); and

(4) is reasonable;

(5) is supported by substantial evidence; and

(6) is consistent with this Act and other terms and conditions to be included in the li- cense.

(b) CONFORMING AND TECHNICAL AMEND- MENTS.—

(1) SECTION 4.—Section 4(e) of the Federal Power Act (16 U.S.C. 797(e)) is amended—

(A) in the first proviso of the first sen- tence, by inserting after "conditions" the following: "the purpose and intent of, and for the regulation of the facilities within their control.

(2) ORGANIZATION.—The term 'Electric Reli- ability Organization' means an organization that may be created by the Congress under this Act, and includes Federal Regional Councils.

SEC. 215. ELECTRIC RELIABILITY ORGANIZA- TION AND OVERSIGHT.

(1) IN GENERAL.—Part II of the Federal Power Act (16 U.S.C. 824 et seq.) is amended by adding at the end the following:

"SEC. 215. ELECTRIC RELIABILITY ORGANIZA- TION AND OVERSIGHT.

"(a) DEFINITIONS.—In this section:

"(1) AFFILIATED REGIONAL RELIABILITY EN- TITY.—The term 'affiliated regional reli- ability entity' means an entity delegated au- thority under the provisions of subsection (h).

"(2) BULK POWER SYSTEM.—The term 'bulk power system' means all facilities and con- trol systems necessary for operating an interconnected transmission grid (or any portion thereof), including high-voltage transmission lines and subtransmission lines; control cen- ters; communications; data; and operations planning facilities; and the output of gener- ating units necessary to maintain trans- mission system reliability.

"(3) ELECTRIC RELIABILITY ORGANIZATION, OR ORGANIZATION.—The term 'Electric Reli- ability Organization' or 'Organization' means the organization approved by the Commission under subsection (d)(4).

"(4) ENTITY RULE.—The term 'entity rule' means a rule adopted by an affiliated re- liability entity organization and designed to implement or enforce 1 or more Organization Standards. An entity rule shall be approved by the organization and shall not be reviewed by the Commission.

"(5) INDUSTRY SECTOR.—The term 'industry sector' means a group of users of the bulk power system, including but not limited to, ratepayer advocates, environmental groups, and State and local government or- ganizations that regulate market partici- pants and promulgate government policy.

"(6) VARIANCE.—The term 'variance' means an exception or variance from the require- ments of an Organization Standard (including variance for an Organization Standard where there is no Organization Standard) that is adopted by an affiliated regional reli- ability entity and applicable to all or a part of the region for which the affiliated re- gional reliability entity is responsible. A variance shall be approved by the organiza- tion and once approved, shall be treated as an Organization Standard.

"(10) SYSTEM OPERATOR.—The term 'system operator' means any entity that operates or is responsible for the operation of a bulk power system, including, but not limited to, a control area operator, an independent sys- tem operator, a regional transmission organi- zation, a transmission company, a trans- mission system operator, or a regional secu- rity coordinator.

"(11) USER OF THE BULK POWER SYSTEM.—The term 'user of the bulk power system' means any entity that sells, purchases, or transmits electric power over a bulk power system, or that owns, operates, or maintains facilities or control systems that are part of a bulk power system, or that is a system oper- ater.

"(b) COMMISSION AUTHORITY.—

(1) Within the United States, the Commis- sion shall have jurisdiction over the Electric Reliability Organization, all affiliated re- gional reliability entities, all system opera- tors, and all users of the bulk-power system, for purposes of approving and enforcing com- pliance with the requirements of this sec- tion.

(2) The Commission may, by rule, define any other term used in this section, provided such definition is consistent with the defini- tions in, and the purpose and intent of, this Act.

(3) Not later than 90 days after the date of enactment of this section, the Commission shall issue a proposed rule for implementing the requirements of this section. The Com- mission shall provide notice and opportunity for comment on the proposed rule. The Commission shall issue a final rule under this subsection within 180 days after the date of enactment of this section.

“(4) Nothing in this section shall be construed as limiting or impairing any authority of the Commission under any other provision of this Act, including its exclusive authority to determine rates, terms, and conditions of transmission services subject to its jurisdiction until—

“(1) withdrawn, disapproved, or superseded by an Organization Standard, issued or approved by the Electric Reliability Organization and made effective by the Commission under subsection (e); or

“(2) disapproved by the Commission if, upon complaint or upon its own motion and after notice and an opportunity for comment, the Commission finds the standard, guidance, or practice unjust, unreasonable, unduly discriminatory, or preferential or not in the public interest.

Standard or guidelines, or practices in effect pursuant to the provisions of this subsection shall be enforceable by the Commission.

“(d) ORGANIZATION APPROVAL.—

“(1) The Electric Reliability Organization shall file with the Commission for approval as the Electric Reliability Organization. The applicant shall specify in its application its governance and prior to the approval of an Electric Reliability Organization, the Commission shall approve the proposal.

“(2) The Commission shall provide public notice of the application and afford interested parties an opportunity to comment.

“(3) The Commission shall approve the application if the Commission determines that—

“A. has the ability to develop, implement, and enforce standards that provide for an adequate level of reliability of the bulk power system;

“B. permits voluntary membership to any user of the bulk power system or public interest if the Commission determines that the proposal to be just, reasonable, and not unduly discriminatory or preferential, and in the public interest.

“C. ensures fair representation of its members in the selection of its directors and management of its affairs, taking into account the need for efficiency and effectiveness in decision making and the exercise of oversight of bulk power system reliability;

“(D) ensures that no 2 industry sectors have the ability to control, and no 1 industry sector has a disproportionate ability to veto, the Electric Reliability Organization’s discharge of its responsibilities (including actions by committees recommending standards to the Commission or other board actions to implement and enforce standards);

“(E) provides for governance by a board wholly comprised of independent directors;

“(F) provides for a funding mechanism and requirements that are just, reasonable, and not unduly discriminatory or preferential and are in the public interest, and which satisfy the requirements of subsection (l); and

“(G) establishes procedures for development of Organization Standards that provide reasonable notice and opportunity for public comment, taking into account the need for efficiency and effectiveness in decision making and operations and the requirements for technical competency in the development of Organization Standards, and which standards development process has—

“(i) openness;

“(ii) balance of interests; and

“(iii) unduly discriminatory or preferential, and in the public interest.

“(H) establishes fair and impartial procedures for the presentation and enforcement of Organization Standards, either directly or through delegation to an affiliated regional reliability entity, including the imposition of penalties, limitations on activities, functions, or operations, or other appropriate sanctions;

“(I) establishes procedures for notice and opportunity for public observation of all meetings, except that the procedures for public observation may include alternative procedures for emergencies; and

“(J) addresses other matters that the Commission deems necessary or appropriate to ensure that the procedures, governance, and funding of the Electric Reliability Organization are just, reasonable, not unduly discriminatory or preferential, and are in the public interest.

“(4) The Commission shall approve only 1 Electric Reliability Organization. If the Commission receives 2 or more timely applications that satisfy the requirements of this subsection, the Commission shall approve only the application it concludes will best implement the provisions of this section.

“(e) ESTABLISHMENT OF AND MODIFICATIONS TO ORGANIZATION STANDARDS.—

“(1) The Electric Reliability Organization shall file with the Commission any new or modified Organization Standards, including any variance or entity rules, and the Commission shall follow the procedures under paragraph (2) for review of filing.

“(2) Submissions under paragraph (1) shall include—

“(a) a concise statement of the purpose of the proposal; and “(b) a record of any proceedings conducted with respect to such proposal.

“The Commission shall provide notice of the proposed variance or entity rule and afford interested entities 30 days to submit comments. The Commission, after taking into consideration any submitted comments, shall approve or disapprove such proposal not later than 60 days after the deadline for the submission of comments, except that the Commission may extend the 60 day period for an additional 90 days to resolve any issues that may arise. If the Commission determines that the proposal to be just, reasonable, and not unduly discriminatory or preferential, and in the public interest.

“(3) A disapproved proposal shall be reviewed by the Commission without prejudice to the authority of the Commission thereafter to modify the proposal in accordance with the standards and requirements of this section. Proposals approved by the Commission shall take effect according to their terms but not earlier than 30 days after the effective date of the Commission’s order, except as provided in paragraph (3) of this subsection.

“(3)(A) In the exercise of its review responsibilities under this subsection, the Commission shall give due weight to the technical expertise of the Electric Reliability Organization with respect to the content of a new or modified organization standard, but shall not defer to the organization with respect to the effect of the standard on competition.

“The Commission shall approve a proposed new or modified organization standard if it determines the proposal to be just, reasonable, and not unduly discriminatory or preferential, and in the public interest.

“(B) An existing or proposed organization standard which is disapproved in whole or in part by the Commission may propose to the Electric Reliability Organization for further consideration.

“(C) The Commission, on its own motion or upon complaint, may direct the Electric Reliability Organization to develop an organization standard, including modification to an existing organization standard, address a specific matter by the Commission. If the Commission considers such new or modified organization standard necessary or appropriate to further the purposes of this section. The Electric Reliability Organization shall file any such new or modified organization standard in accordance with this subsection.

“(D) An affiliated regional reliability entity may propose a variance or entity rule to the Electric Reliability Organization. The affiliated regional reliability entity may request that the Electric Reliability Organization consider the proposed variance or entity rule, and may file a notice of such request with the Commission, if expedited consideration is necessary to provide for bulk-power system reliability. If the Electric Reliability Organization fails to adopt the variance or entity rule, either in whole or in part, the affiliated regional reliability entity may request that the Commission review such action. If the Commission modifies or the Commission approves the variance or entity rule, and if the Commission determines that the variance or entity rule is just, reasonable, and not unduly discriminatory or preferential, and are in the public interest, and that the Electric Reliability Organization has reasonably rejected the proposed variance or entity rule, then the Commission may modify the proposed variance or entity rule for further consideration by the Electric Reliability Organization or may direct the Electric Reliability Organization to develop a variance or entity rule to the Electric Reliability Organization, if the Electric Reliability Organization is unable to implement the procedures specified in this subsection.
"(E) Notwithstanding any other provision of this subsection, a proposed organization standard or amendment shall take effect, according to its terms if the Electric Reliability Organization determines that an emergency exists requiring that such proposed organization standard or amendment take effect without notice or comment. The Electric Reliability Organization shall notify the Commission immediately following such determination, and shall file such emergency organization standard or amendment with the Commission not later than 5 days following such determination and shall include in such filing an explanation of the need for such emergency standard. Subsequently, the Commission shall provide notice of the organization standard or amendment for comment, and shall follow the procedures set out in paragraphs (2) and (3) for review of the new or modified organization standard. Any such organization standard that has gone into effect shall remain in effect unless and until suspended or disapproved by the Commission. If the Commission determines at any time that the emergency organization standard or amendment is not necessary, the Commission may suspend such emergency organization standard or amendment.

"(4) The policies of the bulk power system shall comply with any organization standard that takes effect under this section.

"(I) COORDINATION WITH CANADA AND MEXICO.—The Electric Reliability Organization shall take all appropriate steps to gain recognition in Canada and Mexico. The United States shall use its best efforts to enter into international agreements with the appropriate governments of Canada and Mexico to provide for effective compliance with organization standards and to provide for the effectiveness of the Electric Reliability Organization in carrying out its mission and responsibilities. All actions taken by the Electric Reliability Organization, any affiliated regional reliability organization, any state or local government, or the Commission shall be consistent with the provisions of such international agreements.

"(G) CHANGES IN PROCEDURES, GOVERNANCE, OR FUNCTIONS.—(1) The Electric Reliability Organization shall file with the Commission any proposed change in its procedures, governance, or funding. Such proposal shall include an explanation of the basis and purpose for the change.

"(2) A proposed procedural change may take effect 90 days after filing with the Commission if the change constitutes a statement of policy, practice, or interpretation with respect to the meaning or enforcement of an existing procedure. Otherwise, a proposed procedural change shall take effect only upon a finding by the Commission, after notice and opportunity for comment, that the change is just, reasonable, not unduly discriminatory or preferential, in the public interest, and satisfies the requirements of subsection (d)(4).

"(3) A change in governance or funding shall not take effect unless the Commission finds that the change is just, reasonable, not unduly discriminatory or preferential, in the public interest, and satisfies the requirements of subsection (d)(4).

"(4) The Commission, upon complaint or upon its own motion, may require the Electric Reliability Organization to amend the procedures, governance, or funding if the Commission determines that the amendment is necessary to meet the requirements of this section. The Electric Reliability Organization shall propose an amendment in accordance with paragraph (1) of this subsection.

"(H) DELEGATIONS OF AUTHORITY.—(1) The Electric Reliability Organization shall have the authority to enter into an agreement with any entity for the delegation of authority to implement and enforce compliance with organization standards. Any such organization standard finds that the entity requesting the delegation satisfies the requirements of subparagraphs (A), (B), (C), (D), (E), (F), (J), and (K) of subsection (d)(4), and if the delegation promotes the effective and efficient implementation and administration of bulk power system reliability. The Electric Reliability Organization may enter into an agreement to delegate to the entity any other authority, except that the Electric Reliability Organization shall reserve the right to set and approve standards for bulk power system reliability.

"(2) The Electric Reliability Organization shall file with the Commission any agreement entered into pursuant to paragraph (1) of this section. TheElectric Reliability Organization shall include in such filing an explanation of the basis and purpose for the change.

"(3) A delegation agreement entered into under this subsection shall comply with the provisions for an affiliated regional reliability entity or entities, direct the Electric Reliability Organization to make such delegation.

"(4) If an affiliated regional reliability entity requests, consistent with paragraph (1) of this subsection, that the Electric Reliability Organization delegate authority to it, but is unable within 180 days to reach agreement, the Electric Reliability Organization shall make a determination with respect to such requested delegation, such entity may seek relief from the Commission. If, following notice and opportunity for comment, the Commission determines that a delegation to the entity would meet the requirements of paragraph (1) above, and that the delegation would be just, reasonable, not unduly discriminatory or preferential, and in the public interest, and that the Electric Reliability Organization has unreasonably withheld such delegation, the Commission may require the Electric Reliability Organization to make such delegation.

"(SA) The Commission may, upon its own motion or upon complaint, and with notice to the appropriate affiliated regional reliability entity or entities, direct the Electric Reliability Organization to propose a modification to an agreement entered into under this subsection if the Commission determines that—"(I) the affiliated regional reliability entity no longer has the capacity to carry out efficiently and effectively its enforcement responsibilities under that agreement, has failed to meet its obligations under that agreement, or has violated any provision of this section;

"(II) the rules, practices, or procedures of the affiliated regional reliability entity no longer provide for fair and impartial dispatch or enforcement responsibilities under the agreement;

"(III) the geographic boundary of a transmission line, approved by the Commission is not wholly within the boundary of an affiliated regional reliability entity and such difference is inconsistent with the effective and efficient implementation and administration of bulk power system reliability; or

"(IV) the agreement is inconsistent with another delegation agreement as a result of actions taken under paragraph (4) of this subsection.

"(B) Following an order of the Commission issued under paragraph (A), the Commission may suspend the affected agreement if the Electric Reliability Organization finds that the affiliated regional reliability entity or entities making the proposal demonstrate that it—

"(i) was developed in a fair and open process that provided an opportunity for all interested parties to participate;

"(ii) would not have an adverse impact on commerce that is not necessary for reliability;

"(iii) provides a level of bulk power system reliability adequate to protect public health, safety, welfare, and national security, and would not have a significant adverse impact on commerce that is not necessary for reliability; and

"(IV) in the case of a variance, is based on legitimate differences between regions or between subregions within the affiliated regional reliability entity or entities.

The Electric Reliability Organization shall approve or disapprove such proposal within 120 days, or the proposal shall be deemed approved. The Electric Reliability Organization shall take all appropriate steps to gain recognition in Canada and Mexico for the purposes of implementing the agreement.
The Commission shall allow the Electric Reliability Organization and the affiliated regional organizations an opportunity to appeal the suspension.

''(1) ORGANIZATION MEMBERSHIP.—Every system operator shall be required to be a member of the Electric Reliability Organization and shall be required also to be a member of any affiliated regional reliability entity operating under an agreement effective pursuant to subsection (b) applicable to the region in which the system operator operates or is responsible for the operation of bulk-power system facilities.

''(2) PROHIBITION.—A user of the bulk-power system shall not be required to be a member of any affiliated regional reliability entity, regarding whether the proposed organization standard hinders or conflicts with that regional transmission organization's ability to fulfill the requirements of any rule, order, rate schedule, or agreement approved or ordered by the Commission in its order under subsection (e) regarding the proposed organization standard. Where such hindrance or conflict is identified, the regional transmission organization must address such hindrance or conflict, and the need for any changes to such rule, order, rate schedule, or agreement, approved or ordered by the Commission applicable to a regional transmission organization, nothing in this section shall require a change in the regional transmission organization's obligation to comply with such provision unless the Commission orders such a change and the change becomes effective. If the Commission finds that the tariff, rate schedule, or agreement needs to be changed, the regional transmission organization must expeditiously make a section 205 filing to reflect the change. If the Commission finds that the organization standard needs to be changed, it shall remand the proposed organization standard to the electric reliability organization under subsection (e)(3)(B).

''(3) Except as provided in paragraph (5), to the extent hindrances and conflicts arise after approval of a reliability standard under subsection (c) or organization standard under subsection (e), each regional transmission organization authorized by the Commission shall report to the Commission, and the Commission shall give deference to the advice of any such regional advisory body if that body is organized on an interconnection-wide basis.

''(4) ORGANIZATION MEMBERSHIP.—The Electric Reliability Organization shall conduct periodic assessments of the reliability and adequacy of the interconnected bulk power system in North America and shall report annually to the Secretary of Energy and the Commission regarding its findings and recommendations for monitoring or improving system reliability and adequacy.

''(5) ASSESSMENT AND RECOVERY OF CERTAIN COSTS.—The reasonable costs of the Electric Reliability Organization, and the reasonable costs of each affiliated regional reliability entity that are related to implementation and enforcement of organization standards or other requirements contained in a delegation agreement approved under subsection (h), shall be assessed by the Electric Reliability Organization and each affiliated regional reliability entity, respectively, taking into account the relationship of costs to each region and based on an allocation that reflects an equitable sharing of the costs among all end users. The Commission shall provide by rule for the review of such costs and allocations, pursuant to the standards in subsection (d)(4)(P).

''(m) SAVINGS PROVISIONS.—

''(1) The Electric Reliability Organization shall have authority to develop, implement, and enforce organization standards for the reliable operation of only the bulk power system.

''(2) This section does not provide the Electric Reliability Organization or each affiliated regional reliability entity, regarding whether the proposed organization standard hinders or conflicts with that regional transmission organization's ability to fulfill the requirements of any rule, order, rate schedule, or agreement approved by the Commission applicable to a regional transmission organization, nothing in this section shall require a change in the regional transmission organization's obligation to comply with such provision unless the Commission orders such a change and the change becomes effective. If the Commission finds that the tariff, rate schedule, or agreement needs to be changed, the regional transmission organization must expeditiously make a section 205 filing to reflect the change. If the Commission finds that the organization standard needs to be changed, it shall remand the proposed organization standard to the electric reliability organization under subsection (e)(3)(B).

SEC. 4813. REPEAL OF THE PUBLIC UTILITY HOLDING COMPANY ACT OF 1935.

The Public Utility Holding Company Act of 1935 (16 U.S.C. 796 et seq.) is repealed, effective 1 year after the date of enactment of this Act.

SEC. 4814. FEDERAL ACCESS TO BOOKS AND RECORDS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Each holding company and each associate company thereof shall maintain, and shall make available to the Commission, such books, accounts, memoranda, and other records as the Commission deems to be relevant to costs incurred by a public utility or natural gas company that is an associate of such holding company, wherever located, shall have jurisdiction to regulate public utility companies; and

(b) AFFILIATE COMPANIES.—Each affiliate of a holding company or of any subsidiary company of a holding company shall maintain, and shall make available to the Commission, such books, accounts, memoranda, and other records as the Commission deems to be relevant to costs incurred by a public utility or natural gas company that is an affiliate of such holding company, wherever located, shall have jurisdiction to regulate public utility companies; and

(c) HOLDING COMPANY SYSTEMS.—The Commission may examine the books, accounts, memoranda, and other records of any company in a holding company system, or any affiliate thereof, as the Commission deems to be relevant to costs incurred by a public utility or natural gas company within such holding company system and necessary or appropriate for the protection of utility customers with respect to jurisdictional rates.

(d) CONFIDENTIALITY.—No member, officer, or employee of the Commission shall divulge any fact or information that may come to his or her knowledge during the course of examination of books, accounts, memoranda, or other records as provided in this section, except as may be directed by the Commission or by a court of competent jurisdiction.

SEC. 4815. STATE ACCESS TO BOOKS AND RECORDS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Upon the written request of a State commission having jurisdiction to regulate a public utility company in a holding company system, the holding company or any associate company or affiliate thereof, other than such public utility company, wherever located, shall produce for inspection books, accounts, memoranda, and other records that—

(1) have been identified in reasonable detail in a proceeding before the State commission;

(2) the State commission deems to be relevant to costs incurred by such public utility company; and

(3) are necessary for the effective discharge of the responsibilities of the State commission with respect to such proceeding.

(b) LIMITATION.—(a) does not apply to any person that is a holding company solely by reason of ownership of 1 or more qualifying facilities under the Public Utility Regulatory Policies Act of 1978; or any person that is a holding company, solely by reason of ownership of 1 or more qualifying facilities under the Public Utility Regulatory Policies Act of 1978.

(c) CONFIDENTIALITY OF INFORMATION.—The production of books, accounts, memoranda, and other records under subsection (a) shall be subject to such terms and conditions as may be necessary and appropriate to safeguard against unwarranted disclosure to the public of any trade secrets or sensitive commercial information.

(d) EFFECT ON STATE LAW.—Nothing in this section shall preempt applicable State law concerning the provision of books, records, or any other information, or in any way limit the rights of any State to obtain books, records, or any other information under any other Federal law, contract, or otherwise.

(e) COURT JURISDICTION.—Any United States district court in which the State commission referred to in subsection (a) is located shall have jurisdiction to enforce compliance with this section.

SEC. 4816. RULEMAKING.

(a) RULEMAKING.—Not later than 90 days after the effective date of this subtitle, the Commission shall promulgate a final rule to carry out the provisions of section 4815.

(b) OTHER AUTHORITY.—If, upon application from an entity that is a public utility company or upon its own motion, the Commission finds that the books, records, accounts, memoranda, and other records of any person are not relevant to the jurisdictional rates of a public utility company, or if the Commission finds that any class of transactions is not relevant to the jurisdictional rates of a public utility or natural gas company, the Commission shall exempt such person or transaction from the requirements of section 4815.

SEC. 4817. AFFILIATE TRANSACTION.

Nothing in this subtitle shall preclude the Commission or a State commission from exercising its jurisdiction under otherwise applicable law to protect utility customers.

SEC. 4818. APPlicability.

No provision of this subtitle shall apply to—

(1) the United States;

(2) a State or any political subdivision of a State;

(3) any foreign governmental authority not operating in the United States;

(4) any agency, authority, or instrumentality of any entity referred to in paragraph (1), (2), or (3);

(5) any officer, agent, or employee of any entity referred to in paragraph (1), (2), or (3) acting as such in the course of his or her official duty.

SEC. 4819. EFFECT ON OTHER REGULATIONS.

Nothing in this subtitle precludes the Commission or a State commission from exercising its jurisdiction under otherwise applicable law to protect utility customers.

SEC. 4820. ENFORCEMENT.

The Commission shall have the same powers as set forth in section 4817 of the Federal Power Act (16 U.S.C. 726d-725p) to enforce the provisions of this subtitle.

SEC. 4821. SAVINGS PROVISIONS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Nothing in this subtitle prohibits a person from engaging in or continuing to engage in activities or transactions in which it is legally engaged or authorized to engage on the effective date of this subtitle.

SEC. 4822. IMPLEMENTATION.

Not later than 180 days after the date of enactment of this subtitle, the Commission shall—

(1) promulgate such regulations as may be necessary or appropriate to implement this title (other than section 4815); and

(2) submit to Congress detailed recommendations on technical and conforming amendments to Federal law necessary to carry out this subtitle and the amendments made by this subtitle.

SEC. 4823. TRANSFER OF RESOURCES.

All books and records that relate primarily to the functions transferred to the Commission under this subtitle shall be transferred from the Securities and Exchange Commission to the Commission.

SEC. 4824. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

There are authorized to be appropriated such sums as are necessary to carry out this subtitle.

SEC. 4825. CONFORMING AMENDMENT TO THE FEDERAL POWER ACT.

Section 318 of the Federal Power Act (16 U.S.C. 725p) is repealed.

Subtitle D—Emission-Free Control Measures Under State Implementation Plans

SEC. 4830. EMISSION-FREE CONTROL MEASURES UNDER A STATE IMPLEMENTATION PLAN.

Actions taken by a State to support the continued operation of existing emission-free electricity sources, or the construction or operation of new emission-free utility power sources, shall be considered control measures necessary or appropriate to meet applicable requirements under section 110(a) of the Clean Air Act (42 U.S.C. 7410(a)) and shall be included in a State Implementation Plan.

TRIBUTE TO KENNETH AND JENNIFER LEWIS

HON. ERIC CANTOR OF VIRGINIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, September 19, 2001

Mr. CANTOR. Mr. Speaker, I would like to take the opportunity today to pay tribute to Jennifer and Kenneth Lewis.

On Tuesday, September 11, 2001, the lives of a husband and wife from Culpeper, Virginia, were tragically wrenched from us. Jennifer and Kenneth Lewis, attendants on Flight 77, will be greatly missed by their family, their friends, and their community.

Rest assured that the people of Culpeper and across the Commonwealth mourn this great loss in unity.

Mr. and Mrs. Lewis are two of the courageous souls who paid the price on Tuesday for America’s freedom.

America was chosen as a target because it is the brightest beacon for freedom and democracy this world has ever known.

Jennifer and Kenneth stood on the anvil of America’s greatness and suffered as the representatives of our freedom and the values that have made America the strongest nation in the world.

Consequently, their memory will remain with us.

Their memory will guide us as America rebuilds and grows stronger in the wake of Tuesday’s tragedy.

The great loss of Jennifer and Kenneth will serve as a reminder to us of the precious value of each life and will draw us closer together as a community.

America must not forget Jennifer and Kenneth and those who perished with them, for their memory will motivate us to protect our families, our communities, and our Nation from future tragedy.

It is fitting that the Lewises were together on their final day—a demonstration of their unity and their strength as a family.

They have helped America to unify. We will now care more for our neighbor and treasure every day more dearly, in their honor.

God bless America. Our loss is not in vain. My prayers and those of my wife, Diana, remain with the family and friends of Jennifer and Kenneth Lewis and with the community of Culpeper.

INTRODUCTION OF THE VICTORY BONDS ACT OF 2001

HON. JOHN J. LAFLANCE
OF NEW YORK
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, September 19, 2001

Mr. LAFLANCE. Mr. Speaker, I am today introducing legislation that will provide Americans in every part of the Nation with an opportunity to contribute directly to our Nation’s response to last week’s tragic events. The “Victory Bonds Act of 2001” directs the United States Treasury to issue special bonds to help finance the Federal government’s recovery and anti-terrorism efforts.

The American people have responded to last week’s murderous attacks on the World Trade Center and the Pentagon with great courage, generosity, and determination. Thousands of volunteers have joined in the rescue efforts in New York City and tens of thousands more have donated blood and contributed money and supplies to aid both the rescuers and victims. These efforts represent the true spirit and finest traditions of our American public.

Americans in my district and across the country have called Federal offices asking how they can also assist in relief and rebuilding efforts and how they can show support for possible military operations against terrorism. The legislation I am introducing responds to these requests by directing the Treasury Department to offer special “Victory Bonds” to fund recovery operations, victim relief and military operations responding to the terrorist attacks. By purchasing these special U.S. bonds, patriotic citizens will make a direct contribution that helps heal and rebuild our Nation and expresses a common determination to resist all future terrorist attacks on American soil.

The “Victory Bonds Act of 2001” also directs the Treasury to place the proceeds of the bond sales into a separate Treasury fund that would be earmarked for recovery and anti-terrorism expenses. Americans who purchase the bonds should have assurance that they are contributing directly to Federal relief for terrorist victims and specific programs to combat terrorism. The bill is similar in this approach to legislation introduced in the Senate by Sen. Tim Johnson (D–SD).

The issuance of special bonds in times of national emergency is one of our country’s proudest traditions that dates back to the American Revolution. The war bond effort during World War II generated more than $200 billion as patriotic Americans sought to contribute to our Nation’s struggle against international fascism. A similar outpouring of public support will be needed in what could be a long and arduous effort to defeat international terrorism.

Just as special war bonds enabled our parents and grandparents to contribute to our military victory in World War II, purchases of Victory Bonds will give millions of Americans a vital and continuing role in our new struggle against terrorism. The bonds will help mobilize and direct public resources for emergency spending while signifying that all Americans stand together in their resolve to root out terrorism once and for all.

I urge prompt consideration of this important and timely legislation.

HONORING THE NEW JERSEY URBAN SEARCH AND RESCUE TEAM

HON. RUSH D. HOLT
OF NEW JERSEY
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, September 19, 2001

Mr. HOLT. Mr. Speaker, I rise to praise the members of the State of New Jersey Office of Emergency Management’s Urban Search and Rescue Team (NJTF–1), who responded to the call for assistance in New York City after the terrorist attack on September 11, 2001.

I had the privilege of spending time with their members who have created a tent city at the Jacob Javitz Convention Center. They are among the best-trained rescue personnel anywhere, and no one works harder than they do. They, along with the Federal Emergency Management Agency and others, have risen to the challenge of last week’s tragedy.

Within hours after the attack on the World Trade Center, the New Jersey Urban Search and Rescue Team were in New York City volunteering to assist in the immediate search for victims. The team stayed in New York City for nine days, away from their families, and in harm’s way, in order to help those in need. Tomorrow, they return to their homes and jobs in New Jersey. First NJTF–1 will stop at their deployment center in Lakehurst where their families and friends will celebrate their service to their fellow citizens.

On behalf of all of New Jersey’s residents, I am proud of these dedicated men and women who did not just serve New Jersey, but all the people of the United States. They, like so many of New Jersey’s fire, police, and emergency medical technicians, deserve our praise and our thanks for their efforts in Manhattan.

I urge all my colleagues in the House to join me in honoring them for their dedication and their heroism.

SENATE COMMITTEE MEETINGS

Title IV of Senate Resolution 4, agreed to by the Senate on February 4, 1977, calls for establishment of a system for a computerized schedule of all meetings and hearings of Senate committees, subcommittees, joint committees, and committees of conference. This title requires all such committees to notify the Office of the Senate Daily Digest—designated by the Rules committee—of the time, place, and purpose of the meetings, when scheduled, and any cancellations or changes in the meetings as they occur.

This “bullet” symbol identifies statements or insertions which are not spoken by a Member of the Senate on the floor.

Matter set in this typeface indicates words inserted or appended, rather than spoken, by a Member of the House on the floor.
September 19, 2001

As an additional procedure along with the computerization of this information, the Office of the Senate Daily Digest will prepare this information for printing in the Extensions of Remarks section of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD on Monday and Wednesday of each week.

Meetings scheduled for Thursday, September 20, 2001 may be found in the Daily Digest of today’s RECORD.

PRAYER
The Chaplain, Dr. Lloyd John Ogilvie, offered the following prayer:

God of grace and God of glory, on the Congress pour Your power. Grant these leaders wisdom; grant them courage for the facing of this hour. We pray for our President, George W. Bush, tonight as he speaks to the joint session of Congress about the soul-sized issues confronting our Nation and the world. May this evening be a defining hour in our history. Reveal Your strategy for exorcising the evil treachery of terrorism. Draw us into Your inspiring presence, then into one another in shared patriotism, then to loyalty to our Commander in Chief in mutual commitment to seek and do Your will in the battle against this insidious, infamous threat to the freedom and peace of our world. Amen.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE
The Honorable Debbie Stabenow led the Pledge of Allegiance, as follows:

I pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America, and to the Republic for which it stands, one nation under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.

APPOINTMENT OF ACTING PRESIDENT PRO TEMPORE
The Presiding Officer. The clerk will please read a communication to the Senate from the President pro tempore (Mr. Byrd).

The assistant legislative clerk read the following letter:

U.S. SENATE
PRESIDENT PRO TEMPORE
WASHINGTON, DC, SEPTEMBER 20, 2001.

TO THE SENATE:

Under the provisions of rule I, paragraph 3, of the Standing Rules of the Senate, I hereby appoint the Honorable Debbie Stabenow, a Senator from the State of Michigan, to perform the duties of the Chair.

Robert C. Byrd,
President pro tempore.

Ms. Stabenow thereupon assumed the Chair as Acting President pro tempore.

MEASURES PLACED ON CALENDAR—S. 1438 AND S. 1439
Mr. REID. Madam President, I understand that the following bills are at the desk having been read for the first time: S. 1438 and S. 1439. I ask unanimous consent that it be in order en bloc for these two bills to have received a second reading, and I would then object to any further consideration of this legislation.

The Acting President pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The bills will be placed on the calendar.

AUTHORITY TO APPOINT A COMMITTEE TO ESCORT THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES INTO THE HOUSE CHAMBER
Mr. REID. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that the President pro tempore of the Senate be authorized to appoint a committee on the part of the Senate to join with a like committee on the part of the House of Representatives to escort the President of the United States into the House Chamber for the joint session to be held at 9 p.m. on Thursday, September 20, 2001.

The Acting President pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

RESERVATION OF LEADER TIME
The Acting President pro tempore. Leadership time is reserved.

MORNING BUSINESS
The Acting President pro tempore. Under the previous order, there will now be a period for the transaction of morning business for not to extend beyond the hour of 8:40 p.m. with Senators permitted to speak therein for up to five minutes.

A HOUSE UNITED
Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, in the wake of the terrible events of September 11, 2001, there have been reports of senseless acts of gun violence against innocent Americans, whose only crime was their ethnicity or religion. In this time of national crisis we must not lose sight that it is our diversity, our freedom to worship, and our steadfast commitment to liberty and the rule of law that form the foundation of this great Nation. While it has shaken, standing together we can ensure that the American house remains strong. And it is unity that guarantees our ultimate victory.

SURVIVOR BENEFIT PLAN AMENDMENT TO THE NATIONAL DEFENSE AUTHORIZATION BILL FOR FISCAL YEAR 2002
Mr. THURMOND. Mr. President, today, I am offering an amendment to the national Defense authorization bill for fiscal year 2002 that would correct the longstanding injustice to the widows or widowers of our military retirees. The proposed legislation, which reflects the language of S. 145 which I introduced on January 23, 2001, would immediately increase for surviving spouses over the age 62 the minimum survivor Benefit Plan, SBP, annuity from 35 percent to 40 percent of the SBP covered retired pay. The bill would provide a further increase to 45 percent of covered retired pay as of October 1, 2004, and to 55 percent as of September 2011.

As I outlined in my many statements in support of this important legislation the Survivor Benefit Plan advertises, that if the service member elects to join the plan, his survivor will receive 55 percent of the member’s retirement pay. Unfortunately, that is not so. The reason that they do not receive the 55 percent of retired pay is that current law mandates that at age 62 this amount be reduced either by the amount of the survivor’s Social Security benefit or to 35 percent of the SBP. This law is especially irksome to those retirees who joined the plan when it was first offered in 1972. These service members were never informed of the age-62 reduction until they made an irrevocable decision to participate. Many retirees and their spouses, as our constituent mail attests, believed their premium payments would guarantee 55 percent of retired pay for the life of the survivor. It is not hard to imagine the shock and financial disadvantage these men and women who so loyally served the Nation for many years experience when they learn of the annuity reduction.

Uniformed services retirees pay too much for the available SBP benefit both, compared to what we promised and what we offer other Federal retirees. When the Survivor Benefit Plan was enacted in 1972, the Congress intended that the government would pay 40 percent of the cost to parallel the government subsidy of the Federal civilian survivor benefit plan. That was short-lived. Over time, the government cost sharing has declined to about 26 percent. In other words, the retiree’s premiums now cover 74 percent of expected long-term program costs versus the intended 60 percent. Contrast this with the Federal civilian SBP, which has a 42-percent subsidy for those personnel under the Federal Employees Retirement System and a 50-percent subsidy for those under the Civil Service Retirement System. Further, Federal civilian survivors receive 50 percent of retired pay with no offset at age 62. Although Federal civilian premiums are 10 percent retired pay compared to 6.5 percent for military retirees, the difference in the percent of contribution is offset by the fact that our service personnel retire at a much younger age than the civil servant and, therefore, pay premiums much longer than the Federal civilian retiree.

Although the House conferees thwarted my previous efforts to enact this legislation into law, I am ever optimistic that this year we will prevail. I base my optimism on the fact that the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2001 included a sense of the Congress saying, "Those of us who work on these issues daily know how important the SBP, which has a 42-percent subsidy for those personnel under the Federal Employees Retirement System and a 50-percent subsidy for those under the Civil Service Retirement System. Further, Federal civilian survivors receive 50 percent of retired pay with no offset at age 62. Although Federal civilian premiums are 10 percent retired pay compared to 6.5 percent for military retirees, the difference in the percent of contribution is offset by the fact that our service personnel retire at a much younger age than the civil servant and, therefore, pay premiums much longer than the Federal civilian retiree.

generously donated $12 million to the relief efforts ongoing in New York and Washington. It is not surprising to see that Coca-Cola is continuing its long tradition of helping those in need. Approximately $6 million will be used to support the efforts of the Red Cross, which has been tireless in its dedication to the victims of this at-tack. The remaining $6 million will be channeled to local funds in New York and Washington to support humanitarian causes. It is fitting that a company so associated with America and the American spirit would come to the aid of our citizens in this difficult time.

It is for this reason that I rise to honor the Coca-Cola Company for its charitable support. Their efforts deserve our applause and recognition.

ADDITIONAL STATEMENTS

TRIBUTE TO EDWIN L. SULLIVAN

- Mr. REED. Mr. President, it is with great pleasure that I rise today to acknowledge a distinguished Rhode Islander and proven leader in my State’s labor community, Mr. Eddie Sullivan, the President and Business Manager of the International Union of Operating Engineers, (IUOE), Local 57 in Providence.

Eddie Sullivan lives in Warwick with his wife Dolly and is a proud father of four wonderful daughters, Kim, Kimberly, Kristen, and Katherine. Mr. Sullivan was initiated into IUOE Local 57 in January of 1964, and has worked for various contractors in the State of Rhode Island as a crane operator over the years, taking part in the construction of some of Rhode Island’s most significant structures. In 1976, Local 57 elected him as an Auditor, and due to his hard work appointed him as the Vice President in 1980. In just five short years, Eddie was appointed as the Business Manager and President of Local 57 in 1985 and continues to serve in this capacity today.

In addition to his various responsibilities within the labor movement, Mr. Sullivan has served as the President of the Rhode Island Building and Construction Trades Council and was elected as a Trustee of the International Union of Operating Engineers for the Northeastern States in 1991.

As Local 57 celebrates its centennial of fighting for the concerns and needs of hard working Rhode Islanders, it is only fitting to acknowledge Eddie for his decades of service to the IUOE. I would like to take this opportunity to personally extend my deep appreciation and gratitude to Eddie Sullivan for his continued hard work and leadership at IUOE, and his efforts to improving the lives of so many Rhode Islanders and their families.

TRIBUTE TO ALEX EUERCASE

- Mr. CONRAD. Mr. President, I rise today to recognize the efforts of a patriotic American. On September 14, 2001, Senator MITCH MCCONNELL and I introduced S. 1431, a bill to authorize the Secretary of the Treasury to issue War Bonds in support of recovery and response efforts relating to the Sep-tember 11, 2001 hijackings and attacks on the Pentagon and the World Trade Center.

After the news media broadcast our efforts, Mr. Alex Eucare of Gaithersburg, MD heard about the bill and moved to reserve the Internet domain name "warbonds.com" and toll free telephone number "866-WAR-BOND" to ensure that others attempting to improperly profit or exploit Americans would not be able to do so.

This action by a concerned and caring citizen such as Alex Eucare makes me proud to call myself an American. His act was selfless and unsolicited. Patriotic efforts like this are taking place all over our great nation. There is no doubt in my mind, that with a collaboration of these efforts, we will prevail, both in solidifying our unity as a nation and in punishing those responsible for these acts of terror.

As my good friend Senator McCONNELL noted, “Alex’s foresight in reserv-ing the domain name and toll free number is yet another example of the thoughtful and compassionate nature of Americans. It is those very qualities that Senator BURNS and I are confident will make War Bonds such a success.”

MESSAGES FROM THE PRESIDENT

REPORT ON RECOVERY AND RE-SPONSE TO TERRORIST ATTACKS ON THE WORLD TRADE CENTER AND THE PENTAGON—MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT—PM 43

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate a message from the President of the United States, transmitting a copy of the President’s address concerning the terrorist attack on New York’s World Trade Center and the Pentagon, delivered to a joint ses-sion of Congress on September 20, 2001; which was ordered to lie on the table.

To the Congress of the United States:

Mr. Speaker, Mr. President pro tem, Members of Congress, and fellow Americans:

In the normal course of events, Presidents come to this chamber to report on the state of the Union. Tonight, no such report is needed. It has already been delivered by the American people.

We have seen it in the courage of pas-sengers, who rushed terrorists to save their fellow passengers like an exceptional man named Todd Beamer. Please help me to welcome his wife, Lisa Beamer, here tonight.

We have seen the unfurling of flags, the lighting of candles, the giving of blood, the saying of prayers—in English, Hebrew, and Ara-bic. We have seen the decency of a loving and giving people, who have made the grief of strangers their own.

My fellow citizens, for the last nine days, the entire world has seen for itself the state of our Union—and it is strong.

Tonight we are a country awakened to danger and called to defend freedom. Our grief has turned to anger, and anger to resolution. Whether we bring our enemies to justice, or bring justice to our enemies, justice will be done.

I thank the Congress for its leadership at such an important time. All of America was touched on the evening of the tragedy to see Republicans and Democrats, joined together on the steps of this Capitol, singing “God Bless America.” And you did more than sing, you acted, by delivering forty billion dollars to rebuild our communities and meet the needs of our military.

Speaker Hastert and Minority Leader Gephardt, Majority Leader Daschle, and Senator Lott, I thank you for your friendship and your leadership and your service to our country.

And on behalf of the American people, I thank the world for its out-pouring of support. America will never forget the sounds of our National An-them playing at Buckingham Palace, and on the streets of Paris, and at Ber-lin’s Brandenburg Gate. We will not forget South Korean children gathering to pray outside our embassy in Seoul, or the prayers of sympathy offered at a mosque in Cairo. We will not forget moments of silence and days of mourning in Australia and Africa and Latin America.

Nor will we forget the citizens of eighty other nations who died with our own. Dozens of Pakistanis. More than 130 Israelis. More than 250 citizens of India. Men and women from El Sal-vador, Iran, Mexico, and Japan. And hundreds of British citizens. America has no truer friend than Great Britain. Once again, we are joined together in a great cause. The British Prime Min-ister has crossed an ocean to show his unity of purpose with America, and to-night we welcome Tony Blair.

On September the eleventh, enemies of freedom committed an act of war against our country. Americans have been warriors for generations. But for the past 136 years, there have been wars on foreign soil, except for one Sunday in 1941. Americans have known the casualties of war—but not at the center of a great city on a peaceful morning. Americans have known surprisesk attacks—but never be-fore on thousands of civilians. All of this was brought upon us in a single day—and night fell on a different world, a world where freedom itself is under attack.

Americans have many questions tonight. Americans are asking: Who attacked our country?

The evidence we have gathered points to a collection of loosely affiliated terrorist organizations known as al-Qaida. They are the same murderers indicted for bombing American embassies in Tanzania and Kenya, and responsible for the bombing of the U.S.S. Cole.

Al-Qaida is to terror what the mafia is to crime. But its goal is not making money; its goal is remaking the world—and imposing its radical beliefs on people everywhere.

The terrorists practice a fringe form of Islamic extremism that has been rejected by Muslim scholars and the vast majority of Muslim clerics—a fringe movement that supports the terrorism of jihadi teachings of Islam. The terrorists’ directive commands them to kill Christians and Jews, to kill all Americans, and make no distinctions among military and civilians, including women and children.

This group and its leaders—a person named Usama bin Ladin—are linked to many other organizations in different countries, including the Egyptian Islamic Jihad and the Islamic Movement of Uzbekistan.

There are thousands of these terrorists in more than sixty countries. They are recruited from their own nations and neighborhoods, and brought to camps in places like Afghanistan where they are trained in the tactics of terror. They are sent back to their homes or sent to hide in countries around the world to plot evil and destruction.

The leadership of al-Qaida has great influence in Afghanistan, and supports the Taliban regime in controlling most of that country. In Afghanistan, we see al-Qaida’s vision for the world.

Afghanistan’s people have been brutalized—many are starving and many have fled. Women are not allowed to attend school. You can be jailed for owning a television. Religion can be practiced only as their leaders dictate. A man can be jailed in Afghanistan if his beard is not long enough.

The United States respects the people of Afghanistan—after all, we are currently that permits the peacemaker aid—but we condemn the Taliban regime. It is not only repressing its own people, it is threatening people everywhere by sponsoring and sheltering and supplying terrorists.

By aiding and abetting murder, the Taliban regime is committing murder. And tonight, the United States of America makes the following demands on the Taliban:

Deliver to United States authorities all the leaders of al-Qaida who hide in your land.

Release all foreign nationals—including American citizens—you have unjustly imprisoned, and protect foreign journalists, diplomats, and aid workers in your country.

Close immediately and permanently every terrorist training camp in Afghanistan and hand over every terrorist, and every person in their support structure, to appropriate authorities.

Give the United States full access to terrorist training camps, so we can make sure they are no longer operating.

These demands are not open to negotiation or discussion. The Taliban must act and act immediately. They will hand over the terrorists, or they will share in their fate.

I also want to speak tonight directly to the people of Afghanistan. We are with you. We stand in your way.

We are not deceived by their pretenses to piety. We have seen their hypocrisy. They are traitors to their own faith, trying to hijack Islam itself. The enemy of America is not our many Muslim friends; it is not our many Arab friends. Our enemy is a radical network of terrorists, and every government that supports them.

Our war on terror will win, al-Qaida, but it does not end there. It will not end until every terrorist group of global reach has been found, stopped, and defeated.

Americans are asking: Why do they hate us?

They hate what we see right here in this chamber—a democratically elected government. Their leaders are self-appointed. They hate our freedoms—our freedom of religion, our freedom of speech, our freedom to vote and assemble and disagree with each other. They hate our friends. They stand against us, because we stand in their way.

We are not deceived by their pretenses to piety. We have seen their kind before. They are the heirs of all the worst of the twentieth century. By sacrificing human life to serve their radical visions—by abandoning every value except the will to power—they follow in the path of fascism, and Nazism, and totalitarianism. And they will follow that path all the way, to where it ends: in history’s unmarked grave of discarded lies.

Americans are asking: How will we fight and win this war?

We will direct every resource at our command—every means of diplomacy, every tool of intelligence, every instrument of law enforcement, every financial influence, and every necessary weapon of war—to the disruption and defeat of the global terror network.

This war will not be like our war against Iraq a decade ago, with its decisive liberation of territory and its swift conclusion. It will not look like the air war above Kosovo two years ago, where no ground troops were used and not a single American was lost in combat.

Our response involves far more than instant retaliation and isolated strikes. Americans should not expect one battle, but a lengthy campaign, unlike any other we have seen. It may include dramatic strikes, visible on television, and covert operations, secret even in success. We will starve terrorists of funding, turn them one against another, drive them from place to place, until there is no refuge or rest.

And we will pursue nations that provide aid or safe haven to terrorism. Every nation, in every region, now has a decision to make. Either you are with us, or you are with the terrorists.

From this day forward, any nation that continues to harbor or support terrorism will be regarded by the United States as a hostile regime.

Our Nation has been put on notice: We are not immune from attack. We will take defensive measures against terrorism to protect Americans.

Today, dozens of Federal departments and agencies, as well as State and local governments, have responsibilities affecting homeland security. These efforts must be coordinated at the highest level. So tonight I announce the creation of a Cabinet-level position reporting directly to me—the Office of Homeland Security. And tonight I also announce a distinguished American to lead this effort to strengthen America’s security—a military veteran, an effective Governor, a true patriot, and my trusted friend, Pennsylvania’s Governor Tom Ridge.

He will lead, oversee, and coordinate a comprehensive national strategy to safeguard our country against terrorism and respond to any attacks that may come.

These measures are essential. But the only way to defeat terrorism as a threat to our way of life is to stop it, eliminate it, and destroy it where it begins.

Many will be involved in this effort, from FBI agents to intelligence operatives to the reservists we have called to active duty. All deserve our thanks, and all have our prayers. And tonight, to every motif of courage, to every citizen of the Pentagon, I have a message for our military: Be ready. I have called the armed forces to alert, and there is a reason. The hour is coming when America will act, and you will make us proud.

This is not, however, just America’s fight, for what is at stake is not just America’s freedom. This is the world’s fight. This is civilization’s fight. This is the fight of all who believe in progress and pluralism, tolerance and freedom.

I ask every nation to join us. We will ask, and we will need, the help of police forces, intelligence services, and banking systems around the world. The United States is grateful that many nations and many international organizations have already responded—with sympathy and with support. Nations from Latin America, to Asia, to Africa, to Europe, to the Islamic world. Perhaps the NATO Charter reflects best the attitude of the world: an attack on one is an attack on all.

The civilized world is rallying to America’s side. They understand that if this terror goes unpunished, their own cities, their own citizens may be next. Terror, unanswered, can not only bring down buildings, it can threaten the stability of legitimate governments. And we will not allow it.

Americans are asking: What is expected of us?

I ask you to live your lives and hug your children. I know many citizens have done this. I ask you to be calm and resolve, even in the face of a continuing threat.

I ask you to uphold the values of America, and remember why so many have come here. We are in a fight for our principles, and our first responsibility is to live by them. No one should be singled out for unfair treatment or unkind words because of their ethnic background or religious faith.

I ask you to continue to support the victims of this tragedy with your contributions. Those who want to give can go to a central source of information, libertyunites.org, to find the names of groups providing direct help in New York, Pennsylvania, and Virginia.

The thousands of FBI agents who are now at work in this investigation may need your cooperation, and I ask you to give it.

I ask for your patience, with the delays and inconveniences that may accompany our security—and for your patience in what will be a long struggle.

I ask your continued participation and confidence in the American economy. Terrorists attacked a symbol of America’s prosperity. They did not cause, by our efforts and by our courage, the great achievements of our people.

Tonight I thank my fellow Americans for what you have already done and for what you will do. And ladies and gentlemen of the Congress, I thank you, their representatives, for what you have already done, and for what we will do together.

Tonight we face new and sudden national challenges. We will come together to improve air safety, to dramatically expand the number of air marshals on domestic flights, and take new measures to prevent hijacking. We will come together to promote stability and keep our airlines flying with direct assistance during this emergency.

We will come together to give law enforcement the additional tools it needs to track down the criminals. We will come together to strengthen our intelligence capabilities to know the plans of terrorists before they act, and find them before they strike.

We will come together to take active steps that strengthen America’s economy, and put our people back to work.

Tonight we welcome here two leaders who embody the extraordinary spirit of all New Yorkers: Governor George Pataki and Mayor Rudy Giuliani. As a symbol of America’s resolve, my Administration will work with the Congress, and these two leaders, to show the world that we will rebuild New York City.

After all that has just passed—all the lives taken, and all the possibilities and hopes that died with them—it is natural to wonder if America’s future is one of fear. Some speak of an age of terror. I know there are struggles ahead, and dangers to face. But this country will define our times, not be defined by our fear. And the United States of America is determined and strong, this will not be an age of terror; this will be an age of liberty, here and across the world.

Great harm has been done to us. We have suffered great loss. And in our grief and anger we have found our mission and our moment. Freedom and fear are at war. The advance of human freedom—the great achievement of our time, and the great hope of every new day—will not depend on us, our Nation—this generation—will lift a dark threat of violence from our people and our future. We will rally the world to this cause, by our efforts and by our courage. We will not tire, we will not falter, and we will not touch its source.

It is my hope that in the months and years ahead, life will return almost to normal. We’ll go back to our lives and routines, and that is good. Even grief recedes with time and grace. But our resolve will not pass. Each of us will remember what happened that day, and to whom it happened. We will remember the moment the news came—where we were and what we were doing. Some will remember an image of fire, or a story of rescue. Some will carry memories of a face and a voice gone forever. And I will carry this. It is the police shield of a man named George Howard, who died at the World Trade Center trying to save others. It was given to me by his mom, Arlene, as a proud memorial to her son. This is my reminder of lives that ended, and a task that does not end.

I will not forget this wound to our country, or those who inflicted it. I will not yield—I will not rest—I will not relent in waging this struggle for the freedom and security of the American people.

The course of this conflict is not known, yet its outcome is certain. Freedom and fear, justice and cruelty, have always been at war, and we know that God is not neutral between them. Fellow citizens, we will meet violence with patient justice—assured of the rightness of our cause, and confident of the victories to come. In all that lies before us, may God grant us wisdom, and may He watch over the United States of America.

Thank you.

GEORGE W. BUSH.

senate resolution 162—designating october 17, 2001, as a “day of national concern about young people and gun violence” by mr. murray (for himself, mr. warner, mr. bingaman, ms. cantwell, ms. clinton, mr. cochin, mr. corzine, mr. daschle, mr. dayton, mr. dodd, mr. durbin, mr. edwards, mr. jeffords, mr. johnson, mr. kennedy, mr. kerry, mr. kohl, mr. levin, ms. mikulski, mr. nelson of nebraska, mr. reed, mr. sabin, ms. schumer, ms. stabenow, mr. wellstone, mr. torricelli, and mr. thurmond) submitted the following resolution; which was referred to the committee on the judiciary:

s. res. 161

whereas young people are our nation’s most important resource, and we, as a society, have a vested interest in enabling children to grow in an environment free from fear and violence;

whereas young people can, by taking responsibility for their own decisions and actions and by positively influencing the decisions and actions of others, help chart a new, less violent course for the entire nation;

whereas students in every school district in the nation will be invited to take part in a day of nationwide observance involving millions of their fellow students, and will thereby be empowered to see themselves as significant agents in a wave of positive social change; and

whereas the observance of october 17, 2001, as a “day of national concern about young people and gun violence” will allow students to make a positive decision about their future by having the opportunity to voluntarily sign the “student pledge against gun violence” and promise that they will never take a gun to school, will never use a gun to settle a dispute; now, therefore, be it resolved, that the senate—

(1) designates october 17, 2001, as a “day of national concern about young people and gun violence”; and

(2) requests that the president issue a proclamation calling on the school children of the united states to observe the day with appropriate ceremonies and activities.

mrs. murray, mr. president, i rise today to submit with senator warner and 27 original cosponsors a resolution that establishes october 17, 2001, as a “day of national concern about young people and gun violence.” i wish to express my appreciation to senator warner in joining me again by shepherding this resolution on his side of the aisle. i thank him for his assistance and support.

the need for this resolution could not be clearer. our nation loses too many young lives to school shootings and other acts of gun violence. these tragedies leave lasting statements on submitted resolutions by mr. santorum (for himself and mr. specter):

s. 141

a bill to establish the oil region national heritage area; to the committee on energy and natural resources.

mr. santorum. mr. president, i rise today to introduce legislation that would establish the oil region national heritage area. this bill is a companion to h.r. 2590, introduced by representative john peterson, which passed the house of representatives on september 10, 2001. this legislation is significant not only to pennsylvania’s history but to our nation’s history and modern, commercial development.

the creation of a national oil heritage region will support the preservation of many natural, cultural and historical resources associated with the site of the first successfully drilled oil well.

the notion of drilling for oil was first considered by the pennsylvania rock oil company who believed that “digging” for oil was too time consuming. acting on the prospect of greater efficiency, the company sent edwin “colonel” drake to titusville, pennsylvania in 1859 to undertake a drilling endeavor. throughout the next year, drake spent his time convincing investors; securing financing; and laying the groundwork to begin actual drilling. a year later, the derrick was built and drilling began. results did not come immediately, but eventually. and so began the modern commercial petroleum industry.

without a doubt, petroleum has played a major part in the history and ultimate development and industrialization of our country. currently, more than 300,000 workers are employed in the oil industry nationwide with more than 8,000 companies producing oil in the united states. the importance of a national heritage region designation will ensure that the vision of a pennsylvania company and edwin drake’s persistence and ultimate success in oil drilling is not only preserved but shared. establishing a national heritage region will coordinate preservation activities and promote the region’s cultural richness through exhibits, displays, and the development of educational and recreational opportunities.

i would be remiss not to mention the significant grassroots support associated with this effort. introduction of this legislation is the product of much collaboration from individuals, businesses, and local government. a key element to securing designations of this kind is assurances of the community’s collective and widespread support. i am confident that such support has been capably demonstrated and proven.

the commonwealth of pennsylvania has also recognized these local efforts, as well the region’s historical significance, by granting a state heritage park designation. today, visitors are able to enjoy cultural and recreational opportunities in the scenic valleys and restored rivers like the allegheny river and oil creek.

the commonwealth of pennsylvania is rich with historical firsts, and the fruitful efforts of edwin drake and the pennsylvania rock oil company are no exception. i am pleased to introduce this legislation today, and to have the shared support of my fellow pennsylvania senator, arlen specter.
The Senate must actively combat this violence and work to address the concerns of families and communities throughout our nation who worry about the safety of their children.

I am introducing this resolution again because I firmly believe that we must involve our children and young people in working to end gun violence. This resolution establishes a special day that gives young people the opportunity to examine how they can help reduce gun violence that targets their peers. Additionally, this special day promotes the Student Pledge Against Gun Violence, an important avenue through which young people can empower themselves and their friends to take action against these tragedies.

The pledge was developed by Mary Lewis Grow, a Minnesota homemaker. Students who sign the pledge agree to never bring a gun to school, to never use a gun to resolve a conflict, and to encourage their friends to do the same. Last year, more than 2.4 million students signed the pledge. The pledge has received national support from such prominent organizations as the National Parent Teacher Association, the National School Boards Association, and the American Medical Association.

It is entirely appropriate that the Senate lend its powerful voice to this cause.

Just imagine how many young people would still be alive today if every student in America had signed, and lived up to, the pledge. Imagine how much happier parents would feel if they knew that their children would not be endangered as they tried to learn. It is clear that if the Senate's support can convince more young people to sign the pledge, and even one more gun from coming to a school, then we have taken a step in the right direction.

The Senate must continue to be active in addressing crime in many ways. We must pass strong and effective antiterrorism legislation that gets criminals off the streets. And we should, through supporting legislation and by example, help parents spend more time with their children and get communities to reach out to those young people who have no one to care for them.

Reducing and ending youth violence will certainly not be easy. But by passing this resolution, we take an important step in the right direction. Let us join with teachers, administrators, parents, and young people in working to empower our young people. Let us encourage all of the Nation in working to end gun violence that targets our young people. Let us encourage all of the Nation in working to empower our young people. Let us encourage all of the Nation in working to empower our young people.

(3) Subsection (d)(3) of such section is amended—

(A) by striking “35 percent” and inserting “the applicable percent”;

(4) by striking “(B) by adding at the end the following:

“The percent applicable for a month under the preceding sentence is the percent specified under subsection (a)(1)(B)(i) as being applicable for the month’’.

(5) $770,000,000 by the end of fiscal year 2011.

(6) EFFECTIVE DATE AND APPLICABILITY.—

This section and the amendments made by this section shall take effect as of September 20, 2001, and shall apply with respect to deaths occurring on or after that date.

SA 1586. Mr. THURMOND (for himself, Mr. LOTT, Mr. BOND, Mr. INOUE, Mr. CLELAND, Mr. HUTCHINSON, Mr. MCCAIN, Mr. LUGAR, Mr. REID, Mr. SESSIONS, Mrs. HUTCHINSON, Mr. WITTMAN, Ms. DAVIS, Mr. SHELBY, Ms. COLLINS, Mr. BREAU, Mr. DODD, Mr. JOHNSON, Mr. ALLEN, Mr. BENNETT, Mr. BINGAMAN, Mr. CARNahan, Mr. CRAPO, Mr. ENSIGN, Mr. HELMS, Mr. INHOFFE, Mr. JEFFORDS, Mr. KERRY, Mrs. LINCOLN, Mrs. MURRAY, Ms. SILLWE, Mr. TORICELLI, and Ms. CANTWELL) submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill S. 1416, to authorize appropriations for fiscal year 2002 for military activities of the Department of Defense, military construction, and defense activities of the Department of Energy, to prescribe personnel strengths for such fiscal year for the Armed Forces, and for other purposes; which was ordered to lie on the table; as follows:

On page 236, between lines 12 and 13, insert the following:

SEC. 562. COMPUTATION OF SURVIVOR BENEFITS.

(a) INCREASED BASIC ANNUITY.—(1) Subsection (a)(1)(B)(i) of section 1458 of title 10, United States Code, is amended by striking “35 percent of the base amount” and inserting “the product of the base amount and the percent applicable for the month. The percent applicable for a month is 35 percent for months beginning on or before the date of the enactment of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2002, 40 percent for months beginning after such date and before October 2005, and 45 percent for months beginning after September 2005.’’.

(b) RECOMPUTATION OF RETIRED PAY REDUCTIONS FOR SUPPLEMENTAL SURVIVOR ANNUITIES.—Section 1457(c) of title 10, United States Code, is amended by striking “5 percent applicable for the month’’.

NOTICES OF HEARINGS/MEETINGS

COMMITTEE ON ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Mr. BINGAMAN. Mr. President, I would like to announce for the information of the Senate and the public that a hearing has been scheduled before the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources.

The hearing will take place on Tuesday, October 2, at 9:30 a.m., in room 366 of the Dirksen Senate Office Building.

The purpose of the hearing is to receive testimony on the status of proposals for the transportation of natural gas from Alaska to markets in the lower 48 States and legislation that may be required to expedite the construction of a pipeline from Alaska.

Those wishing to submit written statements on the legislation should address them to the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources, Attn: Deborah Estes, United States Senate, Washington, D.C. 20510.

For further information, please call Deborah Estes at (202) 224-5360.

SUBCOMMITTEE ON PUBLIC LANDS AND FORESTS

Mr. BINGAMAN. Mr. President, this is to advise you that the Oversight hearing scheduled before the Subcommittee on Public Lands and Forests of the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources on Wednesday, September 26, 2001, in room 366 of the Dirksen Senate Office Building in Washington, D.C. has been postponed. This hearing has not been rescheduled.

The purpose of the hearing was to receive testimony on the science and implementation of the Northwest Forest Plan including its effect on species restoration and timber availability.

For further information, please contact Kira Finkler of the committee staff at (202) 224-8164.

PROGRAM

Mr. REID. Madam President, the majority leader, Senator DASCHLE, asked me to announce that at 8:40 p.m., of course, this evening we are to proceed to the House Chamber for the joint session. Following the joint session, the Senate will adjourn until 9 a.m. tomorrow morning, Friday, September 21. On Friday, there will be 20 minutes of current debate on the nomination of Sharon Pratt Proctor to be United States Circuit Judge and Reggie B. Walton to be United States District Judge.

Two rollcall votes on these nominations will begin at approximately 9:20 tomorrow morning. Following these votes, the Senate will stand in recess subject to the call of the Chair.

Senator DASCHLE has announced that there will be a Democratic caucus at 10 a.m. tomorrow morning.

Madam President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tem. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk provided the roll.

Mr. WYDEN. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tem. Without objection, it is so ordered.

JOINT SESSION OF THE TWO HOUSES—ADDRESS BY THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tem. Under the previous order, the Senate will now proceed in body to the House of Representatives.

Thereupon, at 8:40 p.m., the Senate, preceded by the Secretary of the Senate, Jeri Thomson; the Assistant Sergeant at Arms, Elizabeth McAlhany; and the President pro tempore, proceeded to the Hall of the House of Representatives to hear the address by the President of the United States.

(The address delivered by the President of the United States to the joint session of the two Houses of Congress appears in today's RECORD under "Messages from the President.")

ADJOURNMENT UNTIL 9 A.M. TOMORROW

At the conclusion of the joint session of the two Houses, at 9:44 p.m., the Senate adjourned until Friday, September 21, 2001, at 9 a.m.
The House met at 10 a.m. and was called to order by the Speaker pro tempore (Mr. SIMPSON).

DESIGNATION OF THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore laid before the House the following communication from the Speaker:

I hereby appoint the Honorable MICHAEL K. SIMPSON to act as Speaker pro tempore on this day.

J. DENNIS HASTERT,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.

PRAYER

Dr. Harold Bales, District Superintendent, United Methodist Church, Salisbury, North Carolina, offered the following prayer:

 Eternal God, when we lift our eyes to spacious skies, we know that You are there.

When as if two lightning bolts slice hotly through the high places and plunge us by the thousands into molten, crushing caverns, we know that You are there.

When heroic spirits, roused to action, steer a chariot meant for evil to the right and make a crater of courage in the rich soil of freedom, we know that You are planted there as if a seed, the seed of life.

When wild barbarians spur their murderous winged mount into the encampment of those who serve when called to liberating strife, we know that You are there.

And when representative forces of freedom meet to do their civilizing work, grant, O God, not only Your blessing on their work but grant Your presence there.

So please, God, bless this House and those within it, that through its actions and by Your presence here, justice, mercy, love, and peace may come to reign in every house upon this earth. Amen.

THE JOURNAL

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair has examined the Journal of the last day's proceedings and announces to the House his approval thereof.

Pursuant to clause 1, rule I, the Journal stands approved.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Will the gentleman from New York (Mr. MCNULTY) come forward and lead the House in the Pledge of Allegiance.

Mr. MCNULTY led the Pledge of Allegiance as follows:

I pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America, and to the Republic for which it stands, one nation under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A message from the Senate by Mr. Monahan, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate has passed without amendment a concurrent resolution of the House of the following title:

H. Con. Res. 231. Concurrent resolution providing for a joint session of Congress to receive a message from the President.

The message also announced that the Senate has passed concurrent resolutions of the following titles in which the concurrence of the House is requested:

S. Con. Res. 67. Concurrent resolution permitting the Chairman of the Committee on Rules and Administration of the Senate to designate another member of the Committee to serve on the Joint Committee on Printing in place of the Chairman.

S. Con. Res. 66. Concurrent resolution providing for members of the part of the Senate of the Joint Committee on Printing and the Joint Committee of Congress on the Library.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair desires to announce that the practice of reserving seats prior to the Joint Session by placard will not be allowed.

Members may reserve their seats by physical presence only, following the security sweep of the Chamber.

WELCOMING DR. HAROLD BALES, DISTRICT SUPERINTENDENT, UNITED METHODIST CHURCH, SALISBURY, NORTH CAROLINA

(Mrs. MYRICK asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mrs. MYRICK. Mr. Speaker, it is a true honor for me to have Dr. Harold Bales here to offer prayer to us at this most difficult time in our Nation's history.

Dr. Bales and his wife, Judy, have been friends of my husband, Ed, and myself for over 20 years, as well as pastor. Judy and their daughter, Suzannah, are here with him today.

He has served in many capacities in the Methodist Church, from being a pastor to organizing the World's Fair in Knoxville to administrative positions; and many years ago in Charlotte, he was among the first to recognize our growing problem with homeless people.

When tornados raked through North and South Carolina in 1986, Harold was one of the first responders, not only with spiritual leadership, but also in a relief and recovery effort in the basement of First Methodist, over a hundred miles away.

Recently he has battled cancer, but that has not stopped him from caring and working for others. Harold relieves everyone feel comfortable, and he has always got a real story to tell that is funny as the dickens.

As an instrument of reconciliation, Harold has repeatedly brought together people of diverse beliefs and different factions to celebrate their similarities in honor of God. His surgeon, who coincidentally was also my surgeon for breast cancer, recently shared something with me. She has become a dear friend, also.

Dr. Teresa Flippo told me that he always had an aura of calm about him. Whenever he would come in and when she would go in to see him, he would end up ministering to her and really being concerned about all the stresses that she underwent in her profession, had far more concern for her than he did for his own condition.

That is Dr. Bales, a true servant of God.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. SIMPSON). The Chair will entertain 10 one-minute speeches per side.

HELPING CHILDREN AFFECTED BY SEPTEMBER 11 TERRORISM

(Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN. Mr. Speaker, in scenes worse than a horror movie, Americans witnessed hijacked planes slam into the World Trade Center and the Pentagon and fall to the ground in Pittsburgh. In the blink of an eye, thousands of lives were snatched and Americans lost our sense of safety.

For millions who watched the carnage, the harrowing images will be imprinted forever in our memory. But for the children who lost a parent in this catastrophic act of terror, their lives will never be the same again.

Today, I am proud to join my colleagues, the gentlewoman from Texas (Ms. JACKSON-LEE), in introducing H. Con. Res. 228. This resolution calls for immediate benefits for children who lost one or both parents or guardians in the multiple tragedies.

H. Con. Res. 228 will ensure that services for these children will include, but not be limited to, foster care, medical assistance, and psychological services which they so desperately need.

All the money and the services in the world could never replace the loss of their loved ones. But although money cannot heal their scars, with the passage of this resolution, we can begin to bandage their deep wound.

I hope our colleagues sign on to H. Con. Res. 228.

HELPING AIRLINES TO RECOVER

(Mrs. CHRISTENSEN asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Mrs. CHRISTENSEN. Mr. Speaker, every day for the past 8 days, we have watched with deep respect and gratitude as our firefighters, emergency medical personnel, police, soldiers, counselors, and volunteers rescued and then continued the search and the clearing of the debris of the buildings and lives left by the terrorists.

This morning, I want to especially recognize another group of brave and caring people, our airline pilots, cockpit crews, and flight attendants who went back to work and continue to work every day to get us to our destinations safely and comfortably.

Thank you to those at American who took me to mine last weekend and those at all of the other airlines which serve the many cities in all of our districts.

In a few days, we will have the opportunity to really show our gratitude and pass a package to keep our planes flying and thousands of people in the jobs they need so they can provide for themselves and their families. Let us do it.

KEEPING FOCUSED ON KEEPING AMERICA STRONG

(Mr. OSBORNE asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. OSBORNE. Mr. Speaker, this past week the response of Congress and the American people has been tremendous. We have seen patriotism, bipartisanship, and spiritual renewal, which has been unprecedented in our lifetime.

The focus of Congress has been on the best interests of the country, not on personal ambition or party superiority. The key question is this: What will our focus be next week, next month, and next year?

The best thing that we can do as a Congress to combat terrorism is to, first, display unity of purpose, to serve the national interests above all else; second, provide total commitment, staying power over the coming months and years. This is not going to be a sprint; it is going to be an endurance race. And victory will not go to the swiftest, but to those who have the most resolve and the most commitment.

Third, I think we must support the administration and the military and avoid micromanaging. We cannot become military and tactical experts from this floor.

The Nation will be watching. Our enemies will be watching. Congress will set the tone, one way or another.

A TIME FOR WAR

(Mr. PENCE asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. PENCE. Mr. Speaker, as was written long ago, there is a time for everything, and a season for every activity under heaven; a time to be born, and a time to die; a time to tear down, and a time to build; a time for war, and a time for peace.

Tonight, as our American President will again walk the blue carpet of this Chamber to lead our Nation in a time of war, my hope and my prayer, Mr. Speaker, is that this President will reflect the heart of the American people from this Chamber. I know there is a need to plan, to prepare, to deploy. But justice is inherently impatient, and so am I.

Mr. Speaker, I pray that the President knows in the defense of our Nation, now is the time to tear down. Now is the time for war.

REOPENING AMERICA’S AIRPORT

(Ms. NORTON asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. NORTON. Mr. Speaker, America’s airport, National Airport, remains closed as a lasting symbol of the attack of September 11. Until it is reopened, the terrorists have a temporary victory.

I would be the last to want us to be reckless. Not only do I live here, 600,000 people whom I represent live here. But they want this airport opened with security, and so does America. Part of the problem may be that there are so many issues with which our country must cope that National Airport may not be getting the attention it deserves.

The Congress and the administration must focus on National Airport because of what it means, not to the capital of the United States, but to our country. As immediate steps, the recommendation that the shuttles be opened is most important, because it would unite Washington with New York and Boston, the two cities that were the objects of attack.

We must make National Airport a pilot for airport security for the Nation. To be sure, many jobs and the economy of this city and region are at stake. More important, opening the airport would be a giant symbol of our willingness to fight back.

Mr. Speaker, this is the time for war. Now is the time to tear down. Now is the time for war.

The Wall Street Journal reports today that bin Laden’s fortune is nowhere close to the $300 million stated in some stories, that his fortune has been wildly exaggerated, and bin Laden’s network is a “primitive and cheap force.” Besides that, we have just appropriated $40 billion in emergency funding, and today we start on a bill to give the military the biggest increase in history following 6 straight years of multi-billion dollar increases.

I believe bin Laden has probably been shocked by the worldwide condemnation he received even from people and countries he probably thought would support him. We need to take the terrorists’ threats very seriously, but it would be a very bad mistake to greatly overreact. We need to carry on the other functions of government too, and as President Bush has urged, try to get back to normal as soon as we possibly can.
Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H.R. 2061, legislation I introduced on June 5, 2001, to remove the provision of Southeastern University charter requiring that one-third of the board of trustees be Southeastern alumni.

Southeastern University President Charlene Drew Jarvis and the board of trustees asked me to introduce this corrective measure. The bill unanimously passed in both the subcommittee of the District of Columbia and the full Committee on Government Reform.

Mr. Speaker, I want to express my appreciation to the Chair of the subcommittee for the District of Columbia, the gentlewoman from Maryland (Mrs. MORELLA), for her support of H.R. 2061 and for her continuing support of all we do in the District of Columbia.

Southeastern University was incorporated in the District of Columbia by an act of Congress on October 19, 1937. Its charter contains a provision requiring that one-third of the University’s board of trustees be alumni. On September 9, 1997, I received letters from Southeastern University President Charlene Drew Jarvis and board of trustees Chair Elizabeth Lisboa-Farrow asking that I introduce legislation to remove this provision.

President Jarvis and the board of trustees would like this provision removed in order to let the university draw from a wider pool of potential board nominees. Because the university was incorporated by an act of Congress, only the Congress can effectuate this change.

Southeastern University is an important and productive institution which contributes to higher education and the economy of the District of Columbia by offering undergraduate and graduate degrees geared specifically to the needs of working professionals such as accounting, banking, business management, computer science, information systems management, health servces administration, government management, marketing and taxation.

Under the able leadership of Southeast’s president, Dr. Charlene Drew Jarvis, who formerly served with this provision removed, the university has emerged from past difficulties and reached many milestones.

For example, in 1997, the Consortium of Universities of the Washington Metropolitan Area admitted Southeastern to its membership. Since Ms. Jarvis has been president, Southeastern’s enrollment has doubled. Southeastern has developed productive partnerships with local businesses that foster community involvement, while at the same time promoting educational achievement. One such partnership is D.C. Link and Learn, an after-school training center founded with Southeastern’s help near Southeast’s main campus. In addition, Southeastern has obtained

AWARDING CONGRESSIONAL GOLD MEDALS

(Mr. TANCREDO asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. TANCREDO. Mr. Speaker, there are countless heroes that have emerged from this tragedy, firefighters, police and others who have offered themselves in aid to their fellow citizens; but a few have risen even above those, and these are the folks that through their acts of incredible valor actually saved the lives of countless others. They are Jeremy Glick, Todd Beamer, Tom Burn-

nett, and Mark Bingham and the other members of the crew and passengers of Flight 93 that were hijacked.

These people did something so extraordinary that it deserves the attention of this Congress. The way we are able to provide that attention is to award them and the other members of the crew and the passengers of that plane who participated in the events that prevented that plane from reaching its ultimate destination and killing who knows how many other people. We should, in fact, therefore, bestow on them the Congressional Gold Medal.

Mr. Speaker, I am introducing legislation today for that purpose, and I encourage all of my colleagues to join me in that effort.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. SIMPSON). Pursuant to clause 8, rule XX, the Chair announces that he will postpone further proceedings today on each motion to suspend the rules on which a recorded vote or the yeas and nays are ordered, or on which the vote is ordered to be taken under clause 6, rule XX.

Any record votes on postponed questions will be taken after debate has concluded on all motions to suspend the rules, but not before noon today.

AMENDING CHARTER OF SOUTHEASTERN UNIVERSITY OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

Mrs. MORELLA. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H.R. 2061) to amend the charter of Southeastern University of the District of Columbia.

The Clerk read as follows:

H.R. 2061

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. AMENDMENTS TO CHARTER OF SOUTHEASTERN UNIVERSITY REGARDING BOARD OF TRUSTEES.

(a) In General.—Section 3 of the Act entitled “An Act for the relief of the Southeastern University of the Young Men’s Christian Association of the District of Columbia”, approved August 19, 1937 (50 Stat. 687), as amended by section 1 of the Act entitled “An Act to amend the charter of Southeastern University of the District of Columbia”, approved October 10, 1966 (80 Stat. 883), is amended—

(1) in the first sentence, by striking “one-third of whom” and all that follows and in-serting a period; and

(2) in the second sentence, by striking “elected for a term” and inserting “elected by the board for a term”.

(b) TREATMENT OF CURRENT TRUSTEES.—The amendment made by subsection (a) shall not affect the term of office of any individual serving on the Board of Trustees of Southeastern University as of the date of the enactment of this Act.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentlewoman from Maryland (Mrs. MORELLA) and the gentletewoman from the District of Columbia (Ms. NORTON) each will control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentlewoman from Maryland (Mrs. MORELLA).

Mrs. MORELLA. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks on H.R. 2061.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentlewoman from Maryland?

There was no objection.

Mrs. MORELLA. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, our colleague and ranking member of the subcommittee of the District of Columbia, the gentlewoman from the District of Columbia (Ms. NORTON), introduced H.R. 2061 on June 5, 2001. The subcommittee on the District of Columbia considered and marked up the bill on June 26, and the legislation was considered and ordered reported by the Committee on Government Reform on July 25.

H.R. 2061 amends the charter of Southeastern University of the District of Columbia and removes a provision in its charter requiring that one-third of the board of directors of the university be alumni of the university. This provision would enable the university to attract a wider pool of nominees to the board.

I want to thank the gentlewoman from the District of Columbia (Ms. NORTON) for introducing this legislation on behalf of the president and board of directors of Southeastern University. I also want to recognize the dedicated work of Dr. Charlene Drew Jarvis, who has headed Southeastern’s president, Dr. Charlene Drew Jarvis and the board of trustees Chair Elizabeth Lisboa-Farrow, to remove this provision.

Southeastern University is an important and productive institution which contributes to higher education and the economy of the District of Columbia by offering undergraduate and graduate degrees geared specifically to the needs of working professionals such as accounting, banking, business management, computer science, information systems management, health serv-

ces administration, government management, marketing and taxation.

Under the able leadership of Southeast’s president, Dr. Charlene Drew Jarvis, who formerly served as a member of our city council for 17 years, the university has emerged from past difficulties and reached many milestones.

For example, in 1997, the Consortium of Universities of the Washington Metropolitan Area admitted Southeastern to its membership. Since Ms. Jarvis has been president, Southeastern’s enrollment has doubled. Southeastern has developed productive partnerships with local businesses that foster community involvement, while at the same time promoting educational achievement. One such partnership is D.C. Link and Learn, an after-school training center founded with Southeastern’s help near Southeast’s main campus. In addition, Southeastern has obtained cooperative agreements with the Washington Teachers’ Union and the Greater Washington Society of Certified Public Accountants to create partnerships in support of professional development programs.

Mr. Speaker, H.R. 2061 will allow Southeastern to complement these and other efforts under way to strengthen the university’s role in the life of the District of Columbia. I urge my colleagues to support this corrective measure.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mrs. MORELLA. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests to speak on this very important bill, and I urge my colleagues to support H.R. 2061.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. SIMPSON). The question is on the motion offered by the gentlewoman from Maryland (Mrs. MORELLA) that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 2061.

The question was taken; and two-thirds of the Members voting in favor thereof the rules were suspended and the bill was passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA FAMILY COURT ACT OF 2001

Mrs. MORELLA. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H.R. 2657) to amend title 11, District of Columbia Code, to redesignate the Family Division of the Superior Court of the District of Columbia as the Family Court of the Superior Court, to re-cruit and retain trained and experienced judges to serve in the Family Court, to balance the efficiency in the assignment of judges to the Family Court and in the consideration of actions and proceedings in the Family Court, and for other purposes.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the “District of Columbia Family Court Act of 2001”.

SEC. 2. REDESIGNATION OF FAMILY DIVISION AS FAMILY COURT OF THE SUPERIOR COURT.

(a) In General.—Section 11–902, District of Columbia Code, is amended to read as follows:

“11–902. Organization of the court.

(a) In General.—The Superior Court shall consist of the Family Court of the Superior Court and the following divisions of the Superior Court:

(1) The Civil Division.

(2) The Criminal Division.

(3) The Probate Division.

(4) The Tax Division.

(b) Branches.—The divisions of the Superior Court may be divided into such branches as the Superior Court may by rule prescribe.

(c) Designation of Presiding Judge of Family Court.—The chief judge of the Superior Court may assign to the Family Court the presiding judge of the Superior Court.

(d) Jurisdiction.—The Family Court shall have exclusive jurisdiction over the actions, applications, determinations, adjudications, and proceedings described in section 11–1101, except that those actions within the jurisdiction of the Domestic Violence Unit (a section of the Civil Division, Criminal Division, and the Family Court) and under Family Court Act, 2001, Act 80–25 (October 31, 1996) shall remain in that Unit.

(1) Conforming Amendments to Chapter 12.—Section 11–906(b), District of Columbia Code, is amended by inserting “Family Court” and before “the various divisions”.

(2) Conforming Amendments to Chapter 3.—Section 11–916.103, District of Columbia Code, is amended by the Family Division” and inserting “Family Court”.

(3) Item relating to chapter 11 in the table of chapters for title 11, District of Columbia Code, is amended by striking “Family Division” and inserting “Family Court”.

(4) General References to Proceedings.—Chapter 23 of title 11, District of Columbia Code, is amended by inserting after section 16–2301 the following new section:

“16–2301.1. References deemed to refer to Family Court of the Superior Court.

Upon the effective date of the District of Columbia Family Court Act, any references in this chapter or any other Federal or District of Columbia law, Executive order, rule, regulation, delegation of authority, or any document or pertaining to the Family Division of the Superior Court of the District of Columbia shall be deemed to refer to the Family Court of the Superior Court of the District of Columbia.

(4) Clerical Amendment.—The following new section:

“16–2301.1. References deemed to refer to Family Court of the Superior Court.

SEC. 3. APPOINTMENT AND ASSIGNMENT OF JUDGES; NUMBER AND QUALIFICATIONS.

(a) Number of Judges for Family Court; Qualifications and Terms of Service.—Chapter 9 of title 11, District of Columbia Code, is amended by inserting after section 11–908 the following new section:

“11–908A. Special rules regarding assignment and service of judges of Family Court.

(a) Number of Judges.—The number of judges serving on the Family Court of the Superior Court at any time may not be

(1) less than the number of judges determined by the chief judge of the Superior Court to be needed to serve on the Family Court under the transition plan for the Family Court if the chief judge determines that the President and Congress under section 3(b) of the District of Columbia Family Court Act of 2001 or

(2) greater than 15.

(b) Qualifications.—The chief judge may not assign an individual to serve on the Family Court of the Superior Court unless

(1) the individual has training or expertise in the Family Court.

(2) the individual certifies to the chief judge that the individual intends to serve the full term of service, except that this paragraph shall not apply with respect to individuals serving as senior judges under section 11–1504; and

(3) the individual certifies to the chief judge that the individual will participate in the ongoing programs carried out for judges of the Family Court under section 11–1504(c).

(c) Term of Service.—

(1) In General.—Except as provided in paragraph (2), an individual assigned to serve as a judge of the Family Court of the Superior Court shall serve for a term of 3 years.

(2) Special Rule for Judges Serving on Superior Court on Date of Enactment of Family Court Act.—

(A) In General.—An individual assigned to serve as a judge of the Family Court of the Superior Court who is serving as a judge in the Family Division of the Court on the date of the enactment of the District of Columbia Family Court Act of 2001, the 3-year term applicable under subparagraph (A) shall be reduced by the length of any period of consecutive service as a judge in such Division as of the date of the enactment of such Act.

(3) Assignment for Additional Service.—After the term of service of a judge of the Family Court (as described in paragraph (1) or paragraph (2) expires, at the judge’s request the judge may be assigned for additional service on the Family Court for a period of such duration (consistent with section 43(c) of the District of Columbia Home Rule Act) as the chief judge may provide.

(4) Permits Service on Family Court for Entire Term.—At the request of the judge, a judge may serve as a judge of the Family Court for the judge’s entire term of service as a judge of the Superior Court under section 43(c) of the District of Columbia Home Rule Act.

(d) Reassignment to Other Divisions.—The chief judge may reassign a judge of the Family Court to any division of the Superior Court if the chief judge determines that the judge is unable to continue serving in the Family Court.

(1) Plan for Family Court Transition.—In the case of a judge who is serving as a judge of the Superior Court, the transition plan for the Family Court shall include in the plan the following:

A. The chief judge’s determination of the number of judges needed to serve on the Family Court.
(B) The chief judge's determination of the role and function of the presiding judge of the Family Court.

(C) The chief judge's determination of the number of magistrate judges of the Family Court needed for appointment under section 11–1104(a), District of Columbia Code (as added by section 4(a)), regarding the promulgation of rules to enforce the “one family, one judge” requirement for cases and proceedings in the Family Court.

(G) An analysis of the needs of the Family Court for space, equipment, and other physical plant requirements, as determined in consultation with the Administrator of General Services.

(H) An analysis of the success of the use of magistrate judges under the expedited appointment procedures established under section 6(d) in reducing the number of pending actions and proceedings within the jurisdiction of the Family Court (as described in section 11–1101, District of Columbia Code, as amended by subsection (a)).

(1) Consistent with the requirements of paragraph (2), a proposal and timetable for the disposition and disposition of actions and proceedings pending in the Family Division of the Superior Court as of the date of the enactment of this Act (together with actions and proceedings described in section 11–1101, District of Columbia Code, which were initiated in the Family Division but remain pending in other Divisions of the Superior Court as of such date), and a timetable for the disposition of actions and proceedings pending in the Family Division of the Superior Court of the District of Columbia as of the date of the enactment of this Act (together with actions and proceedings described in section 11–1101, District of Columbia Code, which were initiated in the Family Division but remain pending in other Divisions of the Superior Court as of such date), but in no event may any such action or proceeding remain pending longer than 18 months after the date the chief judge submits the transition plan required under paragraph (1) to the President and Congress.

(2) TRANSFER OF ACTIONS AND PROCEEDINGS.—The chief judge of the Superior Court shall take such steps as may be necessary to provide for the earliest practicable disposition of actions and proceedings pending in the Family Division of the Superior Court of the District of Columbia Code, as amended by subsection (a), which begin on the date the chief judge submits the transition plan required under paragraph (1) to the President and Congress.

(3) TRANSFER OF ACTIONS AND PROCEEDINGS.—The chief judge of the Superior Court shall take such steps as may be required to ensure that each action or proceeding described in section 9 is transferred or otherwise assigned to the Family Court immediately upon such date.

(4) EFFECTIVE DATE OF IMPLEMENTATION OF PLAN.—The chief judge of the Superior Court may not take any action to implement the transition plan under this subsection until the Chief Judge of the Superior Court under section 9 is transferred or otherwise assigned to the Family Court of the District of Columbia Code, as amended by subsection (a).

(i) The action or proceeding involves an allegation of abuse or neglect.

(ii) The action or proceeding was initiated in the Family Division prior to the date on which the action or proceeding was assigned under this section.

(iii) The judge to whom the action or proceeding is assigned as of the date of the enactment of this Act.

(D) DECISIONS DURING TRANSITION.—During the period which begins on the date of the enactment of this Act and ends on the effective date described in section 9, any reference to the Family Court of the Superior Court of the District of Columbia in any provision of law added or amended by this section shall be deemed to be a reference to the Family Division of the Superior Court of the District of Columbia.

SEC. 7. SENSE OF CONGRESS REGARDING BORDER AGREEMENT WITH MARYLAND AND VIRGINIA.

It is the sense of Congress that the State of Maryland, the Commonwealth of Virginia, and the District of Columbia should promptly enter into an agreement to facilitate the timely and safe placement of children in the District of Columbia's welfare system in foster and kinship homes and other facilities in Maryland and Virginia.

SEC. 8. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

There are authorized to be appropriated to the District of Columbia courts such sums as may be necessary to carry out this Act and the amendments made by this Act, including sums necessary for salaries and expenses and capital improvements for the District of Columbia courthouse facilities.

SEC. 9. EFFECTIVE DATE.

The amendments made by sections 2 and 4 shall take effect on the first date occurring after the date of the enactment of this Act on which 10 individuals who meet the qualifications described in section 11–908A, District of Columbia Code (as added by section 3(a)) are assigned by the chief judge of the Superior Court of the District of Columbia to serve as associate judges of the Family Court of the Superior Court (as certified by the chief judge).

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from Maryland (Mrs. MORELLA) and the gentleman from the District of Columgentleman from Texas, Cassie Bevan, who has devoted untold hours in crafting this legislation, holding meetings with other staff, the courts, and various agencies involved in bringing this legislation to its present form.

I also want to recognize Jon Bouker of the staff of the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. Tom Davis) who worked with Cassie Bevan to bring this bill to the floor. So it has been a collaborative effort.

Mr. Speaker, I urge our colleagues to support H.R. 2657, a bill which will be beneficial to the most vulnerable children of the District of Columbia and their families.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Ms. NORTON. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of H.R. 2657, the District of Columbia Family Court Act of 2001. However, I want first to thank the current Chair of the Subcommittee on the District of Columbia, the gentlewoman from Maryland (Mrs. Morella), and the former chair of the subcommittee, the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. Tom Davis), for their contributions to the bill; also, the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. Delahunt) who assisted with this bill, though he is not a member of our subcommittee; our full committee chairman, the gentleman from Indiana (Mr. Burton), and the ranking member, the gentleman from California (Mr. Waxman), for their leadership and for expediting this bill, which needed the permission of the chair and the ranking member to come to the House floor without a full committee markup after it passed our subcommittee unanimously.

Mr. Speaker, I take my truncated action was necessary in order to assure that the bill was ready for the floor in time for the fiscal 2002 appropriation process.

If I may say so, Mr. Speaker, Cassie Bevan and Jon Bouker, Cassie Bevan of the staff of the gentleman from Texas (Mr. Delay) and Jon Bouker of my staff, did much of the heavy lifting to get this bill to the point that we find it today. We very much appreciate their hard work.

I would particularly like to thank the majority whip of the House, the gentleman from Texas (Mr. Delay), whose interest, energy, and commitment has been an indispensible force behind this Act.

The gentleman from Texas (Mr. Delay) and I are not of the same party, but he and I share an overriding concern for the children of this country and for children caught in the District's foster care system.

The concern and involvement of the gentleman from Texas did not end with this bill, or with seeking to have it reach the floor expeditiously. The gentleman from Texas (Mr. Delay) is chiefly responsible for the millions of dollars that are now part of the D.C. budget. He has spearheaded the reforms that this bill mandates.

I also appreciate the support of the gentleman from Texas (Mr. Delay) for the return of the agency responsible for foster care in the District, the Child and Family Services Agency, to the D.C. government from a failed Federal court receivership.

The need to update the Family Division became a priority as a result of the tragic death of Brianna Blackmond, an infant who was allowed to return to her troubled mother without a hearing after it was alleged that lawyers representing all the parties, the social workers, and the guardians ad litem all certified that the child should be returned.

Several important investigations followed the child's death, especially concerning the agency chiefly responsible, the Child and Family Services Agency, then under a Federal court receivership. Because a Federal court had jurisdiction, we held hearings in the Subcommittee on the District of Columbia on the District's child welfare system. My staff and I commenced a detailed investigation of best practices of family courts and family divisions here and around the country, and began writing a bill, because D.C. local courts are Federal courts not under the jurisdiction of the D.C. government.

Meanwhile, the gentleman from Texas (Mr. Delay) and his staff also were working on a bill, and we soon began working together to produce a single product, with support and assistance from our Chair, the gentlewoman from Maryland (Mrs. Morella), from the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. Tom Davis), the judge members, and other interested Members.

The Family Court Act is the result of this joint effort, the culmination of a collegial process spanning several months. The subcommittee held a hearing on the Family Court Act on June 26, 2001, prior to reporting it unanimously to the full committee.

It must be noted that the D.C. City Council is far more familiar with the children and families of the city than we in the Congress, and are best qualified to write such a bill. However, when the Home Rule Act was passed in 1973, Congress withheld jurisdiction over Federal courts from the city. The District of Columbia needs to have the same control over its courts as other cit- ies.

In the meantime, at my request, the council passed a resolution in support of the reforms in this bill, after scrutinizing it and offering their own recommendations for changes. We have also cooperated with Mayor Anthony Williams and Chief Judge Rufus King and the judges of the Superior Court in writing this bill.

The D.C. Family Court Act of 2001 is the first overhaul of our Family Division since 1970, when it was upgraded to be part of the Superior Court of the District of Columbia, formerly called Juvenile Court, then called Juvenile Court, was a stand-alone court that had become a place apart, in effect a ghetto court, to which the city's most troubled children and families were sent, away from the formal judicial system and out of sight, which left children and families out of mind until the Juvenile Court was abolished as hopelessly ineffective and poorly funded.

All agree that the Family Division has proved to be a vast improvement over the Juvenile Court, despite the increasing number of abused and neglected children, troubled juveniles, and families in crisis typical of big cities and of foster care systems in rural communities.

However, no court or other institution should go on without a full examination of its strengths and weaknesses. The Family Division increasingly has been taxed by intractable societal problems, and, in addition, must depend on an outside agency, the Child and Family Services Agency, which only recently had been adjudged so dysfunctional that it had been taken over by the Federal courts and placed in receivership.

Our bill incorporates what we found in our investigation to be the best practices from successful independent family courts and family divisions as a part of family courts across the country.

These courts have in common several basic reforms: creating an independent family court or division; providing ample family court judges to handle family matters; mandating terms for judges in family court; requiring family court judges may not also have any other court personnel to have training or expertise in family law; requiring ongoing training of family court judges and other personnel; employing alternative dispute resolution and mediation in family cases; adhering to the standard of "one family one judge" in family cases; retaining family cases in the Family Court and the Family Court alone; using magistrate judges to assist family court judges with their caseloads; and dedicating special magistrate judges to assist judges with current pending cases.

The D.C. Family Court Act incorporates all of these best practices.

As important as our bill is, the major benefit for children and families in the District is not the court but the Child and Family Services Agency. The court needs more resources and it needs modernization. CFSA needs a complete makeover. Yet, after 6 years the Court of Columbia Affairs (CFSA) is returning to the District largely because the receivership failed, not because that agency has been revitalized.
Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

MRS. MORELLA. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentlewoman from the District of Columbia (Ms. Norton) for her wonderful comments, but even beyond that, for the work that has been done through the years to make this bill possible. As was mentioned time and time again, this has been a collaborative effort. But all collaborative efforts have to have a leader. They have to have somebody who is going to guide, watch over, and make sure and bring the parties together.

Mr. Speaker, it is my pleasure to yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. DeLay), who is that person and that leader.

Mr. DeLAY. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentlewoman for yielding time to me, and for her kind remarks. I thank the gentlewoman from Washington, D.C. (Ms. Norton) for her kind remarks.

Mr. Speaker, first day of the rest of reform in the child welfare system in Washington, D.C. This is not the end of reform, as the gentlewoman from the District of Columbia (Ms. Norton) has so eloquently stated. This is an ongoing effort. It is going to take everybody in Washington, D.C., as well as in Congress, to do what is necessary to save the kids of the District.

Mr. Speaker, the purpose of the District of Columbia Family Court Act of 2001 is to save lives of children in the District. We do this by creating a specialized Family Court that will allow judges to spend more time hearing, reviewing, and monitoring the accomplishments of abused and neglected children.

The work that has been done by the gentlewoman from the District of Columbia (Ms. Norton), the gentlewoman from Maryland (Mrs. Morella), and the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. Tom Davis) is exemplary, and it has taken a long, hard road to get to where we are in putting this legislation together.

I also want to thank my colleague, the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. Delahunt), who has had his input and his support for this legislation, obviously. I too want to thank the real movers and shakers of this House. And that is the staff, John Bouker, staff member of the gentlewoman from the District of Columbia (Ms. Norton); Russell Smith and Reesa Vazirani-Pales of the office of the gentlewoman from Maryland (Mrs. Morella); Victoria Proctor and Melissa Wojciak of the office of the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. Tom Davis); and Mark Agrast of the office of the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. Delahunt).

Most importantly, the driving force for all of us is a woman that is really incredible in her knowledge of what children need, especially abused and neglected children and their needs, is Dr. Casie Bevan on my staff. Without her leadership, none of this would have happened.

Last week, The Washington Post ran a series of articles under the headline ‘‘Protected Children Died as Government Did Little.’’ The Post attributed 40 child deaths in the past decade, including Brianna Blackmond, to the District’s failed child protection system. This system includes the judges and the Superior Court as well as the social workers and the police. Our bill aims to put the need of the children for safety and permanency first. And here is how we do it:

We require that the judges be trained before they serve on Family Court. We mandate that judges sit on the Family Court bench for 5 years, long enough to achieve effectiveness. We insist that every judge that serves on the Family Court be a volunteer.

Our bill creates a separate pool of judges to set on Family Court with the desired training and expertise necessary to serve. Training is critical for judges who have to decide if and when a home is too dangerous for a child to remain there or safe enough for a child to be returned.

Meaningful change cannot happen without committed judges. That is why I believe that 5-year terms are a key measure. A 5-year term on Family Court increases the chance that a judge really wants to serve on this bench and is not just serving time.

Today, judges who rotate off the family division bench take cases with them. Our bill ends that practice. A specialized family court, by its very nature, requires that all family cases remain in this court until they are heard. The ‘‘one judge, one family’’ concept is central to real reform. Only a judge who knows the full history surrounding a child’s family and reasons for placement will be better able to consider the child’s best interests.

Our bill provides resources to hire more judges and magistrate judges in order to decrease the number of children seen by each judicial officer. With this change, more time can be spent with the children and their families to better identify their need and to monitor progress.

Funds are provided under this bill to upgrade and integrate the computer systems at the courts and at the Child and Family Services agency so that they work together, as they have not in the past.

Finally, our bill authorizes funds for expanding courtroom facilities to accommodate the increased number of judges and magistrates hired to hear these cases. We hope this expansion will lead to closer monitoring of the cases and increased judicial oversight. Too many cries have gone unanswered.
I cannot say enough about the work that has been done on behalf of the children of the District in pulling this bill together. I greatly appreciate everyone who put their heart and soul into this. The children will benefit.

Mr. Speaker, I am attaching a section-by-section analysis of my state containing my comments and summarizing congressional intent supporting each provision. I insert this for the record so that the intent of Congress in passing this legislation is clear and unequivocal.

District of Columbia Family Court Act of 2001

PURPOSE

To redesignate the Family Division as a Family Court of the Superior Court. To recruit and retain trained and experienced judges to serve in the Family Court.

Intent: This legislation is intended to reorganize the Family Division so that more time will be spent on making expeditious and informed decisions that affect the lives of the children brought before the court. This legislation will come specialized judges who volunteer to serve on the Family Court and to sit on the bench for 5 years, so that they can gain the experience necessary to make good decisions that will impact the lives and the futures of the children that come before them.

Section 1. Short title

Title: District of Columbia Family Court Act of 2001

Section 2. Redesignation of Family Division as Family Court of the Superior Court

The Family Division of the Superior Court is renamed the Family Court of the Superior Court.

Intent: Note that we considered creating a separate court but were concerned about the additional expenses for administration and facilities. It was decided that it would be more practical to establish a Family Court that will make the safety and permanency of abused children its highest and exclusive priority. This is accomplished by reforming the way the Family Court is organized to create specialized pools for the recruitment of judges, to limit the judicial term to five years, and to increase the training and expertise of the judges.

The Chief Judge of Superior Court assigns a judge as the Presiding Judge of Family Court.

Intent: While the assignment of a Presiding Judge is left to the Chief Judge, the intent of Congress is to make the Presiding Judge be the one who should be given sufficient authority so that more time will be spent on making expeditious and informed decisions that affect the lives of the children brought before the court. The Presiding Judge shall have the power to reassign a judge of the Family Court to another case or another judge, if the Presiding Judge determines that the judge is unable to continue serving.

A judge is permitted to serve on Family Court for the entire term of service that is 15 years.

Intent: The purpose of this provision is to allow a judge who wants to serve on the Family Court for his/her entire career to do so.

Family Court judges may be reassigned for additional terms of service as the chief judge may provide.

The chief judge may reassign a judge of the Family Court because of poor job performance or because the judge’s ability to serve the Family Court is questioned.

Within 90 days, the chief judge must submit a transition plan for the Family Court to the President and to Congress containing the following: (A) a determination of the number of judges needed to serve on the Family Court; (B) a determination of the role and function of the presiding judge of the Family Court; (C) a determination of the number of magistrate judges needed for appointed cases; (D) a determination of the appropriate functions of the magistrate judges together with compensation and other personnel matters; (E) a plan for a case flow, budgetary, and staffing needs; (F) description of how the Superior Court will implement the “one family one judge” requirement for cases and proceedings; (G) an analysis of the needs of the Family Court for space, equipment, and other physical requirements; (H) an analysis of the effectiveness of expedited cases; (I) a determination of the magistrate judge’s ability to handle cases, and best practices.

Intent: It is critical that this transition plan be based on an empirical analysis of the number of cases, the equipment and staffing needs, the adequacy of the facility. This is meant to be a “needs assessment” plan based on data analysis. The plan must specify the court’s budgetary, case management, and staffing needs (both judicial and non-judicial); (F) a description of how the Superior Court will implement the “one family one judge” requirement for cases and proceedings; (G) an analysis of the needs of the Family Court for space, equipment, and other physical requirements; (H) an analysis of the effectiveness of expedited cases; (I) a determination of the magistrate judge’s ability to handle cases, and best practices.

The chief judge must take action to provide for the earliest practicable return or resolution of all cases carried by judges outside of the Family Division to the Family Court but this must take place no later than 18 months from the submission of the transition plan.

Intent: While the statute allows the chief judge 18 months to complete the return of all cases, the chief judge should order the Family Court as soon as the magistrate judges are hired.

The chief judge must ensure that cases pending within the jurisdiction of the Family Court as of the date of enactment are immediately assigned to the Family Court.
The chief judge may not take any action to implement the transition plan until Congress and the President have 30 days to review.

Intent: The purpose here is to ensure that Congress and the President have time to review the delivery of services.

The chief judge must include in the transition plan an analysis of how many judges currently on the bench in Superior Court meet the qualifications for judges of Family Court. If the chief judge determines that the number is less than the number needed to serve on Family Court a request must be made to the President for the appointment of additional judges for Family Court.

Intent: At the time of passage in the House, it is unclear how many judges sitting on the bench will volunteer for the Family Court or qualify under this proposal to sit. Therefore, it is important that the chief judge only after review make a request for a specified number of additional judges.

After receiving the request from the chief judge the President must appoint additional qualified judges to serve on the Family Court. The District of Columbia Judicial Nomination Commission, upon the request from the chief judge, must provide nominees to fill these vacancies in the Superior Court equal to the number of judges appointees requested by the chief judge and must recruit individuals for nomination to the Superior Court who meet the qualifications for judges of Family Court.

For the purpose of making the transition only the initial appointments to Family Court will be made without regard to the limit on the number of Superior Court Judges.

Intent: The appointments without regard to the limit on the number of Superior Court judges are one-time only.

The Comptroller General is required to submit a report analyzing the impact of these reforms on the time required to make appointments to the Family Court, on the impact of the magistrate judges on the workload of judges, on how the number of judges may be affected by the qualification requirements for judges, and, on the timeliness of the resolution of cases.

The chief judge must submit a status report to the President and Congress on the backlog of cases that are still outside of the Family Court.

Intent: While the chief judge has 18 months to return all the cases to the Family Court, Congress requires the chief judge to provide a status report every six months on the progress of the return of these cases to the Family Court.

Section 4. Improving administration of cases and proceedings in Family Court

To the greatest extent practicable, cases must be resolved through alternative dispute resolution and judicially tractable.

The Superior Court must establish standards of practice for attorneys appointed to Family Court.

The Superior Court must promulgate rules for the Family Court requiring ‘one family, one judge’ so that all issues concerning one family or one child are decided by one judge, to the greatest extent practicable.

Intent: Extensive testimony was taken regarding the importance of this provision. While the provision does not prohibit the establishment of separate calendars, the intent here is that children see the same judge while their cases remain open and before the court. The rationale behind one judge/one child is to provide the child with judicial continuity so that the approach to the case and to the child is seamless and comprehensive.

Family members who have actions pending in family court will be assigned to the same judge or magistrate judge.

Intent: This provision recognizes the importance of keeping all matters involving one family or household before the same judge. When the members of the same family have actions before the same judge this enhances the judges understanding of not just the particular case before him but of the family dynamics that impact each family member in each case.

Judges who have actions pending in family court will be assigned to the same judge or magistrate judge.

Intent: While this provision does not prohibit separate calendars the provision envisions that separate calendars will not be routinely used which would necessitate children’s cases being heard by different judges.

The drafters have taken testimony that there are no due process violations in implementing the one judge/one child plan.

All cases will be moved to the Family Court until the final disposition (even if the judge involved moves out of the Family Court) unless there are extraordinary circumstances which show that due process is not assured and that changing judges would both delay that goal and result in a violation of the Adoption and Safe Families Act of 1997.

Intent: Cases that remain outside of Family Court are meant to be truly extraordinary circumstances and the drafters do not envision more than 10% of these cases falling within this category.

The presiding judge of the Family Court must implement a Family Law training program for judges, magistrate judges, and nonjudicial personnel to include among other things: child development, family dynamics and recognizing the risk factors in child abuse.

The training program is required to use social workers and experts in child development as well as lawyers and legal professionals.

The presiding judge of the Family Court must ensure that materials and services be understandable and accessible to the families served and that the environment be family friendly.

Cases and proceedings in the Family Court must be conducted at locations readily accessible to the parties involved to the extent practicable.

The Executive Officer of the court must provide for an integrated computerized case tracking and management system to: (1) ensure that all records, materials and proceedings be computerized; (2) establish an integrated tracking system for cases and proceedings to be used by judicial and nonjudicial personnel; and (3) expand the feasibility of the integrated computer system to all divisions of Superior Court.

Social workers coordinated on site with the Mayor ensuring that the appropriate offices are represented.

Intent: Coordination between social services agencies and the courts is absolutely essential to the success of these reforms. The drafters remain concerned about the lack of cooperation between social and the courts.

The Chief Judge must be an official of Family Court.

The Mayor must ensure that the appropriate office be responsible for providing coordination.

The Mayor must ensure that the appropriate office be responsible for coordinating social services and provide information to the judges about the availability of social services.

The judges must be informed by social services representatives about the availability and quality of prevention, intervention and placement services available to the children moving through the court system.

The Mayor must appoint a Social Services Liaison with Family Court for coordinating the delivery of services.

The chief judge must submit an annual report to Congress on the activities of the Family Court to include: (1) an assessment of the alternative dispute resolution process; (2) goals and timetables to improve Family Court performance; (3) information on the extent to which the Court is in compliance with relevant Federal and District of Columbia laws; (4) information on the progress made in finding suitable locations and space for the Family Court; (5) information on any factors which are not under the control of the Family Court which interfere with or prevent the Court from carrying out its responsibilities; (6) an analysis of the Court’s efficiency and effectiveness in managing its caseload; and, (7) any proposed remedial action plan needed to address any failures.

Intent: This report must be comprehensive to ensure Congress that the Court is fulfilling its responsibilities. This report must provide sufficient empirical evidence to document the extent of progress.

Within six months after enactment, the Mayor and the Courts are required to submit a plan to develop an integrated computer system that will interface with appropriate agencies.

The Mayor and the Courts have to work together to develop this integrated computer system that meets the requirements of both the social service system and the court system to track and monitor children as they come into and move through the various systems.

Funds are to be provided to the Mayor to carry out these requirements.

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—HOUSE 17341

Cases involving allegations of maltreatment that are at least two years in the system and are currently handled by judges outside of the Family Division will be given priority to be referred to the magistrate judges for expedited handling.

Intent: This provision is an attempt to triage the cases in the backlog so that the oldest cases are reviewed first.

Section 7. Sense of Congress regarding border agreements with Maryland and Virginia Congress resolved that DC, Maryland and Virginia should promptly enter into border agreements to facilitate timely placement of DC children.

Intent: Testimony has been received that indicates that problems with the Interstate Compact on the Placement of Children are causing lengthy delays in the placement of children. A border agreement will accelerate the movement of children across state lines to ensure timely placement.

EFFECTIVE DATE

Special magistrate judges will be hired immediately to handle the backlog of cases pending outside of the Family Division. The Act becomes effective as soon as ten judges who meet the qualifications are appointed to serve on the Family Court.

Mrs. MORELLA. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Ms. NORTON. Mr. Speaker, I yield 7 minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. DELAHUNT), who has been very helpful in assisting us on this bill because of his own interest in the children of this country; and I want to especially thank a member of his staff, Mark Agrast, who was also very helpful to all of us.

Mr. DELAHUNT. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentlewoman for yielding me this time. I caught the earliest flight possible from Boston today because I felt it was important to be here to commend the gentleman from Texas (Mr. DELAY) and the gentlewoman from the District of Columbia (Ms. NORTON) for their resolve and commitment to the well-being of children, not just here in the District of Columbia but all over America.

Now, I want to join with my colleagues who have already sung the praises of the staff members that have been involved in this. I want to make special mention of Cassie Bevan, on the staff of the gentleman from Texas (Mr. DELAY), and John Bouker, on the staff of the gentlewoman from the District of Columbia (Ms. NORTON).

This is the first time I have worked with Cassie. We have worked together on a number of other children’s issues, especially in conjunction with intercountry adoption. I have learned to trust her judgment, to value her experience, and to admire her deep commitment to the well-being of children everywhere and her love for children in need. I would also note that the same is true of the gentleman from Texas (Mr. DELAY). And this is truly profound and inspirational for many of us.

Mrs. MORELLA. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume to thank the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. DELAHUNT) for his comments and the fact that in working with him I know of his concern about human rights and children’s rights and applaud him.

Mr. Speaker, it is my pleasure to yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. TOM DAVIS), someone who has been leader in helping to craft this bill through the years and my predecessor as chairman of the District of Columbia authorizing committee.

Mr. TOM DAVIS of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I thank my colleague for yielding me this time. And I rise in strong support of H.R. 2657, the District of Columbia Family Court Act of 2001, which will create structural and management reforms so the Family Court can better serve the needs of the city’s vulnerable children.

The bill addresses the recruitment and retention of family court judges and mandates longer judicial terms of service for the Family Court judges. It assures continuity in the handling of cases. Additionally, it imposes the critically important “one family, one judge” requirement for the Family Court.

After the tragic death of 23-month-old Brianna Blackmond on January 1 of 2000, the Subcommittee on the District of Columbia held two hearings to review the status of the Child and Family Services Administration and to determine how we could prevent further tragedies. It was clear from those hearings that changing CFSA alone would be insufficient. The court plays an integral role in the D.C.’s child welfare system and has to be overhauled as well.

Anyone who has been following The Washington Post’s coverage of the District’s most vulnerable residents understands this is very complex and challenging, and will require a comprehensive and proactive approach. The legislation before us is to establish that the Family Court judges have the knowledge, the training, the administrative processes in place so that the best interests of the children in the City’s child welfare system can be served. This bill puts the court on the right track. It provides strategic management tools the court needs to accomplish key reform objectives.

Decisions the Family Court judges make often have a lasting impact on children’s lives. We want judges to feel burdened by service in the Family Court. This assignment should never be a form of punishment. That is why this bill encourages volunteerism and appoints the Family Court judges who have committed themselves to the practice of family law. To ensure greater continuity, judges need to serve on the Family Court longer than the 1 year they have typically served now. Therefore, the term of service on the Family Court for new judicial appointees for D.C. Superior Court is 5 years.

Additionally, the “one family, one judge” requirement will allow Family Court judges to handle cases from intake through final disposition. They will then have full histories of the child’s family dynamics to help them make better informed decisions regarding the safety and the welfare of the child.

H.R. 2657 mandates the immediate return of all family law cases to the Family Court. The court must eliminate the backlog and manage cases within the time frame established by the adoption of the Safe Families Act. To facilitate case management, the bill directs the court to integrate its computer system so that judges, magistrate judges, and nonjudicial personnel will have access to all pending cases related to a child and his or her family. The bill requires the D.C. government to integrate the computer systems with those of the Superior Court to improve communication in the sharing of information about families served by the court.

In addition to the training requirement for judges, it is important that they are well informed about critical social services available to the children and the families they serve. By requiring a social services liaison and representatives from D.C. agencies to be on site, our bill gives judges the tools to help children and families access much-needed programs and services. I would like to thank the gentleman from Texas (Mr. DELAY), the gentlewoman from Maryland (MRS. MORELLA), and the gentlewoman from the District of Columbia (Ms. NORTON) for their leadership and dedication on this issue.

H.R. 2657 mandates critical and long overdue reforms to the current family court system and families. That help put a dent in the tragedy of 180 of the District of Columbia’s children from 1993 to 2000 that died after the families came to the attention of the District’s Child and Family Services.

Mr. Speaker, the important aspect of this is that they came to the attention of that agency, but the connection was lost so those children may have been placed back in homes or back in foster care that was not good for them and resulted in their death.

Obviously we know that abused children result in juvenile delinquents and incarcerated adults. With a family court tracking the system of many of our States, we will have a professional court that deals specifically with these issues. This has been a tumultuous time. We have seen in the last week the trauma on families and the trauma on children across the Nation who may have lost their parents during the tragedies of September 11.

We are making a commitment today to provide another vehicle to nurture our children and protect them, as we will do throughout these days for children who suffered through September 11, 2001.

I applaud the proponents of this legislation. I believe this will make the family court in the District of Columbia a very prominent example of how we can save lives and track families and how we can intervene appropriately in order to provide the most nurturing and supportive system for our children.

Mr. Speaker, I add my applause for those who have supported and will help pass this legislation.

Ms. NORTON. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Ms. NORTON. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentlewoman from Texas (Ms. JACKSON-LEE) for the Children’s Caucus.

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H.R. 2657 and add my deep appreciation to the distinguished gentlewoman from the District of Columbia and for her ability to work across party lines, and to my colleague from Texas, the gentleman from Texas (Mr. DELAY), the majority whip, who has shown, as has the representatives from the District of Columbia (Ms. NORTON), the gentlewoman from Virginia (Mr. TOM DAVIS). I thank my colleagues who spoke, the gentlewoman from Texas (Ms. JACKSON-LEE), the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. DELAHUNT), and all of the people who will be voting for this bill. Indeed, it could not happen if we did not have great staff.

Mr. Speaker, I reiterate the names of some of the staff: Casie Bevan, Russell Smith, Heea Vazirani-Fales, John Bouker, Victoria Proctor, Melissa Wogciak, and all of the others who have toiled to bring this about. I urge my colleagues to vote for H.R. 2657, a bill that will be beneficial to the most vulnerable children of the District of Columbia and their families and strengthen our Nation.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. SIMPSON). The question is on the motion offered by the gentlewoman from Maryland (MRS. MORELLA) that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 2657.

The question was taken.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. In the opinion of the Chair, two-thirds of those present have voted in the affirmative.

Ms. MORELLA. Mr. Speaker, on that I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered. The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to clause 8 of rule XX and the Chair’s prior announcement, further proceedings on this motion will be postponed.

REMOVAL OF NAME OF MEMBER AS COSPONSOR OF H.R. 2779

Ms. NORTON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to have my name removed as a cosponsor of H.R. 2779.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentlewoman from the District of Columbia? There was no objection.

JUVENILE JUSTICE AND DELINQUENCY PREVENTION ACT OF 2001

Mr. GREENWOOD. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H.R. 1900) to amend the Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention Act of 1974 to provide quality prevention programs and accountability programs relating to juvenile delinquency; and for other purposes, as amended.

The Clerk read as follows:

SEC. 2. FINDINGS.
Section 101 of the Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention Act of 1974 (42 U.S.C.
5061) is amended to read as follows:

"Sec. 101. (a) The Congress finds the following:

"(1) Although the juvenile violent crime arrest rate in 1999 was the lowest in the decade, there remains a consensus that the number of crimes and the rate of offending by juveniles nationwide is still too high.
"(2) According to the Office of Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention, allowing a youth to leave school for a life of crime and of drug abuse costs society $1,700,000 to $2,300,000 annually.
"(3) One in every 6 individuals (16.2 percent) arrested for committing violent crime in 1999 was less than 18 years of age. In 1999, juveniles accounted for 9 percent of murder arrests, 17 percent of forcible rape arrests, 25 percent of robberies, 14 percent of aggravated assault arrests, and 24 percent of weapons arrests.
"(4) More than ½ of juvenile murder victims are victims of gang crime. Of the nearly 1,800 murder victims less than 18 years of age, 17 percent of the victims less than 13 years of age were murdered with a firearm, and 81 percent of the victims 13 years of age or older were killed with a firearm.
"(5) Juveniles accounted for 13 percent of all drug abuse violation arrests in 1999. Between 1990 and 1999, juvenile arrests for drug abuse violations rose 132 percent.
"(6) Over the last 3 decades, youth gang problems have increased nationwide. In the 1970's, 19 States reported youth gang problems. By the late 1990's, all 50 States and the District of Columbia reported gang problems. For the same period, the number of cities reporting gang problems grew 143 percent, and the number of counties reporting gang problems increased more than 1,000 percent.
"(7) According to a national crime survey of individuals 12 years of age or older during 1999, those 12 to 19 years old are victims of violent crime at higher rates than individuals in all other age groups. Only 39.5 percent of these violent victimizations were reported by youth to police in 1999.
"(8) One-fifth of juveniles 16 years of age who had been arrested were first arrested before attaining 12 years of age. Juveniles who are known to the juvenile justice system before attaining 13 years of age are responsible for a disproportionate share of serious crimes and violence.

"(9) The increase in the arrest rates for girls and young juvenile offenders has changed the gender offender re-

"(13) to establish policies and systems to incorporate relevant child protective services records into justice records for purposes of establishing treatment plans for juvenile offenders;

"(14) programs that encourage social competency, life skills, and communication skills, youth leadership, and civic involvement;

"(15) programs that focus on the needs of young males at risk of delinquency or status offenses;

"(16) projects which provide for—

(A) an assessment by a qualified mental health professional of incarcerated juveniles who are suspected to be in need of mental health services;

(B) the development of an individualized treatment plan for those incarcerated juveniles determined to be in need of such services;

(C) the inclusion of a discharge plan for incarcerated juveniles receiving mental health services that addresses aftercare services; and

(D) all juveniles receiving psychotropic medications to receive the care of a licensed mental health professional;

"(17) after-school programs that provide at-risk juveniles and juveniles in the juvenile justice system with the opportunity for appropriate activities, including tutoring, mentoring, and other educational and enrichment activities;

"(18) programs related to the establishment and maintenance of a school violence hotline, based on a public-private partnership, that students and parents can use to report suspicious, violent, or threatening behavior to local school and law enforcement authorities;

"(19) programs (excluding programs to purchase guns from juveniles) designed to reduce the unlawful acquisition and illegal use of guns by juveniles, including partnerships between law enforcement agencies, health professionals, school officials, firearms manufacturers, consumer groups, faith-based groups and community organizations;

"(20) programs designed to prevent animal cruelty offenses, including programs that commit animal cruelty offenses, including partnerships among law enforcement agencies, animal control officers, social services agencies, animal shelters, school officials, and animal rights groups;

"(21) programs that provide suicide prevention services for incarcerated juveniles and for juveniles leaving the incarceration system;

"(22) programs to establish partnerships between State educational agencies and local educational agencies for the design and implementation of character education and training programs that reflect the values of parents, teachers, and local communities, and incorporate elements of good character, including reliability, honesty, courage, justice, respect, personal responsibility, and trustworthiness;

"(23) programs that foster strong character development in at-risk juveniles and juveniles in the juvenile justice system;

"(24) local programs that provide for immediate psychological evaluation and follow-up treatment (including evaluation and treatment during a mandatory holding period for not less than 24 hours) for juveniles who bring a gun on school grounds without permission from appropriate school authorities; and

"(25) other activities that are likely to prevent juvenile delinquency.

"SEC. 244. GRANTS FOR LOCAL PROJECTS.

"(a) GRANTS TO STATES.—Using a grant recommended under section 241, a State may make grants to eligible entities whose applications are received by the State, and reviewed by the State advisory group, to carry out projects and activities described in section 241.

"(b) SPECIAL CONSIDERATION.—For purposes of making grants under subsection (a), the State shall give special consideration to eligible entities that—

(1) propose to carry out such projects in geographical areas in which there is—

(A) a disproportionately high level of serious crime committed by juveniles; or

(B) a recent rapid increase in the number of nonstatus offenses committed by juveniles;

(2)(A) agreed to carry out such projects or activities that are multidisciplinary and involve more than 2 public nonprofit agencies, organizations, and institutions that have experience dealing with juveniles; or

(B) represent communities that have a comprehensive plan designed to identify at-risk juveniles and to prevent or reduce the rate of juvenile delinquency, and that involve other entities operated by individuals who have a demonstrated history of involvement in activities designed to prevent juvenile delinquency; and

(3) the amount of resources (in cash or in kind) such entities will provide to carry out such projects and activities.

"(b) LIMITATION.—If an eligible entity that submitted an application for a grant under subsection (a) or (b) of section 244 is awarded a grant under section 241, it shall be required to spend, within a fiscal year, not more than 5 percent of the grant amount as the State determines is proportional, based on the amount of funds received under any grant under section 244.

"(c) ANNUAL REPORT.—Each eligible entity that receives a grant under subsection (a) or (b) of section 244 shall submit to the State an annual report that contains the following:

(1) A description of the project or activity funded by the grant, including the description of how, such grant will supplement, and not replace, State and local efforts to prevent juvenile delinquency.

(2) An assurance that such application was prepared with consultation with and participation by the State advisory group, community-based organizations, and organizations in the local juvenile justice system, that carry out programs, projects, or activities to prevent juvenile delinquency.

(3) An assurance that such application would afford the opportunity to review and comment on all grant applications submitted to the State under this section.

(4) An assurance that the State advisory group will be afforded the opportunity to review and comment on all grant applications submitted to the State.

(5) An assurance that such application describes in sufficient detail the plan for the subsequent fiscal year to carry out such project or activity, a grant under such section in an amount that is proportionate, based on such initial grant and the amount of the grant received under section 241 by the State for such subsequent fiscal year, but does not exceed the amount specified for such subsequent fiscal year in such application as approved by the State.

(6) Such other information and assurances as the Administrator may reasonably require by rule.

"(d) APPROVAL OF APPLICATIONS.—

"(1) APPROVAL REQUIRED.—Subject to paragraph (2), the Administrator shall approve an application, and amendments to such application submitted in subsequent fiscal years, that satisfies the requirements of subsection (a).

"(2) LIMITATION.—The Administrator may not approve such application (including amendments to such application) for a fiscal year unless—

(A)(i) the State submitted an application under section 223 for such fiscal year; and

(B)(i) such plan is approved by the State advisory group, and

(ii) such plan is approved by the Administrator for such fiscal year; or (B)(i) the Administrator waives the application of subparagraph (A) to such State for such fiscal year, after finding good cause for such a waiver.

"SEC. 245. GRANTS TO INDIAN TRIBES.

"(a) ELIGIBILITY.—To be eligible to receive a grant under this section 245, a tribe shall—

(1) demonstrate, before the expiration of such 2-year period, that such projects and activities are designed to prevent juvenile delinquency; and

(2) carry out projects and activities that are multidisciplinary and involve more than 2 private nonprofit agencies, organizations, and institutions that have experience dealing with juveniles.

"(b) ALLOCATION AMONG INDIAN TRIBES.

"(1) GRANTS TO ELIGIBLE INDIAN TRIBES.—The Administrator may make grants to eligible Indian tribes.

"(2) GRANTS TO ELIGIBLE INDIAN TRIBES.—Under a grant recommended under section 241, a tribe may make grants to eligible entities whose applications are received by the tribe, and reviewed by the tribe advisory group, to carry out projects and activities described in section 241.
shall submit to the Administrator an application in accordance with this section, in such form and containing such information as the Administrator may require by rule.

(2) Plans.—Such application shall include a plan for conducting programs, projects, and activities described in section 241(a), which plan shall—

(A) provide evidence that the applicant Indian tribe performs law enforcement functions or, if determined by the Secretary of the Interior:

(B) identify the juvenile justice and delinquency problems and juvenile delinquency prevention needs to be addressed by activities conducted with funds provided by the grant for which such application is submitted, by the Indian tribe in the geographic area under the jurisdiction of the Indian tribe;

(C) provide for fiscal control and accounting procedures that—

(i) are necessary to ensure the prudent use, proper disbursement, and accounting of grants received by applicants under this section; and

(ii) are consistent with the requirements specified in subparagraph (B); and

(D) comply with the requirements specified in section 222(a) (excluding any requirement that the application be submitted with a Start advisory group) and with the requirements specified in section 222(c); and

(E) contain such other information, and be subject to such additional requirements, as the Administrator may reasonably require by rule to ensure the effectiveness of the projects for which grants are made under section 241(b).

(b) Factors for Consideration.—For the purpose of selecting eligible applicants to receive grants under section 241(b), the Administrator shall consider—

(1) the resources that are available to each applicant Indian tribe that will assist, and be coordinated with, the overall juvenile justice and delinquency prevention system in Indian tribes; and

(2) with respect to each applicant—

(A) the juvenile population; and

(B) the population and the entities that will benefit from projects proposed to be carried out with the grant for which the application is submitted.

(c) Grant Process.—

(1) Selection of Grant Recipients.—

(A) Selection Requirements.—Except as provided in paragraph (2), the Administrator shall—

(i) make grants under this section on a competitive basis; and

(ii) specify in writing to each applicant selected to receive a grant under this section, the terms and conditions on which such grant is made to such applicant.

(B) Period of Grant.—A grant made under this section shall be available for expenditure during a 2-year period.

(2) Exception.—If—

(A) in the 2-year period for which a grant made under this section shall be expended, the recipient of such grant applies to receive a subsequent grant under this section; and

(B) the Administrator determines that such recipient performed during the year preceding the 2-year period for which such recipient applies to receive such subsequent grant satisfactorily and in accordance with the terms and conditions applicable to the grant received; then the Administrator may waive the application of the competition-based requirement specified in paragraph (1)(A)(i) and may allow the applicant to incorporate by reference in the current application the text of the plan contained in the recipient’s most recent application previously approved under this use of the funds on a year-by-year basis.

(3) Authority to Modify Application Process for Subsequent Grants.—The Administrator may modify by rule the operation of this paragraph with respect to the submission and contents of applications for subsequent grants described in paragraph (2).

(d) Reporting Requirement.—Each Indian tribe that receives a grant under this section shall be subject to the fiscal accountability provisions of section 5(f)(1) of the Indian Self-Determination and Education Assistance Act (25 U.S.C. 450c(1)), relating to the submission of a single-agency audit report required by chapter 75 of title 31, United States Code.

(e) Matching Requirement.—(1) Funds appropriated for the activities of any agency of an Indian tribal government or the Bureau of Indian Affairs performing law enforcement functions on any Indian lands may be used to provide the non-Federal share of any program or project with a matching requirement funded under this section.

(2) Paragraph (1) shall not apply with respect to funds appropriated before the date of the enactment of the Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention Act of 2001.

(f) If the Administrator determines that an Indian tribe does not have sufficient funds available to meet the non-Federal share of the cost of any program or activity to be funded under the grant, the Administrator may increase the Federal share of the cost thereof to the extent the Administrator deems necessary.

SEC. 11. RESEARCH; EVALUATION; TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE; TRAINING.

Title II of the Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention Act of 1974 (42 U.S.C. 5611 et seq.) is amended by inserting after part C, as added by section 10, the following:

"PART D—RESEARCH; EVALUATION; TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE; TRAINING.

"SEC. 251. RESEARCH AND EVALUATION; STATISTICAL ANALYSES; INFORMATION DISSEMINATION

"(a) Research and Evaluation.—(1) The Administrator shall—

(A) plan and identify the purposes and goals of all agreements carried out with funds provided under this subsection; and

(B) conduct an evaluation in juvenile justice matters, for the purpose of providing research and evaluation relating to—

(i) the prevention, reduction, and control of juvenile delinquency and serious crime committed by juveniles;

(ii) the link between juvenile delinquency and the incarceration of members of the families of juveniles;

(B) the extent to which State juvenile justice systems and child welfare systems are coordinating services and treatment for such juveniles;

(C) the Federal and local sources of funds used for placements and post-placement services;

(D) barriers faced by State in providing services to these juveniles;

(E) the types of post-placement services used;

(F) the frequency of case plans and case plan reviews; and

(G) the extent to which case plans identify and address permanency and placement barriers and treatment plans.

(b) Statistical Analyses.—The Administrator may—

(1) plan and identify the purposes and goals of all agreements carried out with funds provided under this subsection; and

(2) undertake statistical work in juvenile justice matters, for the purpose of providing for the collection, analysis, and dissemination of statistical data and information relating to juvenile delinquency and serious crimes committed by juveniles, the juvenile justice system, juvenile violence, and to other purposes consistent with the purposes of this title and title I.

(c) Competitive Selection Process.—The Administrator shall use a competitive process, established by rule by the Administrator, to carry out subsections (a) and (b).

(d) Implementation of Agreements.—A Federal agency that makes an agreement under subsections (a)(1)(B) and (b)(2) with the Administrator may carry out such agreement directly or by making grants to or contracts with public and private agencies, institutions, and organizations.

“(e) INFORMATION DISSEMINATION.—The Administrator may—

(1) make grants and contracts with public and private agencies, institutions, and orizations, for the purpose of disseminating informary to representatives and personnel of public and private agencies, including practitioners in juvenile justice, law enforcement, courts, corrections, schools, and related services, in the establishment, implementation, and operation of programs, projects, and activities for which financial assistance is provided under this title.

“SEC. 252. TRAINING AND TECHNICAL ASSIST-ANCE.”

“(a) TRAINING.—The Administrator may—

(1) develop and carry out projects for the purpose of providing technical assistance to representatives and personnel of public and private agencies and organizations, including practitioners in juvenile justice, law enforcement, courts (including model juvenile and family courts), corrections, schools, and related services, to carry out the purposes specified in section 102; and

Mr. Speaker, I urge all of my colleagues to join me in supporting H.R. 1900.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. SCOTT. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, as we begin to rebuild from the tragedy and devastation we experienced in New York, Pennsylvania, and at the Pentagon, it is appropriate that two of the first three bills we take up this week concern the safety and well-being of our children.

I am proud to be a cosponsor of H.R. 1900, the Justice and Delinquency Prevention Act, with my colleagues, the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. GREENWOOD). Juvenile justice is always a challenge because we have a choice of playing politics or reducing crime.

This bill is a bipartisan initiative that lays the groundwork for sensible juvenile crime policy. Five years ago we started from a decidedly different perspective. The House considered juvenile crime bills with such titles as the “Violent Youth Predator Act,” the “Juvenile Crime Control Act,” and others. The titles of the bills made it clear that Congress was more concerned in using political sound bites than coming up with sound policy designed to reduce crime. After those bills collapsed in partisan controversy, the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. HASTERT) and the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. GEPHARDT) appointed a bipartisan working group on youth violence to thoughtfully review the issue of youth violence and to make meaningful suggestions.

Our working group reviewed studies of problems of youth violence and heard testimony from academia, law enforcement, the judicial system, and advocacy groups. Those experts that met with us agreed that prevention and early intervention were the things that we needed to reduce crime. Those efforts needed to require parental and other protections. For example, runaways and truants should not be jailed in secure facilities. And if juveniles are ever housed in adult facilities, it must be for short periods of time; and during that time they must be separated by sight and sound from adult offenders.

Lastly, we recommended a mechanism to address the disproportionate number of minority youth who are under the jurisdiction of the juvenile court system.

The bill before us recognizes the need for community input and requires community collaboration and planning that encourages bringing delinquency prevention professionals around the table to decide how best to respond to the crime prevention needs of the community. Those experts should include the school system, law enforcement, social services, business, sociology and other experts. And for the first time we are also asking the States to ensure that the child welfare system, the foster care system, and the juvenile justice system are working together to address the needs of juvenile offenders.

We know that two-thirds of children in the juvenile system are already known by the child welfare system. The link between abuse, neglect, and delinquency demands greater involvement between the various systems that serve at-risk youth.

H.R. 1900 starts us down the path of greater collaboration, and I appreciate the work of my ranking member, the gentleman from California (Mr. GEORGE MILLER), and the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. GREENWOOD) in offering these important improvements to the bill. H.R. 1900 deserves the support of this body. It is not based on politics or sound bites, but instead represents sound policy; and it is the product of a constructive, bipartisan cooperative effort to reduce youth crime in our communities. It will add to the safety and security of future generations.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. GREENWOOD. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. BOEHNER), the chairman of the Committee on Education and the Workforce.

Mr. BOEHNER. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in support of the juvenile justice bill that we have on the floor, and thank all of my colleagues that have taken part in bringing us to this important day. I think the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. SCOTT) and the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. GREENWOOD) have fully explained the bill.

My reason for rising today is to say that, without a true bipartisan effort over the long journey of bringing this bill to the floor, it would not be here. The gentleman from Virginia (Mr. SCOTT) and the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. GREENWOOD) have worked diligently for 5 years trying to bridge the differences, and they have done it in such a way that we have learned a great deal from them.

I also thank the chairman of the subcommittee, the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. HOEKSTRA) and the ranking Democrat on the subcommittee, the gentleman from Indiana (Mr. ROEMER), for their efforts in shepherding this bill through the committee process. Lastly, I thank the ranking Democrat, the gentleman from California (Mr. GEORGE MILLER), who provided an atmosphere of cooperation and respect which I think brings this bill here in front of us today.

Mr. Speaker, this is a great example of what can happen when people keep their eye on the goal, and the goal being what is it that we can do from our perspective here in Washington to help these juvenile justice programs work better. They have done a great job, and they deserve our thanks.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.
reducing juvenile delinquency and making sure that our children, in fact, get into programs of opportunity and programs that will help them to sort out the kinds of lives and lead productive lives in America. I want to thank them very, very much for all their effort, all their time to bring this legislation to the floor in the form that it is now in.

While we have seen a decrease in juvenile crime over the last couple of years, we also see some disturbing factors, that many of the perpetrators of that crime are younger and younger. We see the inclusion of more and more young girls in the perpetration of these crimes, and these are reasons for concern. It is a reason we need to take new approaches and new choices.

This legislation is really about prevention and about accountability and about focusing our efforts on the early part of a child’s life because, again, the scientific-based research, the peer-reviewed research tells us that this is our best opportunity to intervene on behalf of these children, to intervene in their dysfunctional families.

I want to commend those who supported the previous bill on the floor today dealing with the D.C. court system and the foster care system in the District of Columbia. Understanding the need to intervene early, to save these children and to give them an opportunity, where they are caught up in a family that is so clearly dysfunctional that it now becomes a threat to those children in the immediate sense, but the long-term ramifications and impact on the kinds of lives those children will lead in terms of their involvement in the juvenile justice system or the adult criminal system makes it all the more important.

I believe that H.R. 1900 does this by providing the recognition of early intervention accountability and providing the guidelines to make sure that we, in fact, protect these children at the same time that we are dealing with their transgressions, so that we do not send them off to schools that improve their ability to commit a crime but do not improve their ability to extract themselves from that life of crime.

I also want to quickly mention the parts of this legislation dealing with the question about the needs, and the scientific-based research, the peer-reviewed research tells us that this is our best opportunity to intervene on behalf of these children, to intervene in their dysfunctional families.

H.R. 1900 requires that any residence program receiving funds under this act must be licensed by State and must have standards of discipline to prohibit abuse and neglect as defined by State law and the cost is only about $400 per year, on the average, for a good mentoring program. So it is tremendously beneficial. The cost is only about $400 per year, on the average, for a good mentoring program. So it is tremendously beneficial.

Mr. GREENWOOD. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Nebraska (Mr. OSBORNE), an active member of the Committee on Education and the Workforce.

Mr. OSBORNE. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of H.R. 1900, the Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention Act. I am particularly pleased to see language in the bill to provide positive youth development which includes mentoring. We often see money spent on building prisons, drug rehabilitation programs, hiring more police, and building youth correction facilities as money that is well spent. Money spent on prevention of juvenile crime, drug abuse, teenage pregnancy, is often seen as less important and is perceived as being wasteful. It costs 25 to $30,000 per year to incarcerate a young person. If that young person stays in prison for life, it is more than $1 million. States are currently raising unwanted children at unprecedented cost. Drug addiction leads to other crime and a great social cost to those involved. Recidivism is very high. It is much more cost effective to prevent juvenile misbehavior than to attempt to correct behavior after the fact.

One example is mentoring. According to “Character Counts,” mentoring reduces absenteeism from school by more than 50 percent, significantly cuts dropout rates, reduces drug abuse by more than 50 percent, certainly curtails teenage pregnancy, crime and violent behavior by significant degrees, and the cost is only about $400 per year, on the average, for a good mentoring program. So it is tremendously beneficial. The cost is only about $400 per year, on the average, for a good mentoring program.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to point out the fact that the bill provides more flexibility for the use of funds at the local level. I think all of us realize that money spent at the local level is spent much more effectively than money spent at the Federal or the State level.

Finally, I would like to thank the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. SCOTT) and the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. GREENWOOD) for their efforts, and strongly encourage passage of H.R. 1900.

Mr. SCOTT. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from California (Ms. SOLIS), a member of the Committee on Education and the Workforce.

Ms. SOLIS. I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

Mr. Speaker, I also rise in support of H.R. 1900. I stand here as a new member of this Committee and the Workforce. My heart is full, because I realize that this is such an important issue that needs to be addressed. In my
I want to thank the committee and I want to thank our leadership for taking the time to address these issues and hopefully deter them into a better life-style.

But I found that many of the young people, particular Latinos that I found there from my district, were experiencing some different kinds of hardships. Many of them at the age of 13 and 14 were already finding themselves as mothers. They were pregnant. I found that the treatment and medical attention that they needed to be prioritized. I asked the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. SCOTT) and other Members if they would please include an amendment in this bill to help address prenatal assistance in assessing these young women's needs. They adopted that.

I also wanted to thank them for including another provision, suicide prevention. Many of the youngsters that I saw at these facilities were also coming from a life of hardship. Some of them were recent immigrants, coming from war-torn El Salvador and other Central American countries. Face-to-face with that dilemma, many of them had this put before them, of how they were going to lead their lives, not having appropriate supervision by their parents and by our inadequate school system that does not provide enough counseling and after-school programs. This bill, I believe, in my opinion will do that.

I want to thank the committee and I want to thank our leadership for taking the time to address these issues and including these two amendments in this bill. I ask for support of this legislation.

Mr. GREENWOOD. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Texas (Ms. JACKSON-LEE), a member of the Committee on the Judiciary.

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I thank the distinguished gentleman from Virginia for yielding me this time. I also thank the distinguished gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. GREENWOOD), both the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. SCOTT) and the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. GREENWOOD), for a very policy-changing initiative, H.R. 1900, that will really turn the corner in how we address the questions of juvenile crime control and the issue of delinquency. Let me thank them and their staff for this legislation.

Let me thank in particular my colleagues on the Committee on the Judiciary for merging his responsibilities as the ranking member of the Subcommittee on Crime of the Committee on the Judiciary and the Committee on Education and the Workforce, realizing that these are two very important responsibilities, that there is some commonality.

Mr. Speaker, about a year ago, I held a hearing in my district with Senator Paul Wellstone on the question of mental health and juvenile delinquency. We had over 90 witnesses, of local authorities, mental health specialists, parents who had dealt with suicide amongst their teenagers, and teenagers who said they had attempted suicide on a number of occasions.

One thing we determined out of that hearing was that we had to approach the issue of juvenile delinquency and the resulting crime in a totally different mode; that prevention and intervention on these young people and their families was crucial for America to get its hands around the whole question of juvenile indiscretions or crime and delinquency.

This bill authorizes the use of juvenile delinquency prevention block money to provide treatment to juvenile offenders. The bill covers a litany of programs, including treatment for mental health problems for juveniles who have experienced violence, projects which provide for an individualized assessment, and the treatment plans for incarcerated juveniles suspected to be in need of mental health services, after-school programs for at-risk juveniles, programs related to the establishment and maintenance of programs designed to reduce the illegal use of guns by juveniles. It is heavy on prevention.

When we visited one of our juvenile detention centers with Senator Wellstone and County Judge Bob Eckels, we were able to see youngsters who were crying out for services, crying out for an adult that would help supervise them, and certainly in need of mental health.

This bill, of course, is of special importance to me; and I thank my colleague, the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. SCOTT), for addressing the question of the issue of mental health.

The mental health of children, including its intersection with the issue of juvenile justice, is an issue that has long been ignored. In the bill, as this passed through the Committee on the Judiciary, I was very glad that amendments that I proposed, language I proposed, was included, dealing with the mental health aspect; it is the Subcommittee on Education and Workforce.

Yet one to which I pay special attention, not only in my capacity as a member of the Committee on the Judiciary but also in my capacity as founder and chair of the Congressional Children's Caucus, in working with the House Bipartisan Working Group on Youth Violence that many of my colleagues served on, it was interesting that Members from both sides of the aisle came away from that 6- or 7- or 8-week time frame, and determined that prevention had to be the way this country and this Congress would go.

In doing so, mental health was raised and the mental health aspect of the demonstration I made, my particular subcommittee was dealing with mental health, it was without question that that was what was needed.

The mental health of children is an issue that has been too long ignored. Untreated, it manifests itself in many ways, ranging from eating disorders to school bullying and violence. That is why I have H.R. 75, that deals in particular with helping children overcome their frustration or their need for counseling by providing enhanced community mental health services.

We held a hearing a couple of weeks ago, the Congressional Children’s Caucus, about bullying; and we determined that children need counseling to intervene so they do not bully each other and that turns into violence.

This legislation has many aspects to it, but what I believe is the key element to this legislation is a recognizing that we must look at juvenile delinquency and crime control in a totally different manner; intervene, prevent, before we run into trouble.

I, in conclusion, will simply say that this bill overall is an excellent bill. I would raise a reservation, however, about the provision of the bill that gives proponents of promising or innovative models the ability to hold juveniles in adult lockups for more than 24 hours if other alternatives are not available. I would encourage my local communities to find alternative sites for our children, because what we want to do is intervene so those children can grow up to be contributing adults.

I support H.R. 1900, and ask my colleagues to join me in support it.

I rise in support of the Juvenile Crime Control and Delinquency Prevention Act, H.R.

1900.

This bill authorizes the use of Juvenile Delinquency Prevention Block Grants for projects that provide treatment to juvenile offenders. The bill covers a litany of programs, including treatment for mental health problems, for juveniles who have experienced violence, projects which provide for an individualized assessment and the treatment plans for incarcerated juveniles suspected to be in need of mental health services, after-school programs for at-risk juveniles, programs related to the establish-manship of a juvenile violence hotline and programs designed to reduce the unlawful acquisition and illegal use of guns by juveniles.

This bill also authorizes the Office of Juvenile Crime Control and Delinquency Prevention to undertake specified activities regarding research, evaluation, technical assistance, and training, including providing training and technical assistance to mental health professionals and law enforcement personnel to address or promote the development, testing, or dem-centralization of promising or innovative models or programs, or delivery systems addressing the needs of delinquent juveniles who are placed in secure detention, confinement or in non-secure residential placements.

This bill is of special importance to me because so many of the programs that I support address the issue of mental health. The mental health of children, including its intersection with the issue of juvenile justice, is an issue that has been long ignored, yet one to which I pay special attention, not only in my capacity as a member of the Juvenile Justice Caucus, but also in my capacity as Founder and Chair of the Congressional Children’s Caucus and as a member of the House Bipartisan Working Group on Youth Vi-colence, which was formed on June 25, 1999 by Speaker HASTERT and Minority Leader GEHRARDT and which issued its final report on March 8, 2000.

Just this past July, the Congressional Children’s Caucus held a briefing on the relationship between children’s mental health and school bullying, and we discussed how bullying, which causes and is caused by mental health problems, can escalate into violence. And I am the sponsor of the bipartisan bill H.R. 75, which would sponsor grants to schools to put more mental health professionals in our schools.

The issue is of such pressing importance that during the Congressional Black Caucus annual legislative conference this month, I will be hosting a forum on the nexus between juvenile justice and children’s mental health. National experts will join us to discuss this topic.

The mental health of children is an issue that has been too long ignored. Untreated, it may lead to eating disorders to school bullying and violence, as I just discussed. In fact, in the bipartisan Working Group on Youth Violence formed a mental health subgroup to determine the extent to which mental health problems lead to incidences of youth violence and how to address the problem. We determined, in part, that it is important to identify at risk youths in school to encourage them to see schools are safe, stable learning environments and to ensure that they have access to mental health services. The Report also noted that the juveniles should screen youths who enter the system and that treatment is provided where the need is identified.

Hence, I am pleased to see that many of the recommendations of the Working Groups have been considered in drafting this legislation. This was not a group of mere talking heads, but a group that proposed and is enacting, real, practical solutions.

The fact the juvenile violent crime has decreased does not mean that we should ignore the problem. Indeed, we should see it as an opportunity to study the previously unanswered problems and reach those who might otherwise be issued.

I do have reservations about the provision of the bill that gives local authorities the ability to hold juveniles in adult lockups for more than 24 hours if other alternatives are not available. However, I applaud efforts to address the mental health needs of the troubled youths. Hence, I believe that the benefits of the bill far outweigh its negative aspects and believe that as its provisions are enacted, we will work to correct any problems.

It is time we took an affirmative step forward and realized that although we may differ in some provisions, we all agree that we must help our youth become, productive, mentally and physically, law-abiding citizens. I urge my colleagues to join me in supporting this bill.

Mr. GREENWOOD. Mr. Speaker, it is my pleasure and honor to yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Delaware (Mr. CASTLE), the most distinguished chairman of the Subcommittee on Eduation Reform of the Committee on Education and the Workforce.

Mr. CASTLE. Mr. Speaker, I thank the distinguished gentleman from the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania for yielding me time.

Mr. Speaker, I am pleased also to support this legislation. When police arrest children and young adults who shirk off their criminal acts as a right of passage, our response is often fear and anger. How can we protect ourselves? How can we make them pay for what they have done?

Then a secondary, more productive response sets in, how did these children become settled in lives of delinquency and crime? How can we intervene to break the link between a single delinquent act and a life of criminal activity?

Today, after countless hearings and debates, we seek to answer these questions with a balanced response through H.R. 1900, the Juvenile Crime Control and Delinquency Prevention Act. This act, sponsored by the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. GREENWOOD) and the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. SCOTT), is a product of extensive negotiations between Members of both sides of the aisle; and I am pleased that it comes to the floor with bipartisan support, thanks in large part to the sustained effort of the bill's authors.

H.R. 1900 recognizes that there are many root causes of crime. When we examine the lives of our most troubled young adults, we often see many predictors of their behavior, absent parents and an absence of safe and enriching places to go after school, among others.

The bill also appreciates the fact that most successful solutions to juvenile crime are developed at the State and local levels, encompassing multiple strategies that are tailored to the place according to specific need of families, neighbors, and communities. In so doing, H.R. 1900 is flexible enough to fund State and local programs and services ranging from character education and mental health, to school violence hot lines.

In addition, H.R. 1900 recognizes that after-school programs give our most at-risk children a positive alternative to television, drugs, and crime, and that they take away the dangers and perils of crime and its societal cost must place a high priority on the needs of our young adults.
For 6 years, the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. GREENWOOD) and the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. SCOTT) have worked to create a bipartisan solution to a difficult problem. This year, I am confident that, with our support, they will see their bill become law. To that end, I urge an aye vote.

Mr. SCOTT. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, this bill is a product of a lot of hard work. We had leadership from the committee, from the chairman, the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. BOEHRNER); the subcommittee chairman, the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. HOEKSTRA); the gentleman from Delaware (Mr. CASTLE); and, our side, from our ranking member of the committee, the gentleman from California (Mr. GEORGE MILLER); and the gentleman from Indiana (Mr. ROEMER).

But, more important, Mr. Chairman, we had hard work from our staffs, Jo Marie St. Martin, Judy Borger, Bob Sweet, and Krisann Pearce from the Republican side, and Denise Forte, Maggie McDow, Cheryl Johnson, and Ruth Friedman from the Democratic side.

I would point out that Judy Borger and Denise Forte spent innumerable long hours over the last 5 years working on this bill, and they are really the experts on juvenile justice for the House Representatives.

I am particularly pleased, Mr. Speaker, to have worked over those years with the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. GREENWOOD). We have had many long, difficult discussions. This is a very politically charged issue. Two years ago when we went through this, there were a lot of provisions put into the bill that his side wanted, but our side did not; a lot of provisions were put in the bill that our side wanted, that his side did not; and, when we ended up, we had a bill that nobody wanted and it did not pass.

We focused on those core, important issues. That was very difficult, and I want to thank the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. GREENWOOD) for his hard work and cooperation.

Mr. Speaker, I ask the House approve the bill. It is a product of very hard work and will help our next generation.

Mr. Speaker I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. GREENWOOD. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, let me also return the kind word of the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. SCOTT) and say we have to work this out, how can we do this, let us put our heads together, can you yield a little bit here if I yield a little bit here, can you get your Members to go along with this compromise if I can get my Members to go along, without exception, every single time the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. SCOTT) was there to do that.

I have made a good friend of one of the best Members of this House, and I am proud to be associated with the gentleman in this work and thank him again.

Mr. Speaker, we are at a time of national crisis; and, ultimately, our success will depend partly upon our superiority when it comes to technology and to our military equipment. Ultimately, our success over the coming months and years and decade will be a function of the character of the American people.

When we talk about the character of the American people, we have to remember that that means everyone.

No one can be absent from the national cause to develop the strength of character and to see us through these dark times and to resecure America’s place in the world.

As a former caseworker who has worked with abused and neglected and troubled and delinquent children, I know firsthand that what these kids need more than anything else is adults in their lives who care about them, who are interested in their future, who believe in them, who have confidence in them, and who do not throw them away into the dark dungeons of the juvenile justice system but, in fact, spend time with them to teach them self-discipline, to teach them self-control, to teach them about the need to take responsibility for the consequences of their actions.

I believe that this legislation will promote those efforts in every State and county in the country so that the young people who find themselves, generally because of difficulties in their home situation, with histories of abuse and violence and neglect and terrible home situations, find themselves in trouble with the law. These provisions in H.R. 1900, I think, will help these young people become full-fledged members of society who can contribute to our national security and well-being, rather than drain resources for important and vital needs.

I urge again, Mr. Speaker, all of the Members and the staff who have worked on this. I urge passage of H.R. 1900.

Mr. WU. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H.R. 1900, the Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention Act of the year of crime, particularly violent crime, among our nation’s youth is a problem that affects us all. The downstream result of our action— or inaction—is tremendous. Today is all about the future. Future generations will be affected by the actions we take today, and we can choose to either address the current situation, work for tomorrow, or turn a blind eye.

I believe we must work with our youth to make a brighter future.

I am particularly pleased that the bill before the House today includes a provision which I worked with local schools detain and monitor, including a psychological evaluation, any student who brings a gun to school. Recent school tragedies, like the one that took place in my home State of Oregon, have occurred after a student was sent home after bringing a gun to school.

The Wt provision in the Juvenile Justice bill will ensure that local schools can provide for immediate psychological evaluation and follow-up treatment for any juvenile that brings a gun to school.

By ensuring that local schools will have these students evaluated in a timely fashion, we are intervening at the right time; before another tragedy transpires. I believe this provision is in the best spirit of commonsense and prevention. I want to thank my colleague from Oregon, Mr. DEFAZIO, who has been very supportive of this amendment. He has toiled very hard on behalf of his constituents, including those in Springfield, and deserves to be recognized for his good work. I thank him for his friendship and counsel.

I thank the Members of the Committee on both sides of the aisle for their good efforts, and urge all my colleagues to support this legislation.

Mr. BOEHRNER. Mr. Speaker, today we consider legislation to prevent juvenile crime, while at the same time holding juvenile criminal offenders accountable for their actions.

The Office of Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention (OJJDP) was created by Congress in 1974 to help communities and States prevent and control delinquency and to improve their juvenile justice systems. The nature and extent of delinquency and abuse have changed considerably since OJJDP was created, and this reauthorization has taken that into account.

I want to especially thank my colleagues Jim GREENWOOD and BOBBY SCOTT for this bipartisan bill. They have worked tirelessly for several years to craft a bipartisan bill that I believe will provide flexibility and assistance to States and local communities in preventing and controlling juvenile crime. And I also want to thank Chairman HOEKSTRA and Ranking Member TIM ROEMER for the good work they did in steering this bill through Committee. My colleague from Oregon, MR. DEFAZIO, who has worked closely with me in bringing this bill through full Committee and to the Floor for consideration today.

These programs have not been authorized since 1994, although a similar bill has passed the House by overwhelming majorities at least twice since then. This year, I believe we have an opportunity to send this bill to the President for his signature.
There have been a number of issues that we have included in this bill that are worthy of note.

The collection of data on the frequency, seriousness, and incidence of drug use by youth and information on the relationship between victims and perpetrators of violence; the determination of the type of weapon used in violent incidents as reported in the FBI's Uniform Crime Report; the prohibition of the development of any national data base of personally identifiable information; a prevention block grant that will give states added flexibility in how they use grant funds to prevent and control juvenile delinquency; an emphasis on making sure that juvenile justice programs under this act are proven effective based on scientifically based research; participation by the State advisory groups in helping States determine those areas most in need of juvenile justice system improvements; mentoring and positive youth development programs; attention exists but if there is, we will not make any mistakes.

As I have said, the Congress is capable of accomplishing these important goals. The political will of the House probably cannot be overcome, and the President might not know, because the bill in question betrays our noble intentions regarding America's youth and the scourge of youth violence.

Mr. Speaker, the current research associated with the subject of H.R. 1900 provides alarming, overwhelming, irrefutable, and most firm evidence that programs undertaken by the Office of Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention (OJJDP) are a complete waste of taxpayer dollars, because they cannot be proven to work.

Despite these programs lack of proven effectiveness, the number of active OJJDP discretionary grants has more than tripled since 1996 (the time of OJJDP's expiration), and the related funding has almost doubled to $555 million. Before authorizing this questionable program again, Congress should at least question whether OJJDP programs are a good use of OJJDP funds. Congress should also devote its energy to ensuring any and all such programs yield the kinds of results that might inspire public confidence and ultimately improve the lives of America's youth.

In 1997, the Center for the Study and Prevention of Violence released Blueprints for Violence Prevention, the most comprehensive review of juvenile crime prevention programs at that time. The Congress was referred to this report by the Department of Justice itself during testimony before the House Committee on Education and the Workforce. The study contains a scathing review and rather harsh criticism of various youth justice and delinquency programs. The expository report filled a void for much-needed research on the ineffectiveness of violence prevention programs.

The authors surveyed 400 program activities and could identify only a paltry 10 that met their standards for effectiveness. The report’s analysis pronounced a credible and shocking indictment on violence prevention programs, stating, “the vast majority of these programs are not being evaluated. Worse yet, some of the most popular programs have actually been demonstrated in careful scientific studies to be ineffective, and yet we continue to invest huge sums of money in them for largely political reasons.”

The report goes on to lambaste violence prevention programs further. “A responsible accounting to the taxpayers, private foundations, or businesses funding these programs requires that we justify these expenditures with tangible results. No respectable business or corporation would invest millions of dollars in an enterprise without checking to see if it is profitable.”

In the long run, Blueprints found that “the deterrent effects of most prevention programs deteriorate quickly once youth leave the program and return to their original neighborhoods, families, and friends.” Unfortunately, even the best violence prevention programs have little lasting value over time.

Since Blueprints was released in 1997, the Center for the Study and Prevention of Violence has reviewed 100 additional programs, yet it has added only one to its list of effective programs. An additional 19 programs have been added as “promising.”

Just this past week, I received a briefing on the status of two GAO reports to be released in October on OJJDP programs. The findings are not complimentary of the way OJJDP is monitoring and evaluating its programs. In fact, the reports provide even more compelling evidence that OJJDP has not responded to 1996 GAO recommendations for better grant monitoring as the agency pledged it would. Mr. Speaker, how much would anyone expect OJJDP to comply now?

The soon-to-be-released GAO reports show that an incredible 96 percent of the demonstration grants had no documentation showing the required number of phone contacts had been made, 94 percent of the grants had no documentation for the proper number of site visits. Progress reports did not cover the entire grant period in 56 percent of the 89 demonstration grant files and 80 percent of the 45 training and technical assistance grant files. Financial status reports did not cover the entire grant period in 65 percent of the demonstration grant files and 80 percent of the 45 training and technical assistance grant files.

According to the GAO, “Our current observations are similar to those we reported in May 1996 about the agency’s lack of documentation of its monitoring activities.”

Congress should be alarmed by this information. If OJJDP cannot determine the effectiveness of its own programs, why should the American people, especially during a time of resource scarcity, continue to fund unproven—sometimes dangerous—programs? I submit to this House, Mr. Speaker, there is no compelling answer.

In light of the ongoing monitoring and evaluation failures at OJJDP and the embarrassing lack of evidence for program effectiveness, I strongly urge my colleagues to join me in opposing H.R. 1900. We should not continue to fund OJJDP programs to the tune of more than $500 million per year when the programs consistently receive poor marks for effectiveness and the research shows no progress toward actually making an appreciable difference in the lives of America’s youth.

To pass this legislation is to perpetrate great harm upon America’s youth and a cruel hoax upon the children in whose name this poor legislation is deceivingly cloaked. The Speaker pro tempore (Mr. Whitfield). The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. Whitfield) that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 1900, as amended.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof)

PERMISSION TO EXPAND TIME FOR GENERAL DEBATE DURING
CONSIDERATION OF H.R. 2586, NATIONAL DEFENSE AUTHORIZATION ACT FOR FISCAL YEAR 2002
Mr. STUMP. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that during consideration of H.R. 2586 in the Committee of the Whole pursuant to the order of September 19, 2001, general debate be enlarged to 2 hours equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Armed Services.
The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr.
WHITFIELD). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Arizona?
There was no objection.

NATIONAL DEFENSE AUTHORIZATION ACT FOR FISCAL YEAR 2002
The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the order of the House of Wednesday, September 19, 2001, and rule XVIII, the Chair declares the House in the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill, H.R. 2586.
The Chair designates the gentlewoman from Illinois (Mrs. BIGGERT) as Chairman of the Committee of the Whole, and requests the gentleman from Kentucky (Mr. WHITFIELD) to assume the chair temporarily.
b 1247
IN THE COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE

Accordingly, the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill (H.R. 2586) to authorize appropriations for fiscal year
2002 for military activities of the Department of Defense, to prescribe military personnel strengths for fiscal year 2002, and for other purposes, with Mr.
WHITFIELD (Chairman pro tempore) in the chair.
The Clerk read the title of the bill.
The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. Pursuant to the order of the House of Wednesday, September 19, 2001, the bill is considered as having been read the first time.


Pursuant to the order of the House of today, the gentleman from Arizona (Mr. STUMP) and the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. SKELTON) each will control 1 hour.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Arizona (Mr. STUMP).

Mr. STUMP. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

On August 1, the Committee on Armed Services reported H.R. 2586 with strong bipartisan support, a vote of 58–1.

The bill authorizes appropriations for the Department of Defense and for the Department of Energy national security programs for a total of $343 billion in budget authority, consistent with the President’s amended defense budget request.

Mr. Chairman, normally at this point we cover all the various initiatives in the bill and why this is a strong proposal to support our men and women in uniform. This bill is all that and more.

The bill contains the largest military pay increase since 1982 and provides significant increases in funding for critical military readiness accounts. The bill also makes great strides in beginning to fix our crumbling military infrastructure and makes a modest down payment on our next priority, the modernization of our aging fleet of combat equipment.

However, the bill also reflects the reality that existed prior to last Tuesday’s terrorist attacks on the United States.

The tragic events of September 11, 2001, have changed our Nation. They exposed our vulnerability to terrorism and removed forever the belief that Americans here at home were safe from the kinds of barbaric attacks that have occurred against our citizens, our military personnel, and our friends and allies overseas. We now know that America itself is a target and that terrorists will not hesitate to use whatever means at their disposal to kill innocent Americans on a massive scale.

The terrorists’ actions were deliberate and calculated. Our response must be as well. Once again, our Armed Forces are being called upon to defend this great Nation, this time from the scourge of terrorism. I have no doubt that they will rise to the occasion. But we must ensure that they have the proper tools and resources to do the job, now and in the future.

H.R. 2586 provides our men and women in uniform with the tools they need to combat the challenges our country will face in the next decade and beyond. The bill goes a long way toward helping our military recover from the devastating effects of the chronic underfunding that has taken place over the past 8 years. It is a critical step toward ensuring that the United States is ready to meet the challenges that lie ahead, including the challenge of meeting and defeating international terrorism.

The bill recognizes that the war against terrorism will not be won quickly and that the United States will require additional capabilities to deal with the threat terrorism poses to America. To this end, the bill authorizes roughly $6 billion for Department of Defense accounts to combat terrorism. Moreover, the bill reflects the need to modernize America’s military capabilities so that our country’s vulnerability to other threats, including ballistic missiles, will be eliminated.

This is a good bill. However, despite the increases contained in the bill, additional resources will be needed. America’s defenses cannot be rebuilt in a single year. The war against terrorism cannot be won with a single year of defense increases. Our ability to protect our citizens against other emerging threats cannot be assured with a single year of defense increases.

The effort to improve our Nation’s defenses and capabilities must be significant and it must be sustained.

That said, it is clear that the funding levels in this bill will not be sufficient to support the level of effort that the Department must undertake to hunt down and root out the perpetrators of last week’s attack. I understand that the Pentagon and the administration are in the process of identifying additional resources required, and we hope to receive a proposal to address these needs soon.

Rather than wait until that proposal arrives, I urge the House to proceed with the approval of this bill and allow us to adjust it as the outlines of the administration’s revised budget proposal become clearer. The bill is too important and contains too many critical legislative tools necessary for the Department to conduct its business to fall victim to the press of schedule.

I urge my colleagues to support this legislation.

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. SKELTON. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, this has been quite a floor debate already. One of the most significant elements of this bill was the amendment that net savings were preserved for the Department of Energy national security programs for a total of $343 billion authorized, the bill commits approximately $10.3 billion to build and renovate new facilities and housing for the military services. It helps to privatize 28,000 units and builds 51 new barracks and dormitories. This is putting our money where the soldier is.

And, to be sure, there are some worthy highlights. Of the $343 billion authorized, the bill commits approximately $3 billion to build and modernize our military services. It helps to privatize 28,000 units and builds 51 new barracks and dormitories. This is putting our money where the soldier is.

And we do not forget the families. The bill builds or improves 6,800 units of military family housing, makes substantial contributions to supporting additional quality-of-life enhancements like child development centers and fitness centers for military personnel, and improves basic working conditions.

As the Department of Defense considers how it shall fight in the decades ahead, our procurement and research development titles preserve the widest range of options. We do not take away what commanders say they need, and back a full array of new and innovative approaches for the future.

The bill also begins to formally close the door on the Cold War. It takes a bold new step in our relations with Russia by authorizing the delivery of 50 Peacekeeper missiles. At the same time, it funds the cooperative threat reduction programs that make those offensive reductions possible. Other adversaries would do well to note how cooperation in making peace leads to greater security on all sides.

There are more strong reasons to support the bill, but let me set aside the formalities for a moment and speak to my colleagues from the heart.

One clear trend in the history of warfare is that war has come closer and closer to home. Now we are faced with an aggressor who deliberately chooses to make war on civilians.

We have a military, Mr. Chairman, of volunteers, each of whom has chosen to put on a uniform. Each of them knows that by doing so, he or she is saying this: “I will put myself between Americans and danger. I will risk my life and freedom to preserve yours. I will do what my country asks, and more.”

Mr. Chairman, their strength and fidelity may soon be put to the test. I guarantee every Member that they will not be found wanting.

As they go, I hope and believe that they carry with them every good wish of those in this Chamber and across the civilized world. And I wish them Godspeed.

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. STUMP. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from California (Mr. HUNTER), chairman of the Subcommittee on Military Research and Development.

Mr. HUNTER. Mr. Chairman, this is a bill in which we generally have some fairly hotly contested issues. It is a bill in which Members voice strong opinions because national security issues evoke strong opinions. But all of us understand now that we have a major mission which predomnates over all other missions with respect to this bill; and that is to give the President the tools that he needs to pursue the terrorist threat emanating from America.

Because of that, Mr. Chairman, I think we are all going to be working together here as we walk through this floor with this bill and go to conference and try to keep our controversy to a minimum, try to compromise on packages, and try to move to the point where we are actually procuring for the President, for our armed services, the resources that they need.

Mr. SKELTON. Madam Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Guam (Mr. UNDERWOOD).

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Madam Chairman, I thank our leader on the Democratic side for yielding me time.

Madam Chairman, at this particular time in our debate here in Congress, there is no more important bill that we are confronted with than this particular bill to provide adequate resources to our men and women in uniform and to all the people who work in support of those men and women in uniform. Certainly at this point in time, our Nation's concern has to be to tem plate a wide variety of ideas and scenarios regarding what is an appropriate response to the heinous attacks that have been unleashed upon our people, the Defense Authorization Act for fiscal year 2002 will certainly be one of the most important defense authorizations in our history.

Madam Chairman, I rise today to join my colleagues in support of H.R. 2586, the fiscal year 2002 Defense Authorization Bill. This bill is well-crafted legislation and a result of tremendous bipartisan effort. It will go a long way toward ensuring that the bedrock of our security, our troops, will be well looked after and supported in the forthcoming year. It provides the largest military pay raise since 1982, and meets many of our military's modernization needs. This bill is essential to stemming the decline in readiness and buttressing the security of the United States and around the world.

In particular, I want to address the provisions in the act relating to the morale, welfare, and recreation activities of DOD. First, I want to acknowledge the outstanding leadership of the panel chair, the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. BARTLETT), and active participation and strong support of panel members. While there are few legislative provisions in this bill, it does not detract from the work of the panel or support of the committee for those provisions.

I also want to draw attention to some of the items in the defense authorization which will support Guam and its strategic role to our Nation's national security. There is over $66 million in defense activities. The people of Guam stand ready to do their part.

Mr. STUMP. Madam Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Colorado (Mr. HEFLEY), the chairman of our Subcommittee on Readiness.

Mr. HEFLEY. Madam Chairman, I rise today in strong support of H.R. 2586, the National Defense Authorization Act for fiscal year 2002.
I believe the committee has done a good job in fulfilling its role of oversight of the Department of Defense and has done its best to provide the necessary funding to improve the readiness of our military forces. Let us not forget, however, that for many years we have asked our military to do more and more with less and less. Now, after the tragic events of last week, we will be asking our military men and women to do even more.

Although there have been many additional missions placed on our military forces over the years, there has not been a corresponding increase in funding to fully sustain our infrastructure and equipment. We are all heartened that the funding levels requested by the administration for next year makes an attempt to arrest the decline in military readiness and begins the process of rebuilding and restoring our military forces. To accomplish this, the administration has had to significantly increase readiness funding this year as compared with last year. As an example, funding for flight operations has increased by over $2.2 billion, which includes the increased costs for fuel and attempts to address the severe parts shortages. In addition, there is an increase for combat training of over $385 million, an increase for facilities repair and sustainment of nearly $500 million, and an increase of $1.2 billion for depot maintenance and repair of equipment. These are significant increases; but, again, they merely halt the decline.

Madam Chairman, H.R. 2386 is a responsible, meaningful bill, that fairly allocates resources for the restoration of acceptable readiness and an acceptable quality of life for men and women of our military forces. To do anything less will allow the readiness of our military to further erode and could risk the lives of countless men and women in every branch of the military. As we get this bill into conference, we may decide on or the President may veto the measure. I urge my colleagues to support this bill, and pass it into law.

Mr. SKELTON. Madam Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Arkansas (Mr. SNYDER).

Mr. SNYDER. Madam Chairman, as the ranking member of the Subcommittee on Military Personnel, the gentleman from New York (Mr. MCHUGH), for his leadership this year.

I would like to thank my friend and colleague, the fine chairman of the Subcommittee on Military Personnel, the gentleman from New York (Mr. MCHUGH), for his leadership this year. It increases the health care operations accounts by $6 billion over what was authorized in fiscal year 2001. It reflects a commitment shared by DOD and the Congress to fully fund health care for our brave men and women in uniform that we are now looking to lead us in this, this greatest of challenges.

The legislation also provides for the largest military pay increase since 1982, including a 5 percent across-the-board increase for officers and a 6 percent across-the-board increase for all enlisted personnel.

Further, the bill authorizes retirement-qualified members of the uniformed services to receive VA disability compensation. This would allow us for the first time to meaningfully deal with that concurrent receipt issue. I want to thank the gentleman from Florida (Mr. Bilirakis), who has been such a leader in this provision.

The bill also very quickly reduces out-of-pocket costs that we require our military men and women to pay from 15 percent to 11.3 percent over the next year, keeping faith with the plan that we initiated to eliminate those costs, and many other provisions with respect to improving TRICARE, health care for our men and women in uniform, building on the budget request for so many other kinds of personnel issue accounts that are so invaluable as we ask these men and women to go forward to defend our Nation.

As we ask these men and women to go forward to defend our Nation and defend our interests, this bill I think signifies very strongly our shared commitment to them as we go forward on defending our interests, this bill I think reflects the need for this Congress to move forward aggressively in support of our defense in a way that we perhaps have not done over the past several years. I am ecstatic that we have struck a balance. We have continued to fund aggressive support for missile defense, we have continued to fund aggressive support for modernization, and in this bill we begin to address the needs of the readiness shortfall that our troops have experienced.

Madam Chairman, just 2½ weeks ago, a group of five of us traveled around the country interacting with 20 of our bases as we traveled across 15 States to get a glimpse of the capability of our military to respond. What we saw was atrocious. We saw military bases that one would not put their worst enemies on. We saw raw sewage coming out of barracks. We saw day care centers for the children of the off-spring of our personnel with mold on the wall, without adequate fire protection. This bill begins to address those long-term maintenance and improvement needs that we have had for so many years and begins to address the readiness shortfall.

I commend the leadership of both the majority under the gentleman from Arizona (Mr. Stump), the chairman of the full committee, and the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. Skelton), the ranking member, for allowing us to move forward in this area.

But we have done other things besides readiness. We have continued to focus on our efforts and addressing the issues relative to terrorism. I am proud of the fact that this committee has been out on the forefront, even though we have had some silent ears in the past, of calling for additional funds to combat terrorism. In fact, Madam Chairman, it was this committee 2 years ago that called for the need for an integration of our intelligence capabilities, the establishment of a national data fusion center, and a national operations and analysis hub. It was this committee that called for that.

Yet the CIA and the FBI have not yet torn down the stovepipes that exist between our intelligence agencies. It was this committee that said all 32 Federal agencies must come together, because the most significant need for our military and our warfighters in the 21st century is the ability to do profiling, to use our intelligence systems to understand the enemy, to understand terrorists and terrorist groups and terrorist organizations.

This bill reaffirms that priority. In fact, we are working for some specific funding to implement that during the process of moving this legislation. It is this committee who again, Madam Chairman, reestablishes the Gillmor Commission. The Gillmor Commission was created by this committee to look at the interaction between the military and our domestic responders. Long before the World Trade Center, we were on the cutting edge of telling the Congress and the American people that our domestic defenders, our international defenders, our military and our fire and EMS must work together. In this bill, we will continue the effort of that.

In every possible area of terrorism, we have been in the forefront and we will continue on the forefront. I urge my colleagues to vote ‘yes’ on this legislation.

Mr. Skelton. Madam Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Let me take just a moment to compliment the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. Weldon) on his efforts concerning the housing for our young people in uniform. He and the gentleman from Texas (Mr. Reyes), the gentleman from Texas (Mr. Ortiz), and the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. Schrock) made a series of appearances to look at the conditions of some of our young folks. We ask so much of them; and I think this bill does make, as the gentleman said, a major step in helping the living conditions for those young people in uniform, and I want to thank him for his efforts in that regard.

Madam Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. Reyes).

Mr. Reyes. Madam Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

Madam Chairman, I rise today to support the defense authorization and to thank the gentleman from Arizona.
CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—HOUSE
September 20, 2001

(Reprinted with leave of the House Armed Services Committee.)

Mr. STUMP. Madam Chairman, I yield 4 minutes to the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. SAXTON), the chairman of our Subcommittee on Research and Development.

Mr. SAXTON. Madam Chairman, I rise in strong support of H.R. 2586, the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2002.

Prior to the August recess, the Committee on Armed Services met to mark up this legislation and ordered it reported by a vote of 58 to 1, a testament to the tradition of bipartisanship of the committee.

I must say that I have been gratified by the strengthening unity of purpose which has seized this House. As a matter of fact, Madam Chairman, if the terrorists who perpetrated last Tuesday's attacks hoped to play any partisan or policy differences we may have with each other, they have failed. As a matter of fact, the aisle that separates the two sides of this House has disappeared.

Obviously, in light of the horrific terrorist attacks of September 11, many aspects of the defense program will be looked at anew; but we are pressing ahead with this bill because there are many, many important defense priorities that will be addressed in this measure. All of us in this great body understand that we need to relook at everything we have been doing to protect our national security, and I promise my colleagues that those needs will be our first priority as we meet in conference with the other body to give final shape to this measure.

Even though we all yearn to act now, the prudent course of action is to address the requirements that the Secretary of Defense identifies, requirements that have been studied hard over the last 10 days. I know the Secretary is working hard with members of our leadership and with the chairman and vice chairman of the Committee on Armed Services to develop our priorities for our consideration; and in the weeks ahead, we will be considering those measures.

As chairman of both the Special Oversight Panel on Terrorism and the Subcommittee on Military Installations and Facilities, I will be very active in pursuing effective ways to defeat the scourge of terrorism while allowing all Americans dearly those who serve in the military, to live and work without fear of sudden attack. Clearly, we must do what we can to protect the safety of our citizens, our military, and our military families. Just as importantly, we must find ways to streamline the security processes so that military bases are reasonably accessible.

In all of this tragedy, there is a glimmer of hope. For example, there is evidence that the improved reinforced measures that have been taken in new construction have saved lives. I am told, and will go and visit soon to see for myself, that portions of the Pentagon that have been renovated, which included several explosion-resistant features, stood up far better than the original structure. So I am sending a delegation of my colleagues to examine the damage very soon and promise my best efforts to do whatever we can to protect all Americans from terrorism.

Later this week, the Committee on Appropriations is expected to bring to the floor the bill to provide appropriations for military construction for the coming year which, of course, are also included in this bill. Our two committees have worked closely together, that is, the Committee on Appropriations and the Committee on Armed Services, in the development of the MILCON program for the next fiscal year. The gentleman from Ohio (Mr. HOBSON) and the gentleman from Hawaii (Mr. ABERCROMBIE) and the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. OLIVER) have worked closely together with all parties, and our bills mirror each other. H.R. 2586 would commit approximately $10.3 billion, roughly $350 million more than the President's request, to the military construction and military housing for the next fiscal year.

In closing, I want to again express my appreciation to the members of the subcommittee who have contributed to Mr. STUMP. Madam Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN), a member of the committee.

Mr. HANSEN. Madam Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me.

As the President said, we have seen the first battle of the first war of the 21st century, but there are many battles to come. Even as we speak, our military forces are deploying to the farthest reaches of the planet to begin the noble campaign to rid the planet of the scourge of terrorism.

I appreciate the gentleman from Arizona (Chairman STUMP) and the ranking member, the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. SKELTON), for the great work they have done on this very important piece of legislation.

I would like to say one thing: This bill has some things that are very important to the ranges of America. As many realize, there have been some real encroachments in it. We had one hearing where we thought they only use 18 percent of Camp Pendleton because of the Endangered Species Act, a small percent of Fort Hood, and challenges coming around. This piece of legislation allows us to have the military have some hand in the Endangered Species Act.

If Members read the 1973 Endangered Species Act, the Secretary of Defense has a prerogative in there to utilize it, and I would urge the Secretary to take a look at that bill. That may help him.

This bill also sets aside the referendum in Vieques. At a time like this, I am sure Puerto Ricans and Americans all over will stand tall, square their shoulders, and say that this is important. And it is important when the JFK goes out that it has live-fire training, that they do not go out unprepared. That is an extremely important thing.

It gets into the idea of readiness, of $7.5 billion more for readiness, which is so important at this time. I think the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Chairman WELDON) and others who have worked admirably in getting this bill ready to go on things that will protect America.

This is a good piece of legislation, a piece of legislation that should be passed. If Members read the Constitution of America, what is the reason we are here in these offices anyway? It is not a lot of this stuff we have been debating for the past year. The main reason we are here is to defend our people and defend this Nation.

This is the first piece of legislation I have seen this year that does that, and it is a good piece of legislation. Let us all vote for this bill.

Mr. SKELTON. Madam Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. ANDREWS).

Mr. ANDREWS. Madam Chairman, I thank my friend, the gentleman from Missouri, for yielding time to me.

At a time of great uncertainty in our country, this bill provides strong assurances to the American people. When our Commander in Chief calls our men and women to land and the soldiers need to do their work, they will be ready because of the diligence and vigilance of Members of this committee on both sides of the aisle.

This bill does a lot to make them even more ready. It raises their pay, and makes significant steps towards improving the conditions in which their families live. It provides for funding for the ships, the planes, the weapons that they will need to do their job. As a member of the National Defense Authorization Act on Military Research and Development, I am particularly pleased that under the leadership of the gentleman from California (Chairman HUNTER), with the active leadership of the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. MEEHAN), we were able to increase by $8 billion, from $41 billion in the present fiscal year to $47 billion in the forthcoming fiscal year, the resources for research and development.

If Members want to make the air-ports safer, these research and development projects will make it so. If Members are looking for ways to defend America’s civilian infrastructure from attacks that we dread and anticipate, these projects are the way to make it so.

Our enemies should note duly this afternoon, we are united on this bill. We will go forward together, and when our Commander in Chief calls, our troops will be ready as a result of this legislation. I urge its passage by the House.

Mr. STUMP. Madam Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. BARTLETT), chairman of our Panel on Morale, Welfare and Recreation of the Committee on Armed Services.

Mr. BARTLETT of Maryland. Madam Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me.

Under normal circumstances, I would confine my remarks to the provisions in the bill relating to the morale, welfare, and recreation and activities for military personnel in general. But in my capacity as chairman of the Panel on Morale, Welfare, and Recreation of the Committee on Armed Services, I certainly wish to thank my ranking member, the gentleman from Guam (Mr. UNDERWOOD), for his commitment and help.

But these are far from normal circumstances. The morale, welfare, and recreation provisions are important, and I commend them to all Members of this great body. More to the point, the overreaching purpose of this bill is to strengthen the national defense. The barbaric and inexplicable acts of terrorism committed just last week brought home the grim reality to us that our enemies are real, they are clever, and they are determined. We must not rest until others responsible are brought to justice. We in Congress must not rest until we discharge our sacred duty to provide for the common defense of this great Nation.

In my opinion, we should have been doing more. However, this is not the time to dwell on what we did or did not do in the past. As Members of Congress, we must fulfill our responsibility to work together to provide the men and women who volunteer to serve in our military with the tools and resources they need to exact justice and ensure that the terrorists I am sure we will have disagreements about exactly how to do that as this effort moves forward. We have to keep focused and united behind the ultimate goal of securing liberty for ourselves and our posterity. This bill and the $60 billion supplemental we passed a few days ago are a good start. More should and will be done, but this bill, as we will amend it today and tomorrow, is a good follow-up to the supplemental, and I urge all Members to support it.

Mr. SKELTON. Madam Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from Maine (Mr. ALLEN).

Mr. ALLEN. Madam Chairman, I thank the chairman and ranking members for putting together a good bill. While I take issue with the bill's acceleration of national missile defense, the overall bill is worthy of support, especially given the importance of supporting our troops in the war on terrorism.

Let me take a moment to mention a little-noticed but important part of the bill, the maritime section. I thank the gentleman from California (Mr. HUNTER), the chairman of the Merchant Marine Panel, for crafting a quality bipartisan product. The likelihood of a military buildup overseas shows that the need for a ready and viable Merchant Marine fleet and a shipbuilding industrial base remains as critical as ever. The committee recommends $104 million to maintain the Title 11 loan guarantee program, and provides $99 million for operation of the Maritime Administration, including the U.S. and State maritime academies.

In addition, we did not support the President's request to transfer the maritime security program from the Department of Transportation to the Department of Defense because the committee has not received any justification for the transfer.

As the Nation stands united after the terrorist attacks, today is not the time for controversial debates. But there are items in this bill worthy of a full debate and vote in the future.

For example, I believe the massive increase in the national missile defense is a mistake. The 40 percent increase for the Patriot system means that the Administration is now spending $20 billion more than the original cost. Considering the only real deployment of the Patriot system is in Germany, I think we should increase our defense posture now, just as much as 2 weeks ago.

Madam Chairman, in the broader sense, I believe this bill takes important steps forward in making sure that we have the prepared forces needed to face the threats of the future. One thing that the events of last week remind us is that the United States can be attacked by more actors using more different methods than ever before, so we have to have a military that is more flexible and more adaptable. This committee has been pushing to make sure that we have expanded capabilities that can deal with this greater variety of threats.

Included in this bill are important provisions dealing with space, because while a lot of our focus now is on these particular acts of terrorism, this country can also be subject to economic terrorism, if for example satellites were disabled, and it would also of course cripple our military. Having control of space and giving space the proper attention it needs is a critical thing.

We support the Army's efforts to transform itself to have smaller units that are more mobile and more lethal, and obviously the events of recent days point out the importance of these particular acts of terrorism. This bill also moves ahead with the conversion of the Trident Submarines into SSBNs. It is a very important step that gives us additional capability.

This bill helps move us forward and will make us better prepared to deal with the challenges ahead.

Mr. SKELTON. Madam Chairman, I yield 7 minutes to the gentlewoman from Georgia (Ms. MCKINNEY).

Ms. MCKINNEY. Madam Chairman, I have grave concerns about this bill. I would first like to say that I hope that reason and common sense prevail in any decisions on our Nation's future response to terrorism.

Madam Chairman, I pray for God's intervention in ensuring the safe return of our many young men and women who are now being sent off to fight this war against terrorism. They face tremendous dangers and uncertain futures, and their families endure many long and sleepless nights waiting for their return. We must remember them all, and acknowledge the great personal sacrifices they are going to have to make on our behalf in the coming days.

H.R. 2586 represents a near $33 billion increase from last year. In comparison, appropriations for diplomacy and foreign aid total only $22.9 billion, a mere 6 percent of the entire defense budget.
September 20, 2001

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—HOUSE 17365

With the financial mismanagement that continues to exist within the Department of Defense, increases should not be made until a system of financial responsibility is instituted to prevent waste and address the lack of accountability.

The single largest portion of the budget increase is dedicated to the development of missile defense systems. It should be apparent to us all now that ballistic missiles are not our worst threat at this time. Expensive high-tech weapons are no substitute for effective diplomacy. Arms control, disarmament, and international cooperation will be more effective in advancing peace and security in the years ahead and will cost far less than a missile shield.

This bill also prevents our Nation from reducing our nuclear weapons arsenal and from de-alerting our nuclear weapons stockpile. In light of recent events, I think it would be prudent to de-alert our nuclear missiles and to retire as many as possible, lest they become greater targets or be turned against us.

I regret that the committee did not support the Sanchez amendment to change current law to permit service-women and female dependents who are overseas to access military hospitals for the purpose of privately funded abortions. This provision is tantamount to gender discrimination and should be changed.

This bill also reduces the likelihood of the Navy’s departure from Vieques. It is my hope that the administration will be permitted to go ahead with its plans for withdrawal from Vieques in 2003.

There have been recent revelations about the use of military intelligence for domestic purposes, specifically with respect to the surveillance of Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., and Operation Lantern Spike. Evidence of such past activities give rise today to grave concern.

The Church committee exposed by the Frank Church Committee revealed the existence of surveillance of American citizens. The Committee on Oversight and Government Reform should be re-established to conduct a thorough investigation of this activity.

I support the Sanchez amendment to the Defense Authorization Act because it directly addresses the quality-of-life problems today’s service members are experiencing. In total, the bill authorizes $343 billion for defense spending in 2002. Of the $33 billion increase from last year, military health care receives a 54 percent increase in funding. Clearly, this is one of the largest given in this critical area in many years.

It is a well-known adage in the military that you recruit soldiers and you retain families. Quality of life is essential in recruiting and retaining quality personnel. If we are re-solving the attrition problem, we must continue to focus on the quality of health care for the entire family. That is why I wanted to eliminate a burden-some requirement experienced by military spouses in maternity-related care.

I believe that service members should not have to worry about administrative health care problems their families may suffer. It detracts from their focus on their work, when their work demands total attention to protecting our Nation. This bill appropriately calls on the Pentagon to make some changes. They are required to report on how they are operating under recent changes made in this aspect of beneficiary health care.

Congress must move ahead to remove the pressures felt by America’s military personnel who put their lives on the line every day to protect America’s freedom. H.R. 2586 makes great strides in adequately addressing pay, housing, and health care for our soldiers, sailors and Marines. I urge my colleagues to vote “yes” on this very important piece of legislation.

Mr. SKELTON. Madam Chairman, may I make an inquiry of the time we have remaining?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Missouri (Mr. SKELTON) has 33½ minutes remaining, and the gentleman from Arizona (Mr. STUMP) has 29 minutes remaining.

Mr. STUMP. Madam Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Kansas (Mr. RYUN), a member of the committee.

Mr. RYUN of Kansas. Madam Chairman, I want to thank the chairman and ranking member of the committee for their hard work on this bill.

Madam Chairman, this Congress is still experiencing the pain of a tremendous tragedy. America’s military personnel and their families will be called on to make even greater sacrifices to protect the freedoms of our Nation. Unfortunately, for too many years they have been called on to do more with less.

Now, more than ever before, we realize our presence represents a stabilizing force to countries around the globe. With the pace of deployments and redeployments, this committee on Armed Services has appropriately concentrated on enhancing quality-of-life issues in support of our deserving personnel.

I support H.R. 2586. The Fiscal Year 2002 Defense Authorization Act, because it directly addresses the quality-of-life problems today’s service members are experiencing. In total, the action to do something about this important problem of unexploded ordnance. I appreciate the committee's including the most important provision of this legislation, which the gentleman from Alabama (Mr. Riley) and I have introduced to deal with this problem that is not theoretical and touches every congressional district, and that is to inventory the sites and prioritize a program for their prioritization.

We are going to have to address the problem of unexploded ordnance at some time. The current rate of cleanup will take hundreds, some have even estimated it may take as many as a thousand, years. That is unacceptable. Sooner is better for the environment, for our citizens, and for the taxpayers.

I hope that this last week's tragic incident will strengthen our resolve to do everything we can to make our citizens safe in every way possible.

Unexploded ordnance, also known as UXO, is the bombs and shells that did not go off as intended and are subsequently buried or litter the landscape. Our bill, the Ordnance and Explosives Risk Management Act (H.R. 2605), lays out policy guidelines to address this problem.

Section 311 of the Committee bill calls for an inventory of explosive risk sites at former military ranges. It requires DOD to complete and annually update the inventory that is already being used to establish criteria for site prioritization among UXO sites.

I want to clarify the purpose of this prioritization requirement. It requires the Department of Defense to develop much more detailed information on the nature and extent of the unexploded ordnance problem that it has compiled to date. Recent GAO reports have concluded that the Department of Defense does not have a complete inventory of current and former training ranges, and that DOD may have overlooked as many as 200 former ranges. It urges DOD to complete a survey of Formerly Used Defense Sites for the Senate Armed Services Committee. Thus, DOD has likely significantly underestimated the scope of the unexploded ordnance problem. In addition to woefully incomplete information on the scope of this problem, DOD has not been able to provide much information on the urgency of cleaning up the many sites that have been identified.

Some have expressed concern to me that the prioritization requirements of the new section 2710 (which is added to Chapter 160 of title 10, United States code) may preempt states’ regulatory authority. That certainly is not the case. I want to emphasize that these requirements are simply intended to generate information on the relative urgency of necessary actions and to establish the criteria for site prioritization among UXO sites. These provisions are not intended to impair or alter, or diminish any existing federal or state authorities to establish requirements for investigating and responding to ordnance contamination.

Madam Chairman, I am pleased to note that the Senate is addressing similar issues to this inventory requirement regarding UXO in its version of the FY02 Defense Authorization. We in the House of Representatives look forward to combining and improving the language in conference in pursuit of what appears to be our common objectives.

It is difficult to find a Congressional district that does not have a UXO problem: over 1,000 formerly-used defense sites (FUDS) are known or suspected to be contaminated with it. They are located from extremely remote areas in Alaska to dense urban environments such as the Spring Valley neighborhood in Washington, DC.

Many of these sites are located in already heavily populated urban areas bordered by housing developments, schools, and parks. Much of this land is otherwise highly desirable, yet its use is restricted due to UXO contamination. At least 65 people have been killed in this country by accidents with UXO, most of them since World War II.

This inventory requirement is going to enable us to begin to learn more about the scope of the threat and make what is needed for our families to be safe, healthy, and economically secure.

Mr. STUMP. Madam Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Connecticut (Mr. Simmons), a member of the committee.

Mr. SIMMONS. Madam Chairman, I rise today in strong support of this legislation; and I commend the chairman, the ranking member, and the staff for their excellent work on this bill.

The past week has been one of tremendous challenge for this Nation and for this Congress; and as we stand here today, thousands and thousands of Americans in uniform are moving by land, sea and air to take part in what may be a long and difficult campaign against a vicious enemy. It is with great seriousness and bipartisanship that we work here today.

When I served as a young lieutenant in Vietnam, America was divided on the war. This made the war particularly difficult for me and for my generation. Today, I hope we stand with strong bipartisan support for this defense authorization bill. It is my hope that this bipartisanship will continue as we deploy the men and women of our armed services to defend our citizens, our interests, and our values both here at home and abroad. They deserve our unanimous support, and they certainly have mine.

The Second District of Connecticut is home to the Groton Submarine Base at New London—the proud home to nearly 10,000 military families and civilians who maintain and support 21 fast attack submarines within Submarine Group Two. The quality of life improvements in this bill have a major affect to many lives in the community I have the privilege of representing.

Our men and women in the military and their families are this bill's primary focus. The pay raise, the highest single increase since 1982, is a critical element towards improving the Pentagon’s quality of life. Each day there are thousands of men and women who get up and put on a uniform and serve their country abroad or on the seas. They guard our shores, provide stability in unstable regions, provide security to our allies, and deter our adversaries. These patriots have not experienced the years of prosperity we are living in today. This bill makes a significant step forward in resolving this disparity.

At the end of this month the Department of Defense will report the Quadrennial Defense Review to Congress outlining the findings of comprehensive reviews and studies it has conducted over the past months. This is expected to highlight the efforts of this administration to transform our military to meet the threats of the present day and those of the future. Madam Chairman, I was pleased that the President's budget and this bill already contains a significant step towards transforming our military to better meet the needs of the future, and it does so in a cost efficient manner through the Trident Submarine Conversion program. By converting a Trident Ballistic Missile Submarine and converting it into a Guide Missile Submarine with 154 Tomahawk Cruise missiles is transformational. It provides the United States with a massive, stealthy, long-range knock-the-door-down capability. This bill is going to fund the conversion of two of the four Tridents currently requiring refueling and sets the course for the conversion of the remaining two. Let us now complete this transformational initiative.

Finally, I am especially pleased that this bill addresses one of my priorities—solving the problem of American soldiers on food stamps. Last year's targeted sustenance benefit and formational initiative.

Mr. SIMMONS. Madam Chairman, I am especially pleased that this bill addresses one of my priorities—solving the problem of American soldiers on food stamps. Last year's targeted sustenance benefit and formational initiative.
We need, then, a new set of principles to form the backbone of an efficient and effective national defense.

First, we need a force that is capable to adapt to changing circumstances, a force that is comfortable and capable countering a terrorist infiltration as an invading army. To accomplish this we need accurate and comprehensive information upon which to base our decisions. This includes information about ourselves, our systems, our current capabilities, our expenditures, as well as our potential enemies.

Finally, borrowing from Colonel Boyd, we need to acknowledge that our people, not our machines, are our most important assets.

The Pentagon, for example, in this context has an independent audit, cannot properly document trillions of dollars in accounting entries, cannot account for all of its equipment, overpays its contractors and uses unrealistic assumptions in all aspects of planning, according to audit agencies.

We have the opportunity to construct an efficient and versatile force oriented towards the diverse threats facing our Nation, one that exploits the ability of a talented officer and enlisted corps and utilizes machines as their tools. But our Nation has much work to do before we complete that task, and we are in a position to accomplish it.

Madam Chairman, I want to thank the ranking member and also the Chair for this opportunity. I know they are trying to do what is best for this country. We have a lot more work to do.

Mr. STUMP. Madam Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. Kirk).

Mr. KIRK. Madam Chairman, more Americans died last Tuesday than in our Revolutionary War. Therefore, I strongly support this bill and commend the chairman, the gentleman from Arizona (Mr. STUMP), and our ranking minority member, the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. SKELTON), for their excellent bipartisan work on this national defense measure.

As a Reserve Naval intelligence officer and a new member of the committee, I strongly support almost all of the provisions of this bill. I would especially like to thank the gentleman from Arizona (Mr. STUMP), the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. NEY), the gentleman from California (Mr. THOMAS), the gentleman from California (Mr. BEVINS), the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. SKELTON) for their support for my amendment, which would allow polling places to be established on military installations.

The Kirk-Langevin amendment would clarify an arcane statute that outlaws “military presence at voting facilities,” hence, allowing the Department of Defense 1999 memo to prohibit establishing polling places on military installations. The section of the U.S. Code that our amendment seeks to repeal was enacted in 1865 in response to actions during the 1864 elections involving Union troops at polling places in Maryland and Delaware. Voters in some States were reportedly asked to take an oath of loyalty to the Union before voting with Union soldiers preventing others from voting.

At the time the law was enacted, it was an appropriate response to these irregularities. However, the 1999 DOD interpretation of the statute makes voting for our men and women in uniform very difficult.

When the DOD issued a directive to base commanders instructing that polling places should not be located on military installations, it has forced existing polling places to be relocated. According to the CRS, an April 2000 survey of State election officials identified at least 20 jurisdictions that have lost polling places and others that were vulnerable. Some of those polling places had been used for at least 15 years. It is time to let State and county officials decide to choose the convenient places for our people to exercise the franchise granted by the Constitution.

Our amendment is to clarify this arcane law, making voting more accessible to our men and women in uniform. I thank my colleagues and I thank them for including this in the en bloc amendment and urge support for this legislation.

Mr. SKELTON. Madam Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. HOEFFEL).

Mr. HOEFFEL. Madam Chairman, I rise in support of this bill and in strong support of the Tauscher amendment that will be offered as part of an en bloc amendment that would require a Presidential strategic plan dealing with nonproliferation issues regarding Russia.

Clearly, the unstable situation in Russia and the uncertainty about the future of her nuclear weaponry and technology requires this kind of strategic plan to be performed. It is very appropriate that the gentlewoman from California (Mrs. TAUSCHER) offer this amendment to the defense authorization bill. I wanted to speak in strong support of it.

I also want to bring to the attention of the Committee that I introduced the State authorization bill a similar proposal that I offered that would require a 5-year strategic plan to be done on our arms control and non-proliferation strategies in general. It is important that we pay close attention to these challenges. That we require both the State Department and, in this case, the Department of Defense to do this sort of planning under Presidential direction, and that we get our national security team and agencies to work together to deal with nonproliferation issues, with arms control matters.

Madam Chairman, I compliment the gentlewoman from California (Mrs. TAUSCHER) for bringing this matter to the attention of the House. I urge support for her amendment and the close attention to be paid to the future of proliferation issues. The events of last week bring home as clearly as possible the need for us to pay attention to keeping the nuclear weapons, technology and information out of the hands of terrorists. This sort of strategic planning is the way to do it. I ask for support of the Tauscher amendment.

Mr. STUMP. Madam Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Arizona (Mr. KOLBE).

Mr. KOLBE. Madam Chairman, I congratulate the chairman and the ranking member for a good bipartisan bill. I rise in strong support of it.

Madam Chairman, I come to the floor today to discuss an inequity in the treatment of Americans who helped to win the Cold War. Unfortunately, an amendment that I would have offered to this bill was not made in order.

This same bill last year included the Energy Employees Occupational Illness Compensation Program Act of 2000. This act provides compensation to employees and survivors of employees suffering from illnesses incurred from exposure to beryllium in the performance of duty in America’s nuclear weapons program.

Beryllium is a metal with structural and atomic characteristics that make it irreplaceable for many nuclear-related uses. Inhalation of beryllium dust, even at very low concentrations, can cause chronic beryllium disease, which gradually destroys lung function many years after exposure. Thousands of workers involved in producing nuclear weapons, materials and components have suffered disability and horrible deaths.

Although beryllium has numerous commercial applications, the Department of Energy and Defense have been the largest users. In the construction of our strategic nuclear arsenal, the Department of Energy had responsibility for the nuclear device, that is, the weapon, while the Department of Defense had responsibility for the delivery system, the missile, and the inertial guidance system which would deliver the device to target.

Congress has recognized its responsibility and determined that we are responsible in accordance with the Energy Employees Occupational Illness Compensation Program Act.

Alleged to be associated with the best of intentions, the act is a travesty because it is not equitable. It applies only to the DOE. A worker with the exact same condition developed under the exact same circumstances but who worked for the Department of Defense is not covered. Why should one Department of Government have different responsibilities and liabilities than another Department?

If the Department of Energy has a responsibility to compensate its workers, then under the same circumstances the Department of Defense should have the same responsibility. I would not seek to greatly expand the scope of the Energy Employees Occupational Illness Compensation Program Act, but I insist that those people working for the Department of Defense under the same relationship and same conditions as those working for the Department of Energy receive the same benefit.

This inequitable treatment of people who did work on behalf of our national defense was more important than tax cuts. The citizens who work on our national weapons program helped to win the Cold War, and they should not be punished unfairly only because they worked for one agency instead of another. I do not intend to give up on this matter. I and the people who are suffering from this disease are anxiously awaiting the Department of Defense’s report on this subject, which is inexplicably late; and I will continue to pursue a legislative remedy for this injustice.

Mr. SKELTON. Madam Chairman, I yield 4 minutes to the gentleman from Mississippi (Mr. TAYLOR).

Mr. TAYLOR of Mississippi. Madam Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

Madam Chairman, last Tuesday was a tragic reminder of what a dangerous place this world is. It is also a tragic reminder of how dangerous the world is not only for the men and women in uniform, but the people they protect.

This job is not for everyone. It is not only for the men and women in uniform, but the people they protect. It is not just for our military, but for our nation as well as we should have. The fact that any American died means that we have to do better.

This bill will address a lot of our Nation’s needs, but it also leaves some things unattended. I regret to say this year’s shipbuilding budget will lead to a Navy that is 210 ships in the very near future. That is inadequate. Maybe what happened on Tuesday will cause us to rethink that, and I hope so. I had assurance 2 weeks ago from the Secretary of the Navy that he will try to do better. Unfortunately, he told me next year’s budget does not look any better than this year’s budget for shipbuilding.

Earlier I told my colleagues that defense was more important than tax breaks. I will say it again. Defending this Nation is more important than tax breaks. Having served in both State and local government, I can tell my colleagues who walk into a base hospital will be cared for just like every other person in America, be used to reimburse that base hospital for their care to ensure that promise was kept.

Over half of our Nation’s military retirees live close to a military base, and the overwhelming preponderance of them did so so they could use the base hospital. Unfortunately, language was inserted in the last bill that instead of saying they must do this, allowed Medicare and the Department of Defense health care system to reach an agreement. For 3 months under the Clinton administration and for 8 months under the Bush administration, neither HCFA nor the DOD have reached that agreement and now talks have broken off.

So on October 1, military retirees who walk into a base hospital will be turned away. Many have been going to those base hospitals since they were 18 years old. They like being called colonel or chief. They earned those titles. They want to go to the base hospital because that has been their family for 20 to 40 years of their lives.

Madam Chairman, I have gone before the Committee on Rules with the same amendment that over 400 of my colleagues voted for last year. It is a very simple premise. It would allow our Nation’s military retirees who pay Medicare taxes, just like every other American, to take their Medicare benefits to a base hospital.

Unfortunately, thus far the Committee on Rules has not made that amendment in order. I am here publicly to ask my colleagues, the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. SKELTON), the gentleman from Arizona (Mr. STUMP), I have met with the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. HASTERT), the ranking members on both sides of the Committee on Rules, let us make that amendment in order before we ask one more kid to serve their country with promises of doing good things for them.

Let us keep the promises that we have made. Those promises have been made. Those people who work on our national weapons and atomic characteristics that make it irreplaceable for many nuclear-relevant uses. Inhalation of beryllium dust, even at very low concentrations, can cause chronic beryllium disease, which gradually destroys lung function many years after exposure. Thousands of workers involved in producing nuclear weapons, materials and components have suffered disability and horrible deaths.

Although beryllium has numerous commercial applications, the Department of Energy and Defense have been the largest users. In the construction of our strategic nuclear arsenal, the Department of Energy had responsibility for the nuclear device, that is, the weapon, while the Department of Defense had responsibility for the delivery system, the missile, and the inertial guidance system which would deliver the device to target.

Congress has recognized its responsibility and determined that we are responsible in accordance with the Energy Employees Occupational Illness Compensation Program Act.

Alleged to be associated with the best of intentions, the act is a travesty because it is not equitable. It applies only to the DOE. A worker with the exact same condition developed under the exact same circumstances but who worked for the Department of Defense is not covered. Why should one Department of Government have different responsibilities and liabilities than another Department?

If the Department of Energy has a responsibility to compensate its workers, then under the same circumstances the Department of Defense should have the same responsibility. I would not seek to greatly expand the scope of the Energy Employees Occupational Illness Compensation Program Act, but I insist that those people working for the Department of Defense under the same relationship and same conditions as those working for the Department of Energy receive the same benefit.

This inequitable treatment of people who did work on behalf of our national defense was more important than tax cuts. The citizens who work on our national weapons program helped to win the Cold War, and they should not be punished unfairly only because they worked for one agency instead of another. I do not intend to give up on this matter. I and the people who are suffering from this disease are anxiously awaiting the Department of Defense’s report on this subject, which is inexplicably late; and I will continue to pursue a legislative remedy for this injustice.

This act provides compensation to employees and survivors of employees suffering from illnesses incurred from exposure to beryllium in the performance of duty in America’s nuclear weapons program.

Mr. STUMP. Madam Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Indiana (Mr. BUYER).

Mr. BUYER. Madam Chairman, I thank the gentleman from Arizona (Mr. STUMP) and the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. SKELTon) for a job well done on the bill.

The President, as we all know, is coming here tonight to address not only a joint session, but the American people, to describe not only his mission in the war on terrorism, but also how he will help stabilize and stimulate our economy and how sacrifice must be of a higher priority than personal inconvenience.

This is the first war of the 21st century, and it is nothing like anything we have ever faced. The enemy flies no flag, has no boundaries, and often goes unseen. We call it the asymmetrical threat; but this is one that is not subject to the traditional calculus of deterrence, which means that we also in this bill, and I am sure as we go to conference, will have to address the intelligence side of the House, not only by my colleagues' cooperation as an authorizing committee, but also with the appropriators to make sure that not only the intelligence community of our CIA but the military intelligence community is strengthened.

I thank on behalf of the Guard and Reserve Caucus, the gentleman from Mississippi (Mr. TAYLOR) and myself, the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. SKELTon), and the gentleman from Arizona (Mr. STUMP), for allowing us to play a part in the bill. I am pleased that the bill provides $907 million, $192 million more than the President's request for facilities enhancements to improve training and readiness for the Guard and Reserve.

Congress has worked hard in the past close the procurement gap between the active and reserve components to ensure seamless integration of equipment and compatibility.

That modernization of those reserve components is highlighted by the call-up that is happening right now. We cannot go to remote places of the world without relying upon the Guard and Reserve. We need their air assets to build the air bridge for the lift to get us to where we need to be.

As this bill supports them, I want to thank the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. SKELTon) and members of the committee on both sides of the aisle and the chairman for a job well done in this bill. Please support this defense bill.

Mr. SKELTon. Madam Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Madam Chairman, last year in the bill that related to the Department of Defense, there was a provision that required the General Accounting Office, the GAO, to examine the Federal Government's progress in its effort to combat terrorism. As of today, the GAO is making its findings public.

First, Mr. Chairman, I yield that for quite some time, we have been in a quiet war against terrorism. Nothing has happened here on our soil. And as of September 11, the difference is now that everyone knows it. This report, which was well in the works before the horrific attacks on September 11, underscores our need to dedicate more attention to protecting Americans by combating terrorism.

"This report is entitled "Combatting Terrorism: Progress Made, but Executive Direction Needed to Address Evolving Challenges."

The report concludes that while progress has been made, much remains to be done to establish overall leadership and resources needed at both the operational and national level to implement a comprehensive national strategy. The report recommends the establishment of a single focal point for overall coordination and leadership and calls on the President to appoint a person to be responsible for threat assessments, strategy, budgeting, and oversight. The study further suggests the need for greater consolidation of Federal programs designed to assist State and local governments such as those managed by the Department of Justice and the Federal Emergency Management Agency.

This report, though it cannot be of help because of the September 11 acts that occurred, hopefully will be of help in the days and years ahead.

Madam Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. STUMP. Madam Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. FOORES).

Mr. FORRES. Madam Chairman, I rise in strong support of the National Defense Authorization Act. In the coming days, we will see a strong demonstration of America's military might. But as our military responds to Tuesday's tragic events, keep in mind that this is a military that has faced a decade of high tempo of operations, armed with declining numbers of personnel and decreased funding. This other battle, the battle to maintain readiness, has degraded America's security by encouraging the attrition of some of its most talented personnel.

Now more than ever, we need to support our service personnel, the true power behind America's military might.

We must give our soldiers, sailors, airmen and marines modern weaponry with which to keep American interests secure. We must support shipbuilding, aircraft procurement, homeland defense, and the modernization of the force. We must support the National Defense Authorization Act if we want to ensure that America will be able to respond to aggression, today and tomorrow. The National Defense Authorization Act addresses the urgent need to rebuild the U.S. military. I urge my fellow members to support this balanced measure.

I thank the chairman and the ranking member for their hard work and dedication to this legislation.

Mr. STUMP. Madam Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Florida (Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN).

Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN. Madam Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

One of the more revealing elements of the approach undertaken by Osama bin Laden and his terrorist network is the importance of lengthy preparation, meticulous planning and guerilla warfare. However, it is not guerilla warfare in the traditional sense. As the baron of terrorism, Mr. bin Laden clearly has demonstrated, anything and everything is possible. In the minds of these terrorists, anything and everything is justified. Thus, the U.S. must be prepared on every front to confront and eradicate such an enemy.

This bill seeks to accomplish just that. The U.S. and democratic principles triumphed over tyranny and communism during the Cold War by following the tenets of the landmark document, NSC–68, and the doctrine of peace through strength. We did simply more than match capabilities; we overpowered our adversaries through a policy firmly rooted in U.S. military superiority and overwhelming strength. The resources and the funding that we allocate for the war against terrorism must follow this precedent. We must provide for a flexible, comprehensive, and definitive response which includes any and all options available to the U.S.

Thomas Jefferson wrote in 1788, "War requires every resource."

Mr. HAYES. Madam Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from North Carolina (Mr. HAYES), a member of the committee.

Mr. HAYES. Madam Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Arizona (Mr. STUMP) and the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. SKELTon) for their absolutely tireless effort on the part of our military, our men and women in uniform.

Madam Chairman, the tragic events of September 11, 2001, have thrust our Nation's military into the spotlight and called to duty the brave men and women of the U.S. Armed Forces. Once again, U.S. citizens are relying behind them as they face a two-front, two-pronged mission, a war against terrorism and the narrowing mission they have been called upon to do. We in Congress just passed a $40 billion funding bill, half of which will be devoted to our military. This financial support, devoted to our national security, is long in coming. I am proud to say that as a member of the House Committee on Armed Services, this legislation that we passed in August took the first step in rebuilding our military after almost a decade of decay and neglect.

The bill in front of us today marks the most significant increase to the defense budget since the mid-1980s. It is targeted at two of the most critical areas crucial to maintaining a healthy and robust military: quality of life and readiness. For the soldiers in my district at Fort Bragg, North Carolina, the ability to adequately care for their families and train for the mission for which they are called are the two issues that are second to none. I believe this legislation makes significant progress in these areas. Furthermore, this bill gives the President’s missile defense program and ensures a necessary and realistic testing program.

Madam Chairman, it is gross injustice and misfortune that it took the tragedy of a week ago to focus the public eye on the need for a more robust defense budget. I feel the legislation in front of us today takes that important first step and sets a clear and strong course to rebuild our Nation’s defenses. I urge my colleagues to send a message, loud and clear, to our soldiers, sailors and airmen that we will strongly support them and give them the resources necessary to perform the mission at hand.

Mr. STUMP. Madam Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Arizona (Mr. FLAKE).

Mr. FLAKE. Madam Chairman, I wanted to briefly speak about an amendment that I had planned to offer. My amendment would have removed my amendment that I had planned to offer.

Mr. STUMP. Madam Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FLAKE. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. HUNTER. Madam Chairman, I want to briefly speak about an amendment that I had planned to offer.

Mr. STUMP. Madam Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FLAKE. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. HUNTER. Madam Chairman, I just want to add my thoughts on the B-2 fleet. We have been so short of money the last several years that we have been like a farmer who has three hay balers and he cannot afford to keep all three of them running, so he starts cannibalizing parts off one of them just so he can keep the other two in operation. That is not the way to do it. That’s not the way we have been forced to run part of our B-1 fleet.

And so the idea was to save money, we would cut down that fleet, coming down from the nineteen into the sixties, and basically away with those operations of some 30-some aircraft. That would take out of operation one of our fine assets, our most recently built bombers beyond the few B-2s that we have built, something that has got long-range capability. In fact, those packages may be utilized in upcoming air operations.

My own thoughts are that it is wise for us to spend the money that it takes for these operational support to keep the entire B-1 fleet in the air and operational. I think that makes sense. I think that is where the gentleman was going with his amendment.

Mr. FLAKE. I thank the gentleman. Yes, I want a discussion in conference and want to make sure that we do not foreclose on any option by the administration.

Mr. HUNTER. Let me just say I would be happy to work with the gentleman, with Democrat and Republican Members, and with the administration, to try to persuade them that keeping all our bombers in the air is the way to go.

Mr. STUMP. Madam Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from California (Mr. HUNTER).

Mr. HUNTER. Madam Chairman, I would like to talk with the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. SKELTON) who is an expert on the B-2 fleet.

I still think that most Americans do not realize what we have done with that capability, because I just left the building. While I was there, during World War II, we built bombers at a rate that was remarkable. We built a bomber aircraft per hour. That meant that in 1 day, 24 hours, we would build more aircraft than we have in the entire B-2 fleet. And in some cases, in missions in Europe and other places, we lost more than that many planes in a day. Yet the B-2 fleet, because it has the ability to avoid and evade enemy radar and, therefore, the ability to penetrate enemy’s airspace directly over target, coupled with precision munitions, where instead of dropping a giant payload of hundreds of bombs on a bridge or another asset, you send one precision-targeted munition into that bridge that bridges and bring it down, that capability, that precision munitions, coupled with stealth that we have with B-2, has made us very effective.

Mr. SKELTON. Madam Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HUNTER. I yield to the gentleman from Missouri.

Mr. SKELTON. Madam Chairman, the B-2 fleet from Whiteman Air Force Base, which is in west central Missouri, did remarkable work during the Kosovo conflict. The precision ammunition that it used was the best effort in the history of aerial warfare. In this bill, we are working towards smaller precision-type ammunition, bombs, and I think that is a mistake.

I also think that, regarding the B-2 fleet, we need certain upgrades to make sure that we stay ahead of all the technology so that, even more so, they will be stealthy. They are a first-class instrument of national defense. The B-2 fleet, as the gentleman knows, is so very, very important to our future. We must in our capacity as lawmakers and members of this committee make sure that the upgrades that are necessary for future technical advancement are bought and paid for.

On a related item, I might tell the gentleman from California that not long ago I was talking with a marine captain who had just relinquished his command as a corps general. He was asking him about his experience. He, of course, being a marine all the way through, was very proud of his service as commander of that company. But he did remark, “We didn’t have enough ammunition to train properly.”

The gentleman from California has done yeoman’s work in the area. We need, I think, to do more in the area of ammunition. I know full well that I join him in that effort.

Mr. SKELTON. Madam Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

I want to take this opportunity to thank the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. SKELTON), the ranking member, for all his help this past year. This is our first bill. It has been a joy to work with him. He’s been the epitome of a gentleman, and I thank the gentleman, my friend, for all his hard work.

Few people are more diligent when it comes to the defense of this country than the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. SKELTON), and I commend him again.

I have no further speakers, Madam Chairman.

Mr. HUNTER. Madam Chairman, does the gentleman from Missouri yield time?

Mr. SKELTON. How much time do I have remaining, Madam Chairman?

Mr. HUNTER. The gentleman from Missouri (Mr. SKELTON) has 20 seconds.

Mr. SKELTON. The gentleman from Missouri (Mr. SKELTON) has 20 seconds.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Missouri yield time?
minutes. The gentleman from Arizona (Mr. STUMP) has 10 minutes.

Mr. SKELTON. Madam Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from California (Mr. CUNNINGHAM), a member of the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. CUNNINGHAM. Madam Chairman, the defense bill has been neglected for a long period of time, not necessarily by appropriations or even authorization, but by the utilization of our Armed Forces without replenishing those forces. It has prevented modernization in many areas.

I also serve on the Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence; and if we think about the depreciation of our personnel and equipment and every rock we turn over, whether it is parts, whether it is training, whether it is ship repair, there is a deficiency.

I would like for everyone to think also, because authorization goes to appropriations and under the appropriations cycle we fund the intelligence committees; but every time we had one of those 124 deployments, our intelligence agencies were forced to withdraw from their budget as well and not modernize both in the HUMINT, ELINT and areas in which they need to protect us from terrorism as well as national security from other sources.

I laud the gentlemen on both sides. One of my favorite Members here in Congress is the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. SKELTON), a direct descendant of Daniel Boone; and he believes in defense, as does the gentleman from Arizona (Mr. STUMP), the chairman, on our side of the aisle.

It is important now that the Nation realizes just how far short deficient that our Armed Forces are and our intelligence service; and if we are going to do an adequate job of protecting this country, then this must be just a start.

Mr. SKELTON. Madam Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. FENNETT).

Mr. FENNETT. Madam Chairman, I appreciate the time from the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. SKELTON), and I want to pay my deep respects to him and to the gentleman from Arizona (Mr. STUMP), the Chair, and to the others.

Let me just say parenthetically, I think we here all enormously enjoy this job almost all the time, but this is such a grave time that I think none of us feel that we are adequate to these terrific decisions and we are all doing our best; and I particularly admire those who have the responsibility for national security, especially because from what I have learned from our ranking member and others, there was a genuine effort to work together.

We understand that the kind of differences of opinion we have among ourselves do not mean a lack of national unity, but we also understand the importance of international perception, and we all carry with us a commitment to make sure that none of this murderous gang that has launched a war on innocent people here get any comfort from our debates; and indeed, I think and I understand this, there will be less of a debate in this particular bill over one very controversial issue, national missile defense, than there might otherwise have been and there will be some day.

While many regret that, I think that is an opportunity, and I commend the leadership on both sides for acknowledging that because we do run the risk that the people who do not understand that democracy is a strength and not a weakness might temporarily be emboldened by that. So many of us do note that we are supportive of a decision to forgo a all-out debate at this point, not because this is not an important issue, but because there will be another and better time in which to do it.

I do, however, want to stress one aspect of the missile defense question. President Bush has very wide, virtually unanimous support in this country in fashioning a response to this terrorism, which is based on his recognition that it cannot be done without significant international support. Just as a physical fact, given the location of Afghanistan, this, given all of the other problems we have with this far-flung network of murderous assailants that we confront, international cooperation is very important.

I was particularly struck that former President Bush made a point in a speech in Boston about the need for us to disavow any notion any might have had that America can go it alone. This reminds people why we need the rest of the world.

One discordant note in this, however, potentially, would be an American decision unilaterally to withdraw from the ABM treaty in the pursuit of national missile defense. Just as many of us are today acquiescing in the decision not to have a full-fledged debate on this issue, I hope the administration, in the interest of national unity and in the interest of getting that international supportive coalition that is so critical to success, will not be on the verge of or threatening to abdicate a treaty which is so important.

Cooperation from Russia and from the other countries like Tajikistan, Kazakhstan, et cetera, that is very important. Cooperation with China is important. It would be, I think, a mistake if we were to make it harder to get that necessary multilateral cooperation by an excessive unilateral approach to the question of the antiballistic missile treaty.

Just as many of us are deferring our views on the overall issue because we do not want anyone outside this country to misunderstand, we do not want anyone to misapprehend the degree of determination. We believe in this Administration, as shown by the kind of leadership that is shown in America, we believe unanimously, almost certainly in this Congress, that we have not only the right, but the moral obligation, to use whatever physical force is necessary to pursue these murderers, because it is our obligation as the nation of great strength, to prevent them from trying striking again and again and again.

But we need to do that with a full respect to our own traditions. We need to show our moral as well as our physical superiority. Part of that has been correctly understood by the President of the United States and by Secretary Powell and others, a multilateral approach.

So, therefore, I hope very strongly that nothing will be done in the area of missile defense in this next few months that would jeopardize the important principles of multilateralism, of getting the maximum cooperation. It cannot be a good policy for us completely to disregard the views of others on that one issue, when we are so eager to have their cooperation; and we ought to have their cooperation. We are asking for something in the world’s interests, as well as our own.

So, again, I want to thank the ranking member, the Chair and others, for the example they are setting of cooperation.

Mr. STUMP. Madam Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. WELDON).

Mr. WELDON. Madam Chairman, I yield the gentleman for yielding me time.

I want to respond to our colleague’s comments. The gentleman raises a valid point, and I want to acknowledge the fact that many of our colleagues who oppose missile defense are working in a very constructive way to move forward with this sense of unity; and we appreciate that.

I want to assure the gentleman that that is our intent. In fact, on Wednesday, a group of us will travel to Moscow. We have been working for 2 months quietly behind the scenes with the administration, both the Department of Defense, the National Security Council and the White House, to put together a major package, this comprehensive package ever, to engage Russia and its people in the area of the environment, education, health care, culture, agriculture, across-the-board, with a component of that being defense.

We are very sensitive to the gentleman’s comments that we do not want to have this become an issue that becomes divisive. I share that feeling. Even though we may disagree on missile defense, I share the gentleman’s sentiments. And I know many of our colleagues, like the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. KUCINICH) and others, feel the same way.

So we are using every ounce of energy to reach that compromise to work together. The need will be among our minority party on the trip. In fact, the gentleman from New York (Mr. Hinchey) has agreed to go, the gentleman from Hawaii (Mr. Abercrombie), the gentleman from Texas (Mr. Edwards) is looking at going with us.

We will have constructive discussions. I want to assure our colleague, the White House, the Defense Department, and the State Department understands the gentleman’s comments. We do not want to have this become a split between us and Russia, and I want to pledge my support to working every possible way I can to make sure that we do exactly what the gentleman has asked us to do, and that is not box Russia out.

So I appreciate the gentleman’s comments.

Mr. FRANK. Madam Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WELDON of Pennsylvania. I yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. FRANK. Madam Chairman, given the fact that the gentleman acknowledges, yes, this is an area in which we differ, I appreciate very much his comments. And I hope that this will be part of the signal that we set, that we can maintain legitimate differences within our democratic structure without in any way endangering our unity.

Mr. SKELTON. Madam Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Madam Chairman, I thank the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. Frank), for his comments on the need for working together with other countries. One of the pole stars of this entire effort against terrorism will be that of building a coalition of countries who desire and urge freedom for their people. So I thank the gentleman for pointing that out.

Madam Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Connecticut (Mr. Larson).

Mr. LARSON of Connecticut. Madam Chairman, I want to join with those who have come to this floor today to express, first and foremost, the heartfelt feelings that all of us on the committee have for the extraordinary leadership on this committee, exemplified by the gentleman from Arizona (Mr. Stump) and the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. Skelton). Truly in this hour of need for our country and throughout their service on this committee, they have always put America first.

The help that I have received in putting forward legislation from people like the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. Weldon) and the gentleman from California (Mr. Hunter) and working with the gentleman from Mississippi (Mr. Taylor) and the gentleman from Hawaii (Mr. Abercrombie), makes this committee, makes this Chamber, especially during this hour of crisis, that much more significant, that much more important. To see the debate that just transpired between two colleagues lets the American people know how strong and firm and committed we remain.

Mr. STUMP, Madam Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from California (Mr. Hunter).

Mr. HUNTER. Madam Chairman, I just want to mention that with respect to the ranking member who was just talking about the need for a bilateral policy and working with our allies, obviously that system has now been energized, in light of the strike on the United States.

I think one other aspect of missile defense has been addressed by that, because one of the arguments of the Bush Administration to the Russians has been that while we did sign the ABM agreement with them and we promised not to defend ourselves against incoming missiles and they did the same thing with respect to the United States, our argument has been that this world is a very dangerous place external to that relationship between the Russians and the United States; that there are other states out there that would attack the United States that we should be worried about and who are developing missiles and developing those systems that could harm us.

I think that this strike on the United States has given great deal of credibility to this message that we have been sending to the Russians, that we have not only a real threat, but we have obviously the supreme national interest of defending ourselves against that threat. I think there is going to be a new tone taken by the Russians post-strike.

Mr. SKELTON. Madam Chairman, I yield such time as she may consume to the gentleman from California (Ms. Sanchez) for the purposes of a closing.

Ms. SANchez. Madam Chairman, I rise to engage the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. Skelton), the distinguished ranking member of the committee, on an issue that directly impacts my district.

Mr. SKELTON. Madam Chairman, if the gentleman will yield, I would be pleased, of course, to engage with the gentleman from California in a discussion of her concerns.

Ms. SANchez. Madam Chairman, as a member of the House Committee on Armed Services, I wish to bring to the attention of my colleagues and the administration a problem that involves a former active military facility in my congressional district, the Marine Corps Air Station of Tustin.

Madam Chairman, I would tell the gentlewoman that I am familiar with the facility, which was closed under the auspices of the Base Closure and Realignment Commission, also known as BRAC. The gentlewoman has discussed the status with me in the past.

Ms. SANCHEZ. Madam Chairman, as the gentleman from Missouri knows, MCAS Tustin was closed along with MCAS El Toro in Orange County, California. As in other communities throughout the Nation, the local public and their leaders have had to decide how best to use these former military installations. In the case of MCAS Tustin, there is currently a tug of war going on in my district between the different interests. The city of Tustin wishes to use most of the facility for purposes that exclude public benefit conveyances to Santa Ana Unified School District and Rancho Santiago Community College District.

So if I may say, if the gentlewoman will again yield, I might say that I am aware of the city of Tustin’s base reuse plan and that there is currently a dispute between the city of Tustin and the school district, as the gentlewoman mentioned. I further understand that the Department of the Navy has been meeting with both parties to try to encourage a compromise solution to the outstanding issues regarding this former base.

Ms. SANCHEZ. Madam Chairman, that is correct. In short, the city of Tustin has not provided for the conveyance of enough appropriate land to accommodate the needs of the growing school district populations in Santa Ana. The land that the city of Tustin has offered to the school districts is contaminated and unusable for purposes of housing children. The Department of the Navy has assured me that the resolution of the issues surrounding conveyance of this Tustin property for educational needs is critical in any conveyance decision, and the Navy continues to encourage a local agreement on the issue and feels that the lack of agreement on educational transfers seriously complicates and has stopped any Navy decision to convey MCAS Tustin property.

Mr. SKELTON. Madam Chairman, that is my understanding of the position of the Department of the Navy as well. As ranking minority member of the committee, I can assure the gentlewoman that the committee would take a very dim view of a transfer of land by the Navy before the issues that she raises today are resolved.

Ms. SANCHEZ. Madam Chairman, I thank the gentleman.
Mr. MCGOVERN. Madam Chairman, I have many concerns about this bill and our defense budget, including its overall size, weapons systems, and priorities. I have never supported President George W. Bush's Missile Defense, and I never will. This foolish and expensive program takes monies away that would be better spent, in my opinion, to combat terrorism, enhance readiness, and support research on battlefield medical and other support.

At the same time, I strongly support the significant increases in this authorizations bill for "quality of life" improvements for our uniformed men and women and their families. H.R. 2586 makes welcome advances in providing additional resources for military pay, health care, and housing, as well as health care for our military retirees.

I believe it is important to move this funding forward so that the Pentagon and our various defense agencies might rest assured that they have the resources necessary to effectively respond to our current national security crisis.

I would like to take a moment, however, to talk about a small amount of military aid in this bill, small at least relative to the overall $343.1 billion authorized in H.R. 2586. But not small in the impact these funds will have in the country where they will be used.

This bill contains a little over $99 million in military aid for Colombia. In July, during debate on the foreign operations appropriations bill, many of my colleagues claimed that the amendment offered by Congressman Hoekstra and myself would eliminate military aid for Colombia. We said that was not true—that there were additional funds in the DOD bill. We were right.

President Pastrana recently announced that Colombia should rethink the entire approach of the United States-backed Plan Colombia. Indeed, as the Push Into Southern Colombia proceeds, President Pastrana described how coca fields are shifting from the southern state of Putumayo to regions never used before for drug cultivation. The various armed factions in Colombia, the guerrilla groups, the paramilitary forces and the Armed Forces—are now entering those regions, fighting for territorial control and bringing violence and death in their wake. And the expanded conflict has brought peace negotiations to a halt.

Rather than containing coca cultivation and decreasing the level of violence in Colombia, our policy is doing the opposite, and drawing Colombia and the United States into a wider conflict.

As we prepare for yet another war against an enemy that can respond with force and forces, we need to remember that military force alone can’t win these campaigns. Over $340 billion in military aid for the Pentagon alone won’t guarantee success.

I support the efforts of president Bush, Secretary of State Colin Powell, and this Armed Services Committee to create a global, multilateral effort to coordinate our diplomatic, economic, judicial, law enforcement, and intelligence resources. The United States cannot do this alone, and we should not “go it alone.”

Increased development and economic assistance can make a significant difference in overcoming the poverty, hunger, ignorance, illiteracy, and oppression, which are often the breeding grounds of civil unrest, conflict and terrorism.

And unless the United States is actively engaged in finding just and lasting solutions to the many long-standing conflicts around the globe, including the Middle East, terrorism will continue to flourish.

Now, more than ever, we must make serious efforts to advance justice, human dignity and the rule of law to every corner of the globe.

And lest we forget, our national security is grounded in our ability to provide our own citizens with quality education, health care, a sound infrastructure, economic opportunity, and fundamental civil liberties.

So, while we take up consideration today of this defense bill, I urge my colleagues to also support significant new investments in food and development aid, in diplomatic resources, and in strengthening our domestic and international judicial law enforcement programs. The September 11 terrorist attacks were attacks against our freedoms and the prosperity of our nation and our communities. We must ensure both continue to advance if we are to genuinely thwart the intent behind these evil acts.

Ms. MCKINNEY. Madam Chairman, I have grave concerns about this bill.

I would first like to say that I hope that reason and common sense prevail in any decisions on our Nation’s future response to terrorism.

Madam Chairman, I pray for God’s intervention in ensuring the safe return of our many young men and women who are now being sent off to fight this war against terrorism. They face tremendous dangers and uncertain futures and their families will endure many long and sleepless nights waiting for their return. We must remember them all and acknowledge the great personal sacrifices they are going to have to make on our behalf in the coming days.

BUDGET INCREASE AND COMPARISON

The passage of H.R. 2586, the National Defense Authorization Act of 2002, by the House Armed Services Committee represented a near $33 billion dollar increase from fiscal year 2001, and provides a total of $343.3 billion in budget authority to the Department of Defense for fiscal year 2002. For the sake of comparison, the House of Representatives has passed an appropriation totaling $7.7 billion for the Department of State for fiscal year 2002, and the appropriation for Foreign Operations was passed by the House at $15.2 billion. The sum of these two appropriations—$22.9 billion—representing the amount allocated to diplomacy, international aid, and peace by the United States, rises only to 70 percent of the defense allocation increase and 6.7 percent of the entire defense budget.

With the financial mismanagement that continues to exist within the Department of Defense, increases should not be made to many programs until a system of financial responsibility is instituted to prevent future overspending and fiscal waste and to address the lack of accountability.

The single largest portion of the budget increase is dedicated to the development and proliferation of missile defense systems. It should be apparent to us all that ballistic missiles are not our worst threat at this time.

The committee’s missile defense program is a carbon copy of the Bush administration proposal. It would dramatically increase the missile defense budget 57 percent—$3 billion to $8.3 billion. This accelerated missile defense program is virtually certain to lead China to increase the number of nuclear weapons pointed at United States cities and may discourage Russia from making deep cuts in its arsenal.

It should be apparent be apparent to us all that ballistic missiles are not our worst threat at this time. This program has also had seriously questionable success in operational tests to date, and functional operation of any missile defense is still in doubt.

NUCLEAR REDUCTIONS

Although both Russia and the United States have ratified START II, its implementation has become entangled in contradictory conditions by the Russian Duma and the U.S. Senate. In the Senate, the Anti-Ballistic Missile (ABM) Treaty, I have been encouraged by President Bush’s proposal to unilaterally reduce the U.S. strategic arsenal, beginning with the 50 Peacekeeper (MX) missiles, which contain 500 nuclear warheads.

Unfortunately, current law prohibits the President from reducing the nuclear arsenals, other than through START II ratification. Current law also places unnecessary restrictions on the ability of the President to de-alert, or take off high-alert status, our nuclear weapons. Currently the United States and Russia have over 4,000 nuclear weapons aimed at each other—poised to be launched within minutes.

The committee unfortunately rejected the amendment by Representative TOM ALLEN to remove the restrictions in section 1302. It did allow a second, narrower amendment to remove the restrictions on the MX missile retirements. However, the committee denied the President the ability to negotiate deeper reductions with Russia by defeating the first Allen amendment.

The President, Secretary of Defense Rumsfeld, and the Joint Chiefs of Staff have all called for reductions in our strategic arsenal. Yet the majority party on our committee continues to cling to these weapons as cold war relics.

I was also disappointed that the committee rejected the amendment by Representative ELLEN TAUSCHER that would have de-alerted the nuclear weapons in our arsenal that are already retired from the fleet. The first President Bush de-alerted thousands of nuclear weapons in 1991 as the Warsaw Pact disintegrated. The current President Bush has also supported the concept of taking nuclear weapons off hair-trigger alert. Unfortunately the committee again failed to demonstrate leadership in reducing the nuclear danger. In light of recent events, I think that it would be prudent to de-alert as many... nuclear missiles, and to retire as many as possible lest they become greater targets, or become threats against ourselves.

MEDICAL ACCESS AND GENDER

I regret that the committee did not support changing current law to permit service women and female dependents who serve or reside overseas to access military hospitals and other facilities for the purpose of privately funded abortions. Similar women who serve or reside within the United States have constitutionally protected right to access to legal and safe facilities that provide abortions. Left with no other option than to either seek an abortion in a potentially unsafe, foreign medical facility or to forgo an abortion altogether, this legal provision is tantamount to gender discrimination and should be changed. Not only does this threaten the health of such women, such a policy is seemingly unconstitutional, and further, it threatens retention and recruitment of soldiers. I urge my colleagues to support efforts to correct this discriminatory discrepancy.

VIEQUES, PUERTO RICO

I find it unfortunate that the committee has sought to reduce the likelihood of the Navy's departure from the island of Vieques, PR, and that the Reyes amendment was defeated. The people of Vieques were provided last year with the opportunity to choose their own fate with regards to the Navy range, and through a nonbinding referendum on June 29, 2001, overwhelmingly issued their desire for the Navy to depart from their island. The continued bombing erodes the safety, environment and economy of this island and its people, and should cease. It is my hope that the administration is permitted to proceed with the Navy's planned withdrawal from Vieques in 2003, and that the unlikely discovery of another "suitable" alternate site not be held as prerequisite for this departure.

DOMESTIC USE OF INTELLIGENCE

There have been recent revelations about the use of military intelligence for domestic purposes, especially with respect to the surveil-

ANCE of Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., and Operation Lantern Spark. Evidence of such past activities give rise today to grave constitutional issues and concern about civil liberties. The 1975 report written by the Select Committee to Study Governmental Operations with Respect to Intelligence Activities revealed practices "abhorrent in a free society." The Church Committee, named after its Chairman, Frank Church of Idaho, exposed that in the name of state security and program of manipulation, infiltration, surveillance, harassment, disruption, and murder was carried out with the consent of those at the highest levels of the United States government and against domestic and international law.

Proposals supporting the creation of a National Homeland Security Agency raise a specter of the most frightening religious aspects of the domestic program that deprived too many Americans of their constitutional rights and in some cases their lives. The military has an appropriate role in protecting the United States from foreign threats, and should remain vigilant in providing for national security. Domestic uses of the military have long been prohibited for good reason, and the same should continue to apply to all military functions, especially any and all military intelligence and surveillance.

INTERNATIONAL ASSISTANCE AND PROGRAMS

The escalating war on drugs is another problematic expense for the Treasury. Though it was private sector companies and CIA contractors who were involved in this specific incident, our military resources are being used to train and support foreign nations in their efforts to curb drug production and distribution. As with the transgressions that resulted from training foreign militaries at the School of the Americas, human rights abuses can result from the training, arming, and empowerment of nations' armed forces. Further, we should be cautious that such actions dovetail into difficult regional conflicts, and in light of the apparent failure of the war on drugs, the entire concept of military-based drug interdiction and it's efficacy should be reconsidered.

As with the bombing of Kosovo and overflights of Iraq and other operations, I think that now is not the time to be fighting proxy wars overseas, making more enemies abroad than we may already have. Now is a time to focus on diplomacy abroad and justice and security within, and as such, I do not support continued funding and training for civil conflicts in Colombia or elsewhere.

QUALITY OF LIFE ISSUES

Despite my reservations with this legislation, it includes positive aspects that I applaud. I would like to commend the committee, and particularly the Personnel Subcommittee for the increase in military pay and salaries. This is an appropriate step that not only provides our service men and women with sufficient compensation, but also achieves two other important goals: furthering the profession of the military and the responsibility inherent in the changing roles of the armed forces; and enhances the retention of service men and women. Similarly, increases in moving allowances, housing allowances permitting concurrent receipt of retired pay and veteran's disability benefits, and efforts to protect voting rights of personnel are praiseworthy.

Much has changed since the committee passed this bill in August. Many of the nations that we perceive as a threat will respond to the expansion and proliferation of missile defense, the expanding role of the military in drug interdiction, and prevention of reductions in nuclear missiles. It is uncertain how these nations will respond, but I am confident that diplomacy and engagement will have much more positive effects on our national security than will an expanding defense budget. Similarly, the Department of Defense should be urged to respond to the trust that is instilled in it by reimagining financial management, reducing the obstruction that has plagued its history, and by eschewing involvement in domestic issues. I urge this body to prudently consider its role in developing not only national policy, but also international relations, and to realize that as the global leader we have a role not only in preparing for war, but also in promoting peace.

Mr. SOUDER. Madam Chairman, I rise in support of this bill at a particularly critical time for our Nation. As chair of the Drug Policy Subcommittee and one of the cochairs of the Speaker's Task Force for a Drug Free America, however, I wanted to express my desire to work with all interested parties with respect to critical counterdrug programs.

My subcommittee and the Speaker's Task Force have watched with some concern as significant changes to the Defense Department's counterdrug program and organization have been considered. This is an issue which deserves careful attention, and I very much appreciate the Armed Service's Committee's clear statement of its support for a robust counterdrug role for the Department. I also appreciate the committee's stated intention to continue to direct careful and continuing attention to departmental reorganization initiatives in this area.

Our counterdrug efforts are interagency efforts to require cooperation and coordination from agencies across the Federal Government. It is critical that the Defense Department not unilaterally withdraw key support in this area or conduct fundamental reorganizations without consulting with the Office of National Drug Control Policy and other affected Federal agencies. Any policy changes in this area must be considered in light of the overall national drug control strategy issued by ONDCP.

I would also like to express my concern about a provision of this bill related to the Tethered Aerostat Radar System. TARS, I intended to offer an amendment regarding this provision, but was not able to submit it due to the extremely early deadline set by the Rules Committee regarding the bill. The TARS system has been an important asset to our narcotics interdiction efforts along the southern border and the Caribbean and has been operated in cooperation between the Department of Defense and the U.S. Customs Service. TARS balloons provide a platform for radars to detect incoming aircraft attempting to smuggle drugs into the United States.

The Defense Department has determined that the TARS system is no longer needed for national defense purposes, and has now shut down virtually all of the aerostats which previously operated in the Caribbean and the Gulf of Mexico. However, the Customs Service strongly believes, as do I, that these assets remain critical to our drug interdiction efforts. The Department and the Customs Service have been attempting to reach an agreement to transfer the system completely to the Customs Service. Because of the change in administrations, those discussions have been stalled. The relevant political officials have only recently started work at DOD, and we still do not have a confirmed Commissioner of Customs.

This bill contains a provision authorizing the Secretary of Defense to transfer the TARS system to the Customs Service, which I support. I am concerned, however, that the bill contains a specific deadline of the end of the next fiscal year by which the transfer must be completed or the system will effectively be retained. Since top officials have not yet been able to resume discussions with the Defense Department on this matter, I do not believe that it is wise either to mandate a specific date for the resolution of this matter, or to pass legislation which would relieve the Defense Department of its responsibility to operate this system without providing for a mechanism to ensure that the counterdrug mission will continue.

I ask the committee to consider removing this deadline in the final version of the legislation and look forward to working with all interested parties to reach an appropriate resolution of this matter.

Mr. GALLEGLY. Madam Chairman, I rise today to thank both subcommittee Chairman MCHUGH and Chairman STUMP for their help in including my legislation within the Defense Authorization Act to create a Korea Defense Service Medal for those members of the Armed Forces who served, and still serve, in Korea.

Madam Chairman, more than 40,000 members of the United States Armed Forces have served on the Korean Peninsula each year since they were first signed in 1891, July 1953. Since then, an estimated 1,200 service men and women have died as a direct result of their service in Korea.

Service medals are given the veterans who serve in particular regions during times of hostility or the threat of hostility. For example, those who served in Berlin during the cold war were awarded a service medal. Since the Korean armistice was signed, there have been more than 40,000 breaches of the cease-fire, making it among the more dangerous places to serve. However, no campaign medal has been awarded for Korean service.

In light of the current crisis, it is appropriate that we honor the thousands of dedicated and brave men and women we have sent, and continue to send, to Korea. This recognition is long overdue.

On another note, I again want to thank Chairman STUMP for supporting several projects that will upgrade the Navy facilities at Pt. Mugu and Port Hueneme, CA. The chairman and his staff have been most helpful and his interest in these facilities and the welfare of our service men and women is greatly appreciated.

Mr. BILIRAKIS. Madam Chairman, some military retirees—individuals who are eligible for military retirement benefits as a result of a full service career—are also eligible for disability compensation from the VA based on a medical problem they incurred while in the service. Under present law, these service-disabled retirees must surrender a portion of their retired pay if they want to receive the disability compensation to which they are entitled.

Congress enacting this law in 1973, the Congress expected that the service-disabled veterans would automatically receive a reduced retired pay in order to receive their VA disability compensation. Congress never intended that the retired pay of our disabled veterans be reduced because of the VA disability compensation.

Think of two soldiers who joined the Army together and were wounded in the same battle. Joe left the Army after his 4-year stint and joined the Department of Justice as a civilian employee. Jim stayed on and made a career in the military.

Thirty years later, both men are receiving Federal longevity retired pay based on their careers. Both are also eligible for VA disability compensation as a result of the injuries they sustained while in the Army. The difference is that in order to get his disability compensation, Jim must forfeit an equal amount of his retired pay, while Joe collects the full amount of both benefits without a deduction in either.

Should the individual who chose a military career be penalized? One benefit is based on longevity in a career, the other on an injury sustained while in the service. Joe in our example will lose all our service retirement credit for his four years in the military. Yet, Jim is branded a “double dipper.” This simply is not fair.

Nationwide, more than 500,000 disabled military retirees must give up their retired pay in order to receive their VA disability compensation. In effect, they must pay for their VA disability out of their military retirement—something nothing other Federal retiree must do. How can we possibly expect to maintain a viable national defense if service members realize that if they experience a service-connected disability, they cannot receive both VA disability compensation and military retired pay?

The 106th Congress took the first steps toward addressing this inequity by authorizing the military to pay a monthly allowance to military retirees with disabilities rated by the Department of Veterans’ Affairs at 70 percent or greater. While these special compensation provisions do not correct the long-standing inequity of the current offset, they do move us one step closer to correcting this injustice once and for all.

In the beginning of the 107th Congress, once again introduced H.R. 303, the Retired Pay Restoration Act, to eliminate the current offset between military retired pay and VA disability compensation. I am pleased to report that my bill has received strong bipartisan support with 73 cosponsors in the House—roughly 85 percent of House Members. A Senate companion bill, S. 170, has also received strong support with 73 cosponsors.

I would like to thank Military Personnel Subcommittee Chairman JOHN MCHUGH and full committee Chairman BOB STUMP for working with me this year to incorporate “concurrent receipt” language into H.R. 2586, the FY 2002 National Defense Authorization Act.

I also want to thank Representatives STEVE BUYER and CHARLIE BLOCHE for their assistance. They have been stalwart supporters of eliminating the current offset.

H.R. 2586 includes a provision to authorize military retirees to receive VA disability compensation concurrently with military retired pay. This provision will take effect after the President submits legislation in an annual budget request and Congress enacts legislation to offset the cost of this initiative. While not perfect, I do believe that this language is an important step in our efforts to eliminate the offsets between retired pay and VA disability compensation.

Each of the thousands of disabled military retirees answered when America called. Now it’s time for America to answer their call.

I urge colleagues to support H.R. 2586.

Mr. SAUER, Mr. Speaker. Madam Chairman, as a nation, we have unfortunately witnessed firsthand the true threats to our Nation’s security. It is vital for every Member to support our men and women in uniform—and this bill. Right now, our troops are being sent into harm’s way to protect our freedom.

They are being asked to leave their families and defend this country against an enemy we do not fully understand, for an amount of time we cannot determine. For 8 long years, we neglected our forces.

For America to win the war against terrorism, our military must have the best equipment, the best training, and the best resources available.

Our lives have changed forever, but the role of our military is still the same—to protect America. It is time to give them what they need now. They deserve our help and support.

You know, we live in the greatest nation on Earth. And we have a President and Commander-in-Chief who believes in our strength and in our military’s might.

This bill today reflects that confidence. Rest assured, we can and will win this war against freedom.

Vote for freedom.

Vote for our men and women in uniform.

Vote for this bill.

Mr. ORTIZ. Madam Chairman, I rise in strong support of H.R. 2586, the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2002. I want to specifically address the provisions in the Act relating to military readiness.

First, I would like to express my appreciation to the Readiness Subcommittee leadership and to my colleagues, on both the subcommittee and the full committee, for the manner in which the readiness provisions of H.R. 2586 were developed this session. I want to express my personal thanks to my friend and colleague, CURT WELDON, for the extraordinary steps he took while serving as chairman of the Readiness Subcommittee to focus attention on the critical readiness issues facing our military and the Nation. While we may differ on some policy and program objectives, we on the subcommittee were able to get a better appreciation of the challenges our military personnel and dedicated civilian employees face in trying to do more with less. For their effort, we can all be proud. I personally remain concerned about how long they will be able to keep up the pace.

Accepting the budget realities we are facing, the readiness provisions in the bill reflect some of the steps I believe are necessary, with the dollars available, to make their tasks easier. It does not provide all that is needed. I remain perplexed when I reflect on the impact that the resource shortages are having on every facet of our military. That includes the stability of our dedicated civilian employees who are also being asked to remain productive while at the same time the Department appears to be trying to take away their jobs. I regret that we are unable to do more about the deplorable facilities our personnel must use to train and to maintain equipment. There is an immediate need for the administration and the Congress to scrub the budget to address this serious budget shortfall. I am very concerned that what was thought to be a certain increase in the defense budget may very well be used to counter the shortfall. For the first time, the Department of Defense could turn out to be a hollow promise.

Madam Chairman, I want to make it very clear that I believe that the readiness policy provisions in H.R. 2586 represent a step in the right direction. We denied several policy modifications requested by the Department that would do harm to overall readiness. It is the dollar shortfall that raises my concern. I hope that as we continue with the passage of this bill and go into conference with the Senate, we will continue to search for opportunities to increase the resources available for the readiness accounts. We cannot afford to fail in this endeavor.

I hope my colleagues will join me in supporting H.R. 2586.

Mr. STUMP. Madam Chairman, I would like to submit the following letters for the Congressional Record for H.R. 2586, the National Defense Authorization Act of 2001.

U.S. HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.
COMMITTEE ON TRANSPORTATION AND INFRASTRUCTURE.

Hon. BOB STUMP, Chairman,
Committee on Armed Services, Washington, DC.

Dear Mr. Chairman,
This letter concerns the jurisdiction interest of the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure has jurisdiction over the bill, including many that affect the United States Coast Guard and the United States Coast Guard Reserve.

Our Committee recognizes the importance of H.R. 2586 and the need for this legislation to move expeditiously. While we have a valid claim to jurisdiction over a number of provisions in the bill, including many that affect the United States Coast Guard, I do not intend to seek a sequential referral of the bill. This, of course, conditionally on our mutual understanding that nothing in this legislation waives or affects the jurisdiction of the Transportation Committee, that every effort will be made to include any agreements worked out by our staffs as the bill is taken to the Floor, and that a copy of this letter and your response will be included in the Committee Report and as part of the record during consideration of the bill by the House.

The Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure has jurisdiction to be included as conferees on the provisions over which we have jurisdiction.

Thank you for your cooperation in this matter.

Sincerely,

DON YOUNG,
Chairman.

U.S. HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.
COMMITTEE ON ARMED SERVICES.

Hon. DON YOUNG,
Chairman, Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure,
U.S. House of Representatives, Washington, DC.

Dear Mr. Chairman,

I agree that the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure has valid jurisdictional claims to certain provisions in this important legislation, and I am most appreciative of your decision not to request such a referral in the interest of expediting consideration of the bill. While the bill would be sequentially referred to the Judiciary Committee, I understand the desire to have this legislation considered expeditiously by the House; therefore, I do not intend to hold a hearing or markup on this legislation.

In agreeing to waive consideration by our Committee, I would expect you to agree that this procedural route should not be construed to prejudice the Committee on the Judiciary’s jurisdictional interest and prerogatives on this or any similar legislation and will not be considered as precedent for consideration of matters of jurisdictional interest to my Committee in the future. The Committee on the Judiciary takes this action with the understanding that the Committee’s jurisdiction over the provisions within the Committee’s jurisdiction is in no way diminished or altered, and that the Committee’s right to the appointment of conferees during any conference on the bill is preserved. I would also expect your support in my request to the Speaker for the appointment of conferees from my Committee with respect to matters within the jurisdiction of my Committee should a conference with the Senate be convened on this or similar legislation.

Again, thank you for your cooperation on this important matter. I would appreciate this exchange of letters in your Committee’s report to accompany H.R. 2586.

Sincerely,

F. JAMES SENSENBRENNER, JR.,
Chairman.

U.S. HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—HOUSE

September 20, 2001

Hon. BOB STUMP,
Chairman, Committee on Armed Services, U.S. House of Representatives, Washington, DC.

DEAR CHAIRMAN STUMP: On August 1, 2001, the Committee on Armed Services ordered reported H.R. 2586, the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2002. As ordered reported by the Committee on Armed Services, this legislation contains a number of provisions that fall within the jurisdiction of the Committee on Energy and Commerce. These provisions include the following:

Section 509—One-year extension of expiration date for certain force management authorities.

Section 514—Improved disability benefits for certain reserve component members.

Title III—Operation and Maintenance

Section 319. Use of military leave for funeral honors duty by Reserve members and National Guardsmen.

Section 506. Payment of FEHBP premiums for certain Reservists called to active duty in support of contingency operations.

Title VIII—Acquisition Policy, Acquisition Management, and Related Matters

Section 811 through 819. Erroneous Payment Recovery for Federal Civilian Employees.

Title X—General Provisions

Section 101. Access to sensitive unclassified information for administrative support contracts.

Title XI—Civilian Personnel

Section 1101. Undergraduate training program for employees of the National Imagery and Mapping Agency.

Section 1103. Payment of expenses to obtain professional credentials.

Title XV—Retirement Portability

Sections 1504, 1506, and 1507. Retirement portability elections for certain Department of Defense and Coast Guard employees.

Section 1105. Removal of requirement that granting of compensatory time be based on amount of irregular occasional overtime work.

Section 1106. Applicability of certain laws to certain individuals assigned to work in the Savannah River Site in Aiken, South Carolina, that may fall within its jurisdiction. In addition, the Committee on Energy and Commerce reserves its right to seek conferees on any provisions within its jurisdiction which are considered in the House-Senate conference, and asks for your support in being accorded such conferees.

I request you include this letter as part of the report on H.R. 2586 and as part of the Record during consideration of this bill by the House.

Sincerely,

W. J. "Billy" Tauzin, Chairman.

Hon. BOB STUMP,
Chairman, Committee on Armed Services, Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: The Committee on Government Reform has decided not to assert its jurisdiction over the following provisions of H.R. 2586, the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2002 that fall within the Committee's jurisdiction.

Title III—Operation and Maintenance

Section 333. Continuation of contractor reporting system in Department of the Army.

Title V—Military Personnel Policy

Section 519. Use of military leave for funeral honors duty by Reserve members and National Guardsmen.

Section 506. Payment of FEHBP premiums for certain Reservists called to active duty in support of contingency operations.

Title VIII—Acquisition Policy, Acquisition Management, and Related Matters

Section 811 through 819. Erroneous Payment Recovery for Federal Civilian Employees.

Title X—General Provisions

Section 101. Access to sensitive unclassified information for administrative support contracts.

Title XI—Civilian Personnel

Section 1101. Undergraduate training program for employees of the National Imagery and Mapping Agency.

Funds are hereby authorized to be appropriated for fiscal year 2002 for the Department of Defense for procurement for health care programs, projects, and activities of the Department of Defense in the total amount of $267,915,000.

Subtitle B—Army Programs
SEC. 111. EXTENSION OF MULTIYEAR CONTRACT FOR FAMILY OF MEDIUM TACTICAL VEHICLES.
In order to ensure that an adequate number of vehicles of the “A1” variant of the Family of Medium Tactical Vehicles program continue to be fielded to the Army, the Secretary of the Army may extend for one additional year the existing multiyear procurement contract, authorized by section 112(b) of the National Defense Authorization Act, Fiscal Year 1996 (Public Law 104-106; 10 U.S.C. 1521) and awarded on October 14, 1994, for procurement of vehicles under that program (notwithstanding the maximum period for such contracts otherwise applicable under section 2306b(k) of title 10, United States Code) if the Secretary determines that it is necessary to do so in order to prevent a break in production of those vehicles.

SEC. 112. REPEAL OF LIMITATIONS ON BUNKER DEFEAT MUNITIONS PROGRAM.

Subtitle C—Air Force Programs
SEC. 121. RESPONSIBILITY OF AIR FORCE FOR CONTRACTS FOR ALL DEFENSE SPACE LAUNCHES.
(a) In General.—(1) Chapter 807 of title 10, United States Code, is amended by inserting after section 8062 the following new section:

"§8062. Contracts for space launches: responsibility of Air Force for all Department of Defense elements.
"The Secretary of the Air Force shall ensure that contracts for space launch vehicles and services for all elements of the Department of Defense are prepared, negotiated, executed, and managed in a manner that maximizes launch effectiveness, minimizes cost of launch services, provides clear visibility to all elements into contract costs and functions, and, where practicable, takes advantage of commercial space launch capabilities."

"(2) The table of sections at the beginning of such chapter is amended by inserting after the item relating to section 8062 the following new item:

"8063. Contracts for space launches: responsibility of Air Force for all Department of Defense elements."."

(b) REPORT.—Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of the Air Force shall submit to the congressional defense committees and the congressional intelligence committees a report on the implementation of section 8063 of title 10, United States Code, as added by subsection (a)."

SEC. 122. MULTI-YEAR PROCUREMENT OF C-17 AIRCRAFT.
If the Secretary of Defense certifies to the congressional defense committees before the enactment of this Act that it is in the interest of the Department of Defense to proceed with a follow-on contract for additional C-17 aircraft, then the Secretary may, in accordance with section 2306b of title 10, United States Code, enter into a new multi-year procurement contract or extend the current multi-year procurement contract beginning in fiscal year 2002 to procure up to 60 additional C-17 aircraft in order to meet the Department’s airlift requirements.

Title D—Chemical Munitions Destruction
SEC. 141. DESTRUCTION OF EXISTING STOCKPILE OF LETHAL CHEMICAL AGENTS AND MUNITIONS.
Section 152 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1996 (Public Law 104-106; 10 U.S.C. 1521 note) is amended—
(1) in subsection (b)—
(A) by inserting “for that site” after “in place”;
and
(B) by adding at the end the following new paragraphs:

"(4) Emergency preparedness and response capabilities have been established at the site and in the surrounding communities to respond to emergencies involving risks to public health or safety that are identified by the Secretary of Defense as being risks resulting from the storage or destruction of lethal chemical agents and munitions at the site."

"(5) The Under Secretary of Defense for Acquisition, Technology, and Logistics recommends initiation of destruction at the site after considering the recommendation by the board established by section 1411(b)."

"(2) by adding at the end the following new subsection:

`(g) OVERSIGHT BOARDS.—(1) The Under Secretary of Defense for Acquisition, Technology, and Logistics shall convene, for each site at which the chemical munitions stockpile is stored, an independent oversight board comprised of—
"(A) the Secretary of the Army;
"(B) the Director of the Federal Emergency Management Agency;
"(C) the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency;
"(D) the President of the National Academy of Sciences;
"(E) the Governor of the State in which the site is located;

"(F) one individual designated by the Under Secretary from a list of three local representatives of the area in which the site is located, prepared jointly by the Member of the House of Representatives who represents the Congressional District in which the site is located and the Senators representing the State in which the site is located;

"(2) Not later than six months after each such board is convened, the board shall make a recommendation to the Under Secretary whether the destruction of the chemical munitions stockpile should be initiated at the site."

"(3) The Under Secretary may not recommend initiation of destruction of the chemical munitions stockpile at a site after considering a negative recommendation of the board until 90 days..."
after the Under Secretary provides notice to Congress of the intent to recommend initiation of destruction.

TITLE II—RESEARCH, DEVELOPMENT, TEST, AND EVALUATION

Subtitle A—Authorization of Appropriations

SEC. 201. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS. Funds are hereby authorized to be appropriated for fiscal year 2002 for the use of the Department of Defense for research, development, test, and evaluation as follows:

(1) For the Army, $6,749,025,000.
(2) For the Navy, $15,853,274,000.
(3) For the Air Force, $14,455,633,000.
(4) For Defense-wide activities, $15,591,978,000, of which $27,555,000 is authorized for the Director of Operational Test and Evaluation.

SEC. 202. AMOUNT FOR BASIC AND APPLIED RESEARCH.

(a) FISCAL YEAR 2002.—Of the amounts authorized to be appropriated under section 201, $4,973,843,000 shall be available for basic research and applied research projects.

(b) BASIC RESEARCH AND APPLIED RESEARCH DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this section, the term "basic research and applied research" means work funded in program elements for defense research and development under Department of Defense category 6.

Subtitle B—Program Requirements, Restrictions, and Limitations

SEC. 211. COOPERATIVE DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE-DISTRIBUTED VETERANS AFFAIRS MEDICAL RESEARCH PROGRAM.

Of the funds authorized to be appropriated under section 201(4), $5,000,000 shall be available for the cooperative Department of Defense-Distributed Veterans Affairs medical research program. The Secretary of Defense shall transfer such amount to the Secretary of Veterans Affairs for such purpose not later than 30 days after the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 212. ADVANCED LAND ATTACK MISSILE PROGRAM.

(a) PROGRAM REQUIRED.—The Secretary of Defense shall establish a competitive program for the development of an advanced land attack missile for the DD-21 land attack destructor and other naval combatants.

(b) REPORT.—The Secretary of Defense shall submit to the congressional defense committees, with the submission of the budget for the Department of Defense for fiscal year 2003, a report providing the program plan for the Advanced Land Attack Missile program, the schedule for that program, and funding required for that program.

(c) FUNDING.—Of the amount authorized to be appropriated under section 201(4), $20,000,000 shall be available in PE 06025759N for the Advanced Land Attack Missile program.

SEC. 213. COLLABORATIVE PROGRAM FOR DEVELOPMENT OF ADVANCED RADAR SYSTEMS FOR NAVAL APPLICATIONS.

(a) PROGRAM REQUIRED.—The Secretary of Defense shall carry out a program to develop and demonstrate advanced technologies and concepts leading to advanced radar systems for naval and other applications.

(b) DEPARTMENTAL PROGRAM.—The program under subsection (a) shall be carried out collaboratively pursuant to a memorandum of agreement to be entered into by the Director of Defense Research and Engineering, the Secretary of the Navy, and the Director of the Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency. The program shall include the following activities:

(1) Activities needed to develop and deploy advanced electronics materials, including specifically wide band gap electronic components needed to extend the range and sensitivity of naval radar systems.
(2) Identification of acquisition systems for use of the new technology.

(c) REPORT.—Not later than January 31, 2002, the Director of Defense Research and Engineering, the Secretary of the Navy, and the Director of the Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency shall submit to the congressional defense committees a joint report on the enunciation and development of the program under subsection (a). The report shall include the following:

(1) A description of the memorandum of agreement referred to in subsection (b).
(2) A schedule for the program.
(3) Identification of the funding required for fiscal year 2003 and for the future-years defense program to carry out the program.
(4) A list of program capability goals and objectives.

(d) FUNDING.—(1) Of the amount authorized to be appropriated for defense-wide activities by section 201(4) for the Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency, $41,000,000 shall be available for research, development, test, and evaluation of high frequency and high power wide band gap semiconductor electronics technology to carry out the program under subsection (a).

(2) Of the amount authorized to be appropriated by section 201(2) for the Department of the Navy, $13,500,000 shall be available to carry out the program under subsection (a).

Subtitle C—Ballistic Missile Defense Program

SEC. 215. TRANSFER OF RESPONSIBILITY FOR PROCUREMENT FOR MISSILE DEFENSE PROGRAMS FROM BALLISTIC MISSILE DEFENSE ORGANIZATION TO MILITARY DEPARTMENTS.

(a) BUDGETING OF MISSILE DEFENSE PROCUREMENT AUTHORITY.—(1) Subsection (a) of section 224 of title 10, United States Code, is amended by striking "procurement" both places it appears and inserting "research, development, test, and evaluation".

(2) Such section is further amended by striking subsections (b) and (c) and inserting the following:

"(b) COVERED PROGRAMS.—Subsection (a) applies to any ballistic missile defense program for which research, development, test, and evaluation is carried out by the Ballistic Missile Defense Organization.

(3) The heading of that section is amended to read as follows:

"§ 224. Ballistic missile defense programs: display of amounts for research, development, test, and evaluation."

(b) TRANSFER CRITERIA.—(1) Of the amounts authorized to be appropriated to the Department of Defense pursuant to section 201(4), $25,000,000 shall be available, subject to subsection (b) and at the discretion of the Director of the Ballistic Missile Defense Organization, for research, development, and demonstration activities at the national laboratories of the Department of Energy in support of the missions of the Ballistic Missile Defense Organization, including the following activities:

(1) Technology development, concept demonstration, and integrated testing to enhance performance, reduce risk, and improve reliability in hit-to-kill interceptors for ballistic missile defense.

(2) Support for science and engineering teams to assess critical technical problems and prudential alternative approaches as agreed upon by the Director of the Ballistic Missile Defense Organization and the Administrator for Nuclear Security.

(b) REQUIREMENT FOR MATCHING FUNDS FROM NNSA.—Funds shall be available as provided in subsection (a) only if the Administrator for Nuclear Security makes available matching funds for the activities referred to in subsection (a).

(c) MEMORANDUM OF UNDERSTANDING.—The activities referred to in subsection (a) shall be carried out under the memorandum of understanding entered into by the Secretary of Energy and the Secretary of Defense for the use of national laboratories for ballistic missile defense programs required by section 224 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1998 (Public Law 105-45; 111 Stat. 2034) and modified pursuant to section 3132 of the Floyd D. Spence National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2001 (as enacted into law by Public Law 106-398; 114 Stat. 1654A-455) to provide for jointly funded projects.

SEC. 216. MISSILE DEFENSE TESTING INITIATIVE.

(a) TESTING INFRASTRUCTURE.—(1) The Secretary of Defense shall ensure that each annual budget request of the Department of Defense—

(A) is designed to provide for comprehensive testing of ballistic missile defense programs during early stages of development; and

(B) includes necessary funding to support and protect the test infrastructure and provide advanced test assets for the testing of such programs.

(2) The Secretary shall ensure that ballistic missile defense programs incorporate, to the greatest possible extent, operationally realistic test configurations (referred to as "test bed" configurations) to demonstrate system performance across a broad range of scenarios and, during final stages of operational testing, to demonstrate reliable performance.

(b) REQUIREMENTS FOR EARLY STAGES OF SYSTEM DEVELOPMENT.—In order to demonstrate... acceptable risk and developmental stability, the Secretary of Defense shall ensure that any ballistic missile defense program incorporates to the maximum extent practicable, the following elements during the early stages of system development:

(1) Pursuit of parallel conceptual approaches and technological paths for all critical problematic components until effective and reliable solutions can be demonstrated.

(2) Comprehensive ground testing in conjunction with flight-testing for key elements of the proposed system that are considered to present high risk, with such ground testing to make use of existing facilities or other facilities that support testing at the highest possible levels of integration.

(3) Where appropriate, expenditures to enhance the capabilities of existing test facilities or to construct new test facilities to support alternative complementary test methodologies.

(4) Test instrument development to ensure accurate measurement of all critical test events and, where possible, incorporation of mobile assets to enhance flexibility in test configuration.

(5) Incorporation into the program of sufficient schedule flexibility and expendable test assets, including missile interceptors and targets, to ensure that aborts can be repeated in a prudent, but expeditious manner.

(6) Incorporation into flight-test planning for the program, where possible, of (a) test events referred to as “campaign testing” and “test through failure” and other appropriate test methods in order to reduce costs per test event,

(b) events to demonstrate engagement of multiple targets, “shoot–look–shoot” and other planned operational concepts; and

(c) opportunities to facilitate early development and demonstration of “family of systems” concepts.

(7) Specific requirements for ground-based mid-course interceptor systems, the Secretary of Defense shall initiate steps during fiscal year 2002 to establish a flight-testing capability of launching not less than three missile defense interceptors and not less than two ballistic missile targets to provide a realistic test infrastructure.

SEC. 235. MISSILE DEFENSE SYSTEM TEST BED FACILITIES.

(a) Authority to Acquire or Construct Facilities.—(1) The Secretary of Defense, using funds appropriated to the Department of Defense for research, development, test, and evaluation for fiscal years after fiscal year 2001 that are available for programs of the Ballistic Missile Defense Organization, may carry out construction projects, or portions of construction projects, including projects for the acquisition, improvement, or construction of general utility, to establish and operate the Missile Defense System Test Bed Facilities.

(2) The authority provided in paragraph (1) may be used to acquire, improve, or construct facilities at a total cost not to exceed $900,000,000.

(b) Authority to Provide Assistance to Local Communities.—(1) Subject to paragraph (2), the Secretary of Defense, using funds appropriated to the Department of Defense for research, development, test, and evaluation for fiscal year 2002 that are available for programs of the Ballistic Missile Defense Organization, may provide assistance, by grant or otherwise, to local communities to meet the needs of increased municipal or community services or facilities resulting from the construction, installation, or operation of the Missile Defense System Test Bed Facilities.

(2) Assistance may be provided to a community under paragraph (1) only if the Secretary of Defense determines that there is an immediate and substantial increase in the need for municipal or community services or facilities as a direct result of the construction, installation, or operation of the Missile Defense System Test Bed Facilities.

Subtitle D—Other Matters

SEC. 241. ESTABLISHMENT OF UNMANNED AERIAL VEHICLE JOINT OPERATIONAL TEST BED SYSTEM.

(a) Establishment of Test Bed System.—The commander of the United States Joint Forces Command shall establish a capability referred to as a “test bed” within the facilities and resources of that command to evaluate and ensure joint interoperability of unmanned aerial vehicles. That capability shall be independent of the military departments and shall be managed directly by the Joint Forces Command.

(b) Required Transfer of Predator UAV Assets.—The Secretary of the Navy shall transfer to the commander of the Joint Forces Command the two Predator unmanned aerial vehicles currently undergoing operational testing by the Navy, together with associated payloads and antennas and associated tactical control system (TCS) ground station.

(c) Use by Joint Forces Command.—The items transferred pursuant to subsection (a) may be used by the United States Joint Forces Command only through the independent joint operational test bed system established pursuant to subsection (a) for testing of those United States Joint Forces Command unique or development of the associated tactical control system (TCS) ground station, other aspects of unmanned aerial vehicle interoperability, and participation in such experiments and exercises as the commander considers appropriate to the mission of that command.

(d) Deadline for Transfers.—The transfers required by subsection (b) shall be completed not later than 90 days after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(e) Transfer When No Longer Required by Joint Forces Command.—Upon a determination by the commander of the United States Joint Forces Command that any of the items transferred pursuant to subsection (a) are no longer needed by that command for use as provided in subsection (c), those items shall be transferred to the Secretary of the Air Force.

SEC. 242. DEMONSTRATION PROJECT TO INCREASE SMALL BUSINESS AND UNIVERSITY PARTICIPATION IN OFFICE OF NAVAL RESEARCH EFFORTS TO EXTEND BENEFITS OF SCIENCE AND TECHNOLOGY RESEARCH TO FLEET.

(a) Project Required.—The Secretary of the Navy, acting through the Chief of Naval Research, shall carry out a demonstration project to increase access to Navy facilities of small businesses and universities that are engaged in science and technology research beneficial to the fleet.

(b) Project Elements.—In carrying out the project under this section, the Secretary shall—

(1) establish and operate a Navy Technology Extension Center at a location to be selected by the Secretary;

(2) permit participants in the Small Business Innovation Research Program (SBIR) and Small Business Technology Transfer Program (STTR) that are awarded contracts by Office of Naval Research to use Navy facilities without charge for purposes of carrying out such contracts; and

(3) permit universities, institutions of higher education, and certain aviation facilities currently undergoing operational testing by the Navy to use Navy facilities.

(c) Report.—Not later than February 1, 2004, the Secretary shall submit to Congress a report on the demonstration project. The report shall include a description of the activities carried out pursuant to the demonstration project, the Secretary’s recommendations for the improvement or expansion of the demonstration project that the Secretary considers appropriate.

SEC. 243. MANAGEMENT RESPONSIBILITY FOR NAVY MINE COUNTERMEASURES PROGRAMS.

SEC. 244. PROGRAM TO ACCELERATE THE INTRODUCTION OF INNOVATIVE TECHNOLOGY IN DEFENSE ACQUISITION PROGRAMS.

(a) Program Required.—The Secretary of Defense shall carry out a program to provide opportunities for the increased introduction of innovative and cost-saving technology in acquisition programs of the Department of Defense. The program, to be known as the Challenge Program, shall provide an individual or activity within or outside the Department of Defense with the opportunity to demonstrate to the Department of Defense, and be known as challenge proposals, at the component, subsystem, or system level of an existing Department of Defense acquisition program that would result in improvements in performance, affordability, manufacturability, or operational capability at the component, subsystem, or system level of that acquisition program.

(b) Panel.—(1) In carrying out the Challenge Program, the Secretary of Defense shall establish a panel of highly qualified scientists and engineers (hereinafter in this section referred to as the “Panel”) under the auspices of the Under Secretary of Defense for Acquisition, Technology, and Logistics. The duty of the Panel shall be to carry out review and evaluation of challenge proposals under subsection (c).

(2) A member of the Panel may not participate in any review and evaluation of a challenge proposal under subsection (c) if such member has, in any capacity, participated in or been affiliated with the Department of Defense program for which the challenge proposal is submitted (hereinafter referred to as the “Panel” under the auspices of the Under Secretary of Defense for Acquisition, Technology, and Logistics).

(c) Review and Evaluation of Challenge Proposals.—(1) Under procedures prescribed by the Secretary, an individual or activity within or outside the Department of Defense may submit challenge proposals to the Panel.

(2) The Panel shall carry out an expedited evaluation of each challenge proposal submitted under paragraph (1) to determine whether a prima facie case has been made that the challenge proposal will result in improvements in performance, affordability, manufacturability, or operational capability at the component, subsystem, or system level of the applicable acquisition program. The Panel shall, in any other case, provide a full review of the challenge proposal under paragraph (3).

(3) In carrying out a full review of a challenge proposal, the Panel shall ensure the following:

(A) Any incumbent that would be displaced by the implementation of the challenge proposal is provided with notice of the challenge proposal, and a full opportunity to demonstrate why the challenge proposal should not be implemented.

(B) Notice of the full review of the challenge proposal is published in appropriate commercial publications of national circulation.

(C) If one or more challenge proposals are submitted on matters relating to the challenge proposal being reviewed, the Panel shall, to the maximum extent practicable, carry out a full review of those other challenge proposals togeth-er with the full review of the original chal-lenge proposal.

(4) The Secretary of Defense shall ensure that the panel, in carrying out reviewing and evalu-ation of challenge proposals under this subsec-tion, has the authority to call upon the tech-nical resources of the laboratories, research, de-velopment, and engineering centers, test and evalua-tion activities, and other elements of the Department of Defense.

(d) FINDINGS OF SUBSTANTIAL SUPERIORITY.—If, after the full review of a challenge proposal is com-pleted, the panel finds that the challenge proposal would result in improvements in performance, affordability, manufacturability, or oper-a-tional capability at the component, subsystem, or system level, with respect to the proposal, the panel shall submit this finding to the Under Secretary.

(e) ACTION UPON FINDINGS.—Upon receiving a finding under subsection (d), the Under Sec-retery shall carry out a plan to acquire and im-plement the challenge proposal with respect to which the finding was made.

(f) ELIMINATION OF CONFLICTS OF INTEREST.—In carrying out each review and evaluation under subsection (c), the Secretary shall ensure the elimination of conflicts of interest.

(g) FINDING REQUIRED.—The funds authorized to be appropriated by section 210(4) for Defense-wide research, development, test, and evaluation for fiscal year 1999 shall be available in PE 628612D2 for the Challenge Program re-quired by this section.

(h) REPORT.—The Secretary shall submit to Congress, with the submission of the budget re-quest for the Department of Defense for each fiscal year beginning with fiscal year 2003, a report on the implementation of this section. The report shall include the number and scope of challenge proposals submitted, reviewed and evaluated, found to be substantially superior, and implemented.

SEC. 302. WORKING CAPITAL FUNDS.

Funds are hereby authorized to be appro-priated for fiscal year 2002 for the use of the Armed Forces and other activities and agencies of the Department of Defense for providing capital for working capital and revolving funds in amounts as follows:

(1) For the Defense Working Capital Funds, $1,931,986,000.
(2) For the National Defense Sealift Fund, $407,708,000.

SEC. 303. ARMED FORCES RETIREMENT HOME.

There is hereby authorized to be appropriated for fiscal year 2002 for the use of the Armed Forces Retirement Home Trust Fund the sum of $71,440,000 for the operation of the Armed Forces Retirement Home, including the United States Soldiers’ and Airmen’s Home and the Naval Home.

SEC. 304. TRANSFER FROM NATIONAL DEFENSE STOCKPILE TRANSACTION FUND.

(a) TRANSFER AUTHORITY.—To the extent pro-vided in appropriations Acts, not more than $150,000,000 is authorized to be transferred from the National Defense Stockpile Transaction Fund to operation and maintenance accounts for fiscal year 2002 in amounts as follows:

(1) For the Army, $50,000,000.
(2) For the Navy, $50,000,000.
(3) For the Air Force, $50,000,000.
(b) TREATMENT OF TRANSFERS.—Amounts transferred under this section—

(1) shall be merged with, and be available for the same purposes and the same period as, the amounts in the accounts to which transferred; and

(2) may not be expended for an item that has been denied authorization of appropriations by Congress.

(c) RELATIONSHIP TO OTHER TRANSFER AU-THORITY.—The transfer authority provided in this section is in addition to the transfer authority provided in section 1001.

Subtitle B—Environmental Provisions

SEC. 311. INVENTORY OF EXPLOSIVE RISK SITES AT FORMER MILITARY RANGES.

(a) INVENTORY AUTHORITY.—(1) Chapter 190 of title 10, United States Code, is amended by add-ing at the end the following new section:

"§2710. Former military ranges: inventory of explosive risk sites; use of inventory; public safety issues

"(a) DEFINITIONS.—In this section:

"(1) The term 'former military range' means a military range presently located in the United States that—

"(A) is or was owned by, leased to, or other-wise possessed or used by the Federal Govern-ment;

"(B) is designated as a closed, transferred, or transferring military range (rather than as an active or inactive range); or

"(C) is or was used as a site for the disposal of military munitions or for the use of military munitions training research, development, testing, and evaluation.

"(2) The term 'abandoned military munitions' means unexploded ordnance and other aban-doned military munitions, including component thereof and chemical weapons material, that pose a threat to human health or safety.

"(3) The term 'State' includes the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, and the territories and possessions.

"(4) The term 'United States', in a geographic sense, includes the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico and the territories and possessions.

"(b) INVENTORY REQUIRED.—(1) The Secretary of Defense shall develop and maintain an inven-tory of former military ranges that are known or suspected to contain abandoned military munitions.

"(2) The information for each former military range in the inventory shall include, at a mini-mum, the following:

"(A) A unique identifier for the range and its current designation as either a closed, trans-ferred, or transferring range.

"(B) The appropriate working record showing the location, boundaries, and extent of the range, in-cluding identification of the State and political subdivisions of the State in which the range is located and any Tribal lands encompassed by the range.

"(C) Known persons and entities, other than a military department, with any current ownership interest or control of lands encompassed by the range.

"(D) Any restrictions or other land use controls currently in place that might affect the po-tential for military munition and environmental exposure to abandoned military munitions.

"(e) SITE PRIORORIZATION.—(1) With respect to each former military range included on the inven-tory, the Secretary of Defense shall assign the range a relative priority for response activi-ties based on the overall conditions at the range. The level of response priority assigned the range shall be included with the information required by subsection (b)(2) to be maintained for the range.

"(2) In assigning the response priority for a former military range, the Secretary of Defense shall primarily consider factors relating to safety and environmental hazard potential, such as the following:

"(A) Whether there are known, versus sus-pected, abandoned military munitions on all or any portion of the range and the types of muni-tions present or suspected to be present.

"(B) Whether public access to the range is controlled, and the effectiveness of these con-trols.

"(C) The potential for direct human contact with abandoned military munitions at the range and evidence of people entering the range.

"(D) Whether a response action has been or is being undertaken at the range under the For-merly Used Defense Sites program or other pro-grams.

"(E) The planned or mandated dates for transfer of the range from military control.

"(F) The extent of any documented incidents involving abandoned military munitions at or from the range. In this subparagraph, the term 'incidents' means any or all of the following: expl-o-sions, discoveries, injuries, reports, and in-vestigations.

"(G) The potential for drinking water con-tamination or the release of weapon components into the air.

"(H) The potential for destruction of sensitive ecosystems and damage to natural resources.

"(d) UPDATES AND AVAILABILITY.—(1) The Secretary of Defense shall annually update the inventory and site prioritization list to reflect new information that becomes available. The inventory shall be available in published and electronic form.

“2710. Former military ranges: inventory of explosive risk sites; use of inventory; public safety issues.”

(b) Initial Inventory.—The inventory required by section 2710 of title 10, United States Code, as added by subsection (a), shall be completed and made available not later than one year after the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 312. NATIONAL SECURITY IMPACT STATEMENTS.

(a) Evaluation of National Security Impacts Required.—(1) Chapter 106 of title 10, United States Code, as added by subsection (a) in any input provided by the Secretary of Defense in connection with a proposed Department of Defense action, the Secretary of Defense shall include as a part of the environmental impact statement or environmental assessment prepared in connection with the action a detailed evaluation of the impact of the proposed action, and each alternative to the proposed action considered in the statement or assessment, on national security, including the readiness, training, testing, and operations of the armed forces.

(2) The Secretary shall also include any evaluation required by subsection (a) in any input provided by the Department of Defense as a cooperating agency to a lead agency preparing an environmental impact statement or environmental assessment of the impact of the proposed action, and each alternative to the proposed action considered in the statement or assessment, on national security, including the readiness, training, testing, and operations of the armed forces.

(3) The Secretary of Defense shall carry out the evaluation required by subsection (a) and subsection (b) in any input provided by the Department of Defense as a cooperating agency to a lead agency preparing an environmental impact statement.

(b) Effective Date.—Section 2711 of title 10, United States Code, as added by subsection (a), shall take effect on the date of the enactment of this Act and apply with respect to any environmental impact statement or environmental assessment prepared by the Secretary of Defense that has not been released in final form as of that date.

SEC. 313. REIMBURSEMENT FOR CERTAIN COSTS IN CONNECTION WITH HOOPER SANDS SITE, SOUTH BERWICK, MAINE.

Using amounts authorized to be appropriated by section 301(15) for environmental restoration for the purpose of carrying out the requirements of this section, the Secretary of the Navy may pay $1,005,478 to the Hooper Sands Special Account within the Hazardous Substance Superfund established by section 9507 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (26 U.S.C. 9507) to reimburse the Environmental Protection Agency in full for certain response costs incurred by the Environmental Protection Agency for actions taken pursuant to the Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation, and Liability Act of 1980 (42 U.S.C. 9601 et seq.) at the Hooper Sands site in South Berwick, Maine, pursuant to a contract entered into by the Department of the Navy and the Environmental Protection Agency in January 2001.

SEC. 314. RIVER MITIGATION STUDIES.

(a) Potomac River, Shenandoah River.—The Secretary of Defense may conduct a study regarding mitigation needs in connection with protruding structures and submerged objects remaining from the World War II naval shipbuilding industry located at the former Navy installation in Orange, Texas, which create navigational hazards along the Sabine River and surrounding the Port of Orange.

(b) Delaware River, Delaware Watershed.—The Secretary of Defense may conduct a study regarding mitigation needs in connection with protruding structures and submerged debris possibly relating to the Philadelphia Naval Shipyard in that portion of the Delaware River from Philadelphia to the mouth of the river which create navigational hazards along the river.

(c) Use of Existing Information.—In conducting the study authorized by this section, the Secretary shall take into account any information available from other studies conducted in connection with the same navigation channel.

(d) Consultation.—The Secretary shall conduct the studies authorized by this section in consultation with appropriate State and local government entities and Federal agencies.

(e) Report on Study Results.—Not later than April 30, 2002, the Secretary of Defense shall submit to the Committee on Armed Services of the Senate and the Committee on Armed Services of the House of Representatives a report that summarizes the results of the studies conducted under this section.

(f) Cost Sharing.—Nothing in this section is intended to require non-Federal cost sharing of the costs incurred by the Secretary of Defense in conducting the studies authorized by this section.

(g) Removal Authority.—Consistent with existing laws, using funds authorized to be appropriated for these purposes, and after providing notice to the Secretary of Defense may work with the other Federal, State, local, and private entities—

(1) to remove the protruding structures and submerged objects in the Hooper Sand site and surrounding the Port of Orange that resulted from the abandonment of the shipbuilding industry and Navy installation in Orange, Texas; and

(2) to remove floating and partially submerged debris in the portion of the Delaware River subject to the study under subsection (b).

(h) Relation to Other Laws and Agreements.—This section is not intended to modify any authorities provided to the Secretary of the Army by the Water Resources Development Act of 1986 (33 U.S.C. 2201 et seq.), nor is it intended to modify any non-Federal cost-sharing responsibilities outlined in any local cooperation agreements.

SEC. 315. ELIMINATION OF ANNUAL REPORT ON CONTRACTOR REIMBURSEMENT FOR CONSTRUCTIVE WORKFORCE RE-RESPONSE ACTIONS.

Section 2706 of title 10, United States Code, as amended by striking subsection (c).
(1) 328, in the case of full-time equivalent positions for civilian employees of the Department of the Air Force; and
(2) 435, in the case of full-time equivalent positions for civilian employees of the Department of the Navy.

(c) ADDITIONAL LIMITATION.—None of the time equivalent positions for civilian emyee the Department of the Navy that may be considered in a workforce review during fisscending to 2002 may involve civilian employees who perform functions on behalf of the Marine Corps.

SEC. 332. APPLICABILITY OF CORE LOGISTICS CA-PABILITY REQUIREMENTS TO NU-CLEAR AIRCRAFT CARRIERS.

Section 2464(a)(3) of title 10, United States Code, is amended by striking “nuclear aircraft carriers” and inserting “nuclear refueling of aircraft carriers”.

SEC. 333. CONTINUATION OF CONTRACTOR MAN-POWER REPORTING SYSTEM IN DE-PARTMENT OF THE ARMY.

Section 343 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2000 (Public Law 106–65; 113 Stat. 568) is amended—
(1) by striking subsection (a) and inserting the following new subsection:

“(a) REPORTING REQUIREMENT FOR DEPART-MENT OF THE ARMY.—(1) Not later than March 1 of each fiscal year, the Secretary of the Army shall submit to Congress a report describing the use during the previous fiscal year of non-Federal entities to provide services to the Department of the Army.

“(2) The data collection required to prepare the report is deemed to be in compliance with the requirements of chapter 35 of title 44, United States Code, commonly known as the Paperwork Reduction Act.

“(3) The report required by this section is needed to comply with sections 115a and 129a of section 301(5) for operation and maintenance for fiscal year 2002,”.

SEC. 334. LIMITATION ON EXPANSION OF WHOLE-SALE LOGISTICS MODERNIZATION
PROGRAM.

(a) LIMITATION.—The Secretary of the Army may not authorize the expansion of the Wholesale Logistics Modernization Program beyond the original legacy systems included in the scope of the contract awarded in December 1999 until the Secretary certifies to Congress that the original legacy systems have been successfully replaced.

(b) GAO EVALUATION.—Not later than 60 days after the Secretary submits to Congress the report required under subsection (a) for a fiscal year, the Comptroller General shall submit to Congress an evaluation of the report.

SEC. 335. PILOT PROJECT FOR EXCLUSION OF CERTAIN EXPENDITURES FROM LIMIT-ATION ON PRIVATE SECTOR PER-FORMANCE OF DEPOT-LEVEL MAINTEN-ANCE.

Section 2474 of title 10, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

“(g) PILOT PROJECT FOR THE EXCLUSION OF CERTAIN EXPENDITURES FROM LIMITATION ON PRIVATE SECTOR PERFORMANCE OF DEPOT-LEVEL MAINTENANCE.

“(1) AMOUNTS EXCLUDED.—Amounts expended out of funds described in paragraph (2) for the performance of a depot-level maintenance and repair workload by non-Federal Government personnel at a Center of Industrial and Techtical Excellence named in paragraph (4) shall not be counted for the purposes of section 2466(a) of this title if the personnel are provided by private industry pursuant to a public-private partnership undertaken by the Center under subsection (b).

“(2) FUNDS FOR FISCAL YEARS 2002 THROUGH 2006.—The funds referred to in paragraph (1) are available to the Air Force for depot-level maintenance and repair workloads for fiscal exceed 10 percent of the total funds available in any single year.

“(3) REPORTING REQUIREMENTS.—All funds covered by paragraph (1) shall be included as a separate item in the reports required under paragraphs (1), (2), and (3) of subsection (b) of this title.

“(4) COVERED CENTERS.—(A) The Centers of Industrial and Technical Excellence referred to in paragraph (1) are the following:

“(i) Oklahoma City Air Logistics Center, Oklahoma.

“(ii) Warner-Robins Air Logistics Center, Georgia.

“(B) The Secretary of the Air Force shall designate as a Center of Industrial and Technical Excellence any of the air logistics centers numbered in subparagraph (A) that have previously been so designated and shall specify the core competencies for which the designation is made.

SEC. 336. PROTECTIONS FOR PURCHASERS OF AR-TICLES AND SERVICES MANUFAC-TURED OR PERFORMED BY WORK-ING-CAPITAL FUNDED INDUSTRIAL FACILITIES OF THE DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE.

(a) GENERAL RULE.—Section 2563(c) of title 10,
United States Code, is amended—
(1) in paragraph (1)(B), by striking “in any case of willful misconduct or gross negligence and inserting “as provided in paragraph (1)(B);” and
(2) by adding at the end the following new subsection:

“(3) Paragraph (1)(B) does not apply in any case of willful misconduct or gross negligence or in the case of a claim by a purchaser of articles or services under this section that damages or injury arose from the failure of the Government to comply with quality, schedule, or cost performance requirements in the contract to provide the articles or services.”.

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—Section
2474(e)(2)(B)(i) of this title is amended by striking “in any case of willful conduct or gross negligence” and inserting “under the circumstances described in section 2563(c)(3) of this title”.

Subtitle E—Defense Dependents Education
SEC. 341. ASSISTANCE TO LOCAL EDUCATIONAL AGENCIES THAT BENEFIT DEPEND-ENTS OF MEMBERS OF THE ARMED FORCES AND DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE EMPLOYEES.

(a) EDUCATIONAL AGENCIES ASSISTANCE.—Of the amount authorized to be appropriated by section 301(5) for operation and maintenance for Defense-dependents’ education, $30,000,000 shall be available only for providing educational assistance to local educational agencies that are eligible for educational assistance.

(b) NOTIFICATION.—Not later than June 30,
2002, the Secretary of Defense shall notify each local educational agency that is eligible for educational agencies assistance for fiscal year 2002 of

(1) that agency’s eligibility for educational agencies assistance; and

(2) the amount of the educational agencies assistance for which that agency is eligible.

(c) DISBURSEMENT OF FUNDS.—The Secretary of Defense shall disburse funds made available under subsection (a) not later than 30 days after the date on which notification to the eligible local educational agencies is provided pursuant to subsection (b).

(d) DEFINITIONS.—In this section—

SEC. 353. COMPLETION AND EVALUATION OF CURRENT DEMONSTRATION PRO-GRAMS TO IMPROVE QUALITY OF PERSONAL PROPERTY SHIPMENTS OF MEMBERS.
(a) COMPLETION.—The Secretary of Defense shall complete all demonstration programs in the Department of Defense that were designed to improve the movement of household goods of members of the Armed Forces and were being conducted or authorized as of October 1, 2000,
(b) EVALUATION.—Not later than August 31,
2002, the Secretary of Defense shall submit to Congress a report evaluating whether the demonstration programs referred to in subsection (a), as implemented, satisfy the goals (as contained in the General Accounting Report NSAID 97–49) that the demonstration programs previously agreed upon between the Department of Defense and representatives of private sector entities involved in the transportation of household goods for members of the Armed Forces.
(c) INTERIM REPORTS.—Not later than January 15, 2002, and April 15, 2002, the Secretary shall submit to Congress interim reports regard-

Subtitle G—Service Contracting Reform
SEC. 361. SHORT TITLE.
This subtitle may be cited as the ‘‘Department of Defense Service Contracting Reform Act of 2001’’.
SEC. 362. REQUIRED COST SAVINGS LEVEL FOR CHANGE OF FUNCTION TO CON-TRACT PERFORMANCE.
Section 2461(b) of title 10, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:
“(5)(A) A commercial or industrial type function of the Department of Defense may not be changed to performance by the private sector unless, as a result of the cost comparison examination required under paragraph (3)(A), that employed the most efficient organization process prescribed in Office of Management and Budget Circular A–76 or any successor administrative regulation or policy, at least a 10-percent cost savings would be achieved by performance of the function by the private sector over the term of the contract.
“(B) The cost savings requirement specified in subparagraph (A) does not apply to any contracts for special studies and analyses, construction services, architectural services, engineering services, medical services, scientific and technical services related to (but not in support of) research and development, and depot-level maintenance and repair services.
“(C) The Secretary of Defense may waive the cost savings requirement if—“(i) the written waiver is prepared by the Secretary of Defense, or the relevant Assistant Secretary or agency head; and “(ii) the written waiver is accompanied by a detailed determination that national security interests are so compelling as to preclude compliance with the requirement for a cost comparison examination.
“(D) The Secretary of Defense shall publish a copy of the waiver in the Federal Register.’’.
SEC. 363. APPLICABILITY OF STUDY AND REPORT-ING REQUIREMENTS TO NEW COM-MERCIAL OR INDUSTRIAL TYPE FUNCTIONS.
(a) NEW FUNCTIONS.—Section 2461(a) of title
10, United States Code, is amended—
(1) by striking “CHANGE IN PERFORMANCE.—” and inserting “CHANGE IN OR INITIATION OF PERFORMANCE.—”;
(2) by adding at the end the following new paragraphs:
“(2) In the case of a commercial or industrial type function of the Department of Defense previously performed by Department of Defense civilian employees or a contractor, the performance of the function by the private sector may not be initiated until—
“(A) the Secretary of Defense conducts a cost comparison examination that employs the most efficient organization process described in Office of Management and Budget Circular A–76, and its supplemental or successor administrative regulation or policy; and “(B) a determination is made that performance of the function by the private sector would be less costly over the term of the contract than performance by Department of Defense civilian employees during that same period.
“(3) This subsection does not apply to the following:
“(A) A contract between the Department of Defense and the private sector for work with a contract value of less than $1,000,000 so long as such work was not previously performed, or in any way changed for the purpose of avoiding the requirements of this section.
“(B) A contract for special studies and analyses, construction services, architectural services, engineering services, medical services, scientific and technical services related to (but not in support of) research and development, and depot-level maintenance and repair services.
“(C) the Secretary of Defense may waive the applicability of this section if—“(A) the written waiver is prepared by the Secretary or agency head; and “(B) the written waiver is accompanied by a detailed determination that—“(i) there is no reasonable expectation that civillian employees would win a public-private competition for the function; and “(ii) the issuance of a waiver would not serve to reduce significantly the level of or quality of competition in the future award or performance of work.
“(5) The Secretary of Defense shall publish a copy of the waiver in the Federal Register.’’;
(b) MINIMAL LEVELS OF PUBLIC-PRIVATE COMPETITION FOR NEW WORK.—(1) Notwithstanding the use of the waiver authority provided in section 2461 of title 10, United States Code, as amended by this section, not less than the percentage specified in paragraph (2) of the total dollars expended during a specified fiscal year for the performance of commercial or industrial type functions of the Department of Defense not previously performed by Department of Defense civilian employees or the private sector (that is, a contract which is exempt from comparison under such section) shall be expended for service contracts that are awarded after the completion of cost comparison examinations.
“(2) The requirements of paragraph (1) apply as follows:
“(A) Not less than 10 percent, for fiscal year
“(B) Not less than 20 percent, for fiscal year
2002.
“(C) Not less than 30 percent, for fiscal year
2003.
“(d) EQUITY IN PUBLIC-PRIVATE COMPETI-TION.—(1) The Secretary of Defense shall subject approximately 20% of the dollars expended during a specified fiscal year for the performance of commercial or industrial type functions of the Department of Defense not previously performed by Department of Defense civilian employees or the private sector (that is, a contract which is exempt from comparison under such section) shall be expended for service contracts that are awarded after the completion of cost comparison examinations.
“(2) The requirements of paragraph (1) apply as follows:
“(A) Not less than 10 percent, for fiscal year
“(B) Not less than 20 percent, for fiscal year
2002.
“(C) Not less than 30 percent, for fiscal year
2003.
“(e) CLERICAL AMENDMENTS.—The heading of such section 2461 is amended to read as follows:
‘‘§2461. Commercial or industrial type functions: required studies and reports before conversion, or initiation of, contractor or civilian employee performance’’.
(2) The item relating to such section in the table of sections at the beginning of chapter 146 of title 10, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:
‘‘2461. Commercial or industrial type functions:
required studies and reports before conversion, or initiation of, contractor or civilian employee performance’’.
SEC. 365. REQUIREMENT FOR EQUITY IN PUBLIC-PRIVATE COMPETITIONS.
Section 2461 of title 10, United States Code, is amended by inserting after subsection (d) the following new subsection:
“(d) EQUITY IN PUBLIC-PRIVATE COMPETI-TION.—(1) For any fiscal year in which commercial or industrial type functions of the Department of Defense performed by Department of Defense civilian employees are studied for possible change to private sector performance, the Secretary of Defense shall subject approximately the same number of positions held by non-Federal employees under contracts with the Department of Defense to the same cost comparison examination described in subsection (b)(3), subject to the completion of the terms of those contracts.
“(2) To the extent possible, the Secretary of Defense should, in complying with this subsection, select those contract positions held by

TITLE IV—MILITARY PERSONNEL AUTHORIZATIONS

SUBTITLE A—ACTIVE FORCES

SEC. 401. END STRENGTHS FOR ACTIVE FORCES.

The Armed Forces are authorized for active duty as of September 30, 2002, as follows:

(1) The Army, 480,000.

(2) The Navy, 376,000.

(3) The Marine Corps, 172,600.

(4) The Air Force, 358,800.

SEC. 402. REVISION IN PERMANENT END STRENGTH MINIMUM LEVELS.

(a) REVISED END STRENGTH FLOORS.—Section 691(b) of title 10, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in paragraph (2), by striking “372,000” and inserting “376,000”;

(2) in paragraph (4), by striking “357,000” and inserting “358,800”;

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by subsection (a) shall take effect on October 1, 2001, or the date of the enactment of this Act, whichever is later.

SUBTITLE B—RESERVE FORCES

SEC. 411. END STRENGTHS FOR SELECTED RESERVE COMPONENTS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Armed Forces are authorized for active duty personnel of the reserve components as of September 30, 2002, as follows:

(1) The Army National Guard of the United States, 350,000.

(2) The Army Reserve, 205,000.

(3) The Naval Reserve, 87,000.

(4) The Marine Corps Reserve, 39,558.

(6) The Air Force Reserve, 74,700.

(7) The Coast Guard Reserve, 8,000.

(b) ADJUSTMENTS.—The end strengths prescribed by subsection (a) for any reserve component shall be proportionately reduced by—

(1) the total authorized strength of units organized as units of the Selected Reserve of such component which are on active duty (other than for training) at the end of the fiscal year; and

(2) the total number of individual members not in units organized to serve as units of the Selected Reserve of such component who are on active duty (other than for training or for unsatisfactory participation in training) without their consent at the end of the fiscal year.

Whenever such units or such individual members are released from active duty during any fiscal year, the end strength prescribed for such fiscal year for such reserve component shall be proportionately increased by the total authorized strengths of such units and by the total number of such individuals released from active duty during any fiscal year.

SEC. 412. END STRENGTHS FOR RESERVES ON ACTIVE DUTY IN SUPPORT OF THE RESERVE FORCES.

Within the end strengths prescribed in section 411(a), the reserve components of the Armed Forces are authorized, as of September 30, 2002, the following number of members to be serving on full-time active duty or full-time duty, in the case of members of the National Guard, for the purpose of organizing, administering, recruiting, instructing, training, or performing such duties:

(1) The Army National Guard of the United States, 22,974.

(2) The Army Reserve, 13,108.
