report by the Institute of Medicine on medication errors found that safe staffing and limits on mandatory overtime are essential to preventing medication errors. An investigative report by the Chicago Tribune also found that patient safety was sacrificed when reductions in hospital staff resulted in registered nurses working long overtime hours and being more likely to make serious medical errors.

Mr. Speaker, these studies confirm the grim stories I hear from my constituents on a regular basis. In fact, last October 1,900 people participated in a 1-day strike at Rhode Island Hospital which illustrated the magnitude of this problem facing Rhode Island nurses, hospitahls and patients.

I understand that hospitals need an ample supply of nurses to safely administer to the needs of patients, and this body, the Bush administration, the Bush administration, the Bush administration, the
