From his experiences, he cautions future presidential abuse of power and the dangers of over-reliance on staff. At the outset of President Bill Clinton's first term, there was criticism of his staff and operation of the White House. Mr. Ford then expressed sympathy for a president undergoing periods of anxiety and disarray, even turmoil. He notes that he, too, had problems with staff mismanagement. Today, he is still concerned about the image of the presidency, and still concerned that a solution has not been found for the White House's staff-people who are not instructed, from the outset, that they work for the president and for the people—and not the other way around.

He maintains that staff assistants are not elected by the people, and that the president himself needs to determine how much trust to invest in his aides. “Otherwise,” he emphasizes, “the ramifications and the consequences of their arrogance and abuse of power are patently dangerous.”

Mr. Ford concurs with one of President Lyndon B. Johnson’s press secretaries, George Roettig, who wrote in his book, “The Twilight of the Presidency”: “Presidents should not hire any assistants under 40 years old who had not suffered any major disappointments in life. When young amateurs find themselves in the West Wing or East Wing of the White House, they begin to think they are little tin gods . . .”

In his autobiography, "A Time to Heal," Mr. Ford wrote: “Reedy had left the White House staff several years before, but he was predicting the climate that had led to ‘Watergate’ and cultivating it.”

Born in 1913 in Omaha, Nebraska, to Dorothy Gardner and Leslie Lynch King Jr., Gerald Ford was christened Leslie L. King Jr. His parents divorced when he was two years old. He moved with his mother to Grand Rapids, Mich., where she married Gerald Rudolph Ford, who later adopted the child. He gave his name, Gerald Rudolph Ford Jr. If he were able to relive his 88 years, what would he do differently?

“I would make no significant changes,” he says. “I’ve been lucky, both in my personal life and professionally. Along the way I tried to improve myself by learning something new in whatever I did. I learned I was created with more than my share of miracles . . . I’ve witnessed the defeat of Nazi tyranny and the destruction of hateful walls that once divided free men from those enslaved . . . And it was a grand adventure and I have been blessed every step by a loving wife and supportive family.”

He sees he will never forget one of the family’s worst days in the White House . . . six weeks after they moved in, “Betty received a diagnosis of breast cancer,” he recalls. “But her courage in going public with her condition . . . and her candor about her mastectomy increased awareness of the need of examination for early detection, saving countless women’s lives.”

Six years later (1980), former President and Mrs. Ford dedicated The Betty Ford Diagnostic and Treatment Center at the White House. In Washington, D.C. (part of Columbia Hospital for Women). The Center’s former director, Dr. Katherine Alley, a renowned breast cancer surgeon, wrote in her autobiography, “As one of his first women of note to go public with her cancer diagnosis and treatment, Betty Ford helped women to face the disease more openly and with less fear.”

Turning to his philosophy of life, Mr. Ford says: “I’ve always been an optimist and still am. Yes, I suffered a few disappointments and differences, but I tried to forget about those and keep a positive attitude. When I was in sports and lost a game by error, or in the political arena, when I lost by a narrow margin, no groaning would do any good. So I don’t dwell on the past. I learned to move on and look ahead.”

Much as he had yearned to be elected president, in his own right in 1976, Gerald Ford is confident that history will record that he “healed America at a very difficult time.” He believes that his presidential leadership for 27 months and 98 days, four years, 11 months, and 14 days, through that period of turmoil, making it possible to move from despair to a renewed national unity of purpose and progress.

“I also re-established a working relationship between the White House and Congress, one that had been ruptured,” he concludes. “All that made an important difference. I consider that to be my greatest accomplishment as president, and I hope historians will record that as my legacy.”

LOCAL LAW ENFORCEMENT ACT OF 2001

Mr. SMITH of Oregon. Madam President, I rise today to speak about hate crimes legislation I introduced with Senator KENNEDY in March of this year. The Local Law Enforcement Act of 2001 would add new categories to current hate crimes legislation sending a signal that violence of any kind is unacceptable in our society.

I would like to cite a terrible crime that occurred November 3, 1991 in Houston, TX. Phillip W. Smith was shot to death outside a gay bar in Montrose. Johnny Bryant Darrington III, 20, was charged with murder and aggravated robbery. He told police he hated homosexuals.

I believe that government’s first duty is to defend its citizens, to defend them against the harms that come out of hate. The Local Law Enforcement Enhancement Act of 2001 is now a symbol that can become substance. I believe that by passing this legislation, we can change hearts and minds as well.

TRIBUTE TO JAMES A. TURNER

Mr. SHELBY. Madam President, I rise today to pay tribute to a dear friend, James A. Turner of Tuscaloosa, Alabama. Jim Turner was a man of great courage, intelligence and character. We were friends for more than 40 years. I believe America has lost a great patriot with the recent death of James A. Turner.

Born in 1925, Jim grew up on a farm just outside of Tuscaloosa, Alabama. As World War II began, Jim left high school to serve his country. He enlisted in the Marine Corps and served with honor. Indeed, he earned and received the Purple Heart in 1945 on Iwo Jima when a machine gun blinded him during the battle.

Jim returned to Alabama and in spite of his blindness earned his undergraduate degree in 1949. He received his juris doctorate from the University of Alabama in 1952. Jim always credited his wife and classmate, Louise, for his success in school. Louise read Jim’s textbooks to him so he could keep up with his studies.

Following graduation, Louise joined Jim at their law firm, Turner and Turner. Today, their son, Don, and their grandson, Brian, also work at Turner and Turner. The family law firm has spanned five decades and continues to thrive in Tuscaloosa.

Together, Jim and Louise raised three wonderful sons, Don, Rick and Glenn, who have brought them great joy in life. Their grandchildren, Brian, Lindsay and Brittany; and great-granddaughter Farris, are sources of considerable pride.

Jim was active in his community. He was an active member of the Tuscaloosa Bar Association and also served as President of the Tuscaloosa Bar Association. His family worshiped at United Methodist Church in Alberta.

We have in recent years heard reference to ‘’the Greatest Generation.’’ Many of us have friends and relatives who have served our country and earned the right to wear that mantle. However, I know of few men who lived every day of their lives with the valor, courage, and love of country with which Jim Turner lived his entire life.

Our country has lost a good man and great lawyer, a devoted husband and father, a proud Marine and a loyal American. Words cannot express the respect I have for Jim Turner, nor can they express the sorrow my family and our community feels since this loss.

TRIBUTE TO MORTIMER CAPLIN

Mr. WARNER. Madam President, I rise today to honor a man whose lifetime record of achievement and service is the embodiment of the best of America. My friend, Mortimer Caplin, has
