

establishment within the health and human services department of an office of emergency preparedness require the development of national plans to deal with a new bioterrorist threat.

There are some things that it does not do. We do not claim that this bill includes all the things we are going to need to do to protect the public health. We know that probably next year we are going to have to do some things with the National Guard and the military to strengthen that first response that every Governor turns to when something goes wrong in their State. We do know that this really deals mostly with living things, with pathogens, with organisms and not so much with other kinds of poisons, whether they be radionuclides or chemicals. And those surveillance systems are different than those you see for disease. And we need to think differently about how we do that.

Finally, it does not include water research and development for real-time monitoring. That is in a separate bill. It is sponsored by the gentleman from New York (Mr. BOEHLERT), and we may see that come forward here possibly this week or next week to really expand our research and development on water safety and water monitoring.

This is a very good solid bill. It is a very important bill, in some ways because it has been worked quietly and in a bipartisan way here in the House; we have not talked about it much. We have not explained what is in here, and I think it is a real concern of Americans. I know it is a concern of mine of, well, what if there is something that makes my family sick; and how do we know whether someone is trying to hurt them or hurt us. What if someone were to be as organized and as ruthless as there were in the attacks on September 11; but instead of using aircraft, they used disease. They use small pox or they were more effective with anthrax or ebola or all kinds of other things that would be devastating to our families and our communities.

The Federal Government has a responsibility to step up to the challenge, to change the way we think about our health and our health security. And I think this bill goes a long way to taking us there. And I commend the gentleman from Louisiana (Mr. TAUZIN) and the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. DINGELL) for their leadership on this. And I look forward to an overwhelming vote on this tomorrow to pass the bioterrorism bill.
