He was appointed to the state's high court in 1964 by then-Governor Pat Brown. Justice Mosk loved being on the court and hated the thought of retirement, but fearing that his age was slowing him down, he had reluctantly decided to step down this year. He died the day he planned to submit his resignation letter to Governor Davis.

Justice Mosk fought doggedly for civil rights and individual liberties. He threw out restrictive real estate covenants that kept black families out of white neighborhoods and opened professional golf to nonwhites. He barred prosecutors from removing jurors on racial grounds. He declared that handicapped parents could not be stereotyped and automatically disqualified from raising their own children.

He was revered for his independence as well as his intelligence, his dedication to equal justice and his wisdom and common sense.

In September, a list of his top priorities should he be re-elected to the Supreme Court: (1) Properly apply the law, (2) Independence and impartiality, and (3) Justice. He can be no better eulogized than by this short list, which he honored throughout his brilliant career. I ask my colleagues to join me today in paying tribute to Justice Stanley Mosk, a legal giant of California.

COUNTRY-OF-ORIGIN LABELING FOR FARM-RAISED FISH

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. Osborne). Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Arkansas (Mr. Ross) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. ROSS. Mr. Speaker, the farm-raised catfish industry is an important part of the economy in my congressional district that covers the southern third of Arkansas. In fact, Arkansas is third in catfish sales in the Nation, behind only Mississippi and Alabama, with nearly $66 million, or 13 percent, of the total U.S. sales.

I recently met with catfish farmers in southeast Arkansas, and I can tell my colleagues that catfish producers in my district are upset that so-called catfish are being dumped into our markets from Vietnam and sold as farm-raised catfish. The truth is that it is not farm raised, and I am not even sure it is catfish. Last year, imports of Vietnamese catfish totaled 7 million pounds, more than triple the 2 million pounds imported in 1999 and more than 12 times the 575,000 pounds imported in 1998.

In Vietnam, these so-called catfish, also known as basa, can be produced at a much lower cost, due to cheap labor and less stringent environmental regulations. In fact, many of these fish are grown in floating cages in the Mekong River, exposing the fish to pollutants and other conditions. They are then dumped into American markets and often marketed as farm-raised catfish. Many catfish producers believe that these imports have taken away as much as 10 percent of our markets here at home.

It is really quite simple. Farmers do not mind competition, but they do mind when the competition is unfair and untruthful. This is why today my colleagues, including the gentleman from Arkansas (Mr. Berry), the gentleman from Mississippi (Mr. Shows), and the gentleman from Mississippi (Mr. Pickering) introduced, along with me, a bipartisan bill, H.R. 2439, the Ross-Berry-Pickering bill, that would amend the Agricultural Marketing Act of 1946 to require retailers to inform consumers of the country of origin of the fish that they sell.

Under the bill, all fish would be covered. Each retailer would be required to notify the consumer at the final point of sale of the country of origin of the fish. The fish could only be designated as being from the United States if it is from a farm-raised fish that is exclusively born, raised, and processed in the United States.

When our consumers go into the store to buy farm-raised catfish, they deserve to know what they are getting is actually farm raised and catfish. By letting consumers know where the product is coming from, this bill will encourage the people in Arkansas and all across America to buy catfish grown by our farm families, not fish grown in a polluted river in another country.

I urge my colleagues to join me in protecting consumers and to support a level playing field for America’s farm-raised fish producers by supporting this measure.

TRIBUTE TO THE LATE JUDGE STANLEY MOSK

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from California (Mr. Waxman) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. WAXMAN. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to join my California congressional colleagues in honoring the memory of Justice Stanley Mosk and the great legacy he left the people of California and our Nation.

Justice Mosk was in public service for sixty years. He was a trial judge on the Superior Court of Los Angeles. He served as the Attorney General for the State of California. He was the longest serving member in California State’s Supreme Court 151-year history. He served on the court for 37 years under five chief justices until his death on June 19, 2001 at the age of 88.

My colleagues who have preceded me have spoken very eloquently about Judge Mosk’s contributions to our Nation. I want to take a moment to speak of Judge Mosk’s personal influence on me as a Jewish American. Today, we take for granted that individuals of different racial and ethnic ancestry serve in public office. Last year, when Senator Joe Lieberman ran on the national ticket for vice president, he was the first Jewish American to do so, but his religious and ethnic background did not cause a strong reaction in most Americans. He was judged as an individual on his abilities, his political beliefs, and his record.

In the late 1930’s, Stanley Mosk was the first Jewish American to run for statewide office in California, and his candidacy caused some concern and trepidation in the Jewish community. American Jews were very active in politics, and they made great public service contributions, but there was enormous hesitancy in running for public office and assuming such a visible a position. Today, those of us who are Jewish and from California feel an enormous amount of pride in Justice Mosk because he was one of the premier constitutional lawyers in our Nation and he met the highest standards for public officials.

As a trailblazer in the Jewish community, Stanley Mosk never forgot that he helped pave the way for Jews and other minority Americans who faced professional and social hurdles. He was an unflagging champion of civil rights and individual liberties. He was also a shining inspiration to all of us who followed. When I ran for a seat in the House of Representatives more than twenty-five years ago, I was the first Jewish American from Southern California to be elected to Congress, and the first in the State in forty years. It is tribute to our Nation that Jewish Americans today represent not only districts with large Jewish populations, but those with small Jewish constituencies as well.

Stanley Mosk was mentor to a whole generation of Jewish activists. He will be affectionately remembered and sorely missed.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair would remind Members not to refer to individual Senators.

AMERICA’S ENERGY POLICY

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under the Speaker’s announced policy of January 3, 2001, the gentleman from Oregon (Mr. DeFazio) is recognized for 60 minutes as the designee of the minority leader.

Mr. DEFAZIO. Mr. Speaker, this evening I rise, hopefully to be joined by others, to discuss the energy situation in the United States of America. It was James Watt, when President Bush unveiled the national energy policy, so-
