We do not have that now. We do not have the reestimate. We do not have an objective, independent review of the cost of this President’s tax plan.

What has been reestimated is part of the plan. And what has been reestimated is the estate tax plan of the Senator from Arizona, not the President’s estate tax plan, because the Joint Tax Committee has made clear they don’t have sufficient detail to make such a reestimate. This body is being asked to write a budget resolution without the budget from the President, without sufficient detail from this President to have an objective, independent analysis of the cost of his proposal, without markup in the committee.

That is another difference. In 1993, we had a full and complete markup in the Budget Committee. This time there is none. It has never happened before.

Some on their side will say, well, in 1983, we went to the floor with a budget resolution without having completed a markup in this committee. That is true. But at least we tried to mark up in the Budget Committee each and every year. Virtually every year we have succeeded, except this year. There wasn’t even an attempt to mark up the budget resolution in the committee.

As I say, we are now being asked to go to the budget resolution with no budget from the President, without even sufficient detail to have an independent analysis of the cost of his proposal, which is a massive $1.6 trillion tax cut that threatens to put us back into deficit, that threatens to raid the trust funds of Medicare and Social Security, and we have had no markup in the committee.

The majority is proposing to use reconciliation, which was designed for deficit reduction, for a tax cut. That is an abuse of reconciliation. It would be an abuse if it was for spending; it is an abuse if it is tax cuts, and not the purpose of special procedures in which Senators give up their rights, their rights to debate and amend legislation. That is wrong. That turns this body into the House of Representatives.

I say to my colleagues on the other side, in 1993, when our leadership came to some of us and asked to use reconciliation for a spending program, we said no. This Senator said no. That is an abuse of reconciliation because reconciliation is for deficit reduction, not for spending increases, not for tax cuts. We are not to short-circuit the process of the Senate—extended debate, the right of a Senator—to defer on campaign finance so we might be having this debate in September on an appropriations bill, less than 60 days before the election. This bill prohibits them, in many cases, from being able to run ads less than 60 days prior to an election that mention a candidate’s name. There are a lot of groups, some on the left, such as the Sierra Club, and some on the right, such as National Right To Life, for example, that may want to run ads about a bill before Congress. We may be debating partial birth abortion or ANWR, and we might be having this debate in September on an appropriations bill, less than 60 days before the election.

All of that is being short-circuited. All of that is being thrown aside. All of that is being put in a position in which I wanted to do this as a thank-you to the Senator from Oklahoma for his good manners and graciousness. I appreciate it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oklahoma is recognized.

CAMPAIGN FINANCE REFORM

Mr. NICKLES. Mr. President, I thank my friend and colleague from North Carolina, Mr. McCauley, and the Senators, who are here, we get a little impatient since we all have places we want to go. I appreciate his comments, and I very much look forward to debating the budget and tax bills on the floor of the Senate next week and, frankly, over the next couple of months, as we do our appropriations bills.

I enjoy those issues, and I would have preferred doing those instead of campaign finance for the last 2 weeks. I would have preferred doing the education bill. I, for one, was urging our caucus, and Senator MCAIN and others, to defer on campaign finance so we could take up some of the higher priorities which, in my opinion, are education, tax reduction, and the budget. I didn’t win that debate.

We have been on the campaign finance bill for the last couple weeks because of the tenacity, persistence, and stubbornness of our good friends, the Senator from Arizona, Mr. MCCAIN, and the Senator from Vermont, Mr. FEINGOLD. I compliment them. They have been persistent and tenacious in pushing this bill. I also compliment them for their efforts in working with many of us who tried to make the bill better. We had some successes and we had some failures. In some ways this bill is a lot better than it was when it was introduced and in some areas it got a lot worse. I will touch on a few of those.

I had hoped we would be able to improve the bill. I could not support the bill when it was originally introduced before the Senate. I had hoped we could make some improvements so that this Senator could support final passage. I was committed to try to do that. We had some success in a couple of areas, but we had some important failures as well.

I also compliment others who worked hard on this bill including Senator THOMPSON and Senator HAGEL. Senator HAGEL came up with a good substitute. Senator THOMPSON had a good amendment dealing with hard money, and I worked with him on that amendment.

I also compliment Senator MCCONNELL and Senator GRAMM, who were fierce, articulate opponents and spoke very well. Senator GRAMM’s speech last night was one of the best speeches I have heard in my entire career.

He spoke very forcefully about freedom of speech and the fact that even though the editorial boards and public opinion polls say, let’s vote for this, that we should abide by the Constitution.

The President’s Office, Senator BYRD, reads the Constitution as frequently, maybe more frequently than anybody in this body. When we are sworn into office, we put up our hand and we swear to abide by the Constitution.

The first amendment to the Constitution, one of the most respected and important provisions in the Constitution, states very clearly that “Congress shall make no law . . . abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press; or the right of the people peaceably to assemble, and to petition the Government for redress of grievances.”

“Congress shall make no law . . .” Mr. President, that includes the McCain-Feingold bill. In my opinion, this bill restricts our freedom of speech, not only in the original version, but especially in the version that we have now.

Some of the different sections of this bill go by different names based on their sponsors. I have great respect for my colleagues, and I know Senators SNOWE and JEFFORDS worked on a section restricting speech before elections by unions, corporations, and by other interest groups. This bill restricts their ability to speak, to run ads. This bill prohibits them, in many cases, from being able to run ads less than 60 days prior to an election that mention a candidate’s name. There are a lot of groups, some on the left, such as the Sierra Club, and some on the right, such as National Right To Life, for example, that may want to run ads about a bill before Congress. We may be debating partial birth abortion or ANWR, and we might be having this debate in September on an appropriations bill, less than 60 days before the election. This bill will say they cannot run an ad with an individual’s name saying vote this way or that way, or don’t support this person, because he is wrong on ANWR, or he is correct on the right to life issue. Their free speech would be prohibited. I find that to be unconstitutional.

I have heard a lot of debate on the floor saying they did not think that Snowe-Jeffords is unconstitutional, and other people saying that it was. Then Senator WELLSTONE came up with an amendment that said, let’s expand that to all interest groups—the same restrictions we had on unions and businesses on running ads within 60 days. Let’s make that apply to them as well. Senators MCCAIN and FEINGOLD said... the Wellstone amendment was unconstitutional. If that was unconstitutional, then the underlying bill was unconstitutional because, basically, Senator Wellstone copied it.

Why would we pass a bill we know is going to be unconstitutional? And that relates to the nonseverability amendment, described as a killer amendment. Why? Because they know some of the bill is going to be declared unconstitutional. Why would we pass legislation we know is going to be unconstitutional? Yet, some of the proponents are basically admitting it is going to be unconstitutional.

The big fight was on severability. The sponsors had to have that because we more than suspect that parts of this bill will be declared unconstitutional. I think they are right, because the people sitting at the Supreme Court are going to say: does this bill restrict an organization’s ability to communicate and mention a Member’s name, or mention an issue that is before Congress? It will restrict that right. So it will restrict their ability to have freedom of speech.

I think parts of this bill—not all of it, but certain parts of it—will be determined unconstitutional. I think we should not be passing unconstitutional bills. I think we should not say, let’s just pass it and let the courts do the homework on it. I guess you can do that, but I think the responsibility to uphold the Constitution, respect the Constitution, and not to be passing things we know are unconstitutional, that won’t uphold a constitutionality test.

In addition, I mentioned that we had some victories and some defeats. One of the victories, in my opinion, was when we increased the hard money limits, which have been frozen at the 1974 amount, and contributed thousands and thousands of dollars more through the special committee, through either the Republican Senatorial Campaign Committee or the Democratic Senate Campaign Committee.

The Democrats did it to the tune of $21 million last year, and the Republicans did it to the tune of $5 million in New York. In New York, there was $13 million of soft money directed toward one candidate. How can you have limits and then have other people contributing millions of dollars outside those limits? Everybody has heard about that Denise Rich contribution. She contributed over $100,000 to one Senate candidate, and I thought the law was only $1,000 for a primary and $1,000 for a general election. But Denise Rich contributed over $100,000 through the use of a joint committee. That was an abuse. It needed to be stopped.

Now, let me turn to the issue of coordination. I mentioned this last night on the floor. The coordination section in the underlying bill and the bill was grossly inadequate in its respect for free speech. The sponsors of the bill, Senators McCain and Feingold, admitted as much and said we needed to fix it. The bill had a several-page definition of coordination, saying if a union or interest group coordinated with a campaign, they would have to report everything they did and consider it as a contribution. And if you didn’t do so, there could be fines and penalties against that organization and against the candidate. You could make them criminal violations because they would be violating the law. We didn’t want to make people criminals and put them in jail because, basically, they were exercising their constitutional rights.

Senators McCain and Feingold said they would fix that. I looked at the fix, and they fixed it for the unions, but not for everybody else. For the unions, they excluded the in-kind contributions, to contribute to or disclose their contributions. We are not a constitutional scholar—I believe, I think they are right, because the people sitting at the Supreme Court are going to say: I agree with them, or “I disagree with them,” or “I disagree with Senator so-and-so,” or “I agree with Senator so-and-so,” before the election. This bill says, no, you can’t do it. If you do it, you might well be in trouble.

But, oh, we have a little fix for the unions. We will just run it through on the last amendment of the day, which is what happened.

Do you know what else concerning the unions is missing in this bill? You would think in the year 2001 we would say that all campaigns contributions would be voluntary. Guess what? They are not in America today. There are millions of Americans who are compulsory contributors because they don’t support. They would rather not. Some people say these people don’t have to contribute because they don’t have to join the union. In some States, they have to join, or if they don’t, they have to join under an agency fee arrangement, and they have to pay dues. They may not want to, but they have to. They have to pay the dues or the agency fee. A lot of that money—maybe in excess of $10, or $15, or $20 a month—is used for political activity. That individual may not want it to be used for that.

He might disagree with the leadership of the union that money is going to candidates to whom he or she is totally opposed. We wanted to have a provision that says no one should be compelled to contribute to a campaign; they would have to give their permission before money can be taken out of their paycheck every month.

So that amendment could not be accepted. To be fair, the amendment that was offered was not a good amendment, in my opinion, because it also included shareholders, and there is no... way in the world you can include a shareholders provision, in my opinion. But the voices are clear: You are not going to win on that Paycheck Protection Amendment.

Senator HATCH offered another amendment that said at least let's have disclosure on businesses and unions on how much money they are putting into campaigns. I thought surely that amendment was going to be adopted. That amendment was not adopted.

I will say right now that I believe organized labor put hundreds of millions of dollars into the campaigns last cycle, and we do not know and we will not know because this bill does not require that they tell us. Everybody else has to disclose contributions; organized labor does not. They do not have to disclose the way Senator HATCH wants them to. They do not have to disclose their indirect, in-kind contributions to campaigns. They have thousands of people making phone calls day after day that are paid full salaries, benefits, at a station set up for political activity, and most of that is not disclosed. We do not know and this bill does not help us know. Is this a balanced package? It looks to me more and more that it is not.

Originally, this bill had language supposedly to codify Beck, Beck being a decision that if a union person did not want their money used for political purposes, they could file notice and get a refund. I never thought that case was satisfactory because their money would be used in ways with which they still would not agree, but it was better than nothing. They could get a refund.

If somebody does not want money used for political purposes, they should say no and not have to contribute.

The underlying bill purported to codify Beck, but it did not do that. I raised that issue with Senator MCCAIN and Senator FEINGOLD, and they concurred with me. We struck the language that weakened Beck, in my opinion, significantly. That made the bill a little better.

I want to give credit when credit is deserved. Certainly this bill is improved by the hard money increase. I think it was improved by striking the language, what I would call the false Beck. That language was taken out of the bill. That made it a little bit better.

Then there was another provision this Senator fought very strongly against, but only at the last minute because I just found out about it at the last minute, and that was the amendment by our friend and colleague from New Jersey, Senator TORICELLI, that dealt with lower advertising rates for political ads.

I fought it, but we only had 30 votes against it. Under that amendment, broadcasters have to offer the lowest unit rate to candidates for each type of time over a 365-day period. That is an outrageous, enormously expensive subsidy for politicians. And while people say that with public financing of limiting money in politics, and so on, what we have given politicians is an enormous multimillion-dollar gift through this amendment, a multimillion-dollar gift. We defeated a couple amendments that dealt with public financing of campaigns, but this amendment is indirect public financing of campaigns because it is going to allow politicians to get the rates cheaper than anybody else in America. It also has a little provision that says the politician's ads cannot be preempted.

To give an example, prior to the election in October, it gets expensive because a lot of people are trying to buy time. There is a lot of competition. A lot of time is available. It is critical time for Monday Night Football. "I like to watch it. I am sure commercial ads get expensive on Monday night or any night of high visibility.

We said: Politician, you get the cheapest rate of the year, and you can use that time, and you can use it on any great night. You get to have the cheapest time of the year. You get your time, and it may be one-tenth as expensive as normal rates for "Monday Night Football" or some other program. You get the lowest rate of anybody throughout the entire year, and they cannot preempt you. You buy the time, you've got it.

Maybe the broadcaster is in rural West Virginia or Oklahoma and has a radio station or a TV station and is scraping to get by. They are going to get paid the lowest rate they charge on a hot summer night. The broadcaster may think: This is good, we have the new "ER" or some other new show that is really popular, so we can make some money. We are going to have politicians swamping them saying: Give that time to me.

We passed an enormous subsidy for politicians. It is an enormous advantage for incumbents because incumbents usually outraise their challengers most of the time. We just increased the advantage incumbents have by millions of dollars. Thank you very much. We should put ourselves on the back: Hey, this is good, and we were able to slide this through. People don't know—they think we are reforming campaigns, and we are giving politicians enormous subsidies and acting as if it is reform, and being proud of it. We are going to slap everybody on the back about our great reform. We did a little nice thing to which nobody paid attention. Politicians, you get the lowest rate of anybody all year long, and you get to use it the night before an election. That is our little gift to ourselves. We are limiting contributions, but it did not do that. I raised the objection, it is so ordered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The quorum call be rescinded.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I yield the floor to the Chair.

Mr. KENNEDY. I thank the Chair.

THE BUDGET

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, it is midway through Friday afternoon. We know most Americans are heading home from a busy day working and providing for their families. They may be looking forward over the weekend to some of the basketball championships that are going to be played on Saturday and again on Monday evening. They are looking forward to attending services on Sunday and then spending some time with their families.

Then perhaps on Monday, when they go to work, they may hear on the radio or on television that the Senate is involved in what they broadly term "a resolution on the budget." By and large, many are going to wonder exactly what that means and what is its relationship to their lives. They are going to wonder, what is it going to mean to my children's education, what is it going to mean to my parents' prescription drugs, what is it going to mean as far as investing in housing or in law enforcement, or any of the areas of national priority, or what is it going to mean in terms of the security of Medicare and Social Security? They are going to wonder about this.

I heard over the last several months the President of the United States talk about the fact that he is going to urge the Congress to pass a very sizable tax cut. He talks about $1.6 trillion tax cut. We know the real figures are far in excess of that because they do not include other factors, as others have pointed out in earlier debates. Senator CONRAD has done such a wonderful job not only in educating the Members of
