(8) It is important to invest in the youth of the United States and Poland in order to help ensure long-lasting ties between both societies.

(9) It is in the interest of the United States to preserve a United States presence in Europe and to continue to contribute to the development of transatlantic relationships.

(10) Poland for many years received international and United States financial assistance and is now determined to invest its own resources toward attaining its shared desire with the United States to develop international cooperation.

SEC. 3. UNITED STATES-POLAND PARLIAMENTARY YOUTH EXCHANGE PROGRAM.

(a) AUTHORITY.—The Secretary of State, in cooperation with the Government of Poland, may establish and carry out a parliamentary exchange program for youth of the United States and Poland.

(b) DESIGNATION.—The youth exchange program carried out under this subsection shall be known as the “United States-Poland Parliamentary Youth Exchange Program”.

(c) PURPOSE.—The purpose of the youth exchange program is to demonstrate to the youth of the United States and Poland the benefits of friendly cooperation between the United States and Poland based on common political and cultural values.

(d) ELIGIBLE PARTICIPANTS.—An individual is eligible for participation in the youth exchange program if the individual—

(1) is a citizen or national of the United States or of Poland;

(2) is under the age of 19 years;

(3) is a student who is enrolled and in good standing at a secondary school in the United States or Poland;

(4) has been accepted for up to one academic year of study in a program of study abroad approved for credit at such school; and

(5) meets any other qualifications that the Secretary of State may establish for purposes of the program.

(e) PROGRAM ELEMENTS.—Under the youth exchange program, eligible participants selected for participation in the program shall—

(1) live in and attend a public secondary school in the host country for a period of one academic year;

(2) while attending public school in the host country, undertake academic studies in the host country, with particular emphasis on the history, constitution, and political development of the host country;

(3) be eligible, either during or after the completion of such academic studies, for an internship in an appropriate position in the host country; and

(4) engage in such other activities as the President considers appropriate to achieve the purpose of the program.

SEC. 4. ANNUAL REPORT TO CONGRESS.

The Secretary of State shall submit to the Committee on Foreign Relations of the Senate and the Committee on International Relations of the House of Representatives an annual report on the United States-Poland Parliamentary Youth Exchange Program established under this Act. Each annual report shall include—

(1) information on the implementation of the Program during the preceding year;

(2) the number of participants in the Program during such year;

(3) the names and locations of the secondary schools in the United States and Poland attended by such participants;

(4) a description of the areas of study of such participants during their participation in the Program;

(5) a description of any internships taken by such participants during their participation in the Program; and

(6) a description of any other activities such participants carried out during their participation in the Program.

SEC. 5. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—There is authorized to be appropriated for the Department of State for fiscal year 2007 such sums as may be necessary to carry out the youth exchange program authorized by this Act.

(b) AVAILABILITY.—Amounts authorized to be appropriated by subsection (a) shall remain available until expended.

UNITED STATES AMBASSADOR FOR ASEAN AFFAIRS

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to immediate consideration of S. 2697.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The clerk will report the bill by title. The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 2697) to establish the position of the United States Ambassador for ASEAN.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill which had been reported from the Committee on Foreign Relations, with amendments, as follows:

S. 2697

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the “United States Ambassador for ASEAN Affairs Act”.

SEC. 2. FINDINGS.

Congress makes the following findings:

(1) The Association of Southeast Asian Nations (referred to in this Act as “ASEAN”) was established in 1967, with an initial membership of Indonesia, Malaysia, the Philippines, Singapore, and Thailand.

(2) ASEAN is committed to accelerating economic growth, social progress, cultural development and regional peace and stability.

(3) The membership of ASEAN has expanded to 10 countries since its establishment in 1967.

(4) The United States seeks to maintain and further develop a constructive and cordial relationship with ASEAN.

(5) The countries comprising ASEAN—

(A) constitute the 3rd largest export market for United States products;

(B) have received nearly $90,000,000,000 in direct investment from United States sources; and

(C) are developing an integrated free trade area.

(6) Trade between the United States and the countries comprising ASEAN totals approximately $130,000,000,000.

(7) ASEAN continues to contribute to regional stability in East Asia and has partnered with the United States to combat global terror.

(8) In 2006, approximately 38,000 students from the countries comprising ASEAN were studying in the United States.

(9) The countries comprising ASEAN share a common concern with the United States regarding—

(A) the spread of avian influenza and other diseases; and

(B) environmental issues, such as the preservation of biodiversity and the prevention of illegal logging.

(10) It is in the long-term interest of the United States to maintain and expand a relationship with ASEAN.

(11) The United States does not have an Ambassador to ASEAN, which limits the ability of the United States and ASEAN to respond quickly and appropriately to events of mutual interest.

SEC. 3. UNITED STATES AMBASSADOR FOR ASEAN.

(a) APPOINTMENT.—There is established in the Department of State the position of United States Ambassador for ASEAN Affairs, who shall be appointed by the President, subject to the advice and consent of the Senate.

(b) SENSE OF CONGRESS.—It is the sense of Congress that a Deputy Assistant Secretary of State for East Asia and the Pacific should be designated as the Ambassador for ASEAN Affairs.

Amend the title so as to read: “To establish the position of the United States Ambassador for ASEAN Affairs.”.

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the committee-reported amendments be agreed to, the bill, as amended, be read the third time and passed, the title amendment be agreed to, the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table, and any statements be printed in the RECORD.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The committee amendments were agreed to.

The bill (S. 2697), as amended, was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, was read the third time, and passed.

S. 2697

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

SEC. 3. UNITED STATES AMBASSADOR FOR ASEAN.

(a) APPOINTMENT.—There is established in the Department of State the position of United States Ambassador for ASEAN Affairs, who shall be appointed by the President, subject to the advice and consent of the Senate.

(b) SENSE OF CONGRESS.—It is the sense of Congress that a Deputy Assistant Secretary of State for East Asia and the Pacific should be designated as the Ambassador for ASEAN Affairs.

NAVAL VESSELS TRANSFER ACT OF 2006

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the immediate consideration of Calendar No. 564, S. 3722.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The clerk will report the bill by title.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 3722) to authorize the transfer of naval vessels to certain foreign recipients.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill.

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the bill be read the third time and passed, the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table, and any statements be printed in the RECORD.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The bill (S. 3722) was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, was read the third time, and passed, as follows:
S. 3722

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Naval Vessels Transfer Act of 2006".

SEC. 2. TRANSFERS BY GRANT.

The President is authorized to transfer vessels to foreign recipients on a grant basis under section 516 of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 (22 U.S.C. 2321j), as follows:

(1) LITHUANIA.—To the Government of Lithuania, the OSPREY class minehunter coastal ships KINGFISHER (MHC-56) and CORMORANT (MHC-57).

(2) PORTUGAL.—To the Government of Portugal, the OLIVER HAZARD PERRY class guided missile frigates GEORGE PHILIP (FFG-12) and SIDES (FFG-14).

(3) TURKEY.—To the Government of Turkey, the OSPREY class minehunter coastal ship BLACK HAWK (MHC-58).

SEC. 3. TRANSFERS BY SALE.

The President is authorized to transfer vessels to foreign recipients on a sale basis under section 21 of the Arms Export Control Act (22 U.S.C. 2761), as follows:

(1) TAIWAN.—To the authorities in Taiwan, the OSPREY class minehunter transport ships ORIOLE (MHC-55) and FALCON (MHC-59).

(2) TURKEY.—To the Government of Turkey, the OSPREY class minehunter coastal ship SHRIKE (MHC-62).

(3) MEXICO.—To the Government of Mexico, the AUSTIN class amphibious transport dock ships OGDEN (LPD-5) and CLEVELAND (LPD-7).

SEC. 4. GRANTS NOT COUNTED IN ANNUAL TOTAL OF TRANSFERRED EXCESS DEFENSE ARTICLES.

The value of a vessel transferred to another country on a grant basis pursuant to authority provided by section 2 shall not be counted against the aggregate value of excess defense articles transferred to countries in any fiscal year under section 516 of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961.

SEC. 5. COSTS OF CERTAIN TRANSFERS.

Notwithstanding section 516(e)(1) of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 (22 U.S.C. 2321j(e)(1)), any expense incurred by the United States in connection with a transfer authorized under section 2 shall be charged to the recipient.

SEC. 6. REPAIR AND REFURBISHMENT IN UNITED STATES SHIPYARDS.

To the maximum extent practicable, the President shall require, as a condition of the transfer of a vessel under this section, that the country to which the vessel is transferred have such repair or refurbishment of the vessel as is needed before the vessel joins the naval forces of that country performed at a shipyard located in the United States, including a United States Navy shipyard.

SEC. 7. APPROVAL OF TRANSFER OF NAVAL VESSELS TO FOREIGN NATIONS BY VESSEL CLASS.

Section 7307(a) of title 10, United States Code, is amended by inserting "or vessels of that class" after "that vessel".

SEC. 8. EXPIRATION OF AUTHORITY.

The authority to transfer a vessel under this Act shall expire at the end of the 2-year period beginning on the date of the enactment of this Act.

STOLEN VALOR ACT OF 2005

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Judiciary Committee be discharged from further consideration of S. 1998 and that the Senate then proceed to its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered. The clerk will please report the bill by title.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 1998) to amend title 18, United States Code, to enhance protections relating to the reputation and meaning of the Medal of Honor and other military decorations and awards, and for other purposes.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill.

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the bill be read a third time, passed, and the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table; that any statements relating thereto be printed in the RECORD, without intervening action or debate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The bill (S. 1998) was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, was read the third time, and passed, as follows:
S. 1998

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Stolen Valor Act of 2005".

SEC. 2. FINDINGS.

Congress makes the following findings:

(1) Fraudulent claims surrounding the receipt of the Medal of Honor, the distinguished-service cross, the Navy cross, the Air Force cross, the Purple Heart, and other decorations and medals awarded by the President or the Armed Forces of the United States damage the reputation and meaning of such decorations and medals.

(2) Federal law enforcement officers have limited ability to prosecute fraudulent claims of receipt of military decorations and medals.

(3) Legislative action is necessary to permit law enforcement officers to protect the reputation and meaning of military decorations and medals.

SEC. 3. ENHANCED PROTECTION OF MEANING OF MILITARY DECORATIONS AND MEDALS.

(a) EXPANSION OF GENERAL CRIMINAL OFFENSE.—Subsection (a) of section 704 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by striking "manufactures, or sells" and inserting "purchases, attempts to purchase, solicits for purchase, mails, ships, imports, exports, produces blank certificates of receipt for, manufactures, sells, attempts to sell, advertises for sale, trades, barter, or exchanges for anything of value".

(b) ESTABLISHMENT OF CRIMINAL OFFENSE RELATING TO FALSE CLAIMS ABOUT RECEIPT OF DECORATIONS AND MEDALS.—Such section 704 is further amended—

(1) by redesignating subsection (b) as subsection (c);

(2) by inserting after subsection (a) the following:

"(b) FALSE CLAIMS ABOUT RECEIPT OF MILITARY DECORATIONS OR MEDALS.—Whoever falsely represents himself or herself, verbally or in writing, to have been awarded any decoration or medal authorized by Congress for the Armed Forces of the United States, any of the service medals or badges awarded to the members of such forces, the ribbon, button, or rosette of any such badge, decoration, or medal, or any colorable imitation of such item shall be fined under this title, imprisoned not more than six months, or both.";

(3) in paragraph (1) of subsection (c), as redesignated by paragraph (1) of this subsection, by inserting "or (b)" after "subsection (a)".

(c) ENHANCED PENALTY FOR OFFENSES INVOLVING CERTAIN OTHER MEDALS.—Such section 704 is further amended by adding at the end the following:

"(d) ENHANCED PENALTY FOR OFFENSES INVOLVING CERTAIN OTHER MEDALS.—If a decoration or medal involved in an offense described in subsection (a) or (b) is a distinguished-service cross awarded under section 3742 of title 10, a Navy cross awarded under section 6242 of title 10, an Air Force cross awarded under section 8742 of section 10, a silver star awarded under section 3746, 6244, or 8746 of title 10, a Purple Heart awarded under section 1129 of title 10, or any replacement or duplicate medal for such medal as authorized by law, in lieu of the punishment provided in the applicable subsection, the offender shall be fined under this title, imprisoned not more than 1 year, or both."

(d) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—Subsection (c) of such section 704, as so redesignated, is further amended—

(1) by inserting "ENHANCED PENALTY FOR OFFENSES INVOLVING" before "CONGRESSIONAL MEDAL OF HONOR"; and

(2) by striking paragraph (2) and inserting the following:

"(2) CONGRESSIONAL MEDAL OF HONOR DEFINED.—In this subsection, the term 'Congressional Medal of Honor' means—
"(A) a medal of honor awarded under section 3741, 6241, or 8741 of title 10 or section 491 of title 14;

"(B) a duplicate medal of honor issued under section 3754, 6256, or 8754 of title 10 or section 504 of title 14; or

"(C) a replacement of a medal of honor provided under section 3747, 6253, or 8747 of title 10 or section 501 of title 14."

MEASURES READ THE FIRST TIME—S. 3873, S. 3874, S. 3875, S. 3876, S. 3877

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, I understand there are five bills at the desk, and I ask for their first reading en bloc.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will please report the titles of the bills en bloc.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 3873) to protect private property rights.

A bill (S. 3874) to provide in statute for the conduct of electronic surveillance of suspected terrorists for the purposes of protecting the American people, the Nation, and its interests from terrorist attack while ensuring that the civil liberties of United States citizens are safeguarded, and for other purposes.

A bill (S. 3875) to provide real national security, restore United States leadership, and implement tough and smart policies to win the war on terror, and for other purposes.

A bill (S. 3876) entitled the "National Security Surveillance Act."

A bill (S. 3877) entitled the "Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Improvement and Enhancement Act of 2006."

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, I now ask for a second reading, and in order to place the bills on the calendar under the provisions of rule XIV, I object to my own request, all en bloc.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is heard. The bills will be read for the second time on the next legislative day.

ORDERS FOR FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 8, 2006

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that when the Senate completes its business today, it stand in adjournment until 9:30 a.m. on Friday, September 8. I further ask consent that following the prayer and pledge, the morning hour be deemed expired, the Journal of proceedings be approved to date, the time for the two leaders be reserved, and the Senate resume consideration of H.R. 4954, the port security bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

PROGRAM

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, tomorrow we will continue to work on the port security bill, which we began tonight. As I announced earlier in the evening, there will not be any rollcall votes tomorrow or on Monday. That being said, the managers will be here and we do hope to move forward with this bill and have amendments offered. Opening statements on the port security bill have begun tonight and will continue in the morning and over the course of the morning and maybe afternoon. I do encourage Senators with amendments to this bill to begin working with the managers in order to get these amendments in the queue.

Today, a very important bill was passed 98 to 0, the Department of Defense appropriations bill. As we have done on the floor previously, I thank the chairman and ranking member, Senator STEVENS and Senator INOUE, for their perseverance in passing this critical spending bill, a bill we completed today but we began prior to the August recess.

We, earlier today, recognized Senator DOMENICI for passing a very significant milestone with 13,000 votes. As we reviewed the records, there have been only seven other Senators who have met that milestone. He is No. 8. As we said, there are four other Senators currently serving who have met that milestone, so we have a lot of competition here in the U.S. Senate.

As I said earlier, and as was spoken in the tributes to him, he has been a steadfast leader, a bold leader here in the U.S. Senate, somebody who—I did not say earlier today—has offered me counsel from day one over the last 12 years since I have been in the U.S. Senate, counsel that I respect. And I have tremendous admiration for him.

Several of my colleagues did mention Nancy, his wife. She has been right at his side throughout each of his endeavors and, as he has told me so many times, does provide the anchor for everything he accomplishes. They are a great couple, a great pair, and are great friends to Karyn and myself.

ADJOURNMENT UNTIL 9:30 A.M. TOMORROW

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, if there is no further business to come before the Senate, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate stand in adjournment under the previous order.

There being no objection, the Senate, at 7:59 p.m., adjourned until Friday, September 8, 2006, at 9:30 a.m.

EXTENSIONS OF REMARKS

CELEBRATING MRS. ANNA WALLACE'S 100TH BIRTHDAY

HON. BRIAN HIGGINS

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 7, 2006

Mr. HIGGINS. Mr. Speaker, today I would like to recognize Mrs. Anna Wallace who will celebrate her 100th birthday on September 12, 2006. Mrs. Wallace is a lifelong resident of South Buffalo and lives in an apartment at 36 Columbus Avenue and her grandson lives upstairs. Anna is the daughter of Cecelia and Daniel Hurley, and was raised in the family home on Woodside Avenue with two siblings, Cecelia Duggan and Daniel Hurley.

On June 9, 1926, Anna was married to Francis Wallace by the revered Reverend John Nash in Holy Family Roman Catholic Church on South Park Avenue. She and Francis were married for 71 years until he passed away in 1997.

The Wallaces were always a very social couple and remained active well into their eighties. To this day, Anna is a member of the Catholic Daughters at Holy Family Church. She and her husband were instrumental in starting the second chapter of the Muscular Dystrophy Society in the nation and they were involved in raising money for the Muscular Dystrophy Society, the disease that afflicted their son, Paul. For many years Anna was a school aide in the City of Buffalo working with handicapped children.

Anna and Francis had four children, Mary Katherine Jordan (deceased), Janet Ann (deceased), Frances Carol Konter, and Paul Francis (deceased). She will be celebrating this momentous occasion with her daughter, 10 grandchildren, 27 great grandchildren and 8 great great grandchildren.

Mr. Speaker, thank you for allowing me to pay tribute to Mrs. Anna Wallace, a strong and inspirational woman. I am pleased to extend my best wishes to Mrs. Wallace upon this very special birthday and further wish her health and happiness in the years to come. I ask my colleagues to join me in wishing Mrs. Wallace a very happy 100th birthday.

HONORING THE NOVATO YOUTH CENTER

HON. LYNN C. WOOLSEY

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 7, 2006

Ms. WOOLSEY. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor the Novato Youth Center, which is commemorating 30 years of community service to the children, youth and families of Novato, California.

In response to the need for a safe and nurturing environment for children, parents and community leaders launched an energetic grassroots effort to establish the Novato Youth Center in 1976. Now, 30 years later, the Youth Center provides a safe and caring home away from home while responding to ever changing community needs. Serving children, infants through 18 years, the Youth Center offers childcare and recreational activities, as well as teen pregnancy prevention programs, tutoring, family counseling, and Parent Project workshops. Youth serve in many positions, and are involved as program volunteers, sports coaches, event planners, and as full voting members on the board of directors.

Through advocacy and outreach, Novato Youth Center's mission is to increase the community's investment in its youth, and to nurture and encourage youth to realize their potential for growth and personal development. The founding parents and Board Members were an ideal match for this mission. Honorary Board Members include: Robert Busher, Tommie Whitener, Steve Rempe, Peter E. Haas, Jr., David Kenyon, Dennis DeSousa, Alan Dunham, Ed Lathrop, Vicki McDill, Dave Milano, and Paul Scheller.

Over the years Novato Youth Center grew steadily, developing successful collaborations with Novato Unified School District, the City of Novato, the County of Marin, Novato Community Hospital, and other local youth service and childcare providers. Providing strong community leadership, the Youth Center played a key role in starting the Novato Youth Wellness Collaborative, also serving as its fiscal agent. As a result, the Novato Wellness Center will open soon, offering health education, teen pregnancy counseling, substance abuse prevention, mental health services, and a health clinic devoted to teens.

Collaborative and inclusive in philosophy, the Youth Center is committed to serving youth across ethnicities, economic levels, age groups, social and educational levels. To that end, the Youth Center champions respect and diversity, recruiting and hiring bicultural and bilingual staff to ensure the full spectrum of needs and interests of all communities are met.

Mr. Speaker, Novato Youth Center provides an invaluable role in preparing our youth for the challenges of the future as well as instilling the values of community involvement and education. I am proud to honor the Novato Youth Center on this memorable occasion.

IN HONOR OF MR. EUTIQUIO CHAPA

HON. SAM FARR

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 7, 2006

Mr. FARR. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor Mr. Eutiquio Chapa upon his receipt of the National Hispanic Heritage Youth Award in the category of Education. This prestigious award is given each year to Latino high school graduates who have excelled in academic achievement, community service, and writing. The Hispanic Heritage Foundation, a Washington-based non-profit organization which commemorates ethnic dignity and education, specifically tasks each applicant to express the influence of their heritage on their personal success. Looking at Mr. Chapa's accomplishments and goals, it is evident why he was chosen.

Mr. Chapa was a top student at Palma High School, where he graduated with a 4.4 GPA and was named a National Hispanic Scholar. Furthermore, Mr. Chapa was chosen for a special summer program at M.I.T. in 2005. All of this success was in the face of criticism he endured from his own peer group for changing schools midway through high school. Eutiquio Chapa has been accepted to Stanford University for the fall and will no doubt have much success there.

A second-generation Mexican-American from King City, CA, Eutiquio Chapa is interested in furthering his knowledge of the human brain. He plans to develop manners of instruction in order to improve the education process for low-income elementary grade level students learning English as a second language. He is obviously determined to equip others with educational possibilities.

Mr. Speaker, my heartfelt congratulations go to Eutiquio Chapa. It is a true pleasure to have him as a member of my constituency.

HISPANIC HERITAGE FOUNDATION HONORING DR. JULIET GARCIA

HON. SOLOMON P. ORTIZ

OF TEXAS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 7, 2006

Mr. ORTIZ. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize a patriotic American honored this month by the—Hispanic Heritage Foundation—Dr. Juliet Garcia of Brownsville, Texas.

Dr. Garcia has been a groundbreaker for higher education, becoming the first Mexican American woman in the nation to ascend to the presidency of a university, the University of Texas at Brownsville (UTB).

She has provided improved higher education opportunities for the people in the Lower Rio Grande Valley of South Texas.

She has led UTB through a phenomenal period of growth and success. The campus has grown from 49 acres to 382 acres, enrollment has increased by 27 percent, and student performance has improved dramatically.

The Hispanic Heritage Foundation promotes and celebrates Hispanic culture, education, and accomplishment through year-round national and regional inspirational leadership programs by sponsoring a number of educational and cultural programs, including the Hispanic Heritage Awards, Youth Awards, and the LOFT (Latinos on Fast Track) Initiative.

The Hispanic Heritage Awards and Ceremony began as a small White House ceremony in 1987 honoring the creation of Hispanic Heritage Month, September 15 thru October 15. The award is a prestigious honor for Dr. Garcia and is a culmination of the Foundation's year-round efforts.

In an evening filled with cultural pride and celebration, the Foundation and the audience honor notable Hispanics who have distinguished themselves as role models in the Hispanic community while making a positive impact in our country.

This year marks the 20th anniversary of the Hispanic Heritage Awards and the theme of the 2006 ceremony will be "Looking Back, Moving Forward," representing the Hispanic community as part of the history of this Nation and our presence in the Nation's future.

I ask the House of Representatives to join me today in commending our Texas pioneer, Dr. Garcia, for her recognition as an outstanding educator that inspires our community, increases individual excellence among young Hispanics, and raises the standard of excellence at UTB.

A GREAT POINT-OF-LIGHT FOR ALL AMERICANS: REGINALD WEAVER

HON. MAJOR R. OWENS

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 7, 2006

Mr. OWENS. Mr. Speaker, I rise to salute a dynamic trailblazer who continues to set a productive pace for positive change within the ranks of the Nation's education leaders. Reginald Weaver is a magnificent Great Point-of-Light. He is both profound and practical in his pursuit of school improvement across the Nation for all children. In addition to protecting the interests of the largest organization of teachers, he is a tireless spokesman for education policy-making and the need to increase expenditures for the basics which support opportunities to learn: improved and new school facilities; teacher training and compensation; adequate school libraries; science laboratories; computer instruction; and other necessities.

As a strong advocate for public education, Reginald Weaver was elected president of the 2.7 million-member National Education Association. He has traveled across the country as an ambassador for public education, stressing the association's mission to ensure that every child in America can attend a great public school right in his or her own neighborhood. In order to have great public schools, Mr. Weaver has outlined six areas that need to be addressed: parental involvement, high-quality school employees, high-quality classroom instruction, educators who give their best to every child, a high-quality teacher in every classroom, and fixing and funding the No Child Left Behind law. His NEA career started as a local president in Harvey, IL and eventually he became the president of the Illinois Education Association from 1981 to 1987; served on the NEA Executive Committee from 1989 to 1995 and as NEA vice president from 1996 to 2002. In addition, he serves on the executive board of the National Council for the Accreditation of Teacher Education and on the board of governors of the Joint Center for Political and Economic Studies. Among his many accomplishments, he was named to the Ebony 2004 100+ Most Influential Black Americans list and was featured in Who's Who, as well as in Who's Who in Black America.

For his continuing leadership on the frontlines in the crusade for excellence in education, we salute Reginald Weaver as a Great Point-of-Light for all Americans.

HONORING SESQUICENTENNIAL OF ATASCOSA COUNTY

HON. HENRY CUELLAR

OF TEXAS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 7, 2006

Mr. CUELLAR. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor the sesquicentennial of Atascosa County, which resides within the 28th District of Texas. This year marks the 150th anniversary of the founding of Atascosa County.

Atascosa County had its beginnings after the Texas Revolution, when several land grants were given out to notable Texans such as Jose Antonio Navarro that marked extensive colonization in the area in 1853. The first county seat, Navatasco, was established in 1857 on land donated by Navarro. Many of the new settlers were recent immigrants from Mexico, Germany, and England. The early years of the twentieth century brought many changes to Atascosa County. Several railroads were built that helped connect the towns of Leming, Pleasanton, McCoy, Charlotte, and Hindes. In 1910, the residents of Atascosa County voted to officially make Jourdanton the county seat.

Agriculture is a vital part of Atascosa County with a wide variety of agricultural products ranging from livestock to strawberries. In 2002, there were over 1,539 farms and ranches covering 669,890 acres, 52% of which were devoted to pasture, 33% to crops, and 12% to woodlands. In that year alone, local farmers and ranchers earned $51,808,000, with livestock sales accounting for $34,534,000 of that total. Oil and gas also continue to be a leading industry in the county, with over 1,236,387 barrels of oil produced in 1990. By the end of 2004, over 149,778,538 barrels of oil have been produced in Atascosa County. The largest communities in the county are Jourdanton, Pleasanton, Campbellton, Poteet, Lytle, Charlotte, Christine, Leming, McCoy, and Peggy. Some of the county's wonderful attractions include the famous Poteet Strawberry Festival, the Jourdanton Days Celebration, and the Cowboy Homecoming and Rodeo in Pleasanton. As we look back on the past 150 years with pride, we also look forward to a very promising future for Atascosa County.

Mr. Speaker, I am honored to have had this time to honor Atascosa County on their 150th anniversary, and I thank you for this time.

RECOGNIZING ARMY SPECIALIST
GARY PITTS OF INVERNESS, FLORIDA

HON. GINNY BROWN-WAITE

OF FLORIDA.

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 7, 2006

Ms. GINNY BROWN-WAITE of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I Rise today to honor Gary Pitts of Inverness, Florida, an Army Specialist who served in Iraq and is currently based at Fort Carson, Colorado.

Born in Inverness, Florida, Specialist Pitts graduated from Citrus High School in 1993. Following the events of September 11, he felt a strong need to do his part to fight the global war on terror and joined the Army at the age of 26. Completing basic training in May 2002 at Fort Knox, Kentucky, he went on to advanced training at Fort Bliss, Texas.

Deployed to Iraq in February 2003 for a 5-month tour as a Patriot missile operator, Specialist Pitts returned to Fort Bliss following the completion of his duties. Having completed his initial commitment, on April 6, 2004, Specialist Pitts re-enlisted for another 3 years. Once again deployed to Iraq in March 2005, he served for a year in the 3rd Armored Cavalry Regiment as a radar operator and a turret gunner. While serving in Iraq, Specialist Pitts' missions included convoy security and elections security during Iraq's first elections.

Specialist Pitts received the Combat Action Badge for engaging the enemy in action following an IED explosion next to his vehicle. Currently based at Fort Carson, Specialist Pitts has approximately 8 more months to complete his 6 years of enlistment.

In addition to his military service, Specialist Pitts has a natural talent for art and creativity, winning numerous blue ribbons for his pastel artwork. He is now married and living in Colorado Springs and enjoys his visits home to see his parents, Mike and Anne, and brothers, Steven and Mike. He also visits his sister Michele and niece Tiffany who live in Colorado.

Mr. Speaker, it is soldiers like Gary Pitts who volunteer to protect the freedoms that all Americans hold dear to their hearts. He is to be commended for his service to our Nation and for his commitment to his family and loved ones. This Congress will never forget his sacrifices in battle.

JIM WESTFALL—JOHNS FELLOWSHIP AWARDEE

HON. BOB FILNER

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 7, 2006

Mr. FILNER. Mr. Speaker, I stand here today to honor James M. Westfall as the Johns Fellowship Award Winner for 2006. After graduating from high school, "Jim" Westfall completed the San Diego Electrical Joint Apprenticeship 4-year program in 1973.

In 1976, he began working for the Bechtel Power Corp., at the San Onofre Nuclear Generating Station and advanced to General Foreman in the Electrical Department. In 1980, Jim was elected Business Representative for I.B.E.W. Local 569 and served for 7 years.

For the past 19 years, Jim has been employed with the San Diego Electrical Training Trust as Administrative Manager/Director of Training. During his tenure, Jim was instrumental in building the Apprenticeship from 300 students with 12 instructors to 13 full-time staff, 1250 students and 75 instructors.

During his 30-year career, Jim has served on the National Electrical Training Directors Association, California Apprenticeship Coordinators Association and the Apprenticeship Coordinators Association of San Diego. He has also been awarded the Electrical Industry Progress Award for Leadership and Exemplary Service and the Founder's Trophy for Extraordinary Leadership and Service to the Electrical Industry by the National Electrical Contractors Association, San Diego Chapter.

Jim is currently the Director of Training for San Diego Electrical Training and has been inducted into the California apprenticeship Hall of Fame on May 4, 2006.

James M. Westfall is very deserving of this award as he has been a driving force in the organized labor movement for the past 30 years.

CONGRATULATING MAGEE RIETER
AUTOMOTIVE SYSTEMS OF BLOOMSBURG, PENNSYLVANIA ON BEING NAMED SUPPLIER OF
THE YEAR TO GENERAL MOTORS
FOR THE 14TH CONSECUTIVE YEAR

HON. PAUL E. KANJORSKI

OF PENNSYLVANIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 7, 2006

Mr. KANJORSKI. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to ask you and my esteemed colleagues in the House of Representatives to pay tribute to Magee Rieter Automotive Systems of Bloomsburg, Pennsylvania, on the occasion of their being named worldwide "Supplier of the Year" to General Motors for the 14th consecutive year.

Of GM's 30,000 suppliers, Magee Rieter Automotive Systems is the only company in North America to achieve this remarkable record, a fact that should make its nearly 800 employees exceedingly proud.

Magee Rieter is the leading supplier of carpets to General Motors in America. The company has been in business in Bloomsburg since 1889 and has been supplying General Motors for more than 90 years, first with hand draped tapestries for Fisher Body carriages and, today, with fully molded carpet floors and integrated acoustical systems.

For more than a century, the company has endured and overcome numerous challenges including floods, fires and the rapidly changing business environment. After World War II, the company received the Army/Navy "E" award for excellence in recognition of its production of high quality materials for the war effort.

Magee Rieter records annual sales in excess of $175 million and has an annual payroll of more than $37 million that provides its employees with family sustaining incomes that average about $39,000 annually. Overall, Magee Rieter is responsible for a $168 million annual impact to the local economy.

The current employees of Magee Rieter are carrying on traditions of pride and success handed down by their parents, grandparents and great grandparents who worked at this remarkable company.

Mr. Speaker, please join me in congratulating Magee Rieter for demonstrating superior performance and for serving as a shining example for other businesses to emulate.

AIDS IN 2006—MOVING TOWARD ONE WORLD, ONE HOPE?

HON. JANICE D. SCHAKOWSKY

OF ILLINOIS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 7, 2006

Ms. SCHAKOWSKY. Mr. Speaker, the International AIDS Society meeting in Toronto last month focused the world's attention on ways to deal with the ongoing AIDS pandemic. Global health experts and advocates came together to discuss effective tactics and comprehensive strategies for improved prevention and therapies and, ultimately, a cure. I am particularly glad that the meeting highlighted the need for microbicides development, treatments that will allow vulnerable women to protect themselves and their families from infection.

As we consider the recommendations made in Toronto, I want to draw my colleagues' attention to a recent article, "AIDS in 2006—Moving toward One World, One Hope?," published in the August 17 edition of The New England Journal of Medicine. Written by Dr. Paul Farmer and Dr. Jim Yong Kim, leading medical experts with years of front-line experience through their work at Partners in Health, they offer us important lessons that will help translate the optimism expressed in Toronto into the reality of improved global health.

As they point out, an effective approach to the global AIDS epidemic (and to the global TB and malaria epidemics as well) will require strategies that address the global epidemic of poverty and the inequitable distribution of health care resources. Affordable drugs, viable public health systems, access to trained health care personnel, and the provision of nutrition and other "wrap-around" services that make the difference between life and death are all essential components for success. As Partners in Health has proven in Haiti and Rwanda, this comprehensive approach is not a pie-in-the-sky notion. It is completely achievable given a commitment to make and sustain the necessary investments.

The work of nongovernmental organizations like Partners in Health, the Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation and the Clinton Foundations HIV/AIDS Initiative has allowed us to make incredible strides, but they cannot solve these problems alone. As Dr. Farmer and Dr. Kim caution us, "Only the public sector, not nongovernmental organizations, can offer health care as a right." The U.S. government can and must take the lead in expanding our commitment to defeating the twin dangers of global pandemics and global poverty. By doing so, we will not only make the world healthier, we will make it safer.

[From the New England Journal of Medicine, Aug. 17, 2006]

AIDS IN 2006—MOVING TOWARD ONE WORLD, ONE HOPE?

(By Jim Yong Kim and Paul Farmer)

For the past two decades, AIDS experts—clinicians, epidemiologists, policymakers, activists, and scientists—have gathered every two years to confer about what is now the world's leading infectious cause of death among young adults. This year, the International AIDS Society is hosting the meeting in Toronto from August 13 through 18. The last time the conference was held in Canada, in 1996, its theme was "One World, One Hope." But it was evident to conferees from the poorer reaches of the world that the price tag of the era's great hope—combination antiretroviral therapy—rendered it out of their reach. Indeed, some African participants that year made a banner reading "One World, No Hope."

Today, the global picture is quite different. The claims that have been made for the efficacy of antiretroviral therapy have proved to be well founded: in the United States, such therapy has prolonged life by an estimated 13 years—a success rate that would compare favorably with that of almost any treatment for cancer or complications of coronary artery disease. In addition, a number of lessons, with implications for policy and action, have emerged from efforts that are well under way in the developing world. During the past decade, we have gleaned these lessons from our work in setting global AIDS policies at the World Health Organization in Geneva and in implementing integrated programs for AIDS prevention and care in places such as rural Haiti and Rwanda. As vastly different as these places may be, they are part of one world, and we believe that ambitious policy goals, adequate funding, and knowledge about implementation can move us toward the elusive goal of shared hope.

The first lesson is that charging for AIDS prevention and care will pose insurmountable problems for people living in poverty, since there will always be those unable to pay even modest amounts for services or medications, whether generic or branded. Like efforts to battle airborne tuberculosis, such services should be seen as a public good for public health. Policymakers and public health officials, especially in heavily burdened regions, should adopt universal-access plans and waive fees for HIV care. Initially, this approach will require sustained donor contributions, but many African countries have recently set targets for increased national investments in health, a pledge that could render ambitious programs sustainable in the long run.

As local investments increase, the price of AIDS care is decreasing. The development of generic medications means that antiretroviral therapy can now cost less than 50 cents per day, and costs continue to decrease to affordable levels for public health officials in developing countries. All antiretroviral medications—first-line, second-line, and third-line—must be made available at such prices. Manufacturers of generic drugs in China, India, and other developing countries stand ready to provide the full range of drugs. Whether through negotiated agreements or use of the full flexibilities of the Agreement on Trade-Related Aspects of Intellectual Property Rights, full access to all available antiretroviral drugs must quickly become the standard in all countries.

Second, the effective scale-up of pilot projects will require the strengthening and even rebuilding of health care systems, including those charged with delivering primary care. In the past, the lack of a health care infrastructure has been a barrier to antiretroviral therapy; we must now marshal AIDS resources, which are at last considerable, to rebuild public health systems in sub-Saharan Africa and other HIV-burdened regions. These efforts will not weaken efforts to address other problems—malaria and other diseases of poverty, maternal mortality, and insufficient vaccination coverage—if they are planned deliberately with the public sector in mind. Only the public sector, not nongovernmental organizations, can offer health care as a right.

Third, a lack of trained health care personnel, most notably doctors, is invoked as a reason for the failure to treat AIDS in poor countries. The lack is real, and the brain drain continues. But one reason doctors flee Africa is that they lack the tools of their trade. AIDS funding offers us a chance not only to recruit physicians and nurses to underserved regions, but also to train community health care workers to supervise care, for AIDS and many other diseases, within their home villages and neighborhoods. Such training should be undertaken even in places where physicians are abundant, since community-based, closely supervised care represents the highest standard of care for chronic disease, whether in the First World or the Third. And community health care workers must be compensated for their labor if these programs are to be sustainable.

Fourth, extreme poverty makes it difficult for many patients to comply with antiretroviral therapy. Indeed, poverty is far and away the greatest barrier to the scale-up of treatment and prevention programs. Our experience in Haiti and Rwanda has shown us that it is possible to remove many of the social and economic barriers to adherence but only with what are sometimes termed “wrap-around services”: food supplements for the hungry, help with transportation to clinics, child care, and housing. In many rural regions of Africa, hunger is the major coexisting condition in patients with AIDS or tuberculosis, and these consumptive diseases cannot be treated effectively without food supplementation. Coordination among initiatives such as the President's Emergency Plan for AIDS Relief, the Global Fund to Fight AIDS, Tuberculosis, and Malaria, and the World Food Program of the United Nations can help in the short term; fair-trade agreements and support of African farmers will help in the long run.

Fifth, investments in efforts to combat the global epidemics of AIDS and tuberculosis are much more generous than they were five years ago, but funding must be increased and sustained if we are to slow these increasingly complex epidemics. One of the most ominous recent developments is the advent of highly drug-resistant strains of both causative pathogens. “Extensively drug-resistant tuberculosis” has been reported in the United States, Eastern Europe, Asia, South Africa, and elsewhere; in each of these settings, the copresence of HIV has amplified local epidemics of these almost untreatable strains. Drug-resistant malaria is now common worldwide, extensively drug-resistant HIV disease will surely follow, and massive efforts to diagnose and treat these diseases ethically and effectively will be needed. We have already learned a great deal about how best to expand access to second-line antituberculous drugs while increasing control over their use; these lessons must be applied in the struggles against AIDS, malaria, and other infectious pathogens.

Finally, there is a need for a renewed basic-science commitment to vaccine development, more reliable diagnostics (the 100-year-old tests widely used to diagnose tuberculosis are neither specific nor sensitive), and new classes of therapeutics. The research-based pharmaceutical industry has a critical role to play in drug development, even if the overall goal is a segmented market, with higher prices in developed countries and generic production with affordable prices in developing countries.

There has been a heartening increase in basic-science investments for tuberculosis and malaria; funding for HIV research at the National Institutes of Health remains robust. Yet the fruits of such research will not arrive in time for those now living with, and dying from, AIDS and tuberculosis. New tools to prevent, diagnose, and treat the diseases of poverty will be added to the stockpile of other potentially lifesaving products that do not reach the poorest people, unless we develop an equity plan to provide them. Right now, our focus must be on improving access to the therapies that are available in high-income countries. The past few years have shown us that we can make these services available to millions, even in the poorest reaches of the world.

The unglamorous and difficult process of increasing access to prevention and care needs to be our primary focus if we are to move toward the lofty goal of equitably distributed medical services in a world riven by inequality. Without such goals, the slogan “One World, One Hope” will remain nothing more than a dream.

AMERICA'S OLDEST MAIL ORDER
CATALOGUE COMPANY CELEBRATES ITS 150TH ANNIVERSARY

HON. BERNARD SANDERS

OF VERMONT

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 7, 2006

Mr. SANDERS. Mr. Speaker, Charles F. Orvis founded the Orvis Company in 1856 to sell high quality fly-fishing equipment.

The Orvis Company has been doing exactly that—selling the best in fishing equipment throughout the entire world—ever since. The reel that Charles Orvis developed, a ventilated fly reel, is still the basis of most modern fly reels. In fact, the Orvis Company is the oldest fishing rod manufacturer in the world, selling rods made in Vermont all over the globe. And its catalogue business is older than that of Sears or L.L. Bean, for it has been in existence for over a 100 years. Currently its 26 annual catalogues—Orvis mails out over 50 million catalogues a year—help generate the company's remarkable sales of over $250 million annually.

Orvis has deep, deep roots in Vermont, but it has shown the flexibility to adapt to a growing international market. It has distributors in 25 countries, and sells widely in both England and Japan. Although Orvis has its headquarters in Manchester, Vermont, where its flagship store of 23,000 square feet is also located, Orvis has 30 retail stores across the United States and in England. Its network of dealers is truly global, with dealers in not only

North and South America, but Europe, Asia, Africa, and Australia.

But Orvis is not just about success in retailing. The company has a deep commitment to preserving the natural environment. Each year Orvis puts 5 percent of its pre-tax profits into conservation projects and, works to multiply its commitments—and the commitments of its customers—by matching donations from customers to its forest/wetland and biodiversity projects.

With 150 years of success behind them, we wish the owners and employees at Orvis many more years of success ahead, both in retailing and in working to conserve and preserve our precious natural heritage.

TRIBUTE TO JOHN BASILONE

HON. RODNEY P. FRELINGHUYSEN

OF NEW JERSEY

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 7, 2006

Mr. FRELINGHUYSEN. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to ask my colleagues to join with me in paying tribute to a man who dedicated his life to the United States Armed Forces. John Basilone, born in 1916, served in the United States Army from 1934 until 1937 and in the United States Marines from 1942 until his death in 1945. Each year, since 1981, the good citizens of the Borough of Raritan, Somerset County, a vibrant community I am proud to represent, sponsor a parade in memory of John Basilone. The 25th Annual John Basilone Parade will take place on Sunday, September 25, 2006.

John Basilone, native of Raritan, New Jersey, served an honorable career in defense of our country. For heroics performed on the invasion of Guadalcanal in August of 1942, Mr. Basilone was awarded The Congressional Medal of Honor. Without fear for his life, he unabashedly commanded his fellow troops and sought to bring the United States to victory.

After returning from duty in Guadalcanal, John went home to Raritan to be honored by his friends and family for his courage and bravery. However, it was not long before Basilone sought another mission on behalf of his country. The Marines granted his wish to be sent back overseas in December of 1943.

On February 19th of 1945 the Marines, including John, landed on the island of Iwo Jima. After giving the Marines a chance to wade ashore, the Japanese opened fire on defenseless United States soldiers. Brave men with leadership ability were needed to rally the troops. John Basilone rose to the occasion. Many survivors of the battle recall that in the midst of fighting there was one Marine out in the open, directing and rallying the men. It was John Basilone.

Mr. Basilone was hit with a mortar shell and died of his wounds shortly thereafter on the island of Iwo Jima. For his actions that day, John Basilone was awarded The Navy Cross. According to his official biography, John Basilone remains the only soldier, non-officer, in United States history to be awarded both The Congressional Medal of honor and The Navy Cross.

Mr. Speaker, I urge you and my colleagues to join me in congratulating the citizens of Raritan and the John Basilone Parade participants for celebrating the life of a fine man and true American hero.

RECOGNIZING CHRISTOPHER MARTELL OF LAKEWOOD, COLORADO

HON. GINNY BROWN-WAITE

OF FLORIDA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 7, 2006

Ms. GINNY BROWN-WAITE of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor Christopher Martell of Lakewood, Colorado, an Army 2nd Lieutenant currently serving in Iraq.

Lieutenant Martell served in the ROTC while at Gonzaga University, stating that his ROTC service was the most rewarding part of his entire college experience. Following his graduation with a bachelors degree in Communications, Lieutenant Martell reported to the Army's 82nd Airborne Division where he was assigned to military intelligence.

Lieutenant Martell has remarked that he has found a strong sense of patriotism and brotherhood in the Army. The history and camaraderie among his fellow soldiers is truly a sight to behold and has made his experience a rewarding one.

Coming from a proud family history of military service, Lieutenant Martell's grandmother, Florence McCann, served in the U.S. Navy WAVES, or Women Accepted for Volunteer Emergency Service, during World War II. Mrs. McCann currently resides in Inverness, Florida.

Mr. Speaker, it is soldiers like Christopher Martell who volunteered to protect the freedoms that all Americans hold dear to their hearts. While brave men and women like Christopher serve in the name of freedom and liberty, his family, friends and loved ones should know that this Congress will never forget his sacrifice and commitment.

IN MEMORY OF DR. STERLING SMITH

HON. MICHAEL C. BURGESS

OF TEXAS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 7, 2006

Mr. BURGESS. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to give tribute to Dr. Sterling Smith, of Denton, Texas, for his lifelong commitment and contributions to his community and to education.

A native of Denton, Texas, Dr. Smith received his undergraduate degree from the University of North Texas in 1963. He also received a Master of Secondary Education degree from the University of Arizona and a Ph.D. in Science and Mathematics Education from the University of Texas at Austin. A 40-year veteran of public education and an avid mountain-climber, Dr. Smith died August 21 as the result of a fall while descending South Macon Peak near Aspen, Colorado.

Dr. Smith began as a product of the Denton public school system and spent 30 of his 40 years as an educator teaching at the Texas Women's University in Denton. He worked closely for years with science teachers in North Texas and served for 2 years as president of the Denton High School Band Booster Club. He was active in the Boy Scouts for more than 40 years and volunteered as a teacher in the men's Sunday school class at First Baptist Church.

Most recently, Dr. Smith had been elected as the newest member of the Denton school board, his first elected office, and fellow members said he was already hard at work getting caught up on the complex issues associated with a modern public school system.

Dr. Smith was a lifelong champion of education and service to his community. I join in mourning the loss of Dr. Smith and extend my deepest sympathies to his friends and family. He will be deeply missed and his service and dedication will always be greatly appreciated.

APPOINTMENT OF ROGER GODELL AS COMMISSIONER OF THE NATIONAL FOOTBALL LEAGUE

HON. BRIAN HIGGINS

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 7, 2006

Mr. HIGGINS. Mr. Speaker, I would like to congratulate Roger Godell on his appointment as the new Commissioner of the National Football League (NFL). Godell's longtime dedication to the league and his genuine love for the game will assure him a long and successful tenure as league commissioner.

I was especially excited to see a Western New York native succeed Commissioner Tagliabue. As a lifelong Western New York resident and Representative from the 27th District of New York, I am pleased to know that as the new commissioner, Godell can relate to the small-market environment in his hometown region and to the great impact the presence of the Buffalo Bills has on our community.

The Buffalo Bills are one of the most respected franchises in the NFL, and our fans are extremely loyal. However, I am concerned that under the current collective bargaining agreement, the existence of the Bills in Buffalo may be in danger. The departure of the Bills would have a devastating impact in the area.

Without consideration of the unique economic situation concerning this storied franchise, and the great city that has enthusiastically supported the Bills for almost 50 years, the loss of this team to this city would, in effect, rip the heart and soul out of the NFL, and out of this great American city.

Provisions in the CBA that greatly affect Buffalo include stipulations regarding ticket sales falling below a certain level before revenue sharing participation kicks in. While the Bills have great community support, ticket prices are low because we are not a wealthy community; but under the stipulations, the Bills could sell-out all home games and still lose money and not be eligible for revenue sharing.

Additionally, including state and county monetary support in establishing franchise revenue would be extremely detrimental to the Bills and similar teams. For example, in Buffalo all game day stadium expenses are picked up by Erie County—the County reimburses the Bills for the cost of security, ticket takers, ushers, among other services—counting these contributions against the team could mean that the CBA is a de facto plan to annihilate small market franchises.

Finally, I am also highly concerned about the possibility that new team ownership would not be eligible for revenue sharing. The Bills have been lucky enough to remain under the stewardship of their owner, Ralph C. Wilson, but should Mr. Wilson pass, or should he ever decide to sell the team, a new owner would have no alternative but to look to move the team.

I appreciate the hard work of former Commissioner Tagliabue in helping resolve some of these issues by placing Mr. Wilson and other small-market owners on the Qualifier Committee responsible for final interpretation of these and other issues. With Godell's help, I am hopeful that the league can resolve the revenue sharing issue and help its small-market teams remain in their respective cities.

I wish Commissioner Godell the best of luck and success in his new position and I look forward to working with him in the future.

IN HONOR OF WILLIAM OSKAR GROGGINS

HON. LYNN C. WOOLSEY

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 7, 2006

Mr. WOOLSEY. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor William Oskar Goggins for the kindness and influence he showed the world during his 43 years here.

Billy was born at St. Mary's Hospital in San Francisco, CA on Sunday, May 10, 1963—on Mother's Day. He was the first child of Patrick and Ute Goggins, both very well-known and respected individuals in the Bay Area and beyond.

From the hospital he was carried right into a civil rights demonstration in Golden Gate Park. Billy took his first trip to Ireland at 4 years old to meet his family relatives in the west of Ireland in County Mayo. Annual family trips by car to Montana and Dakota included reunions in the Bear's Paw Mountains, hi-balling on the Iron Road, the old Great Northern Railway and running brave with Chippewa, Cree, Blackfoot and Sioux Indian friends. The Goggins' adventured on 2-month road trips to Baja and the Pacific Coast of Mexico where mother Ute painted, and sisters Cathy and Aimee followed in Bill's energetic footsteps. Billy toiled in family vineyards in Germany with equally embracing relatives. These things were the soul of his education.

Over the years Bill played soccer, drew cartoons, tutored younger students from Mill Valley and Marin City, played volleyball at Stinson Beach, surfed in Bolinas, and much much more. He graduated from Tamalpais High School as a National Merit Scholar and Salutatorian.

Summer jobs were at Bancroft-Whitney legal publishers, San Francisco and Wausau

Paper Mill, Wisconsin. He worked at numerous restaurants including the Book Depot Café; and Avenue Grill in Mill Valley, and Embarko in San Francisco. He also volunteered at St. Anthony Dining Room in the Tenderloin, providing free meals for the homeless.

Bill attended Georgetown University School of Foreign Service and San Francisco State University, Departments of Communication and Philosophy. He began his vital journalism career with Frisko Kids, KALW radio, and then moved on to the old SF Weekly.

Former SF Weekly editor and colleague Andrew O'Hehir remembers, "Of course he worked harder than anyone and became essential, and in 3 years moved from all-purpose intern to copy editor to running the Arts and Entertainment section. I can't remember exactly when he became the go-to guy for headline copy, but I'd say that by the time he'd been there a year, he was writing half the heads in the paper."

Bill thrived at Wired for 10 years. He started as a freelance copy editor and rose to become deputy editor. Bill served as a special link between the digital industry's pace-setting magazine in the center of San Francisco's media gulch and an eager, educated national and international readership. His colleagues admired him tremendously.

"Bill was that rarest of things: a true original," says Chris Anderson, the magazine's editor in chief. "He was brilliant, witty and culturally omnivorous, all of which combined in his signature headlines. They usually worked on at least three levels of meaning, from some remixed cultural reference to at least one pun. In many ways his winking style and clever turns of phrase became Wired house style for nearly a decade, and to look at our covers and headlines over those years is to hear Bill's voice again."

Bill's voice also made its mark through the alternative dot-com generation's website Suck.com where he wrote under the name 'Bartelby'. Bill recently enjoyed writing and editing with the new magazine Todo, and they remember him not just as a logophile, a wordsmith, a gifted editor, a true friend; but also as "one who tirelessly pursues perfection, fraternity and goodness."

A real linguist (German, Spanish and Bill-English) and traveler—Bill visited Tunisia, the Philippines, Bahamas, Mexico, Canada, and all over the United States and Europe. He was a dual citizen of the U.S. and Ireland. Bill was a citizen of the world.

Bill was a San Franciscan through and through. He openly embraced and explored all of the city's neighborhoods. He was an avid supporter of the arts, with active memberships to many museums and regular attendance at the symphony, opera, ballet, varied theatres and clubs.

Bill participated with his family and compatriots in the antiwar demonstrations from the Vietnam era to Iraq of today.

My daughter, Amy Critchett, had the good fortune to be a friend with and to work with Bill at Wired for many years. "Bill Goggins made work seem like work—because it was and he was so incredibly good at what he did—but with him around there was always a twist of irony and a splash of curly-haired, smiling-cheeked sunshine not far away," according to Amy. "Get ready to laugh all you up there."

Bill inexplicably collapsed and passed away suddenly during mile 24 of the San Francisco Marathon Benefit for Cancer on Sunday, July 30, 2006. He was in fit condition and many knew him as a wonderful, companionable runner, reconciled, strong and happy.

An outpouring of hundreds from around the globe, representing family, friends, colleagues, public officials on local, state and national levels, ambassadors, the Irish and British governments, the Democratic party, and diverse cultural non-profit organizations attended a memorial mass held at our Lady of Mount Carmel Church and a life celebration at the Outdoor Art Club in Mill Valley on August 4, 2006.

Billy was a deeply loved member of a very close family. He supported all of them individually and together—helping hang his mother Ute's art shows, assisting his father Pat with community outreach via organizations such as the Irish Forum, Irish Mexican Association, and Irish Literary and Historical Society to name a few, being the proud uncle to sister Cathy's two children, Lina Rose & Dominic Chester, and showing up for sister Aimee's various work events or helping edit her writing.

Bill believed in justice, peace and humanity. He connected with people everywhere he went. No one and nothing escaped his keen eye and warm words. His sense of community was broad and all-encompassing. Bill was a man of grace. He chipped in for everyone.

He had old-fashioned manners, was a staunch listener and he gave of himself enormously. His roughish grin, sparkle in his eye and love of discussion and opinion will live on with us forever.

Mr. Speaker, Bill had enormous integrity and loyalty, and taught us all how to be total human beings. To be fearless, to be bold, to be true to yourself. To be both gracious and outspoken. To pursue what matters in life and cherish each other. Bill knew all of these things and helped us be them too. Bill lived his life and made all of us proud. He will be deeply missed by many.

COMMEMORATING THE 40TH ANNIVERSARY OF THE MOSS LANDING MARINE LABORATORIES, MOSS LANDING, CALIFORNIA

HON. SAM FARR

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 7, 2006

Mr. FARR. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to celebrate a national treasure located in my district and commemorate an auspicious occasion: the 40th anniversary of the California State University's Moss Landing Marine Laboratories at the heart of Monterey Bay.

Founded in 1966, Moss Landing Marine Laboratories (MLML) is the second oldest marine lab on the Monterey Bay. The founders were a small group of strong-minded faculty and forward-thinking administrators at California State University (CSU) who were dedicated to the pursuit of marine science, research and education at the highest possible level. Currently, MLML is operated by a consortium of seven CSU campuses (Fresno, East Bay, Monterey Bay, Sacramento, San Francisco, San Jose, and Stanislaus), with undergraduate and graduate students pursuing their Masters of Science degrees in marine biology and oceanography. From its grass roots conception and its humble beginnings in an old cannery building, MLML has grown into an institution of international reputation for excellence and has trained generations of students.

The current director, Dr. Kenneth Coale, 9 full-time faculty and a complement of adjunct professors and affiliated researchers dutifully cultivate the mission, which is to "Provision the Pioneers of the Future in Marine Sciences" through a hands-on, field-oriented approach to their curriculum, placing their students at the frontiers of marine science where discoveries are being made. Since MLML is associated with the California State University system, the primary responsibility of the faculty is teaching. Despite their emphasis on well-taught courses and mentoring of graduate students, the MLML faculty and associated researchers are regional leaders within their research disciplines. Their research has been critical to the creation of the Monterey Bay National Marine Sanctuary and the Elkhorn Slough National Estuarine Research Reserve, and has shaped the development of new programs throughout CSU. Findings by the faculty have been acknowledged as some of the most significant in the field of oceanography over the last 50 years by the National Research Council, and MLML has received the Environmental Heroes Award bestowed by the head of NOAA and former Vice President Al Gore.

The Moss Landing Marine Laboratories are a testament to the power of academic freedom and the commitment to Science-Based Earth Stewardship. MLML has educated over 1000 marine scientists who now hold positions in the federal government, the most prestigious academic and research institutions nationwide, regulatory and resource agencies, and teaching institutions throughout the country. The great wealth of nearby marine resources, the faculty emphasis on mentoring and teaching with integrated research, and the excellent facilities, staff, and marine operations contribute to making this one of the best programs for a Master of Science in Marine Science in the United States. I celebrate the pioneers that founded this institution and those who continue to lead the way in maintaining excellence.

HISPANIC HERITAGE FOUNDATION

HON. SOLOMON P. ORTIZ

OF TEXAS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 7, 2006

Mr. ORTIZ. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize an outstanding non-profit organization: the Hispanic Heritage Foundation.

The Hispanic Heritage Foundation promotes and celebrates Hispanic culture, education, and accomplishment through year-round national and regional inspirational leadership programs by sponsoring a number of educational and cultural programs including the Hispanic Heritage Awards, Youth Awards, and the LOFT (Latinos on Fast Track) Initiative.

The Hispanic Heritage Awards and Ceremony began as a small White House ceremony in 1987 honoring the creation of Hispanic Heritage Month, September 15 through October 15. The award is a prestigious honor, and is a culmination of the Foundation's year-round efforts.

In an evening filled with cultural pride and celebration, the Foundation and the audience honor notable Hispanics who have distinguished themselves as role models in the Hispanic community while making a positive impact in our country.

This year marks the 20th anniversary of the Hispanic Heritage Awards and the theme of the 2006 ceremony will be "Looking Back, Moving Forward," representing the Hispanic community as part of the history of this Nation, and our presence in the Nation's future.

The event will be held September 7, 2006 on the Eisenhower Stage at the Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts.

I ask the House of Representatives to join me today in recognizing such an outstanding organization that strives to inspire education in our community, individual excellence among young Hispanics, and prosperity within our communities.

A GREAT POINT-OF-LIGHT FOR ALL AMERICANS, ROGER TOUSSAINT

HON. MAJOR R. OWENS

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 7, 2006

Mr. OWENS. Mr. Speaker, I rise to salute a premium leader for both the middle class and working families. Roger Toussaint is a truly unique Great Point-of-Light. In December 2005 he led New York City's first transit strike in 25 years in order to safeguard the pensions and healthcare for transit workers and future retirees. When all of the negotiations had been completed, the Governor of New York attempted to set a precedent by placing a cut in future pension benefits for new hires. It was the opening salvo for a campaign to cut pension benefits for all state and city employees. In an act of monumental significance for future workers Roger Toussaint rejected this deal with the words: "I will not sell out the unborn."

TWU Local 100 President Roger Toussaint was born in Trinidad in 1956. As a youth in Trinidad, he took part in the 1970 rebellion that targeted the vestiges of British colonial rule and challenged the oppressive conditions of workers, soldiers and small farmers. At the age of 17, Toussaint was arrested and expelled from school for writing slogans on school walls, including "Free Education Means Free Books." In 1974 he came to New York. After a brief enrollment at Brooklyn College, during which he took part in the anticutbacks movement, he worked for several years as a welder prior to the closing of the Brooklyn Naval Yard. Toussaint was hired by the Transit Authority as a cleaner in 1984 and became a track worker in 1985.

Toussaint became active on the job, joining with other track workers to publish "On Track" and to pursue a series of struggles against managerial arrogance and safety hazards. He did not seek a formal union position until 1994, when he was elected Chair of the 1,800-member Track Division. Already a thorn in the side of management and the incumbent union administration, Toussaint used the newly gained position to step up the struggle. In July of 1998, he was fired on the pretext of having been in an unauthorized vehicle during working hours, when the car in which he was a passenger was hit in an intersection and he suffered neck and back injuries. In fact, Toussaint was on official union business at the time, riding in a union car operated by a union official. A routine appeal of the firing was dismissed as untimely—the first such ruling in 60 years of Transit Authority (TA) discipline.

The TA had Toussaint shadowed by private investigators who followed him to union meetings, to his son's nursery school, and even to disciplinary hearings where he defended fellow union members. Toussaint's firing became a rallying cry for union members who demanded his reinstatement. In the union election of 2000, Toussaint became the presidential candidate of New Directions, an umbrella group embracing the opposition to the incumbent regime.

On taking office, Toussaint immediately took measures to reform the finances of the nearly bankrupt Local, including cutting his own salary by 25 percent. In March 2001 he led a successful strike at a Westchester bus company, obtaining landmark increases in wages and benefits for 700 union members. In 2002 he led the union through a difficult strike at three bus companies in Queens operating under city franchise, securing the failing health benefits for 1,500 members. At the end of that year, he led the union in winning a contract settlement that guaranteed threatened health benefits for 34,000 transit workers and their families and opened an array of new initiatives on such fronts as discipline, safety, training and childcare.

In December 2003 he was reelected to a second term as President of TWU Local 100. As well as his duties at Local 100, Roger Toussaint is President of the Coalition of Metropolitan Transit Authority Unions and a New York City Employees' Retirement System Board Member. He has served on the NYC Central Labor Council and the Municipal Labor Committee. The father of five, Roger Toussaint lives in Crown Heights with his wife, Donna.

For his exceptional vision and leadership courage we salute Roger Toussaint as a Great Point-of-Light for all Americans.

RESOLUTION HONORING CONGRESSMAN ELIGIO "KIKA" DE LA GARZA

HON. HENRY CUELLAR

OF TEXAS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 7, 2006

Mr. CUELLAR. Mr. Speaker, Whereas, Eligio "Kika" de la Garza was born in Mercedes, a small town in Hidalgo County, Texas, on September 22nd, 1927, beginning what would be the start of a long, and illustrious life in representing the Rio Grande Valley.

Whereas, at 17 years of age, he enlisted in the United States Army and served until 1946, continuing his education at Edinburg Junior College and the United States Army Artillery School in Oklahoma. Soon thereafter, he earned a law degree from St. Mary's University in San Antonio.

Whereas, in 1952, Eligio "Kika" de la Garza was elected to the Texas House of Representatives in 1952, serving the Rio Grande Valley. He accomplished many goals such as the creation of the Texas Water Commission and sponsoring a bill that allowed the border cities and counties along the Rio Grande river to build their own international bridges, helping to foster the spirit of trade and cooperation that still exists to this day.

Whereas, after serving honorably in the Texas House of Representatives, Congressman de la Garza was elected in 1964 to the United States House of Representatives to represent the 15th Congressional District of Texas. In his 32 years of congressional service, he was Chairman of the Committee on Agriculture, the first Hispanic to serve in the seat since 1917.

Whereas, during his leadership as Chairman of the Agriculture Committee for the next 13 years, he oversaw major agricultural legislation such as the Agriculture and Food Act of 1981, the Temporary Emergency Food Assistance Act, the Food Security Act, the Agricultural Credit Act of 1987, and the Disaster Assistance Acts of 1988 and 1989.

Whereas, in 1976, Congressman de la Garza became one of the founding members of the Congressional Hispanic Caucus, which he chaired from 1989 to 1991 as a strong supporter of civil rights for minorities and free trade along the border. He was highly involved in the passage of the North American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA) which has greatly benefited the Texas-Mexico border region in South Texas: be it hereby Resolved, That Congressman Henry Cuellar commends Congressman "Kika" de la Garza for having served the Rio Grande Valley with the utmost distinction and courage.

RECOGNIZING ANTHONY MUSSELMAN OF SUFFOLK, VIRGINIA

HON. GINNY BROWN-WAITE

OF FLORIDA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 7, 2006

Ms. GINNY BROWN-WAITE of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor Anthony Musselman of Suffolk, Virginia, a Quartermaster 1st class sailor currently serving in Iraq in the Global War on Terror.

Originally joining the Navy for an opportunity to see the world and learn some new skills, Quartermaster Musselman has accomplished his dream and has literally traveled the world over. A dedicated student of the naval profession, he was always looking at the stars. Quartermaster Musselman was happy to strike for quartermaster, learning to "shoot" the stars with a sextant rather than use GPS satellites.

One of his favorite memories during his 9 years of service was following September 11th when a German destroyer asked permission to pass by his amphibious assault ship. As they passed, the whole German crew was standing at attention with large sheets hung from all parts of the ship saying "We Stand With You".

Quartermaster Musselman is married to Misti Musselman from Chino, California. The couple currently lives in Suffolk, Virginia and is expecting their first child while he is deployed in Iraq. He is currently deployed with the Iraqi coastal patrol squadron guarding coastal oil fields. Quartermaster Musselman's parents currently reside in Citrus Hills, Florida.

Mr. Speaker, it is soldiers like Anthony Musselman who volunteered to protect the freedoms that all Americans hold dear to their hearts. While brave men and women like Anthony serve in the name of freedom and liberty, his family, friends and loved ones should know that this Congress will never forget his sacrifice and commitment.

JIM SANTANGELO—LABOR LEADER OF THE YEAR

HON. BOB FILNER

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 7, 2006

Mr. FILNER. Mr. Speaker, I rise to recognize Jim Santangelo who is being honored as San Diego's Labor Leader of the Year. Jim is a New Jersey native who began his career as a truck driver in his home state following an honorable discharge from the Navy in 1959. This was also the time when Jim joined his first Teamsters Union Local. Shortly thereafter, he moved to Southern California and began his rapid rise in Teamsters Local 848.

Widely known throughout Southern California by thousands of rank- and-file Teamsters over the decades because of his communication skills, he served the Western Conference of Teamsters in 13 states as food and warehouse division director. In that post, he expanded working strategies for industry Union members to prosper under new collective bargaining agreements.

For years he served as the Union's political affairs chairman. His long tenure as the director of Joint Council 42's political screening committee prompted a return of pro-worker and pro-labor elected representatives at all levels of public life in Southern California.

His dedication to Union members and working families and advocacy of training and education for all propelled him to the leadership of the largest Teamsters Joint Council in 1998. This was followed by his election to Western Region Vice President of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters. He was re-elected IBT Vice President in June, 2006.

More recently, Jim spearheaded the region's massive donation, mobilization and transportation of foodstuffs and necessities to the families of San Diego-based United States Marines deployed to Iraq and Afghanistan when it became known that welfare and food stamps were keeping families afloat.

Under his leadership, Teamster's Joint Council 42 inaugurated an annual scholarship program, created a computerized phone center for Union-to-member communications, and secured the award-winning Teamsters Joint Council 42 truck and trailer, which traverses the country for organizing and charity relief purposes.

He has also recently overseen the creation of the Teamsters Training Academy, a comprehensive training and upgrading facility to license commercial drivers.

Jim's commitment to the community has also led him to train for and join the city of El Monte Police Department as a reserve officer where he serves as a sergeant. In addition, Jim is a Los Angeles County Sheriff's Department reserve officer.

Jim Santangelo has been an inspiration to working families throughout Southern California—and truly deserves the honor as "Labor Leader of the Year."

CONGRATULATING PENNSYLVANIA
SENATOR CHARLES D. LEMMOND
AND MRS. BARBARA LEMMOND FOR RECOGNITION RECEIVED FROM THE SALVATION ARMY FOR THEIR COMMUNITY SERVICE

HON. PAUL E. KANJORSKI

OF PENNSYLVANIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 7, 2006

Mr. KANJORSKI. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to ask you and my esteemed colleagues in the House of Representatives to pay tribute to my personal friends Senator Charles D. Lemmond and his wife, Barbara, who have been honored by the Salvation Army of the greater Wilkes-Barre area for their many years of community service.

Senator Lemmond has represented the 20th senatorial district in the Pennsylvania Senate since 1985 and is retiring at the end of this year. He is chairman of the Senate State Government Committee, Vice Chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee and a member of the Senate Committees on Rules and Executive Nominations, Finance, and Military and Veterans Services.

A former Common Pleas Court judge in Luzerne County, Senator Lemmond is currently chairman of the Executive Committee of the Pennsylvania Higher Education Assistance Agency and he serves on the Joint Legislative Budget and Finance Committee and the Joint State Government Commission's Task Force on Decedent's Estates. Senator Lemmond is also a member of the Reapportionment Task Force, the Elections Reform Task Force and the Criminal Justice Committee of the National Conference of State Legislatures.

Legislatively, Senator Lemmond was the prime sponsor of a law providing judicial access to juvenile crime reports, a major anti-drug law aimed at imposing tougher punishments for repeat drug offenders, a law providing for the housing of state prisoners in federal prisons, and a law providing sentencing procedures for first-degree murder.

Senator Lemmond has also been instrumental in the passage of voter registration and election reform laws and, most recently, a law requiring hearing screening for all infants born in the Commonwealth. He has also sponsored numerous initiatives relating to government ethics, charitable organizations, tourist promotion, agriculture preservation, natural resource conservation and industrial site clean up.

A past potentate of Irem Temple, he is a 33rd degree Mason, a trustee of the Wyoming Conference of the United Methodist Church, an advisory board member of the Salvation Army, a life member of the board of trustee of Wyoming Seminary Preparatory School and an advisory board member of the Penn State Wilkes-Barre campus.

Senator Lemmond is a graduate of Harvard College and the University of Pennsylvania Law School. He also served overseas in the U.S. Army of Occupation.

Barbara Northrup Lemmond is a graduate of Wyoming Seminary and she attended Skidmore and Elmira Colleges. During a career spanning 37 years, she served as secretary to the Luzerne County Register of Wills, was a nursery school teacher for B'nai B'rith, co-owned Project 40, a handcraft and antique shop, served as office manager to a local physician as well as secretary for the Penn State University, Wilkes-Barre campus.

Mrs. Lemmond's dedication to the enhancement and well-being of the northeastern Pennsylvania community extends beyond her business acumen. She serves as a member of the board of directors for Wesley Village and the Anthracite Scenic Trails Association. She is an active volunteer for the Back Mountain Memorial Library and has been a driver for Meals on Wheels for more than 30 years, which is still a part of her weekly routine.

Mrs. Lemmond has served as past secretary, vice president, and board member for the Back Mountain Memorial Library, as well as a board member and president of Meals on Wheels. She has also served as a board member and president of the Luzerne County Library Systems, and a teacher at First United Methodist Church School in Wilkes-Barre. Mrs. Lemmond has also been a volunteer for Wilkes-Barre General Hospital, Planned Parenthood of Luzerne County, the Swetland Home, and a member of the Junior League of Wilkes-Barre.

On a personal note, my wife Nancy and I have known Charlie and Barbara for many, many years, since Charlie and I were young lawyers in the Luzerne County bar. Although we are members of different political parties, Charlie and I have always been friends and have been able to work together to serve Northeastern Pennsylvania. His thoughtful and dedicated service to our region and the Commonwealth will be greatly missed, and I wish him and Barbara all the best in their well-deserved retirement.

Mr. Speaker, please join me in congratulating Senator and Mrs. Lemmond on this joyous occasion. Together, they have contributed greatly to improving the quality of life in northeastern Pennsylvania through their selflessness and love of community.

MARY A. BAIN: A NATIONAL TREASURE

HON. JANICE D. SCHAKOWSKY

OF ILLINOIS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 7, 2006

Ms. SCHAKOWSKY. Mr. Speaker, last month, the 9th Congressional District of Illinois mourned the loss of a dedicated and extraordinary public servant. Mary Anderson Bain brought her many talents, a firmly-rooted commitment to the New Deal principles of expanding opportunities to all, and a deep love of the arts to a career that has enriched our Nation.

Mary Bain is known by many of us from her long service with Representative Sid Yates, and she was one of the first women chiefs of staff when she accepted that position in 1975. Mrs. Bain was gracious and charming, but she was also politically-savvy and focused when it came to contributing to the well-being of the 9th Congressional District of Illinois and promoting the interests that she and Representative Yates shared. The two of them were a finely-tuned team who, together, were able to do great things.

In 2003, Mary Bain received the Heritage Defender Award, an award that recognized her many achievements: helping to create a cultural heritage grants program for the National Park Service and a conservation program at the Institute of Library and Museum Services and to ensure funding for the National Endowment for the Arts, the National Endowment for the Humanities, the Smithsonian Institute, the National Gallery, and the Kennedy Center.

At the awards ceremony, Democratic Leader NANCY PELOSI said, "Not only did Mary Bain save national treasures, she is a national treasure."

Mrs. Bain served the Nation but she started her public service in Illinois, first as a junior high school English teacher and later as the Illinois administrator of the National Youth Administration, a depression-era New Deal initiative. She was one of the youngest and one of the few women leaders. Part of the Works Progress Administration, the NYA provided young men and women with small work study payments so that they could afford to get an education. It provided an opportunity for a generation of young people who would otherwise have lost hope and their chance for a better future.

Mary Bain followed two guiding principles throughout her life. One was the belief that publicly-accountable government could make a positive difference in people's lives, whether it is in preserving the environment, providing education opportunities and financial security or expanding our cultural life. She was proud to be a liberal and made no bones about it.

The second was her commitment to sharing what she had learned from her decades of public service with others. There are many people in Washington and Illinois who were mentored by Mary Bain—staff, House members, activists and advocates. I will always be grateful for her generosity in helping me when I was elected to succeed Representative Yates.

And, like so many others, I will always be grateful for her lifetime of accomplishments.

A VERMONT LESSON IN HOW TO EXPORT TO THE WORLD

HON. BERNARD SANDERS

OF VERMONT

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 7, 2006

Mr. SANDERS. Mr. Speaker, this year the Small Business Administration selected Robert Johnson of Omega Optical, in Brattleboro, Vermont, as Vermont's Small Business Exporter of the Year. His story, and the company's story, has much to tell us about how the United States can remain competitive in a global economy, and how we can create new manufacturing jobs through innovation and foresight.

Omega Optical began in 1968—in a garage. Since then, it has grown into a $13 million company that employs over 140 employees. Omega Optical makes, and has always made, filters for optical instruments.

Robert Johnson did not set out to make a less costly filter, or a slight improvement on a previous filter. Instead, he committed himself and Omega Optical to doing research in optical thin-films, which can be used to control the flow of light. In particular, their research focused on fluorescence, the light emitted from objects illuminated by a very energetic light.

The filters that Omega Optical developed have played a major role in the burgeoning of biological science in our day. Let me cite a passage from Vennont: An Illustrated History by John Duffy and Vincent Feeney: "The sciences of fluorescence microscopy and flow cytometry, which allow for the visualization of cellular structures and the sorting and analysis of cells, were made possible by design and manufacturing developments invented at Omega. These advances set the state-of-the-art and allowed Omega not only to define the science, but for many years capture the entire market worldwide."

Omega's filters are used in not only cellular biology, but also in astronomy and in clinical medicine. Whether scientists look at the enormous spatial universe around us, or the microscopic secrets of genetics and bodily functioning, they use filters not just made, but developed, by Omega Optical.

What has made Omega so successful, in both manufacturing and the export of manufactured products? A stress on research and long-range development, not just the immediate pursuit of profit; a commitment to moving into new areas and inventing new products; and a dedicated workforce. For clearly Omega Optical shows that American workers, just like American product developers, are the best in the world, and can and do make the best and most competitive products. And by creating a 'green' production facility, their 'Delta Campus,' the company has shown that safeguarding the environment can be a major piece of a business agenda.

If we as a Nation think about research and the long-term, as Omega Optical has done, and if we boldly build on our strengths and the capability of our workers, we can move confidently into our future.

RECOGNIZING RYAN SEADER OF WEST PALM BEACH, FLORIDA

HON. GINNY BROWN-WAITE

OF FLORIDA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 7, 2006

Ms. GINNY BROWN-WAITE of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor Ryan Seader of West Palm Beach, Florida, an Army Private First Class soldier currently serving in Iraq.

Following his education at community college and prior to enlisting in the National Guard, Private Seader used his natural ability to fix things to start a profession in the construction field, specializing in restoring old homes.

Enlisting in the National Guard in January 2004 as a mechanic in the construction field, Private Seader was trained to work with water pumps. Following his activation, he was sent to Fort Dix, New Jersey and cross trained to serve as a prison guard.

Private Seader is currently serving in company 652 while deployed in Iraq. His Company is stationed at the Abu Ghraib Prison where he is a part of the team working to demolish the facility.

While on a recent leave, Private Seader was presented with an American flag that had been flown in his honor. Ryan is a proud soldier-demonstrating his dedication to his country and the war on terror.

Private Seader's parents are also committed to helping fight the global war on terror. Mary and Rick Seader live in Inverness and work to educate their local community on the need to defend the American ideal and to never give into cowardly acts by terrorists like the September 11, 2001 attack on our homeland.

Mr. Speaker, it is soldiers like Ryan Seader who volunteer to protect the freedoms that all Americans hold dear to their hearts. While brave men and women like Ryan serve in the name of freedom and liberty, his family, friends and loved ones should know that this Congress will never forget his sacrifice and commitment.

TRIBUTE TO BOONTON FIRE DEPARTMENT

OF NEW JERSEY

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 7, 2006

Mr. FRELINGHUYSEN. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor the Boonton Fire Department, in the Town of Boonton, Morris County, New Jersey, a patriotic community that I am proud to represent. On Saturday, September 2, 2006 the good people of the Town of Boonton celebrated the Fire Company's 115th Anniversary with their annual parade and carnival.

For 115 years, the Boonton Fire Department has been protecting and serving the residents of their community and nearby towns. Featuring five companies, each with their own unique and vibrant history, this Fire Department embodies the ideas of brotherly love and teamwork for the betterment of their communities.

Currently, the fire department, led by Fire Chief Pete Herbert, is made up entirely of volunteers, who live in or around the Town of Boonton. They are men and women who "volunteer their time to protect and educate the residents of Boonton."

Mr. Speaker, I urge you and my colleagues to join me in congratulating the volunteers of the Boonton Fire Department on celebrating 115 years of a rich history in the protection of one of New Jersey's finest municipalities.

IN RECOGNITION OF RISING STAR
BAPTIST CHURCH

HON. MICHAEL C. BURGESS

OF TEXAS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 7, 2006

Mr. BURGESS. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to congratulate the Rising Star Baptist Church of Fort Worth, Texas on its 75th Anniversary.

The church's modest beginning began on September 13, 1931 in a local diner, when Reverend Smith Cary and a small number of members organized Rising Star Church. The church has seen the leadership of many dynamic ministers including, Reverend Smith Cary, Reverend T.H. Davis, and its present pastor, Reverend Ralph W. Emerson, Jr.

The stated vision of the Church is to be "the Worship Center that seeks to reclaim lost souls, reshape lives, rejoice in love, react to the Holy Spirit while responding to God's call". Rising Star Baptist church has exemplified their vision through growth to a congregation of over 2,500 members and progressing into a multi-ministry church. Rising Star Baptist Church continues to be an influential presence and respected contributor to the Fort Worth community and greater Tarrant County citizenry.

I extend my sincere congratulations to the Rising Star Baptist Church on their 75th anniversary and praise their dedication and service to the people of Fort Worth, Texas.

RECOGNIZING THE MINORITY BAR ASSOCIATION OF WESTERN NEW YORK

HON. BRIAN HIGGINS

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 7, 2006

Mr. HIGGINS. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to the Minority Bar Association of Western New York, not only for furthering the work of the National Bar Association, providing social and professional interaction among minority attorneys but also for their work improving the protection of political and civil rights of all citizens.

Since its inception the Association has played a role in the community providing opportunities to students in its administration on scholarships, and has also awarded and recognized local leaders in the area for their hard work and diligent efforts.

The MBA is an organization that has grown to over one hundred members from diverse ethnic backgrounds and practices across Western New York. With each member aiming to be effective advocates and advisors for Western New York clients and for the Western New York Community.

In 2004, the MBA, enlarging its commitment to promote education and scholarship in the field of law, organized the Minority Bar Association of Western New York Foundation, Inc., a not-for-profit organization providing financial assistance to individuals interested in pursuing a career in law. The Foundation is committed to ensuring continued minority representation in the legal community.

Mr. Speaker, it is with great pleasure and gratitude that I stand here today to recognize the Minority Bar Association, for its continuing efforts in the community, its ongoing work for the furthering of the cause, and its promotion of minorities in the legal profession.

IN RECOGNITION OF FREE CLINIC OF SIMI VALLEY

HON. ELTON GALLEGLY

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 7, 2006

Mr. GALLEGLY. Mr. Speaker, I rise in recognition of 35 years of continuous community service by the Free Clinic of Simi Valley.

The Free Clinic is a non-profit, volunteer-based community organization that provides medical care, counseling, dental, and legal assistance to individuals and families, regardless of their ability to pay. Throughout its history, it has enjoyed widespread support from the medical and legal communities, service groups, and elected officials.

Funding for the Free Clinic is provided primarily by private foundations, corporations, local service organizations, and individual donors.

All services offered at the clinic's fully licensed facilities are provided by volunteers, which include doctors, nurses, nurse practitioners, medical assistants, dentists, dental assistants, lawyers, paralegals, marriage and family therapists, MFT trainees, and interns.

Last year alone, more than 8,000 patients received services through the clinic, including general medical care, immunizations, smoking cessation programs, and counseling. The dental clinic, which just opened in May 2005, served 79 patients before the year was out. Over its 35-year history, the clinic has served an estimated 70,000 children and adults.

Despite the impressive number of patients served, the Board of Directors and staff practice frugality, with operating costs of less than $225,000 in 2005. That speaks highly of the caliber of professionals who volunteer their services for the betterment of their community.

Mr. Speaker, I know my colleagues will join me in recognizing the Free Clinic of Simi Valley, its board members over the years, its staff, and its volunteers for 35 years of service to our community.

"CONGRATULATING OFF-ROAD MOTORSPORTS HALL OF FAME INDUCTEES"

HON. BOB FILNER

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 7, 2006

Mr. FILNER. Mr. Speaker, I rise to acknowledge two extraordinary men who have been recognized for their contributions to Off-Road Motorsports. Bob Ham and the late "Corky" McMillin were inducted into the Off-Road Motorsports Hall of Fame on August 26th of this year.

Bob Ham has been a long time advocate for "off-roaders". In 1969, he co-founded the California Off-Road Vehicle Association (CORVA) and went on to create the Off-Road Vehicle Legislative Coalition in 1983. Bob worked with President Reagan's Interior Secretary, James Watt, to successfully re-establish the "Barstow to Vegas Motorcycle Race". He has worked diligently to preserve designated funds for off-highway vehicles and created a trust fund to stop California legislators from taking allocated money from off-highway vehicle programs. Bob later forced the state to return 30 million dollars to off-highway vehicle programs. His efforts have made it possible for many of my constituents to enjoy the California wilderness in their off-road vehicles.

Unfortunately, the off-road motorsports industry lost one of their most adamant supporters last year after Corky McMillin passed away last September. Corky was posthumously inducted to the Hall of Fame after supporting the industry for more than 29 years. He was a champion off-road racer, winning many competitions multiple times. Corky never wavered from his commitment to the sport and gave generously to various off-road events. He sponsored numerous races, and he was the title sponsor of the Superstition Championship Series, held in Plaster City, California. He was a true statesman to off-road racing and will be greatly missed.

I am pleased to recognize these men on their induction to the Off-Road Motorsports Hall of Fame.

SUPPORT FOR A SPECIAL ENVOY FOR SUDAN

HON. FRANK R. WOLF

OF VIRGINIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 7, 2006

Mr. WOLF. Mr. Speaker, I introduce this resolution to again call for the immediate appointment of a Presidential Special Envoy for Sudan. In calling for this I would like to commend the President for the leadership he has shown toward Sudan; Secretary of State Condoleezza Rice, who has traveled there and cares deeply about this issue; the work of former Secretary of State Colin Powell, who was the first leader to call the conflict genocide; and former Deputy Secretary Robert Zoellick, for his efforts on behalf of the people of Sudan.

I also want to specifically recognize Roger Winter who has dedicated his life to the people of Sudan. He has been a true hero to the suffering Sudanese.

While we were all hopeful that the signing last May of the Darfur Peace Agreement would bring needed stability to Darfur, I am extremely alarmed that in recent weeks the fighting in Sudan has intensified. The targeting of civilians and humanitarian workers must end. Sudan is at a critical moment and the appointment of a special envoy could not be more timely.

The appointment of a special envoy will send a clear message to Khartoum that the United States will not stand by while genocide is taking place and will send a message to the people suffering in the camps that the United States has been and will continue to be actively involved in ending their nightmare.

I urge the administration to move quickly to bring hope to the people of Sudan.

RECOGNIZING RANDY HATCHER OF BRANDON, FLORIDA

HON. GINNY BROWN-WAITE

OF FLORIDA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 7, 2006

Ms. GINNY BROWN-WAITE of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor Randy Hatcher of Brandon, Florida, an Army Staff Sergeant killed in 1991 during the first Persian Gulf War.

Born in Tallahassee, Florida, Sgt. Hatcher was active on his high school wrestling team while living in Birmingham, Alabama. The son of an Air Force veteran, Randy made the decision to enter the military following high school.

Following 6 years of Army service in Germany, Sgt. Hatcher was deployed to Iraq as part of the 197th Army Infantry Brigade. During his seven months serving in the Persian Gulf, Sgt. Hatcher wrote many upbeat letters to his family and loved ones, speaking of his love of fishing and how he worried for his family back home.

Three days following victory in the Persian Gulf, Sgt. Hatcher was killed when an ammunition trailer in his convoy exploded. Up until his death, Sgt. Hatcher remained positive about his mission and his service in the Army. He believed in what the United States was doing in the Persian Gulf and did not complain about the work or the conditions he served in while overseas. He left behind his wife Florlita and a two and a half year old son Randy. Sgt. Hatcher's parents, Carol and Joseph Jones, still reside in Citrus County, Florida.

Mr. Speaker, it is soldiers like Randy Hatcher who volunteered to protect the freedoms that all Americans hold dear to their hearts. While brave men and women like Randy have perished in the name of freedom and liberty, his family, friends and loved ones should know that this Congress will never forget his sacrifice and commitment.

RECOGNIZING THE ACCOMPLISHMENTS OF STEPHEN BARROUK AS HE LEAVES THE WILKES-BARRE CHAMBER OF BUSINESS AND INDUSTRY

HON. PAUL E. KANJORSKI

OF PENNSYLVANIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 7, 2006

Mr. KANJORSKI. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to ask you and my esteemed colleagues in the House of Representatives to pay tribute to Mr. Stephen Barrouk, of Wilkes-Barre, Pennsylvania, who has served as president and chief executive officer of the Wilkes-Barre Chamber of Business and Industry from 1989 until earlier this month.

Mr. Barrouk's extraordinary leadership has helped guide and forge the beginning of a truly remarkable revitalization of the City of Wilkes-Barre.

Since 1989, Mr. Barrouk has led the growth of the Chamber from 500 members to 1,338 members in 2005. He has been at the forefront of a litany of catalytic projects that have transformed the region. Those projects include the Wachovia Arena, an entertainment venue that has spawned tens of millions of dollars of commercial expansion and created hundreds of new jobs. An innovation center was carved out of a vacant department store complex in central city to nurture fledgling businesses. Public Square Commons, formerly the Pomeroy's Department Store, was completely renovated to provide first class office space. Also during his tenure, Mr. Barrouk secured an American Hockey League franchise and recruited the Penguins as an anchor tenant for the Wachovia Arena.

In addition, Mr. Barrouk helped launch a 14-screen downtown theater complex as well as studies for the Susquehanna Riverfront Convention Center and Hotel and the Riverfront Museum.

Mr. Barrouk also led the way for the development of two business parks, Hanover Crossings and the East Mountain Corporate Center, both of which have major tenants responsible for creating hundreds of jobs.

During his tenure he managed three capital campaigns that raised over $10 million to support 15 years of economic development marketing that attracted over 125 new companies to the region. He also led the effort to create Penn's Northeast, Inc., a regional marketing organization; the Diamond City Partnership and Downtown Business Association, the Great Valley Technology Alliance and the Luzern County Convention Center Authority which manages the Arena.

Mr. Barrouk has been the worthy recipient of numerous service awards, among them the Distinguished Citizen Award from the Boy Scouts of America; the Distinguished Leader Award from Leadership Wilkes-Barre; a 25 Year Leadership Star Award from Leadership Wilkes-Barre, a Special Achievement Award from the Pennsylvania Ben Franklin Partnership and, in 2001, he received the Chamber of the Year award from the Pennsylvania Chamber of Business and Industry and the Pennsylv-vania Chamber of Commerce executives in 2001.

Mr. Barrouk serves on the boards of directors of numerous organizations including 10,000 Friends of Pennsylvania, Chairman of Steering Committee for the Renew Pennsylvania effort; NEPA Alliance; Luzerne-Schuylkill Counties Work Force Investment Board; Great Valley Technology Alliance; Joint Urban Studies Center, Earth Conservancy, United Way of Wyoming Valley, Catholic Social Services and the Diamond City Partnership.

On a personal note, I have worked closely with Steve on many projects over the last 17 years. There is no economic development official who is more dedicated to improving the quality of life in our area. His perseverance, hard work and integrity made him one of the most effective leaders in our area. I am proud to call him a friend and look forward to continuing working with him to help northeastern Pennsylvania for many years to come.

Mr. Speaker, please join me in congratulating Mr. Barrouk for the exemplary community service he has contributed over the past 17 years. His commitment to revitalizing the Wilkes-Barre area has been responsible for a wealth of community improvements that have greatly enhanced the quality of life in northeastern Pennsylvania.

IN RECOGNITION OF CAPTAIN
MICHAEL R. WOMACK

HON. MICHAEL C. BURGESS

OF TEXAS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 7, 2006

Mr. BURGESS. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to commend Captain Michael R. Womack, of North Richland Hills, Texas on his years of dedicated service and commitment to law enforcement.

Captain Womack joined the North Richland Hills Police Department as a police officer in September of 1976. During his thirty years of service to North Richland Hills, Captain Womack has been awarded the Patrolman of the Year Award, the Supervisor of the Year award, as well as three Meritorious Service Awards and a Life Saving Award.

On Wednesday, January 31, 2007, Captain Womack will be retiring from law enforcement. Having worked in the Patrol Division, the Administrative Services Division, as well as the Technical Services Division and Investigative Services Division, Captain Womack's tenure, skills, and experience will surely be difficult to replace.

Mr. Speaker, I commend Captain Womack on his devotion to the service and protection to his community. His contributions and commitment to North Richland Hills should inspire us all. I wish him the best of luck in his retirement and all of his future endeavors.

IN RECOGNITION OF BROOKLYN CENTER JUNIOR/SENIOR HIGH SCHOOL IN BROOKLYN CENTER, MINNESOTA

HON. BETTY McCOLLUM

OF MINNESOTA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 7, 2006

Ms. McCOLLUM of Minnesota. Mr. Speaker, last evening I had the great pleasure to join in a celebration in honor of our Nation's high schools that have made an outstanding commitment to music education. As a strong supporter of the arts and music education, it was a pleasure to sit among music industry supporters, arts advocates, individuals in the private sector, and corporate sponsors such as 7UP, who work every day to ensure that young people have access to strong music education programs.

It was an even greater privilege to be part of a celebration where a Minnesota high school headlined the event. Brooklyn Center Junior/Senior High School, located in Brooklyn Center, Minnesota, received one of the Foundation's highest honors—the GRAMMY Foundation's Signature Schools Enterprise Award, which honors those schools that make great efforts to bring music to economically underserved students. I'd like to extend a warm congratulations to Ms. Chris Porter, Brooklyn Center High School's music teacher and all of her students, including Chanel Chatham, who both traveled to DC to participate in last evening's special event.

As budgets for the arts and arts education continues to dramatically decline, I applaud the efforts of the thousands of teachers and students across the country who are working to piece together the critical funding needed to strengthen, and sometimes simply sustain, their music education programs. It is my hope that the federal government will recommit its resources to the arts and arts education—especially since we know that there are strong correlations between arts education and achievement in math and science. Our nation's ability to compete in an increasingly competitive world will depend on not only strong math and science preparation—but also on an emphasis in the arts and in music education. As a member of the House Education and the Workforce Committee, I will continue to fight for a well-rounded education for all students.

I commend the hard work and dedication of the students and staff at Brooklyn Center Junior/Senior High School. Thank you for the opportunity to join you in your celebration. I look forward to hearing more about your continued success in bringing the joys and benefits of music to students!

RECOGNIZING DIALOGUE ON DIVERSITY'S 2006 HEALTH CARE SYMPOSIUM

HON. HILDA L. SOLIS

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 7, 2006

Ms. SOLIS. Mr. Speaker, as Democratic Co-Chair of the Congressional Caucus for Women's Issues, I rise today to congratulate Dialogue on Diversity for its 2006 Health Care Symposium. I am proud to recognize the Dialogue's effort to inform and educate the public about the importance of an effective preventive health care system.

Dialogue on Diversity, founded in 1989, is committed to improving the economic and social condition of women in the U.S. and around the world. Its programs bring together multi-ethnic women for a worldwide interchange on concerns of vital importance to the world's women and their families.

Today, our health care system is not meeting the needs of all people, particularly in racial and ethnic minority communities where health disparities continue to grow. Discussions and symposiums like Dialogue on Diversity's 2006 Health Care Symposium will help to address these important issues.

Again, I want to commend the Dialogue on Diversity for its 2006 health care event and wish them the best of luck in the future.

IN RECOGNITION OF ED TEMPLETON, NEWLY ELECTED BOARD MEMBER OF THE NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF FEDERAL CREDIT UNIONS

HON. CHARLIE NORWOOD

OF GEORGIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 7, 2006

Mr. NORWOOD. Mr. Speaker, it is with great pleasure that I rise today to recognize Ed Templeton, the President of SRP Federal Credit Union, on his recent election to the Board of Directors of the National Association of Federal Credit Unions, NAFCU.

For the past 34 years, Ed has dedicated his life on behalf of improving financial institutions in America and currently serves on the South Carolina Credit Union League Board of Directors. His illustrious experience further includes service as President of the Columbia Chapter of Credit Unions, member of NAFCU's Education Committee, and member of the Better Business Bureau of Augusta, Georgia.

As the President of SRP Federal Credit Union, Ed has focused on ensuring his members receive helpful, personal service. Through his credit union, Ed is continuously educating his members on how to prevent identity theft. He also understands that today's youth must be armed with the knowledge to be financially savvy. SRP Federal Credit Union established the "Teaching Kids How to Handle Money Responsibly" program which was designed to help children at an early age develop the decision making skills for sound future financial decisions.

Ed's involvement to improve the lives of others can be further illustrated through his involvement as a Member of the Board of Directors for the Shepard Blood Center in Augusta, and in his past service as Elected Commissioner for the City of Hephzibah.

It is because of the good work of Ed and others like him that the credit union movement enjoys the success it has today. Such service is the hallmark of the credit union movement and I wish Ed the best of luck in his new role as a member of the NAFCU Board of Directors.

THE YOUTHBUILD TRANSFER ACT

HON. MAXINE WATERS

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 7, 2006

Ms. WATERS. Mr. Speaker. I rise in strong support of the YouthBuild Transfer Act, S. 3534. The bill amends the Workforce Investment Act of 1998 provides for the transfer of the YouthBuild program from HUD to the Department of Labor. I would like to acknowledge Mr. CASTLE, Mr. GEORGE MILLER, Mr. WILLIAM LACY CLAY and Mr. DALE KILDEE who supported this bill. I also want to thank Mr. FRANK, Ranking Member of the Committee on Financial Services for sponsoring the bill.

The YouthBuild Transfer Act will do four important things. It will:

(1) Enable disadvantaged youth to obtain the education and employment skills necessary to achieve economic self-sufficiency in occupations in demand and postsecondary education and training opportunities;

(2) Provide disadvantaged youth with opportunities for meaningful work and service to their communities;

(3) Foster the development of employment and leadership skills and commitment to community development among youth in low income communities; and

(4) Expand the supply of permanent affordable housing for low-income families by utilizing the energies and talents of disadvantaged youth.

The education, employment, and housing needs of our nation's most vulnerable youth must be one of our highest priorities. Since 1994, the YouthBuild program has awarded $485 million in grants, enabling 47,000 youth to obtain education, training and trade skills related to the building and rehabilitation of affordable housing for low-income families and the homeless. The program has a long track record of proven success, although for the past two years funding has been down 23 percent from $65 million to $50 million. YouthBuild would be extended for five years consistent with other Work Investment Act programs, and would provide for greater flexibility in the use of funds. This program is being extended just as the U.S. Bureau of Census released the most recent data on youth and poverty in the United States.

In August 2006, the U.S. Bureau of the Census reported that the poverty rate for children in the U.S. was higher than the rates for people 18 to 64 years and older. Children represent 34.9 percent of the people living in poverty and 25 percent of the total population of the United States. The poverty rate for young children under the age of 6 living in families were 20.0 percent and 4.8 million. Even more astounding is that for those children living in households headed by females 52.9 percent were in poverty, over five times the rate of their counterparts in married families 9.9 percent. For children under 18 living in families headed by females, 42.8 percent were in poverty, compared with 8.5 percent for married couples. Many of us know that these youth are most at risk, and that any public policy or program that is designed to assist these young people as they prepare to enter the workforce is an investment in our future.

So why YouthBuild? The poverty data paints a very vivid picture of what is going on in America. Too many American youth live in poverty, and are robbed of opportunities to take full advantage of all their God-given talents. Even Alan Greenspan, the former Chairman of the Federal Reserve System, pointed to the fact that the historic causes of poverty and disenfranchisement detrimentally impact our entire nation. When the least among us do well, we know the entire nation benefits. In effect, these youth, who are vital to the economic well-being of this country, are handicapped by poverty, poor education and the lack of strong viable communities with housing that is livable, affordable and safe. YouthBuild is one program that acknowledges the experience of millions of American youth by making real investments in their education, employment skills and leadership development. It also provides housing for the homeless and low-income families that represents another approach to address what is an overlooked group.

The Secretary of Labor is authorized to fund YouthBuild activities through grants for which public and nonprofit entities can compete. In addition, there are provisions in the bill to ensure the orderly transition of the program from HUD to the Department of Labor. In 2005, 14,000 youth were turned away from the YouthBuild program for lack of funding. Over 1000 communities would like to participate in YouthBuild, and this bill will make that happen for many of them.

Mr. Speaker I am convinced that the YouthBuild program represents a major step to refocusing our national resources toward a well-established vehicle that can provide hope and opportunity for disadvantaged youth in America. These young people deserve every chance, and we must continue to provide opportunities for them to succeed. By better preparing our disadvantaged youth to be competitive and to function in the ever changing global economy we will continue to reduce poverty and strengthen American households. YouthBuild will improve our youth and increase housing opportunity for the homeless. I urge my Colleagues to support the bill.

CELEBRATING THE LIFE OF BRIDGET MASIELLO

HON. BRIAN HIGGINS

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 7, 2006

Mr. HIGGINS. Mr. Speaker, it is my distinct honor to remember the life of a proud Buffaloian. Bridget Masiello passed away August 5, 2006 of this year, but she left behind a legacy for all of Buffalo to be proud of.

Born of Seventh Street and raised on Busti Avenue, Mrs. Masiello was a lifelong resident of Buffalo's Westside.

It was here that she made her home with her husband, the late Daniel J. Masiello, and her seven children, including the former mayor of Buffalo, Anthony M. Masiello.

Remembered as a warm and affectionate lady, by her son, Mrs. Masiello was a devout Catholic and enjoyed bingo and playing cards. She was also active in the many social, political and athletic endeavors of her children and grandchildren.

Mrs. Masiello is survived by her five sons, two daughters; her sister, Carmella Leib; 14 grandchildren; and six great-grandchildren.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to take this opportunity to remember and celebrate the life of Mrs. Masiello for her contributions to the social and political fabric of the City of Buffalo. I ask my colleagues to join me in honoring her spirit here today.

ACQUITTAL OF MIDSHIPMAN 1ST CLASS LAMAR OWENS

HON. JOHN LEWIS

OF GEORGIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 7, 2006

Mr. LEWIS of Georgia. Mr. Speaker, I'm sure many people followed the case against Lamar Owens, as well as the not guilty verdict that followed. Because the impact of this case does not end with the verdict, I am submitting two opinion articles for the RECORD. I believe these articles highlight some important things to consider regarding the lasting impact these charges will have on this young man, his accuser, and so many others. I submit the following opinion articles for the RECORD: "Owens absolved, but Navy case has no winners," by Rick Maese from the Baltimore Sun and "Academy can help dispel cloud from rape case," which appeared in the Capital on August 1, 2006.

[From the Capital, Aug. 1, 2006]

ACADEMY CAN HELP DISPEL CLOUD FROM RAPE CASE

Whatever conduct Midshipman 1st Class Lamar Owens admitted to when he was court-martialed on rape charges, much of the second guessing following his acquittal on those charges hasn't focused on him. It has focused on the Naval Academy, which relied on noncredible testimony in a case that showcased the superintendent's crackdown on sexual harassment.

A military jury recently acquitted Midshipman Owens of raping a female midshipman. It found insufficient evidence to disregard Midshipman Owens' version of events. He contended all along that the sexual intercourse was consensual.

The female midshipman, who had a history of alcohol abuse, had returned to her dorm drunk on the night of the incident. Midshipman Owens testified that she invited him to her room and that she fell asleep during sexual intercourse.

It was her word against his—and the verdict surprised no one who followed the trial. The jury did convict Midshipman Owens of the lesser charge of conduct unbecoming of an officer, but declined to impose any punishment for it.

The case was deeply flawed. Not only did the accuser's history cast doubt on her testimony, but she didn't even cry for help from a roommate asleep just a few feet away. All the prosecutors really had solid evidence for was a sexual encounter—something that violated the institution's honor code, but is not unheard-of at the academy.

There are no winners here, but right now the biggest loser seems to be Midshipman Owens. His reputation can't be restored and the suffering for himself and his family can't be erased. The superintendent should drop any further action against him.

It is less clear what to do with his accuser. She and her friends were granted immunity for their testimony, so she faces only minor disciplinary action. Perjury trumps immunity—so if prosecutors believe she perjured herself, would they pursue those charges with equal determination?

Just what is the penalty for making a false accusation? Graduation and a commission? The accuser's name wasn't paraded before the public. Her family didn't have to face public speculation and ridicule. She was shielded. But given the problems she admitted to at the trial, is she the kind of officer we'd want to lead troops into combat?

The superintendent, Vice Adm. Rodney Rempt, inherited a school with a history of sexual misconduct. We applaud his determination to purge the academy of sexual harassment. But in the process of demonstrating their resolve, he and his staff appear to have chosen the wrong case.

We don't know if the superintendent got bad advice from the attorneys or if he decided to make an example of Midshipman Owens, the former quarterback of the Navy football team. But now that Midshipman Owens has been acquitted of rape, we believe he has suffered enough. If his accuser ends up with the commission that he deserves, then the worst miscarriage of justice is yet to come.

[From the Baltimore Sun, July 23, 2006]

OWENS ABSOLVED, BUT NAVY CASE HAS NO
WINNERS

(By Rick Maese)

Forget the campus fame, the media coverage, the proud alumni and the smiling boosters. There's no real meaning behind any of that.

The game clock only hints at this possibility, but there's a point for everybody when you realize that the game is over. When you step off the playing field, your role changes.

One minute: a star quarterback, the team's most valuable player, playing in a bowl game. The next: a worried defendant, the accused, marooned far away from the football field.

One minute: a successful coach, the father figure, a leader of men. The next: a character witness, the supporter, taking a stand in a courtroom.

There's no scoreboard that will tell you this, but there wasn't a single winner when Lamar Owens, the Naval Academy's quarterback last season, was cleared of rape charges last week.

On Friday, a military jury recommended no punishment for Owens in connection with two lesser charges.

Navy coach Paul Johnson was at home when he heard the news. He picked up the phone and called Owens. It went to voice mail, and the coach said that he was happy for Owens, happy for his family, and that he hoped they could all move forward.

As tough as the past six months have been, moving forward is no easy challenge. Not for Owens and not for his accuser. Not for the academy and not for Johnson's football team.

"Lamar and his family, for them this has been a tremendous pressure," Johnson said.

"I wasn't really worried about the program. The program stands on its own. I can see where for some people, though, the verdict does vindicate Lamar and maybe it does vindicate the program a little bit."

Johnson has remained mostly tightlipped about the case. He spoke with reporters during the team's spring practice but has said little else. Even after the verdict, Johnson was careful with his words when I spoke with him Friday evening.

But you could tell how highly Johnson regards Owens. The two met six years ago when the coach recruited Owens to play for him at Division I-AA powerhouse Georgia Southern. Then, when Johnson accepted the Navy job five years ago, he persuaded Owens to follow him to Annapolis.

There's a reason that Owens' defense attorneys called on Johnson as a character witness. The coach took the stand and said Owens had always been "above reproach," but the judge, Navy Cmdr. John Maksym, barred Johnson from sharing any opinions on the charges brought against Owens.

"What they were saying Lamar did, well, it was just totally out of character," Johnson told me on Friday. "The accusations weren't the Lamar I knew."

That's why it was so easy for Johnson to tell everyone to just allow the case to play out. Johnson says he was confident that if Owens was not guilty, the evidence and testimony would reveal it.

"I think some people are quick to jump to conclusions," he said. "But my take all along was: Let's wait and see what happens. People want to rush to judgment, but that's not fair to anybody. You have to give a guy a chance to defend himself."

The charges never made sense to anyone who knew Owens. He was from a good home—his father works for the power company, his mother is a prenatal nurse. He attended a military school before coming to the Naval Academy. He recited Scripture to friends and attended Bible study sessions every Thursday.

In fact, after the accuser went to academy officials with her allegations, several of Owens' teammates wanted to confront her en masse. Owens pleaded with them not to. He even went to Johnson and asked the coach to also discourage his teammates.

They all love Owens. It's why the players voted him Most Valuable Player of last season's 8-4 team. It's why they were in court for 10 straight days, sitting together in the gallery as a show of support.

They all breathed a sigh of relief Friday. What they knew about their friend, now everyone knew.

But no one thinks this is completely over. When someone levies a serious charge, such as rape, the pounding of a gavel doesn't make everything disappear.

Owens has completed his classwork but isn't certain he'll be allowed to graduate. There's also the possibility that he could be expelled from the academy and forced to repay costs for his taxpayer-funded schooling: $140,000.

"He's been remarkably upbeat," Johnson said of Owens. "I think he's handling stuff very well."

Owens won, but so much has been lost. In sports, victory is supposed to be the ultimate reward, but that doesn't always translate neatly to the real world.

There's so often a gray area—between consent and force, between innocence and guilt, between winning and losing.

"Nobody wins in these situations," Johnson said.

Owens is a free man now. The Midshipmen begin practice next week. And life at the academy is back to normal.

But not really.

There are lessons in this for everyone—surely, for Owens and his accuser, but also for team officials and school administrators. It's just unfortunate that this is how lessons are learned.

Owens led his team in rushing and passing and touchdowns last season. He took the Midshipmen to the Poinsettia Bowl, a 51-30 win over Colorado State. It was a great senior season, one most Navy fans won't soon forget.

Time will pass and Owens' place in school lore will be cemented. When that happens, it'd be nice if Owens is remembered for all that he did at the academy and not for something he didn't.

FREEDOM FOR FÉLIX GERARDO VEGA RUÍZ

HON. LINCOLN DIAZ-BALART

OF FLORIDA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 7, 2006

Mr. LINCOLN DIAZ-BALART of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to speak about Félix Gerardo Vega Ruíz, a political prisoner in totalitarian Cuba.

Mr. Vega Ruíz is a member of the Cuban Democratic Workers Union and the Pro Human Rights party. As a courageous member of the opposition, he has steadfastly demanded freedom, democracy, and human rights for the Cuban people. He has bravely denounced the cruel policies of the tyrant and demanded that the people of Cuba be allowed their inalienable rights.

According to The Assembly to Promote Civil Society, Mr. Vega Ruíz was arrested by the dictatorship in 2003 and, after a sham trial, thrown into the totalitarian gulag. According to multiple sources, Mr. Vega Ruíz was sentenced to 7 years in the gulag. Let me be very clear, Mr. Vega Ruíz has been incarcerated in the gulag for daring to dream of and to work on behalf of a democratic Cuba.

According to NetforCuba, Mr. Vega Ruíz has continued to oppose the tyrannical regime while locked in the gulag. He has conducted hunger strikes, including one that lasted 83 days and nearly killed him, to call attention to the horrific abuses of the dictatorship. He has also been stabbed while in the gulag. Let me say that again, Mr. Vega Ruíz has been stabbed while he languishes in the abhorrent gulag, and yet he continues to steadfastly oppose the gangster regime in Havana.

Mr. Vega Ruíz is a brilliant example of the heroism of the Cuban people. Mr. Vega Ruíz knows the violence, abuse, and repression that will be used to try to break him. Yet he stands strong in the strength of his conviction that the people of Cuba should be and will be free. Mr. Vega Ruíz is one of the many heroes of the Cuban democratic movement who are locked in the dungeons of the dictatorship for their beliefs. They are symbols of freedom and democracy who will always be remembered with respect and admiration when freedom reigns again in Cuba.

Mr. Speaker, this courageous man is locked in the tyrant's gulag for failing to keep silent about the nightmare that is the Castro regime. It is unacceptable that, while the world stands by in silence and acquiescence, pro democracy activists like Mr. Vega Ruíz are systematically tortured. My Colleagues, we must never forget those who are locked in gulags because of their desire for freedom for their countries. We must demand the immediate and unconditional release of Felix Gerardo Vega Ruíz and every prisoner of conscience in totalitarian Cuba.

RECOGNIZING NIKITA RODRIGUES FOR HER INSPIRING SPEECH

HON. HAROLD ROGERS

OF KENTUCKY

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 7, 2006

Mr. ROGERS of Kentucky. Mr. Speaker, we need not worry about America's future if all our up and coming leaders believe in her as does a high school student in my District who delivered the following "Message for America" to an audience of young people.

Nikita Rodrigues lives in my hometown of Somerset, Kentucky and is an outstanding person, as you can tell.

"MY MESSAGE FOR AMERICA"

Ladies and Gentlemen, I speak to you today as a young American. Let that serve as sufficient warning that what I have to say contains equal proportions of young Hope and American Pride. These are the priceless ingredients of my Message for America, which is, "America: Be, all that you can be."

As a young American I am sick and tired of the naysayers that predict the end of the American dream. I am sick of reading about the differences between the red and the blue states and how those insurmountable differences will suffocate our future as Americans. I am sick of hearing about Americans being described as consumers, not producers. And I am sick of people taking pot shots at my country as being past her glory years. To all these naysayers, divisionists, and pessimists I have only one thing to say, "Your mistake lies in under-estimating the youth of America."

It was our past-President Bill Clinton who once said, "There is nothing wrong with America that cannot be cured by what is right with America!" America's most priceless asset lies not in her immense natural resources, not in her huge factories, not in her stores of gold, not her natural beauty nor her system of incredible highways. America's greatest assets still are the character of her people and the optimism of her youth.

We the youth of America must believe that we can make a difference. We must participate in the political process and hold our leaders accountable when partisan politics stymies our progress. If American high-schoolers are lagging behind the rest of the world, it is time to demand that our schools foster excellence and competitiveness rather than comfortable mediocrity. In the flat world of today, American youth must step up and compete. Yes, we are more diverse than we ever were, but that diversity can and must be our strength.

In his book, "What's so Great About America" Dinesh D'Souza had this to say about our country. "America is the greatest, freest and most decent society in existence. It is an oasis of goodness in a desert of cynicism and barbarism. This country, once an experiment unique in the world, is now the last best hope for the world."

That hope and responsibility rests firmly on our young American shoulders. We can either shrug it off or bear down and accept the daunting challenge to each do our part to make America—All That She Can Be!

Nikita Rodrigues, Somerset, Kentucky

TRIBUTE TO LEO SHERLOCK HOLMES

HON. ROBERT A. BRADY

OF PENNSYLVANIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 7, 2006

Mr. BRADY of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, I rise to honor the life, dedication and contributions of Mr. Leo Sherlock Holmes, who passed away on July 21, 2006.

Mr. Holmes served the U.S. Army as a member of the 99th Fighter Squadron of the Tuskegee Airmen during World War II, and in November 1965 he became the first African American to be elected to Chester City Council. Mr. Holmes served as an inspiration for many people. Because of his trail blazing, the impossible became possible and a reality.

Aside from his career on City Council, Mr. Holmes was also a City Treasurer, a math teacher at Frederick Douglass Junior High School, and a deacon at Bethany Baptist and, later, Calvary Baptist Church. It could never be said that Leo was not an active person. He loved people and lived under the motto that he would be a better person when he reached out to help others.

Mr. Holmes served as a Councilman for the City of Chester for 14 years. He then served as Personnel Director before retiring as City Treasurer on January 10, 1986. Believing and accepting that the people of Chester entrusted him in this position, Leo worked hard to address the issues and answer to the call of the people to the best of his ability. In September of 1990, Leo was appointed to the Board of Directors of the Chester Water Authority and served for 12 years before retiring due to increasing health problems.

Mr. Holmes was dedicated and devoted to the Masonic Order. His journey there started on December 3, 1955 until he his failing health forced him to leave his Masonic office in October of 1990. Upon his resignation the Grand Lodge unanimously voted that he be recognized as the Right Worshipful Grand Secretary Emeritus of the Most Worshipful Prince Hall Grand Lodge, Free and Accepted Masons of Pennsylvania.

Throughout his career, Mr. Holmes has led by example and we all have benefited from his leadership, intellect and integrity. Mr. Holmes' passing represents the loss of a powerful and committed voice, and it is for these reasons I ask that you and my other distinguished colleagues rise to honor him.

RECOGNIZING KEVIN JUSTICE OF CITRUS COUNTY, FLORIDA

HON. GINNY BROWN-WAITE

OF FLORIDA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 7, 2006

Ms. GINNY BROWN-WAITE of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor Kevin Justice of Citrus County, Florida, an Army Chief Warrant Officer with More than twenty-four years of service.

Chief Warrant Officer Justice is a graduate of Hernando High School and the Florida Military Academy, where he attended Officer Candidate School. When he is not deployed overseas, Kevin attends the First United Methodist Church and tries to find time for a round of golf. During his many missions abroad, he sets up a web cam to keep in touch with his wife Shannan, his two children, Nickolus and Hillery and his parents Jay and Mary Justice.

One of the benefits of being in service for Kevin is the opportunity to travel to many countries, including the United Arab Emirates, England, Afghanistan, and the Netherlands. While serving in Operation Enduring Freedom, Kevin was awarded the Bronze Star for justifying the need for additional troops and rotating soldiers in the field.

As a member of the Florida National Guard, Kevin has been deployed for many of the hurricanes that have struck Florida's shores, including Andrew, Charlie, Jeanne and Ivan. Kevin served primarily as a liaison for military assistance and was the go to person to acquire supplies. He went to Oakley Fruit Company to request the use of their tankers to provide purified water to dialysis patients.

One of Kevin's highest honors is his membership in the Royal Order of Saint Barbara, an honorary military society of the United States Field Artillery. Both U.S. Marine and Army field artillery, along with their military and civilian supporters, are eligible for membership. The order links field artillerymen of the past and present in a brotherhood of professionalism, selfless service and sacrifice symbolized by Saint Barbara.

Mr. Speaker, it is soldiers like Kevin Justice who volunteer to protect the freedoms that all Americans hold dear to their hearts. While brave men and women like Kevin serve in the name of freedom and liberty, his family, friends and loved ones should know that this Congress will never forget his sacrifice and commitment.

HONORING ENVIRONMENTAL ACTIVIST DAVID HAHN-BAKER

HON. BRIAN HIGGINS

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 7, 2006

Mr. HIGGINS. Mr. Speaker, It is my distinct honor to recognize David Hahn-Baker as the 2006 recipient of the Paul MacClennan Environmental Citizen of the Year Award as presented by Eire County Environmental Education Institute. ECEEI has chosen to acknowledge Mr. Hahn-Baker's lifelong commitment to environmental causes, which are deserving of acknowledgement before this chamber.

Mr. Hahn-Baker is the Founder and President of Inside/Out Political Consultants. An independent national consulting firm based in Buffalo, NY, Inside/Out works with national and local organizations across the country to address the intensifying environmental crisis.

Mr. Hahn-Baker's organization has worked with numerous local and national environmental organizations, including: Community Action Organization of Erie County; Earth Day Network; Buffalo Foundation; Tides Foundation; National Religious Partnership for the Environment; American Resources Information Network; EarthShare; League of Conservation Voters; National Wildlife Foundation; Lawyer's Committee for Civil Rights Under Law; Greenpeace USA; Southern Organizing Committee.

Mr. Hahn-Baker has also taught graduate and undergraduate classes at the University of Michigan and George Washington University. Additionally, Mr. Hahn-Baker was instrumental in the development of the Environment Health Advisory Network at the State University of New York at Buffalo.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to take this opportunity to publicly thank Mr. Hahn-Baker who has dedicated his professional career to environmental preservation. I ask my colleagues to join me in recognizing Mr. David Hahn Baker whom is so richly deserving of this honor.

HONORING MR. ALEX TRUJILLO, REGIONAL ADMINISTRATOR FOR THE CENTERS FOR MEDICARE AND MEDICAID SERVICES

HON. MARK UDALL

OF COLORADO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 7, 2006

Mr. UDALL of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor Mr. Alex Trujillo, who has served for 35 years in the federal government, most recently as the Region VIII Administrator for the Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services. A personable, thoughtful and caring individual, Mr. Trujillo has worked closely with my office on numerous occasions to ensure that beneficiaries of Medicare, Medicaid and Children's Health Programs are receiving reliable information from which to base their healthcare decisions.

Under Mr. Trujillo's direction, nearly 92 percent of beneficiaries in Region VIII now have prescription drug coverage. This is a remarkable number of people receiving much needed healthcare coverage, especially in a time of rising prescription drug costs.

Over the past four decades, Medicare has grown to become a critical provider of healthcare services for millions of Americans. More often than not, recipients of Medicare are not fully aware of all of the advantages and health benefits to which they are entitled. Consequently, many beneficiaries pay a higher premium for their healthcare or do not understand where and how they can make savings. One of Alex Trujillo's accomplishments has been his leadership in improving public education about Medicare. During his tenure, Region VIII has measured an increase in responsible healthcare decision-making by beneficiaries that not only provides better quality healthcare, but also utilizes services more efficiently. This is an important accomplishment considering that Region VIII provides services for 3.2 percent of the U.S. population. It is also one of the biggest regions geographically, with a coverage area that stretches from Colorado to Montana, Wyoming, Utah, North Dakota and South Dakota. Mr. Trujillo's attention to rural communities has also been noteworthy.

Following his graduation from college in 1971, Mr. Trujillo entered public service at the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services. For the last 20 years he has worked for the Center for Medicare and Medicaid Services (CMS). He gained valuable experience in the Divisions of Medicare and Health Standards and Quality, and also served as the Assistant Regional Inspector General for the Office of Investigations and Office of the Inspector General. In short, he knows the landscape of these agencies and developed a reputation for exceptional service.

Mr. Speaker, I ask my colleagues to join me in expressing our appreciation to Alex Trujillo for his record of service in the federal government.

IN RECOGNITION OF DAVID
LAWRENCE, JR.

HON. DEBBIE WASSERMAN SCHULTZ
OF FLORIDA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, September 7, 2006

Ms. WASSERMAN SCHULTZ. Mr. Speaker, David Lawrence, Jr. is a 20-year veteran of the newspaper business, serving in many capacities including positions as the editor of the Charlotte Observer, the publisher and executive editor of the Detroit Free Press, and the publisher of the Miami Herald which, under his leadership, won five Pulitzer Prizes for investigative reporting, meritorious public service, editorial cartooning and local news reporting.

David Lawrence, Jr. has been awarded eleven honorary doctoral degrees and has received numerous awards for his writing, including the First Amendment Award from the Scripps Howard Foundation and the Inter American Press Association Commentary Award.

After his retirement from The Miami Herald in 1999, David Lawrence, Jr. left the newspaper business entirely and focused his attention on child advocacy and early childhood education initiatives. His service in support of these efforts include his roles as Chairman of the Children's Trust, President of The Early Childhood Initiative, Chairman of the Florida Partnership for School Readiness, Chairman of the Governor's Blue Ribbon Panel on Child Protection, and member of the High/Scope Educational Research Foundation and the Foundation for Child Development.

His legacy of education and service to the community will continue at the David Lawrence, Jr. K-8 Center, a Miami-Dade County Public School for 1,600 students across from the north campus of Florida International University in North Miami, Florida. Mr. Lawrence, Jr.'s work exemplifies the contributions of so many South Floridians who work tirelessly to strengthen our community. My sincerest gratitude to a great journalist, philanthropist and my constituent, David Lawrence, Jr.

RECOGNITION OF DR. DENNIS SPELLMANN

HON. W. TODD AKIN

OF MISSOURI
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, September 7, 2006

Mr. AKIN. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to state for the record how deeply saddened I am by the recent death of Dr. Dennis Spellmann.

As President of Lindenwood University in St. Charles Missouri since 1989, Dr. Spellmann leaves a legacy of success. His unique leadership style resulted in the tremendous growth of Lindenwood from a small struggling college, to the beautiful sprawling campus of almost 3,500 students (living on campus) that it is today as Lindenwood University.

In my many conversations with Dr. Spellmann over the past five and a half years, I was keenly aware of his convictions. He was a man of deep faith and commitment. He was a patriot and a proud American who made his life a reflection of what our forefathers intended in "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness". His love and concern for the students and faculty under his charge was evident in the vigor and passion with which he approached every issue and hurdle he navigated.

As the Congressman for Missouri's second district, I know I speak for many, especially those in St. Charles County who are the most direct beneficiaries of the many successes of Lindenwood University during Dr. Spellmann's tenure, when I say, he will be greatly missed.

IN MEMORY OF ARMY SERGEANT
FIRST CLASS RICHARD HENKES

HON. MIKE ROSS

OF ARKANSAS
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, September 7, 2006

Mr. ROSS. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to Army Sergeant First Class Richard Henkes, who died on September 3, 2006, fighting for our country in Mosul, Iraq, supporting Operation Iraqi Freedom. Richard Henkes, 32 years old, was killed during combat when a roadside bomb struck his military vehicle. Richard Henkes was assigned to the U.S. Army's C Company, 2nd Battalion, 3rd Infantry Regiment, 2nd Infantry Division in Fort Lewis, Washington.

Following a family tradition of service in U.S. Armed Forces, Richard Henkes enlisted in the U.S. Army in 1992 and had been serving in Mosul for the past two months. His father served in the Air Force, both grandfathers were in the Army and fought in World War II and a great grandfather fought in World War I. While not serving our country, Richard Henkes enjoyed spending time with his five year-old daughter and had a passion for snowboarding.

I am deeply saddened by the tragic loss of soldiers who have died while supporting Operation Iraqi Freedom. These brave Americans lost their lives while making the ultimate sacrifice to serve our country, and I will be forever grateful to them for their courageous spirit.

Richard Henkes gave his life to serve our country and will forever be remembered as a hero, a son, and a father. My deepest condolences go out to his daughter Isabel; his parents Chris and Jim Stanton and Richard and Karen Henkes; his sisters Tamara Henkes Bass, Dana Harmel and Karen Henkes; and his brothers, Mark Holmgren and Paul Stanton. I know Army Sergeant First Class Henkes was proud of his service to the U.S. Army and to our country. He will be missed by his family, fellow soldiers, and all those who knew him and counted him as a friend. I will continue to keep Richard Henkes and his family in my thoughts and prayers.

TRIBUTE TO THE LATE B.D.
KANAN, FORMER KANSAS STATE SENATOR

HON. DENNIS MOORE

OF KANSAS
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, September 7, 2006

Mr. MOORE of Kansas. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to note the passing, on August 7, of former Kansas State Senator B.D. Kanan, of Kansas City, Kansas.

Senator Kanan was born Nov. 26, 1924 to John Walter and Hattie Pearl (Evans) Kanan in Cameron, Missouri. He was a Kansas State Senator from 1988 to 1992 and was the founder and owner of TRAFTEC in Kansas City, Kansas, since 1972. Previously, he had worked as a truck driver for Auto Transport for 19 years. Senator Kanan was a member of Christ the King Catholic Church and the Knights of Columbus. He was a Teamster and a member of ATSSA for over 32 years. He was preceded in death by his parents, two brothers and one sister as well as a granddaughter, Heather Lorraine.

Survivors include his wife of 62 years, Betty Jo; their sons: Bernard, Jr., of Basehor, Kansas, and Walter of Kansas City, Kansas; and their daughters: Donna "Pug" Uzzell of Kansas City, Kansas, Elizabeth "Suzie" Lorraine of Kansas City, Kansas, Mary Michelle Chapman of Seffner, Florida, Karen Martin of Kansas City, Kansas, Jamie Doolittle of Shawnee, Kansas, and Roseanne Smallwood of Fairmont, Kansas, as well as 17 grandchildren and 10 great-grandchildren.

Mr. Speaker, B.D. Kanan was an active, concerned citizen who did much to improve conditions in his home community of Kansas City, Kansas, and Wyandotte County, particularly with regard to improving the local transportation infrastructure. He served his constituents with honor and integrity as a member of the Kansas State Senate, and I am pleased to have this opportunity to publicly note his passing and to honor his record of public service. I include in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD an article about Senator Kanan's legacy that appeared in the Kansas City Kansan.

[From the Kansas City Kansan]

FORMER STATE SENATOR, BUSINESSMAN B.D.
KANAN, 81, DIES
(By Adam Torres)

Kansas City, Kan., lost a prominent citizen and former state senator this week. Bernard "B.D." Kanan, 81, passed away at his KCK home Monday. Kanan had a heart condition that had been troubling him in recent weeks, according to one of his daughters, Donna "Pug" Uzzell.

For 18 years, Kanan worked as a truck driver. When driving once, he noticed how inconvenient the barricades and construction signs were, Uzzell said. Kanan designed a barricade that was easier to use.

"He got a patent for it and started his company, TRAFFTEC," Uzzell said.

In the 1980s, Kanan started to feel that KCK was not facing certain issues that it should, Uzzell said. He decided to use his own funds to represent the people of KCK and started a "Fight Back" initiative. Through the initiative, Kanan purchased advertising space in The Kansas City Kansan.

"Concerned citizens would write to him about certain issues and he would address them in a 'fight back' ad that he would personally buy," Uzzell said. "He lived his whole life in KCK and he really cared about the community. It seemed like no one was addressing the citizens." Thus began Kanan's political career, although it wasn't his original intention.

"He really didn't mean for it to get into politics," Uzzell said. Kanan ran for state senate, with the help of his wife of 62 years, Betty Jo, and eight children, and won the election. He served for one term, from 1988 to 1992.

"That was enough for him," Uzzell said. Kanan, a Democrat, ran for the seat against David Haley, who currently holds the seat as a Democrat after losing to Kanan as a Republican. Despite being on opposite sides of the political aisle for a time, Haley said he had a great deal of respect for Kanan.

"I was always impressed with how cordial he was to me," Haley said, "and that was a relationship we shared even after I switched parties." Uzzell said her dad was fair politician who was concerned about the citizens he represented.

"He wasn't bought by lobbyists," Uzzell said. "He didn't go to their cocktail hours."

Former Kansas state representative and current Edwardsville, Kan., City Administrator Doug Spangler said Kanan worked on legislation that improved the highway system throughout the county. "B.D. was instrumental in the passage of the original transportation bill that funded so many improvements in Wyandotte County and the entire state of Kansas," Spangler said.

"He's going to be remembered for his concern for highway safety and for being an advocate for the Kansas highway system," Haley said. "Because of that, we have what is now one of the finest highway systems in this part of the U.S."

Spangler also said Kanan cared about the disadvantaged in Wyandotte County. "Senator Kanan was a very caring and wonderful person who always kept Wyandotte County residents in mind when he voted in the Kansas Senate," Spangler said. "He was always for the underdog and would reach out to help the less fortunate. He had a big heart and to know him was to love him."

Kanan, a member of Christ the King Church and the Knights of Columbus, once bought hundreds of fans to give to those who needed them during a heat wave, Spangler said. He also worked and supported homeless shelters and helped people financially, Uzzell said. "He was quite the person in the community," Uzzell said.

Kanan enjoyed seeing the development in western Wyandotte County over the last few years. He was proud of its happening in the community, Uzzell said. "He really wanted to take our mother (Kanan's wife of 62 years, Betty Jo) to the Legends (at Village West). He wasn't able to but we promised to do it for him."

TRIBUTE TO RICHARD TODD RHODES

HON. MIKE McINTYRE

OF NORTH CAROLINA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 7, 2006

Mr. McINTYRE. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to Richard Todd Rhodes of Wilmington, North Carolina, who sacrificed his life on August 17, 2006 while valiantly serving his country as a private contractor with Cochise Company in Iraq. Our heartfelt thanks and prayers are for his family and friends in this time of grief.

For 8 years, Todd served his country honorably as a member of the United States Marine Corps. After serving in Desert Shield/Desert Storm, he was employed as a security specialist with United States Protection Investigation while in Afghanistan, and most recently, with Cochise Company working in Iraq. For 12 years, Todd and his wife, Terry, owned and operated Best Video and Audio in Jacksonville, N.C.

Todd was a loving husband to Terry and a dedicated father to two sons, Shaun Rhodes and Ryan Rhodes, all of Wilmington, with whom he spent many hours teaching them life lessons and individual skills, such as construction and diving. Todd loved life and enjoyed such activities as dancing, diving, tennis and sailing. His memory will be forever cherished by his family and the friends and co-workers whose lives he touched in life's journey.

As a member of the U.S. Marine Corps and a contractor in Iraq, Todd dedicated his career to defending the values this Nation holds dear. By risking his life to ensure the safety of others, he made the ultimate sacrifice. His valiant actions and steadfast service remind us of the gratitude we feel toward him and all the other servicemen and women and civilians who have given their lives serving as guardians of this great country. Todd was indeed a man of courage and integrity.

Mr. Speaker, may the memory of Richard Todd Rhodes live on in our hearts, and may God's strength and peace be with his family.

TRIBUTE TO SERGEANT FIRST CLASS MELVIN HILL

HON. JAMES P. MORAN

OF VIRGINIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 7, 2006

Mr. MORAN of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, today I take the time to honor a distinguished veteran from the Commonwealth of Virginia, SFC

Melvin Hill. A true patriot for his heroic service to our country, Hill was born on March 26, 1939 in Brooklyn. In 1955 he enlisted in the U.S. Army and was assigned to the 18th Regimental Combat Team (Airborne) at Fort Campbell, Kentucky. There he was selected to be an instructor at the Airborne School. He was later assigned to Germany, where he was responsible for conducting convoys from Helmstadt, Germany to insure U.S. access to Berlin. On each tour of duty, he also served as a guard at Spandau Prison, which at that time housed Rudolph Hess, Albert Speer, and Baldur von Schirach. In 1964 Hill was accepted for Special Forces training and assignment at Fort Bragg, North Carolina. After completing this training, he was assigned to the Military Advisory Command in Vietnam.

It was in this capacity that Sergeant Hill was awarded a Silver Star on January 18, 1971 for his fearless actions while serving as Leader of a Combined Reconnaissance Team in November of 1970. In this role, Sergeant Hill courageously led his team from the tailgate of a C-130 aircraft at an altitude of 17,000 feet on the first combat high altitude free fall into hostile territory in the history of the United States Army. His team landed in rugged and dangerous terrain in enemy territory where, despite equipment malfunctions, Sergeant Hill refused to abandon his team. They remained behind enemy lines in the harshest conditions for 5 days where, led by Sergeant Hill, the team gathered sufficient hard intelligence to mark the mission a success. When his transmit voice radio malfunctioned, Sergeant Hill used another device to transmit instructions to his team via Morse code and in this manner triangulated multiple targets for the Air Force. During the extraction from enemy territory, Sergeant Hill was wounded by a bullet to the leg, but due to his courage and leadership, his team was recovered with no losses and no other injuries.

After leading this successful mission, Hill extended his tour of duty to teach high altitude Military Free Fall techniques to other Reconnaissance teams. After retirement from the military, Hill continued to serve his country through a position in the U.S. General Services Administration in Washington, D.C., where he worked for 14 years and was recognized for his innovative approach to Contract Support, winning the Administrator's Meritorious Service Award and a citation from the Governor of Maryland.

Mr. Speaker, I am grateful today to recognize the achievements of SFC Melvin Hill that are so long overdue. His leadership and courage in combat during our nation's time of war require our sincere appreciation. I wish him the best in his future endeavors.

TRIBUTE TO BISHOP ARTHUR
GEORGE BURRELL

HON. DALE E. KILDEE

OF MICHIGAN

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 7, 2006

Mr. KILDEE. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor the memory of Bishop Arthur George Burrell. St. George Beth El Church of God in Christ will hold a remembrance dinner in his honor on September 16 in my hometown of Flint, Michigan.

Bishop Burrell began his service to the church in 1947. He worked as a Deacon, Sunday School Teacher, Church Secretary and Broadcast Announcer until 1962. On April 14, 1962 Bishop C.J. Johnson ordained him and almost a year later he became the pastor of Gospel Temple Church of God in Christ. Under his leadership, the church negotiated the purchase of a new building in 1972 and changed the name to St. George Beth El Church of God in Christ.

During his ministry Bishop Burrell served as the State Sunday School Superintendent from 1975 to 1980 for the Northeast Michigan Jurisdiction, Administrative Assistant to the Bishop, and Chairman of the Commission of Budget and Finance. He served as the District Superintendent of the Progressive District and in 2002 he celebrated the Progressive District's Golden Jubilee. Bishop Burrell also served as the National Financier of the International Sunday School Department and in April 1998 he received the Outstanding Service Award to the Church of God in Christ from the Association of Church of God in Christ Business Owners.

Bishop Brooks, with the concurrence of the Presiding Bishop and the General Board of the Church of God in Christ, appointed Bishop Burrell to Assistant Jurisdictional Bishop at the 81st Annual Holy Convocation of the Northeast Michigan (Historic First) Jurisdiction.

In addition to his work for the church, Bishop Burrell retired from General Motors after 35 years of employment. He was married to Norma Burrell for 46 years and they had three sons. Bishop Burrell passed away in 2002.

Mr. Speaker, I ask the House of Representatives to join me in honoring the memory of Bishop Arthur George Burrell and St. George Beth El Church of God in Christ as they celebrate his ministry and life.

HONORING NYS POLICE TROOPER
JOSEPH A. LONGOBARDO

HON. BRIAN HIGGINS

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 7, 2006

Mr. HIGGINS. Mr. Speaker, it is with much sadness that I rise and respectfully request the members of this honorable chamber to join me in commemorating the life of Joseph A. Longobardo, a respected member of the New York State Police, who was killed while serving his State.

A native of Amsterdam, New York, residing in Ballston Spa, Saratoga County, Trooper Longobardo, 32, is survived by his wife and 1-year-old son.

Trooper Longobardo, an 8-year veteran of the State Police, was a 1998 graduate of the New York State Police Academy, where he distinguished himself through his commitment of service to the Citizens of the State of New York.

Trooper Longobardo's commitment and dedication to protecting and serving the citizens of New York State was evidenced by his service in the elite Mobile Response Team. We recognize and thank Trooper Longobardo for his desire and dedication to the New York State Police Force.

Trooper Longobardo desire to serve his fellow Americans extended beyond his Police work, as he was also a Technical Sergeant in the New York Air National Guard, based out of Scotia, Schenectady County.

With great sadness, I, along with the Great State of New York and the United States at large, celebrate Trooper Joseph A. Longobardo achievements in life as we mourn his tragic passing in the line of duty. I thank you, Mr. Speaker, for offering me an opportunity to share with the House Trooper Longobardo's accomplishments and for allowing the chamber this chance to join the State of New York in honoring his life.

RECOGNIZES JEREMY REIS

HON. GINNY BROWN-WAITE

OF FLORIDA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 7, 2006

Ms. GINNY BROWN-WAITE of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor Jeremy Reis, a Private in the Marine Corps.

Private Reis attended Lovejoy High School in Jonesboro, Georgia, transferring his senior year to Newton County High, graduating earlier this year in May. His original post-graduate plans were to study art and photography, but following the events of September 11, Private Reis felt the call to duty and enlisted in the Marine Corps. When his tour of duty is complete he hopes to attend art school and fulfill his dream.

Entering basic training in August 2006 at Parris Island, South Carolina, Private Reis is training to be a computer programming specialist.

Raised as part of a close-knit family, Private Reis is a member of his Church Youth group and enjoys hunting with his father and brothers. He also enjoys visiting his grandparents at their home in Citrus County, Florida. Private Reis has five dogs, including a pug named Mojo and a boxer named Jordan.

Mr. Speaker, it is soldiers like Jeremy Reis who volunteer to protect the freedoms that all Americans hold dear to their hearts. He is to be commended for his service to our Nation and for his commitment to his family and loved ones.

RECOGNIZING MR. LEO McHALE AND MARYLAND'S FIRST PRIVATE 9/11 MEMORIAL

HON. ROSCOE G. BARTLETT

OF MARYLAND

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 7, 2006

Mr. BARTLETT of Maryland. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize the efforts of one of my constituents, Mr. Leo McHale, of Walkersville, Maryland, to honor the heroes of 9/11.

With community support, Mr. McHale created Maryland's first private memorial to be member and honor the heroes who responded to the terrorist attacks and those who perished on September 11, 2001. It was dedicated on May 10, 2003.

I personally would like to thank Mr. McHale and the Walkersville residents whose joint efforts and hard work are responsible for the completion of this commemorative project. In spite of the terrible losses on that cataclysmic day, it is important to recognize the astounding community efforts and cooperative response that symbolize the character, pride and unity of the American people.

With 9/11's 5th anniversary approaching, it is essential that the American people continue to remember the events that occurred when America was attacked on September 11, 2001. Through the efforts of Mr. Leo McHale—and so many others—we continue to keep the memory alive by honoring the heroes who responded and the men, women and children whose lives were mercilessly and cruelly taken on 9/11.

PAYING TRIBUTE TO RANDOLPH C.
ROBINSON, M.D., D.D.S

HON. THOMAS G. TANCREDO

OF COLORADO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 7, 2006

Mr. TANCREDO. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize the dedicated and inspiring career of Dr. Randolph Robinson. Dr. Robinson, along with his wife, Ginger, founded Face the Challenge. This charitable organization has provided thousands of free surgeries to the world's poorest children in order to correct facial deformities.

Dr. Robinson has used his medical knowledge and surgical skills to better the lives of many impoverished people around the world. Face the Challenge has traveled to many countries in South America, Eastern Europe and Asia with the goal of treating the indigent and most affected.

Dr. Robinson, who practices in Lone Tree, Colorado, has performed 836 free facial surgeries since 1993. His selfless contributions should be commended and his dedication to public service deserves our highest regard. I wish to thank Dr. Robinson for his tireless efforts to bring medical advances to the world's poor.

IN MEMORY OF SERGEANT JEFFREY
SCOTT BROWN, UNITED STATES ARMY

HON. PETE SESSIONS

OF TEXAS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 7, 2006

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor the memory of Army Sergeant Jeffrey Scott Brown, an American hero who gave his life in defense of liberty and freedom. He made the ultimate sacrifice so that others might know freedom, and I am humbled by his bravery and selflessness.

Sergeant Brown lost his life on August 10, 2006 due to injuries sustained when his UH-

60 Blackhawk helicopter crashed in Rutbah, Iraq during combat operations in support of Operation Iraqi Freedom. He was 25 years old. Sergeant Brown was assigned to the 82nd Medical Company at Fort Riley, Kansas.

Sergeant Brown came from a family dedicated to American ideals and serving this great Nation. His father is a Vietnam veteran and his brother, Timothy, currently serves as a crew chief on an Apache helicopter in Germany. Sergeant Brown is survived by his wife, Ashley, of Carrollton, Texas; his parents, Ed and Diane Brown of Trinity Center, California; his brothers, Timothy and Michael; and his sister, Kathryn.

I extend my sincerest condolences to the family and friends of Sergeant Brown. He leaves behind a legacy marked by courage, integrity and character. May God bless all those he loved, and may they know the gratitude of the American people.

HONORING KATHRYN SWANSON

HON. JAMES L. OBERSTAR

OF MINNESOTA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 7, 2006

Mr. OBERSTAR. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to Kathryn Swanson, a dedicated public servant whose passionate commitment to highway safety has guided her throughout her career.

Kathy has been a leading, influential figure in highway safety for more than 25 years, working tirelessly to save lives and prevent injuries on our Nation's roads.

Since 1998, Kathy has served as director of Minnesota's Office of Traffic Safety in the state's Department of Public Safety. Prior to being director, she served as deputy director, safety program coordinator, and as a research analyst.

As one of the longest tenured members of the state highway safety community, Kathy's counsel is frequently sought by other states and organizations around the country.

In her role as director, Kathy administers the state and community highway safety grant programs in Minnesota. During her tenure, the state has achieved significant progress including an 83.9 percent seat belt usage rate, which is above the national average. The state also achieved its lowest fatality rate ever during Kathy's tenure.

Kathy has also worked tirelessly with her counterparts in the Minnesota Department of Transportation in a true partnership aimed at significantly reducing traffic fatalities in Minnesota. Today the Towards Zero Death program is the keystone of Minnesota's safety agenda, affecting the work of various state and local agencies and private sector partners.

Kathy's success in Minnesota, her strong commitment to highway safety and the respect and support of her state peers led to her election as Vice Chair of the Governors Highway Safety Association (GHSA) in September 2002. GHSA is the nonprofit association representing the highway safety program managers of the states and the territories.

Following a leadership change in March of 2003, Kathy was elevated to Chair of GHSA, a position in which she served until the fall of 2004. Under Kathy's leadership, GHSA developed its positions on the reauthorization of our nation's surface transportation bill, the Safe, Accountable, Flexible, Efficient Transportation Equity Act: A Legacy For Users (SAFETEA-LU).

As Immediate Past Chair, Kathy continues her involvement in GHSA. In 2005, she represented the Association at a listening session for the White House Conference on Aging where she discussed the role of the state highway safety offices in enhancing the safety of older drivers. She also represented GHSA at the 2005 launch of the Ford/GHSA Driving Skills for Life teen driving safety program.

Kathy's work has no doubt prevented countless traffic fatalities and injuries in Minnesota and across the Nation. I am proud and honored to share with my colleagues this deserved tribute to Kathy Swanson, who gives so much of herself to enrich the lives of others and to serve her community and her country.

HONORING LANCE CORPORAL
PATRICK T. HOWARD

HON. ILEANA ROS-LEHTINEN

OF FLORIDA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 7, 2006

Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to wish a full and healthy recovery to Lance Corporal Patrick T. Howard, who suffered extensive injuries while on guard duty in Iraq on July 18.

Lance Corporal Howard was born and raised in Miami, and enlisted in the Marines directly after graduating from high school. In March of 2006, he was deployed to Ramadi, Iraq, and was meritoriously promoted to the rank of Lance Corporal.

I am deeply saddened about the grave nature of the injuries inflicted upon such a selfless young man from South Florida. The entire community is grateful to Lance Corporal Howard for his contributions in the struggle to spread liberty to Iraq, and values the sacrifices of all those currently defending our Nation overseas.

I ask that you please keep Lance Corporal Howard and his family in your thoughts and prayers as he completes the recovery process.

TRIBUTE TO JOYCE ROBINSON

HON. SHELLEY MOORE CAPITO

OF WEST VIRGINIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 7, 2006

Mrs. CAPITO. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to commend Joyce Robinson of her service to the Social Security Administration and to congratulate her on her upcoming retirement.

Mrs. Robinson began her career in 1975 as a Claims Clerk in the Martinsburg, West Virginia Social Security Office. She has held 7 different positions, reaching the level of Special Disability Workload Cadre Manger in the Charleston, West Virginia Social Security Office.

Mrs. Robinson has been recognized numerous times for her outstanding leadership qualities. Her immense knowledge of programs and great interpersonal communication skills led her to gain the distinction of being a liaison to her peers, as well as, to Congressional Staffs and entities outside the SSA office. She will be greatly missed as a helpful resource to me and my staff.

For her dedication and willingness to serve my constituents, the State of West Virginia, and surrounding states, I offer Mrs. Robinson my most sincere congratulations and best wishes for a well-deserved retirement.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

HON. LINDA T. SANCHEZ

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 7, 2006

Ms. LINDA T. SANCHEZ of California. Mr. Speaker, yesterday I was attending a National Policy Conference in Los Angeles, and I could not be present, subsequently missing rollcall votes numbered 427, 428, and 429. Had I been present, I would have voted:

"Aye" on rollcall No. 427, H.R. 2808, the "Abraham Lincoln Commemorative Coin Act,"

"Aye" on rollcall No. 428, H. Res. 605, "Recognizing the life of Preston Robert Tisch and his outstanding contributions to New York City, the New York Giants Football Club, the National Football League, and the United States," and

"Aye"—on rollcall No. 429, H. Res. 875, "Congratulating Spelman College on the Occasion of its 125th anniversary."

IN HONOR OF MARY BOURDETTE

HON. GEORGE MILLER

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 7, 2006

Mr. GEORGE MILLER of California. Mr. Speaker, with a heavy heart, I rise to honor the life of Mary Bourdette.

On September 5th, America lost one of its great champions for children and families. Mary Bourdette was a passionate and dedicated advocate and had an extraordinary 30-year career. Mary's tireless efforts improved the lives of countless children and families across the country.

I will personally miss her friendship, and the Nation will miss her devotion to children's welfare.

I first met Mary in California when she was working on improving education in the state. Mary and I then worked closely together when I chaired the House Select Committee on Children Youth and Families in the 1980s here in the House.

She was a skilled advocate and negotiator and her vision and persistence were critical to my efforts on child welfare policy and numerous other issues. Mary advocated for children and families in many capacities here in Washington, D.C. over the past 30 years. She worked for the Legal Services Corporation to help ensure that our poorest citizens have access to the legal system that our Constitution promises. She later worked tirelessly at the Children Defense Fund on the first major expansion of the Earned Income Tax Credit and the original enactment of the Child Care and Development Block Grant—programs that have made an enormous difference for America's poorest families.

Her work with the Child Welfare League of America as Director of Public Policy also proved vital for the well-being of America's children and families. And her 8 years with the Clinton Administration allowed Mary to play a central and critical role in the many federal policies that affect children.

Her untimely death is a tragedy. Her colleagues will miss her and her family and closest friends will mourn her loss. To them, I extend my profound condolences and empathy. But in honor of Mary, let not one of us ever forget the meaning of her life's work. Mary Bourdette believed that every child and family, no matter how poor or meager their existence, deserved the chance to live a better life. She was a model for those who wish to dedicate themselves to improving the lives of others. And for that I am grateful. Our nation is indebted to her for what she believed in and what she tried so hard to accomplish.

TRIBUTE TO NANCY KERR

HON. JOHN J. DUNCAN, JR.

OF TENNESSEE

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 7, 2006

Mr. DUNCAN. Mr. Speaker, Nancy Kerr, the founder of the first hospice program in Tennessee, was killed in a tragic accident on May 1.

I knew Nancy Kerr for a big part of my life. She was a staunch conservative and a strong supporter of both my late father and me.

She did not just talk about compassionate conservatism; she lived it.

She comforted more than 500 patients as they neared death and was doing this right up to the day of her death at age 80.

She was a wonderful woman, and this Nation is a better place today because of the love and kindness she gave to so many.

Sam Brown, a friend of mine, wrote a great article about Nancy Kerr for the August 27 edition of The Knoxville News-Sentinel.

I would like to call this article to the attention of my colleagues and other readers of the RECORD.

NURSES'S WORLD WAR II WORK LAID FOUNDATION FOR FUTURE HOSPICE CARE

(By Sam Brown)

It could have been a Hollywood movie.

She was a young, stunningly beautiful English nurse who cared for wounded British and American troops in World War II. Several dying soldiers called her an angel. Some said she looked like Katharine Hepburn. She was 18 and a student nurse when Allied forces stormed the beaches of Normandy, France. She remembers D-Day well, comforting many wounded and dying soldiers who were brought back from the front lines. After the war, she married Jim Kerr of Knoxville after saying she would never marry an American. She became the first hospice nurse in the state of Tennessee.

This is not a Hollywood script. It is the story of Nancy Wilkie Kerr.

She was born near Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia, where she spoke Malay and Chinese before she learned English. Kerr was 13 in Southampton, England, when World War II started. She lived through German bombing raids and recalled when three British Spitfires flew up to meet 20 German bombers. The air raid sirens and the screams of the wounded were etched in her memory. She wanted to help, so she became a nurse. During the war, she worked 12-hour shifts for six weeks and got two days off. Kerr once said, "I look in the face of death every day."

It was invaluable experience for what was ahead in her life.

In 1979, Kerr helped establish the first hospice program at Fort Sanders Hospital. It was also the first program of its kind in Tennessee.

I was anchoring television news for Channel 6 in 1979 and heard about the hospice program. It intrigued me. I had never heard of Elisabeth Kubler-Ross, who founded the concept in England. Hospice is a medieval term meaning a stopping-off point for weary travelers.

In 1969, Kubler-Ross wrote the book "On Death and Dying." She presented the premise that the terminally ill go through various stages from denial to acceptance as death closes in. Hospice allows them to face death with dignity. Hospice tries first and foremost to relieve pain with medication, to prepare the patient for death both mentally and physically and, if possible, to let the patient die peacefully at home.

Kerr felt the terminally ill should not die in a sterile hospital room. In a span of 25 years, she comforted more than 500 families as their loved ones went through the stages of death with dignity. Shortly after the Knoxville program started, I did a two-part TV series on hospice with Kerr.

She told me, "You become a definite part of each family with which you work. Of course you get emotionally involved, but we try to aim for what we call a 'good death' where they are tranquil and accepting. Not joyous or euphoric but rather accepting."

Kerr died in May at the age of 80, just before her death, she was still doing what she did best—nursing the sick and terminally ill. And comforting their families. The tributes poured in at her funeral.

Patty Loveday wrote in the guest book, "She helped us through two long months of Mother's illness. We could never have brought Mother home without her. She was truly a wonderful nurse. We felt like she was part of the family."

Nancy's number three son, Chris and his wife, Karen, carry on her legacy with their company, Tender Hearts Support Services, which provides companionship for the elderly with a hospice approach. "We are trying to keep Mother's mission alive. She was truly a remarkable woman," Chris Kerr said.

Ironically, Nancy Kerr did not die in a hospice environment. On the afternoon of May 1, 2006, she was killed instantly in an auto accident on Alcoa Highway.

A friend at her funeral perhaps said it best. "Heaven has gained a new angel."

175TH ANNIVERSARY OF SARCOXIE, MISSOURI

HON. ROY BLUNT

OF MISSOURI

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 7, 2006

Mr. BLUNT. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize the 175th anniversary of the City of Sarcoxie, located in Jasper County, Missouri.

The region where Sarcoxie is located was acquired by the United States as part of the Louisiana Purchase in 1803. One of the first known inhabitants of the area was Chief Sarcoxie, head of the Turtle Band of the Delaware Tribe of Indians. Thackery Vivion became the first permanent settler to Jasper County when he built a log cabin and began farming near Sarcoxie Spring in 1831, and Sarcoxie soon became the first town in Jasper County. Gene Taylor, who served in the United States House of Representatives from 1973 until 1989, was born near Sarcoxie, and the Gene Taylor Library and Museum is located on the town square.

I am proud to congratulate the City of Sarcoxie and its citizens on the 175th anniversary of this historic city.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

HON. MARK GREEN

OF WISCONSIN

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 7, 2006

Mr. GREEN of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, I was absent from Washington on Wednesday, September 6, 2006. As a result, I was not recorded for rollcall votes Nos. 427, 428, and 429. Had I been present, I would have voted "yea" on rollcall Nos. 427, 428, and 429.

HONORING ALAN BROCKMAN

HON. TIMOTHY H. BISHOP

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 7, 2006

Mr. BISHOP of New York. Mr. Speaker, I rise to recognize a distinguished American and constituent, Mr. Alan Brockman, for a successful career and a lifetime of public service exemplified by unwavering dedication to the Fire Island community along the south shore of Long Island.

Throughout his legal career, Alan has been a respected attorney and partner of the New York City law firm, Blank Rome, located in the Chrysler Building. With equal diligence and commitment, he has served Long Island residents as president of the Fire Island Pines Property Owners Association for the past 24 years, following 6 years as treasurer.

Alan's impeccable reputation and strong ties with local, state and federally elected officials have contributed to a record of exemplary representation of the Pines and effective leadership on behalf of the interests of its residents. For over forty years, Alan has opened his home to residents and friends of the Pines. Today, he enjoys traveling the world but continues to call the Pines home, where he will always be affectionately known as "the mayor," a title he has earned for dramatically improving the quality of life on Fire Island, where property values have nearly doubled as a result of his advocacy and hard work.

Alan's commitment to Long Island and the Fire Island Pines is also made evident by his numerous responsibilities, affiliations, friends, and titles, including 16 years directing the Fire Island Association. His efforts have always been focused toward making the Pines a better place to call home, and that is exactly where Alan's loyalty and his heart remain.

Mr. Speaker, it is an honor to represent constituents and civic leaders like Alan who work tirelessly to make our communities more livable and enjoyable. I am proud to congratulate Alan Brockman for a long and distinguished career, and on behalf of New York's First Congressional District and indeed all of Long Island, I wish him continued success in his future endeavors.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

HON. LORETTA SANCHEZ

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 7, 2006

Ms. LORETTA SANCHEZ of California. Mr. Speaker, on Wednesday, September 6, 2006, I was unavoidably detained due to a prior obligation.

Had I been present and voting, I would have voted as follows:

- (1) Rollcall No. 427 "yea" (H.R. 2808).
- (2) Rollcall No. 428 "yea" (H. Res. 605).
- (3) Rollcall No. 429 "yea" (H. Res. 875).

HONORING JUKE VAN OSS ON 55 YEARS OF BROADCASTING ON WHTC 1450

HON. PETER HOEKSTRA

OF MICHIGAN

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 7, 2006

Mr. HOEKSTRA. Mr. Speaker, today I rise in honor of Juke Van Oss for 55 years of broadcasting on WHTC 1450 in Holland, Mich. On Aug. 12, Juke celebrated 55 years of service to the station and his community.

Juke began his career in radio during World War II on the Pacific, Front, transporting a radio for his infantry troop and transmitting codes. When the war ended, he returned home and continued to foster his interest in radio, obtaining his amateur license and later securing a job as a radio engineer for WHTC at 27 years old.

It was not until one morning that the announcer failed to arrive on time that Juke was able to sit at the microphone. An instant favorite of listeners, Van Oss began hosting his own morning show, and for the past 45 years he has hosted "Talk of the Town." Juke has become a household name and a local celebrity in the Holland area through his years behind the mic at WHTC.

When Juke started broadcasting in 1951, the United Nations headquarters officially opened in New York, "I Love Lucy" debuted on CBS and Bobby Thomson of the New York Giants hit the "Shot Heard 'Round the World" game-winning home run against the Brooklyn Dodgers to win the National League pennant.

Mr. Van Oss is not only a radio personality, but a community servant. He has served as a member of the Saugatuck Schools Board of Education and Village Council, including three years as Mayor, as well as President of the Chamber of Commerce and a seat on the Region 8 Criminal Justice Planning Council.

Mr. Speaker, please let it be known that on this Sept. 7, 2006, that the U.S. House of Representatives acknowledges the achievements of Mr. Van Oss and wishes him the best in his upcoming years of broadcast.

BEAM ME UP

HON. THOMAS G. TANCREDO

OF COLORADO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 7, 2006

Mr. TANCREDO. Mr. Speaker, let me get this straight: The Bush administration won't let the democratically elected President of Taiwan, a staunch ally and longtime friend of the United States, so much as stop to fill his airplane with gas in Alaska.

Yet they didn't hesitate to issue a visa to Muhammad Khatami, the former President of Iran—a country the U.S. has classified as a state sponsor of terrorism for nearly the last 30 years.

What can we expect next from the Rocket Scientists at State Department, Mr. Speaker? Fidel Castro throwing out the first pitch at the next Yankee game?

Kim Jong Il spending the weekend at Disneyland?

Sudanese President Omar Al-Bashir giving a guest lecture on human rights at Cal-Berkeley?

Hugo Chavez playing a round of golf at Army Navy?

As our old friend used to say, Mr. Speaker—Beam Me Up.

IMMIGRATION REFORM

HON. MIKE PENCE

OF INDIANA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 7, 2006

Mr. PENCE. Mr. Speaker, in my lifetime, no issue has so disturbed our domestic tranquility than immigration reform.

Thanks to the leadership of this House, the American people are convinced we have a serious problem with illegal immigration and the American people know the Senate bill granting amnesty to 12M illegal immigrants is not the answer.

There are many ideas of how we can move forward. Senator KAY BAILEY HUTCHISON of Texas and I have proposed a compromise that would:

—put border security first and reject amnesty;

—after 2 years of border security only, our plan would set up a new guest worker program using American employment firms outside the United States;

—illegal immigrants would be required to leave the country and apply at these Ellis Island Centers by submitting to a background check and health screening before being issued a 2-year guest worker visa. They also would have to pass an English course to renew it; and —tough employer sanctions would drive companies and employees into this new system.

Pence-Hutchison puts border security first, and once that is accomplished, it creates a new guest worker program outside the United States without amnesty and without creating a new federal bureaucracy.

Some in Congress think we have done enough. I believe we must do more. Even in this contentious election year, the American people expect us to "be strong, courageous and do the work" they elected this Congress to do.

A TRIBUTE TO THE BRAVERY OF NORTHAMPTON COUNTY SHERIFF DEPUTIES JOE MAGEE AND COREY JACKSON

HON. G.K. BUTTERFIELD

OF NORTH CAROLINA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 7, 2006

Mr. BUTTERFIELD. Mr. Speaker, on Wednesday, July 12, 2006, the swift, determined and heroic actions of Northampton County Sheriff's Deputy Joe Magee and Northampton County Sheriff's Deputy Corey Jackson preserved the peace and protected the citizens of our community in eastern North Carolina.

During the incident, Deputy Joe Magee, a 28-year law enforcement veteran, and Deputy Corey Jackson, a 3½-year veteran of the sheriff's department, bravely took control of an enraged, armed suspect in the courtroom of the Northampton County Courthouse.

Facing a charge of murder, the suspect flew into a rage when Superior Court Judge Alma L. Hinton rejected a request to dismiss his lawyer. Despite being shackled, the suspect managed to wrestle a gun from a nearby state correction officer and fired shots.

Deputy Corey Jackson forced the suspect's arms toward the ceiling after a corrections officer was struck by a bullet in the shoulder and Deputy Joe Magee shot the inmate in the abdomen, ending the threat.

These decisive, heroic and selfless actions preserved the lives of those present and met the highest call of duty. It is my privilege today to commend the officers for their outstanding efforts and for acts of courage and quick thinking that saved the lives of the people they are sworn to protect.

Mr. Speaker, on behalf of the citizens of Northampton County, North Carolina, whom it is my privilege to represent, and on behalf of the United States Congress, it is my honor to recognize and thank Deputy Joe Magee and Deputy Corey Jackson. Their tireless dedication and exceptional bravery serve our community and our Nation well.

IN RECOGNITION OF JOHN TIP-PETS, NEWLY ELECTED DIRECTOR ON THE BOARD OF THE NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF FEDERAL CREDIT UNIONS

HON. KENNY MARCHANT

OF TEXAS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 7, 2006

Mr. MARCHANT. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize John Tippetts, the president and CEO of American Airlines Federal Credit Union, located in Dallas-Fort Worth on his election to the Board of Directors of the National Association of Federal Credit Unions (NAFCU). John has been an advocate for federal credit unions for over 15 years at the state and local level.

I know John will serve with distinction in his new post, as this is just one more in a long list of accomplishments. In addition to serving as President and CEO at AAFCU, he previously served on the Board of Directors as well. John previously served on the Filene Institute Advisory Council, the Federal Reserve's Thrift Institutions Advisory Council and Fannie Mae's National Advisory Council. Further, John currently serves on the Aspen Institute's Advisory Board for the "Initiative on Financial Security" and on NAFCU's Legislative Committee.

Under John's leadership, AAFCU has continued to grow, serving over 200,000 employees of the air transportation industry. During his time at AAFCU, John has worked hard to ensure that the credit union continue to reflect the original goals of the credit union movement; promoting thrift, encouraging volunteer leadership and cooperative ownership. AAFCU provides helpful, timely, personal service that caters to the needs and financial goals of individual members. It is that service that is the hallmark of AAFCU and the credit union movement.

Again, I wish John good luck in his new position as a member of NAFCU's Board of Directors.

REMEMBERING THE HEROES OF
SEPTEMBER 11, 2001

HON. MADELEINE Z. BORDALLO

OF GUAM

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 7, 2006

Ms. BORDALLO. Mr. Speaker, I rise today upon the 5th anniversary of September 11, 2001, in solemn remembrance of those who lost their lives as a result of the terrorist attacks that befell our beloved country on that tragic day. Americans awoke that day to witness sudden, deliberate, unconventional and planned attacks on our country and on the ideals of freedom and democracy that we cherish and hold dear to our hearts. On Guam, we were ending our day due to the time zone difference. We tuned to the live television news coverage of the attacks and watched in disbelief as the events unfolded.

The scenes from the attacks on the World Trade Center in New York City and on the Pentagon in Arlington, Virginia, and the crash of United Airlines Flight 93 in the fields of Shanksville, Pennsylvania, are etched into our memories. Many of us remember where we were that day when we first learned of the attacks, who we were with, where we first sought refuge and consolation, and where we turned in the days that followed to offer our support to those that lost loved ones, to donate blood, or to simply lend a helping hand in a remembrance project.

On this anniversary we recall the 3,031 innocent individuals whose lives were lost as a result of these terrorist attacks. We remember the valor of those who came face-to-face with the terrorists on the hijacked commercial airplanes, the courage of those trapped inside the targeted buildings, and the bravery of the first responders who came to their rescue. We remember the dedication of the personnel from the Port Authority of New York and the Federal Aviation Administration who worked under extreme pressure that day to safeguard our transportation networks and to protect the lives of passengers, pilots, and flight crews en route and in the air. Their professionalism brought control and command in an environment threatened with chaos and distress.

On Monday, September 11, 2006, the people of Guam will join the rest of the country in remembering and mourning the innocent victims of the terrorist attacks, as well as the brave men and women who gave of their lives trying to save others in the aftermath.

The events of September 11, 2001, have helped strengthen our country. Today, we are more resilient, stronger, and especially proud of our first responders and law enforcement community. Our commercial aviation industry has rebounded and commercial flight today inside the United States is safe as a result of the professionalism and dedication of airport and airline employees.

We must continue to denounce those who would do evil against our country, and to our allies around the world, and we must continue to support our men and women, sons and daughters, brothers and sisters, who fight terror abroad today.

God Bless the families who lost loved ones to the heinous attacks on our country on September 11, 2001, God Bless those who lost their lives fighting terror on foreign shores and those who continue to fight, and God Bless Guam, and God Bless our great country, the United States of America.

ACCOUNTABLE BUDGETING COMMISSION

HON. ANDER CRENSHAW

OF FLORIDA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 7, 2006

Mr. CRENSHAW. Mr. Speaker, in 1967 the Federal Government spent just over $157 billion and operated with a deficit that was under $9 billion. Today, almost 40 years later, the Federal Government spends approximately $2.7 trillion and has a $260 billion deficit.

The Federal Government's total spending and oversight has vastly changed from the 1960s, yet it still operates under the basic accounting rules established 40 years ago by President Lyndon Johnson's Commission on Budget Concepts.

Just as an engine of a 1967 Cheverolet Impala would be an automotive disaster in a 2006 Toyota Prius, our economic policies suffer today because we are using outdated concepts and antiquated accounting practices.

Today, I am introducing the Accountable Budgeting Commission. This needed legislation will provide the long overdue review of the underlying concepts that are impairing our ability to properly and effectively analyze and understand the issues we face in the 21st century.

This Commission will provide the necessary oversight and make recommendations on ways to modernize our basic budgetary principles as Congress brings more accountability and transparency to the budget process.

I look forward to working with my colleagues on this important and long overdue legislation.

HONORING MR. RAY L. PERETTI OF KENT, WASHINGTON

HON. ADAM SMITH

OF WASHINGTON

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 7, 2006

Mr. SMITH of Washington. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to highlight and commend the service of Ray L. Peretti of the Ninth Congressional District of Washington, for his service to his community and the Nation as a member of the National Association of Insurance Agents.

Mr. Peretti recently completed his term as the president of the National Association of Professional Insurance Agents, and has also served in many positions of responsibility in the association. Mr. Peretti has been a member of the board of directors of PIA National since 1995. He was also a member of the board of directors of PIA of Washington/Alaska, which is now part of the PIA Western Alliance, serving as vice president, president-elect and president and on various committees.

Mr. Peretti has served on the State of Washington Property and Casualty Advisory Committee. He was named Agent of the Year by PIA of Washington/Alaska in 1995, received the Hartford/Jonathan Trumbull Council's Chairman's Award. Mr. Peretti was also honored by the Insurance Fire Mark Society of the Pacific Northwest with its Presidential Award, and is the recipient of a public relations award from the Insurance Women of South King County.

Active in his community, Mr. Peretti is the owner of the Hub Insurance Agency of Renton, Washington. A lifelong member of the Renton Lions Club, he is also a member of the Renton Chamber of Commerce, serving 6 years as a member of its board of directors, and has been a member of the Renton Arts Commission and the Renton Ethics Board.

As a professional insurance agent, Mr. Peretti's dedication to the highest standards of his profession has earned him the respect of his friends, associates, business colleagues, and of the insurance industry as a whole.

Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the opportunity to rise today to recognize the good work that Ray L. Peretti has done throughout his career as a member of the insurance community, and to again congratulate him on the completion of his term as the president of the National Association of Professional Insurance Agents.

RECOGNIZING THE LIFE AND ACHIEVEMENTS OF ERNESTO
MERCADER ESPALDON

HON. MADELEINE Z. BORDALLO

OF GUAM

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 7, 2006

Ms. BORDALLO. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize the achievements of Dr. Ernesto Mercader Espaldon who passed away on August 4, 2006. Dr. Espaldon was a devoted husband and father, an accomplished physician, a dedicated public servant, and community leader.

Born on November 11, 1926, to Cipriano Acuna Espaldon and Claudia Cadag Mercader in Simunul, Sulu Province, Philippines, young Ernesto Espaldon, established himself as a true Filipino and American patriot. Joining the Sulu Guerrilla Organization as a freedom fighter, the 16-year-old soldier quickly proved his abilities as a soldier and leader. On January 12, 1945, Ernesto and two fellow soldiers fended off a contingent of Imperial Japanese soldiers attempting to take the village of Banaran, Tawi-Tawi. For their heroism, the grateful people of Banaran erected a monument memorializing the battle and the three soldiers.

Spoken in his own words, Dr. Espaldon was a humanitarian who firmly believed that "God gives us gifts that we might share them, not hold them for our own." For 36 years, Dr. Espaldon fulfilled those very words, having made biennial medical relief missions to islands throughout Micronesia. He founded the Guam Balikbayan Medical Mission and pioneered teams of local and national experts on journeys to isolated provinces in the Philippines. Committed to meeting the medical needs of others, in particular children and young adults, his efforts were entirely voluntary. These medical missions set an example of community service for others.

He served six terms in the Guam Legislature. Dr. Espaldon was a dedicated public servant of the people of Guam. His political career was one marked by courage. He sponsored and steered to passage the island's first smoking ban legislation and he did so under the threat of losing his bid for re-election. He was a man who worked hard for the good of the people and the island of Guam.

Having served with Dr. Espaldon in the Guam Legislature, I recall that he was a model citizen-senator. His service was marked by dedication and advocacy for health issues. His devotion to his family and to the people of Guam is an inspiration to our island. His keen attention to detail and thoroughness was a reflection of his medical training. I will always remember Ernie for his spirit, his community involvement, his humanitarianism and his compassion to the condition of those less fortunate.

I am deeply saddened by this loss and know that many people on Guam, in the Philippines, and throughout the Pacific are mourning as well. My thoughts and prayers are with his wife Leticia Virata Espaldon, M.D., and their six children: Arlene, Vivian, James Albert, Diane Marie, Karl Patrick, and Ernesto Jr. Although he will be missed by his family and friends throughout the Pacific, his legacy of service will live on in our community.

HONORING THE 9/11 FLIGHT CREW MEMBERS

HON. KENNY MARCHANT

OF TEXAS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 7, 2006

Mr. MARCHANT. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in order to honor the flight crew members that lost their lives in the terrorist attacks on the United States on September 11, 2001.

During the horrific attacks that took place on that fateful date, thousands of innocent people lost their lives at the hands of these terrorists. Among them, 25 flight attendants, 5 captains and 4 first officers were lost on American Airlines flights 11 and 77 and United Airlines flights 93 and 175. Everyone of them acted heroically in the face of the terrorist attacks, the magnitude of which is unparalleled in American history.

In addition, on December 22, 2001, the flight crew members of American Airlines flight 63 responded with courage, determination, and skill, saving the lives of 185 passengers, 12 crew members, and countless people on the ground, by helping to restrain Richard Reid, who was attempting to detonate a bomb in his shoe.

This Monday, September 11, 2006, on the 5th anniversary of the terrorist attacks, the 9/11 Flight Crew Memorial Foundation will hold a candle light vigil and dedication of a new memorial to honor these American heroes in Grapevine, TX.

It is my honor for this memorial to be located in my district. It will serve not only as an inspiration to every American because of the courage and fortitude the flight crew members showed in the face of danger on 9/11, but also as a stark reminder of the continuing danger that we all face and the vigilance we must maintain.

RECOGNITION OF PETE HOSKINS,
PRESIDENT AND CEO OF THE PHILADELPHIA ZOO

HON. CHAKA FATTAH

OF PENNSYLVANIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 7, 2006

Mr. FATTAH. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor Alexander L. (Pete) Hoskins, who has diligently served as President and CEO of the Philadelphia Zoo for the past 12 years. Pete is the Zoo's 12th president and the fourth-longest serving leader since it opened in 1874. America's first zoo and one of the region's foremost conservation organizations, the Philadelphia Zoo is home to more than 1,500 animals, many of which are rare and endangered. The Zoo, fulfilling its mission of conservation, science, education and recreation, supports and engages in conservation efforts to protect endangered species around the world.

I am proud to have known Pete, not only as head of the Zoo, but also during his tenure at the Fairmount Park Commission and the City of Philadelphia. Pete has been serving the citizens of Greater Philadelphia for over 30 years. His vision and cultural destination advocacy reaches beyond the Zoo. He championed a plan to promote a network of family-friendly attractions in Fairmount Park, revitalizing the Park and positioning it as a family destination with the Zoo as anchor. The relocated Please Touch Museum will be a key step in making the "Centennial District" a reality. I am pleased that Pete, former chair of the Greater Philadelphia Cultural Alliance, will continue to work on behalf of the arts and culture community in the Philadelphia region.

During his tenure at the Zoo, Pete led an unprecedented, $100 million capital investment, including the Zoo's spectacular, $20 million Bank of America Big Cat Falls exhibit that recently opened. The list of new facilities and other Hoskins-led initiatives includes: New Animal Health Center, PECO Primate Reserve, Reptile House Renovation, Dodge Rare Animal Conservation Center, Lorikeet Landing, Monkey Junction, and Channel 6 Zooballoon.

Pete also has laid the foundation to raise capital for three more master plan projects, including a series of new bird exhibits, a new elephant habitat, and a new children's zoo. In 1997, he guided the Zoo's Board and staff through the development of "Vision 2020" and the Zoo's master plan as the Zoo renewed and strengthened its mission to educate visitors and inspire them to take action in their own lives to protect animals and their natural habitats. All of the Zoo's new exhibits now include key conservation messages and opportunities to engage in conservation outreach.

Mr. Speaker, I am proud to pay tribute to Pete Hoskins. His knowledge, dedication and vision for Philadelphia are truly an asset. I would like to thank him for his Zoo leadership and sincerely look forward to working with him for the betterment of Philadelphia into the future.

IN MEMORY OF IMOGENE HARRIS

HON. JOHN S. TANNER

OF TENNESSEE

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 7, 2006

Mr. TANNER. Mr. Speaker, today I rise to honor the memory of Mrs. Imogene Harris, an important community leader in Tennessee, a tireless political activist and my dear friend. Imogene died Saturday in an automobile accident.

Imogene had been active in the Gibson County Democratic Party and the Tennessee Democratic Party for nearly 50 years, during which she was an important part of hundreds of local, state and national campaigns. I was fortunate to have Imogene working in my congressional office. She also worked closely with my predecessor, the late Congressman Ed Jones, former Governor Ned McWherter and Vice President Al Gore, and served as a delegate to four Democratic National Conventions.

She was just as involved locally. A board member at the Carl Perkins Center for the Prevention of Child Abuse and former chair of the Milan Housing Authority, Imogene was also to be sworn in next week as a Gibson County Commissioner.

The driving force behind her work was an attempt to help those around her and make our community stronger. Imogene was known in Tennessee for her take-charge attitude. She knew her opinions, shared them often and acted on them enthusiastically.

Imogene and her late husband, Tom "Skinny" Harris, have two daughters, Jan Anderson of Milan and Pam McAlpin of Trezevant, and four grandchildren, Jake and Clay Anderson, and Jason and Adam McAlpin.

Mr. Speaker, I am saddened that you and most of our colleagues in the House of Representatives never got to meet my friend, Imogene Harris. The way she lived her life, the passion with which she acted on her beliefs, and the dedication with which she worked to improve our world, make her the perfect example of effective leadership. She will be sorely missed.

IN TRIBUTE TO THE LATE MAYOR
RITA AFLLEJE TAINATONGO

HON. MADELEINE Z. BORDALLO

OF GUAM

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 7, 2006

Ms. BORDALLO. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize the life and achievements of Mayor Rita Afilleje Tainatongo who passed away on August 13, 2006. Mayor Tainatongo was a caring and devoted public servant who was dedicated to her family and loved by her village of Malesso and all the people of Guam.

Rita was born on January 7, 1949 to Antonio Taitano Afilleje and Rosa Tedpahago-Champaco in the village of Malesso. She was raised in a loving and caring home that included her parents, her brother John, and two sisters, Rosita and Regina. Rita credits Felipe Duenas and Josefina Acfalle Candaso as important role models during her formative teen years who helped her develop the character and poise that she was known for as a young adult.

Rita attended Mount Carmel School, in Agat, and graduated from the Academy of Our Lady of Guam in 1967. Her public service career began in 1985 when she was appointed as a Municipal Clerk in the Malesso's Mayor's Office. She later became the Administrative Assistant to the Mayor. Her reputation as a "can-do" person and her experience led to her own successful run for the Mayor's Office in 2000. She was reelected to a second term in 2004.

During her two terms she re-invigorated the sister village relationship between the Coast Guard and Malesso, improved services for senior citizens and successfully organized the Malesso Fiestan Tasi annual celebrations.

A lifelong Democrat, Rita was a village leader for the party in the gubernatorial campaigns of 1982, 1986 and 1990. Her politics were motivated by a deep sense of purpose and a vision of what government can do to make lives better.

Throughout her public life, Rita gave back to the community through her support of the American Cancer Society and American Red Cross and other civic organizations.

The island of Guam has lost a leader, a humanitarian, and a friend. Our thoughts and prayers are with Rita's husband, Ramon Baza Tainatongo, her children, and grandchildren. We are saddened and at the same time we are inspired by how much one person can accomplish for her community. She has touched many lives and made the island a better place to live for many people, most especially her beloved people of Malesso.

HONORING SOUTHLAKE, TEXAS
UPON 50 YEARS OF INCORPORATION

HON. KENNY MARCHANT

OF TEXAS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 7, 2006

Mr. MARCHANT. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize the city of Southlake, Texas for its 50th Anniversary of Incorporation.

In 1956, Southlake was born on the North Texas Prairie as 1.62 square miles of land with less than 1000 inhabitants and now boasts 22 square miles with a population of more than 25,000 Texans.

During the past 50 years, businesses and families alike have migrated to Southlake to plant roots in the stable and warm community. With the growth of the city's size in land and residents, Southlake has worked hard and succeeded at maintaining a comfortable and safe hometown atmosphere.

The American family is thriving in Southlake, Texas with just over 60 percent of families having kids under the age of 18. Whether a faculty member in the accomplished local school system, or a participant in the storied high school athletic programs, these families take great pride in preparing their children for the future. Within these families are hard working employees at locally owned businesses or large corporations who strive for the betterment of the community in which they live.

I commend Southlake's city officials of past and present for their dedication during challenging periods of growth and laud their accomplishments of making Southlake a premier North Texas community for families and businesses.

I give my congratulations to the city officials and private residents of Southlake on their Golden Anniversary of Incorporation. I honor Southlake, Texas upon this milestone and look forward to the future as the city continues to be a shining example in North Texas.

It is with pride that I serve such a distinguished city in my Congressional District and give my sincere congratulations upon this Golden Anniversary.

THE REOPENING OF THE SAN MATEO LIBRARY—A 21ST CENTURY
MARVEL

HON. TOM LANTOS

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 7, 2006

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, every now and then there are events in the life of a city that are so monumental they alter the very core of the city and its people. Today, the city of San Mateo, California, which is in my Congressional District, is proudly reopening its public library and I am certain that this new library, a true modern marvel, will change San Mateo for the better.

Today's event is the culmination of seven years of hard work, including close to 50 community meetings, years of fund-raising, and two years of construction. However, I can say with complete confidence that it was all worth it.

Mr. Speaker, this new library is the monument to learning that the citizens of San Mateo desire and deserve. This 90,000 square foot modern marvel is three times larger than the old library, contains 75,000 additional books, 10 times the number of computers, and a wireless internet connection throughout the building. Despite its towering size, the building was designed in an environmentally friendly manner. In fact 98% of the original building was recycled during the demolition process. The new library utilizes natural light and the latest technologies; including automated window shades that rise and close based on room temperature to create a "green building" that is expected to save the city 40% in energy costs.

Mr. Speaker, while the library of the past was mainly used to borrow reading material, today's 21st century library is intended to be a focal hub of the community and the new San Mateo library has been expertly designed in that fashion. The library will boast a teen lounge, a multi-media collection, a story time amphitheater in the children's section with stories told in English, Spanish and Chinese languages, as well as a café operated by a local vendor. In addition because the Bay Area is the pinnacle of our nation's biotech industry the library will include a Biotechnology Learning Center, which will be staffed by its own biotech librarian and will include seminar rooms and specialized reference materials. Of course the library will also continue to provide more traditional offerings, such as adult literacy programs, research training for elementary school age students, and Internet classes for the general public.

The roots of the San Mateo library were planted in 1883 when members of the Ladies Guild of St. Matthew's Episcopal Church decided to create "a reading room or place of resort where people could pass their leisure time socializing and improving their minds by reading good books and periodicals". Today, more than 100 years later the citizens of San Mateo have once again shown incredible foresight to create a citadel of culture and a place where its residents can ensconce themselves in an educational environment.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES—Friday, September 8, 2006

The House met at 2 p.m. and was called to order by the Speaker pro tempore (Mr. CAMPBELL of California).

DESIGNATION OF THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore laid before the House the following communication from the Speaker:

WASHINGTON, DC,
September 8, 2006.

I hereby appoint the Honorable JOHN CAMPBELL to act as Speaker pro tempore on this day.

J. DENNIS HASTERT,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.

PRAYER

The Chaplain, the Reverend Daniel P. Coughlin, offered the following prayer:

Lord our God, shower Your blessings of welcome and peace upon all the new pages, interns and other staff who begin their work here in the U.S. House of Representatives for this session of Congress.

You are the God of light. With each dawning day, You provide Your people with new assurances of Your love.

Bless the continuing work of the 109th Congress, that the common good and protection of this Nation be secured and that, by working together, all may give You praise and glory, now and forever. Amen.

THE JOURNAL

DISCHARGE PETITIONS— ADDITIONS OR DELETIONS

The following Member added his name to the following discharge petition:

Petition 14 by Mr. FILNER on House Resolution 917: Ted Strickland and Michael H. Michaud.

SENATE—Friday, September 8, 2006

The Senate met at 9:30 a.m. and was called to order by the President pro tempore (Mr. STEVENS).

PRAYER

The Chaplain, Dr. Barry C. Black, offered the following prayer:

Let us pray.

Eternal Lord God, ruler of our nature, hallowed be Your Name. Today, we pray for those in the forefront of world events: for Government leaders, as well as all those whose words and insights influence the course of human history. Give them the courage not to tolerate injustice or resort to violence as a first option. Remind them that You bless peacemakers and call them Your children.

Guide our Senators as they use the immense resources of this land to bring relief to the oppressed. Make them good stewards of your manifold grace and may their lives magnify Your name. Today, use them to establish peace and justice in our land.

We pray in Your sacred Name. Amen.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE

The PRESIDENT pro tempore led the Pledge of Allegiance, as follows:

I pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America, and to the Republic for which it stands, one nation under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.

RESERVATION OF LEADER TIME

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Under the previous order, the leadership time is reserved.

RECOGNITION OF THE MAJORITY LEADER

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The majority leader is recognized.

SCHEDULE

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, this morning we return to session for the consideration of the port security bill. Last night we were able to complete work on the Defense appropriations bill, with a final vote of 98 to 0 on passage.

Following that vote, we began consideration of port security, with opening statements which began last night and continue this morning.

I stated last night that we will not be voting on amendments today, but we do anticipate Members will come forward and offer and debate amendments over the course of business today and Monday. The two leaders will then work with the managers and begin stacked votes on those pending amendments for Tuesday morning.

Having said that, I ask Senators to make themselves available today and Monday to debate their amendments.

I again remind my colleagues of the joint leadership event on Monday which will observe the fifth anniversary of the terrorist attacks on September 11. We will have a brief ceremony beginning at 6 p.m. on Monday on the east front of the Capitol. All Senators are invited to participate.

Mr. President, I turn to my colleague from Missouri. I have a short statement on port security, but I know the Senator has other scheduling issues today. I will defer to him and then make my statement on port security following his remarks.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Missouri is recognized.

ANNIVERSARY OF SEPTEMBER 11, 2001

Mr. BOND. I thank the Chair, I thank the majority leader.

Mr. President, 5 years ago Monday, we witnessed the murder of 3,000 Americans in the largest terrorist attack on American soil in the Nation's history.

September 11 was a day of loss but also a day of lessons. On September 11, 2001, the American people learned there exists a group of killers, fueled by a twisted version of Islam, who want to destroy America. But we also witnessed how a group of passengers in one hijacked plane, United flight 93, banded together, fought back, and saved countless lives in a simple, selfless act of heroism.

Today, we continue to fight the same group of killers not on an airplane over America but in a country in their own neighborhood, Iraq, and elsewhere in the Middle East and around the world.

It is the same enemy, the same determination, the same goal. But today we are fighting the radical Islamists on their own turf because we have a President who knows if America doesn't fight back, another September 11 is inevitable.

Although the central front on the war in terror is Iraq, we have taken the fight to every corner of the globe. We have improved our intelligence capabilities. We have programs in place to help watch what the bad guys are doing, gather intelligence and disrupt their plans.

We have made progress. We passed the PATRIOT Act, developed effective terrorist surveillance programs, created the Department of Homeland Security, established the Director of National Intelligence, and tore down the wall built by previous administrations which blocked critical communications between agencies.

That work has paid off. There has been no attack in the United States since September 11. Afghanistan and Iraq are now free. They have held elections. They are taking control of their own security forces.

Yet while the threat level remains high, some in this country, and regrettably in this Senate, want to let our guard down. Some talk of giving up the fight in Iraq. Let's not talk of "troop redeployment" and other such euphemisms. If America pulls out of Iraq now, it signals to our enemies we have given up.

On that day, the United States and the world will embark on a future of fear and violence unlike what we have ever seen. It will be a black day for freedom and democracy. It would embolden and encourage every religious extremist and other enemies of the United States.

Letting our guard down is not a choice. It is an invitation to disaster. The alternative to naysayers is to continue our efforts. America must support the democratic governments in Iraq and elsewhere in their efforts to disarm militias and deter regional countries from undermining security there. We can't allow a minority of criminal extremists to intimidate Iraqi citizens.

While some talk of giving up the fight in the central front on the war on terror, others leak sensitive details of legal classified intelligence programs to the media to further their political agendas. We have seen our most important intelligence-gathering methods splashed across the front pages of our newspapers for the world, including our enemies, to see. Leaks expose our methods of apprehending the enemy and erode the confidence of our allies.

Over the past year, there has arisen an apparent absence of fear of punishment in regard to the arbitrary divulging of highly classified information. That needs to change. Each of these leaks gravely threatens our national security and makes it easier for our enemies to achieve their murderous and destructive plans.

The critics of this administration and our efforts to go after the enemies fail to understand the nature of our enemies, but they understand politics. I am afraid politics is what is driving some of our friends on the other side.

In the Intelligence Committee, the Democrats decided in 2003 they could prove that the administration misled the people of America, misused intelligence, and pressured the intelligence-gathering activities. We had 2 years of discussion and debate and thorough review. We concluded, the Intelligence Committee, as did the Silverman-Robb Commission and others that there was no pressure, that there was no misuse of intelligence. In fact, the intelligence was bad. But some continue to hold that view, even though the facts do not support those conclusions.

This is a long, hard battle. The people are being challenged and tested. Many are weary of war. My Democratic colleagues want to play on the weary public, trying to convince them if the United States withdraws from the rest of the world, our enemies will leave us alone. They are tougher on our Secretary of Defense than they are on the enemy. They spent a whole lot of time on Wednesday talking not about how to defeat terrorists in Iraq and elsewhere, rather, how to bring down the Secretary of Defense. Thankfully, the President and the Secretary know the truth; that is, that our enemy will not stop, and any sign of weakness on America's part will be exploited fully.

Throwing in the towel on the war on terror is not an option. But the Democrats—some—would have us believe that. Iraq's Ambassador to the United States said recently:

Plan B—abandoning the region to the religious fanatics and Baathist terrorists—is nothing but a definition of defeat dressed up to look like a vision for the future.

He continues:

A retreat on Iraq would encourage all the enemies of the United States—and they are many—to be bolder and more ready to challenge its interests everywhere. A radicalized, totalitarian, fragmented Iraq, sitting on a lake of oil, would become the center of a new and dangerous bloc threatening the United States and world peace.

Not only would abandoning Iraq to its fate now be irresponsible, it would almost certainly lead to disintegration and dictatorship, with a high risk of a wide regional conflict—a catastrophe for not just Iraq but also for the United States and for world peace.

The Iraqis understand what is at stake. The administration understands what is at stake. Those on this side of the aisle do, but, unfortunately, some in the minority do not. For political reasons, they will not acknowledge the reality.

So we may expect to see they will continue to play the war on terror as a political game. This is not the first time, for sure. They have long argued for a cut-and-run strategy and have blocked our efforts time and again to fight this war. The minority voiced opposition to the NSA surveillance program. They blocked reauthorization of the PATRIOT Act for months, with the minority leader proudly boasting, "We killed the PATRIOT Act."

Sadly, the political games will continue at least until November. But the war on terror against radical Islam will last for generations. The choices we make today will shape the world we live in, the world our children live in.

Republicans have worked to make America safer. Action by the President and the Republican Congress, through the use of military intelligence and law enforcement resources, has led to the capture of many of al-Qaida's top leaders and degraded the capabilities of a terror network.

More needs to be done, both here at home and abroad. Accomplishment will take resolve and determination and a long-term commitment, not abandoning our efforts at the first sign of hardship.

As I said at the beginning, the passengers of United Flight 93 banded together, fought back, and died to save countless lives in a simple, selfless act of determination. It is that kind of determination that will serve us well as we confront the challenges ahead.

I ask unanimous consent that the statement of Iraqi Ambassador Samir Sumaidaie be printed in the RECORD after my remarks.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

WHAT IRAQ NEEDS
(By Samir Sumaidaie)

AUGUST 28, 2006.—As the debate on Iraq rages on, more and more American voices call for throwing in the towel and leaving the mess to the Iraqis to sort out.

The controversy over the decision by the United States to remove the Saddam Hussein regime should not prevent an honest assessment of the situation in Iraq today. That the post-Hussein period was not well managed is now widely acknowledged. But we are where we are, and there is a future for all our children to secure. Plan B—abandoning the region to religious fanatics and Baathist terrorists—is nothing but a declaration of defeat dressed up to look like a vision for the future.

Our enemies' strategy has never changed: creating mayhem and making Iraq ungovernable, thereby driving the Americans and their allies out, and installing a Saddam Hussein look-alike to "make peace." In pursuing this strategy, they have forged many alliances and changed course and tactics many times.

Just as they have kept to their strategy and adapted, we should do the same. In this context, staying the course must mean adapting our approach while still standing firm for democracy and for a new vision for the country and the region. If we abandon our effort, our enemies win by default.

Those in the new government and leaders of civil society in Iraq are putting their lives on the line every day to advance a democratic society. And it is this that our enemies are most afraid of—not U.S. forces but a real democracy in the Middle East that would showcase human rights, women in politics and the rule of law. And they fear that this worst-case scenario could prove to be contagious.

What has made the last three years hugely more difficult and complicated is the fact that we all underestimated the determination of our opponents—and some of our neighbors—to undermine this new project. In the context of a global confrontation, this has pitched our fledgling democracy onto the front line of a monumental struggle. It is these outside forces, allied with Saddamists, other terrorists and regular criminals, that threaten to overwhelm us.

A retreat on Iraq would encourage all the enemies of the United States—and they are many—to be bolder and readier to challenge its interests everywhere. A radicalized, totalitarian, fragmented Iraq, sitting on a lake of oil, would become the center of a new and dangerous bloc threatening the United States and world peace.

Some argue that the very presence of the foreign forces is a source of tension and that their departure would remove a prime source of violence. This claim is without merit. Consider precisely who is ready to fight to drive foreign forces out: It is only the Saddamists and the religious extremists (al Qaeda and the like). If U.S. forces are in fact withdrawn, these people will consider it a victory and go on fighting even harder to achieve control over the country.

The majority of Iraqis may be irritated by the presence of foreign forces, but most realize that a premature withdrawal would create hideous problems for the country. This majority includes Sunnis as well as Shiites and Kurds.

The real question is: What to do now in the face of the combined onslaught of insurgents, terrorists, criminal gangs and sectarian militias.

A policy for success should include:

- * Developing, with the Iraqi government, workable measures for reforming the security forces and making available the necessary resources to implement them.

- * Supporting the government of Prime Minister Nouri al-Maliki in its efforts to disarm the militias. What is needed is a detailed, multifaceted approach that encompasses political, economic and public-information considerations as well as conventional force.

- * Applying maximum pressure on regional powers to stop undermining security in Iraq and start helping to stabilize it.

- * Mobilizing the Iraqi people to oppose the extremists in their midst.

Those who say that Iraqis are at each other's throats and should be left to fight it out are wrong. A minority of sectarian extremists and Saddamists is causing and promoting sectarian violence. These resisters have been successful in intimidating the rest of the population, which abhors them. When they are challenged, as they should be, the great majority of Iraqi men and women will be very supportive.

- * Taking the initiative from our enemies by acting boldly and aggressively. Our posture should not be defensive. That is a recipe for defeat.

- * Working out a bipartisan U.S. domestic consensus in favor of winning this war for America, Iraq and democracy. (This item is for American leaders to achieve; the others are collaborative U.S.-Iraqi endeavors.)

All this is achievable. Iraqis are resilient. They thirst for normality and a chance to build a future in freedom and dignity. They are fighting and dying for it every day. Witness the numbers enlisting in the security forces despite horrific losses. Witness the support Iraqi women are providing for the political process and the potential of their emancipation.

The United States cannot escape responsibility for the current situation in Iraq. Not only would abandoning Iraq to its fate now be irresponsible, it would almost certainly lead to disintegration and dictatorship, with a high risk of a wide regional conflict—a catastrophe for not just Iraq but also for the United States and for world peace and stability for decades to come. On the other hand, winning this war would be one of the best gifts the United States could make to the world and to its own people.

Mr. BOND. I yield the floor.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The majority leader is recognized.

SECURITY

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, with passage of the Department of Defense appropriations yesterday, we took another major step forward making America safer and more secure. We hit a few bumps and distractions along the way, but the end result was passing the Defense appropriations bill. Under the tremendous leadership of the President pro tempore, who is occupying the chair, we passed a bill that makes America, and continues to make America, safer and more secure. We helped to bring to our troops the cutting-edge technologies and resources that they need and will continue to need in fighting the war against terror.

It is important to share with our colleagues and the American people that in these appropriations bills, pending bills that are coming to the Senate, we are addressing a lot of issues that are not the principal focus of the bill but are very important issues to address, issues of concern and focus of the American people. I refer to an element of border security.

Most Members, as we traveled around the country and through our States over the last several weeks and during August, heard again and again that the American people expect us to focus on security at our perimeter, at our border, and at our ports. We are on the port security bill today.

In addition, it is important to note, for border security interests, over the past 2 years we have made huge progress in funding initiatives along our border, as reflected in the bills, the Homeland Security appropriations bill and the bill we passed yesterday, the Department of Defense appropriations bill. If we examine the last 2 years, we see how much progress, indeed, has been made for the border. We have added 3,736 new Border Patrol agents, for a total of 14,555. We have added in these bills 9,150 new detention beds, for a total of 27,500.

We have added, in these bills, 370 miles of border security fencing and added 461 miles of vehicle barriers along that Southwest border. We have added $682 million for border tactical infrastructure and facilities construction.

As for detention personnel, we have added 1,373 detention personnel, for a total of over 5,500. People ask about Customs and Border Protection officers. Indeed, we have added 460 new Customs and Border Protection officers for seaport inspections, for a total of 18,321 officers at ports of entry.

For the Coast Guard, in these bills, we have added $7.5 billion for the Coast Guard maritime border security, including $4 billion for Coast Guard port security and $2.1 billion for deepwater assets.

I mention these figures and this data because that is what we have done over the last 2 years in the supplemental bill, the Homeland Security bill, and the Department of Defense appropriations bill.

In fact, spending on border and immigration enforcement has increased from less than $4 billion prior to 9/11 to over $16 billion today—a fourfold increase. Catch and release has been ended. Apprehensions are up along the border by 45 percent. We are acting. We are funding. We are controlling the borders. We have a long way to go, but we are delivering on border security.

Security and safety are not static states. They are dynamic, which means we must constantly take steps, which we are doing on the floor to bolster them.

Earlier this year, I took a trip to the west coast and toured the Long Beach Port in southern California. It was amazing. I took an aerial tour, talked to all of the people there from security to the people handling the containers. Over 13,000—13,000—containers come through that one port every day. It is the largest port in the country. It is the third largest in the world.

It is not far from Los Angeles or LAX where 62 million passengers pass through annually. To say the least, this part of the country is a major front on the battle to protect our ports from terrorist attacks.

I am delighted we did turn to the port security bill last night. We have much to do over the next several days—with opening statements made last night and over the course of the day.

The bill before us now will provide the structure and resources necessary to strengthen our seaport vulnerabilities and better protect the American people from attack that might occur through those ports. It addresses security throughout the international cargo supply chain—from factory gate in a foreign country to screening in the U.S. port of final destination.

The U.S. maritime system includes more than 300 sea and river ports, with more than 3,700 cargo and passenger terminals. More than 95 percent of all U.S. overseas trade, excluding trade with Mexico and Canada, arrives by ship. The top 50 ports in the United States account for about 90 percent of all cargo tonnage, and 25 U.S. ports account for 98 percent of all container shipments.

Most of the 60,000 U.S. port calls made each year are foreign owned and crewed. Less than 3 percent of U.S. overseas trade is carried on U.S.-flagged vessels.

What all this means is that ports are a significant choke point for an enormous amount of economic activity for this country. In and of themselves, they, therefore, represent an attractive target for terrorists.

Equally significant is that ports clearly facilitate the transportation of something from one place to another. Goods arrive at and depart through these ports—by ship, by rail, by truck—so it is not inconceivable that terrorists could use ports as a conduit to smuggle into this country.

Just imagine the damage if a terrorist smuggled a dirty bomb in a cargo container off a ship calling on a U.S. port. Once unloaded, it could be transferred to a waiting tractor-trailer or train and from there target anywhere in this country.

Just imagine if terrorists seized control of a large commercial cargo ship and used it as a collision weapon for destroying a bridge or refinery on the waterfront.

Imagine the damage if terrorists sank a large commercial cargo ship in a major shipping channel, thereby blocking all traffic to and from that port.

These are not pipedreams. They are legitimate threats. Remember when the USS Cole was attacked by a bomb-laden boat during a refueling stop in Yemen? Had that occurred in a U.S. port, not only would the port of calling be shut down but very likely officials would halt the entire U.S. maritime transportation system, as they did in the days immediately following 9/11. Studies suggest that such a disruption in trade would reverberate throughout the country, costing billions of dollars.

The 9/11 Commission—if we look back at their recommendations—concluded that “opportunities to do harm are as great, or greater, in maritime and surface transportation” as in commercial aviation. That is why we have elected to bring this bill to the floor of the Senate. That is why the bill before us is so very important. It provides the Department of Homeland Security with the additional authorities and vital tools necessary to improve maritime security and to foil plots to injure or destroy our ports, to the detriment of our people and to the detriment of our economy.

Effective port security is a critical component of national security. And the bill before us now is a critical component of effective port security.

I look forward to a thoughtful and engaging debate over the next several days and do hope my colleagues will join me in supporting this very important piece of legislation.

SECURITY AND ACCOUNTABILITY FOR EVERY PORT ACT

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Under the previous order, the Senate will resume consideration of H.R. 4954, which the clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (H.R. 4954) to improve maritime and cargo security through enhanced layered defenses, and for other purposes.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Who seeks recognition?

The Senator from Maine.

Ms. COLLINS. Mr. President, for the information of our colleagues, I thought I would describe how we are going to be proceeding today. Shortly, the President pro tempore, who is the comanager of the bill, will be making his opening statement. It is my understanding he will then move to lay down an amendment offered by Senator DEMINT and a substitute amendment offered by Senator INOUE relating to the WARN Act, which is a Commerce Committee bill. We will not be voting on that amendment today, it is my understanding, under the agreement that has been previously reached.

We are open for business on other amendments for Members who may come to the floor or Members who wish to speak on this bill.

Thank you, Mr. President.

Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. ISAKSON). Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, as we all know, Monday marks the fifth anniversary of September 11 and the terrorist attacks against this country. Shortly after those attacks, during the 107th Congress, the President signed into law the Maritime Transportation Security Act of 2002, which was developed by our Commerce Committee to enhance our country's maritime security. Since then, our Commerce Committee has worked as hard as possible to pass and implement a number of initiatives which have made our ports and borders more secure.

Today we take up the Port Security Improvement Act of 2006. This bill marks the first time three Senate committees have merged their collective expertise and crafted a truly comprehensive approach to port security. A bipartisan group of members from the Commerce Committee, the Finance Committee, and the Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs Committee have worked together for several months on this bill.

As I know the Senate will realize, these three committees each have tremendous knowledge about our ports and programs which protect and secure our international supply chain. I believe it is a credit to the Senate that each committee agreed to pool their resources, put aside jurisdictional issues, and reach a consensus on this bill.

When enacted, this bill will strengthen our land and sea ports, improve our maritime transportation security strategy, and enhance communication between the Department of Homeland Security and transportation security stakeholders.

It includes a plan to get our trade activities up and running again in the event of a transportation security incident. And it creates a pilot program which will study the feasibility of scanning each of the containers—100 percent of the containers—entering our ports.

Mr. President, I spent considerable time in the last couple of years examining our ports, and particularly the west coast, which is really sort of the domain I know best. When I was a boy, the Port of Los Angeles was three separate Ports of San Pedro, Long Beach, and Los Angeles. The Port of Los Angeles is now an enormous area. Forty percent of the seaborne trade of the U.S. comes through the Port of Los Angeles, the Port of San Francisco, and of course, the Port of Seattle, which is the home of our colleague, Senator MURRAY, but also is sort of the stepping stone into my State of Alaska. It is a dynamic port and one that has been experimenting to a great extent on how to bring about container inspection, container scanning.

I personally went through each of the ports to see what was being done. There are still a great many problems. I must say that the people operating the ports, including those who are really the working people, have gone out of their way to try to make certain that those ports are safe and secure and that the containers are, in fact, scanned to the best extent possible now. But we want to do this pilot program to see if it is possible to tell our people that 100 percent of the containers coming into the country are scanned.

This legislation will enhance the collection and analysis of information about cargo destined for our ports. Those in the shipping industry are our eyes and ears with respect to security, and this bill aims to increase awareness of the operations at domestic and foreign ports. Once those in industry share important information about cargo in the international supply chain, we must analyze it quickly. This legislation expedites that process and ensures it begins earlier in the supply chain—before containers even reach our shores. This act requires information about cargo be provided and analyzed before the cargo is loaded on a vessel in a foreign port and shipped here. That will be a significant change.

This bill also expands several initiatives with a proven track record of success. There are currently five inter-agency operations centers up and running throughout our country. These centers bring together Federal, state, and local security enforcement officials to ensure communication among them. This act expands this effort to each of the major seaports, and places the Coast Guard in charge of these centers.

This act also builds upon the Department of Homeland Security's past cooperation with foreign governments. The Container Security Initiative, CSI, contained within this bill enables the department, working in partnership with host government customs services, to examine high-risk containerized cargo at foreign seaports before it is loaded on vessels destined for the United States.

The Customs-Trade Partnership Against Terrorism, C-TPAT, a voluntary public-private partnership, is also strengthened in this bill. The Commissioner of Customs and Border Protection will now be able to certify that a business's supply chain is secure from the point of manufacture to the product's final U.S. destination. Under this legislation, whether cargo crosses our border at Laredo or arrives on a ship from Hong Kong, participating companies' supply chains will undergo a thorough security check. This will add another layer of security to the C-TPAT initiative. Since this is a voluntary system, we have also included provisions which encourage those in industry to go above and beyond the security requirements already in place. These new incentives include expedited clearance of cargo.

Mr. President, while I was disappointed earlier this year by the negative public reaction to foreign investment in our Nation's port terminals, we learned a great deal from hearings held by the Commerce Committee on this matter. As a result of those hearings, this bill requires DHS to conduct background checks on all port personnel. Current law only requires the Transportation Security Administration to perform checks on those workers directly tied to transportation at the port, or involved in its security. From the Commerce Committee hearings, it was evident that a more stringent requirement was needed, and it is in the bill.

The events of September 11, 2001, forever altered the course of our Nation. Senator INOUE and I traveled to ground zero shortly after the attacks. It was a sad and terrible sight. It was also a stark reminder that we must do everything possible to prevent those who wish to harm Americans from carrying out their missions.

To prevent future attacks, we must secure our ports, and this bill is a major step forward in this effort. Senator INOUE, my co-chairman on the Commerce Committee, and I thank Senators GRASSLEY, BAUCUS, COLEMAN, COLLINS and LIEBERMAN for their leadership in drafting this bill. I would also like to thank the staff members on each of the committees; they have worked tirelessly on this bill.

Each of the committees involved in this bill has jurisdiction over an area vital to the safety of our ports. The Commerce Committee oversees issues related to the shipping industry, transportation security, and the Coast Guard. The Finance Committee oversees international trade and customs. And greater security of our ports and borders is central to the Homeland Security Committee's mission. Working together, our three committees have developed a comprehensive bill which will help shield our Nation from future terrorist attacks. It is my hope our colleagues will support this act and move quickly to pass this bill.

I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD following my statement a summary of the bill prepared by Ken Nahigian, who sits next to me and is counsel for our Commerce Committee.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

SUMMARY OF BILL: PORT SECURITY
IMPROVEMENT ACT OF 2006

TITLE I: SECURITY OF UNITED STATES SEAPORTS
Subtitle A: General Provisions

Section 101: Area maritime transportation security plan to include salvage response plan. Ensures that following a maritime transportation security incident waterways are cleared, salvage equipment is identified, and the flow of commerce is reestablished.

Section 102: Requirements relating to maritime facility security plans. Authorizes qualified individuals to implement Department of Homeland Security (DHS) approved security plans for a maritime facility.

Section 103: Unannounced inspections of maritime facilities. Verifies the effectiveness of facility security plans on a periodic basis, including at least one unannounced inspection annually.

Section 104: Transportation security card deadline. Establishes a timeframe for Transportation Worker Identification Credential (TWIC) implementation at all U.S. seaports. Requires DHS to process applications simultaneously for individuals needing both TWIC and merchant mariner documents.

Section 105: Long-range vessel tracking. Encourages DHS to issue regulations to establish a voluntary long-range automated vessel tracking system for select vessels.

Section 106: Establishment of interagency operational centers for port security. Expands existing interagency operational/fusion centers to all high-priority ports within three years to facilitate coordination and communication among Federal, State, local and private sector stakeholders. Requires DHS to submit a budget and cost-sharing analysis to Congress within 180 days of this Act.

Subtitle B: Grant and Training Programs

Section 111: Port security grants. Requires DHS to allocate grants based on risk to port authorities, facility operators, and State and local government agencies to enhance port security activities. Authorizes appropriations of $400 million.

Section 112: Port security training program. Allows establishment of a training program for seaports' prevention of, preparation for, response to, and recovery from threats, including terrorism, natural disasters and other emergencies. The program would be coordinated with the Coast Guard.

Section 113: Port security exercise program. Allows creation of an exercise program to test and evaluate the capabilities of Federal, State, local and other relevant stakeholders to coordinate appropriate response and recovery from threats at commercial seaports. The program would be coordinated with the Coast Guard.

Subtitle C: Port Operations

Section 121: Domestic radiation detection and imaging. Requires the Secretary to develop a strategy for deployment of radiation detection capabilities and ensures that by December 2007, all containers entering the U.S., through the busiest 22 seaports, shall be examined for radiation. Requires DHS to submit a report of the strategic plan developed and to implement the strategy nationwide within three years. Requires DHS to submit a separate plan for the development of equipment to detect WMD threats at all U.S. ports of entry.

Section 122: Port security user fee study. Requires DHS to study the need for and feasibility of oceanborne and port-related transportation security user fees to be collected for funding port security improvements. Requires DHS to submit a report detailing the results of the study, analysis of current customs fees and duties collected that are dedicated to security, comparison of comparable fees imposed in ports of Canada and Mexico, assessment of the impact on competitiveness of U.S. ports, and recommendations based on findings.

Section 123: Inspection of car ferries entering from Canada: Requires DHS, in coordination with Department of State, to develop a plan for the inspection of passengers and vehicles before loading onto ferries bound for a U.S. port.

Section 124: Random searches of containers. Requires DHS to develop and implement a plan, within one year after enactment, for random physical inspection of shipping containers. Random searches would not preclude additional container searches.

Section 125: Work stoppages and employee-employer disputes. Defines the term economic disruption, which does not include a work stoppage or nonviolent employee related action not related to terrorism and resulting from an employee-employer dispute.

TITLE II: SECURITY OF THE INTERNATIONAL SUPPLY CHAIN

Subtitle A: General Provisions

Section 201: Strategic plan to enhance the security of the international supply chain. Requires DHS to develop, implement and update a strategic plan to improve the security of the international cargo supply chain. The plan would be required to identify and address gaps, provide improvements and goals, establish protocols for the resumption of trade including identification of the initial incident commander, consider international standards for container security, and allow for communication with stakeholders.

Section 202: Post incident resumption of trade. Establishes that following a maritime transportation security incident, the initial incident commander and lead department carry out the protocols of the international supply chain security strategic plan. The Coast Guard would ensure the safe and secure transit of vessels to U.S. ports. Preference would be given to certain vessels and cargo (CSI/C-TPAT) in the resumption of trade. The Secretary would ensure that there is appropriate coordination among federal officials and communication of revised procedures, not inconsistent with security interests, to the private sector to provide for the resumption of trade.

Section 203: Automated targeting system (ATS). Requires DHS to identify, and allows it to request the submission of, additional data (non-manifest and entry data elements) of container cargo moving through the international supply chain. Data would be analyzed to identify high-risk cargo for inspection. Authorization of appropriations to fund ATS for FY 2007-2009.

Section 204: Container security standards and procedures. Requires DHS to promulgate a rule to establish minimum standards and procedures for securing containers in transit to the U.S. If the rulemaking deadline is not met, DHS would have to provide a letter of explanatory rationale to Congress. DHS and other federal agencies are encouraged to promote international cargo security standards.

Section 205: Container security initiative (CSI). Authorizes CSI program to identify, examine or search maritime containers before U.S.-bound cargo is loaded in a foreign port. Designates foreign ports as part of the CSI program based upon select criteria including risk, trade volume and value of cargo, Coast Guard assessments, and the commitment of the host nation to comply with data sharing requirements. DHS would establish standards for the use of nonintrusive imaging and radiation detection equipment at CSI ports. DHS would also develop a plan to ensure adequate staffing at CSI ports. Requires DHS to submit a report to Congress on the effectiveness of, and need for improvements to, CSI. Authorizes appropriations for FY 2008-2010.

Subtitle B: Customs-Trade Partnership Against Terrorism (C-TPAT)

Section 211: Establishment. Authorizes DHS to establish a voluntary program (C-TPAT) to strengthen international supply chain and border security, facilitate the movement of secure cargo and provide benefits to eligible participants.

Section 212: Eligible entities. Allows importers, customs brokers, forwarders, air, sea, and land carriers, contract logistics providers, and other entities in the international supply chain and intermodal transportation system to apply for this voluntary program.

Section 213: Minimum requirements. Establishes minimum security and other requirements that applicants must meet to be eligible for C-TPAT.

Section 214: Tier 1 participants in C-TPAT. Allows for limited benefits for participants, which may include a reduction of the ATS risk score, to those C-TPAT participants that meet the minimum guidelines established. To the extent practicable, DHS would complete the Tier 1 certification process within 90 days of receipt of a candidate's application.

Section 215: Tier 2 participants in C-TPAT. Allows for an additional level of benefits—reduced cargo examinations and priority processing—to those participants who meet a higher level of C-TPAT security requirements. DHS would be required to validate the security measures and supply chain practices of C-TPAT participants, including on-site assessments, within one year of certification.

Section 216: Tier 3 participants in C-TPAT. Establishes a third-tier of C-TPAT offering increased benefits to participants that demonstrate a sustained commitment to security based on certain criteria. Benefits may include, among others, expedited release of cargo, further reduced examinations, reduced bonding requirements, and notification of specific alerts and post-incident procedures as well as inclusion in joint incident management exercises, as appropriate.

Section 217: Consequences for lack of compliance. Allows DHS to deny benefits in part or in whole, including suspension or elimination for at least five years, of any participant that fails to meet C-TPAT requirements or knowingly provides false or misleading information: said entities may appeal this decision.

Section 218: Revalidation. Establishes a process for revalidating C-TPAT participants in tiers 2 and 3 and requires an annual plan for revalidation, detailing performance measures and necessary personnel requirements.

Section 219: Non-containerized cargo. Allows DHS to consider including importers of noncontainerized cargo as participants in C-TPAT, provided program requirements are met.

Section 220: C-TPAT program management. Requires DHS to establish sufficient internal quality controls and record management of C-TPAT including development of a strategic plan to identify goals, annual plans to match resources with workload, a standardized work program to monitor progress, a record management system, and a data protection program.

Section 221: Resource management staffing plan. Requires development of a staffing plan to recruit, train and cross-train C-TPAT personnel.

Section 222: Additional Personnel. Obliges DHS to increase, by at least 50 positions annually for fiscal years 2007 through 2009, the number of personnel to validate and revalidate C-TPAT members.

Section 223: Authorization of appropriations. Authorizes appropriations to Customs and Border Protection in DHS to carry out the C-TPAT provisions of sections 211 through 221. In addition to any monies appropriated to Customs and Border Protection, there are authorized to be appropriated funds for the purpose of meeting the staffing requirement provided in section 222.

Section 224: Report to Congress. Stipulates that DHS must report on the progress of C-TPAT certifications, validations and revalidations in conjunction with the President's annual budget submission.

Subtitle C: Miscellaneous Provisions

Section 231: Pilot integrated scanning system. Develops a pilot program in three foreign seaports, each with unique features and varying levels of trade volume to test integrated scanning systems using nonintrusive inspection and radiation detection equipment. Requires full-scale pilot implementation within one year after enactment. An evaluation report would be required to be submitted to Congress 120 days after full implementation of the pilot.

Section 232: International cooperation and coordination. Allows DHS to provide assistance, equipment and training to facilitate the implementation of supply chain security measures at CSI designated ports. Requires DHS to identify foreign assistance programs to encourage implementation of port security antiterrorism measures at foreign ports, with particular emphasis on foreign ports in the Caribbean Basin. Requires GAO to submit a report on the security of Caribbean ports within 180 days.

TITLE III: ADMINISTRATION

Section 301: Office of Cargo Security Policy. Establishes an office within DHS to coordinate all cargo security policy within the Department, coordinate DHS cargo security policies with policies of other executive agencies, consult with stakeholders, establish standards, and promote best practices.

Section 302: Reauthorization of Homeland Security Science and Technology Advisory Committee. Authorizes the Assistant Secretary for Science and Technology to utilize the Homeland Security Science and Technology Advisory Committee to provide outside expertise in advancing cargo security technology.

Section 303: Research, development, test, and evaluation efforts in furtherance of maritime and cargo security. Assures coordination within DHS and with other public and private sector entities for research and development of maritime and cargo security innovations.

TITLE IV: AGENCY RESOURCES AND OVERSIGHT

Section 401: Office of International Trade. Creates within the Bureau of Customs and Border Protection (CBP), an Office of International Trade. Establishes an International Trade Policy Committee to assist in coordinating with the DHS Assistant Secretary for Policy regarding commercial customs and trade facilitation functions. Establishes an International Trade Finance Committee to coordinate and oversee the implementation of programs involved in the assessment and collection of duties on U.S. imported and exported cargo.

Section 402: Resources. Requires CBP to complete a resource allocation model, by June 2007 and every 2 years thereafter, to determine optimal staffing for commercial and revenue functions. Requires submission of models of Congress. Authorizes appropriations to increase the number of CBP personnel to perform commercial operations and customs revenue functions: new hires would be based upon aforementioned models and additional authorized 725 CBP officers.

Section 403: Negotiations. Requires DHS to work with appropriate Federal officials and international organizations to harmonize customs procedures, standards, requirements and commitments to facilitate the efficient flow of international trade.

Section 404: International Trade Data System (ITDS). Requires the Secretary of the Treasury to oversee the establishment of an electronic trade data interchange system to eliminate redundant information requirements, to efficiently regulate the flow of commerce and enforce regulations relating to international trade. All Federal agencies that require documentation for clearing or licensing the importation and exportation of cargo shall participate in the ITDS, unless based on national security interests, the Office of Management and Budget (OMB) waives the participation requirement. Establishes an Interagency Steering Committee to define the standard set of data elements to be collected, stored and shared in the ITDS: said committee would submit a report to Congress before the end of each fiscal year.

Section 405: In-bond cargo. Requires DHS to submit a report to Congress including analysis of various aspects of in-bond cargo, such as tracking, technologies, evaluation criteria for targeting and examining in-bond cargo and the feasibility of reducing the transit time for in-bond shipments.

Section 406: Sense of the Senate. Delegates elements of the bill that shall not affect the jurisdiction of standing Senate committees.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I thank Senator COLLINS and Senator GRASSLEY for their cooperation, and our counterparts on the other side of the aisle, my colleagues Senator INOUE, Senator MURRAY, and Senator BAUCUS, those who are working with us to move this bill as quickly as possible.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who seeks recognition?

AMENDMENT NO. 4921

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I understand that there was a negotiation going on concerning an amendment that is before the Senate now. I have been asked to call up Senator DEMINT's amendment. There is a negotiation going on concerning a possible modification of it. He called and asked that this be placed before the Senate. I wish to comply with his request.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Alaska [Mr. STEVENS], for Mr. DEMINT, proposes an amendment numbered 4921.

(The amendment is printed in the RECORD of Thursday, September 7, 2006, under "Text of Amendments.")

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. ALLARD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from Colorado is recognized.

Mr. ALLARD. Mr. President, I understand there is a pending amendment. I ask unanimous consent that amendment be laid aside and that I be allowed to speak for 7 minutes in morning business.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

(The remarks of Mr. ALLARD are printed in today's RECORD under "Morning Business.")

Mr. ALLARD. Mr. President, I yield the floor, and I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Ms. COLLINS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Ms. COLLINS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that a summary of the Port Security Improvement Act of 2006 prepared by my staff be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

THE PORT SECURITY IMPROVEMENT ACT OF 2006—SUMMARY

This legislation will provide the structure and the resources needed to better protect the American people from attack through our seaports that are both vulnerable points of entry and vital centers of economic activity. Each year, more than 11 million containers pass through the ports and 53,000 foreign-flagged vessels call at U.S. ports. This bill is a comprehensive approach that addresses all major aspects of maritime cargo security. The bill reflects not only bipartisan consultation and support, but coordination among the Senate Homeland Security, Commerce, and Finance Committees.

DEPARTMENT OF HOMELAND SECURITY (DHS)
MUST ESTABLISH STRATEGIES AND STANDARDS

Strategic Plan. The Secretary of Homeland Security must develop a strategic plan to enhance international supply chain security for all modes of transportation by which containers arrive in, depart from or move through seaports of the United States. The Secretary must clarify roles, responsibilities, and authorities of all government agencies at all levels and private sector stakeholders. The plan must provide measurable goals for furthering the security of commercial operations from point of origin to point of destination, build on available resources and consider costs and benefits; and identify response and recovery methods.

Container Security Standards. Because container security standards have languished at the Department of Homeland Security (DHS), the legislation requires the Secretary to establish minimum standards for the movement and storage of containers within 180 days of the enactment of the bill. It can base these regulations on its experience with the cargo security programs that it currently operates. In addition, the Secretary is directed to seek to establish international standards through multilateral agreements or international bodies.

Resumption of Operations at Seaports. The Secretary shall develop protocols for the resumption of trade in the event of a security incident or a disruption to trade at seaports. To handle the immediate response to an incident, the Secretary must establish protocols that make clear who is the initial incident commander and the lead agency that will execute and coordinate the response so that there will be no confusion. In reestablishing the flow of trade through U.S. ports, preference shall be given to vessels with a valid security plan that are manned with individuals who have undergone background checks and are operated by validated C-TPAT participants. Preference should be given to cargo that is entering a U.S. port from a CSI port and handled by a validated participant in C-TPAT.

CARGO SECURITY PROGRAMS

Improved Automated Targeting System. A critical component of the targeting of cargo for inspection is the Automated Targeting System. This computer-based system helps DHS to determine which cargo presents a high security risk. The legislation requires the Secretary to identify and seek the submission of data related to the importation of cargo in order to improve the targeting of high-risk cargo. It also requires the Secretary to establish an independent review of the system.

Container Security Initiative (CSI). The bill establishes CSI to identify and examine maritime containers that pose a risk for terrorism at foreign ports in order to keep potential threats far from America's shores. In CSI, U.S. Customs and Border Protection (CBP) personnel work closely with foreign government officials to target and inspect cargo headed to the U.S. at foreign ports. Before the Secretary may designate a foreign port under CSI, the Secretary must conduct a full assessment of the risk of terrorists compromising containers; the capabilities and level of cooperation of the intended host country; and the potential for validation of security practices by the Department.

Customs-Trade Partnership Against Terrorism (C-TPAT). This legislation establishes the C-TPAT program to strengthen and improve the overall security of the international supply chain. This voluntary program encourages participants to take steps to ensure that their supply chains are secure. Based on a participant's efforts in the program, they are placed on one of three tiers. The legislation requires the Secretary to validate the supply chain security practices of each participant and offer benefits to participants based on their levels of certification and validation.

C-TPAT Top Tier. The top tier (Tier 3) or GreenLane status for C-TPAT participants provides the highest level of benefits, which may include the following: reduced examinations, priority examinations and searches, and the expedited release of cargo during all threat levels.

Uniform Data for Government-Wide Usage. To simplify the filing of documentation needed to import cargo and facilitate the compilation of data, the Secretary of Treasury shall complete the implementation of the International Trade Data System, a single, uniform data system for the electronic collection, dissemination, and sharing of import and export information.

Radiation Detection and Radiation Safety. Radiation detection equipment is critical to ensuring that no radiological device leaves a U.S. port. The bill directs the Secretary of DHS to install radiation portal monitors at the 22 largest U.S. ports by the end of 2007. This will cover 98 percent of incoming container traffic.

100 Percent Scanning Pilot Program. The Secretary shall establish a pilot program at three foreign ports to test the practicality and effectiveness of systems designed to scan 100 percent of cargo. The scanning systems must couple non-intrusive imaging and radiation detection equipment.

In-Bond Cargo. Cargo that travels in-bond through the U.S. from the ports is a major vulnerability because the final destination of the cargo is not known. The bill requires a report on in-bond cargo that would include whether additional information should be required for in-bond cargo, a plan for tracking in-bond cargo in the to-be-developed ACE system, and an assessment of how to ensure 100 percent reconciliation between the port of arrival and destination.

RESOURCES AND COORDINATION FOR PORT
SECURITY

Port Security Grants and Training. The bill establishes risk-based grants, training, and exercises for port security. The legislation authorizes $400 million in appropriations for port security grants.

Office of Cargo Security Policy. This legislation establishes within the Department of Homeland Security an Office of Cargo Security Policy to coordinate department-wide efforts regarding cargo security policies and programs.

Interagency Operations Centers. The bill directs the Secretary to establish Interagency Operation Centers for Maritime and Cargo Security at all high-priority ports to enhance information sharing and facilitate day-to-day operational coordination, and incident management and response between agencies. The agencies at the operations centers include the Coast Guard, CBP, the FBI, Department of Defense, state and local law enforcement or port security personnel, and private sector stakeholders, as the Secretary determines is appropriate.

Research, Development, Test and Evaluation (RDT&E). The Secretary must direct RDT&E efforts in furtherance of maritime and cargo security, encourage the ingenuity of the private sector in developing and testing such technologies, and evaluate such technologies. The Secretary shall ensure all Department RDT&E efforts are coordinated to avoid duplicative efforts and share results.

Ms. COLLINS. Mr. President, one of the issues that will undoubtedly come up during the debate on the port security bill has to do with the scanning of containers. Some people have asked: Why don't we scan 100 percent of the 11 million containers coming into this country? And the answer is simply that it is not practical with the current technology. The bill that is before us authorizes three pilot projects in three foreign ports where we would take a look at the feasibility and practicality and the implications of 100 percent scanning.

There is 100 percent screening. There is a difference between screening a container, which means gathering information on each and every container and doing a sophisticated computer analysis to determine which are of higher risk, versus scanning each container with an x-ray-type machine or some other method or a physical inspection.

The problem of trying to scan 100 percent of all containers is best summed up by a letter that we recently received from the Supply Chain Security Coalition. This is a coalition of some of the largest and most knowledgeable stakeholders in the supply chain's system, including the Retail Industry Leaders Association.

The letter says:

One hundred percent scanning proposals and amendments advocating such a proposal could potentially actually decrease security by forcing containers to sit for extended periods of time, putting them at greater risk of tampering, and would divert resources away from the current risk assessment approach. In addition—

And this is the key point—

such a mandate has the potential to significantly impede the flow of commerce and damage the U.S. and global economy.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the full text of that letter be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Hon. SUSAN COLLINS,
U.S. Senate,
Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR COLLINS: On behalf of the Retail Industry Leaders Association, I am writing to urge you to support strong and carefully crafted port security legislation that builds on the current multilayered, risk assessment approach that has effectively protected our nation's seaports over the last several years. I also urge you, in the strongest terms possible, to oppose any legislation that would require all U.S. bound cargo containers to be "scanned" for radiation and density, so called 100% scanning legislation. While we strongly support improving the security of our nation's seaports, 100% scanning proposals have the potential to do more harm than good.

The Retail Industry Leaders Association (RILA) is the trade association of the largest and fastest growing companies in the retail industry. Its members include retailers, product manufacturers, and service suppliers, which together account for more than $1.5 trillion in annual sales. RILA members operate more than 100,000 stores, manufacturing facilities and distribution centers, have facilities in all 50 states, and provide millions of jobs domestically and worldwide.

We understand that key committees in the Senate has come to an agreement on a port security bill that may be taken up as soon as tomorrow, September 8th, 2006, and that the legislation is based on provisions from earlier bills drafted in the Homeland Security & Government Affairs Committee, the Commerce, Transportation and Infrastructure Committee and the Finance Committee. Each of those bills contain important provisions that will help improve our nation's port security laws by building upon and recognizing the effectiveness of the well-established security measures our government currently has in place. RILA supports legislation that builds upon this proven approach, which is why we worked to help pass port security legislation in the House, H.R. 4954, The SAFE Ports Act. It is our hope that the Senate bill will closely mirror the House legislation, which received overwhelming bipartisan support.

However, I also strongly urge you to oppose any legislation that would require that all U.S. bound cargo containers be scanned for radiation and density, so called "100% scanning" amendments. Such proposals may at first glance appear to improve security, but in reality, they would impose immense costs on our economy and foreign relations without improving the security of our international trading systems.

First, a 100% scanning mandate is unrealistic since the technology does not yet exist to do this efficiently and with a high degree of accuracy. We are not aware of any credible technology to actually analyze the millions of density images that would be taken of outbound cargo containers, meaning such images would have to be reviewed one by one by a port official or Customs officer. Second, this mandate could actually decrease security by forcing containers to sit for extended periods of time, putting them at greater risk of tampering.

In addition, forcing all containers to be scanned—including the vast majority of those that pose no risk—would divert scarce security resources away from the successful risk assessment approach currently utilized by the government. This approach uses sophisticated risk-analysis tools to determine which containers pose a risk and ensures those containers are handled appropriately.

It is important for Senators to remember that the Department of Homeland Security currently uses a risk-based targeting approach to inspect inbound cargo. All cargo manifests are submitted at least 24 hours prior to loading on a vessel and the Automated Targeting System (ATS) uses complex, rule-based formulas to assign a numerical score and identify at-risk containers. CBP then inspects 100% of all containers deemed high-risk.

Finally, a 100% scanning mandate has the potential to significantly impede the flow of commerce and do damage to the economy. According a June 2006 study conducted by the RAND Corporation, 100% scanning would delay the movement cargo containers by 5.5 hours per container. With 11 to 12 million containers entering the U.S. every year, it is obvious that of 100% scanning mandate would bring global commerce and the flow goods to a virtual standstill. This would severely damage the U.S. economy, not only by denying consumers access to thousands of products they need, but also by preventing the delivery of material and other inputs that U.S. manufactures need.

Rather than mandating 100% scanning, port security legislation should authorize additional testing and evaluation of scanning technology. Several of the relevant port security bills address this issue by calling for pilot projects and other evaluations to test the effectiveness and operational capability to conduct increased container scanning, including the "GreenLane Maritime Cargo Security Act" passed by the Senate Homeland Security Committee and the House SAFE Ports Act. These provisions represent the best way to address this issue and answer important operational and economic questions critical to understanding how to effectively implement container scanning.

Retail companies are among the largest and most knowledgeable stakeholders in the supply chain system and administer the most extensive and efficient logistics operations in the world. The industry has worked hand-in-hand with the Department of Homeland Security (DHS), and specifically with the Coast Guard and Customs and Border Protection to ensure that our customers, employees, and the nation's seaports remain safe and that the nation's economy remains strong. We take a back seat to no industry in our support for strong and carefully crafted port security legislation, and we urge the Senate to move quickly to pass such a bill as soon as possible.

Thank you for your consideration of our views. We look forward to working with you on this critically important issue. Should you have any questions, please contact Paul T. Kelly, Senior Vice President for Government Affairs or Allen Thompson, Vice President for Global Supply Chain Policy.

Sincerely,

SANDY KENNEDY,

President.

Ms. COLLINS. Mr. President, what we have tried to do with this bill is very carefully balance the need for effective, improved security with the need to ensure that we are not crippling our international trading system. We now have 11 million shipping containers coming into this country each year. This is a number that has grown substantially in recent years. We know each one has the potential to be the Trojan horse of the 21st century, to include not consumer goods but perhaps terrorists themselves, the makings of a dirty bomb, a chemical, biological, or even nuclear weapon.

That is why the legislation that we have authored proposes a strong, effective, layered system of security. It focuses on the ports of origin. It focuses on each container to make sure that it is effectively evaluated, and it has a system for securing the entire supply chain that is called the C-TPAT system.

The highest system of C-TPAT would be the GreenLane system, of which Senator MURRAY is the author.

At that level, shippers would take steps to completely certify the security of their supply chain from the factory where the good is manufactured, all the way to the delivery to the retail store. Each step of the supply chain would be certified as secure. In return, those shippers or retailers that reach that highest level, the GreenLane, would be given certain benefits. Their cargo would be expedited. Their cargo would be subjected to fewer inspections. Their cargo would be released more quickly in the event of an attack on our ports.

Our proposal addresses the people who work at our ports. It addresses the shipping containers. It addresses the ports themselves and other facilities. It takes the layered approach to security that is recommended by the 9/11 Commission.

So I hope those of our colleagues who may be tempted to think that the answer to port security is to do an x-ray of each and every shipping container will take a closer look at the systems and the security that would be provided by our legislation and would consider the points that have been raised by the experts who point out the dangers in delaying the transit of shipping containers. It might actually decrease security rather than enhance it. And, also, that we have to strike that right balance so we do not significantly impede the flow of commerce and damage the U.S. and global economy.

Just think how many farmers rely on our ports to ship their crops overseas. Think of how many factories and stores in our country rely on just-in-time inventory. If you are reliant on just-in-time inventory and your containers are delayed just 3 days, it can make a big difference to your operations. So we need to make sure that we strike the right balance.

I think the bill before us, which has been carefully worked out by three committees, which has been in progress for years, does strike the right balance.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Arizona.

AMENDMENT NO. 4922

Mr. McCAIN. I call up amendment No. 4922 and ask for its immediate consideration. I ask unanimous consent the pending amendment be set aside.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to setting aside the pending amendment? Without objection, it is so ordered.

The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Arizona [Mr. MCCAIN], for himself, Ms. SNOWE, Mr. DEWINE, Mr. BIDEN, and Mr. LIEBERMAN, proposes an amendment numbered 4922.

Mr. MCCAIN. I ask unanimous consent the reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

(The amendment is printed in today's RECORD under "Text of Amendments.")

Mr. MCCAIN. Mr. President, I congratulate the distinguished chairman of the committee for the outstanding work that she and the ranking member, Senator LIEBERMAN, have done in bringing forth this very important legislation. I believe the work that is done by these two Members of the Senate, in a bipartisan fashion, in order to better secure the safety of our citizens, is laudable and important. I congratulate them on this legislation that we are considering today.

This amendment would ensure that in addition to our efforts to improve port security, we also address another critical transportation mode—rail transportation. I am pleased to be joined in this effort by Senators DEWINE, SNOWE, and BIDEN.

Again, I want to say I am pleased the Senate has chosen to take up the Port Security Act of 2006 to protect our Nation's ports and waterways. I just listened carefully to the statement by the distinguished chairwoman of the committee, outlining both the threat and the way that this legislation will address these very important aspects of our Nation's security at our ports.

I would also like to point out that the bill implements several recommendations from the 9/11 Commission's final report, including allocating security grants based on risk and comprehensive cargo screening. Additionally, the bill would establish an office within the Department of Homeland Security to coordinate all cargo security policy, develop a strategy for deployment of radiation detection capabilities in all ports, and establish a process to facilitate the movement of secure cargo from international ports to our ports without interrupting the international supply chain and delaying goods to consumers in the United States.

Securing our ports is a crucial part of our efforts to protect Americans at home. The amendment I am offering today would complement the underlying legislation by providing essential funding and additional tools to strengthen our Nation's rail system.

Two years ago the Senate passed by unanimous consent the Rail Security Act of 2004, legislation that was almost identical to the amendment I am offering today. Unfortunately, that bill died in the House of Representatives. Last year I reintroduced the legislation shortly after the London bombings of July 7 and language that is similar to the provisions of the Rail Security Act is in a title of the Transportation Security Bill that was reported by the Commerce Committee in February. I sincerely hope that we will once again pass this important legislation. Rail security must be made a top priority of this Congress.

Look at the recent threats of attacks. We were all deeply saddened by the tragic loss of lives caused by the 2004 terrorist attacks in Madrid, the 2005 London attacks, and the terrorist attacks on commuter trains in Mumbai this summer. Those incidents are a painful reminder of the cruel nature of our enemies in our global war on terror and what we must do to fight and win against those who wish to eradicate our way of life. On many occasions we have said we cannot play just defense in this war; that, instead, we must take the fight to the enemy. Still, we must do what is possible and prudent to protect Americans at home.

The numerous attacks on rail systems abroad demonstrate all too vividly the continuing need for this legislation.

There is little doubt that we have increased dramatically our security capabilities over the past 5 years. However, there is just as little doubt that we have much more to do. Since the attacks of 9/11, only relatively modest resources have been dedicated to rail security. In fact, I would be very curious if the distinguished chairman of the committee knows the relative amounts of money that we have spent on rail security as compared with airport security. I think you will find it is minuscule.

Our Nation's transit system, Amtrak, and the freight railroads, I am sad to say, remain vulnerable to terrorist threats. This lack of funding exists despite the fact that the Department of Homeland Security has identified as potential terrorist targets the freight and passenger rail networks which are critical to the Nation's transportation system and national defense.

The 9/11 Commission, too, in its report on the facts and circumstances surrounding the 9/11 attacks called for improved security in all modes of transportation, noting that "... terrorists may turn their attention to other modes."

This amendment would authorize a total of almost $1.2 billion for rail security. More than half of this funding would be authorized to complete tunnel safety and security improvements at New York's Pennsylvania station, which is used by over 500,000 transit, commuter, and intercity passengers each workday.

I want to repeat that fact. Penn Station in New York City is used by over 500,000 transit, commuter, and intercity passengers each workday. Look at the amount of money we have spent to try to protect that vulnerable target as opposed to literally every major airport in America. This funding is all the more urgent given this summer's arrest by the FBI of eight suspects tied to al-Qaida who were plotting attacks on train tunnels connecting New York and New Jersey.

The legislation would also establish a grant program authorized at $350 million to help increase security by the freight railroads, Amtrak, shippers of hazardous materials, and local governments with security responsibility for passenger stations not owned by Amtrak. Further, DHS would be required to complete a vulnerability assessment of the rail network to terrorist attack and make recommendations to Congress for addressing security weaknesses. Importantly, to protect the taxpayers' interests, all Amtrak authorizations would be managed by the Department of Transportation through formal grant agreements.

We all know that we face a dedicated, focused, and intelligent foe in the war on terrorism. This enemy will probe to find our weaknesses and move against them. We have seen the vulnerabilities of rail to terrorism in other countries and the devastating consequences of such an attack. It is essential that we move expeditiously to protect all the modes of transportation from potential attack.

I also note that this amendment is cosponsored by Senators DEWINE, SNOWE, and BIDEN. I thank the Senators for their cosponsorship of this critical measure.

I trust the Senate will once again pass this essential legislation. We owe at least that much to the American people as we continue our struggle against an enemy that wants nothing less than to destroy everything we stand for and believe in.

I would like to mention to the distinguished manager of the bill that I don't think this is probably the best way to address this issue. Obviously, the bill should have stood on its own and been addressed separately with amendments to the bill. But I think there is a compelling case that can be made that, if port security is vital and must be acted on, so must rail security. I do not diminish the importance of this legislation. But, again, I would like to point out railway stations all over America have received very little attention and very little funding. Are we going to wait until there is an attack, such as where we arrested eight subjects this summer who were planning attacks on rail connections between New York and New Jersey or are we going to get ahead of this?

I come from a State where very few of our passengers use rail. But I think it is very important to point out that in places in the Northeast this is a primary form of transportation. Just a couple of blocks from here, if you did a rough assessment, you would find at Union Station there are significant vulnerabilities.

By the way, I would like to mention that Senator STEVENS has played a key role in this effort on this legislation. We have worked together. His leadership has been vital. I know his efforts have been very important, and I want to express my appreciation.

Again, I say to the distinguished managers of the bill, if changes need to be made to this legislation in conference we would certainly welcome improvements. But I hope we can include this as part of this legislation so we can begin making serious efforts to ensure rail safety in America.

My thanks to the managers and my thanks to the distinguished chairman of the Commerce Committee for all of his efforts on this legislation.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Alaska.

Mr. STEVENS. I thank the Senator from Arizona for his comments. I might say on the visit that I made to Los Angeles Harbor, it is very clear that rail is essential for the 40 percent of the cargo that comes into the United States. The majority moves out of the Los Angeles Harbor by rail, and currently that is very sensitive because there is only one rail coming out of there and there should be multiple rails.

Senator McCAIN has offered S. 1052, which our committee reported in November of 2005. That bill contained sections of aviation, rail, trucking, and port security.

In addition, Senator McCAIN's bill passed the Senate in 2004. It is not controversial. I will urge the Senate to let us pass it again without amendment so we can take it to conference, and I do believe it will become law.

It is very clear it is as essential as the port security section, and I thank him for bringing it to the floor. I intend to support it completely because I hope we can get back to both the aviation and trucking portions of S. 1052 sometime. I don't think it will be in this Congress, however, because it has become too controversial. But we intend to take them up again, I believe, early next year whether there is change of management or not in terms of the Commerce Committee. I do hope we can realize the aviation and trucking areas need to change, as far as security considerations are concerned, in terms of their basic law. But I am here to urge the Senate very favorably to approve this, and I am certainly urging the Senate to adopt the McCain amendment when we start voting on this bill next Tuesday.

Is there anyone else who wishes to comment at this time?

AMENDMENT NO. 4922, AS MODIFIED

Mr. McCAIN. Mr. President, if I may just make one additional comment, I ask unanimous consent the amendment be modified with the changes at the desk. They add the Homeland Security Committee as recipient of the reporting requirements in the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered. The amendment, as modified, is as follows;

At the appropriate place in the bill, insert the following:

TITLE —RAIL SECURITY ACT OF 2006

SEC. —01. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the "Rail Security Act of 2006".

SEC. —02. RAIL TRANSPORTATION SECURITY RISK ASSESSMENT.

(a) IN GENERAL.—

(1) VULNERABILITY ASSESSMENT.—The Under Secretary of Homeland Security for Border and Transportation Security (referred to in this title as the "Under Secretary"), in consultation with the Secretary of Transportation, shall conduct a vulnerability assessment of freight and passenger rail transportation (encompassing railroads, as that term is defined in section 20102(1) of title 49, United States Code), which shall include—

(A) identification and evaluation of critical assets and infrastructures;

(B) identification of threats to those assets and infrastructures;

(C) identification of vulnerabilities that are specific to the transportation of hazardous materials via railroad; and

(D) identification of security weaknesses in passenger and cargo security, transportation infrastructure, protection systems, procedural policies, communications systems, employee training, emergency response planning, and any other area identified by the assessment.

(2) EXISTING PRIVATE AND PUBLIC SECTOR EFFORTS.—The assessment conducted under this subsection shall take into account actions taken or planned by both public and private entities to address identified security issues and assess the effective integration of such actions.

(3) RECOMMENDATIONS.—Based on the assessment conducted under this subsection, the Under Secretary, in consultation with the Secretary of Transportation, shall develop prioritized recommendations for improving rail security, including any recommendations the Under Secretary has for—

(A) improving the security of rail tunnels, rail bridges, rail switching and car storage areas, other rail infrastructure and facilities, information systems, and other areas identified by the Under Secretary as posing significant rail-related risks to public safety and the movement of interstate commerce, taking into account the impact that any proposed security measure might have on the provision of rail service;

(B) deploying equipment to detect explosives and hazardous chemical, biological, and radioactive substances, and any appropriate countermeasures;

(C) training employees in terrorism prevention, passenger evacuation, and response activities;

(D) conducting public outreach campaigns on passenger railroads;

(E) deploying surveillance equipment; and

(F) identifying the immediate and long-term costs of measures that may be required to address those risks.

(b) CONSULTATION; USE OF EXISTING RESOURCES.—In carrying out the assessment required by subsection (a), the Under Secretary shall consult with rail management, rail labor, owners or lessors of rail cars used to transport hazardous materials, first responders, shippers of hazardous materials, public safety officials (including those within other agencies and offices within the Department of Homeland Security), and other relevant parties.

(c) REPORT.—

(1) CONTENTS.—Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Under Secretary shall submit to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation and the Committee on Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs of the Senate and the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure of the House of Representatives a report that contains—

(A) the assessment and prioritized recommendations required by subsection (a) and an estimate of the cost to implement such recommendations;

(B) a plan, developed in consultation with the freight and intercity passenger railroads, and State and local governments, for the government to provide increased security support at high or severe threat levels of alert; and

(C) a plan for coordinating rail security initiatives undertaken by the public and private sectors.

(2) FORMAT.—The Under Secretary may submit the report in both classified and redacted formats if the Under Secretary determines that such action is appropriate or necessary.

(d) 2-YEAR UPDATES.—The Under Secretary, in consultation with the Secretary of Transportation, shall update the assessment and recommendations every 2 years and transmit a report, which may be submitted in both classified and redacted formats, to the Committees named in subsection (c)(1), containing the updated assessment and recommendations.

(e) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated to the Under Secretary $5,000,000 for fiscal year 2007 to carry out this section.

SEC. —03. RAIL SECURITY.

(a) RAIL POLICE OFFICERS.—Section 28101 of title 49, United States Code, is amended by striking "the rail carrier" each place it appears and inserting "any rail carrier".

(b) REVIEW OF RAIL REGULATIONS.—Not later than 1 year after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Transportation, in consultation with the Under Secretary, shall review existing rail regulations of the Department of Transportation for the purpose of identifying areas in which those regulations need to be revised to improve rail security.

SEC. —04. STUDY OF FOREIGN RAIL TRANSPORT SECURITY PROGRAMS.

(a) REQUIREMENT FOR STUDY.—Not later than 1 year after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Comptroller General of the United States shall complete a study of the rail passenger transportation security programs that are carried out for rail transportation systems in Japan, member nations of the European Union, and other foreign countries.

(b) PURPOSE.—The purpose of the study conducted under subsection (a) shall be to identify effective rail transportation security measures that are in use in foreign rail transportation systems, including innovative measures and screening procedures determined effective.

(c) REPORT.—The Comptroller General shall submit a report on the results of the study conducted under subsection (a) to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation and the Committee on Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs of the Senate and the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure of the House of Representatives. The report shall include the Comptroller General's assessment regarding whether it is feasible to implement within the United States any of the same or similar security measures that are determined effective under the study.

SEC. 05. PASSENGER, BAGGAGE, AND CARGO SCREENING.

(a) REQUIREMENT FOR STUDY AND REPORT.—The Under Secretary, in cooperation with the Secretary of Transportation, shall—

(1) conduct a study to analyze the cost and feasibility of requiring security screening for passengers, baggage, and cargo on passenger trains; and

(2) not later than 1 year after the date of the enactment of this Act, submit a report containing the results of the study and any recommendations that the Under Secretary may have for implementing a rail security screening program to—

(A) the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation and the Committee on Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs of the Senate; and

(B) the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure of the House of Representatives.

(b) PILOT PROGRAM.—As part of the study conducted under subsection (a), the Under Secretary shall complete a pilot program of random security screening of passengers and baggage at 5 passenger rail stations served by Amtrak, which shall be selected by the Under Secretary. In conducting the pilot program under this subsection, the Under Secretary shall—

(1) test a wide range of explosives detection technologies, devices, and methods;

(2) require that intercity rail passengers produce government-issued photographic identification, which matches the name on the passenger's tickets before the passenger boarding a train; and

(3) attempt to give preference to locations at the highest risk of terrorist attack and achieve a distribution of participating train stations in terms of geographic location, size, passenger volume, and whether the station is used by commuter rail passengers and Amtrak passengers.

(c) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated to the Under Secretary to carry out this section $5,000,000 for fiscal year 2007.

SEC. 06. CERTAIN PERSONNEL LIMITATIONS NOT TO APPLY.

Any statutory limitation on the number of employees in the Transportation Security Administration of the Department of Transportation, before or after its transfer to the Department of Homeland Security, does not apply to the extent that any such employees are responsible for implementing the provisions of this title.

SEC. 07. FIRE AND LIFE-SAFETY IMPROVEMENTS.

(a) LIFE-SAFETY NEEDS.—The Secretary of Transportation may award grants to Amtrak for the purpose of making fire and life-safety improvements to Amtrak tunnels on the Northeast Corridor in New York, New York, Baltimore, Maryland, and Washington, D.C.

(b) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated to the Secretary of Transportation for the purposes of carrying out subsection (a) the following amounts:

(1) For the 6 New York tunnels, to provide ventilation, electrical, and fire safety technology upgrades, emergency communication and lighting systems, and emergency access and egress for passengers—

- (A) $100,000,000 for fiscal year 2007;
- (B) $100,000,000 for fiscal year 2008;
- (C) $100,000,000 for fiscal year 2009; and
- (D) $170,000,000 for fiscal year 2010.

(2) For the Baltimore & Potomac tunnel and the Union tunnel, together, to provide adequate drainage, ventilation, communication, lighting, and passenger egress upgrades—

- (A) $10,000,000 for fiscal year 2007;
- (B) $10,000,000 for fiscal year 2008;
- (C) $10,000,000 for fiscal year 2009; and
- (D) $17,000,000 for fiscal year 2010.

(3) For the Washington, DC Union Station tunnels to improve ventilation, communication, lighting, and passenger egress upgrades—

- (A) $8,000,000 for fiscal year 2007;
- (B) $8,000,000 for fiscal year 2008;
- (C) $8,000,000 for fiscal year 2009; and
- (D) $8,000,000 for fiscal year 2010.

(c) INFRASTRUCTURE UPGRADES.—There are authorized to be appropriated to the Secretary of Transportation $3,000,000 for fiscal year 2007 for the preliminary design of options for a new tunnel on a different alignment to augment the capacity of the existing Baltimore tunnels.

(d) AVAILABILITY OF APPROPRIATED FUNDS.—Amounts appropriated pursuant to this section shall remain available until expended.

(e) PLANS REQUIRED.—The Secretary of Transportation may not make amounts available to Amtrak for obligation or expenditure under subsection (a)—

(1) until Amtrak has submitted to the Secretary, and the Secretary has approved, an engineering and financial plan for such projects; and

(2) unless, for each project funded under this section, the Secretary has approved a project management plan prepared by Amtrak that appropriately addresses—

- (A) project budget;
- (B) construction schedule;
- (C) recipient staff organization;
- (D) document control and record keeping;
- (E) change order procedure;
- (F) quality control and assurance;
- (G) periodic plan updates;
- (H) periodic status reports; and
- (I) such other matters the Secretary determines to be appropriate.

(f) REVIEW OF PLANS.—

(1) COMPLETION.—The Secretary of Transportation shall complete the review of the plans required under paragraphs (1) and (2) of subsection (e) and approve or disapprove the plans not later than 45 days after the date on which each such plan is submitted by Amtrak.

(2) INCOMPLETE PLANS.—If the Secretary determines that a plan is incomplete or deficient—

(A) the Secretary shall notify Amtrak of the incomplete items or deficiencies; and

(B) not later than 30 days after receiving the Secretary's notification under subparagraph (A), Amtrak shall submit a modified plan for the Secretary's review.

(3) REVIEW OF MODIFIED PLANS.—Not later than 15 days after receiving additional information on items previously included in the plan, and not later than 45 days after receiving items newly included in a modified plan, the Secretary shall—

(A) approve the modified plan; or

(B) if the Secretary finds the plan is still incomplete or deficient—

(i) submit a report to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation and the Committee on Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs of the Senate and the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure of the House of Representatives that identifies the portions of the plan the Secretary finds incomplete or deficient;

(ii) approve all other portions of the plan;

(iii) obligate the funds associated with those other portions; and

(iv) execute an agreement with Amtrak not later than 15 days thereafter on a process for resolving the remaining portions of the plan.

(g) FINANCIAL CONTRIBUTION FROM OTHER TUNNEL USERS.—The Secretary of Transportation shall, taking into account the need for the timely completion of all portions of the tunnel projects described in subsection (a)—

(1) consider the extent to which rail carriers other than Amtrak use the tunnels;

(2) consider the feasibility of seeking a financial contribution from those other rail carriers toward the costs of the projects; and

(3) obtain financial contributions or commitments from such other rail carriers at levels reflecting the extent of their use of the tunnels, if feasible.

SEC. 08. MEMORANDUM OF AGREEMENT.

(a) MEMORANDUM OF AGREEMENT.—Not later than 60 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Transportation and the Secretary of Homeland Security shall execute a memorandum of agreement governing the roles and responsibilities of the Department of Transportation and the Department of Homeland Security, respectively, in addressing railroad transportation security matters, including the processes the departments will follow to promote communications, efficiency, and nonduplication of effort.

(b) RAIL SAFETY REGULATIONS.—Section 20103(a) of title 49, United States Code, is amended by striking "railroad safety" and inserting "railroad safety, including security."

SEC. 09. AMTRAK PLAN TO ASSIST FAMILIES OF PASSENGERS INVOLVED IN RAIL PASSENGER ACCIDENTS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Chapter 243 of title 49, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

"§ 24316. Plans to address needs of families of passengers involved in rail passenger accidents

"(a) SUBMISSION OF PLAN.—Not later than 6 months after the date of the enactment of the Rail Security Act of 2006, Amtrak shall submit to the Chairman of the National Transportation Safety Board and the Secretary of Transportation a plan for addressing the needs of the families of passengers involved in any rail passenger accident involving an Amtrak intercity train and resulting in a loss of life.

"(b) CONTENTS OF PLANS.—The plan to be submitted by Amtrak under subsection (a) shall include, at a minimum, the following:

"(1) A process by which Amtrak will maintain and provide to the National Transportation Safety Board and the Secretary of Transportation, immediately upon request, a list (which is based on the best available information at the time of the request) of the names of the passengers aboard the train (whether or not such names have been verified), and will periodically update the list. The plan shall include a procedure, with respect to unreserved trains and passengers not holding reservations on other trains, for Amtrak to use reasonable efforts to ascertain the number and names of passengers aboard a train involved in an accident.

“(2) A plan for creating and publicizing a reliable, toll-free telephone number within 4 hours after such an accident occurs, and for providing staff, to handle calls from the families of the passengers.

“(3) A process for notifying the families of the passengers, before providing any public notice of the names of the passengers, by suitably trained individuals.

“(4) A process for providing the notice described in paragraph (2) to the family of a passenger as soon as Amtrak has verified that the passenger was aboard the train (whether or not the names of all of the passengers have been verified).

“(5) A process by which the family of each passenger will be consulted about the disposition of all remains and personal effects of the passenger within Amtrak’s control; that any possession of the passenger within Amtrak’s control will be returned to the family unless the possession is needed for the accident investigation or any criminal investigation; and that any unclaimed possession of a passenger within Amtrak’s control will be retained by the rail passenger carrier for at least 18 months.

“(6) A process by which the treatment of the families of nonrevenue passengers will be the same as the treatment of the families of revenue passengers.

“(7) An assurance that Amtrak will provide adequate training to its employees and agents to meet the needs of survivors and family members following an accident.

“(c) USE OF INFORMATION.—The National Transportation Safety Board, the Secretary of Transportation, and Amtrak may not release to any person information on a list obtained under subsection (b)(1) but may provide information on the list about a passenger to the family of the passenger to the extent that the Board or Amtrak considers appropriate.

“(d) LIMITATION ON LIABILITY.—Amtrak shall not be liable for damages in any action brought in a Federal or State court arising out of the performance of Amtrak in preparing or providing a passenger list, or in providing information concerning a train reservation, pursuant to a plan submitted by Amtrak under subsection (b), unless such liability was caused by Amtrak’s conduct.

“(e) LIMITATION ON STATUTORY CONSTRUCTION.—Nothing in this section may be construed as limiting the actions that Amtrak may take, or the obligations that Amtrak may have, in providing assistance to the families of passengers involved in a rail passenger accident.

“(f) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated to the Secretary of Transportation for the use of Amtrak $500,000 for fiscal year 2007 to carry out this section. Amounts appropriated pursuant to this subsection shall remain available until expended.”

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—The chapter analysis for chapter 243 of title 49, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

“Sec. 24316. Plans to address needs of families of passengers involved in rail passenger accidents.”

SEC. 10. SYSTEMWIDE AMTRAK SECURITY UPGRADES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Subject to subsection (c), the Under Secretary may award grants, through the Secretary of Transportation, to Amtrak—

(1) to secure major tunnel access points and ensure tunnel integrity in New York, Baltimore, and Washington, D.C.;

(2) to secure Amtrak trains;

(3) to secure Amtrak stations;

(4) to obtain a watch list identification system approved by the Under Secretary;

(5) to obtain train tracking and interoperable communications systems that are coordinated to the maximum extent possible;

(6) to hire additional police and security officers, including canine units; and

(7) to expand emergency preparedness efforts.

(b) CONDITIONS.—The Secretary of Transportation may not disburse funds to Amtrak for projects under subsection (a) unless—

(1) the projects are contained in a system-wide security plan approved by the Under Secretary, in consultation with the Secretary of Transportation;

(2) capital projects meet the requirements under section 407(e)(2); and

(3) the plan includes appropriate measures to address security awareness, emergency response, and passenger evacuation training.

(c) EQUITABLE GEOGRAPHIC ALLOCATION.—The Under Secretary shall ensure that, subject to meeting the highest security needs on Amtrak’s entire system, stations and facilities located outside of the Northeast Corridor receive an equitable share of the security funds authorized under this section.

(d) AVAILABILITY OF FUNDS.—There are authorized to be appropriated to the Under Secretary $63,500,000 for fiscal year 2007 for the purposes of carrying out this section. Amounts appropriated pursuant to this subsection shall remain available until expended.

SEC. 11. FREIGHT AND PASSENGER RAIL SECURITY UPGRADES.

(a) SECURITY IMPROVEMENT GRANTS.—The Under Secretary may award grants to freight railroads, the Alaska Railroad, hazardous materials shippers, owners of rail cars used in the transportation of hazardous materials, universities, colleges and research centers, State and local governments (for passenger facilities and infrastructure not owned by Amtrak), and, through the Secretary of Transportation, to Amtrak, for full or partial reimbursement of costs incurred in the conduct of activities to prevent or respond to acts of terrorism, sabotage, or other intercity passenger rail and freight rail security threats, including—

(1) security and redundancy for critical communications, computer, and train control systems essential for secure rail operations;

(2) accommodation of cargo or passenger screening equipment at the international border between the United States and Mexico or the international border between the United States and Canada;

(3) the security of hazardous material transportation by rail;

(4) secure intercity passenger rail stations, trains, and infrastructure;

(5) structural modification or replacement of rail cars transporting high hazard materials to improve their resistance to acts of terrorism;

(6) employee security awareness, preparedness, passenger evacuation, and emergency response training;

(7) public security awareness campaigns for passenger train operations;

(8) the sharing of intelligence and information about security threats;

(9) to obtain train tracking and interoperable communications systems that are coordinated to the maximum extent possible;

(10) to hire additional police and security officers, including canine units; and

(11) other improvements recommended by the report required under section 402(c), including infrastructure, facilities, and equipment upgrades.

(b) ACCOUNTABILITY.—The Under Secretary shall adopt necessary procedures, including audits, to ensure that grants awarded under this section are expended in accordance with the purposes of this title and the priorities and other criteria developed by the Under Secretary.

(c) EQUITABLE ALLOCATION.—The Under Secretary shall equitably distribute the funds authorized by this section, taking into account geographic location, and shall encourage non-Federal financial participation in awarding grants. With respect to grants for passenger rail security, the Under Secretary shall also take into account passenger volume and whether a station is used by commuter rail passengers and intercity rail passengers.

(d) CONDITIONS.—The Secretary of Transportation may not disburse funds to Amtrak under subsection (a) unless Amtrak meets the conditions set forth in section 410(b).

(e) ALLOCATION BETWEEN RAILROADS AND OTHERS.—Unless the Under Secretary determines, as a result of the assessment required by section 402, that critical rail transportation security needs require reimbursement in greater amounts to any eligible entity, a grant may not be awarded under this section—

(1) in excess of $65,000,000 to Amtrak; or

(2) in excess of $100,000,000 for the purposes described in paragraphs (3) and (5) of subsection (a).

(f) HIGH HAZARD MATERIALS DEFINED.—In this section, the term “high hazard materials” means poison inhalation hazard materials, class 2.3 gases, class 6.1 materials, and anhydrous ammonia.

(g) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated to the Under Secretary $350,000,000 for fiscal year 2007 to carry out the purposes of this section. Amounts appropriated pursuant to this subsection shall remain available until expended.

SEC. 12. OVERSIGHT AND GRANT PROCEDURES.

(a) SECRETARIAL OVERSIGHT.—The Secretary of Transportation may use not more than 0.5 percent of amounts made available to Amtrak for capital projects under this title—

(1) to enter into contracts for the review of proposed capital projects and related program management plans; and

(2) to oversee construction of such projects.

(b) USE OF FUNDS.—The Secretary may use amounts available under subsection (a) to make contracts for safety, procurement, management, and financial compliance reviews and audits of a recipient of amounts under subsection (a).

(c) PROCEDURES FOR GRANT AWARD.—The Under Secretary shall prescribe procedures and schedules for the awarding of grants under this title, including application and qualification procedures (including a requirement that the applicant have a security plan), and a record of decision on applicant eligibility. The procedures shall include the execution of a grant agreement between the grant recipient and the Under Secretary. The Under Secretary shall issue a final rule establishing the procedures not later than 90 days after the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 13. RAIL SECURITY RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT.

(a) ESTABLISHMENT OF RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT PROGRAM.—The Under Secretary, in conjunction with the Secretary of Transportation, shall carry out a research and development program for the purpose of improving freight and intercity passenger rail security that may include research and development projects to—

(1) reduce the vulnerability of passenger trains, stations, and equipment to explosives and hazardous chemical, biological, and radioactive substances;

(2) test new emergency response techniques and technologies;

(3) develop improved freight technologies, including—

(A) technologies for sealing rail cars;

(B) automatic inspection of rail cars;

(C) communication-based train controls; and

(D) emergency response training;

(4) test wayside detectors that can detect tampering with railroad equipment; and

(5) support enhanced security for the transportation of hazardous materials by rail, including—

(A) technologies to detect a breach in a tank car and transmit information about the integrity of tank cars to the train crew;

(B) research to improve tank car integrity, with a focus on tank cars that carry high hazard materials (as defined in section 411(g));

(C) techniques to transfer hazardous materials from rail cars that are damaged or otherwise represent an unreasonable risk to human life or public safety;

(6) other projects recommended in the report required under section 402.

(b) COORDINATION WITH OTHER RESEARCH INITIATIVES.—The Under Secretary shall ensure that the research and development program under this section is coordinated with other research and development initiatives at the Department of Homeland Security and the Department of Transportation. The Under Secretary shall carry out any research and development project authorized under this section through a reimbursable agreement with the Secretary of Transportation if the Secretary—

(1) is already sponsoring a research and development project in a similar area; or

(2) has a unique facility or capability that would be useful in carrying out the project.

(c) ACCOUNTABILITY.—The Under Secretary shall adopt necessary procedures, including audits, to ensure that grants made under this section are expended in accordance with the purposes of this title and the priorities and other criteria developed by the Under Secretary.

(d) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated to the Under Secretary $50,000,000 in each of fiscal years 2007 and 2008 to carry out the purposes of this section. Amounts appropriated pursuant to this subsection shall remain available until expended.

SEC. 14. WELDED RAIL AND TANK CAR SAFETY IMPROVEMENTS.

(a) TRACK STANDARDS.—Not later than 90 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Administrator of the Federal Railroad Administration shall—

(1) require each track owner using continuous welded rail track to include procedures to improve the identification of cracks in rail joint bars in the procedures filed with the Administration under section 213.119 of title 49, Code of Federal Regulations;

(2) instruct Administration track inspectors to obtain copies of the most recent continuous welded rail programs of each railroad within the inspectors' areas of responsibility and require that inspectors use those programs when conducting track inspections; and

(3) establish a program to—

(A) periodically review continuous welded rail joint bar inspection data from railroads and Administration track inspectors; and

(B) require railroads to increase the frequency or improve the methods of inspection of joint bars in continuous welded rail, if the Administrator determines that such increase or improvement is necessary or appropriate.

(b) TANK CAR STANDARDS.—The Administrator of the Federal Railroad Administration shall—

(1) not later than 1 year after the date of the enactment of this Act, validate the predictive model it is developing to quantify the relevant dynamic forces acting on railroad tank cars under accident conditions; and

(2) not later than 18 months after the date of the enactment of this Act, initiate a rulemaking to develop and implement appropriate design standards for pressurized tank cars.

(c) OLDER TANK CAR IMPACT RESISTANCE ANALYSIS AND REPORT.—Not later than 2 years after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Administrator of the Federal Railroad Administration shall—

(1) conduct a comprehensive analysis to determine the impact resistance of the steels in the shells of pressure tank cars constructed before 1989; and

(2) submit a report to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation of the Senate and the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure of the House of Representatives that contains recommendations for measures to eliminate or mitigate the risk of catastrophic failure.

SEC. 15. NORTHERN BORDER RAIL PASSENGER REPORT.

Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Under Secretary, in consultation with the heads of other appropriate Federal departments and agencies and the National Railroad Passenger Corporation, shall submit a report to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation and Committee on Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs of the Senate and the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure of the House of Representatives that contains—

(1) a description of the current system for screening passengers and baggage on passenger rail service between the United States and Canada;

(2) an assessment of the current program to provide preclearance of airline passengers between the United States and Canada as outlined in "The Agreement on Air Transport Preclearance between the Government of Canada and the Government of the United States of America", dated January 18, 2001;

(3) an assessment of the current program to provide preclearance of freight railroad traffic between the United States and Canada as outlined in the "Declaration of Principle for the Improved Security of Rail Shipments by Canadian National Railway and Canadian Pacific Railway from Canada to the United States", dated April 2, 2003;

(4) information on progress by the Department of Homeland Security and other Federal agencies towards finalizing a bilateral protocol with Canada that would provide for preclearance of passengers on trains operating between the United States and Canada;

(5) a description of legislative, regulatory, budgetary, or policy barriers within the United States Government to providing pre-screened passenger lists for rail passengers traveling between the United States and Canada to the Department of Homeland Security;

(6) a description of the position of the Government of Canada and relevant Canadian agencies with respect to preclearance of such passengers; and

(7) a draft of any changes in existing Federal law necessary to provide for pre-screening of such passengers and providing pre-screened passenger lists to the Department of Homeland Security.

SEC. 16. REPORT REGARDING IMPACT ON SECURITY OF TRAIN TRAVEL IN COMMUNITIES WITHOUT GRADE SEPARATION.

(a) STUDY.—The Secretary of Homeland Security, in consultation with State and local government officials, shall conduct a study on the impact of blocked highway-railroad grade crossings on the ability of emergency responders, including ambulances and police, fire, and other emergency vehicles, to perform public safety and security duties in the event of a terrorist attack.

(b) REPORT.—Not later than 1 year after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Homeland Security shall submit a report to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation and Committee on Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs of the Senate and the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure of the House of Representatives that contains—

(1) the findings of the study conducted under subsection (a); and

(2) recommendations for reducing the impact of blocked crossings on emergency response.

SEC. 17. WHISTLEBLOWER PROTECTION PROGRAM.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Subchapter I of chapter 201 of title 49, United States Code, is amended by inserting after section 20115 the following:

"§ 20116. Whistleblower protection for rail security matters

"(a) DISCRIMINATION AGAINST EMPLOYEE.—A rail carrier engaged in interstate or foreign commerce may not discharge a railroad employee or otherwise discriminate against a railroad employee because the employee (or any person acting pursuant to a request of the employee)—

"(1) provided, caused to be provided, or is about to provide or cause to be provided, to the employer or the Federal Government information relating to a perceived threat to security; or

"(2) provided, caused to be provided, or is about to provide or cause to be provided, testimony before Congress or at any Federal or State proceeding regarding a perceived threat to security; or

"(3) refused to violate or assist in the violation of any law, rule or regulation related to rail security.

"(b) DISPUTE RESOLUTION.—A dispute, grievance, or claim arising under this section is subject to resolution under section 3 of the Railway Labor Act (45 U.S.C. 153). In a proceeding by the National Railroad Adjustment Board, a division or delegate of the Board, or another board of adjustment established under such section 3 to resolve the dispute, grievance, or claim the proceeding shall be expedited and the dispute, grievance, or claim shall be resolved not later than 180 days after the filing date. If the violation is a form of discrimination that does not involve discharge, suspension, or another action affecting pay, and no other remedy is available under this subsection, the Board, division, delegate, or other board of adjustment may award the employee reasonable damages, including punitive damages, of not more than $20,000.

“(c) PROCEDURAL REQUIREMENTS.—Except as provided in subsection (b), the procedure set forth in section 42121(b)(2)(B), including the burdens of proof, applies to any complaint brought under this section.

“(d) ELECTION OF REMEDIES.—An employee of a railroad carrier may not seek protection under both this section and another provision of law for the same allegedly unlawful act of the carrier.

“(e) DISCLOSURE OF IDENTITY.—

“(1) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in paragraph (2), the Secretary of Transportation may not disclose the name of an employee of a railroad carrier who has provided information about an alleged violation of this section without the written consent of the employee.

“(2) ENFORCEMENT.—The Secretary shall disclose to the Attorney General the name of an employee described in paragraph (1) if the matter is referred to the Attorney General for enforcement.”.

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—The chapter analysis for chapter 201 of title 49, United States Code, is amended by inserting after the item relating to section 20115 the following:

“Sec. 20116. Whistleblower protection for rail security matters.”.

Mr. MCCAIN. I also ask unanimous consent to add Senator LIEBERMAN as a cosponsor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from Hawaii.

Mr. INOUE. Mr. President, I wish to associate myself with the remarks of Mr. STEVENS.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Maine.

Ms. COLLINS. Mr. President, I, too, commend the Senator from Arizona for bringing this measure to the Senate floor. As Senator STEVENS has pointed out, it is directly relevant to port security because many of the containers that come into our ports by ship are then deployed throughout the country by rail. So I would argue this is directly relevant to the goal of the legislation before us.

This is a Commerce Committee matter that Senator MCCAIN has brought up, but I did just want to let my colleagues know that it is very relevant to our goal of securing our ports. I strongly support the amendment and commend the Senator for his initiative.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I rise in strong support of the amendment before the Senate that's been offered as a complete substitute to H.R. 4954. This legislation could not be more timely. The anniversary of September 11 is imminent, a stark reminder that our Nation must remain vigilant in the global war on terror.

This amendment, the Port Security Improvement Act of 2006, is critically important legislation. It strengthens port security operations, both in the United States and abroad so we can prevent threats from reaching our shores in the first place.

This legislation improves existing programs for targeting and inspecting cargo containers so that a dangerous shipment doesn't enter or threaten the Nation. It provides direction for further strengthening of these programs as technological advances permit. And, it calls for greater coordination and cooperation among Federal agencies in contingency planning in the event there is a security breach.

This legislation represents a thoughtful reevaluation of how best to meet the Nation's security interests at United States seaports. We have taken a look at what has been done since 9/11. This legislation builds upon that. Terrorists have proven that they will change their ways to exploit perceived weaknesses in our defenses. We need to stay ahead of them. This legislation empowers our personnel in the Department of Homeland Security and United States Border and Customs Protection to do just that.

At the same time, this legislation includes provisions to strengthen the economic security of our Nation. It's important to remember that in addition to killing innocent Americans, the 9/11 attacks were intended to wreak economic havoc and injury upon our Nation. This legislation includes provisions that realign resources to ensure better efficiency in the administration of customs laws within the United States Customs and Border Protection. It authorizes the International Trade Data System, a forward-looking program to better utilize technology in order to increase efficiency and facilitate trade. And, it provides for added resources to better meet all of our economic and trade security interests that are overseen by the U.S. Customs and Border Protection.

In sum, this legislation is the culmination of months of hard and thoughtful work. I thank my ranking member on the Finance Committee, Senator BAUCUS, my colleagues on the Commerce Committee, Senator STEVENS and Senator INOUE, and my colleagues on the Homeland Security Committee, Senator COLLINS and Senator LIEBERMAN, with whom I have worked so closely to bring this legislation to the floor. I urge all of my colleagues to join me in advancing this essential legislation through the Senate in a timely manner.

Ms. COLLINS. Mr. President, I want to comment on the tremendous efforts of the ranking member of the Homeland Security Committee, Senator LIEBERMAN, and the chairmen and ranking members of the Commerce and Finance Committees, Senators STEVENS, INOUE, GRASSLEY and BAUCUS. They along with their committee staffs have worked together for months to develop the bill that is before us today.

Each of the committees has its own jurisdictional interests in this bill. The Homeland Security Committee has jurisdiction over the Department of Homeland Security with its primary mission of preventing terrorist attacks against the United States and reducing vulnerabilities to such attacks. Many of the programs in this bill, including the Automated Targeting System, the Container Security Initiative, and the Customs-Trade Partnership Against Terrorism, serve the purpose of reducing vulnerabilities to terrorist attacks and are operated by the U.S. Customs and Border Protection within the Department of Homeland Security—squarely within the Homeland Security Committee's jurisdiction. Moreover, it was the committee's jurisdictional authority to study the effectiveness of government agency programs that began the evaluation of the DHS' cargo security initiatives that are improved by this bill.

The Commerce and Finance Committees also have significant jurisdictional interests. The Commerce Committee has jurisdiction over shipping and the Coast Guard. And the Finance Committee has jurisdiction over the assessment of customs duties and compliance with customs laws.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Alaska.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, it is my understanding that there is no one else who wishes to speak on the bill or the McCain amendment at this time.

MORNING BUSINESS

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, on behalf of the leader, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to a period of morning business with Senators permitted to speak for up to 10 minutes each.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. ALLEN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that I be allowed to speak for as much time as I may consume.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

AMERICAN ENERGY INDEPENDENCE

Mr. ALLEN. Mr. President, I rise today to offer a new vision for American independence, a mission that is vital for Americans and for America's homeland and national security.

We Americans have always been freedom seekers. We have been risk takers for liberty, daring to cross oceans and blaze trails across our continent, and at the same time we are reaching skyward to charter our own course into the future. We are always trying to provide a beacon to light the way for others around the world. Now is the time for us to be bold and chart our own course once again.

In this time of expanding promise and unparalleled danger in the world, we are called to come together with a clear vision and a unity of purpose worthy of a great people and a great nation.

We declared our independence from colonial masters more than two centuries ago. We declared our independence from fascism, from imperial communism, and from every other form of totalitarian oppression and brutality in the 20th century. And America belatedly strode forward to become a more perfect union with justice and opportunity for all.

In each of these challenges to our self-determination and our freedom, we not only declared our independence, we also mustered the resolve and the resources to achieve it. It is time for America to declare its independence again.

Nearly 5 years ago, on September 11, 2001, we awoke on a bright, blue-sky morning to the dark realization that a great evil still stalks our world. Out of the shocking smoke and devastation of September 11 came the realization that we are at war—at war with an extraordinarily violent ideology that seeks to pervert a great religion and murder thousands of innocent people to satisfy its thirst for power in a new caliphate from Europe to Indonesia.

Today, we find ourselves engaged in a global war against vile, maniacal terrorists—a war against many foes—including Hezbollah, al-Qaida, the Islamic Jihad, and others, but with its primary theaters being the breeding ground of radicalism and terrorism in the Middle East.

My colleagues, in this war we have our differences over the means and methods, tactics and timetables. We do not have the same conviction about the importance of every theater or every engagement. We do not all see the same causes and effects, nor do we all give credit or cast blame in the same direction.

But there comes a time where we have to set aside such differences and act not as Republicans or Democrats determined to win an election but as Americans determined to win a war, and in so doing preserve our freedom, our values, and our way of life.

Rather than petty political bickering and partisan posturing, let all of us stand together—those of us who understand the reality of the mortal danger that our irreconcilable, fanatical enemy and its hateful ideology represent. Let's stand apart from those who would still deny or diminish the magnitude of the danger that we face, even as we mourn our thousands dead and foil new plots to kill thousands more.

Let those of us who want to fight this war to win stand together, and let's stand against those who counsel appeasement at the point of a gun, negotiations as missiles rain down, and retreat in the face of adversity.

My colleagues, if that is the new dividing line, I am convinced that the majority in the Senate and in this Congress, and most importantly, all Americans, regardless of political persuasion, are capable of coming together behind a new declaration of independence to secure America's future.

Today, as we combat the powerful forces of terrorism and their state sponsors, we and our allies find ourselves continually dependent on and compromised by Middle Eastern and other hostile sources of foreign oil.

This war is unlike other great wars. In the past, the financial sacrifice of free citizens fueled the engines of industry and military output. But today, many of our gasoline dollars now go to finance the war effort of our enemies, and, if those dollars do not go directly to our enemies now, then they go into bank accounts of some friendly but fragile states—bank accounts that are the envy and object of radical ideologues.

When a nation like Iran has an advanced program to develop nuclear weapons—and when that nation is committed to the destruction of Israel and others—when that nation uses oil as blackmail to keep the international community from confronting its nuclear threat, as the leaders of Iran have done, then we know this: Our peace, freedom, and national security depend on making that oil weapon irrelevant.

Because we rely so heavily on Middle Eastern oil in our economies, our foreign policy options are limited for addressing the terrorism, tyranny, and related geopolitical issues. For America to be free and independent—for Americans to remain the masters of our own destiny—we must declare our independence from Middle Eastern and other hostile sources of oil. We must commit every effort and resource to the achievement of this national purpose.

I strongly believe that a comprehensive, enduring, sustained, and strategic plan for independence from Middle Eastern and other hostile sources of foreign oil must include five essential elements.

They are, first, the strategic use of our global economic power and international relationships to remove oil-based leverage that hostile states currently enjoy; second, the accelerated exploration and development of American energy supplies, including American oil, American natural gas, American clean coal, and American nuclear power; third, the accelerated research, development, and deployment of every economically viable alternative and renewable source of energy; fourth, a bold new national commitment to innovation and entrepreneurship, investing in the next generation of leading-edge, creative scientists, researchers, and engineers of advanced technology; and, fifth, an unequivocal declaration of our national security commitment to energy independence.

Let me highlight some of these key initiatives that I believe are needed in each of those five areas.

First, we must use our global economic power and international relationships strategically to undercut the oil-based leverage that hostile nations enjoy now and in the future.

We all recognize that America's dependence on Middle Eastern and other hostile sources of foreign oil leaves America and our allies, mainly in Europe and Asia, vulnerable to blackmail from radicals in the Middle East, and even in our own hemisphere, such as the avowed Marxist, Hugo Chavez.

Meanwhile, China is aggressively making oil alliances with Sudan, Cuba, Venezuela, and Indonesia to reduce its dependence on Middle Eastern oil. It is not in the interest of the United States to let Africa and Latin America become dominated by oil trade with China.

As a member of the Foreign Relations Committee, I will be introducing a bill for the establishment of America's Energy Security Initiative.

The plan will require the President to establish a permanent energy security working group consisting of representatives of the Department of State, Department of Energy, Department of Commerce, Department of Defense, and intelligence agencies. Our allies will be asked to join us in developing this plan.

We will develop an inventory of all energy reserves worldwide so we can prioritize potential alliances and recognize when strategically important countries come under the influence of others. And we will establish a strategic plan for identifying and forming energy alliances, including bilateral and multilateral arrangements.

The second essential element in our comprehensive plan for achieving independence from the Middle East and other hostile sources of foreign oil is accelerated exploration and development of American energy supplies. We need to adopt a flexible, diverse portfolio of energy options. First and foremost, that must include increased domestic energy production from American oil, more American natural gas, more American clean coal, and more American advanced nuclear energy.

The bottom line is we need more energy explored, produced, grown, and manufactured in America so that hundreds of billions of energy dollars stay here in America and are reinvested in America's economy for American jobs, American competitiveness, and American national security rather than having to worry about the whims of some dictator in a hostile part of the world.

Last month, the Senate passed a Gulf of Mexico Energy Security Act, a good action by the Senate, and a good first step toward reducing natural gas prices at home and making America less dependent on foreign sources of energy.

This was commonsense, bipartisan legislation that would permit deep-water exploration for oil and natural gas in the eastern Gulf of Mexico. This bill will free up enough natural gas to heat the homes of 6 million American families for 15 years. And there is more oil and natural gas even further into the Gulf of Mexico.

We also need to allow Virginia and other Atlantic coast States to move toward deepwater oil and/or natural gas exploration far off their coasts. According to the Department of Interior, there are roughly 86 billion unexplored barrels of oil and 420 trillion unutilized cubic feet of natural gas under deep water on our Outer Continental Shelf.

The fact is, we have the resources in America and the deep water of our coasts—and also in shale on our land—to reduce the leverage that hostile dictators now enjoy.

We also need to explore for oil and natural gas on the North Slope of Alaska. Critics will say it will hurt the pristine environment. I have been up there. It is a flat, barren, treeless plain. In the summer it is filled with mosquitos, and in the winter it is like the dark side of the Moon.

According to our Department of Energy, the estimated daily oil in ANWR 1.37 million barrels—would be roughly the equivalent of current daily oil imports from Saudi Arabia—1.52 million barrels. That is a lot of oil.

When it comes to natural gas, natural gas is a wonderful, clean-burning fuel. It is needed for heating our homes, and it is also vital for manufacturing, particularly in plastics, chemicals, and fertilizers. We need to make sure that price is reduced at home so those manufacturing jobs stay in America. A lot of the new electric powerplants in this country which have been permitted in recent decades have to use natural gas.

Using natural gas to generate electricity would be like using bottled water to wash your dishes. It will do the job, but why would you want to use a resource as good as that for generating electricity when there are alternatives for generating electricity such as coal?

In fact, the United States is the Saudi Arabia of the world in coal, with 500 billion tons of coal, which is the equivalent of 750,000 billion barrels of oil. We have 27 percent of the world's supply of coal. This is why we should be using clean coal technology for electricity generation.

I recently visited a clean coal facility in King George County, VA, where the smokestacks run so clean you can't even see the emissions from it. If you didn't hear the whirling, you would think it was closed.

We ought to be using innovative technology to gasify or use coal as a fuel.

Today, I am announcing my strong support for a comprehensive bill directed at advancing domestic coal-to-liquids technologies. Senator BUNNING is the lead sponsor of this Coal-to-Liquids Promotion Act of 2006, authorizing the Department of Energy to administer loan guarantees to the first coal-to-liquids plants and promulgating rules to allow BRAC sites and military bases to be considered as sites for commercial coal-to-liquids plants.

This bill also expands 20 percent tax credits for coal-to-liquids plants and provides a similar provision for expensing these investments, and it also extends the fuel tax credit for coal-to-liquids products from 2009 to the year 2020.

Our comprehensive plan for energy independence must also include using American advanced nuclear power for electricity generation. The Energy Policy Act that we passed last year was a significant step in rekindling the domestic nuclear industry in the United States which has not seen a new nuclear reactor built in the last 20 years. It provides meaningful incentives and protections and it strengthens security for nuclear facilities.

Going forward, as far as nuclear power is concerned, the big impediment for nuclear power is the disposal of spent fuel. This is why we need a comprehensive solution such as the Global Nuclear Energy Partnership that develops a viable long-term solution to the problem of nuclear spent fuel through chemical separation and reprocessing, which is much more efficient and much less dangerous than our current methods of using nuclear power and dealing with spent fuel.

We also need to increase our Nation's refinery capacity. There hasn't been a new oil refinery built in the United States in almost 30 years. In response, I have introduced a bill called The Bolster Our Energy Security for Tomorrow Act, which directs the President to designate three BRAC sites for possible refinery development, with at least one of these refineries producing biofuels, and to appoint a Federal refinery coordinator to negotiate with willing States to streamline the permitting process without changing existing environmental laws.

I have also joined with my colleague and friend from North Carolina, Senator BURRE, in introducing the Affordable and Reliable Gas Act. This legislation will help increase refinery capacity and prevent these dramatic spikes in gas prices that we see in this country, usually in the spring, as they shift from a winter blend to a summer blend.

We have 104 "boutique" fuels that strain our refinery capacity, as well as pipeline capacity. Our measure would reduce the number of boutique fuels from 104 to 1 clean-burning diesel fuel and 4 clean-burning gasoline fuel blends by the end of 2008. That will help reduce gas prices.

We also need, as Americans, to conserve. We need to conserve. We need to look at ways of being less wasteful, more efficient and smart in the use of our energy, particularly in energy used by large computer servers. It is not widely known, but one large computer data center can use as much electricity in 1 day as it takes to power a city the size of Petersburg, VA, with its approximately 34,000 residents. That is so much energy that I want to make sure the Federal Government and companies that use such mega computer servers and data centers are doing so wisely and efficiently.

I have introduced legislation that directs the Environmental Protection Agency, through its Energy Star Program, to study the rapid growth in energy consumption of computer data centers by both the Federal Government and the private sector, analyze how effectively the computer industry is migrating to more energy efficient microchips and servers, reduce the costs associated with building and operating large-scale data centers, and make recommendations for positive incentives to advance adoption of energy-efficient data centers.

The third essential element of our comprehensive plan for achieving independence from Middle Eastern and hostile sources of foreign oil is the accelerated research, development, and deployment of every economically viable alternative source of energy. We need to adopt a flexible, diverse portfolio of energy options. Diversity of supply is security of supply. We ought to be using alternative fuels, such as biofuels, including soy diesel and ethanol, cellulose fuels, and innovative ideas, whether it's hybrids, hydrogen, solar power, or nanotech-enabled lithium ion batteries.

We must take further action to create an economic climate that encourages investment in new energy and alternative fuels. That is why I am reviewing, and I urge my colleagues to consider, legislation that allows 100 percent first-year expensing for all plant and equipment investments to help spur development of domestic and alternative sources of energy.

Expensing is a high-performance tax reform of vital national importance from an energy-specific perspective. According to economists such as Gary Robbins with Fiscal Associates, 100 percent expensing would reduce the capital costs in key segments of the energy industry by up to approximately 10 percent. It would also be important to environmentally friendly "green" technologies, where first-year expensing for the green technologies can often tip the balance between feasible and unfeasible.

In fact, many financial and industry experts believe that expensing is the cheapest, most effective and most growth-oriented tax change that the Congress can actually make. It has been estimated that replacing the old-fashioned tax depreciation with immediate first-year expensing would add more than $200 billion to our GDP and upwards of 750,000 new jobs.

The fourth major area in which we must act for energy independence is one that is often overlooked in the usual discussions of national energy policy. We need a bold new national commitment to innovation and entrepreneurship, investing in the next generation of leading-edge scientists, researchers, and engineers.

We should all want America to be the world capital of innovation. To achieve that mission we need scientists, we need engineers, we need technologists. They will be the ones who will be designing and developing the new inventions, the new innovations, and the new intellectual property of the future.

However, America's education system is not graduating sufficient talent in science, technology, and engineering.

Last year, the United States matriculated approximately 70,000 engineers compared to 300,000 engineers in India and 500,000 in China.

In America, we must do a much better job in motivating, inspiring, and incenting our young people to study science, engineering, technology, and medicine at a much earlier age. That is why I have worked, as many have worked, in a bipartisan fashion, with Senators LIEBERMAN, ENSIGN, ALEXANDER, DOMENICI, BINGAMAN, and others on the National Innovation Act, which implements the recommendations of the National Innovation Initiative Report and provides tangible action items, including scholarships, to increase America's science and technology talent.

I am also a strong supporter of the Protecting America's Competitive Edge through Energy Act of 2006, which would boost science and math education programs in the United States by providing early career research grants that support young, promising scientists and engineers at the beginning of their careers.

I have led with a good partner, Senator Ron Wyden, on the other side of the aisle, on our Nanotech Initiative. Nanotechnology is the next transformative economic development for our country and the world. Nanotechnology is a very diverse field. It is going to have a positive impact on life and health sciences. It will have a major impact on microelectronics and materials engineering. Nanotechnology will allow us to build wider and stronger materials that will need less energy for propulsion. There is a company called NanoChemionics, in southwest Virginia, that is teaming up with coal companies to get the impurities out of coal, to make it into a fuel, as is Sasol in South Africa. Nanotechnology will be helpful in environmental cleanups.

All together, the Nanotechnology Initiative, the National Innovation Act, and the PACE Energy Act will go a long way toward meeting America's rising demand for highly skilled men and women in all fields of innovation, and it will strengthen America's security through energy independence.

Fifth, and finally, I conclude where we must begin, with a clear, unequivocal expression of national commitment, a new Declaration of Independence, if you will, matched with the discipline to keep us on track, according to an agreed-upon timetable. For those who say we cannot come together for such a national purpose, I say you underestimate the character and the resolve of the American people and the power of the American idea.

Look at what we have done in the past when confronted with great challenges to our freedom and our way of life. Half a century ago, the Soviet Union launched the space satellite Sputnik. Our scientific edge in missile technology and the space race was in serious doubt. Our national security was at great risk of falling behind. But America's ingenuity was dramatically and urgently mobilized by President Eisenhower, who passed the National Defense Education Act, providing massive investment in science, technology, and engineering.

We need that same kind of commitment and leadership to keep America the world capital of innovation now and in the future.

September 11 awakened our Nation to a monumental new challenge: fighting and winning this global war against hate-filled terrorists. This war on terror, similar to all wars, will require clarity of vision and unity of purpose. America's long-term national security depends on securing our independence from the Middle East and other hostile sources of oil. We have the resources to do it, the resources underneath our land and water, and the best resource of all, the ingenuity of our free, creative minds. Now we just need the willpower to use it.

Mr. President, 230 years ago our forebears pledged their lives, their fortune, and their sacred honor to the cause of independence. We are more fortunate. We need only do what we have already sworn to do—set aside our differences and act in the public interest. This Congress must adopt a clear "Declaration of Independence" from the Middle East and other hostile sources of oil, and it must act urgently, decisively, and with a unity that rises above partisan differences to make that Declaration of Independence a reality.

Let us begin right now.

I yield the floor and suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. ROCKEFELLER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. ROCKEFELLER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that I be allowed to speak for about 20 or 25 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

INTELLIGENCE COMMITTEE PHASE II REPORT

Mr. ROCKEFELLER. Mr. President, today the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence has released to the public two of the five sections of our long-promised report on how intelligence was used by policymakers in the lead-up to the war in Iraq. This phase II report builds on the committee's July 2003 phase I report on the intelligence community's very substantial mistakes regarding weapons of mass destruction in Iraq. Fundamentally, these reports are about accountability. They are about identifying the mistakes that led us to war and making sure those mistakes never happen again, so far as we can do so.

Let me share some important excerpts from the report which reflect both my own views and the views of all of my Democratic colleagues on the committee.

The committee's investigation into prewar intelligence on Iraq has revealed that the Bush administration's case for war in Iraq was fundamentally misleading.

Prior to the war, administration officials repeatedly characterized Iraq's weapons of mass destruction programs in more conclusive and threatening terms than were substantiated by the underlying intelligence assessments. Analytical assessments of the intelligence community that were not in line with the more strident administration view on alleged Iraqi links to al-Qaida and the 9/11 plot were ignored and were denigrated by senior policymakers. Most disturbingly, the administration, in its zeal to promote public opinion in the United States before toppling Saddam Hussein, pursued a deceptive strategy prior to the war of using intelligence reporting that the intelligence community warned was uncorroborated, unreliable, and, in critical instances, fabricated.

The committee has uncovered information in its investigation which shows that the administration ignored warnings prior to the war about the veracity of the intelligence trumpeted publicly to support its case that Iraq was an imminent threat to the security of the United States.

Some of the false information used to support the invasion of Iraq was provided by the Iraqi National Congress, the INC, an organization which our intelligence agencies had cautioned repeatedly was penetrated by hostile intelligence services and would use its relationship with the United States to promote its own agenda to overthrow Saddam Hussein. The committee's investigation concluded that the INC attempted to influence U.S. policy on Iraq by providing false information through Iraqi defectors directed at convincing the United States that Iraq possessed weapons of mass destruction and had links to terrorists.

The committee also found the July 2002 decision by the National Security Council directing that the renewed funding of the INC contract—the Iraqi National Congress, the Chalabi operation—be put under Pentagon management was ill advised given the counter-intelligence concerns of the CIA and warnings of financial mismanagement from the State Department.

Repeated prewar statements by administration officials sought to connect Iraq and al-Qaida in ways the underlying intelligence simply did not support.

The administration's—this is key—the administration's repeated allegations of the past, present, and future relationship between al-Qaida and Iraq exploited the deep sense of insecurity among Americans in the immediate aftermath of the September 11 attacks, leading a large majority of Americans to believe, contrary to the intelligence assessments at the time, that Iraq had a role in the 9/11 terrorist attacks.

The administration sought and succeeded in creating the impression that al-Qaida and Iraq worked in concert and presented a single unified threat to the United States of America. The committee's investigation revealed something completely different.

The committee found that there was no credible information that Iraq was complicit or had foreknowledge of the September 11 attacks or any other al-Qaida strike anywhere. The committee also found that Iraq did not provide chemical or biological weapons training or any material or operational support to al-Qaida prior to the war.

Furthermore, no evidence was found of any meeting between al-Qaida and the Iraq regime before the war, other than a single meeting that took place years earlier in 1995, in fact, in the Sudan. That meeting was at a fairly low level, and that meeting did not lead to any operational cooperation at all. Osama was there, but the Iraqi representative was at a low level.

Key pieces of evidence used by the administration asserting links between Iraq and al-Qaida were a report of a meeting in Prague between 9/11 hijacker Mohamed Atta and an Iraqi intelligence officer and a claim that Iraq provided chemical and biological weapons training to al-Qaida in the late 1990s. The committee report demonstrates that the prewar statements of the Vice President of the United States that the Prague meeting had been “pretty well confirmed” and that the 9/11 hijacker Mohamed Atta—again the Vice President's words—“in fact” met with Iraqi intelligence services in 2001 were not substantiated by the intelligence assessment at the time the statements were made by the Vice President. Likewise, the statement by National Security Adviser Rice that “there are a lot of tantalizing meetings” between Iraq and “people who were involved in 9/11” was clearly false based upon what was known prior to the war.

The committee's investigation revealed no postwar information indicating that Iraq considered using al-Qaida or any other terrorist group to attack the United States. The committee investigation concluded that, in fact, Saddam Hussein was distrustful of al-Qaida and viewed Islamic extremists as a threat to his regime and to him personally, refusing all requests from al-Qaida to provide material or any kind of operational support. Postwar findings indicate that Saddam Hussein refused all al-Qaida overtures for material or operational support and, in fact, issued a general order that Iraq should not deal with al-Qaida. In addition, Saddam viewed al-Zarqawi, who was present in Baghdad only from May to November of 2002, as an outlaw. Saddam regarded Zarqawi as an outlaw and attempted unsuccessfully to locate him and capture him. Again, he failed.

During the buildup to war, the intelligence community was placed under pressure to support the administration's position that there was a link between Iraq and al-Qaida. This is particularly distressing. This pressure took the form of policymakers repetitively tasking analysts to review, to reconsider, to revise their analytical judgments, or simply asking the same question again and again.

Many participants involved with the preparation of prewar intelligence felt at the time that the decision had been made to go to war by the administration early on—in fact, many months before Congress was asked to authorize the use of force. The committee investigation revealed evidence that this prewar pressure to conform to administration policy demands may have led to the co-option of the intelligence community.

The committee's two-phased investigation has been significantly limited, I must say, by the majority's refusal to examine issues and documents relative to our inquiry when the issues and documents came close to the White House.

While a quarter of the committee's INC report is devoted to a lengthy examination of the CIA's relationship with the INC in the early and mid-1990s, the committee majority voted down requests by the minority to investigate the flow of intelligence information from the INC that circumvented the intelligence community and went directly to the White House and to Pentagon policy officials in the lead-up to the war.

Finally, the committee's inquiry has been hampered by the decision to deal with five phase II tasks as separate inquiries, which they are not, and complete the report on a piecemeal basis rather than a unified whole. This has been distressing to those of us in the minority.

The chairman suspended the committee investigation into the Pentagon policy office—we associate the name Doug Fife with that—over 2 years ago, rejected any investigation, oversight—whatever you will—into the Pentagon policy office despite evidence presented in the committee's phase I report that the office attempted to shape the CIA's terrorism analysis, and when it failed, prepared an alternative intelligence analysis for policy officials designed to denigrate the CIA's analysis for not embracing a link between Iraq and al-Qaida and the 9/11 terrorist attacks. It is my belief that the committee can complete its remaining work on phase II of its Iraq inquiry in a manner that is complete, objective, and expeditious. It should not have taken nearly 3 years to reach the point where we are now.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Michigan is recognized.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that I be able to proceed as in morning business for 25 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. We are in morning business. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. LEVIN. I understand it is for 10 minutes unless we get unanimous consent for more time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the Senator is recognized for 25 minutes.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, let me begin by thanking the Senator from West Virginia for the leadership he has shown on this matter and so many other matters—on every matter he has touched on, in fact, on intelligence and in his other work in this body.

Today the Senate Intelligence Committee is releasing two of five parts of phase II of the committee's inquiry into prewar intelligence. One of the two reports released today looks at what we learned after the attack on Iraq about the accuracy of prewar intelligence regarding links between Saddam Hussein and al-Qaida. Today's report is a devastating indictment of the Bush administration's unrelenting, misleading, and deceptive attempts to convince the American people that Saddam Hussein was linked with al-

Qaida, the perpetrators of the 9/11 attack.

The President said Wednesday, just this week, that:

One of the hardest parts of my job is to connect Iraq to the war on terror.

Well, that shouldn't surprise anybody. The President's decision to ignore intelligence community assessments prior to the Iraq war and to make repeated public statements that gave the misleading impression that Saddam Hussein's regime was connected to the terrorists who attacked us on 9/11 cost him any credibility he may have had on this issue.

President Bush said Saddam and al-Qaida were allies—his words. And that:

You can't distinguish between al-Qaida and Saddam when you talk about the war on terror.

The bipartisan report released today directly contradicts that linkage which the President has consistently made in his effort to build public support for his Iraq policy.

The bipartisan committee report finds that the prewar intelligence assessments were right when the intelligence community said Saddam and al-Qaida were independent actors who were far from being natural partners. The report finds that prewar intelligence assessments were right when they expressed consistent doubts that a meeting occurred between 9/11 hijacker Mohamed Atta and a senior Iraqi intelligence official in Prague prior to September 11. Our report finds that prewar intelligence assessments were right when they said there was no credible reporting on al-Qaida operatives being trained in Iraq. Those were the two principal arguments which were used prior to the war to support the alleged linkage between al-Qaida and Saddam Hussein.

The accurate prewar intelligence assessments didn't stop the administration from making many false and misleading statements trying to link Saddam Hussein with al-Qaida. In his September 5 presentation to the United Nations, Secretary Powell said:

Iraq today harbors a deadly terrorist network headed by Abu Musab al-Zarqawi, an associate and collaborator of Osama bin Laden, and his al-Qaida lieutenant.

After the war, in June of 2004, the President said that al-Zarqawi, the terrorist leader recently killed in Iraq, was the best evidence of a connection between Iraq and al-Qaida. And to this day—to this day—these statements have not stopped.

Just 2 weeks ago, the President said in a press conference that Saddam Hussein "had relations with Zarqawi." Our Intelligence Committee report demonstrates that statement made 2 weeks ago by the President was false. The committee report discloses, for the first time, the CIA's October 2005 assessment that Saddam's regime:

Did not have a relationship, harbor, or turn a blind eye towards Zarqawi and his associates.

The President's statement made just 2 weeks ago is flatout false.

The drumbeat of misleading administration statements alleging Saddam's links to al-Qaida was unrelenting in the lead-up to the Iraq war which began in March of 2003.

On September 25, 2002, the President said:

Al-Qaida hides. Saddam doesn't, but the danger is that they work in concert. The danger is that al-Qaida becomes an extension of Saddam's madness and his hatred and his capacity to extend weapons of mass destruction around the world.

And then he said:

You can't distinguish between al-Qaida and Saddam when you talk about the war on terror.

The next day, in September of 2002, Secretary Rumsfeld said:

We have what we consider to be credible evidence that al-Qaida's leaders have sought contacts in Iraq who would help them acquire weapons of mass destruction capabilities.

On October 14, 2002, the President said:

This is a man—Saddam is a man that we know has had connections with al-Qaida. This is a man who, in my judgment, would like to use al-Qaida as a forward army.

On January 30, 2003, Vice President CHENEY said:

Saddam's regime aids and protects terrorists, including members of al-Qaida. He could decide secretly to provide weapons of mass destruction to terrorists for use against us. And as the President said on Tuesday it would just take one vial, one canister, one crate to bring a day of horror to our Nation unlike any we have ever known.

On February 6, 2003, Deputy Secretary of Defense Wolfowitz said:

And, worst of all, his connections with terrorists which go back decades and which started some 10 years ago with al-Qaida are growing every day.

What the administration and the President and other administration officials did not say was what the intelligence community was saying about this crucial issue because it would have undermined their march to war and it would have refuted their main argument for attacking Iraq: that Iraq was linked to the terrorists who attacked us on 9/11.

What was the CIA saying? What was the intelligence community saying before the war? In June of 2002, the CIA said that:

Our assessment of al-Qaida's ties to Iraq rests on a body of fragmented, conflicting reporting from sources of varying reliability.

That same report of the CIA said:

The ties between Saddam and bin Laden appear much like those between rival intelligence services.

And the Defense Intelligence Agency stated in a July 2002 assessment, being declassified for this first time in this report:

Compelling evidence demonstrating direct cooperation between the government of Iraq and al-Qaida has not been established.

So these two then-classified assessments preceded the President's statements that "You can't distinguish between Iraq and al-Qaida" and that, in his view, Saddam would love to use al-Qaida as a "forward army."

Then the CIA assessed in January 2003, still before the war, that "Saddam Hussein and Osama bin Laden are far from being natural partners" and that Saddam has "viewed Islamic extremists operating inside Iraq as a threat."

The CIA assessed in January of 2003 that Saddam viewed al-Qaida with "deep suspicion" and stated that:

The relationship between Saddam and bin Laden appears to more closely resemble that of two independent actors trying to exploit each other.

That 2003 classified report was issued 1 day before the Vice President stated to the American public that Saddam's regime:

Aids and protects terrorists, including members of al-Qaida.

The misleading statements by administration officials didn't stop there. The Intelligence Committee report recounts the story of the alleged meeting between Mohamed Atta and the Iraqi intelligence officer in Prague. In the fall of 2001, the Czech intelligence service provided the CIA with reporting based on a single source who stated that Atta met with an Iraqi intelligence officer in Prague in April of 2001.

On December 9, 2001, Vice President CHENEY was asked about the report on "Meet the Press." The Vice President said:

It has been pretty well confirmed that he—

The 9/11 hijacker Mohamed Atta—did go to Prague and he did meet with a senior official with the Iraqi intelligence service in Czechoslovakia last April, several months before the attack.

On March 24, 2002, the Vice President told "Meet the Press":

We discovered, and it has since been public, the allegation that one of the lead hijackers, Mohammed Atta, had, in fact, met with Iraqi intelligence in Prague.

But the Intelligence Committee report released today cites a June 2002 CIA paper that said:

Reporting is contradictory on hijacker Mohammed Atta's alleged trip to Prague and meeting with an Iraqi intelligence officer and we have not verified his travels.

The Intelligence Committee report released today declassifies, for the first time, a July 2002 Defense Intelligence Agency paper that said:

Mohammed Atta reportedly was identified by an asset, not an officer, of a Czech service, only after Atta's picture was widely circulated in the media after the attacks, approximately five months after the alleged meeting occurred.

And that:

There is no photographic, immigration, or other documentary evidence indicating that Atta was in the Czech Republic during the time frame of the meeting.

Two months later, in September 2002, the CIA published its assessment that “evidence casts doubt” on the possibility that the meeting had occurred and that:

The CIA and FBI have reviewed the reporting available so far and they are unable to confirm that Atta met al-Ani in Prague.

None of those assessments stopped the Vice President from continuing to suggest that the report of the meeting was evidence that Saddam’s regime was linked to the 9/11 attack.

On September 8, 2002, in a “Meet the Press” interview, the Vice President said that the CIA considered the report of the meeting credible, although again, that same month, the CIA said there was evidence that cast doubt on it having occurred.

In January 2003, the CIA published an assessment stating that:

A CIA and FBI review of intelligence and open-source reporting leads us to question the information provided by the Czech service source who claimed that Atta met al-Ani.

The January 2003 paper stated that the CIA was “increasingly skeptical”—increasingly skeptical—“that Atta traveled to Prague in 2001 or met with the IIS officer, al-Ani,” and that “the most reliable reporting to date casts doubt on this possibility.”

But the Vice President was undeterred by the CIA’s skepticism. On September 14, 2003, 8 months after the CIA said that the most reliable reporting cast doubt on the possibility of a meeting between Atta and the Iraqi intelligence officer, Vice President CHENEY was still citing as this having possibly occurred.

On January 14, 2004, a full year after the CIA expressed serious doubts about the meeting and the fact that not a shred of evidence had been found to support the claim of a meeting, the Vice President told the Rocky Mountain News that the Atta meeting was “the one that possibly tied the two together to 9/11.”

Six months later, on June 17, 2004, the Vice President was asked whether Iraq was involved in 9/11. The Vice President said, “We don’t know. . . . We had one report, this was the famous report on the Czech intelligence service, and we’ve never been able to confirm it or knock it down. We just don’t know.”

The Vice President may not have “known,” but the intelligence community sure as heck did not believe, and did not believe for a long time before the Vice President’s statement, that the meeting took place.

The intelligence assessments contained in the Intelligence Committee’s unclassified report are an indictment of the administration’s unrelenting and misleading attempts to link Saddam Hussein to 9/11. But portions of the report which the intelligence community leaders have determined to keep from public view provide some of the most damaging evidence of this administration’s falsehoods and distortions.

Among what remains classified, and therefore covered up, includes deeply disturbing information. Much of the information redacted from the public report does not jeopardize any intelligence source or method but serves effectively to cover up certain highly offensive activities. Even the partially released picture is plenty bleak, about the administration’s use of falsehoods and distortions to build public support for the war. But the public is entitled to the full picture. Unless this report is further declassified, they won’t get it. While the battle is waged to declassify those covered-up portions of the report—unless, of course, those portions truly disclose intelligence sources or methods, every Senator should read the classified version of this report. It is available to every Senator, and I urge every Senator to read the classified version of this report and reach his own conclusion about what I and Senator ROCKEFELLER have said about the portions of this report that remain classified and unavailable to the public.

In addition to trying to create the impression that Iraq was connected to the 9/11 attackers, the administration also claimed that Iraq had provided al-Qaida with training in poisons and gases. For instance, in a speech on October 2002, the President said, “We’ve learned that Iraq has trained al-Qaida members in bomb making and poisons and deadly gases.”

In February, 2003, the President said, “Iraq has also provided al-Qaida with chemical and biological weapons training.”

In March of 2003, National Security Advisor Condoleezza Rice said there was a “very strong link to training al-Qaida in chemical and biological weapons techniques, we know from a detainee that—the head of training for al-Qaida, that they sought help in developing chemical and biological weapons because they weren’t doing very well on their own. They sought it in Iraq. They received the help.”

Those statements were based on representations of Ibn al Shaykh al-Libi, a detained senior al-Qaida operative. But what the administration hid was the fact that the Defense Intelligence Agency did not believe al-Libi’s statement. In February 2002, a year before the President claimed that Iraq “provided al-Qaida with chemical and biological weapons training,” the DIA assessed that al-Libi “is more likely . . . intentionally misleading the debriefers.”

Nor did the administration disclose a second DIA assessment in February of 2002 that said, “Iraq is unlikely to have provided bin Ladin any useful CB knowledge or assistance,” or DIA’s

April 2000 assessment that there was no credible reporting on al-Qaida training “anywhere” in Iraq.

The administration’s statements also flew in the face of the CIA’s January 2003 assessment that al-Libi was not in a position to know whether training had taken place.

So here is what we have. The President still says that Saddam had a relationship with Zarqawi. The Senate Intelligence Committee found that the intelligence community, in 2005, concluded that “the regime did not have a relationship with, harbor, or turn a blind eye towards Zarqawi.”

The President said that Saddam and al Qaida were “allies.” The intelligence community found that intelligence shows that Saddam Hussein “viewed Islamic extremists as a threat to his regime,” and, indeed, as postwar intelligence shows, he, Saddam, “refused all requests from al-Qaida to provide material or operational support.”

The Vice President called the claim that lead hijacker Mohammed Atta met with the Iraqi intelligence officer “credible” and “pretty much confirmed,” but the Intelligence Committee report finds that the intelligence shows “no such meeting occurred.”

The President said that Iraq provided training in poisons and gases to al-Qaida, but the Intelligence Committee finds that postwar intelligence supports prewar assessments that there was no credible reporting on al-Qaida training “anywhere” in Iraq and that the terrorist who made the claim of training was “likely intentionally misleading his debriefers” when he said that Iraq had provided poisons and gases training.

But the administration’s efforts to create the false impression that Iraq and al-Qaida were linked didn’t stop with just statements. One of the most significant disclosures of the Intelligence Committee report is the account of the administration’s successful efforts to obtain the support of CIA Director George Tenet to help them make that false case. The events were of major significance. They go to the heart of the administration’s case for war on the eve of a congressional vote on whether to authorize that war. Here is what happened.

On October 7, 2002, in a speech in Cincinnati, the President represented that linkage existed between Saddam and terrorist groups. He said that “Iraq could decide on any given day to provide a biological or chemical weapon to a terrorist group or an individual terrorist.”

But on that very day, October 7, 2002, in a letter to Intelligence Committee Chairman Bob Graham, the CIA declassified at the request of the committee the CIA assessment that it would be an “extreme step” for Saddam Hussein to assist Islamic terrorists in conducting a weapons-of-mass-destruction attack against the United States and that the likelihood of Saddam Hussein using weapons of mass destruction if he did not feel threatened by an attack was "low."

When made public, the CIA assessment would have undercut the President's case. Something had to be done. So on October 8, 2002, the Director of Central Intelligence, George Tenet, issued a statement that "there is no inconsistency between our view of Saddam's growing threat and the view expressed by the President in his speech."

The Tenet statement was aimed at damage control and it undercut the CIA's own crucial assessment at a critical moment. The New York Times quoted Tenet prominently in a major story on October 9.

We called Tenet before the Intelligence Committee a month and a half ago, on July 26, 2006. In his testimony, quoted in the Intelligence Committee's report, Mr. Tenet admitted that perhaps there was an inconsistency between the President's statement and the CIA's assessment. Mr. Tenet said he issued his statement denying the inconsistency after policymakers expressed concern about the CIA's assessment, as expressed in the declassified October 7 letter. Again, that letter saying that it would be an extreme step for Saddam to assist Islamic terrorists in conducting a weapons-of-mass destruction attack.

I ask for an additional 3 minutes, Mr. President.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. LEVIN. Tenet admitted to the intelligence subcommittee that the policymakers wanted him to "say something about not being inconsistent with what the President had said." Tenet complied.

Tenet acknowledged to the committee, in his July 26, 2006, testimony, that issuing the statement was "the wrong thing to do."

It was much more than that. It was a shocking abdication of a CIA Director's duty not to act as a shill for any administration or its policies. Director Tenet issued that statement at the behest of the administration on the eve of the Congress's debate on the resolution authorizing the use of force in Iraq. The use of the Director of Central Intelligence by the administration to contradict his own agency's assessment in order to support a policy goal of the administration is reprehensible, and it seriously damaged the credibility of the CIA.

Mr. President, I thank the Chair for its indulgence and I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who seeks recognition?

RECESS SUBJECT TO THE CALL OF THE CHAIR

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent we stand in recess subject to the call of the Chair.

There being no objection, at 12:42 p.m., the Senate recessed subject to the call of the Chair and reassembled at 1:14 p.m. when called to order by the Presiding Officer (Mr. ALLEN).

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Democratic leader is recognized.

Mr. REID. Thank you very much, Mr. President. I apologize for keeping you and the staff longer than you should have been, but I was unable to be here until just now. So thank you all very much for waiting for me.

SENATE INTELLIGENCE COMMITTEE REPORT

Mr. REID. Mr. President, at noon today, the Senate Intelligence Committee released a report that proved evidence of two things: first, the Bush administration's case for war in Iraq was fundamentally misleading and deceptive and not supported by the underlying intelligence; second, the Republican-controlled Senate Intelligence Committee continues to put the political interests of the Bush White House ahead of the security of the American people.

According to today's report, the Bush administration desperately sought to prove a link between Saddam Hussein and Osama bin Laden in order to shore up public assertions being made by the President, the Vice President, the Secretary of Defense, and other senior administration officials. But from this report which was made public today, at noon, we know these assertions directly contradicted the best assessments of our intelligence experts. In short, the facts were not there to show any connection between Osama bin Laden and Saddam Hussein.

It is clear: The administration knew or should have known it was misleading America in its effort to make the case for a war in Iraq.

Just as significant, today's report shows America what you get with a Republican-led Congress. What do you get? You get the White House refusing to declassify information. And you find that in this report. You find that the White House refuses to declassify information that would embarrass them 2 months before a midterm election. And you get a Republican-led committee that is perfectly willing to bow down to the White House and keep the American people in the dark about its mistakes and its distortions.

Nearly 4 years since the war started in Iraq, 2½ years after the Republican chairman of the Intelligence Committee was pressured into starting this investigation, and nearly a year after Democrats sent the Senate into closed session to discuss the Republicans' stonewalling, 60 percent of the Intelligence Committee's investigation still is unfinished, and questions as to how and why the administration exaggerated and cherry-picked intelligence to sell its case for war remain unanswered.

These are critically, crucially important questions for our troops and our security. Authorizing the use of force and placing our citizens in harm's way is the most significant vote a Member of Congress can make, and it is essential we understand how this administration skewed that decision in the runup to the war in Iraq so we can take the steps necessary to ensure these abuses are never repeated. That is why you have to complete the work of the Intelligence Committee.

With 140,000 American troops serving bravely in the middle of a civil war in Iraq, bin Laden still at large, and a growing threat posed by North Korea and Iran, it is long past time this rubberstamping Republican Congress stood up to the Bush administration and did its job, did its job of being a separate and equal branch of Government.

The problem during the 6 years of President Bush's administration is that the Constitution has not been what it should be, not the checks and balances, not three separate, equal branches of Government. It is no mystery why there have been no vetoes—because the President has gotten everything he has wanted, with the exception of stem cell. Other than that, the Republican Congress has given him everything he has wanted.

We have had no congressional oversight. We have had committees not doing their work, as indicated by the Intelligence Committee today.

I do extend my congratulations to the entire committee. They do very valuable work for this country in dealing with the most sensitive issues America has to deal with; that is, intelligence operations of this country. I am glad we have gotten 40 percent of the work that has been so long overdue. I look forward, in the weeks ahead, to getting the remaining 60 percent. I doubt it will happen before the elections, but it should.

I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will please call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. McCONNELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. WARNER). Without objection, it is so ordered.

HONORING OUR ARMED FORCES

SPECIALIST STEPHEN P. DOWNING II

Mr. McCONNELL. Mr. President, I rise today to honor the life of a father, son, uncle, and brother from the Commonwealth of Kentucky who was lost in the line of duty as a member of America's Armed Forces. I ask the Senate to pause today in memory of SPC Stephen P. Downing II of Burkesville, KY. He was 30 years old.

On October 28, 2004, Specialist Downing and his squad were on patrol securing one of the busiest intersections in Ramadi, Iraq. As a key route for vital U.S. convoys, this crossroads had become a focal point of terrorist attacks. The threat to vulnerable U.S. vehicles meant soldiers like Stephen Downing were needed to stand guard against would-be bombers.

As his squad waited to be relieved at noon, Stephen, whose duty was simply to drive the armored humvee, volunteered to give his gunner a break from the intense heat. He climbed out of the relative safety of the driver's seat to man the .50 caliber machinegun mounted on top of the roof. Then, just a few minutes before his squad was to be replaced, he was fatally wounded by a lone sniper's bullet.

For his actions as a soldier, Specialist Downing earned numerous medals and awards, including the Bronze Star Medal and the Purple Heart.

Stephen Downing was a man of action, with a keen sense of right and wrong. He was more comfortable working on an engine or being outdoors than sitting inside. He was quick-witted, with a knack for pulling practical jokes. This quality endeared him to his family, friends, and fellow soldiers.

Stephen loved his family. As SPC Robert Gonzales, who served with Stephen Downing in both Korea and Iraq, recalls—using Stephen's nickname with the unit—

Stevy D. was very proud of his kids. He always talked about how proud they made him. . . . I can't remember how many times he showed me a picture of his son and his daughter swimming in a pool, wearing floaties. He kept it with him all the time.

Stephen's fatherly tenderness extended beyond his daughter, Taylor, and his son, Stephen, to include his niece, Chelsea. As Stephen's sister, Danica, says:

Stephen was like a father to my daughter . . . and Chelsea always looked up to Stephen.

When Stephen himself was a child, his appetite for adventure could not be satisfied. His sister recalls that her brother loved to go diving, swimming, skiing—if it was to be done outside, Stephen was eager to pursue the challenge.

When he was not taking things apart, he was putting them back together. Stephen loved modifying his BMX bikes, even if his modifications did not always turn out to be an improvement.

According to his stepfather, Jim Maynard, Stephen seemed blessed with a constant smile on his face.

And nothing could make Stephen smile more than pulling a prank on his sister. As the older sibling by almost 2 years, Danica was a constant presence for her brother growing up, helping him if older bullies tried to pick on him. But this didn't stop Stephen from having a good-natured laugh at her expense.

One morning, Stephen rushed out to catch the schoolbus and told the driver to go ahead because his sister was not going to school that day. About 3 miles down the road, the bus driver and everyone else on the bus learned the truth when Stephen's mother flagged down the schoolbus and Danica jumped on.

Another time, Danica was babysitting for a neighbor, and she and a girlfriend decided to take the baby for an evening stroll. Along their path they passed an abandoned old farm house, an infamously spooky local attraction.

As you might have guessed, Mr. President, what better way to scare your sister than to hide in the weeds by a house such as this and at the right time, jump out yelling. As Danica recounts, "Stephen scared [us] half to death . . . we both were so scared, we just took off screaming. It took us a minute to realize neither of us had brought the stroller."

Stephen enlisted in the Army in 1992. He joined the National Guard in 1994, and left the service in 2000. In 2002, however, Stephen felt compelled to re-enlist in the Army. He was sent to Korea, where he was stationed with the Second Infantry Division.

After a year-long stint, his unit was ordered to prepare for deployment to Iraq. Given the choice between staying with the unit or being transferred to Fort Carson, CO, Stephen elected to go to war with the men he had come to know and depend on.

Shortly before Stephen deployed to Iraq with the 2nd I.D., he returned home for 2 weeks to be with his family. During that time, his mother, Stella Maynard, fixed all of Stephen's favorite foods, including her famous cherry delight cake. Each family member let Stephen know how proud they were of him, while also quietly airing their greatest fears.

Stephen told his daughter, who pleaded with him not to go, that he was needed in Iraq. Putting her on his knee, Stephen told her that he was going to Iraq to help the children there—to keep them safe, so that they could have a chance at a better life.

Danica also pulled her brother aside and told him to be careful. "I told him to keep his head down," she says. "Not to be a hero, not to do more than what he had to do to get by." Stephen understood his sister's motivations, but as his actions would demonstrate, and as his fellow soldiers would later recall, Stephen did anything but the bare minimum.

SP Phillip Pilcher, who was on patrol with Stephen that fateful day, recalls

"Stephen was one of the hardest working guys over there; he would work two to three hours later than everyone else just to make sure that everything was where it needed to be."

Specialist Gonzales, who credits Stephen with being instrumental in making him a better soldier, strikes a similar chord. "Stephen was the heart and soul of our squad and our regiment," he says. "Even though he didn't have the stripes on his arm, he was still a great leader."

Many of the friends Stephen made over his 30 years came to say goodbye when he was laid to rest. BG Dan Bolger, who helped command the Second Infantry Division in Korea and asked to be the survivor-assistance officer for Stephen's family, was astounded by what he saw that day: For a 22-mile stretch along the path of the funeral procession, people, some holding signs, others flags, stood in silent tribute to their fallen hero.

A few months before his death, Stephen wrote a letter to his mother, to be sent in the event he did not return. He wrote, "Different people will remember me for different reasons, but I would hope that everyone would think that I was over here for them."

The devotion to honor and sacrifice expressed in those words tells us how Specialist Downing was able to touch so many people, and why so many people paid their final respects to his memory. As his mother recalls, "Stephen didn't have friends—he had family."

I thank Stephen's mother, Stella Maynard, and his niece, Chelsea Downing, who have traveled to our Nation's capital to meet with me today, for sharing Stephen's story. His children, Taylor and Stephen, his sister, Danica, his stepfather, Jim Maynard, and other beloved family members are in our thoughts today as well.

We can never repay Specialist Downing's family for their loss. But we can, and we must, honor the sacrifice of their beloved father, son, uncle and brother, and recognize that without his courage and the courage of the men and women of our Armed Forces, America could not lead the world in the defense of freedom.

Mr. President, Stephen's mother, Stella, put it just right, and we are all blessed to have had SP Stephen Downing in our family.

MISSILE DEFENSE

Mr. ALLARD. Mr. President, I rise today to talk about the recent successes of the Missile Defense Agency. Last Friday, a week ago from today, the Missile Defense Agency conducted a test of the ground-based midcourse system and scored an intercept. This exercise was designed to evaluate the performance of several elements of the ballistic missile defense system, and it appears that all elements worked remarkably well. Although it was not a primary objective for the data collection flight test, an intercept of the target warhead was achieved.

The test marked the first time an operational interceptor was launched from Vandenberg Air Force Base while the target flew from Alaska. It was conducted by crews who were manning operational fire control systems in Colorado Springs. It also marked the first use of the early warning radar at Beale Air Force Base in California.

I congratulate the head of the Missile Defense Agency, General Obering, and especially all the dedicated men and women of the MDA who helped make this test a success.

General Obering stated that the test is about as close as we can come to an end-to-end test of our long-range missile defense system. This success only builds upon a long record of missile defense intercepts and, more importantly, it is the fourth intercept in the last 90 days that used hit-to-kill technology.

In June, we launched a sea-based AEGIS interceptor that was successful in intercepting a separating warhead. In July, we launched a land-based terminal-phase interceptor, Terminal High Altitude Air Defense—or the THAAD—interceptor, successfully intercepting the target. Very recently, we had a successful Patriot-3 intercept that was conducted by the U.S. Army in collaboration with the Missile Defense Agency.

There have been many naysayers and doubters on missile defense, but I am proud to have supported the Missile Defense Agency over the past several years as it has grappled in an intensive effort to track down and eliminate or minimize risks that have contributed to setbacks in the past. There is an emphasis on quality that is paying off, as witnessed by our most recent tests. We learn from our mistakes, and we now see the fruit of the combined efforts of a wide range of dedicated military, civilian, and contractor personnel.

Testing will continue. We will encounter difficulties, but the program will move forward. We are succeeding in building an integrated and layered ballistic missile defense system. Our defenses will continue to improve, and our citizens will be increasingly protected and grateful.

While I am pleased that we have a limited missile defense capability, I believe our missile defense system needs to be challenged even further. We need more testing so that we can better understand the task at hand and discover the errors that must be corrected. I am confident that the Missile Defense Agency is on the right path. I look forward to supporting the Agency testing plan in the future. I do not expect perfection. In fact, I expect some failures. But in the context of several missile defense intercept tests per year, one or two failures only means that we are pushing to find out the real capabilities of the system.

We all know hit-to-kill technology works. We now need to further develop the midcourse system and introduce greater capability to that system. I look forward to assisting the Missile Defense Agency in its future programs so our Nation can rest assured that we are protected from rogue nations that wish to do us harm.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD a letter addressed to me dated September 8, 2006.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

U.S. SENATE,
SELECT COMMITTEE ON INTELLIGENCE,
Washington, DC, September 8, 2006.

HON. TED STEVENS,
President Pro Tempore, U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. PRESIDENT: On behalf of the Select Committee on Intelligence, we submit the following unclassified reports, together with additional and minority views, for filing with the Senate: (1) Postwar Findings about Iraq's WMD Programs and Links to Terrorism, and How they Compare with Pre-war Assessments and (2) The Use by the Intelligence Community of Information Provided by the Iraqi National Congress.

Senate Resolution 400 of the 94th Congress (1976) charges the Committee with the duty to oversee and make continuing studies of the intelligence activities and programs of the United States Government, and to report to the Senate concerning those activities and programs. Pursuant to its responsibilities under Senate Resolution 400, the Committee has undertaken an in-depth examination of the matters described in the reports.

Both reports have been approved by the Committee in both classified and unclassified form. The classified reports are available to Members for reading at the Committee. The classified reports will also be provided to appropriately cleared officials of the Executive branch.

The unclassified versions of the reports, which are hereby transmitted for printing, are intended to provide the Senate, and through it, the American public, a substantial factual record upon which to consider the issues covered by the reports.

Sincerely,

PAT ROBERTS,
Chairman.

JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER IV,
Vice Chairman.

COMBATING GUN TRAFFICKING

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, I have long supported law enforcement's efforts to combat gun trafficking. Earlier this summer, 11 people were charged with purchasing firearms in gun shops in Virginia and illegally dumping them on the streets of New York City between 2004 and 2005. These arrests bring attention to the need to vigorously enforce our gun laws in order to stem the flow of guns to the black market.

These individuals have been charged with making straw purchases of handguns at various gun shops in Norfolk and Portsmouth, VA, and transporting them to New York City, where they were allegedly sold on the streets at a significant markup. Straw purchases are transactions that violate Federal law in which one individual submits to the required Federal background check for a gun that is clearly intended for use by someone else. Such purchasers play a crucial role in the illegal trafficking of guns by purchasing with the intention of reselling them to prohibited buyers. The alleged conspiracy, which took place from September 2004 through June 2005, was first uncovered in 2004 when New York City police officers began making undercover purchases of firearms from this organization on the streets. The guns were traced back to gun shops in Virginia where the original straw purchases are said to have taken place. More than 50 guns were involved.

Gun trafficking has also been a problem in my home State of Michigan. According to an Americans for Gun Safety analysis of ATF trace data from 1996–1999, over 40 percent of the guns traced to crimes committed in Michigan in 1998 and 1999 originated in other States, a much higher rate than the national average. The largest number of out of State suppliers of guns to Michigan during that period were in Ohio, Kentucky, Georgia, and Alabama.

These statistics demonstrate the length to which criminals are willing to go to circumvent our gun laws. This kind of activity can be stopped by vigorously enforcing our gun laws, providing law enforcement with stronger tools to crack down on gun trafficking, on corrupt gun dealers and other armed criminals, and by passing sensible gun safety legislation.

I commend the hard work of the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms and Explosives and other Federal, State and local law enforcement officers. Vigorous law enforcement is an integral part of reducing gun violence.

IN MEMORIAM OF CONGRESSMAN BOB MATHIAS

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, today I rise to honor the life of Congressman Robert "Bob" Mathias, Olympian, Congressman, and San Joaquin Valley son. Congressman Bob Mathias passed away on September 2, 2006.

Bob Mathias was born in Tulare, CA, on November 17, 1930. Mr. Mathias attended and graduated from Tulare Union High School in 1948. In 1953, he graduated with his bachelor of arts degree from Stanford University, and in 1954 he enlisted in the U.S. Marine Corps, where he rose to the rank of second lieutenant. In 1966, he was elected to the U.S. House of Representatives for the 18th Congressional District that also included his hometown of Tulare, and continued his service until 1974.

By all accounts such impressive accomplishments would be considered aspects of a fruitful life. However, Mr. Mathias was also a gifted athlete. Mr. Mathias' athletic career was laden with accomplishments, including consecutive gold medals in the Olympic decathlons, four national Amateur Athletic Union—AAU—championships, and three world records in the decathlon. Seventeen-year-old Bob Mathias first competed in the 1948 London Summer Olympics, only months after picking up the sport. He became the youngest Olympic gold medalist, winning the decathlon. His meteoric rise in 1948 led to his depiction on the cover of LIFE magazine and the Sullivan Award for Athlete of the Year from the AAU. At the 1952 Helsinki games, Mr. Mathias again won the gold medal in the decathlon, and continued to make history as the first person to ever win consecutive Olympic decathlons. That same year Bob Mathias was named the Associated Press Male Athlete of the Year recognition of his feats on the track and on the football field. Mr. Mathias was also a member of the 1952 Stanford football team, playing an integral part of that team that went on to the 1952 Rose Bowl.

His athleticism and accomplishments earned him a place in the U.S. Olympic Hall of Fame, as well as the National Track and Field Hall of Fame. He also went on to guide younger generations of athletes as the Director of the U.S. Olympic Training Center in Colorado Springs, the National Fitness Foundation, and the American Kids Sports Association.

Throughout his life, Congressman Mathias remained a humble man, true to his roots, dedicated to his family and his country, unfazed by fame. As a young child, Mr. Mathias battled anemia and other illnesses. His perseverance in athletics and academics despite these problems no doubt prepared him for his work later in life. After his athletic career and service in the Marine Corps, Bob Mathias served as a goodwill ambassador for youth programs on behalf of the U.S. Department of State. His service to his country continued in his dedication to the constituents of the 18th Congressional District.

Congressman Mathias is survived by his wife Gwen; his 4 daughters, Romel, Megan, Marissa, and Alyse; his son Reiner; his 10 grandchildren; his sister Patricia; and his two brothers, Jim and Eugene. I extend my deepest sympathies to his family.

Congressman Mathias will be missed by his family, his friends, his fans and all those whose lives he touched. May his kindness, humility and hard work remain an inspiration to us all.

FASD AWARENESS DAY

Ms. MURKOWSKI. Mr. President, tomorrow is the ninth day of the ninth month, a day designated as International Fetal Alcohol Spectrum Awareness Day. I rise today to state that it is imperative that we continue to spread the word that no amount of alcohol is safe to consume during the 9 months of pregnancy. By continuing to raise awareness, we can hopefully minimize the harm that drinking during pregnancy causes our most vulnerable population—our children.

In February of 1999, a small group of parents, raising children afflicted with fetal alcohol spectrum disorders, set out to change the world. That small group started a support group which quickly became a worldwide grassroots movement to observe September 9 as International Fetal Alcohol Spectrum Disorders Awareness Day. This year, for the eighth consecutive year, events are occurring in cities and towns not just across the country but around the world.

In my State of Alaska, I am proud that events are occurring in Juneau, Anchorage, and Fairbanks. Citizens from my State are raising awareness about the dangers of drinking during pregnancy through a variety of events, such as passing out brochures with preventative messages to physicians' offices, delivering cocktail napkins to area bars with a message stamped on them that reminds pregnant women to not drink, and conducting high school assemblies which teach students about the dangers of alcohol on the developing fetus.

As we all know, FASD is 100 percent preventable, yet it remains a leading cause of nonhereditary mental retardation in the United States. Many children affected by maternal drinking during pregnancy have irreversible conditions—including severe brain damage—that cause permanent, lifelong disability.

Every year in America, an estimated 1 in every 100 babies is born with FASD—that is 40,000 infants. FASD affects more children than Down syndrome, cerebral palsy, spina bifida and muscular dystrophy combined.

In Alaska, we sadly continue to have the highest rate of FASD in the Nation. Approximately 163 Alaskan babies are born each year affected by maternal alcohol use during pregnancy. Among our Native communities, the rate of FASD can be 15 times higher than non-Native areas in the State.

Despite these troubling figures, FASD is still widely under diagnosed, misdiagnosed, or not diagnosed at all. Diagnosis is critical because many persons with FASD can overcome learning and behavioral problems and succeed but only with appropriate health, social, and educational resources.

The cost of FASD is high—more than $3 billion each year in direct health care costs. The indirect financial and social costs are also great—including the cost of specialized health care, education, job training, and general support services.

That is why prevention is so imperative. Prevention of FASD is seven times more cost effective than treating the disorder. But more importantly, abstaining from alcohol during pregnancy will save a family a lifetime of heartache and will prevent the greatest loss of all that of human potential.

Senator TIM JOHNSON and I have introduced the Advancing FASD Research, Prevention, and Services Act. Our bill will develop targeted State and community-based outreach programs and will improve current support services for families who are living with FASD. It will also improve coordination among Federal agencies involved in FASD treatment and research by establishing stronger communication with these programs. Lastly, it will strengthen educational outreach efforts to doctors, teachers, judges, and others whose work puts them in contact with people with FASD. I ask my colleagues to support the Advancing FASD, Research, Prevention and Services Act.

Mr. President, tomorrow, on Fetal Alcohol Awareness Day, let us pause to remember the innocent babies inflicted with this disorder and then let us imagine the potential that these babies could have attained but for the damage done by alcohol.

CONGRESS MUST STRENGTHEN WHISTLEBLOWER PROTECTIONS

Mr. AKAKA. Mr. President, as a conferee to the fiscal year 2007 National Defense Authorization Act, I urge my fellow conferees to retain the Senate's strong whistleblower protections for federal employees. The Senate bill includes an amendment I offered with Senator COLLINS that mirrors our bipartisan measure, S. 494, the Federal Employee Protection of Disclosures Act. S. 494 and the amendment have strong bipartisan support in the Senate. In the House, Representatives TOM DAVIS and HENRY WAXMAN, the chairman and ranking member of the House Government Reform Committee, and Representative TODD PLATTS, the sponsor of companion legislation to S. 494, have asked Representative DUNCAN HUNTER, chairman of the House Armed Services Committee, to include strong whistleblower protections in the final defense authorization bill.

The Senate action was a significant step forward for Federal whistleblowers and the American taxpayer. Congress must assert its original intent of the Whistleblower Protection Act, WPA, which protects Federal employees who disclose any waste, fraud, and abuse. Congress encourages such disclosures, which save lives and taxpayer dollars, and has repeatedly said that the courts should not erect barriers to disclosures which limit the flow of information from Federal employees who may have knowledge of government wrongdoing.

We have all heard of the brave men and women who have come forward at great personal risk to report cases of waste and threats to public safety. Examples include: Mr. Richard Foster, Medicare's chief actuary, who disclosed to Congress that the actual cost of the Medicare reform bill was $156 billion more than what the Bush administration told us. He was prohibited by his supervisors from alerting Congress to this huge discrepancy prior to the bill's enactment and was threatened with firing if he did so; U.S. Border Patrol Agents Mark Hall and Bob Lindemann, who disclosed security lapses along our northern border, including a lack of staff, equipment, and detention facilities. As a result, their supervisors proposed 90-day suspensions and demotions for 1 year; and Mr. Donald Van Winkle, an air-monitoring technician at the Bluegrass Army Depot in Kentucky, who revealed serious operational failures with monitors used to detect leaks of chemical warfare agents. As a result of this disclosure, Mr. Van Winkle lost his security clearance, thus denying him the ability to continue his job. Unfortunately, current law does not provide any independent review for this type of retaliation.

This spring, the Supreme Court ruled that the first amendment does not protect public sector employees, including Federal workers, from retaliation when disclosing government wrongdoing as a part of their official duties. Instead, the Court held that protection is left to State and Federal whistleblower laws. Unfortunately, Federal whistleblower protections have been watered-down by repeated decisions by the Federal Circuit Court of Appeals which ignore clear congressional intent that disclosures are protected without restriction to time, place, form, motive, or context, including disclosures made during the ordinary course of an employee's job.

As a result of various court decisions, honest employees have been denied protection from retaliatory practices. In fact, only one federal whistleblower has won on the merits of their claim before the Federal Circuit in the past 12 years. This egregious lack of employee protection has a serious chilling effect on good faith whistleblowing. Although President Bush issued a memo in 2001 requiring Federal employees to disclose waste, fraud, and abuse, the decisions of the Supreme Court and the Federal Circuit Court of Appeals have eroded protections for disclosures and placed Federal workers in a no-win situation. Congress must take action now to restore the protections granted by the WPA.

My amendment will: clarify congressional intent that Federal employees are protected for any disclosure of waste, fraud, or abuse—including those made as part of an employee's job duties; provide an independent determination as to whether the loss or denial of a security clearance is retaliation against a whistleblower; and suspend the Federal Circuit's sole jurisdiction over Federal employee whistleblower cases for 5 years.

Congress has the responsibility to guarantee strong and meaningful protections for Federal whistleblowers. Federal employees must know they will not face retaliation when disclosing information that protects our national security, safeguards the health of our children, or saves taxpayer dollars.

If Congress is serious about eliminating waste, fraud, and abuse, and ensuring that the government for the people and by the people actually is working in the best interests of the people, then we must protect those who wish to disclose illegal or unethical activities. Whistleblowers should not be restrained because they fear retaliation for doing what is right.

Again, I thank my Senate colleagues for supporting this important measure, and I urge our House counterparts to join with us in strengthening whistleblower protections.

ADDITIONAL STATEMENTS

HONORING POLICE CHIEF GARY MARTIN

• Mr. BAYH. Mr. President, today I pay tribute to retired Lake County Sheriff's Department police chief Gary Martin for his decades of dedicated service to the people of northwest Indiana and his extraordinary kindness toward the families of fallen Hoosier police officers. It is with a heavy heart and a deep sense of gratitude that I honor the life of Chief Martin, who was killed on August 22 on Indiana 63 when he was struck by an automobile while participating in a charity bike ride to benefit the families of fellow officers who have died in the line of duty. Gary's dedication to the families of our State kept him involved in public service up until his death, doing his part to comfort and support Hoosiers as they confront the loss of a loved one. I know that he will be greatly missed.

Gary was a good and decent man who dedicated his life to serving others. From his work with the sheriff's department to his involvement in the community, his career and retirement were filled with acts of conscientious service on behalf of friends, family members, and Hoosiers across Indiana. The contributions he made touched countless lives, and he will be sorely missed.

Gary was a 25-year veteran of the Gary Police Department, where he attained the rank of assistant chief. He was appointed chief of the Lake County Sheriff's Department in 2002. And for the past three decades, Gary taught criminal justice at Indiana University Northwest. He devoted all of his energy to protecting and serving his community and to caring for his colleagues and their families in their time of need. He is survived by his wife Olga and two children, Greg and Jennifer.

Like all of his colleagues in law enforcement, Chief Martin made daily sacrifices to ensure the safety of our streets, our neighborhoods, and our families. In an increasingly dangerous world, we depend on our brave men and women like Gary to protect us from violence and other threats to our communities.

A lifelong Hoosier, he was also involved in numerous other public safety projects, including working to create a pilot program with Gary schools that sought to assure parents that their children would get to school, attend school, and return home safely. Lake County sheriff Rogelio "Roy" Domiguez recalled Martin's leadership and warmth, saying "Gary was a friend and a mentor to everyone in law enforcement and our entire community. He will be greatly missed by the thousands of students, police officers and others who simply call him 'friend.'" It is a rare man who can make such an impact on so many people over the course of one life. Hoosiers will miss Gary as a friend, a community leader, and a tireless public servant.

It is my sad duty to enter the name of Gary Martin in the official RECORD of the U.S. Senate for his service to the State of Indiana.●

HONORING INDIANA STATE POLICE LIEUTENANT GARY DUDLEY

• Mr. BAYH. Mr. President, I today pay tribute to Indiana State Police Lieutenant Gary Dudley for his decades of dedicated service to the people of Indiana and his extraordinary kindness toward the families of fallen Hoosier police officers. It is with a heavy heart and a deep sense of gratitude that I honor the life of Lieutenant Dudley, who was killed on August 22 when he was struck by an automobile while participating in a charity bike ride to benefit the families of his fellow officers who have died in the line of duty. Gary's dedication to the families of our State kept him involved in public service up until his death, doing his part to comfort and support Hoosiers as they confront the loss of a loved one. I know he will be greatly missed.

Gary was a good and decent man who dedicated his life to serving others. From his work at the Indiana Law Enforcement Academy to his involvement in the community, his career was filled with acts of conscientious service on behalf of friends, family members, and Hoosiers across Indiana. The contributions he made touched countless lives.

Lieutenant Dudley started his State police career as a trooper in 1979 and was promoted to sergeant in 1991, when he transferred to the training division. He was appointed commander of the Indiana State Police Recruit Academy in 1993. He devoted all of his energy to protecting and serving his community and to caring for his colleagues and their families in their time of need. He is survived by his wife Carolyn, his father Orsel Dudley, and a brother, Danny Dudley.

Like all of his colleagues in law enforcement, Lieutenant Dudley made daily sacrifices to ensure the safety of our streets, our neighborhoods, and our families. In an increasingly dangerous world, we depend on brave men like Gary to protect us from violence and other threats to our communities.

A lifelong Hoosier, he used his passion for cycling to help families of police officers who died in the line of duty. The COPS charity ride, which he started, was in its third year. Long-time friend Sergeant Dave Bursten recalled Dudley's selfless commitment to friends and strangers alike, saying "Gary was very unique, beyond the proverbial 'give you the shirt off his back.' He'd give you his pants, he'd give you his shoes, he'd give you his next to last dollar if you genuinely needed it. He was always there to help people." It is a rare man who can make such an impact on so many people over the course of one life. Hoosiers will miss Gary as a friend, a community leader, and a tireless public servant.

THIS 45TH ANNIVERSARY CELEBRATION

● Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, I would like to congratulate The Hospitality and Information Service, THIS, of Washington, DC, on its 45th anniversary. Since 1961 THIS volunteers have welcomed diplomats and their families to Washington, providing friendship, assistance and an understanding of Washington and the United States.

THIS is a nonprofit organization that was established in 1961 at the suggestion of Angie Biddle, then Chief of Protocol, to help the hundreds of newly arrived diplomats and their families adjust to Washington. In 1961 there were 101 Embassies with 1,200 diplomatic families. Today embassies total more than 170 with 4,000 diplomats and families in Washington. THIS' 400 volunteers provide a variety of services and programs to help diplomats and their families learn about Washington through English and seven foreign language conversation groups and a book club. Programs include forums for discussion of issues that are world-wide in scope, such as health, human rights and education. They also conduct programs on government affairs, performing arts, architecture and American history.

THIS plays an important role in welcoming foreign diplomats to Washington and has made a difference in the lives of diplomats from many countries. As just a few have said:

"I would like to thank THIS for the wonderful work that you do and for your warm and friendly attention." Miriam Barak—Israel

"I express both my pleasure and my gratitude to the THIS organization as a whole. THIS is a wonderful vehicle by which the best of America is portrayed. Such an organization can only be an influential force for good." Ann Robinson—Great Britain

"THIS is a fantastic organization. It makes me feel very welcomed and comfortable . . . THIS has given me better understanding of the U.S. life and society and also given me some new good American friends." Ingela Beiming—Sweden

"THIS is a window that opens Washington for us and lets us experience and know it. It opens opportunities to meet different people." Marilia Bulhoes—Brazil

Congratulations to THIS and its volunteers on 45 years of service to the diplomatic community.●

RECOGNIZING BIG BROTHERS BIG SISTERS OF NORTHEAST INDIANA

● Mr. BAYH. Mr. President, today I wish to pay tribute to the remarkable achievement of Big Brothers Big Sisters of Northeast Indiana, which was named "National 2006 Agency of the Year" by Big Brothers Big Sisters of America this summer.

This honor was achieved through the hard work and persistence of the entire staff, board of directors, Bigs, Littles, donors and other stakeholders. Headquartered in Fort Wayne, IN, the agency was established in August 1972 and continues to assist young adolescents who lack guidance and support by creating positive and enduring relationships between youth and adults and by supporting those relationships with appropriate screening, training and supervision. Presently, more than 1,100 area youth participate in Big Brothers Big Sisters programs in 10 Indiana counties and 2 Michigan counties.

Several factors contributed to the agency receiving this year's award. During the past 5 years, it has grown exponentially in many areas, from expanding the region it helps to increasing the length of the matches it provides, which grew by almost 120 percent between 2001 and 2005. The number of participating adult volunteers has increased by 90 percent since 2003, and the time taken to enroll those volunteers has been decreased by 60 days over the course of last 2 years, allowing more Bigs to be matched with more Littles, thereby fulfilling the Big Brothers Big Sisters mission of helping children to reach their potential through professionally supported one-to-one relationships with measurable impact.

In addition to being recognized as the National 2006 Agency of the Year, Big Brothers Big Sisters of Northeast Indiana was also a finalist in the categories of Board of the Year and Chief Executive Officer of the Year—the only agency to achieve this distinction. It should also be noted that all of these nominations were in the "Large" category, yet the Fort Wayne agency was considered mid-sized only a few years ago. Since that time, the organization's growth in programs and quality have bolstered it to the top among BBBS agencies in large metropolitan markets.

I have supported Federal funding for agency programs like the Amachi program, which pairs faith-based mentors in one-to-one matches with children of incarcerated parents, as well as its Lunch Buddies program, which pairs elementary school students with caring adult mentors for weekly lunch visits at the children's schools.

Big Brothers Big Sisters of Northeast Indiana makes a visible impact in the lives of Hoosier youths, and it is deserving of the recognition that it has received. I offer my sincere congratulations today and look forward to continuing to support to this exemplary organization in the future.●

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

STATEMENTS ON INTRODUCED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS

By Mr. INHOFE (for himself, Mrs. FEINSTEIN, Mr. THUNE, and Mr. ISAKSON):

S. 3880. A bill to provide the Department of Justice the necessary authority to apprehend, prosecute, and convict individuals committing animal enterprise terror; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. Mr. President, today along with Senator INHOFE, I am pleased to introduce the Animal Enterprise Terrorism Act. This legislation is crucial to respond to the expanded scope of terrorist activity that has threatened to impede important medical research and scientific innovation.

The legislation we introduce today would: clarify that it is a crime to damage or interfere with an “animal enterprise”—which includes legitimate companies and non-profit organizations that use animals for education, research or testing; expand Federal law to also make it illegal to harm or cause property loss to anyone connected with an animal enterprise;

Criminalize threats, harassment, and other illegal activity that uses interstate commerce to intentionally cause fear of death or injury to anyone connected with an animal enterprise;

Establish graded penalties of up to 20 years depending on the financial damage or level of bodily injury caused by such illegal conduct, and up to life imprisonment if death results; establish that a convicted animal enterprise terrorist can also be ordered as restitution to pay the animal enterprise's cost of repeating experiments and other losses resulting from the criminal conduct; and clarify that all legitimate protest activities protected by the First Amendment are exempted out from any prosecution under the bill.

The need for this bill is obvious.

On June 30 of this year, extremist activists, acting in the name of animal rights, attempted to firebomb a Los Angeles home thought to belong to a prominent UCLA primate researcher.

The home actually belonged to a 70-year-old woman, and thankfully, the device did not ignite. But the desired impact was nonetheless achieved.

Just weeks later, a colleague of the targeted researcher announced that he will discontinue his important research at UCLA. He had two words for the terrorists who orchestrated the failed bombing: "You win."

While I recognize that reasonable people might disagree about animal research, and believe in the right to legitimate protest, it is outrageous that violent acts, threats and extortion have ended a legitimate medical research career.

Unfortunately, similar incidents have occurred throughout the State of California for several years, including the two bombs placed at the Emeryville offices of Chiron Corporation, a pharmaceutical company in the Bay area, that employs 4400 employees as our Nation's 2nd largest manufacturer of flu vaccines.

Agents believe the second bomb was timed to go off as first-responders arrived.

Yet extremist organizations, such as the Animal Liberation Front, defend these actions around the country as morally justifiable, and shamelessly take credit for these heinous acts.

Their tactics have evolved in the face of our current laws, and consequently, the scope of their terror is widening.

In recent years, animal rights extremists have expanded their campaigns to include secondary and tertiary targets, such that businesses and associates who maintain even highly-attenuated relationships with animal research facilities have found themselves the targets of terror and harassment.

These targets include banks, insurance companies, stockbrokers, customers, construction services, food services, Internet service providers, telecom companies, and even janitorial services.

No matter how remote the relationship, anyone who does business with an organization engaged in animal research is at risk.

But these indirect attacks are outside the scope of our current laws, and threaten to slow the progress of one of our Nation's largest and most valuable industries.

We must recognize that scientific research is not only a legitimate career, but also an invaluable facet of medical advancement, conducted by respectable professionals deserving of our support.

The deplorable actions of these terrorists threaten to impede important medical progress toward lifesaving cures and medical innovation.

They threaten to dishearten noble researchers, and to discourage promising young scientists and graduate students from ever entering these important fields of research.

It is in light of these dangerous threats that Senator INHOFE and I today introduce the Animal Enterprise Terrorism Act.

This legislation addresses the changing tactics of these terrorists, and provides law enforcement officials with the tools necessary to protect our Nation's researchers more effectively.

This new legislation will expressly outlaw the targeting of secondary and tertiary targets, by including within the scope of prosecution terrorists who act against any "person or entity having a connection to, relationship with, or transactions with an animal enterprise."

This is an important step toward combating the modern tactics of animal rights extremists and eco-terrorists, and toward protecting vital business relationships that foster and support the research industry.

At the same time, however, this legislation confronts these terrorist threats in manner that gives due protections under the First Amendment.

I fully recognize that peaceful picketing and public demonstrations against animal testing should be recognized as part of our valuable and sacred right to free expression.

For this reason, all conduct protected by the First Amendment is expressly excluded from the scope of this legislation. This law effectively protects the actions of the law-abiding protestor while carefully distinguishing the criminal activity of extremists.

The bill is also mindful and respectful of State efforts to address these problems. For this reason, the bill makes clear that it does not preempt State or local laws that address such conduct.

We are keenly aware of our responsibility to protect legitimate businesses and educational institutions from the damaging effects of this new breed of domestic terrorism. It is with this goal in mind that we introduce this bill today.

Biomedical research is a multi-billion dollar industry, but more importantly, it is a lifesaving industry. With the passage of this legislation, we can help to ensure both the productivity of this important field, and the protection of our scientists and their associates.

I would like to express my thanks to Senator INHOFE for his hard work and support on this important issue. I would also like to thank Senator HATCH for his early initiative and continued support for this goal.

I urge my colleagues to support this legislation.

SUBMITTED RESOLUTIONS

SENATE RESOLUTION 562—PAYING TRIBUTE TO THE REVEREND WAITSTILL SHARP AND MARTHA SHARP FOR THEIR RECOGNITION BY THE YAD VASHEM HOLOCAUST MARTYRS' AND HEROES' REMEMBRANCE AUTHORITY AS RIGHTEOUS AMONG THE NATIONS FOR THEIR HEROIC EFFORTS TO SAVE JEWS DURING HOLOCAUST

Mr. CHAFEE (for himself, Mr. REED, Mr. KERRY, and Mr. KENNEDY) submitted the following resolution; which was considered and agreed to:

S. RES. 562

Whereas on June 13, 2006, the Yad Vashem Holocaust Martyrs' and Heroes' Remembrance Authority in Israel, an organization dedicated to preserving the memory of Holocaust victims, honored the Reverend Waitstill Sharp, and his wife, Martha Sharp, posthumously as "Righteous Among the Nations" for risking their lives to save Jews during the Holocaust;

Whereas the Sharps had to leave their 2-year-old daughter and 6-year-old son in the care of family and congregants in Wellesley, Massachusetts to answer a call from leaders of the American Unitarian Association to go to Czechoslovakia in February 1939 to provide humanitarian assistance for the tens of thousands of refugees crowding into Prague;

Whereas Martha Sharp was a social worker trained at the Jane Addams Hull House, a community service organization in Chicago, Illinois, and the Reverend Waitstill Sharp was a Harvard-educated lawyer and a Sunday school teacher who was inspired to become a Unitarian minister;

Whereas after their arrival in Czechoslovakia the Sharps immediately grasped that they needed not only to help feed refugees, but also to assist Jews and opponents of the Nazi regime escape to safety elsewhere in Europe;

Whereas the Sharps refused to leave Prague when, in March 1939, a month after the Sharps' arrival, the Nazis occupied Czechoslovakia, making the Sharps' work more urgent, more complicated, and more dangerous;

Whereas the Sharps insisted on continuing their life-saving mission by working out of private residences even after April 1939, when the Nazis ransacked the office of the Unitarian mission in Prague and threw the furniture into the street;

Whereas the Sharps repeatedly risked their own safety to exit and re-enter Nazi-occupied Czechoslovakia, crisscrossed Europe to obtain the travel documents necessary to help Jews and opponents of the Nazi regime escape Czechoslovakia, and even escorted some refugees by train through Germany to the United Kingdom;

Whereas the Sharps were determined to complete their 6-month mission, even after warnings that the Gestapo was searching for them;

Whereas the Sharps stayed in Czechoslovakia until August 30, 1939, 1 day before Gestapo agents came to arrest Martha Sharp, who had become known for her boldness at evading Nazi rules restricting travel;

Whereas upon the Sharps' return in 1940 to their family and the Wellesley Hills Unitarian Church in Massachusetts, their report to the American Unitarian Association about the imminent danger posed by the Nazis to refugees across Europe led to the Sharps being asked to establish a similar operation in France under the newly founded Unitarian Service Committee;

Whereas the Sharps returned to Europe in 1940 fully aware of the Nazi terror they would face;

Whereas the Sharps had a special interest in saving refugee children, as well as artists, intellectuals, and political dissidents, and the Sharps and the Unitarian colleagues who followed in their footsteps set up systems and escape routes that functioned throughout World War II to assist approximately 2,000 men, women, and children to gain freedom;

Whereas the famous Jewish novelist, Lion Feuchtwanger, who was one of the first Germans to have his citizenship revoked after Hitler came to power and whose name topped the Gestapo's "Surrender on Demand" list, was one of the first people the Sharps helped in a dramatic and dangerous escape from France;

Whereas Eva Rosemarie Feigl, who was 14 in December 1940 when Martha Sharp helped her and 28 other children reach safety in the United States, provided eye-witness testimony that enabled the Yad Vashem Holocaust Martyrs' and Heroes' Remembrance Authority in Jerusalem, Israel, to honor the Sharps as Righteous Among the Nations;

Whereas when the Sharps' plans to set up the first office of the newly formed Unitarian Service Committee in Paris, France failed as a result of the Nazi occupation of France, the Sharps instead established an operation in neutral Portugal, where throughout World War II Lisbon remained the last hope for refugees seeking safe passage out of Nazi-occupied territory;

Whereas the Sharps recognized that they were dependent upon a much larger circle of friends and colleagues who made their heroism possible, such as the people who cared for the Sharps' children, the members of the congregation in Wellesley, Massachusetts who maintained the Wellesley Hills Unitarian Church in the Sharps' absence, ordinary Unitarians who financed their cause, ministers across the United States who urged their congregations to become sponsors for refugees, and secretaries who volunteered in Europe and the United States to maintain thousands of case files for refugees;

Whereas the Sharps' efforts resulted not only in the rescue of thousands of people, but in the creation of what is now known as the Unitarian Universalist Service Committee, an institution that multiplied the number of rescues a thousand-fold in the years that followed;

Whereas at the Yad Vashem ceremony that honored the Sharps as Righteous Among the Nations on June 13, 2006, in Israel, officials specifically recognized the Sharps' courage in going into the heart of Europe when World War II was unfolding and many people were fleeing;

Whereas Martha Sharp was the first American woman to be named Righteous Among the Nations, and the Reverend Waitstill Sharp and Martha Sharp were only the second and third individuals named Righteous Among the Nations who were United States citizens at the time they performed the deeds for which they were honored;

Whereas the Sharps' daughter, Martha Sharp Joukowsky, accepted the Yad Vashem honor on behalf of her parents and remarked that they were "modest and ordinary people, who responded to the suffering and needs around them . . . as they would have expected everyone to do in a similar situation";

Whereas Martha Sharp Joukowsky added that the honor given to her parents is also about "the unseen efforts of a much wider circle of people who made their work possible" and that it "is the kind of network that is needed again today to stop the slow genocide in Darfur";

Whereas Martha Sharp Joukowsky concluded her remarks by saying, "Let this celebration about my parents stand as a call to action";

Whereas September 9, 2006, marks the second anniversary of the United States Government declaring the violence in Darfur, Sudan to be genocide; and

Whereas the Sharps deserve honor for their example and for helping to found an institution, the Unitarian Universalist Service Committee, that today carries on their work in distant corners of the world and asks for the Righteous Among the Nations to help save Darfur now: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Senate—

(1) recognizes the Reverend Waitstill Sharp and Martha Sharp as genuine American heroes;

(2) pays tribute to the Reverend Waitstill Sharp and Martha Sharp as their names are added to the Wall of Rescuers in the permanent exhibition of the United States Holocaust Memorial Museum on September 14, 2006;

(3) commends the organization founded to support the Sharps' work, the Unitarian Universalist Service Committee, for its efforts to rescue Jews and opponents of the Nazi regime in Europe from 1939 to 1945 and for carrying on the Sharps' legacy by working to save the lives of the people of Darfur, Sudan and to protect human rights worldwide; and

(4) requests the Secretary of the Senate to transmit an enrolled copy of this resolution to the Joukowsky family of Providence, Rhode Island, the direct descendants of the Reverend Waitstill Sharp and Martha Sharp, and to the Unitarian Universalist Service Committee of Cambridge, Massachusetts.

SENATE RESOLUTION 563—DESIGNATING SEPTEMBER 13, 2006, AS "NATIONAL CELIAC DISEASE AWARENESS DAY"

Mr. INHOFE (for himself and Mr. NELSON of Nebraska) submitted the following resolution; which was considered and agreed to:

S. RES. 563

Whereas celiac disease affects 2,200,000 people in the United States, including 1 in 133 healthy people;

Whereas celiac disease is an intolerance to gluten, a protein found in wheat, rye, oats, and barley, as well as some medicines and vitamins;

Whereas exposure to gluten damages the villi of the small intestine, interfering with the absorption of nutrients in food;

Whereas celiac disease is an autoimmune disorder and a malabsorption disease;

Whereas celiac disease is a genetic disease, with 1 in 22 people having a first-degree relative with celiac disease;

Whereas the average length of time it takes for a symptomatic person to be diagnosed with celiac disease is 11 years;

Whereas celiac disease is often misdiagnosed and underdiagnosed due to the fact that symptoms can be attributed to other conditions and many doctors are not very knowledgeable about the disease;

Whereas, according to a study, 60 percent of children and 41 percent of adults diagnosed with celiac disease were asymptomatic;

Whereas celiac disease is diagnosed through tests measuring the blood for abnormally high levels of the antibodies of immunoglobulin A, anti-tissue transglutaminase, and IgA anti-endomysium antibodies;

Whereas celiac disease is treated by following a gluten-free diet;

Whereas damage to the small intestine leads to an increased risk for malnutrition, anemia, lymphoma and adenocarcinoma, osteoporosis, miscarriage and congenital malformation, and short stature;

Whereas celiac disease is linked to many autoimmune disorders, including thyroid disease, systemic lupus erythematosus, type 1 diabetes, liver disease, collagen vascular disease, rheumatoid arthritis, and Sjögren's syndrome;

Whereas the connection between celiac disease and diet was first established by Dr. Samuel Gee, who was born on September 13, 1839;

Whereas the Senate is an institution that can raise awareness in the general public and the medical community of celiac disease: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Senate—

(1) designates September 13, 2006, as "National Celiac Disease Awareness Day";

(2) recognizes that all people of the United States should become more informed and aware of celiac disease;

(3) calls upon the people of the United States to observe the date with appropriate ceremonies and activities; and

(4) respectfully requests the Secretary of the Senate to transmit a copy of this resolution to the Celiac Sprue Association, the American Celiac Society, the Celiac Disease Foundation, the Gluten Intolerance Group of North America, and the Oklahoma Celiac Support Group.

SENATE RESOLUTION 564—DESIGNATING SEPTEMBER 10 THROUGH SEPTEMBER 16, 2006, AS "NATIONAL POLYCYSTIC KIDNEY DISEASE AWARENESS WEEK" AND SUPPORTING THE GOALS AND IDEALS OF A NATIONAL POLYCYSTIC KIDNEY DISEASE AWARENESS WEEK TO RAISE PUBLIC AWARENESS AND UNDERSTANDING OF THE IMPACT POLYCYSTIC KIDNEY DISEASE HAS ON PATIENTS AND FUTURE GENERATIONS OF THEIR FAMILIES

Mr. DEWINE (for himself and Mr. KOHL) submitted the following resolution; which was considered and agreed to:

S. RES. 564

Whereas polycystic kidney disease (known as “PKD”) is the most prevalent life-threatening genetic disease in the United States, is a severe, dominantly inherited disease that has a devastating impact, in both human and economic terms, on people of all ages, and affects equally people of all races, sexes, nationalities, geographic locations, and income levels;

Whereas, based on prevalence estimates by the National Institutes of Health, it is estimated that about 600,000 patients in the United States have a genetic inheritance from 1 or both parents called polycystic kidney disease, and that countless additional friends, loved ones, spouses, and caregivers must shoulder the physical, emotional, and financial burdens that polycystic kidney disease causes;

Whereas polycystic kidney disease, for which there is no cure, is 1 of the 4 leading causes of kidney failure in the United States;

Whereas the vast majority of polycystic kidney disease patients reach kidney failure at an average age of 53, causing a severe strain on dialysis and kidney transplantation resources and on the delivery of health care in the United States, as the largest segment of the population of the United States, the “baby boomers”, continues to age;

Whereas end stage renal disease is one of the fastest growing components of the Medicare budget, and polycystic kidney disease contributes to that cost by an estimated $2,000,000,000 annually for dialysis, kidney transplantation, and related therapies;

Whereas polycystic kidney disease is a systemic disease that causes damage to the kidney and the cardiovascular, endocrine, hepatic, and gastrointestinal organ systems and instills in patients a fear of an unknown future with a life-threatening genetic disease and apprehension over possible genetic discrimination;

Whereas the severity of the symptoms of polycystic kidney disease and the limited public awareness of the disease causes many patients to live in denial and forego regular visits to their physicians or to avoid following good health management which would help avoid more severe complications when kidney failure occurs;

Whereas people who have chronic, life-threatening diseases like polycystic kidney disease have a predisposition to depression (7 times the national average) and its resultant consequences due to their anxiety over pain, suffering, and premature death;

Whereas the Senate and taxpayers of the United States desire to see treatments and cures for disease and would like to see results from investments in research conducted by the National Institutes of Health and from such initiatives as the NIH Roadmap to the Future;

Whereas polycystic kidney disease is a verifiable example of how collaboration, technological innovation, scientific momentum, and public-private partnerships can generate therapeutic interventions that directly benefit polycystic kidney disease sufferers, save billions of Federal dollars under Medicare, Medicaid, and other programs for dialysis, kidney transplants, immunosuppressant drugs, and related therapies, and make available several thousand openings on the kidney transplant waiting list;

Whereas improvements in diagnostic technology and the expansion of scientific knowledge about polycystic kidney disease have led to the discovery of the 3 primary genes that cause polycystic kidney disease and the 3 primary protein products of the genes and to the understanding of cell structures and signaling pathways that cause cyst growth that has produced multiple polycystic kidney disease clinical drug trials;

Whereas there are thousands of volunteers nationwide who are dedicated to expanding essential research, fostering public awareness and understanding of polycystic kidney disease, educating polycystic kidney disease patients and their families about the disease to improve their treatment and care, providing appropriate moral support, and encouraging people to become organ donors; and

Whereas these volunteers engage in an annual national awareness event held during the third week of September and such a week would be an appropriate time to recognize National Polycystic Kidney Disease Week: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Senate—

(1) designates September 10 through September 16, 2006, as “National Polycystic Kidney Disease Awareness Week”;

(2) supports the goals and ideals of a National Polycystic Kidney Disease Awareness Week to raise public awareness and understanding of polycystic kidney disease (known as “PKD”);

(3) recognizes the need for additional research into a cure for polycystic kidney disease; and

(4) encourages the people of the United States and interested groups to support National Polycystic Kidney Disease Awareness Week through appropriate ceremonies and activities to promote public awareness of polycystic kidney disease and to foster understanding of the impact of the disease on patients and their families.

AMENDMENTS SUBMITTED AND PROPOSED

SA 4922. Mr. MCCAIN (for himself, Ms. SNOWE, Mr. DEWINE, Mr. BIDEN, and Mr. LIEBERMAN) submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill H.R. 4954, to improve maritime and cargo security through enhanced layered defenses, and for other purposes.

SA 4923. Mr. ISAKSON submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill H.R. 4954, supra; which was ordered to lie on the table.

TEXT OF AMENDMENTS

SA 4922. Mr. MCCAIN (for himself, Ms. SNOWE, Mr. DEWINE, Mr. BIDEN, and Mr. LIEBERMAN) submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill H.R. 4954, to improve maritime and cargo security through enhanced layered defenses, and for other purposes; as follows:

At the appropriate place in the bill, insert the following:

TITLE —RAIL SECURITY ACT OF 2006

SEC. 01. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the “Rail Security Act of 2006”.

SEC. 02. RAIL TRANSPORTATION SECURITY RISK ASSESSMENT.

(a) IN GENERAL.—

(1) VULNERABILITY ASSESSMENT.—The Under Secretary of Homeland Security for Border and Transportation Security (referred to in this title as the “Under Secretary”), in consultation with the Secretary of Transportation, shall conduct a vulnerability assessment of freight and passenger rail transportation (encompassing railroads, as that term is defined in section 20102(1) of title 49, United States Code), which shall include—

(A) identification and evaluation of critical assets and infrastructures;

(B) identification of threats to those assets and infrastructures;

(C) identification of vulnerabilities that are specific to the transportation of hazardous materials via railroad; and

(D) identification of security weaknesses in passenger and cargo security, transportation infrastructure, protection systems, procedural policies, communications systems, employee training, emergency response planning, and any other area identified by the assessment.

(2) EXISTING PRIVATE AND PUBLIC SECTOR EFFORTS.—The assessment conducted under this subsection shall take into account actions taken or planned by both public and private entities to address identified security issues and assess the effective integration of such actions.

(3) RECOMMENDATIONS.—Based on the assessment conducted under this subsection, the Under Secretary, in consultation with the Secretary of Transportation, shall develop prioritized recommendations for improving rail security, including any recommendations the Under Secretary has for—

(A) improving the security of rail tunnels, rail bridges, rail switching and car storage areas, other rail infrastructure and facilities, information systems, and other areas identified by the Under Secretary as posing significant rail-related risks to public safety and the movement of interstate commerce, taking into account the impact that any proposed security measure might have on the provision of rail service;

(B) deploying equipment to detect explosives and hazardous chemical, biological, and radioactive substances, and any appropriate countermeasures;

(C) training employees in terrorism prevention, passenger evacuation, and response activities;

(D) conducting public outreach campaigns on passenger railroads;

(E) deploying surveillance equipment; and

(F) identifying the immediate and long-term costs of measures that may be required to address those risks.

(b) CONSULTATION; USE OF EXISTING RESOURCES.—In carrying out the assessment required by subsection (a), the Under Secretary shall consult with rail management, rail labor, owners or lessors of rail cars used to transport hazardous materials, first responders, shippers of hazardous materials, public safety officials (including those within other agencies and offices within the Department of Homeland Security), and other relevant parties.

(c) REPORT.—

(1) CONTENTS.—Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Under Secretary shall submit to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation of the Senate and the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure of the House of Representatives a report that contains—

(A) the assessment and prioritized recommendations required by subsection (a) and an estimate of the cost to implement such recommendations;

(B) a plan, developed in consultation with the freight and intercity passenger railroads, and State and local governments, for the government to provide increased security support at high or severe threat levels of alert; and

(C) a plan for coordinating rail security initiatives undertaken by the public and private sectors.

(2) FORMAT.—The Under Secretary may submit the report in both classified and redacted formats if the Under Secretary determines that such action is appropriate or necessary.

(d) 2-YEAR UPDATES.—The Under Secretary, in consultation with the Secretary of Transportation, shall update the assessment and recommendations every 2 years and transmit a report, which may be submitted in both classified and redacted formats, to the Committees named in subsection (c)(1), containing the updated assessment and recommendations.

(e) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated to the Under Secretary $5,000,000 for fiscal year 2007 to carry out this section.

SEC. 03. RAIL SECURITY.

(a) RAIL POLICE OFFICERS.—Section 28101 of title 49, United States Code, is amended by striking “the rail carrier” each place it appears and inserting “any rail carrier”.

(b) REVIEW OF RAIL REGULATIONS.—Not later than 1 year after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Transportation, in consultation with the Under Secretary, shall review existing rail regulations of the Department of Transportation for the purpose of identifying areas in which those regulations need to be revised to improve rail security.

SEC. 04. STUDY OF FOREIGN RAIL TRANSPORT SECURITY PROGRAMS.

(a) REQUIREMENT FOR STUDY.—Not later than 1 year after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Comptroller General of the United States shall complete a study of the rail passenger transportation security programs that are carried out for rail transportation systems in Japan, member nations of the European Union, and other foreign countries.

(b) PURPOSE.—The purpose of the study conducted under subsection (a) shall be to identify effective rail transportation security measures that are in use in foreign rail transportation systems, including innovative measures and screening procedures determined effective.

(c) REPORT.—The Comptroller General shall submit a report on the results of the study conducted under subsection (a) to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation of the Senate and the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure of the House of Representatives. The report shall include the Comptroller General’s assessment regarding whether it is feasible to implement within the United States any of the same or similar security measures that are determined effective under the study.

SEC. 05. PASSENGER, BAGGAGE, AND CARGO SCREENING.

(a) REQUIREMENT FOR STUDY AND REPORT.—The Under Secretary, in cooperation with the Secretary of Transportation, shall—

(1) conduct a study to analyze the cost and feasibility of requiring security screening for passengers, baggage, and cargo on passenger trains; and

(2) not later than 1 year after the date of the enactment of this Act, submit a report containing the results of the study and any recommendations that the Under Secretary may have for implementing a rail security screening program to—

(A) the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation of the Senate; and

(B) the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure of the House of Representatives.

(b) PILOT PROGRAM.—As part of the study conducted under subsection (a), the Under Secretary shall complete a pilot program of random security screening of passengers and baggage at 5 passenger rail stations served by Amtrak, which shall be selected by the Under Secretary. In conducting the pilot program under this subsection, the Under Secretary shall—

(1) test a wide range of explosives detection technologies, devices, and methods;

(2) require that intercity rail passengers produce government-issued photographic identification, which matches the name on the passenger’s tickets before the passenger boarding a train; and

(3) attempt to give preference to locations at the highest risk of terrorist attack and achieve a distribution of participating train stations in terms of geographic location, size, passenger volume, and whether the station is used by commuter rail passengers and Amtrak passengers.

(c) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated to the Under Secretary to carry out this section $5,000,000 for fiscal year 2007.

SEC. 06. CERTAIN PERSONNEL LIMITATIONS NOT TO APPLY.

Any statutory limitation on the number of employees in the Transportation Security Administration of the Department of Transportation, before or after its transfer to the Department of Homeland Security, does not apply to the extent that any such employees are responsible for implementing the provisions of this title.

SEC. 07. FIRE AND LIFE-SAFETY IMPROVEMENTS.

(a) LIFE-SAFETY NEEDS.—The Secretary of Transportation may award grants to Amtrak for the purpose of making fire and life-safety improvements to Amtrak tunnels on the Northeast Corridor in New York, New York, Baltimore, Maryland, and Washington, D.C.

(b) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated to the Secretary of Transportation for the purposes of carrying out subsection (a) the following amounts:

(1) For the 6 New York tunnels, to provide ventilation, electrical, and fire safety technology upgrades, emergency communication and lighting systems, and emergency access and egress for passengers—

- (A) $100,000,000 for fiscal year 2007;
- (B) $100,000,000 for fiscal year 2008;
- (C) $100,000,000 for fiscal year 2009; and
- (D) $170,000,000 for fiscal year 2010.

(2) For the Baltimore & Potomac tunnel and the Union tunnel, together, to provide adequate drainage, ventilation, communication, lighting, and passenger egress upgrades—

- (A) $10,000,000 for fiscal year 2007;
- (B) $10,000,000 for fiscal year 2008;
- (C) $10,000,000 for fiscal year 2009; and
- (D) $17,000,000 for fiscal year 2010.

(3) For the Washington, DC Union Station tunnels to improve ventilation, communication, lighting, and passenger egress upgrades—

- (A) $8,000,000 for fiscal year 2007;
- (B) $8,000,000 for fiscal year 2008;
- (C) $8,000,000 for fiscal year 2009; and
- (D) $8,000,000 for fiscal year 2010.

(c) INFRASTRUCTURE UPGRADES.—There are authorized to be appropriated to the Secretary of Transportation $3,000,000 for fiscal year 2007 for the preliminary design of options for a new tunnel on a different alignment to augment the capacity of the existing Baltimore tunnels.

(d) AVAILABILITY OF APPROPRIATED FUNDS.—Amounts appropriated pursuant to this section shall remain available until expended.

(e) PLANS REQUIRED.—The Secretary of Transportation may not make amounts available to Amtrak for obligation or expenditure under subsection (a)—

(1) until Amtrak has submitted to the Secretary, and the Secretary has approved, an engineering and financial plan for such projects; and

(2) unless, for each project funded under this section, the Secretary has approved a project management plan prepared by Amtrak that appropriately addresses—

- (A) project budget;
- (B) construction schedule;
- (C) recipient staff organization;
- (D) document control and record keeping;
- (E) change order procedure;
- (F) quality control and assurance;
- (G) periodic plan updates;
- (H) periodic status reports; and
- (I) such other matters the Secretary determines to be appropriate.

(f) REVIEW OF PLANS.—

(1) COMPLETION.—The Secretary of Transportation shall complete the review of the plans required under paragraphs (1) and (2) of subsection (e) and approve or disapprove the plans not later than 45 days after the date on which each such plan is submitted by Amtrak.

(2) INCOMPLETE PLANS.—If the Secretary determines that a plan is incomplete or deficient—

(A) the Secretary shall notify Amtrak of the incomplete items or deficiencies; and

(B) not later than 30 days after receiving the Secretary’s notification under subparagraph (A), Amtrak shall submit a modified plan for the Secretary’s review.

(3) REVIEW OF MODIFIED PLANS.—Not later than 15 days after receiving additional information on items previously included in the plan, and not later than 45 days after receiving items newly included in a modified plan, the Secretary shall—

(A) approve the modified plan; or

(B) if the Secretary finds the plan is still incomplete or deficient—

(i) submit a report to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation of the Senate and the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure of the House of Representatives that identifies the portions of the plan the Secretary finds incomplete or deficient;

(ii) approve all other portions of the plan;

(iii) obligate the funds associated with those other portions; and

(iv) execute an agreement with Amtrak not later than 15 days thereafter on a process for resolving the remaining portions of the plan.

(g) FINANCIAL CONTRIBUTION FROM OTHER TUNNEL USERS.—The Secretary of Transportation shall, taking into account the need for the timely completion of all portions of the tunnel projects described in subsection (a)—

(1) consider the extent to which rail carriers other than Amtrak use the tunnels;

(2) consider the feasibility of seeking a financial contribution from those other rail carriers toward the costs of the projects; and

(3) obtain financial contributions or commitments from such other rail carriers at levels reflecting the extent of their use of the tunnels, if feasible.

SEC. 08. MEMORANDUM OF AGREEMENT.

(a) MEMORANDUM OF AGREEMENT.—Not later than 60 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Transportation and the Secretary of Homeland Security shall execute a memorandum of agreement governing the roles and responsibilities of the Department of Transportation and the Department of Homeland Security, respectively, in addressing railroad transportation security matters, including the processes the departments will follow to promote communications, efficiency, and nonduplication of effort.

(b) RAIL SAFETY REGULATIONS.—Section 20103(a) of title 49, United States Code, is amended by striking “railroad safety” and inserting “railroad safety, including security.”.

SEC. 09. AMTRAK PLAN TO ASSIST FAMILIES OF PASSENGERS INVOLVED IN RAIL PASSENGER ACCIDENTS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Chapter 243 of title 49, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

“§ 24316. Plans to address needs of families of passengers involved in rail passenger accidents

“(a) SUBMISSION OF PLAN.—Not later than 6 months after the date of the enactment of the Rail Security Act of 2006, Amtrak shall submit to the Chairman of the National Transportation Safety Board and the Secretary of Transportation a plan for addressing the needs of the families of passengers involved in any rail passenger accident involving an Amtrak intercity train and resulting in a loss of life.

“(b) CONTENTS OF PLANS.—The plan to be submitted by Amtrak under subsection (a) shall include, at a minimum, the following:

“(1) A process by which Amtrak will maintain and provide to the National Transportation Safety Board and the Secretary of Transportation, immediately upon request, a list (which is based on the best available information at the time of the request) of the names of the passengers aboard the train (whether or not such names have been verified), and will periodically update the list. The plan shall include a procedure, with respect to unreserved trains and passengers not holding reservations on other trains, for Amtrak to use reasonable efforts to ascertain the number and names of passengers aboard a train involved in an accident.

“(2) A plan for creating and publicizing a reliable, toll-free telephone number within 4 hours after such an accident occurs, and for providing staff, to handle calls from the families of the passengers.

“(3) A process for notifying the families of the passengers, before providing any public notice of the names of the passengers, by suitably trained individuals.

“(4) A process for providing the notice described in paragraph (2) to the family of a passenger as soon as Amtrak has verified that the passenger was aboard the train (whether or not the names of all of the passengers have been verified).

“(5) A process by which the family of each passenger will be consulted about the disposition of all remains and personal effects of the passenger within Amtrak’s control; that any possession of the passenger within Amtrak’s control will be returned to the family unless the possession is needed for the accident investigation or any criminal investigation; and that any unclaimed possession of a passenger within Amtrak’s control will be retained by the rail passenger carrier for at least 18 months.

“(6) A process by which the treatment of the families of nonrevenue passengers will be the same as the treatment of the families of revenue passengers.

“(7) An assurance that Amtrak will provide adequate training to its employees and agents to meet the needs of survivors and family members following an accident.

“(c) USE OF INFORMATION.—The National Transportation Safety Board, the Secretary of Transportation, and Amtrak may not release to any person information on a list obtained under subsection (b)(1) but may provide information on the list about a passenger to the family of the passenger to the extent that the Board or Amtrak considers appropriate.

“(d) LIMITATION ON LIABILITY.—Amtrak shall not be liable for damages in any action brought in a Federal or State court arising out of the performance of Amtrak in preparing or providing a passenger list, or in providing information concerning a train reservation, pursuant to a plan submitted by Amtrak under subsection (b), unless such liability was caused by Amtrak’s conduct.

“(e) LIMITATION ON STATUTORY CONSTRUCTION.—Nothing in this section may be construed as limiting the actions that Amtrak may take, or the obligations that Amtrak may have, in providing assistance to the families of passengers involved in a rail passenger accident.

“(f) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated to the Secretary of Transportation for the use of Amtrak $500,000 for fiscal year 2007 to carry out this section. Amounts appropriated pursuant to this subsection shall remain available until expended.”.

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—The chapter analysis for chapter 243 of title 49, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

“Sec. 24316. Plans to address needs of families of passengers involved in rail passenger accidents.”.

SEC. 10. SYSTEMWIDE AMTRAK SECURITY UPGRADES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Subject to subsection (c), the Under Secretary may award grants, through the Secretary of Transportation, to Amtrak—

(1) to secure major tunnel access points and ensure tunnel integrity in New York, Baltimore, and Washington, D.C.;

(2) to secure Amtrak trains;

(3) to secure Amtrak stations;

(4) to obtain a watch list identification system approved by the Under Secretary;

(5) to obtain train tracking and interoperable communications systems that are coordinated to the maximum extent possible;

(6) to hire additional police and security officers, including canine units; and

(7) to expand emergency preparedness efforts.

(b) CONDITIONS.—The Secretary of Transportation may not disburse funds to Amtrak for projects under subsection (a) unless—

(1) the projects are contained in a systemwide security plan approved by the Under Secretary, in consultation with the Secretary of Transportation;

(2) capital projects meet the requirements under section 407(e)(2); and

(3) the plan includes appropriate measures to address security awareness, emergency response, and passenger evacuation training.

(c) EQUITABLE GEOGRAPHIC ALLOCATION.—The Under Secretary shall ensure that, subject to meeting the highest security needs on Amtrak’s entire system, stations and facilities located outside of the Northeast Corridor receive an equitable share of the security funds authorized under this section.

(d) AVAILABILITY OF FUNDS.—There are authorized to be appropriated to the Under Secretary $63,500,000 for fiscal year 2007 for the purposes of carrying out this section. Amounts appropriated pursuant to this subsection shall remain available until expended.

SEC. 11. FREIGHT AND PASSENGER RAIL SECURITY UPGRADES.

(a) SECURITY IMPROVEMENT GRANTS.—The Under Secretary may award grants to freight railroads, the Alaska Railroad, hazardous materials shippers, owners of rail cars used in the transportation of hazardous materials, universities, colleges and research centers, State and local governments (for passenger facilities and infrastructure not owned by Amtrak), and, through the Secretary of Transportation, to Amtrak, for full or partial reimbursement of costs incurred in the conduct of activities to prevent or respond to acts of terrorism, sabotage, or other intercity passenger rail and freight rail security threats, including—

(1) security and redundancy for critical communications, computer, and train control systems essential for secure rail operations;

(2) accommodation of cargo or passenger screening equipment at the international border between the United States and Mexico or the international border between the United States and Canada;

(3) the security of hazardous material transportation by rail;

(4) secure intercity passenger rail stations, trains, and infrastructure;

(5) structural modification or replacement of rail cars transporting high hazard materials to improve their resistance to acts of terrorism;

(6) employee security awareness, preparedness, passenger evacuation, and emergency response training;

(7) public security awareness campaigns for passenger train operations;

(8) the sharing of intelligence and information about security threats;

(9) to obtain train tracking and interoperable communications systems that are coordinated to the maximum extent possible;

(10) to hire additional police and security officers, including canine units; and

(11) other improvements recommended by the report required under section 402(c), including infrastructure, facilities, and equipment upgrades.

(b) ACCOUNTABILITY.—The Under Secretary shall adopt necessary procedures, including audits, to ensure that grants awarded under this section are expended in accordance with the purposes of this title and the priorities and other criteria developed by the Under Secretary.

(c) EQUITABLE ALLOCATION.—The Under Secretary shall equitably distribute the funds authorized by this section, taking into account geographic location, and shall encourage non-Federal financial participation in awarding grants. With respect to grants for passenger rail security, the Under Secretary shall also take into account passenger volume and whether a station is used by commuter rail passengers and intercity rail passengers.

(d) CONDITIONS.—The Secretary of Transportation may not disburse funds to Amtrak under subsection (a) unless Amtrak meets the conditions set forth in section 410(b).

(e) ALLOCATION BETWEEN RAILROADS AND OTHERS.—Unless the Under Secretary determines, as a result of the assessment required by section 402, that critical rail transportation security needs require reimbursement in greater amounts to any eligible entity, a grant may not be awarded under this section—

- (1) in excess of $65,000,000 to Amtrak; or
- (2) in excess of $100,000,000 for the purposes described in paragraphs (3) and (5) of subsection (a).

(f) HIGH HAZARD MATERIALS DEFINED.—In this section, the term “high hazard materials” means poison inhalation hazard materials, class 2.3 gases, class 6.1 materials, and anhydrous ammonia.

(g) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated to the Under Secretary $350,000,000 for fiscal year 2007 to carry out the purposes of this section. Amounts appropriated pursuant to this subsection shall remain available until expended.

SEC. 12. OVERSIGHT AND GRANT PROCEDURES.

(a) SECRETARIAL OVERSIGHT.—The Secretary of Transportation may use not more than 0.5 percent of amounts made available to Amtrak for capital projects under this title—

- (1) to enter into contracts for the review of proposed capital projects and related program management plans; and
- (2) to oversee construction of such projects.

(b) USE OF FUNDS.—The Secretary may use amounts available under subsection (a) to make contracts for safety, procurement, management, and financial compliance reviews and audits of a recipient of amounts under subsection (a).

(c) PROCEDURES FOR GRANT AWARD.—The Under Secretary shall prescribe procedures and schedules for the awarding of grants under this title, including application and qualification procedures (including a requirement that the applicant have a security plan), and a record of decision on applicant eligibility. The procedures shall include the execution of a grant agreement between the grant recipient and the Under Secretary. The Under Secretary shall issue a final rule establishing the procedures not later than 90 days after the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 13. RAIL SECURITY RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT.

(a) ESTABLISHMENT OF RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT PROGRAM.—The Under Secretary, in conjunction with the Secretary of Transportation, shall carry out a research and development program for the purpose of improving freight and intercity passenger rail security that may include research and development projects to—

- (1) reduce the vulnerability of passenger trains, stations, and equipment to explosives and hazardous chemical, biological, and radioactive substances;
- (2) test new emergency response techniques and technologies;
- (3) develop improved freight technologies, including—
  - (A) technologies for sealing rail cars;
  - (B) automatic inspection of rail cars;
  - (C) communication-based train controls; and
  - (D) emergency response training;
- (4) test wayside detectors that can detect tampering with railroad equipment; and
- (5) support enhanced security for the transportation of hazardous materials by rail, including—

(A) technologies to detect a breach in a tank car and transmit information about the integrity of tank cars to the train crew;

(B) research to improve tank car integrity, with a focus on tank cars that carry high hazard materials (as defined in section 411(g));

(C) techniques to transfer hazardous materials from rail cars that are damaged or otherwise represent an unreasonable risk to human life or public safety;

(6) other projects recommended in the report required under section 402.

(b) COORDINATION WITH OTHER RESEARCH INITIATIVES.—The Under Secretary shall ensure that the research and development program under this section is coordinated with other research and development initiatives at the Department of Homeland Security and the Department of Transportation. The Under Secretary shall carry out any research and development project authorized under this section through a reimbursable agreement with the Secretary of Transportation if the Secretary—

(1) is already sponsoring a research and development project in a similar area; or

(2) has a unique facility or capability that would be useful in carrying out the project.

(c) ACCOUNTABILITY.—The Under Secretary shall adopt necessary procedures, including audits, to ensure that grants made under this section are expended in accordance with the purposes of this title and the priorities and other criteria developed by the Under Secretary.

(d) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated to the Under Secretary $50,000,000 in each of fiscal years 2007 and 2008 to carry out the purposes of this section. Amounts appropriated pursuant to this subsection shall remain available until expended.

SEC. 14. WELDED RAIL AND TANK CAR SAFETY IMPROVEMENTS.

(a) TRACK STANDARDS.—Not later than 90 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Administrator of the Federal Railroad Administration shall—

(1) require each track owner using continuous welded rail track to include procedures to improve the identification of cracks in rail joint bars in the procedures filed with the Administration under section 213.119 of title 49, Code of Federal Regulations;

(2) instruct Administration track inspectors to obtain copies of the most recent continuous welded rail programs of each railroad within the inspectors’ areas of responsibility and require that inspectors use those programs when conducting track inspections; and

(3) establish a program to—

(A) periodically review continuous welded rail joint bar inspection data from railroads and Administration track inspectors; and

(B) require railroads to increase the frequency or improve the methods of inspection of joint bars in continuous welded rail, if the Administrator determines that such increase or improvement is necessary or appropriate.

(b) TANK CAR STANDARDS.—The Administrator of the Federal Railroad Administration shall—

(1) not later than 1 year after the date of the enactment of this Act, validate the predictive model it is developing to quantify the relevant dynamic forces acting on railroad tank cars under accident conditions; and

(2) not later than 18 months after the date of the enactment of this Act, initiate a rulemaking to develop and implement appropriate design standards for pressurized tank cars.

(c) OLDER TANK CAR IMPACT RESISTANCE ANALYSIS AND REPORT.—Not later than 2 years after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Administrator of the Federal Railroad Administration shall—

(1) conduct a comprehensive analysis to determine the impact resistance of the steels in the shells of pressure tank cars constructed before 1989; and

(2) submit a report to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation of the Senate and the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure of the House of Representatives that contains recommendations for measures to eliminate or mitigate the risk of catastrophic failure.

SEC. 15. NORTHERN BORDER RAIL PASSENGER REPORT.

Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Under Secretary, in consultation with the heads of other appropriate Federal departments and agencies and the National Railroad Passenger Corporation, shall submit a report to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation of the Senate and the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure of the House of Representatives that contains—

(1) a description of the current system for screening passengers and baggage on passenger rail service between the United States and Canada;

(2) an assessment of the current program to provide preclearance of airline passengers between the United States and Canada as outlined in “The Agreement on Air Transport Preclearance between the Government of Canada and the Government of the United States of America”, dated January 18, 2001;

(3) an assessment of the current program to provide preclearance of freight railroad traffic between the United States and Canada as outlined in the “Declaration of Principle for the Improved Security of Rail Shipments by Canadian National Railway and Canadian Pacific Railway from Canada to the United States”, dated April 2, 2003;

(4) information on progress by the Department of Homeland Security and other Federal agencies towards finalizing a bilateral protocol with Canada that would provide for preclearance of passengers on trains operating between the United States and Canada;

(5) a description of legislative, regulatory, budgetary, or policy barriers within the United States Government to providing pre-screened passenger lists for rail passengers traveling between the United States and Canada to the Department of Homeland Security;

(6) a description of the position of the Government of Canada and relevant Canadian agencies with respect to preclearance of such passengers; and

(7) a draft of any changes in existing Federal law necessary to provide for pre-screening of such passengers and providing pre-screened passenger lists to the Department of Homeland Security.

SEC. 16. REPORT REGARDING IMPACT ON SECURITY OF TRAIN TRAVEL IN COMMUNITIES WITHOUT GRADE SEPARATION.

(a) STUDY.—The Secretary of Homeland Security, in consultation with State and local government officials, shall conduct a study on the impact of blocked highway-railroad grade crossings on the ability of emergency responders, including ambulances and police, fire, and other emergency vehicles, to perform public safety and security duties in the event of a terrorist attack.

(b) REPORT.—Not later than 1 year after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Homeland Security shall submit a report to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation of the Senate and the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure of the House of Representatives that contains—

(1) the findings of the study conducted under subsection (a); and

(2) recommendations for reducing the impact of blocked crossings on emergency response.

SEC. 17. WHISTLEBLOWER PROTECTION PROGRAM.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Subchapter I of chapter 201 of title 49, United States Code, is amended by inserting after section 20115 the following:

“§ 20116. Whistleblower protection for rail security matters

“(a) DISCRIMINATION AGAINST EMPLOYEE.—A rail carrier engaged in interstate or foreign commerce may not discharge a railroad employee or otherwise discriminate against a railroad employee because the employee (or any person acting pursuant to a request of the employee)—

“(1) provided, caused to be provided, or is about to provide or cause to be provided, to the employer or the Federal Government information relating to a perceived threat to security; or

“(2) provided, caused to be provided, or is about to provide or cause to be provided, testimony before Congress or at any Federal or State proceeding regarding a perceived threat to security; or

“(3) refused to violate or assist in the violation of any law, rule or regulation related to rail security.

“(b) DISPUTE RESOLUTION.—A dispute, grievance, or claim arising under this section is subject to resolution under section 3 of the Railway Labor Act (45 U.S.C. 153). In a proceeding by the National Railroad Adjustment Board, a division or delegate of the Board, or another board of adjustment established under such section 3 to resolve the dispute, grievance, or claim the proceeding shall be expedited and the dispute, grievance, or claim shall be resolved not later than 180 days after the filing date. If the violation is a form of discrimination that does not involve discharge, suspension, or another action affecting pay, and no other remedy is available under this subsection, the Board, division, delegate, or other board of adjustment may award the employee reasonable damages, including punitive damages, of not more than $20,000.

“(c) PROCEDURAL REQUIREMENTS.—Except as provided in subsection (b), the procedure set forth in section 42121(b)(2)(B), including the burdens of proof, applies to any complaint brought under this section.

“(d) ELECTION OF REMEDIES.—An employee of a railroad carrier may not seek protection under both this section and another provision of law for the same allegedly unlawful act of the carrier.

“(e) DISCLOSURE OF IDENTITY.—

“(1) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in paragraph (2), the Secretary of Transportation may not disclose the name of an employee of a railroad carrier who has provided information about an alleged violation of this section without the written consent of the employee.

“(2) ENFORCEMENT.—The Secretary shall disclose to the Attorney General the name of an employee described in paragraph (1) if the matter is referred to the Attorney General for enforcement.”

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—The chapter analysis for chapter 201 of title 49, United States Code, is amended by inserting after the item relating to section 20115 the following:

“Sec. 20116. Whistleblower protection for rail security matters.”

SA 4923. Mr. ISAKSON submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill H.R. 4954, to improve maritime and cargo security through enhanced layered defenses, and for other purposes; which was ordered to lie on the table; as follows:

At the appropriate place, insert the following:

SEC. . CARGO SCREENING.

(a) RADIATION RISK REDUCTION.—The Secretary of Homeland Security shall make every effort to protect maritime workers and the general public by reducing exposure to ionizing and non-ionizing radiation to the lowest levels feasible while conducting cargo screening activities.

(b) GOVERNMENT RESPONSIBILITY.—

(1) INDEMNIFICATION.—Any person who is injured by ionizing or non-ionizing radiation resulting from cargo screening conducted pursuant to Federal law may not bring a claim for such injury against the employer of such person under Federal or State law if the employer was not the operator of the cargo screening equipment.

(2) SAVINGS PROVISION.—Nothing in this subsection shall be construed to limit the liability of, or create liability for, any third party other than employers.

PRIVILEGES OF THE FLOOR

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that Pamela Friedmann, who is a fellow from the Transportation Security Administration, be granted privileges of the floor during the consideration of H.R. 4954.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE APPROPRIATIONS ACT, 2007

TITLE VIII

GENERAL PROVISIONS

SEC. 8001. No part of any appropriation contained in this Act shall be used for publicity or propaganda purposes not authorized by the Congress.

SEC. 8002. During the current fiscal year, provisions of law prohibiting the payment of compensation to, or employment of, any person not a citizen of the United States shall not apply to personnel of the Department of Defense: Provided, That salary increases granted to direct and indirect hire foreign national employees of the Department of Defense funded by this Act shall not be at a rate in excess of the percentage increase authorized by law for civilian employees of the Department of Defense whose pay is computed under the provisions of section 5332 of title 5, United States Code, or at a rate in excess of the percentage increase provided by the appropriate host nation to its own employees, whichever is higher: Provided further, That this section shall not apply to Department of Defense foreign service national employees serving at United States diplomatic missions whose pay is set by the Department of State under the Foreign Service Act of 1980: Provided further, That the limitations of this provision shall not apply to foreign national employees of the Department of Defense in the Republic of Turkey.

SEC. 8003. No part of any appropriation contained in this Act shall remain available for obligation beyond the current fiscal year, unless expressly so provided herein.

SEC. 8004. No more than 20 percent of the appropriations in this Act which are limited for obligation during the current fiscal year shall be obligated during the last 2 months of the fiscal year: Provided, That this section shall not apply to obligations for support of active duty training of reserve components or summer camp training of the Reserve Officers' Training Corps.

(TRANSFER OF FUNDS)

SEC. 8005. Upon determination by the Secretary of Defense that such action is necessary in the national interest, he may, with the approval of the Office of Management and Budget, transfer not to exceed $4,500,000,000 of working capital funds of the Department of Defense or funds made available in this Act to the Department of Defense for military functions (except military construction) between such appropriations or funds or any subdivision thereof, to be merged with and to be available for the same purposes, and for the same time period, as the appropriation or fund to which transferred: Provided, That such authority to transfer may not be used unless for higher priority items, based on unforeseen military requirements, than those for which originally appropriated and in no case where the item for which funds are requested has been denied by the Congress: Provided further, That the Secretary of Defense shall notify the Congress promptly of all transfers made pursuant to this authority or any other authority in this Act: Provided further, That no part of the funds in this Act shall be available to prepare or present a request to the Committees on Appropriations for reprogramming of funds, unless for higher priority items, based on unforeseen military requirements, than those for which originally appropriated and in no case where the item for which reprogramming is requested has been denied by the Congress: Provided further, That a request for multiple reprogrammings of funds using authority provided in this section must be made prior to June 30, 2007: Provided further, That transfers among military personnel appropriations shall not be taken into account for purposes of the limitation on the amount of funds that may be transferred under this section.

(TRANSFER OF FUNDS)

SEC. 8006. During the current fiscal year, cash balances in working capital funds of the Department of Defense established pursuant to section 2208 of title 10, United States Code, may be maintained in only such amounts as are necessary at any time for cash disbursements to be made from such funds: Provided, That transfers may be made between such funds: Provided further, That transfers may be made between working capital funds and the "Foreign Currency Fluctuations, Defense" appropriation and the "Operation and Maintenance" appropriation accounts in such amounts as may be determined by the Secretary of Defense, with the approval of the Office of Management and Budget, except that such transfers may not be made unless the Secretary of Defense has notified the Congress of the proposed transfer. Except in amounts equal to the amounts appropriated to working capital funds in this Act, no obligations may be made against a working capital fund to procure or increase the value of war reserve material inventory, unless the Secretary of Defense has notified the Congress prior to any such obligation.

SEC. 8007. Funds appropriated by this Act may not be used to initiate a special access program without prior notification 30 calendar days in session in advance to the congressional defense committees.

SEC. 8008. None of the funds provided in this Act shall be available to initiate: (1) a multiyear contract that employs economic order quantity procurement in excess of $20,000,000 in any one year of the contract or that includes an unfunded contingent liability in excess of $20,000,000; or (2) a contract for advance procurement leading to a multiyear contract that employs economic order quantity procurement in excess of $20,000,000 in any one year, unless the congressional defense committees have been notified at least 30 days in advance of the proposed contract award: Provided, That no part of any appropriation contained in this Act shall be available to initiate a multiyear contract for which the economic order quantity advance procurement is not funded at least to the limits of the Government's liability: Provided further, That no part of any appropriation contained in this Act shall be available to initiate multiyear procurement contracts for any systems or component thereof if the value of the multiyear contract would exceed $500,000,000 unless specifically provided in this Act: Provided further, That no multiyear procurement contract can be terminated without 10-day prior notification to the congressional defense committees: Provided further, That the execution of multiyear authority shall require the use of a present value analysis to determine lowest cost compared to an annual procurement: Provided further, That none of the funds provided in this Act may be used for a multiyear contract executed after the date of the enactment of this Act unless in the case of any such contract—

(1) the Secretary of Defense has submitted to Congress a budget request for full funding of units to be procured through the contract;

(2) cancellation provisions in the contract do not include consideration of recurring manufacturing costs of the contractor associated with the production of unfunded units to be delivered under the contract;

(3) the contract provides that payments to the contractor under the contract shall not be made in advance of incurred costs on funded units; and

(4) the contract does not provide for a price adjustment based on a failure to award a follow-on contract.

Funds appropriated in title III of this Act may be used for a multiyear procurement contract as follows:

C-17 Globemaster;

F-22A;

MH-60R Helicopters;

MH-60R Helicopter mission equipment; and

V-22 Osprey.

SEC. 8009. Within the funds appropriated for the operation and maintenance of the Armed Forces, funds are hereby appropriated pursuant to section 401 of title 10, United States Code, for humanitarian and civic assistance costs under chapter 20 of title 10, United States Code. Such funds may also be obligated for humanitarian and civic assistance costs incidental to authorized operations and pursuant to authority granted in section 401 of chapter 20 of title 10, United States Code, and these obligations shall be reported as required by section 401(d) of title 10, United States Code: Provided, That funds available for operation and maintenance shall be available for providing humanitarian and similar assistance by using Civic Action Teams in the Trust Territories of the Pacific Islands and freely associated states of Micronesia, pursuant to the Compact of Free Association as authorized by Public Law 99-239: Provided further, That upon a determination by the Secretary of the Army that such action is beneficial for graduate medical education programs conducted at Army medical facilities located in Hawaii, the Secretary of the Army may authorize the provision of medical services at such facilities and transportation to such facilities, on a nonreimbursable basis, for civilian patients from American Samoa, the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands, the Marshall Islands, the Federated States of Micronesia, Palau, and Guam.

SEC. 8010. (a) During fiscal year 2007, the civilian personnel of the Department of Defense may not be managed on the basis of any end-strength, and the management of such personnel during that fiscal year shall not be subject to any constraint or limitation (known as an end-strength) on the number of such personnel who may be employed on the last day of such fiscal year.

(b) The fiscal year 2008 budget request for the Department of Defense as well as all justification material and other documentation supporting the fiscal year 2008 Department of Defense budget request shall be prepared and submitted to the Congress as if subsections (a) and (b) of this provision were effective with regard to fiscal year 2008.

(c) Nothing in this section shall be construed to apply to military (civilian) technicians.

SEC. 8011. None of the funds appropriated in this or any other Act may be used to initiate a new installation overseas without 30-day advance notification to the Committees on Appropriations.

SEC. 8012. None of the funds made available by this Act shall be used in any way, directly or indirectly, to influence congressional action on any legislation or appropriation matters pending before the Congress.

SEC. 8013. None of the funds appropriated by this Act shall be available for the basic pay and allowances of any member of the Army participating as a full-time student and receiving benefits paid by the Secretary of Veterans Affairs from the Department of Defense Education Benefits Fund when time spent as a full-time student is credited toward completion of a service commitment: Provided, That this subsection shall not apply to those members who have reenlisted with this option prior to October 1, 1987: Provided further, That this subsection applies only to active components of the Army.

SEC. 8014. (a) LIMITATION ON CONVERSION TO CONTRACTOR PERFORMANCE.—None of the funds appropriated by this Act shall be available to convert to contractor performance an activity or function of the Department of Defense that, on or after the date of the enactment of this Act, is performed by more than 10 Department of Defense civilian employees unless—

(1) the conversion is based on the result of a public-private competition that includes a most efficient and cost effective organization plan developed by such activity or function;

(2) the Competitive Sourcing Official determines that, over all performance periods stated in the solicitation of offers for performance of the activity or function, the cost of performance of the activity or function by a contractor would be less costly to the Department of Defense by an amount that equals or exceeds the lesser of—

(A) 10 percent of the most efficient organization's personnel-related costs for performance of that activity or function by Federal employees; or

(B) $10,000,000; and

(3) the contractor does not receive an advance for a proposal that would reduce costs for the Department of Defense by—

(A) not making an employer-sponsored health insurance plan available to the workers who are to be employed in the performance of that activity or function under the contract;

(B) offering to such workers an employer-sponsored health benefits plan that requires the employer to contribute less towards the premium or subscription share than the amount that is paid by the Department of Defense for health benefits for civilian employees under chapter 89 of title 5, United States Code; or

(C) offering to such workers a retirement benefit that in any year costs less than the annual retirement cost factor applicable to Department of Defense civilian employees under chapter 84 of title 5, United States Code.

(b) EXCEPTIONS.—

(1) The Department of Defense, without regard to subsection (a) of this section or subsections (a), (b), or (c) of section 2461 of title 10, United States Code, and notwithstanding any administrative regulation, requirement, or policy to the contrary shall have full authority to enter into a contract for the performance of any commercial or industrial type function of the Department of Defense that—

(A) is included on the procurement list established pursuant to section 2 of the Javits-Wagner-O'Day Act (41 U.S.C. 47);

(B) is planned to be converted to performance by a qualified nonprofit agency for the blind or by a qualified nonprofit agency for other severely handicapped individuals in accordance with that Act; or

(C) is planned to be converted to performance by a qualified firm under at least 51 percent ownership by an Indian tribe, as defined in section 4(e) of the Indian Self-Determination and Education Assistance Act (25 U.S.C. 450b(e)), or a Native Hawaiian Organization, as defined in section 8(a)(15) of the Small Business Act (15 U.S.C. 637(a)(15)).

(2) This section shall not apply to depot contracts or contracts for depot maintenance as provided in sections 2469 and 2474 of title 10, United States Code.

(c) TREATMENT OF CONVERSION.—The conversion of any activity or function of the Department of Defense under the authority provided by this section shall be credited toward any competitive or outsourcing goal, target, or measurement that may be established by statute, regulation, or policy and is deemed to be awarded under the authority of, and in compliance with, subsection (h) of section 2304 of title 10, United States Code, for the competition or outsourcing of commercial activities.

(TRANSFER OF FUNDS)

SEC. 8015. Funds appropriated in title III of this Act for the Department of Defense Pilot Mentor-Protege Program may be transferred to any other appropriation contained in this Act solely for the purpose of implementing a Mentor-Protege Program developmental assistance agreement pursuant to section 831 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1991 (Public Law 101-510; 10 U.S.C. 2302 note), as amended, under the authority of this provision or any other transfer authority contained in this Act.

SEC. 8016. None of the funds in this Act may be available for the purchase by the Department of Defense (and its departments and agencies) of welded shipboard anchor and mooring chain 4 inches in diameter and under unless the anchor and mooring chain are manufactured in the United States from components which are substantially manufactured in the United States: Provided, That for the purpose of this section manufactured will include cutting, heat treating, quality control, testing of chain and welding (including the forging and shot blasting process): Provided further, That for the purpose of this section substantially all of the components of anchor and mooring chain shall be considered to be produced or manufactured in the United States if the aggregate cost of the components produced or manufactured in the United States exceeds the aggregate cost of the components produced or manufactured outside the United States: Provided further, That when adequate domestic supplies are not available to meet Department of Defense requirements on a timely basis, the Secretary of the service responsible for the procurement may waive this restriction on a case-by-case basis by certifying in writing to the Committees on Appropriations that such an acquisition must be made in order to acquire capability for national security purposes.

SEC. 8017. None of the funds available to the Department of Defense may be used to demilitarize or dispose of M-1 Carbines, M-1 Garand rifles, M-14 rifles, .22 caliber rifles, .30 caliber rifles, or M-1911 pistols.

SEC. 8018. None of the funds appropriated by this Act available for the Civilian Health and Medical Program of the Uniformed Services (CHAMPUS) or TRICARE shall be available for the reimbursement of any health care provider for inpatient mental health service for care received when a patient is referred to a provider of inpatient mental health care or residential treatment care by a medical or health care professional having an economic interest in the facility to which the patient is referred: Provided, That this limitation does not apply in the case of inpatient mental health services provided under the program for persons with disabilities under subsection (d) of section 1079 of title 10, United States Code, provided as partial hospital care, or provided pursuant to a waiver authorized by the Secretary of Defense because of medical or psychological circumstances of the patient that are confirmed by a health professional who is not a Federalemployee after a review, pursuant to rules prescribed by the Secretary, which takes into account the appropriate level of care for the patient, the intensity of services required by the patient, and the availability of that care.

SEC. 8019. No more than $500,000 of the funds appropriated or made available in this Act shall be used during a single fiscal year for any single relocation of an organization, unit, activity or function of the Department of Defense into or within the National Capital Region: Provided, That the Secretary of Defense may waive this restriction on a case-by-case basis by certifying in writing to the congressional defense committees that such a relocation is required in the best interest of the Government.

SEC. 8020. In addition to the funds provided elsewhere in this Act, $8,000,000 is appropriated only for incentive payments authorized by section 504 of the Indian Financing Act of 1974 (25 U.S.C. 1544): Provided, That a prime contractor or a subcontractor at any tier that makes a subcontract award to any subcontractor or supplier as defined in section 1544 of title 25, United States Code or a small business owned and controlled by an individual or individuals defined under section 4221(9) of title 25, United States Code shall be considered a contractor for the purposes of being allowed additional compensation under section 504 of the Indian Financing Act of 1974 (25 U.S.C. 1544) whenever the prime contract or subcontract amount is over $500,000 and involves the expenditure of funds appropriated by an Act making Appropriations for the Department of Defense with respect to any fiscal year: Provided further, That notwithstanding section 430 of title 41, United States Code, this section shall be applicable to any Department of Defense acquisition of supplies or services, including any contract and any subcontract at any tier for acquisition of commercial items produced or manufactured, in whole or in part by any subcontractor or supplier defined in section 1544 of title 25, United States Code or a small business owned and controlled by an individual or individuals defined under section 4221(9) of title 25, United States Code: Provided further, That, during the current fiscal year and hereafter, businesses certified as 8(a) by the Small Business Administration pursuant to section 8(a)(15) of Public Law 85-536, as amended, shall have the same status as other program participants under section 602 of Public Law 100-656, 102 Stat. 3825 (Business Opportunity Development Reform Act of 1988) for purposes of contracting with agencies of the Department of Defense.

SEC. 8021. None of the funds appropriated by this Act shall be available to perform any cost study pursuant to the provisions of OMB Circular A-76 if the study being performed exceeds a period of 24 months after initiation of such study with respect to a single function activity or 30 months after initiation of such study for a multi-function activity.

SEC. 8022. Funds appropriated by this Act for the American Forces Information Service shall not be used for any national or international political or psychological activities.

SEC. 8023. Notwithstanding any other provision of law or regulation, the Secretary of Defense may adjust wage rates for civilian employees hired for certain health care occupations as authorized for the Secretary of Veterans Affairs by section 7455 of title 38, United States Code.

SEC. 8024. During the current fiscal year, the Department of Defense is authorized to incur obligations of not to exceed $350,000,000 for purposes specified in section 2350j(c) of title 10, United States Code, in anticipation of receipt of contributions, only from the Government of Kuwait, under that section: Provided, That upon receipt, such contributions from the Government of Kuwait shall be credited to the appropriations or fund which incurred such obligations.

SEC. 8025. (a) Of the funds made available in this Act, not less than $35,975,000 shall be available for the Civil Air Patrol Corporation, of which—

(1) $25,087,000 shall be available from "Operation and Maintenance, Air Force" to support Civil Air Patrol Corporation operation and maintenance, readiness, counterdrug activities, and drug demand reduction activities involving youth programs;

(2) $10,193,000 shall be available from "Air-craft Procurement, Air Force"; and

(3) $695,000 shall be available from "Other Procurement, Air Force" for vehicle procurement.

(b) The Secretary of the Air Force should waive reimbursement for any funds used by the Civil Air Patrol for counter-drug activities in support of Federal, State, and local government agencies.

SEC. 8026. (a) None of the funds appropriated in this Act are available to establish a new Department of Defense (department) federally funded research and development center (FFRDC), either as a new entity, or as a separate entity administered by an organization managing another FFRDC, or as a nonprofit membership corporation consisting of a consortium of other FFRDCs and other non-profit entities.

(b) No member of a Board of Directors, Trustees, Overseers, Advisory Group, Special Issues Panel, Visiting Committee, or any similar entity of a defense FFRDC, and no paid consultant to any defense FFRDC, except when acting in a technical advisory capacity, may be compensated for his or her services as a member of such entity, or as a paid consultant by more than one FFRDC in a fiscal year: Provided, That a member of any such entity referred to previously in this subsection shall be allowed travel expenses and per diem as authorized under the Federal Joint Travel Regulations, when engaged in the performance of membership duties.

(c) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, none of the funds available to the department from any source during fiscal year 2007 may be used by a defense FFRDC, through a fee or other payment mechanism, for construction of new buildings, for payment of cost sharing for projects funded by Government grants, for absorption of contract overruns, or for certain charitable contributions, not to include employee participation in community service and/or development.

(d) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, of the funds available to the department during fiscal year 2007, not more than 5,517 staff years of technical effort (staff years) may be funded for defense FFRDCs: Provided, That of the specific amount referred to previously in this subsection, not more than 1,050 staff years may be funded for the defense studies and analysis FFRDCs: Provided further, That this subsection shall not apply to staff years funded in the National Intelligence Program (NIP).

(e) The Secretary of Defense shall, with the submission of the department's fiscal year 2008 budget request, submit a report presenting the specific amounts of staff years of technical effort to be allocated for each defense FFRDC during that fiscal year.

(f) Notwithstanding any other provision of this Act, the total amount appropriated in this Act for FFRDCs is hereby reduced by $53,200,000.

SEC. 8027. None of the funds appropriated or made available in this Act shall be used to procure carbon, alloy or armor steel plate for use in any Government-owned facility or property under the control of the Department of Defense which were not melted and rolled in the United States or Canada: Provided, That these procurement restrictions shall apply to any and all Federal Supply Class 9515, American Society of Testing and Materials (ASTM) or American Iron and Steel Institute (AISI) specifications of carbon, alloy or armor steel plate: Provided further, That the Secretary of the military department responsible for the procurement may waive this restriction on a case-by-case basis by certifying in writing to the Committees on Appropriations of the House of Representatives and the Senate that adequate domestic supplies are not available to meet Department of Defense requirements on a timely basis and that such an acquisition must be made in order to acquire capability for national security purposes: Provided further, That these restrictions shall not apply to contracts which are in being as of the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 8028. For the purposes of this Act, the term "congressional defense committees" means the Armed Services Committee of the House of Representatives, the Armed Services Committee of the Senate, the Subcommittee on Defense of the Committee on Appropriations of the Senate, and the Subcommittee on Defense of the Committee on Appropriations of the House of Representatives. In addition, for any matter pertaining to basic allowance for housing, facilities sustainment, restoration and modernization, environmental restoration and the Defense Health Program, "congressional defense committees" also means the Subcommittee on Military Quality of Life and Veterans Affairs, and Related Agencies of the Committee on Appropriations of the House of Representatives.

SEC. 8029. During the current fiscal year, the Department of Defense may acquire the modification, depot maintenance and repair of aircraft, vehicles and vessels as well as the production of components and other Defense-related articles, through competition between Department of Defense depot maintenance activities and private firms: Provided, That the Senior Acquisition Executive of the military department or Defense Agency concerned, with power of delegation, shall certify that successful bids include comparable estimates of all direct and indirect costs for both public and private bids: Provided further, That Office of Management and Budget Circular A-76 shall not apply to competitions conducted under this section.

SEC. 8030. (a)(1) If the Secretary of Defense, after consultation with the United States Trade Representative, determines that a foreign country which is party to an agreement described in paragraph (2) has violated the terms of the agreement by discriminating against certain types of products produced in the United States that are covered by the agreement, the Secretary of Defense shall rescind the Secretary's blanket waiver of the Buy American Act with respect to such types of products produced in that foreign country.

(2) An agreement referred to in paragraph (1) is any reciprocal defense procurement memorandum of understanding, between the United States and a foreign country pursuant to which the Secretary of Defense has prospectively waived the Buy American Act for certain products in that country.

(b) The Secretary of Defense shall submit to the Congress a report on the amount of Department of Defense purchases from foreign entities in fiscal year 2007. Such report shall separately indicate the dollar value of items for which the Buy American Act was waived pursuant to any agreement described in subsection (a)(2), the Trade Agreement Act of 1979 (19 U.S.C. 2501 et seq.), or any international agreement to which the United States is a party.

(c) For purposes of this section, the term "Buy American Act" means title III of the Act entitled "An Act making appropriations for the Treasury and Post Office Departments for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1934, and for other purposes", approved March 3, 1933 (41 U.S.C. 10a et seq.).

SEC. 8031. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, funds available during the current fiscal year and hereafter for "Drug Interdiction and Counter-Drug Activities, Defense" may be obligated for the Young Marines program.

(INCLUDING TRANSFER OF FUNDS)

SEC. 8032. During the current fiscal year, amounts contained in the Department of Defense Overseas Military Facility Investment Recovery Account established by section 2921(c)(1) of the National Defense Authorization Act of 1991 (Public Law 101-510; 10 U.S.C. 2687 note) shall be available until expended for the payments specified by section 2921(c)(2) of that Act.

SEC. 8033. (a) IN GENERAL.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the Secretary of the Air Force may convey at no cost to the Air Force, without consideration, to Indian tribes located in the States of North Dakota, South Dakota, Montana, and Minnesota relocatable military housing units located at Grand Forks Air Force Base and Minot Air Force Base that are excess to the needs of the Air Force.

(b) PROCESSING OF REQUESTS.—The Secretary of the Air Force shall convey, at no cost to the Air Force, military housing units under subsection (a) in accordance with the request for such units that are submitted to the Secretary by the Operation Walking Shield Program on behalf of Indian tribes located in the States of North Dakota, South Dakota, Montana, and Minnesota.

(c) RESOLUTION OF HOUSING UNIT CONFLICTS.—The Operation Walking Shield Program shall resolve any conflicts among requests of Indian tribes for housing units under subsection (a) before submitting requests to the Secretary of the Air Force under subsection (b).

(d) INDIAN TRIBE DEFINED.—In this section, the term "Indian tribe" means any recognized Indian tribe included on the current list published by the Secretary of the Interior under section 104 of the Federally Recognized Indian Tribe Act of 1994 (Public Law 103-454; 108 Stat. 4792; 25 U.S.C. 479a-1).

SEC. 8034. During the current fiscal year, appropriations which are available to the Department of Defense for operation and maintenance may be used to purchase items having an investment item unit cost of not more than $250,000.

SEC. 8035. (a) During the current fiscal year, none of the appropriations or funds available to the Department of Defense Working Capital Funds shall be used for the purchase of an investment item for the purpose of acquiring a new inventory item for sale or anticipated sale during the current fiscal year or a subsequent fiscal year to customers of the Department of Defense Working Capital Funds if such an item would not have been chargeable to the Department of Defense Business Operations Fund during fiscal year 1994 and if the purchase of such an investment item would be chargeable during the current fiscal year to appropriations made to the Department of Defense for procurement.

(b) The fiscal year 2008 budget request for the Department of Defense as well as all justification material and other documentation supporting the fiscal year 2008 Department of Defense budget shall be prepared and submitted to the Congress on the basis that any equipment which was classified as an end item and funded in a procurement appropriation contained in this Act shall be budgeted for in a proposed fiscal year 2008 procurement appropriation and not in the supply management business area or any other area or category of the Department of Defense Working Capital Funds.

SEC. 8036. None of the funds appropriated by this Act for programs of the Central Intelligence Agency shall remain available for obligation beyond the current fiscal year, except for funds appropriated for the Reserve for Contingencies, which shall remain available until September 30, 2008: Provided, That funds appropriated, transferred, or otherwise credited to the Central Intelligence Agency Central Services Working Capital Fund during this or any prior or subsequent fiscal year shall remain available until expended: Provided further, That any funds appropriated or transferred to the Central Intelligence Agency for advanced research and development acquisition, for agent operations, and for covert action programs authorized by the President under section 503 of the National Security Act of 1947, as amended, shall remain available until September 30, 2008.

SEC. 8037. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, funds made available in this Act for the Defense Intelligence Agency may be used for the design, development, and deployment of General Defense Intelligence Program intelligence communications and intelligence information systems for the Services, the Unified and Specified Commands, and the component commands.

SEC. 8038. Of the funds appropriated to the Department of Defense under the heading "Operation and Maintenance, Defense-Wide", not less than $10,000,000 shall be made available only for the mitigation of environmental impacts, including training and technical assistance to tribes, related administrative support, the gathering of information, documenting of environmental damage, and developing a system for prioritization of mitigation and cost to complete estimates for mitigation, on Indian lands resulting from Department of Defense activities.

SEC. 8039. (a) None of the funds appropriated in this Act may be expended by an entity of the Department of Defense unless the entity, in expending the funds, complies with the Buy American Act. For purposes of this subsection, the term "Buy American Act" means title III of the Act entitled "An Act making appropriations for the Treasury and Post Office Departments for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1934, and for other purposes", approved March 3, 1933 (41 U.S.C. 10a et seq.).

(b) If the Secretary of Defense determines that a person has been convicted of intentionally affixing a label bearing a "Made in America" inscription to any product sold in or shipped to the United States that is not made in America, the Secretary shall determine, in accordance with section 2410f of title 10, United States Code, whether the person should be debarred from contracting with the Department of Defense.

(c) In the case of any equipment or products purchased with appropriations provided under this Act, it is the sense of the Congress that any entity of the Department of Defense, in expending the appropriation, purchase only American-made equipment and products, provided that American-made equipment and products are cost-competitive, quality-competitive, and available in a timely fashion.

SEC. 8040. None of the funds appropriated by this Act shall be available for a contract for studies, analysis, or consulting services entered into without competition on the basis of an unsolicited proposal unless the head of the activity responsible for the procurement determines—

(1) as a result of thorough technical evaluation, only one source is found fully qualified to perform the proposed work;

(2) the purpose of the contract is to explore an unsolicited proposal which offers significant scientific or technological promise, represents the product of original thinking, and was submitted in confidence by one source; or

(3) the purpose of the contract is to take advantage of unique and significant industrial accomplishment by a specific concern, or to insure that a new product or idea of a specific concern is given financial support: Provided, That this limitation shall not apply to contracts in an amount of less than $25,000, contracts related to improvements of equipment that is in development or production, or contracts as to which a civilian official of the Department of Defense, who has been confirmed by the Senate, determines that the award of such contract is in the interest of the national defense.

SEC. 8041. (a) Except as provided in subsection (b) and (c), none of the funds made available by this Act may be used—

(1) to establish a field operating agency; or

(2) to pay the basic pay of a member of the Armed Forces or civilian employee of the department who is transferred or reassigned from a headquarters activity if the member or employee's place of duty remains at the location of that headquarters.

(b) The Secretary of Defense or Secretary of a military department may waive the limitations in subsection (a), on a case-by-case basis, if the Secretary determines, and certifies to the Committees on Appropriations of the House of Representatives and Senate that the granting of the waiver will reduce the personnel requirements or the financial requirements of the department.

(c) This section does not apply to—

(1) field operating agencies funded within the National Intelligence Program; or

(2) an Army field operating agency established to eliminate, mitigate, or counter the effects of improvised explosive devices, and, as determined by the Secretary of the Army, other similar threats.

SEC. 8042. The Secretary of Defense, notwithstanding any other provision of law, acting through the Office of Economic Adjustment of the Department of Defense, may use funds made available in this Act under the heading "Operation and Maintenance, Defense-Wide" to make grants and supplement other Federal funds in accordance with the guidance provided in the report of the Committee on Appropriations of the Senate accompanying this Act.

(RESCISSIONS)

SEC. 8043. Of the funds appropriated in Department of Defense Appropriations Acts, the following funds are hereby rescinded from the following accounts and programs in the specified amounts:

"Other Procurement, Army, 2006/2008", $20,000,000;

"Aircraft Procurement, Navy, 2006/2008", $40,700,000;

"Aircraft Procurement, Air Force, 2006/2008", $141,100,000;

"Missile Procurement, Air Force, 2006/2008", $100,000,000;

"Other Procurement, Air Force, 2006/2008", $125,000,000;

"Research, Development, Test and Evaluation, Navy, 2006/2007", $27,282,000;

"Research, Development, Test and Evaluation, Air Force, 2006/2007", $92,800,000;

"Research, Development, Test and Evaluation, Defense-Wide, 2006/2007", $100,000,000;

"Aircraft Procurement, Air Force, 2005/2007", $107,200,000; and

"Shipbuilding and Conversion Navy, 2005/2009", $11,245,000.

SEC. 8044. None of the funds available in this Act may be used to reduce the authorized positions for military (civilian) technicians of the Army National Guard, the Air National Guard, Army Reserve and Air Force Reserve for the purpose of applying any administratively imposed civilian personnel ceiling, freeze, or reduction on military (civilian) technicians, unless such reductions are a direct result of a reduction in military force structure.

SEC. 8045. None of the funds appropriated or otherwise made available in this Act may be obligated or expended for assistance to the Democratic People's Republic of North Korea unless specifically appropriated for that purpose.

SEC. 8046. Funds appropriated in this Act for operation and maintenance of the Military Departments, Combatant Commands and Defense Agencies shall be available for reimbursement of pay, allowances and other expenses which would otherwise be incurred against appropriations for the National Guard and Reserve when members of the National Guard and Reserve provide intelligence or counterintelligence support to Combatant Commands, Defense Agencies and Joint Intelligence Activities, including the activities and programs included within the National Intelligence Program and the Military Intelligence Program: Provided, That nothing in this section authorizes deviation from established Reserve and National Guard personnel and training procedures.

SEC. 8047. During the current fiscal year, none of the funds appropriated in this Act may be used to reduce the civilian medical and medical support personnel assigned to military treatment facilities below the September 30, 2003, level: Provided, That the Service Surgeons General may waive this section by certifying to the congressional defense committees that the beneficiary population is declining in some catchment areas and civilian strength reductions may be consistent with responsible resource stewardship and capitation-based budgeting.

SEC. 8048. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, that not more than 35 percent of funds provided in this Act for environmental remediation may be obligated under indefinite delivery/indefinite quantity contracts with a total contract value of $130,000,000 or higher.

SEC. 8049. (a) None of the funds available to the Department of Defense for any fiscal year for drug interdiction or counter-drug activities may be transferred to any other department or agency of the United States except as specifically provided in an appropriations law.

(b) None of the funds available to the Central Intelligence Agency for any fiscal year for drug interdiction and counter-drug activities may be transferred to any other department or agency of the United States except as specifically provided in an appropriations law.

SEC. 8050. None of the funds appropriated by this Act may be used for the procurement of ball and roller bearings other than those produced by a domestic source and of domestic origin: Provided, That the Secretary of the military department responsible for such procurement may waive this restriction on a case-by-case basis by certifying in writing to the Committees on Appropriations of the House of Representatives and the Senate, that adequate domestic supplies are not available to meet Department of Defense requirements on a timely basis and that such an acquisition must be made in order to acquire capability for national security purposes: Provided further, That this restriction shall not apply to the purchase of "commercial items", as defined by section 4(12) of the Office of Federal Procurement Policy Act, except that the restriction shall apply to ball or roller bearings purchased as end items.

SEC. 8051. None of the funds in this Act may be used to purchase any supercomputer which is not manufactured in the United States, unless the Secretary of Defense certifies to the congressional defense committees that such an acquisition must be made in order to acquire capability for national security purposes that is not available from United States manufacturers.

SEC. 8052. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, each contract awarded by the Department of Defense during the current fiscal year and hereafter for construction or service performed in whole or in part in a State (as defined in section 381(d) of title 10, United States Code) which is not contiguous with another State and has an unemployment rate in excess of the national average rate of unemployment as determined by the Secretary of Labor, shall include a provision requiring the contractor to employ, for the purpose of performing that portion of the contract in such State that is not contiguous with another State, individuals who are residents of such State and who, in the case of any craft or trade, possess or would be able to acquire promptly the necessary skills: Provided, That the Secretary of Defense may waive the requirements of this section, on a case-by-case basis, in the interest of national security.

SEC. 8053. None of the funds made available in this or any other Act may be used to pay the salary of any officer or employee of the Department of Defense who approves or implements the transfer of administrative responsibilities or budgetary resources of any program, project, or activity financed by this Act to the jurisdiction of another Federal agency not financed by this Act without the express authorization of Congress: Provided, That this limitation shall not apply to transfers of funds expressly provided for in Defense Appropriations Acts, or provisions of Acts providing supplemental appropriations for the Department of Defense.

SEC. 8054. (a) LIMITATION ON TRANSFER OF DEFENSE ARTICLES AND SERVICES.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, none of the funds available to the Department of Defense for the current fiscal year may be obligated or expended to transfer to another nation or an international organization any defense articles or services (other than intelligence services) for use in the activities described in subsection (b) unless the congressional defense committees, the Committee on International Relations of the House of Representatives, and the Committee on Foreign Relations of the Senate are notified 15 days in advance of such transfer.

(b) COVERED ACTIVITIES.—This section applies to—

(1) any international peacekeeping or peace-enforcement operation under the authority of chapter VI or chapter VII of the United Nations Charter under the authority of a United Nations Security Council resolution; and

(2) any other international peacekeeping, peace-enforcement, or humanitarian assistance operation.

(c) REQUIRED NOTICE.—A notice under subsection (a) shall include the following:

(1) A description of the equipment, supplies, or services to be transferred.

(2) A statement of the value of the equipment, supplies, or services to be transferred.

(3) In the case of a proposed transfer of equipment or supplies—

(A) a statement of whether the inventory requirements of all elements of the Armed Forces (including the reserve components) for the type of equipment or supplies to be transferred have been met; and

(B) a statement of whether the items proposed to be transferred will have to be replaced and, if so, how the President proposes to provide funds for such replacement.

SEC. 8055. None of the funds available to the Department of Defense under this Act shall be obligated or expended to pay a contractor under a contract with the Department of Defense for costs of any amount paid by the contractor to an employee when—

(1) such costs are for a bonus or otherwise in excess of the normal salary paid by the contractor to the employee; and

(2) such bonus is part of restructuring costs associated with a business combination.

(INCLUDING TRANSFER OF FUNDS)

SEC. 8056. During the current fiscal year, no more than $30,000,000 of appropriations made in this Act under the heading "Operation and Maintenance, Defense-Wide" may be transferred to appropriations available for the pay of military personnel, to be merged with, and to be available for the same time period as the appropriations to which transferred, to be used in support of such personnel in connection with support and services for eligible organizations and activities outside the Department of Defense pursuant to section 2012 of title 10, United States Code.

SEC. 8057. During the current fiscal year, in the case of an appropriation account of the Department of Defense for which the period of availability for obligation has expired or which has closed under the provisions of section 1552 of title 31, United States Code, and which has a negative unliquidated or unexpended balance, an obligation or an adjustment of an obligation may be charged to any current appropriation account for the same purpose as the expired or closed account if—

(1) the obligation would have been properly chargeable (except as to amount) to the expired or closed account before the end of the period of availability or closing of that account;

(2) the obligation is not otherwise properly chargeable to any current appropriation account of the Department of Defense; and

(3) in the case of an expired account, the obligation is not chargeable to a current appropriation of the Department of Defense under the provisions of section 1405(b)(8) of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1991, Public Law 101-510, as amended (31 U.S.C. 1551 note): Provided, That in the case of an expired account, if subsequent review or investigation discloses that there was not in fact a negative unliquidated or unexpended balance in the account, any charge to a current account under the authority of this section shall be reversed and recorded against the expired account: Provided further, That the total amount charged to a current appropriation under this section may not exceed an amount equal to 1 percent of the total appropriation for that account.

SEC. 8058. (a) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the Chief of the National Guard Bureau may permit the use of equipment of the National Guard Distance Learning Project by any person or entity on a space-available, reimbursable basis. The Chief of the National Guard Bureau shall establish the amount of reimbursement for such use on a case-by-case basis.

(b) Amounts collected under subsection (a) shall be credited to funds available for the National Guard Distance Learning Project and be available to defray the costs associated with the use of equipment of the project under that subsection. Such funds shall be available for such purposes without fiscal year limitation.

SEC. 8059. Using funds available by this Act or any other Act, the Secretary of the Air Force, pursuant to a determination under section 2690 of title 10, United States Code, may implement cost-effective agreements for required heating facility modernization in the Kaiserslautern Military Community in the Federal Republic of Germany: Provided, That in the City of Kaiserslautern such agreements will include the use of United States anthracite as the base load energy for municipal district heat to the United States Defense installations: Provided further, That at Landstuhl Army Regional Medical Center and Ramstein Air Base, furnished heat may be obtained from private, regional or municipal services, if provisions are included for the consideration of United States coal as an energy source.

SEC. 8060. None of the funds appropriated in title IV of this Act may be used to procure end-items for delivery to military forces for operational training, operational use or inventory requirements: Provided, That this restriction does not apply to end-items used in development, prototyping, and test activities preceding and leading to acceptance for operational use: Provided further, That this restriction does not apply to programs funded within the National Intelligence Program: Provided further, That the Secretary of Defense may waive this restriction on a case-by-case basis by certifying in writing to the Committees on Appropriations of the House of Representatives and the Senate that it is in the national security interest to do so.

SEC. 8061. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, funds available to the Department of Defense shall be made available to provide transportation of medical supplies and equipment, on a nonreimbursable basis, to American Samoa, and funds available to the Department of Defense shall be made available to provide transportation of medical supplies and equipment, on a nonreimbursable basis, to the Indian Health Service when it is in conjunction with a civil-military project.

SEC. 8062. None of the funds made available in this Act may be used to approve or license the sale of the F-22A advanced tactical fighter to any foreign government.

SEC. 8063. (a) The Secretary of Defense may, on a case-by-case basis, waive with respect to a foreign country each limitation on the procurement of defense items from foreign sources provided in law if the Secretary determines that the application of the limitation with respect to that country would invalidate cooperative programs entered into between the Department of Defense and the foreign country, or would invalidate reciprocal trade agreements for the procurement of defense items entered into under section 2531 of title 10, United States Code, and the country does not discriminate against the same or similar defense items produced in the United States for that country.

(b) Subsection (a) applies with respect to—

(1) contracts and subcontracts entered into on or after the date of the enactment of this Act; and

(2) options for the procurement of items that are exercised after such date under contracts that are entered into before such date if the option prices are adjusted for any reason other than the application of a waiver granted under subsection (a).

(c) Subsection (a) does not apply to a limitation regarding construction of public vessels, ball and roller bearings, food, and clothing or textile materials as defined by section 11 (chapters 50-65) of the Harmonized Tariff Schedule and products classified under headings 4010, 4202, 4203, 6401 through 6406, 6505, 7019, 7218 through 7229, 7304.41 through 7304.49, 7306.40, 7502 through 7508, 8105, 8108, 8109, 8211, 8215, and 9404.

SEC. 8064. (a) PROHIBITION.—None of the funds made available by this Act may be used to support any training program involving a unit of the security forces of a foreign country if the Secretary of Defense has received credible information from the Department of State that the unit has committed a gross violation of human rights, unless all necessary corrective steps have been taken.

(b) MONITORING.—The Secretary of Defense, in consultation with the Secretary of State, shall ensure that prior to a decision to conduct any training program referred to in subsection (a), full consideration is given to all credible information available to the Department of State relating to human rights violations by foreign security forces.

(c) WAIVER.—The Secretary of Defense, after consultation with the Secretary of State, may waive the prohibition in subsection (a) if he determines that such waiver is required by extraordinary circumstances.

(d) REPORT.—Not more than 15 days after the exercise of any waiver under subsection (c), the Secretary of Defense shall submit a report to the congressional defense committees describing the extraordinary circumstances, the purpose and duration of the training program, the United States forces and the foreign security forces involved in the training program, and the information relating to human rights violations that necessitates the waiver.

SEC. 8065. None of the funds appropriated or made available in this Act to the Department of the Navy shall be used to develop, lease or procure the T-AKE class of ships unless the main propulsion diesel engines and propulsors are manufactured in the United States by a domestically operated entity: Provided, That the Secretary of Defense may waive this restriction on a case-by-case basis by certifying in writing to the Committees on Appropriations of the House of Representatives and the Senate that adequate domestic supplies are not available to meet Department of Defense requirements on a timely basis and that such an acquisition must be made in order to acquire capability for national security purposes or there exists a significant cost or quality difference.

SEC. 8066. None of the funds appropriated or otherwise made available by this or other Department of Defense Appropriations Acts may be obligated or expended for the purpose of performing repairs or maintenance to military family housing units of the Department of Defense, including areas in such military family housing units that may be used for the purpose of conducting official Department of Defense business.

SEC. 8067. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, funds appropriated in this Act under the heading "Research, Development, Test and Evaluation, Defense-Wide" for any new start advanced concept technology demonstration project may only be obligated 30 days after a report, including a description of the project, the planned acquisition and transition strategy and its estimated annual and total cost, has been provided in writing to the congressional defense committees: Provided, That the Secretary of Defense may waive this restriction on a case-by-case basis by certifying to the congressional defense committees that it is in the national interest to do so.

SEC. 8068. The Secretary of Defense shall provide a classified quarterly report beginning 30 days after enactment of this Act, to the House and Senate Appropriations Committees, Subcommittees on Defense on certain matters as directed in the classified annex accompanying this Act.

SEC. 8069. During the current fiscal year, refunds attributable to the use of the Government travel card, refunds attributable to the use of the Government Purchase Card and refunds attributable to official Government travel arranged by Government Contracted Travel Management Centers may be credited to operation and maintenance, and research, development, test and evaluation accounts of the Department of Defense which are current when the refunds are received.

SEC. 8070. (a) REGISTERING FINANCIAL MANAGEMENT INFORMATION TECHNOLOGY SYSTEMS WITH DOD CHIEF INFORMATION OFFICER.—None of the funds appropriated in this Act may be used for a mission critical or mission essential financial management information technology system (including a system funded by the defense working capital fund) that is not registered with the Chief Information Officer of the Department of Defense. A system shall be considered to be registered with that officer upon the furnishing to that officer of notice of the system, together with such information concerning the system as the Secretary of Defense may prescribe. A financial management information technology system shall be considered a mission critical or mission essential information technology system as defined by the Under Secretary of Defense (Comptroller).

(b) CERTIFICATIONS AS TO COMPLIANCE WITH FINANCIAL MANAGEMENT MODERNIZATION PLAN.—

(1) During the current fiscal year, a financial management automated information system, a mixed information system supporting financial and non-financial systems, or a system improvement of more than $1,000,000 may not receive Milestone A approval, Milestone B approval, or full rate production, or their equivalent, within the Department of Defense until the Under Secretary of Defense (Comptroller) certifies, with respect to that milestone, that the system is being developed and managed in accordance with the Department's Financial Management Modernization Plan. The Under Secretary of Defense (Comptroller) may require additional certifications, as appropriate, with respect to any such system.

(2) The Chief Information Officer shall provide the congressional defense committees timely notification of certifications under paragraph (1).

(c) CERTIFICATIONS AS TO COMPLIANCE WITH CLINGER-COHEN ACT.—

(1) During the current fiscal year, a major automated information system may not receive Milestone A approval, Milestone B approval, or full rate production approval, or their equivalent, within the Department of Defense until the Chief Information Officer certifies, with respect to that milestone, that the system is being developed in accordance with the Clinger-Cohen Act of 1996 (40 U.S.C. 1401 et seq.). The Chief Information Officer may require additional certifications, as appropriate, with respect to any such system.

(2) The Chief Information Officer shall provide the congressional defense committees timely notification of certifications under paragraph (1). Each such notification shall include a statement confirming that the following steps have been taken with respect to the system:

(A) Business process reengineering.

(B) An analysis of alternatives.

(C) An economic analysis that includes a calculation of the return on investment.

(D) Performance measures.

(E) An information assurance strategy consistent with the Department's Global Information Grid.

(d) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this section:

(1) The term "Chief Information Officer" means the senior official of the Department of Defense designated by the Secretary of Defense pursuant to section 3506 of title 44, United States Code.

(2) The term "information technology system" has the meaning given the term "information technology" in section 5002 of the Clinger-Cohen Act of 1996 (40 U.S.C. 1401).

SEC. 8071. During the current fiscal year, none of the funds available to the Department of Defense may be used to provide support to another department or agency of the United States if such department or agency is more than 90 days in arrears in making payment to the Department of Defense for goods or services previously provided to such department or agency on a reimbursable basis: Provided, That this restriction shall not apply if the department is authorized by law to provide support to such department or agency on a nonreimbursable basis, and is providing the requested support pursuant to such authority: Provided further, That the Secretary of Defense may waive this restriction on a case-by-case basis by certifying in writing to the Committees on Appropriations of the House of Representatives and the Senate that it is in the national security interest to do so.

SEC. 8072. Notwithstanding section 12310(b) of title 10, United States Code, a Reserve who is a member of the National Guard serving on full-time National Guard duty under section 502(f) of title 32 may perform duties in support of the ground-based elements of the National Ballistic Missile Defense System.

SEC. 8073. None of the funds provided in this Act may be used to transfer to any nongovernmental entity ammunition held by the Department of Defense that has a center-fire cartridge and a United States military nomenclature designation of "armor penetrator", "armor piercing (AP)", "armor piercing incendiary (API)", or "armor-piercing incendiary-tracer (API-T)", except to an entity performing demilitarization services for the Department of Defense under a contract that requires the entity to demonstrate to the satisfaction of the Department of Defense that armor piercing projectiles are either: (1) rendered incapable of reuse by the demilitarization process; or (2) used to manufacture ammunition pursuant to a contract with the Department of Defense or the manufacture of ammunition for export pursuant to a License for Permanent Export of Unclassified Military Articles issued by the Department of State.

SEC. 8074. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the Chief of the National Guard Bureau, or his designee, may waive payment of all or part of the consideration that otherwise would be required under section 2667 of title 10, United States Code, in the case of a lease of personal property for a period not in excess of 1 year to any organization specified in section 508(d) of title 32, United States Code, or any other youth, social, or fraternal non-profit organization as may be approved by the Chief of the National Guard Bureau, or his designee, on a case-by-case basis.

SEC. 8075. None of the funds appropriated by this Act shall be used for the support of any nonappropriated funds activity of the Department of Defense that procures malt beverages and wine with nonappropriated funds for resale (including such alcoholic beverages sold by the drink) on a military installation located in the United States unless such malt beverages and wine are procured within that State, or in the case of the District of Columbia, within the District of Columbia, in which the military installation is located: Provided, That in a case in which the military installation is located in more than one State, purchases may be made in any State in which the installation is located: Provided further, That such local procurement requirements for malt beverages and wine shall apply to all alcoholic beverages only for military installations in States which are not contiguous with another State: Provided further, That alcoholic beverages other than wine and malt beverages, in contiguous States and the District of Columbia shall be procured from the most competitive source, price and other factors considered.

SEC. 8076. Funds available to the Department of Defense for the Global Positioning System during the current fiscal year may be used to fund civil requirements associated with the satellite and ground control segments of such system's modernization program.

(INCLUDING TRANSFER OF FUNDS)

SEC. 8077. Of the amounts appropriated in this Act under the heading "Operation and Maintenance, Army", $78,300,000 shall remain available until expended: Provided, That notwithstanding any other provision of law, the Secretary of Defense is authorized to transfer such funds to other activities of the Federal Government: Provided further, That the Secretary of Defense is authorized to enter into and carry out contracts for the acquisition of real property, construction, personal services, and operations related to projects carrying out the purposes of this section: Provided further, That contracts entered into under the authority of this section may provide for such indemnification as the Secretary determines to be necessary: Provided further, That projects authorized by this section shall comply with applicable Federal, State, and local law to the maximum extent consistent with the national security, as determined by the Secretary of Defense.

SEC. 8078. Section 8106 of the Department of Defense Appropriations Act, 1997 (titles I through VIII of the matter under subsection 101(b) of Public Law 104-208; 110 Stat. 3009-111; 10 U.S.C. 113 note) shall continue in effect to apply to disbursements that are made by the Department of Defense in fiscal year 2007.

SEC. 8079. (a) The Secretary of Defense, in coordination with the Secretary of Health and Human Services, may carry out a program to distribute surplus dental and medical equipment of the Department of Defense, at no cost to the Department of Defense, to Indian Health Service facilities and to federally-qualified health centers (within the meaning of section 1905(l)(2)(B) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1396d(l)(2)(B))).

(b) In carrying out this provision, the Secretary of Defense shall give the Indian Health Service a property disposal priority equal to the priority given to the Department of Defense and its twelve special screening programs in distribution of surplus dental and medical supplies and equipment.

SEC. 8080. Amounts appropriated in title II of this Act are hereby reduced by $92,000,000 to reflect savings attributable to efficiencies and management improvements in the funding of miscellaneous or other contracts in the military departments, as follows:

(1) From "Operation and Maintenance, Army", $5,000,000.

(2) From "Operation and Maintenance, Air Force", $87,000,000.

SEC. 8081. The total amount appropriated or otherwise made available in this Act is hereby reduced by $71,000,000 to limit excessive growth in the procurement of advisory and assistance services, to be distributed as follows:

“Operation and Maintenance, Army”, $32,000,000.

“Operation and Maintenance, Navy”, $34,000,000.

“Operation and Maintenance, Marine Corps”, $5,000,000.

(INCLUDING TRANSFER OF FUNDS)

SEC. 8082. Of the amounts appropriated in this Act under the heading “Research, Development, Test and Evaluation, Defense-Wide”, $152,494,000 shall be made available for the Arrow missile defense program: Provided, That of this amount, $63,000,000 shall be available for the purpose of producing Arrow missile components in the United States and Arrow missile components and missiles in Israel to meet Israel’s defense requirements, consistent with each nation’s laws, regulations and procedures, and $25,000,000 shall be available for the purpose of the initiation of a joint feasibility study designated the Short Range Ballistic Missile Defense (SRBMD) initiative: Provided further, That funds made available under this provision for production of missiles and missile components may be transferred to appropriations available for the procurement of weapons and equipment, to be merged with and to be available for the same time period and the same purposes as the appropriation to which transferred: Provided further, That the transfer authority provided under this provision is in addition to any other transfer authority contained in this Act.

(INCLUDING TRANSFER OF FUNDS)

SEC. 8083. Of the amounts appropriated in this Act under the heading “Shipbuilding and Conversion, Navy”, $557,849,000 shall be available until September 30, 2007, to fund prior year shipbuilding cost increases: Provided, That upon enactment of this Act, the Secretary of the Navy shall transfer such funds to the following appropriations in the amounts specified: Provided further, That the amounts transferred shall be merged with and be available for the same purposes as the appropriations to which transferred:

To:

Under the heading “Shipbuilding and Conversion, Navy, 1999/2007”:

New SSN, $25,000,000;

LPD-17 Amphibious Transport Dock Ship Program, $22,400,000.

SEC. 8084. The Secretary of the Navy may settle, or compromise, and pay any and all admiralty claims under section 7622 of title 10, United States Code arising out of the collision involving the U.S.S. GREENEVILLE and the EHIME MARU, in any amount and without regard to the monetary limitations in subsections (a) and (b) of that section: Provided, That such payments shall be made from funds available to the Department of the Navy for operation and maintenance.

SEC. 8085. Notwithstanding any other provision of law or regulation, the Secretary of Defense may exercise the provisions of section 7403(g) of title 38, United States Code for occupations listed in section 7403(a)(2) of title 38, United States Code as well as the following:

Pharmacists, Audiologists, and Dental Hygienists.

(A) The requirements of section 7403(g)(1)(A) of title 38, United States Code shall apply.

(B) The limitations of section 7403(g)(1)(B) of title 38, United States Code shall not apply.

SEC. 8086. Funds appropriated by this Act, or made available by the transfer of funds in this Act, for intelligence activities are deemed to be specifically authorized by the Congress for purposes of section 504 of the National Security Act of 1947 (50 U.S.C. 414) during fiscal year 2007 until the enactment of the Intelligence Authorization Act for fiscal year 2007.

SEC. 8087. None of the funds in this Act may be used to initiate a new start program without prior written notification to the Office of Secretary of Defense and the congressional defense committees.

SEC. 8088. FINANCING AND FIELDING OF KEY ARMY CAPABILITIES.—The Department of Defense and the Department of the Army shall make future budgetary and programming plans to fully finance the Non-Line of Sight Future Force cannon and resupply vehicle program (NLOS-C) in order to field this system in fiscal year 2010, consistent with the broader plan to field the Future Combat System (FCS) in fiscal year 2010: Provided, That if the Army is precluded from fielding the FCS program by fiscal year 2010, then the Army shall develop the NLOS-C independent of the broader FCS development timeline to achieve fielding by fiscal year 2010. In addition the Army will deliver eight (8) combat operational pre-production NLOS-C systems by the end of calendar year 2008. These systems shall be in addition to those systems necessary for developmental and operational testing: Provided further, That the Army shall ensure that budgetary and programmatic plans will provide for no fewer than seven (7) Stryker Brigade Combat Teams.

SEC. 8089. Up to $2,000,000 of the funds appropriated under the heading “Operation and Maintenance, Navy” in this Act for the Pacific Missile Range Facility may be made available to contract for the repair, maintenance, and operation of adjacent off-base water, drainage, and flood control systems, electrical upgrade to support additional missions critical to base operations, and support for a range footprint expansion to further guard against encroachment.

SEC. 8090. The budget of the President for fiscal year 2008 submitted to the Congress pursuant to section 1105 of title 31, United States Code shall include separate budget justification documents for costs of United States Armed Forces’ participation in contingency operations for the Military Personnel accounts, the Operation and Maintenance accounts, and the Procurement accounts: Provided, That these documents shall include a description of the funding requested for each contingency operation, for each military service, to include all Active and Reserve components, and for each appropriations account: Provided further, That these documents shall include estimated costs for each element of expense or object class, a reconciliation of increases and decreases for each contingency operation, and programmatic data including, but not limited to, troop strength for each Active and Reserve component, and estimates of the major weapons systems deployed in support of each contingency: Provided further, That these documents shall include budget exhibits OP-5 and OP-32 (as defined in the Department of Defense Financial Management Regulation) for all contingency operations for the budget year and the two preceding fiscal years.

SEC. 8091. None of the funds in this Act may be used for research, development, test, evaluation, procurement or deployment of nuclear armed interceptors of a missile defense system.

SEC. 8092. Of the amounts provided in title II of this Act under the heading “Operation and Maintenance, Defense-Wide”, $20,000,000 is available for the Regional Defense Counter-terrorism Fellowship Program, to fund the education and training of foreign military officers, ministry of defense civilians, and other foreign security officials, to include United States military officers and civilian officials whose participation directly contributes to the education and training of these foreign students.

SEC. 8093. None of the funds appropriated or made available in this Act shall be used to reduce or disestablish the operation of the 53rd Weather Reconnaissance Squadron of the Air Force Reserve, if such action would reduce the WC-130 Weather Reconnaissance mission below the levels funded in this Act: Provided, That the Air Force shall allow the 53rd Weather Reconnaissance Squadron to perform other missions in support of national defense requirements during the non-hurricane season.

SEC. 8094. None of the funds provided in this Act shall be available for integration of foreign intelligence information unless the information has been lawfully collected and processed during the conduct of authorized foreign intelligence activities: Provided, That information pertaining to United States persons shall only be handled in accordance with protections provided in the Fourth Amendment of the United States Constitution as implemented through Executive Order No. 12333.

SEC. 8095. None of the funds available to the Department of Defense may be obligated to modify command and control relationships to give Fleet Forces Command administrative and operational control of U.S. Navy forces assigned to the Pacific fleet: Provided, That the command and control relationships which existed on October 1, 2004, shall remain in force unless changes are specifically authorized in a subsequent Act.

SEC. 8096. (a) At the time members of reserve components of the Armed Forces are called or ordered to active duty under section 12302(a) of title 10, United States Code, each member shall be notified in writing of the expected period during which the member will be mobilized.

(b) The Secretary of Defense may waive the requirements of subsection (a) in any case in which the Secretary determines that it is necessary to do so to respond to a national security emergency or to meet dire operational requirements of the Armed Forces.

(TRANSFER OF FUNDS)

SEC. 8097. The Secretary of Defense may transfer funds from any currently available Department of the Navy appropriation to any available Navy shipbuilding and conversion appropriation for the purpose of funding shipbuilding cost increases for any ship construction program, to be merged with and to be available for the same purposes and for the same time period as the appropriation to which transferred: Provided, That all transfers under this section shall be subject to the notification requirements applicable to transfers under section 8005 of this Act.

SEC. 8098. (a) The total amount appropriated or otherwise made available in title II of this Act is hereby reduced by $85,000,000 to limit excessive growth in the travel and transportation of persons.

(b) The Secretary of Defense shall allocate this reduction proportionately to each budget activity, activity group, subactivity group, and each program, project, and activity within each applicable appropriation account.

SEC. 8099. In addition to funds made available elsewhere in this Act, $5,500,000 is hereby appropriated and shall remain available until expended to provide assistance, by grant or otherwise (such as, but not limited to, the provision of funds for repairs, maintenance, construction, and/or for the purchase of information technology, text books, teaching resources), to public schools that have unusually high concentrations of special needs military dependents enrolled: Provided, That in selecting school systems to receive such assistance, special consideration shall be given to school systems in States that are considered overseas assignments, and all schools within these school systems shall be eligible for assistance: Provided further, That up to 2 percent of the total appropriated funds under this section shall be available to support the administration and execution of the funds or program and/or events that promote the purpose of this appropriation (e.g. payment of travel and per diem of school teachers attending conferences or a meeting that promotes the purpose of this appropriation and/or consultant fees for on-site training of teachers, staff, or Joint Venture Education Forum (JVEF) Committee members): Provided further, That up to $2,000,000 shall be available for the Department of Defense to establish a non-profit trust fund to assist in the public-private funding of public school repair and maintenance projects, or provide directly to non-profit organizations who in return will use these monies to provide assistance in the form of repair, maintenance, or renovation to public school systems that have high concentrations of special needs military dependents and are located in States that are considered overseas assignments: Provided further, That to the extent a Federal agency provides this assistance, by contract, grant, or otherwise, it may accept and expend non-Federal funds in combination with these Federal funds to provide assistance for the authorized purpose, if the non-Federal entity requests such assistance and the non-Federal funds are provided on a reimbursable basis.

SEC. 8100. The Secretary of the Air Force is authorized, using funds available under the heading "Operation and Maintenance, Air Force", to complete a phased repair project, which repairs may include upgrades and additions, to the infrastructure of the operational ranges managed by the Air Force in Alaska: Provided, That the total cost of such phased projects shall not exceed $50,000,000.

SEC. 8101. For purposes of section 612 of title 41, United States Code, any subdivision of appropriations made under the heading "Shipbuilding and Conversion, Navy" that is not closed at the time reimbursement is made shall be available to reimburse the Judgment Fund and shall be considered for the same purposes as any subdivision under the heading "Shipbuilding and Conversion, Navy" appropriations in the current fiscal year or any prior fiscal year.

SEC. 8102. (a) None of the funds appropriated by this Act may be used to transfer research and development, acquisition, or other program authority relating to current tactical unmanned aerial vehicles (TUAVs) from the Army.

(b) The Army shall retain responsibility for and operational control of the Extended Range Multi-Purpose (ERMP) Unmanned Aerial Vehicle (UAV) in order to support the Secretary of Defense in matters relating to the employment of unmanned aerial vehicles.

SEC. 8103. Of the funds provided in this Act, $10,000,000 shall be available for the operations and development of training and technology for the Joint Interagency Training Center-East and the affiliated Center for National Response at the Memorial Tunnel and for providing homeland defense/security and traditional warfighting training to the Department of Defense, other Federal agency, and State and local first responder personnel at the Joint Interagency Training Center-East.

SEC. 8104. The authority to conduct a cooperative program in the proviso in title II of Public Law 102-368 under the heading "Research, Development, Test and Evaluation, Defense Agencies" (106 Stat. 1121) shall be extended through September 30, 2008.

SEC. 8105. Up to $10,000,000 of the funds appropriated under the heading, "Operation and Maintenance, Navy" may be made available for the Asia Pacific Regional Initiative Program for the purpose of enabling the Pacific Command to execute Theater Security Cooperation activities such as humanitarian assistance, and payment of incremental and personnel costs of training and exercising with foreign security forces: Provided, That funds made available for this purpose may be used, notwithstanding any other funding authorities for humanitarian assistance, security assistance or combined exercise expenses: Provided further, That funds may not be obligated to provide assistance to any foreign country that is otherwise prohibited from receiving such type of assistance under any other provision of law.

SEC. 8106. The Secretary of Defense may present promotional materials, including a United States flag, to any member of an Active or Reserve component under the Secretary's jurisdiction who, as determined by the Secretary, participates in Operation Enduring Freedom or Operation Iraqi Freedom, along with other recognition items in conjunction with any week-long national observation and day of national celebration, if established by Presidential proclamation, for any such members returning from such operations.

SEC. 8107. Notwithstanding any other provision of this Act, to reflect savings from revised economic assumptions the total amount appropriated in title II of this Act is hereby reduced by $520,300,000, the total amount appropriated in title III of this Act is hereby reduced by $331,600,000, the total amount appropriated in title IV of this Act is hereby reduced by $317,000,000, the total amount appropriated in title V of this Act is hereby reduced by $9,700,000, and the total amount appropriated in title VI of this Act is hereby reduced by $93,700,000: Provided, That the Secretary of Defense shall allocate this reduction proportionally to each budget activity, activity group, sub-activity group, and each program, project, and activity, within each appropriation account.

SEC. 8108. (a) LIMITATION ON RETIREMENT PENDING REPORT ON BOMBER FORCE STRUCTURE.—No funds appropriated for the Department of Defense may be obligated or expended for retiring or dismantling any of the 93 B-52H bomber aircraft in service in the Air Force as of June 1, 2006, until 30 days after the Secretary of the Air Force transmits to the congressional defense committees a report on the bomber force structure of the Air Force meeting the requirements of subsection (b).

(b) ELEMENTS.—The report under subsection (a) shall set forth the following:

(1) The plan of the Air Force for the modernization of the B-52H bomber aircraft fleet.

(2) The plans of the Air Force for the modernization of the balance of the bomber force structure.

(3) The amount and type of bombers in the bomber force structure that is appropriate to meet the requirements of the national security strategy of the United States.

(4) An analysis and justification of the cost and projected savings of any reductions to the B-52H bomber fleet as a result of the retirement or dismantlement of the B-52H bomber aircraft covered by the report.

(5) The current assessments for the useful life of each of the bomber aircraft in the Air Force inventory under the Aircraft Structural Integrity Program, any flight restrictions against each of the bomber aircraft in the Air Force inventory, and an analysis of any funding required for modifications designed to correct a problem that threatens grounding all or a portion of that aircraft fleet.

(6) The date by which any new bomber aircraft must reach initial operational capability and the capabilities of the bomber force structure that would be replaced or superseded by any new bomber aircraft.

(7) An assessment of the likelihood that the development of a new bomber aircraft will meet the current schedule of reaching initial operational capability by 2018.

(8) An assessment of the risk to national security of retiring a substantial portion of our bomber fleet, including a consideration of the additional risk if the development of a new bomber aircraft does not meet the current schedule of reaching initial operational capability by 2018.

(c) PREPARATION OF REPORT.—A report under this section shall be prepared and submitted by the Institute of Defense Analysis to the Secretary of the Air Force for transmittal by the Secretary in accordance with subsection (a).

(d) FORM.—The report under subsection (a) shall be in unclassified form, but may include a classified annex.

SEC. 8109. Not later than December 31, 2006, the Secretary of Defense shall submit to the congressional defense committees a report setting forth the assessment of the Secretary regarding the Depleted Uranium Sensing and Treatment for Removal program of the Department of Defense.

SEC. 8137. Of the amount appropriated or otherwise made available by title IV under the heading "RESEARCH, DEVELOPMENT, TEST AND EVALUATION, DEFENSE-WIDE", up to $3,000,000 may be available for Small and Medium Caliber Recoil Mitigation Technologies (PE #1160402BB).

SEC. 8138. Of the amount appropriated or otherwise made available by title IV under the heading "RESEARCH, DEVELOPMENT, TEST AND EVALUATION, ARMY", up to $1,000,000 may be available for the Automated Communications Support System for WARFIGHTERS, Intelligence Community, Linguists, and Analysts.

SEC. 8139. No funds appropriated or otherwise made available by this Act may be used by the Government of the United States to enter into an agreement with the Government of Iraq that would subject members of the Armed Forces of the United States to the jurisdiction of Iraq criminal courts or punishment under Iraq law.

SEC. 8140. (a) REPORTS TO CONGRESS AND NOTICE TO PUBLIC ON EARMARKS IN FUNDS AVAILABLE TO THE DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE.—The Secretary of Defense shall submit to Congress, and post on the Internet website of the Department of Defense available to the public, information as follows:

(1) A description of each earmark of funds made available to the Department of Defense by this Act, including the location (by city, State, country, and congressional district if relevant) in which the earmarked funds are to be utilized, the purpose of such earmark (if known), and the recipient of such earmark.

(2) The total cost of administering each such earmark including the amount of such earmark, staff time, administrative expenses, and other costs.

(3) The total cost of administering all such earmarks.

(4) An assessment of the utility of each such earmark in meeting the goals of the Department, set forth using a rating system as follows:

(A) A for an earmark that directly advances the primary goals of the Department or an agency, element, or component of the Department.

(B) B for an earmark that advances many of the primary goals of the Department or an agency, element, or component of the Department.

(C) C for an earmark that may advance some of the primary goals of the Department or an agency, element, or component of the Department.

(D) D for an earmark that cannot be demonstrated as being cost-effective in advancing the primary goals of the Department or any agency, element, or component of the Department.

(E) E for an earmark that distracts from or otherwise impedes that capacity of the Department to meet the primary goals of the Department.

(b)  earmark DEFINED.—In this section, the term “earmark” means a provision of law, or a directive contained within a joint explanatory statement or report accompanying a conference report or bill (as applicable), that specifies the identity of an entity, program, project, or service, including a defense system, to receive assistance not requested by the President and the amount of the assistance to be so received.

SEC. 8141. Of the amount appropriated or otherwise made available by title IV under the heading “RESEARCH, DEVELOPMENT, TEST AND EVALUATION, ARMY”, up to $1,000,000 may be available for Program Element 0602787A for blast protection research.

SEC. 8142. Of the amount appropriated or otherwise made available by title IV under the heading “RESEARCH, DEVELOPMENT, TEST AND EVALUATION, ARMY”, up to $10,000,000 may be available for the Combat Support Hospital-Mobile Support Hospital.

SEC. 8144. None of the funds appropriated or otherwise made available by this Act may be obligated or expended by the United States Government for a purpose as follows:

(1) To establish any military installation or base for the purpose of providing for the permanent stationing of United States Armed Forces in Iraq.

(2) To exercise United States control over any oil resource of Iraq.

SEC. 8145. Of the amount appropriated by title IV under the heading “RESEARCH, DEVELOPMENT, TEST AND EVALUATION, ARMY”, up to $10,000,000 may be available for experimentation and refinement of tactics and doctrine in the use of the Class IV unmanned aerial vehicles and ground stations associated with such vehicles.

SEC. 8146. Of the amount appropriated by title IV under the heading “RESEARCH, DEVELOPMENT, TEST AND EVALUATION, ARMY”, up to $10,000,000 may be available for Combat Vehicle and Automotive Technology.

SEC. 8147. Of the amount appropriated or otherwise made available by title III under the heading “SHIPBUILDING AND CONVERSION, NAVY”, up to $10,000,000 may be available for the Carrier Replacement Program for advance procurement of nuclear propulsion equipment.

SEC. 8148. (a) Except as provided in subsection (b), the Secretary of the Air Force shall, not later than March 31, 2007, submit to the congressional defense committees a cost-benefit analysis of significant proposed realignments or closures of research and development or test and evaluation installations, activities, facilities, laboratories, units, functions, or capabilities of the Air Force. The analysis shall include an evaluation of missions served and alternatives considered and of the benefits, costs, risks, and other considerations associated with each such proposed realignment or closure.

(b) The requirement under subsection (a) does not apply to realignment and closure activities carried out in accordance with the final recommendations of the Defense Base Closure and Realignment Commission under the 2005 round of defense base closure and realignment.

SEC. 8149. (a) Of the amount appropriated or otherwise made available by title II under the heading “OPERATION AND MAINTENANCE, DEFENSE-WIDE”, up to $2,000,000 may be available for the Office of Economic Adjustment of the Department of Defense to conduct a traffic study on the improvements that are required to be carried out to the transportation infrastructure around Fort Belvoir, Virginia, to accommodate the increase in the workforce located on and around Fort Belvoir resulting from decisions implemented under the 2005 round of defense base closure and realignment. The study shall incorporate the input of the Virginia Department of Transportation and other State and local governments and agencies.

(b) Not later than one year after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Defense shall submit to the congressional defense committees a report on the study conducted under subsection (a), including a cost estimate for such improvements and the funding sources, including the Defense Access Road Program, proposed for such improvements.

SEC. 8150. Of the amount appropriated or otherwise made available by title III under the heading “PROCUREMENT, DEFENSE-WIDE”, up to $12,600,000 may be available for the completion of the final phase of the activity described on pages 337 through 339 of Volume II of Book I of the Fiscal Year 2007 Congressional Budget Justification Book of a component of the intelligence community.

SEC. 8151. Of the amount appropriated or otherwise made available by title IV under the heading “RESEARCH, DEVELOPMENT, TEST AND EVALUATION, ARMY”, $1,000,000 may be available for the Portable Battery Operated Solid-State Electrochemical Oxygen Generator project for the purpose of developing a field-portable oxygen generation device to enable the quick administration of oxygen to members of the Armed Forces wounded in action.

SEC. 8152. Of the amount appropriated or otherwise made available by title IV under the heading “RESEARCH, DEVELOPMENT, TEST AND EVALUATION, NAVY”, up to $1,000,000 may be available for Energy Regeneration and Conversion Fuel Cell Systems to address Navy Unmanned Underwater Vehicle requirements.

SEC. 8153. ROYALTY RELIEF FOR PRODUCTION OF OIL AND GAS.—(a) PRICE THRESHOLDS.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the Secretary of the Interior shall place limitations based on market price on the royalty relief granted under any lease for the production of oil or natural gas on Federal land (including submerged land) entered into by the Secretary of the Interior on or after the date of enactment of this Act.

(b) CLARIFICATION OF AUTHORITY TO IMPOSE PRICE THRESHOLDS FOR CERTAIN LEASE SALES.—Congress reaffirms the authority of the Secretary of the Interior under section 8(a)(1)(H) of the Outer Continental Shelf Lands Act (43 U.S.C. 1337(a)(1)(H)) to vary, based on the price of production from a lease, the suspension of royalties under any lease subject to section 304 of the Outer Continental Shelf Deep Water Royalty Relief Act (Public Law 104-58; 43 U.S.C. 1337 note).

SEC. 8154. Of the amount appropriated or otherwise made available by title IV under the heading “RESEARCH, DEVELOPMENT, TEST AND EVALUATION, ARMY”, up to $1,000,000 may be available for Program Element 0602105A for Thermoplastic Composite Body Armor research.

SEC. 8155. Of the amount appropriated or otherwise made available by title II under the heading “OPERATION AND MAINTENANCE, ARMY NATIONAL GUARD”, up to $7,500,000 may be available to renovate and repair existing barracks at Camp Perry, Port Clinton, Ohio.

GENERAL PROVISIONS, THIS TITLE

SEC. 9001. Appropriations provided in this title are available for obligation until September 30, 2007, unless otherwise so provided in this title.

SEC. 9002. Notwithstanding any other provision of law or of this Act, funds made available in this title are in addition to amounts provided elsewhere in this Act.

(TRANSFER OF FUNDS)

SEC. 9003. Upon his determination that such action is necessary in the national interest, the Secretary of Defense may transfer between appropriations up to $2,500,000,000 of the funds made available to the Department of Defense in this title: Provided, That the Secretary shall notify the Congress promptly of each transfer made pursuant to the authority in this section: Provided further, That the authority provided in this section is in addition to any other transfer authority available to the Department of Defense and is subject to the same terms and conditions as the authority provided in section 8005 of this Act.

SEC. 9004. Funds appropriated in this title, or made available by the transfer of funds in or pursuant to this title, for intelligence activities are deemed to be specifically authorized by the Congress for purposes of section 504 of the National Security Act of 1947 (50 U.S.C. 414).

SEC. 9005. None of the funds provided in this title may be used to finance programs or activities denied by Congress in fiscal years 2006 or 2007 appropriations to the Department of Defense or to initiate a procurement or research, development, test and evaluation new start program without prior written notification to the congressional defense committees.

SEC. 9006. (a) From funds made available in this title to the Department of Defense, not to exceed $500,000,000 may be used, notwithstanding any other provision of law, to fund the Commander's Emergency Response Program, for the purpose of enabling military commanders in Iraq to respond to urgent humanitarian relief and reconstruction requirements within their areas of responsibility by carrying out programs that will immediately assist the Iraqi people, and to fund a similar program to assist the people of Afghanistan.

(b) QUARTERLY REPORTS.—Not later than 15 days after the end of each fiscal year quarter (beginning with the first quarter of fiscal year 2007), the Secretary of Defense shall submit to the congressional defense committees a report regarding the source of funds and the allocation and use of funds during that quarter that were made available pursuant to the authority provided in this section or under any other provision of law for the purposes of the programs under subsection (a).

SEC. 9007. Amounts provided in this title for operations in Iraq and Afghanistan may be used by the Department of Defense for the purchase of up to 20 heavy and light armored vehicles for force protection purposes, notwithstanding price or other limitations specified elsewhere in this Act, or any other provision of law: Provided, That the Secretary of Defense shall submit a report in writing no later than 30 days after the end of each fiscal quarter notifying the congressional defense committees of any purchase described in this section, including the cost, purposes, and quantities of vehicles purchased.

SEC. 9008. During the current fiscal year, funds available to the Department of Defense for operation and maintenance may be used, notwithstanding any other provision of law, to provide supplies, services, transportation, including airlift and sealfit, and other logistical support to coalition forces supporting military and stability operations in Iraq and Afghanistan: Provided, That the Secretary of Defense shall provide quarterly reports to the congressional defense committees regarding support provided under this section.

SEC. 9009. Supervision and administration costs associated with a construction project funded with appropriations available for operation and maintenance, and executed in direct support of the Global War on Terrorism only in Iraq and Afghanistan, may be obligated at the time a construction contract is awarded: Provided, That for the purpose of this section, supervision and administration costs include all in-house Government costs.

SEC. 9010. (a) Not later than 60 days after the date of the enactment of this Act and every 90 days thereafter through the end of fiscal year 2007, the Secretary of Defense shall set forth in a report to Congress a comprehensive set of performance indicators and measures for progress toward military and political stability in Iraq.

(b) The report shall include performance standards and goals for security, economic, and security force training objectives in Iraq together with a notional timetable for achieving these goals.

(c) In specific, the report requires, at a minimum, the following:

(1) With respect to stability and security in Iraq, the following:

(A) Key measures of political stability, including the important political milestones that must be achieved over the next several years.

(B) The primary indicators of a stable security environment in Iraq, such as number of engagements per day, numbers of trained Iraqi forces, and trends relating to numbers and types of ethnic and religious-based hostile encounters.

(C) An assessment of the estimated strength of the insurgency in Iraq and the extent to which it is composed of non-Iraqi fighters.

(D) A description of all militias operating in Iraq, including the number, size, equipment strength, military effectiveness, sources of support, legal status, and efforts to disarm or reintegrate each militia.

(E) Key indicators of economic activity that should be considered the most important for determining the prospects of stability in Iraq, including—

- (i) unemployment levels;
- (ii) electricity, water, and oil production rates; and
- (iii) hunger and poverty levels.

(F) The criteria the Administration will use to determine when it is safe to begin withdrawing United States forces from Iraq.

(2) With respect to the training and performance of security forces in Iraq, the following:

(A) The training provided Iraqi military and other Ministry of Defense forces and the equipment used by such forces.

(B) Key criteria for assessing the capabilities and readiness of the Iraqi military and other Ministry of Defense forces, goals for achieving certain capability and readiness levels (as well as for recruiting, training, and equipping these forces), and the milestones and notional timetable for achieving these goals.

(C) The operational readiness status of the Iraqi military forces, including the type, number, size, and organizational structure of Iraqi battalions that are—

- (i) capable of conducting counterinsurgency operations independently;
- (ii) capable of conducting counterinsurgency operations with the support of United States or coalition forces; or
- (iii) not ready to conduct counterinsurgency operations.

(D) The rates of absenteeism in the Iraqi military forces and the extent to which insurgents have infiltrated such forces.

(E) The training provided Iraqi police and other Ministry of Interior forces and the equipment used by such forces.

(F) Key criteria for assessing the capabilities and readiness of the Iraqi police and other Ministry of Interior forces, goals for achieving certain capability and readiness levels (as well as for recruiting, training, and equipping), and the milestones and notional timetable for achieving these goals, including—

(i) the number of police recruits that have received classroom training and the duration of such instruction;

(ii) the number of veteran police officers who have received classroom instruction and the duration of such instruction;

(iii) the number of police candidates screened by the Iraqi Police Screening Service, the number of candidates derived from other entry procedures, and the success rates of those groups of candidates;

(iv) the number of Iraqi police forces who have received field training by international police trainers and the duration of such instruction; and

(v) attrition rates and measures of absenteeism and infiltration by insurgents.

(G) The estimated total number of Iraqi battalions needed for the Iraqi security forces to perform duties now being undertaken by coalition forces, including defending the borders of Iraq and providing adequate levels of law and order throughout Iraq.

(H) The effectiveness of the Iraqi military and police officer cadres and the chain of command.

(I) The number of United States and coalition advisors needed to support the Iraqi security forces and associated ministries.

(J) An assessment, in a classified annex if necessary, of United States military requirements, including planned force rotations, through the end of calendar year 2007.

SEC. 9011. Amounts provided in chapters 1 and 2 of this title are designated as making appropriations for contingency operations directly related to the global war on terrorism, and other unanticipated defense-related operations, pursuant to section 402 of H. Con. Res. 376 (109th Congress), as made applicable to the House of Representatives by H. Res. 818 (109th Congress) and are designated as an emergency requirement pursuant to section 402 of S. Con. Res. 83 (109th Congress), the concurrent resolution on the budget for fiscal year 2007, as made applicable in the Senate by section 7035 of Public Law 109-234: Provided, That the amounts provided in chapters 3, 4, 5, and 6 of this title are available immediately upon enactment of this Act.

SEC. 9012. (a) ADDITIONAL AMOUNT FOR ARMY AND MARINE CORPS FOR EQUIPMENT RESET.—In addition to amounts provided by other provisions of this title, $7,800,000,000 is provided to the Army, and $5,300,000,000 is provided to the Marine Corps, to fund equipment reset requirements resulting from continuing combat operations.

(b) DESIGNATION AS EMERGENCY REQUIREMENTS.—The amounts provided under subsection (a) are designated as appropriations for contingency operations directly related to the Global War on Terrorism, and other unanticipated defense-related operations, pursuant to section 402 of H. Con. Res. 376 (109th Congress), as made applicable to the House of Representatives by H. Con. Res. 818 (109th Congress), and are designated as an emergency requirement pursuant to section 402 of S. Con. Res. 83 (109th Congress), the concurrent resolution on the budget for fiscal year 2007, as made applicable in the Senate by section 7035 of Public Law 109-234.

SEC. 9013. Of the amount appropriated or otherwise made available by chapter 2 of this title under the heading "OPERATION AND MAINTENANCE, ARMY NATIONAL GUARD", up to $6,700,000 may be available for the pilot program of the Army National Guard on the reintegration of members of the National Guard into civilian life after deployment.

SEC. 9014. (a) Of the amount appropriated or otherwise made available by chapter 2 of this title under the heading "OPERATION AND MAINTENANCE, ARMY", up to $9,000,000 may be made available for the procurement of hemostatic agents, including blood clotting bandages and invasive hemostatic agents, for use by members of the Armed Forces in the field.

(b) Of the amount appropriated or otherwise made available by such chapter under the heading "OPERATION AND MAINTENANCE, MARINE CORPS", up to $2,000,000 may be made available for the procurement of hemostatic agents and invasive hemostatic agents, including blood clotting bandages, for use by members of the Armed Forces in the field.

SEC. 9015. Of the amount appropriated or otherwise made available by this Act by reason of the adoption of Senate Amendment 4751 (referred to as the "Stevens amendment"), $2,440,000,000 is available for the National Guard for National Guard and Reserve equipment. Such amount is in addition to any other amounts available in this title, or under title III under the heading "OTHER PROCUREMENT, ARMY", for National Guard and Reserve equipment.

SEC. 9016. (a) Not later than 30 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Defense shall submit to the appropriate committees of Congress a report setting forth procedures and guidelines of the Department of Defense to protect United States military and civilian personnel should sectarian violence further increase in Iraq.

(b) FORM.—The report required by subsection (a) may be submitted in classified form.

(c) APPROPRIATE COMMITTEES OF CONGRESS DEFINED.—In this section, the term "appropriate committees of Congress" means—

(1) the Committee on Armed Services, the Committee on Foreign Relations, the Select Committee on Intelligence, and the Committee on Appropriations of the Senate; and

(2) the Committee on Armed Services, the Committee on International Relations, the Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence, and the Committee on Appropriations of the House of Representatives.

SEC. 9017. (a) Congress makes the following findings:

(1) Despite the signing of the Darfur Peace Agreement on May 5, 2006, the violence in Darfur, Sudan, continues to escalate and threatens to spread to other areas of Sudan and throughout the region.

(2) The African Union Mission in Sudan (AMIS) currently serves as the primary security force in Sudan, but is undermanned and under-equipped.

(3) Although the United Nations has approved sending a peacekeeping force to Darfur, the African Union Mission in Sudan (AMIS) will need to expand its manpower and capability in order to assist or serve as a bridge force until the United Nations peacekeeping force can be deployed.

(b) The amount appropriated or otherwise made available by chapter 2 of this title under the heading "OPERATION AND MAINTENANCE, DEFENSE-WIDE" is hereby increased by $20,000,000.

(c) Of the amount appropriated or otherwise made available by chapter 2 of this title under the heading "OPERATION AND MAINTENANCE, DEFENSE-WIDE", as increased by subsection (b), $20,000,000 may be available—

(1) to assist in the training, support, and equipping of the African Union Mission in Sudan (AMIS) to bolster its efforts to protect the civilian population in Darfur;

(2) to facilitate the air-lifting of AMIS forces into the Darfur region as quickly as possible; and

(3) to assist and expand the logistics capability of the African Union Mission in Sudan (AMIS).

(d) The amount made available by subsection (b) is designated as appropriations for contingency operations directly related to the global war on terrorism, and other unanticipated defense-related operations, pursuant to section 402 of H. Con. Res. 376 (109th Congress), as made applicable to the House of Representatives by H. Res. 818 (109th Congress) and is designated as an emergency requirement pursuant to section 402 of S. Con. Res. 83 (109th Congress), the concurrent resolution on the budget for fiscal year 2007, as made applicable in the Senate by section 7035 of Public Law 109-234.

(e) The Secretary of Defense may transfer funds made available by subsection (b) to other appropriations to accomplish the purposes of this section. This transfer authority is in addition to any other transfer authority available to the Department of Defense. The Secretary shall, not fewer than five days prior to making transfers from this appropriation account, notify the congressional defense committees in writing of the details of any such transfer.

SEC. 9018. (a) ADDITIONAL AMOUNT FOR AIRCRAFT PROCUREMENT, AIR FORCE.—The amount appropriated by chapter 3 of this title under the heading "AIRCRAFT PROCUREMENT, AIR FORCE" is hereby increased by $65,400,000, with the amount of the increase designated as appropriations for contingency operations directly related to the Global War on Terrorism, and other unanticipated defense-related operations, pursuant to section 402 of H. Con. Res. 376 (109th Congress), as made applicable to the House of Representatives by H. Con. Res. 818 (109th Congress) and designated as an emergency requirement pursuant to section 402 of S. Con. Res. 83 (109th Congress), the concurrent resolution on the budget for fiscal year 2007, as made applicable in the Senate by Section 7035 of Public Law 109-234.

(b) AVAILABILITY FOR PROCUREMENT OF PREDATORS.—Of the amount appropriated by chapter 3 of this title under the heading "AIRCRAFT PROCUREMENT, AIR FORCE", as increased by subsection (a), up to $65,400,000 may be available for procurement of Predators for Special Operations forces.

(c) SUPPLEMENT NOT SUPPLANT.—The amount available under subsection (b) for the purpose specified in that subsection is in addition to any other amounts available in this Act for that purpose.

This Act may be cited as the "Department of Defense Appropriations Act, 2007".

MEASURES READ FIRST TIME—S. 3882 and H.R. 503

Mr. MCCONNELL. Mr. President, I understand there are two bills at the desk, and I ask for their first reading en bloc.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will read the bills for the first time.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 3882) to amend Title 18, United States Code, to support the war on terrorism, and for other purposes.

A bill (H.R. 503) to amend the Horse Protection Act to prohibit the shipping, transporting, moving, delivering, receiving, possessing, purchasing, selling, or donation of horses and other equines to be slaughtered for human consumption, and for other purposes.

Mr. MCCONNELL. Mr. President, I ask for a second reading, and in order to place the bills on the calendar under the provisions of rule XIV, I object to my own request.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is heard.

MEASURES PLACED ON CAL- ENDAR—S. 3861, S. 3873, S. 3874, S. 3875, S. 3876, and S. 3877

Mr. MCCONNELL. Mr. President, I understand there are six bills at the desk due for a second reading.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will read the bills for the second time.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 3861) to facilitate bringing to justice terrorists and other unlawful enemy combatants through full and fair trials by military commissions, and for other purposes.

A bill (S. 3873) to protect private property rights.

A bill (S. 3874) to provide in statute for the conduct of electronic surveillance of suspected terrorists for the purposes of protecting the American people, the Nation, and its interests from terrorist attack while ensuring that the civil liberties of United States citizens are safeguarded, and for other purposes.

A bill (S. 3875) to provide real national security, restore United States leadership, and implement tough and smart policies to win the war on terror, and for other purposes.

A bill (S. 3876) entitled the "National Security Surveillance Act."

A bill (S. 3877) entitled the "Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Improvement and Enhancement Act of 2006."

Mr. MCCONNELL. Mr. President, in order to place the bills on the calendar under the provisions of rule XIV, I object to further proceeding en bloc.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is heard. The bills will be placed on the calendar.

PAYING TRIBUTE TO REVEREND WAITSTILL SHARP AND MARTHA SHARP

Mr. MCCONNELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the consideration of S. Res. 562, which was submitted earlier today.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the resolution by title.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

A resolution (S. Res. 562) paying tribute to Reverend Waitstill Sharp and Martha Sharp for their recognition by Yad Vashem Holocaust Martyrs' and Heroes' Remembrance Authority as Righteous Among the Nations for their heroic efforts to save Jews during the Holocaust.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the resolution.

Mr. MCCONNELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the resolution be agreed to, the preamble be agreed to, and the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The resolution (S. Res. 562) was agreed to.

The preamble was agreed to.

The resolution, with its preamble, reads as follows:

S. RES. 562

Whereas on June 13, 2006, the Yad Vashem Holocaust Martyrs' and Heroes' Remembrance Authority in Israel, an organization dedicated to preserving the memory of Holocaust victims, honored the Reverend Waitstill Sharp, and his wife, Martha Sharp, posthumously as "Righteous Among the Nations" for risking their lives to save Jews during the Holocaust;

Whereas the Sharps had to leave their 2-year-old daughter and 6-year-old son in the care of family and congregants in Wellesley,

Massachusetts to answer a call from leaders of the American Unitarian Association to go to Czechoslovakia in February 1939 to provide humanitarian assistance for the tens of thousands of refugees crowding into Prague;

Whereas Martha Sharp was a social worker trained at the Jane Addams Hull House, a community service organization in Chicago, Illinois, and the Reverend Waitstill Sharp was a Harvard-educated lawyer and a Sunday school teacher who was inspired to become a Unitarian minister;

Whereas after their arrival in Czechoslovakia the Sharps immediately grasped that they needed not only to help feed refugees, but also to assist Jews and opponents of the Nazi regime escape to safety elsewhere in Europe;

Whereas the Sharps refused to leave Prague when, in March 1939, a month after the Sharps' arrival, the Nazis occupied Czechoslovakia, making the Sharps' work more urgent, more complicated, and more dangerous;

Whereas the Sharps insisted on continuing their life-saving mission by working out of private residences even after April 1939, when the Nazis ransacked the office of the Unitarian mission in Prague and threw the furniture into the street;

Whereas the Sharps repeatedly risked their own safety to exit and re-enter Nazi-occupied Czechoslovakia, crisscrossed Europe to obtain the travel documents necessary to help Jews and opponents of the Nazi regime escape Czechoslovakia, and even escorted some refugees by train through Germany to the United Kingdom;

Whereas the Sharps were determined to complete their 6-month mission, even after warnings that the Gestapo was searching for them;

Whereas the Sharps stayed in Czechoslovakia until August 30, 1939, 1 day before Gestapo agents came to arrest Martha Sharp, who had become known for her boldness at evading Nazi rules restricting travel;

Whereas upon the Sharps' return in 1940 to their family and the Wellesley Hills Unitarian Church in Massachusetts, their report to the American Unitarian Association about the imminent danger posed by the Nazis to refugees across Europe led to the Sharps being asked to establish a similar operation in France under the newly founded Unitarian Service Committee;

Whereas the Sharps returned to Europe in 1940 fully aware of the Nazi terror they would face;

Whereas the Sharps had a special interest in saving refugee children, as well as artists, intellectuals, and political dissidents, and the Sharps and the Unitarian colleagues who followed in their footsteps set up systems and escape routes that functioned throughout World War II to assist approximately 2,000 men, women, and children to gain freedom;

Whereas the famous Jewish novelist, Lion Feuchtwanger, who was one of the first Germans to have his citizenship revoked after Hitler came to power and whose name topped the Gestapo's "Surrender on Demand" list, was one of the first people the Sharps helped in a dramatic and dangerous escape from France;

Whereas Eva Rosemarie Feigl, who was 14 in December 1940 when Martha Sharp helped her and 28 other children reach safety in the United States, provided eye-witness testimony that enabled the Yad Vashem Holocaust Martyrs' and Heroes' Remembrance Authority in Jerusalem, Israel, to honor the Sharps as Righteous Among the Nations;

Whereas when the Sharps' plans to set up the first office of the newly formed Unitarian Service Committee in Paris, France failed as a result of the Nazi occupation of France, the Sharps instead established an operation in neutral Portugal, where throughout World War II Lisbon remained the last hope for refugees seeking safe passage out of Nazi-occupied territory;

Whereas the Sharps recognized that they were dependent upon a much larger circle of friends and colleagues who made their heroism possible, such as the people who cared for the Sharps' children, the members of the congregation in Wellesley, Massachusetts who maintained the Wellesley Hills Unitarian Church in the Sharps' absence, ordinary Unitarians who financed their cause, ministers across the United States who urged their congregations to become sponsors for refugees, and secretaries who volunteered in Europe and the United States to maintain thousands of case files for refugees;

Whereas the Sharps' efforts resulted not only in the rescue of thousands of people, but in the creation of what is now known as the Unitarian Universalist Service Committee, an institution that multiplied the number of rescues a thousand-fold in the years that followed;

Whereas at the Yad Vashem ceremony that honored the Sharps as Righteous Among the Nations on June 13, 2006, in Israel, officials specifically recognized the Sharps' courage in going into the heart of Europe when World War II was unfolding and many people were fleeing;

Whereas Martha Sharp was the first American woman to be named Righteous Among the Nations, and the Reverend Waitstill Sharp and Martha Sharp were only the second and third individuals named Righteous Among the Nations who were United States citizens at the time they performed the deeds for which they were honored;

Whereas the Sharps' daughter, Martha Sharp Joukowsky, accepted the Yad Vashem honor on behalf of her parents and remarked that they were "modest and ordinary people, who responded to the suffering and needs around them . . . as they would have expected everyone to do in a similar situation";

Whereas Martha Sharp Joukowsky added that the honor given to her parents is also about "the unseen efforts of a much wider circle of people who made their work possible" and that it "is the kind of network that is needed again today to stop the slow genocide in Darfur";

Whereas Martha Sharp Joukowsky concluded her remarks by saying, "Let this celebration about my parents stand as a call to action";

Whereas September 9, 2006, marks the second anniversary of the United States Government declaring the violence in Darfur, Sudan to be genocide; and

Whereas the Sharps deserve honor for their example and for helping to found an institution, the Unitarian Universalist Service Committee, that today carries on their work in distant corners of the world and asks for the Righteous Among the Nations to help save Darfur now: Now, therefore, be it

(1) recognizes the Reverend Waitstill Sharp and Martha Sharp as genuine American heroes;

(2) pays tribute to the Reverend Waitstill Sharp and Martha Sharp as their names are added to the Wall of Rescuers in the permanent exhibition of the United States Holocaust Memorial Museum on September 14, 2006;

(3) commends the organization founded to support the Sharps' work, the Unitarian Universalist Service Committee, for its efforts to rescue Jews and opponents of the Nazi regime in Europe from 1939 to 1945 and for carrying on the Sharps' legacy by working to save the lives of the people of Darfur, Sudan and to protect human rights worldwide; and

(4) requests the Secretary of the Senate to transmit an enrolled copy of this resolution to the Joukowsky family of Providence, Rhode Island, the direct descendants of the Reverend Waitstill Sharp and Martha Sharp, and to the Unitarian Universalist Service Committee of Cambridge, Massachusetts.

NATIONAL CELIAC DISEASE AWARENESS DAY

Mr. MCCONNELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the consideration of S. Res. 563, which was submitted earlier today.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the resolution by title.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

A resolution (S. Res. 563) designating September 13, 2006, as "National Celiac Disease Awareness Day".

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the resolution.

Mr. INHOFE. Mr. President, I rise today, along with my colleague, BEN NELSON, to urge support for resolution designating September 13, 2006, as National Celiac Disease Awareness Day. We come before the Senate today to seek your help in raising awareness of celiac disease. Celiac disease hits very close to home for me as I have a staffer with the disease and an Oklahoma Celiac Support Group working to promote awareness in my great State. There are many groups and organizations working to promote celiac disease, and we applaud all their efforts. We would like to give special thanks to Heather Cline, President, with the Oklahoma Celiac Support Group, and Tom Sullivan, President, and Mary Schluckebier, Executive Director, with the Celiac Sprue Association, located in Nebraska, for their help with this resolution and great work promoting awareness.

Celiac disease is an autoimmune disorder and a malabsorption disease that affects an estimated 2.2 million Americans which could mean as many as 22,000 in the State of Oklahoma. Celiac disease is, essentially, intolerance to gluten, a protein found in wheat, rye, oats and barley, as well as some medicines and vitamins. When exposed to gluten, the villi of the small intestine are damaged, interfering with the absorption of nutrients. Other problems can occur as a result of damage to the small intestine, including malnutrition, anemia, lymphoma, and adenocarcinoma, osteoporosis, miscarriage and congenital malformation, and short stature. Celiac disease is also linked other autoimmune disorders such as thyroid disease, systemic lupus erythematosus, type 1 diabetes, liver disease, collagen vascular disease, rheumatoid arthritis and Sjögren's syndrome.

Celiac disease has been widely underdiagnosed and misdiagnosed until recently thanks to an increase in research regarding the disease. It is easily detectable through tests measuring the blood for abnormally high levels of the antibodies of immunoglobulin A, anti-tissue transglutaminase and IgA anti-endomysium antibodies. Of the 2.2 million Americans who have celiac disease, 97 percent are currently undiagnosed, according to the University of Chicago Celiac Disease Program. Often the symptoms are attributed to other conditions as many doctors lack sufficient knowledge about the disease. In a study published by the American Journal of Gastroenterology, the average length of time for a symptomatic person to be diagnosed with celiac disease is eleven years, dramatically increasing an individual's risk of developing more serious conditions. To compound the situation, according to a study by Dr. Allesio Fasano, published in the Archives of Internal Medicine, sixty percent of children and forty-one percent of adults diagnosed with celiac disease are asymptomatic, showing no symptoms of the disease.

Treatment for celiac disease involves following a gluten-free diet. The good news is that the treatment for celiac disease is highly effective. In most sufferers, the small intestines heal completely. However, failure to properly diagnose celiac disease could lead to some of the issues mentioned earlier, and most often malnutrition.

Awareness can go a long way toward diagnosing and treating the millions of suffers of celiac disease both in my home state of Oklahoma and across the nation. Therefore, we ask you to join us in this effort to raise awareness of celiac disease.

Mr. MCCONNELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the resolution be agreed to, the preamble be agreed to, and the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The resolution (S. Res. 563) was agreed to.

The preamble was agreed to.

The resolution, with its preamble, reads as follows:

S. RES. 563

Whereas celiac disease affects 2,200,000 people in the United States, including 1 in 33 healthy people;

Whereas celiac disease is an intolerance to gluten, a protein found in wheat, rye, oats, and barley, as well as some medicines and vitamins;

Whereas exposure to gluten damages the villi of the small intestine, interfering with the absorption of nutrients in food;

Whereas celiac disease is an autoimmune disorder and a malabsorption disease;

Whereas celiac disease is a genetic disease, with 1 in 22 people having a first-degree relative with celiac disease;

Whereas the average length of time it takes for a symptomatic person to be diagnosed with celiac disease is 11 years;

Whereas celiac disease is often misdiagnosed and underdiagnosed due to the fact that symptoms can be attributed to other conditions and many doctors are not very knowledgeable about the disease;

Whereas, according to a study, 60 percent of children and 41 percent of adults diagnosed with celiac disease were asymptomatic;

Whereas celiac disease is diagnosed through tests measuring the blood for abnormally high levels of the antibodies of immunoglobulin A, anti-tissue transglutaminase, and IgA anti-endomysium antibodies;

Whereas celiac disease is treated by following a gluten-free diet;

Whereas damage to the small intestine leads to an increased risk for malnutrition, anemia, lymphoma and adenocarcinoma, osteoporosis, miscarriage and congenital malformation, and short stature;

Whereas celiac disease is linked to many autoimmune disorders, including thyroid disease, systemic lupus erythematosus, type 1 diabetes, liver disease, collagen vascular disease, rheumatoid arthritis, and Sjögren's syndrome;

Whereas the connection between celiac disease and diet was first established by Dr. Samuel Gee, who was born on September 13, 1839;

Whereas the Senate is an institution that can raise awareness in the general public and the medical community of celiac disease: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Senate—

(1) designates September 13, 2006, as "National Celiac Disease Awareness Day";

(2) recognizes that all people of the United States should become more informed and aware of celiac disease;

(3) calls upon the people of the United States to observe the date with appropriate ceremonies and activities; and

(4) respectfully requests the Secretary of the Senate to transmit a copy of this resolution to the Celiac Sprue Association, the American Celiac Society, the Celiac Disease Foundation, the Gluten Intolerance Group of North America, and the Oklahoma Celiac Support Group.

NATIONAL POLYCYSTIC KIDNEY DISEASE AWARENESS WEEK

Mr. MCCONNELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the consideration of S. Res. 564 which was submitted earlier today.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the resolution by title.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

A resolution (S. Res. 564) designating September 10 through September 16, 2006, as "National Polycystic Kidney Disease Awareness Week" and supporting the goals and ideals of a National Polycystic Kidney Disease Awareness Week to raise public awareness and understanding of polycystic kidney disease and to foster understanding of the impact polycystic kidney disease has on patients and future generations of their families.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the resolution.

Mr. MCCONNELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent the resolution be agreed to, the preamble be agreed to, and the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The resolution (S. Res. 564) was agreed to.

The preamble was agreed to.

The resolution, with its preamble, reads as follows:

S. RES. 564

Whereas polycystic kidney disease (known as "PKD") is the most prevalent life-threatening genetic disease in the United States, is a severe, dominantly inherited disease that has a devastating impact, in both human and economic terms, on people of all ages, and affects equally people of all races, sexes, nationalities, geographic locations, and income levels;

Whereas, based on prevalence estimates by the National Institutes of Health, it is estimated that about 600,000 patients in the United States have a genetic inheritance from 1 or both parents called polycystic kidney disease, and that countless additional friends, loved ones, spouses, and caregivers must shoulder the physical, emotional, and financial burdens that polycystic kidney disease causes;

Whereas polycystic kidney disease, for which there is no cure, is 1 of the 4 leading causes of kidney failure in the United States;

Whereas the vast majority of polycystic kidney disease patients reach kidney failure at an average age of 53, causing a severe strain on dialysis and kidney transplantation resources and on the delivery of health care in the United States, as the largest segment of the population of the United States, the "baby boomers", continues to age;

Whereas end stage renal disease is one of the fastest growing components of the Medicare budget, and polycystic kidney disease contributes to that cost by an estimated $2,000,000,000 annually for dialysis, kidney transplantation, and related therapies;

Whereas polycystic kidney disease is a systemic disease that causes damage to the kidney and the cardiovascular, endocrine, hepatic, and gastrointestinal organ systems and instills in patients a fear of an unknown future with a life-threatening genetic disease and apprehension over possible genetic discrimination;

Whereas the severity of the symptoms of polycystic kidney disease and the limited public awareness of the disease causes many patients to live in denial and forego regular visits to their physicians or to avoid following good health management which would help avoid more severe complications when kidney failure occurs;

Whereas people who have chronic, life-threatening diseases like polycystic kidney disease have a predisposition to depression (7 times the national average) and its resultant consequences due to their anxiety over pain, suffering, and premature death;

Whereas the Senate and taxpayers of the United States desire to see treatments and cures for disease and would like to see results from investments in research conducted by the National Institutes of Health and from such initiatives as the NIH Roadmap to the Future;

Whereas polycystic kidney disease is a verifiable example of how collaboration, technological innovation, scientific momentum, and public-private partnerships can generate therapeutic interventions that directly benefit polycystic kidney disease sufferers, save billions of Federal dollars under Medicare, Medicaid, and other programs for dialysis, kidney transplants, immunosuppressant drugs, and related therapies, and make available several thousand openings on the kidney transplant waiting list;

Whereas improvements in diagnostic technology and the expansion of scientific knowledge about polycystic kidney disease have led to the discovery of the 3 primary genes that cause polycystic kidney disease and the 3 primary protein products of the genes and to the understanding of cell structures and signaling pathways that cause cyst growth that has produced multiple polycystic kidney disease clinical drug trials;

Whereas there are thousands of volunteers nationwide who are dedicated to expanding essential research, fostering public awareness and understanding of polycystic kidney disease, educating polycystic kidney disease patients and their families about the disease to improve their treatment and care, providing appropriate moral support, and encouraging people to become organ donors; and

Whereas these volunteers engage in an annual national awareness event held during the third week of September and such a week would be an appropriate time to recognize National Polycystic Kidney Disease Week: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Senate—

(1) designates September 10 through September 16, 2006, as “National Polycystic Kidney Disease Awareness Week”;

(2) supports the goals and ideals of a National Polycystic Kidney Disease Awareness Week to raise public awareness and understanding of polycystic kidney disease (known as “PKD”);

(3) recognizes the need for additional research into a cure for polycystic kidney disease; and

(4) encourages the people of the United States and interested groups to support National Polycystic Kidney Awareness Week through appropriate ceremonies and activities to promote public awareness of polycystic kidney disease and to foster understanding of the impact of the disease on patients and their families.

SUPPORTING AND COMMENDING THE NATIONAL SEXUAL ASSAULT HOTLINE

Mr. McCONNELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Judiciary Committee be discharged from further consideration of S. Res. 537, and the Senate proceed to its consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The clerk will report the resolution by title.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

A resolution (S. Res. 537), supporting the National Sexual Assault Hotline and commending the Hotline for counseling and supporting more than 1,000,000 callers.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the resolution.

Mr. McCONNELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the resolution be agreed to, the preamble be agreed to, and the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table, and that any statements relating to the resolution be printed in the RECORD as if read without further intervening action or debate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The resolution (S. Res. 537) was agreed to.

The preamble was agreed to.

The resolution, with its preamble, reads as follows:

S. RES. 537

Whereas it is estimated that a sexual assault occurs every 2.5 minutes in the United States and more than 200,000 people in the United States each year are victims of sexual assault;

Whereas 1 of every 6 women and 1 of every 33 men in the United States have been victims of rape or attempted rape, according to the Department of Justice;

Whereas the Uniform Crime Reports of the Federal Bureau of Investigation rank rape second only to murder in the hierarchy of violent crimes;

Whereas research suggests that sexual assault victims who receive counseling are more likely to report the assault to the police and to participate in the prosecution of the offender;

Whereas, in June 2006, the National Sexual Assault Hotline (referred to in this preamble as “Hotline”) helped its 1,000,000th caller;

Whereas the Hotline operates 24 hours per day, 365 days per year, offering important, free, and confidential crisis intervention, support, information, and referrals for victims of sexual assault and their friends and families;

Whereas the Hotline was created by the Rape, Abuse & Incest National Network (referred to in this preamble as “RAINN”), a non-profit corporation, the headquarters of which are located in Washington, D.C.;

Whereas the Hotline answered its first call on July 27, 1994, and operated solely with private funds for the first 10 years the Hotline was in existence;

Whereas RAINN continues to operate the Hotline today, in partnership with 1,100 local rape crisis centers in the 50 States and the District of Columbia and with over 10,000 trained volunteers and staff, and in collaboration with coalitions against sexual assault in each of the 50 States;

Whereas the Hotline helps an average of 11,000 people each month and in 2005 helped 137,039 women, men, and children across the Nation;

Whereas the public education and outreach undertaken by RAINN and local rape crisis centers have increased public awareness of sexual violence and contributed to a 58-percent decline in crimes of sexual violence since 1993;

Whereas the Hotline has experienced a significant increase in call volume as public awareness of sexual violence has grown, with calls to the Hotline increasing by 43 percent since 2003;

Whereas millions of Americans have learned of the services available through the Hotline, thanks to the public service promotion contributed by every national broadcast television network, a dozen cable networks, and more than 1,000 radio stations, newspapers, and magazines; and

Whereas the Hotline serves as an outstanding example of a successful partnership between the Federal Government, the private sector, and individuals: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Senate—

(1) supports the National Sexual Assault Hotline; and

(2) commends the National Sexual Assault Hotline for counseling and supporting more than 1,000,000 callers.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN COMMEMORATIVE COIN ACT

Mr. McCONNELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the immediate consideration of H.R. 2808, which was received from the House.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the bill by title.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (H.R. 2808) to require the Secretary of the Treasury to mint coins in commemoration of the bicentennial of the birth of Abraham Lincoln.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill.

Mr. McCONNELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the bill be read a third time and passed, the motion to reconsider be laid on the table, and that any statements relating to the bill be printed in the RECORD.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The bill (H.R. 2808) was ordered to a third reading, was read the third time, and passed.

ORDERS FOR MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 11, 2006

Mr. McCONNELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that when the Senate completes its business today, it stand in adjournment until 2 p.m. on Monday, September 11. I further ask that following the prayer and pledge, the morning hour be deemed expired, the Journal of proceedings be approved to date, the time for the two leaders be reserved, and the Senate then proceed to a period of morning business until 4 p.m.; further, that at 4 p.m. the Senate resume consideration of H.R. 4954, the port security bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

PROGRAM

Mr. McCONNELL. Today we continued debate on the port security bill. Two amendments are pending and we anticipate additional amendments to be offered on Monday, for a series of votes on Tuesday. Senators should be consulting with the bill managers in order to get their amendments in the queue and to finish this bill, we hope, in short order. While the leader has indicated that we will not have any roll-call votes until Tuesday, we need to continue to move forward on this bill, and Senators are encouraged to offer and debate their amendments on Monday next and early in the week.

Everyone should also remember that Monday will mark the fifth anniversary of the terrorist attack known as 9/11. We will have a bipartisan, bicameral ceremony at 6 p.m. On Monday evening on the East Front of the Capitol at exactly the same time we all joined on the Capitol steps on the evening of 9/11.

All Members obviously are urged to join us and to participate in remembrance of that event on the steps of the Capitol at 6 p.m., September 11, 2001.

ORDER FOR RECORD TO REMAIN OPEN

Mr. McCONNELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the RECORD remain open until 3 p.m. for statements.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

ADJOURNMENT UNTIL MONDAY,
SEPTEMBER 11, 2006, AT 2 P.M.

Mr. McCONNELL. Mr. President, if there is no further business to come before the Senate, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate stand in adjournment under the previous order.

There being no objection, the Senate, at 1:43 p.m., adjourned until Monday, September 11, 2006, at 2 p.m.

EXTENSIONS OF REMARKS

TRIBUTE TO DR. SAMUEL J. PRISK

HON. THADDEUS G. McCOTTER

OF MICHIGAN

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Friday, September 8, 2006

Mr. McCOTTER. Mr. Speaker, today I rise to honor and acknowledge the distinguished career of Dr. Samuel J. Prisk, upon attaining the Boy Scouts of America's prestigious 2006 Silver Buffalo Award.

For nearly six decades, Dr. Prisk has dedicated his life to improving the communities in which he lived. On March 1, 1948, he began his career as a dentist in Livonia, Michigan. From October 1960 until June 30, 1987, he served with distinction as a member and officer of the Clarenceville School Board in Clarenceville, Michigan. To commemorate his commitment to exceptional community service, the Board created the Dr. Samuel J. Prisk Scholarship, an award given to high school students who have excelled in academics, community involvement, school spirit, and attendance.

Since 1986, Dr. Prisk has proudly served on the board of directors of the Methodist Children's Home Society, a non-profit volunteer-driven agency, which provides foster care, residential care, adoption, and literacy programs for children. During March 2006, he was recognized by the Michigan High School Football Coaches Association with an honorary membership for supporting high school sports for 43 years by providing medical services during games, and gathering the resources necessary to assist aspiring athletes.

For his extraordinary loyalty and invaluable contributions to youth, the Boy Scouts have bestowed upon Dr. Prisk the 2006 Silver Buffalo Award, Scouting's highest commendation. He has held positions at the national and region level and served the Boy Scouts Detroit Area Council as council vice president, council commissioner, council activities chair, council executive committee, district training chair, Scoutmaster, and Webelos leader.

Mr. Speaker, during Dr. Samuel J. Prisk's laudable career, he has demonstrated exemplary leadership and involvement in local schools, sports teams, and youth agencies. His legendary benevolence has improved the lives of countless children across Michigan. Today, I ask my colleagues to join me in honoring his many years of loyal and dedicated service to our community and our country.

IN RECOGNITION OF MR. MARC C. SAPERSTEIN

HON. STEVEN R. ROTHMAN

OF NEW JERSEY

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Friday, September 8, 2006

Mr. ROTHMAN. Mr. Speaker, I rise to recognize Mr. Marc C. Saperstein, who was elected this past summer as president of the New Jersey Association of Trial Lawyers of America (ATLA-NJ). Mr. Saperstein is more than qualified for this distinguished position. He currently practices law at Davis, Saperstein & Salomon, P.C. in Teaneck, New Jersey, which is located in my district.

Mr. Saperstein grew up in New York City. He received his Bachelor of Arts in Economics from Rutgers University in New Brunswick, New Jersey and then completed a Juris Doctorate at Emory University School of Law in 1978. Mr. Saperstein has been admitted to the Bar of New York, New Jersey, Georgia in addition to the U.S. District Court, U.S. Court of Appeals, Second, Third and Fifth Circuits and the United States Supreme Court. He has been admitted as Pro Hac Vice Counsel in various complex litigation matters in the States of California, Florida, Louisiana and West Virginia. More importantly, Marc is a devoted husband to his wife, Shelly, and a caring father to his wonderful children, Gregory and Allison. I am proud to have such an excellent attorney and a fine man representing the New Jersey branch of ATLA.

Mr. Speaker, today I would like to congratulate Mr. Saperstein on his impressive accomplishments and wish him the best of luck in his new position as president of the New Jersey Association of Trial Lawyers of America.

TRIBUTE TO JIM PADILLA

HON. THADDEUS G. McCOTTER

OF MICHIGAN

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Friday, September 8, 2006

Mr. McCOTTER. Mr. Speaker, today I rise to honor and acknowledge Jim Padilla, president and chief operating officer of Ford Motor Company, upon his retirement.

Since Jim first joined Ford in 1966 as a quality-control engineer, he has worked tirelessly to maintain the company's position as a global leader in automotive quality. In 1976, Jim was promoted to the first of several management roles he would hold in product engineering and manufacturing. He served in a number of senior manufacturing, engineering, and management positions from 1992 to 1996, before being named president of Ford South America operations until 1998.

Jim became group vice president of global manufacturing in 1999. He then served as Ford president of the Americas from 2001 to 2002, which is responsible for all operations in the United States, Canada, Mexico, and South America. In April of 2005, Jim was promoted to chief operating officer of Ford Motor Company and chairman of Ford automotive operations. On February 1, 2005, Jim was named president of Ford Motor Company and elected to its board of directors.

For 40 years, Jim's commitment to quality, environmental consciousness, and innovation has helped keep Ford a premier automotive manufacturer. He is credited with revamping failing sectors of the company, such as the Jaguar automotive line, and with successfully restructuring operations after the breakup of Autolinc. A graduate of the University of Detroit-Mercy, he now serves on the university's board of trustees and has been named a fellow of the National Academy of Engineering.

Mr. Speaker, Jim's tireless leadership and vision of excellence has revolutionized Ford's automotive operations for four decades. As he enters the next phase of his life, I ask my colleagues to join me in applauding his achievements and honoring him for his legendary service to our community and our country.

TRIBUTE TO DICK AND GINI BRITTON

HON. THADDEUS G. McCOTTER

OF MICHIGAN

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Friday, September 8, 2006

Mr. McCOTTER. Mr. Speaker, today I rise to honor and acknowledge Dick and Gini Britton as they celebrate their 30th wedding anniversary, September 4, 2006.

Dick and Gini are a loving couple committed to improving the lives of Michigan citizens.

Over the years, their friends and family have watched as their friendship blossomed into a relationship of mutual respect, love, and fulfillment. It began during the mid-1970s, when their friends Mike and Mary Sedlak arranged a dinner date for the couple-to-be. Soon, a relationship ensued, Dick and Gini fell in love, and they married on September 4, 1976.

Their first home was in Dearborn, Michigan, where they lived with their dog, Erin. By the end of the decade, the couple had moved to Commerce Township and bore their first child, Michelle, in 1980. In 1985, their second daughter, Bridget, was born and the family moved to Northville Township a year later.

Dissatisfied with the Northville Township Board of Trustees, Gini decided to make a difference by entering public service; she was elected to the Board in the early 1990s, where we initially met. Her dedication to the citizens of Northville continued even after moving to Oxford, Michigan, during the spring of 1999. For several years after they moved, Gini still ordered the local newspaper, the Northville

Record, to maintain her awareness of Northville current events. Currently, Gini serves as a political consultant for the Oxford Rotary and member of the Oxford Women's Club. In addition, Dick is a member of the Knights of Columbus and has loyally worked at the manufacturing representative firm, Terry Barr Sales, for 30 years. Last year, as Gini battled breast cancer, Dick supportively stood by her side through chemotherapy and at every major consultation or procedure until she defeated the disease.

Mr. Speaker, this loving family has touched the lives of so many individuals across Michigan. Gini Britton's legendary commitment to promoting effective governance is a testament to her moral and compassionate character. For three decades, Dick and Gina have shown an unwavering and selfless dedication to their family, their friends, and to each other. Today, I ask my colleagues to join me in celebrating their 30th wedding anniversary and in honoring them for their years of unfaltering service to our community and our country.

SENATE—Monday, September 11, 2006

The Senate met at 2 p.m. and was called to order by the President pro tempore (Mr. STEVENS).

PRAYER

The Chaplain, Dr. Barry C. Black, offered the following prayer:

Let us pray.

Eternal God, who maintains our world and directs it toward the future, we thank You for Your promise that justice, righteousness, and truth will be stronger than injustice, evil, and falsehood.

Today, we remember all those who lost their lives on September 11, 2001. Comfort those who still grieve, and teach each of us the wisdom of remembering that life is fragile and precious. May we never think of You as absent from our world or disinterested in it.

Today, bless the Members of this legislative body as they labor for liberty. Strengthen them to work with calm reality, glowing enthusiasm, vibrant faith, and personal integrity.

We pray in Your holy Name. Amen.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE

The PRESIDENT pro tempore led the Pledge of Allegiance, as follows:

I pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America, and to the Republic for which it stands, one nation under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.

RESERVATION OF LEADER TIME

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Under the previous order, the leadership time is reserved.

RECOGNITION OF THE MINORITY LEADER

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Democratic leader is recognized.

Mr. REID. Thank you, Mr. President.

FIFTH ANNIVERSARY OF THE ATTACKS ON SEPTEMBER 11, 2001

Mr. REID. Five years and a day ago, we rarely saw flags flying at every door. Five years and a day ago, men in suits rarely wore flag pins. Today, 5 years after September 11, from sea to sea, flags fly proudly in our front yards, on our suit lapels, and in our hearts.

The acts of terrorism that September morn lit for all Americans a lamp blazing through the smoke and pain and tears and flames. Even as our hearts ached, our hopes soared, inspired by the selfless courage and devotion of ordinary people performing extraordinary feats of courage and devotion.

Men and women—good, kind, loving moms and dads, sons and daughters, brothers and sisters—died that day. For that, we can never cease to grieve. But the light that shone on September 11 cannot die. It cannot be dimmed. It cannot fail. It cannot fail because it is the light of their spirit and of ours. It is the light of a great republic, of a free and democratic people.

September 11 will always be our burden. Our minds, our souls, our hearts cannot forget. We must not forget. But we must also always remember that our fallen children in those fallen towers relit a lamp that outshines the evil done to us. In their loss, and in ours, they remind us, as could nothing else, of that for which we stand—that liberty is our central value, that freedom is our cardinal virtue, that we love our country and our flag and our people for the light we shine, on ourselves, to the world, and for the future of humanity.

RECOGNITION OF THE ACTING MAJORITY LEADER

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The acting majority leader is recognized.

SCHEDULE

Mr. MCCONNELL. Mr. President, today the Senate will have a period of morning business until 4 p.m. this afternoon. This period was set aside to give Senators an opportunity to give statements on the fifth anniversary of September 11.

At 4 o'clock today, the Senate will continue to debate H.R. 4954, the port security bill. Several Senators were in the Chamber on Friday to offer amendments, and the managers are here again today to make more progress. We hope to finish this bill midweek, and those Senators who have amendments should be talking with the bill managers today. There are no rollcall votes today, and we will announce the voting schedule for tomorrow before we adjourn this evening.

I also wish to remind everyone that this evening Senators should meet in the Chamber at 5:40 p.m. so we can proceed as a group to the east front for an event to mark the anniversary of the September 11 attacks.

FIFTH ANNIVERSARY OF THE ATTACKS OF SEPTEMBER 11, 2001

Mr. MCCONNELL. Mr. President, 5 years ago today, al-Qaida terrorists launched a brutal sneak attack on American soil. It was their deadliest attack ever and a day America will never forget.

Today, we remember and honor the innocent victims of that attack and stand in support of their families and communities.

We honor the heroic police officers, firefighters, and emergency medical personnel who rushed into burning buildings when everyone else was rushing out.

We honor the valiant passengers of United Airlines Flight 93, who gave their lives to save thousands of others—including, quite possibly, many in the building in which we stand.

We honor millions of good-hearted volunteers who lined up to help their fellow Americans and donated time, money, blood, and literally everything they could.

We honor the families who opened their homes, the houses of worship that opened their doors, and the schoolchildren who saw evil for the first time but were not afraid to open their hearts.

We honor the military and law enforcement personnel whose vigilance has kept us from attack since that day. It is because of their service we have not been attacked at home in the 5 years since.

Some have made the ultimate sacrifice, and we honor their families, while realizing the debt can never be repaid.

As the country reflects on what happened that tragic day, we must remember this: Two skyscrapers may be gone, but 5 years after 9/11, America stands taller than ever.

America is on the offense against terrorists, and America is winning the war on terror. And thanks to hard and dangerous work over the last 5 years, today, America is safer. To make us safer still, we continue to wage war against terrorists who would harm America here and around the world. Of the senior terrorist leaders whom our Government has been tracking, many have been apprehended or killed, and we are disrupting the flow of money, supplies, people, and information to the terrorists.

But we must stay on the offensive. This Congress must ensure that the brave men and women fighting under our flag have everything they need to complete their mission. War is horror, and none of us want these heroes torn away from their homes and families. But we must confront the fundamental reality of 9/11. The enemy was at war with us for years prior to that attack. It was only on that day that we began to fight back with the effort necessary to beat this warped and virulent strain of radical Islam. And we will prevail over the toxic death wish that preaches indiscriminate killing of men, women, and children in the Name of the Almighty.

Most importantly, all of us must do what we can to sustain the faith of our fellow citizens through this long and difficult war. When we began the fight after 9/11, we knew it would not be short, and we knew it would not be easy. In fact, this struggle will last years, perhaps decades. We cannot be sure when we will win, but we can be sure that we will win. We must sustain our faith because as long as we maintain our will to win, we will prevail.

Once before, America was the target of a surprise deadly attack. Two days after that attack, on December 9, 1941, President Franklin Roosevelt addressed the Nation. Here is what he had to say:

When we resort to force, as now we must, we are determined that this force shall be directed toward ultimate good as well as against immediate evil. We Americans are not destroyers, we are builders. . . . We are going to win the war and we are going to win the peace that follows.

What was true then is truer today. We do not fight for death and destruction, as the terrorists do. We fight for liberty. That is America's greatest strength. And no terrorist attack will ever diminish it.

Five years ago today, Members of Congress from both parties and both Chambers stood united on the Capitol steps and sang "God Bless America." In the days that followed, our Nation witnessed a resurgence in unity and in purpose.

Voluntarism soared. American flags sold out of stores overnight. Just as we stood united here, the country stood united against a growing threat.

This evening, Members of Congress will return to the steps and join together to remember that day of resolve. And as we once again "swear allegiances to a land that's free," it is my sincere hope that we will reignite our united purpose.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

MORNING BUSINESS

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Under the previous order, there will be a period for the transaction of morning business until 4 p.m. today.

The Senator from Montana.

PORT SECURITY IMPROVEMENT ACT

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I rise to take a moment to recognize that today is the fifth anniversary of the September 11 attacks. That day 5 years ago changed the way we all think about the world. The consequences were profound. We learned that we must be prepared for threats we cannot even imagine.

That is why our work here today on the Port Security Improvement Act is so important. I was pleased to help write the Port Security Improvement Act of 2006, the amendment before the Senate today. I am proud of our work. Working together, we have crafted legislation to help keep our ports safe and our economy strong. The legislation strikes a balance. It protects Americans, and it preserves the free flow of commerce upon which our prosperity depends.

Last year, nearly 11 million containers came into our country. That is more than 30,000 containers every day. They arrive at more than 300 ports all across our borders. That number of containers is expected to double over the next 3 years. The U.S. Customs and Border Protection Agency is responsible for ensuring that not one of those millions of containers—not one—carries with it anything that could harm us. It is a daunting task. It would be tempting to say we should slow this torrent of containers to a trickle. It would be tempting to say we should allow Customs and Border Protection unlimited time to do its job to protect us from harm, but slowing trade to a trickle would also cause America great harm. It would cripple our economy.

Ensuring security is only half of the work of Customs and Border Protection. The agency is also charged with carrying on the centuries-old responsibility of its predecessor, the U.S. Customs Service, to facilitate the commerce so critical to keeping our economy strong.

Cross-border trade accounts for fully a quarter of the American economy—one-quarter. How, then, do we keep this flow of trade both safe and smooth? I believe this legislation tries to do just that. We have given Customs and Border Protection more tools and resources to accomplish both of its missions.

We authorize $1.2 billion in port security grant assistance, and we authorize another $750 million for key programs such as the Container Security Initiative and the automated targeting system.

We also authorize funds to fulfill the promise of the Customs Trade Partnership Against Terrorism. We provide the personnel to validate supply chain security for the thousands of American importers eager to participate in the program and keep their cargo moving.

I also strongly support testing and deployment of fully integrated container scanning systems capable of increasing the security of containers in foreign ports while maintaining or improving the processing time of just-in-time cargoes. The more we can know about a container before it gets to America, the safer we all will be.

But technology is not a panacea. We need people at our land and seaports to detect and deter contraband or unlawful persons from entering our country. My State of Montana is a border State. In Montana, we have new cargo examination equipment, but we don't have new personnel to run it.

We need people to ensure the robust enforcement of our trade laws and trade agreements upon which American companies and workers rely. That is why, in the 2002 Homeland Security Act, Congress prohibited any diminution in Customs trade facilitation and enforcement functions. And we prohibited any reduction or consolidation of the personnel performing those functions.

In violation of that act, personnel dedicated to revenue collection and trade enforcement are increasingly being asked to assist with port security-related functions for which they are neither trained nor equipped. Since 2003, trade personnel numbers decreased by as much as 15 percent.

This legislation reverses this damaging trend by requiring Customs and Border Protection to restore personnel vital to its commercial mission. At the same time, we ensure sufficient numbers of security-focused personnel by adding uniformed officers at every one of our Nation's ports. We can do both, and we need to do both.

The legislation also creates an Office of International Trade within Customs and Border Protection. The new office would be headed by an Assistant Commissioner for International Trade, reporting directly to the Commissioner.

This office is responsible for supervising and giving policy direction to employees before the agency's commercial and revenue functions. This structural change is designed to give voice to the concerns of commerce. It will guarantee that the concerns of commerce receive due consideration.

And an International Trade Policy Committee within Customs and Border Protection will assist the Commissioner in coordinating with the Assistant Secretary for Policy. The committee will help them implement policies related to the commercial customs and trade facilitation functions within the Agency.

Mr. President, if security at our ports is compromised, then the international trade that drives our Nation's economy could grind to a halt. But if security at our ports does not protect the overall health of the international commerce system, then that would not provide Americans real security. We need to do both.

I am very pleased with the legislation before us. We still need to address other critical transportation security issues, such as rail and transit security, which this legislation doesn't do. But the pending amendment is a critical component of a national strategy on homeland and economic security.

This legislation would not have been completed without the tireless efforts of my colleagues. I thank and commend Senator INOUE, Senator STEVENS especially for his very helpful work, MURRAY, COLLINS, LIEBERMAN, COLEMAN, and my dear friend, the chairman of the Finance Committee, Senator GRASSLEY.

Too many staff to name have worked countless hours to get this legislation ready, and I thank them.

Working together, I believe we have created something that both safeguards our Nation's ports and protects American prosperity. America needs us to do both. That is why America needs us to pass this important legislation.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Maine is recognized.

REMEMBERING SEPTEMBER 11 ATTACKS

Ms. COLLINS. Mr. President, 5 years ago, our Nation experienced one of its darkest days and finest hours. With shocking suddenness, an act of unparalleled cruelty transformed the late-summer morning of uncommon brilliance into one of unfathomable horror. On that awful morning, September 11 was transformed from a mere point on the calendar into an eternal monument to the deepest human emotions of loss, of sacrifice, and of resolve.

We pause today to remember those whose lives were taken that terrible morning—2,996 innocent men, women, and children, workers doing their jobs, travelers embarking on trips. Men and women like Robert and Jacqueline Norton of Lubec, ME boarded Flight 11 to celebrate a son's wedding in California. In the days just before the trip, the Nortons planted new raspberry bushes in their garden and Robert, at age 85, helped repair the concrete steps at their church.

At age 85, Robert Norton was the oldest to perish that day. At age 2, Christine Hanson of Groton, MA, was the youngest. She was traveling with her parents to that place of childhood dreams, Disneyland. The aircraft that was to take the Hanson family on their dream vacation instead was driven into the North Tower. There, on the 92nd floor, were John and Sylvia Resta of Queens, NY. They worked together and on September 11th they died together. Resta was seven months pregnant.

The Pentagon that morning was filled with men and women who had dedicated their lives to serving their country. Among them was Commander Robert Schlegel. After his 1981 graduation from Gray-New Gloucester High School in Maine, he went to college, married his high-school sweetheart, Dawn, and followed a tradition set by his father and two brothers by joining the United States Navy. His 15-year Naval career was one of achievement and courage. Among his many commendations were the Meritorious Service Medal, four Navy and Marine Corps Commendation Medals, and the Purple Heart. Shortly before September 11, he had been promoted to the rank of Commander. His new office, on the second floor of the Pentagon, believed to be the point of impact of Flight 77.

Each of these names, and the names of so many more, represent lives of accomplishment, contribution, and promise. Each loss leaves a wound in the hearts of families and friends that can never be fully healed.

But September 11 was not just a day of personal tragedy. It was an attack on the United States, an attack on freedom, an attack on civilization. We must never forget what was lost, and what remains at stake.

We also pause today to remember the heroes whose courage saved countless lives then, and who continue to inspire us. Yamel Merino, of Yonkers, NY, was described by colleagues as the perfect EMT. She gave her life while helping the injured near the World Trade Center when the first tower collapsed.

After an outstanding career with the FBI, John O'Neill became head of security for the World Trade Center. He exited the building safely after the first of the two hijacked planes hit, but re-entered when he saw the extent of the damage and the danger to others. He saved lives, but could not save himself.

After his safe exit from the Pentagon, Staff Sergeant Christopher Braman rushed back into the burning building, returning again and again to find survivors and to carry them to safety. He stayed on the scene for the next 3 days, working past exhaustion, saving lives with the search and rescue skills the U.S. Army had taught him.

In the days and weeks immediately following the attacks, we were moved by the selfless courage of the men and women—passengers and crew—aboard Flight 93. By wresting control of that aircraft from the terrorists, they knowingly gave their lives so that others might live. Todd Beamer's Let's Roll! became our Nation's rallying cry.

Last month, additional recordings of emergency calls made that terrible morning were released. One contains a statement that describes with eloquent simplicity the spirit of September 11. Amid the suffocating smoke, searing flames, and falling debris of the South Tower, the last words Fire Captain Patrick Brown spoke from the 35th floor to the outside world were these: "We're still heading up."

We may never know where the courage to keep heading up into such danger comes from. We must always honor it. We must never forget.

As we pledge to never forget what was lost and what was given on September 11, we must in the same breath pledge to do all that we can to prevent future attacks. We can offer no guarantee, but that must be our goal.

The fundamental obligation of Government is to protect its people. Since September 11, we have done much to meet that obligation. Immediately after the attacks, we passed legislation to close the gap between law enforcement and intelligence that the terrorists exploited. The reauthorization signed into law earlier this year makes permanent many provisions from the original law that are important to protect Americans from terrorists. Equally important, it contains significant new safeguards that protect the civil liberties we cherish but that the terrorists despise.

We created the Department of Homeland Security to provide a unifying core to the vast effort of detecting and preventing terrorist attacks, assessing and protecting our vulnerabilities, and improving our response to disasters of all types. We have made great investments in training and equipping first responders throughout the nation. We have strengthened our borders with additional personnel, better coordination with State and local authorities, and cutting-edge technology so that they remain open to our friends but increasingly closed to our enemies.

We passed the Intelligence Reform and Terrorism Prevention Act of 2004, which Senator LIEBERMAN and I authored. This legislation, based on the recommendations of the 9/11 Commission, brought about the most comprehensive reforms of our intelligence community in more than a half century so that the trail of dots terrorists leave behind as they plan, train, and organize will never again be left unconnected. This newly restructured intelligence community has uncovered terrorist plots, cells, and financing operations, and it played an important role in thwarting the scheme to blow up transatlantic airliners that was exposed in Britain last month.

Today we are on the brink of passing the GreenLane Maritime Security Act. America's seaports are vital to our economy, but at the same time they offer a port of entry for those who would do us harm, or for devastating weapons. This bipartisan legislation will help build a coordinated approach to maritime and port security across all levels of government with our overseas trading partners. I urge my colleagues to take this major step toward protecting these valuable and vulnerable facilities.

We have taken many such steps. None was easily taken. All were accompanied by controversy, conflict, and reasonable differences of opinion. Yet, working together, we found a way.

Each, however, remains a work in progress. DHS has yet to develop the cohesion, the common culture, that is needed for its complex mission. First responder grants to the States still lack the accountability and effective measures of progress needed to prevent the waste of taxpayer dollars. Ongoing shortages of detention space and personnel still leave our borders at risk, despite the many improvements that have been made.

Other gaps remain. Ten million Americans live and work in proximity to plants that produce, use, or store large quantities of hazardous chemicals and, indeed, if one talks to the experts, over and over again you will hear them identify the security of our ports and our chemical facilities as major vulnerabilities. We are about to complete action this week on port security legislation. I hope we will turn to chemical security legislation as well. There is no question that attacking these facilities fits squarely within the terrorist strategy of causing maximum harm to our people and to our prosperity.

Yet 5 years after 9/11, America is left vulnerable by an incomplete and inadequate patchwork of laws and voluntary industry standards that too many facilities fail to observe. The Homeland Security Committee approved our bipartisan Chemical Facility Anti-Terrorism Act more than 3 months ago by a unanimous vote. For the first time, our legislation would ensure that high-risk chemical facilities are covered by Federal standards that would not only help to deter terrorist attacks but also to mitigate the consequences of an attack.

Our legislation would give the Department of Homeland Security the strongest possible remedy to ensure compliance: the authority to shut down any chemical facility that does not adequately address the risks of a terrorist attack. Unless this legislation moves forward, these highly attractive terrorist communities, large and small, will remain without the protection they require.

The heroes of 9/11 faced grave danger and made great sacrifices in order to save others. They performed magnificently despite being hampered by obsolete and incompatible communications equipment that placed them in needless peril and resulted in needless loss of life. That should be a major national priority for our country to solve once and for all the issue of first responders being able to communicate with one another in the midst of a disaster, whether it is a terrorist attack or another hurricane, such as Hurricane Katrina.

The Post-Katrina Emergency Reform Act, which Senator LIEBERMAN and I introduced, contains strong provisions to establish a comprehensive national emergency communications strategy and provide State grants for interoperable communications. It is time to act on this legislation—we must never again send our first responders into harm's way with a deficiency that has been so thoroughly revealed.

Perhaps our greatest challenge, however, is to recognize that terrorism continually evolves. As the devastating attacks in Madrid, Bali, Istanbul, Beslan, London, and Israel prove, terrorists will strike wherever opportunity allows and wherever innocent people are the most vulnerable. The terrorists' resourcefulness, cunning, and patience are exceeded only by their cruelty.

Indeed, one of the most striking findings of the 9/11 Commission was that the September 11 attacks were made possible by a failure of imagination. Commercial airliners had long been a target of terrorists. The conventional wisdom was that they would be targeted in two ways: to hijack for the purpose of taking hostages or to blow up in midair. To envision airliners being hijacked to use as missiles would have taken some imagination, but it was not unimaginable.

We all remember one of the striking findings of the 9/11 Commission that the September 11 attacks represented a failure of imagination. How different things might be today if 5 years prior to September 11, 2001, our imagination had been fully engaged.

Mr. President, 1996 was the year that Ramzi Yousef, while awaiting trial for the 1993 World Trade Center bombing, was convicted of a conspiracy to plant bombs on a number of U.S. airliners operating in East Asia, and of placing the bomb that exploded on a Philippine airliner the previous year.

Mr. President, 1996 was the year of the truck bomb attack on Khobar Towers that specifically targeted U.S. military personnel.

And 1996 was the year that Osama bin Laden relocated from the Sudan to Afghanistan, established a new base of operations under the protection of the Taliban, and declared war on the United States.

The terrorist strategy was evolving 5 years prior to 2001 to direct massive attacks on high-profile American targets, but we failed to see that these seemingly isolated events were, in fact, tied together.

In the aftermath of 9/11, we learned that although the terrorists targeted high-profile targets in major cities, they did much of their planning, training, and transiting in smaller communities—communities such as Stone Mountain, GA, Norman, OK, and Portland, ME. It may be that they believed these locations shielded their activities from the scrutiny they would have been subjected to in their larger, more terrorism-savvy target locations.

Today there is no question that the tactics of terrorists have evolved. As the recent arrests in Canada and Miami, the attacks on the London subway of a year ago, and the thwarted airliner plot in Britain have made clear, terrorist masterminds no longer have to rely on operatives imported from abroad to infiltrate target nations and carry out attacks. The emerging threat is from home-grown terrorists. They are far harder to detect, and increased border security will not protect us from them.

Whether the target we seek to protect is a cargo port, a chemical plant, a public water supply, the electric grid, or the information technology networks critical to our economy, it does not take a stretch of imagination to see that an attack can come from within just as easily, perhaps more easily, than from overseas.

From John Walker Lindh, we already know the most extreme ideology can take root even among those who enjoy the most privileged circumstances our society can offer. As the details of the British airliner plot emerge, it becomes evident that home-grown terrorists, working in conjunction with masterminds overseas, can be every bit as sophisticated as the imported terrorists who attacked us on 9/11.

What is particularly alarming is the evidence that this infection is being spread within our State and Federal prisons, and this is an area that the Homeland Security Committee will hold a hearing on next week.

Richard Reid—the infamous shoe bomber—and Jose Padilla both were indoctrinated into Islamic extremism while in prison. Less well known, but equally lethal, is Kevin James, a self-styled Imam who, while a California State prison inmate, founded an organization based upon his radical interpretation of Islam. James recruited among his fellow inmates, allegedly instructing them that it was their duty to kill his perceived enemies of Islam—in particular U.S. military personnel and supporters of Israel. Upon their release, his followers reportedly conducted surveillance on military installations, the Israeli Consulate, and synagogues. It is alleged that they sought firearms with silencers and also explosives and that they financed their operations through a string of armed robberies in the Los Angeles area. These operatives have been arrested and they face trial next month.

The new face of terrorism—born and raised in America, in Great Britain—has been exposed. This new face of terrorism will challenge us, perhaps as much or even more as Osama bin Laden has challenged us. But this is the reality that we must confront. We must not allow our imagination to fail us again.

Five years ago, in what seemed like a moment, September 11 was transformed from a day like any other day into one that for as long as our Nation stands will stand alone. The loss that we relive this day reminds us of the value of all that we must protect. The heroism reminds us of the unconquerable spirit of the American people. Our accomplishments remind us that we can meet any challenge with decisive action and a sense of unity. As long as we keep the meaning of this day of remembrance in our hearts, I am confident that we can meet any challenge that lies ahead.

Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. ALEXANDER). The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. INOUE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. SESSIONS). Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. INOUE. Mr. President, what is the pending business?

SECURITY AND ACCOUNTABILITY FOR EVERY PORT ACT

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the hour of 4 p.m. having arrived, the Senate will resume consideration of H.R. 4954, which the clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (H.R. 4954) to improve maritime and cargo security through enhanced layered defenses, and for other purposes.

Pending:

Stevens (for DeMint) amendment No. 4921, to establish a unified national hazard alert system.

McCain modified amendment No. 4922, to provide increased rail transportation security.

Mr. INOUE. Mr. President, we are ready to proceed, but other Members are not here. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

AMENDMENT NO. 4926 TO AMENDMENT NO. 4922
(Purpose: To provide improved rail security)

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk and ask that it be considered to the pending bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Alaska [Mr. STEVENS], for himself, Mr. INOUE, Mr. MCCAIN, and Mr. LAUTENBERG, proposes an amendment numbered 4926 to amendment No. 4922.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

(The amendment is printed in today's RECORD under "Text of Amendments.")

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, this second-degree amendment offered by Senator INOUE and myself, with Senators MCCAIN and LAUTENBERG as cosponsors, simply adds the additional rail security provisions of S. 1052, the Commerce Committee's Transportation Security Improvement Act of 2005, to the McCain amendment. The provisions in the second-degree amendment address rail worker security training, rail security public awareness, hazardous materials threat mitigation, railcar tracking, and update a few of the provisions that are in Senator MCCAIN's provisions.

Taken together with Senator MCCAIN's Rail Security Act of 2005, which Senator MCCAIN offered to this bill, this amendment and Senator MCCAIN's bill will form the rail security title of S. 1052 that was unanimously supported by the Commerce Committee. It is supported by both the railroads and the rail workers, and I urge its adoption.

I again say it is an amendment cosponsored by Senator INOUE, myself, Senator MCCAIN, and Senator LAUTENBERG.

Mr. INOUE. Mr. President, I associate myself with the remarks of the Senator from Alaska, our chairman.

Mr. STEVENS. I urge the adoption of the second-degree amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to amendment No. 4926.

The amendment (No. 4926) was agreed to.

Mr. STEVENS. I now ask for approval of Senator MCCAIN's amendment, as amended.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to amendment No. 4922, as amended.

The amendment (No. 4922), as amended, was agreed to.

Mr. STEVENS. I ask unanimous consent to reconsider both those actions at the same time. I ask that they be reconsidered and the motions be laid on the table.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. STEVENS. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. KYL). Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent Senator CLINTON be added as a cosponsor to the Stevens second-degree amendment to Senator MCCAIN's amendment No. 4922.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. STEVENS. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

AMENDMENT NO. 4927 TO AMENDMENT NO. 4921

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I send to the desk an amendment proposed by Senator DEMINT for Senator INOUE and myself, to the amendment numbered 4921, proposed by Senator DEMINT. I ask it be considered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Alaska [Mr. STEVENS], for Mr. DEMINT, for himself, Mr. STEVENS, and Mr. INOUE, proposes an amendment numbered 4927 to amendment No. 4921.

Mr. STEVENS. I ask unanimous consent the reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

(The text of the amendment is printed in today's RECORD under "Text of Amendments.")

Mr. STEVENS. I ask unanimous consent this be considered a complete substitute for the DeMint amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. STEVENS. I am pleased to offer this amendment on behalf of Senator DEMINT. The second-degree amendment clarifies some issues in the legislation and improves this important legislation. It has been agreed to now by Senator INOUE and myself and by Senator DEMINT. I think we are closer to passing the WARN Act. We have been working for 3 years through the Homeland Security and appropriations bill to move DHS to improve the national alerting system. This amendment is a large step forward.

If the worst happens and there is a successful attack on one of our ports, we need a tool to effectively alert communities surrounding the port. The purpose of this amendment is to do just that: to move the emergency alert system out of the area of broadcast radio and television into the wireless era. We need to give the Nation an alerting system that harnesses all the capabilities of the digital age.

When disaster strikes, we know not everyone will be listening to the radio or television, but almost all Americans will be carrying a mobile phone, a Blackberry, or a PDA. There are over 200 million wireless subscribers in the United States.

This is crucial because regardless of when or where disaster strikes, be it American seaports, a rail terminal, or an airport, minutes save lives.

This amendment will provide a tool for emergency managers at all levels of Government—Federal, State, or local—so they can quickly and effectively reach all affected individuals with specific lifesaving instructions. In addition to the threat posed by terrorist attacks, this system, the system created by this amendment, will give our managers the ability to alert communities of other hazards such as natural disasters or manmade accidents.

It is already funded. I worked during last year's budget reconciliation bill to provide $106 million for this program.

I urge our colleagues to vote for the amendment and move the Nation one step forward to having a modern public safety alerting system.

I urge the adoption of this second-degree amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment (No. 4927) was agreed to.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote, and I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, we will shortly have a request for a vote on this amendment, as amended. Hopefully, it will take place around noon tomorrow.

I know of no other business we have to come before us tonight. We will await the wrapup statement to be sent to us by the leader's office.

I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Ms. COLLINS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. CORNYN). Without objection, it is so ordered.

Ms. COLLINS. Mr. President, it is my understanding that either shortly this evening or tomorrow the Senator from South Carolina will be coming to the floor to speak on the agreement that has been worked out among all the players, which is based on legislation he introduced, S. 1753, the Warning Alert and Response Network Act, the so-called WARN Act. This amendment would create the national alert system which will contribute to a strengthened emergency management system for our country. The amendment will create a national alert office within the Department of Homeland Security and will ensure that the office will work closely with the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, NOAA, to bring together the wealth of expertise in both of these agencies to create an alert system that will transmit alerts in response to all threats to public safety, whether they are a terrorist attack, a natural disaster or a manmade accident.

The amendment directs this new office to develop a 21st century alert system that takes advantage of new technologies, including technologies to better alert underserved communities.

Five years ago, all of us remember the frustration of trying to get accurate information. Most of us found that our cell phones were no longer functioning. At that point, we did not have Blackberries, and we had a very difficult time communicating.

The legislation that Senator DEMINT has authored helps to respond to that need to disseminate information quickly and accurately to the public using a variety of tools. The new system would use multiple modes of communication, providing alerts not only by television and radio but also cell phones, Blackberries, and other wireless devices such as the Internet, satellite television, and other means of communication.

The DeMint proposal builds on the recommendations of the White House Katrina Report to employ all available 21st century technologies both to update and utilize the National Emergency Alert System in order to provide the general public with advanced notification of, as well as instructions during, a disaster or other emergencies.

We need a warning and alert system in this country that keeps pace with new technologies and an increasingly mobile society. No longer is it adequate to depend on television and radios to disseminate absolutely critical public safety information.

I believe that the approach in this amendment will save lives by creating a system with the capability to alert individuals to dangers, whether they are watching television, driving in their cars or sitting on the beach with a cell phone and a Blackberry. Yes, some of us take the Blackberry and the cell phone even when we are on the beach.

I thank Senator DEMINT for his work on this important amendment. I thank the Commerce Committee, which has worked very closely with the Homeland Security Committee to work out some issues, and I am pleased to support its passage as amended by the amendment of Senator INOUE and Senator STEVENS.

Thank you, Mr. President.

I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DEMINT. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

AMENDMENT NO. 4921

Mr. DEMINT. Mr. President, I will speak on my amendment, which is based on legislation I introduced last year called the WARN Act.

First, I thank the managers of this legislation for their tireless work, particularly Senator COLLINS and Senator

STEVENS, who have helped bring this amendment up for consideration.

America needs the world's best port security. This legislation we are debating will help America get it.

While our Nation has come a long way in preparing for the threat posed by natural disasters and terrorist attack since the creation of the Department of Homeland Security, there are still areas where we can and must do better.

If, God forbid, there is a successful attack at one of our ports, minutes will make the difference between life and death for many citizens in the surrounding communities. To save lives, our first responders will need the tools to immediately communicate with people in harm's way.

For decades, the emergency broadcast system has largely been the only available tool. As people are increasingly on the move, getting word out via television and radio alone is not effective. We need to do more.

This amendment does that by building on the foundation of the emergency broadcast system and bringing it into the 21st century. Over 200 million Americans subscribe to wireless services, Blackberrys, cell phones or other PDAs. This amendment leverages these new mobile capabilities, in addition to television and radio, to provide alerts that will save lives during disasters.

Wireless networks have enthusiastically endorsed the WARN Act and look forward to competing with each other to create the best system.

The need for this system is obvious. Whether it is the foiled London airline bombing plots or the train attacks in India, we are constantly reminded we must be vigilant in our efforts to secure America's homeland. One year ago, terrorists brutally attacked the London subway system, killing dozens. We have since discovered that terrorists were targeting commuter lines running under the New York Harbor. In July, we saw terrorists in India kill 300 innocent men, women and children and injure over 700.

If the unthinkable happens and we are attacked with a chemical, biological or radiological weapon, we must be prepared to respond. The WARN Act does this, establishing a system that represents a major advance in emergency management. One of the most effective ways to save lives is to keep people out of the impacted areas and efficiently evacuate those who are already affected. Under this new system, we will be able to tell some people to stay where they are if it is safe; others can be given instructions to evacuate in certain directions depending on their location and the direction of the wind or they could be told how to avoid the impacted area all together, preventing first responders from being forced to manage new victims.

While the system would be a crucial tool in saving lives in the event that there was an attack at one of our ports, the uses of this new national alerting system extend well beyond terrorists attacks, to manmade or natural disasters. A year and a half ago, a town in my State of South Carolina was exposed to a massive chlorine gas release. The train crash that caused the release occurred at 2:39 in the morning. Beeping television or radio is not much help when the owner is sleeping and the TV and radio are silent. What could have been helpful would have been if emergency managers in the area could have run the cell phones that were designed to turn on in emergencies so the individuals in the affected area could have been instructed to evacuate away from the path of the chlorine cloud and get to safer ground.

Finally, the new system set up by the WARN Act will have significant impact for the response to natural disasters. For example, in the Midwest, tornadoes pose a grave threat. Tornado sirens have a limited reach and can save some, but by leveraging the capabilities of cell phones, we can effectively direct individuals who are in the path of a tornado to take cover or get out of the way.

The applications are promising, as well, along the gulf and Atlantic coasts, where hurricanes often make landfall. This year could still be a strong hurricane season, with predictions of three or four major hurricanes category 3 or above. If one of one of these makes landfall, it will trigger a massive evacuation.

The system created by the WARN Act will provide crucial information to aid in evacuation and recovery. It will alert evacuees to the closest shelter with beds and where water and food is being distributed after the storm and what roads are not usable as evacuation routes.

We all hope and pray disasters—natural, manmade or terrorist—never happen, but we must be prepared. Today, I ask my colleagues to join in supporting this amendment.

Again, I thank Senator COLLINS and all those who have worked to bring up this amendment. This way we give first responders one of the more crucial tools they need to save lives and secure our homeland.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Maine.

Ms. COLLINS. Mr. President, I spoke earlier in favor of the amendment of the Senator from South Carolina. While he is here, I again commend him for his effort, his leadership in this area, and for working with both the Homeland Security and the Commerce Committees to work out some technical issues. His amendment is going to make a big difference. All of us remember 5 years ago on this day how difficult it was to get information—our cell phones were not working; we did not have Blackberrys then. The Senator's approach will ensure that we use every possible means to inform the public when there is an incident that is a threat to public safety.

I salute the Senator for his leadership. This is an excellent proposal. I am pleased to support it.

PUBLIC SAFETY PROMOTION

Mr. INOUE. I appreciate the efforts of my colleagues, Senator STEVENS, Senator DEMINT, and Senator BEN NELSON, in working to build consensus on the pending amendment, which will improve our Nation's ability to transmit critical emergency information to the public in times of crisis. As we consider this amendment, however, I believe it is important for us to clarify that provisions in this act do not affect or in any way limit or impair the Federal Communications Commission's existing authority under the Communications Act to promote public safety. As my colleagues well know, one of the most fundamental and significant statutory mandates of the FCC is the promotion of safety of life and property through the use of wire and radio communication.

As a result, while section 103(f) of the amendment makes clear that no new regulatory authority is granted to the FCC, other than to regulate compliance with its provisions and as specified in subsection 103(d) and (e), I would ask my colleague, Senator DEMINT, to confirm my understanding that the amendment will have no impact on the FCC's existing regulatory authority under the Communications Act to promote public safety through the use of communications technologies.

Mr. DEMINT. Mr. President, I agree with the interpretation and understanding of my colleague, Senator INOUE, and thank him for his assistance and support in working on this amendment.

Mr. STEVENS. I concur with Senator INOUE and Senator DEMINT.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate majority leader.

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, I ask consent at 12 noon tomorrow the Senate proceed to a vote in relation to the DeMint amendment No. 4921, as amended; further, that notwithstanding the adoption of the amendment 4927, the second-degree amendment be modified to reflect a perfecting amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

MORNING BUSINESS

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, I unanimous consent that the Senate now proceed to a period of morning business, with Senators permitted to speak for up to 10 minutes each.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

REMEMBERING SEPTEMBER 11, 2001

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, there are moments in every lifetime which defy words. For me, those moments are the attack on Pearl Harbor, the day President Kennedy was assassinated, the Good Friday earthquake in Alaska, my own airplane crash in 1978, and the day I viewed the Exxon Valdez oilspill. My most recent and most vivid memory is the helicopter trip I took over Ground Zero with my good friend, Senator INOUE, on September 13, 2001.

The total impact of what Senator INOUE and I saw just shocked the two of us. We both went through World War II and saw a lot of trauma, a lot of destruction. But nothing was more stark in terms of our memories, particularly mine, than what I saw that day in New York. Embedded in my mind then were the questions: Who would do something like this? And why? We would soon learn the answers, and those answers changed our Nation forever.

September 11, 2001, was one of our country's darkest days, but the worst in our enemies brought out the best in our citizens. Their efforts reflected the words of the author Henry James:

We work in the dark, we do what we can, we give what we have.

Following those attacks, Americans did everything they could to help those directly affected. Those of us in Congress almost immediately made $40 billion available to initiate recovery.

Since then, our country has been fortunate. We have met the terrorists abroad rather than here on our soil, and we have accomplished this in a way consistent with our ideals.

Democracy is harder to move than a dictatorship. It moves slowly, but it moves surely. There is much more work left to do, but so far, we have been able to prevent another massive terrorist attack on our country.

The terrorists who attacked us 5 years ago thought they could defeat us. They questioned our resolve and our dedication to our principles. They were wrong. Our resolve is strong, and it has brought about a different response than the terrorists anticipated. The past 5 years have been a proving ground for our country's courage and commitment.

Today I am reminded of the words once spoken by President Reagan. He said this:

Perhaps you and I have lived with this miracle too long to be properly appreciative. Freedom is a fragile thing and is never more than one generation from extinction. It is not ours by inheritance; it must be fought for and defended constantly by each generation, for it comes only once to a people. Those who have known freedom, and then lost it, have never known it again.

Today we pause to remember those we have lost over the past 5 years, men and women who sacrificed everything so that this miracle, the great American experiment, could continue. Our thoughts and prayers are with them and with their families. And we will remember forever September 11.

Mr. FEINGOLD. Mr. President, today, our Nation honors the memory of those who were killed in the terrorist attacks of September 11, 2001. We also pay tribute to the heroism of the first responders who selflessly risked, and even gave, their lives in the rescue and recovery missions that followed those horrific attacks. Five years after that tragic day, we still remember their tremendous bravery, and we remember the simple acts of kindness that Americans all over the country displayed as they donated equipment for the first responders, observed moments of silence, or flew the flag in a show of patriotism and unity. Each of these acts, however large or small, contributed to our Nation's recovery. Let us not forget the great strength of spirit that guided Americans through that difficult time as we move forward, bound together by our faith in this great and free Nation.

As we mark this solemn day, let us also rededicate ourselves to defeating the terrorists who continue to threaten us. This should not be a partisan issue every Senator wants to protect our country and every American wants to defeat the terrorists who attacked us. This must be our top priority, and we must strive to regain the unity and resolve that bound us together after 9/11 as we show the terrorists how badly they have underestimated the strength and resilience of the American people.

Mr. ALLARD. Mr. President, I rise today to speak on the approaching fifth anniversary of the terrorist attacks against our Nation.

I still vividly remember that morning. When my chief of staff came to tell me about the attacks on the World Trade Center, I was in a meeting on how to improve our 911 emergency response system to better suit the needs of our first responders in rural areas. Even then we knew right away that our country would be forever changed.

The events of September 11 undoubtedly remain etched into the memory of every American. Five years later we are reminded daily of the profound impact that fateful morning had on our great Nation. Although deliberation and debate continues all across the country and in this body to determine the best way to keep our Nation safe, as we approach the anniversary of 9/11 we must commemorate and pray for those who lost their lives, for their surviving loved ones, and for the brave men and women serving in our Armed Forces around the world protecting our freedoms.

I said it the day after the tragedy here on the floor of the Senate, and I still believe it: America is strong. No terrorist strike will undermine our country to a point that would make us lose our fundamental purpose as a nation and a people.

We as a nation have adjusted to a new way of life since that day. We understand that these measures have changed our lives slightly but not our way of life. Increased security at airports, a transformed homeland security position, and a new national intelligence apparatus are but a few of the changes we have made in combating the new war of the 21st century.

After that day in 2001, many of us in elected service had to answer "what happens next?" We knew then that the phrase "war on terror" had been used lightly before and that this war had been ongoing before September 11. But our eyes were opened that day, and our strategic outlook was dramatically altered. President Bush has called it the long war, and I agree with him. We are in a struggle for survival against a faceless enemy who uses terror as a weapon against civilians anywhere, anytime.

It is this reality that has driven our foreign policy for the last 5 years and will continue to define how we fight against terror abroad. This is a different kind of war than what we have confronted before. Not only will we have to fight terrorists on the battlefield but also in urban areas, cyberspace, and over the airwaves. Not only are we fighting with bullets but also with ideas. Our greatest export continues to be freedom and democracy, and it will be these tools, not force, that will eventually lead us to victory.

But any victory we have will be hard fought. Our enemy is a radical network of terrorists that can flourish anywhere in the world. The terrorists' directive commands them to kill Christians and Jews, to kill all Americans, and make no distinction among military and civilians, including women and children.

It is with this knowledge that we approach the global war on terror. After September 11, we could not sit back and wait for the terrorists to strike again. On the contrary, our President, with congressional backing, ordered our Government to go on the offensive. We have shut down sanctuaries of terror in Iraq and Afghanistan. We have cut off the terror financing, and we have worked with our friends and allies to track down and apprehend terror operatives wherever they may be. We have had many such successes against terrorism since 9/11.

In the past, we would combat terrorism mostly using law enforcement mechanisms. We now combat these terrorists by taking the fight to them with our international partners using every available resource.

Some of these resources come from our intelligence community. Prior to September 11, our intelligence and law enforcement communities were restricted from sharing certain information with one another. Thankfully, today our counterterrorism efforts are more comprehensive, and these barriers no longer exist.

Al-Qaida used to train thousands of terrorists in Afghanistan under the nose of the international community without any repercussions to the organization or the Taliban. Thankfully, no longer is Afghanistan a safe haven for those brewing plots against our Nation. The Afghan people have been freed from the oppressive Taliban and fight with us side-by-side in the war on terror.

Additionally, Iraq was governed by a mass-murderer and a state sponsor of terror and now boasts for the first time a democratically elected government.

Of course, none of this could have been attained without the men and women of the armed services. Many of these servicemen have sacrificed everything to protect our freedoms abroad. Yet while the cost has been high, the cost of doing nothing would be even greater. Our country continues to mourn for the men and women who have lost their lives while on duty in Iraq, Afghanistan, and other parts of the globe.

Despite the many difficulties in this war, our Armed Forces have not retreated nor walked away in the face of adversity. They continue to seek out terrorists to disrupt their plans of horror both in the Middle East and elsewhere. They also continue to provide support and guidance to the Iraqi and Afghani people in their newborn democracies. Our citizens in uniform have taken the battle to the enemy and achieved success.

As we mourn the victims lost on September 11 and the Americans who have lost their lives since that day protecting us, let us remember that we are all Americans and must continue to remain committed to protecting what we hold dear. We will never forget the events of September 11. It will forever be a harsh reminder of the intentions of our enemies who detest freedom and democracy.

That said, we must also never forget what we witnessed in the days following this tragedy as America came together for the greater good. From that experience we learned that we as Americans are much more united than not. Much has changed since that fateful day of September 11, but our country has emerged prepared for the new challengers of the 21st century. Let us remember those who lost their lives that day and never forget why we fight abroad today.

Mr. SALAZAR. Mr. President, I wish to take a few minutes to reflect upon one of our Nation's most trying hours. Five years ago, our Nation embarked on the greatest test of its courage and mettle since the "greatest generation" rose to the challenge of defending freedom in World War II from the forces of hatred and fascism.

As the 9/11 Commission observed, the morning of Tuesday, September 11, 2001, was a beautiful morning in New York and here in Washington, DC, before the peace was shattered. None of us will forget those hours that morning, hours which saw our Nation face unimaginable tragedy. This defining moment awoke within every American the grim knowledge that we are a nation at war with hatred and fear and that we must rise to the challenge. Each of us will remember where we were, what we were doing, when America turned to face this new challenge with sorrow and resolve.

In the morning hours of September 11, starting at 8:46 a.m., we experienced the 21st century's "Pearl Harbor" moment. Americans stood transfixed by the images we saw unfolding before us: the brutal violence of intolerance and the unimaginable courage of our heroes on the ground and in the air striving valiantly to prevent it. By 10:38 a.m., America began to truly understand the scope of what had happened: the thousands of innocent Americans lost, the destruction of the Twin Towers and damage to the Pentagon, the dawning of a new age in our Nation's proud history.

Each American grappled to understand this moment in history as it unfolded before us, trying to make sense of senselessness. As a nation, we continue to struggle with it each day. Like all Americans, I have spent many hours seeking meaning from and understanding of the events of September 11, 2001. It has not been an easy task, nor will it ever be completed.

But we know the importance of remembering those who are not here with us now—the innocent passengers aboard those four planes and in the Towers and the Pentagon; the courageous first responders who charged into the chaos to try to save their fellow man; the brave servicemembers who have given their lives around the world to protect the freedoms we continue to enjoy, to engage our enemies wherever they may run and hide.

The people who perished during the September 11 attacks were not simply victims: they were mothers and fathers, brothers and sisters, sons and daughters, husbands and wives, and friends and neighbors. We remember them for the shared jokes and laughter, the debates and challenges, the quarrels and sometimes heart-wrenching disagreements, the fellowship and love of family that bind us together.

Mr. President, 9/11 represented a crossroads for our Nation: we had the choice between fear and hope, between appealing to our higher angels and succumbing to our darkest demons. A year from now, children starting kindergarten will never have known a world before 9/11. It is my greatest hope that a century from now, when schoolchildren look back on 9/11, it will be viewed not as the beginning of a time of darkness over our democracy but as the clarion call for us to protect and defend the fundamental rights and liberties we enjoy, a rallying to the fundamental beliefs that we as Americans hold so dear. It is the least we can do, out of respect for those who left us that day.

Those lost to us on September 11 and the struggles afterwards shall never be forgotten. They remain in our hearts, the source of our resolve. As we have in the past, America shall meet this challenge with honor, wisdom, and an unbreakable spirit. As a nation, we recommit ourselves to never giving in to those who would misrepresent faith to spread hate, fear, and violence. We know that the gifts bestowed upon us are the gifts of faith, hope, and love. We shall eschew the politicking of fear and instead choose the unity of purpose that our times require.

Five years after that day, our Nation recommit itself to remembering the tremendous loss we suffered as a country. We seek to honor the sacrifices made on September 11 by renewing our faith in America itself. I stand here as sure today as I was when I went to sleep on the night of September 10, 2001, that it is the promise of our common goals of hope and progress, not fear and violence, that deliver freedom and security both at home and across the globe, for all people.

Ms. SNOWE. Mr. President, today, across my great State of Maine and throughout America, in countless ceremonies—public and private, in testaments—planned and spontaneous, and in towns of every size and stripe, we commemorate with mutual solemnity the fifth anniversary of a day born out of inconsolable and unimaginable loss as well as unconquerable spirit and ennobling service September 11, 2001.

As we pause to mourn those who have passed from us and as we confront once again unspeakable acts of barbarism and horror, we cannot help but find abundant comfort, solace, inspiration, and pride in the eternal images and remembrances of heroism and sacrifice on that terrible day.

Through what President Lincoln once eloquently phrased as the "mystic chords of memory," we share in reverent and heart-wrenching moments of silence and find a unifying kinship with those who convene at Ground Zero in lower Manhattan, at the Pentagon, and in Shanksville, PA. And regardless of our circumstance, location, and occupation, we cast aside our differences, agendas, and personal and individual pursuits, to place into action and live out the immortal words of our Founding Fathers that reverberate throughout the halls of Congress as well as the annals of our history: E Pluribus Unum, or "Out of Many, One." Out of the ashes of destruction, we become one Nation, indivisible.

At the same time, we are not immune to feeling a panoply of emotions—patriotism, pride, anger—as well as a persistent, gnawing disbelief that such calculated savagery could exist in the world and could be perpetrated so brutally and ruthlessly against innocent people. And those feelings intensify when we put faces and names with the long line of those who perished. It becomes especially personal when we reflect upon the Mainers whom we have lost. We grieved then—and we feel a deep, inescapable sorrow now for the tragedy that befell Anna Allison, Carol Flyzik, Robert Jalbert, Jacqueline Norton, Robert Norton, James Roux, Robert Schlegel, and Stephen Ward. Our thoughts and prayers remain—as they have for the last 5 years and as they will always—with their families and loved ones.

While we forever honor their memory, we also understand that the greatest memorial is to embrace all that we have retained as a nation—our strength, our sense of purpose, and our veneration of the principles of liberty and justice—even and especially in tumultuous times.

Let us remember how that one day in September not only changed America and the world but also reminded us of what really matters—of the tenets and people we should value and what true heroes really look like. I recall those passengers who, when faced with the horrible certainty of their circumstances, brought down United Airlines flight 93 to save the lives of others—not to mention the very symbols of our democracy, the Capitol and the White House.

On this poignant occasion, we celebrate those heroes who walk among us today while the legacy of those who perished on 9/11 echoes throughout New York, Washington DC, Pennsylvania, and every town and city in this land. And we revere the indelible and exemplary contributions of all first responders on 9/11 and those made daily throughout our Nation by firefighters, police officers, rescue workers, and Americans who are ever-capable of performing extraordinary deeds.

We are also mindful of our military men and women who protect and defend our way of life. Whether on American shores and soil or around the globe, their steadfast sense of duty is an inspiration to us all. As we herald the supreme actions of the past, we must remain unrelenting in our focus on the trials and tribulations of the present and the future. The plot foiled by British authorities this past summer was a chilling reminder that underscores the lurking and merciless threat we face—and that we cannot afford to yield to the call of complacency. Just as our enemies have proved they are ever-patient, so must we prove we are ever-vigilant.

We come together on days of remembrance such as 9/11 to draw strength from those who are with us and from the memories of those who are not. We recognize the remarkable and munificent valor of fallen friends, family, and fellow countrymen whose valiant example binds us to them and their noble heritage—and binds us to each other today—and into a future more illumined by their selfless deeds on our behalf.

That sentiment brings to mind a great son of Maine, GEN Joshua Chamberlain, who, in 1889, said the following upon dedicating the Monument to the 20th Maine that he so nobly commanded at the Battle of Gettysburg:

In great deeds something abides. On great fields something stays. Forms change and pass. Bodies disappear. But spirits linger to consecrate ground for the vision-places of souls. And reverent men and women from afar, and generations that know us not and that we know not of, heart-drawn to see where and by whom great things were suffered and done for them . . . And lo! the shadow of a mighty presence shall wrap them in its bosom, and the power of the vision pass into their souls.

It is that power of vision that we have in common that draws us together today. From that it surely follows the outpouring of respect and admiration that testifies to a solitary and solemn truth—that time will never, ever, dim the glorious deeds that were done in the face of heinous evil.

The morning of September 11, 2001, began with such beautiful blue skies but ended with a nation in grief-stricken desolation and stunned shock. In Washington, DC, I watched the images along with the rest of the world.

Later, as the sun set over the National Mall—still capped by smoke billowing from the wound in the side of the Pentagon—I will never forget joining with my colleagues in the House and Senate on the Capitol steps to sing “God Bless America.” We sang to send a message to the country and to the world that we would never be deterred—that freedom is forged by something much more resolute than any act of terror.

Recalling all that September 11 represents—the tragedies and the triumphs—how it revealed the better angels of our nature for the world to see in our hour of calamitous attack, despair, and fear, we must unequivocally resolve on this day—and every day—that we will bring the fight to the enemy, will not falter in our unwavering commitment, we will persevere, and most of all, we will and must prevail.

Mr. MARTINEZ. Mr. President, today is a day of remembrance, a day of remembrance here in America and around the globe. Five years ago today, on a clear September morning, serenity was broken by death and destruction.

What happened in New York, in Washington, and in Pennsylvania that day we will never forget.

We will never forget the nearly 3,000 people whose lives were lost on that day; we will never forget their families; and we will continue to honor their lives by defending our freedom and fighting against all those who wish our Nation harm.

Much has happened in the last 5 years since September 11, 2001. Our Government has responded in a variety of ways.

So that we could better “connect the dots” in the future, the Department of Homeland Security was established, and later, a Director of National Intelligence was put into place so that our intelligence community could work together more seamlessly.

Numerous security upgrades have been put into place across our country, new technologies have been developed and implemented to curb the advances of terrorists, and we are safer now than we were then.

Over the last 5 years, we have waged an unprecedented and global campaign against terrorism. America is safer because we have had the PATRIOT Act. Our families are safer because we have had the surveillance necessary to make sure that those who are speaking on telephones with al-Qaida operatives overseas are being monitored.

Our Nation is safer because we have pursued, captured, and interrogated terrorists and used that information to capture other, high-ranking al-Qaida leaders. We are safer because we have had the leadership, tenacity, and the opportunity to pursue terrorists wherever they may go.

Our campaign against terrorism has been done in a comprehensive way with cooperation from other countries and it has been done utilizing all the power that the State has, not only militarily but through the surveillance of terrorist training camps, a strong diplomatic front working with our allies, and through financial means watching and seizing the bank accounts from where terrorists draw their resources.

Our comprehensive efforts are about keeping America safe. As we remember those who died on 9/11, we also must remember that we are not safe yet.

We are safer. We have been kept safe, but we must continue the vigilance, we must continue the determined campaign against terrorists and the states that sponsor terrorism.

Thanks to the faithful leadership and resolve of all those that serve to protect us, especially our Armed Forces who give so much, no other attacks have occurred on American soil to date. We must continue to defend freedom here at home and abroad. As a Member of the Senate, I will continue to work with my colleagues on both sides of the aisle and in both Houses of Congress to make sure that we continue to devote the necessary resources to this continuing mission.

As our President said on that mournful day 5 years ago, “A great people has been moved to defend a great nation.

Terrorist attacks can shake the foundations of our biggest buildings, but they cannot touch the foundation of America. These acts shattered steel, but they cannot dent the steel of American resolve.”

Our Nation will never forget those lost on September 11, 2001, and we can demonstrate our continued commitment to their lives and memories through our unending defense of Democracy and our blessed and beloved United States of America.

Mr. ENZI. Mr. President, 5 years ago we saw the face of evil cross our shores as a band of terrorists took control of four planes and used our own technology against us to kill thousands of our fellow citizens. Plotting in secrecy and under the cover of darkness, in caves in the remote hills of Afghanistan, these terrorists planned to kill as many Americans as they could, destroying some carefully selected buildings that, to them, symbolized our Nation and our unique way of life.

We all remember that day with great clarity and we will never forget where we were and what we were doing when we heard the news—a plane had crashed into one of the Trade Towers in what appeared to be a tragic accident. Then, a second plane struck the other tower. It was then clear that this was no accident. We were under attack.

In the moments that followed a nation looked on in horror as we saw the face of bravery and courage under fire as the men and women of New York’s police and fire departments responded to the attack in New York. They battled long and hard, against the odds, to come to the aid of those who were trapped in the towers. Sadly, in the effort to save those who were in desperate trouble, many of those first responders were also trapped in the towers as they weakened, and ultimately collapsed.

As we watched events continue to unfold in New York, we heard reports that another plane had hit the Pentagon and caused a considerable amount of damage to the building and claimed the lives of many of those who were working there. Then came the news that a fourth plane had crashed in a lonely field in Pennsylvania. Suddenly the attack took on massive proportions as we looked with fear and trepidation to the skies and wondered if there were more planes headed for additional targets throughout the country.

In the days that followed, the story behind the events became clear. The attack was orchestrated by a terrorist group that was led by Osama bin Laden. Three planes had hit their targets. The passengers on the fourth, made aware of the fate of the other three planes by friends and loved ones on their cell phones, had launched their own attack on the hijackers and they were able to take control of the plane and stop the hijackers from using it to destroy another landmark and kill more Americans in a crowded city. The brave men and women on that flight had sacrificed their own lives so that others might be spared.

Those are the bare details, a brief outline of some of what happened that day. It was a day that had a great impact on every American—and it hit us all on a deeply personal level. Ask anyone and you will see that we all have our own story, our own recollection of what happened on September 11 and what it meant to us. We aren't unique in that. The Trade Center was a global marketplace, so people from all over the world also have their own story to tell about that day, especially those who lost friends and loved ones in the attacks on the Trade Center and the Pentagon.

When it is written, history will make it clear that September 11 was more than an American tragedy. It was the beginning of a global nightmare.

It has now been 5 years since the day the towers fell and with the passage of time has come study after study, investigations, and other attempts to make some sense of everything that happened that day. There were failures of some systems to work at their peak efficiency, and there were warnings that, with hindsight, should have been handled differently. The important thing now is not to place blame and point fingers, but to ensure we are fully and adequately protected so we don't have to experience another September 11.

As I prepared my remarks for this day, I thought about my young grandson, now 3 years old. He is a wonderful addition to my life and he continues to give me an added perspective to the events I see on the news every night. I know someday he will ask me about that day. When he does, I hope I am able to find the right words to explain to him about the courage and the bravery of all those who worked so hard to try to save the lives of those who were in danger that day. I hope I can help him understand the reasons why our brave service men and women are fighting on the front lines of the war on terror to keep him safe. It won't be easy for his is a world of peace and innocence and far removed from the hatred that drove the events of that day.

Still, no matter what I tell him, I know he will ask me why these things happen. His grampa will tell him that this is a world full of so many good things—like his parents who love him so very dearly, and the things he loves to do, like go fishing with his grampa. Unfortunately, it is also a world where people preach anger and hatred and try to harm people they don't even know.

If it is a hard lesson for us to learn, you can imagine how difficult it will be for a small child. How to talk to our children about September 11 was a problem when it happened, and it will continue to be so as we work to put an end to terrorism around the globe, wherever it exists.

Ultimately, that will be the legacy of September 11. We were cruelly attacked on that day, by a group that underestimated our resolve as a nation and our will as individuals to right the great wrong that had been done to us. Today, 5 years later, we stand united, still strongly committed to putting an end to the threat of terrorism, wherever it appears. We didn't start this battle, but our Armed Forces will, once again, put an end to it.

Five years ago the world stood still, and it was changed forever. The ripples begun on September 11 continue to have repercussions that draw us back to that day almost constantly. As we remember the events of that dark, sad day, we pause to remember all those who lost their lives, especially their families and their loved ones. Our thoughts and prayers are constantly with you. We remember the fireman, police and rescue squads who responded to the sites of the attacks and performed with great bravery. The concern they showed for others and the sacrifices they made to try to save anyone they could will never be forgotten. And, we remember our servicemen and women who stand guard around the world, defending our precious freedoms and our way of life. We owe them all a debt we will never be able to repay for the sacrifices they continue to make on our behalf.

Today we rededicate ourselves to the work that must be done to make our Nation stronger, safer and more secure so that our world will be a better place for us all to live. It will be difficult and it will require us all to play a part in the effort to rid the world of the threat of terror. It will ultimately be the legacy we will leave to those who will follow us—a world in which everyone is able to live in peace and freedom and without fear.

Ms. CANTWELL. Mr. President, five years after the terrorist attacks of September 11, we still feel the pain and loss of that terrible day. We will always honor the memory and spirit of those who lost their lives and those who gave their lives for others.

Our Nation's most enduring values were attacked on that day. We have a responsibility to those who died, to their families, and to the first responders who answered the call of duty without hesitation, to never forget and to never let this tragedy be repeated. Together we have a responsibility to all Americans to keep our Nation secure and our citizens safe.

Yet, 5 years after our cities were attacked, America is still not as secure as it should be. We must take the hard lessons from that devastating attack and confront the new challenges of a changing world. We must continue fighting for the tough, smart policies that will make our communities safer.

We have a lot of work ahead of us. Our vast transportation systems remain vulnerable. Our borders are porous.

To protect America, we must secure our ports, improve intelligence oversight, share information effectively, and allocate resources based on risk. We must fully implement the 9/11 Commission recommendations, improve nuclear material tracking, and strengthen our diplomacy around the world. We must deliver better support to our first responders to help them do their jobs.

In the aftermath of September 11, our Nation came together. Five years later, we must remember those we have lost, their courage and brave spirits, and once again, move forward together to better protect our communities and defend the freedom we cherish.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, I rise today to pay tribute to the innocent Americans who were killed in the terrorist attacks of September 11, 2001. I ask that we commemorate the emergency responders who provided relief in the aftermath of the attacks. I finally ask that we salute our brave men and women in uniform who have volunteered to serve their country in this time of need.

I offer my condolences to the family of Al Marchand from Alamogordo, NM, a flight attendant on United Airlines flight 175 and one of the first casualties on this horrific day. Since that day, many New Mexicans have volunteered to serve their country by entering the ranks of our Armed Forces. Some lost their lives in this war to protect our way of life. I will ask that the attached Associated Press article containing the names of these proud soldiers be printed into the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD. I also will pay tribute to LTC Marshall A. Gutierrez and LCpl Shane P. Harris, the two most recent casualties from New Mexico in the ongoing global war on terror.

Five years have passed since al-Qaida terrorists struck our homeland. The images and shock of that day are still with me. To this day, I am saddened by our losses, but I am also heartened by all the heroic acts of our citizens in what was the most shocking attack on our homeland. In the months following the attacks, our brave soldiers toppled the regime in Afghanistan that provided a base of operations for the terrorists who carried out the 2001 attacks. We helped that country establish a democratic government and are working with allies in NATO to bring peace and stability to a country that has spent much of its recent history in the strife of civil war.

One of the important lessons political and military leaders learned from the 2001 terrorist attacks was that America cannot stand by idly as threats to its security develop far from our shores. This required our intelligence and law enforcement agencies to work with friends and allies around the world and with each other to gather actionable intelligence that would help us disrupt terrorist plots at home and abroad. To help consolidate our domestic defense system, the Congress created the Department of Homeland Security. The Department of Homeland Security was organized to prevent attacks within the United States, reduce America's vulnerability to terrorism, and to minimize the damage and assist in the recovery from terrorists attacks in America. The Congress also followed the recommendations of the National Commission on Terrorist Attacks Upon the United States, the 9/11 Commission, and passed historic legislation that reformed the agencies that make up our intelligence community. While these reforms were important and necessary, the disruption of a recent plot to hijack planes flying from London to the United States shows us that our enemies are still bent on bringing terror into our cities.

Many of my fellow citizens from the State of New Mexico have contributed to strengthening our defenses in the global war on terror. An urban rescue team traveled from New Mexico to Virginia to help recover survivors from the ruins at the Pentagon. Sandia and Los Alamos National Laboratories helped identify the strains of anthrax that were found in Government office buildings shortly after the terrorist attacks. They helped develop a biological threat detection system that was deployed at the 2002 Winter Olympics, the 2004 Summer Olympics, and in locations around our Nation's Capital. The national labs have also been at the forefront in developing tools to detect and dispose of materials that can be used as a "dirty bomb" or other weapon of mass destruction. Finally, the National Infrastructure and Analysis Center—NISAC—is being used to develop response strategies for government officials and first responders for large and complex crises.

Over the past 5 years, we have learned a good deal more about how the attack was planned and executed, and we have spent countless man hours and resources to make our Nation safer. We can be proud of the fact that we have worked to implement most of the 9/11 Commission recommendations. We are more prepared as a Nation for these types of dangers than we were prior to September 11, 2001. But this is a struggle that will not end with the same clarity and decisiveness of battles past. So as we continue to adjust to the new sense of normal, I hope all Americans take time to reflect on the events of September 11, 2001, honor those who have fallen, and rededicate themselves for the struggle ahead.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the article to which I referred be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Senior Airman Jason Cunningham, 26, a Carlsbad native who also lived in Farmington and Gallup, killed March 4, 2002, while rescuing wounded troops in Marzak, Afghanistan.

Mr. KOHL. Mr. President, 5 years ago, the Nation woke up to a crisp and sunny fall day and went to bed in a world forever changed. We lost so much that day—3000 lives, a skyline, a sense of safety in our homes, our comforting ignorance of the stark face of evil. Since 9/11, we have tried to heal, to remember with honor those we lost. And we have tried to make real the false security we felt that crisp September morning before the first plane hit.

We have—and will continue to—debate what America has become since 9/11. We need to figure out if we are safer, if we have sacrificed too much freedom for security, if we have paid too little to bolster the first responders, if we have fought the wrong war in Iraq, if we haven't done the right work in Afghanistan. These questions should and must be answered.

But today, we need to put aside our considerable differences and recall the common, deep wound every American suffered on 9/11. Our sorrow, anger, and shock were not partisan; we were united in our outrage and unified in our resolve. As we remember today who and what we lost on 9/11, we must also remember the love we share for who and what we are in America. That is what was attacked that September morning—and that is what can bring us together to build a more secure America.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, today marks the fifth anniversary of the vicious attack on America by al-Qaida terrorists. Despite the passage of time, Americans still vividly recall with enormous pain and sorrow that dark and somber day.

We honor the nearly 3,000 innocent Americans who lost their lives that day. We recall the brave firefighters and first responders who sacrificed their lives so that others could live.

We vividly remember the images on television of the Twin Towers crumbling before our eyes. We could see from our office windows the plume of smoke rising from the Pentagon, and we realized that but for the grace of God and courage of the passengers on flight 93, the Capitol buildings and many of us could have met that same fate.

We recall the pledge by all Americans that this type of attack will never, ever occur again. We recall how all of us in Congress came together in common purpose.

And we recall the enormous outpouring of support from the entire world, which stood by us and reassured us, saying so eloquently, "Today, we are all Americans."

More than 200 sons and daughters of Massachusetts perished in that tragedy. I will ask that their names be printed in the RECORD. Today, more than ever, our thoughts and prayers are with them and their families and friends whose lives were changed forever on that tragic day.

Although their loved ones will never be brought back, I hope the words of Abraham Lincoln will provide a measure of solace on this anniversary—"We here highly resolve that those dead shall not have died in vain, that this nation, under God, shall have a new birth of freedom; and that government of the people, by the people, and for the people, shall not perish from the earth."

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the list of names to which I referred to be printed in the RECORD.

CELEBRATING HISPANIC HERITAGE MONTH

Mr. LUGAR. Mr. President, I appreciate this opportunity to join my many friends from the Hispanic community in Indiana and across the country as we celebrate Hispanic Heritage Month.

From September 15 through October 15, all Americans will take time to reflect upon and celebrate the many contributions that Americans of Hispanic and Latino descent have made to our Nation. Millions of Hispanic Americans have worked tirelessly to provide for their families, strengthen their communities, and enrich our national culture.

I also wish to recognize the approaching 196th anniversary of Mexican Independence. I am hopeful that, as we commemorate this important milestone, we can also celebrate the remarkable friendship between our two nations as neighbors and partners for peace and justice in the world.

HONORING OUR ARMED FORCES

SERGEANT GERMAINE L. DEBRO

Mr. HAGEL. Mr. President, I rise to express my sympathy over the loss of Nebraska Army National Guard Sergeant Germaine Debro of Omaha, NE. Sergeant Debro died when an improvised explosive device detonated near his vehicle near Balad, Iraq on September 4. He was 33 years old.

The son of a retired U.S. Air Force technical sergeant, Sergeant Debro and his family moved frequently around the country. Sergeant Debro attended Omaha Benson High School for 1 year and then moved to Arkansas where he graduated from high school in 1991.

In October 1994, Sergeant Debro enlisted in the U.S. Army. Following his service in the Army, Sergeant Debro enlisted in the Nebraska Army National Guard in October 1997. He was assigned to Detachment 1, Troop B, 1-167th Cavalry Squadron based in Wahoo, NE. Sergeant Debro remained in Wahoo until being reassigned to the Fremont, Nebraska-based Troop B, 1-167th Cavalry Squadron in January 2001. While serving with the 1-167th Cavalry Squadron, Sergeant Debro was mobilized for several overseas deployment including service in Kuwait in 2001 and in Bosnia-Herzegovina from 2002-2003. Sergeant Debro will be remembered as a loyal soldier who had a strong sense of duty, honor and love of country. Thousands of brave Americans like Sergeant Debro are currently serving in Iraq.

Sergeant Debro is survived by his parents, Alvin and Priscilla Debro; and brothers, Alvin Jr., who served in the U.S. Army, and Maurice, all of Omaha. Our thoughts and prayers are with them at this difficult time. America is proud of Sergeant Debro's heroic service and mourns his loss.

I ask my colleagues to join me and all Americans in honoring SGT Germaine L. Debro.

DARFUR

Mr. FEINGOLD. Mr. President, we are at a crossroads in the 3-year-old conflict raging in Sudan's Darfur region. Last week's Security Council Resolution 1706, authorizing a United Nations peacekeeping force for Darfur, represents the culmination of persistent advocacy for a robust international intervention and offers the resources and mandate necessary to bring an end to violence which has already taken more than 200,000 lives and forced an estimated 2.5 million Darfurians from their homes.

Unfortunately, the Government of Sudan has rejected the U.N.'s plan and is actively undermining peace efforts while exacerbating the humanitarian situation. The Sudanese Government's behavior increasingly violates both international law and the terms of the Peace Agreement it signed in May.

If the Sudanese Government remains on its current trajectory, disaster—perhaps on the scale of the 1994 Rwandan genocide—is imminent. The current 7,000-member African Union Mission in Sudan, which has been struggling valiantly to protect innocent civilians for 2 years, is set to withdraw at the end of this month. If it is not replaced by a U.N. force at that time or given an extended and expanded mandate, a power vacuum will result that many agree would lead to a resurgence in violence from all sides.

Already, the future of the peace process is at risk and increasing insecurity are leading humanitarian aid organizations to retreat from the areas where their services are needed most. More than a dozen aid workers have been murdered since the Darfur Peace Agreement was signed in May.

It is time for the United States and the international community to use all means of influence at their disposal to ensure that U.N. Resolution 1706 is implemented. In contrast to the small African Union contingent, which is severely limited in both what it is able and allowed to do, the recently-authorized United Nations force would include up to 22,500 U.N. troops and police officers and an immediate injection of air, engineering, and communication support for the African Union force. The resolution, passed unanimously by the Security Council on August 31, also gives the U.N. peacekeepers power to take all necessary measures to protect humanitarian aid workers and civilian populations.

In an affront to international law and the international community, Sudan's envoys refused to attend last week's United Nations meetings and the Government has rejected the introduction of a U.N. peacekeeping force, likening it to "western colonization." Most recently, the Government has issued an ultimatum to the African Union, demanding that it refrain from incorporating U.N. reinforcements or withdraw its peacekeepers from the country. The Sudanese Government insists that it will defeat rebel groups in Darfur on its own and has announced intentions to move more than 10,000 troops to the region. In effect, this amounts to sending the same soldiers who displaced Darfur's refugees to protect them.

Over the past week, there has been a military buildup in Darfur, with witnesses reporting an influx of Sudanese military equipment and troops, which is in direct violation of May's Darfur Peace Agreement. In fact, while the Security Council was debating how to end the violence in Darfur, the Sudanese military was indiscriminately bombing rebel-held villages. Firsthand sources report flight crews rolling bombs off plane ramps, a tactic often practiced by Government forces in their 21-year civil war to devastate whole areas of southern Sudan, with nightmarish consequences for civilians.

Meanwhile, the situation on the ground is deteriorating rapidly. The more than 2 million refugees in Darfur and neighboring Chad—two thirds of them children—are particularly susceptible to malaria, diarrhea, and other health problems and live in fear of forced recruitment by rebel fighters or bomb attacks by the military. This current escalation in instability seriously impedes the mobility of humanitarian organizations, preventing them from reaching civilians in Sudan's most dangerous areas. The World Food Program reports that its existing food rations—upon which some 6 million Sudanese rely—will run out in January, adding another dimension of desperation.

In unanimously passing Resolution 1706, the international community has delivered a clear message to the Government in Khartoum that it needs to abide by international law and its own commitments. Last-minute changes the recent resolution included a reaffirmation of the sovereignty and “territorial integrity of Sudan” and the first paragraph of the resolution invites the Sudanese Government to consent to the deployment of a U.N. force, but such consent is not required by international law or the text of the resolution. Additionally, the U.N. Resolution threatens sanctions for any individual or group that violates human rights or the Darfur Peace Agreement.

At this critical juncture, the Government of Sudan must fulfill its obligation to relieve the suffering of its citizens by working with the United Nations to agree upon a robust, coordinated force to end the violence in Darfur. It is essential that the international community displays steadfast solidarity in insisting upon the implementation of United Nations Resolution 1706 and provides the troops and resources necessary to follow through on its commitment. The implications of allowing another genocide to take place in Africa could lead to a complete collapse in the U.N.’s authority and the deterioration of international law.

In conclusion, I am deeply troubled by recent developments regarding Sudan. The international community has asserted its determination to bring an end to the violence in Darfur. Now we need to act upon these intentions and pressure the Government of Sudan to cooperate in efforts to improve prospects for peace throughout Sudan and the greater east Africa region.

FEDERAL FUNDING ACCOUNTABILITY AND TRANSPARENCY ACT

Mr. OBAMA. Mr. President, I rise today to speak about the Federal Funding Accountability and Transparency Act, which passed the Senate last week.

This is an important bill that will bring badly needed transparency to Federal spending. The bill creates a user-friendly website to search all Government contracts, grants, earmarks, and loans, opening up Federal financial transactions to public scrutiny. By helping to lift the veil of secrecy in Washington, this website will help make us all better legislators. It will help make reporters better journalists. And it will help make all Americans more informed voters and more active citizens.

I am heartened to see that Government transparency can be a bipartisan issue. This bill has been cosponsored by more than 40 of our colleagues and has the support of more than 100 outside groups from all parts of the political spectrum. It has been endorsed by dozens of editorial boards across the country from the Wall Street Journal, to the Chicago Sun-Times and The Oklahoman. Most people I speak to in Illinois or here in Washington or anywhere else wonder why a public website of all Federal spending does not already exist. To them, this is just common sense.

Whether you believe the Government ought to spend more money or spend less, you should certainly be able to agree that the Government ought to spend every penny efficiently and transparently. Transparency is the first step to holding Government accountable for its actions and is a prerequisite to oversight and financial control. We can’t reduce waste, fraud, and abuse without knowing how, where, and why Federal money is flowing out the door. This bill will provide that transparency, and not just to Members of Congress. Anybody with access to the Internet will be able to see how Federal funds are being spent. If Government spending can’t withstand public scrutiny, then the money shouldn’t be spent. The American people deserve no less.

I want to express my appreciation for the hard work that went into getting S. 2590 passed. I would like to thank the majority leader and minority leader, as well as the chairman and ranking member of the Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs Committee, for their assistance in moving this important legislation forward.

I would also like to thank the organizations that helped create a grassroots movement in support of Government transparency and in support of this bill. Without the hard work of OMB Watch, the Project on Government Oversight, and Citizens Against Government Waste, to name just a few supporters, this bill would not have been considered and passed so quickly.

And most importantly, I would like to thank my colleague, Senator COBURN, and his outstanding staff for their diligence and dedication. Since Senator COBURN and I first met during freshman orientation, we have developed a close personal bond that has translated into a close working relationship to bring more transparency and accountability into the way that Government spends taxpayer money. I have been impressed by the commitment and tenacity with which he stands up for his principles and beliefs, and it is these qualities that enabled this bill to get passed.

The House of Representatives is expected to vote on this bill later this week, and I am confident that our bipartisan and bicameral collaboration will quickly become law. It is not often that two Senators from different parties are able to bridge the partisan divide in this town and get something accomplished. But the American people demand greater transparency and accountability, and it is our honor and privilege—indeed, it is our duty—to provide the tools to help make that possible.

TRIBUTE TO SORIN DUCARU

Mr. BROWNBACK. I commend the Romanian Ambassador to the United States for his service as a diplomat, a civil leader, a transatlantic thinker, and a friend of the United States.

Sorin Ducaru has served as Romania’s principal diplomatic spokesman for the last 5 years. He played a key role in the Romanian Ministry of Foreign Affairs as the first head of the Division for NATO and Strategic Issues and was deeply involved in events leading to Romania’s membership in NATO—ratified with the unanimous support of the U.S. Senate.

Once Romania joined NATO, Ambassador Ducaru was a part of the Romanian team that helped pave the way for the establishment of U.S. military facilities in Romania. The agreement was signed in 2005, ratified this past summer, and is currently in its implementation phase.

On this fifth anniversary of the 9/11 attacks in particular, it is important to recall our partners in the war on terrorism. In 2001, just days after 9/11 terrorist attacks, Ambassador Ducaru helped facilitate Romanian-American political dialogue that resulted in Romania’s offer to put its military and logistical facilities, air corridors, and troops at the disposal of the United States in the war on terrorism. Even before Romania was a NATO member, it participated with troops and logistical support in the war on terrorism. Now, Romania is the fifth largest contributor of troops in Afghanistan and Iraq.

Ambassador Ducaru has been a strong supporter of Romania’s participation in the process of democratic and economic reconstruction of Afghanistan and Iraq, pointing to the lessons learned of his own country’s dramatic and sometimes painful transformations in the last 16 years. He has been a constant advocate of cooperation between American businesses and the business potential of coalition countries.

His support for democracy in Afghanistan and Iraq is not surprising because Ambassador Ducaru is a long-time advocate of democratic values. He is a member of the new generation of leaders that transformed Romania to an open free society following the revolution of 1989. He has been at the forefront of a new generation of Central European leaders whose countries have evolved from nondemocratic and closed societies to countries that preserve freedom, security, and economic opportunity.

As he departs his current post to become the Romanian Ambassador to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, I express my gratitude for his efforts to build a strong and vibrant relationship between Romania and the United States. I look forward to working with him to continue efforts to expand political, diplomatic, economic, and military cooperation and stability through NATO. Ambassador Ducaru is a true friend of the United States, and I wish him well in his new capacity.

REDUCING FOREIGN ENERGY RELIANCE

Mr. LUGAR. Mr. President, I rise today to request that my remarks, delivered in the keynote address to the Richard G. Lugar-Purdue University Summit on Energy Security, at Purdue University, West Lafayette, IN, on August 29, 2006, be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

I am honored to address this assembly, which will explore an aggressive agenda to reduce our nation's dependence on foreign energy sources. I appreciate the opening words of my good friend, Governor Mitch Daniels. He and his administration have given priority to energy issues in Indiana. They are attempting to maximize the opportunities that our state has to become a leader in a broad gamut of energy technologies. I also want to thank our host, Purdue University, and President Martin Jischke for promoting this energy summit. President Jischke has provided brilliant direction to this university. His advice on energy, agriculture, education, and many other topics has been of great benefit to me personally. I will deeply miss his leadership at Purdue when he steps down as President next June, but I look forward to a very productive year immediately ahead and many mutual endeavors in years to come. I am also delighted that Congressman Pete Visclosky, will address the summit conference this noon. Pete has been a great partner on numerous issues, ranging from local projects of special importance to Hoosiers, to the global search for an AIDS vaccine.

It is exciting to be surrounded by so many talented individuals who are committed to the objective of greater energy independence for the United States. I believe that in the future, the United States can be energy self sufficient or nearly so. Over the long term, we have the resources and the ingenuity to achieve this goal.

The crucial question is what happens between now and then. Will we achieve this goal rapidly through a coherent and resolute national policy that takes advantage of America's natural assets to create new economic opportunities, a cleaner environment, and improved national security? Or will we achieve our objective only after many years of widespread economic pain and national vulnerability caused by scarcity, terrorist attacks, market shocks, and foreign manipulation of our energy supplies?

We must move now to address our energy vulnerability because sufficient investment cannot happen overnight, and it will take years to build supporting infrastructure and to change behavior. In other words, by the time a sustained energy crisis fully motivates market forces, we are likely to be well past the point where we can save ourselves from extensive suffering. Our motivation will come too late and the resulting investment will come too slowly to prevent the severe economic and national security consequences of our oil dependence. This is the very essence of a problem requiring citizen, business, and governmental action.

I will describe our energy dilemma as a six-pronged threat to national security. First, oil supplies are vulnerable to natural disasters, wars, and terrorist attacks that can disrupt the lifeblood of the international economy. Within the last year, the international flow of oil has been disrupted by hurricanes, unrest in Nigeria, and continued sabotage in Iraq. In late February of this year, terrorists penetrated the outer defenses of Saudi Arabia's largest oil processing facility with car bombs before being repulsed. Al-Qaeda and other terrorist organizations have openly declared their intent to attack oil facilities to inflict pain on Western economies.

Second, as large industrializing nations such as China and India seek new energy supplies, oil and natural gas will become more expensive. In the long run we will face the prospect that the world's supply of oil may not be abundant and accessible enough to support continued economic growth in both the industrialized West and in large rapidly growing economies. As we approach the point where the world's oil-hungry economies are competing for insufficient supplies of energy, oil will become an even stronger magnet for conflict.

Third, adversarial regimes from Venezuela, to Iran, to Russia are using energy supplies as leverage against their neighbors. We are used to thinking in terms of conventional warfare between nations, but energy is becoming a weapon of choice for those who possess it. Nations experiencing a cutoff of energy supplies, or even the threat of a cutoff, may become desperate, increasing the chances of armed conflict, terrorism, and economic collapse.

Fourth, the revenues flowing to authoritarian regimes often increase corruption in those countries and allow them to insulate themselves from international pressure and the democratic aspirations of their own peoples. We are transferring hundreds of billions of dollars each year to some of the least accountable regimes in the world. Some are using this money to invest abroad in terrorism, instability, or demagogic appeals to populism.

Fifth, the threat of climate change has been made worse by inefficient and unclean use of non-renewable energy. In the long run this could bring drought, famine, disease, and mass migration, all of which could lead to conflict and instability.

Sixth, much of the developing world is being hit hard by rising energy costs, which often cancel the benefits of our foreign assistance. Without a diversification of energy supplies that emphasizes environmentally friendly energy sources that are abundant in most developing countries, the national incomes of energy poor nations will remain depressed, with negative consequences for stability, development, disease eradication, and terrorism.

Each of these six threats from energy dependence is becoming more acute as time passes. Any of them could be a source of catastrophe for the United States and the world.

The vulnerability of the United States rests on some basic factors. With less than 5 percent of the world's population, our nation consumes 25 percent of its oil. World demand for oil and other forms of energy is rapidly increasing. Within 25 years, the world will need 50 percent more energy than it does now. If oil prices average $60 a barrel through 2006—a figure that we are currently well above—we will spend about $320 billion on oil imports this year. This is roughly the same amount that the United States has spent on the war and reconstruction effort in Iraq during the first three years of conflict.

These conditions might be negotiable in the short and medium terms if oil resided with responsible, secure producers who maximize production during periods of elevated demand. But just the opposite is true. According to PFC Energy, about 79 percent of the world's oil supply is controlled by state-run oil companies. These governments profoundly affect prices through politicized investment and production decisions. The vast majority of these oil assets are afflicted by at least one of three problems: lack of investment, political manipulation, or the threat of instability and terrorism.

As recently as four years ago, spare production capacity exceeded world oil consumption by about ten percent. As world demand for oil has rapidly increased in the last few years, spare capacity has declined to less than two percent. Thus, even minor disruptions of oil can drive up prices. Earlier this month, a routine inspection found corrosion in a section of BP's Prudhoe Bay oil pipeline that shut down 8 percent of U.S. oil output, causing a $2 spike in oil prices. That the oil market is this vulnerable to something as mundane as corrosion in a pipeline is evidence of the precarious conditions in which we live.

Our current dependence on imported oil has put the United States in a position that no great power should tolerate. Our economic health is subject to forces far beyond our control, including the decisions of hostile countries. We maintain a massive military presence overseas, partly to preserve our oil lifeline. One conservative estimate puts U.S. oil-dedicated military expenditures in the Middle East at $50 billion per year. But there is no guarantee that even our unrivaled military forces can prevent an energy disaster. We have lost leverage on the international stage and are daily exacerbating the problem by participating in an enormous wealth transfer to authoritarian nations that happen to possess the commodity that our economy can least do without.

Rising energy prices, news reports of hostile oil producers, and the energy shocks experienced after the Katrina and Rita hurricanes, have awakened Americans to our energy vulnerability.

Almost six months ago, I delivered an address at the Brookings Institution in which I described "a shifting balance of realism" from those who believe in the immutability of oil domination of our economy and a laissez faire approach to energy policy to those who recognize that our nation has no choice but to seek a major reorientation in the way we get our energy. With oil at $72 a barrel and multiple crises flaring in the Middle East, fewer pro-oil commentators still assert that dependence on oil is simply a choice of the marketplace and government can and should do little to change it.

I believe that there is a growing consensus behind the new energy realism. There are clear signs that policy makers and a majority of the public recognize that our oil dependence is dangerously unsustainable.

The media is filled with examples of enterprising individuals who are making ethanol or biodiesel, erecting windmills, installing solar panels, or otherwise establishing personal control over their energy resources. A review of the nation's five largest newspapers revealed that twice as many energy-related stories appeared in July 2006 as appeared in July 2003.

Gasoline prices are beginning to have some effect on the automobile choices of American consumers. Sales of SUV's were down fifteen percent in the first half of 2006 compared with the same period in 2005. Sales of compact cars, by comparison, rose eight percent. These statistics were reinforced by a May 2006 Consumer Reports survey, which found that 37 percent of Americans were considering trading in their current cars for more fuel efficient cars. Almost half of these consumers were considering the purchase of a hybrid car or another alternative to traditional gasoline powered cars.

Progress is also appearing in the investment world. The entrepreneurial vanguard that brought us the internet and transformed telecommunications is turning its attention to alternative energy. According to data compiled by VentureOne, venture capital targeted at alternative energy projects more than tripled to $315 million in the first half of 2006 compared to the first half of 2005. Alternative energy investment is no longer just a niche area for environmental idealists and companies trying to improve their public image.

As a political issue, energy has been elevated to a status that is roughly equivalent to health care or education. A check of all one hundred Senators' websites in early August found that at least 85 of them had either issued a press release on energy this summer or had an energy section prominently displayed on their homepage. No politician on the national scene can afford to ignore energy.

Unfortunately, although many Americans are embracing the idea of changing our energy destiny, they have not committed themselves to the action steps required to achieve an alternative future. This is an important distinction, because although national acceptance that there is a problem is a necessary condition for solving the problem, it does not guarantee that the problem will be solved.

In fact, advancements in American energy security have been painfully slow during 2006, and political leadership has been defensive, rather than pro-active. One can point with appreciation to a few positive trends, as I have just done, but these are small steps forward in the context of our larger vulnerability. If our economy is crippled by an oil embargo, if terrorists succeed in disrupting our oil lifeline, or if we slide into a war because oil wealth has emboldened anti-American regimes, it will not matter that before disaster struck, the American public and its leaders gained a new sense of realism about our vulnerability. It will not matter that we were producing marginally more ethanol than before or that consumers are more willing to consider hybrids and other alternative vehicles.

Not all indices and measures of energy progress are even moving in the right direction. The American people are angered by $3.00 gasoline, but they are still buying it in record quantities. In a recent Business Week article, writer Peter Coy points out that gasoline consumption during the 2006 July 4th holiday was up 2 percent from a year earlier and consumers bought ten percent more gasoline in the first half of 2006 than they did in the first half of 2000, even though the price of gasoline was 75 percent higher.

Neither American oil companies, nor American car companies have shown an inclination to dramatically transform their businesses in ways that will achieve the degree of change we need to address a national security emergency. In fact, a number of the major oil companies have written to me to explain why they are not enthusiastic about installing pumps that can accommodate E85—a blend of gasoline and up to 85 percent ethanol. Some are distinctly hostile to any such idea.

General Motors launched a new "Live Green, Go Yellow" ad campaign to promote the purchase of flexible fuel vehicles. But its strategy for overall corporate recovery appears to depend on the sale of pickup trucks. Earlier this month, General Motors CEO Richard Wagoner called a new redesigned line of pickup trucks "the most important part of our North American turnaround plan." According to the New York Times, to counter GM's new line, Ford Motors plans to cut the price of its 2007 F-Series pickups, add two more body styles, and increase towing capacity. Moreover, earlier in the summer, GM attempted to tap into consumer worries about gasoline costs by offering to subsidize gasoline for purchasers of certain gas guzzlers in Florida and California. Under the deal, GM would cap the price of gasoline at $1.99 per gallon for one year for buyers of Hummers, Yukons, Tahoes, and other large vehicles.

Within State governments, dropping speed limits or raising gas taxes are non-starters almost everywhere. In fact, speed limits are rising in some states. Recently, Texas raised speed limits on some sections of rural interstate highways to 80 miles per hour, effectively ensuring that many motorists will be traveling closer to 90 miles per hour on those stretches and using more gasoline per mile.

Most importantly, the Federal Government is not treating energy vulnerability as a crisis, despite an increase in energy related proposals. Consider that the only major energy legislation taken up by Congress so far this year was legislation to encourage offshore oil and gas production in the Gulf of Mexico. I supported passage of the bill, but it was offered in a format that did not allow for amendments, and no bill has emerged from a House-Senate conference. If the bill passes, we would be addressing only a small corner of the energy picture. Issues such as energy efficiency, renewable fuels, and alternative energy technology had no chance to be discussed.

Even when the Congress and the President establish programs that would produce meaningful results, bureaucratic inertia and turf-consciousness within the Federal agencies have added delays. Groundbreaking for the first commercial-scale cellulosic ethanol plant has been on hold for a year while investors wait for the Federal government to establish the regulations and application procedure for a loan guarantee program that was passed last summer. The program was meant to jump start the commercialization of cellulosic ethanol—a key goal of President Bush and Congress. But despite the urgency of this mission, the Energy Department's glacial implementation of the program has frustrated potential investors and those of us who are urging the transition to gasoline alternatives. In fairness, Secretary Bodman announced in early August that the Energy Department will accept proposals this fall for cellulosic plant pilot projects, even before regulations are complete. The Department estimates that construction of the first plants could begin early next year.

We could all take our time if this were merely a matter of accomplishing an industrial conversion to more cost effective technologies. Unfortunately, in the absence of far-reaching changes in energy policy, we are risking multiple disasters for our country.

The energy debate is afflicted with what writer Jonathan Rauch has called "Demosclerosis"—the phenomenon of competing interest groups protecting their perceived interests so effectively that policy can achieve only least common denominator outcomes that do not solve the problem threatening the whole nation. Rauch used the concept of demosclerosis to describe the gridlock afflicting efforts to cut the federal budget and restructure entitlement programs. But it is also applicable to the energy debate. The competing interests of oil companies, car companies, environmentalists, truckers, farmers, consumers, and governmental agencies cancel out initiatives or compromises that serve the broader public interest.

Even in California, where voters tend to be environmentally sensitive and where pollution provides a strong extra impetus to cut gasoline use, entrenched business interests have succeeded in discouraging alternative fuels and transportation technologies. Since 1979, California lawmakers have tried a variety of approaches, only to be frustrated by the oil and auto industries that resisted change. A proposal there to cut oil use 15 percent by 2020 is supported by Governor Schwarzenegger, but opposed by the major oil companies, and has not made it through the legislature. California consumes more gasoline than any other state. Yet the number of E85 stations open to the public, after all the conflicting cross-currents, is exactly one.

Overlaying these elements of gridlock are memories of President Jimmy Carter's unpopular energy program from the 1970s. His dour calls for sacrifice remain a cautionary example for many office holders, editorial writers, and political strategists. Conventional political wisdom holds that the American public will punish anyone who forces significant energy sacrifices on them. This is a major oversimplification, but it is true that Americans are not eager to pay higher prices for energy, wait in gas lines, or see their driving or horsepower curtailed. A recent Bloomberg/Los Angeles Times poll asked about 1,500 people which of five options were "the best way to reduce U.S. reliance on foreign oil." Two percent chose increasing the gas tax. Building new nuclear plants or enforcing stricter mileage standards fared little better at 6 and 8 percent respectively. Respondents gravitated toward general trends that were unlikely to affect them personally, with 52 percent endorsing increased government investments in alternative energy sources and 20 percent choosing to relax environmental standards for oil and gas drilling.

Breaking through a political logjam often requires a crisis that focuses the nation in a way that achieves a consensus. But consider that the combination of September 11, 2001, the war in Iraq, the conflict on the Israeli-Lebanese border, the nuclear standoffs with Iran and North Korea, the Katrina and Rita hurricanes, sustained $3.00 per gallon gasoline, and several other severe problems have not created a consensus on energy policy. This leads one to the sobering conclusion that a disaster capable of sufficiently energizing public opinion and our political structures will have to be something worse than the collective maladies I just mentioned—perhaps extreme enough to push the price of oil to triple digits and set in motion a worldwide economic downturn. None of us want to experience this or any of the nightmare scenarios that await us. It is time to summon the political will to overcome the energy stalemate.

In most areas of national policy we are concerned far more with trends than with a discernable national goal. For example, we watch the effects of President Bush's "No Child Left Behind Act" and debate whether more American school children are reading at grade level than before. Despite the name of that bill, we realize that not every school or every child will succeed. We measure success or failure in trends and those trends have meaning because they can be translated into progress for real individuals. The same is true for most aspects of health care policy, environmental protection, job creation, highway construction, and numerous other policy areas. Even when goals aren't met completely, we are rarely disappointed if we achieve measurable improvements.

Our energy dilemma is different. Although every gallon of ethanol, every E-85 pump, every flex fuel vehicle that comes on line moves us closer to safety, they do not necessarily make us safer right now. Marginally reducing our reliance on imported oil over the course of the next few decades will be welcome, but we will still be vulnerable to disaster at any time, and our national security and economic policy options will be constrained accordingly.

Our energy vulnerability is analogous to rowing a boat to shore in rough seas. Each stroke moves us closer to safety, but until we reach the shore, we can be capsized. We have to measure progress not against where we have been, but against the distance to our goals. Achieving a positive trend line is almost inevitable as long as energy costs remain high, because these costs will lead to some improvements in investment and conservation. We need to have the discipline to understand that a modestly positive trend line is not enough. With the storm bearing down on them, the occupants of a threatened boat do not put up their oars and relax because the current has caused them to drift a little closer to shore.

To bolster public motivation and to connect our efforts to rational outcomes, we must work much harder to establish meaningful goals. Americans need to know exactly what the plan is and how we will achieve it. We not only must understand how to bring alternatives to the market, we must establish what degree of change would improve our national security situation, then tailor national policy to achieve that goal.

Although the energy debate is multifaceted, the heart of our geostrategic problem is reliance on imported oil in a market that is dominated by volatile and hostile governments. This is where we must devote our national effort, because it is our most intense short term vulnerability. It also could bring the most collateral benefits, including reinvigorating the American automobile and agricultural industries and helping to reduce carbon emissions. This is not to minimize the challenges facing our electricity grid or other energy problems, but as we marshal our political capital for a difficult task, this should be our first focus.

To this end, the United States should adopt a national program that would make virtually every new car sold in America a flexible fuel vehicle. We should ensure that at least one quarter of filling stations in America have E85 pumps. We should expand ethanol production to 100 billion gallons a year by 2025, a figure that could be achieved by doubling output every five years. We should also create an approximate $45 per barrel price floor on oil through a variable ethanol tax credit to ensure that investments keep flowing to alternatives. And we should enact stricter vehicle mileage standards to point automobile innovation toward conservation. The plan I am proposing today would achieve the replacement of 6.5 million barrels of oil per day by volume—the rough equivalent of one third of the oil used in America and one half of our current oil imports.

I am aware that these are ambitious goals, and that achieving them will take political breakthroughs and intensive government oversight. But if we have the political will, America can end its oil addiction through technology, the new economics of energy, and targeted government incentives and regulations to focus market forces on the problem.

As former Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee earlier this year, almost one out of every seven barrels of oil produced in the world is consumed on American highways. To break oil's monopoly on American roads, some experts favor a giant leap in technology to hydrogen. But that will require new engines, new distribution systems, new production technologies, and is decades away from commercialization. Instead, we can start to break petroleum's grip right now. The key is making ethanol as important as gasoline in our transportation fuel mix.

To start with, every new car can be easily fitted with proven technology that enables it to burn E85. Millions of these cars are on the road today, and the factory cost of making each vehicle capable of burning E85 is probably less than $150. Because these flex-fuel cars can run on either gasoline or E85, or any combination, the driver can fill up with E85 when it is available, and with regular gasoline when it is not. So the first step should be to require that all new cars sold in America be flex-fuel vehicles.

We applaud the efforts of American automakers to increase their flexible fuel offerings. On June 28, Daimler-Chrysler, Ford, and General Motors issued a statement announcing that they will double their production of flexible fuel vehicles by 2010. This pledge is significant within the context of the auto company's business objectives, but it is inadequate in the context of pursuing the national security benefits of replacing a large share of gasoline with ethanol. The Federal government should work with both foreign and domestic car companies on a plan to rapidly achieve the goal of equipping all new vehicles sold in America with flex-fuel technology. The Federal government should be willing to offer incentives to help make a voluntary plan work. But if car manufacturers do not respond with a sufficient plan in a short time period, Congress should mandate that all new autos sold in the United States have flex-fuel capability.

I do not suggest this lightly. But my observations of the post-Katrina response by car companies, oil companies, and consumers is that in the short run, the evolution of market forces won't be capable of producing the progress that we need to achieve our national security goals, particularly since the car fleet turns over slowly.

Next, we need to make E85 more widely available. Major oil companies have resisted installing E85 pumps. Indeed, most of the 897

E85 fuel stations in the country are independently-owned. As the profits of oil companies have increased with the price of oil, members of Congress have discussed increasing taxes on oil companies or requiring that a certain percentage of profits be devoted to research, exploration, or alternative energy sources.

Some of these ideas may have merit. I would suggest, however, that our first requirement of oil companies should be to use some of their recent profits to install E85 pumps in at least 25 percent of the nation's fuel stations within ten years. Unfortunately, this may also require an outright mandate. The majors have, thus far, shown little willingness to take this step.

The oil companies have argued that installing these pumps is too expensive and should wait until sufficient supplies of ethanol and flex-fuel vehicles are available. It does cost money to turn a gas pump into an E85 pump, primarily to replace the underground storage tank. But the cost is generally far less than the oil companies have portrayed. A recent Wall Street Journal article cited Chevron as estimating that installing an E85 pump costs $200,000. In fact, last year I helped inaugurate an E85 outlet in Terre Haute, and the owner said it cost her less than five thousand dollars to retrofit her station. Moreover, according to oil industry sources, installing a new E85 pump costs only about $5,000 more than installing a new gasoline pump. This suggests that stations on the drawing board would be low-cost candidates for E85 pumps. Conversion of some pumps will be much more expensive, and there are numerous price variables to consider. But by making use of retrofits and by devoting one pump to E85 at newly constructed fuel stations, the average conversion cost nationwide would be a fraction of what oil companies have implied.

In addition, gasoline companies can take advantage of an existing tax credit for the installation of renewable fuel pumps. I would support increasing this tax credit if a mandate were enacted. Gasoline companies also would be able to hold costs down by selecting the least expensive locations for adding E85 pumps, as long as they met geographic distribution requirements.

If the six largest gasoline companies installed E85 pumps in half of their stations, we would get to the 25 percent fuel station goal. For the sake of argument, if we estimated that the average marginal cost of opening an E85 pump after tax credits was $15,000, then establishing the pumps at one quarter of the nation's 170,000 fuel stations would cost approximately $637 million over ten years. That is just one percent of the combined $64 billion profit made during 2005 alone by the three largest American oil companies—Exxon-Mobil, Chevron, and Conoco-Phillips. Even if the average cost is somewhat more than $15,000, these figures illustrate that the cost of a nationwide E85 pump conversion for the major oil companies would be far from prohibitive.

My intent here is not to punish the oil companies. As a Senator who has favored new drilling and other initiatives designed to help the oil companies produce more domestic oil, I am suggesting that they need to alter their thinking. In the best circumstances, they would embrace ethanol and work hard to diversify their investments and operations—partly for the good will they would receive from Congress and the public—but also to prepare for the coming decades of greater American prosperity and security.

If the mandate can be effectively linked to the increasing availability of ethanol, so much the better. But to achieve our larger goal, we must be prepared to tolerate a certain level of disconnect between cars, pumps, and ethanol in the early stages of this effort. Some pumps may be underutilized at first, but this cannot be an excuse not to move forward.

Incidentally, virtually every gas-powered vehicle in America today can run on gasoline blended with 10 percent ethanol, or E10. By requiring that all gasoline be E10 as ethanol supplies become available, we could accommodate significantly more ethanol production even before most flex-fuel vehicles and E85 pumps are in place. Our neighbors in Illinois have passed such legislation, and I have urged my friends in Indianapolis to follow suit.

Now how do we produce enough ethanol to supply these stations and fuel these cars? The good news is we can let the market do a lot of the work. When oil is above $70 a barrel, making ethanol from corn or sugar, even before subsidies, is less costly than producing gasoline. That is true even if oil drops substantially from today's level.

But the long term advancement of ethanol as a national transportation fuel requires a focused effort to perfect and commercialize cellulosic technology, which will enable us to make ethanol from switch grass, agricultural waste and other inexpensive biomass. The addition of cellulosic ethanol has the potential to substantially reduce the overall production cost of ethanol, while greatly expanding the volume produced. Although scientists and technicians are confident of the possibilities for cellulosic ethanol, efforts at commercialization have lagged behind basic research. The time is long past due for the Federal government to step in and prime the pump for commercial production through an aggressive loan program. The experience gained by the first production plants will provide the knowledge we need to rapidly expand the cellulosic industry.

Studies have shown that we will have enough land for energy crops, given the expected increases in yields and improvements in processing efficiency. If we could reach a target of 100 billion gallons of ethanol a year—a 13-fold increase over current capacity in operation or under construction—that would be equivalent to 71 percent of current gasoline consumption by volume. The two are not directly comparable because ethanol has lower energy content than gasoline, but over time, I expect automakers will improve the efficiency of their engines for E85 fuel.

Although many investors are currently lining up to jump into the ethanol business, many are still hesitating to take the plunge. They fear that foreign oil producers might, as they have before, manipulate the oil market to temporarily cut the price and drive ethanol producers out of business. Therefore, another step we should take is to ensure market certainty for investors by setting a price floor for crude oil at about $45 a barrel through a variable ethanol tax credit that would rise as the price of oil dropped. I am developing legislation to achieve this goal and have benefited from the contributions of Dr. Wallace Tyner of Purdue University, who will appear in the afternoon panel.

Finally, it will be far easier to alter the mix of fuel supplies if we can slow or stop the growth in overall fuel demand. It has been more than twenty years since there was a change in the Corporate Average Fuel Efficiency standards for cars. Over that time, American gas mileage has largely stagnated. In 1987, the average light duty vehicle got 22.1 miles per gallon, according to the EPA.

Nineteen years later, in 2006, the figure has fallen to 21 miles per gallon. Yet during that time, automobile technology has greatly advanced, only in other directions. For instance, today a family car like the Toyota Camry has faster acceleration than a muscle car of the 1970s.

We need to channel the technical prowess of America's auto industry in the direction of greater fuel efficiency so that we can grow our economy without growing our fuel consumption. Therefore, Congress should enact modern mileage standards that set a target of steadily improving fuel economy every year. It should also continue to encourage research, development, and deployment of hybrids, plug-in technology, ultra-light auto materials, biodiesel, and coal-based transportation fuels, among other promising technologies.

This package of proposals would dramatically improve America's security posture. It would not dismantle the automobile culture that Americans cherish, nor would it create a vast bureaucracy with a bottomless appetite for taxpayer dollars. In fact, if it is accompanied by strong leadership and thoughtful explanation, I am confident that Americans will recognize that this is the way that we will preserve our cars and our economy over the long run. It would provide more jobs for Americans instead of sending a deluge of money to hostile countries, support our farmers instead of foreign terrorists, and promote green fuels over fossil fuels.

It should not surprise you to learn that I have proposed or co-sponsored legislation on these ideas. But this is just a start. None of these bills has passed, or even been put to a vote in the Senate. For instance, the Fuel Economy Reform Act, which I co-sponsored with my friend Sen. Barack Obama and other Democrats and Republicans, seeks a four percent annual increase in fuel economy. Last month, Sen. Obama tried to amend the offshore oil drilling bill with our legislation, but Senate procedures prevented him from doing so. While we are asking for greater statesmanship from our automobile and oil companies, we must demand the same from our Federal legislators and administrators.

Far in the future, historians may point to the energy policy of the last several decades as the major national security failing of the American government in this era. In the absence of decisive policy changes, historians will rightly ask how the wealthiest and most powerful nation on earth with abundant land, a magnificent industrial infrastructure, and the world's best universities and research institutions simply would not reorient itself over the course of decades despite repeated warning signs. Our failure to act will be all the more unconscionable given that success would bring not only relief from the geopolitical threats of energy-rich regimes, but also restorative economic benefits to our farmers, rural areas, automobile manufacturers, high technology industries, and many others.

We must be very clear that this is a political problem. We now have the financial resources, the industrial might, and the technological prowess to shift our economy away from oil dependence. What we are lacking is coordination and political will. We have made choices, as a society, which have given oil a near monopoly on American transportation. Now we must make a different choice in the interest of American national security and our economic future. As the vanguard of concerned and informed experts in this field, I call upon each of you to apply your talents and energies to solving this fundamental problem threatening the well-being of our nation. I look forward to working with you as we achieve this goal.

ADDITIONAL STATEMENTS

REMEMBERING MADONNA ARCHAMBEAU

• Mr. JOHNSON. Mr. President, today I wish to honor the life of Madonna Archambeau. Madonna was a member of the Yanktonwan Dakota Nation who passed away just over a week ago.

Mrs. Archambeau was born in 1934 in Ravinia, SD just a few miles off the Missouri River near the Nebraska border. Mrs. Archambeau was then educated at St. Paul's Indian Mission in nearby Marty, SD. From there, she began her service to her community which culminated in her election as the first woman to chair the Yankton Sioux Tribe.

Mrs. Archambeau began her career at the post office in Greenwood, SD, then moved to the Indian Health Service where she served for 31 years. Although she didn't end her career there; after her retirement from IHS she ran for chairperson of the Yankton Sioux Tribe and eventually tribal members elected her as the first woman to serve in that position.

This exceptionally strong woman was an especially strong advocate for the health and wellness of the Yankton Sioux Tribe and some of her greatest contributions to the tribe were in the health care arena. A tireless advocate of the health needs of her people, Mrs. Archambeau fought for adequate health care by working to ensure that emergency services remained at the Wagner Service Unit of the IHS. She was also a major influence in the establishment of a dialysis center for members of the Yankton Sioux Tribe.

It was my pleasure to have worked with her during her term and I would like to offer my condolences to the family, friends, and fellow advocates whom Madonna touched with her efforts on behalf of her people. They have much to be proud of, and it is my hope that their memories will be rich with the great many accomplishments she achieved during her career. Her memory will serve as a beacon to young Native women in the Yankton Sioux tribe and throughout Indian Country. •

MEASURES PLACED ON THE CALENDAR

The following bills were read the second time, and placed on the calendar:

H.R. 503. An act to amend the Horse Protection Act to prohibit the shipping, transporting, moving, delivering, receiving, possessing, purchasing, selling, or donation of horses and other equines to be slaughtered for human consumption, and for other purposes.

S. 3882. A bill to amend title 18, United States Code, to support the war on terrorism, and for other purposes.

MEASURES READ THE FIRST TIME

The following bills were read the first time:

S. 3884. A bill to impose sanctions against individuals responsible for genocide, war crimes, and crimes against humanity, to support measures for the protection of civilians and humanitarian operations, and to support peace efforts in the Darfur region of Sudan, and for other purposes.

S. 3886. A bill to authorize military commissions to bring terrorists to justice, to strengthen and modernize terrorist surveillance capabilities, and for other purposes.

EXECUTIVE AND OTHER COMMUNICATIONS

The following communications were laid before the Senate, together with accompanying papers, reports, and documents, and were referred as indicated:

EC-8152. A communication from the President of the United States, transmitting, pursuant to law, a report relative to his intention to enter into a free trade agreement with the Republic of Columbia; to the Committee on Finance.

EC-8153. A communication from the Secretary of Health and Human Services, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report entitled "The Medicare Quality Improvement Organization (QIO) Program—Response to IOM Study"; to the Committee on Finance.

EC-8154. A communication from the Secretary of Health and Human Services, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report entitled "Report to Congress on the Evaluation of the Quality Improvement Organization (QIO) Program for Medicare Beneficiaries for Fiscal Year 2005"; to the Committee on Finance.

EC-8155. A communication from the Chief of Publications and Regulations, Internal Revenue Service, Department of the Treasury, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled "Special Depreciation Allowance" ((RIN1545-BB57) (TD9283)) received on September 5, 2006; to the Committee on Finance.

EC-8156. A communication from the Chief of Publications and Regulations, Internal Revenue Service, Department of the Treasury, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled "Examples Under Section 937(b)" (Notice 2006-76) received on September 5, 2006; to the Committee on Finance.

EC-8157. A communication from the Chief of Publications and Regulations, Internal Revenue Service, Department of the Treasury, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled "User Fee for Form 8802, Application for the United States Residency Certification" (Rev. Proc. 2006-35) received on September 5, 2006; to the Committee on Finance.

EC-8158. A communication from the Chief of Publications and Regulations, Internal Revenue Service, Department of the Treasury, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled "Dividends Paid Deduction for Stock Held in Employee Stock Ownership Plan" ((RIN1545-BE74) (TD9282)) received on September 5, 2006; to the Committee on Finance.

EC-8159. A communication from the Chief of Publications and Regulations, Internal Revenue Service, Department of the Treasury, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled "Recomputed Differential Earnings Rate for 2004 under Section 809" (Rev. Rul. 2006-45) received on September 5, 2006; to the Committee on Finance.

EC-8160. A communication from the Chief of Publications and Regulations, Internal Revenue Service, Department of the Treasury, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled "Modifications to Weighted Average Interest Rate—Section 301 of Pension Protection Act of 2006" (Notice 2006-75) received on September 5, 2006; to the Committee on Finance.

EC-8161. A communication from the Chief of Publications and Regulations, Internal Revenue Service, Department of the Treasury, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled "Announcement: Overview of the IRS's Use of Private Collection Agencies (PCAs) in 2006" (Announcement 2006-63) received on September 5, 2006; to the Committee on Finance.

EC-8162. A communication from the Chief of Publications and Regulations, Internal Revenue Service, Department of the Treasury, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled "Treatment of Services Under Section 482, Allocation of Income and Deductions from Intangibles" ((RIN1545-BB31) (RIN1545-AY38) (TD9278)) received on September 5, 2006; to the Committee on Finance.

EC-8163. A communication from the Chief of Publications and Regulations, Internal Revenue Service, Department of the Treasury, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled "Modification of Automatic Accounting Method Change Procedures for Intangibles" (Rev. Proc. 2006-37) received on September 7, 2006; to the Committee on Finance.

EC-8164. A communication from the Chief of Publications and Regulations, Internal Revenue Service, Department of the Treasury, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled "Collection After Assessment" ((RIN1545-BC72) (TD9284)) received on September 7, 2006; to the Committee on Finance.

EC-8165. A communication from the Chief of Publications and Regulations, Internal Revenue Service, Department of the Treasury, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled "Final Regulations Regarding the Nonaccrual-Experience Method of Accounting Under Section 448(d)(5)" (TD9285) received on September 7, 2006; to the Committee on Finance.

EC-8166. A communication from the Secretary of Health and Human Services, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report entitled "Finalizing Medicare Regulations under Section 902 of the Medicare Prescription Drug, Improvement, and Modernization Act (MMA) of 2003 for Calendar Year 2005"; to the Committee on Finance.

EC-8167. A communication from the Chief of the Border Security Regulations Branch, Customs and Border Protection, Department of Homeland Security, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled "Establishment of New Port of Entry at Sacramento, California; Realignment of the Port Limits of the Port of Entry at San Francisco, California" (CBP Dec. 06-23) received on September 5, 2006; to the Committee on Finance.

EC-8168. A communication from the Regulations Coordinator, Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled "Medicaid Program and State Children's Health Insurance Program (SCHIP) Payment Error Rate Measurement" (RIN0938-AN77) received on September 5, 2006; to the Committee on Finance.

EC-8169. A communication from the Assistant Secretary of Defense (Health Affairs), transmitting an update on the Department's progress in its preparation of a report relative to accession bonuses, salaries and other benefits offered by the Department of Defense and Department of Veterans' Affairs and their impact on recruitment and retention; to the Committee on Armed Services.

EC-8170. A communication from the Principal Deputy, Office of the Under Secretary of Defense (Personnel and Readiness), transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of (13) officers authorized to wear the insignia of the grade of brigadier general in accordance with title 10, United States Code, section 777; to the Committee on Armed Services.

EC-8171. A communication from the Chief of the Freedom of Information and Privacy Act Office, Department of the Army, Department of Defense, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled "The Army Privacy Program" (RIN0702-AA53) received on August 24, 2006; to the Committee on Armed Services.

EC-8172. A communication from the Acting Clerk, Wayne County Commission, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of an adopted resolution for review; to the Committee on Armed Services.

EC-8173. A communication from the Assistant Secretary of Defense (International Security Policy), transmitting, pursuant to law, a report relative to the Department's intent to obligate up to $44.5 million in funds for the Cooperative Threat Reduction (CTR) Program; to the Committee on Armed Services.

EC-8174. A communication from the Under Secretary (Comptroller) and the Under Secretary (Acquisition, Technology, and Logistics), transmitting, pursuant to law, a report relative to the feasibility and desirability of using a capital budgeting system for the financing of major defense acquisition programs; to the Committee on Armed Services.

EC-8175. A communication from the Principal Deputy, Office of the Under Secretary of Defense (Personnel and Readiness), transmitting, pursuant to law, a report of the authorization of 4 officers to wear the authorized insignia of the next higher grade; to the Committee on Armed Services.

EC-8176. A communication from the Under Secretary of Defense (Acquisition, Technology, and Logistics), transmitting, pursuant to law, a report relative to the amount of purchases from foreign entities made by the Department in fiscal year 2005; to the Committee on Armed Services.

EC-8177. A communication from the Under Secretary of Defense (Personnel and Readiness), transmitting, pursuant to law, a report relative to the plan for accession of persons with specialized skills and the civilian skills corps feasibility study; to the Committee on Armed Services.

EC-8178. A communication from the Director of Defense Procurement and Acquisition Policy, Department of Defense, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled "Threshold for Small Business Specialist Review" (DFARS Case 2003-D060) received on September 5, 2006; to the Committee on Armed Services.

EC-8179. A communication from the Director, Defense Procurement and Acquisition Policy, Department of Defense, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled "Contract Reporting" (DFARS Case 2005-D004) received on September 5, 2006; to the Committee on Armed Services.

EC-8180. A communication from the Director of Defense Procurement and Acquisition Policy, Department of Defense, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled "Contract Administration Functions"

(DFARS Case 2003-D051) received on September 5, 2006; to the Committee on Armed Services.

EC-8181. A communication from the Principal Deputy, Office of the Under Secretary of Defense (Personnel and Readiness), transmitting, pursuant to law, a report relative to how information is provided to potential recruits and to new entrants into the Armed Forces on "Stop Loss" authorities and initial period of military service obligation; to the Committee on Armed Services.

EC-8182. A communication from the Secretary of the Federal Trade Commission and the Chairman of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, transmitting, pursuant to law, a report relative to the steps that consumer reporting agencies take after receiving a consumer dispute about the accuracy or completeness of information in the consumer's file; to the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs.

EC-8183. A communication from the President of the United States, transmitting, pursuant to law, a report relative to his extension of the national emergency period pertaining to the terrorist attacks of September 11, 2001, for an additional year; to the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs.

EC-8184. A communication from the Chairman and President of the Export-Import Bank of the United States, transmitting, pursuant to law, a report relative to a transaction involving U.S. exports to Mexico; to the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs.

EC-8185. A communication from the Chairman and President of the Export-Import Bank of the United States, transmitting, pursuant to law, a report relative to transactions involving U.S. exports to India; to the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs.

EC-8186. A communication from the Chairman and President of the Export-Import Bank of the United States, transmitting, pursuant to law, a report relative to a transaction involving U.S. exports to Brazil; to the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs.

EC-8187. A communication from the Chairman and President of the Export-Import Bank of the United States, transmitting, pursuant to law, a report relative to transactions involving U.S. exports to India; to the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs.

EC-8188. A communication from the Chairman and President of the Export-Import Bank of the United States, transmitting, pursuant to law, a report relative to a transaction involving U.S. exports to Mexico; to the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs.

EC-8189. A communication from the Chairman and President of the Export-Import Bank of the United States, transmitting, pursuant to law, a report relative to a transaction involving U.S. exports to Mexico; to the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs.

EC-8190. A communication from the General Counsel, Federal Emergency Management Agency, Department of Homeland Security, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled "National Flood Insurance Program (NFIP); Appeal of Decisions Relating to Flood Insurance Claims" (RIN1660-AA41) received on September 5, 2006; to the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs.

EC-8191. A communication from the General Counsel, Federal Emergency Management Agency, Department of Homeland Security, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled "Suspension of Community Eligibility" (Docket No. FEMA-7939) received on September 5, 2006; to the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs.

EC-8192. A communication from the General Counsel, Federal Emergency Management Agency, Department of Homeland Security, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled "Public Assistance Eligibility" (RIN1660-AA45) received on September 5, 2006; to the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs.

EC-8193. A communication from the General Counsel, Federal Emergency Management Agency, Department of Homeland Security, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled "Changes in Flood Elevation Determinations" (Docket No. FEMA-7652) received on September 5, 2006; to the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs.

EC-8194. A communication from the General Counsel, Federal Emergency Management Agency, Department of Homeland Security, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled "Suspension of Community Eligibility" (Docket No. FEMA-7931) received on September 5, 2006; to the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs.

EC-8195. A communication from the General Counsel, Federal Emergency Management Agency, Department of Homeland Security, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled "List of Communities Eligible for the Sale of Flood Insurance" (Docket No. FEMA-7786) received on September 5, 2006; to the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs.

EC-8196. A communication from the General Counsel, Federal Emergency Management Agency, Department of Homeland Security, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled "Suspension of Community Eligibility" (Docket No. FEMA-7927) received on September 5, 2006; to the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs.

EC-8197. A communication from the General Counsel, Federal Emergency Management Agency, Department of Homeland Security, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled "Suspension of Community Eligibility" (Docket No. FEMA-7929) received on September 5, 2006; to the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs.

EC-8198. A communication from the General Counsel, Federal Emergency Management Agency, Department of Homeland Security, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled "Final Flood Elevation Determinations" (71 FR 35176) received on September 5, 2006; to the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs.

EC-8199. A communication from the General Counsel, Federal Emergency Management Agency, Department of Homeland Security, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled "Final Flood Elevation Determinations" (71 FR 33645) received on September 5, 2006; to the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs.

EC-8200. A communication from the General Counsel, Federal Emergency Management Agency, Department of Homeland Security, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled "Final Flood Elevation Determinations" (71 FR 40925) received on September 5, 2006; to the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs.

EC-8201. A communication from the General Counsel, Federal Emergency Management Agency, Department of Homeland Security, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled "Final Flood Elevation Determinations" (71 FR 33646) received on September 5, 2006; to the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs.

EC-8202. A communication from the General Counsel, Federal Emergency Management Agency, Department of Homeland Security, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled "Changes in Flood Elevation Determinations" (Docket No. FEMA-7585) received on September 5, 2006; to the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs.

EC-8203. A communication from the Assistant to the Federal Reserve Board, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled "Electronic Fund Transfers" (Docket No. R-1247) received on September 5, 2006; to the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs.

EC-8204. A communication from the Assistant to the Federal Reserve Board, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled "Regulation E—Electronic Fund Transfers" (Docket No. R-1265) received on September 5, 2006; to the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs.

EC-8205. A communication from the Deputy Director, Terrorism Risk Insurance Program, Department of the Treasury, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled "Terrorism Risk Insurance Program: TRIA Extension Act Implementation" (RIN1505-AB67) received on September 5, 2006; to the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs.

EC-8206. A communication from the Secretary of Health and Human Services, transmitting, pursuant to the Medical Device User Fee and Modernization Act of 2002, the Food and Drug Administration's annual report for 2005; to the Committee on Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions.

EC-8207. A communication from the Human Resources Specialist, Office of the Assistant Secretary for Administration and Management, Department of Labor, transmitting, pursuant to law, (2) reports relative to vacancy announcements within the Department, received on August 24, 2006; to the Committee on Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions.

EC-8208. A communication from the Chairman, National Labor Relations Board, transmitting, pursuant to law, a report relative to the Board's inventory of inherently governmental and commercial activities; to the Committee on Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions.

EC-8209. A communication from the Secretary of Education, transmitting, pursuant to law, the follow-up report to the one entitled "The Mission Continues, Annual Report to the President on the Results of Participation of Historically Black Colleges and Universities in Federal Programs 2002-03"; to the Committee on Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions.

EC-8210. A communication from the Attorney General of the Department of Justice and the Secretary of Health and Human Services, transmitting, pursuant to law, the ninth Annual Report on the Health Care Fraud and Abuse Control Program for Fiscal Year 2005; to the Committee on Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions.

EC-8211. A communication from the Secretary of Health and Human Services, transmitting, pursuant to the Prescription Drug User Fee Act of 1992, the Food and Drug Administration's performance report for 2005; to the Committee on Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions.

EC-8212. A communication from the Assistant General Counsel, Division of Regulatory Services, Department of Education, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled "Interim Final Regulations—Federal Student Aid Programs" (RIN1840-AC87) received on September 5, 2006; to the Committee on Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions.

EC-8213. A communication from the Director of Regulations Policy and Management Staff, Food and Drug Administration, Department of Health and Human Services, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled "Medical Devices; Immunology and Microbiology Devices; Classification of Fecal Calprotectin Immunological Test Systems" (Docket No. 2006N-0276) received on September 5, 2006; to the Committee on Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions.

EC-8214. A communication from the White House Liaison, Office of Vocational and Adult Education, Department of Education, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a vacancy in the position of Assistant Secretary, received on September 5, 2006; to the Committee on Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions.

EC-8215. A communication from the White House Liaison, Office of Vocational and Adult Education, Department of Education, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of discontinuation of service in the acting role for the position of Assistant Secretary, received on September 5, 2006; to the Committee on Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions.

EC-8216. POM-421. A resolution adopted by the General Assembly of the State of New Jersey relative to outsourcing port operations to a company controlled by a foreign government; to the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs.

ASSEMBLY RESOLUTION No. 138

Whereas, Security officials of the administration of President George W. Bush, both United States Senators from the State of New Jersey, the Governor of the State of New Jersey and members of this House have serious concerns that terrorists could infiltrate ports through Dubai Ports World, a company controlled by the United Arab Emirates; and

Whereas, Intelligence and security officials believe that ports are vulnerable to the entry of terrorists or illicit weapons because of the large number of containers that enter the United States through these port facilities; and

Whereas, The ports of New York, Newark, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Miami and New Orleans are major points of entry into the United States; and

Whereas, The United Arab Emirates has a mixed record in combating terrorism and terrorist organizations; and

Whereas, The United Arab Emirates was one of only three countries to recognize the Taliban regime in Afghanistan; and

Whereas, The 45-day review of Dubai Ports World security details must be carried out in a rigorous and independent manner with Congress given final authority over the deal; and

Whereas, The Bush administration has been unable to provide sufficient evidence that security procedures vital to the United States will not be compromised by officials from a foreign company that is controlled by a foreign government; Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, by the General Assembly of the State of New Jersey:

1. It is the sense of the General Assembly of the State of New Jersey that President Bush should reconsider his decision, and he is advised to reverse his decision, to permit the sale of certain United States port operations to Dubai Ports World because this foreign company is controlled by a government with a mixed record in fighting terrorism.

2. It is the sense of the General Assembly of the State of New Jersey that the federal government should conduct a thorough review of this pending sale, pursuant to a 45-day investigation period required by federal law.

3. Duly authenticated copies of this resolution, signed by the Speaker of the General Assembly and attested by the Clerk thereof, shall be transmitted to the President and Vice President of the United States, the Majority and Minority Leader of the United States Senate, the Speaker and Minority Leader of the United States House of Representatives, and every member of Congress elected from this State.

POM-422. A concurrent resolution adopted by the House of Representatives of the State of Hawaii relative to the adoption of changes to the Medicare Part D Program; to the Committee on Finance.

HOUSE CONCURRENT RESOLUTION No. 80

Whereas, over 40 million Americans, including approximately 186,000 Hawaii residents, receive health coverage through Medicare and are currently eligible to purchase prescription drug coverage through the

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS

The following petitions and memorials were laid before the Senate and

Medicare Part D Program, which began on January 1, 2006; and

Whereas, over 6.4 million Americans, including 26,000 Hawaii residents, are eligible for both Medicare and Medicaid and are referred to as "dual eligibles"; and

Whereas, the dual eligible group, 60 percent of whom live below the poverty line, has more individuals who rely on healthcare than other Medicare beneficiaries, with more than 50 percent requiring assistance with activities of daily living or suffering from multiple chronic conditions, such as Alzheimer's disease, diabetes, pulmonary disease, or stroke; and

Whereas, the number of elderly residents in the state is expected to rise rapidly over the next two decades with one in four residents over the age of 60; and

Whereas, Medicare-eligible individuals enrolling in the Medicare Part D Program after May 15, 2006, face a cumulative one percent late-enrollment penalty for each month between the date they were eligible and the date they enrolled; and

Whereas, the enrollment penalty for Medicare Part B is ten percent per year on the standard premium amount, which is more predictable and less severe than the enrollment penalty for Medicare Part D; and

Whereas, Medicare beneficiaries must now navigate a new, complex system of multiple health plans to purchase coverage and receive prescription drug benefits; and

Whereas, each prescription drug plan has a different formulary, different co-payments, and varied cost-sharing that Medicare beneficiaries must understand to determine which plan has a formulary that not only includes most, or all, of the beneficiaries' drugs, but also offers the best value; and

Whereas, beneficiaries face a great deal of uncertainty as each plan is allowed to modify its formulary, including dropping coverage of medications, on a monthly basis, while most Medicare beneficiaries may only change plans once a year during the open enrollment period; and

Whereas, a beneficiary who needs a drug that is suddenly dropped by the chosen plan must change to another drug or pay out-of-pocket for the drug; and

Whereas, drugs not listed on the formulary that are purchased out-of-pocket by a beneficiary or paid for with a discount card or through a state pharmacy program do not count toward the beneficiaries' cost-sharing under the Medicare Part D plan; and

Whereas, plans are not required to disclose complete information about the actual price of the drugs on their formularies nor the cost of these drugs as negotiated by the plan which drug manufacturers, resulting in the opportunity for plans to inflate prices charged to Medicare beneficiaries who will then have a higher total cost-sharing amount; and

Whereas, many states will have additional costs associated with the "clawback" provision of the Medicare law, which requires states to reimburse the federal government for the costs of dual eligibles based on a formula that may not accurately reflect actual costs and numbers of these enrollees; and

Whereas, States will also incur significant costs if they participate in educational and other efforts necessary to ensure that dual eligibles and other Medicare enrollees do not have a gap in coverage and have adequate information with which to make informed choices between plan options; and

Whereas, the State initiated a fail-safe program that covered dual eligibles' prescriptions if their claims were not processed through the drug plans offered by the new Medicare Part D Program, and paid 480 claims in a four-day period from January 1, 2006 to January 4, 2006, to ensure that patients received their medications; and

Whereas, the Medicare law explicitly prohibits negotiations over the price paid by the federal government for prescription drugs; and

Whereas, these same medications currently provided to dual eligibles under Medicaid are subject to price negotiation by the federal government, and the costs of these medications, which will be reimbursed by the states to the federal government, are likely to increase in the absence of price negotiation; and

Whereas, according to the Congressional Budget Office, the new Medicare Part D Program is expected to increase spending by $47 billion in 2006, the first year of implementation, and reach $174 billion per year in 2015, when it will make up 23 percent of the $766 billion in total Medicare spending; now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the House of Representatives of the Twenty-third Legislature of the State of Hawaii, Regular Session of 2006, the Senate concurring. That the President and Congress of the United States are requested to adopt the following changes to the Medicare Part D Program:

(1) Eliminate the penalty for all Medicare-eligible individuals enrolling after May 15, 2006;

(2) Permit, once a year, prescription drug plans to drop coverage of drugs on their formularies only after advance notice to coincide with the annual open enrollment period, except that drugs that have been determined to be dangerous or have been removed from the market may be dropped from formularies as deemed necessary for safety;

(3) Standardize the formulary design so that each plan has the same number of tiers and requirements for coverage;

(4) Modify the requirements for what can be counted toward the Medicare beneficiaries' "true out-of-pocket cost," or "TROOP," to include all prescription drugs purchased on behalf of the beneficiary regardless of where the drugs are purchased, whether purchased through a state pharmacy program or with a discount card, or whether the drug is on the formulary of the enrollee's plan;

(5) Ensure transparency so that states know the cost negotiated by the prescription drug plan to ensure that all negotiated rebates are passed on to the beneficiaries; and

(6) Institute price negotiations for the purchase of prescription drugs for the Medicare program, similar to the provisions already in place under Medicaid and the Veterans Administration; and be it further

Resolved, That certified copies of this Concurrent Resolution be transmitted to the President of the United States, the Speaker of the United States House of Representatives, the President of the United States Senate, and the members of Hawaii's Congressional delegation.

POM-423. A resolution adopted by the General Assembly of the State of New Jersey relative to Lyme and tick-borne disease prevention education; to the Committee on Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions.

ASSEMBLY RESOLUTION NO. 55

Whereas, Lyme disease is a common but frequently misunderstood illness that, if not caught early and treated properly, can cause serious health problems; and

Whereas, Lyme disease is a bacterial infection that is transmitted by a tick bite, and early signs of infection may include a rash and flu-like symptoms such as fever, muscle aches, headaches and fatigue; and

Whereas, although Lyme disease can be treated with antibiotics if caught early, the disease often goes undetected because it mimics other illnesses or may be misdiagnosed and, if untreated, can lead to severe heart, neurological, eye and joint problems because the bacteria can affect many different organs and organ systems; and

Whereas, although Lyme disease accounts for 90 percent of all vectorborne infections in the United States, the ticks that spread the disease also spread other diseases, such as ehrlichiosis, babesiosis and other strains of Borrelia; and

Whereas, studies indicate that only 10 percent of the number of tick-borne disease cases reported meet the criteria established by the Federal Centers for Disease Control and Prevention; and

Whereas, the persistence of symptomatology in many patients without reliable testing makes treatment of patients more difficult; and

Whereas, New Jersey ranks third among the 50 states in the number of reported Lyme disease cases; and

Whereas, the "Lyme and Tick-borne Disease Prevention, Education, and Research Act of 2005" has been introduced in the 109th Congress as H.R. 3427 and S. 1479; and

Whereas, the "Lyme and Tick-borne Disease Prevention, Education, and Research Act of 2005" would advance the treatment of, and cure for, Lyme and other tick-borne diseases by expanding federal efforts concerning prevention, education, treatment and research activities related to Lyme and other tick-borne diseases, providing authorization for the appropriation of $20 million for each of the federal fiscal years 2006 through 2010 for these activities and requiring the Secretary of Health and Human Services to annually report to Congress on these activities and make recommendations for further research and education, and establishing a Tick-borne Diseases Advisory Committee within the Office of the Secretary of Health and Human Services; Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the General Assembly of the State of New Jersey:

1. This House respectfully memorializes the United States Congress and the President of the United States to enact the "Lyme and Tick-borne Disease Prevention, Education, and Research Act of 2005," which is currently pending in the Congress as H.R. 3427 and S. 1479.

2. Duly authenticated copies of this resolution, signed by the Speaker of the General Assembly and attested by the Clerk of the General Assembly, shall be transmitted to the presiding officers of the United States Congress, each of the members of the Congress elected from the State of New Jersey, and the President of the United States.

POM-424. A concurrent resolution adopted by the House of Representatives of the State of Hawaii relative to improving the quality of the nation's public schools by substantially increasing education funding; to the Committee on Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions.

HOUSE CONCURRENT RESOLUTION NO. 47

Whereas, the State of Hawaii has long pursued the goal of improving the academic performance of all students regardless of race, income, ethnicity, or disability; and

Whereas, the State of Hawaii commends the President and the United States Congress for putting forth the same goals in the

No Child Left Behind Act of 2001 (NCLB) and emphasizing the urgency in improving the performance of all students; and

Whereas, the NCLB has encouraged necessary changes in public education and was initially accompanied with substantial increases in federal funding for public elementary and secondary education; and

Whereas, however, the increases in federal funding since the inaugural year of the NCLB have been minimal; and

Whereas, the Federal Government has decreased funding in fiscal year 2006 by:

(1) $793,000,000 for the NCLB;

(2) $166,000,000 for post secondary education; and

(3) $21,000,000 for programs that serve students with disabilities; Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the House of Representatives of the Twenty-third Legislature of the State of Hawaii, Regular Session of 2006, the Senate concurring. That the Legislature urges the President of the United States and the United States Congress to support improving the quality of the nation's public schools by substantially increasing funding for the No Child Left Behind Act, Higher Education Act, Individuals with Disabilities Education Act, and other education-related programs; and be it further

Resolved. That the State of Hawaii encourages other states to adopt similar resolutions; and be it further

Resolved. That certified copies of this Concurrent Resolution be transmitted to President of the United States, President of the United States Senate, Speaker of the United States House of Representatives, Secretary of the United States Department of Education, and each member of Hawaii's Congressional delegation.

POM-425. A resolution adopted by the General Assembly of the State of New Jersey relative to the issuance of a stamp honoring the U.S. Army's canine corps; to the Committee on Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs.

ASSEMBLY RESOLUTION NO. 69

Whereas, the Army Quartermaster Corps began the U.S. Armed Forces first war dog training during World War II, creating what has come to be known as the canine corps (K-9 corps); and

Whereas, the canine corps has served in World War II, Korea, Vietnam, the Persian Gulf and Bosnia and is currently serving in Iraq and Afghanistan; and

Whereas, the canine corps dogs are used as scouts, trackers, sentries, point dogs, messengers and detectors of mines, boobytraps, explosives and enemy soldiers; and

Whereas, while many dogs are killed, abandoned or euthanized in combat, it has been estimated that the canine corps saved over 10,000 lives in Vietnam and continues to save thousands of lives in Iraq and Afghanistan; and

Whereas, a stamp to honor the canine corps is currently under consideration by the Citizens' Stamp Advisory Committee for future stamp use; and

Whereas, it is in the best interest of the State to urge the United States Postal Service and Citizens' Stamp Advisory Committee to issue a stamp for the canine corps in honor of the thousands of lives the corps saved and continues to save while in combat; Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the General Assembly of the State of New Jersey:

1. This house resolution urges the United States Postal Service and the Citizens' Stamp Advisory Committee to issue a stamp honoring the United States Army's canine corps.

2. Duly authenticated copies of this resolution, signed by the Speaker of the General Assembly and attested by the Clerk thereof, shall be transmitted to the President and the Vice President of the United States, the Speaker of the United States House of Representatives, the Majority and Minority leaders of the United States Senate and the United States House of Representatives, and each member of the United States Congress elected from this State.

POM-426. A resolution adopted by the Senate of the State of Michigan relative to the Gaylord, Michigan, mail processing center; to the Committee on Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs.

SENATE RESOLUTION NO. 151

Whereas, Gaylord, Michigan, is the largest city in Otsego County and one of the fastest growing and economically vibrant cities in northern Michigan. The Gaylord Post Office handles mail in the 487 zip codes, which covers a sprawling area from Grayling to Sault Saint Marie and from Petoskey to Alpena. The post office's mail plant processes packages and flats, such as magazines, newspapers, legal documents, and mail larger than letter-size; and

Whereas, in April 2006, the United States Postal Service concluded an Area Mail Processing (AMP) survey to determine whether or not to consolidate Gaylord mail processing operations into the Traverse City Processing & Distribution Center. The postal service is considering consolidation in order to reduce the $8 million deficit of the Greater Michigan Postal District, which includes Wisconsin, Illinois, and Indiana. District postal officials are expected to receive final word from Washington, D.C., in either June or July of this year; and

Whereas, if both packaging and flats processing are eliminated, then nearly 80 full-time employees are expected to be transferred out of the region to other postal facilities. This transfer will have a detrimental impact on the Gaylord economy as well-paying jobs flee the area. Moreover, closing the Gaylord mail processing operations will result in a lower standard of service because without the processing center mail cannot be delivered to this vast region in an efficient and timely manner; Now, there, be it

Resolved by the Senate. That we memorialize the United States Postal Service and the United States Congress to keep open the Gaylord, Michigan, mail processing center; and be it further

Resolved. That copies of this resolution be transmitted to the United States Postmaster General, the President of the United States Senate, the Speaker of the House of Representatives, and the members of the Michigan congressional delegation.

POM-427. A concurrent resolution adopted by the House of Representatives of the State of Hawaii relative to the convention on the elimination of all forms of discrimination against women; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

HOUSE CONCURRENT RESOLUTION NO. 67

Whereas, International Women's Day, celebrated throughout the world on March 8th, is a time to:

(1) Reflect on the status of women in the United States and around the world;

(2) Assess the progress made and the challenges for women remaining; and

(3) Recommit to women's human rights and the full empowerment of the world's women as the basis for truly sustainable social, economic, and political development of nations and communities; and

Whereas, two hundred twenty-eight million women are in need of effective contraceptive methods; and

Whereas, a woman dies every minute as a result of pregnancy and childbirth-related causes (approximately five hundred women a year) and for every woman who dies, thirty other women are injured or disabled; and

Whereas, between seven hundred thousand and four million people, mainly women and children, are trafficked annually across international borders for sexual exploitation and forced labor; and

Whereas, fifty thousand to one hundred thousand women and girls are trafficked annually for sexual exploitation into the United States; and

Whereas, HIV/AIDS is a women's epidemic worldwide with over nineteen million women worldwide currently living with HIV/AIDS and over one million women dying of AIDS in 2002; and

Whereas, for the last several years, HIV/AIDS has been the fifth leading cause of death for women ages twenty-five to forty-four years in the United States, and the third leading cause of death for African American women in this same age group; and

Whereas, gender-based violence against women, including prenatal sex selection, female infanticide, sexual abuse, female genital mutilation, school and workplace sexual harassment, sexual trafficking and exploitation, prostitution, dowry-killings, domestic violence, battering, and marital rape, causes more death and disability among women in the fifteen to forty-four-year age group than cancer, malaria, traffic accidents, and even war; and

Whereas, approximately four million eight hundred thousand rapes and physical assaults are perpetrated annually against women in the United States; and

Whereas, women in many countries lack the right to own land and inherit property, obtain credit, attend and stay in school, earn income, and be free from job discrimination, they also lack access to services that meet their sexual and reproductive health needs; and

Whereas, over two billion women around the globe live on less than $2 a day, and women in the United States earn seventy-three cents on average for every dollar earned by men; and

Whereas, two-thirds of the nine hundred sixty million illiterate adults in the world are women and two-thirds of the one hundred thirty million children not enrolled in primary school are girls; and

Whereas, in 1972, Hawaii became the first state to ratify the federal Equal Rights Amendment, which would have amended the United States Constitution by adding a guarantee of equal rights for women; and

Whereas, in 2003, the Hawaii State House of Representatives adopted House Resolution No. 59, which: supported International Women's Day; urged the United States Senate to ratify the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination Against Women; and further urged the United States Congress to fund high quality, voluntary family planning and reproductive health services; Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the House of Representatives of the Twenty-third Legislature of the State of Hawaii, Regular Session of 2006, the Senate concurring. That the United States Senate is requested to demonstrate our nation's commitment to human rights by ratifying the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination Against Women, and joining one hundred seventy other nations in endorsing the most comprehensive treaty ensuring the fundamental human rights and equality of women; and be it further

Resolved, That the United States Congress is urged to affirm every woman's fundamental right to reproductive health, including the ability to choose the number of children they will have and the timing of their births, by funding high quality, voluntary family planning and reproductive health services that enable women to exercise this right; and be it further

Resolved, That certified copies of this Concurrent Resolution be transmitted to the President of the United States Senate, the Speaker of the United States House of Representatives, and the members of Hawaii's congressional delegation.

POM-428. A concurrent resolution adopted by the House of Representatives of the State of Hawaii relative to the detonation of the Bravo Hydrogen Bomb over Bikini Atoll; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

HOUSE CONCURRENT RESOLUTION NO. 34

Whereas, at 6:45 a.m. on March 1, 1954, over Bikini Atoll, the United States of America tested a hydrogen bomb device, which is acknowledged to be the most powerful nuclear explosion ever detonated; and

Whereas, the "Bravo" H-Bomb inadvertently yielded fifteen megatons instead of the five megatons expected by the scientists working on the project—a yield one thousand times more powerful than the bomb dropped on the city of Hiroshima; and

Whereas, including the Bravo H-Bomb, sixty-seven nuclear tests were conducted at Bikini Atoll and Enewetak Atoll between 1946 and 1958, exposing the people of the Republic of the Marshall Islands to severe health problems and genetic anomalies due to the tests, such as "jelly fish" babies and other anomalies in the children, grandchildren, and great-grandchildren of survivors; and

Whereas, Enewetak Atoll served as ground zero for forty-three tests, eventually causing the exile of its people from their homeland for thirty-three years; and

Whereas, even after a massive cleanup program by the United States, more than fifty-seven percent of the land is not safe for human habitation; and

Whereas, at the advice of the United States, the residents of Bikini Atoll were repatriated to their homeland in 1967 only to be evacuated seven years later when high levels of radionuclides were discovered in their bodies; and

Whereas, the people of neighboring Rongelap and Utirik were also returned prematurely to their atolls and received additional exposure, causing many to believe that they were used to study the effects of radiation on human beings as evidenced in the Atomic Energy Commission's now infamous Project 4.1 "Study of Response of Human Beings Exposed to Significant Beta and Gamma Radiation due to Fallout from High Yield Weapons"; and

Whereas, in the Compact of Free Association (Compact), the United States "accepts the responsibility for compensation owing to the citizens of the Marshall Islands . . . for loss or damage to property and person . . . resulting from the nuclear testing program which the Government of the United States conducted in the Northern Marshall Islands between June 30, 1946 and August 18, 1958"; and

Whereas, the pertinent provisions of the Compact were negotiated based on limited and misleading information provided by the United States Government to the representatives of the Republic of the Marshall Islands, a fact only recently exposed in material declassified by the United States and acknowledged by officials; and

Whereas, the "changed circumstances" provisions of the Compact provide that, should it become manifestly clear that the agreement on nuclear matters is grossly inadequate to meet the technological and financial requirements anticipated during the negotiations, or if new information emerges that render those agreements insufficient for the purpose of concluding full and just compensation, the Congress of the United States would consider a petition on the issue; and

Whereas, the Republic of the Marshall Islands submitted such a "Changed Circumstances" petition on September 11, 2000, based on recently declassified data; and

Whereas, the Bush administration recently took a stand against further compensation under the Changed Circumstances petition, and

Whereas, just compensation and continued funding for promised medical and health programs for survivors of the atomic tests now depend upon Congress' favorable consideration of this petition; and

Whereas, over the past seventeen years, Hawaii has provided medical, educational, and other supportive services to lawful non-immigrants from the Republic of the Marshall Islands, without receiving adequate reimbursement from the United States; now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the House of Representatives of the Twenty-third Legislature of the State of Hawaii, Regular Session of 2006, the Senate concurring, That the United States Congress is respectfully requested to enact appropriate measures to provide for the full health needs of the hydrogen bomb tests survivors and their progeny, pay appropriate property damage claims, and provide for the costs of cleaning up nuclear sites in the Republic of the Marshall Islands in connection with hydrogen bomb testing on atolls of the Republic of the Marshall Islands; and be it further

Resolved, That the Legislature expresses deep regret for the harm done to the people of the Republic of the Marshall Islands and their homeland and hereby requests the Governor to declare March 1st as a Day of Remembrance for the survivors of the United States nuclear tests in the Republic of the Marshall Islands; and be it further

Resolved, That certified copies of this Concurrent Resolution be transmitted to the President of the United States, President of the United States Senate, Speaker of the United States House of Representatives, Chairperson of the United States House of Representatives Committee on Resources, Chairperson of the United States Senate Committee on Energy and Natural Resources, United States Secretary of Energy, Governor of Hawaii, members of Hawaii's Congressional delegation, President of the Republic of the Marshall Islands, Speaker of the Marshall Islands Nitijela, and Mayors of Bikini, Enewetak, Rongelap, and Utirik, and to ERUB I (survivors in Majuro) and ERUB II (survivors in Hawaii).

STATEMENTS ON INTRODUCED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS

By Mr. LUGAR:

S. 3884. A bill to impose sanctions against individuals responsible for genocide, war crimes, and crimes against humanity, to support measures for the protection of civilians and humanitarian operations, and to support peace efforts in the Darfur region of Sudan, and for other purposes; read the first time.

Mr. LUGAR. Mr. President, I rise today to introduce a bill that is a product of a significant amount of consideration and work within our Congress over the last year and a half. The Darfur Peace and Accountability Act of 2006 has had many iterations since both the Senate and the House introduced legislation by the same name in 2005. Each piece of legislation that has been introduced has contributed to Congress's understanding of this issue and has ensured a more complete and thoughtful response.

There is a consensus within Congress that the genocidal policies of the Bashir regime in Sudan must be condemned and opposed. Many Members have introduced bills and resolutions dealing with the crisis, and Members have been vocal about the urgency of this issue through hearings, statements, visits to the region, and other activities. This consensus has been supported by numerous groups and individual Americans who have lent their voices to the effort to prevent genocide and their resources to provide relief to those in the region who are facing violence and bleak circumstances.

The legislation I am introducing today is intended to provide a vehicle upon which Members can quickly concur and consolidate their efforts in providing needed authorities for our State Department and targeted sanctions to compel Khartoum to comply with their agreements. Regrettably, the Darfur Peace Agreement appears to be faltering with the ill-advised rejection of the U.N. resolution establishing a U.N.

peacekeeping force to transition from the overburdened African Union mission in Sudan. The situation has become insecure for humanitarian operations and as threatening to the people of the region as it has ever been. The United Nations Security Council resolution authorizing a peacekeeping force for Darfur is a unanimous signal that the international community is committed to seeing no further violence take place in Darfur. Sudan, as a member of the United Nations, must abide by this decision of the international community. Their national and international responsibility is to serve and protect their people, and the suffering and killing in Darfur must end. The gargantuan humanitarian effort to provide basic necessities for more than 2 million displaced persons requires unrestricted access by national and international aid organizations, as well as the U.N.-mandated peacekeeping force to ensure their security.

This legislation also seeks to help consolidate the difficult road to recovery in southern Sudan in accordance with the Comprehensive Peace Agreement for Sudan. I have included additional authorities for our officials to provide assistance to southern Sudan, as well as Darfur. Such economic and military assistance is necessary and requires close consultation with Congress to ensure assistance is not manipulated or misdirected. The bill also sustains existing sanctions on Sudan in direct response to their violation of agreements they have made. The President will have the authority to waive these restrictions if he determines such action is in our national interest; so the flexibility he requires is there as well.

Finally, in further support of peace and to assist U.S. diplomats, targeted sanctions are authorized on individuals whom the President determines are "complicit in, or responsible for, acts of genocide, war crimes, or crimes against humanity in Darfur." These sanctions include blocking assets and refusing to grant individuals entry to the United States. Further, this legislation encourages the President to prevent entry at our ports to certain ships in order to deny the Government of Sudan oil revenues and access to deliveries of military equipment. The only exception to such entry should be for those vessels providing assistance in carrying out the elements of the Sudan peace agreements or humanitarian assistance.

Shifting circumstances on the ground in Sudan and at the United Nations have complicated our efforts to achieve consensus on legislation that would help our diplomats resolve the Darfur crisis. I believe this legislation can win majority support in the Senate, and I hope it will receive favorable consideration in the House.

By Mr. DORGAN (for himself, Mrs. MURRAY, Ms. MIKULSKI, Mr. LEAHY, Mrs. FEINSTEIN, Mr. AKAKA, Mr. KERRY, Mr. KENNEDY, and Mr. LIEBERMAN):

S. 3887. A bill to prohibit the Internal Revenue Service from using private debt collection companies, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, today I am joined by Senator MURRAY and seven of our Senate colleagues in introducing legislation to stop the Internal Revenue Service's plan to outsource part of its tax collection responsibilities to private collection companies.

It would be a serious mistake for the Internal Revenue Service (IRS) to move ahead with its controversial tax debt collection privatization plan. When the IRS attempted a similar plan in 1996, it failed miserably. Mistakes were made at every turn. Taxpayers were harassed by private debt collectors. In many instances, private debt collectors violated Federal debt collection laws and confidential taxpayer information was not properly secured.

Serious concerns have been raised by tax experts, including the National Taxpayer Advocate, that the new IRS initiative will suffer from the same kinds of maladies. It is my understanding that the IRS intends to share more than 2.5 million taxpayer accounts with ten private collection companies when its new plan is fully implemented. There is troubling evidence which suggests that the IRS plan may not have adequate safeguards in place to protect confidential taxpayer information.

Just over two years ago, a Treasury Inspector General for Tax Administration (TIGTA) investigation found that a contractor's employees committed security violations, placing IRS equipment and taxpayer data at risk. In some cases, TIGTA officials found that contractors "blatantly circumvented IRS policies and procedures even when security personnel had identified inappropriate practices."

It is also troubling that the IRS has agreed to pay very large commissions of 21 to 24 percent of the amount of the tax debt collected by three private collection firms at the outset of its initiative. Some tax experts understand what others are choosing to ignore: paying a commission based on the firms' success increases the potential for overzealous collection practices and the misuse of sensitive taxpayer information. Private debt collection agencies are driven by profit motives, not public service.

In addition, the IRS admits that if it hired more employees for this purpose, not private collectors, far more revenues would be deposited in the U.S. Treasury fund. It is astounding that the IRS appears ready to pay nearly a quarter for every dollar collected by private collection firms, when internal IRS reports suggest that it would cost the Federal Government just 3 pennies on a dollar to have trained IRS employees collect tax debts that are owed. At a time of exploding deficits and Federal debt, the IRS plan to use of private debt collectors would be an inexcusable waste of taxpayer money.

Everybody needs to pay the taxes they owe. If they do not, however, professional IRS employees, not private collectors in search of profits, should be the ones to ensure that outstanding tax debts are paid. If the IRS now says it needs more resources for tax enforcement and collection activities, then Congress should consider providing them.

I fully agree with the independent Taxpayer Advocacy Panel's recent recommendation that the IRS "should abandon all plans to outsource any taxpayer debts and restrict collection activities to properly trained and proficient IRS personnel." Indeed, the IRS should immediately reverse course and indefinitely suspend the implementation of its private debt collection plan.

It was recently reported in the press that IRS Commissioner Everson has said the IRS will "immediately stand down" if the House and Senate act to revoke its authority to outsource tax debt collections to private companies. The House of Representatives has already voted to kill new funding for this IRS initiative. I will be pushing for a vote on this proposal by the full Senate at the first available opportunity.

The IRS should act on its own to stop its planned use of private debt collectors and save any further expenditures of taxpayer money for this purpose. If not, however, I will do everything in my power to put the brakes on this plan in the U.S. Senate.

There is an old adage: "Those who cannot learn from history are doomed to repeat it." Someone needs to remind the Internal Revenue Service and even some in the Congress of that. I urge my colleagues to cosponsor this legislation and help us get it enacted into law.

Mrs. MURRAY. Mr. President, I am glad to join my colleague, Senator DORGAN, and other cosponsors, in introducing legislation which would prevent the use of private collection agencies by the Internal Revenue Service. As Ranking Member of the Transportation, Treasury, the Judiciary, HUD, and Related Agencies (TTHUD) Appropriations Subcommittee, I have consistently opposed allowing the IRS the authority to hire private debt collectors. During Subcommittee hearings with the IRS, I have had the opportunity to discuss this issue at length with the current IRS Commissioner, Mark Everson. What I have learned during those conversations has not changed my mind.

When Chairman BOND and I finally are allowed to bring the Fiscal Year

2007 Transportation/Treasury Appropriations bill to the Senate Floor, I intend to offer an amendment that would effectively prohibit the IRS from going forward with this initiative. My amendment will be very similar to the bill we introduce today and the language that is already included in the House-passed Transportation/Treasury bill. I would point out, that the House Transportation/Treasury bill cleared the House of Representatives with the support of more than 400 Members.

There is no question that people who owe back taxes must pay their debt to the government. At the same time, every taxpayer should have the right to interact with a professional IRS agent when it comes to dealing with contested tax liabilities.

I'm against the use of private collection agencies (PCAs) because, first, I don't believe that taxpayer privacy will be adequately protected. When the IRS attempted the use of PCAs once before in the 1990s, it was a dismal failure. The IRS has not had a good track record of protecting taxpayer information and the Treasury Department's performance in providing information security protections to protect data confidentiality has worsened.

Second, I am concerned that private debt collectors will not show the level of professionalism, sensitivity, and respect that taxpayers deserve. In 2005, the Federal Trade Commission received more consumer complaints about private debt collectors than any other industry.

Due to the nature of the debts that the IRS intends to transfer to PCAs, the likely result will be that these agencies will end up going after the most vulnerable taxpayers in our society. We should not allow a system to emerge where better-off taxpayers get the benefit of interacting with a professional IRS agent, while economically-disadvantaged taxpayers are relegated to the harassing tactics of private collection agencies.

Third, I am deeply concerned with the cost-effectiveness of this initiative. The IRS Commissioner, himself, testified that it would be more cost-effective for the IRS to collect these debts than to contract them out to PCAs. Initially, I am told that it will require 55 IRS personnel to oversee 75 private tax collectors. Taken as a whole, I have to wonder whether the Federal Treasury will really benefit at all from this initiative.

Finally, the IRS should not be moving ahead with this activity while Congress is still debating its merits. More than 400 Members of the House approved a bill that included a prohibition on outsourcing tax collection. The IRS should suspend this effort immediately until the Congress has debated its fate and reached a final judgment.

SENATE RESOLUTION 565—EX-PRESSING THE SENSE OF THE SENATE UPON THE FIVE-YEAR ANNIVERSARY OF THE TER-RORIST ATTACKS AGAINST THE UNITED STATES ON SEPTEMBER
11, 2001

S. RES. 565

Whereas on September 11, 2001, terrorists hijacked four civilian aircraft; crashed two of them into the towers of the World Trade Center in New York City; and crashed the third into the Pentagon outside Washington, D.C.;

Whereas the fourth hijacked plane, United Airlines flight 93, crashed in Somerset County, Pennsylvania, near the town of Shanksville, after the passengers and crew of that flight struggled with the terrorist-hijackers to take back control of the plane, ultimately preventing the flight from reaching its likely destination in Washington, DC;

Whereas the heroic actions of the rescue workers, volunteers, federal, state and local officials who responded to the attacks with courage, determination, and skill is to be commended;

Whereas thousands of innocent Americans, and civilians from many other countries, were killed and injured as a result of these attacks;

Whereas Congress declared, in the aftermath of the attacks, September 12, 2001 to be a National Day of Unity and Mourning;

Whereas there has not been a terrorist attack on the United States homeland since the terrorist attacks five years ago; but al Qaeda has perpetrated terrorist attacks throughout the world against U.S. persons, facilities, and interests, as well as U.S. allies during that time;

Now, therefore, be it Resolved, That the Senate

(1) commemorates the life of each individual who died as a result of the attacks of September 11, 2001;

(2) extends its deepest condolences to the victims of these attacks, as well as to their families, friends, and loved ones;

(3) once again condemns in the strongest possible terms the attacks, the terrorists who perpetrated them, and their sponsors;

(4) commits to support the necessary steps to interdict and defeat terrorists who plot to do harm to the American people;

(5) recommits itself and the nation to bringing to justice the perpetrators of the attacks, along with their sponsors;

(6) honors and expresses its gratitude to members of its Armed Forces, law enforcement personnel, first responders, members of intelligence community and others who have bravely and faithfully participated in the War on Terrorism since September 11, 2001;

(7) declares September 11, 2006 to be a National Day of Remembrance, in commemoration of the terrorist attacks against the United States on September 11, 2001;

(8) declares that when the Senate adjourns today, it stand adjourned as a further mark of respect to each individual who died as a result of the attacks of September 11, 2001.

TEXT OF AMENDMENTS

SA 4924. Mr. ROCKEFELLER submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill H.R. 4954, to improve maritime and cargo security through enhanced layered defenses, and for other purposes; which was ordered to lie on the table; as follows:

SEC. ——. ESTABLISHMENT OF COMPETITIVE RESEARCH PROGRAM.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Title III of the Homeland Security Act of 2002 (6 U.S.C. 181 et seq.) is amended by adding at the end the following:

“SEC. 314. COMPETITIVE RESEARCH PROGRAM.

“(a) IN GENERAL.—

“(1) ESTABLISHMENT.—The Secretary, acting through the Under Secretary for Science and Technology, shall establish a competitive research program within the Directorate.

“(2) DIRECTOR.—The program shall be headed by a Director, who shall be appointed by the Secretary. The Director shall report to the Under Secretary.

“(3) DUTIES OF DIRECTOR.—In the administration of the program, the Director shall—

“(A) establish a cofunding mechanism for States with academic facilities that have not fully developed security-related science and technology to support burgeoning research efforts by the faculty or link them to established investigators;

“(B) provide for conferences, workshops, outreach, and technical assistance to researchers and institutions of higher education in States on topics related to developing science and technology expertise in areas of high interest and relevance to the Department;

“(C) monitor the efforts of States to develop programs that support the Department’s mission;

“(D) implement a merit review program, consistent with program objectives, to ensure the quality of research conducted with Program funding; and “(E) provide annual reports on the progress and achievements of the Program to the Secretary.

“(b) ASSISTANCE UNDER THE PROGRAM.—

“(1) SCOPE.—The Director shall provide assistance under the program for research and development projects that are related to, or qualify as, homeland security research (as defined in section 307(a)(2)) under the program.

“(2) FORM OF ASSISTANCE.—Assistance under the program can take the form of grants, contracts, or cooperative arrangements.

“(3) APPLICATIONS.—Applicants shall submit proposals or applications in such form, at such times, and containing such information as the Director may require.

“(c) IMPLEMENTATION.—

“(1) START-UP PHASES.—For the first 3 fiscal years beginning after the date of enactment of the Border Infrastructure and Technology Integration Act of 2004, assistance under the program shall be limited to institutions of higher education located in States in which an institution of higher education with a grant from, or a contract or cooperative agreement with, the National Science Foundation under section 113 of the National Science Foundation Act of 1988 (42 U.S.C. 1862) is located.

“(2) SUBSEQUENT FISCAL YEARS.—

“(A) IN GENERAL.—Beginning with the 4th fiscal year after the date of enactment of this Act, the Director shall rank order the States (excluding any noncontiguous State (as defined in section 2(14)) other than Alaska, Hawaii, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, and the Virgin Islands) in descending order in terms of the average amount of funds received by institutions of higher education (as that term is defined in section 101(a) of the Higher Education Act of 1965 (20 U.S.C. 1001(a))) in each State that received financial assistance in the form of grants, contracts, or cooperative arrangements under this title during each of the preceding 3 fiscal years.

“(B) ALLOCATION.—Beginning with the 4th fiscal year after the date of enactment of this Act, assistance under the program for any fiscal year is limited to institutions of higher education located in States in the lowest third of those ranked under subparagraph (A) for that fiscal year.

“(C) DETERMINATION OF LOCATION.—For purposes of this paragraph, an institution of higher education shall be considered to be located in the State in which its home campus is located, except that assistance provided under the program to a division, institute, or other facility located in another State for use in that State shall be considered to have been provided to an institution of higher education located in that other State.

“(D) MULTIYEAR ASSISTANCE.—For purposes of this paragraph, assistance under the program that is provided on a multi-year basis shall be counted as provided in each such year in the amount so provided for that year.

“(d) FUNDING.—The Secretary shall ensure that no less than 5 percent of the amount appropriated for each fiscal year to the Acceleration Fund for Research and Development of Homeland Security Technologies established by section 307(c)(1) is allocated to the program established by subsection (a).”.

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—The table of contents of the Homeland Security Act of 2002 is amended by inserting after the item relating to section 313 the following:

“Sec. 314. Competitive research program.”.

SA 4925. Mr. SHELBY (for himself, Mr. SARBANES, Mr. SANTORUM, Mr. REED, Mr. MENENDEZ, Mrs. CLINTON, and Mr. LIEBERMAN) submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill H.R. 4954, to improve maritime and cargo security through enhanced layered defenses, and for other purposes; which was ordered to lie on the table; as follows:

At the appropriate place, insert the following:

TITLE —MASS TRANSIT SECURITY

SEC. 01. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the “Public Transportation Terrorism Prevention Act of 2006”.

SEC. 02. FINDINGS.

Congress finds that—

(1) public transportation systems throughout the world have been a primary target of terrorist attacks, causing countless death and injuries;

(2) 5,800 public transportation agencies operate in the United States;

(3) 14,000,000 people in the United States ride public transportation each work day;

(4) safe and secure public transportation systems are essential for the Nation’s economy and for significant national and international public events;

(5) the Federal Transit Administration has invested $74,900,000,000 since 1992 for construction and improvements to the Nation’s public transportation systems;

(6) the Federal Government appropriately invested $18,100,000,000 in fiscal years 2002 through 2005 to protect our Nation’s aviation system and its 1,800,000 daily passengers;

(7) the Federal Government has allocated $250,000,000 in fiscal years 2003 through 2005 to protect public transportation systems in the United States;

(8) the Federal Government has invested $7.38 in aviation security improvements per passenger, but only $0.007 in public transportation security improvements per passenger;

(9) the Government Accountability Office, the Mineta Institute for Surface Transportation Policy Studies, the American Public Transportation Association, and many transportation experts have reported an urgent need for significant investment in public transportation security improvements; and

(10) the Federal Government has a duty to deter and mitigate, to the greatest extent practicable, threats against the Nation’s public transportation systems.

SEC. 03. SECURITY ASSESSMENTS.

(a) PUBLIC TRANSPORTATION SECURITY ASSESSMENTS.—

(1) SUBMISSION.—Not later than 30 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Federal Transit Administration of the Department of Transportation shall submit all public transportation security assessments and all other relevant information to the Secretary of Homeland Security.

(2) REVIEW.—Not later than July 31, 2007, the Secretary of Homeland Security shall review and augment the security assessments received under paragraph (1).

(3) ALLOCATIONS.—The Secretary of Homeland Security shall use the security assessments received under paragraph (1) as the basis for allocating grant funds under section 04, unless the Secretary notifies the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs of the Senate that the Secretary has determined that an adjustment is necessary to respond to an urgent threat or other significant factors.

(4) SECURITY IMPROVEMENT PRIORITIES.—Not later than September 30, 2007, the Secretary of Homeland Security, after consultation with the management and employee representatives of each public transportation system for which a security assessment has been received under paragraph (1) and with appropriate State and local officials, shall establish security improvement priorities that will be used by public transportation agencies for any funding provided under section 04.

(5) UPDATES.—Not later than July 31, 2008, and annually thereafter, the Secretary of Homeland Security shall—

(A) update the security assessments referred to in this subsection; and

(B) conduct security assessments of all public transportation agencies considered to be at greatest risk of a terrorist attack.

(b) USE OF SECURITY ASSESSMENT INFORMATION.—The Secretary of Homeland Security shall use the information collected under subsection (a)—

(1) to establish the process for developing security guidelines for public transportation security; and

(2) to design a security improvement strategy that—

(A) minimizes terrorist threats to public transportation systems; and

(B) maximizes the efforts of public transportation systems to mitigate damage from terrorist attacks.

(c) BUS AND RURAL PUBLIC TRANSPORTATION SYSTEMS.—Not later than July 31, 2007, the Secretary of Homeland Security shall conduct security assessments, appropriate to the size and nature of each system, to determine the specific needs of—

(1) local bus-only public transportation systems; and

(2) selected public transportation systems that receive funds under section 5311 of title 49, United States Code.

SEC. 04. SECURITY ASSISTANCE GRANTS.

(a) CAPITAL SECURITY ASSISTANCE PROGRAM.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary of Homeland Security shall award grants directly to public transportation agencies for allowable capital security improvements based on the priorities established under section 03(a)(4).

(2) ALLOWABLE USE OF FUNDS.—Grants awarded under paragraph (1) may be used for—

(A) tunnel protection systems;

(B) perimeter protection systems;

(C) redundant critical operations control systems;

(D) chemical, biological, radiological, or explosive detection systems;

(E) surveillance equipment;

(F) communications equipment;

(G) emergency response equipment;

(H) fire suppression and decontamination equipment;

(I) global positioning or automated vehicle locator type system equipment;

(J) evacuation improvements; and

(K) other capital security improvements.

(b) OPERATIONAL SECURITY ASSISTANCE PROGRAM.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary of Homeland Security shall award grants directly to public transportation agencies for allowable operational security improvements based on the priorities established under section 03(a)(4).

(2) ALLOWABLE USE OF FUNDS.—Grants awarded under paragraph (1) may be used for—

(A) security training for public transportation employees, including bus and rail operators, mechanics, customer service, maintenance employees, transit police, and security personnel;

(B) live or simulated drills;

(C) public awareness campaigns for enhanced public transportation security;

(D) canine patrols for chemical, biological, or explosives detection;

(E) overtime reimbursement for enhanced security personnel during significant national and international public events, consistent with the priorities established under section 03(a)(4); and

(F) other appropriate security improvements identified under section 03(a)(4), excluding routine, ongoing personnel costs.

(c) STATE HOMELAND SECURITY PLANS.—In establishing security improvement priorities under section 3(a)(4) and in awarding grants for capital security improvements and operational security improvements under subsections (a) and (b), respectively, the Secretary of Homeland Security shall ensure that its actions are consistent with relevant State Homeland Security Plans.

(d) MULTI-STATE TRANSPORTATION SYSTEMS.—In cases where a public transportation system operates in more than 1 State, the Secretary of Homeland Security shall give appropriate consideration to the risks of the entire system, including those portions of the States into which the system crosses, in establishing security improvement priorities under section 3(a)(4), and in awarding grants for capital security improvements and operational security improvements under subsections (a) and (b), respectively.

(e) CONGRESSIONAL NOTIFICATION.—Not later than 3 days before the award of any grant under this section, the Secretary of Homeland Security shall notify the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs of the Senate of the intent to award such grant.

(f) PUBLIC TRANSPORTATION AGENCY RESPONSIBILITIES.—Each public transportation agency that receives a grant under this section shall—

(1) identify a security coordinator to coordinate security improvements;

(2) develop a comprehensive plan that demonstrates the agency's capacity for operating and maintaining the equipment purchased under this section; and

(3) report annually to the Department of Homeland Security on the use of grant funds received under this section.

(g) RETURN OF MISSPENT GRANT FUNDS.—If the Secretary of Homeland Security determines that a grantee used any portion of the grant funds received under this section for a purpose other than the allowable uses specified for that grant under this section, the grantee shall return any amount so used to the Treasury of the United States.

SEC. 05. INTELLIGENCE SHARING.

(a) INTELLIGENCE SHARING.—The Secretary of Homeland Security shall ensure that the Department of Transportation receives appropriate and timely notification of all credible terrorist threats against public transportation assets in the United States.

(b) INFORMATION SHARING ANALYSIS CENTER.—

(1) ESTABLISHMENT.—The Secretary of Homeland Security shall provide sufficient financial assistance for the reasonable costs of the Information Sharing and Analysis Center for Public Transportation (referred to in this subsection as the "ISAC") established pursuant to Presidential Directive 63, to protect critical infrastructure.

(2) PUBLIC TRANSPORTATION AGENCY PARTICIPATION.—The Secretary of Homeland Security—

(A) shall require those public transportation agencies that the Secretary determines to be at significant risk of terrorist attack to participate in the ISAC;

(B) shall encourage all other public transportation agencies to participate in the ISAC; and

(C) shall not charge a fee to any public transportation agency for participating in the ISAC.

SEC. 06. RESEARCH, DEVELOPMENT, AND DEMONSTRATION GRANTS AND CONTRACTS.

(a) GRANTS AND CONTRACTS AUTHORIZED.—The Secretary of Homeland Security, through the Homeland Security Advanced Research Projects Agency in the Science and Technology Directorate and in consultation with the Federal Transit Administration, shall award grants or contracts to public or private entities to conduct research into, and demonstrate, technologies and methods to reduce and deter terrorist threats or mitigate damages resulting from terrorist attacks against public transportation systems.

(b) USE OF FUNDS.—Grants or contracts awarded under subsection (a)—

(1) shall be coordinated with Homeland Security Advanced Research Projects Agency activities; and

(2) may be used to—

(A) research chemical, biological, radiological, or explosive detection systems that do not significantly impede passenger access;

(B) research imaging technologies;

(C) conduct product evaluations and testing; and

(D) research other technologies or methods for reducing or deterring terrorist attacks against public transportation systems, or mitigating damage from such attacks.

(c) REPORTING REQUIREMENT.—Each entity that is awarded a grant or contract under this section shall report annually to the Department of Homeland Security on the use of grant or contract funds received under this section.

(d) RETURN OF MISSPENT GRANT OR CONTRACT FUNDS.—If the Secretary of Homeland Security determines that a grantee or contractor used any portion of the grant or contract funds received under this section for a purpose other than the allowable uses specified under subsection (b), the grantee or contractor shall return any amount so used to the Treasury of the United States.

SEC. 07. REPORTING REQUIREMENTS.

(a) SEMI-ANNUAL REPORT TO CONGRESS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Not later than March 31 and September 30 each year, the Secretary of Homeland Security shall submit a report, containing the information described in paragraph (2), to—

(A) the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs of the Senate;

(B) the Committee on Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs of the Senate; and

(C) the Committee on Appropriations of the Senate.

(2) CONTENTS.—The report submitted under paragraph (1) shall include—

(A) a description of the implementation of the provisions of sections 03 through 06;

(B) the amount of funds appropriated to carry out the provisions of each of sections 03 through 06 that have not been expended or obligated; and

(C) the state of public transportation security in the United States.

(b) ANNUAL REPORT TO GOVERNORS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Not later than March 31 each year, the Secretary of Homeland Security shall submit a report to the Governor of each State with a public transportation agency that has received a grant under this title.

(2) CONTENTS.—The report submitted under paragraph (1) shall specify—

(A) the amount of grant funds distributed to each such public transportation agency; and

(B) the use of such grant funds.

SEC. 08. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

(a) CAPITAL SECURITY ASSISTANCE PROGRAM.—There are authorized to be appropriated $2,370,000,000 for fiscal year 2007 to carry out the provisions of section 04(a), which shall remain available until expended.

(b) OPERATIONAL SECURITY ASSISTANCE PROGRAM.—There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out the provisions of section 04(b)—

(1) $534,000,000 for fiscal year 2007;

(2) $333,000,000 for fiscal year 2008; and

(3) $133,000,000 for fiscal year 2009.

(c) INTELLIGENCE.—There are authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of section 05.

(d) RESEARCH.—There are authorized to be appropriated $130,000,000 for fiscal year 2007 to carry out the provisions of section 06, which shall remain available until expended.

SEC. 09. SUNSET PROVISION.

The authority to make grants under this title shall expire on October 1, 2010.

SEC. —118. RAIL WORKER SECURITY TRAINING PROGRAM.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 180 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Homeland Security and the Secretary of Transportation, in consultation with appropriate law enforcement, security, and terrorism experts, representatives of railroad carriers, and nonprofit employee organizations that represent rail workers, shall develop and issue detailed guidance for a rail worker security training program to prepare front-line workers for potential threat conditions. The guidance shall take into consideration any current security training requirements or best practices.

(b) PROGRAM ELEMENTS.—The guidance developed under subsection (a) shall include elements, as appropriate to passenger and freight rail service, that address the following:

(1) Determination of the seriousness of any occurrence.

(2) Crew communication and coordination.

(3) Appropriate responses to defend or protect oneself.

(4) Use of protective devices.

(5) Evacuation procedures.

(6) Psychology of terrorists to cope with hijacker behavior and passenger responses.

(7) Situational training exercises regarding various threat conditions.

(8) Any other subject the Secretary considers appropriate.

(c) RAILROAD CARRIER PROGRAMS.—Not later than 90 days after the Secretary of Homeland Security issues guidance under subsection (a) in final form, each railroad carrier shall develop a rail worker security training program in accordance with that guidance and submit it to the Secretary for review. Not later than 30 days after receiving a railroad carrier's program under this subsection, the Secretary shall review the program and transmit comments to the railroad carrier concerning any revisions the Secretary considers necessary for the program to meet the guidance requirements. A railroad carrier shall respond to the Secretary's comments within 30 days after receiving them.

(d) TRAINING.—Not later than 1 year after the Secretary reviews the training program developed by a railroad carrier under this section, the railroad carrier shall complete the training of all front-line workers in accordance with that program. The Secretary shall review implementation of the training program of a representative sample of railroad carriers and report to the Senate Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation, the House of Representatives Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure, and the House of Representatives Committee on Homeland Security on the number of reviews conducted and the results. The Secretary may submit the report in both classified and redacted formats as necessary.

(e) UPDATES.—The Secretary shall update the training guidance issued under subsection (a) as appropriate to reflect new or different security threats. Railroad carriers shall revise their programs accordingly and provide additional training to their front-line workers within a reasonable time after the guidance is updated.

(f) FRONT-LINE WORKERS DEFINED.—In this section, the term “front-line workers” means security personnel, dispatchers, train operators, other onboard employees, maintenance and maintenance support personnel, bridge tenders, as well as other appropriate employees of railroad carriers, as defined by the Secretary.

(g) OTHER EMPLOYEES.—The Secretary of Homeland Security shall issue guidance and best practices for a rail shipper employee security program containing the elements listed under subsection (b) as appropriate.

SEC. —119. HIGH HAZARD MATERIAL SECURITY THREAT MITIGATION PLANS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary of Homeland Security, in consultation with the Assistant Secretary of Homeland Security (Transportation Security Administration) and the Secretary of Transportation, shall require rail carriers transporting a high hazard material, and of a quantity equal or exceeding the quantities of such material listed in subpart 172.800, title 49, Federal Code of Regulations, to develop a high hazard material security threat mitigation plan containing appropriate measures, including alternative routing and temporary shipment suspension options, to address assessed risks to high consequence targets. The plan, and any information submitted to the Secretary under this section shall be protected as sensitive security information under the regulations prescribed under section 114(s) of title 49, United States Code.

(b) IMPLEMENTATION.—A high hazard material security threat mitigation plan shall be put into effect by a rail carrier for the shipment of high hazardous materials by rail on the rail carrier’s right-of-way when the threat levels of the Homeland Security Advisory System are high or severe and specific intelligence of probable or imminent threat exists towards—

(1) a high-consequence target that is within the catastrophic impact zone of a railroad right-of-way used to transport high hazardous material; or

(2) rail infrastructure or operations within the immediate vicinity of a high-consequence target.

(c) COMPLETION AND REVIEW OF PLANS.—

(1) PLANS REQUIRED.—Each rail carrier shall—

(A) submit a list of routes used to transport high hazard materials to the Secretary of Homeland Security within 60 days after the date of enactment of this Act;

(B) develop and submit a high hazard material security threat mitigation plan to the Secretary within 180 days after it receives the notice of high consequence targets on such routes by the Secretary; and

(C) submit any subsequent revisions to the plan to the Secretary within 30 days after making the revisions.

(2) REVIEW AND UPDATES.—The Secretary, with assistance of the Secretary of Transportation, shall review the plans and transmit comments to the railroad carrier concerning any revisions the Secretary considers necessary. A railroad carrier shall respond to the Secretary’s comments within 30 days after receiving them. Each rail carrier shall update and resubmit its plan for review not less than every 2 years.

(d) DEFINITIONS.—In this section:

(1) CATASTROPHIC IMPACT ZONE.—The term “catastrophic impact zone” means the area immediately adjacent to, under, or above an active railroad right-of-way used to ship high hazard materials in which the potential release or explosion of the high hazard material being transported would likely cause—

(A) loss of life; or
(B) significant damage to property or structures.

(2) HIGH-CONSEQUENCE TARGET.—The term “high-consequence target” means a building, buildings, infrastructure, public space, or natural resource designated by the Secretary of Homeland Security that is viable terrorist target of national significance, the attack of which could result in—

(A) catastrophic loss of life; and
(B) significantly damaged national security and defense capabilities; or
(C) national economic harm.

(3) HIGH HAZARD MATERIALS.—The term “high hazard materials” means quantities of poison inhalation hazard materials, Class 2.3 gases, Class 6.1 materials, and anhydrous ammonia that the Secretary, in consultation with the Secretary of Transportation, determines pose a security risk.

(4) RAIL CARRIER.—The term “rail carrier” has the meaning given that term by section 10102(5) of title 49, United States Code.

SEC. —120. PUBLIC AWARENESS.

Not later than 90 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Homeland Security, in consultation with the Secretary of Transportation, shall develop a national plan for public outreach and awareness. Such plan shall be designed to increase awareness of measures that the general public, railroad passengers, and railroad employees can take to increase railroad system security. Such plan shall also provide outreach to railroad carriers and their employees to improve their awareness of available technologies, ongoing research and development efforts, and available Federal funding sources to improve railroad security. Not later than 9 months after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Homeland Security shall implement the plan developed under this section.

SEC. —121. RAILROAD HIGH HAZARD MATERIAL TRACKING.

(a) WIRELESS COMMUNICATIONS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—In conjunction with any rail security research and development program administered by the Department of Homeland Security and consistent with the results of research relating to wireless tracking technologies, the Secretary of Homeland Security, in consultation with the Assistant Secretary of Homeland Security (Transportation Security Administration), shall develop a program that will encourage the equipping of rail cars transporting high hazard materials (as defined in section —104) in quantities equal to or greater than the quantities specified in subpart 171.800 of title 49, Code of Federal Regulations, with wireless terrestrial or satellite communications technology that provides—

(A) car position location and tracking capabilities;

(B) notification of rail car depressurization, breach, or unsafe temperature; and

(C) notification of hazardous material release.

(2) COORDINATION.—In developing the program required by paragraph (1), the Secretary shall—

(A) consult with the Secretary of Transportation to coordinate the program with any ongoing or planned efforts for rail car tracking at the Department of Transportation; and

(B) ensure that the program is consistent with recommendations and findings of the Department of Homeland Security’s hazardous material tank rail car tracking pilot programs.

(b) FUNDING.—There are authorized to be appropriated to the Secretary of Homeland Security to carry out this section $3,000,000 for each of fiscal years 2007, 2008, and 2009.

SA 4927. Mr. STEVENS (for Mr. DEMINT (for himself, Mr. STEVENS, and Mr. INOUE)) proposed an amendment to amendment SA 4921 proposed by Mr. DEMINT to the bill H.R. 4954, to improve maritime and cargo security through enhanced layered defenses, and for other purposes; as follows:

SEC. —101. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the “Warning, Alert, and Response Network Act”.

SEC. —102. NATIONAL ALERT SYSTEM.

(a) ESTABLISHMENT.—There is established a National Alert System to provide a public communications system capable of alerting the public on a national, regional, or local basis to emergency situations requiring a public response.

(b) FUNCTIONS.—The National Alert System—

(1) will enable any Federal, State, tribal, or local government official with credentials issued by the National Alert Office under section —103 to alert the public to any imminent threat that presents a significant risk of injury or death to the public;

(2) will be coordinated with and supplement existing Federal, State, tribal, and local emergency warning and alert systems;

(3) will be flexible enough in its application to permit narrowly targeted alerts in circumstances in which only a small geographic area is exposed or potentially exposed to the threat; and

(4) will transmit alerts across the greatest possible variety of communications technologies, including digital and analog broadcasts, cable and satellite television, satellite and terrestrial radio, wireless communications, wireline communications, and the Internet to reach the largest portion of the affected population.

(c) CAPABILITIES.—The National Alert System—

(1) shall incorporate multiple communications technologies and be designed to adapt to, and incorporate, future technologies for communicating directly with the public;

(2) shall include mechanisms and technologies to ensure that members of the public with disabilities and older individuals (as defined in section 102(35) of the Older Americans Act of 1965 (42 U.S.C. 3002(35))) are able to receive alerts and information provided through the National Alert System;

(3) shall not interfere with existing alert, warning, priority access, or emergency communications systems employed by Federal, State, tribal, or local emergency response personnel and may utilize existing emergency alert technologies, including the NOAA All-Hazards Radio System, digital and analog broadcast, cable, and satellite television and satellite and terrestrial radio;

(4) shall not be based upon any single technology or platform, but shall be designed to provide alerts to the largest portion of the affected population feasible and improve the ability of remote areas to receive alerts;

(5) shall incorporate technologies to alert effectively underserved communities (as determined by the Commission under section —108(a) of this title);

(6) when technologically feasible shall be capable of providing information in languages other than, and in addition to, English where necessary or appropriate; and

(7) shall be designed to promote local and regional public and private partnerships to enhance community preparedness and response.

(d) RECEPTION OF ALERTS.—The National Alert System shall—

(1) utilize multiple technologies for providing alerts to the public, including technologies that do not require members of the public to activate a particular device or use a particular technology to receive an alert provided via the National Alert System; and

(2) provide redundant alert mechanisms where practicable so as to reach the greatest number of people regardless of whether they have access to, or utilize, any specific medium of communication or any particular device.

(e) EMERGENCY ALERT SYSTEM.—Within 1 year after the date of enactment of this Act, the Federal Communications Commission shall—

(1) ensure the President, Secretary of Homeland Security, and State Governors have access to the emergency alert system; and

(2) ensure that the Emergency Alert System can transmit in languages other than English.

SEC. —103. IMPLEMENTATION AND USE.

(a) AUTHORITY TO ACCESS SYSTEM.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Within 180 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the National Alert Office shall establish a process for issuing credentials to Federal, State, tribal, or local government officials with responsibility for issuing safety warnings to the public that will enable them to access the National Alert System and preserves access to existing alert, warning, and emergency communications systems pursuant to section

—102(c)(3). The Office shall approve or disapprove a request for credentials within 60 days of request by the Federal department or agency, the governor of the State or the elected leader of a federally recognized Indian tribe.

(2) REQUESTS FOR CREDENTIALS.—Requests for credentials from Federal, State, tribal, and local government agencies shall be submitted to the Office by the head of the Federal department or agency, or the governor of the State or the elected leader of a Federally recognized Indian tribe, concerned, for review and approval.

(3) SCOPE AND LIMITATIONS OF CREDENTIALS.—The Office shall—

(A) establish eligibility criteria for issuing, renewing, and revoking access credentials;

(B) limit credentials to appropriate geographic areas or political jurisdictions; and

(C) ensure that the credentials permit use of the National Alert System only for alerts that are consistent with the jurisdiction, authority, and basis for eligibility of the individual to whom the credentials are issued to use the National Alert System.

(4) PERIODIC TRAINING.—The Office shall—

(A) establish a periodic training program for Federal, State, tribal, or local government officials with credentials to use the National Alert System; and

(B) require such officials to undergo periodic training under the program as a prerequisite for retaining their credentials to use the system.

(b) ALLOWABLE ALERTS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Any alert transmitted via the National Alert System, other than an alert described in paragraph (3), shall meet 1 or more of the following requirements:

(A) An alert shall notify the public of a hazardous situation that poses an imminent threat to the public health or safety.

(B) An alert shall provide appropriate instructions for actions to be taken by individuals affected or potentially affected by such a situation.

(C) An alert shall advise individuals of public addresses by Federal, State, tribal, or local officials when related to a significant threat to public safety and transmit such addresses when practicable and technically feasible.

(D) An alert shall notify the public of when the hazardous situation has ended or has been brought under control.

(2) EVENT ELIGIBILITY REGULATIONS.—The director of the National Alert Office, in consultation with the Working Group, shall by regulation specify—

(A) the classes of events or situations for which the National Alert System may be used to alert the public; and

(B) the content of the types of alerts that may be transmitted by or through use of the National Alert System, which may include—

(i) notifications to the public of a hazardous situation that poses an imminent threat to the public health or safety accompanied by appropriate instructions for actions to be taken by individuals affected or potentially affected by such a situation; and

(ii) when technologically feasible public addresses by Federal, State, tribal, or local officials related to a significant threat to public safety.

(3) OPT-IN PROCEDURES FOR OPTIONAL ALERTS.—The director of the Office, in coordination with the Working Group, may establish a procedure under which licensees who elect to participate in the National Alert System as described in subsection (d), may transmit non-emergency information via the National Alert System to individuals who request such information.

(c) ACCESS POINTS.—The National Alert System shall provide—

(1) secure, widely dispersed multiple access points to Federal, State, or local government officials with credentials that will enable them to initiate alerts for transmission to the public via the National Alert System; and

(2) system redundancies to ensure functionality in the event of partial system failures, power failures, or other interruptive events.

(d) ELECTION TO CARRY SERVICE.—

(1) AMENDMENT OF LICENSE.—Within 60 days after the date on which the National Alert Office adopts relevant technical standards based on recommendations of the Working Group, the Federal Communications Commission shall initiate a proceeding and subsequently issue an order—

(A) to allow any licensee providing commercial mobile service (as defined in section 332(d)(1) of the Communications Act of 1934 (47 U.S.C. 332(d)(1))) to transmit National Alert System alerts to all subscribers to, or users of, such service; and

(B) to require any such licensee who elects under paragraph (2) not to participate in the transmission of National Alert System alerts, to provide clear and conspicuous notice at the point of sale of any devices with which its service is included, that it will not transmit National Alert System alerts via its service.

(2) ELECTION TO CARRY SERVICE.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—Within 30 days after the Commission issues its order under paragraph (1), each such licensee shall file an election with the Commission with respect to whether or not it intends to participate in the transmission of National Alert System alerts.

(B) PARTICIPATION.—If a licensee elects to participate in the transmission of National Alert System alerts, the licensee shall certify to the Commission that it will participate in a manner consistent with the standards and protocols implemented by the National Alert Office.

(C) ADVERTISING.—Nothing in this title shall be construed to prevent a licensee from advertising that it participates in the transmission of National Alert System alerts.

(D) WITHDRAWAL FROM OR LATER ENTRY INTO SYSTEM.—The Commission shall establish a procedure—

(i) for a participating licensee to withdraw from the National Alert System upon notification of its withdrawal to its existing subscribers;

(ii) for a licensee to enter the National Alert System at a date later than provided in subparagraph (A); and

(iii) under which a subscriber may terminate a subscription to service provided by a licensee that withdraws from the National Alert System without penalty or early termination fee.

(E) CONSUMER CHOICE TECHNOLOGY.—Any licensee electing to participate in the transmission of National Alert System alerts may offer subscribers the capability of preventing the subscriber's device from receiving alerts broadcast by the system other than an alert issued by the President.

(3) EXPANSION OF CLASS OF LICENSEES PARTICIPATING.—The Commission, in consultation with the National Alert Office, may expand the class of licensees allowed to participate in the transmission of National Alert System alerts subject to such requirements as the Commission, in consultation with the National Alert Office, determines to be necessary or appropriate—

(A) to ensure the broadest feasible propagation of alerts transmitted by the National Alert System to the public; and

(B) to ensure that the functionality, integrity, and security of the National Alert System is not compromised.

(e) DIGITAL TELEVISION TRANSMISSION TOWERS.—

(1) RETRANSMISSION CAPABILITY.—Within 30 days after the date on which the National Alert Office adopts relevant technical standards based on recommendations of the Working Group, the Federal Communications Commission shall initiate a proceeding to require public broadcast television licensees and permittees to install necessary equipment and technologies on, or as part of, any broadcast television digital signal transmitter to enable the transmitter to serve as a backbone for the reception, relay, and retransmission of National Alert System alerts.

(2) COMPENSATION.—The National Alert Office established by section 105 shall compensate any such licensee or permittee for costs incurred in complying with the requirements imposed pursuant to paragraph (1).

(f) FCC REGULATION OF COMPLIANCE.—Except as provided in subsections (d) and (e), the Federal Communications Commission shall have no regulatory authority under this title except to regulate compliance with this title by licensees and permittees regulated by the Commission under the Communications Act of 1934 (47 U.S.C. 151 et seq.).

(g) LIMITATION OF LIABILITY.—Any person that participates in the transmission of National Alert System alerts and that meets its obligations under this title shall not be liable to any subscriber to, or user of, such person's service or equipment for—

(1) any act or omission related to or any harm resulting from the transmission of, or failure to transmit, a National Alert System alert to such subscriber or user; or

(2) for the release to a government agency or entity, public safety, fire service, law enforcement official, or emergency facility of subscriber information used in connection with delivering an alert.

(h) TESTING.—The director shall establish testing criteria and guidelines for licensees that elect to participate in the transmission of National Alert System alerts.

SEC. 104. COORDINATION WITH EXISTING PUBLIC ALERT SYSTEMS AND AUTHORITY.

(a) EXISTING FEDERAL WARNING SYSTEM COORDINATION.—The director shall work with the Federal Communications Commission, the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, and other relevant Federal agencies to ensure that the National Alert System—

(1) complements, rather than duplicates, existing Federal alert systems; and

(2) obtains the maximum benefit possible from the utilization of existing research and development, technologies, and processes developed for or utilized by existing Federal alert systems.

(b) EXISTING ALERT AUTHORITY.—Nothing in this title shall be construed—

(1) to interfere with the authority of a Federal, State, or local government official under any other provision of law to transmit public alerts via the NOAA All-Hazards Radio System, digital and analog broadcast, cable, and satellite television and satellite and terrestrial radio, or any other emergency alert system in existence on the date of enactment of this Act;

(2) to require alerts transmitted under the authority described in paragraph (1) to comply with any standard established pursuant to section 103; or

(3) to require any Federal, State, or local government official to obtain credentials or undergo training under this title before transmitting alerts under the authority described in paragraph (1).

SEC. 105. NATIONAL ALERT OFFICE.

(a) ESTABLISHMENT.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The National Alert Office is established within the Department of Homeland Security.

(2) DIRECTOR.—The office shall be headed by a director with at least 5 years' operational experience in the management and issuance of warnings and alerts, hazardous event management, or disaster planning. The Director shall serve under and report to the Secretary of Homeland Security or his designee.

(3) STAFF.—The office shall have a staff with significant technical expertise in the communications industry and emergency public communications. The director may request the detailing of staff from any appropriate Federal department or agency in order to ensure that the concerns of all such departments and agencies are incorporated into the daily operation of the National Alert System.

(b) FUNCTIONS AND RESPONSIBILITIES.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Office shall administer, operate, and manage the National Alert System established under this title.

(2) IMPLEMENTATION OF WORKING GROUP RECOMMENDATIONS.—The Office shall be responsible for implementing the recommendations of the Working Group established by section 106 regarding—

(A) the technical transmission of alerts;

(B) the incorporation of new technologies into the National Alert System;

(C) the technical capabilities of the National Alert System; and

(D) any other matters that fall within the duties of the Working Group.

(3) TRANSMISSION OF ALERTS.—In administering the National Alert System, the director of the National Alert Office shall ensure that—

(A) the National Alert System is available to, and enables, only Federal, State, tribal, or local government officials with credentials issued by the National Alert Office under section 103 to access and utilize the National Alert System;

(B) the National Alert System is capable of providing geographically targeted alerts where such alerts are appropriate;

(C) the legitimacy and authenticity of any proffered alert is verified before it is transmitted;

(D) each proffered alert complies with formats, protocols, and other requirements established by the Office to ensure the efficacy and usefulness of alerts transmitted via the National Alert System;

(E) the security and integrity of a National Alert System alert from the point of origination to delivery is maintained; and

(F) the security and integrity of the National Alert System is maintained and protected.

(c) REPORTS.—

(1) ANNUAL REPORTS.—The director shall submit an annual report to the Senate Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation, the Senate Committee on Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs, the House of Representatives Committee on Homeland Security, the House of Representatives Committee on Energy and Commerce, the House of Representatives Committee on Science, and the House of Representatives

Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure on the status of, and plans for, the National Alert System. In the first annual report, the director shall report on—

(A) the progress made toward operational activation of the alerting capabilities of the National Alert System; and

(B) the anticipated date on which the National Alert System will be available for utilization by Federal, State, and local officials.

(2) 5-YEAR PLAN.—Within 1 year after the date of enactment of this Act and every 5 years thereafter, the director shall publish a 5-year plan that outlines future capabilities and communications platforms for the National Alert System. The plan shall serve as the long-term planning document for the Office.

(d) GAO AUDITS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Comptroller General shall audit the National Alert Office every 3 years after the date of enactment of this Act and periodically thereafter and transmit the findings thereof to the Senate Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation, the Senate Committee on Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs, the House of Representatives Committee on Homeland Security, the House of Representatives Committee on Energy and Commerce, the House of Representatives Committee on Science, and the House of Representatives Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure.

(2) RESPONSE REPORT.—If, as a result of the audit, the Comptroller General expresses concern about any matter addressed by the audit, the director of the National Alert Office shall transmit a report to the Senate Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation, the Senate Committee on Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs, the House of Representatives Committee on Homeland Security, the House of Representatives Committee on Energy and Commerce, the House of Representatives Committee on Science, and the House of Representatives Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure describing what action, if any, the director is taking to respond to any such concern.

SEC. 106. NATIONAL ALERT SYSTEM WORKING GROUP.

(a) ESTABLISHMENT.—Not later than 60 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the director of the National Alert Office shall establish a working group, to be known as the National Alert System Working Group.

(b) MEMBERSHIP.—

(1) APPOINTMENT; CHAIR.—The director shall appoint the members of the Working Group as soon as practicable after the date of enactment of this Act and shall serve as its chair. In appointing members of the Working Group, the director shall ensure that the number of members appointed under paragraph (5) provides appropriate and adequate representation for all stakeholders and interested and affected parties.

(2) FEDERAL AGENCY REPRESENTATIVES.—Appropriate personnel from the National Institute of Standards and Technology, the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, the Federal Communications Commission, the Federal Emergency Management Agency, the Nuclear Regulatory Commission, the Department of Justice, the National Communications System, the National Telecommunications and Information Administration, the Department of Homeland Security's Preparedness Directorate, the United States Postal Service, and other appropriate Federal agencies shall serve as members of the Working Group.

(3) STATE AND LOCAL GOVERNMENT REPRESENTATIVES.—The director shall appoint representatives of State and local governments and representatives of emergency services personnel, selected from among individuals nominated by national organizations representing such governments and personnel, to serve as members of the Working Group.

(4) TRIBAL GOVERNMENTS.—The director shall appoint representatives from Federally recognized Indian tribes and National Indian organizations.

(5) SUBJECT MATTER EXPERTS.—The director shall appoint individuals who have the requisite technical knowledge and expertise to serve on the Working Group in the fulfillment of its duties, including representatives of—

- (A) communications service providers;
- (B) vendors, developers, and manufacturers of systems, facilities; equipment, and capabilities for the provision of communications services;
- (C) third-party service bureaus;
- (D) technical experts from the broadcasting industry;
- (E) the national organization representing the licensees and permittees of noncommercial broadcast television stations;
- (F) national organizations representing individuals with special needs; and
- (G) other individuals with technical expertise that would enhance the National Alert System.

(c) DUTIES OF THE WORKING GROUP.—

(1) DEVELOPMENT OF SYSTEM-CRITICAL RECOMMENDATIONS.—Within 1 year after the date of enactment of this Act, the Working Group shall develop and transmit to the National Alert Office recommendations for—

(A) protocols, including formats, source or originator identification, threat severity, hazard description, and response requirements or recommendations, for alerts to be transmitted via the National Alert System that ensures that alerts are capable of being utilized across the broadest variety of communication technologies, at National, State, and local levels;

(B) procedures for verifying, initiating, modifying, and canceling alerts transmitted via the National Alert System;

(C) guidelines for the technical capabilities of the National Alert System;

(D) guidelines for technical capability that provides for the priority transmission of National Alert System alerts;

(E) guidelines for other capabilities of the National Alert System as specified in this title;

(F) standards for equipment and technologies used by the National Alert System;

(G) guidelines for the transmission of National System Alerts in languages in addition to English, to the extent practicable; and

(H) guidelines for incorporating the National Alert System into comprehensive emergency planning standards for public alert and notification and emergency public communications.

(2) INTEGRATION OF EMERGENCY AND NATIONAL ALERT SYSTEMS.—The Working Group shall work with the operators of nuclear power plants and other critical infrastructure facilities to integrate emergency alert systems for those facilities with the National Alert System.

(d) MEETINGS.—

(1) INITIAL MEETING.—The initial meeting of the Working Group shall take place not later than 60 days after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(2) OTHER MEETINGS.—After the initial meeting, the Working Group shall meet at the call of the chair.

(3) NOTICE; OPEN MEETINGS.—Any meetings held by the Working Group shall be duly noticed at least 14 days in advance and shall be open to the public.

(e) RESOURCES.—

(1) FEDERAL AGENCIES.—The Working Group shall have reasonable access to—

(A) materials, resources, data, and other information from the National Institute of Standards and Technology, the Department of Commerce and its agencies, the Department of Homeland Security and its bureaus, and the Federal Communications Commission; and

(B) the facilities of any such agency for purposes of conducting meetings.

(2) GIFTS AND GRANTS.—The Working Group may accept, use, and dispose of gifts or grants of services or property, both real and personal, for purposes of aiding or facilitating the work of the Working Group. Gifts or grants not used at the expiration of the Working Group shall be returned to the donor or grantor.

(f) RULES.—

(1) QUORUM.—One-third of the members of the Working Group shall constitute a quorum for conducting business of the Working Group.

(2) SUBCOMMITTEES.—To assist the Working Group in carrying out its functions, the chair may establish appropriate subcommittees composed of members of the Working Group and other subject matter experts as deemed necessary.

(3) ADDITIONAL RULES.—The Working Group may adopt other rules as needed.

(g) FEDERAL ADVISORY COMMITTEE ACT.—Neither the Federal Advisory Committee Act (5 U.S.C. App.) nor any rule, order, or regulation promulgated under that Act shall apply to the Working Group.

SEC. —107. RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Undersecretary of Homeland Security for Science and Technology and the director jointly shall establish an extramural research and development program based on the recommendations of the Working Group to support the development of technology that will enable all existing and future providers of communications services and all existing and future communications devices to be utilized effectively with the National Alert System.

(b) FUNCTIONS.—In carrying out subsection (a) the Undersecretary for Science and Technology and the director shall—

(1) fund research and development which may include academia, the private sector, and government laboratories; and

(2) ensure that the program addresses, at a minimum—

(A) developing innovative technologies that will transmit geographically targeted emergency messages to the public;

(B) enhancing participation in the national alert system;

(C) understanding and improving public response to warnings; and

(D) enhancing the ability of local communities to integrate the National Alert System into their overall operations management.

(c) USE OF EXISTING PROGRAMS AND RESOURCES.—In developing the program, the Undersecretary for Science and Technology shall utilize existing expertise of the Department of Commerce, including the National Institute of Standards and Technology.

SEC. —108. GRANT PROGRAM FOR REMOTE COMMUNITY ALERT SYSTEMS.

(a) GRANT PROGRAM.—The Undersecretary of Commerce for Oceans and Atmosphere shall establish a program under which grants may be made to provide for the installation of technologies in remote communities effectively unserved by commercial mobile radio service (as determined by the Federal Communications Commission within 180 days after the date of enactment of this Act) for the purpose of enabling residents of those communities to receive National Alert System alerts.

(b) APPLICATIONS AND CONDITIONS.—In conducting the program, the Undersecretary—

(1) shall establish a notification and application procedure; and

(2) may establish such conditions, and require such assurances, as may be appropriate to ensure the efficiency and integrity of the grant program.

(c) SUNSET.—The Undersecretary may not make grants under subsection (a) more than 5 years after the date of enactment of this Act.

SEC. —109. PUBLIC FAMILIARIZATION, OUTREACH, AND RESPONSE INSTRUCTIONS.

The director of the National Office, in consultation with the Working Group, shall conduct a program of public outreach to ensure that the public is aware of the National Alert System and understands its capabilities and uses for emergency preparedness and response. The program shall incorporate multiple communications technologies and methods, including inserts in packaging for wireless devices, Internet websites, and the use of broadcast radio and television Non-Commercial Sustaining Announcement Programs.

SEC. —110. ESSENTIAL SERVICES DISASTER ASSISTANCE.

Title IV of the Robert T. Stafford Disaster Relief and Emergency Assistance Act (42 U.S.C. 5170 et seq.) is amended by adding at the end the following:

“SEC. 425. ESSENTIAL SERVICE PROVIDERS.

“(a) DEFINITION.—In this section, the term ‘essential service provider’ means an entity that—

- “(1) provides—
- “(A) telecommunications service;
- “(B) electrical power;
- “(C) natural gas;
- “(D) water and sewer services; or
- “(E) any other essential service, as determined by the President;

“(2) is—

- “(A) a municipal entity;
- “(B) a nonprofit entity; or
- “(C) a private, for-profit entity; and
- “(3) is contributing to efforts to respond to an emergency or major disaster.

“(b) AUTHORIZATION.—In an emergency or major disaster, the President may use Federal equipment, supplies, facilities, personnel, and other non-monetary resources to assist an essential service provider, in exchange for reasonable compensation.

“(c) COMPENSATION.—

“(1) IN GENERAL.—The President shall, by regulation, establish a mechanism to set reasonable compensation to the Federal Government for the provision of assistance under subsection (b).

“(2) CRITERIA.—The mechanism established under paragraph (1)—

“(A) shall reflect the cost to the government (or if this is not readily obtainable, the full market value under the applicable circumstances) for assistance provided under subsection (b) in setting compensation;

“(B) shall have, to the maximum degree feasible, streamlined procedures for determining compensation; and “(C) may, at the President’s discretion, be based on a good faith estimate of cost to the government rather than an actual accounting of costs.

“(3) PERIODIC REVIEW.—The President shall periodically review, and if necessary revise, the regulations established pursuant to paragraphs (1) and (2) to ensure that these regulations result in full compensation to the government for transferred resources. Such reviews shall occur no less frequently than once every 2 years, and the results of such reviews shall be reported to the House Transportation and Infrastructure Committee and the Senate Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs Committee.”

SEC. —111. DEFINITIONS.

In this title:

(1) DIRECTOR.—The term “director” means the director of the National Alert Office.

(2) OFFICE.—The term “Office” means the National Alert Office established by section —105.

(3) NATIONAL ALERT SYSTEM.—The term “National Alert System” means the National Alert System established by section —102.

(4) NOAA.—The term “NOAA” means the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration.

(5) NON-COMMERCIAL SUSTAINING ANNOUNCEMENT PROGRAM.—The term “Non-Commercial Sustaining Announcement Program” means a radio and television campaign conducted for the benefit of a nonprofit organization or government agency using unsold commercial air time donated by participating broadcast stations for use in such campaigns, and for which the campaign’s sponsoring organization or agency funds the cost of underwriting programs that serve the public convenience, interest, and necessity, as described in section 307 of the Communications Act of 1934 (47 U.S.C. 307).

(6) WORKING GROUP.—The term “Working Group” means the National Alert System Working Group on the established under section —106.

SEC. —112. SAVINGS CLAUSE.

Nothing in this title shall interfere with or supersede the authorities, missions, programs, operations, or activities of the Federal Communications Commission or the Department of Commerce, including those of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, the National Institute of Standards and Technology, and the National Telecommunications and Information Administration.

SEC. —113. FUNDING.

Funding for this title shall be provided from the Digital Transition and Public Safety Fund in accordance with section 3010 of the Digital Television Transition and Public Safety Act of 2005 (47 U.S.C. 309 note).

SA 4928. Mr. BINGAMAN submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill H.R. 4954, to improve maritime and cargo security through enhanced layered defenses, and for other purposes; which was ordered to lie on the table; as follows:

At the appropriate place, insert the following:

SEC. ____ . PILOT PROGRAM TO EXTEND CERTAIN COMMERCIAL OPERATIONS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—During fiscal year 2007, the Commissioner shall extend the hours of commercial operations at the port of entry located at Santa Teresa, New Mexico, to a minimum of 16 hours a day.

(b) REPORT.—The Commissioner shall submit a report to the appropriate congressional committees not later than September 30, 2007, with respect to the extension of hours of commercial operations described in subsection (a). The report shall include

(1) an analysis of the impact of the extended hours of operation on the port facility, staff, and trade volume handled at the port; and

(2) recommendations regarding whether to extend such hours of operation beyond fiscal year 2007.

NOTICE OF HEARING

COMMITTEE ON ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, I would like to announce for the information of the Senate and the public that the hearing scheduled before the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources for Tuesday, September 12th at 10 a.m. has been relocated to room SD-106.

The purpose of the hearing is to receive testimony relating to the effects of the BP pipeline failure in the Prudhoe Bay Oil Field on U.S. oil supply and to examine what steps may be taken to prevent a recurrence of such an event.

Because of the limited time available for the hearing, witnesses may testify by invitation only. However, those wishing to submit written testimony for the hearing record should send two copies of their testimony to the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources, United States Senate, Washington, DC 20510-6150.

For further information, please contact Dick Bouts or Sara Zecher.

AUTHORITY FOR COMMITTEES TO MEET

COMMITTEE ON FINANCE

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Finance be authorized to meet during the session on Monday, September 11, 2006, at 2 p.m., in 215 Dirksen Senate Office Building, to hear testimony on “NAFTA at Year Twelve.”

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

PRIVILEGES OF THE FLOOR

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the following interns with the Finance Committee staff be allowed on the Senate floor today and for the duration of the debate on the Port Security Improvement Act: John Lageson, Tory Cyr, and Brett Youngerman.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

REMEMBERING SEPTEMBER 11, 2001

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, about an hour ago a number of Members of the House and the Senate, principally leadership, participated in a wreath-laying ceremony by the President at the Pentagon. The President has participated over the last 48 hours in similar events in New York, earlier today in Pennsylvania, and later at the Pentagon today.

A number of colleagues have come to the Senate to offer statements in remembrance of that day 5 years ago and that question of: What were you doing? Whom did you talk to? What were your memories? Whom were you with? This is a familiar question and one we have all gone back over the course of the last several days and thought about.

I remember where I was. I remember exactly what I was doing. I remember whom I was with. I was across the street in the Russell Building with my chief of staff, Emily Reynolds, at the time, who is now Secretary of the Senate. We were in a meeting with a colleague of mine, Senator HUTCHISON, talking over issues, when a member of her staff came in and told us that a plane had struck the Twin Towers.

At that time, it was thought initially to be a corporate plane, but as a pilot it was very clear to me that would not have happened by accident. While our discussion continued for a few moments, someone wheeled in a television, and then, dumbstruck, we watched that second plane strike the tower. Shortly thereafter, of course, we heard there was smoke coming from the Pentagon, where we were a few moments ago. Clearly, we were under attack.

I remember my first phone call home. We all remember our phone calls, reaching out to touch others whom we loved. I called my wife Karyn. Immediately, we talked about what should be done with our three boys who were at school in Washington, DC.

Of course, later that afternoon, we were standing on the steps of the Capitol with so many of our colleagues, spontaneously, together, breaking out in “God Bless America,” to let the world know that America will not cower to such terrorism. Indeed, in about 30 minutes, a number of our colleagues from both the House and the Senate will, once again, go to those Senate steps.

Those are the moments that are indelibly etched into my mind in terms of where I was and whom I was with. But it really goes out to the people we were just with over at the Pentagon, as I talked to one man I never met before whom, as we were waiting just prior to the ceremony, I turned to and introduced myself. He told me his story, his story of Amelia, who, on her second day of work, indeed, her birthday, September 11, 5 years ago, at the Pentagon was struck and died. And then there are the images of all the first responders—the law enforcement, the firefighters, the police, and the volunteers—and the family responses. All of those feelings come tumbling in.

Nearly 3,000 Americans lost their lives to those vicious acts of terror that day. The attacks shattered the longstanding illusions I had through my entire life of safety and security, at least in this great country of ours. Indeed, we found ourselves hard pressed on every side but not crushed; perplexed but not in despair; persecuted but not abandoned; struck down but not destroyed.

Instead, we pressed on, pushing every hindrance aside with resolve, calling upon our most fundamental beliefs about America, many going back over the ensuing days addressing what makes us uniquely American.

We pressed on, coming together and sending forth thousands of those first responders, thousands of those policemen, paramedics, construction workers, and other rescue workers to Ground Zero and the Pentagon.

I remember a few days after the Pentagon was struck going out and welcoming an entire delegation of first responders from Tennessee, with that American flag displayed so proudly and that Tennessee flag right next to it.

We pressed on, facing down that economic shock and developing new respect for our economy's natural resilience and a new respect for the economy's ability and resiliency to bounce back.

We pressed on, immediately in this body, addressing issues of intelligence, of making sure we not only mobilized our troops but we supported them with the very best equipment that we could.

We pressed on by taking the fight to the enemy because we knew that if we did not, that fight would come to us.

With the passage of 5 years' time, some things begin, inevitably, to blur. That is why in some ways it is so useful to have remembrances like what we have had over the course of today.

We forget a time when we had a great fear of even boarding airplanes. We forget a time when we held our children—and those days, weeks, and months afterwards; it was so, so, so close—but we forget that time of holding our kids just a little bit longer with that hug before they went off to school. And we forget a time when we felt that hatred in the heart of our enemy. The feelings that were once so vivid, so sharp—that shock, that anger, that fury—the fear began to lose the jagged edge with time. In part, that is part of this Nation's healing—coming together, responding in a healing way to a catastrophe—because we should not live in fear. We cannot be a nation that lives in fear. Salesmen go out traveling on business, families who are out traveling on vacations should not fear boarding that plane to fly. Parents loading their children on a bus, they should not fear sending them off to school.

But there is also a danger in forgetting. There is a danger in having time pass and letting those memories fade because as time fades we also start to forget the enemy who took those 3,000 lives so prematurely. We forget the intentions they harbor and the agenda they champion.

There was a stark reminder for me yesterday, as I joined Senator MCCONNELL and Senator SPECTER, as we went to Guantanamo Bay, to the detention facility there. And when you walk those grounds—a remarkable place in and of itself and the entity itself in terms of treating those detainees in a safe and humane way, which is very possible—in walking those grounds, it causes you to think back to 5 years ago, to what precipitated that event which caused the loss of 3,000 and destroyed the lives of so many thousands of others.

We cannot become complacent because if we do, we will be struck again. Our enemy remembers. Our enemy plans. And I was reminded again and again yesterday, as I toured those grounds, our enemy continues to plan, continues to plot, continues to conspire—conspires to see us lose in Iraq, plots to drive us out of Afghanistan, plans to attack us here, right here, again in the United States. We know that because over these last 5 years, at least 11 times such plots have been promoted. That is why we cannot afford to grow complacent. We cannot afford to let our resolve waiver. We have to continue to press on. We have to continue to strengthen our security.

That is why on this floor, in the bill that has been talked about this afternoon and the bills we will address over the coming days, we are focusing on a security agenda. It is an agenda that includes replenishing our critical supplies for troops on the ground—we just finished the Department of Defense appropriations bill on the Senate floor last week—eliminating vulnerabilities and closing the gaps in port security, the bill on the floor today; and, indeed, in the near future, creating military commissions to try the enemy combatants, the terrorists who are captured on the field of battle, and bolstering the terrorist surveillance program to make sure our law enforcement and our Government are appropriately equipped to be able to detect terrorism before an event happens.

Here in the Senate we have worked tirelessly to ease the burden on our memories. That is why we are safer now than we were 5 years ago. Consider there has not been a successful terrorist attack against the homeland.

But safety and security are not static points in time. They are not static statistics. They are dynamic, in constant flux. So as we take time today to remember the horror as well as the courageous actions of 5 years ago, let us also remember there is much more we can and we must do to bring the terrorists to justice and to ensure the events of 9/11 are never repeated.

EXPRESSING THE SENSE OF THE SENATE UPON THE FIVE-YEAR ANNIVERSARY OF THE TERRORIST ATTACKS AGAINST THE UNITED STATES ON SEPTEMBER 11, 2001

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate now proceed to the consideration of S. Res. 565, which was submitted earlier today.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the resolution by title.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

A resolution (S. Res. 565) expressing the sense of the Senate upon the five-year anniversary of the terrorist attacks against the United States on September 11, 2001.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the resolution.

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the resolution be agreed to, the preamble be agreed to, and the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The resolution (S. Res. 565) was agreed to.

The preamble was agreed to.

The resolution, with its preamble, reads as follows:

S. RES. 565

Whereas on September 11, 2001, terrorists hijacked four civilian aircraft; crashed two of them into the towers of the World Trade Center in New York City; and crashed the third into the Pentagon outside Washington, DC;

Whereas the fourth hijacked plane, United Airlines Flight 93, crashed in Somerset County, Pennsylvania, near the town of Shanksville, after the passengers and crew of that flight struggled with the terrorist-hijackers to take back control of the plane, ultimately preventing the flight from reaching its likely destination in Washington, DC;

Whereas the heroic actions of the rescue workers, volunteers, Federal, State and local officials who responded to the attacks with courage, determination, and skill is to be commended;

Whereas thousands of innocent Americans, and civilians from many other countries, were killed and injured as a result of these attacks;

Whereas Congress declared, in the aftermath of the attacks, September 12, 2001 to be a National Day of Unity and Mourning;

Whereas there has not been a terrorist attack on the United States homeland since the terrorist attacks five years ago; but al Qaeda has perpetrated terrorist attacks throughout the world against U.S. persons, facilities, and interests, as well as U.S. allies during that time; Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Senate:

(1) commemorates the life of each individual who died as a result of the attacks of September 11, 2001;

(2) extends its deepest condolences to the victims of these attacks, as well as to their families, friends, and loved ones;

(3) once again condemns in the strongest possible terms the attacks, the terrorists who perpetrated them, and their sponsors;

(4) commits to support the necessary steps to interdict and defeat terrorists who plot to do harm to the American people;

(5) recommits itself and the nation to bringing to justice the perpetrators of the attacks, along with their sponsors;

(6) honors and expresses its gratitude to members of its Armed Forces, law enforcement personnel, first responders, members of intelligence community and others who have bravely and faithfully participated in the War on Terrorism since September 11, 2001;

(7) declares September 11, 2006, to be a National Day of Remembrance, in commemoration of the terrorist attacks against the United States on September 11, 2001; and

(8) declares that when the Senate adjourns today, it stand adjourned as a further mark of respect to each individual who died as a result of the attacks of September 11, 2001.

COMMEMORATING THE 60TH ANNI-VERSARY OF HISTORIC 1946
BASEBALL SEASON OF BOB FELLER

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Judiciary Committee be discharged from further consideration, and the Senate now proceed to H. Con. Res 449.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

A concurrent resolution, H. Con. Res. 449, commemorating the 60th anniversary of the historic 1946 season of Major League Baseball Hall of Fame member Bob Feller and his return from military service to the United States.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the concurrent resolution.

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the concurrent resolution be agreed to, the preamble be agreed to, and the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The concurrent resolution (H. Con. Res. 449) was agreed to.

The preamble was agreed to.

MEASURES READ THE FIRST
TIME—S. 3884 and S. 3886

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, I understand there are two bills at the desk, and I ask for their first reading, en bloc.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will state the bills by title.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 3884) to impose sanctions against individuals responsible for genocide, war crimes, and crimes against humanity, to support measures for the protection of civilians and humanitarian operations, and to support peace efforts in the Darfur region of Sudan, and for other purposes.

A bill (S. 3886) to authorize military commissions to bring terrorists to justice, to strengthen and modernize terrorist surveillance capabilities, and for other purposes.

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, I ask for their second reading, and in order to place the bills on the calendar under rule XIV, I object to my own request en bloc.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is heard. The bills will be read the second time on the next legislative day.

MEASURES PLACED ON
CALENDAR—S. 3882 and H.R. 503

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, I understand there are two bills at the desk due for a second reading.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The leader is correct. The clerk will read the titles of the bills for a second time.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 3882) to amend title 18, United States Code, to support the war on terrorism, and for other purposes.

A bill (H.R. 503) to amend the Horse Protection Act to prohibit the shipping, transporting, moving, delivering, receiving, possessing, purchasing, selling, or donation of horses and other equines to be slaughtered for human consumption, and for other purposes.

Mr. FRIST. In order to place the bills on the calendar under the provisions of rule XIV, I object to further proceeding en bloc.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is heard, and the bills will be placed on the calendar.

ORDERS FOR TUESDAY,
SEPTEMBER 12, 2006

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that when the Senate completes its business today, it stand in adjournment until 9:45 a.m. on Tuesday, September 12. I further ask unanimous consent that following the prayer and pledge, the morning hour be deemed expired, the Journal of proceedings be approved to date, the time for the two leaders be reserved, and the Senate proceed to a period for the transaction of morning business for up to 30 minutes, with the first 15 minutes under the control of the majority leader or his designee and the final 15 minutes under the control of the Democratic leader or his designee; further, that following morning business, the Senate resume consideration of H.R. 4954, the port security bill. I further ask unanimous consent that the Senate stand in recess from 12:30 p.m. to 2:15 p.m. to accommodate the weekly policy luncheons.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

PROGRAM

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, tomorrow we will continue to work through the port security bill. Members wishing to offer amendments should be consulting with the bill managers and be ready to debate their amendments tomorrow and Wednesday. Members should note that we will be voting throughout the day tomorrow, and the first vote will be at noon on Senator DEMINT's national hazard alert system.

In a few moments, Members of Congress will be marking the fifth anniversary of the terrorist attacks of 9/11 with a ceremony on the Capitol steps. Senators are reminded to meet in the Chamber by 5:45 p.m. to walk over as a body for the 6 o'clock ceremony.

ADJOURNMENT UNTIL 9:45 A.M.
TOMORROW

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, if there is no further business to come before the Senate, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate stand in adjournment under the provisions of S. Res. 565 as a further mark of respect for those who died as a result of the September 11, 2001, terrorist attacks.

There being no objection, the Senate, at 5:42 p.m., adjourned until Tuesday, September 12, 2006, at 9:45 a.m.

EXTENSIONS OF REMARKS

SENATE COMMITTEE MEETINGS

Title IV of Senate Resolution 4, agreed to by the Senate on February 4, 1977, calls for establishment of a system for a computerized schedule of all meetings and hearings of Senate committees, subcommittees, joint committees, and committees of conference. This title requires all such committees to notify the Office of the Senate Daily Digest—designated by the Rules Committee—of the time, place, and purpose of the meetings, when scheduled, and any cancellations or changes in the meetings as they occur.

As an additional procedure along with the computerization of this information, the Office of the Senate Daily Digest will prepare this information for printing in the Extensions of Remarks section of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD on Monday and Wednesday of each week.

SENATE—Tuesday, September 12, 2006

The Senate met at 9:45 a.m. and was called to order by the Honorable JOHN THUNE, a Senator from the State of South Dakota.

PRAYER

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Today the Senate will be led in prayer by our guest Chaplain, Dr. Clyde P. Thomas, of Cherokee Avenue Baptist Church, in Gaffney, SC.

The guest Chaplain offered the following prayer:

Would you join with me as we pray.

Gracious God, our heavenly Father, we humbly come to You today to seek Your guidance knowing we can take only one step at a time. Illuminate each step as only You can, and keep us strong in our path.

O Lord, grant that we live together as people of vision and understanding, as well as promise and peace.

We pray for our President and the Members of this body as they serve our Nation. Encourage and strengthen them with Your power and wisdom. Protect our military and law enforcement men and women. Give comfort to their families and refresh their spirits. Make us mindful of our responsibilities and grateful for our opportunities to do Your will.

We pray this in the Name above every other name. Amen.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE

The Honorable JOHN THUNE led the Pledge of Allegiance, as follows:

I pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America, and to the Republic for which it stands, one nation under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.

APPOINTMENT OF ACTING PRESIDENT PRO TEMPORE

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will please read a communication to the Senate from the President pro tempore (Mr. STEVENS).

The legislative clerk read the following letter:

U. S. SENATE,

PRESIDENT PRO TEMPORE,

Washington, DC, September 12, 2006.

To the Senate:

Under the provisions of rule I, paragraph 3, of the Standing Rules of the Senate, I hereby appoint the Honorable JOHN THUNE, a Senator from the State of South Dakota, to perform the duties of the Chair.

TED STEVENS,
President pro tempore.

Mr. THUNE thereupon assumed the chair as Acting President pro tempore.

RECOGNITION OF THE MAJORITY LEADER

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The majority leader is recognized.

SCHEDULE

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, today, following 30 minutes set aside for morning business, we return to the port security legislation. Yesterday we were able to adopt the McCain rail security amendment, as amended, and today we have scheduled a vote, to begin at noon, on Senator DEMINT's amendment on a national alert system. The vote at noon will be the first vote of the day. Following that vote, the Senate will recess for the weekly policy meetings to occur. For the remainder of the afternoon and evening, we will make further progress on the bill, with additional rollcall votes expected. It is my hope Senators will continue to work with the managers on their amendments, and that will allow us to schedule votes as necessary.

I do want to thank all Senators for participating in yesterday's east front observance of the anniversary of September 11. It was an emotional day across this country, and I was proud to stand with my Senate and House colleagues during that important tribute.

Mr. President, I will be happy to turn to the Democratic leader for any announcements, but I do have a short statement to make.

GUANTANAMO BAY

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, I do want to briefly comment on a very short trip I took on Sunday, when I visited Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, along with Senator MCCONNELL and Senator SPECTER.

It was my first visit to the detainee facility there. We received extensive briefings over the course of the day from Admiral Harris and other base administrators. We took that opportunity to tour five of the detainee camps, as well as visit the medical facilities and visit with the health personnel there.

Bottom line, I left there very impressed with the care and the respect our military affords the detainees kept at Guantanamo. As most of my colleagues know who have visited there—and I am glad to report that many have visited there over the last several years—each detainee receives a copy of the Koran. Arrows in each of the detainees' cells point to Mecca. You see arrows throughout the prison grounds.

That makes it easier, and it is a reminder that these individuals have that opportunity to practice their faith, with prayer time occurring five times every day, where everything stops, and that time is set aside so that prayer can be offered.

It was interesting from a health standpoint. The meals themselves are nutritious meals. And I looked at a lot of the charts, aggregate charts, and, indeed, detainees gain weight from these meals. They get regular exercise. It might be as much as 2 hours a day—but 1 to 2 hours a day. They receive mail from their families. They visit privately with their lawyers. They have medical care, which again was amazing to me, which is 24/7, acute care as well as preventive care literally 24 hours a day.

When the camp first opened, much of the medical care was centered around the treatment of acute care or injuries that may have occurred in the battlefield or the like. Prosthetics were made. I think they said 22 prosthetics had been made for the detainees who have been at the facility.

The nature of health care has shifted a bit. There is still acute care 24 hours a day, in which surgical procedures, everything, can be performed right there in the detainee camps, but as those wounds healed and as the detainees got further and further away from acute injuries, there has been increasing emphasis on preventative care. Indeed, the immunization rate there is higher than in the United States of America.

I think the report is they have had fewer than 500 detainees, but all have been immunized appropriately. Things such as screening for cancer have taken place there. Colonoscopies—a procedure which, as we all know, is used commonly in this country to screen for colon cancer—are performed there on a routine basis.

The health personnel-to-detainee ratio is 1 to 4—remarkably high. That is all health personnel who are there. And I guess, as I left this briefing and the opportunity to talk to the doctors and the nurses and the psychologists and the psychiatrists, I left with an impression that health care there is clearly better than they received at home and as good as many people receive in the United States of America.

Also, I have to comment on the courageous men and women who are our military personnel there, working every day, 24 hours a day. They are doing a tremendous job. I commend them for it. As you walk through the cells, it is clear they are at least verbally abused in just walking through those cells. I know they are under a great deal of stress in carrying out their activities every day.

Our men and women, in spite of that sort of verbal abuse—and clearly at risk of physical assault—remain focused on their mission to provide the detainees there safe and humane treatment but, at the same time, simultaneously protecting Americans from the deadly plots that have been hatched by many of those detainees who are there.

As we all know from the President's comments and speeches over the last week or so, on that island today are some of the world's most hardened enemy combatants, terrorists. Khalid Sheikh Mohammed is there, the man the 9/11 Commission described as the "principal architect of the 9/11 attacks." The fact that we have the presence of them—we did not see them, we did not even ask to go to their facility—but the fact that they are there is a vivid reminder that the detainees at Guantanamo do remain locked up for a critical purpose: to protect Americans. We were reminded of that again and again as we listened to the stories about the backgrounds of the types of people who are there. I left there with no question in my mind that many would return to what they were doing before they were captured; that is, plotting new ways to attack us. We know some who have been released have, indeed, returned to the battlefield. And that has been well documented.

There has been a lot of debate recently on how we should prosecute these terrorists, these enemy combatants. Soon we will be addressing that issue once again on the floor of the Senate, as we should. But I think we should all be very clear in our own thinking that these men are dangerous terrorists who remain a threat to the safety and well-being of every American. They are militant extremists whose goal in life is to kill Americans, is to destroy our freedom and security.

Mr. President, as we were reminded through remembrances and through the ceremonies of yesterday and through the discussions yesterday, 9/11 shattered our longstanding illusions of safety and security in this country. As we learned then and have since learned—on no less than 11 occasions—safety and security are not static states, but they are dynamic, they are constantly changing, in constant flux. That means we cannot just enact a bill and then move on and say that is sufficient. We have to continuously, in this body, take stock of where we are, assess and reassess and implement changes when necessary.

We have done just that over the last 5 years. As of August, we passed 71 laws and other bills related to the war on terror. The next step is the bill we are debating today; that is, the Port Security Improvement Act. It provides additional authorities and tools critical to improving our port security and our maritime security—and to foil plots to injure us or to destroy our ports, to the detriment of hard-working Americans and to the detriment of our economy.

Very soon we will take up legislation that strengthens and modernizes our foreign intelligence surveillance laws, as well as legislation that authorizes military commissions to prosecute terrorists for war crimes, such as those who are currently detained at Guantanamo Bay.

Without these tools, we simply cannot guarantee the safety and security of the American people. That is why they are being addressed on the floor right now. That is what hangs in the balance: the safety and security of the American people. On this floor, we are not going to always agree on the approach, but it is a goal I believe every one of my colleagues shares.

As we move forward in this body over the next couple weeks, I hope we do remain focused on that goal, ensuring the safety and security of the American people.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

RECOGNITION OF THE MINORITY LEADER

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The minority leader is recognized.

PRESIDENT'S 9/11 SPEECH

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I was honored to join with President Bush and others at the Pentagon yesterday to commemorate the fifth anniversary of 9/11. I was pleased, also to join my colleagues on the east steps of the Capitol last evening in an emotional tribute to those who died on that fateful day 5 years ago.

Mr. President, 9/11 was one of the darkest days of this Nation's history. It brought America together. We were inspired by the bravery of our fellow Americans. We stood shoulder to shoulder with the President. And when he stood upon the mound of rubble at Ground Zero, with a bullhorn in hand, he spoke for all of us.

Last night, however, the President, in his address to the Nation, spoke for himself, for his administration, and not for the Nation. No bullhorn, only the bully pulpit of his office, which he used to defend an unpopular war in Iraq and to launch clumsily disguised barbs at those who disagree with his policies.

By focusing on Iraq in the manner he did, the President engaged in an all-too-familiar Bush administration tactic: conflate and blur the war in Iraq with the response to 9/11.

Despite definitive and repeated findings that there were no ties between Iraq and al-Qaida—a finding most recently echoed by the Republican-controlled Senate Intelligence Committee—the President continued to deliberately lump and blur al-Qaida, Osama bin Laden, Iraq, and 9/11 together.

This is a political move designed to tap the overwhelming public sentiment to destroy al-Qaida as a way to bolster sagging public support for the war in Iraq.

Despite the President's best efforts, the American people can see through this ploy—as we have seen with the pundits' comments following his speech and editorials all across the country today. The American people understand that Iraq is largely a sectarian struggle and that the longer we are bogged down in the streets of Baghdad, the easier it is for al-Qaida and its affiliates to reconstitute in places such as Afghanistan and Somalia.

Americans understand that this administration's "stay the course" strategy is hurting our security and moving Iraq in the wrong direction. Unemployment in Iraq is high. It is 40 to 50 percent unemployment, at least. Some places, it is 70 and 80 percent.

News accounts today say that inflation is now 75 percent in Iraq. An average of a thousand Iraqis are dying each month in Iraq. Is that a civil war? I think so. News accounts, the last couple of days—one, in fact, today said: "Iraq conflict worsens." The General Accounting Office, the watchdog of Congress, a nonpartisan organization, said that the Iraq conflict worsens.

We heard two days ago an Army general saying that the Anbar province is lost. We have a general, even before he is retired, saying that Secretary Rumsfeld said he would fire anyone who tried to develop a plan after the soldiers went into Iraq. He would fire them. There was no planning as to how the peace would take place.

The American people deserved better last night. They deserved a break from the politics that honored the spirit of 9/11, a chance to reclaim that sense of unity, purpose, and patriotism which swept through our country 5 years ago—feelings only the Commander in Chief could have inspired, that he should have tried to inspire. He didn't. Last night was not the time for a political partisan speech. Sadly, it was a missed opportunity for President Bush, who obviously was more consumed by staying the course in Iraq and playing election year partisan politics than changing the direction for this wonderful country.

I yield the floor.

RESERVATION OF LEADER TIME

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Under the previous order, the leadership time is reserved.

---

MORNING BUSINESS

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Under the previous order, there will be a period for the transaction of morning business for 30 minutes, with the first half of the time under the control of the majority leader or his designee and the second half of the time under the control of the Democratic leader or his designee.

The Senator from Pennsylvania is recognized.

THE PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS TO THE NATION

Mr. SANTORUM. Mr. President, I come to the Senate floor in sadness. The President of the United States gives an address about the condition of our country 5 years after the events of 9/11. He gives an address and lays out the scope of the problem we are confronting. There are people all across this world who subscribe to a radical, perverted form of Islam and want to destroy everything we believe in. That is the enemy we are confronting. We are in an active war with our military against them in Afghanistan and Iraq. That is the reality.

The minority leader just referred to it as sectarian violence. What is that word? Religious? Religious violence. Radical Islam violence—some Sunni, some Shia, but both are radical in their nature, and they are fighting us. That is the reality of the enemy today. The very people who planned the attacks are the people who are in Iraq. Al-Qaida is in Iraq causing that sectarian violence. Should we ignore that? I ask the Senator from Nevada, should we just ignore that, pretend they are not there, not talk about that last night, pretend al-Qaida is not in Iraq? Is this not part of the mission we are trying to accomplish?

It is sad. We are at war against an enemy that I happen to believe is the most dangerous enemy ever to confront this country, and we play petty politics constantly here on the floor of the Senate—even after a solemn day of remembrance for the valued people who died on September 11. It is chilling. We just cannot get past the politics around here, just cannot get past the partisan advantage around here. We cannot face the reality that we have a dangerous enemy out there who wants to destroy everything we hold dear, an enemy who is very clear about what they want to accomplish. How clear? They say it—not to Mike Wallace on “60 Minutes,” I might add. No, when you are spinning in English in America, you put on the nice face, you put on the happy face that we want peace and want to live together in brotherhood and all this wonderful stuff.

But that is a lie. When they go back and speak in Arabic and Farsi, they give a very different story. It is a consistent story, I might add. It is the destruction of the State of Israel, and it is the submission of the infidels to what they believe in. That is the enemy we confront. It is real. We can play politics about it and say it is not real. We can say it is a trumped-up war. They are at war with us. We may not want to be at war with them, but they are at war with us—not just in Afghanistan and Iraq, not just in southern Lebanon, not just in Great Britain, but here. They want to defeat us. Their intent is to defeat us. They are motivating people in the Middle East and around the world to join their ranks and attack us.

One of the things I learned from my days in Little League, and in everything else I have ever engaged in, is that one of the ways to lose anything you are engaged in with an opponent is not to take your opponent seriously, not to look at what they are really about, and not look at their capability. I remember early that in this war many were calling the terrorists cowards, as if these people were weak and they had no real resolve. These people are not weak. They are misguided—horribly misguided—but they are not weak. They are a dangerous enemy. They are a dangerous enemy that has an ideology that is motivating people, and they have a tactic that is uniquely effective against us.

As Osama bin Laden says, “We will defeat you because you love life; we love death.” And we do love life in this country because we have a lot to live for. We have great freedom, great material wealth. We have a wonderful culture. They, on the other hand, for the most part have none of those. They love death because they see death as better than life. They are willing to die. In fact, they want to die. We have never fought an enemy like this. We have never fought an enemy who wanted to die as part of the victory for them. We always fought enemies who saw death as a tragic consequence of war, and their objective was an earthly kingdom. Not this enemy. This enemy says death is part of the war—a desire for those entering into this battle—and their kingdom is not one they want to build here but one they want to achieve after death. This is an enemy who wants a nuclear weapon in Iran, not because they want to stave off attacks, no, but because they want to use it to pursue their messianic vision of the return of the 12th Imam, or Hidden Imam.

I give speeches all across Pennsylvania and lay out for the people of my State this vision of President Mahmud Ahmadi-Nejad and the rulers of Iran, the vision of the 12th, or Hidden, Imam, who is to return at the end of time. That is what the Shias believe. But President Ahmadi-Nejad and the rulers of Iran believe different than most Shias, thank God. They believe it is their obligation to bring about the end of time by the destruction of the State of Israel and by world chaos in which Islam is suppressing the infidels, and only at that time will this Hidden Imam return and the actualization of their religion come to pass.

This is a serious enemy, an enemy with resources. This is an enemy with growing technology, and this is an enemy with fervent disciples who are willing to go around and kill themselves in pursuit of this objective. This is not something to be played politics with. This is not something to ignore and pass off as sectarian violence that we brought about because we happen to be there. These people have been at war with us for 20 years, and we have chosen to ignore them. We paid a very high price.

So what is our lesson? If you listen to the Democratic leader, it is: Let's continue to ignore them. Let's continue to play politics. Let's put domestic politics ahead of the security of this country.

That is his message—that this is not real, this is trumped up, and if we leave them alone, they will leave us alone. Oh, really? Do you really believe that? If we leave these people alone, do you believe that somehow we would be safe here? We can just garrison America, make all public buildings like we have here at the Capitol—put Jersey barriers around everything and have police on every corner. We can protect ourselves from these people. Is that the America in which we want to live? Not me.

We are at war—the most serious war this country has ever faced against an opponent like none we have ever faced. Yet we play politics. We ignore the reality. We can pretend they are just not there—at least until November, at least until we can get control. Then maybe we will come to our senses and recognize the grave threat that confronts our country.

No, the President did not give a political speech last night. He spoke of the reality of the conflict that is before us. It is not popular to do so, I know. It is not popular to stand up and support a conflict that is difficult to deal with every day. But understand that is exactly what they have in mind.

Did you ever wonder why they don't kill 3,000 people in 1 day? They have the capability of doing so. You just send out, instead of 1 every day or 2 every day, you send out 200 in 1 day. Why not? Why don't they just have one mass, huge offensive? It is because that is not what they are all about. That is not a terrorist tactic.

The terrorist tactic is to cause death every single day. It doesn't matter who but just cause death. So why? To defeat the military? No, their objective isn't to defeat the military or drive back the lines of our troops or to control more area. No, those deaths are not aimed at our military, they are aimed at us. Every day they want to make it harder for you and you and you and you to open the paper, to turn on the television, to see more death.

This is the steady drumbeat of the psychological war of terror being inflicted on the American public. They will keep up the drumbeat every single day—not in big conflagrations but every day—to make it painful, to make it hard.

They want one thing out of us. They know our military, and I am going to submit for the RECORD an assessment from a serviceman who wrote me who provided his experience in Iraq of success, I might add.

Our military knows they must win this war, and they are succeeding at some level. They are not attacking our military. They are attacking us psychologically every single day until finally they get us to say one word—enough. Enough. We have had enough. We can't take this anymore. It is just too hard.

They believe we will say "enough" because they believe we are weak. They believe we and the modern world just don't have the stomach to fight and die for what we believe in anymore. We like our "things" too much, and so we will just leave them alone until they get stronger and stronger and in a position to do more and more damage to our children and grandchildren.

The President is right. This is our hour. We can play politics with the hour, we can seek political advantage to win the next election with this hour, or we can confront the reality of this hour and do something about it.

On my watch, even though I am facing what many consider to be a difficult time back in Pennsylvania, I am going to confront the reality of the threat to me, to this country, and to our children and grandchildren. It is too important to walk away and play politics to get reelected. It is too important to the future of this country to minimize the threat that we are engaged in and play politics with it.

It may win or lose elections. Matters not to me. It matters not to me. What matters is defending our country when it needs to be defended, not putting personal politics above what is in the best interest of the national security of this country.

I believe the President, given all the mistakes that this administration has made in the conduct of this war—and they certainly are numerous—the President has it right. This is the greatest threat for our generation, and I pray we have the courage to confront it.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to print the assessment from 1LT Jeremy Burke in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

MY MISSION

Foreign Military Advising by Military Transition Teams, MiTTs, is currently the Main Effort for the U.S. Military in Iraq. The current objective of CENTCOM is to build and train the Iraqi Security Forces in order that they can take over control of the security in their battlespace. MiTT teams advise on everything from logistical planning, operational management and command & control (C2) of their units. I was an advisor for the 3rd Brigade of the 3rd Division, Iraqi Army.

Overall assessment: I believe we have been extremely successful in our efforts to secure peace and freedom in Iraq. Many people in Iraq are now enjoying freedoms that they never could before. For those born during Saddam's reign of terror, they are tasting freedom for the first time. All over Iraq we are turning over control of security to Iraqi Security Forces like the Army, Border Police and the regular Police. Our presence there as American military is to backup the Iraqis when they need help. They are finally standing on their own two feet. Now we're just letting them get balanced.

AREAS OF SUCCESS WITH IRAQI ARMY

(1) Control of Security: We started out August 2005 and our Iraqi counterparts were assessed at being able to take over control of their battlespace no earlier than 18 months. 10 months later, in June 2006, they completed their validation exercise and we transitioned battle space authority over to Iraqi Army control.

(2) Communications: At onset of our mission our Iraqi counterparts were severely limited in communications and they could not talk between 2 of their 3 battalions nor their Brigade rear location. We needed to locate the appropriate equipment for them and get it issued out. Then we had the task of training them how to utilize all their comms gear and put it into use.

Now they have a Codan radio base station set up at their Brigade (BDE) Headquarters, BDE rear and at each Battalion location. Each location is now capable of communicating across their entire battle space, 16,000 sq KM.

Their vehicles now have mobile Codan radios to communicate between their maneuver elements and their headquarters.

They now have Internet access to send status reports to Division headquarters and to receive and send information from their battalions.

Command & Control: When we arrived in August of 2005 they had no functioning Tactical Operations Center (TOC) in which to manage subordinate units, track convoys, manage information flow and oversee operations.

After months of training and preparation, we helped them open the first Iraqi Army Brigade TOC on January 15, 2006.

All IA BDE communications are handled out of their TOC.

A representative from the S2 (Intelligence) and S3 (Operations) is working in this TOC all day and in the evening. At night there are two enlisted soldiers manning the radios and acting as a runner.

The S3 is tracking units on the ground with large wall sized maps that we provided for them. The S2 tracks enemy activity or a long period of time on an exact replica of the operations map.

As the Coalition Forces Liaison Officer (LNO), I worked 7 days a week in their TOC providing classes on: map reading, Intelligence Analysis, and reporting.

Now that our IA counterparts have taken over control of their battle space a U.S. LNO will work in their TOC as a means of bridging communications between the IA units on the ground and U.S. units providing support. Examples of this function are when an Iraqi convoy is hit with an IED attack they call back to their TOC, then the Iraqi officer in charge would request assistance and I would call in a MEDEVAC request to the U.S. Headquarters in the area.

Pay & Promotions: At the beginning of our mission, approximately 75 percent of the IA Brigade we advised had some sort of pay or promotion issue. The most common example of this was a soldier was promoted but the Ministry of Defense, MOD, had yet to recognize the promotion so they were still being paid at their old pay grade.

When I left Iraq, the Brigade's pay issues were down to 4 percent.

The Brigade S1 and the Division G1, Personnel, now work closely together and get actively involved in resolving pay issues to include traveling to Baghdad to meet directly with the Personnel Department at MOD.

MOD still has problems recognizing promotions when they come but at least now the soldier might only have 1-2 months to wait for it to be resolved as opposed to years as it was before.

(3) Vehicle Maintenance: This is still a difficult problem for the Iraqis but they are slowing making headway. They are facing a difficult task with maintenance because their culture has not adopted the idea of operator maintenance as a personal responsibility. The wealthy would just abandon a vehicle if it died on the road. The lower classes simply use a Duct Tape resolution to solve maintenance issues. One of their problems now is that since they didn't conduct periodic maintenance on their vehicles they have a lot of work to catch up on as they get more involved. Upon our arrival in August 2005, they had dozens of deadlined, inoperable, vehicles just strewn about their bases, which made their motor pools look more like junkyards.

U.S. advisors in Baghdad worked with MOD to set up a National Maintenance Contract for the Army's vehicles. For our unit they bring all their vehicles back to the Division base where the maintenance facilities are and can get any kind of repair done they need—to include newly issued HUMMWVs.

In December of 2005 we started sending soldiers from our Brigade to the maintenance course also run by the NMC group. Soldiers become qualified to perform various levels of maintenance on their vehicles. After the course they spend time at the maintenance facility to get "on the job" training before returning to their units.

(4) Logistics: Logistical support, in my mind, is now their biggest obstacle to being a successful, self-sustaining military.

MOD has not come up with appropriate plan to provide fuel for the Iraqi Security Forces, ISF. Currently the U.S. supplies some fuel to the ISF but that is being cut off—probably by August 2006.

Life Support Contracts are set up and managed by MOD but there is no MOD rep to monitor them locally except for an army officer. In some cases this has led to corruption, in other cases it has allowed local vendors to operate with no quality control.

OVERALL SENTIMENT OF THE IRAQI PEOPLE

Generally the people of Iraq are appreciative of the United States, want our Military to stay as long as possible to ensure their safety and security.

Some portions of the population are happy that we can provide for their safety and are grateful that we ousted Saddam. But they will be equally as happy when we leave. This is more of an Arab cultural thing. Arab culture is driven by pride and shame. These people might be embarrassed that they could not secure their freedoms themselves and now would like us to leave so they can take over from here. And some simply don't want Westerners controlling their future.

When we traveled to various villages we were typically well received. Kids run out to the convoy in hopes that they'll get candy or water. Village leaders come out to greet us and invite us in to sit and talk while we drink Chai. When we entered a village and people looked away or closed their doors to us, it almost always meant that they were being intimidated by the terrorists. It was these villages that we spent more time. We'd come back as often as possible, bringing clothes, food, and commanders of all levels from the Iraqi Army and the Coalition to meet with tribal leadership. When we caught Saddam Hussein, there were celebrations at every village we went to. People were both relieved and overjoyed. And they thanked us in whatever way they could. When U.S. forces killed Abu Musab Zarqawi, people celebrated in the streets firing their guns in the air, they offered us food and gifts when we visited villages. These were true inspiring patriotic moments for Iraq.

When a suicide bomber attacks an Army or Police recruiting station and kills many people, the following day the lines waiting to join up are 3-4 times larger. People are looking for jobs and they see joining the Iraqi Security Forces as a great opportunity to make a living and do their part in getting rid of the terrorism rampant in their region of the world.

We are seeing lots of economic expansion everywhere. Strip malls are being constructed, businesses are expanding and franchises are popping up. New homes are being constructed all over the country. And people are spending money, looking for new types of goods to buy and they desire goods and services that are currently available throughout the rest of the world. Satellite TV has been a big help with this.

OBSTACLES

Fuel—Currently fuel is a major crisis not only for the Iraqi Security Forces but for the general population as well. The issue is not for a lack of oil, but a lack of functioning refineries—2 shut down in November. It has started to limit the ability of the Iraqi Security Forces to conduct long-range operations.

Border Crossings—Foreign Fighters and Terrorist support still continues to flow across the Syrian Border. Smuggling of fuel, cigarettes and other goods is commonplace and put a big strain on the ability of the Border Police to shut down the border. Lack of fuel has reduced the number of border patrols that are conducted. Long lines at the Point of Entry have caused many people to come across illegally. Some smuggling is being conducted as a direct support mechanism for terrorists.

Corruption: Very problematic in all areas of the Iraqi Security Forces. But it is also misunderstood. Some levels of corruption are generally accepted in Arab culture. It is the way they have done business and government for so long that they have come to allow it—to an extent. Some of the areas of corruption that we've seen are when soldiers or police at checkpoints or border crossings do not check cars as they come through. They will sometimes take payments in order to speed a vehicle through the checkpoint. We began cracking down on this during Spring of 2006. There are also kickbacks with contractors—this is very typical and also very accepted.

Mr. SANTORUM. I yield the floor.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Illinois.

FIFTH ANNIVERSARY OF SEPTEMBER 11, 2001, AND IRAQ

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, I came to the Capitol yesterday on the fifth anniversary of September 11. I looked out the window, down the Mall on the west side, and I couldn't help but remember what we saw on 9/11. On that morning as we met in a small room on the west side of the Capitol and watched the television broadcast and first heard of a plane crashing into the World Trade Center, I thought: What a freak accident. I hope a lot of people won't die.

Then as we watched incredulously, a second plane hit the World Trade Center. The scales fell from our eyes and we knew exactly what was happening. This was no accident. This was intentional. America was under attack.

We met in this meeting a few minutes longer. Someone walked into the room and said they were evacuating the White House. We looked down the Mall on 9/11 and saw black, billowing smoke, and then the word came across that there was some explosion at the Pentagon. We weren't sure what had happened. A bomb? It turned out it was a plane.

As that black smoke billowed across the Mall, as we looked on that bright sunlit day at this horrible, disgusting display of destruction, we were told to evacuate this building, to leave the U.S. Capitol for our lives as quickly as we could.

We raced down the steps, all of us, thousands of us, and gathered outside. We stood on the grass not sure where to turn or where to go. We heard a loud boom. Many of us thought it was another explosion. It turned out it was the scrambling of our fighter planes over the Nation's Capital to protect us.

Finally, after dismissing our staff, telling them to go home and find a safe place, I walked a few blocks away from the Capitol Building and sat, as most Americans did, for the rest of the day hearing the news reports, watching the television scenes from New York.

Then late that evening, after that wrenching day, Members of Congress gathered on the steps outside the Capitol in a rare, heartening display of bipartisanship or nonpartisanship, said a prayer, and sang "God Bless America."

In the weeks that followed, there was a mood on Capitol Hill unlike anything we had seen for a long time. The President came to us within hours and said: We are now declaring war on those responsible for 9/11. He proposed that we mobilize the strength of America, all of us, and strike back at those who had killed 3,000 innocent people on that day. The President's plea was answered with unequivocal support on both sides of the aisle.

I have often said that in the years I have served here, there is no more difficult vote than a vote to go to war. We know that with that vote, people will die. The enemy, brave Americans, and innocent people will die, and you must take that seriously. But I didn't hesitate to vote for that war against al-Qaida. I didn't hesitate to vote for that war in Afghanistan. America had to stand and defend itself against those who would kill innocent people, as they did on 9/11.

Yesterday, on the fifth anniversary of 9/11, there was an effort to rekindle that feeling.

The President made important visits to New York, to the site of the World Trade Center, to Pennsylvania where United flight 93 crashed into the ground when the brave passengers took control of the plane away from the terrorists and, in the process, may have saved my life. Many believe that plane was destined for Washington, destined for this building, this important symbol of America. Those brave passengers took control of that plane and gave their lives in the process. The President visited that rural setting to remember their heroism.

Then he came to the Pentagon, and I was honored to join him as he laid a wreath at the corner of the new section of the Pentagon that was rebuilt after 184 people in that building died on 9/11.

We gathered again on the steps yesterday, a bipartisan gathering of the House and Senate, for a moment of prayer, a moment of reflection, and to sing "God Bless America." It was a time when we tried to recapture that spirit of unity, that spirit of determination, and many of us felt we were moving our Nation again in the right direction.

But what is it that divides us? We heard the speech of my leader and friend, Senator HARRY REID of Nevada, and the speech of the Senator from Pennsylvania, again at odds in debating about our policy. What divides us is clearly another war—not the war in Afghanistan but the war in Iraq. Twenty-three of us on the floor of this Senate, when given a chance, voted against the authorization of force to go to war in Iraq.

As a member of the Senate Intelligence Committee, I knew from closed door sessions, which I was sworn not to disclose, I knew from those sessions that many of the things that were being told to the American people as reasons to go to war against Saddam Hussein and Iraq were just plain wrong.

This last week, the Senate Intelligence Committee, in a bipartisan report, made it public for the record, for history, for all to see, that the American people were misled into this war in Iraq—statements about weapons of mass destruction that didn't exist, statements about nuclear weapons that didn't exist, statements about connections between Saddam Hussein and al-

Qaida which were fabricated. Those reasons were told to the American people to justify a war which is now in its fourth year.

Unlike the war in Afghanistan where our mission was clear to go after those who were responsible for 9/11, to go after al-Qaida, in Iraq we are in our fourth year. The official report from the Pentagon this morning is 2,671 of our best and bravest soldiers have died in that war; more than 19,000 have returned wounded, serious wounds—amputations, blindness, burns, traumatic brain injury. We have spent more than $320 billion on that war. And last night, as the President spoke to America, he went beyond that spirit of unity that brought us together for the war in Afghanistan and against al-Qaida to discuss this war in Iraq.

It is part of an offensive by this administration. We saw it on Sunday with Condoleezza Rice, our Secretary of State, and with Vice President CHENEY's appearance on television. We saw and heard the statements they made to justify a war in Iraq, a war which, unfortunately, is not going well.

The Senator from Pennsylvania objected to Senator REID saying that we were involved in some sort of sectarian violence in Iraq. Those are not original words of the Senator from Nevada. He made reference to the General Accountability Office which released its report yesterday in which it said:

Iraq's political process has sharpened the country's sectarian divisions, polarized relations between its ethnic and religious groups, and weakened its sense of national identity.

The Senator from Pennsylvania criticized the Democratic leader for being political and partisan in saying these words. But the same words were used by the General Accountability Office. It is a fact. We can't ignore it. The situation in Iraq has worsened.

Mr. President, do you know what the GAO reported in terms of violence in Iraq? The figures are startling. I read the report:

The Pentagon said enemy attacks against coalition and Iraqi forces increased by 23 percent from 2004 to 2005. The number of attacks from January to July 2006 were 57 percent higher than during the same period in 2005.

The GAO published a graph yesterday. The number of attacks rose from around 100 in May of 2003 to roughly 4,500 in July of 2006. Is it political or partisan to note the obvious, the GAO report to which Senator REID made reference? That is not political partisanship; that is a reality, and we should face that reality because Iraq does continue to slip into civil war despite the billions that we have spent and the thousands of American lives which have been lost in that battle.

There is another political reality. Osama bin Laden is still on the loose. Al-Qaida's membership, estimated at 20,000 on 9/11, is now estimated by our intelligence agencies at 50,000. Instead of shrinking and disappearing, they are growing geometrically.

And there is another reality. The Taliban is gaining ground again in Afghanistan. They have set up shop in Pakistan where that Government has agreed to have a safe haven for some of these terrorist forces. That is unfortunate, and it is disastrous when you think of our long-term war on terrorism.

Sitting at home in Springfield, IL, over the weekend, I listened to Vice President CHENEY when he appeared on "Meet the Press." He said that those of us who make these speeches about the reality of the war in Iraq are not showing the kind of resolve that we should. We are somehow validating terrorism. We are weakening America's efforts to fight terrorism.

I couldn't disagree more. If Members of Congress—if the American public cannot stand up and speak when they disagree with the policies of this administration, we have lost sight of the values of this democracy and how important they are. Despite the Intelligence Committee's disclosure of how we were misled into the war in Iraq, and despite the situation on the ground today, when Vice President CHENEY says he would do it all again, it is a reminder that this administration is resolute in continuing on a path that does not make us safer and, in fact, endangers our troops even as we stand and speak today. It strikes me as odd that this Vice President, after the Intelligence Committee report, did not show even a hint of embarrassment for some of the things he said before the invasion of Iraq and not even a word of regret for misleading the American people.

Well, we have a different vision. We believe there are things we can do to make America safe and strong. Let's take the 9/11 Commission report. Let's take their recommendations and make them reality—100 percent of them. Instead of a failing grade, let's have an A+ so that America can take these recommendations and move forward.

The budget of the Bush administration has continued to cut these recommendations, has refused to fund the things that will make us safer, whether it is a stronger National Guard, a better communications system, stronger port facilities, more surveillance and security of chemical plants and nuclear powerplants, better security on Amtrak, on mass transit—these are things the Democrats on this side of the aisle believe should be our highest priority in making America safe.

We need to strengthen our ports and our nuclear powerplants in my State and across the Nation. We need to cut our dependence on foreign oil so that we aren't indirectly subsidizing terrorism and indirectly subsidizing those who are killing our troops in Iraq and Afghanistan. And we need to push to change course in Iraq. We need a responsible redeployment of troops so that the Iraqis understand this is their battle, this is their war, this is their country. There has to come a time, in this fourth year of a war that has lasted longer than the Korean war, when the Iraqis stand and fight for their own country, when American troops are replaced and can come home.

Last week, the administration sent 5,000 more troops to Iraq. There is no end in sight. The President said we must stay the course. I think we need to change the course. We need to start the redeployment of American troops—not precipitous, immediate withdrawal; that would be wrong, but to start the redeployment of American troops so the Iraqis stand and fight for their own nation, so that our troops, having served us so well and so honorably, can come home safely.

The sad reality in Afghanistan is if we don't put more force in place there, we are not going to see the results for which we fought for so long. Afghanistan is tough territory. Many have learned that. The British Empire learned it. The Soviet Union learned it as well. If we are not going to become victims of the same fate, we need to make certain that our commitment to NATO and Afghanistan is real. That is part of the war on terrorism.

The Senator from Pennsylvania said of Senator REID that he didn't take our opponents seriously. The Senator from Pennsylvania is wrong. Senator REID understands terrorism, as we all do. He understands that we need to stand together, on a bipartisan basis, to make America safe and to fight the right war in the right place, to win a victory that counts. That is why he spoke today. We should never forget, according to the Senator from Pennsylvania, that we are fighting an enemy that wants to die. He said that has never happened before.

I think a brief study of history would tell him it has. The Japanese Kamikaze fliers had the same death wish as those who are suicide bombers today. It has happened before. It doesn't make it any less of a threat, but the fact is, we have faced it before and we have overcome it.

It is interesting that as we listen to our military experts, they tell us we cannot win in Iraq militarily no matter how many troops we put in place; we have to win politically. We have to stop and reflect on the fact that there is a large swath of this world that doesn't understand who we are and what we stand for. They continually are told the wrong thing about America. They continue to be misled. So as we are strong militarily, as we must be, as we must defend America at home, we must also reach out and spread the word about what America's values are, what we are willing to stand for, so that we are better understood in this world and so that this new generation, looking for an impression of the United States, doesn't come up with the wrong impression.

As we consider what we face today in the closing weeks of this session, let's make sure we do stand together in a bipartisan fashion for defending America as our homeland. Let's put the resources in place to make us safer. We continue to stand behind our troops, but let us not be so bull-headed that we won't consider any change in tactic or strategy that might start to bring our troops home safely, with their mission truly accomplished this time, and let's not give up on Afghanistan. We cannot allow the Taliban to have a resurgence of power and give al-Qaida another place to gather forces to launch against the world. That is our mission. That is our responsibility.

As we gathered yesterday, it was a reminder that at one time not that long ago we stood together in that effort.

Mr. President, I yield the floor, and I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

CONCLUSION OF MORNING BUSINESS

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Morning business is closed.

SECURITY AND ACCOUNTABILITY FOR EVERY PORT ACT

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Under the previous order, the Senate will resume consideration of H.R. 4954, which the clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (H.R. 4954) to improve maritime and cargo security through enhanced layered defenses, and for other purposes.

Pending:

Stevens (for DEMINT) amendment No. 4921, to establish a unified national hazard alert system.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, is the pending business the DeMint amendment?

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Yes, it is.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mrs. MURRAY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

AMENDMENT NO. 4929

Mrs. MURRAY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the pending amendment be set aside, and I send an amendment to the desk.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Washington [Mrs. MURRAY] proposes an amendment numbered 4929.

Mrs. MURRAY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent the reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

AMENDMENT NO. 4929

(Purpose: To extend the merchandise processing fees, and for other purposes)

At the appropriate place, insert the following:

SEC. _____ . COBRA FEES.

(a) EXTENSION OF FEES.—Subparagraphs (A) and (B)(i) of section 13031(j)(3) of the Consolidated Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1985 (19 U.S.C. 58c(j)(3)(A) and (B)(i)) are amended by striking “2014” each place it appears and inserting “2015”.

(b) USE OF FEES.—Paragraph (2) of section 13031(f) of such Act (19 U.S.C. 58c(f)(2)) is amended by adding at the end the following: “The provisions of the first and second sentences of this paragraph limiting the purposes for which amounts in the Customs User Fee Account may be made available shall not apply with respect to amounts in that Account during fiscal year 2015.”

Mrs. MURRAY. Mr. President, this morning the Senate is considering a very important bill, the port security bill, which many Members have come to the floor to talk about. I am proud to be an original sponsor of this bill and have been working on it for a number of years; in fact, since five years ago, after September 11, when I was the Transportation Appropriations Subcommittee chair. At that time I began to bring stakeholders together to talk about how we can make sure the cargo containers that are coming into this country are secure. It is a very complex issue. It is very difficult to do. We have a tremendous balancing act of making sure that cargo containers are safe when they come into our ports but also that we don't halt our economy as we move forward with this initiative.

I have been very proud to work with a number of Senators in getting us to this point, and I am hoping this bill will move forward in an expeditious manner. Obviously, there will be a number of amendments that come before us, and I look forward to working with other Senators on both sides of the aisle to move them forward.

The bill that is now before the Senate has one major hole. The original bill we have been working on with all of the committees contained a funding source for this bill that some Members had some concerns about. The original bill that we offered had tariff fees as the funding source. The Finance Committee has objected to that. They were concerned about that. I understand that concern. Because of that objection, the bill that has come before us is an important bill, but it lacks the ability to put in place a secure system. It is essentially an empty shell without a funding source.

That is why I have sent to the desk right now an amendment we have been working on together with a number of people to make sure this bill is not just about rhetoric but actually has the funding behind it. If we pass this bill without funding it, we will not have done our job. The amendment I sent to the desk extends two existing Customs user fees for 1 year to fund this bill. Those are fees that are collected today that are going to expire, and all we are doing is extending the collection for an additional year.

The fees we are extending are the merchandise processing fee and the passenger conveyance fee. Extending those for just 1 year will produce close to $2.5 billion in revenue and will importantly provide a dedicated funding stream to pay for the new security initiatives authorized in this bill. By voting for this amendment, this Senate will put money behind the rhetoric of port security. This Senate will put money behind the rhetoric. That is absolutely critical in today's world.

I sit on the Appropriations Committee. I sit on the Department of Homeland Security Appropriations Subcommittee. If we do not put a dedicated source of funding behind this bill, we will simply put port security in contention with all of the other functions of the Department of Homeland Security. We will be looking at Coast Guard money, FBI money, all of the important functions that we need to have within this bill, and port security will be just another issue that doesn't get funded. That is why this funding amendment is so absolutely critical.

The funding for this amendment is going to be used to hire new Customs and Border Protection officers. We can't just simply require our Customs and border officials to do more. They are important positions. Their eyes on the containers and their eyes on the tracking, their eyes on the containers as they are loaded and secured is absolutely critical. Without putting new Customs and Border Patrol agents in place to do the functions we are asking for in this bill, we simply will be sending an empty promise to America.

The funding also will improve the tracking and data collection of every container coming into our ports. That is essential funding which will make sure that we put into those containers is sealed, that someone is watching to make sure they haven't been tampered with, that no one has gotten into them, and that those containers have not gone someplace they are not supposed to. Just putting a tracking seal on it isn't going to make sure we know a container has not been tampered with. We need the personnel in place to do the tracking. That is an important item for funding in this bill. The current bill doesn't have the funding for it. The amendment I am offering will make sure we have eyes on those tracking systems.

The funding will also establish incentive programs for shippers who voluntarily agree to these standards. That is the GreenLane section of this bill that is very important to make sure we know we can reduce the number of cargo containers coming into our ports that could produce a danger for American citizens and for America's economy.

The funding will also establish protocols for the resumption of cargo shipments after a disruptive incident. We put in place a system which assures, should an incident occur on one of our ports, that we have a resumption strategy in place so we know which cargo, which containers can begin to move off of our ports in an expeditious manner. The reason this is so important is if we don't have a protocol in place, it will take weeks, if not months, to get that cargo moving again. That will have a tremendous impact on our economy not just in our port cities but throughout the Nation, as stores would not have any retail goods on their shelves. The economic impact of that has been outlined in this debate, but it would be devastating. We absolutely need to have a protocol in place, and this funding stream will assure it is not just empty rhetoric but actually a funding source.

Finally, the funding is important for authorizing and appropriating money for a grant system for our ports, critical funding infrastructure for gates, for fencing, for making sure people are in place to know who is coming onto our ports—critical infrastructure that we have known is lacking and needs a real funding stream, not just rhetoric saying we are requiring it.

I am very pleased to bring this amendment to the Senate, and I hope it is agreed to overwhelmingly because it is critical that we put in place not just an authorizing bill to tell the American public we are putting in place a port security bill but that we actually have the funding so we can accomplish what I think everyone believes is an important goal.

I have presented this amendment and ask for its consideration.

I yield the floor.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Hawaii.

Mr. INOUE. Mr. President, I ask the Senator from Washington I be added as a cosponsor of her amendment.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. INOUE. I thank Senator MURRAY for her efforts to reconcile what we believe to be the most glaring vulnerability of this bill—how to pay for it.

As I noted in my opening statement, authorizing security programs for our ports and supply chain is the first step. We also must provide the actual funding to implement these new initiatives. While we have rushed to debate this security bill this week as the country remembers those who lost their lives 5 years ago, the Homeland Security Appropriations Subcommittee is in conference struggling to find the necessary funds to pay for existing programs. The security enhancements we are debating this week provide our constituents no benefit if we do not give the agencies we have tasked with these new responsibilities the necessary funds to do their job.

Despite a vulnerable maritime system and a very real threat to the physical and economic security of all Americans, the President has provided little support to help secure our Nation's ports from terrorist attacks. Even though the Congress has enacted two port security laws, the White House has included limited port security funding in their annual budget requests, proving their support for port security has been all talk and no action.

In 2003, when the President's budget failed to provide a fraction of the funding necessary for port security programs, Democrats offered an amendment to the Budget Resolution to provide $1 billion per year for 2 years to help ports meet the new security mandates. The amendment closely followed the Coast Guard's estimates on the immediate, first year costs for ports to meet the mandates. The amendment received unanimous approval in the Senate. During the conference committee's consideration of the budget resolution, the Republican leadership eliminated the provision.

Recognizing this inadequacy and lost opportunity to deliver funds to the ports quickly, the Democrats offered an amendment to add $1 billion to the 2003 supplemental again to help ports meet the new security mandates. Despite unanimous approval in the Senate 3 weeks earlier, when it came time to put the real dollars behind the budget commitment, the amendment was opposed by the administration and defeated on the Senate floor on a party-line vote.

Unfortunately, this year we saw history repeat itself. A Democratic amendment offered by Senator BYRD to increase funds for port security programs by $648 million was offered and agreed to by unanimous consent during committee consideration of the fiscal year 2006 supplemental appropriations bill. Yet again when it came time to put real dollars behind their commitment to port security programs to make them a reality, the additional funds were opposed by the administration and were eliminated in conference.

If history is any guide, the additional funding provided by the Senate in the fiscal year 2007 Department of Homeland Security Appropriations bill is likely to be eliminated again during this ongoing conference.

It has become evident that only by identifying a revenue source other than appropriated funds to pay for the new initiatives authorized in this Port Security Improvement Act can we truly overcome this cycle of all talk and no action. And that is exactly what the Murray amendment does.

The Murray amendment raises $2.5 billion by extending customs fees. It goes a long way toward covering the costs for the $3.2 billion authorized in this legislation. This is a tremendous step in the right direction to pay for more than 78 percent of the authorized levels in the underlying bill. I hope my colleagues will join with me in supporting this amendment.

Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. BURR). Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, parliamentary inquiry: What is the pending business?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The pending business is the Murray amendment.

Mr. LOTT. I understand that other Senators may be coming to speak on the amendment. But I wish to speak in general in support of the bill itself.

Mr. President, yesterday, Monday, September 11, 2006, marked the fifth anniversary of the terrorist attacks of our country, on September 11, 2001. It was an emotional day for all of us. There were feelings of remembering the unity that it brought to all of us even here in this institution after that dreadful day. It was a day of mourning and sadness and a lot of mixed emotions. But I also think it reminded us once again that the terrible threat we saw come to fruition on that fateful day is still with us and we have more work to do.

I think it is important for those of us in Congress to point out that we have done a lot to address the terrorist threat to try to make our country safer from a variety of security vulnerabilities since then. I don't think we talk enough about what we do. But I remember very well the months after September 11, 2001, the fall of that year on into the next year, for a period of weeks—yes, even months—when we worked together. We put aside partisanship, we put aside political interests, and we decided we were going to do what was right for our country. It was a great time.

I note that the approval rating of the Congress during that period went to the highest level it has ever been before or since. The people liked it when they saw us working together and doing the right thing for our country. Of course, I should note that it has probably fallen steadily ever since then. But we have more to do.

I took the time last month to go to the west coast and look at ports, to look at ships that come in and their cargo, how the targeting works, how the random selection works, how the scanning works, how the intermodule systems work. It is an incredible thing to see, all the cargo coming into and going out of our west coast port—in fact, all of our ports.

I represent ports that serve the Gulf of Mexico and, of course, we have our very important east coast ports, too. It is a phenomenal thing to see where good progress has been made, but more needs to be done.

I do not know if it is fiscally possible or physically possible to guarantee that our ports are secure. But we have done some, and we need to do more.

I point out that we passed the Maritime Transportation Security Act of 2002. This was major legislation. And I was very pleased we were able to get it done. It has made a difference. It has a number of provisions in it that have helped us to move toward more sophisticated analysis of cargo shipment data; cooperative arrangements between foreign ports and businesses involved; targeted deployment of non-intrusive scanning and radiation detection equipment. Great progress is being made in this area.

The next generation of these scanners is ready to come onto the market. I took a look at how one of them works. It scans a container in 12 seconds. You can pick up something as small as a pistol smuggled among the cargo. You can pick it out because I saw it. If I picked it out, just about anybody can pick it out.

But that was a good piece of legislation. Now we have this next step, the Port Security Act of 2006. I thank the chairman of the Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs Committee, Senator COLLINS of Maine, and her ranking member, Senator LIEBERMAN. They deserve great credit for having produced a good bill—and then they took it beyond that. They worked with the Commerce, Science and Transportation Committee, on which I serve, to address concerns of that committee and some of their jurisdictional interests.

Then we had to go another step and work with the Finance Committee. Good work has been done. It has been done by three different committees and in a bipartisan way.

Now we have an opportunity to do something good and something that is needed, but more is needed. There is no question about that.

This bill will improve security at our seaports by including waterway salvage operations in port security plans. It calls for unannounced inspections of port facilities to verify the effectiveness of facility security plans.

I want to reemphasize I was a little surprised and impressed at what I saw at the Ports of Seattle and Tacoma—the security operation, the way the port officials work with Government officials and work with our security officials, DEA and Customs, and all the rest of them where there is a maze of entities that are involved. It seems to be working pretty well, I say to the Senator from Washington State. I went out there, frankly, not expecting much, and I was surprised and relatively pleased.

Am I still concerned and nervous? When you look at the Port of Seattle, as the Senator said on the floor, you have a city, two stadiums right there in a pretty compact area. You have ships coming in from all over the world at a steady stream. The risk of danger is unsettling, to say the least.

We need to do more. This legislation provides additional direction on the implementation of the Transportation Worker Identification Card Program. We can do that. In fact, they have already done it in the private sector. It is just the Government that is lagging behind.

It mandates the establishment of interagency operation centers to coordinate the security activities of the many Federal, State and local agencies.

I get a little nervous because I have dealt with this, too, where you have a major event. I remember one time when we had a drug cargo coming into my hometown. A pretty good fracas broke out about what was going to be the lead agency and take the credit. Was it going to be the local sheriff, was it going to be port authority, FBI, Customs or DEA?

Here is my answer: Who cares? Somebody needs to get the job done. Quit squabbling over who is the lead agency or who gets the credit or who gets the blame and make sure it is done seamlessly and effectively. I think we do that with this bill.

This bill mandates the establishment of interagency operations centers to coordinate the security activities of all these different agencies.

It mandates the establishment of an exercise program to test interagency cooperation.

It establishes a training program for ports and their workers.

It improves security in the international supply chain. That is what a lot of people say: Wait a minute, once it gets to Seattle, it is too late. Right. So what is happening at the port of embarkation? Who is looking at the situation there?

The bill ensures that following any maritime transportation security incident there will be an orderly resumption of cargo movement through our ports. It authorizes the Container Security Initiative, which examines containers at foreign ports prior to their shipment to the United States. It authorizes the Customs-Trade Partnership Against Terrorism Program to improve information sharing and cooperation between the private sector and the Department of Homeland Security.

Everything I was concerned about, while I was looking at these ports and ports in my hometown and gulf ports and other ports, I think this legislation addresses or moves in the right direction.

Now, I admit, some of it will include pilot programs or we are going to study this or that, and we waste so much money and so much time with that sort of thing. But when you are talking about very sophisticated, integrated, voluminous programs, like what is going on in our ports, a little thought might be a good idea.

Now, my complaint would be, why did we not do that a year ago, two years ago, three years ago? Well, sometimes the problem is us. We have to legislate. We have to do something. It is not enough that we just stand around and complain about our concerns, and then, when we have a chance to do something, we cannot follow through.

So I urge the leaders of these committees to press forward. Do it now. Let's not drag this out. There will be some good amendments that will be offered. Probably we ought to take them. Some of them are already being considered. Some of them have already been taken. There will be some amendments, really, that are just grand-standing.

Hey, that is our right. We are Senators. But I would just say we need to get this done. There is not a lot we can take credit for in terms of security in this particular Congress. This would be good. And besides that, I would hate to let the Senator who dragged this bill out or voted against this bill when an incident occurs.

This is a plus for the institution. When you do the right thing for the American people, there is plenty of credit to go around. Let's get this legislation passed and let's do it now. We do not need to be working on this at 6 o'clock Thursday night. We can finish this tonight or tomorrow. And then let's move on because it is well considered. It is bipartisan. There are some legitimate amendments. Let's take them up. Let's deal with them, and then let's go to another subject.

But overall, I feel good about the work that has been done on this bill, and I think we need to do more, and we need to do it very quickly. This will be a step in that direction.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The minority leader.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, first of all, I congratulate the individuals responsible for bringing this bill to the floor. No one is more responsible than the senior Senator from Washington, Mrs. MURRAY. She has talked about this for years. This was a difficult bill because it had multiple jurisdictions—the Homeland Security Committee, the Finance Committee, and the Commerce Committee. The bill is here and I am glad it is here. It is long overdue. But this is a small slice of what we need to do to make America safe. We need to do much more. Five years after 9/11, America is not as safe as it could be and should be. In my opinion, failures by this White House and inaction by this Republican-dominated Congress have left our ports and borders vulnerable, our chemical plants open to attack, our nuclear power facilities unsafe, our mass transit systems unsecure, and our military stretched to levels not seen since Vietnam. We need a new direction to keep America safe, and we need it now.

AMENDMENT NO. 4936

(Purpose: To provide real national security, restore United States leadership, and implement tough and smart policies to win the war on terror)

Today, I intend to offer the Real Security Act of 2006 as an amendment to the port security bill. The Real Security Act provides an aggressive plan to make America safe. It takes nothing away from the port security legislation before this body. It is based on the real lessons of 9/11, more than 5 years ago, that occurred, lessons that for too long have been ignored by this Congress. This Democratic amendment would get serious about all facets of security—not only on port security but also on rail, aviation, and mass transit.

My colleagues on the other side of the aisle talk tough about national security. Today we will see if they are serious about taking the required steps to actually keep America safe by joining with us in supporting a tough and smart plan to protect our families.

This Real Security Act would, first of all, implement all 41 recommendations of the bipartisan 9/11 Commission.

In a report card last year, the 9/11 Commission gave Republicans in Congress and the Bush administration D's and F's in implementing its recommendations. The amendment would provide the adequate resources for first responders, improve intelligence oversight and homeland security funding, and improve our tracking of material that can be used in nuclear weapons.

An additional section would equip our intelligence community to fight against terrorists. With all the tough talk from this Republican Congress about terrorism, it is striking, stunning to find that for the first time in 27 years, this Congress did not authorize the Intelligence bill for our intelligence community—the first time in 27 years. This year, again, there is no authorization, and we have 18 days remaining in this session of Congress. This Real Security Act would, in fact, adopt the Intelligence authorization bill that needs to be passed.

Third, the amendment will secure not only our ports but our rails, our airports, and our mass transit systems. In addition to that, it would protect our chemical plants. And this is real money here to protect our chemical plants, real money to protect our nuclear power facilities. Our nuclear generating facilities—it is no secret—have their independent security systems. Some have referred to them as “rent-a-cop” programs. What they do is put out the security of these nuclear power facilities to the lowest bidder. We have to have standard protection for our nuclear power facilities. That would be done with this amendment which we are going to offer.

As I indicated, this legislation will do some good things, in section 3, that I have talked about.

Customs and Border Protection, which we talk about a lot—this would actually give a half a billion dollars, $571 million, for necessary expenses for border security, including for air asset replacement and air operations facilities upgrade, the acquisition, lease, maintenance, and operation of vehicles, construction, and radiation portal monitors that Border Patrol tells us are absolutely essential, and they do not have them after 5 years.

It would give $87 million to the U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services. As I have indicated, it would give an additional $55 million for air cargo security, including cargo canine teams and inspectors. It would give $250 million for aviation security, including—very importantly—after all these years after 9/11, we still do not have explosives monitoring equipment. The Coast Guard would be given $184 million—these are real dollars; these are not authorized dollars—for necessary expenses for the Integrated Deepwater Systems Program. The Coast Guard says this is essential. This section is important, as I have indicated, for making our country safer.

The fourth provision of this amendment would focus resources on the war on terror. Bin Laden's trail has gone cold, as we have seen in the papers in recent days. The administration has taken its eye off the war on terror and gotten our country bogged down in Iraq. This amendment will change this by increasing substantially our special forces operations to capture terrorists, to kill terrorists. It would improve our relationships with the Muslim world so we can help stop recruitment of new terrorists.

Fifth, the amendment would provide better, updated tools to bring terrorists to justice. We have a sense of the Senate on FISA. As we speak, there is good bipartisan work being done on domestic surveillance. Senator FEINSTEIN and others have worked on a bipartisan basis. It is my understanding she has, on the Judiciary Committee, at least two Republican Senators who will support her amendment. That is important.

As to the Hamden decision, the Supreme Court said we need to do something. And we do need to do something. Senators LEVIN and WARNER and others have worked on a bipartisan basis to do something about that. It would bring terrorists and detainees in Guantanamo Bay and other places to justice by listening to our military experts and helping to create tough tribunals that will lock up terrorists while respecting the Constitution and maintaining America's integrity. It is important we do this.

Finally, this amendment would change the course in Iraq. Our amendment would include the Levin-Reed resolution to move in a new direction in Iraq. There would be a transition of the U.S. mission in Iraq to counterterrorism, training, logistics, and force protection. No immediate withdrawal, nothing like that. It would begin a phased redeployment of U.S. forces from Iraq before the end of this year, as called for by some of my colleagues on the other side of the aisle. We would work with Iraqi leaders to disarm the militias and develop a broad-based and sustainable political settlement, including amending the Iraqi Constitution to achieve a fair sharing of power and resources.

We would convene an international conference—which has been called for by Senator BIDEN for years now, and others—and contact group to support a political settlement in Iraq, preserve Iraq sovereignty.

It is very important that this amendment be adopted. We have talked a lot about terrorism, homeland security, talked about doing something about what is going on in Iraq and Afghanistan. This amendment would do that. I would hope my colleagues on the other side of the aisle would allow us to adopt this amendment. I believe it is essential. We have waited too long. It needs to be done.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the amendment that is now pending be laid aside.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I call up my amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the amendment.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Nevada [Mr. REID] proposes an amendment numbered 4936.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

(The amendment is printed in today's RECORD under "Text of Amendments.")

Mr. REID. Mr. President, thank you very much.

I now yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from North Dakota.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, I am going to offer an amendment. I will ask that the pending amendment be set aside in a moment. I am not able to debate my amendment at this point because there is a large group of farmers who are in town to talk about disaster relief, and I am expected to be with them at 11:30. I am going to offer the amendment, go over and be a part of what they are doing, and then come back.

But before I offer this amendment, I want to say, just for a moment, this morning the new trade deficit figures were released. The highest trade deficit in America's history was announced this morning: $68 billion. That is the highest trade deficit in our history: $68 billion for 1 month.

This is the most incompetent, unbelievably dangerous trade strategy, and yet all we get from anybody is this talk about free trade, free trade, how wonderful it is. Well, this last month alone, we are up to our necks in $68 billion of debt, the majority of which is held by the Chinese and the Japanese. If this month's trade deficit does not persuade some people to finally decide the current trade strategy is not working, then I guess nothing ever will.

But let me just, from this 1 month, extrapolate what our yearly trade deficit is with these various countries. We are running a trade deficit at a $240 billion-a-year level with China. Our trade deficit with the European Union is at a $140 billion-a-year level; OPEC, $120 billion a year; Japan, $90 billion a year; Canada, $70 billion a year; Mexico, $60 billion a year. It is unbelievable what is happening—$68 billion a month in trade deficits.

Now, I understand there are a lot of people who vote for all these trade agreements and think this is wonderful. This is not wonderful. It is undermining this country's economy, it will injure our economic future, and I think it will consign our children to an economic future and opportunities that are much less than we have experienced. I would expect and hope that one of these days this Congress and this President will wake up and decide that this trade strategy isn't working. We are choking on trade debt, moving millions of jobs overseas, and tens of millions more are poised to go.

If this doesn't persuade people to decide to stand up for this country's economic interests, I guess nothing ever will. At this point, we need, on an emergency basis, the understanding that we should create a fair trade commission in this country that leads us toward trade balance, getting rid of deficits, and standing up for American jobs and American interests. That hasn't been the case for a long time.

This morning's announcement simply underscores once again the dramatic failure of this trade strategy, the failure of this Government to stand up for this country's economic interests. I will talk about that more later.

AMENDMENT NO. 4937

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk, and I ask unanimous consent that the pending amendment be set aside.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from North Dakota [Mr. DORGAN] proposes an amendment numbered 4937.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

(Purpose: To prohibit the United States Trade Representative from negotiating any future trade agreement that limits the Congress in its ability to restrict the operations or ownership of United States ports by a foreign country or person, and for other purposes)

At the appropriate place, insert the following:

SEC. ____ FOREIGN OWNERSHIP OF PORTS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—On and after the date of the enactment of this Act, the United States Trade Representative may not negotiate any bilateral or multilateral trade agreement that limits the Congress in its ability to restrict the operations or ownership of United States ports by a foreign country or person.

(b) OPERATIONS AND OWNERSHIP.—For purposes of this section, the term "operations and ownership" includes—

- (1) operating and maintaining docks;
- (2) loading and unloading vessels directly to or from land;
- (3) handling marine cargo;
- (4) operating and maintaining piers;
- (5) ship cleaning;
- (6) stevedoring;
- (7) transferring cargo between vessels and trucks, trains, pipelines, and wharves; and
- (8) waterfront terminal operations.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, this amendment is simple. It relates to the issue of port security, which is the bill we are on. As you know, earlier this year we had a substantial amount of controversy about port security, at a time when the Bush administration gave the green light for Dubai Ports World, which was a government-owned company in the United Arab Emirates, to have the opportunity to take over management of seaports in our country—in New York, New Jersey, Baltimore, Philadelphia, New Orleans, and Miami, among others.

In February of this year, the Bush administration said that was fine for a company called Dubai Ports World to take over the management of these ports. It had been given official sanction to do so, and the President indicated that if the Congress didn't like it, and if the Congress passed legislation to do something about it, he would veto any bill Congress might approve to block the agreement that would allow the United Arab Emirates-owned company to manage American seaports.

Well, the UAE then indicated it was going to back away, and Dubai Ports World has now moved to try to find a way to sell its interest to others. My understanding is that it has not yet done so. But the circumstances are that the Oman Free Trade Agreement, which will come to the floor of the Senate this week we are told by the majority leader, includes a provision—I will describe it in greater depth later—that would prevent the Congress from interfering in any way with a foreign company from Oman from managing our ports.

My amendment is very simple. It would say that trade officials would be prohibited from agreeing to any trade agreement that would preclude the Congress from blocking a takeover of U.S. port operations by foreign companies. In recent trade agreements they have actually included—which we have negotiated with other countries—the opportunity for those countries and their companies to come in and run America's ports.

When we are talking about port security, don't tell me about security if we decide we are going to allow other countries, and companies owned in many cases by countries, to take over the management of America's ports. That is not port security and not, in my judgment, improving the security interests of this country.

We went through this debate about Dubai Ports World and United Arab Emirates. That issue is not resolved. It is being raised again in every trade agreement that is being negotiated and is included in the one with Oman that will be debated later this week. The majority leader wishes to take up that trade agreement. I believe there is a 20-hour requirement or debate provision with respect to that agreement.

I intend to talk at some length about what that agreement provides with respect to this provision. The provision in this trade agreement once again is that it is going to be just fine for foreign interests to come in and provide management and many other functions at America's seaports. Tell me how that will make this country more secure.

I don't think anybody can talk about security when at the same time, in trade agreements, we are saying we want other countries, and companies that are owned by these countries, in fact, to come in and manage America's seaports. That is a recipe for disaster, in my judgment.

I will speak more about it later. I wanted to at least lay the amendment down and have the opportunity to be in line after lunch and talk about this amendment at greater length.

I yield the floor.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, everyone in this Chamber understands that we are in a political season. And that means we are going to be taking political votes. The amendment offered by the Senator from North Dakota is indeed one of those votes.

Now, Senator DORGAN is a friend of mine. We have worked together on a number of important issues. But let's face it. This amendment doesn't really do anything. It creates the appearance of a problem and then purports to resolve that illusory problem. So there really isn't any point to the amendment. But we also know, that no Member wants to be portrayed in a 30-second television commercial as having voted against U.S. ownership of port operations. So I recommend to my colleagues that they support this do-nothing amendment.

Let me explain why this amendment doesn't really do anything. This amendment says that after the date of enactment, the U.S. Trade Representative may not negotiate any bilateral or multilateral trade agreement that limits the Congress in its ability to restrict the operations or ownership of U.S. ports by a foreign country or person. But the fact is, our trade agreements do not prevent Congress from legislating on any matter, including ports.

First off, Congress can always override an international agreement by passing subsequent legislation. That is an elementary principle of constitutional law. Moreover, our standard implementing legislation for trade agreements expressly states that if a provision of a trade agreement is inconsistent with any provision of U.S. law, then that provision in the trade agreement shall not have effect. In other words, in the event of an inconsistency between a trade agreement and U.S. law, Federal law prevails over the trade agreement. Yet this amendment suggests that the U.S. Trade Representative can somehow transcend our Constitution and Federal law by negotiating a trade agreement.

That is ridiculous. It is false. But as I said, we are in a political season. So I suggest we accept this do-nothing amendment, recognizing it for the political act that it is, and we move on.

It is critical that we move this important legislation through the Senate as soon as possible and avoid getting bogged down in politics.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to lay aside the pending amendment, and I call up my amendment, which I believe is at the desk, No. 4930.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the pending amendment is set aside.

The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from New York [Mr. SCHUMER] proposes an amendment numbered 4930.

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

(Purpose: To improve maritime container security by ensuring that foreign ports participating in the Container Security Initiative scan all containers shipped to the United States for nuclear and radiological weapons before loading)

On page 5, between lines 20 and 21, insert the following:

(9) INTEGRATED SCANNING SYSTEM.—The term “integrated scanning system” means a system for scanning containers with the following elements:

(A) The container passes through a radiation detection device.

(B) The container is scanned using gamma-ray, x-ray, or another internal imaging system.

(C) The container is tagged and catalogued using an on-container label, radio frequency identification, or global positioning system tracking device.

(D) The images created by the scans required under subparagraph (B) are reviewed and approved by the Secretary, or the designee of the Secretary.

(E) Every radiation alarm is resolved according to established Department procedures.

(F) The information collected is utilized to enhance the Automated Targeting System or other relevant programs.

(G) The information is stored for later retrieval and analysis.

On page 43, strike lines 11 through 14 and insert “enter into agreements with the governments of foreign countries participating in the Container Security Initiative that establish criteria and procedures for an integrated scanning system and shall monitor oper-”.

On page 44, line 5, strike “and”.

On page 44, line 9, strike the period at the end and insert the following: “; and”.

On page 44, between lines 9 and 10, insert the following:

(5) shall prohibit, beginning on October 1, 2008, the shipment of any container from a foreign seaport designated under Container Security Initiative to a port in the United States unless the container has passed through an integrated scanning system.

On page 60, strike lines 9 through 15.

On page 62, lines 7 and 8, strike “As soon as practicable and possible after the date of enactment of this Act” and insert “Not later than October 1, 2010”.

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. President, I rise to talk about one of the most critical gaps in our homeland security, and that is port security. This week, everyone in my home State of New York—certainly there but also everywhere in America—is asking if we are safer since 9/11. I have to say, if you look at port security, the answer is an unfortunate no.

In this week of remembering the attacks on 9/11, I am pleased that the critical issue of port security is under consideration by the Senate. I think the Port Security Act of 2006 is a good start. I commend my colleagues, and particularly my friend from Washington State, who worked so long and hard on this issue. But I also want to be sure the legislation we pass provides real teeth and resources for port security.

The United States is the leading maritime trading Nation in the world. At any given moment our seaports are full of container ships, warships, cruise ships, and oil tankers. Every one of these ships is an opportunity for terrorists to strike at our industry, our infrastructure, and our lives. We know these enemies will wait patiently and plan carefully in order to create maximum panic and damage.

Our greatest risk is that a terrorist could easily smuggle a nuclear weapon through our ports, God forbid, and bring it into the United States. Once it gets out of the port, it will be gone, and we would not know about it until it is too late.

Yet, unfortunately, our vulnerable seaports have long been neglected by the administration. Programs to screen for nuclear materials are delayed and delayed and delayed. I have been pushing amendments such as this for years and, frankly, the administration, in lockstep with my colleagues on the other side of the aisle, generally talks the talk, but they do not walk the walk. They do not say we should not do research to guard against nuclear weapons being smuggled into our country, but then when it comes time to allocate resources to get it done, when the need is $500 million, they might allocate $50 million or $35 million. That is what has happened in years past. That is a disgrace. That is letting our guard down.

Mr. President, we need to fight the war on terror overseas, no question about that. But as any high school basketball coach will tell you, to win a game—in this case, a war on terror—you need both a good offense and a good defense. We have woefully neglected the defense. An example is the spending by this administration, DHS, and by the Senate and this Congress on port security.

By the end of this month, DHS will have provided $876 million in port security grants since 9/11. This is a fraction of what we have spent on aviation security, and it is far less than what is needed.

Maritime trade is booming. The Coast Guard estimates port owners will need $7.2 billion over the next 10 years to bring ports in line with Federal security requirements, and we need to give more funding and more attention to vulnerable seaports. If we ever needed convincing that this administration is asleep at the switch when it comes to port security, turn back the clock a few months to the fiasco over Dubai Ports World. That company, a government company from the United Arab Emirates, was cleared to take over operations at more than 20 ports along our eastern and gulf coasts without any serious review.

It was hard to believe. And then when the President learned there wasn't serious review, he still said we don't need it. Now that shows a profound and very disturbing unawareness of what we need for port security.

The Dubai Ports World takeover almost snuck under the radar, after getting scanty review from the CFIUS committee. There is only one bit of good that came from this Dubai Ports World fiasco. It revealed how little we had done to protect our ports and focused the Nation, and hopefully this administration, on bolstering port security in the United States and around the world.

I am inclined to support the Port Security Improvement Act of 2006, but I am also very concerned that this bill does not go nearly far enough toward securing our seaports and shipping vessels, especially against the unspeakable danger of a nuclear weapon.

This is our great nightmare. God forbid—God forbid—a nuclear weapon is shipped into this country and exploded. Nothing could be worse.

So instead of doing little baby steps, instead of saying this is a 10- or 15-year project, why aren't we moving with alacrity to make ourselves safer against the greater danger we could face?

I know my colleague from Connecticut, who has just walked in, has been very active on this issue and has been very helpful to me when I have offered amendments in this regard.

We need to do much more to guard against nuclear weapons being smuggled into our country by sea, and we can't have any holes in our defenses. Today I am offering two amendments that will strengthen port security improvement in these key aspects.

The first amendment is the amendment that is pending, No. 4930. This amendment secures our ports by screening all cargo containers that reach our shores to make sure they do not contain a nuclear or radiological weapon.

More than 9 million cargo containers enter the country through our ports each year, and as we all know—it is sad, it is woeful—only 5 percent of these containers have been thoroughly screened by Customs agents. That is nothing short of an outrage. It would truly be a nightmare scenario if one of these unchecked containers had a nuclear weapon smuggled in by a terrorist group.

The latest I heard from some on the other side is: We can't guard against every single terrorist act. We don't have the resources or the focus to do it.

I disagree. But even if one believed in that philosophy, one would have to put nuclear weapons and the danger of them being smuggled into this country at the very top of the list of dangers. So even if one's view is we can't do everything, we certainly should do everything we can to prevent this nightmare scenario.

Terrorists, unfortunately, could detonate a nuclear bomb in a port or the bomb could be loaded on a truck or railcar and be sent anywhere in our country or terrorists could combine radioactive material with conventional explosives to make a so-called dirty bomb.

Any attack of this kind would cause unspeakable casualties, destruction, and panic. We know our enemies are ruthless and determined enough to plan this type of attack. Yet the administration has waited years and years, and I have been trying to implore them to take significant action on port security.

We know terrorists have tried to purchase nuclear materials on the black market, and we know that any shipping container could be used as a Trojan horse to smuggle deadly radioactive material into our country. But this country has not stepped up to the plate to fund port security at the levels that are necessary or to pass laws with real teeth.

This amendment will end this shocking state of affairs and make America safer by requiring that within 4 years, every container coming into the United States will pass an advanced nuclear detection system known as integrated scanning.

Integrated scanning is used now. I have visited—and so has my colleague; I visited, with my colleague from South Carolina, LINDSEY GRAHAM, Hong Kong about 6 months ago. It is an amazing system. The containers are not slowed down. They simply are required to drive through a portal with two detection devices, each on a side, that do two things: They first check for nuclear weapons and nuclear materials. The only good news is—they are terrible and dangerous—they emit gamma rays which pass through just about anything but lead. Even if they are hidden in an engine block, the detection device works.

At the same time, because lead may cover them, there is a scanning device that will reveal large chunks of lead. Once these trucks go through the devices with these containers, we will know if they have nuclear weapons or nuclear radiation, nuclear materials or, alternatively, a significant enough amount of lead that could shield those, and we could then inspect the container.

An integrated scanning system works. I have seen it with my own eyes. I salute the firm of Hutchison Wampoa, the largest shipping company in the world, for on their own instituting this system in the Port of Hong Kong. They do the checks using non-intrusive imaging technology. Then it is checked with a tracking device, as well as, of course, the nuclear device. And if the checks don't match up, Customs inspectors know something is wrong and can stop the container.

Isn't it a shame that China and Hong Kong have better port security than we have in the United States? Integrated scanning for nuclear weapons is a model of what it means to make a true commitment to port security.

We don't need to study this any more. My amendment sets firm deadlines for containers entering the United States to meet this mark. If it is working in Hong Kong, there is no reason why America shouldn't hold other ports that handle our commerce to the same high standard of safety.

There are some critics who say this is an unrealistic deadline; let's study it some more. It is working. It is there. It has been working for a year without flaws. Why do we have to study it when the danger is so great and the technology is there?

The Department of Homeland Security has wasted enough time securing our ports. It is time for Congress to hold DHS accountable and time for us to demand real security at our seaports.

Under this pending amendment, by October 2008, integrated scanning must be used to check all containers that arrive on U.S. shores from foreign ports participating in what is known as CSI, the Container Security Initiative.

There are 40 ports in the CSI in 22 countries. U.S. Customs agents, under the program, work directly to inspect containers bound for America.

But it is not enough to extend integrated scanning only to the ports in the voluntary CSI program. So my amendment also sets a deadline of October 2010 for every single container entering the United States to pass an integrated scan.

We have waited long enough for port security to receive the attention it deserves. While the Department of Homeland Security drags its feet, it is time to put our safety first by voting for a measure that will actually stop nuclear weapons before they ever get near the United States.

This does not cost the taxpayers a plug nickel. We simply require the shipping companies to do it. When Senator GRAHAM and I visited Hong Kong—and Senator COLEMAN, who has been very interested in this issue, will confirm it—they told us it costs about $8 to scan a container; whereas, the cost of shipping that container from Hong Kong to the west coast is $2,000. That is .2 percent.

Shipping companies will have to put these scanners in. They will then have to pass along the costs to their customers. But I doubt the U.S. consumer would see any increase, the amount is so small and competition in the shipping industry is so large.

I support this amendment and urge bipartisan support so we can once and for all say we are keeping our world safe.

AMENDMENT NO. 4938

I have another amendment which I am not going to ask to call up at the desk right now because we don't have anyone on the other side, and they haven't seen it yet. I don't think there will be any objection to calling it up, but I am going to talk about it now, and then we can get unanimous consent to call it up. It is amendment No. 4938. Let's talk about that.

This is the Apollo project amendment. Here is what it does.

Forty-four years ago today, John Kennedy vowed to put a man on the Moon by the end of the decade. That was a bold and visionary promise. NASA succeeded with time to spare because it was backed by the full extent of American resources and ingenuity. John Kennedy called for us to do it, and we went forward and did it. It was a bold and visionary promise.

Now it is time for Congress to make the same bold commitment to homeland security. Too often since 9/11 we have said this has to be done; here is $5 million when the job takes $100 million. As a result, 5 years after the attacks on our country, we are still far behind where we need to be. We must stop shortchanging port security.

This amendment dedicates $500 million over the next 2 years in competitive grants to public and private researchers who have innovative and realistic ideas for nuclear detection devices that will keep us ahead of our enemies. The funding is sorely needed.

We have to develop better portal monitoring devices. We need devices that can be positioned on cranes. We need devices that can be placed under water. In all of these areas, we need devices accurate and effective enough to keep commerce moving smoothly.

The model Hong Kong uses will work for big ports, but it may not work for small ports. In all these areas, we need the devices to be accurate enough and effective enough not only to detect radiation but to not have so many false positives that they interfere with commerce.

So many times in the past, this Congress has authorized appropriations for port security. They are simply hollow promises and do not go anywhere. This amendment is different. It makes a meaningful and long-term commitment of a worthy goal of keeping our seaports safe. Funding for the grant process will come from a port-related user fee that will be a dedicated source of revenue. It is only fair to ask those who will benefit most from port security improvements to contribute to this task.

We have spent $18 billion on aviation security in the past 5 years. Mr. President, $500 million is not too much to devote against the horrifying threat of a nuclear attack on our soil. The first amendment doesn't cost us any money. This amendment does. I imagine that is why there is a temporary holdup on the other side to offering it.

The bottom line is the leaders of the 9/11 Commission called a nuclear weapon being smuggled into this country "the most urgent threat to the American people." Congress has done far too little for far too long in this area. We are running a marathon against a ruthless enemy. We haven't taken any more than a few halting steps. We can no longer afford to fail in securing our ports.

I ask my colleagues to support both amendments, when we have a chance to vote on them, to strengthen this important bill.

Once again, she wasn't here earlier. I praise my colleague from Washington for the good work she has done on this bill, a bill I am strongly inclined to support.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

The Senator from Connecticut.

Mr. LIEBERMAN. Mr. President, I rise to speak on the overall bill before the Senate to express my strong support for it and to say I am proud to be an original cosponsor of the Port Security Improvement Act of 2006 and its predecessor, the GreenLane Cargo Act.

Seeing that the clock is reaching noon, I ask unanimous consent we extend the time for the scheduled vote by 10 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. LIEBERMAN. I thank the Chair. Mr. President, I rise to express my support for the bill and say I am proud to be a cosponsor with Senator COLLINS, Senator MURRAY, and Senator COLEMAN. This is a comprehensive, bipartisan port security bill. I would also like to thank Senator STEVENS and Senator INOUE of the Commerce Committee, and Senator GRASSLEY and Senator BAUCUS of the Finance Committee, for their hard work, leadership, and commitment to passing a port security bill this Congress. This is really important. In the midst of a Congress and a Capitol that has become all too reflexively and destructively—I might say self-destructively—partisan, and that partisanship getting in the way of us getting anything done, this is a bill on which members of our Homeland Security Committee and the other relevant committees have risen above partisanship and focused on a real threat to our security, a terrorist threat that would come to us in containers moving through our ports or in terrorist acts at our ports.

I know there will be many amendments offered this week. I hope we will consider them in the fullness of debate that is part of the Senate but that we always ask ourselves the question: Will this amendment stand in the way of this bill passing and making it through conference committee to be signed by the President? This is urgent and this bill responds comprehensively to the urgent terrorist threat that we face.

Ninety-five percent of our international trade flows through our ports. Prior to 9/11, the main goal was to move these millions of tons through our ports efficiently, quickly, for reasons obviously of commerce, jobs, and employment. Since 9/11, we have realized that we need to bring security into the equation but without inflicting on ourselves the precise economic harm that the terrorists intend to do to us. This is a difficult but imperative balance we must achieve.

The 9/11 Commission report said that "major vulnerabilities still exist in cargo security," and that, since aviation security has been significantly improved since 9/11, "terrorists may turn their attention to other modes. Opportunities to do harm are as great, or greater, in maritime and surface transportation"—i.e. ports.

Just last month, RAND's Center for Terrorism Risk Management Policy published a report entitled "Considering the Effects of a Catastrophic Terrorist Attack" that considered the effects of a nuclear weapon smuggled in a shipping container sent to the Port of Long Beach in California and detonated on a pier. This is chilling.

But I remember that the 9/11 Commission, in its conclusions, said one of the great shortcomings we had prior to 9/11 was a failure of imagination. Imagination is usually thought to be a wonderful thing, but what they meant by that is our inability to imagine how brutal, inhumane, and murderous terrorists could be.

The potential short- and long-term effects of a nuclear weapon smuggled in a shipping container sent to the Port of Long Beach and detonated on a pier are devastating. The report estimated that up to 60,000 people might die instantly from the blast or radiation poisoning, with 150,000 more exposed to hazardous levels of radiation.

The blast and fires could completely destroy both the Port of Long Beach and the Port of Los Angeles and every ship in the port. As many as 6 million people might have to be evacuated from the Los Angeles area, and another 2 to 3 million people from the surrounding area might have to relocate due to the fallout. Gasoline supplies would quickly dry up because one-third of all the gas used on the west coast is processed at the refineries of the Port of Long Beach.

Short-term costs for medical care, insurance claims, workers' compensation, and evacuation and reconstruction could exceed $1 trillion. By comparison, the cost in similar categories resulting from the attacks on America on September 11, 2001 were between $50 billion and $100 billion. Besides damage to the United States, the attack would cause economic effects that would ripple across the globe.

That is devastating and chilling. I hesitate to even speak it on the floor of the Senate, and yet it is the world in which we live, and the threat is real.

The unsettling fact is, we still have too little idea about the contents of thousands of containers that are shipped into and across the heart of America every day. It is strange to say, but perhaps the controversy over the Dubai Ports World incident raised the collective consciousness of the American people and Members of Congress to the vulnerabilities that we face at our ports. Following that incident, the Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs Committee marked up the Green Lane bill, and later Senators COLLINS, MURRAY, and I started working with the Senate Commerce and Finance Committees to craft the comprehensive port security legislation that is before the Senate today.

The Port Security Improvement Act of 2006 builds on these foundations for homeland security by strengthening key port security programs by providing both direction and much-needed resources. I would like to focus my colleagues' attention on a few critically important parts of the bill.

First, the bill moves us closer to the goal of inspecting all of the containers entering the United States through our ports. The legislation requires DHS to establish a pilot program to inspect 100 percent of all containers bound for the U.S. from three foreign ports within 1 year and then report to Congress on how DHS can expand that system.

There is legitimate concern that inspecting 100 percent of containers would be so burdensome that it would bring commerce to a halt. However, technology companies have been working for several years to build more efficient inspection systems. The Port of Hong Kong is currently testing an integrated inspection system to scan every container entering the two largest terminals at that port, while the research and development offices of DHS have begun work on developing automated systems to analyze this data. We should move towards 100 percent inspection as fast as we can get there, understanding that we can not afford to bring commerce to a halt. This legislation will provide us critical information about how soon we can achieve this goal.

Second, this bill authorizes comprehensive and robust port security grant, training, and exercise programs, with a $400 million grant program available to all ports. Third, this legislation requires DHS to deploy both radiation detection and imaging equipment to improve our ability to find dangerous goods and people being smuggled into the United States.

DHS has committed to deploying radiation portal monitors at all of our largest seaports by the end of 2007. Unfortunately, this "solution" is, in fact, only half of the equation. To provide real port security, radiation detection equipment capable of detecting unshielded radiological materials, as these portal monitors do, must be paired with imaging equipment capable of detecting dense objects, like shielding.

This legislation requires DHS to develop a strategy for deploying both types of equipment, and the pilot program for screening 100 percent of containers at three ports similarly requires that both types of equipment be used.

Fourth, this bill requires DHS to develop a strategic port and cargo security plan, and it creates an Office of Cargo Security Policy in DHS to ensure Federal, State, and local governments and the private sector coordinate their policies.

Currently, the Coast Guard is responsible for the waterside security of our ports. U.S. Customs and Border Protection regulates the flow of commerce through our ports. The Transportation Security Administration is responsible for overseeing the movement of cargo domestically. And the Domestic Nuclear Detection Office has been working with the Defense Department and the Department of Energy to strengthen our ability to detect radiological materials anywhere in the country.

It is imperative that these agencies, offices, and departments are working closely with each other, as well as State and local government and the private sector to develop and coordinate port security policies and programs.

Lastly, this bill requires DHS to develop a plan to deal with the effects of a maritime security incident, including developing protocols for resuming trade and identifying specific responsibilities for different agencies.

This is critically important to ensuring the private sector and our global partners have enough confidence in our system, so that we can mitigate any economic disruption and foil a terrorist's plan to hurt our economy.

Moving the Port Security Improvement Act of 2006 forward will take us one giant step closer to where we ought to be by building a robust port security regime, domestically and abroad, and provide the resources necessary to protect the American people.

I look forward to continuing to work with Senators COLLINS, STEVENS, INOUE, GRASSLEY and BAUCUS, and our colleagues in the House, to finalizing meaningful port security legislation.

Yesterday was a day of remembrance and requiem. Today is a day to resolve that we will do everything in our capacity to make sure that no terrorist attack against our country and our people succeeds in the future. That is the intention of this bill. I urge Members of the Senate to adopt it by this week's end.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the hour of 12 p.m. having arrived, the Senate will proceed to a vote on amendment No. 4921 offered by Senator DEMINT, as amended.

Mrs. MURRAY. Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second? There appears to be a sufficient second.

The question is on agreeing to the amendment. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. MCCONNELL. The following Senator was necessarily absent: the Senator from Rhode Island (Mr. CHAFFEE).

Mr. DURBIN. I announce that the Senator from Hawaii (Mr. AKAKA), the Senator from Indiana (Mr. BAYH), the Senator from Maryland (Ms. MIKULSKI), and the Senator from Maryland (Mr. SARBANES) are necessarily absent.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there any other Senators in the Chamber desiring to vote?

The result was announced—yeas 95, nays 0, as follows:

2006 LITTLE LEAGUE WORLD SERIES CHAMPIONS

Mr. CHAMBLISS. Mr. President, I rise today to encourage my colleagues to join Senator ISAKSON and me in supporting a resolution congratulating the 2006 Little League World Series Champions, the Columbus Northern Little League team of Columbus, GA.

On August 28, 2006, the Columbus Northern Little League team defeated the Kawaguchi Little League of Japan by a score of 2-1 and concluded their season with an impressive record of 20 wins and only 1 loss. And when you consider the fact that more than 7,000 Little League all-star teams took the field in July, you realize the magnitude of this accomplishment.

Their talent, hard work, and sportsmanship allowed them to become the second team from the State of Georgia to win the Little League World Series, and in doing so they captured the hearts of people across Georgia and in many parts of the Nation who love the game of baseball.

As a former Little League coach during the years that Julianne and I were raising our children in Moultrie, I was so proud to participate in the long-standing tradition of Little League Baseball as a coach for my son's team—the Destiny Dawgs. There is no question that this great arena of sportsmanship, founded in 1939, builds confidence, determination, and hard work in youth.

And since the inception of the Little League World Series in 1947, it has grown to encompass not only national teams, but teams from all around the globe.

I would like to recognize the 11 young men of the Columbus Northern Team individually for their great accomplishment: Matthew Hollis, Ryan Lang, Mason Myers, Matthew Kuhlenberg, Patrick Stallings, Josh Lest, Brady Hamilton, Cody Walker, J.T. Phillips, Kyle Rovig, and Kyle Carter, who became the only pitcher in Little League Baseball World Series history to win four games in one series. Their manager Randy Morris and their coach Richard Carter deserve strong recognition for guiding these young players to victory.

And I would be remiss if I didn't recognize the teachers and students of these young men's schools, and the fans who represented their community and the State of Georgia with such enthusiasm and support.

It is with great pride that I extend my heartfelt congratulations to the Columbus Northern Team and their families. Columbus, the city that produced Major Leaguers Frank Thomas and Tim Hudson, now has a few more heroes to celebrate. I am extremely proud of them and their accomplishments and wish them great success in the future. I urge my colleagues to support this resolution.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Georgia is recognized.

Mr. ISAKSON. Mr. President, I am pleased to join my colleague, Senator CHAMBLISS, in support of the resolution honoring the Columbus Northern Little League, the Little League World Series champions for the year 2006.

I am particularly honored to pay tribute to them because this is deja vu all over again for me; in 1983 another Georgia team, the East Marietta team, where I live, was the first Georgia team to win the Little League World Series. So now, in just 60 years, 2 of the 60 champions have come from our great State.

SAXBY and I had the chance to meet these fine young men with the President of the United States just last week on Thursday on the tarmac at Dobbins Air Force Base. They were poised, they were excited, and they were proud.

I also pay tribute to the parents of these young men. If you watched the championship game against the State of New Hampshire when they won the American title, before they went on to play Japan, you saw the parents of these young men, right before the game, sharing their baskets of Georgia peaches with the parents of the New Hampshire team, just as they did with the Japanese team 2 days later. The parents showed the sportsmanship and good will and the care and the compassion that makes Little League Baseball so special.

These are special young men: Matthew Hollis, second baseman and center fielder; Ryan Lang, right fielder; Mason Meyers, right field and third base; Matthew Kuhlenberg, left field; Patrick Stallings, third base; Josh Lester, second base and shortstop; Brady Hamilton, first base, outfield, and pitcher; Cody Walker, catcher; Kyle Carter, pitcher; J. T. Phillips, shortstop and pitcher; and Kyle Rovig, left field and pitcher. And there was the management and leadership brought by manager Randy Morris and coach Richard Carter.

These fine young men played wonderful baseball all the way through the tournament. But in those final two games against New Hampshire and Japan, they soared and played like true professionals—young men who had been taught well, who were respectful, and who knew how to pay the price for victory.

Columbus Northern is our State's second team to win the Little League World Series. Kyle Carter, the pitcher, made history by striking out 11 batters and became the first pitcher in history to win 4 times in the Little League World Series.

We cannot forget Cody Walker's hitting—with the pitch and where it was pitched—and knocking a two-out pitch over the fence in right field for the two runs that won the game over Japan, nor can we forget the great second baseman workmanship of Josh Lester nor any of these fine young men who brought great pride to their State, great pride to their parents, and great pride to the great city of Columbus, GA.

I am pleased to rise today on the floor of the Senate and join Senator CHAMBLISS in acknowledging the great achievement of these young men and encourage the Senate to unanimously adopt this resolution of recognition and appreciation for the Columbus Northern Little League team.

Mr. President, I yield back.

RECESS

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the hour of 12:30 having arrived, the Senate stands in recess until 2:15 p.m.

Thereupon, the Senate, at 12:48 p.m., recessed until 2:15 p.m. and reassembled when called to order by the Presiding Officer (Mr. VOINOVICH).

SECURITY AND ACCOUNTABILITY FOR EVERY PORT ACT—Continued

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Hawaii is recognized.

Mr. INOUE. Mr. President, I yield to the Senator from Colorado.

AMENDMENT NO. 4935

Mr. SALAZAR. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the pending amendment be set aside so I can call up amendment No. 4935.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Colorado [Mr. SALAZAR], for himself, Mr. CHAMBLISS, Mr. ISAKSON, Mr. PRYOR, and Ms. CANTWELL, proposes an amendment numbered 4935.

Mr. SALAZAR. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

(Purpose: To create a Rural Policing Institute as part of the Federal Law Enforcement Training Center)

At the appropriate place, insert the following:

SEC. ____ . RURAL POLICING INSTITUTE.

(a) IN GENERAL.—There is established a Rural Policing Institute, which shall be administered by the Office of State and Local Training of the Federal Law Enforcement Training Center (based in Glynco, Georgia), to—

(1) evaluate the needs of law enforcement agencies of units of local government and tribal governments located in rural areas;

(2) develop expert training programs designed to address the needs of rural law enforcement agencies regarding combating methamphetamine addiction and distribution, domestic violence, law enforcement response related to school shootings, and other topics identified in the evaluation conducted under paragraph (1);

(3) provide the training programs described in paragraph (2) to law enforcement agencies of units of local government and tribal governments located in rural areas; and

(4) conduct outreach efforts to ensure that training programs under the Rural Policing Institute reach law enforcement officers of units of local government and tribal governments located in rural areas.

(b) CURRICULA.—The training at the Rural Policing Institute established under subsection (a) shall be configured in a manner so as to not duplicate or displace any law enforcement program of the Federal Law Enforcement Training Center in existence on the date of enactment of this Act.

(c) DEFINITION.—In this section, the term “rural” means area that is not located in a metropolitan statistical area, as defined by the Office of Management and Budget.

(d) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out this section (including for contracts, staff, and equipment)—

(1) $10,000,000 for fiscal year 2007; and

(2) $5,000,000 for each of fiscal years 2008 through 2012.

Mr. SALAZAR. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that Senator CANTWELL be added as a cosponsor to this amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. SALAZAR. Mr. President, I rise this afternoon to discuss my amendment to create a rural policing institute within the Federal Law Enforcement Training Center. I thank Senator CHAMBLISS, Senator ISAKSON, and Senator PRYOR for cosponsoring this very important legislation. Law enforcement matters should be nonpartisan, so I am particularly pleased to see my friends from both Arkansas and Georgia on this amendment.

I want to acknowledge the tremendous work done by the 800,000 State and local law enforcement officials and first responders throughout our Nation. They are at the forefront today of our efforts to make sure our homeland is more secure. In Colorado alone, there are 14,000 of these law enforcement officers. Too often, these heroes are on their own when it comes to help from the Federal Government. This is especially true when it comes to rural America. This is wrong because our law enforcement officials and first responders are at the forefront of the effort to not only protect our communities but to ensure our homeland is secure.

Mr. President, along with some of my colleagues on the Senate floor, I have often referred to these rural communities as “the forgotten America.” Indeed, rural America is the backbone of our country, but it is too often neglected by Washington and political figures who have lost touch with the people in the heartland. Nowhere is this neglect felt more acutely than in the small-town law enforcement agencies of my State and of every State in the country. These are small communities that have been confronted with decreased funding, with increased homeland security responsibilities, and with the great toll of the meth epidemic that is devastating rural America.

Many people don’t realize that most American law enforcement agencies serve rural communities or small towns in very large proportions. Indeed, of the nearly 17,000 police agencies in the United States, 90 percent of them serve a population of under 25,000 people. And of those, most of them operate with fewer than 50 sworn officers and, in many cases, with 3, 4, or 5 officers.

I am well aware of the difficulties these small-town law enforcement agencies face day to day. As attorney general in Colorado, I had the honor of working with 14,000 of some of America’s finest law enforcement officers. Many of them are from rural Colorado—sheriffs such as Jerry Martin, from Dolores County, and the other sheriffs in my State. These people are always asked to do a lot more with a lot less. Their pressure is great. The growing demands on rural law enforcement and shrinking budgets have hit training programs particularly hard. Many rural law enforcement agencies simply don’t have the budget to provide officers with adequate training. Furthermore, even those agencies that can come up with the money cannot afford to take police officers off the street to get additional training.

As attorney general and chairman of the Colorado Peace Officers Standards and Training Board a few years ago, one of my proudest accomplishments was working on a bipartisan basis to help establish a $1 million annual training fund for Colorado’s 14,000 peace officers, with the focus on the smaller law enforcement agencies in Colorado.

That is where our amendment on the floor today comes in. FLETC does a fantastic job in training Federal, State, and local law enforcement in our Nation. But FLETC doesn’t have enough resources dedicated specifically toward training rural law enforcement officers. The rural policing institute would do the following:

First, evaluate the needs of rural and tribal law enforcement agencies throughout our Nation, so that we know exactly what the challenges are that we are facing in those rural communities.

Secondly, it would develop training programs designed to address the needs of rural law enforcement agencies, with a focus on combating meth, domestic violence, and school violence.

Third, it would export those training programs to rural and tribal law enforcement agencies.

Fourth, it would conduct outreach to ensure that the training programs reach rural law enforcement agencies.

As attorney general, I learned that a small investment in law enforcement can pay great dividends.

Mr. President, when we look at 9/11 today and the fact that we are all united in this effort to try to make America safer, and we look at who it is within our country who ultimately will be out there to stop the next attack on America, I would submit there is a very good chance it is going to be the deputy sheriff in a small county somewhere in America or a member of the police force in some small community making sure that a water tank is not contaminated with some kind of biological contamination or it is going to be somebody else who understands that some kind of a network has come together to try to take the fertilizer that our farmers use in rural America and make a bomb out of it. It is going to be rural law enforcement that is going to make sure they are going to help us prevent those kinds of attacks on America. When we think about the 800,000 men and women in law enforcement across America, they are on the frontlines, in terms of making sure we have a more secure homeland.

I cannot think of a more important amendment than to establish a rural police training institute under the auspices of FLETC, to ensure that these 800,000 men and women have the right kind of training so that through their eyes they can help us in our march and our efforts to make America more secure. We have a long way to go. I hope our colleagues will support this bipartisan amendment to establish a rural police training institute.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Jersey is recognized.

AMENDMENT NO. 4940

Mr. LAUTENBERG. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk, and I ask unanimous consent that the pending amendment be laid aside.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from New Jersey [Mr. LAUTENBERG] proposes an amendment numbered 4940.

Mr. LAUTENBERG. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

(Purpose: To provide that the limitation on the number of Transportation Security Administration employees shall not apply after the date of enactment of this Act, and for other purposes)

At the appropriate place, insert the following:

SEC. —. CERTAIN TSA PERSONNEL LIMITATIONS NOT TO APPLY.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Notwithstanding any provision of law to the contrary, any statutory limitation on the number of employees in the Transportation Security Administration, before or after its transfer to the Department of Homeland Security from the Department of Transportation, does not apply after the date of enactment of this Act.

(b) AVIATION SECURITY.—Notwithstanding any provision of law imposing a limitation on the recruiting or hiring of personnel into the Transportation Security Administration to a maximum number of permanent positions, the Secretary of Homeland Security shall recruit and hire such personnel into the Administration as may be necessary—

(1) to provide appropriate levels of aviation security; and

(2) to accomplish that goal in such a manner that the average aviation security-related delay experienced by airline passengers is reduced to a level of less than 10 minutes.

Mr. LAUTENBERG. Mr. President, I wish to talk about the current hiring limit on TSA screeners at our Nation's airports. That is what this amendment deals with—to eliminate the current hiring. One can ask: Why can't we just add more funding to TSA's budget and let them hire the personnel they need?

Unfortunately, it is not that simple. Each year, in the Homeland Security appropriations bill, the House Republican leaders tie the hands of TSA officials by setting an arbitrary limit on the number of screeners they can hire.

This cap has no basis in security. It is not what the security experts at TSA want. This cap only undermines our security, while forcing Americans to wait in longer security lines at airports.

This arbitrary cap currently restricts the TSA screener population to 45,000. Now, 45,000 is a large number, until you consider that 2 million people fly within the United States every day. In our discussions with TSA officials, it is clear that we need more than 45,000 screeners.

Mr. President, we are at a point in time, I am told by the managers of airports, particularly at Newark Liberty Airport, that we are likely to be exceeding the gross travel numbers in aviation that were achieved in the year 2000. So here we are with more people traveling, more concern about terrorist invasions of our country and particularly in aviation.

So why do we have this cap? Well, it is not for security, it is not for efficiency. Believe it or not, it is based on ideology.

Conservatives in the House want this cap to limit the growth of a so-called big Government workforce. But do you know what? The American people want this workforce, and they want it fully staffed, as I do; we should all want it fully staffed.

The result of this ill-advised cap is the shortage of screeners. We witnessed this last month when British and U.S. authorities foiled a plot to attack airliners headed to our shores using liquid explosives.

In the days following the British threat, DHS raised the security alert level and overworked screeners at American airports. They had to doublecheck bags, conduct random searches at gates, and help calm anxious crowd fears. At Newark Liberty Airport in New Jersey, screeners worked 12-hour shifts and 60-hour weeks for several weeks after the London incident. There were reports of exhausted screeners falling asleep at x-ray machines. One screener said that his colleagues "can't maintain these 12-hour days." Remember, this work is on your feet. You are mandated to look at every little detail in front of you. It is exhausting work. Overstretching this workforce puts the American people at risk, and that is unacceptable.

Now, with my amendment, TSA will be able to hire enough well-trained, alert screeners to give us the safety and efficiency we deserve. Since 9/11, long lines have been the rule rather than the exception at our Nation's airports. Each year, 760 million people fly in the United States, and by 2015, we will hit 1 billion passengers a year.

Anyone who has traveled by air in the last few years has seen this congestion at airport security checkpoints. To give an example, this is Orlando Florida International Airport. The lines are waiting to go through security. We see the same thing throughout the country. This is Denver, a very efficient airport, but one cannot get through security in time enough, in many cases, to reach the flights. It is an unacceptable condition. This is the international airport in Nashville, TN—lines and lines. We see it wherever we travel in almost any part of the country.

The Senate accepted an amendment I offered in July to the Homeland Security appropriations bill to eliminate this arbitrary cap, but the Republican majority in the House of Representatives wanted to remove my amendment in the final bill that will be sent to the President. They want to keep the 45,000-worker cap rather than letting TSA decide what its workforce needs are. Security cannot be based on arbitrary numbers. Conservative ideology must not trump commonsense security needs.

Americans stuck in long security lines at airports don't care about ideology. They want to get through, and they want to get through on time. The mission for our system to operate efficiently is to have no longer than 10-minute waits, and we can only accomplish that if we have the people and the equipment to review this baggage as it comes to them.

The American people want to know that they and their families are safe when they fly. This body needs to go on record on this issue so it can scrap this limit once and for all. I hope my colleagues will look carefully at this amendment. Listen, remember, it might be their family who is on an airplane, it might be their friends who are on a particular airplane, it might be anybody who is entitled to feel secure when they are in an airplane. But judge it by one's personal attitude and say this is a responsibility we have as Senators to want enough people to assure security wherever we can get it. One way to do that is to have enough of these screeners working these lines, fully awake, able to handle their jobs, and reduce what we find is significant growth in sick days among the screener population. There are a lot of absences.

Perhaps we will hear: We have a 45,000-person limit, but we only have 43,000 people working. The problem is we will always have some absentees. We will always have some job turnovers. These are not easy jobs. So we are going to have a difference between the number hired and the number at work at a given time. We should raise the limit so we know we are increasing the likelihood that all of the places will be covered, that the flying public will be able to get through their security check within a 10-minute timeframe.

I urge my colleagues to support the amendment. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

There is not a sufficient second.

Mr. LAUTENBERG. How many do we need, Mr. President, for the yeas and nays?

Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I understand the Lautenberg amendment is the pending amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is correct.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, this would lift the TSA's current screener cap of 45,000 persons. The cap is at 45,000, but currently the resources available to TSA allow for only 43,000 screeners, and currently there are only 41,000. The reason is there is such an enormous turnover in screeners. They work for a small period of time and then move on to other jobs.

We have enhanced screening technology and improved staffing models that have helped maximize the workforce currently available. We have a strong security system with minimal passenger line waits. They have been reduced considerably.

I do believe the Lautenberg amendment is not necessary. The current cap of 45,000 screeners helps us maintain the pressure on the TSA to employ new screening technology. I personally met in a classified briefing with the head of the TSA to discuss this problem last week. It was classified because of some of the technology that is involved and new models being pursued. One of the comments that was made to me was that the cap really helps us maintain the pressure to secure the new screening technology and reduce the redundancy in the workforce. The workforce is only relevant to the extent the technology does not do the job. We believe we should have more and quicker screening, and that is going to be brought about by new technology. That is where we have put our money this year.

Unless my friend wants to make any further comments, I intend to move to table this amendment. I still have the floor. Does my friend wish to have some time on the amendment?

Mr. LAUTENBERG. I wish to ask the Senator from Alaska a question, if I might, in relation to his comments.

Is it not possible that with the increased passenger volume we are seeing—and it is about to break the record held since the year 2000 in terms of volume of people traveling—is the manager, the committee chairman, aware of the fact that TSA has said that in order to have a 10-minute wait or less, they need more screeners than they have? They need as many as 48,000.

Mr. STEVENS. I say to the Senator, in answer to the question, I personally talked with the head of TSA. He told us they have never been able to reach the cap yet because of unavailability of people to take these jobs under the circumstances that they must be screened and checked themselves before they are employed. The delay in getting the clearances for screeners is one of those things that hold people up. It is not the limited resources or the cap that is the problem; the problem is getting people who will take these jobs who can fit through the screening process they face before they become a screener.

As I said, the current cap is 45,000. There are 41,000 right now with full-time employment and people trying to find more screeners. The answer isn't to raise the cap; the answer is to keep the pressure on the system so we use more technology, not more screeners. More screeners is more delay. The technology processes these inspections faster than individual screeners can.

Mr. LAUTENBERG. Mr. President, if I may ask the Senator from Alaska another question, and that is, if we had a higher cap and were able to persuade the management of TSA to search for a larger pool of people, might we have more people available presently to serve? My experience from my corporate life tells me that you never quite reach the level you have. We see that in our staffing here.

I urge the Senator from Alaska to respond to whether the Senator thinks we can improve our population of screeners who are readily available if we search a little bit harder, train a little bit better, reduce the fatigue factor which now occurs and causes so many sick days, so many absences, and so much turnover because the job, at 60 hours a week, as many of our people are working, is a strain on them and they just can't take it.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I say to my friend again that the workforce right now is approximately 41,000 in number. The turnover rate is enormous because they don't want to stay in these jobs. They are not exactly the kind of full-time jobs some people want to pursue. It is not a career.

The real problem is we already are capped at 45,000. There is room for 4,000 more right now. They are looking for them. But as we speak, there are more people leaving than we can add to the force. The reason is the problems associated with this type of activity. It is the screening, as we all know, as we go through these lines and through the detection systems at the airports. The people who have the jobs just don't like to stay on that kind of a job. We have discussed how we get around it. I don't know, but increasing the number will not solve the problem. Increasing the cap is what the Senator wants to do. The concept of lifting that cap is not a solution. The solution is to try to find some way to make the job more attractive, maybe pay them more, whatever it takes.

The two limitations involved right now are the 45,000 cap and the budget resources that are available now. We tried to increase that, but we have not been able to get additional moneys yet for this purpose in terms of the screeners.

The TSA budget resources currently, as I said, allow for only 43,000. But still that is 2,000 more than are actually on duty right now, and the cap is still 4,000 above that. They can go to a 10-percent increase under the existing circumstance. Lifting the cap is not the answer is what I tell my friend.

Mr. LAUTENBERG. I have so much respect for the Senator from Alaska. He is on top of the issues of security, as well as aviation. But is the Senator aware that many of the screeners are on military duty or medical leave because of exhaustion? Shouldn't we try to improve the pool of people from which we can choose? We have as much as 10 percent of the workforce out at a time. If it is 10 percent of 48,000, that is 4,800. That is quite different from having a population that is short on the job. We don't have enough time.

I can simply add that at Newark Airport, we are about 10 percent short of the number we need, something over a thousand. We can't get them. The recruiters can't search for them because they will be bumping up against the cap. I think and I hope the Senator will reconsider. I believe—and I throw this in for the Senator's consideration with my question; that is, aren't we better off taking the limit off and trying to find a way—we are talking about security of the people. The Senator doesn't need any lecture from me. But aren't we better off knowing that everybody who can make a connection can get through in 10 minutes, thoroughly screened, and having a population that is equal to the growing population of those who want to travel by air?

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I understand the Senator from New Jersey. He is really trying hard, and I am trying hard, to work on this problem. Let me tell the Senator this: 37.5 percent of the screeners at Dulles turned over last year; 37.5 percent left. The reason is they are handling bags; they don't like the hours, as you mentioned; they work hours in accordance with the shifts based on the number of flights, not in terms of—it is not a steady workload is what I am saying. So they might be there 10 hours, but they are working 6 of that 10 hours and very hard in those 6 hours. The turnover rate is enormous.

I do think the difficulty is not in the cap; the difficulty is in the money. We have to impress on our people in the appropriations process to provide more money. We are trying to see if we can find some way to justify higher salaries. In some places, the salaries are enormous for small airports. In others where you deal with the numbers of passengers at Dulles or New York airports or Los Angeles, those airports are totally overworked, and the turnover in those big airports is enormous, almost 40 percent a year. You have to consider the fact that these replacements have to be cleared under the clearance process with regard to security. They have to be cleared people; they cannot be people who just walk in off the street. It takes months to clear one of them. You can lift the cap all you want, but you are not going to get any more than 45,000 in the next year.

Mr. President, let me tell my colleague this: We will just accept the amendment because it won't make any difference in terms of the number of screeners who are available. That is what my staff just told me. Why am I arguing? Because no matter what the ceiling is, we won't have any more screeners.

Mr. LAUTENBERG. Mr. President, is the Senator aware of the fact that this was an amendment which was already there, it was already conferenced and was dropped in conference? The Senator is certainly aware of the process here. If you don't like it, accept it; it will die of its own weight.

For the Senator's information, before the screeners were federalized, the turnover rate was 400 percent and we were ignoring the risks we were putting people under. That was a porous thing. You could walk through there with almost anything.

What we want to do is get a stable workforce of screeners who have passed the vetting, who work normal hours, who have—and by the way, the Senator is absolutely right about the improvement in equipment so the baggage lifting doesn't have to be as strenuous as it is.

So I would ask the Senator whether we can have a vote.

Mr. STEVENS. Have a vote on it?

Mr. LAUTENBERG. And when we meet with the House, let the conferees, when the issue goes to conference, look at the issue and review what it is that is keeping them from—

Mr. STEVENS. I will give you a vote and move to table. I will tell my friend, this isn't a solution to the problem. The solution is in more money and finding a way that we can get people who are cleared to take the job and keep it. You can't put just anybody in there handling those bags. If you get a terrorist in there, they could add something rather than see whether there is something in the bags. So they all have to be cleared. This ceiling is not an issue.

Mr. LAUTENBERG. Mr. President, if I may respond to say I am so pleased that the Senator is asking for more money for screeners, and we will try to convince the appropriators jointly to increase the funding for those workers.

Mr. STEVENS. Will the Senator just let us take it to conference and see what we can work out? I don't see that the number makes any difference. The problem is the process and who is hired and what are the restrictions and how much money is available, not the numbers. You could put the number at 90,000 and we will still have 41,000 people next year.

Mr. LAUTENBERG. Mr. President, we obviously don't agree. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Alaska has the floor.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, there is a series of meetings going on in the Capitol right now pertaining to national defense issues, and I would like to see—

Mr. LAUTENBERG. Mr. President, I note the absence of a quorum.

Mr. STEVENS. I still have the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Alaska has the floor.

Mr. STEVENS. I want to work this out with my friend to have the time for a vote that he wishes to have. Could we have this vote at 5 o'clock? Is that all right? We will ask for the yeas and nays with the understanding that we will vote at 5 o'clock.

Mr. LAUTENBERG. I appreciate that.

Mr. STEVENS. I join him in requesting the yeas and nays and ask unanimous consent that the vote take place at 5 o'clock.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second? There is. Without objection, the unanimous consent request is agreed to.

AMENDMENT NO. 4931

Mrs. HUTCHISON. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk, amendment No. 4931, and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered. The pending amendment is set aside.

The clerk will report the amendment.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Texas [Mrs. HUTCHISON] proposes an amendment numbered 4931.

Mrs. HUTCHISON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

(Purpose: To strengthen national security by adding an additional 275 Customs and Border Protection officers at United States ports)

On page 76, line 1, strike "725" and insert "1000".

On page 77, strike lines 17 through 21 and insert the following:

“(A) $130,000,000 for fiscal year 2008.

“(B) $239,200,000 for fiscal year 2009.

“(C) $248,800,000 for fiscal year 2010.

“(D) $258,700,000 for fiscal year 2011.

“(E) $269,000,000 for fiscal year 2012.”.

Mrs. HUTCHISON. Mr. President, my amendment would increase the number of U.S. Customs and Border Protection officers by 275. This would bring the total of new U.S. Customs and Border Protection officers in this bill to 1,000.

In my State of Texas, the Customs and Border Protection officers are assigned in the Houston region are responsible for the seaports along the Texas coast from Port Arthur to the Port of Corpus Christi. Some of these officers are also assigned to Houston's George Bush Intercontinental Airport. The CBP officers work at the Port of Houston in the morning and leave the port in the afternoon to go work at the Houston Intercontinental Airport. Sharing these U.S. Customs and Border Protection officers between port duties and airport duties is unacceptable.

With increased security demands being placed on our Nation's ports and the desire to increase the number of containers inspected as they enter the United States, local port officials have long expressed the need for additional personnel in order to carry out the tasks that are so critical to our Nation's economy. With an unprecedented 11 million containers entering the United States annually, cargo doesn't stop when there isn't a Customs agent there to inspect the incoming shipments. What happens, of course, is that the cargo is not inspected. So I hope we can pass my amendment.

I believe the Port Security Improvement Act of 2006 is a very good bill, and I particularly commend the leaders of the respective Senate committees for working together to bring all of the port security bills that have been introduced in Congress into one comprehensive bill so that we can address this issue.

In the last 5 years, we have significantly strengthened our national defense. I think we saw yesterday that so many things have been done to keep our country safe and secure, because yesterday, of course, was the 5-year anniversary of the attack of 9/11. We have engaged the enemy before they have reached America since 9/11 of 2001. We have improved our homeland security. We have passed the PATRIOT Act to give law enforcement officials the tools they need and the resources necessary to protect our Nation. We must remain vigilant in pursuing terrorists who seek to harm our country. An integral aspect of our national defense and our economy is the security of our ports.

Our Nation has more than 360 federally regulated, thriving ports, any one of which could be a target for our enemies. One terrorist incident at a U.S. port could impact an entire coast, and the financial impact of closing one of these ports could be devastating.

Texas is home to 29 ports, including 4 of the 10 busiest in the Nation. The Port of Houston is one of the most important ports in the world. It ranks first in the United States in foreign waterborne tonnage, second in total tonnage, and is the sixth largest in the world. It is also home to one of the biggest petrochemical complexes in the world. It is also part of our Nation's U.S. Strategic Petroleum Reserve, the world's largest oil stockpile. Due to the volume of hazardous materials, a terrorist attack in the Port of Houston would be an enormous disaster. An attack in the Port of Houston could also disrupt our Nation's energy supply, delivering a blow to our economy at a time when we cannot afford such a disruption.

For years, I have worked with my colleagues on both sides of the aisle for more stringent port security. In the 107th Congress, my colleagues, Senators FEINSTEIN, KYL, SNOWE, and I introduced the Comprehensive Seaport and Container Security Act of 2002. This bill called for container seals and tracking numbers for goods being shipped to the United States. It also called for a plan to increase inspection of merchandise at foreign facilities as well as for a shipment profiling plan to track containers and shipments of merchandise imported into the United States that could be a threat to security.

In the 107th Congress, we passed the Maritime Transportation Security Act. This bipartisan bill was landmark legislation that closed a large hole in our national security. I was an original co-sponsor of this bill as well. However, when it passed the Senate, I made the point of saying the legislation only laid the foundation for port security and more needed to be done.

The following year, I introduced the Intermodal Shipping Container Security Act in both the 108th and 109th Congresses. This was comprehensive legislation, and I am pleased that many of the key provisions in that bill, such as the random inspection of containers, the establishment of minimum standards and procedures for securing containers in transit to the United States, and the implementation of an improved container targeting system, have been incorporated into the legislation before us today. I thank Chairman STEVENS and Cochairman INOUE for working with me in the Commerce Committee on these provisions.

In addition, Senator COLLINS and Senator LIEBERMAN have added so much to make this bill even more powerful and more helpful in our overall goal of securing the ports in our country.

This legislation calls for the Department of Homeland Security to develop and implement a plan for random inspection of containers in addition to any targeted or preshipment inspection. This significant provision would require the Secretary of Homeland Security to develop and implement a plan to conduct random searches of containers in addition to any targeted or preshipment inspection of the containers as required by law. This would allow the U.S. Customs inspectors to do more at the point of embarkation with the random sampling of different cargo that has been inspected.

Another important provision in this legislation is the establishment of minimum standards for securing containers in transit to the United States. The Secretary of Homeland Security is encouraged to promote and establish those minimum standards for the security of containers moving through the entire international supply chain. This is a key element and I am hopeful the Secretary will take this action. We cannot inspect every piece of cargo, or our international commerce as we know it today would come to a grinding halt. However, if we have better technology, such as a seal which is tamper-proof, we will know when the contents of the cargo have been altered.

My amendment would add to the numbers of Customs and Border Protection officers. A thousand new officers, when you have more than 360 federally regulated ports in this country, is not asking a lot.

We must do more. We must do more at the point of embarkation, the point of origin, at the point where ships come into our U.S. waters, and at the ports themselves. We need more inspectors to be authorized in order to do that.

I am asking that my colleagues support my amendment to raise this number to 1,000. We cannot afford, as we are passing this major legislation, not to do it right, not to authorize everything we need and give the Department of Homeland Security the tools they need to do the job of securing our ports.

We have done a lot. We have passed maritime security laws since 2001, since our country was attacked. But this bill adds to the measures that we know are lacking in the system today. We are taking more steps every week, every month, and every year to secure our country.

I thank Chairman STEVENS and Co-chairman INOUE, Chairman COLLINS and Ranking Member LIEBERMAN, Chairman GRASSLEY and Ranking Member BAUCUS for their leadership in this area. I appreciate that they have come together. It is very difficult in this Congress, when more than one committee has jurisdiction over a major part of the Government of this country. In homeland security we find that the Commerce Committee and the Homeland Security Committee do have overlapping jurisdiction.

This bill could have been brought down with in-fighting among the committees, but it has not been brought down because of the leadership of the committees on a bipartisan basis. I appreciate what we are doing today. I urge my colleagues to support my amendment.

I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. COLEMAN). Is there a sufficient second? At this time there is not a sufficient second.

Ms. COLLINS. Mr. President, while we are awaiting representation on the other side of the aisle in order to get the yeas and the nays, let me respond to the Senator from Texas about her amendment.

First, let me acknowledge the work of the Senator from Texas on port security issues over the past few years. Her amendment would increase the minimum hiring of Customs and Border Protection officers in the resource allocation model of the legislation before us from 725 to 1,000. As the Presiding Officer is aware, our bill requires the Department to do a resource allocation model, really take a hard look at how many CBP officers are needed at which port.

One reason we believed that was necessary was the experience of Houston's ports and airports. The Senator from Texas has told me of the problems that Houston has experienced, where CBP agents actually are being transferred from the port to the airport to deal with incoming flights and then are sent back to the port. Clearly that is a situation that cries out for more agents so they do not have to be constantly shifting back and forth from a busy port to a busy airport.

I think the Senator is correct that she has a real problem with understaffing in the Houston seaport and airport and that we do need to have more agents allocated. But I also want to point out to my colleagues that we do specifically require the Department to do this resource allocation plan. There may be some seaports or airports that actually have more staff than they need. Those could be allocated to busier seaports and airports. But clearly the situation in Houston cries out for more agents so we do not have this constant choice of where they should be.

I do support the amendment of the Senator. I will assist her in gaining the yeas and nays when we have representation from the Democratic side. I hope that will be shortly.

I also suggest that we stack the vote on the amendment of the Senator at 5 o'clock, after the vote on the Lautenberg amendment, in order to make it more convenient for our colleagues.

Once we get the yeas and nays, I will be making a unanimous consent request that the vote occur immediately after the vote on the amendment offered by the Senator from New Jersey, with 4 minutes of debate equally divided prior to the vote. But I am withholding that unanimous consent request until we have representation from the minority on the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Texas.

Mrs. HUTCHISON. Mr. President, while we are waiting, I would like to respond to the Senator from Maine and thank her. She and I have had a conversation about the situation at the Port of Houston. It is particularly dire, in that it is such a busy port and one that has so many unique features. I think the fact that she is supporting the amendment will go a long way toward getting us to the point we need to be.

I think her point is very well taken that giving the Secretary of Homeland Security the capability to reallocate personnel within this mandate that we are giving is also the right thing to do, just as we should be allocating our resources for homeland security based on terror threats, based on needs, not based on politics or anything else. We need to secure our homeland, and we need to do it in a professional way. I think this bill goes a long way in a very bipartisan spirit toward giving our Department of Homeland Security the tools it needs to do the job. I am very hopeful we will be able to agree to my amendment and go forward to conference and send this bill to the President very shortly.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Maine.

Ms. COLLINS. Mr. President, I think we are now ready to order the yeas and nays.

Mrs. HUTCHISON. Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays on my amendment No. 4931.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second? There is a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Ms. COLLINS. We are still not ready for the timing on that, but we have ordered the yeas and nays, and I hope we will be able to stack the vote to occur immediately after the conclusion of the vote on the amendment of the Senator from New Jersey.

Mrs. HUTCHISON. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. I ask unanimous consent the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from California is recognized.

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. Mr. President, before I make my statement, which will be on the Reid amendment, I would like to congratulate Senator COLLINS, Senator INOUE, Senator MURRAY, and all of the Members who worked in committee on this bill. Although one doesn't often tell tales of what happened in a Democratic caucus, I would like to quote Senator MURRAY in that caucus. She said, "This bill will make a difference."

I think that is a very dispositive, definitive, and positive statement. So I would like to offer my congratulations to the chairman of the committee and all who worked on it and thank them very much.

AMENDMENT NO. 4936

Mr. President, I would like to speak about this very long Reid amendment which has been offered to be part of this bill. The amendment, much like the Real Security Act introduced last week, is a comprehensive package of ways to strengthen our national security through improved intelligence, military, diplomatic, and homeland security tools. But in particular I would like, as a member of both the Judiciary Committee and the Intelligence Committee, to address the issue of electronic surveillance to identify and prevent terrorist attacks.

All Democrats support giving the President the tools he needs to find the terrorists before they have a chance to strike us again. This cannot be said too many times in too many ways. It is a fact, and I have never heard anything to the contrary.

We also agree, though, that these intelligence tools, especially electronic surveillance of telephone content—the content of a phone call or wiretapping of a phone call—can and should be done in a way that protects constitutional and privacy rights of all Americans, because whatever is done here will go on for decades and because whatever is done here will likely impact tens of thousands of persons in the United States.

I am pleased that the minority leader has endorsed these concepts, as they are the key pillars of legislation that Senator SPECTER and I have introduced. That is the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Improvement and Enhancement Act. I thank the minority leader for "Rule 14'ing" my bill, which now appears as the Feinstein-Specter bill as hotlined, S. 3877.

Tomorrow in Judiciary we will be marking up FISA bills. This same bill but under a different bill number, namely S. 3001, will be subject to markup along with the other bills. Senator SPECTER's Administration bill, Senator DEWINE's bill, and a bill by Senator SCHUMER will be marked up tomorrow morning and Thursday morning.

My legislation, which is pretty simple and pretty limited, is aimed at providing our intelligence agencies with more authority, more resources, and more flexibility to conduct electronic surveillance. In doing so, the legislation reaffirms that the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act of 1978, or FISA, is the exclusive means for conducting electronic surveillance to collect foreign intelligence in the United States. I believe this is very important.

We have had hearings in Judiciary. The Attorney General has testified. The head of the NSA program has testified. It is pretty clear to me that this terrorist surveillance program can be fit into the confines of the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act passed in 1978. What has to be done is a streamlining of the process leading up to it and some revised provisions for emergency hot pursuit. So what I have tried to do is take what the Attorney General has said to the committee were obstructions to using FISA and solve those obstructions but keep FISA because it is so important.

The legislation that I have introduced would recognize that further changes are needed in this shadowy world of asymmetric terror. That is why the legislation would give the executive branch the authority to listen in to conversations between terrorists and their conspirators inside and outside the United States.

At the same time, we preserve the cornerstone of FISA, and that is that it is by warrant, that a Federal judge reviews and approves every individual warrant request for content to ensure the Government is not spying on innocent Americans.

I think it is useful to remind ourselves why this body wrote and enacted FISA in the first place. In 1976 a committee headed by Frank Church, which became known as the Church committee, provided a report to the Select Committee to Study Government Operations with Respect to Intelligence Activities.

There are three books just like this, on what went on in our Nation prior to 1976. It is startling. I will get to it in a moment. But it was the genesis for the 1978, very carefully considered Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act.

This committee reported—and please read it, Members—on a series of excesses and abuses that had taken place in the intelligence community. These included some of the worst civil rights violations our Government has ever committed, such as the secret campaign to smear Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., and domestic targeting of Americans peacefully advocating civil disobedience in areas such as civil rights and opposition to the Vietnam war.

The Church committee found these abuses stemmed from a lack of oversight and checks on Government power. Watch lists were established on people whose views ranged from Joan Baez on the left to members of the John Birch Society on the right.

The Church committee's report led not only to FISA but also to the establishment of the Permanent Intelligence Committees in both Houses of the Congress. It was a historic report.

So discussions today that the President has the authority to go around FISA and doesn't need court approval should cause Members of this great body serious concern. It was a surprise to almost every Senator to learn last December that the President had authorized the National Security Administration to electronically surveil U.S. persons without following the law.

As a member of the Intelligence Committee, I have received many briefings on the President's program. There are still some unanswered questions, and the administration has a responsibility to provide Congress with answers. But basically the Senate Intelligence Committee has been briefed on the program in the main.

But from what I have learned to date, I am convinced of two things: First, the work that NSA is doing is important to prevent terrorists from attacking us again—and I support it. Second, the surveillance that is done under the "terrorist surveillance program" can be done under FISA's framework with some changes. As a member of the Judiciary Committee, I participated in the hearings, and I thank my chairman, Senator SPECTER, for holding these hearings.

The conclusion I draw from them, and from the briefings, is that fairly modest changes can be made to FISA which would remove the barriers standing in the NSA's way while also restoring the FISA Court oversight that is necessary to protect a citizen's constitutional right.

Let me briefly tell you what we have done.

We have expanded hot pursuit. Currently, the law states that during specified "emergency" periods surveillance can proceed without a warrant for 72 hours. At the recommendation of former FISA judges, we have extended the time for hot pursuit to 7 days. So if something happens and the NSA wants to immediately wiretap someone, they can, provided they notify the Attorney General within 24 hours that it is happening, and then go to the FISA Court.

Attorney General Gonzales testified to us that he personally has to approve applications before they go to the FISA Court. That was a problem. So we created additional flexibility to handle the increased caseload by allowing the Attorney General to delegate this authority to two Senate-confirmed officials: the Deputy Attorney General, and the Assistant Attorney General for National Security.

War-time authority: Currently, FISA provides the President with authority to wiretap without a warrant for 15 days after a declaration of war. That is a good thing, I believe.

Our bill would expand Presidential authority by allowing the President to also order wiretaps without a warrant for 15 days following a congressional authorization to use military force and a terrorist attack on the United States.

Additional resources: The staff and court need additional resources, and Members have expressed concern about a backlog of FISA applications. We would authorize additional judges as necessary, additional OIPR assistant United States attorneys as necessary, and additional NSA and FBI staff as necessary, so that this problem would be taken care of.

Then we clarify "foreign to foreign." It has often been said that in the 28 years since FISA was written changes in technology have made the law outdated. Communications that start and end outside of the United States but may switch through the United States—communications that FISA never attempted to cover—are now regularly put before the FISA Court.

General Alexander expressed his frustration that foreign-to-foreign communications impede the FISA process.

This bill—which again has been "Rule 14'd"—would explicitly exempt these telephone calls and e-mails from FISA while preserving the existing process for the appropriate handling of communications involving a U.S. party that were inadvertently wiretapped.

We believe these provisions will go a long way. We also would mandate that briefings on electronic surveillance conducted for foreign intelligence purposes be given to the full Intelligence Committee of both the House and the Senate, really to prevent what was happening, which was the beginning of a major wiretapping program where only eight Members of Congress knew very early on about the program, and therefore there was virtually no congressional oversight that was meaningful in any way, shape, or form.

In this bill is a two-page sense of the Senate beginning on page 313 of the Reid amendment and going through pages 314 and 315. Essentially, it states up front that the U.S. Government should have the legal authority to engage in electronic surveillance of any telephone conversation in which one party is reasonably believed to be a member or an agent of a terrorist organization.

It goes on to say that absent emergency or other appropriate circumstances, domestic electronic surveillance should be subject to judicial review in order to protect the privacy of law-abiding citizens or Americans with no ties to terrorism.

I strongly support the Reid amendment. I support the Sense of the Senate. And I look forward to being able to debate the bill which Senator REID has agreed to cosponsor, as well as Senator SPECTER—it is a bipartisan bill—at the appropriate time when bills to change the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act are before the body.

I thank the Chair. I yield the floor. Once again, I indicate my very strong support for the bill before the U.S. Senate today.

Thank you, Mr. President.

Ms. COLLINS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that a vote in relation to the Hutchison amendment No. 4931 occur following the vote on the Lautenberg amendment, No. 4940, with no second degrees in order to either amendment prior to the votes, and 2 minutes of debate equally divided between the managers or their designees before each vote, and that this occur at 5 o'clock.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? Without objection, it is so ordered.

Ms. COLLINS. Thank you, Mr. President. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mrs. MURRAY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mrs. MURRAY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to set aside the pending amendment and call up the Murray amendment No. 4929.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That is the pending amendment.

Mrs. MURRAY. Mr. President, is my amendment now pending?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment is already pending.

AMENDMENT NO. 4929

Mrs. MURRAY. Mr. President, I send a modification to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the amendment is so modified.

The amendment (No. 4929), as modified, is as follows:

At the appropriate place, insert the following:

SEC. ____ . COBRA FEES.

(a) EXTENSION OF FEES.—Subparagraphs (A) and (B)(i) of section 13031(j)(3) of the Consolidated Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1985 (19 U.S.C. 58c(j)(3)(A) and (B)(i)) are amended by striking "2014" each place it appears and inserting "2015".

Mrs. MURRAY. Mr. President, this is an agreed-upon modification to the amendment I spoke to this morning regarding the funding for port security.

As I said this morning, it makes sure that we have adequate resources to implement the port security bill, and that is essential to its success. We have worked out an agreement with Finance, and that amendment is pending. I hope we can move quickly and agree to it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Maine is recognized.

Ms. COLLINS. Mr. President, I rise in support of Senator MURRAY's amendment. I commend her for offering it. Each year, U.S. Customs and Border Protection collects more than $24 billion in Customs duties and fees.

The amendment would extend the merchandise processing fee and passenger conveyance fee for an additional year, and our hope is that that money will then be targeted to pay for this bill. This makes sense. In many ways, it is a user fee. It makes a great deal of sense. It will help ensure that there is a dedicated funding source for the security measures.

I point out again that the amendment has been cleared with the Finance Committee. Senator MURRAY has worked hard with Senators GRASSLEY and BAUCUS to find the source of funding. I commend her for her efforts. I fully support the amendment and I urge its adoption.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment (No. 4929), as modified, was agreed to.

Ms. COLLINS. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote.

Mrs. MURRAY. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mrs. MURRAY. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

AMENDMENT NO. 4936

Mr. REED. Mr. President, I rise today to discuss Senator HARRY REID's amendment, the Real Security Act. This is a comprehensive plan for making our Nation safer and making true progress in the war on terror.

I would argue that despite continued upbeat assessments by the President, there is growing evidence that we need to change course—not cut and run, but change course, regroup, and reassess our progress in Iraq, in the global war on terror, and in the area of homeland security. I believe an evaluation would lead to the realization that changes need to be made and that a step in the right direction would be to implement measures that are included in Senator REID's amendment.

I would like to focus on just a couple of aspects of Senator HARRY REID's proposal, which is entitled the "Real Security Act," those dealing particularly with Afghanistan and Iraq.

Reports indicate that we may be losing ground in Afghanistan, the initial proper focus of the war on terror. Afghanistan was the locale of the Taliban. They were aiding and abetting al-Qaida and bin Laden, and we, by unanimous approval of this Congress and the Senate, gave the President the authority to launch offensive operations there. Those operations were successful. But then, before the entire success was secured, the focus of this administration turned away to a pre-9/11 project: regime change in Iraq.

In the intervening years, we have lost ground in Afghanistan. The Taliban has regrouped and rearmed, and this spring they mounted the toughest resistance since 2001. Suicide attacks, which once were unknown in Afghanistan, have more than doubled this year.

Almost 5 years after the U.S. invasion, only half the money pledged by the international community to rebuild Afghanistan has been delivered and effectively spent. As Afghanistan's Ambassador to the United States has said:

We will not be able to stabilize the country if we don't build up the domestic security forces and have development in the countryside. Had we invested more in development, we would have less security problems today.

I have traveled to Afghanistan on a number of occasions. One of the problems we have is moving outside of Kabul, the capital, and creating a governmental presence, an Afghani governmental presence, in the countryside. We are trying vigorously to disrupt the production of poppies and opium, but that is hard in a society in which that cash crop is easy to move around, and it is quite lucrative. It is harder to move around other agricultural staples because there are no roads and irrigation is difficult.

If we had, as the Ambassador suggested, focused more resources and attention more promptly on development, we might have a much more benign climate in which to deal with a resurgent Taliban.

Without viable alternatives, there are scores of problems in Afghanistan. Sixty percent of the country is still without electricity, 80 percent is without potable water, and the unemployment rate is 40 percent. These are features which tend to support angry, disappointed young men, particularly, who are easy targets for those fanatics who would try to sway them into attacking security forces of both the Afghani Government and the United States. Without viable alternatives in terms of jobs and economic progress, it is easy to see how some turn to growing poppies, to providing support for this underground economy. According to the United Nations, Afghanistan just produced a record poppy crop, enough for 6,100 tons of opium—one-third more than the world's demand for heroin. These harvests fund the Taliban fighters who fuel the fighting in Afghanistan and terrorists around the world.

Section 301 of Senator HARRY REID's amendment calls for a long-term commitment to Afghanistan, focusing on economic and developmental assistance, along with security assistance. That is the right plan.

I have had the occasion to visit with our commanders in the field, and we asked them about additional forces, and we asked them about additional military hardware. They will say: We could use that, but I can tell you something we know we need right now; that is, economic development to give the people of Afghanistan confidence in their Government and hope for the future. Confidence and hope is one of the best anecdotes to the kind of regime the Taliban is trying to impose again in Afghanistan.

Last night, as he addressed the Nation, President Bush stated:

The safety of America depends on the outcome of the battle in the streets of Baghdad.

Two weeks ago in Salt Lake City, the President said:

America has a clear strategy to help the Iraqi people protect their new freedom and build a democracy that can govern itself and sustain itself and defend itself. . . . We will stay the course.

Yesterday, the Government Accounting Office, in testimony before the House Committee on Government Reform, provided a grim assessment of the Iraq security situation. GAO found, in their words:

Since June 2003, the overall security conditions in Iraq have deteriorated and grown more complex, as evidenced by increased numbers of attacks and Sunni/Shia sectarian strife which has grown since the February 2006 bombing in Samarra. Attacks against the coalition and its Iraqi partners reached an all-time high during July 2006. The deteriorating conditions threaten the progress of U.S. and international efforts to assist Iraq in the political and economic areas.

A New York Times story yesterday entitled "Deal on a Constitution for Iraq is Teetering" details how Shia and Sunnis failed once again over the weekend to reach an agreement on changes to the Constitution which would allow for a truly inclusive government.

Also yesterday, the Washington Post reported that on August 16, COL Pete Devlin, the Marine Corps chief of intelligence in Iraq, filed a classified report about Iraq's Al Anbar Province, which includes the cities of Fallujah and Ramadi. This province borders Saudi Arabia and Syria.

Colonel Devlin has been stationed in Iraq for 7 months and is considered by his fellow officers to be one of the best who is "careful and straightforward." An army officer in Iraq familiar with the report says he considers it accurate. "It is best characterized as 'realistic,'" he said.

This report, while one of the first negative reports filed by a military officer, echoes several years of pessimistic CIA assessments of the province. The report is classified, so there are no direct quotes; however, those who are familiar with the report state that the assessment is dire. As the Washington Post summarized:

One Marine officer called it "very pessimistic." Another person familiar with the report said it describes Anbar as beyond repair; a third said it includes that the United States has lost in Anbar.

The document reportedly states that there are no functioning Iraqi Government institutions in Anbar, leaving a vacuum that has been filled by the insurgent group al-Qaida in Iraq, which has become the province's most significant political force.

One Army officer summarized the situation in Anbar province with the following:

We haven't been defeated militarily, but we have been defeated politically—and that's where wars are won and lost.

I visited Fallujah in March 2005 with General Abizaid. At that time, there was one State Department official there and no representatives from other agencies. That State Department official was tired and overworked. He was doing a remarkable job, both in terms of exposing himself to dangers and working tirelessly to try to give a political mentoring to the Iraqi authorities. He was desperate for assistance. At that time, he said he didn't think there was another big fight in Iraq unless the politics broke down and that it was a big year for politics. Clearly, more civilian assistance was key. My first visit was in 2005. I revisited the province this July. That same State Department official was still there, still doing a remarkable job, and still weathering the dangers and putting in the long hours to try to make a difference. Sixteen months since my last visit, and he was still the only civilian representative in Fallujah. He was even more tired. He said he believes the Marines have accomplished all they can reasonably be expected to accomplish. They are quickly running out of a mission. He felt it was time to see if the Iraqi forces could perform without the Marines, if the Iraqi Government could support their troops in the field and whether sectarian divisions were so acute that they would prevent the Iraqis from forging even minimal political cohesion. In his view, the United States was currently in a holding pattern, delaying the inevitable day when the Iraqis must step forward and, in the meantime, our forces are suffering additional casualties.

These are the views of those on the ground in Fallujah, and they are representative of a larger problem this administration has had since the beginning of the war in Iraq. There was simply no postwar planning. While this administration has been focused exclusively on our military forces in Iraq, the reconstruction of the Iraqi infrastructure and economy has been virtually ignored. Iraqi reconstruction funds have been depleted with only a fraction of needed projects completed. The ability of the United States to aid in ministerial capacity building is hobbled by the lack of U.S. civilian experts in Iraq. In fact, because of the shortage of appropriate civilian advisers, the military is providing personnel on a case-by-case basis to help mentor civilian ministries.

Clearly, the lack of emphasis on reconstruction is having a dire effect on progress in Iraq. Tired of 3 years without adequate security or services, Iraqi professionals are leaving the country. Those who remain do not trust or feel invested in the new Government. Frustration with services and lack of employment opportunities means angry young men join militias instead of supporting their Government. Lieutenant General Chiarelli, Commanding General of the Multi-National Corps of Iraq, told me in July that unless we devote renewed attention and additional resources to the economic reconstruction of Iraq and the development of governmental capacity, the emergence of capable Iraqi forces will not be decisive. We can train an Army, but unless we have the ministries to support that Army, unless we have a police system and a judicial system that can give individual Iraqis a sense of both security and the hope of justice, simply having an Iraqi Army in the field will not be decisive to the ultimate challenge of stabilizing Iraq.

I, and many of my colleagues, have made it clear to the administration that several steps can and should be taken immediately to address this situation.

The administration should secure fulfillment of international pledges to provide economic support to Iraq. We are spending billions and billions of dollars a month. The American people cannot indefinitely spend this kind of effort without support from our international partners. We cannot meet all of the demands for reconstruction. In fact, we should insist, and this Government should be effective, in securing the already pledged funds, so that at least we have another chance—and maybe we can do it right this time—to rebuild the infrastructure of Iraq to a point at least that individual Iraqis feel they will have a minimal amount of electricity, hopefully, more than that; that they will feel secure in terms of access to health care and to those things that give them the sense that their Government can succeed, and they should risk, in some cases, their lives to make that Government succeed. That is not the situation today in Iraq.

The administration should work with Iraqis to create a master list of necessary reconstruction projects with estimated funding and timelines. Funding for such projects should be a priority in the President's budget. We invested a lot of money, and we made a lot of contractors rich by building huge projects. General Chiarelli has been quoted several times talking about a huge water project in Sadr City was a model of engineering. There was only one problem: There was no distribution system, so it became the largest and most expensive water fountain in the world. He took his own resources, as a division commander, took some PVC piping and at least got some water out into the neighborhoods. That is the type of project that will make progress in Iraq.

Time is running out. We have to refocus ourselves on these types of efforts. We should assign these projects to the military, the Army Corps of Engineers, USAID, and private contractors, but we have to make sure that these private contractors are willing to go out and do the work, not simply to bill for the work. We have examples where scores of health clinics were supposedly built, and it has been discovered that those health clinics have not been built, and those that have, the few, are inadequate. In fact, I have seen films, videos of raw sewage in the operating rooms of the supposedly new and improved health clinics.

The administration should work with the Iraqis to establish target efforts to increase employment in order to provide young men an alternative to joining the militia. One of the things that is being done now on a neighborhood-by-neighborhood basis under the leadership of General Chiarelli is, after securing the neighborhood, now we are moving in, searching, taking out the weapons, trying to disrupt the cells of terrorists and others but then putting people to work with simple tasks, such as picking up trash and giving them some money, giving them a sense of hope, and improving the environment in these communities. We have to do more of that: putting people to work.

The administration should provide increased incentives and funding to attract large numbers of volunteers from the Department of State, Agriculture, Justice, and Commerce to serve in Iraq. The President is fond of reminding the American people that we are a country at war. But this is not an administration at war; it is a Department of Defense at war. We are seeing soldiers and marines sent back to Iraq for the third time and some for the fourth time. But where is the mobilization of all of our power, our State Department experts, our agriculture experts, our Justice Department experts? That is the great fight we are facing today in Iraq. The military, through the loss of lives and through the wounded of so many Americans, are buying this Government the time to work with the Iraqi Government to build capacity, to build infrastructure. But we are not using that time because, once again, despite the President's claim that this is a Nation at war, this is not an administration at war. And until we mobilize all of our resources, we are not going to be able, I think successfully, to meet the challenges of stabilizing Iraq.

Last year, the Secretary of State talked about provincial reconstruction teams which would be spread throughout Iraq. So far, we have not fully deployed sufficient numbers of these teams to do the job. It made for a good speech line last fall. It hasn't happened yet, and it is overdue.

Section E of Senator REID's amendment calls for a new direction for Iraq and expresses the sense of Congress that Iraq should work for an inclusive government and disarm the militias, diffusing the sectarian violence. These militias are becoming a critical and dangerous aspect of the situation in Iraq, and unless the Iraqi Government is able to deal with these militias successfully, the Iraqi Government will be compromised and incapable of effectively governing their country.

Today, and for the last 2 days, we have been looking at a situation where the Iraqi Assembly is debating whether they want to regionalize the country—break it up. Shia representatives, led by Hakim and the Badr organization, are pushing for a legislative approach that will essentially provide the southern part of Iraq and the northern part of Iraq with their autonomy, leaving the center autonomous but desperately poor. It is raising the fears of the Sunni community. But the battle is between not just Sunnis and Shias but within the Shias because, on the other side, Moqtada al-Sadr and his militia are urging that the regionalization plan be dropped. This is what is going on in Iraq. It is not international terrorists plotting to attack us from there; it is the sectarian struggle for power of who will run that country, and we are caught in the middle of it.

That is why Senator HARRY REID's proposal is so sensible. It talks about redeploying our forces, reinvesting again and is perhaps the last chance we will get to provide the Government of Iraq with the tools and the mentoring so that they can provide their people with basic services and basic security.

I hope we can rally around and support this amendment because it represents not only a strong policy for America but a smart policy for America. I hope that when Senator REID's proposal comes up for a vote, it is supported. It is one thing to go around the country and make speeches about staying the course, and it is something else to provide the resources, to provide the support, to provide the relief for our military that will give them a chance to succeed and give the Iraqis a chance to succeed. So I urge passage, when it is called for a vote, of the Harry Reid amendment.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, the Senate is now considering a long overdue—a long overdue—authorization bill to address the security of our ports—yes, our ports. I applaud the efforts of Senators LIEBERMAN, STEVENS, INOUE, MURRAY, COLLINS, and many others for their steadfast commitment to address this vulnerability.

The administration has let the issue of port security languish for far too long—far too long. Oh, yes, the President has made a series of speeches in recent days about the threat to the homeland and the great desire and capabilities that al-Qaida possesses to attack us—yes, to attack us, the United States. Yet when one reviews the President's homeland security budget, gaping holes can be found in funding to address known vulnerabilities. After 9/11, we learned that our first responders could not communicate with one another. How about that. We learned that our first responders could not communicate with one another. How awful that was. The cost was lives, human lives.

It now appears that we have a similar problem in the White House, where the administration's speech writers and its budget writers don't communicate. They operate in alternate worlds—worlds far apart.

In his speech last Friday at Georgetown University, Homeland Security Secretary Chertoff urged Congress to pass this port security legislation. He said that passing the bill:

Would be not only a fitting tribute to the fifth anniversary of 9/11, but would also be an important set of tools that we can use in achieving the goal that we have set for ourselves over the next couple of years.

Now, this is the very same rhetoric and, if I may say, it is the very same hot air that we have been listening to and we have been hearing for 5 years—5 years. Yes, we have been listening to it for 5 years, the same rhetoric, the same hot air that is used for lifting balloons, lifting balloons into the heavens.

The administration, time and time again, uses tough talk when it comes to homeland security, but, sadly, that tough talk rarely is followed up with real money, cash on the barrelhead.

This month the majority leadership is once again playing a clever rhetorical game with homeland security. The port security bill that is before the Senate authorizes $400 million for port security grants. These grants would provide essential resources to our most vulnerable ports for building fences, deploying cameras and sensors, training security personnel, and for verifying the identity of the thousands of port workers who access our ports every day.

The House-passed bill which authorized the same $400 million level was adopted by a vote of 421 to 2. But, I ask my colleagues, where, oh where is the $400 million? Where is it? Right now, the Senate and House are conferring the Homeland Security appropriations bill for fiscal year 2007. The Senate-passed version of the bill includes an amendment that I offered with the support of my illustrious, inimitable chairman, JUDD GREGG, which provides an additional $648 million for port security. The amendment would appropriate the full $400 million authorization for port security grants along with critical funds for cargo container inspection equipment, for Coast Guard ships and planes, and for increased cargo inspections at foreign and domestic ports. That is real port security, but—oh, there is that conjunction here—but, regrettably, the House majority has refused to make the $648 million available to the conference. What a sad state of affairs.

Our citizens watching the Senate today are being led to believe that this bill will secure our ports. Here it is:

H.R. 4954, an Act to Improve Maritime and Cargo Security Through Enhanced Layered Defenses, and for other purposes.

They believe this bill will secure our ports. Here is the bill. It doesn't weigh very much, but it means security for our ports. However, it will be a charade if the port security funds are not appropriated. How about that? Money. What does the Bible say about money? The love of money, what does it say about it?

Did the White House step to the plate? How about it? "Hey, Mr. President—hello there, down at the White House." Did the White House step up to the plate to address security risks at our ports? No. No. One of the hardest words in the English language to say: No.

If the administration were really serious about port security, it would have voiced support for the $400 million in the Senate bill for security grants. Yet there was not one mention of port security in the administration's letter—not one mention. It has been more than 3½ years since the Coast Guard estimated that the security cost at our ports would be $5.4 billion.

Senator COLLINS, bless your heart, to date not a cent of that amount has been funded despite the fact that U.S. seaports handled over 95 percent of U.S. overseas trade.

Last year, the Department of Homeland Security was able to fund only 24 percent of the critical projects requested by the port authorities. These funds are critical, absolutely critical for ports to improve communications, access control systems, and provide waterside security. Where, oh where has the administration been? "Where, oh where has my little dog gone?" Where has the administration been?

Of the $816 million the Congress appropriated since 9/11 for port security, only $46 million was requested by the President. Did you get that? Let me say it again. Of the $816 million the Congress appropriated since 9/11 for port security, only $46 million was requested by the President. There is an odd disconnect at the White House when it comes to port security funding.

While I applaud the efforts of my colleagues today for moving this authorization legislation forward, and hopefully to the President's desk, authorizations of funding are not worth a hill of beans unless we provide real money, real dollars to fund them. That funding is in jeopardy. Why? That funding is in jeopardy due to an irresponsible indifference from the White House and objections from the House majority.

I challenge the White House—yes, come on now—I challenge the White House and the majority, not only to talk the talk on port security but also to walk the walk by supporting the funding that will actually make us safer. Our ports are seriously vulnerable to a terrorist attack. Potentially, thousands of American lives are at stake. Think about it. If we are truly determined to tighten security at our ports, we should send the Homeland Security appropriations bill to the President with the $648 million to fund port security.

My amendment includes the funding to address many of the provisions in this bill that are being debated today. In addition to port security grant funding, my amendment includes $40 million to hire 354 additional Customs and Border Protection officers to conduct cargo container inspections at our seaports and $211 million to purchase additional nonintrusive inspecting equipment for U.S. seaport and rail border crossings.

There you have it. Currently, only 5 percent of the 11 million containers entering the United States are physically inspected by opening—take a look at it by opening the containers. Only 5 percent of the 11 million containers entering the United States are physically inspected by opening the containers.

The Coast Guard has only 34 inspectors to review security plans at foreign ports. Of the 144 countries that conduct maritime trade with the United States, the Coast Guard has assessed security at only 59.

I have to say that again. I have a duty to say that again. Of the 144 countries that conduct maritime trade with the United States, the Coast Guard has assessed security at only 59—59 out of 144. At the current rate of inspections, U.S. inspectors will visit countries that trade with the United States only once every 4 years. Does that make you feel safer? Think about that tonight when you are laying your head on the pillow. Think about that.

My amendment includes $23 million to double the presence of inspectors at foreign ports and increase security compliance checks at domestic ports.

Finally, my amendment includes $184 million for Coast Guard deepwater assets that are critical to securing our ports and surrounding waterways. These funds will allow the Coast Guard to address an immediate shortfall in boats and planes needed to patrol our ports and adjacent waterways. The President and Members of Congress may applaud each other and congratulate themselves for protecting lives with this port security authorization bill, but the truth of the matter is that this bill will do little to secure our ports if the President and those same Members of Congress do not provide the money—there you go again—the money to actually scan for dirty bombs, inspect containers, and implement the security systems that are so desperately needed. What on Earth is wrong?

Can we please stop playing these dangerous political games with homeland security and actually come together to protect the precious lives of people?

Unless we provide the funding authorized in this bill, we will be playing fast and loose with the security of our people.

Hear me. Hear me now. I say it again.

Unless we provide the funding authorized in this bill, we will be playing fast and loose with the security of our people.

I yield the floor.

Ms. COLLINS. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. DEMINT). Without objection, it is so ordered.

AMENDMENT NO. 4937

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, I previously offered an amendment to the pending bill. My understanding is it will likely be accepted. I did not have a chance to speak at any length on the amendment. I want to do so now. I recognize we have a vote in about 10 minutes. I will be mindful of that.

The amendment which I offered says that our U.S. trade officials will be prohibited from agreeing to any future trade agreement that would preclude the Congress from blocking the takeover of a U.S. port operation by a foreign company. I offered this amendment in the shadow of this morning's announcement that our monthly trade deficit—get this—was the highest in U.S. history. It was announced this morning—$68 billion in 1 month.

If anyone needs additional information about the failure of our trade strategy and the failure of this so-called “free trade” nonsense we have been hearing around here, take a look at this morning's announcement—$68 billion trade deficit in 1 month.

Mr. BYRD. Shame.

Mr. DORGAN. This is not money we owe to ourselves. That is money we owe largely to Japan, and China, and other countries and will be repaid someday with a lower standard of living in this country.

I offer this amendment dealing with trade as a backdrop to this morning's announcement of the highest trade deficit in history, a trade strategy fraught with error—and this is injuring this country.

Let me describe the need for this amendment.

You might recall that earlier this year it was announced that Dubai Ports World was going to begin to manage a number of ports in this country. Dubai Ports World, in February of this year, indicated that they were going to manage ports in America in New York, New Jersey, Baltimore, Philadelphia, New Orleans, Miami, and some others. Dubai Ports World is a company that is operated by the United Arab Emirates.

In February of this year, the Bush administration gave the green light to Dubai Ports World, a company owned by the United Arab Emirates, to manage these American ports. The President said that he felt it was fine for our ports to be managed by a company owned by the United Arab Emirates.

In fact, when a firestorm erupted over this issue, here is what the President said, brushing aside objections from Republicans and Democrats alike. President Bush endorsed the takeover of shipping operations in six major U.S. seaports by a state-owned business in the United Arab Emirates. The President pledged to veto any bill Congress might approve to block the agreement.

Even more than that, the head of Homeland Security, Mr. Michael Chertoff, strangely enough said this: Homeland Security Secretary Michael Chertoff reported yesterday that the proposed takeover of terminal operations at five U.S. ports by Dubai Ports World would give U.S. law enforcement a better handle on security at U.S. terminal operations.

Here is a member of the Cabinet in this country saying that if we turn our port management over to a foreign company, it will actually improve security.

I don't know what he might have had for breakfast that morning, but I am telling you it didn't agree with his thinking process. It is going to improve security to turn the management of American ports over to a company that is owned by the United Arab Emirates? I don't think so.

There was a firestorm of protest. The President said he would veto any legislation that we would provide that stopped this takeover of management of these American seaports. Despite that, at some point, it was quite clear the Congress was going to say to the President—Republicans and Democrats—we are sorry. It doesn't matter what you threaten with respect to a veto, we will pass legislation that prohibits this.

We believe the security of our seaports is best maintained by not turning the management of our seaports over to a company owned by the United Arab Emirates. Dubai Ports World, at some point, announced that they were going to find another way to do this and sell their interests. My understanding is that has not yet been done. But in any event, the administration backed away.

However, the trade agreements that we are negotiating now include it. Past agreements have included it. I don't intend to interrupt that with this amendment. If I could, I would. But I don't have the votes to do that.

But the trade agreements say this, including the Oman agreement, which I am told will be brought to the floor of the Senate on Thursday of this week. I intend to speak at some length on that agreement. I am opposed to it. But it includes this provision, and other trade agreements have included the same provision. U.S. port operations that we couldn't block Oman from acquiring under the FTA, under our Free Trade Agreement with Oman, we would be prohibited from blocking an agreement that included landside aspects of foreign activities, including operations and maintenance of docks, loading and unloading of vessels, directly to or from land, marine cargo handling, ship cleaning, et cetera. In point of fact, we are negotiating trade agreements that include provisions which say we are not able to block a foreign company owned by a foreign country from coming in and managing our seaports.

That is what we are doing in trade agreements. Most of our trade negotiators have been fundamentally incompetent from the start.

It was Will Rogers who said many decades ago that the United States of America has never lost a war and never won a conference. He surely must have been talking about our trade negotiators. They don't wear uniforms so they do not remember whom they represent. I have often threatened to buy them jerseys so they can look down and see whom they represent—the good old U.S.A.—just like Olympic athletes represent the U.S.A.

We negotiate trade agreements that we are told will strengthen this country, and month after month and year after year we sink deeper into this abyss of red ink, with now a $68 billion trade deficit in the last month alone.

Is it surprising then that the same incompetence that has led to the largest trade deficit in history—the same incompetence that led to that—led them to do this, to undermine the very debate we had in February of this year about the management of American ports by a United Arab Emirates-controlled company, Dubai Ports World?

Just as an aside, let me describe the incompetence. Let me describe one example. I could give a hundred. Next year, according to a report, we will be getting imports of Chinese cars into this country because the country of China is now beginning a substantial automobile export industry. They have announced they will begin exporting cars from China to the United States next year. So we will be able to see Chinese cars driving up and down the streets of America. Guess what. Our trade negotiators agreed that when Chinese cars come into our country, we will impose a 2.5-percent tariff on Chinese cars that come into the United States.

We also agreed that any U.S. cars we could sell in China, they could impose a 25-percent tariff.

A country with which we had a $200 billion trade deficit, we agreed they could impose a tariff on automobiles 10 times higher than the tariff we would impose.

Is that brain-dead? It is where I come from. Is that incompetence? It is incompetence in my hometown.

That doesn't represent our country's interests.

We come back to the point. I could give you a hundred examples similar to that, where soft-headed foreign policy is masquerading as trade policy.

We come back to the newest trade agreements, including Oman, which we will have on the floor of the Senate next Thursday which includes this provision. It is identical to provisions that are included in previous agreements as well.

I say we ought to block this from ever occurring in any future free trade agreement. This provision undermines the entire position that we have taken with respect to deciding that it is not in our country's security interests to have the United Arab Emirates engaged in the management of our seaports.

For that reason, I believe we ought to pass the amendment I am proposing, prohibiting this from happening in the future. I would like to go back, frankly, and undo that which was done in previous trade agreements.

There is a little thing that people outside of this congressional system don't recognize very easily. It is called fast track. Fast track sounds so innocuous—just fast track.

Fast track means Congress has decided to give up its opportunity, which exists in the Constitution, to be engaged in trade activities so that when a trade agreement comes to the Congress, this Congress has no opportunity to review it with the understanding of wanting to amend it.

Fast track means we have put ourselves in the straightjacket and no amendments.

That is why, when a trade agreement comes to the floor of the Senate such as Oman—and there will be others. We are now negotiating nine additional trade agreements with nine additional countries right now. The House of Representatives announced they will take up two additional trade agreements in November. When those agreements come to the floor of the Senate, because the Congress, in its lack of wisdom, decided to put itself in a straightjacket, no one can offer an amendment to strip out this kind of provision of a trade agreement. It surely escapes my line of reasoning why the Congress would want to decide to limit its capability to improve a trade agreement, but it has.

Some will say, notwithstanding what trade agreements say, notwithstanding all the other issues, the President can, for national security reasons, decide to back an agreement such as this. Yes, that is true.

It was this President who said: I agree that we ought to allow the United Arab Emirates and Dubai Ports World to come in and manage seaports. I agree that we should do that. We have already evaluated it. It makes sense.

He is wrong about that, of course. His Secretary of Homeland Security says not only does it make sense, but it will make America safer if we have the management of America's seaports being done by a foreign company through a foreign country.

That is the most absurd thing I ever heard. Yet in this country, in this town, it passed with thoughtful debate. Again, it doesn't meet the test of thoughtful debate in my hometown cafe.

I am offering this amendment. My understanding is it will likely be accepted, for which I am very appreciative. I will speak more about the general subject when we have the opportunity to talk about the free trade agreement with the country of Oman. My understanding is it may be this Thursday.

I yield the floor.

Ms. COLLINS. Mr. President, the amendment offered by Senator DORGAN is a restriction on the U.S. Special Trade Representative's authority in negotiations. As such, it is under the jurisdiction of the Senate Finance Committee. However, it is my understanding that the chairman and the ranking member of the Finance Committee have no objection to acceptance of the amendment.

I urge acceptance of the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there further debate on the amendment? If not, the question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment (No. 4957) was agreed to.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Ms. COLLINS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

AMENDMENT NO. 4940

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, there will now be 2 minutes of debate equally divided on the Lautenberg amendment.

Who yields time?

The Senator from Maine.

Ms. COLLINS. Mr. President, based on the debate that occurred earlier, I believe the distinguished chairman of the Commerce Committee has decided to accept this amendment and was willing to do it without a rollcall vote. However, the distinguished Senator from New Jersey wants a rollcall vote, so we are going to have a rollcall vote.

I do not know whether the Senator from New Jersey is on his way. I see that he is in the Chamber, so I yield the floor to the Senator from New Jersey.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Jersey.

Mr. LAUTENBERG. Mr. President as we are now prepared to consider the amendment, in the minute I have—which I assume is the time—I would like to tell everybody that the purpose of this amendment is to ask that we take the cap off the number of TSA screeners we can hire. The cap is 45,000. We have had it in legislation before, but the House insisted on the cap being continued. It is silly, when passenger volume on airlines, as of this point in the year is almost at the alltime high, and it is expected this year we will see the largest number of airline passengers in the history of the country.

We have these constant reviews to protect ourselves from terrorist attack from those who want to sabotage an airplane. So it is simple. Just remove that cap. Remove it and let the TSA figure out what to do with it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator's time has expired.

All time has expired.

The question is on agreeing to the Lautenberg amendment. The yeas and nays have been ordered. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. MCCONNELL. The following Senator was necessarily absent: the Senator from Rhode Island (Mr. CHAFEE).

Mr. DURBIN. I announce that the Senator from Hawaii (Mr. AKAKA), and the Senator from Maryland (Ms. MIKULSKI) are necessarily absent.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there any other Senators in the Chamber desiring to vote?

The result was announced—yeas 85, nays 12, as follows:

AMENDMENT NO. 4931

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, there is 2 minutes of debate equally divided on Hutchison amendment No. 4931.

Who yields time? The Senator from Texas is recognized.

Mrs. HUTCHISON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to add Senators KYL and DEWINE as cosponsors of the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mrs. HUTCHISON. Mr. President, I urge my colleagues to support this amendment. It increases the number of Customs and Border Protection officers by 275 for a total of 1,000.

In my home State of Texas, where the Port of Houston is the sixth largest port in the world, we have officers who have to leave the port at noon and go out to the airport. Because of this, we don't have enough officers to cover our ports.

This amendment will add just 275 officers for a total of 1,000 new officers.

I think this is an amendment that is very important to add for the overall security of our ports. I urge everyone to vote for it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator's time has expired. Who yields time?

Mrs. MURRAY. Mr. President, I yield back the time on the Democratic side.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. All time having been yielded back, the question is on agreeing to the amendment. The yeas and nays have been ordered. The clerk will call the roll.

The amendment (No. 4931) was agreed to.

Ms. COLLINS. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote, and I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Ms. COLLINS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that when the Senate resumes action on the bill on Wednesday, the time until 12:15 be equally divided in the usual form and that at 12:15 the Senate proceed to a vote in relation to the Reid amendment No. 4936, with no second degrees in order prior to the vote.

Before the Chair rules, we anticipate a budget point of order against this amendment, and therefore this vote is likely to be on the motion to waive.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? Without objection, it is so ordered.

Ms. COLLINS. Therefore, Mr. President, although we are going to consider two more amendments tonight, there will be no more rollcall votes tonight.

AMENDMENT NO. 4935

Mr. CHAMBLISS. Mr. President, I rise today to urge my colleagues to support the amendment proposed by the Senator from Colorado, Mr. SALAZAR. My colleague from Georgia, Senator ISAKSON, and I are cosponsors and strong supporters of this measure which I believe fulfills a great need in rural America.

The amendment creates a policing institute that would be administered by the Office of the Federal Enforcement Training Center in Glynco, GA. The creation of this office provides training for those who may not currently have access to it because it sends folks who are going to train our local law enforcement personnel directly into our rural areas. Our local communities have fewer resources and fewer folks on the payroll, so they really can't afford to do without men and women who may be called away for an extended period of time to undergo training.

There is no question—and I hear this whenever I travel around the State—that our local law enforcement in rural areas are called upon day in and day out in providing the nuts and bolts of criminal investigations and law enforcement. In many areas, increased crime and the scourge of methamphetamine drug trafficking have placed severe pressures on rural law enforcement capabilities. If we're going to call upon folks to do more, then we have to provide them with the resources they need to carry out their duties—and as a strong supporter of the criminal justice system this includes giving them access to the vital training they need.

In addition, these dedicated and hard-working professionals are also asked to prepare for different types of threats in our changing security environment. This amendment will greatly assist in their efforts.

I urge my colleagues to support this common sense, bipartisan amendment. I yield the floor.

Mr. ISAKSON. Mr. President, I rise today as a cosponsor of the Salazar amendment—and I thank Senator COLLINS and Senator MURRAY for agreeing to accept the Salazar amendment—which authorizes a new Rural Policing Institute within the Office of State and Local Training at the Federal Law Enforcement Training Center in Glynco, GA. I am joined on my side by Senator CHAMBLISS and others as cosponsors and very much appreciate the acceptance of this important amendment.

Modeled after existing programs within the office, the rural policing institute would evaluate the needs of local law enforcement located in rural areas, and develop expert training programs designed to assist law enforcement in training regarding combating methamphetamine addiction and distribution, domestic violence, law enforcement response related to school shootings, and other topics.

By having a program whereby we can send instructors to these police departments rather than have them come to FLETC itself, we maximize our training capabilities and ensure that these officers are able to receive on the job training without reducing manpower.

This is a win-win for our law enforcement personnel, FLETC, and the American taxpayer. I urge passage of the amendment.

Mr. INOUE. Mr. President, the managers on this side unanimously approve this measure and seek its support.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there further debate on the amendment?

Ms. COLLINS. Mr. President, I am unclear whether the Salazar amendment No. 4935 is actually pending.

I do support the amendment offered by the Senator from Colorado, and the managers on this side are also pleased to recommend its acceptance.

Mr. President, I urge the adoption of the Salazar amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there further debate? If not, the question is agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment (No. 4935) was agreed to.

Mr. SHELBY. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. SARBANES. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

AMENDMENT NO. 4956

Mr. SHELBY. I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Alabama [Mr. SHELBY], for himself and Mr. SARBANES, proposes an amendment numbered 4956.

Mr. SHELBY. I ask unanimous consent that the reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

(The amendment is printed in today's RECORD under "Text of Amendments.")

Mr. SHELBY. Mr. President, I rise today to offer the amendment that has just been referenced on behalf of myself and Senator SARBANES to the Port Security Improvement Act of 2006. This amendment is virtually identical to the Public Transportation Terrorism Prevention Act that the Banking Committee unanimously reported in November of 2005. In fact, the Senate passed an almost identical bill in the 108th Congress. I am hopeful that as we consider port security today, we can include this critically important legislation designed to help address the security vulnerabilities of our Nation's public transportation system.

The national dialog has appropriately been focused on aviation post-9/11, and this week port security is at the top of this agenda here in the Senate. In addition to these key areas, I believe it is imperative that we make transit security a priority, too. We know full well from the occurrences in Great Britain, India, and Spain that our buses, our subways, and rail systems across the country are attractive targets for terrorist attacks. The Public Transportation Terrorism Act before us now is an appropriate first step to address widespread needs, and it paves the way toward making transit safer for the traveling public.

The language in this amendment was carefully crafted and is a result of several hearings on this topic, review of two comprehensive studies by the American Public Transportation Association and the Government Accountability Office, and negotiations with key industry leaders. This amendment authorizes $3.5 billion in capital investment grants, operation security assistance, and research. While this is short of the $6 billion worth of needs identified by the industry, it is an important and necessary first step.

I thank those who have worked hard over the course of several years to produce a sound piece of legislation that will result in safer public transportation systems, particularly my colleague on the Banking Committee and former chairman, Senator SARBANES, as well as the chairman and ranking member of the Subcommittee on Housing and Transportation, Senators ALLARD and JACK REED. I also thank Chairman STEVENS and Senator INOUE with the Commerce Committee for their steadfast support in this effort. In addition, I thank Chairman COLLINS and Senator LIEBERMAN with the Homeland Security Committee.

I ask unanimous consent that Senators ALLARD, BENNETT, SCHUMER, and BOXER be added as cosponsors of this amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. SHELBY. Mr. President, at the proper time I will urge adoption of the amendment, but I think Senator SARBANES wishes to speak.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Maryland.

Mr. SARBANES. Mr. President, I rise in very strong support of the amendment offered by the able chairman of the Senate Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs Committee. While the need for improved security at our Nation's ports is clearly evident, we must not forget the other areas of our Nation's multimodal transportation network. The amendment Chairman SHELBY has offered would provide grants to our Nation's public transportation systems to help protect the millions of riders who use subway trains, commuter rail, and buses every single day.

This amendment is based on legislation that passed the Senate unanimously in the 108th Congress and legislation that has been reported out again by the Banking Committee in the 109th Congress. We must not wait any longer to pass this needed legislation.

If there is any question as to whether transit is at risk, one need only look at recent events. Less than 2 months ago, 7 coordinated bomb blasts devastated commuter trains in Mumbai, India, leaving over 200 dead and 700 injured. Last year, the London subway system was the target of a tragic attack that left 50 people dead, and in 2004, almost 200 people were killed when bombs exploded on commuter trains in Madrid.

Here, this past May, the Department of Homeland Security issued a specific warning to transit systems to remain alert against possible terrorist attacks. The warning said that four people had been arrested in separate incidents involving videotaping of European subway stations and trains or similar activity, which the Department noted provides "indications of continued terrorist interest in mass transit systems as targets."

The threat is clear. In response, both the Federal Transit Administration and the Department of Homeland Security have worked with transit systems to identify steps that can be taken to help prevent and mitigate attacks. In fact, the greatest challenge to securing our Nation's transit systems is not a lack of knowledge of what to do, but rather, a lack of resources with which to do it. In the words of the Government Accountability Office, "Obtaining sufficient funding is the most significant challenge in making transit systems as safe and secure as possible."

In an editorial published shortly after the London subway bombings, the Baltimore Sun stated that, "Since September 11, 2001, the Federal Government has spent $18 billion on aviation security. Transit systems, which carry 16 times more passengers daily, have received about $250 million. That is a ridiculous imbalance."

I commend Chairman SHELBY and Senator REED of Rhode Island and Senator ALLARD of Colorado. We have all worked together on the Public Transportation Terrorism Prevention Act. As I mentioned, this legislation has now twice come out of the Banking Committee. It authorizes, as the chairman mentioned, $3.5 billion over 3 years in security grants for our Nation's public transportation systems. The money will be available for projects designed to resist and deter terrorist attacks, including surveillance technologies, tunnel protection, chemical, biological, radiological and explosive detection systems, perimeter protection, employee training, and other security improvements.

Let me give one example of a critical need right here with respect to Washington's Metro. Their greatest need is a backup operations control center. This need was identified by the Federal Transit Administration in its initial security assessment and then identified again by the Department of Homeland Security in a subsequent security assessment. This amendment would authorize the funding to make this and other urgently needed security upgrades to transit systems around the country.

We know transit systems are potential targets for terrorist attacks. We know the vital role these systems play in our Nation's economic and security infrastructure. I urge my colleagues to support this amendment, which is designed to address the critical security needs of America's transit systems.

I thank Chairman COLLINS and Senator LIEBERMAN for their acceptance of this amendment, and Senator STEVENS and Senator INOUE. This is a major step forward.

Mr. President, I would like to add as cosponsors on our side—I didn't pick up all the names Chairman SHELBY read, but I have Senator REED of Rhode Island, Senator MENENDEZ of New Jersey, Senator CLINTON of New York, Senator LIEBERMAN, Senator BOXER, and Senator SCHUMER.

Ms. STABENOW. If the Senator will yield, I ask to add my name as a member of the committee.

Mr. SARBANES. And Senator STABENOW of Michigan.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. SHELBY. I urge adoption of the amendment if there is no further debate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there further debate?

Ms. COLLINS. I commend the Senators for their initiative. The horrific terrorist attacks in London and Madrid demonstrate that terrorists are willing and able to attack transit systems. Our systems in the United States remain vulnerable.

Just today, the Homeland Security Committee held a hearing looking at the next 5 years and what challenges face us. The witness, the deputy commissioner for counterterrorism from New York City, specifically pointed out the vulnerabilities of our transit systems and also the inequities in funding. I believe the statistics he gave us were that there was a ratio of 9:1 in the amount of money that had been spent on aviation security versus other forms of transportation security. So I think there is an imbalance. I believe this is a vulnerability and that this amendment would allow for the authorization of significant transportation security improvements. I am pleased to join my colleagues in support of the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. CHAMBLISS). Is there further debate? The Senator from Hawaii.

Mr. INOUE. Mr. President, the managers on this side are very pleased to support this bipartisan amendment and urge its immediate adoption.

Mr. SHELBY. I urge adoption of the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If there is no further debate, the question is on agreeing to the amendment. The amendment (No. 4956) was agreed to.

Mr. SHELBY. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. SARBANES. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Michigan.

Ms. STABENOW. Mr. President, I commend my chairman and the ranking member of the Banking Committee for all their hard work. This has been a wonderful bipartisan effort, and I am pleased it is included in the underlying bill. I commend the leadership of Senators COLLINS and MURRAY on the underlying bill.

I wish to speak about a piece of security that is so critical for us that I will be offering tomorrow, an amendment to provide our first responders with the interoperable communications equipment they need to effectively respond to emergencies. Whether it is port security, rail security, whether it is our local police and firefighters, we know that having radios that can actually talk to each other, actually work to be able to actually communicate with the Department of Homeland Security or the Department of Defense or be able to speak to our armed services is absolutely critical.

We also know, in fact, right now that the system is not what it should be.

I also want to thank Senators LIEBERMAN, LEVIN, SCHUMER, DURBIN and BOXER for cosponsoring the amendment that will be offered tomorrow.

My amendment would finally give our first responders the resources they need to be able to quickly communicate and respond to a terrorist attack or other kind of national emergency.

It would provide a dedicated source of funding for our communities by creating a 5-year $5 billion grant program for interoperable communications.

My amendment is based on the interoperability communications program included in the bipartisan Lieberman-Collins bill, S. 1725, which passed out of the Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs Committee with strong bipartisan support. Unfortunately, this has languished on the Senate floor for almost a year. There has to be a sense of urgency about this issue and getting the resources to our local communities so they, in fact, can respond.

My amendment authorizes, as I said, $5 billion in grants. It is slightly more than the $3.3 billion in the Lieberman-Collins bill but certainly very close in terms of our approach.

I think it is important to provide more funding in the early years so that communications can finally address this issue and be able to do what they need to do as quickly as possible.

Yesterday, we observed the 5-year anniversary of the 9/11 attacks. We took time to remember the victims and their families and to recount the events of that horrible day. Many of these victims were our brave firefighters and police officers who gave their lives to save others.

Every day, first responders all across our country, and certainly in my great State of Michigan, put their lives on the line to make our communities safer, a job they do bravely and with honor. Now is time for us in Congress to do our job and finally make sure they have the resources and the equipment they need in coordinated national efforts so they can respond and can communicate in case of a terrorist attack or other national emergencies.

Almost 2 years after the attacks, the 9/11 Commission Report outlined the numerous communications problems first responders had as they tried to save lives. The report details the problems police officers and firefighters in New York faced because they were on different radio systems. Over 50 different public safety organizations from Maryland, Virginia, and DC reported to the Pentagon that they couldn't talk to each other.

This makes absolutely no sense. People running into buildings, into the World Trade Center, into the Twin Towers, when they should have been running out because they did not know what was happening. The radios did not work.

The 9/11 Commission concluded that “the inability to communicate was a critical element at the World Trade Center, the Pentagon, and the Somerset County, Pennsylvania, crash site, where multiple agencies and multiple jurisdictions responded.”

They went on to say, “The occurrence of this problem at three very different sites is strong evidence that compatible and adequate communications among public safety organizations at the local, State, and Federal level remain an important problem.”

The 9/11 Commission published its final report in July of 2004, 2 years ago, that the men and women in the first responder community knew the communications difficulties even before 9/11, 2001. Unfortunately, the Federal Government has not yet made a substantial commitment to solve this problem. It has been 2 years since the 9/11 Commission gave its report.

In fact, 10 commissioners gave Congress a failing grade, an F, for not yet providing adequate radio spectrum for first responders and not addressing the problem where our local communities are stretched too thin and have too many urgent and competing priorities to effectively and completely solve the problem by themselves.

We addressed the issue of the radio spectrum, in part, in the year 2006 budget reconciliation bill, which set a February 17, 2009, handover date and providing $1 billion in funding for interoperable communications for first responders in advance of the handover.

I support these positive steps. But now we have to build on that to provide a guaranteed stream of funding to resolve this overall crisis about radios not being connected, not being able to talk to each other.

The 9/11 Commission is not alone in the assessment of this critical problem. In June of 2004, a U.S. Conference of Mayors survey found that 94 percent of our cities do not have interoperable capability between the police departments, the fire departments, and emergency medical services—unbelievable, 94 percent. And 60 percent of cities do not have interoperable capability with the State emergency operations systems.

This is unacceptable. There needs to be a sense of urgency about changing that, and we have to be a major part of that solution.

The most startling finding was that 80 percent of our cities don't have interoperable communications with the Department of Homeland Security or the Department of Justice.

Imagine if there were a terrorist attack and 80 percent of our cities did not have the capacity for interoperable communications with Homeland Security.

This vulnerability was again exposed over 1 year ago with the Hurricane Katrina disaster, where we know the

New Orleans Police Department and three nearby parishes were on different radio systems. First responders were unable to communicate with each other as they attempted to rescue people trapped in New Orleans.

When I visited the gulf, I was very proud of seeing Michigan people there. I remember sitting for lunch outside the New Orleans Convention Center with a young man from the Michigan Coast Guard on one side and a young man from the Michigan National Guard on the other. I asked them: Do you have radios? They said: Of course. I said: Can you talk to each other on the radios? They said: No. How are you rescuing people? How are you communicating when you are out on the beat? Hand signals, was the response.

We can do better in 2006 than hand signals when we have a national emergency or a terrorist attack. How many more disasters need to happen before we fix this problem?

In May of 2006, Michael Chertoff, Secretary of Homeland Security, said: “The fact of the matter is we cannot effectively manage an incident if we do not, and if we cannot, talk to one another.”

I couldn't agree more.

He went on to concede that it is still the case that too many emergency responders are not able to talk to their counterparts, to their own organizations or to their companion organizations, let alone communicate with agencies in neighboring cities, counties or States during a crisis.

On the fifth anniversary of the September 11 attacks, I believe it is shameful that we have made so little progress on interoperable communications.

It is unacceptable that there is not a sense of urgency about getting this done now—frankly, about having not done it now. We should have gotten it done 4 years ago, 3 years ago, 2 years ago, 1 year ago.

I believe that our constituents would be stunned to learn that the Federal Government has not yet dedicated funding to specifically address this problem.

How many times do we have to hear this is an issue? How many experts, how many bipartisan reports before we do what we need to do urgently and to the maximum extent that we can?

We know that the lack of interoperable communications for America's first responders puts them and our communities in danger. Too many of our police, fire and emergency medical services and transportation officials cannot communicate with each other, and our local departments are not able to link their communications with State and Federal emergency response agencies—way too many.

Our first responders are making do with less and less each year which makes no sense. And they should not have to choose between communicating with each other and critical training and other means.

I think people would be shocked to know that there are fewer police officers on our streets today than on 9/11/2001. In Michigan alone, over 1,500 fewer police officers are on our streets because of cutbacks in law enforcement funding. This makes no sense.

In the 5 years since the 9/11 attacks, one of the too many requests for support that I receive every year from communities is for interoperability communications equipment. Every time I meet with police officers and firefighters and emergency responders and local mayors, others who are leaders in their communities, the issue comes up about the radios, about the lack of ability to communicate. I have done everything I can to help. I have come to this floor many times urgently requesting that we move forward in an aggressive way to address this issue.

I am pleased to be able to put together specific grants to be able to support individual communities, and that is a step in the right direction. But what we need is a comprehensive national approach. We need to make a commitment that we are not going to accept anymore any community in this country not having the ability to talk to each other, the neighboring communities, the folks at the State and the Federal Government. That is intolerable.

This is the fourth time I have stood on the Senate floor and offered an amendment to provide the dedicated stream of funding to address our first responders' interoperable communication problems.

I am very hopeful that now will be the time that we come together right after this fifth anniversary of 9/11 and agree that we are going to turn that F, given by the 9/11 Commission, into an A, by finally coming together and solving this problem so in case of whatever the emergency is in the future, folks will not walk away and say part of the reason we lost lives, part of the reason we couldn't respond was because the radios didn't work. We have the ability to fix that in relationship to this important bill. I hope we do.

I yield the floor.

Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

Mrs. MURRAY. Mr. President, will the Senator withhold his request?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator withdraw his suggestion of the absence of a quorum?

Mr. ISAKSON. I withdraw my suggestion of the absence of a quorum.

Mrs. MURRAY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to add Senator CLINTON as a cosponsor to my amendment No. 4929.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mrs. MURRAY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to add Senator

SCHUMER as a cosponsor to the Dorgan amendment No. 4937.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mrs. MURRAY. Thank you, Mr. President.

Mr. President, we are here on the floor of the Senate this evening talking about the maritime cargo security bill. This is an extremely important piece of legislation. I have been working on this issue since September 11, 5 years ago, when I recognized, as did others, that we have an extreme vulnerability in our port cargo container system when it comes to our Nation's security.

We have been working since that time to put together legislation. I commend Senator COLLINS and her staff, Senator INOUE, Senator STEVENS, the Finance Committee, and numerous Senators who have worked together to get us to this point.

As I said earlier on the floor of the Senate, this measure is extremely important. For the first time, when this bill is passed and it goes to the President's desk, we will assure that every cargo container coming into this country has a much higher level of security.

We also will put in place what is called the GreenLane bill, which will allow an even higher point of security for companies that voluntarily opt to make sure that when their cargo containers are loaded overseas, they are secured, that we know what is in them, we know who is handling them, and we know if they have been diverted. They will be tracked across the ocean, and before they ever come into our ports we will know that they are safe.

Those cargo containers with that higher level of scrutiny will then move off of our ports in a much more efficient and quick manner, leaving behind those containers that will still need to have a higher degree of inspection.

Finally, our bill will make sure we have a way to resume cargo handling quickly and efficiently should a terrible incident ever occur at our ports.

This bill balances the need of making sure our ports and our containers and the people who live and work around those containers, as well as the cargo there, are secured. It balances that with the important economic activity that occurs at ports across our country.

When this bill was brought to the floor of the Senate earlier last week, it lacked one critical component, and that was a dedicated funding stream. As I shared with my colleagues, I was deeply concerned that if we did not fund this bill, we would leave an empty shell and an empty promise to the people of America that we were securing our ports.

That is why today I was very happy the Senate agreed to my amendment to have a funding stream and to put that into this bill to make sure, as it moves forward, we will have the personnel we need to make sure the regime we have put in place actually occurs, that we will have the infrastructure that will be needed to make sure we can assure a secure system of cargo containers this country relies on for its economic activity.

That amendment was adopted, and with that I believe this bill is one we can all be proud of. Within a few days, as we work through the rest of the amendments, I, for one, will finally be able to sleep at night knowing we have made a major move forward.

So there are still amendments to be brought forward to the Senate. I know we are going to work our will through them. But I commend all of our colleagues for stepping up to the plate on this important issue.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD four editorials that talk about the need for funding.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

(From the Everett Herald, Sept. 10, 2006)

FULLY FUND MURRAY'S BILL ON PORT SECURITY

Five years after terrorists seared feelings of vulnerability deep into the American consciousness, much has been done to improve our security. Airport security has been enhanced by more than $20 billion in federal spending. Locally, first responders are more capable of dealing effectively with a disaster, natural or manmade.

But public safety leaders here and elsewhere worry about a potential terrorism target they believe is still neglected: our seaports. Only a tiny percentage of the approximately 10 million containers that enter our ports are inspected, leaving gaping holes that terrorists could exploit with a radioactive bomb or other weapon. And costs for many of the physical upgrades in port security since Sept. 11, 2001, have been borne by local ports rather than the federal government.

On Thursday, Congress sent a signal that it may be ready to give port security the serious attention it needs. Senators announced an agreement on bipartisan legislation that Sen. Patty Murray (D-Wash.) introduced shortly after the 9/11 attacks and has been pushing ever since. It's expected to get a floor vote this week, then go to a conference committee that will iron out differences with a similar bill already passed by the House.

What's still needed, though, is dedicated funding. Murray's bill calls for $835 million annually for a program that will create higher levels of cargo security, allow cargo to be inspected and tracked from the time it leaves the factory floor overseas, and implement a plan to resume trade quickly after an attack to minimize its impact on the economy. "The bill also calls for $400 million in security grants to local ports.

"I've been very clear with everyone that I can't support another NCLB (No Child Left Behind) bill," Murray said Friday, referring to the federal education bill that educators complain was far heavier on mandates than money. "We have to provide the funding or it will never be fully implemented."

The bill originally sought to use money from tariffs on imported goods, but members of the Finance Committee objected, arguing that if tariffs were lowered, funding would dry up. Murray concedes that point, and said she'll offer an amendment this week that would tap existing customs fees that aren't related to duties.

A fully funded bill will mean a more secure Puget Sound, which has major ports in Seattle and Tacoma and a growing container operation at the Port of Everett. Ship activity in Everett has increased roughly tenfold in the past two years, and as, business continues to grow in Seattle and Tacoma, even more figures to come north.

Five years after terrorists proved their desire to hurt us, our ports remain a huge potential target. Congress mustn't wait any longer to act.

IN OUR VIEW—SECURE PORTS

(By Columbia editorial writers)

Five years after 9/11, Senate should take action on Murray's GreenLane bill, because the horror of 9/11 was orchestrated in the air, the logical immediate concern was in air-travel security. But five years after 9/11 it is frightening to see what little the United States has done to enhance port security.

The intransigence and complacency is especially alarming in Washington state, the nation's most trade-dependent state.

There's good news, though. Thanks largely to U.S. Sen. Patty Murray, D-Washington, Congress is finally paying proper attention to port security. Murray's GreenLane bill co-authored with Sen. Susan Collins, R-Maine has been approved by the House and passed by the Senate Homeland Security Committee. Last Thursday, senators announced agreement on port security legislation, and they are expected to vote on the measure this week.

Even if approval is expedited and it should be this congressional footdragging is inexcusable. We're glad Murray has kept forcing Congress to pay attention. The GreenLane offers five desperately needed components:

It would create tough new standards for inspecting and approving all maritime cargo.

It offers the GreenLane option, a faster and even higher level of security for companies that agree to have their cargo tracked and monitored from the time it leaves a factory overseas until it reaches the United States.

The bill offers a plan for quickly resuming maritime trade after any incident, minimizing the economic impact of terrorism.

Port security grants would allow ports to strengthen their perimeter security.

The Department of Homeland Security would be held more accountable for port security, in part by establishing an Office of Cargo Security Policy.

Locally, Port of Vancouver Executive Director Larry Paulson said Friday that he has been frustrated by the congressional foot-dragging. But he is confident about his port's security. "It's less of an issue here because the emphasis is on containers, and we handle very few containers," Paulson said. "The greater concern for port security in our state is in Seattle and Tacoma."

In a speech Friday, Murray enlisted a RAND Center for Terrorism and Risk Management Policy report that presented this horrifying scenario: Terrorists put a 10-kiloton nuclear bomb inside a cargo container and detonate it at the Port of Long Beach, Calif. According to the report, up to 60,000 people would be killed instantly, 15,000 more would be injured, 6 million people would flee the area and economic losses would be about $1 trillion.

In Seattle and Tacoma, ports are close to downtowns and Interstate 5. Imagine how enticing that is to an evil mind that wants to kill Americans and cripple our economy.

Murray also pointed to the 2002 closure of several ports on the West Coast. It cost the U.S. economy about $1 billion a day. She said one study estimates that if all U.S. ports were closed for nine days, it would cost the national economy about $58 billion. Of course, the greater concern of port security is preventing deaths and injuries. Five years even five months is far too long. The Senate should expedite passage and implementation of the GreenLane bill for enhancing port security.

[From the Oregonian, Sept. 12, 2006]

TIME TO LAND TIGHTENED PORT SECURITY

A bill that addresses the vulnerability of U.S. shipping fetches up in the Senate, but still needs to be brought to shore.

The most impressive thing about the port security legislation that the Senate begins debating today isn't the bill's boldness or its thoroughness. It's the five years it took the bill to get to this point.

Talk about a slow boat from China.

Five years after what was supposed to be a new reality, after constant warnings about the vulnerability of U.S. ports that inspect only about 6 percent of incoming cargo containers, the bill raises some new barriers against a seagoing Sept. 11. Ports "were extremely vulnerable," says Sen. PATTY MURRAY, D-Washington, who has been pushing the bill, "on the fact that five years after 9/11 they've failed to address homeland security issues."

This bill may not entirely address those issues, but at least it finally raises them.

It requires the Department of Homeland Security to set minimum container security regulations, sets up an Office of Cargo Security Policy to coordinate federal and local port policy, and makes some federal money available.

Maybe most usefully, it sets up a "Green Lane" program to swiftly move cargoes already inspected at their point of departure. Most containers will still remain uninspected, but sending already-checked containers through will, in MURRAY's phrase, "reduce the size of the haystack where we're trying to find the needle."

Even after last week's: carefully negotiated deal among three Senate committees, the bill faces serious hazards to navigation. The Senate has rejected the House's way of financing the programs, without completely agreeing on its own. Sen. JOHN MCCAIN, R-Arizona, wants to attach to it a major rail security program, an excellent idea by itself that could send port security off the tracks.

In a Congress with minimal accomplishments and a swiftly dwindling number of days to manage any, a bill with real prospects can be a magnet to any idea that any legislator wants to slip across, even if the weight of the additions ends up sinking the bill.

Our strong feelings about getting serious about maritime security may be basic strategic thinking, or may be mostly slack-jawed astonishment at how long this process has taken. It might even be the touchy sensitivity coming from living in a city that not only includes a major port, but is named after it.

There are legitimate points to debate about this bill, and the Senate has two days to debate them.

Let's just hope Congress isn't still debating them next year, which would make it six years after action should have happened.

SAFE PORTS

The brief session of Congress that just convened is distinguished in part for what is absent from its agenda—immigration and lobbying reform, for example. A notable exception, though, is a serious bill that has just emerged from the Senate Commerce, Finance and Homeland Security committees: the Port Security Improvement Act of 2006.

The bill contains several common-sense proposals. It requires the Department of Homeland Security to develop a strategy to rapidly resume trade after an incident at one of the nation's ports, in order to limit economic slowdown. It codifies a number of good programs in law, including the Container Security Initiative, which, if it operates properly, will target suspect cargo for inspection in foreign ports before it gets close to the United States. And it establishes deadlines for Homeland Security to complete critical infrastructure projects—including installing radiation portal monitors in the nation's 22 biggest ports by the end of next year.

Two things distinguish this moderate legislation from the irresponsible rhetoric on port security that has marred debates on the subject for years. First, it does not call for 100 percent of containers arriving at U.S. ports to be individually inspected for all dangerous materials. The "inspect all containers" mantra is a red herring that exploits Americans' fears about what might slip through in order to score political points, ignoring the fact that there are much more cost- and time-effective ways of keeping dangerous cargo out of the country.

To her credit, Sen. Susan Collins (R-Maine), one of the bill's key sponsors, recognizes that the title and money it would take to inspect all 11 million containers that come into the country every year would be prohibitive with the technology available today, and she has committed to vote against it if such a provision is added. Instead, the bill calls for a pilot program in which the feasibility of individually inspecting all containers leaving three overseas ports will be gauged, which should test promising next-generation technologies without significantly slowing the pace of trade to the United States.

Second, while providing five years of steady funding for port security projects, the bill does not dedicate money for port security in perpetuity. The initial costs of making essential improvements such as buying radiation detectors, putting up fencing around ports and coordinating inspection procedures with ports overseas will require a fair amount of steady start-up cash. But a half-decade of grants for improving port security ought to be enough. After that, port security should have to compete for federal money with other worthy projects.

With those sensible checks in place, the Senate should pass this bill.

Mrs. MURRAY. Again, I thank the Senate for working with us to put a funding stream in this bill and to make this a real Maritime Cargo Security Act.

Thank you, Mr. President. I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Maine.

Ms. COLLINS. Mr. President, I rise to commend the Senator from Washington State for her dogged pursuit of a funding source for this bill. I agree with her that it is so important we have dedicated funding so the promise of this bill can become the reality.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that I be added as a cosponsor to Senator MURRAY's amendment No. 4929.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Ms. COLLINS. Again, I thank the Senator for her efforts. It has been a real pleasure to work with her on this important bill.

Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, we began consideration of the very important port security bill on Thursday of last week, and earlier in the week we addressed the Department of Defense appropriations bill. We generally agreed as a body that we would address the security issues first and foremost over the course of these 3 to 4 weeks, and this is the second step in that process. We made reasonable progress on the bill, but at this point it is not certain when we will finish the bill, and the fact is, we have really a little over 2½ weeks left. We have a lot to do, and therefore we need to keep business moving along.

We have been talking about a filing deadline and an amendment list, but we have been unable to reach agreement on either of those.

CLOTURE MOTION

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, I will file a cloture motion tonight to ensure that we do get a vote this week. We will continue to consult with the managers on both sides, and if we can reach a reasonable agreement to bring the bill to a finish on Thursday, then I believe we should vitiate this particular vote. But since it is still uncertain and we do have a lot of business to do, at this time I send a cloture motion to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The cloture motion having been presented under rule XXII, the Chair directs the clerk to read the motion.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

CLOTURE MOTION

We the undersigned Senators, in accordance with the provisions of rule XXII of the Standing Rules of the Senate, do hereby move to bring to a close debate on Calendar No. 432, H.R. 4954, a bill to improve maritime and cargo security through enhanced layered defenses, and for other purposes.

Bill Frist, Susan M. Collins, David Vitter, Jon Kyl, James Inhofe, Tom Coburn, Jim DeMint, Richard Burr, Wayne Allard, Ted Stevens, Craig Thomas, Richard C. Shelby, R.F. Bennett, Mike Crapo, Sam Brownback, Rick Santorum, Larry E. Craig.

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the mandatory quorum under rule XXII be waived.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

MORNING BUSINESS

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate now proceed to a period of morning business, with Senators permitted to speak for up to 10 minutes each.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

TRIBUTE TO ERSKINE RUSSELL

Mr. ISAKSON. Mr. President, in 1 last minute on this day, I want to pause to pay tribute to a great Georgian and a great American, an individual we all lost last Friday morning in Statesboro, GA.

On Friday morning of last week, 80-year-old Erskine Russell, former assistant head coach at the University of Georgia and later head coach at Georgia Southern University, died of a stroke leaving the 7-11 near his home on the way to his beloved Snooky's Restaurant in Statesboro, GA. Erskine Russell was a football coach, but he was far more than a football coach. He changed the lives of countless young men in Georgia and changed the attitude of the people of our State about higher education.

Erskine Russell was a man who led the University of Georgia and its defense in 1980 to the national championship. Then, a few years later, he got the opportunity at a fledgling Georgia college—Georgia Southern—to establish a football team. He went there and went to the local sporting goods store and bought a football. He took a drainage ditch that ran by the field and named it the "wonderful, beautiful Eagle Creek," and slowly but surely he recruited young men to come to Georgia Southern to play football.

Within a few years, Georgia Southern went from just having a program to being a national champion. And he repeated that national championship again. But more importantly, all through his life, Erskine Russell did what only he could do: he led by example, not by lecture, what was right about America, what was right about living by the rules, what was right about playing by the rules, and what was right about moral character.

Two thousand people appeared at Paulson Stadium last Sunday to pay their last respects to Erskine Russell—a man who will be missed not just for a short period of time but for the lifetime of all those whose lives he touched.

In conclusion, talking about the lives he touched, when my son Kevin was in the 11th grade at Walton High School in Marietta, GA, he was tragically injured in an automobile accident. He was a junior football player there. Erk Russell took the time to write him a personal note when it was questionable as to whether he might ever play football again or even walk normally again. It was Erk Russell's inspiration and his caring, his challenging someone to overcome adversity, that led to Kevin's complete recovery and a year later his competition on the football field once again.

That is just one vignette. It is just one cameo in a lifetime of service to young people.

I pay tribute tonight to Erk Russell, to his family, and to all those who knew him, all those who loved him, and to all of us who will always treasure the fact that he was our friend.

TRIBUTE TO MR. MORTON J. HOLBROOK, JR.

Mr. McCONNELL. Mr. President, I rise today to pay tribute to a distinguished Kentuckian, Mr. Morton J. Holbrook, Jr., for his dedicated service to the Commonwealth and his commitment to the practice of law and higher education.

Last month, Mr. Holbrook, a resident of Owensboro, passed away. He was a preeminent attorney in Kentucky and will be remembered for the permanent impression he left on Kentucky's legal system. He helped modernize the courts' rules of procedure and was instrumental in pushing for sweeping changes to the State's judicial system.

On August 30, 2006, the Owensboro Messenger-Inquirer published an editorial highlighting Mr. Holbrook's legal brilliance, his contributions to the judicial system, and his duty to public service. I ask unanimous consent that the full editorial be printed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD and that the entire Senate join me in paying respect to this beloved Kentuckian.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the Owensboro Messenger-Inquirer, Aug. 30, 2006]

STATE BETTER PLACE BECAUSE OF HOLBROOK

Because Morton Holbrook Jr.'s accomplishments were so many, his love for his community so strong, his quest for knowledge so persistent and his zest for life so complete, penning a tribute to his life invites inadequacy.

Holbrook, who died Friday at the age of 91, was a Daviess County icon who mixed a legal career as a Harvard-trained lawyer with a lifetime of public service, gaining fame in both arenas. Twice his leadership helped completely change the face of Kentucky's legal system. Closer to home, there might not be an Owensboro Community & Technical College without his point work in the 1980s.

Whenever and wherever Holbrook decided to take a stand, he usually became an irresistible force for progress and change. Slight of build and not tall, Holbrook was nevertheless formidable, thanks to his agile mind, gifted and eloquent speaking ability and compelling personality.

For 56 years Holbrook practiced law and would have been admired for his legal abilities alone. One colleague called him the greatest attorney he ever knew. But Holbrook strayed far beyond private practice, to Kentucky's lasting benefit. In 1948 he was appointed to a state judicial committee that totally revised the state courts' rules of procedure. Two and a half decades later he helped push through an in-toto reform of Kentucky's judicial system, which required changing the state Constitution.

Holbrook's other passion was higher education. He was a member of the Kentucky Council on Higher Education for 10 years. OCTC can trace its origins to his involvement in the early 1980s.

Holbrook received many awards and recognitions through the years. Perhaps the most fitting came on his 90th birthday in September 2004 when Daviess Fiscal Court named the county's judicial center in his honor—the Morton J. Holbrook Jr. Judicial Center.

Morton Holbrook—a delight and truly one of a kind—will be deeply missed.

REMEMBERING SEPTEMBER 11, 2001

Mr. OBAMA. Mr. President, I rise today to remember the horrifying terrorist attacks that took away so many innocent lives 5 years ago.

As a rule, tragedies of the magnitude we saw on 9/11 do not have silver linings. On that day, we were left only with an aching sense of loss, a sadness that seemed endless, and a bitter rage toward those who had brought chaos to our doorstep.

And yet it is undeniable that amidst one of the worst moments in our history, an ordinary goodness emerged in America. You could see it in the rescue workers and firefighters who rushed toward the rubble, in the scores of young people who signed up to serve their country, and in the quiet candlelight vigils held by millions of people for those they had never met and never would.

In our politics, too, there was a brief moment where it seemed as though the crass partisanship of the nineties would give way to a unity of purpose among Republicans and Democrats that would refocus our efforts on attacking the terrorists, not each other. We saw this in the immediate support given to President Bush, in the near unanimous vote to go after the Taliban and al-Qaida in Afghanistan, and in the formation of an independent, bipartisan commission that would tell us how and where to strengthen our homeland security.

Five years after 9/11, the days of that unity are long gone. In the last two elections, the Republican Party has used national security as a political weapon to attack and beat opponents, while the recommendations of the 9/11 Commission float further and further from the front pages. Now, as we approach another election season, the party in power has announced again that it intends to “run on” the issue of national security, with some going so far as to say that the terrorists are just waiting for Democrats to take over so that they can attack.

I realize that in this day and age, it is naive to think that politics would stop at the water’s edge. But I refuse to believe that we cannot find the will or the resources to implement a series of recommendations that an independent panel of Democrats and Republicans agree would keep our country safer from terrorist attack.

In a report card delivered last year by the 9/11 Commission, the country’s security efforts received mediocre to failing grades—17 Ds and Fs in 41 areas of homeland security.

To this day, our first responders still do not have the communications equipment they need to coordinate a rescue in the event of an attack. We still inspect only 5 percent of the 9,000,000 containers that enter this country every year. We are still spending only 2 percent of what we need to secure our railroads and subways, and not nearly enough on baggage and cargo screening at our airports. We still have only 10,000 border patrol agents to guard 8,000 miles of land borders, and only 1 agent to guard every 3 miles of border with Canada. And we are leaving some of America’s most vulnerable targets—including chemical plants with toxic substances that could kill millions—with the most minimal security.

If on the day after 9/11 you had told anyone in America that these gaps in our security would still exist 5 years later, they might have thought you were crazy. And yet since then attempt after attempt to correct these problems—from efforts to fully fund rail, transit, and port security to the legislation I have introduced to protect chemical plants—have been rebuffed by the administration and the Republican-controlled Congress.

This cannot go on. National security cannot be something we only discuss on 9/11 or when terrorists try to blow up planes over the Atlantic or when it suits our political interests on election day. It is an every day challenge, and it will take Americans of every political persuasion to meet it.

Like most Americans, the effect of September 11 felt profoundly personal to me. It wasn’t just the magnitude of the destruction that affected me or the memories of the 5 years I had spent in New York, but the intimacy of imagining those ordinary acts which 9/11’s victims must have performed in the hours before they were killed, the daily routines that constitute life in our modern world—boarding a plane, grabbing coffee and the morning paper at a newsstand, making small talk on the elevator.

For so long, these acts represented the concrete expression of our belief that if we just exercised, wore seatbelts, and avoided needless risks, our safety was assured, our families protected. Certainly, the prospect of mass violence on American soil seemed remote.

Five years later, we know that world is gone—that we must better understand our fragility and better secure ourselves from those who have the will and the way to do us harm. This means a change in priorities, yes, but it also means a change in our politics—a willingness to put aside the petty, if just for a moment, so that we may rise together to meet one of the greatest challenges of our time. History has shown this will not be easy, but if the ordinary goodness that emerged from that rubble 5 years ago is any indication, I still believe it is imminently possible.

HONORING OUR ARMED FORCES

SERGEANT LONNIE CALVIN ALLEN, JR.

Mr. NELSON of Nebraska. Mr. President, I rise today to honor SGT Lonnie Calvin Allen, Jr. of Bellevue, NE.

Sergeant Allen, 26, graduated from Bellevue East High School, where he was a four-sport athlete, participating in football, track, basketball, and wrestling. After attending Northeastern Junior College in Colorado, Sergeant Allen joined the Army, where he met his wife Birgit while stationed in Germany. “I was just glad every minute I spent with him because it was the most wonderful time I’ve had,” said Mrs. Allen.

Sergeant Allen was dedicated to the Army, choosing to reenlist after his first tour of duty. According to his family, he was expected to wrap up his Iraq tour in July and wanted to enter law enforcement as a career.

While serving with the 2nd Battalion, 22nd Infantry Regiment, 10th Mountain Division in Baghdad, Iraq, Sergeant Allen was killed when an improvised explosive device detonated near his military vehicle on May 18, 2006.

Sergeant Allen is survived by his wife, Birgit, who lives in Bellevue, NE; his parents, Lonnie and Sallie Allen, also of Bellevue; and his brother, Nuru Allen, of St. Louis, MO.

My prayers go out to the family and friends of Sergeant Allen as they face this difficult tragedy. Nebraskans should be proud of the commitment Sergeant Allen showed toward the Army and his country. He is an example for us all.

FIRST LIEUTENANT GARRISON AVERY

Mr. President, today I honor 1LT Garrison Avery of Lincoln, NE.

First Lieutenant Avery, 23, graduated from Lincoln High School before earning his degree from the U.S. Military Academy in West Point, NY. Following his graduation from West Point, he underwent Army Ranger and sapper training, receiving various honors. But according to his father, “He wasn’t interested in the decorations. He was interested in the job.” Following his service, Lieutenant Avery dreamed of helping war orphans.

While serving with the 101st Airborne Division stationed south of Baghdad, Lieutenant Avery and two fellow soldiers were killed when a roadside bomb exploded on February 1, 2006.

Lieutenant Avery is survived by his wife, Kayla, who lives in Clarksville, TN. He is also survived by his parents, Gary and Susan; siblings, Clinton, Johnathan, and Elizabeth; and numerous other family members, friends, and fellow soldiers.

I offer my sincere condolences and prayers to the family and friends of Lieutenant Avery. His noble service to the United States of America is to be respected and remembered by all. Every American and all Nebraskans should be proud of the service of brave military personnel such as 1LT Garrison Avery.

LANCE CORPORAL KYLE CODNER

Mr. President, today I honor LCpl Kyle Codner, 19, of Shelton, NE.

Lance Corporal Codner joined the military after his graduation from Shelton High School on June 16, 2003, and was deployed to Iraq in mid-February. His deployment was to last 7 months, and the family hoped to see him home safe around mid-September. At the time of his death, Lance Corporal Codner was one among a group of marines traveling in an armored personnel carrier conducting security and stability operations in Anbar province, Iraq.

Lance Corporal Codner was liked by all who knew him; he was involved in his church and in his community, and he was a selfless part of the military who knew the worth of life. Codner’s family remembers him saying, “Freedom isn’t free.”

The loss of this outstanding marine is felt by all Nebraskans, but his example will remain as an inspiration for his survivors, a devoted friend, fiancé, son, and grandson, and we extend our thoughts and prayers to them in condolence.

ARMY NATIONAL GUARD SERGEANT GERMAINE L. DEBRO

Mr. President, today I honor Nebraska Army National Guard SGT Germaine L. Debro of Omaha, NE.

Sergeant Debro was a loyal son, brother, friend, and soldier. Selflessly placing his friends and their families before his own life, he volunteered for his last assignment to Iraq so others could stay home with their loved ones. “He put his friends and loyalty first. He couldn’t have lived with himself if one of his friends with kids went over there and died. My brother is a better man than me,” said Sergeant Debro’s brother, Alvin Debro, Jr.

Sergeant Debro was born into the military, as his father, Alvin Debro Sr., served in the Air Force. He first attended Omaha Benson High School; then in 1991, he graduated from high school in Arkansas, where he played football. His military career began on October 14, 1994, when he enlisted in the U.S. Army as an M-1 Abrams tank crewman. Sergeant Debro joined the Nebraska Army National Guard on October 12, 1997, as a tank crewman with Detachment 1, Troop B, 1-167th Cavalry Squadron based in Wahoo, NE. He was reassigned to the Fremont-based Troop B, 1-167th Cavalry Squadron in January 2001.

While serving with the National Guard, Sergeant Debro was mobilized overseas various times, including service in Kuwait in 2001 and in Bosnia-Herzegovina from 2002-2003. He was deployed in support of Operation Iraqi Freedom in March 2005, serving as a scout with Troop B, 1-167th Cavalry Motor Reconnaissance Troop. On Monday, September 4, 2006, Sergeant Debro passed away when an improvised explosive device struck the humvee he was driving while on patrol near Balad, Iraq. Then-SPC Germaine L. Debro was posthumously promoted to Sergeant.

Sacrificing his own life so that others could live, Sergeant Debro was the embodiment of bravery and the finest example of generosity. In addition to his brother Alvin, he is survived by his parents Alvin, Sr. and Priscilla Debro of Omaha; and his brother Maurice Debro. I extend my deepest condolences to Sergeant Debro's family and friends, who played such a tremendous role in his life. His unfaltering dedication to his country and family will remain a source of hope and inspiration for all Americans. Sergeant Debro was a man of exceptional honor, and we will not forget what he gave for our Nation.

ARMY SPECIALIST JEREMY JONES

Mr. President, today I honor Army SPC Jeremy Jones of Omaha, NE.

Specialist Jones was committed to the Army. Wanting to make a career out of it, he chose to reenlist last April for 6 more years. "He'd finally found something he really liked to do and that suited him. He was proud of what he was doing," said his wife, Jenny.

Last February, Specialist Jones flew back from his tour of duty in Iraq to see his newborn daughter, Mackenzie. Baby Mackenzie, together with her brother, Anthony, will grow up knowing their father is a hero.

Specialist Jones graduated from Millard West High School in 1999, where he participated in football and wrestling. While serving with the Army's 1st Battalion, 67th Armored Regiment of Fort Hood, TX, Specialist Jones, 25, was hit by a roadside bomb on June 27, 2006, in Iskandariyah, Iraq.

Specialist Jones is survived by his wife Jenny, daughter Mackenzie, and son Anthony, 3, all of Omaha; mother, Diane Jones, of Omaha; father, Scott Jones, of Council Bluffs, IA; and sister, Abbi Jones, of Omaha. Our hearts and prayers go out to the Jones family. Specialist Jones was a dedicated soldier, and all Americans admire the dedication he gave to his country.

NAVY AIRMAN JASON J. DOYLE

Mr. President, I rise today to honor Airman Jason J. Doyle of Omaha, NE.

Airman Doyle, 19, graduated from Papillion-La Vista South High School after moving to the area from Sunset, UT with his brother, Brandon, and father, Dale, both of Bellevue, NE. At Papillion-La Vista South, he was a member of the Naval Junior Reserve Officer Training Corps program. After graduating, he joined the Navy in an effort to fulfill his dream of traveling to Japan, a dream which began in elementary school after writing a report on Japan. He was also fascinated with flying. "You combine a love for the country of Japan, a love of other cultures and a love of airplanes, and the Navy was a perfect fit for him," said his father.

Airman Doyle had been serving with the Electronic Attack Squadron 136 off the east coast of Japan since October when he fell from the flight deck of the USS Kitty Hawk on July 8, 2006. It was his first assignment.

In addition to his father and brother, Airman Doyle is survived by his mother, Martha Bower, who lives near Sunset, UT; his stepmother, Susie Doyle, of Bellevue; and his three sisters, Shauna, of Utah, and Whitney and Ashley, both of Bellevue.

I offer my sincere condolences to the family and friends of Airman Doyle. His noble service to the United States of America is to be respected and appreciated by all. And while the loss of this remarkable airman is felt by all Nebraskans, his courage to follow his dreams will remain as an inspiration for his survivors.

ARMY NATIONAL GUARD SPECIALIST JOSHUA FORD

Mr. President, today I honor SPC Joshua Ford of Pender, NE.

Specialist Ford, 20, graduated from Pender High School in 2004, where he was active in the FFA and theater. He was also interested in art and utilized his talent by creating a few paintings while serving in Iraq. Teachers knew him as an easygoing, well-liked student with a great sense of humor. Ford joined the Nebraska Army National Guard as a heavy vehicle driver in February 2003, while still attending high school. Friends say he was dedicated to the Guard, even convincing three friends to join with him.

Since October 2005, Specialist Ford had been serving with the Wayne-based Detachment 1, 189th Transportation Company in Iraq. On July 31, 2006, the military truck he was driving in a convoy from Forward Operating Base Delta to Tallil Air Base was struck by an Improvised Explosive Device near Al Numaniyah. Specialist Ford passed away shortly thereafter.

Specialist Ford is survived by his fiancée, Michelle Frohlich; father, Lonnie W. Ford; grandmother, Elle Petersen; sisters, Erin, Jessica, and Shawn; and nephew, William Dyer.

I offer my sincere condolences to the family and friends of Specialist Ford. The loss of this dedicated National Guardsman is felt by all Nebraskans, but his example will remain as an inspiration for all of us.

ARMY NATIONAL GUARD STAFF SERGEANT JEFFREY HANSEN

Mr. President, today I honor SSG Jeffrey Hansen of Cairo, NE.

Staff Sergeant Hansen, 31, was a 1993 graduate of Bertrand Community High School. He earned a bachelor's degree in Athletic Training from the University of Nebraska-Kearney in 1997. Jeffrey joined the Nebraska Army National Guard in January 2000 as a member of Troop A, 1-167th Cavalry in Hastings, NE. During his years as a member of the Nebraska National Guard, Staff Sergeant Hansen exhibited outstanding leadership and rose through the ranks, serving as an assistant squad leader, fire team leader, and squad leader before his current assignment as a fire support sergeant. Prior to his service in Iraq, Hansen served as a peacekeeper in Bosnia with the 1-167th Cavalry from late 2002 until mid-2003.

CPT Jeffrey Searcey, who led Troop A of the 1-167th Cavalry in Ramadi, Iraq, described Staff Sergeant Hansen as a "guy you respected as a soldier and a man." As a civilian, Staff Sergeant Hansen was recognized as an outstanding police officer during his time in the U.S. Department of Veterans Affairs, VA, Police Service. "Jeff was the strong, silent type. He didn't talk a lot, but when he did, people listened to him," said James Arends, a sergeant in the VA Police Service.

Staff Sergeant Hansen passed away on August 27, 2006, at Landstuhl Regional Medical Center in Landstuhl, Germany, from injuries he received when the humvee he was riding in went off a wet and eroded roadside berm and became submerged in an irrigation canal near Camp Anaconda, Iraq.

Staff Sergeant Hansen is survived by his wife Jennifer L. Hansen of Cairo; father Robert Hansen of Bertrand; and brother Jeremy Hansen.

I offer my sincere condolences to Staff Sergeant Hansen's family and friends. He gave his life to save and honor the liberties of America, and his selfless passion to achieve this end will not be forgotten. Staff Sergeant Hansen will be forever remembered as a hero who sacrificed everything for his fellow country men and women.

MARINE CORPORAL MATTHEW C. HENDERSON

Mr. President, today I honor Marine Cpl Matthew C. Henderson of Lincoln, NE.

Corporal Henderson inspired everyone who knew him through his leadership. He enjoyed football, hunting, fishing, and fixing cars with his father, who was his best man at his wedding in May of 2003.

Henderson joined the Marines in September 2000. He had received the Navy and Marine Corps Achievement Medal, the Marine Corps Good Conduct Medal, the National Defense Service Medal and the Sea Service Deployment Ribbon. Corporal Henderson was a combat engineer assigned to the 1st Combat Engineer Battalion, 1st Marine Division, I Marine Expeditionary Force out of Camp Pendleton, CA. Henderson was one among a group of marines traveling in an armored personnel carrier conducting security and stability operations in Anbar province, Iraq, at the time of his death.

I know I join all Nebraskans in grieving the loss of Corporal Henderson. He will be remembered as the selfless leader that he was; for being a compassionate and loyal husband, son, and brother.

SERGEANT ALLEN D. KOKESH, JR.

Mr. President, today I honor SGT Allen D. Kokesh, Jr. of Yankton, SD.

Sergeant Kokesh, 21, willingly signed up for the National Guard as a junior at Yankton High School and completed his basic training before his graduation in 2003. He believed he and his fellow soldiers were playing an important role in bringing peace and freedom to the people of Iraq.

While serving with the Yankton-based Charlie Battery of the 1st Battallion, 147th Field Artillery Brigade, stationed in Baghdad, Sergeant Kokesh was injured in an explosion from a roadside bomb on December 4, 2005. Sergeant Kokesh passed away February 7, 2006, at Brooke Army Medical Center in San Antonio, TX, as a result of his injuries. He was posthumously promoted from specialist to sergeant.

Sergeant Kokesh is survived by his father and stepmother, Allen Sr. and Kristi Kokesh; mother and stepfather, Becky and Jason Beebee; siblings, Chasity, Katrianna, Tom, and Jaylon; and numerous other family members, friends, and fellow soldiers.

I offer my sincere condolences and prayers to the family and friends of Sergeant Kokesh. His noble service to the United States of America is to be respected and remembered by all. Every American and all Nebraskans should be proud of the service of brave military personnel such as SGT Allen D. Kokesh, Jr.

PRIVATE TIM J. MADISON

Mr. President, today I honor Pvt Tim J. Madison of Bellevue, NE.

Private Madison's children will grow up knowing their father is a hero. A 1997 graduate of Bellevue East High School, Private Madison, 28, joined the Army last October. Private Madison enjoyed the outdoors and shared that experience with his children on numerous occasions.

While serving with E Company, Brigade Support Battalion, 2nd Brigade at Fort Carson, CO, Private Madison was struck by .50-caliber machine gun fire during a live-fire operation at a shooting range. "He was very proud of his country, and he wanted to defend and make it a better homeland for his own immediate family, his wife, and kids," said his mother, Nancy Madison.

Private Madison is survived by his wife Melissa and three children, Hailee, 3, Jonathan, 2, and Michael, 4 months, of Fort Carson, CO; parents, Ken and Nancy Madison of Bellevue, NE; brothers, Ken Jr., Tony, and Rick Madison, all of Bellevue; and sister, Christina Coy of Bellevue.

Your hearts go out to the family and friends of Pvt Tim J. Madison. You are all in America's thoughts and prayers.

ARMY SPECIALIST BENJAMIN SLAVEN

Mr. President, today I honor Army SPC Benjamin Slaven of Plymouth, NE.

Following in his family's footsteps, Specialist Slaven, 22, chose to enlist in the Army Reserve because he wanted to serve his country. "He was enthusiastic about working on the front line of the war on terror," said his father, Bruce Slaven.

Before enlisting, Specialist Slaven earned his high school equivalency diploma and was employed in Beatrice, NE, most recently at the Beatrice State Development Center, where he became known for his compassion. Because of his love for scuba diving, Specialist Slaven was considering a career in underwater welding after the military.

While serving with the Army Reserve's 308th Transportation Company of Lincoln, NE, then Private First Class Slaven was killed when a roadside bomb struck his vehicle on June 9, 2006, in Ad Diwaniyah, Iraq. He was promoted to army specialist posthumously.

Specialist Slaven is survived by his mother, Judy Huenink, of Plymouth; his father, Bruce Slaven, of Beatrice; and his sister, PFC Misti Slaven, currently serving with the Army Reserve.

All Americans admire the dedication Specialist Slaven exhibited as he defined what a true soldier should be. The family and friends of Army SPC Benjamin Slaven are in our thoughts and prayers.

ARMY SERGEANT 1ST CLASS TERRY WALLACE

Mr. President, today I honor Army SFC Terry Wallace of Winnsboro, LA.

Sergeant First Class Wallace graduated from Winnsboro High School, where he met his wife, Shunda Wallace. Wallace joined the Army shortly after graduating from high school. "It was something he'd always wanted to do. He always wanted to serve his country," said Mrs. Wallace.

While serving with the 42nd Field Artillery based at Fort Hood, TX, Sergeant First Class Wallace was killed when a roadside bomb hit his humvee in Taji, Iraq, on June 27, 2006. He had served several assignments abroad, including locations in the Middle East, but this was his first tour of duty in Iraq.

In addition to his wife, Sergeant First Class Wallace is survived by his 2-year-old daughter, Raven; his parents, James Jr. and Marry Wallace, of Winnsboro, LA; his twin brother, Jerry Wallace, and several other brothers and sisters, also of Winnsboro.

I know I join all Nebraskans in grieving the loss of Sergeant First Class Wallace. He will be remembered for the selfless hero he was and for being a devoted and compassionate husband, son, and brother. Sergeant First Class Wallace's family and friends remain in our thoughts and prayers.

LANCE CORPORAL BRENT ZOUCHA

Mr. President, today I honor LCpl Brent Zoucha of Clarks, NE.

Being a dedicated athlete at High Plains Community School, Zoucha had already attained much of what he needed to be a good marine: commitment. Knowing he wanted to serve, Zoucha, 19, enlisted in the Marines while still in high school.

Serving with the 1st Battalion, 7th Marine Regiment, 1st Marine Division, I Marine Expeditionary Force, in Twentynine Palms, CA, Corporal Zoucha passed away on June 9, 2006, due to injuries sustained in an explosion while conducting combat operations in Al Anbar, Iraq. "He died doing what he wanted to do: fighting for his country," said friend David Beck.

Corporal Zoucha is survived by his mother, Rita Zoucha, of Clarks, NE; his sister, Sherri Krueger, of Duncan, NE; and two brothers, Dominic Zoucha of Clarks, NE, and Corporal Dyrek Zoucha, currently serving in Iraq.

All Americans admire the dedication LCpl Brent Zoucha exhibited as he defined what a true soldier should be. The family and friends of Corporal Zoucha are in our thoughts and prayers.

DEFENSE APPROPRIATIONS

Mr. LIEBERMAN. Mr. President, I rise today to give my support to the 2007 Defense appropriations bill which passed the Senate last week by a unanimous vote of 98 to 0. The bill provides $469.7 billion in discretionary spending authority for the Department of Defense and will supply critical funding to many Connecticut defense companies that provide our Nation's military with the cutting edge technology, weaponry, and equipment it needs.

It includes $2.5 billion for the construction of another Virginia class submarine, which will be built at Connecticut's submarine base in New London. It also includes $54 million for submarine research. This funding will support the significant work of our submarine designers and engineers in New London and will enable important cost-cutting improvements to the Virginia class. Eight million dollars of that funding is targeted for advanced submarine research, which will allow our designers and engineers in New London to begin the early steps of designing a new class of nuclear attack submarines. In aircraft procurement, the bill contains funding for 12 additional Black Hawk helicopters for a total of 94 aircraft and 12 C-17 transport aircraft, also produced in Connecticut. Finally, I am particularly heartened by the inclusion of funding for several of our smaller defense companies and contractors in Connecticut, which provide our troops with sophisticated technological support. Fuel cell development, sonar technology, clotting agents for troops wounded in battle, mobile military health units, and laser machine tool systems are all products of the high-tech defense industry in Connecticut, and I am proud that I was able to secure funding for this burgeoning sector of my State's economy.

There were several important amendments proposed to the Defense appropriations bill. Senator KENNEDY offered an amendment that would have required the Pentagon to provide information about whether a civil war has developed in Iraq as part of the Defense Department's already mandated quarterly reports. Senator MENENDEZ's proposed amendment prohibited the use of funds for a public relations program designed to monitor news media in the United States and the Middle East to create a database of news stories to promote positive coverage of the Iraq war. Both of these amendments were prevented from being considered explicitly by procedural votes on the Senate floor. If I had voted on those motions, I would have supported both amendments, which would have meant voting against both motions to table. Unfortunately, both amendments were set aside, and my vote would not have changed the procedural outcome in either instance, nor prevented their defeat in a party-line vote.

As I have stated earlier, I will be spending much of my time before the November election in Connecticut. I believe it is important for me to spend time with people in Connecticut, listening to their ideas and concerns. These next 2 months will provide me with a good opportunity to learn more about their views on how we can move forward to solving our Nation's most pressing problems. That being said, I plan to return to the Senate for votes when my presence is a deciding factor and important committee business in which my participation is crucial. The task of representation is truly a two-way street, and I value those times, such as during campaigns, when citizens and their elected representatives can engage in a democratic dialogue. I am looking forward to continuing to participate in that process and also continuing to represent the people of Connecticut in the U.S. Senate.

HONORING GARY STEVENS

Mr. CRAIG. Mr. President, I rise today to recognize Gary Stevens, an accomplished Hall of Fame jockey and Idaho native.

Gary retired in 2005 from an impressive career in horse racing that includes several victories in each leg of the Triple Crown, as well as multiple titles in the Santa Anita and Breeders' Cup races. Holding claim to honorary awards and international racing cups, Gary's popularity only grew in 2003 when he played the role of George Woolf in the Academy Award nominated movie Seabiscuit.

It is an honor to note that Gary started his career in Idaho. At 16 years old, Gary rode his first thoroughbred winner at Les Bois Park in Boise. Born in Caldwell, Gary's father was a riding trainer and his mother was a rodeo queen. This summer, Idaho Governor Jim Risch named a week in Gary's honor, to spotlight this accomplished jockey's ties to Idaho.

On behalf of thousands of Idahoans who are proud of him and his Idaho roots, I say congratulations to Gary Stevens for a lifetime of outstanding achievements.

LET US LOOK UPON THE OCEAN WITH REVERENCE

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, during the August recess, one of my constituents, Michael Mulroy, of Fairhaven, wrote a very thoughtful article that was printed in the New Bedford Standard-Times on August 15 in its "Your View" feature. Mr. Mulroy's article eloquently describes the restorative and wondrous nature of the ocean and questions the wisdom of placing wind farms and other large-scale industrial projects at sea. He urges us to "look upon the ocean with reverence."

As someone who is committed to preserving the natural beauty of Massachusetts and its magnificent coastal waters, I was moved by Mr. Mulroy's inspiring article, and I believe many of our colleagues will be inspired by it as well. I ask unanimous consent that it be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the New Bedford Standard-Times,
Aug. 15, 2006]

"YOUR VIEW: LET'S LOOK UPON OCEAN WITH REVERENCE, UNOBSTRUCTED"

(By Michael Mulroy)

After years of reading about and listening to the debate over the proposed wind farm off the coast of Cape Cod, I felt compelled to weigh in on the subject after reading David Kibbe's article in The Standard-Times.

As a child growing up in one of the tenement neighborhoods in New Bedford, I loved it when my parents would take my sister and me to one of the area beaches for the day. Sometimes we would stop to get ice cream afterwards, or maybe have some clam cakes at one of the small clam shacks that dotted the coast. When it was too cold for swimming, we would still go down to the shore and walk the beach looking for shells or whatever treasure the tide may have washed ashore. In the winter, we would simply take a drive along the seashore and enjoy the scenery. One of the greatest joys for me was looking out at the ocean and being able to see unobstructed to the horizon—there were no tenements or telephone poles or wires or factories to spoil the vista. The ocean was to my mind a blank canvas, I was free to paint my imagination across it, and I dreamed of whaling ships and merchants of days long ago.

Later, when I was first married, one of our first apartments was in Fairhaven. I used to ride my daughter around town in a carrier seat on the back of my bicycle. Wherever else we went, we always went down to Fort Phoenix, and out onto the Hurricane Barrier, and looked out upon the ocean. My grandfather was a construction worker who helped build the barrier, and so it made our visits there all the more special.

Life being what it is, we could not afford to buy a home in Fairhaven at the time, and so we moved back to New Bedford. As time went by, I was eventually divorced from my first wife. Saddled with debt, I was forced to file for bankruptcy. Through hard work and determination, I was able to restore my credit and eventually bought a fine tenement on the same street where I grew up. I went to the beach, I took drives by the shore, but I also worked; I worked hard.

I am now remarried and once again live in Fairhaven. We have easy access to the beach, and I ride my bicycle by the shore. Through all the changes in my life, one thing that has never changed is the ocean. I can still gaze out upon the open sea and look unobstructed to the horizon. I am humbled at the awesome power that lies there. The sheer vastness of the sea amazes me, and I cannot help but think of our great Creator every time I look upon it. Surely this is a holy place! I can imagine how the first people to set eyes upon this wonderful site must have felt, and I feel that as I am able to see what they first saw, I can share their experience.

At first I felt guilty for not wanting to see a wind farm off the coast. After all, this would be a great source of energy. Clean, renewable, it might even lessen our dependence on foreign oil, even if it's only a little bit, I would feel patriotic. I felt like one of the NIMBY (not in my backyard) people, but it just didn't feel right. Some people say that the only argument against the project is that some rich folks on Nantucket and Cape Cod don't want to spoil their view. Rep. Bob Koczera calls it "reasons of aesthetics and really nothing else." I've got news for you, Bob, the grandeur of the world's natural wonders are not "aesthetics!" Aesthetics are in your living room! That's like calling the Grand Canyon "just a hole," or Mount Everest "a big hill and really nothing else."

The ocean is our last wild place on this Earth. We are a throwaway society, and we are too lazy, or too cheap, to bother to clean up the messes we have made on land, and so now we are looking to the sea. Rep. Frank

Smizik of Brookline states "We're relying on dirty power plants" and urges us to "get away from that."

Well, Frank, why not hold the Bush Administration to their responsibility, and stop letting them relax pollution standards for these filthy polluters? Why not force them to clean up their act? I, for one, am sick to death about hearing these corporations whine about the cost! Too bad! Record profits for Big Oil sound familiar? All the while, the public is being gouged at the gas pump!

Why do we have to have this wind farm in the ocean when there are many existing wind farms in areas that are not near the ocean? The answer is simple: It is easier, and cheaper! Cape Wind wants to locate here because they feel this is the best location for them. What is best for an energy corporation is not necessarily what is best for the Earth or for our people. It is time we start to think of ourselves as people of the Earth, and not as people who belong to corporations. It is time we listen to the ancestors of our native peoples. Since time began, they have known that the Earth does not belong to us, we belong to the Earth. We are here as her caretakers. They have been telling us this since the white people first came here. It's time we open our ears, our eyes, and our hearts, and listen.

It is time to use self-restraint and set limits for ourselves. We must take responsibility for our actions, and clean up the mess we have made upon our lands, and not expand our careless ways to the sea. Let us look upon the ocean with reverence, and let us see to the horizon, unobstructed, and let it be our inspiration to take back our Earth from unbridled development. Let us say, "Stop!" Enough is enough! We have the technology to develop alternative energy sources without this project. This is not a "do or die" issue. Why not explore other options? Cape Wind would have us in fear of not supporting them now. Who says they are the only energy development corporation on the horizon? Rep. Matthew Patrick wants to "let the process go forward, and if Cape Wind survives based on its merits, it should not be subject to the arbitrary whims of the governor." If? If it survives? Well what Matthew, pray tell, will befall us if it doesn't survive? Who will pay to dismantle it? Or would you rather it just stay out there, a rusting hulk, as a monument to our failure, until it finally collapses into the sea? If that happened, what then would be the danger to navigation? What would be the environmental impact then? Has anyone thought about this? And what about the diesel fuel stored there for the generators?

The sea and its creatures are a precious resource. Today, our fishermen are paying the price for the sins of our fathers. Exploitation of fish stocks since pre-Colonial times has left them depleted to the point of disaster. We cannot think that human invasion of this delicate environment will have little or no impact. I cannot help but think that if we allow this wind farm, that they will want to expand in the future, or that others will want to follow. Will we ask our children to pay forever for our sins?

I am not rich, but this is not about being rich. It is about a deep respect and reverence for our earth, and yes, it is about my vista. When I look out upon the ocean, it is, to me, as if I am looking upon the face of God, so I would say to you: Yes, I would be happy to have a wind farm in my backyard, as long as it stays where it belongs, on land, and not in the middle of one of the most beautiful places on earth, the ocean.

ADDITIONAL STATEMENTS

RAPID CITY WEED AND SEED ORGANIZATION

• Mr. JOHNSON. Mr. President, today I wish to recognize the hard work and amazing results of the Weed and Seed organization of Rapid City, SD.

The Rapid City group will cease operations later this month after nearly a decade of tireless efforts to rehabilitate a significant portion of the residential and business area in the community.

In partnership with organizations that included the Rapid City Police Department, the Center for Restorative Justice, Volunteers of America, the Project Safe Neighborhood/Gunwise Program, and Good Housekeeping, dozens of individuals came together to address neighborhood crime, abuse, housing, and aesthetic issues.

Primarily focused on the East North and East Boulevard neighborhoods, the Rapid City Weed and Seed organization worked with the Rapid City Police Department on a zero-tolerance policy with an aggressive police presence in areas that were beset with crime, homelessness, and urban blight issues.

The group worked with Rapid City leaders to aggressively enforce city codes involving housing. Vacated and rundown homes and businesses were torn down and replaced with new and thriving businesses and new homes. Other businesses, homes, and apartment complexes were expanded and renovated during this timeframe. Efforts to revitalize Roosevelt Park resulted in the construction of a new ice arena and indoor swimming pool, as part of the city's 2012 economic development program. A business association was formed to bring together local business owners to discuss relevant issues of importance. The Weed and Seed organization also developed an adopt-a-creek program with 21 sections of Rapid Creek adopted by local companies, organizations, and families. The first major cleanup of Rapid Creek since the tragic 1972 flood resulted in the collection of 18 tons of trash, including debris from the 1972 flood event.

Four townhall meetings were conducted with local residents, and annual picnics were sponsored to develop a sense of camaraderie and connection between neighbors.

As a result of these efforts, the East North and East Boulevard areas have once again become a source of pride for the community. This sense of pride is now reflected in the residents and businesses located in the area. These results are due in large part to the collective work of the Rapid City Weed and Seed organization and the partnerships that were developed with city officials, law enforcement agencies, and the local businesses.

Funded through a 5-year Weed and Seed grant of $1.025 million, the local organization will cease operations later this month. I wish to recognize the vision and hard-working efforts of the dozens of Rapid City citizens and officials who have provided tireless efforts to rehabilitate and renovate a key part of the community.

I wish to recognize the help of executive director Patricia Pummel and board members Wayne Asscherick, Phyllis Boernke, Dave Bussard, Jim Castleberry, Patrick Clinch, Cynthia Clinch, Linda M. Colhoff, Richard Cooper, Darcy Dennison, Lee Dennison, Ken Edel, Fred Eisenbraun, Lawren Erickson, Dan Island, Adeline Kalmbeck, Jim Kinyon, Craig Kirsch, Eileen Leir, Burt Lang, Carol Lang, State legislator Alice McCoy, Jim McCoy, Dave Morgan, Lou Morgan, Sharon Oney, Kenneth Palmer, Gloria Pluimer, Alys Ratigan, Kerri Severson, Mickey Snook, Roberta Stevens, Betty Strobel, Raymond Summers, Pat Trumble, Holli Vanderbeek, Jerry Walenta, Lieutenant David Walton, Les Wermers, Dexter Wittman, Rapid City mayor Jim Shaw, former mayor Jerry Munson, and Connie Ewing.

Thanks to the efforts of these individuals, other concerned and committed citizens, and officials in Rapid City, the East North and East Boulevard areas of Rapid City have been effectively rehabilitated. The efforts of this organization may serve as a model for other Weed and Seed organizations in the country. Although ceasing operations, the vision and tireless efforts of individuals in the Rapid City Weed and Seed organization will be maintained. I commend the energetic and innovative work of the Rapid City Weed and Seed organization and the individuals involved in their great work over the past several years.●

CENTENNIAL OF THE FOUNDING OF STRATFORD, SOUTH DAKOTA

• Mr. JOHNSON. Mr. President, today I pay tribute to the centennial of the founding of the city of Stratford, SD. A latecomer in inclusion into Brown County, Stratford sprung up rapidly in just weeks.

Stratford was founded 100 years ago on the Minneapolis and St. Louis railways. Stratford was a convenient commuter system to many of its neighboring cities at the time. In just 5 years, Stratford reached its peak population of 600.

Stratford is one of South Dakota's classic small towns. It has been the home of industry and farm-related businesses and has been served by a volunteer fire department since 1911. The Baribeau Honey Company, which processes about a million pounds of honey annually, was established in 1955 and is still a booming business. The post office and BS Bar and Grill are open to this day.

A hundred years after its founding, Stratford continues to be a vital community and a great asset to South Dakota. I am proud to honor the achievements of Stratford on this memorable occasion. ●

STATEMENTS ON INTRODUCED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS

By Ms. STABENOW:

S. 3888. A bill to amend title XVIII of the Social Security Act to sunset the sustainable growth rate formula as of January 1, 2009, in order to expedite Congressional action in establishing a new physician payment system that would appropriately reimburse physicians by keeping pace with increases in medical practice costs and providing stable, positive Medicare updates; to the Committee on Finance.

Ms. STABENOW. Mr. President, I am pleased to introduce the "Fix and Improve Reimbursement (FAIR) for Physicians Act of 2006" today with the support of the Michigan State Medical Society and the Michigan Osteopathic Association.

Over 20,000 M.D.'s and D.O.'s in Michigan provide more than 1.4 million seniors and people with disabilities with high-quality medical services under the Medicare program. Our Michigan families have received fantastic care, from fantastic doctors.

But will they continue to? Not unless we do something about the payment system used to reimburse physicians for Medicare services. Beginning January 1, 2007, the Medicare Sustainable Growth Rate (SGR) formula will cut payments to physicians and health care professionals by 5.1 percent. What does that mean in dollar terms? Medicare payments in Michigan alone will be cut by $137 million in 2007; the average cut for a physician in Michigan would be $34,000 per year.

That doesn't make any sense. Medical costs are going up. How can doctors provide the same high-quality care when costs are going up and their payments are going down?

It makes even less sense when you realize physicians and other health care professionals have been struggling with this payment system for years. The SGR formula resulted in significant payment cuts in 2002, and would have resulted in payment cuts in 2003, 2004, 2005 and 2006 had Congress not intervened.

And it won't stop with the cut in 2007. According to the Medicare Payment Advisory Commission (MedPAC) and the Board of Trustees of the Federal Hospital Insurance Trust Fund and the Federal Supplementary Medical Insurance Trust Fund, the Medicare SGR formula will result in substantial payment cuts to physicians and health care professionals through at least 2015.

The cuts are scheduled to total 40 percent by 2015, costing Michigan doctors in excess of $8 billion between 2007 and 2015.

Can doctors absorb these kinds of cuts and continue to serve all Medicare beneficiaries with high-quality care? Absolutely not. The cuts would be particularly devastating for primary care doctors, the very doctors that, according to MedPAC, many Medicare beneficiaries rely on for important health care management. MedPAC states in their March 2006 report that they "are concerned that such consecutive annual cuts would threaten access to physician care services over time, particularly primary care services." They go on to say that "payment policies that may discourage medical students and residents from becoming primary care physicians raise particular concern".

A recent survey conducted by the AMA suggests that if the scheduled cuts go into effect, 45 percent of doctors will decrease the number of Medicare patients they accept—and this at a time that the Medicare population is burgeoning! Further, 50 percent of doctors will defer purchase of health information technology, 37 percent of doctors practicing in rural communities will be forced to discontinue rural outreach services, and 43 percent of physicians will decrease the number of new TRICARE patients they suggest.

This is not a new issue. MedPAC considers the Medicare SGR formula a flawed, inequitable mechanism for controlling the volume of services and first recommended repeal of the Medicare SGR formula in 2001. Since then they have consistently recommended repealing the formula.

But what has Congress done? Have we repealed the SGR? No. Instead, each year since 2003 Congress has acted to override the formula temporarily. While these actions have prevented cuts since 2002, nobody can believe this is a good way of going about business. Congress tends to act very late in the year—or AFTER the cuts have actually gone into effect—which results in instability and unpredictability for physicians, health care professionals, seniors and individuals with disabilities.

Further, annual Congressional actions to override SGR don't solve the long-term problem as the formula extracts the added spending in future years by imposing even more drastic cuts.

We know what we need to do. A Medicare physician payment system that will provide stable, positive payment updates is critical to preserve Medicare beneficiaries' access to high-quality care and allow doctors to invest in health information technology and quality improvement programs.

While a new system is being developed, we know we need to adopt MedPAC's recommendation to update payments for physicians' services under the Medicare program by the projected change in input prices less MedPAC's expectation for productivity growth. The "Preserving Patient Access to Physicians Act of 2005", which I introduced last year with Senator KYL, would do just that. It would have provided physicians with a 2.7 percent update in 2006 and would provide a 2.8 percent update in 2007.

When I introduced that legislation I said that it was just the beginning. I said that our bill was necessary to provide updates for a couple of years but that we cannot continue to use stop-gap measures, and must replace the SGR with a payment system that actually makes sense and reflects the costs of providing physician care to Medicare beneficiaries.

This bill—the "Fix and Improve Reimbursement (FAIR) for Physicians Act of 2006"—takes the next step. The purpose of the "FAIR for Physicians Act" is to sunset the Medicare sustainable growth rate formula in order to expedite Congressional action in establishing a new physician payment system under the Medicare program that would appropriately reimburse physicians by keeping pace with increases in medical practice costs and providing stable, positive Medicare updates.

The "Fair for Physicians Act" would repeal the SGR formula as of January 1, 2009. I continue to believe that we must adopt MedPAC's recommendation for updates in 2007 and 2008 to give seniors access to high-quality care while giving Congress time to develop an alternative payment system.

To help Congress with developing the new payment system, the "Fair for Physicians Act" establishes a new, 17 member "Physician Payment Update Commission", the "Physician Commission". The members of the Physician Commission will include members with a wide variety of expertise in the delivery and financing of health care, but—and I believe this is critical—individuals who are physicians and other health professionals shall constitute a majority of the membership of the Commission.

The new Physician Commission will study all matters relating to payment rates under the Medicare physician fee schedule, and develop recommendations on the establishment of a new system that would appropriately reimburse physicians by keeping pace with increases in medical practice costs.

We need to do this right, but we also need to get it done soon. Our physicians and health care professionals, and our Medicare beneficiaries, have been dealing with an unworkable, unsustainable system for too long.

Therefore, the Physician Commission must report to the appropriate Congressional Committees and MedPAC by December 1, 2007. MedPAC then has a month to review the recommendations of the Physician Commission and submit a report to the appropriate Committees. MedPAC's report must include a review of the recommendations, including the reasons for their support if they support their recommendations and, if they do not support the recommendations, the reasons for that, and their own recommendations.

I know we need to get this done by January 1, 2009 and I know we can get this done by January 1, 2009. My bill would repeal the SGR formula as of that date, and establish a new Commission to develop a new payment system by that time, to ensure that our Nation's 42 million Medicare beneficiaries continue to have access to high quality physician care.

In the meantime, we must provide updates based on MedPAC's recommendations.

The Medicare program is one of the most successful federal programs of all time. It has lifted countless seniors out of poverty, and it has ensured access to necessary, affordable, quality medical care for our most vulnerable citizens for the last 40 years.

We can—and must—fix the physician payment formula to maintain Medicare's record of success in providing access to high-quality Medicare services for all of our seniors and people with disabilities.

By Mr. FEINGOLD:

S. 3889. A bill to enhance housing and emergency assistance to victims of Hurricanes Katrina, Rita, and Wilma of 2005, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs.

Mr. FEINGOLD. Mr. President, today I am introducing the gulf coast Housing Accessibility Act to address some of the challenges facing survivors of Hurricanes Katrina and Rita a year after the hurricanes struck the gulf coast. Two weeks ago, we commemorated the anniversary of Hurricane Katrina and honored those who lost their lives and those who lost their livelihoods last year. A year later, the people of New Orleans and the gulf coast continue to deal with an unfortunate reality—that in a lot of neighborhoods, it looks like the hurricanes hit a week ago, not a year ago.

Over the past year, I have heard from a number of Wisconsinites upset with the Federal Government's response to Katrina. They have made powerful pleas to not forget about the people who lost their homes, their communities and their way of life.

In July, I visited some neighborhoods in the New Orleans area that were ravaged by Hurricane Katrina. The painful realities about life there were everywhere—abandoned businesses, and homes and neighborhoods that were totally destroyed by the hurricane and its aftermath. The challenge of rebuilding is enormous. But what's even tougher is trying to rebuild in a way that helps everyone come back, not just people with access to more resources and different options. It is the responsibility of all levels of government to help those who want to come back regardless of their income level. We must ensure that the rebuilt gulf coast reflects the same cultural diversity that made it an American gem before the hurricanes struck. This legislation seeks to meet some of that responsibility by providing low income individuals and families with immediate and long term housing assistance as they rebuild their lives and move back to the gulf coast.

There are so many ways that gulf coast communities still need help—creating jobs, rebuilding the school systems, and gutting damaged homes so that they can be rebuilt. And, when you see those blocks and blocks of neighborhoods that were destroyed—with no sign of reconstruction—it's clear just how much help the people of New Orleans and the gulf coast need to find affordable housing.

Housing has to be affordable so that the gulf coast can get back to work. So many of the people who are the lifeblood of the tourism industry—like hotel and restaurant workers—want to call New Orleans home again, but they can't move back if they can't afford any place to live.

It's a testament to the strength of these communities that so many people want to come back, at every income level. You can't do that if you were working a minimum wage job that doesn't exist anymore, and you were renting an apartment that ended up engulfed in flood water.

There are a lot of barriers to moving back for homeowners, but it's also tough for gulf coast citizens who were renting when the hurricane hit. In the year since the hurricane struck, rents in the gulf coast region have skyrocketed, which makes it even more difficult for low income renters to return to their homes. With a significant percentage of renters in the New Orleans area before Katrina, we need to ensure that the housing assistance in the gulf coast is aimed at helping renters, as well as homeowners, rebuild their lives.

We've got to do something to help displaced residents—particularly low-income individuals—who want to move back to New Orleans. I have put together a few different ideas into one bill, building on some really good work on housing issues by some of my colleagues in the Senate. This bill doesn't tackle every problem, but it will help address some of the tough housing issues facing New Orleans and the gulf coast. It includes housing vouchers to help make rents affordable for the lowest income people and families. It also makes housing like the Katrina cottages—which are more like homes, and less like trailers—more available to those who want them. There have been a lot of problems with the FEMA trailers, so it's important to give people the option of living in a more permanent home. And finally it allows HUD to handle temporary rental assistance programs from here on out, instead of FEMA, which isn't equipped to handle housing issues like these for the long haul.

Not only does this legislation address the needs of current Katrina survivors, but the changes it makes to the Stafford Act to allow FEMA to provide permanent and semi-permanent housing, as well as allowing HUD to provide temporary housing assistance instead of FEMA, apply to future disasters also. The importance of this cannot be stressed enough—we in government must learn from our past mistakes and work to prevent such a horrible government response to future disasters.

A year after Hurricane Katrina and Hurricane Rita, there is so much that we can still do—and that Congress can do—to help the gulf coast recover. We need to have serious conversations about the persistent poverty that still exists in the gulf coast and around our nation, for this poverty magnified the disaster of Hurricane Katrina. We need to develop solutions to address this poverty that exists in cities and rural communities throughout our country. We need to work to ensure the levees are built correctly. We need to better protect the diminishing wetlands of the gulf coast. But we also have to focus on the here and now—what people are facing on the gulf coast today. As we look at the images of the hurricanes a year later, and we remember what people went through, we also have to recognize how far we have to go, and rededicate ourselves to helping the people of the gulf coast make it home again.

I ask unanimous consent that the text of my bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the text of the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 3889

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Gulf Coast Housing Accessibility Act of 2006".

SEC. 2. PROJECT-BASED VOUCHERS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary of Housing and Urban Development (in this Act referred to as the "Secretary") shall allocate additional assistance for project-based housing vouchers under section 8(o)(13) of the United States Housing Act of 1937 (42 U.S.C. 1437f(o)(13)) for individuals and households located within the area in which assistance to individuals has been authorized by the President under a declaration of a major disaster under the Robert T. Stafford Disaster Relief and Emergency Assistance Act, as a consequence of Hurricane Katrina, Rita, or Wilma of 2005.

(b) AUTHORIZED USES.—The Secretary shall make funds available under this section for project-based vouchers used to support—

(1) affordable housing in repaired or rebuilt housing that has been damaged or destroyed as a consequence of Hurricane Katrina, Rita, or Wilma of 2005; or

(2) to support affordable housing in new housing structures in the affected areas created under the low income housing tax credit under section 42 or section 1400N(c) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986.

(c) FUNDS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Of amounts authorized under this section, funds shall be made available for 4,500 project-based vouchers for—

(A) support of housing units for persons, including adults and children, with disabilities;

(B) elderly families; and

(C) individuals and families who were homeless prior to the occurrence of the disaster.

(2) DEFINITIONS.—As used in this subsection:

(A) DISABILITY.—The term "disability" has the same meaning as in section 422(2) of the McKinney-Vento Homeless Assistance Act (42 U.S.C. 11382(2)).

(B) HOMELESS.—The term "homeless" has the same meaning as the term "homeless children and youths" as defined in section 725(2) of the McKinney-Vento Homeless Assistance Act (42 U.S.C. 11434a(2)), except that such term shall also include any adult individual who is homeless.

(d) REQUESTS FOR ASSISTANCE.—The Secretary shall award the project-based vouchers authorized under this section to a State agency designated by the Governor of the State, upon submission of a request to the Secretary, in such form and containing such information as the Secretary may require. If a State agency is unable to provide such a request, a local housing agency may submit the request for funds to implement project-based vouchers under this section. If a State agency enters into an agreement with 1 or more local housing agencies to transfer the administration of vouchers after commitment to a particular development, the Secretary shall make the appropriate transfer.

(e) EXEMPTION FROM CERTAIN LIMITATIONS.—The limitation provided for in section 8(o)(13)(B) of the United States Housing Act of 1937 (42 U.S.C. 1437f(o)(13)(B)) shall not apply to the project-based vouchers allocated and administered under this section.

(f) AUTHORIZATION OF FUNDS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—There are authorized to be appropriated to the Secretary $200,000,000 for purposes of allocating and administering project-based assistance under section 8(o)(13) of the United States Housing Act of 1937 (42 U.S.C. 1437f(o)(13)), which shall remain available until expended.

(2) PURPOSE.—Such funds are authorized for the purpose of ensuring that 25 percent of the units created, repaired, or refurbished under the low income housing tax credit under section 42 or section 1400N(c) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, are affordable to very low-income and extremely low-income individuals and households.

(g) EFFECTIVE DATE.—This section shall become effective upon appropriation of the necessary funds to carry out this section.

(h) OFFSET.—Section 843(a) of title 18, United States Code, is amended by—

(1) inserting "(1)" after "(a)"; and

(2) adding at the end the following:

"(2) The Attorney General shall collect a user fee from each licensee under this section of $0.02 per pound for any commercial, non-military explosive material manufactured in or imported into the United States by that licensee."

SEC. 3. FEMA HOUSING ASSISTANCE.

(a) AMENDMENTS TO STAFFORD DISASTER RELIEF AND EMERGENCY ASSISTANCE ACT.—Section 408(c)(1) of the Robert T. Stafford Disaster Relief and Emergency Assistance Act (42 U.S.C. 5174(c)(1)) is amended—

(1) in the paragraph heading, by inserting "SEMI-PERMANENT, AND PERMANENT" after "TEMPORARY"; and

(2) in subparagraph (B)

(A) in clause (i)—

(i) by inserting "semipermanent, and permanent" after "temporary"; and

(ii) by inserting "subject to certain conditions outlined below" after "units";

(B) by redesignating clauses (ii) and (iii) as clauses (iii) and (iv), respectively; and

(C) by inserting after clause (i) the following:

“(ii) CONDITIONS FOR PROVIDING TEMPORARY, SEMIPERMANENT, AND PERMANENT HOUSING UNITS.—

“(I) IN GENERAL.—When determining whether to provide temporary, semipermanent, or permanent housing under clause (i), the President shall examine certain conditions, including—

“(aa) the relative cost efficiency of providing the housing units;

“(bb) the likelihood that individuals and families will be living in Federal Emergency Management Agency (in this subparagraph referred to as ‘FEMA’) assisted housing longer than 3 to 6 months, due to the scope of the disaster where individuals and households are located;

“(cc) the potential benefits of providing housing that will help to restore permanent housing stock lost as a result of the disaster; and

“(dd) any other conditions that the President deems necessary to examine, depending on the scope of the disaster and the subsequent rebuilding and recovery process.

“(II) MEETING NEEDS.—When providing temporary, semipermanent, or permanent housing units under clause (i), the President shall ensure that—

“(aa) an adequate share of the housing units will be deployed to meet the needs of predisaster renters, especially low-income households;

“(bb) that the deployment of the housing units will minimize the concentration of poverty;

“(cc) that an adequate share of the housing units is accessible for persons with disabilities, as that term is defined in section 422(2) of the McKinney-Vento Homeless Assistance Act (42 U.S.C. 11382(2)); and

“(dd) the housing units will be placed within a reasonable distance from needed services, such as access to transportation, employment opportunities, health care facilities, schools, day care services, and financial and employment counseling.”

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—This section and the amendments made by this section shall apply with respect to individuals and households affected—

(1) by a disaster to which section 408(c)(1) of the Robert T. Stafford Disaster Relief and Emergency Assistance Act (42 U.S.C. 5174(c)(1)) would otherwise apply, occurring on or after the date of enactment of this Act; and

(2) by the consequences of Hurricanes Katrina, Rita, and Wilma of 2005.

SEC. 4. TRANSFER OF TEMPORARY RENTAL ASSISTANCE.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Director of the Federal Emergency Management Agency (in this section referred to as the “Director” and “FEMA”, respectively) shall enter into a mission assignment with the Secretary to transfer adequate funds from FEMA Disaster Relief Funds into the Disaster Voucher Program at the Department of Housing and Urban Development in order to fully implement subsection (b).

(b) TRANSFERS.—The Director shall ensure that the following individuals and households are transferred into the Disaster Voucher Program:

(1) Individuals and households receiving assistance through FEMA’s transitional housing program authorized under section 408 of the Robert T. Stafford Disaster Relief and Emergency Assistance Act (42 U.S.C. 5174) .

(2) Individuals and households receiving assistance through—

(A) rental assistance programs administered through State and local voucher programs that receive reimbursement from FEMA; or

(B) any other program authorized under section 403 of the Robert T. Stafford Disaster Relief and Emergency Assistance Act (42 U.S.C. 5170b).

(c) STATE AND LOCAL GOVERNMENTS.—FEMA shall work with State and local governments, as well as private entities providing services, to ensure that proper notice and assistance is provided to individuals and households, while the transfer under this section is completed.

(d) OPT-OUT PROVISION.—Individuals and families receiving FEMA housing assistance under subsection (b) may opt-out of the transfer to the Disaster Voucher Program authorized in subsection (a).

(e) APPLICABILITY.—This section shall apply with respect to individuals and households affected—

(1) by a disaster occurring on or after the date of enactment of this Act; and

(2) by the consequences of Hurricanes Katrina, Rita, and Wilma of 2005.

By Mr. HARKIN (for himself, Mr. LUGAR, Mr. DURBIN, Mr. HAGEL, and Mr. NELSON of Nebraska):

S. 3890. A bill to enhance and improve the energy security of the United States, expand economic development, increase agricultural income, and improve environmental quality by reauthorizing and improving the renewable energy systems and energy efficiency improvements program of the Department of Agriculture through fiscal year 2012, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Agriculture, Nutrition, and Forestry.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, today I am introducing the Rural Energy for America Act of 2006. This legislation will strengthen and expand the renewable energy and energy efficiency program established in section 9006 of the Farm Security and Rural Investment Act of 2002 by increasing its overall funding, creating a new rebate) program, providing new grant options for wind energy projects, allowing rural schools to qualify for the program and fostering the administration of direct loans. I am very pleased to have Senators LUGAR, DURBIN, HAGEL and NELSON as co-sponsors.

The section 9006 Renewable Energy Systems and Energy Efficiency Improvements program—to be re-named under this legislation as the Rural Energy for America Program (REAP)—provides farmers, ranchers, and rural small businesses with financial support for installing renewable energy systems and making energy efficiency improvements.

I authored section 9006 in 2002 as Chair of the Senate Committee on Agriculture, Nutrition and Forestry with the strong support of Senator LUGAR, the Ranking Member at that time and a long-time ally in advocating for renewable energy production. This has proven to be one of the most important provisions we included in the 2002 farm bill’s first-ever energy title.

During its first three years, the Renewable Energy Systems and Energy Efficiency Improvements program has distributed $63.9 million and catalyzed the development of 412 renewable energy and energy efficiency projects in 37 states. The awards have leveraged an additional $699 million, bringing the total program-related investment in clean energy systems for farms, ranches and rural communities to $763 million. Thus, this program has had remarkable success in stimulating investments that increase reliance on clean, domestic energy systems and enhance energy efficiency in our agricultural and rural business sectors.

Developing and expanding homegrown renewable energy is a key part of our national energy security strategy. Section 9006 provides grant support for many different forms of renewable energy, including solar, wind, biomass, geothermal and renewable hydrogen.

Prior to 2003, there were fewer than 30 locally-owned wind farms in operation. As a direct result of the section 9006 program, over 80 new community wind projects were awarded grants by the end of 2005. When completed, these projects will have a capacity of over 300 megawatts of wind power and provide new income for American farmers and cleaner air for all of us.

Section 9006 successfully promotes on-farm anaerobic digesters, which capture and use methane gas from livestock and poultry manure. Before 2003, there were fewer than 10 digesters in operation in the United States. Under the section 9006 program, 15 new digester projects are now operational and an additional 59 projects are under development. These projects provide new sources of farm income and help farmers deal with manure in a more environmentally sound manner.

The program also has funded bio-energy production and the adoption of energy efficiency technologies and practices. As a result, 124 million gallons of ethanol and biodiesel production capacity are coming online, and energy saving improvements have been installed at 160 farms, ranches and rural small businesses, resulting in a savings of 250 billion BTUs/year and millions of dollars in reduced electricity, diesel fuel, natural gas and propane expense.

Together, these renewable energy projects produce 16.9 trillion BTUs/year in the form of fuels, electricity and thermal energy. The combination of renewable energy and energy efficiency projects also will reduce carbon dioxide emissions into the atmosphere by 4 million metric tons a year, showing that our rural communities can be a part of the solution to global warming.

It is clear that the section 9006 program has been extraordinarily successful. However, we have only begun to tap into the potential for American ingenuity in homegrown clean energy production and energy efficiency measures. The demand for rural renewable energy and energy efficiency assistance far outpaces the program's resources. Today, the demand is almost triple the available program funding.

Our legislation will strengthen and expand the program to help agricultural producers and rural small businesses cope with high energy prices, move our rural economies forward and protect the environment. In addition to increasing overall program funding, this bill will allow rural schools to apply for REAP funding. Schools have been eager to participate in the section 9006 program since its inception. Allowing schools to qualify will help them mitigate high energy costs and help teachers educate our youth about the many benefits of energy efficiency and clean alternative energy sources.

This legislation further promotes wind energy expansion by giving farmers and other eligible developers an additional financing option. Currently, most of the funds granted for wind power projects under section 9006 are used to purchase and install wind turbine systems. Under Federal tax rules, however, grants used for such acquisition and construction costs have the potential to significantly reduce important tax credits for the project.

To avoid such counterproductive tax impacts, the legislation authorizes USDA in appropriate circumstances to structure grants as production incentives instead of equipment purchase or construction grants, thereby reducing the risk of negating the tax credit benefit. The need for such a change was highlighted in a recent report written by Berkeley National Lab entitled "Avoiding the Haircut: Potential Ways to Enhance the Value of the USDA's Section 9006 Program."

This legislation also includes a new rebate program providing the lesser of $10,000 or 50 percent of project costs for energy efficiency improvements and the purchase of renewable energy systems. Similar state-run rebate programs are recognized as effective mechanisms for promoting small-scale development projects. This rebate program will enable small and medium-sized farmers and rural small businesses to obtain rapid and long-lasting relief from high energy prices through a simple and proven mechanism. Grants for this purpose would be limited to no more than 20% of the total REAP funding.

This bill also urges USDA to initiate the use of direct loans to complement the REAP program grants, by expressing the sense of the Senate that USDA should implement the direct loan provisions of section 9006. Although the original legislation in section 9006 called for the establishment of a program of "grants, loans and loan guarantees," USDA has not yet established a direct loan program. Our legislation urges USDA to move a direct loan initiative forward.

The bill also allows USDA to provide grants for feasibility studies. Feasibility studies can ensure that projects are thoroughly assessed through technology and systems' analysis in their early stages, thus promoting successful and cost-effective projects. The amount of funds for feasibility studies would be capped to ensure that the majority of REAP funding continues to focus on deployment of renewable energy systems and energy efficiency improvements.

Farm-based energy initiatives encompass a wide range of proven technologies to produce or save energy. The unique and successful section 9006 program has been instrumental to adoption of renewable energy and energy efficiency systems in the agricultural and rural small business sectors. The record to date signals an opportunity for vastly expanding these alternative energy and energy efficiency benefits in rural America.

We have broad agreement in our country on moving farm-based renewable energy and energy efficiency forward. Let's help do that by updating and improving the section 9006—Rural Energy for America Program—for the future.

I urge my colleagues to support this important legislation.

By Mr. MENENDEZ (for himself,
Mrs. CLINTON, Mr. LAUTENBERG, and Mr. SCHUMER):

S. 3891. A bill to extend the time for filing certain claims under the September 11th Victim Compensation Fund of 2001, and for other purposes; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. MENENDEZ. Mr. President, today I am pleased to join with Senators CLINTON, LAUTENBERG, and SCHUMER to introduce the James Zadroga Act. This bicameral and bipartisan legislation would reopen the September 11 Victims Compensation Fund, VCF, to provide financial assistance to victims and first responders of the attacks of 9/11 who became ill, in addition to their respective family members.

James Zadroga was a New York Police Department, NYPD, detective and New Jersey resident, who when he died earlier this year was the first 9/11 responder to have his death directly attributed to exposure to the toxins of Ground Zero. He became ill just weeks after working at Ground Zero, but because he retired in 2004, the NYPD determined that his four-year-old daughter Tylerann could only receive a disability pension, instead of the full death benefit to which she should be entitled.

That is why in April, I authored a letter with my colleagues Senators LAUTENBERG, CLINTON, and SCHUMER that called on New York officials to enact legislation that would provide full benefits to Tylerann and other beneficiaries like her.

In August, New York enacted three new laws, including one that would allow those recovery workers who have retired from public service to have their retirement status reclassified as accidental disability if they later become ill due to their efforts at Ground Zero. That action by the State of New York is vitally important, because we unfortunately know that Detective Zadroga's death will not be the last to be suffered by the brave Americans who rushed to Ground Zero in the hours and days after September 11.

As our Nation continues to heal from the wounds inflicted by the 9/11 terror attacks, there are many first responders whose wounds have yet to heal from the aftermath of that day. We as a nation must care for those who cared for America in its time of need. We cannot let bureaucratic red tape stand between those who helped America pick up the pieces and the compensation they deserve.

Today, by introducing this legislation we take the next step in working to ensure that the heroes who sacrificed their health—and in Detective Zadroga's case, his life—will be justly compensated. I believe we owe them nothing less.

This legislation reopens the fund created to care for the families of 9/11 victims and for those injured or who became ill as a direct result of the attacks. Unfortunately, many who should have received compensation from the VCF never did because their illnesses did not develop or have become significantly worse since the original filing deadline of December 22, 2003. In other instances, original guidelines prohibited the VCF to make awards if injuries were sustained more than 96 hours after the attacks.

Specifically, the "James Zadroga Act" would: Reopen September 11 Victims Compensation Fund for individuals who became ill or did not file before the original December 22, 2003 deadline;

Allow for adjustment of previous awards if the Special Master of the fund determines the medical conditions of the claimant warrants an adjustment; and Amend eligibility rules so that responders to the 9/11 attacks who arrived later than the first 96 hours could be eligible if they experienced illness or injury from their work at the site.

Congress needs to pass this bill—we need to stand up for these American heroes and their families. I urge my colleagues to join with us in this important effort by cosponsoring this piece of legislation.

I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the text of the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 3891

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "James Zadroga Act of 2006".

SEC. 2. FINDINGS.

Congress finds the following:

(1) The September 11th Victim Compensation Fund of 2001 was established to provide compensation to individuals (or relatives of deceased individuals) who were physically injured or killed as a result of the terrorist-related aircraft crashes of September 11, 2001.

(2) The deadline for filing claims for compensation under the Victim Compensation Fund was December 22, 2003.

(3) Some individuals did not know they were eligible to file claims for compensation or did not know they had suffered physical harm as a result of the terrorist-related aircraft crashes until after the December 22, 2003, deadline.

SEC. 3. DEADLINE EXTENSION FOR CERTAIN CLAIMS UNDER SEPTEMBER 11TH VICTIM COMPENSATION FUND OF 2001.

Section 405(a)(3) of the Air Transportation Safety and System Stabilization Act (49 U.S.C. 40101 note) is amended to read as follows:

“(3) LIMITATION.—

“(A) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided by subparagraph (B), no claim may be filed under paragraph (1) after December 22, 2003.

“(B) EXCEPTIONS.—A claim may be filed under paragraph (1) by an individual (or by a personal representative on behalf of a deceased individual)—

“(i) during the 5-year period after the date of enactment of this subparagraph, if the Special Master determines that the individual—

“(I) did not know that the individual had suffered physical harm as a result of the terrorist-related aircraft crashes of September 11, 2001, until after December 22, 2003, and before the date of the enactment of this subparagraph;

“(II) did not for any reason other than as described in subclause (I) know that the individual was eligible to file a claim under paragraph (1) until after December 22, 2003;

“(III) suffered psychological harm as a result of the terrorist-related aircraft crashes; or

“(IV) in the case of an individual who had previously filed a claim under this title, suffered a significantly greater physical harm than was known to the individual as of the date the claim was filed and did not know the full extent of the physical harm suffered as a result of the terrorist-related aircraft crashes until after the date on which the claim was filed and before the date of enactment of this subparagraph; and

“(ii) during the 5-year period after the date that the individual—

“(I) first knew that the individual had suffered physical or psychological harm as a result of the terrorist-related aircraft crashes of September 11, 2001, if the Special Master determines that the individual did not know that the individual had suffered such physical or psychological harm until a date that is on or after the date of enactment of this subparagraph; or

“(II) in the case of an individual who had previously filed a claim under this title and had suffered a significantly greater physical harm than was known to the individual as of the date the claim was filed, or had suffered psychological harm as a result of the terrorist-related crashes, first knew the full extent of the physical and psychological harm suffered as a result of the terrorist-related aircraft crashes, if the Special Master determines that the individual did not know the full extent of the harm suffered until a date that is on or after the date of the enactment of this subparagraph.”.

SEC. 4. EXCEPTION TO SINGLE CLAIM REQUIREMENT IN CERTAIN CIRCUMSTANCES.

Section 405(c)(3)(A) of the Air Transportation Safety and System Stabilization Act (49 U.S.C. 40101 note) is amended to read as follows:

“(A) SINGLE CLAIM.—

“(i) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided by clause (ii), not more than 1 claim may be submitted under this title by an individual or on behalf of a deceased individual.

“(ii) EXCEPTION.—A second claim may be filed under subsection (a)(1) by an individual (or by a personal representative on behalf of a deceased individual) if the individual is an individual described in either of clauses (i)(IV) or (ii)(II) of subsection (a)(3)(B).”.

SEC. 5. ELIGIBILITY OF CLAIMANTS SUFFERING FROM PSYCHOLOGICAL HARM.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 405(c)(2)(A)(ii) of the Air Transportation Safety and System Stabilization Act (49 U.S.C. 40101 note) is amended by inserting “, psychological harm,” before “or death”.

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—Section 405(a)(2)(B)(i) of such Act is amended by striking “physical harm” and inserting “physical or psychological harm”.

SEC. 6. IMMEDIATE AFTERMATH DEFINED.

Section 402 of the Air Transportation Safety and System Stabilization Act (49 U.S.C. 40101 note) is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

“(11) IMMEDIATE AFTERMATH.—In section 405(c)(2)(A)(i), the term ‘immediate aftermath’ means any period of time after the terrorist-related aircraft crashes of September 11, 2001, as determined by the Special Master, that was sufficiently close in time to the crashes that there was a demonstrable risk to the claimant of physical or psychological harm resulting from the crashes, including the period of time during which rescue, recovery, and cleanup activities relating to the crashes were conducted.”.

SUBMITTED RESOLUTIONS*SENATE RESOLUTION 566—EXPRESSING THE SENSE OF THE SENATE CONCERNING THE IMPORTANCE OF PREVENTING CHILD ABUSE AND NEGLECT BEFORE THEY OCCUR AND ACHIEVING PERMANENCY AND STABILITY FOR CHILDREN WHO MUST EXPERIENCE FOSTER CARE

Mrs. CLINTON submitted the following resolution; which was referred to the Committee on Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions:

S. RES. 566

Whereas in 2004, authorities received reports that an estimated 3,000,000 children suffered child abuse or neglect, and the reports of abuse or neglect were substantiated for approximately 872,000 of the children;

Whereas in 2004, 1,490 children died tragically as a result of abuse;

Whereas research from the United States Children’s Bureau of the Department of Health and Human Services shows that a greater amount of caseworker contact with children and parents results in better outcomes for families;

Whereas child protective service agencies throughout the country have set goals in order to improve service quality, including the agencies in New York, whose goal is to maintain caseloads at an average of 12 cases per caseworker, with a maximum of 5 new cases per caseworker each month;

Whereas research on child welfare service staff suggests the need for staff that have formal social work education, especially education obtained through specialized child welfare programs; and

Whereas research on child welfare service staff has shown a link between a supportive and flexible organizational environment and reduced staff turnover: Now, therefore, be it Resolved, That it is the sense of the Senate that—

(1) Congress should increase funding to provide for additional child welfare service caseworkers and associated administrative costs;

(2) Congress should encourage States to set goals for decreasing caseloads of child welfare service caseworkers, in order to ensure quality service for the most vulnerable children; and

(3) Congress should encourage States to implement policies with increased educational and professional development expectations for caseworkers in child welfare service agencies.

SENATE RESOLUTION 567—HONORING THE DETROIT SHOCK ON WINNING THE 2006 WOMEN’S NATIONAL BASKETBALL ASSOCIATION CHAMPIONSHIP

Ms. STABENOW (for herself and Mr. LEVIN) submitted the following resolution; which was considered and agreed to:

S. RES. 567

Whereas, on Saturday, September 9, 2006, the Detroit Shock won the 2006 Women’s National Basketball Association (WNBA) Championship by defeating the defending champion Sacramento Monarchs by a score of 80 to 75;

Whereas the Detroit Shock triumphed in 5 highly competitive championship games, going into the final championship game with 1 win and 1 loss in Michigan and 1 win and 1 loss in California;

Whereas the Detroit Shock were able to celebrate the tenth year of the WNBA and the eighth year of the Detroit Shock with an inspiring victory in the fifth championship game that secured their second WNBA championship in 4 years;

Whereas the attendance at the final championship game at the Joe Louis Arena in Detroit, Michigan, of over 19,600 people and the enthusiasm shown by the people of Michigan clearly demonstrate Michigan’s strong support for the Detroit Shock organization and the determined effort of all the team’s players;

Whereas the Detroit Shock completed an incredible season, capped by spectacular performances in the final championship game by the Most Valuable Player of the 2006 WNBA Finals, Deanna Nolan, who, with a total of 24 points, led the game in points scored, Cheryl Ford, who led the game in rebounds, recovering 10 rebounds in addition to scoring 10 points, and Katie Smith, who scored 17 points;

Whereas each member of the Detroit Shock organization made meaningful contributions to the team's success, including players Jacqueline Batteast, Kara Braxton, Swin Cash, Cheryl Ford, Kedra Holland-Corn, Deanna Nolan, Plenette Pierson, Elaine Powell, Ruth Riley, Katie Smith, and Angelina Williams, Head Coach Bill Laimbeer, Assistant Coaches Cheryl Reeve and Rick Mahorn, Athletic Trainer Mike Perkins, and the owner of the Detroit Shock, Bill Davidson;

Whereas Detroit Shock Head Coach Bill Laimbeer has won 4 professional basketball titles, including 2 as the coach of the Detroit Shock and 2 as a player for the Detroit Pistons;

Whereas Detroit Shock owner Bill Davidson's 2 Detroit basketball teams have won 5 championship titles; and

Whereas the Detroit Shock demonstrated superior strength, skill, and perseverance during the 2006 season and have made the City of Detroit and the entire State of Michigan proud: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Senate—

(1) congratulates the Detroit Shock on winning the 2006 Women's National Basketball Association Championship and recognizes all the players, coaches, staff, fans, and others who were instrumental in this great achievement; and

(2) directs the Secretary of the Senate to transmit an enrolled copy of this resolution to the Detroit Shock for appropriate display.

SENATE RESOLUTION 568—CONGRATULATING THE COLUMBUS NORTHERN LITTLE LEAGUE TEAM OF COLUMBUS, GEORGIA, FOR WINNING THE CHAMPIONSHIP GAME OF THE LITTLE LEAGUE WORLD SERIES

Mr. CHAMBLISS (for himself and Mr. ISAKSON) submitted the following resolution; which was considered and agreed to:

S. RES. 568

Whereas, on August 28, 2006, the Columbus Northern Little League team defeated the Kawaguchi Little League team of Kawaguchi City, Japan, by 2 runs to 1 run to win the 60th annual Little League Baseball World Series;

Whereas the Columbus Northern Little League team is only the 2nd team from the State of Georgia to win the Little League Baseball World Series in the 60-year history of that tournament;

Whereas the Columbus Northern Little League team had an impressive record of 20 wins and only 1 loss;

Whereas, although no other pitcher in the history of the Little League Baseball World Series had ever won more than 3 games during the tournament, Kyle Carter made history by striking out 11 batters in the championship game to earn his 4th win of the Little League Baseball World Series;

Whereas the success of the Columbus Northern Little League team depended on the tremendous dedication and sportsmanship of the team, including—

(1) Matthew Hollis, who played 2nd base and centerfield;

(2) Ryan Lang, who played right field;

(3) Mason Meyers, who played right field and 3rd base;

(4) Matthew Kuhlenberg, who played left field;

(5) Patrick Stallings, who played 3rd base;

(6) Josh Lester, who played 2nd base and shortstop;

(7) Brady Hamilton, who played 1st base, outfield, and pitched for the team;

(8) Cody Walker, who caught for the team;

(9) Kyle Carter, who pitched for the team;

(10) J.T. Phillips, who played shortstop and pitched for the team; and

(11) Kyle Rovig, who played left field and pitched for the team;

Whereas the Columbus Northern Little League team was managed by Randy Morris and coached by Richard Carter, each of whom demonstrated leadership, professionalism, and respect for the players who they led and the game of baseball;

Whereas the fans of the Columbus Northern Little League team showed enthusiasm, support, and courtesy for the game of baseball and all of the players and coaches;

Whereas the performance of the Columbus Northern Little League team demonstrated to parents and communities throughout the United States that athletic participation builds character and leadership in children; and

Whereas the Columbus Northern Little League team brought pride and honor to the State of Georgia and the United States: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Senate—

(1) congratulates and honors the Columbus Northern Little League team and the loyal fans who supported the team on winning the 60th annual Little League Baseball World Series;

TEXT OF AMENDMENTS

SA 4929. Mrs. MURRAY (for herself, Mr. INOUE, Mrs. CLINTON, and Ms. COLLINS) proposed an amendment to the bill H.R. 4954, to improve maritime and cargo security through enhanced layered defenses, and for other purposes; as follows:

At the appropriate place, insert the following:

SEC. ____ . COBRA FEES.

(a) EXTENSION OF FEES.—Subparagraphs (A) and (B)(i) of section 13031(j)(3) of the Consolidated Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1985 (19 U.S.C. 58c(j)(3)(A) and (B)(i)) are amended by striking “2014” each place it appears and inserting “2015”.

(b) USE OF FEES.—Paragraph (2) of section 13031(f) of such Act (19 U.S.C. 58c(f)(2)) is amended by adding at the end the following: “The provisions of the first and second sentences of this paragraph limiting the purposes for which amounts in the Customs User Fee Account may be made available shall not apply with respect to amounts in that Account during fiscal year 2015.”.

SA 4930. Mr. SCHUMER (for himself, Mrs. BOXER, and Mrs. CLINTON) submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill H.R. 4954, to improve maritime and cargo security through enhanced layered defenses, and for other purposes; as follows:

On page 5, between lines 20 and 21, insert the following:

(9) INTEGRATED SCANNING SYSTEM.—The term “integrated scanning system” means a system for scanning containers with the following elements:

(A) The container passes through a radiation detection device.

(B) The container is scanned using gamma-ray, x-ray, or another internal imaging system.

(C) The container is tagged and catalogued using an on-container label, radio frequency identification, or global positioning system tracking device.

(D) The images created by the scans required under subparagraph (B) are reviewed and approved by the Secretary, or the designee of the Secretary.

(E) Every radiation alarm is resolved according to established Department procedures.

(F) The information collected is utilized to enhance the Automated Targeting System or other relevant programs.

(G) The information is stored for later retrieval and analysis.

On page 43, strike lines 11 through 14 and insert “enter into agreements with the governments of foreign countries participating in the Container Security Initiative that establish criteria and procedures for an integrated scanning system and shall monitor oper-”.

On page 44, line 5, strike “and”.

“(D) $258,700,000 for fiscal year 2011.

“(E) $269,000,000 for fiscal year 2012.”.

SA 4932. Mr. DOMENICI (for himself, Mr. WARNER, and Mr. BINGAMAN) submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill H.R. 4954, to improve maritime and cargo security through enhanced layered defenses, and for other purposes; which was ordered to lie on the table; as follows:

On page 87, add after line 18, the following:

TITLE V—DOMESTIC NUCLEAR DETECTION OFFICE

SEC. 501. ESTABLISHMENT OF DOMESTIC NUCLEAR DETECTION OFFICE.

(a) ESTABLISHMENT OF OFFICE.—The Homeland Security Act of 2002 (6 U.S.C. 101 et seq.) is amended by adding at the end the following:

“TITLE XVIII—DOMESTIC NUCLEAR DETECTION OFFICE

“SEC. 1801. DOMESTIC NUCLEAR DETECTION OFFICE.

“(a) ESTABLISHMENT.—There shall be established in the Department of Homeland Security a Domestic Nuclear Detection Office. The Secretary of Homeland Security may request that the Secretaries of Defense, Energy, and State, the Attorney General, the Nuclear Regulatory Commission, and the directors of other Federal agencies, including elements of the Intelligence Community, provide for the reimbursable detail of personnel with relevant expertise to the Office.

“(b) DIRECTOR.—The Office shall be headed by a Director for Domestic Nuclear Detection, who shall be appointed by the President.

“SEC. 1802. MISSION OF OFFICE.

“(a) MISSION.—The Office shall be responsible for coordinating Federal efforts to detect and protect against the unauthorized importation, possession, storage, transportation, development, or use of a nuclear explosive device, fissile material, or radiological material in the United States, and to protect against attack using such devices or materials against the people, territory, or interests of the United States and, to this end, shall—

“(1) serve as the primary entity in the United States Government to further develop, acquire, and support the deployment of an enhanced domestic system to detect and report on attempts to import, possess, store, transport, develop, or use an unauthorized nuclear explosive device, fissile material, or radiological material in the United States, and improve that system over time;

“(2) enhance and coordinate the nuclear detection efforts of Federal, State, local, and tribal governments and the private sector to ensure a managed, coordinated response;

“(3) establish, with the approval of the Secretary of Homeland Security and in coordination with the Attorney General and the Secretaries of Defense and Energy, additional protocols and procedures for use within the United States to ensure that the detection of unauthorized nuclear explosive devices, fissile material, or radiological material is promptly reported to the Attorney General, the Secretaries of Defense, Homeland Security, and Energy, and other appropriate officials or their respective designees for appropriate action by law enforcement, military, emergency response, or other authorities;

“(4) develop, with the approval of the Secretary of Homeland Security and in coordination with the Attorney General and the Secretaries of State, Defense, and Energy, an enhanced global nuclear detection architecture with implementation under which—

“(A) the Domestic Nuclear Detection Office will be responsible for the implementation of the domestic portion of the global architecture;

“(B) the Secretary of Defense will retain responsibility for implementation of Department of Defense requirements within and outside the United States; and

“(C) the Secretaries of State, Defense, and Energy will maintain their respective responsibilities for policy guidance and implementation of the portion of the global architecture outside the United States, which will be implemented consistent with applicable law and relevant international arrangements;

“(5) conduct, support, coordinate, and encourage an aggressive, expedited, evolutionary, and transformational program of research and development efforts to prevent and detect the illicit entry, transport, assembly, or potential use within the United States of a nuclear explosive device or fissile or radiological material;

“(6) support and enhance the effective sharing and use of appropriate information generated by the intelligence community, law enforcement agencies, counterterrorism community, other government agencies, and foreign governments, as well as provide appropriate information to such entities;

“(7) further enhance and maintain continuous awareness by analyzing information from all Domestic Nuclear Detection Office mission-related detection systems; and “(8) perform other duties as assigned by the Secretary.

“SEC. 1803. HIRING AUTHORITY.

“In hiring personnel for the Office, the Secretary of Homeland Security shall have the hiring and management authorities provided in section 1101 of the Strom Thurmond National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1999 (5 U.S.C. 3104 note; Public Law 105-261). The term of appointments for employees under subsection (c)(1) of that section may not exceed 5 years before granting any extension under subsection (c)(2) of that section.

“SEC. 1804. TESTING AUTHORITY.

“(a) IN GENERAL.—The Director shall coordinate with the responsible Federal agency or other entity to facilitate the use by the Office, by its contractors, or by other persons or entities, of existing Government laboratories, centers, ranges, or other testing facilities for the testing of materials, equipment, models, computer software, and other items as may be related to the missions identified in section 1802. Any such use of Government facilities shall be carried out in accordance with all applicable laws, regulations, and contractual provisions, including those governing security, safety, and environmental protection, including, when applicable, the provisions of section 309. The Office may direct that private-sector entities utilizing Government facilities in accordance with this section pay an appropriate fee to the agency that owns or operates those facilities to defray additional costs to the Government resulting from such use.

“(b) CONFIDENTIALITY OF TEST RESULTS.—The results of tests performed with services made available shall be confidential and shall not be disclosed outside the Federal Government without the consent of the persons for whom the tests are performed.

“(c) FEES.—Fees for services made available under this section shall not exceed the amount necessary to recoup the direct and indirect costs involved, such as direct costs of utilities, contractor support, and salaries of personnel that are incurred by the United States to provide for the testing.

“(d) USE OF FEES.—Fees received for services made available under this section may be credited to the appropriation from which funds were expended to provide such services.

“SEC. 1805. RELATIONSHIP TO OTHER DEPARTMENT ENTITIES AND FEDERAL AGENCIES.

“The authority of the Director under this title shall not affect the authorities or responsibilities of any officer of the Department of Homeland Security or of any officer of any other Department or agency of the United States with respect to the command, control, or direction of the functions, personnel, funds, assets, and liabilities of any entity within the Department of Homeland Security or any Federal department or agency.”

(b) TECHNICAL AND CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—

(1) Section 103(d) of the Homeland Security Act of 2002 (6 U.S.C. 113(d)) is amended by adding at the end the following:

“(5) A Director of the Domestic Nuclear Detection Office.”

(2) Section 302 of such Act (6 U.S.C. 182) is amended—

(A) in paragraph (2) by striking “radiological, nuclear”; and

(B) in paragraph (5)(A) by striking “radiological, nuclear”.

(3) Section 305 of such Act (6 U.S.C. 185) is amended by inserting “and the Director of the Domestic Nuclear Detection Office” after “Technology”.

(4) Section 308 of such Act (6 U.S.C. 188) is amended in each of subsections (a) and (b)(1) by inserting “and the Director of the Domestic Nuclear Detection Office” after “Technology” each place it appears.

(5) The table of contents of such Act (6 U.S.C. 101) is amended by adding at the end the following:

“TITLE XVIII—DOMESTIC NUCLEAR DETECTION OFFICE

“Sec. 1801. Domestic Nuclear Detection Office.

“Sec. 1802. Mission of office.

“Sec. 1803. Hiring authority.

“Sec. 1804. Testing authority.

“Sec. 1805. Relationship to other department entities and Federal agencies.”

SEC. 502. TECHNOLOGY RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT INVESTMENT STRATEGY FOR NUCLEAR AND RADIOLOGICAL DETECTION.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 1 year after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Homeland Security, the Secretary of the Department of Energy, the Secretary of Defense, and the Director of National Intelligence shall submit to Congress a research and development investment strategy for nuclear and radiological detection.

(b) CONTENTS.—The strategy under subsection (a) shall include—

(1) a long-term technology roadmap for nuclear and radiological detection applicable to the mission needs of the Departments of Homeland Security, Energy, and Defense, and the Office of the Director of National Intelligence;

(2) budget requirements necessary to meet the roadmap; and

(3) documentation of how the Departments of Homeland Security, Energy, and Defense, and the Office of the Director of National Intelligence will implement the intent of this title.

SA 4933. Mr. DOMENICI (for himself and Mr. WARNER) submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill H.R. 4954, to improve maritime and cargo security through enhanced layered defenses, and for other purposes; which was ordered to lie on the table; as follows:

On page 44, lines 14 and 15, strike “under any program administered by the Department”.

On page 44, lines 23 and 24, strike “the Department’s” and insert “both the Department’s and the Department of Energy’s”.

On page 59, lines 12 and 13, strike “The equipment may be provided by the Megaports Initiative of the Department of Energy.”

On page 59, line 17, insert “(1) IN GENERAL.—” before “The”.

On page 59, between lines 22 and 23, insert the following:

(2) COORDINATION.—The Secretary shall coordinate with the Secretary of Energy to—

(A) provide radiation detection equipment required to support the pilot-integrated scanning system established pursuant to subsection (a) through the Department of Energy’s Second Line of Defense and Megaports programs; or

(B) work with the private sector to obtain radiation detection equipment that meets both the Department’s and the Department of Energy’s technical specifications for such equipment.

SA 4934. Ms. STABENOW submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by her to the bill H.R. 4954, to improve maritime and cargo security through enhanced layered defenses, and for other purposes; which was ordered to lie on the table; as follows:

At the appropriate place, insert the following:

SEC. . . EMERGENCY COMMUNICATIONS AND INTEROPERABILITY GRANTS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary, through the Office of Domestic Preparedness of the Office of State and Local Government Preparedness and Coordination, shall make grants to States, eligible regions, and local governments for initiatives necessary to improve emergency communications capabilities and to achieve short-term or long-term solutions to statewide, regional, national, and, where appropriate, international interoperability.

(b) USE OF GRANT FUNDS.—A grant awarded under subsection (a) may be used for initiatives to achieve short-term or long-term solutions for emergency communications and interoperability within the State or region and to assist with any aspect of the communication life cycle, including—

(1) statewide or regional communications planning;

(2) system design and engineering;

(3) procurement and installation of equipment;

(4) training exercises;

(5) modeling and simulation exercises for operational command and control functions; and

(6) other activities determined by the Secretary to be integral to the achievement of emergency communications capabilities and communications interoperability.

(c) DEFINITIONS.—In this section—

(1) the term “eligible region” means—

(A) 2 or more contiguous incorporated municipalities, counties, parishes, Indian tribes, or other general purpose jurisdictions that—

(i) have joined together to enhance emergency communications capabilities or communications interoperability between emergency response providers in those jurisdictions and with State and Federal officials; and

(ii) includes the largest city in any metropolitan statistical area, as defined by the Office of Management and Budget; or

(B) any other area the Secretary determines to be consistent with the definition of a region in the national preparedness guidance issued under Homeland Security Presidential Directive 8; and

(2) the terms "emergency response providers" and "local government" have the meanings given the terms in section 2 of the Homeland Security Act of 2002 (6 U.S.C. 101).

(d) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out this section—

(1) $1,000,000,000 for each of fiscal years 2007 through 2011; and

(2) such sums as are necessary for each fiscal year thereafter.

SA 4935. Mr. SALAZAR (for himself, Mr. CHAMBLISS, Mr. ISAKSON, Mr. PRYOR, and Ms. CANTWELL) submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill H.R. 4954, to improve maritime and cargo security through enhanced layered defenses, and for other purposes; as follows:

At the appropriate place, insert the following:

SEC. ____ . RURAL POLICING INSTITUTE.

(a) IN GENERAL.—There is established a Rural Policing Institute, which shall be administered by the Office of State and Local Training of the Federal Law Enforcement Training Center (based in Glynco, Georgia), to—

(1) evaluate the needs of law enforcement agencies of units of local government and tribal governments located in rural areas;

(2) develop expert training programs designed to address the needs of rural law enforcement agencies regarding combating methamphetamine addiction and distribution, domestic violence, law enforcement response related to school shootings, and other topics identified in the evaluation conducted under paragraph (1);

(3) provide the training programs described in paragraph (2) to law enforcement agencies of units of local government and tribal governments located in rural areas; and

(4) conduct outreach efforts to ensure that training programs under the Rural Policing Institute reach law enforcement officers of units of local government and tribal governments located in rural areas.

(b) CURRICULA.—The training at the Rural Policing Institute established under subsection (a) shall be configured in a manner so as to not duplicate or displace any law enforcement program of the Federal Law Enforcement Training Center in existence on the date of enactment of this Act.

(c) DEFINITION.—In this section, the term "rural" means area that is not located in a metropolitan statistical area, as defined by the Office of Management and Budget.

(d) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out this section (including for contracts, staff, and equipment)—

(1) $10,000,000 for fiscal year 2007; and

(2) $5,000,000 for each of fiscal years 2008 through 2012.

SA 4936. Mr. REID proposed an amendment to the bill H.R. 4954, to improve maritime and cargo security through enhanced layered defenses, and for other purposes; as follows:

At the end, add the following:

SEC. 1104. PRIVATE SECTOR PREPAREDNESS.

The Comptroller General of the United States shall submit to Congress by not later than 90 days after the date of the enactment of this Act—

(1) a determination of what has been done to enhance private sector preparedness for terrorist attack; and

(2) recommendations of any additional congressional action or administrative action that is necessary to enhance such preparedness.

SEC. 1105. RELEVANT CONGRESSIONAL COMMITTEES DEFINED.

In this chapter, the term “relevant congressional committees” means the Committee on Homeland Security, the Committee on Government Reform, and the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Homeland Security and Government Affairs and the Committee on Environment and Public Works of the Senate.

CHAPTER 2—ASSISTANCE FOR FIRST RESPONDERS

SEC. 1111. SHORT TITLE.

This chapter may be cited as the “Faster and Smarter Funding for First Responders Act of 2006”.

SEC. 1112. FINDINGS.

Congress makes the following findings:

(1) In order to achieve its objective of preventing, minimizing the damage from, and assisting in the recovery from terrorist attacks, the Department of Homeland Security must play a leading role in assisting communities to reach the level of preparedness they need to prevent and respond to a terrorist attack.

(2) First responder funding is not reaching the men and women of our Nation’s first response teams quickly enough, and sometimes not at all.

(3) To reform the current bureaucratic process so that homeland security dollars reach the first responders who need it most, it is necessary to clarify and consolidate the authority and procedures of the Department of Homeland Security that support first responders.

(4) Ensuring adequate resources for the new national mission of homeland security, without degrading the ability to address effectively other types of major disasters and emergencies, requires a discrete and separate grant making process for homeland security funds for first response to terrorist acts, on the one hand, and for first responder programs designed to meet pre-September 11 priorities, on the other.

(5) While a discrete homeland security grant making process is necessary to ensure proper focus on the unique aspects of terrorism preparedness, it is essential that State and local strategies for utilizing such grants be integrated, to the greatest extent practicable, with existing State and local emergency management plans.

(6) Homeland security grants to first responders must be based on the best intelligence concerning the capabilities and intentions of our terrorist enemies, and that intelligence must be used to target resources to the Nation’s greatest threats, vulnerabilities, and consequences.

(7) The Nation’s first response capabilities will be improved by sharing resources, training, planning, personnel, and equipment among neighboring jurisdictions through mutual aid agreements and regional cooperation. Such regional cooperation should be supported, where appropriate, through direct grants from the Department of Homeland Security.

(8) An essential prerequisite to achieving the Nation’s homeland security objectives for first responders is the establishment of well-defined national goals for terrorism preparedness. These goals should delineate the essential capabilities that every jurisdiction in the United States should possess or to which it should have access.

(9) A national determination of essential capabilities is needed to identify levels of State and local government terrorism preparedness, to determine the nature and extent of State and local first responder needs, to identify the human and financial resources required to fulfill them, to direct funding to meet those needs, and to measure preparedness levels on a national scale.

(10) To facilitate progress in achieving, maintaining, and enhancing essential capabilities for State and local first responders, the Department of Homeland Security should seek to allocate homeland security funding for first responders to meet nationwide needs.

(11) Private sector resources and citizen volunteers can perform critical functions in assisting in preventing and responding to terrorist attacks, and should be integrated into State and local planning efforts to ensure that their capabilities and roles are understood, so as to provide enhanced State and local operational capability and surge capacity.

(12) Public-private partnerships, such as the partnerships between the Business Executives for National Security and the States of New Jersey and Georgia, can be useful to identify and coordinate private sector support for State and local first responders. Such models should be expanded to cover all States and territories.

(13) An important aspect of terrorism preparedness is measurability, so that it is possible to determine how prepared a State or local government is now, and what additional steps it needs to take, in order to prevent, prepare for, respond to, mitigate against, and recover from acts of terrorism.

(14) The Department of Homeland Security should establish, publish, and regularly update national voluntary consensus standards for both equipment and training, in cooperation with both public and private sector standard setting organizations, to assist State and local governments in obtaining the equipment and training to attain the essential capabilities for first response to acts of terrorism, and to ensure that first responder funds are spent wisely.

SEC. 1113. FASTER AND SMARTER FUNDING FOR FIRST RESPONDERS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Homeland Security Act of 2002 (Public Law 107-296; 6 U.S.C. 361 et seq.) is amended—

(1) in section 1(b) in the table of contents by adding at the end the following:

“TITLE XVIII—FUNDING FOR FIRST RESPONDERS

“Sec. 1801. Definitions.

“Sec. 1802. Faster and Smarter Funding for First Responders.

“(iii) is located within or contiguous to one of the 50 largest metropolitan statistical areas in the United States; or “(iv) has more than 1,000 square miles of Indian country, as that term is defined in section 1151 of title 18, United States Code.

“(4) ELEVATIONS IN THE THREAT ALERT LEVEL.—The term ‘elevations in the threat alert level’ means any designation (including those that are less than national in scope) that raises the homeland security threat level to either the highest or second highest threat level under the Homeland Security Advisory System referred to in section 201(d)(7).

“(5) EMERGENCY PREPAREDNESS.—The term ‘emergency preparedness’ shall have the same meaning that term has under section 602 of the Robert T. Stafford Disaster Relief and Emergency Assistance Act (42 U.S.C. 5195a).

“(6) ESSENTIAL CAPABILITIES.—The term ‘essential capabilities’ means the levels, availability, and competence of emergency personnel, planning, training, and equipment across a variety of disciplines needed to effectively and efficiently prevent, prepare for, respond to, and recover from acts of terrorism consistent with established practices.

“(7) FIRST RESPONDER.—The term ‘first responder’ shall have the same meaning as the term ‘emergency response provider’.

“(8) INDIAN TRIBE.—The term ‘Indian tribe’ means any Indian tribe, band, nation, or other organized group or community, including any Alaskan Native village or regional or village corporation as defined in or established pursuant to the Alaskan Native Claims Settlement Act (43 U.S.C. 1601 et seq.), which is recognized as eligible for the special programs and services provided by the United States to Indians because of their status as Indians.

“(9) REGION.—The term ‘region’ means—

“(A) any geographic area consisting of all or parts of 2 or more contiguous States, counties, municipalities, or other local governments that have a combined population of at least 1,650,000 or have an area of not less than 20,000 square miles, and that, for purposes of an application for a covered grant, is represented by 1 or more governments or governmental agencies within such geographic area, and that is established by law or by agreement of 2 or more such governments or governmental agencies in a mutual aid agreement; or

“(B) any other combination of contiguous local government units (including such a combination established by law or agreement of two or more governments or governmental agencies in a mutual aid agreement) that is formally certified by the Secretary as a region for purposes of this title with the consent of—

“(i) the State or States in which they are located, including a multi-State entity established by a compact between two or more States; and “(ii) the incorporated municipalities, counties, and parishes that they encompass.

“(10) TASK FORCE.—The term ‘Task Force’ means the Task Force on Terrorism Preparedness for First Responders established under section 1805.

“(11) TERRORISM PREPAREDNESS.—The term ‘terrorism preparedness’ means any activity designed to improve the ability to prevent, prepare for, respond to, mitigate against, or recover from threatened or actual terrorist attacks.

“SEC. 1802. FASTER AND SMARTER FUNDING FOR FIRST RESPONDERS.

“(a) COVERED GRANTS.—This title applies to grants provided by the Department to States, regions, or directly eligible tribes for the primary purpose of improving the ability of first responders to prevent, prepare for, respond to, mitigate against, or recover from threatened or actual terrorist attacks, especially those involving weapons of mass destruction, administered under the following:

“(1) STATE HOMELAND SECURITY GRANT PROGRAM.—The State Homeland Security Grant Program of the Department, or any successor to such grant program.

“(2) URBAN AREA SECURITY INITIATIVE.—The Urban Area Security Initiative of the Department, or any successor to such grant program.

“(3) LAW ENFORCEMENT TERRORISM PREVENTION PROGRAM.—The Law Enforcement Terrorism Prevention Program of the Department, or any successor to such grant program.

“(b) EXCLUDED PROGRAMS.—This title does not apply to or otherwise affect the following Federal grant programs or any grant under such a program:

“(1) NONDEPARTMENT PROGRAMS.—Any Federal grant program that is not administered by the Department.

“(2) FIRE GRANT PROGRAMS.—The fire grant programs authorized by sections 33 and 34 of the Federal Fire Prevention and Control Act of 1974 (15 U.S.C. 2229, 2229a).

“(3) EMERGENCY MANAGEMENT PLANNING AND ASSISTANCE ACCOUNT GRANTS.—The Emergency Management Performance Grant program and the Urban Search and Rescue Grants program authorized by title VI of the Robert T. Stafford Disaster Relief and Emergency Assistance Act (42 U.S.C. 5195 et seq.); the Departments of Veterans Affairs and Housing and Urban Development, and Independent Agencies Appropriations Act, 2000 (113 Stat. 1047 et seq.); and the Earthquake Hazards Reduction Act of 1977 (42 U.S.C. 7701 et seq.).

“SEC. 1803. COVERED GRANT ELIGIBILITY AND CRITERIA.

“(a) GRANT ELIGIBILITY.—Any State, region, or directly eligible tribe shall be eligible to apply for a covered grant.

“(b) GRANT CRITERIA.—The Secretary shall award covered grants to assist States and local governments in achieving, maintaining, and enhancing the essential capabilities for terrorism preparedness established by the Secretary.

“(c) STATE HOMELAND SECURITY PLANS.—

“(1) SUBMISSION OF PLANS.—The Secretary shall require that any State applying to the Secretary for a covered grant must submit to the Secretary a 3-year State homeland security plan that—

“(A) describes the essential capabilities that communities within the State should possess, or to which they should have access, based upon the terrorism risk factors relevant to such communities, in order to meet the Department’s goals for terrorism preparedness;

“(B) demonstrates the extent to which the State has achieved the essential capabilities that apply to the State;

“(C) demonstrates the needs of the State necessary to achieve, maintain, or enhance the essential capabilities that apply to the State;

“(D) includes a prioritization of such needs based on threat, vulnerability, and consequence assessment factors applicable to the State;

“(E) describes how the State intends—

“(i) to address such needs at the city, county, regional, tribal, State, and interstate level, including a precise description of any regional structure the State has established for the purpose of organizing homeland security preparedness activities funded by covered grants;

“(ii) to use all Federal, State, and local resources available for the purpose of addressing such needs; and

“(iii) to give particular emphasis to regional planning and cooperation, including the activities of multijurisdictional planning agencies governed by local officials, both within its jurisdictional borders and with neighboring States;

“(F) with respect to the emergency preparedness of first responders, addresses the unique aspects of terrorism as part of a comprehensive State emergency management plan; and “(G) provides for coordination of response and recovery efforts at the local level, including procedures for effective incident command in conformance with the National Incident Management System.

“(2) CONSULTATION.—The State plan submitted under paragraph (1) shall be developed in consultation with and subject to appropriate comment by local governments and first responders within the State.

“(3) APPROVAL BY SECRETARY.—The Secretary may not award any covered grant to a State unless the Secretary has approved the applicable State homeland security plan.

“(4) REVISIONS.—A State may revise the applicable State homeland security plan approved by the Secretary under this subsection, subject to approval of the revision by the Secretary.

“(d) CONSISTENCY WITH STATE PLANS.—The Secretary shall ensure that each covered grant is used to supplement and support, in a consistent and coordinated manner, the applicable State homeland security plan or plans.

“(e) APPLICATION FOR GRANT.—

“(1) IN GENERAL.—Except as otherwise provided in this subsection, any State, region, or directly eligible tribe may apply for a covered grant by submitting to the Secretary an application at such time, in such manner, and containing such information as is required under this subsection, or as the Secretary may reasonably require.

“(2) DEADLINES FOR APPLICATIONS AND AWARDS.—All applications for covered grants must be submitted at such time as the Secretary may reasonably require for the fiscal year for which they are submitted. The Secretary shall award covered grants pursuant to all approved applications for such fiscal year as soon as practicable, but not later than March 1 of such year.

“(3) AVAILABILITY OF FUNDS.—All funds awarded by the Secretary under covered grants in a fiscal year shall be available for obligation through the end of the subsequent fiscal year.

“(4) MINIMUM CONTENTS OF APPLICATION.—The Secretary shall require that each applicant include in its application, at a minimum—

“(A) the purpose for which the applicant seeks covered grant funds and the reasons why the applicant needs the covered grant to meet the essential capabilities for terrorism preparedness within the State, region, or directly eligible tribe to which the application pertains;

“(B) a description of how, by reference to the applicable State homeland security plan or plans under subsection (c), the allocation of grant funding proposed in the application, including, where applicable, the amount not passed through under section 1806(g)(1), would assist in fulfilling the essential capabilities for terrorism preparedness specified in such plan or plans;

“(C) a statement of whether a mutual aid agreement applies to the use of all or any portion of the covered grant funds;

“(D) if the applicant is a State, a description of how the State plans to allocate the covered grant funds to regions, local governments, and Indian tribes;

“(E) if the applicant is a region—

“(i) a precise geographical description of the region and a specification of all participating and nonparticipating local governments within the geographical area comprising that region;

“(ii) a specification of what governmental entity within the region will administer the expenditure of funds under the covered grant; and

“(iii) a designation of a specific individual to serve as regional liaison;

“(F) a capital budget showing how the applicant intends to allocate and expend the covered grant funds;

“(G) if the applicant is a directly eligible tribe, a designation of a specific individual to serve as the tribal liaison; and “(H) a statement of how the applicant intends to meet the matching requirement, if any, that applies under section 1806(g)(2).

“(5) REGIONAL APPLICATIONS.—

“(A) RELATIONSHIP TO STATE APPLICATIONS.—A regional application—

“(i) shall be coordinated with an application submitted by the State or States of which such region is a part;

“(ii) shall supplement and avoid duplication with such State application; and “(iii) shall address the unique regional aspects of such region's terrorism preparedness needs beyond those provided for in the application of such State or States.

“(B) STATE REVIEW AND SUBMISSION.—To ensure the consistency required under subsection (d) and the coordination required under subparagraph (A) of this paragraph, an applicant that is a region must submit its application to each State of which any part is included in the region for review and concurrence prior to the submission of such application to the Secretary. The regional application shall be transmitted to the Secretary through each such State within 30 days of its receipt, unless the Governor of such a State notifies the Secretary, in writing, that such regional application is inconsistent with the State's homeland security plan and provides an explanation of the reasons therefor.

“(C) DISTRIBUTION OF REGIONAL AWARDS.—If the Secretary approves a regional application, then the Secretary shall distribute a regional award to the State or States submitting the applicable regional application under subparagraph (B), and each such State shall, not later than the end of the 45-day period beginning on the date after receiving a regional award, pass through to the region all covered grant funds or resources purchased with such funds, except those funds necessary for the State to carry out its responsibilities with respect to such regional application. However in no such case shall the State or States pass through to the region less than 80 percent of the regional award.

“(D) CERTIFICATIONS REGARDING DISTRIBUTION OF GRANT FUNDS TO REGIONS.—Any State that receives a regional award under subparagraph (C) shall certify to the Secretary, by not later than 30 days after the expiration of the period described in subparagraph (C) with respect to the grant, that the State has made available to the region the required funds and resources in accordance with subparagraph (C).

“(E) DIRECT PAYMENTS TO REGIONS.—If any State fails to pass through a regional award to a region as required by subparagraph (C) within 45 days after receiving such award and does not request or receive an extension of such period under section 1806(h)(2), the region may petition the Secretary to receive directly the portion of the regional award that is required to be passed through to such region under subparagraph (C).

“(F) REGIONAL LIAISONS.—A regional liaison designated under paragraph (4)(E)(iii) shall—

“(i) coordinate with Federal, State, local, regional, and private officials within the region concerning terrorism preparedness;

“(ii) develop a process for receiving input from Federal, State, local, regional, and private sector officials within the region to assist in the development of the regional application and to improve the region's access to covered grants; and “(iii) administer, in consultation with State, local, regional, and private officials within the region, covered grants awarded to the region.

“(6) TRIBAL APPLICATIONS.—

“(A) SUBMISSION TO THE STATE OR STATES.—To ensure the consistency required under subsection (d), an applicant that is a directly eligible tribe must submit its application to each State within the boundaries of which any part of such tribe is located for direct submission to the Department along with the application of such State or States.

“(B) OPPORTUNITY FOR STATE COMMENT.—Before awarding any covered grant to a directly eligible tribe, the Secretary shall provide an opportunity to each State within the boundaries of which any part of such tribe is located to comment to the Secretary on the consistency of the tribe's application with the State's homeland security plan. Any such comments shall be submitted to the Secretary concurrently with the submission of the State and tribal applications.

“(C) FINAL AUTHORITY.—The Secretary shall have final authority to determine the consistency of any application of a directly eligible tribe with the applicable State homeland security plan or plans, and to approve any application of such tribe. The Secretary shall notify each State within the boundaries of which any part of such tribe is located of the approval of an application by such tribe.

“(D) TRIBAL LIAISON.—A tribal liaison designated under paragraph (4)(G) shall—

“(i) coordinate with Federal, State, local, regional, and private officials concerning terrorism preparedness;

“(ii) develop a process for receiving input from Federal, State, local, regional, and private sector officials to assist in the development of the application of such tribe and to improve the tribe's access to covered grants; and “(iii) administer, in consultation with State, local, regional, and private officials, covered grants awarded to such tribe.

“(E) LIMITATION ON THE NUMBER OF DIRECT GRANTS.—The Secretary may make covered grants directly to not more than 20 directly eligible tribes per fiscal year.

“(F) TRIBES NOT RECEIVING DIRECT GRANTS.—An Indian tribe that does not receive a grant directly under this section is eligible to receive funds under a covered grant from the State or States within the boundaries of which any part of such tribe is located, consistent with the homeland security plan of the State as described in subsection (c). If a State fails to comply with section 1806(g)(1), the tribe may request payment under section 1806(h)(3) in the same manner as a local government.

“(7) EQUIPMENT STANDARDS.—If an applicant for a covered grant proposes to upgrade or purchase, with assistance provided under the grant, new equipment or systems that do not meet or exceed any applicable national voluntary consensus standards established by the Secretary, the applicant shall include in the application an explanation of why such equipment or systems will serve the needs of the applicant better than equipment or systems that meet or exceed such standards.

“SEC. 1804. RISK-BASED EVALUATION AND PRIORITIZATION.

“(a) FIRST RESPONDER GRANTS BOARD.—

“(1) ESTABLISHMENT OF BOARD.—The Secretary shall establish a First Responder Grants Board, consisting of—

“(A) the Secretary;

“(B) the Under Secretary for Emergency Preparedness and Response;

“(C) the Under Secretary for Border and Transportation Security;

“(D) the Under Secretary for Information Analysis and Infrastructure Protection;

“(E) the Under Secretary for Science and Technology;

“(F) the Director of the Office for Domestic Preparedness;

“(G) the Administrator of the United States Fire Administration; and “(H) the Administrator of the Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service.

“(2) CHAIRMAN.—

“(A) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall be the Chairman of the Board.

“(B) EXERCISE OF AUTHORITIES BY DEPUTY SECRETARY.—The Deputy Secretary of Homeland Security may exercise the authorities of the Chairman, if the Secretary so directs.

“(b) FUNCTIONS OF UNDER SECRETARIES.—The Under Secretaries referred to in subsection (a)(1) shall seek to ensure that the relevant expertise and input of the staff of their directorates are available to and considered by the Board.

“(c) PRIORITIZATION OF GRANT APPLICATIONS.—

“(1) FACTORS TO BE CONSIDERED.—The Board shall evaluate and annually prioritize all pending applications for covered grants based upon the degree to which they would, by achieving, maintaining, or enhancing the essential capabilities of the applicants on a nationwide basis, lessen the threat to, vulnerability of, and consequences for persons (including transient commuting and tourist populations) and critical infrastructure. Such evaluation and prioritization shall be based upon the most current risk assessment available by the Directorate for Information Analysis and Infrastructure Protection of the threats of terrorism against the United States. The Board shall coordinate with State, local, regional, and tribal officials in establishing criteria for evaluating and prioritizing applications for covered grants.

“(2) CRITICAL INFRASTRUCTURE SECTORS.—The Board specifically shall consider threats of terrorism against the following critical infrastructure sectors in all areas of the United States, urban and rural:

“(A) Agriculture and food.

“(B) Banking and finance.

“(C) Chemical industries.

“(D) The defense industrial base.

“(E) Emergency services.

“(F) Energy.

“(G) Government facilities.

“(H) Postal and shipping.

“(I) Public health and health care.

“(J) Information technology.

“(K) Telecommunications.

“(L) Transportation systems.

“(M) Water.

“(N) Dams.

“(O) Commercial facilities.

“(P) National monuments and icons.

The order in which the critical infrastructure sectors are listed in this paragraph shall not be construed as an order of priority for consideration of the importance of such sectors.

“(3) TYPES OF THREAT.—The Board specifically shall consider the following types of threat to the critical infrastructure sectors described in paragraph (2), and to populations in all areas of the United States, urban and rural:

“(A) Biological threats.

“(B) Nuclear threats.

“(C) Radiological threats.

“(D) Incendiary threats.

“(E) Chemical threats.

“(F) Explosives.

“(G) Suicide bombers.

“(H) Cyber threats.

“(I) Any other threats based on proximity to specific past acts of terrorism or the known activity of any terrorist group.

The order in which the types of threat are listed in this paragraph shall not be construed as an order of priority for consideration of the importance of such threats.

“(4) CONSIDERATION OF ADDITIONAL FACTORS.—The Board shall take into account any other specific threat to a population (including a transient commuting or tourist population) or critical infrastructure sector that the Board has determined to exist. In evaluating the threat to a population or critical infrastructure sector, the Board shall give greater weight to threats of terrorism based upon their specificity and credibility, including any pattern of repetition.

“(5) MINIMUM AMOUNTS.—After evaluating and prioritizing grant applications under paragraph (1), the Board shall ensure that, for each fiscal year—

“(A) each of the States, other than the Virgin Islands, American Samoa, Guam, and the Northern Mariana Islands, that has an approved State homeland security plan receives no less than 0.25 percent of the funds available for covered grants for that fiscal year for purposes of implementing its homeland security plan in accordance with the prioritization of needs under section 1803(c)(1)(D);

“(B) each of the States, other than the Virgin Islands, American Samoa, Guam, and the Northern Mariana Islands, that has an approved State homeland security plan and that meets one or both of the additional high-risk qualifying criteria under paragraph (6) receives no less than 0.45 percent of the funds available for covered grants for that fiscal year for purposes of implementing its homeland security plan in accordance with the prioritization of needs under section 1803(c)(1)(D);

“(C) the Virgin Islands, American Samoa, Guam, and the Northern Mariana Islands each receives no less than 0.08 percent of the funds available for covered grants for that fiscal year for purposes of implementing its approved State homeland security plan in accordance with the prioritization of needs under section 1803(c)(1)(D); and “(D) directly eligible tribes collectively receive no less than 0.08 percent of the funds available for covered grants for such fiscal year for purposes of addressing the needs identified in the applications of such tribes, consistent with the homeland security plan of each State within the boundaries of which any part of any such tribe is located, except that this clause shall not apply with respect to funds available for a fiscal year if the Secretary receives less than 5 applications for such fiscal year from such tribes under section 1803(e)(6)(A) or does not approve at least one such application.

“(6) ADDITIONAL HIGH-RISK QUALIFYING CRITERIA.—For purposes of paragraph (5)(B), additional high-risk qualifying criteria consist of—

“(A) having a significant international land border; or “(B) adjoining a body of water within North America through which an international boundary line extends.

“(d) EFFECT OF REGIONAL AWARDS ON STATE MINIMUM.—Any regional award, or portion thereof, provided to a State under section 1803(e)(5)(C) shall not be considered in calculating the minimum State award under subsection (c)(5) of this section.

“SEC. 1805. TASK FORCE ON TERRORISM PREPAREDNESS FOR FIRST RESPONDERS.

“(a) ESTABLISHMENT.—To assist the Secretary in updating, revising, or replacing essential capabilities for terrorism preparedness, the Secretary shall establish an advisory body pursuant to section 871(a) not later than 60 days after the date of the enactment of this section, which shall be known as the Task Force on Terrorism Preparedness for First Responders.

“(b) UPDATE, REVISE, OR REPLACE.—The Secretary shall regularly update, revise, or replace the essential capabilities for terrorism preparedness as necessary, but not less than every 3 years.

“(c) REPORT.—

“(1) IN GENERAL.—The Task Force shall submit to the Secretary, by not later than 12 months after its establishment by the Secretary under subsection (a) and not later than every 2 years thereafter, a report on its recommendations for essential capabilities for terrorism preparedness.

“(2) CONTENTS.—Each report shall—

“(A) include a priority ranking of essential capabilities in order to provide guidance to the Secretary and to the Congress on determining the appropriate allocation of, and funding levels for, first responder needs;

“(B) set forth a methodology by which any State or local government will be able to determine the extent to which it possesses or has access to the essential capabilities that States and local governments having similar risks should obtain;

“(C) describe the availability of national voluntary consensus standards, and whether there is a need for new national voluntary consensus standards, with respect to first responder training and equipment;

“(D) include such additional matters as the Secretary may specify in order to further the terrorism preparedness capabilities of first responders; and

“(E) include such revisions to the contents of previous reports as are necessary to take into account changes in the most current risk assessment available by the Directorate for Information Analysis and Infrastructure Protection or other relevant information as determined by the Secretary.

“(3) CONSISTENCY WITH FEDERAL WORKING GROUP.—The Task Force shall ensure that its recommendations for essential capabilities for terrorism preparedness are, to the extent feasible, consistent with any preparedness goals or recommendations of the Federal working group established under section 319F(a) of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 247d–096(a)).

“(4) COMPREHENSIVENESS.—The Task Force shall ensure that its recommendations regarding essential capabilities for terrorism preparedness are made within the context of a comprehensive State emergency management system.

“(5) PRIOR MEASURES.—The Task Force shall ensure that its recommendations regarding essential capabilities for terrorism preparedness take into account any capabilities that State or local officials have determined to be essential and have undertaken since September 11, 2001, to prevent, prepare for, respond to, or recover from terrorist attacks.

“(d) MEMBERSHIP.—

“(1) IN GENERAL.—The Task Force shall consist of 25 members appointed by the Secretary, and shall, to the extent practicable, represent a geographic (including urban and rural) and substantive cross section of governmental and nongovernmental first responder disciplines from the State and local levels, including as appropriate—

“(A) members selected from the emergency response field, including fire service and law enforcement, hazardous materials response, emergency medical services, and emergency management personnel (including public works personnel routinely engaged in emergency response);

“(B) health scientists, emergency and inpatient medical providers, and public health professionals, including experts in emergency health care response to chemical, biological, radiological, and nuclear terrorism, and experts in providing mental health care during emergency response operations;

“(C) experts from Federal, State, and local governments, and the private sector, representing standards-setting organizations, including representation from the voluntary consensus codes and standards development community, particularly those with expertise in first responder disciplines; and

“(D) State and local officials with expertise in terrorism preparedness, subject to the condition that if any such official is an elected official representing one of the two major political parties, an equal number of elected officials shall be selected from each such party.

“(2) COORDINATION WITH THE DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH AND HEALTH SERVICES.—In the selection of members of the Task Force who are health professionals, including emergency medical professionals, the Secretary shall coordinate such selection with the Secretary of Health and Human Services.

“(3) EX OFFICIO MEMBERS.—The Secretary and the Secretary of Health and Human Services shall each designate one or more officers of their respective Departments to serve as ex officio members of the Task Force. One of the ex officio members from the Department of Homeland Security shall be the designated officer of the Federal Government for purposes of subsection (e) of section 10 of the Federal Advisory Committee Act (5 App. U.S.C.).

“(e) APPLICABILITY OF FEDERAL ADVISORY COMMITTEE ACT.—Notwithstanding section 871(a), the Federal Advisory Committee Act (5 App. U.S.C.), including subsections (a), (b), and (d) of section 10 of such Act, and section 552b(c) of title 5, United States Code, shall apply to the Task Force.

“SEC. 1806. USE OF FUNDS AND ACCOUNTABILITY REQUIREMENTS.

“(a) IN GENERAL.—A covered grant may be used for—

“(1) purchasing or upgrading equipment, including computer software, to enhance terrorism preparedness;

“(2) exercises to strengthen terrorism preparedness;

“(3) training for prevention (including detection) of, preparedness for, response to, or recovery from attacks involving weapons of mass destruction, including training in the use of equipment and computer software;

“(4) developing or updating State homeland security plans, risk assessments, mutual aid agreements, and emergency management plans to enhance terrorism preparedness;

“(5) establishing or enhancing mechanisms for sharing terrorism threat information;

“(6) systems architecture and engineering, program planning and management, strategy formulation and strategic planning, life-cycle systems design, product and technology evaluation, and prototype development for terrorism preparedness purposes;

“(7) additional personnel costs resulting from—

“(A) elevations in the threat alert level of the Homeland Security Advisory System by the Secretary, or a similar elevation in threat alert level issued by a State, region, or local government with the approval of the Secretary;

“(B) travel to and participation in exercises and training in the use of equipment and on prevention activities; and

“(C) the temporary replacement of personnel during any period of travel to and participation in exercises and training in the use of equipment and on prevention activities;

“(8) the costs of equipment (including software) required to receive, transmit, handle, and store classified information;

“(9) protecting critical infrastructure against potential attack by the addition of barriers, fences, gates, and other such devices, except that the cost of such measures may not exceed the greater of—

“(A) $1,000,000 per project; or

“(B) such greater amount as may be approved by the Secretary, which may not exceed 10 percent of the total amount of the covered grant;

“(10) the costs of commercially available interoperable communications equipment (which, where applicable, is based on national, voluntary consensus standards) that the Secretary, in consultation with the Chairman of the Federal Communications Commission, deems best suited to facilitate interoperability, coordination, and integration between and among emergency communications systems, and that complies with prevailing grant guidance of the Department for interoperable communications;

“(11) educational curricula development for first responders to ensure that they are prepared for terrorist attacks;

“(12) training and exercises to assist public elementary and secondary schools in developing and implementing programs to instruct students regarding age-appropriate skills to prevent, prepare for, respond to, mitigate against, or recover from an act of terrorism;

“(13) paying of administrative expenses directly related to administration of the grant, except that such expenses may not exceed 3 percent of the amount of the grant;

“(14) paying for the conduct of any activity permitted under the Law Enforcement Terrorism Prevention Program, or any such successor to such program; and “(15) other appropriate activities as determined by the Secretary.

“(b) PROHIBITED USES.—Funds provided as a covered grant may not be used—

“(1) to supplant State or local funds;

“(2) to construct buildings or other physical facilities;

“(3) to acquire land; or

“(4) for any State or local government cost sharing contribution.

“(c) MULTIPLE-PURPOSE FUNDS.—Nothing in this section shall be construed to preclude State and local governments from using covered grant funds in a manner that also enhances first responder preparedness for emergencies and disasters unrelated to acts of terrorism, if such use assists such governments in achieving essential capabilities for terrorism preparedness established by the Secretary.

“(d) REIMBURSEMENT OF COSTS.—(1) In addition to the activities described in subsection (a), a covered grant may be used to provide a reasonable stipend to paid-on-call or volunteer first responders who are not otherwise compensated for travel to or participation in training covered by this section. Any such reimbursement shall not be considered compensation for purposes of rendering such a first responder an employee under the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938 (29 U.S.C. 201 et seq.).

“(2) An applicant for a covered grant may petition the Secretary for the reimbursement of the cost of any activity relating to prevention (including detection) of, preparedness for, response to, or recovery from acts of terrorism that is a Federal duty and usually performed by a Federal agency, and that is being performed by a State or local government (or both) under agreement with a Federal agency.

“(e) ASSISTANCE REQUIREMENT.—The Secretary may not require that equipment paid for, wholly or in part, with funds provided as a covered grant be made available for responding to emergencies in surrounding States, regions, and localities, unless the Secretary undertakes to pay the costs directly attributable to transporting and operating such equipment during such response.

“(f) FLEXIBILITY IN UNSPENT HOMELAND SECURITY GRANT FUNDS.—Upon request by the recipient of a covered grant, the Secretary may authorize the grantee to transfer all or part of funds provided as the covered grant from uses specified in the grant agreement to other uses authorized under this section, if the Secretary determines that such transfer is in the interests of homeland security.

“(g) STATE, REGIONAL, AND TRIBAL RESPONSIBILITIES.—

“(1) PASS-THROUGH.—The Secretary shall require a recipient of a covered grant that is a State to obligate or otherwise make available to local governments, first responders, and other local groups, to the extent required under the State homeland security plan or plans specified in the application for the grant, not less than 80 percent of the grant funds, resources purchased with the grant funds having a value equal to at least 80 percent of the amount of the grant, or a combination thereof, by not later than the end of the 45-day period beginning on the date the grant recipient receives the grant funds.

“(2) COST SHARING.—

“(A) IN GENERAL.—The Federal share of the costs of an activity carried out with a covered grant to a State, region, or directly eligible tribe awarded after the 2-year period beginning on the date of the enactment of this section shall not exceed 75 percent.

“(B) INTERIM RULE.—The Federal share of the costs of an activity carried out with a covered grant awarded before the end of the 2-year period beginning on the date of the enactment of this section shall be 100 percent.

“(C) IN-KIND MATCHING.—Each recipient of a covered grant may meet the matching requirement under subparagraph (A) by making in-kind contributions of goods or services that are directly linked with the purpose for which the grant is made, including, but not limited to, any necessary personnel overtime, contractor services, administrative costs, equipment fuel and maintenance, and rental space.

“(3) CERTIFICATIONS REGARDING DISTRIBUTION OF GRANT FUNDS TO LOCAL GOVERNMENTS.—Any State that receives a covered grant shall certify to the Secretary, by not later than 30 days after the expiration of the period described in paragraph (1) with respect to the grant, that the State has made available for expenditure by local governments, first responders, and other local groups the required amount of grant funds pursuant to paragraph (1).

“(4) QUARTERLY REPORT ON HOMELAND SECURITY SPENDING.—The Federal share described in paragraph (2)(A) may be increased by up to 2 percent for any State, region, or directly eligible tribe that, not later than 30 days after the end of each fiscal quarter, submits to the Secretary a report on that fiscal quarter. Each such report must include, for each recipient of a covered grant or a pass-through under paragraph (1)—

“(A) the amount obligated to that recipient in that quarter;

“(B) the amount expended by that recipient in that quarter; and

“(C) a summary description of the items purchased by such recipient with such amount.

“(5) ANNUAL REPORT ON HOMELAND SECURITY SPENDING.—Each recipient of a covered grant shall submit an annual report to the Secretary not later than 60 days after the end of each Federal fiscal year. Each recipient of a covered grant that is a region must simultaneously submit its report to each State of which any part is included in the region. Each recipient of a covered grant that is a directly eligible tribe must simultaneously submit its report to each State within the boundaries of which any part of such tribe is located. Each report must include the following:

“(A) The amount, ultimate recipients, and dates of receipt of all funds received under the grant during the previous fiscal year.

“(B) The amount and the dates of disbursements of all such funds expended in compliance with paragraph (1) or pursuant to mutual aid agreements or other sharing arrangements that apply within the State, region, or directly eligible tribe, as applicable, during the previous fiscal year.

“(C) How the funds were utilized by each ultimate recipient or beneficiary during the preceding fiscal year.

“(D) The extent to which essential capabilities identified in the applicable State homeland security plan or plans were achieved, maintained, or enhanced as the result of the expenditure of grant funds during the preceding fiscal year.

“(E) The extent to which essential capabilities identified in the applicable State homeland security plan or plans remain unmet.

“(6) INCLUSION OF RESTRICTED ANNEXES.—A recipient of a covered grant may submit to the Secretary an annex to the annual report under paragraph (5) that is subject to appropriate handling restrictions, if the recipient believes that discussion in the report of unmet needs would reveal sensitive but unclassified information.

“(7) PROVISION OF REPORTS.—The Secretary shall ensure that each annual report under paragraph (5) is provided to the Under Secretary for Emergency Preparedness and Response and the Director of the Office for Domestic Preparedness.

“(h) INCENTIVES TO EFFICIENT ADMINISTRATION OF HOMELAND SECURITY GRANTS.—

“(1) PENALTIES FOR DELAY IN PASSING THROUGH LOCAL SHARE.—If a recipient of a covered grant that is a State fails to pass through to local governments, first responders, and other local groups funds or resources required by subsection (g)(1) within 45 days after receiving funds under the grant, the Secretary may—

“(A) reduce grant payments to the grant recipient from the portion of grant funds that is not required to be passed through under subsection (g)(1);

“(B) terminate payment of funds under the grant to the recipient, and transfer the appropriate portion of those funds directly to local first responders that were intended to receive funding under that grant; or

“(C) impose additional restrictions or burdens on the recipient’s use of funds under the grant, which may include—

“(i) prohibiting use of such funds to pay the grant recipient’s grant-related overtime or other expenses;

“(ii) requiring the grant recipient to distribute to local government beneficiaries all or a portion of grant funds that are not required to be passed through under subsection (g)(1); or

“(iii) for each day that the grant recipient fails to pass through funds or resources in accordance with subsection (g)(1), reducing grant payments to the grant recipient from the portion of grant funds that is not required to be passed through under subsection (g)(1), except that the total amount of such reduction may not exceed 20 percent of the total amount of the grant.

“(2) EXTENSION OF PERIOD.—The Governor of a State may request in writing that the Secretary extend the 45-day period under section 1803(e)(5)(E) or paragraph (1) for an additional 15-day period. The Secretary may approve such a request, and may extend such period for additional 15-day periods, if the Secretary determines that the resulting delay in providing grant funding to the local government entities that will receive funding under the grant will not have a significant detrimental impact on such entities’ terrorism preparedness efforts.

“(3) PROVISION OF NON-LOCAL SHARE TO LOCAL GOVERNMENT.—

“(A) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary may upon request by a local government pay to the local government a portion of the amount of a covered grant awarded to a State in which the local government is located, if—

“(i) the local government will use the amount paid to expedite planned enhancements to its terrorism preparedness as described in any applicable State homeland security plan or plans;

“(ii) the State has failed to pass through funds or resources in accordance with subsection (g)(1); and “(iii) the local government complies with subparagraphs (B) and (C).

“(B) SHOWING REQUIRED.—To receive a payment under this paragraph, a local government must demonstrate that—“(i) it is identified explicitly as an ultimate recipient or intended beneficiary in the approved grant application;

“(ii) it was intended by the grantee to receive a severable portion of the overall grant for a specific purpose that is identified in the grant application;

“(iii) it petitioned the grantee for the funds or resources after expiration of the period within which the funds or resources were required to be passed through under subsection (g)(1); and “(iv) it did not receive the portion of the overall grant that was earmarked or designated for its use or benefit.

“(C) EFFECT OF PAYMENT.—Payment of grant funds to a local government under this paragraph—

“(i) shall not affect any payment to another local government under this paragraph; and “(ii) shall not prejudice consideration of a request for payment under this paragraph that is submitted by another local government.

“(D) DEADLINE FOR ACTION BY SECRETARY.—The Secretary shall approve or disapprove each request for payment under this paragraph by not later than 15 days after the date the request is received by the Department.

“(i) REPORTS TO CONGRESS.—The Secretary shall submit an annual report to the Congress by January 31 of each year covering the preceding fiscal year—

“(1) describing in detail the amount of Federal funds provided as covered grants that were directed to each State, region, and directly eligible tribe in the preceding fiscal year;

“(2) containing information on the use of such grant funds by grantees; and

“(3) describing—

“(A) the Nation’s progress in achieving, maintaining, and enhancing the essential capabilities established by the Secretary as a result of the expenditure of covered grant funds during the preceding fiscal year; and “(B) an estimate of the amount of expenditures required to attain across the United States the essential capabilities established by the Secretary.

“SEC. 1807. NATIONAL STANDARDS FOR FIRST RESPONDER EQUIPMENT AND TRAINING.

“(a) EQUIPMENT STANDARDS.—

“(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary, in consultation with the Under Secretaries for Emergency Preparedness and Response and Science and Technology and the Director of the Office for Domestic Preparedness, shall, not later than 6 months after the date of the enactment of this section, support the development of, promulgate, and update as necessary national voluntary consensus standards for the performance, use, and validation of first responder equipment for purposes of section 1805(e)(7). Such standards—

“(A) shall be, to the maximum extent practicable, consistent with any existing voluntary consensus standards;

“(B) shall take into account, as appropriate, new types of terrorism threats that may not have been contemplated when such existing standards were developed;

“(C) shall be focused on maximizing interoperability, interchangeability, durability, flexibility, efficiency, efficacy, portability, sustainability, and safety; and “(D) shall cover all appropriate uses of the equipment.

“(2) REQUIRED CATEGORIES.—In carrying out paragraph (1), the Secretary shall specifically consider the following categories of first responder equipment:

“(A) Thermal imaging equipment.

“(B) Radiation detection and analysis equipment.

“(C) Biological detection and analysis equipment.

“(D) Chemical detection and analysis equipment.

“(E) Decontamination and sterilization equipment.

“(F) Personal protective equipment, including garments, boots, gloves, and hoods and other protective clothing.

“(G) Respiratory protection equipment.

“(H) Interoperable communications, including wireless and wireline voice, video, and data networks.

“(I) Explosive mitigation devices and explosive detection and analysis equipment.

“(J) Containment vessels.

“(K) Contaminant-resistant vehicles.

“(L) Such other equipment for which the Secretary determines that national voluntary consensus standards would be appropriate.

“(b) TRAINING STANDARDS.—

“(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary, in consultation with the Under Secretaries for Emergency Preparedness and Response and Science and Technology and the Director of the Office for Domestic Preparedness, shall support the development of, promulgate, and regularly update as necessary national voluntary consensus standards for first responder training carried out with amounts provided under covered grant programs, that will enable State and local government first responders to achieve optimal levels of terrorism preparedness as quickly as practicable. Such standards shall give priority to providing training to—

“(A) enable first responders to prevent, prepare for, respond to, mitigate against, and recover from terrorist threats, including threats from chemical, biological, nuclear, and radiological weapons and explosive devices capable of inflicting significant human casualties; and

“(B) familiarize first responders with the proper use of equipment, including software, developed pursuant to the standards established under subsection (a).

“(2) REQUIRED CATEGORIES.—In carrying out paragraph (1), the Secretary specifically shall include the following categories of first responder activities:

“(A) Regional planning.

“(B) Joint exercises.

“(C) Intelligence collection, analysis, and sharing.

“(D) Emergency notification of affected populations.

“(E) Detection of biological, nuclear, radiological, and chemical weapons of mass destruction.

“(F) Such other activities for which the Secretary determines that national voluntary consensus training standards would be appropriate.

“(3) CONSISTENCY.—In carrying out this subsection, the Secretary shall ensure that such training standards are consistent with the principles of emergency preparedness for all hazards.

“(c) CONSULTATION WITH STANDARDS ORGANIZATIONS.—In establishing national voluntary consensus standards for first responder equipment and training under this section, the Secretary shall consult with relevant public and private sector groups, including—

“(1) the National Institute of Standards and Technology;

“(2) the National Fire Protection Association;

“(3) the National Association of County and City Health Officials;

“(4) the Association of State and Territorial Health Officials;

“(5) the American National Standards Institute;

“(6) the National Institute of Justice;

“(7) the Inter-Agency Board for Equipment Standardization and Interoperability;

“(8) the National Public Health Performance Standards Program;

“(9) the National Institute for Occupational Safety and Health;

“(10) ASTM International;

“(11) the International Safety Equipment Association;

“(12) the Emergency Management Accreditation Program; and “(13) to the extent the Secretary considers appropriate, other national voluntary consensus standards development organizations, other interested Federal, State, and local agencies, and other interested persons.

“(d) COORDINATION WITH SECRETARY OF HHS.—In establishing any national voluntary consensus standards under this section for first responder equipment or training that involve or relate to health professionals, including emergency medical professionals, the Secretary shall coordinate activities under this section with the Secretary of Health and Human Services.”.

(b) DEFINITION OF EMERGENCY RESPONSE PROVIDERS.—Paragraph (6) of section 2 of the Homeland Security Act of 2002 (Public Law 107-296; 6 U.S.C. 101(6)) is amended by striking “includes” and all that follows and inserting “includes Federal, State, and local governmental and nongovernmental emergency public safety, law enforcement, fire, emergency response, emergency medical (including hospital emergency facilities), and related personnel, organizations, agencies, and authorities.”.

SEC. 1114. SUPERSEDED PROVISION.

This chapter supersedes section 1014(c)(3) of Public Law 107-56.

SEC. 1115. OVERSIGHT.

The Secretary of Homeland Security shall establish within the Office for Domestic Preparedness an Office of the Comptroller to oversee the grants distribution process and the financial management of the Office for Domestic Preparedness.

SEC. 1116. GAO REPORT ON AN INVENTORY AND STATUS OF HOMELAND SECURITY FIRST RESPONDER TRAINING.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Comptroller General of the United States shall report to Congress in accordance with this section—

(1) on the overall inventory and status of first responder training programs of the Department of Homeland Security and other departments and agencies of the Federal Government; and

(2) the extent to which such programs are coordinated.

(b) CONTENTS OF REPORTS.—The reports under this section shall include—

(1) an assessment of the effectiveness of the structure and organization of such training programs;

(2) recommendations to—

(A) improve the coordination, structure, and organization of such training programs; and

(B) increase the availability of training to first responders who are not able to attend centralized training programs;

(3) the structure and organizational effectiveness of such programs for first responders in rural communities;

(4) identification of any duplication or redundancy among such programs;

(5) a description of the use of State and local training institutions, universities, centers, and the National Domestic Preparedness Consortium in designing and providing training;

(6) a cost-benefit analysis of the costs and time required for first responders to participate in training courses at Federal institutions;

(7) an assessment of the approval process for certifying non-Department of Homeland Security training courses that are useful for anti-terrorism purposes as eligible for grants awarded by the Department;

(8) a description of the use of Department of Homeland Security grant funds by States and local governments to acquire training;

(9) an analysis of the feasibility of Federal, State, and local personnel to receive the training that is necessary to adopt the National Response Plan and the National Incident Management System; and

(10) the role of each first responder training institution within the Department of Homeland Security in the design and implementation of terrorism preparedness and related training courses for first responders.

(c) DEADLINES.—The Comptroller General shall—

(1) submit a report under subsection (a)(1) by not later than 60 days after the date of the enactment of this Act; and

(2) submit a report on the remainder of the topics required by this section by not later than 120 days after the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 1117. REMOVAL OF CIVIL LIABILITY BARRIERS THAT DISCOURAGE THE DONATION OF FIRE EQUIPMENT TO VOLUNTEER FIRE COMPANIES.

(a) LIABILITY PROTECTION.—A person who donates fire control or fire rescue equipment to a volunteer fire company shall not be liable for civil damages under any State or Federal law for personal injuries, property damage or loss, or death caused by the equipment after the donation.

(b) EXCEPTIONS.—Subsection (a) does not apply to a person if—

(1) the person's act or omission causing the injury, damage, loss, or death constitutes gross negligence or intentional misconduct; or

(2) the person is the manufacturer of the fire control or fire rescue equipment.

(c) PREEMPTION.—This section preempts the laws of any State to the extent that such laws are inconsistent with this section, except that notwithstanding subsection (b) this section shall not preempt any State law that provides additional protection from liability for a person who donates fire control or fire rescue equipment to a volunteer fire company.

(d) DEFINITIONS.—In this section:

(1) PERSON.—The term “person” includes any governmental or other entity.

(2) FIRE CONTROL OR RESCUE EQUIPMENT.—The term “fire control or fire rescue equipment” includes any fire vehicle, fire fighting tool, communications equipment, protective gear, fire hose, or breathing apparatus.

TITLE XII—REFORMING THE INSTITUTIONS OF GOVERNMENT

Subtitle A—Intelligence Community

SEC. 1201. REPORT ON DIRECTOR OF NATIONAL INTELLIGENCE.

(a) REPORT; CERTIFICATION.—Not later than 30 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, and every 30 days thereafter, the Director of National Intelligence shall submit to the relevant congressional committees a report on the recommendations of the 9/11 Commission and the policy goals of the Intelligence Reform and Terrorism Prevention Act of 2004 (Public Law 108-458) with respect to the Director of National Intelligence. Such report shall include—

(1) a certification by the Director of National Intelligence that such recommendations have been implemented and such policy goals have been achieved; or

(2) if the Director of National Intelligence is unable to make the certification described in paragraph (1), a description of—

(A) the steps taken to implement such recommendations and achieve such policy goals;

(B) when the Director of National Intelligence expects such recommendations to be implemented and such policy goals to be achieved; and

(C) any allocation of resources or other actions by Congress the Director considers necessary to implement such recommendations and achieve such policy goals.

(b) TERMINATION OF DUTY TO REPORT.—The duty to submit a report under subsection (a) shall terminate when the Director of National Intelligence submits a certification pursuant to subsection (a)(1).

(c) GAO REVIEW OF CERTIFICATION.—If the Director of National Intelligence submits a certification pursuant to subsection (a)(1), not later than 30 days after the submission of such certification, the Comptroller General shall submit to the relevant congressional committees a report on whether the recommendations described in subsection (a) have been implemented and whether the policy goals described in subsection (a) have been achieved.

(d) GAO REPORT ON DNI EXERCISE OF AUTHORITY.—

(1) ANNUAL REPORT.—Not later than 90 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, and annually thereafter, the Comptroller General shall submit to the relevant congressional committees a report on whether—

(A) the Director of National Intelligence has been able to properly exercise the authority of the Office of the Director of National Intelligence, including budget and personnel authority; and

(B) information sharing among the intelligence community is a high priority.

(2) TERMINATION.—The duty to submit a report under paragraph (1) shall terminate when the Comptroller General certifies to the relevant congressional committees that the recommendations of the 9/11 Commission and the policy goals of the Intelligence Reform and Terrorism Prevention Act of 2004 (Public Law 108-458) with respect to the Director of National Intelligence have been achieved.

SEC. 1202. REPORT ON NATIONAL COUNTERTERRORISM CENTER.

(a) REPORT; CERTIFICATION.—Not later than 30 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, and every 30 days thereafter, the Director of National Intelligence shall submit to the relevant congressional committees a report on the recommendations of the 9/11 Commission and the policy goals of the Intelligence Reform and Terrorism Prevention Act of 2004 (Public Law 108-458) with respect to the establishment of a National Counterterrorism Center. Such report shall include—

(1) a certification by the Director of National Intelligence that such recommendations have been implemented and such policy goals have been achieved; or

(2) if the Director of National Intelligence is unable to make the certification described in paragraph (1), a description of—

(A) the steps taken to implement such recommendations and achieve such policy goals;

(B) when the Director of National Intelligence expects such recommendations to be implemented and such policy goals to be achieved; and

(C) any allocation of resources or other actions by Congress the Director considers necessary to implement such recommendations and achieve such policy goals.

(b) TERMINATION OF DUTY TO REPORT.—The duty to submit a report under subsection (a) shall terminate when the Director of National Intelligence submits a certification pursuant to subsection (a)(1).

(c) GAO REVIEW OF CERTIFICATION.—If the Director of National Intelligence submits a certification pursuant to subsection (a)(1), not later than 30 days after the submission of such certification, the Comptroller General shall submit to the relevant congressional committees a report on whether the recommendations described in subsection (a) have been implemented and whether the policy goals described in subsection (a) have been achieved.

SEC. 1203. REPORT ON CREATION OF A FEDERAL BUREAU OF INVESTIGATION NATIONAL SECURITY WORKFORCE.

(a) REPORT; CERTIFICATION.—Not later than 30 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, and every 30 days thereafter, the Director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation shall submit to the relevant congressional committees a report on the recommendations of the 9/11 Commission and the policy goals of the Intelligence Reform and Terrorism Prevention Act of 2004 (Public Law 108-458) with respect to the creation of a Federal Bureau of Investigation national security workforce. Such report shall include—

(1) a certification by the Director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation that such recommendations have been implemented and such policy goals have been achieved; or

(2) if the Director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation is unable to make the certification described in paragraph (1), a description of—

(A) the steps taken to implement such recommendations and achieve such policy goals;

(B) when the Director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation expects such recommendations to be implemented and such policy goals to be achieved; and

(C) any allocation of resources or other actions by Congress the Director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation considers necessary to implement such recommendations and achieve such policy goals.

(b) TERMINATION OF DUTY TO REPORT.—The duty to submit a report under subsection (a) shall terminate when the Director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation submits a certification pursuant to subsection (a)(1).

(c) GAO REVIEW OF CERTIFICATION.—If the Director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation submits a certification pursuant to subsection (a)(1), not later than 30 days after the submission of such certification, the Comptroller General shall submit to the relevant congressional committees a report on whether the recommendations described in subsection (a) have been implemented and whether the policy goals described in subsection (a) have been achieved.

(d) GAO REPORT ON CREATION OF FBI NATIONAL SECURITY WORKFORCE.—

(1) ANNUAL REPORT.—Not later than 90 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, and annually thereafter, the Comptroller General shall submit to the relevant congressional committees a report on whether—

(A) there is a sense of urgency within the Federal Bureau of Investigation to create a national security workforce to carry out the domestic counterterrorism mission of the Federal Bureau of Investigation;

(B) the Federal Bureau of Investigation is on track to create such a workforce; and

(C) the culture of the Federal Bureau of Investigation allows the Federal Bureau of Investigation to meet its new challenges and succeed in its counterterrorism role.

(2) TERMINATION.—The duty to submit a report under paragraph (1) shall terminate when the Comptroller General certifies to the relevant congressional committees that the recommendations of the 9/11 Commission and the policy goals of the Intelligence Reform and Terrorism Prevention Act of 2004 (Public Law 108-458) with respect to the creation of a Federal Bureau of Investigation national security workforce have been achieved.

SEC. 1204. REPORT ON NEW MISSIONS FOR THE DIRECTOR OF THE CENTRAL INTELLIGENCE AGENCY.

(a) REPORT; CERTIFICATION.—Not later than 90 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, and every 90 days thereafter, the Director of National Intelligence shall submit to the relevant congressional committees a report on the recommendations of the 9/11 Commission and the policy goals of the Intelligence Reform and Terrorism Prevention Act of 2004 (Public Law 108-458) with respect to the new mission of the Director of the Central Intelligence Agency. Such report shall include—

(1) a certification by the Director of National Intelligence that such recommendations have been implemented and such policy goals have been achieved; or

(2) if the Director of National Intelligence is unable to make the certification described in paragraph (1), a description of—

(A) the steps taken to implement such recommendations and achieve such policy goals;

(B) when the Director of National Intelligence expects such recommendations to be implemented and such policy goals to be achieved; and

(C) any allocation of resources or other actions by Congress the Director considers necessary to implement such recommendations and achieve such policy goals.

(b) TERMINATION OF DUTY TO REPORT.—The duty to submit a report under subsection (a) shall terminate when the Director of National Intelligence submits a certification pursuant to subsection (a)(1).

(c) GAO REVIEW OF CERTIFICATION.—If the Director of National Intelligence submits a certification pursuant to subsection (a)(1), not later than 30 days after the submission of such certification, the Comptroller General shall submit to the relevant congressional committees a report on whether the recommendations described in subsection (a) have been implemented and whether the policy goals described in subsection (a) have been achieved.

(d) GAO REPORT ON DIRECTOR OF THE CENTRAL INTELLIGENCE AGENCY.—

(1) ANNUAL REPORT.—Not later than 90 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, and annually thereafter, the Comptroller General shall submit to the relevant congressional committees a report on whether the Director of the Central Intelligence Agency has strong, determined leadership committed to accelerating the pace of the reforms underway.

(2) TERMINATION.—The duty to submit a report under paragraph (1) shall terminate when the Comptroller General certifies to the relevant congressional committees that the recommendations of the 9/11 Commission and the policy goals of the Intelligence Reform and Terrorism Prevention Act of 2004 (Public Law 108-458) with respect to the Director of the Central Intelligence Agency have been achieved.

(e) SENSE OF CONGRESS.—It is the sense of Congress that Congress and the leadership of the Central Intelligence Agency should—

(1) regularly evaluate the effectiveness of the national clandestine service structure to determine if it improves coordination of human intelligence collection operations and produces better intelligence results; and

(2) address morale and personnel issues at the Central Intelligence Agency to ensure the Central Intelligence Agency remains an effective arm of national power.

SEC. 1205. REPORT ON INCENTIVES FOR INFORMATION SHARING.

(a) REPORT; CERTIFICATION.—Not later than 30 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, and every 30 days thereafter, the Director of the Office of Management and Budget, in consultation with the Director of National Intelligence and the Program Manager for the Information Sharing Environment, shall submit to the relevant congressional committees a report on the recommendations of the 9/11 Commission and the policy goals of the Intelligence Reform and Terrorism Prevention Act of 2004 (Public Law 108-458) with respect to the provision of affirmative incentives for information sharing, and for reducing disincentives to information sharing, across the Federal Government and with State and local authorities. Such report shall include—

(1) a certification by the Director of the Office of Management and Budget that such recommendations have been implemented and such policy goals have been achieved; or

(2) if the Director of the Office of Management and Budget is unable to make the certification described in paragraph (1), a description of—

(A) the steps taken to implement such recommendations and achieve such policy goals;

(B) when the Director of National Intelligence and the Program Manager for the Information Sharing Environment expect such recommendations to be implemented and such policy goals to be achieved; and

(C) any allocation of resources or other actions by Congress the Director considers necessary to implement such recommendations and achieve such policy goals.

(b) TERMINATION OF DUTY TO REPORT.—The duty to submit a report under subsection (a) shall terminate when the Director of the Office of Management and Budget submits a certification pursuant to subsection (a)(1).

(c) GAO REVIEW OF CERTIFICATION.—If the Director of the Office of Management and Budget submits a certification pursuant to subsection (a)(1), not later than 30 days after the submission of such certification, the Comptroller General shall submit to the relevant congressional committees a report on whether the recommendations described in subsection (a) have been implemented and whether the policy goals described in subsection (a) have been achieved.

SEC. 1206. REPORT ON PRESIDENTIAL LEADERSHIP OF NATIONAL SECURITY INSTITUTIONS IN THE INFORMATION REVOLUTION.

(a) REPORT; CERTIFICATION.—Not later than 30 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, and every 30 days thereafter, the Director of the Office of Management and Budget, in consultation with the Director of National Intelligence and the Program Manager for the Information Sharing Environment, shall submit to the relevant congressional committees a report on the recommendations of the 9/11 Commission and the policy goals of the Intelligence Reform and Terrorism Prevention Act of 2004 (Public Law 108-458) with respect to the leadership of the President of national security institutions into the information revolution. Such report shall include—

(1) a certification by the Director of the Office of Management and Budget that such recommendations have been implemented and such policy goals have been achieved; or

(2) if the Director of the Office of Management and Budget is unable to make the certification described in paragraph (1), a description of—

(A) the steps taken to implement such recommendations and achieve such policy goals;

(B) when the Director of the Office of Management and Budget expects such recommendations to be implemented and such policy goals to be achieved; and

(C) any allocation of resources or other actions by Congress the Director considers necessary to implement such recommendations and achieve such policy goals.

(b) TERMINATION OF DUTY TO REPORT.—The duty to submit a report under subsection (a) shall terminate when the Director of the Office of Management and Budget submits a certification pursuant to subsection (a)(1).

(c) GAO REVIEW OF CERTIFICATION.—If the Director of the Office of Management and Budget submits a certification pursuant to subsection (a)(1), not later than 30 days after the submission of such certification, the Comptroller General shall submit to the relevant congressional committees a report on whether the recommendations described in subsection (a) have been implemented and whether the policy goals described in subsection (a) have been achieved.

(d) GAO REPORT ON INFORMATION SYSTEMS.—

(1) ANNUAL REPORT.—Not later than 90 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, and annually thereafter, the Comptroller General shall submit to the relevant congressional committees a report on whether the departments and agencies of the Federal Government have the resources and Presidential support to change information systems to enable information sharing, policies and procedures that compel sharing, and systems of performance evaluation to inform personnel on how well they carry out information sharing.

(2) TERMINATION.—The duty to submit a report under paragraph (1) shall terminate when the Comptroller General certifies to the relevant congressional committees that the recommendations of the 9/11 Commission and the policy goals of the Intelligence Reform and Terrorism Prevention Act of 2004 (Public Law 108-458) with respect to the leadership of the President of national security institutions into the information revolution have been achieved.

SEC. 1207. HOMELAND AIRSPACE DEFENSE.

(a) CERTIFICATION.—Not later than 30 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, and every 30 days thereafter, the Secretary of Homeland Security and the Secretary of Defense shall each submit to the specified congressional committees a certification as to whether the Federal Government has implemented the policy goals of the Intelligence Reform and Terrorism Prevention Act of 2004 (Public Law 108-458) and the recommendations of the National Commission on Terrorist Attacks Upon the United States regarding homeland and airspace defense. Each Secretary shall include with such certification recommendations if further congressional action is necessary. If a Secretary is unable to certify the goal in the first sentence, the Secretary shall report to the specified committees what steps have been taken towards implementation, when implementation can reasonably be expected to be completed, and whether additional resources or actions from the Congress are required for implementation.

(b) COMPTROLLER GENERAL REPORT.—Within 30 days of the submission of both certifications under subsection (a), the Comptroller General of the United States shall submit to the specified congressional committees a report verifying that the policy referred to in that subsection has in fact been implemented and recommendations of any additional congressional action necessary to implement the goals referred to in that subsection.

(c) SPECIFIED CONGRESSIONAL COMMITTEES DEFINED.—In this section, the term “specified congressional committees” means—

(1) the Committee on Homeland Security, the Committee on Government Reform, and the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure of the House of Representatives; and

(2) the Committee of Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs and the Committee on Environment and Public Works of the Senate.

SEC. 1208. SEMIANNUAL REPORT ON PLANS AND STRATEGIES OF UNITED STATES NORTHERN COMMAND FOR DEFENSE OF THE UNITED STATES HOMELAND.

(a) FINDINGS.—Consistent with the report of the 9/11 Commission, Congress makes the following findings:

(1) The primary responsibility for national defense is with the Department of Defense and the secondary responsibility for national defense is with the Department of Homeland Security, and the two departments must have clear delineations of responsibility.

(2) Before September 11, 2001, the North American Aerospace Defense Command, which had responsibility for defending United States airspace on September 11, 2001—

(A) focused on threats coming from outside the borders of the United States; and

(B) had not increased its focus on terrorism within the United States, even though the intelligence community had gathered intelligence on the possibility that terrorists might turn to hijacking and even the use of airplanes as missiles within the United States.

(3) The United States Northern Command has been established to assume responsibility for defense within the United States.

(b) SENSE OF CONGRESS.—It is the sense of Congress that—

(1) the Secretary of Defense should regularly assess the adequacy of the plans and strategies of the United States Northern Command with a view to ensuring that the United States Northern Command is prepared to respond effectively to all military and paramilitary threats within the United States; and

(2) the Committee on Armed Services of the Senate and the Committee on Armed Services of the House of Representatives should periodically review and assess the adequacy of those plans and strategies.

(c) SEMIANNUAL REPORT.—Not later than 90 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, and every 180 days thereafter, the Secretary of Defense shall submit to the Committee on Armed Services of the Senate and the Committee on Armed Services of the House of Representatives a report describing the plans and strategies of the United States Northern Command to defend the United States against military and paramilitary threats within the United States.

SEC. 1209. RELEVANT CONGRESSIONAL COMMITTEES DEFINED.

In this subtitle, the term “relevant congressional committees” means the following:

(1) The Committee on Homeland Security of the House of Representatives.

(2) The Committee on Government Reform, of the House of Representatives.

(3) The Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence of the House of Representatives.

(4) The Committee on Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs of the Senate.

(5) The Select Committee on Intelligence of the Senate.

Subtitle B—Civil Liberties and Executive Power

SEC. 1211. REPORT ON THE BALANCE BETWEEN SECURITY AND CIVIL LIBERTIES.

(a) REPORT; CERTIFICATION.—Not later than 30 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, and every 30 days thereafter, the Attorney General shall submit to the relevant congressional committees a report on the recommendations of the 9/11 Commission and the policy goals of the Intelligence Reform and Terrorism Prevention Act of 2004

(Public Law 108-458) with respect to the balance between security and civil liberties. Such report shall include—

(1) a certification by the Attorney General that such recommendations have been implemented and such policy goals have been achieved; or

(2) if the Attorney General is unable to make the certification described in paragraph (1), a description of—

(A) the steps taken to implement such recommendations and achieve such policy goals;

(B) when the Attorney General expects such recommendations to be implemented and such policy goals to be achieved; and

(C) any allocation of resources or other actions by Congress the Attorney General considers necessary to implement such recommendations and achieve such policy goals.

(b) TERMINATION OF DUTY TO REPORT.—The duty to submit a report under subsection (a) shall terminate when the Attorney General submits a certification pursuant to subsection (a)(1).

(c) GAO REVIEW OF CERTIFICATION.—If the Attorney General submits a certification pursuant to subsection (a)(1), not later than 30 days after the submission of such certification, the Comptroller General shall submit to the relevant congressional committees a report on whether the recommendations described in subsection (a) have been implemented and whether the policy goals described in subsection (a) have been achieved.

SEC. 1212. PRIVACY AND CIVIL LIBERTIES OVERSIGHT BOARD.

(a) SHORT TITLE.—This section may be cited as the “9/11 Commission Civil Liberties Board Act”.

(b) FINDINGS.—Congress makes the following findings:

(1) On July 22, 2004 the National Commission on Terrorist Attacks Upon the United States issued a report that included 41 specific recommendations to help prevent future terrorist attacks, including details of a global strategy and government reorganization necessary to implement that strategy.

(2) One of the recommendations focused on the protections of civil liberties. Specifically the following recommendation was made: “At this time of increased and consolidated government authority, there should be a board within the executive branch to oversee adherence to the guidelines we recommend and the commitment the government makes to defend our civil liberties.”

(3) The report also states that “the choice between security and liberty is a false choice, as nothing is more likely to endanger America’s liberties than the success of a terrorist attack at home. Our History has shown that the insecurity threatens liberty at home. Yet if our liberties are curtailed, we lose the values that we are struggling to defend.”

(4) On December 17, 2004, Public Law 108-458, the National Intelligence Reform Act, was signed into law. This law created a civil liberties board that does not have the authority necessary to protect civil liberties.

(5) The establishment and adequate funding of a Privacy and Civil Liberties Oversight Board was a crucial recommendation made by the 9/11 Commission.

(6) In its Final Report on 9/11 Commission Recommendations, the Commission noted “very little urgency” and “insufficient” funding as it relates to the establishment of the Privacy and Civil Liberties Oversight Board.

(7) While the President’s budget submission for fiscal year 2006 included $750,000 for the Privacy and Civil Liberties Oversight Board, the President’s budget submission for fiscal year 2007 does not contain a funding line for the Board.

(c) MAKING THE PRIVACY AND CIVIL LIBERTIES OVERSIGHT BOARD INDEPENDENT.—Section 1061(b) of the Intelligence Reform and Terrorism Prevention Act of 2004 is amended by striking “within the Executive Office of the President” and inserting “as an independent agency within the Executive branch”.

(d) REQUIRING ALL MEMBERS OF THE PRIVACY AND CIVIL LIBERTIES OVERSIGHT BOARD BE CONFIRMED BY THE SENATE.—Subsection (e) of section 1061 of the Intelligence Reform and Terrorism Prevention Act of 2004 is amended to read as follows:

“(e) MEMBERSHIP.—

“(1) MEMBERS.—The Board shall be composed of a full-time chairman and 4 additional members, who shall be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate.

“(2) QUALIFICATIONS.—Members of the Board shall be selected solely on the basis of their professional qualifications, achievements, public stature, expertise in civil liberties and privacy, and relevant experience, and without regard to political affiliation, but in no event shall more than 3 members of the Board be members of the same political party. The President shall, before appointing an individual who is not a member of the same political party as the President consult with the leadership of that party, if any, in the Senate and House of Representatives.

“(3) INCOMPATIBLE OFFICE.—An individual appointed to the Board may not, while serving on the Board, be an elected official, officer, or employee of the Federal Government, other than in the capacity as a member of the Board.

“(4) TERM.—Each member of the Board shall serve a term of six years, except that—

“(A) a member appointed to a term of office after the commencement of such term may serve under such appointment only for the remainder of such term;

“(B) upon the expiration of the term of office of a member, the member shall continue to serve until the member’s successor has been appointed and qualified, except that no member may serve under this subparagraph—

“(i) for more than 60 days when Congress is in session unless a nomination to fill the vacancy shall have been submitted to the Senate; or

“(ii) after the adjournment sine die of the session of the Senate in which such nomination is submitted; and

“(C) the members initially appointed under this subsection shall serve terms of two, three, four, five, and six years, respectively, from the effective date of this Act, with the term of each such member to be designated by the President.

“(5) QUORUM AND MEETINGS.—The Board shall meet upon the call of the chairman or a majority of its members. Three members of the Board shall constitute a quorum.”

(e) SUBPOENA POWER FOR THE PRIVACY AND CIVIL LIBERTIES OVERSIGHT BOARD.—Section 1061(d) of the Intelligence Reform and Terrorism Prevention Act of 2004 is amended—

(1) so that subparagraph (D) of paragraph (1) reads as follows:

“(D) require, by subpoena issued at the direction of a majority of the members of the Board, persons (other than departments, agencies, and elements of the executive branch) to produce any relevant information, documents, reports, answers, records, accounts, papers, and other documentary or testimonial evidence.”; and

(2) so that paragraph (2) reads as follows:

“(2) ENFORCEMENT OF SUBPOENA.—In the case of contumacy or failure to obey a subpoena issued under paragraph (1)(D), the United States district court for the judicial district in which the subpoenaed person resides, is served, or may be found may issue an order requiring such person to produce the evidence required by such subpoena.”

(f) REPORTING REQUIREMENTS.—

(1) DUTIES OF BOARD.—Paragraph (4) of section 1061(c) of the Intelligence Reform and Terrorism Prevention Act of 2004 is amended to read as follows:

“(4) REPORTS.—

“(A) RECEIPT, REVIEW, AND SUBMISSION.—

“(i) IN GENERAL.—The Board shall—

“(I) receive and review reports from privacy officers and civil liberties officers described in section 212; and “(II) periodically submit, not less than semiannually, reports to the appropriate committees of Congress, including the Committees on the Judiciary of the Senate and the House of Representatives, the Committee on Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs of the Senate, the Committee on Government Reform of the House of Representatives, the Select Committee on Intelligence of the Senate, and the Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence of the House of Representatives, and to the President. Such reports shall be in unclassified form to the greatest extent possible, with a classified annex where necessary.

“(ii) CONTENTS.—Not less than 2 reports the Board submits each year under clause (i)(II) shall include—

“(I) a description of the major activities of the Board during the preceding period;

“(II) information on the findings, conclusions, and recommendations of the Board resulting from its advice and oversight functions under subsection (c);

“(III) the minority views on any findings, conclusions, and recommendations of the Board resulting from its advice and oversight functions under subsection (c); and “(IV) each proposal reviewed by the Board under subsection (c)(1) that the Board advised against implementing, but that notwithstanding such advice, was implemented.

“(B) INFORMING THE PUBLIC.—The Board shall—

“(i) make its reports, including its reports to Congress, available to the public to the greatest extent that is consistent with the protection of classified information and applicable law; and

“(ii) hold public hearings and otherwise inform the public of its activities, as appropriate and in a manner consistent with the protection of classified information and applicable law.”

(2) PRIVACY AND CIVIL LIBERTIES OFFICERS.—Section 1062 of the Intelligence Reform and Terrorism Prevention Act of 2004 is amended to read as follows:

“(a) DESIGNATION AND FUNCTIONS.—The Attorney General, the Secretary of Defense, the Secretary of State, the Secretary of the Treasury, the Secretary of Health and Human Services, the Secretary of Homeland Security, the National Intelligence Director, the Director of the Central Intelligence Agency, any other entity within the intelligence community (as defined in section 3 of the National Security Act of 1947 (50 U.S.C. 401a)), and the head of any other department, agency, or element of the executive branch designated by the Privacy and Civil Liberties Oversight Board to be appropriate for coverage under this section shall designate not less than 1 senior officer to—

“(1) assist the head of such department, agency, or element and other officials of such department, agency, or element in appropriately considering privacy and civil liberties concerns when such officials are proposing, developing, or implementing laws, regulations, policies, procedures, or guidelines related to efforts to protect the Nation against terrorism;

“(2) periodically investigate and review department, agency, or element actions, policies, procedures, guidelines, and related laws and their implementation to ensure that such department, agency, or element is adequately considering privacy and civil liberties in its actions;

“(3) ensure that such department, agency, or element has adequate procedures to receive, investigate, respond to, and redress complaints from individuals who allege such department, agency, or element has violated their privacy or civil liberties; and

“(4) in providing advice on proposals to retain or enhance a particular governmental power the officer shall consider whether such department, agency, or element has established—

“(A) that the power actually enhances security and the need for the power is balanced with the need to protect privacy and civil liberties;

“(B) that there is adequate supervision of the use by such department, agency, or element of the power to ensure protection of privacy and civil liberties; and

“(C) that there are adequate guidelines and oversight to properly confine its use.

“(b) EXCEPTION TO DESIGNATION AUTHORITY.—

“(1) PRIVACY OFFICERS.—In any department, agency, or element referred to in subsection (a) or designated by the Board, which has a statutorily created privacy officer, such officer shall perform the functions specified in subsection (a) with respect to privacy.

“(2) CIVIL LIBERTIES OFFICERS.—In any department, agency, or element referred to in subsection (a) or designated by the Board, which has a statutorily created civil liberties officer, such officer shall perform the functions specified in subsection (a) with respect to civil liberties.

“(c) SUPERVISION AND COORDINATION.—Each privacy officer or civil liberties officer described in subsection (a) or (b) shall—

“(1) report directly to the head of the department, agency, or element concerned; and

“(2) coordinate their activities with the Inspector General of such department, agency, or element to avoid duplication of effort.

“(d) AGENCY COOPERATION.—The head of each department, agency, or element shall ensure that each privacy officer and civil liberties officer—

“(1) has the information, material, and resources necessary to fulfill the functions of such officer;

“(2) is advised of proposed policy changes;

“(3) is consulted by decisionmakers; and

“(4) is given access to material and personnel the officer determines to be necessary to carry out the functions of such officer.

“(e) REPRISAL FOR MAKING COMPLAINT.—No action constituting a reprisal, or threat of reprisal, for making a complaint or for disclosing information to a privacy officer or civil liberties officer described in subsection (a) or (b), or to the Privacy and Civil Liberties Oversight Board, that indicates a possible violation of privacy protections or civil liberties in the administration of the programs and operations of the Federal Government relating to efforts to protect the Nation from terrorism shall be taken by any Federal employee in a position to take such action, unless the complaint was made or the information was disclosed with the knowledge that it was false or with willful disregard for its truth or falsity.

“(f) PERIODIC REPORTS.—

“(1) IN GENERAL.—The privacy officers and civil liberties officers of each department, agency, or element referred to or described in subsection (a) or (b) shall periodically, but not less than quarterly, submit a report on the activities of such officers—

“(A)(i) to the appropriate committees of Congress, including the Committees on the Judiciary of the Senate and the House of Representatives, the Committee on Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs of the Senate, the Committee on Government Reform of the House of Representatives, the Select Committee on Intelligence of the Senate, and the Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence of the House of Representatives;

“(ii) to the head of such department, agency, or element; and

“(iii) to the Privacy and Civil Liberties Oversight Board; and “(B) which shall be in unclassified form to the greatest extent possible, with a classified annex where necessary.

“(2) CONTENTS.—Each report submitted under paragraph (1) shall include information on the discharge of each of the functions of the officer concerned, including—

“(A) information on the number and types of reviews undertaken;

“(B) the type of advice provided and the response given to such advice;

“(C) the number and nature of the complaints received by the department, agency, or element concerned for alleged violations; and “(D) a summary of the disposition of such complaints, the reviews and inquiries conducted, and the impact of the activities of such officer.

“(g) INFORMING THE PUBLIC.—Each privacy officer and civil liberties officer shall—

“(1) make the reports of such officer, including reports to Congress, available to the public to the greatest extent that is consistent with the protection of classified information and applicable law; and

“(2) otherwise inform the public of the activities of such officer, as appropriate and in a manner consistent with the protection of classified information and applicable law.

“(h) SAVINGS CLAUSE.—Nothing in this section shall be construed to limit or otherwise supplant any other authorities or responsibilities provided by law to privacy officers or civil liberties officers.

“(i) PROTECTIONS FOR HUMAN RESEARCH SUBJECTS.—The Secretary of Homeland Security shall ensure that the Department of Homeland Security complies with the protections for human research subjects, as described in part 46 of title 45, Code of Federal Regulations, or in equivalent regulations as promulgated by such Secretary, with respect to research that is conducted or supported by such Department.”.

(g) INCLUSION IN PRESIDENT'S BUDGET SUBMISSION TO CONGRESS.—Section 1105(a) of title 31, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

“(36) a separate statement of the amount of appropriations requested for the Privacy and Civil Liberties Oversight Board.”.

(h) REPORT; CERTIFICATION.—

(1) REPORT.—Not later than 30 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, and every 30 days thereafter, the Attorney General shall submit to the relevant congressional committees a report on the extent to which the Administration has achieved and implemented the policy goals of Public Law 108-458 and the recommendations of the 9/11 Commission regarding the implementation of the Privacy and Civil Liberties Oversight Board. Such report shall include—

(A) a certification by the Attorney General that such recommendations have been implemented and such policy goals have been achieved; or

(B) if the Attorney General is unable to make the certification described in subparagraph (A), a description of—

(i) the steps taken to implement such recommendations and achieve such policy goals;

(ii) when the Attorney General expects such recommendations to be implemented and such policy goals to be achieved; and

(iii) any allocation of resources or other actions by Congress the Attorney General considers necessary to implement such recommendations and achieve such policy goals.

(2) TERMINATION OF DUTY TO REPORT.—The duty to submit a report under paragraph (1) shall terminate when the Attorney General submits a certification pursuant to paragraph (1)(A).

(3) GAO REVIEW OF CERTIFICATION.—If the Attorney General submits a certification pursuant to paragraph (1), not later than 30 days after the submission of such certification, the Comptroller General shall submit to the relevant congressional committees a report on whether the recommendations described in paragraph (1) have been implemented and whether the policy goals described in paragraph (1) have been achieved.

SEC. 1213. SET PRIVACY GUIDELINES FOR GOVERNMENT SHARING OF PERSONAL INFORMATION.

(a) REPORT.—Not later than 30 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, and every 30 days thereafter, the Attorney General shall submit to the relevant congressional committees a report on the extent to which the Administration has achieved and implemented the policy goals of Public Law 108-458 and the recommendations of the 9/11 Commission regarding the privacy guidelines for government sharing of personal information. Such report shall include—

(1) a certification by the Attorney General that such recommendations have been implemented and such policy goals have been achieved; or

(2) if the Attorney General is unable to make the certification described in paragraph (1), a description of—

(A) the steps taken to implement such recommendations and achieve such policy goals;

(B) when the Attorney General expects such recommendations to be implemented and such policy goals to be achieved; and

(C) any allocation of resources or other actions by Congress the Attorney General considers necessary to implement such recommendations and achieve such policy goals.

(b) TERMINATION OF DUTY TO REPORT.—The duty to submit a report under subsection (a) shall terminate when the Attorney General submits a certification pursuant to subsection (a)(1).

(c) GAO REVIEW OF CERTIFICATION.—If the Attorney General submits a certification pursuant to subsection (a), not later than 30 days after the submission of such certification, the Comptroller General shall submit to the relevant congressional committees a report on whether the recommendations described in paragraph (1) have been implemented and whether the policy goals described in subsection (A) have been achieved.

(1) the Committee on International Relations and the Committee on Government Reform of the House of Representatives; and

(2) the Committee on Foreign Relations and the Committee on Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs of the Senate.

SEC. 1308. ACTIONS TO ENSURE VIGOROUS EFFORTS AGAINST TERRORIST FINANCING.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress makes the following findings:

(1) Financial institutions have too little information about money laundering and terrorist financing compliance in other markets.

(2) The current Financial Action Task Force designation system does not adequately represent the progress countries are making in combatting money laundering.

(3) Lack of information about the compliance of countries with anti-money laundering standards exposes United States financial markets to excessive risk.

(4) Failure to designate countries that fail to make progress in combatting terrorist financing and money laundering eliminates incentives for internal reform.

(5) The Secretary of the Treasury has an affirmative duty to provide to financial institutions and examiners the best possible information on compliance with anti-money laundering and terrorist financing initiatives in other markets.

(b) REPORT.—Not later than March 1 each year, the Secretary of the Treasury shall submit to the relevant congressional committees a report that identifies the applicable standards of each country against money laundering and states whether that country is a country of primary money laundering concern under section 5318A of title 31, United States Code. The report shall include—

(1) information on the effectiveness of each country in meeting its standards against money laundering;

(2) a determination of whether that the efforts of that country to combat money laundering and terrorist financing are adequate, improving, or inadequate; and

(3) the efforts made by the Secretary to provide to the government of each such country of concern technical assistance to cease the activities that were the basis for the determination that the country was of primary money laundering concern.

(c) DISSEMINATION OF INFORMATION IN REPORT.—The Secretary of the Treasury shall make available to the Federal Financial Institutions Examination Council for incorporation into the examination process, in consultation with Federal banking agencies, and to financial institutions the information contained in the report submitted under subsection (b). Such information shall be made available to financial institutions without cost.

(d) DEFINITIONS.—In this section:

(1) FINANCIAL INSTITUTION.—The term “financial institution” has the meaning given that term in section 5312(a)(2) of title 31, United States Code.

(2) RELEVANT CONGRESSIONAL COMMITTEES.—The term “relevant congressional committees” means—

(A) the Committee on Financial Services, the Committee on Government Reform, and the Committee on the Judiciary of the House of Representatives; and

(B) the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs, the Committee on Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs, and the Committee on the Judiciary of the Senate.

Subtitle B—Public Diplomacy

SEC. 1311. PUBLIC DIPLOMACY RESPONSIBILITIES OF THE DEPARTMENT OF STATE AND PUBLIC DIPLOMACY TRAINING OF MEMBERS OF THE FOREIGN SERVICE.

(a) REPORT; CERTIFICATION.—Not later than 30 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, and every 30 days thereafter, the Secretary of State shall submit to the relevant congressional committees a report on the recommendations of the 9/11 Commission and the policy goals of sections 7109 and 7110 the Intelligence Reform and Terrorism Prevention Act of 2004 (Public Law 108-458), and the amendments made by such sections, regarding the public diplomacy responsibilities of the Department of State and public diplomacy training of members of the Foreign Service. Such report shall include—

(1) a certification by the Secretary of State that such recommendations have been implemented and such policy goals have been achieved; or

(2) if the Secretary of State is unable to make the certification described in paragraph (1), a description of—

(A) the steps taken to implement such recommendations and achieve such policy goals;

(B) when the Secretary of State expects such recommendations to be implemented and such policy goals to be achieved; and

(C) any allocation of resources or other actions by Congress the Secretary of State considers necessary to implement such recommendations and achieve such policy goals.

(b) TERMINATION OF DUTY TO REPORT.—The duty to submit a report under subsection (a) shall terminate when the Secretary of State submits a certification pursuant to subsection (a)(1).

(c) GAO REVIEW OF CERTIFICATION.—If the Secretary of State submits a certification pursuant to subsection (a)(1), not later than 30 days after the submission of such certification, the Comptroller General shall submit to the relevant congressional committees a report on whether the recommendations described in subsection (a) have been implemented and whether the policy goals described in subsection (a) have been achieved.

(d) RELEVANT CONGRESSIONAL COMMITTEES DEFINED.—In this section, the term “relevant congressional committees” means—

(1) the Committee on International Relations and the Committee on Government Reform of the House of Representatives; and

(2) the Committee on Foreign Relations and the Committee on Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs of the Senate.

SEC. 1312. INTERNATIONAL BROADCASTING.

(a) REPORT.—Not later than 90 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Broadcasting Board of Governors shall submit to the relevant congressional committees a report on—

(1) the activities of Radio Sawa and Radio Al-Hurra; and

(2) the extent to which the activities of Radio Sawa and Radio Al-Hurra have been successful, including an analysis of impact of the activities on the audience and audience demographics and whether or not funding is adequate to carry out the activities.

(b) RELEVANT CONGRESSIONAL COMMITTEES DEFINED.—In this section, the term “relevant congressional committees” means—

(1) the Committee on International Relations and the Committee on Government Reform of the House of Representatives; and

(2) the Committee on Foreign Relations and the Committee on Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs of the Senate.

SEC. 1313. EXPANSION OF UNITED STATES SCHOLARSHIP, EXCHANGE, AND LIBRARY PROGRAMS IN THE ISLAMIC WORLD.

(a) REPORT; CERTIFICATION.—Not later than 30 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, and every 30 days thereafter, the Secretary of State shall submit to the relevant congressional committees a report on the recommendations of the 9/11 Commission and the policy goals of sections 7112 of the Intelligence Reform and Terrorism Prevention Act of 2004 (Public Law 108-458) for expanding United States scholarship, exchange, and library programs in the Islamic world. Such report shall include—

(1) a certification by the Secretary of State that such recommendations have been implemented and such policy goals have been achieved; or

(2) if the Secretary of State is unable to make the certification described in paragraph (1), a description of—

(A) the steps taken to implement such recommendations and achieve such policy goals;

(B) when the Secretary of State expects such recommendations to be implemented and such policy goals to be achieved; and

(C) any allocation of resources or other actions by Congress the Secretary of State considers necessary to implement such recommendations and achieve such policy goals.

(b) TERMINATION OF DUTY TO REPORT.—The duty to submit a report under subsection (a) shall terminate when the Secretary of State submits a certification pursuant to subsection (a)(1).

(c) GAO REVIEW OF CERTIFICATION.—If the Secretary of State submits a certification pursuant to subsection (a)(1), not later than 30 days after the submission of such certification, the Comptroller General shall submit to the relevant congressional committees a report on whether the recommendations described in subsection (a) have been implemented and whether the policy goals described in subsection (a) have been achieved.

(d) RELEVANT CONGRESSIONAL COMMITTEES DEFINED.—In this section, the term “relevant congressional committees” means—

(1) the Committee on International Relations and the Committee on Government Reform of the House of Representatives; and

(2) the Committee on Foreign Relations and the Committee on Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs of the Senate.

SEC. 1314. INTERNATIONAL YOUTH OPPORTUNITY FUND.

(a) SENSE OF CONGRESS.—It is the sense of Congress that—

(1) the Middle East Partnership Initiative (MEPI) and the United States Agency for International Development should be commended for initiating programs in predominantly Muslim countries to support secular education improvements and the teaching of English, including programs that focus on the education of women;

(2) the secular education programs of MEPI and the United States Agency for International Development are a constructive start to answering the challenge of secular education in predominantly Muslim countries;

(3) the secular education programs of MEPI and the United States Agency for International Development should be components of an overall strategy for educational assistance—itsself one component of an overall

United States strategy for counterterrorism—targeted where the need and the benefit to the national security of the United States are greatest; and

(4) upon formation of a broader strategy for international educational assistance targeted toward the Middle East, a significant increase in funding for these initiatives should be provided.

(b) INTERNATIONAL YOUTH OPPORTUNITY FUND.—There are authorized to be appropriated to the Secretary of State $50,000,000 for each of fiscal years 2007 and 2008 to support the establishment of an International Youth Opportunity Fund pursuant to section 7114 of the Intelligence Reform and Terrorism Prevention Act of 2004 (Public Law 108-458).

Subtitle C—Nonproliferation

SEC. 1321. SHORT TITLE.

This subtitle may be cited as the “Omni-bus Nonproliferation and Anti-Nuclear Terrorism Act of 2006”.

SEC. 1322. FINDINGS.

Congress makes the following findings:

(1) LOOSE NUCLEAR WEAPONS AND MATERIALS IN THE FORMER SOVIET UNION.—

(A) There are in the world today enormous stockpiles of nuclear weapons and the materials required to make them. Counting materials both in assembled warheads and in other forms, worldwide totals are estimated to encompass some 1,900 tons of highly enriched uranium (enough for 143,000 nuclear weapons) and 1,855 tons of plutonium (enough for 330,000 nuclear weapons).

(B) The Russian Federation alone is estimated to have over 1,000 tons of highly enriched uranium (enough for over 80,000 nuclear weapons) and 140 tons of plutonium (enough for over 30,000 nuclear weapons).

(C) The United States has been working for over a decade to eliminate stockpiles of loose nuclear weapons and materials in the former Soviet Union, but the Department of Energy acknowledges that there is still a need to properly secure about 460 tons of weapons-usable Russian nuclear material (outside of warheads), enough for more than 35,000 nuclear weapons.

(D) A recent report by the Central Intelligence Agency faulted the security of nuclear arsenal facilities in the Russian Federation and assessed that “undetected smuggling has occurred.”

(E) There are at least 18 documented incidents of “proliferation significant” fissile material trafficking from facilities in the former Soviet Union between 1991 and 2001. In one incident in 1998, an inside conspiracy at a Russian nuclear weapons facility attempted to steal 18.5 kilograms of highly enriched uranium. In another incident, 2 kilograms of highly enriched uranium taken from a research facility in Sukhumi, Georgia, has never been recovered.

(F) In May 1994, German police found a small but worrisome quantity of supergrade plutonium in the garage of Adolf Jackle. Extremely expensive to produce, this rare item was likely stolen from one of Russia's two premier nuclear weapons laboratories.

(G) Comprehensive security upgrades are not yet completed at 90 percent of Russian nuclear warhead bunkers for Russia's Strategic Rocket Forces.

(H) Border security in the former Soviet Union is inconsistent at best. Existing infrastructure helps at the outer borders of the former Soviet Union but many borders internal to the former Soviet Union, such as the border between Kazakhstan and the Russian Federation, exist only on a map.

(2) LOOSE NUCLEAR MATERIALS AROUND THE GLOBE.—

(A) Dangerous caches of weapons-usable nuclear materials, much of it poorly secured and vulnerable to theft, exist in a multitude of facilities around the world. For example, there are over 130 research reactors in over 40 countries that house highly enriched uranium, some with enough to manufacture an atomic bomb. In total, about 40 tons of highly enriched uranium, enough for over 1,000 nuclear weapons, is estimated to remain in civilian research reactors.

(B) Over the last 50 years, the United States is known to have exported about 27.5 tons of highly enriched uranium to 43 countries to help develop nuclear power production or bolster scientific initiatives. In 1996, the United States began an effort to recover the more than 17.5 tons of the nuclear material that was still overseas, but has recovered only about 1 ton, according to the Department of Energy and the Government Accountability Office.

(C) It is especially important to keep highly enriched uranium out of terrorists' hands because, with minimal expertise, they could use it to make the simplest, gun-type nuclear weapon—a device in which a high explosive is used to blow one subcritical piece of highly enriched uranium from one end of a tube into another subcritical piece held at the opposite end of the tube.

(D) To Osama bin Laden, acquiring weapons of mass destruction is a “religious duty”. Al Qaeda and more than two dozen other terrorist groups are pursuing capability to use weapons of mass destruction.

(E) Osama bin Laden's press spokesman, Sulaiman Abu Ghaith, has announced that the group aspires “to kill 4 million Americans, including 1 million children,” in response to casualties supposedly inflicted on Muslims by the United States and Israel.

(F) Al Qaeda documents recovered in Afghanistan reveal a determined research effort focused on nuclear weapons.

(3) SECURITY STANDARDS FOR ALL NUCLEAR WEAPONS AND MATERIALS.—

(A) There are no international binding standards for the secure handling and storage of nuclear weapons and materials.

(B) Making a nuclear weapon requires only 4 to 5 kilograms of plutonium or 12 to 15 kilograms of highly enriched uranium.

(C) In October 2001, the United States Government became very concerned that Al Qaeda may have smuggled a 10-kiloton Russian nuclear warhead into New York City. If placed in lower Manhattan, such a device would probably kill 100,000 people instantly, seriously injure tens of thousands more, and render the entire area uninhabitable for decades to come.

(4) RUSSIA'S NUCLEAR EXPERTISE.—

(A) Employment at the large nuclear facilities in the Russian Federation's 10 closed nuclear cities is estimated to be in the range of 120,000 to 130,000 people, of whom approximately 75,000 were employed on nuclear weapons-related work.

(B) Poor wages and living conditions in Russian “nuclear cities” have inspired protests and strikes among the employees working in them.

(C) Insiders have been caught attempting to smuggle nuclear materials out of these facilities, presumably to sell on the lucrative black market.

SEC. 1323. ESTABLISHMENT OF OFFICE OF NON-PROLIFERATION PROGRAMS IN THE EXECUTIVE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT.

(a) ESTABLISHMENT.—There is established in the Executive Office of the President an Office of Nonproliferation Programs (in this section referred to as the “Office”).

(b) DIRECTOR; ASSOCIATE DIRECTORS.—There shall be at the head of the Office a Director who shall be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, and who shall be compensated at the rate provided for level II of the Executive Schedule in section 5313 of title 5, United States Code. The President is authorized to appoint not more than four Associate Directors, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, who shall be compensated at a rate not to exceed that provided for level III of the Executive Schedule in section 5314 of such title. Associate Directors shall perform such functions as the Director may prescribe.

(c) PRIMARY FUNCTIONS OF DIRECTOR.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The primary function of the Director is to coordinate and lead—

(A) efforts by the United States to curb terrorist access to nuclear technology, materials, or expertise; and

(B) other United States nonproliferation activities, including nuclear nonproliferation activities and activities to counter other weapons of mass destruction.

(2) SPECIFIC FUNCTIONS.—In addition to such other functions and activities as the President may assign, the Director shall—

(A) advise the President, and others within the Executive Office of the President, on the role and effect of such nonproliferation activities on national security and international relations;

(B) lead the development and implementation of a plan (including appropriate budgets, other resources, goals, and metrics for assessing progress) to ensure that all the highest-priority actions to prevent terrorists from getting and using nuclear weapons are taken in the shortest possible time, including but not limited to a fast-paced global effort to ensure that every nuclear warhead and every kilogram of weapons-usable nuclear material worldwide is secured and accounted for, to standards sufficient to defeat demonstrated terrorist and criminal threats, as rapidly as that objective can be accomplished;

(C) identify obstacles to accelerating and strengthening efforts to prevent terrorists from getting and using nuclear weapons, and raise approaches to overcoming these obstacles for action by the President or other appropriate officials;

(D) lead an effort, to be carried out jointly by the various Federal agencies responsible for carrying out such nonproliferation activities, to establish priorities among those activities and to develop and implement strategies and budgets that reflect those priorities;

(E) build strong partnerships with respect to such nonproliferation activities among Federal, State, and local governments, foreign governments, international organizations, and nongovernmental organizations; and

(F) evaluate the scale, quality, and effectiveness of the Federal effort with respect to such nonproliferation activities and advise on appropriate actions.

SEC. 1324. REMOVAL OF RESTRICTIONS ON COOPERATIVE THREAT REDUCTION PROGRAMS.

(a) REPEAL OF RESTRICTIONS.—

(1) RESTRICTIONS ON ASSISTANCE IN DESTROYING FORMER SOVIET WEAPONS.—Section 211(b) of the Soviet Nuclear Threat Reduction Act of 1991 (22 U.S.C. 2551 note) is repealed.

(2) RESTRICTIONS ON AUTHORITY TO CARRY OUT CTR PROGRAMS.—Section 1203(d) of the Cooperative Threat Reduction Act of 1993 (title XII of Public Law 103-160; 22 U.S.C. 5952(d)) is repealed.

(3) LIMITATION ON USE OF FUNDS FOR CHEMICAL WEAPONS DESTRUCTION.—Section 1305 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2000 (22 U.S.C. 5952 note) is repealed.

(b) EXEMPTION FROM LIMITATIONS.—Cooperative Threat Reduction programs may be carried out notwithstanding any other provision of law, subject to congressional notification and reporting requirements that apply to the use of funds available for Cooperative Threat Reduction programs or the carrying out of projects or activities under such programs.

(c) INAPPLICABILITY OF OTHER RESTRICTIONS.—Section 502 of the Freedom for Russia and Emerging Eurasian Democracies and Open Markets Support Act of 1992 (22 U.S.C. 5852) shall not apply to any Cooperative Threat Reduction program.

SEC. 1325. REMOVAL OF RESTRICTIONS ON DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY NON-PROLIFERATION PROGRAMS.

Section 4301 of the Atomic Energy Defense Act (50 U.S.C. 2561) is repealed.

SEC. 1326. MODIFICATIONS OF AUTHORITY TO USE COOPERATIVE THREAT REDUCTION PROGRAM FUNDS OUTSIDE THE FORMER SOVIET UNION.

Section 1308 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2004 (Public Law 108-136; 117 Stat. 1662; 22 U.S.C. 5963) is amended—

(1) by striking “President” each place it appears and inserting “Secretary of Defense”;

(2) in subsection (a), by striking “each of the following” and all that follows through the period at the end and inserting the following: “that such project or activity will—

“(1) assist the United States in the resolution of a critical emerging proliferation threat; or

“(2) permit the United States to take advantage of opportunities to achieve longstanding nonproliferation goals.”;

(3) by striking subsections (c) and (d); and

(4) by redesignating subsection (e) as subsection (c).

SEC. 1327. MODIFICATIONS OF AUTHORITY TO USE INTERNATIONAL NUCLEAR MATERIALS PROTECTION AND COOPERATION PROGRAM FUNDS OUTSIDE THE FORMER SOVIET UNION.

Section 3124 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2004 (Public Law 108-136; 117 Stat. 1747) is amended—

(1) by striking “President” each place it appears and inserting “Secretary of Energy”;

(2) in subsection (a), by striking “each of the following” and all that follows through the period at the end and inserting the following: “that such project or activity will—

“(1) assist the United States in the resolution of a critical emerging proliferation threat; or

“(2) permit the United States to take advantage of opportunities to achieve longstanding nonproliferation goals.”;

(3) by striking subsections (c) and (d); and

(4) by redesignating subsection (e) as subsection (c).

SEC. 1328. SPECIAL REPORTS ON ADHERENCE TO ARMS CONTROL AGREEMENTS AND NONPROLIFERATION COMMITMENTS.

(a) REPORTS REQUIRED.—At least annually, the Secretary of State shall submit to the appropriate congressional committees a report on each country in which a Cooperative Threat Reduction program is being carried out. The report shall describe that country’s commitments to—

(1) making substantial national investments in infrastructure to secure, safeguard, and destroy weapons of mass destruction;

(2) forgoing any military modernization exceeding legitimate defense requirements, including replacement of weapons of mass destruction;

(3) forgoing any use of fissionable materials or any other components of deactivated nuclear weapons in a new nuclear weapons program;

(4) complying with all relevant arms control agreements;

(5) adopting and enforcing national and international export controls over munitions and dual-use items; and

(6) facilitating the verification by the United States and international community of that country’s compliance with such commitments.

(b) FORM.—The report required under subsection (a) may be submitted with the report required under section 403 of the Arms Control and Disarmament Act (22 U.S.C. 2593a).

SEC. 1329. PRESIDENTIAL REPORT ON IMPEDIMENTS TO CERTAIN NON-PROLIFERATION ACTIVITIES.

Not later than 90 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the President shall submit to the appropriate congressional committees a report identifying impediments (including liability concerns, taxation issues, access rights, and other impediments) to—

(1) the ongoing renegotiation of the umbrella agreement relating to Cooperative Threat Reduction; and

(2) the ongoing negotiations for the implementation of the Plutonium Disposition Program, the Nuclear Cities Initiative, and other defense nuclear nonproliferation programs.

SEC. 1330. ENHANCEMENT OF GLOBAL THREAT REDUCTION INITIATIVE.

Section 3132 of the Ronald W. Reagan National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2005 (Public Law 108-375; 118 Stat. 2166; 50 U.S.C. 2569) is amended—

(1) in subsection (b)—

(A) in the subsection heading, by striking “PROGRAM AUTHORIZED” and inserting “PROGRAM REQUIRED”; and

(B) by striking “The Secretary of Energy may” and inserting “The President, acting through the Secretary of Energy, shall”; and

(2) in subsection (c)(1), by adding at the end the following new subparagraph: “(N) Take such other actions as may be necessary to effectively implement the Global Threat Reduction Initiative.”.

SEC. 1331. EXPANSION OF PROLIFERATION SECURITY INITIATIVE.

(a) SENSE OF CONGRESS RELATING TO PROLIFERATION SECURITY INITIATIVE.—It is the sense of Congress that—

(1) the President should strive to expand and strengthen the Proliferation Security Initiative announced by the President on May 31, 2003, placing particular emphasis on including countries outside of NATO; and

(2) the United States should engage the United Nations to develop a Security Council Resolution to authorize the Proliferation Security Initiative under international law, including by providing legal authority to stop shipments of weapons of mass destruction, their delivery systems, and related materials.

(b) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS RELATING TO PROLIFERATION SECURITY INITIATIVE.—There are authorized to be appropriated for fiscal year 2007, $50,000,000 to conduct joint training exercises regarding interdiction of weapons of mass destruction under the Proliferation Security Initiative. Particular emphasis should be given to allocating funds from such amount—

(1) to invite other countries that do not participate in the Proliferation Security Initiative to observe the joint training exercises; and

(2) to conduct training exercises with countries that openly join the Proliferation Security Initiative after the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 1332. SENSE OF CONGRESS RELATING TO INTERNATIONAL SECURITY STANDARDS FOR NUCLEAR WEAPONS AND MATERIALS.

It is the sense of Congress that the President should seek to devise and implement standards to improve the security of nuclear weapons and materials by—

(1) establishing with other willing nations a set of performance-based standards for the security of nuclear weapons and weapons;

(2) negotiating with those nations an agreement to adopt the standards and implement appropriate verification measures to assure ongoing compliance; and

(3) coordinating with those nations and the International Atomic Energy Agency to strongly encourage other states to adopt and verifiably implement the standards.

SEC. 1333. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS RELATING TO INVENTORY OF RUSSIAN TACTICAL NUCLEAR WARHEADS AND DATA EXCHANGES.

In addition to any other amounts authorized to be appropriated for such purposes, there are authorized to be appropriated to the Administrator for Nuclear Security for fiscal year 2007, $5,000,000 for assistance to Russia to facilitate the conduct of a comprehensive inventory of the stockpile of Russia of—

(1) non-strategic nuclear weapons; and

(2) nuclear weapons, whether strategic or non-strategic, that are not secured by PALs or other electronic means.

SEC. 1334. REPORT ON ACCOUNTING FOR AND SECURING OF RUSSIA’S NON-STRATEGIC NUCLEAR WEAPONS.

Not later than 120 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Defense shall submit to the appropriate congressional committees a report on Russia’s non-strategic nuclear weapons. The report shall—

(1) detail past and current efforts of the United States to encourage a proper accounting for and securing of Russia’s non-strategic nuclear weapons and Russia’s nuclear weapons, whether strategic or non-strategic, that are not secured by PALs or other electronic means;

(2) detail the actions that are most likely to lead to progress in improving the accounting for and securing or dismantlement of such weapons; and

(3) detail the feasibility of enhancing the national security of the United States by developing increased transparency between the United States and Russia with respect to the numbers, locations, and descriptions of such weapons and of the corresponding weapons of the United States.

SEC. 1335. RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT INVOLVING ALTERNATIVE USE OF WEAPONS OF MASS DESTRUCTION EXPERTISE.

(a) AUTHORITY TO USE FUNDS.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law and subject to subsection (c), any funds available to a department or agency of the Federal Government may be used to conduct non-defense research and development in Russia and the states of the former Soviet Union on technologies specified in subsection (b) utilizing scientists in Russia and the states of the former Soviet Union who have expertise in—

- (1) nuclear weapons; or
- (2) chemical or biological weapons, but only if such scientists no longer engage, or have never engaged, in activities supporting prohibited chemical or biological capabilities.

(b) TECHNOLOGIES.—The technologies specified in this subsection are technologies on the following:

- (1) Environmental restoration and monitoring.
- (2) Proliferation detection.
- (3) Health and medicine, including research.
- (4) Energy.

(c) LIMITATION.—Funds may not be used under subsection (a) for research and development if the Secretary of State, in consultation with the Secretary of Defense and the Secretary of Energy, determines that such research and development will—

- (1) pose a threat to the security interests of the United States; or
- (2) further materially any defense technology.

(d) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—There is authorized to be appropriated to the Department of State $20,000,000 for fiscal year 2007 for the following purposes:

(A) To make determinations under subsection (c).

(B) To defray any increase in costs incurred by the Department of State, or any other department or agency of the Federal Government, for research and development, or demonstration, as a result of research and development conducted under this section.

(2) AVAILABILITY.—(A) Amounts authorized to be appropriated by paragraph (1) are authorized to remain available until expended.

(B) Any amount transferred to a department or agency of the Federal Government pursuant to paragraph (1)(B) shall be merged with amounts available to such department or agency to cover costs concerned, and shall be available for the same purposes, and for the same period, as amounts with which merged.

SEC. 1336. STRENGTHENING THE NUCLEAR NON-PROLIFERATION TREATY.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress makes the following findings:

(1) Article IV of the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons (commonly referred to as the Nuclear Nonproliferation Treaty or NPT) (21 UST 483) states that countries that are parties to the treaty have the “inalienable right . . . to develop research, production and use of nuclear energy for peaceful purposes without discrimination and in conformity with articles I and II of this treaty.”

(2) The rights outlined under article IV include all fuel cycle activities, despite the fact that uranium enrichment and plutonium production potentially put a country in a position to produce weapons usable material.

(3) David Bergmann, former chairman of the Israeli Atomic Energy Commission, stated: “. . . by developing atomic energy for peaceful uses, you reach the nuclear weapon option. There are not two atomic energies”.

(4) The wording of article IV has made it possible for countries that are parties to the NPT treaty to use peaceful nuclear programs as a cover for weapons programs. In particular, the misuse by North Korea and Iran of these provisions threatens to undercut the viability of the nuclear nonproliferation regime and the entire system of international nuclear commerce.

(5) If the international community fails to devise effective measures to deal with the “loophole” in article IV, then there is a great likelihood that the ranks of countries possessing nuclear weapons will increase markedly in the next decade.

(b) PRESIDENTIAL REPORT ON CONTROL OF NUCLEAR FUEL CYCLE TECHNOLOGIES AND MATERIAL.—Not later than 90 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the President shall submit to the appropriate congressional committees a report identifying ways to more effectively control nuclear fuel cycle technologies and material, including ways that the United States can mobilize the international community to close the “loophole” of article IV of the NPT, without undermining the treaty itself.

SEC. 1337. DEFINITIONS.

In this subtitle:

(1) APPROPRIATE CONGRESSIONAL COMMITTEES.—The term “appropriate congressional committees” means—

(A) the Committee on International Relations, the Committee on Armed Services, the Committee on Homeland Security, and the Committee on Appropriations of the House of Representatives; and

(B) the Committee on Foreign Relations, the Committee on Armed Services, the Committee on Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs, and the Committee on Appropriations of the Senate.

(2) COOPERATIVE THREAT REDUCTION PROGRAMS.—The term “Cooperative Threat Reduction programs” means programs and activities specified in section 1501(b) of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1997 (Public Law 104-201; 110 Stat. 2731; 50 U.S.C. 2362 note).

DIVISION B—COMBATTING TERRORISM

SEC. 2001. SHORT TITLE.

This division may be cited as the “Targeting Terrorists More Effectively Act of 2006”.

TITLE XXI—EFFECTIVELY TARGETING TERRORISTS

SEC. 2101. SENSE OF CONGRESS ON SPECIAL OPERATIONS FORCES AND RELATED MATTERS.

It is the sense of Congress that—

(1) the number of active-duty Army Special Forces-qualified personnel should be increased during the four years after the date of the enactment of this Act so that on the date that is four years after the date of such enactment such number is 9,290;

(2) an additional 16 Predator aircraft should be acquired for the Air Force Special Operations Command by the end of fiscal year 2008;

(3) an additional Special Operations squadron should be established not later than fiscal year 2009; and

(4) the increase in the number of regular and reserve component personnel who are assigned civil affairs duty should be accelerated.

SEC. 2102. FOREIGN LANGUAGE EXPERTISE.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress makes the following findings:

(1) Success in the global war on terrorism will require a dramatic increase in institutional and personal expertise in the languages and cultures of the societies where terrorism has taken root, including a substantial increase in the number of national security personnel who obtain expert lingual training.

(2) The National Commission on Terrorist Attacks Upon the United States identified the countries in the Middle East, South Asia, Southeast Asia, and West Africa as countries that serve or could serve as terrorist havens.

(3) Although 22 countries have Arabic as their official language, the National Commission on Terrorist Attacks Upon the United States found that a total of only 6 undergraduate degrees for the study of Arabic were granted by United States colleges and universities in 2002.

(4) The report of the National Commission on Terrorist Attacks Upon the United States contained several criticisms of the lack of linguistic expertise in the Central Intelligence Agency and the Federal Bureau of Investigation prior to the September 11, 2001 terrorist attacks, and called for the Central Intelligence Agency to “develop a stronger language program, with high standards and sufficient financial incentives”.

(5) An audit conducted by the Department of Justice in July 2004, revealed that the Federal Bureau of Investigation has a backlog of hundreds of thousands of untranslated audio recordings from terror and espionage investigations.

(6) The National Security Education Program Trust Fund, which funds critical grant and scholarship programs for linguistic training in regions critical to national security, will have exhausted all its funding by fiscal year 2006, unless additional appropriations are made to the Trust Fund.

(b) SENSE OF CONGRESS.—It is the sense of Congress that—

(1) the overwhelming majority of Muslims reject terrorism and a small, radical minority has grossly distorted the teachings of one of the world’s great faiths to seek justification for acts of terrorism, such radical Islamic fundamentalism constitutes a primary threat to the national security interests of the United States, and an effective strategy for combating terrorism should include increasing the number of personnel throughout the Federal Government with expertise in languages spoken in predominately Muslim countries and in the culture of such countries;

(2) Muslim-Americans constitute an integral and cherished part of the fabric of American society and possess many talents, including linguistic, historic, and cultural expertise that should be harnessed in the war against radical, fundamentalist terror; and

(3) amounts appropriated for the National Flagship Language Initiative pursuant to the amendments made by subsection (e)(2) should be used to support the establishment, operation, and improvement of programs for the study of Arabic, Persian, and other Middle Eastern, South Asian, Southeast Asian, and West African languages in institutes of higher education in the United States.

(c) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—

(1) NATIONAL SECURITY EDUCATION TRUST FUND.—Section 810 of the David L. Boren National Security Education Act of 1991 (50 U.S.C. 1910) is amended by adding at the end the following:

“(d) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS FOR THE FUND FOR FISCAL YEAR 2007.—

“(1) IN GENERAL.—There are authorized to be appropriated to the Fund $150,000,000 for fiscal year 2007.

“(2) AVAILABILITY OF FUNDS.—Amounts appropriated pursuant to the authorization of appropriations in paragraph (1) shall remain available until expended and not more than $15,000,000 of such amounts may be obligated and expended during any fiscal year.”

(2) NATIONAL FLAGSHIP LANGUAGE INITIATIVE.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—Section 811(a) of the David L. Boren National Security Education

Act of 1991 (50 U.S.C. 1911(a)) is amended by striking “there is authorized to be appropriated to the Secretary for each fiscal year, beginning with fiscal year 2003, $10,000,000” and inserting “there are authorized to be appropriated to the Secretary for each fiscal year 2003 through 2006, $10,000,000, and for each fiscal year after fiscal year 2006, $20,000,000.”

(B) AVAILABILITY OF FUNDS.—Section 811(b) of such Act (50 U.S.C. 1911(b)) is amended by inserting “for fiscal years 2003 through 2006” after “this section”.

(3) DEMONSTRATION PROGRAM.—There are authorized to be appropriated to the Director of National Intelligence such sums as may be necessary for each of fiscal years 2007, 2008, and 2009 in order to carry out the demonstration program established under subsection (c).

SEC. 2103. CURTAILING TERRORIST FINANCING.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress makes the following findings:

(1) The report of the National Commission on Terrorist Attacks Upon the United States stated that “[v]igorous efforts to track terrorist financing must remain front and center in United States counterterrorism efforts”.

(2) The report of the Independent Task Force sponsored by the Council on Foreign Relations stated that “currently existing U. S. and international policies, programs, structures, and organizations will be inadequate to assure sustained results commensurate with the ongoing threat posed to the national security of the United States”.

(3) The report of the Independent Task Force contained the conclusion that “[l]ong-term success will depend critically upon the structure, integration, and focus of the U. S. Government—and any intergovernmental efforts undertaken to address this problem”.

(b) POLICY.—It is the policy of the United States—

(1) to work with the Government of Saudi Arabia to curtail terrorist financing originating from that country using a range of methods, including diplomacy, intelligence, and law enforcement;

(2) to ensure effective coordination and sufficient resources for efforts of the agencies and departments of the United States to disrupt terrorist financing by carrying out, through the Office of Terrorism and Financial Intelligence in the Department of the Treasury, a comprehensive analysis of the budgets and activities of all such agencies and departments that are related to disrupting the financing of terrorist organizations;

(3) to provide each agency or department of the United States with the appropriate number of personnel to carry out the activities of such agency or department related to disrupting the financing of terrorist organizations;

(4) to centralize the coordination of the efforts of the United States to combat terrorist financing and utilize existing authorities to identify foreign jurisdictions and foreign financial institutions suspected of abetting terrorist financing and take actions to prevent the provision of assistance to terrorists; and

(5) to work with other countries to develop and enforce strong domestic terrorist financing laws, and increase funding for bilateral and multilateral programs to enhance training and capacity-building in countries who request assistance.

(c) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS TO PROVIDE TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE TO PREVENT FINANCING OF TERRORISTS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—There are authorized to be appropriated to the President for the “Economic Support Fund” to provide technical assistance under the provisions of chapter 4 of part II of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 (22 U.S.C. 2346 et seq.) to foreign countries to assist such countries in preventing the financing of terrorist activities—

(A) for fiscal year 2007, $300,000,000; and
(B) for fiscal years 2008 and 2009, such sums as may be necessary.

(2) AVAILABILITY OF FUNDS.—Amounts appropriated pursuant to the authorization of appropriations in this subsection are authorized to remain available until expended.

(3) ADDITIONAL FUNDS.—Amounts authorized to be appropriated under this subsection are in addition to amounts otherwise available for such purposes.

SEC. 2104. PROHIBITION ON TRANSACTIONS WITH COUNTRIES THAT SUPPORT TERRORISM.

(a) CLARIFICATION OF CERTAIN ACTIONS UNDER IEPPA.—In any case in which the President takes action under the International Emergency Economic Powers Act (50 U.S.C. 1701 et seq.) with respect to a foreign country, or persons dealing with or associated with the government of that foreign country, and the government of that foreign country is determined by the Secretary of State to have repeatedly provided support for acts of international terrorism, such action shall apply to a United States person or other person.

(b) DEFINITIONS.—In this section:

(1) CONTROLLED IN FACT.—The term “is controlled in fact” includes—

(A) in the case of a corporation, holds at least 50 percent (by vote or value) of the capital structure of the corporation; and

(B) in the case of any other kind of legal entity, holds interests representing at least 50 percent of the capital structure of the entity.

(2) STATE.—The term “State” means each of the several States of the United States, the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, Guam, the Virgin Islands, and other territories or possessions of the United States.

(3) UNITED STATES PERSON.—The term “United States person” includes any United States citizen, permanent resident alien, entity organized under the law of the United States or of any State (including foreign branches), wherever located, or any other person in the United States.

(c) APPLICABILITY.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—In any case in which the President has taken action under the International Emergency Economic Powers Act and such action is in effect on the date of the enactment of this Act, the provisions of subsection (a) shall not apply to a United States person (or other person) if such person divests or terminates its business with the government or person identified by such action within 90 days after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(2) ACTIONS AFTER DATE OF ENACTMENT.—In any case in which the President takes action under the International Emergency Economic Powers Act on or after the date of the enactment of this Act, the provisions of subsection (a) shall not apply to a United States person (or other person) if such person divests or terminates its business with the government or person identified by such action within 90 days after the date of such action.

(d) NOTIFICATION OF CONGRESS OF TERMINATION OF INVESTIGATION BY OFFICE OF FOREIGN ASSETS CONTROL.—The Office of Federal

Procurement Policy Act (41 U.S.C. 403 et seq.) is amended by adding at the end the following new section:

“SEC. 42. NOTIFICATION OF CONGRESS OF TERMINATION OF INVESTIGATION BY OFFICE OF FOREIGN ASSETS CONTROL.

“The Director of the Office of Foreign Assets Control shall notify Congress upon the termination of any investigation by the Office of Foreign Assets Control of the Department of the Treasury if any sanction is imposed by the Director of such office as a result of the investigation.”

SEC. 2105. COMPTROLLER GENERAL REPORT ON UNITED KINGDOM AND UNITED STATES ANTI-TERRORISM POLICIES AND PRACTICES.

(a) REPORT REQUIRED.—Not later than July 1, 2007, the Comptroller General of the United States shall submit to Congress a report setting forth a comparative analysis of the anti-terrorism policies and practices of the United Kingdom and the United States.

(b) ELEMENTS.—The report required by subsection (a) shall include a comparative analysis of the following:

(1) The counter-intelligence laws and methods of the United Kingdom and the United States.

(2) The structure of the intelligence and law enforcement agencies of the United Kingdom Government and the United States Government.

(3) The compliance by the executive agencies of the United Kingdom and the United States with the laws of such country applicable to terrorism.

(4) The constitutional and legal considerations that enter into the development of anti-terrorism policies in the United Kingdom and the United States.

SEC. 2106. ENHANCEMENT OF INTELLIGENCE COMMUNITY EFFORTS TO BRING OSAMA BIN LADEN AND OTHER AL QAEDA LEADERS TO JUSTICE.

(a) ADDITIONAL APPROPRIATION FOR INTELLIGENCE COMMUNITY MANAGEMENT ACCOUNT.—There is hereby appropriated for the fiscal year ending September 30, 2007, for the Intelligence Community Management Account $200,000,000 which amount shall be available only for a unit dedicated to bringing to justice Osama bin Laden and other key leaders of al Qaeda.

(b) REPORTS ON EFFORTS.—Not later than 60 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, and every 90 days thereafter, the Secretary of Defense shall, in consultation with other appropriate officials, submit to the congressional defense committees, the Committee on International Relations of the House of Representatives, and the Committee on Foreign Relations of the Senate a classified report on progress made by the operations in the global war on terrorism for which funding is provided in subsection (a), including—

(1) an assessment of the likely current location of terrorist leaders (including Osama bin Laden and other key leaders of al Qaeda);

(2) a description of ongoing efforts to bring to justice such terrorists;

(3) a description of the cooperation provided by the governments of any countries assessed as likely locations of top leaders of al Qaeda and by other relevant countries;

(4) a description of diplomatic efforts currently being made to improve the cooperation of any governments described in paragraph (3); and

(5) a description of the status of, and strategy for bringing to justice, perpetrators of terrorism including the top leadership of al Qaeda.

TITLE XXII—PREVENTING THE GROWTH OF RADICAL ISLAMIC FUNDAMENTALISM
Subtitle A—Quality Educational Opportunities

SEC. 2201. FINDINGS, POLICY, AND DEFINITION.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress makes the following findings:

(1) The report of the National Commission on Terrorist Attacks Upon the United States stated that “[e]ducation that teaches tolerance, the dignity and value of each individual, and respect for different beliefs is a key element in any global strategy to eliminate Islamic terrorism”.

(2) According to the United Nations Development Program Arab Human Development Report for 2002, 10,000,000 children between the ages of 6 through 15 in the Arab world do not attend school, and ⅓ of the 65,000,000 illiterate adults in the Arab world are women.

(3) The report of the National Commission on Terrorist Attacks Upon the United States concluded that ensuring educational opportunity is essential to the efforts of the United States to defeat global terrorism and recommended that the United States Government “should offer to join with other nations in generously supporting [spending funds] . . . directly on building and operating primary and secondary schools in those Muslim states that commit to sensibly investing financial resources in public education”.

(b) POLICY.—It is the policy of the United States—

(1) to work toward the goal of dramatically increasing the availability of basic education in the developing world, which will reduce the influence of radical madrassas and other institutions that promote religious extremism;

(2) to join with other countries in generously supporting the International Youth Opportunity Fund authorized under section 7114 of the 9/11 Commission Implementation Act of 2004 (Public Law 108-458), with the goal of building and operating primary and secondary schools in Muslim countries that commit to sensibly investing the resources of such countries in public education;

(3) to work with the international community, including foreign countries and international organizations to raise $7,000,000,000 to $10,000,000,000 each year to fund education programs in Muslim countries;

(4) to offer additional incentives to countries to increase the availability of basic education; and

(5) to work to prevent financing of educational institutions that support radical Islamic fundamentalism.

(c) APPROPRIATE CONGRESSIONAL COMMITTEES DEFINED.—In this subtitle, the term “appropriate congressional committees” means the Committee on Foreign Relations and the Committee on Appropriations of the Senate and the Committee on International Relations and the Committee on Appropriations of the House of Representatives.

SEC. 2202. ANNUAL REPORT TO CONGRESS.

Not later than June 1 each year, the Secretary of State shall submit to the appropriate congressional committees a report on the efforts of countries in the developing world to increase the availability of basic education and to close educational institutions that promote religious extremism and terrorism. Each report shall include—

(1) a list of countries that are making serious and sustained efforts to increase the availability of basic education and to close educational institutions that promote religious extremism and terrorism;

(2) a list of countries that are making efforts to increase the availability of basic education and to close educational institutions that promote religious extremism and terrorism, but such efforts are not serious and sustained; and

(3) a list of countries that are not making efforts to increase the availability of basic education and to close educational institutions that promote religious extremism and terrorism.

SEC. 2203. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

(a) INTERNATIONAL EDUCATION PROGRAMS.—There are authorized to be appropriated to the President for “Development Assistance” for international education programs carried out under sections 105 and 496 of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 (22 U.S.C. 2151c and 2293)—

(1) for fiscal year 2007, $1,000,000,000; and

(2) for fiscal years 2008 and 2009, such sums as may be necessary.

(b) INTERNATIONAL YOUTH OPPORTUNITY FUND.—There are authorized to be appropriated to the President for fiscal years 2007, 2008, and 2009 such sums as may be necessary for the United States contribution to the International Youth Opportunity Fund authorized under section 7114 of the 9/11 Commission Implementation Act of 2004 (Public Law 108-458) for international education programs.

(c) ADDITIONAL FUNDS.—Amounts authorized to be appropriated in this section are in addition to amounts otherwise available for such purposes.

Subtitle B—Democracy and Development in the Muslim World

SEC. 2211. PROMOTING DEMOCRACY AND DEVELOPMENT IN THE MIDDLE EAST, CENTRAL ASIA, SOUTH ASIA, AND SOUTHEAST ASIA.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress makes the following findings:

(1) Al-Qaeda and affiliated groups have established a terrorist network with linkages throughout the Middle East, Central Asia, South Asia, and Southeast Asia.

(2) While political repression and lack of economic development do not justify terrorism, increased political freedoms and economic growth can contribute to an environment that undercuts tendencies and conditions that facilitate the rise of terrorist organizations.

(3) It is in the national security interests of the United States to promote democracy, good governance, political freedom, independent media, women’s rights, private sector development, and open economic systems in the countries of the Middle East, Central Asia, South Asia, and Southeast Asia.

(b) POLICY.—It is the policy of the United States—

(1) to promote the objectives described in subsection (a)(3) in the countries of the Middle East, Central Asia, South Asia, and Southeast Asia;

(2) to provide assistance and resources to organizations that are committed to promoting such objectives; and

(3) to work with other countries and international organizations to increase the resources devoted to promoting such objectives.

(c) STRATEGY.—Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of State shall submit to Congress a strategy to promote the policy of the United States set out in subsection (b). Such strategy shall describe how funds appropriated pursuant to the authorization of appropriations in subsection (d) will be used.

(d) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—There are authorized to be appropriated to the President for the “Economie Support Fund” for activities carried out under chapter 4 of part II of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 (22 U.S.C. 2346 et seq.) to promote the policy of the United States set out in subsection (b)—

(A) for fiscal year 2007, $500,000,000; and

(B) for fiscal years 2008 and 2009, such sums as may be necessary.

(2) SENSE OF CONGRESS ON USE OF FUNDS.—It is the sense of Congress that a substantial portion of the funds appropriated pursuant to the authorization of appropriations in paragraph (1) should be made available to non-governmental organizations that have a record of success working in the countries of the Middle East, Central Asia, South Asia, and Southeast Asia to build and support democratic institutions, democratic parties, human rights organizations, independent media, and the efforts to promote the rights of women.

(3) ADDITIONAL FUNDS.—Amounts authorized to be appropriated in paragraph (1) are in addition to amounts otherwise available for such purposes.

SEC. 2212. MIDDLE EAST FOUNDATION.

(a) PURPOSES.—The purposes of this section are to support, through the provision of grants, technical assistance, training, and other programs, in the countries of the Middle East, the expansion of—

(1) civil society;

(2) opportunities for political participation for all citizens;

(3) protections for internationally recognized human rights, including the rights of women;

(4) educational system reforms;

(5) independent media;

(6) policies that promote economic opportunities for citizens;

(7) the rule of law; and

(8) democratic processes of government.

(b) MIDDLE EAST FOUNDATION.—

(1) DESIGNATION.—The Secretary of State is authorized to designate an appropriate private, nonprofit organization that is organized or incorporated under the laws of the United States or of a State as the Middle East Foundation (referred to in this section as the “Foundation”).

(2) FUNDING.—The Secretary of State is authorized to provide funding to the Foundation through the Middle East Partnership Initiative of the Department of State. The Foundation shall use amounts provided under this paragraph to carry out the purposes of this section, including through making grants and providing other assistance to entities to carry out programs for such purposes.

(3) NOTIFICATION TO CONGRESSIONAL COMMITTEES.—The Secretary of State shall notify the Committee on Foreign Relations of the Senate and the Committee on International Relations of the House of Representatives prior to designating an appropriate organization as the Foundation.

(c) GRANTS FOR PROJECTS.—

(1) FOUNDATION TO MAKE GRANTS.—The Secretary of State shall enter into an agreement with the Foundation that requires the Foundation to use the funds provided under subsection (b)(2) to make grants to persons (other than governments or government entities) located in the Middle East or working with local partners based in the Middle East to carry out projects that support the purposes specified in subsection (a).

(2) CENTER FOR PUBLIC POLICY.—Under the agreement described in paragraph (1), the Foundation may make a grant to an institution of higher education located in the Middle East to create a center for public policy for the purpose of permitting scholars and professionals from the countries of the Middle East and from other countries, including the United States, to carry out research, training programs, and other activities to inform public policymaking in the Middle East and to promote broad economic, social, and political reform for the people of the Middle East.

(3) APPLICATIONS FOR GRANTS.—An entity seeking a grant from the Foundation under this section shall submit an application to the head of the Foundation at such time, in such manner, and including such information as the head of the Foundation may reasonably require.

(d) PRIVATE CHARACTER OF THE FOUNDATION.—Nothing in this section shall be construed to—

(1) make the Foundation an agency or establishment of the United States Government, or to make the officers or employees of the Foundation officers or employees of the United States for purposes of title 5, United States Code; or

(2) to impose any restriction on the Foundation's acceptance of funds from private and public sources in support of its activities consistent with the purposes of this section.

(e) LIMITATION ON PAYMENTS TO FOUNDATION PERSONNEL.—No part of the funds provided to the Foundation under this section shall inure to the benefit of any officer or employee of the Foundation, except as salary or reasonable compensation for services.

(f) RETENTION OF INTEREST.—The Foundation may hold funds provided under this section in interest-bearing accounts prior to the disbursement of such funds to carry out the purposes of this section, and may retain for use for such purposes any interest earned without returning such interest to the Treasury of the United States and without further appropriation by Congress.

(g) FINANCIAL ACCOUNTABILITY.—

(1) INDEPENDENT PRIVATE AUDITS OF THE FOUNDATION.—The accounts of the Foundation shall be audited annually in accordance with generally accepted auditing standards by independent certified public accountants or independent licensed public accountants certified or licensed by a regulatory authority of a State or other political subdivision of the United States. The report of the independent audit shall be included in the annual report required by subsection (h).

(2) GAO AUDITS.—The financial transactions undertaken pursuant to this section by the Foundation may be audited by the General Accounting Office in accordance with such principles and procedures and under such rules and regulations as may be prescribed by the Comptroller General of the United States.

(3) AUDITS OF GRANT RECIPIENTS.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—A recipient of a grant from the Foundation shall agree to permit an audit of the books and records of such recipient related to the use of the grant funds.

(B) RECORDKEEPING.—Such recipient shall maintain appropriate books and records to facilitate an audit referred to subparagraph (A), including—

(i) separate accounts with respect to the grant funds;

(ii) records that fully disclose the use of the grant funds;

(iii) records describing the total cost of any project carried out using grant funds; and

(iv) the amount and nature of any funds received from other sources that were combined with the grant funds to carry out a project.

(h) ANNUAL REPORTS.—Not later than January 31, 2007, and annually thereafter, the Foundation shall submit to Congress and make available to the public an annual report that includes, for the fiscal year prior to the fiscal year in which the report is submitted, a comprehensive and detailed description of—

(1) the operations and activities of the Foundation that were carried out using funds provided under this section;

(2) grants made by the Foundation to other entities with funds provided under this section;

(3) other activities of the Foundation to further the purposes of this section; and

(4) the financial condition of the Foundation.

Subtitle C—Restoring American Moral Leadership

SEC. 2221. ADVANCING UNITED STATES INTERESTS THROUGH PUBLIC DIPLOMACY.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress makes the following findings:

(1) The United States needs to improve its communication of information and ideas to people in foreign countries, particularly in countries with significant Muslim populations.

(2) Public diplomacy should reaffirm the paramount commitment of the United States to democratic principles, including preserving the civil liberties of all the people of the United States, including Muslim-Americans.

(3) The report of the National Commission on Terrorist Attacks Upon the United States stated that, "Recognizing that Arab and Muslim audiences rely on satellite television and radio, the government has begun some promising initiatives in television and radio broadcasting to the Arab world, Iran, and Afghanistan. These efforts are beginning to reach large audiences. The Broadcasting Board of Governors has asked for much larger resources. It should get them."

(4) A significant expansion of United States international broadcasting would provide a cost-effective means of improving communication with countries with significant Muslim populations by providing news, information, and analysis, as well as cultural programming, through both radio and television broadcasts.

(b) SPECIAL AUTHORITY FOR SURGE CAPACITY.—The United States International Broadcasting Act of 1994 (22 U.S.C. 6201 et seq.) is amended by adding at the end the following new section:

"SEC. 316. SPECIAL AUTHORITY FOR SURGE CAPACITY.

"(a) EMERGENCY AUTHORITY.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Whenever the President determines it to be important to the national interests of the United States and so certifies to the appropriate congressional committees, the President, on such terms and conditions as the President may determine, is authorized to direct any department, agency, or other entity of the United States to furnish the Broadcasting Board of Governors with such assistance as may be necessary to provide international broadcasting activities of the United States with a surge capacity to support United States foreign policy objectives during a crisis abroad.

"(2) SUPERSEDES EXISTING LAW.—The authority of paragraph (1) supersedes any other provision of law.

"(3) SURGE CAPACITY DEFINED.—In this subsection, the term 'surge capacity' means the financial and technical resources necessary to carry out broadcasting activities in a geographical area during a crisis.

"(b) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—There are authorized to be appropriated to the President such sums as may be necessary for the President to carry out this section, except that no such amount may be appropriated which, when added to amounts previously appropriated for such purpose but not yet obligated, would cause such amounts to exceed $25,000,000.

"(2) AVAILABILITY OF FUNDS.—Amounts appropriated pursuant to the authorization of appropriations in this subsection are authorized to remain available until expended.

"(3) DESIGNATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—Amounts appropriated pursuant to the authorization of appropriations in this subsection may be referred to as the 'United States International Broadcasting Surge Capacity Fund'."

(c) REPORT.—An annual report submitted to the President and Congress by the Broadcasting Board of Governors under section 305(a)(9) of the United States International Broadcasting Act of 1994 (22 U.S.C. 6204(a)(9)) shall provide a detailed description of any activities carried out under section 316 of such Act, as added by subsection (b).

(d) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS FOR UNITED STATES INTERNATIONAL BROADCASTING ACTIVITIES.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—In addition to amounts otherwise available for such purposes, the following amounts are authorized to be appropriated to carry out United States Government broadcasting activities under the United States Information and Educational Exchange Act of 1948 (22 U.S.C. 1431 et seq.), the United States International Broadcasting Act of 1994 (22 U.S.C. 6201 et seq.), the Foreign Affairs Reform and Restructuring Act of 1998 (as enacted in division G of the Omnibus Consolidated and Emergency Supplemental Appropriations Act, 1999; Public Law 105-277), and this division, and to carry out other authorities in law consistent with such purposes:

(A) INTERNATIONAL BROADCASTING OPERATIONS.—For "International Broadcasting Operations", $500,000,000 for the fiscal year 2007.

(B) BROADCASTING CAPITAL IMPROVEMENTS.—For "Broadcasting Capital Improvements", $70,000,000 for the fiscal year 2007.

(2) AVAILABILITY OF FUNDS.—Amounts appropriated pursuant to the authorization of appropriations in this section are authorized to remain available until expended.

SEC. 2222. DEPARTMENT OF STATE PUBLIC DIPLOMACY PROGRAMS.

(a) UNITED STATES EDUCATIONAL, CULTURAL, AND PUBLIC DIPLOMACY PROGRAMS.—There are authorized to be appropriated for the Department of State to carry out public diplomacy programs of the Department under the United States Information and Educational Exchange Act of 1948, the Mutual Educational and Cultural Exchange Act of 1961, Reorganization Plan Number 2 of 1977, the Foreign Affairs Reform and Restructuring Act of 1998, the Center for Cultural and Technical Interchange Between East and West Act of 1960, the Dante B. Fascell North-South Center Act of 1991, and the National Endowment for Democracy Act, and to carry out other authorities in law consistent with the purposes of such Acts for "Educational and Cultural Exchange Programs", $500,000,000 for the fiscal year 2007.

(b) ADMINISTRATION OF FOREIGN AFFAIRS.—There are authorized to be appropriated for the Department of State under "Administration of Foreign Affairs" to carry out the authorities, functions, duties, and responsibilities in the conduct of foreign affairs of the United States, and for other purposes authorized by law for "Diplomatic and Consular Programs", $500,000,000 for the fiscal year 2007, which shall only be available for public diplomacy international information programs.

SEC. 2223. TREATMENT OF DETAINEES.

(a) FINDINGS.—Consistent with the report of the National Commission on Terrorist Attacks Upon the United States, Congress makes the following findings:

(1) Carrying out the global war on terrorism requires the development of policies with respect to the detention and treatment of captured international terrorists that are adhered to by all coalition forces.

(2) Article 3 of the Convention Relative to the Treatment of Prisoners of War, done at Geneva August 12, 1949 (6 UST 3316), was specifically designed for cases in which the usual rules of war do not apply, and the minimum standards of treatment pursuant to such Article are generally accepted throughout the world as customary international law.

(3) The Commission on Terrorist Attacks Upon the United States urged to the United States to engage its friends to develop a common coalition approach toward the detention and humane treatment of captured terrorists. The 9/11 Public Discourse Project went on to give the Administration a ranking of "unfulfilled" in this area, commenting that "[d]issection either at home or abroad on how the United States treats captured terrorists only makes it harder to build the diplomatic, political and military alliance necessary to fight the war on terror effectively".

(b) POLICY.—The policy of the United States is as follows:

(1) It is the policy of the United States to treat all foreign persons captured, detained, interned, or otherwise held in the custody of the United States (hereinafter "detainees") humanely and in accordance with the legal obligations under United States law and international law, including the obligations in the Convention Against Torture, the Geneva Conventions, and the Detainee Treatment Act of 2005.

(2) It is the policy of the United States that all officials of the United States are bound both in wartime and in peacetime by the legal prohibitions against torture, cruel, inhumane, or degrading treatment set out in the Constitution, laws, and treaties of the United States, as reiterated by the Supreme Court in Hamdan v. Rumsfeld (126 S. Ct. 2749 (2006)).

(3) If there is any doubt as to whether a detainee is entitled to the protections afforded by the Geneva Conventions, it is the policy of the United States that such detainee shall enjoy the protections of the Convention Relative to the Treatment of Prisoners of War, done at Geneva August 12, 1949 (6 UST 3316) until such time as the detainee's status can be determined pursuant to the procedures authorized by Army Regulation 190-8, Section 1-096.

(4) It is the policy of the United States to expeditiously process and, if appropriate, prosecute detainees in the custody of the United States, including detainees in custody at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba.

(c) REPORTING.—The Secretary shall submit to the appropriate congressional committees the following:

(1) Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, a report setting forth the number of individuals currently held at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, the number of such individuals who are unlikely to face a military commission in the next six months, and each reason for not bringing such individuals before a military commission.

(2) Not later than 90 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, a report setting forth all interrogation techniques approved, as of the date of the enactment of this Act, by officials of the United States for use with detainees.

(d) RULES, REGULATIONS, AND GUIDELINES.—

(1) REQUIREMENT.—Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary and the Director shall prescribe the rules, regulations, or guidelines necessary to ensure compliance with the standards of the Detainee Treatment Act of 2005 and Common Article 3 of the Geneva Conventions by all personnel of the United States Government and by any person providing services to the United States Government on a contract basis.

(2) REPORT TO CONGRESS.—The Secretary and the Director shall submit to Congress the rules, regulations, or guidelines prescribed under paragraph (1), and any modifications to such rules, regulations, or guidelines—

(A) not later than 30 days after the effective date of such rules, regulations, guidelines, or modifications; and

(B) in a manner and form that will protect the national security interests of the United States.

(e) REPORTS ON POSSIBLE VIOLATIONS.—

(1) REQUIREMENT.—The Secretary and the Director shall each submit, on a timely basis and not less than twice each year, a report to Congress on the circumstances surrounding, and a status report on, any investigation of, or prosecution on account of, a possible violation of the standards specified in subsection (d)(1) by United States Government personnel or by a person providing services to the United States Government on a contract basis.

(2) FORM OF REPORT.—A report required under paragraph (1) shall be submitted in a manner and form that—

(A) will protect the national security interests of the United States; and

(B) will not prejudice any prosecution of an individual alleged to have violated the standards specified in subsection (d)(1).

(f) DEFINITIONS.—In this section:

(1) APPROPRIATE CONGRESSIONAL COMMITTEES.—The term "appropriate congressional committees" means the Committee on Armed Services, the Committee on the Judiciary, and the Committee on Foreign Relations of the Senate and the Committee on Armed Services, the Committee on the Judiciary, and the Committee on International Relations of the House of Representatives.

(2) CONVENTION AGAINST TORTURE.—The term "Convention Against Torture" means the Convention Against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment, done at New York December 10, 1984.

(3) DIRECTOR.—The term "Director" means the Director of National Intelligence.

(4) GENEVA CONVENTIONS.—The term "Geneva Conventions" means—

(A) the Convention for the Amelioration of the Condition of the Wounded and Sick in Armed Forces in the Field, done at Geneva August 12, 1949 (6 UST 3114);

(B) the Convention for the Amelioration of the Condition of the Wounded, Sick, and Shipwrecked Members of Armed Forces at Sea, done at Geneva August 12, 1949 (6 UST 3217);

(C) the Convention Relative to the Treatment of Prisoners of War, done at Geneva August 12, 1949 (6 UST 3316); and

(D) the Convention Relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, done at Geneva August 12, 1949 (6 UST 3516).

(5) SECRETARY.—The term "Secretary" means the Secretary of Defense.

(6) TORTURE.—The term "torture" has the meaning given that term in section 2340 of title 18, United States Code.

SEC. 2224. NATIONAL COMMISSION TO REVIEW POLICY REGARDING THE TREATMENT OF DETAINEES.

(a) ESTABLISHMENT OF COMMISSION.—There is established the National Commission To Review Policy Regarding the Treatment of Detainees.

(b) PURPOSES.—The purposes of the Commission are as follows:

(1) To examine and report upon the role of policymakers in the interrogation and detention policies related to the treatment of individuals detained during Operation Iraqi Freedom or Operation Enduring Freedom.

(2) To examine and report on the causes of the alleged mistreatment of detainees by United States personnel and the impact of such mistreatment on the security of the Armed Forces of the United States.

(3) To build upon the reviews of the policies of the United States related to the treatment of individuals detained by the United States, including such reviews conducted by the executive branch, Congress, or other entities.

(c) COMPOSITION OF THE COMMISSION.—

(1) MEMBERS.—The Commission shall be composed of 15 members, of whom—

(A) 3 members shall be appointed by the majority leader of the Senate;

(B) 3 members shall be appointed by the Speaker of the House of Representatives;

(C) 3 members shall be appointed by the minority leader of the Senate;

(D) 3 members shall be appointed by the minority leader of the House of Representatives;

(E) 1 member shall be appointed by the Judge Advocate General of the Army;

(F) 1 member shall be appointed by the Judge Advocate General of the Navy; and

(G) 1 member shall be appointed by the Judge Advocate General of the Air Force.

(2) CHAIRPERSON; VICE CHAIRPERSON.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—Subject to subparagraph (B), the Chairperson and Vice Chairperson of the Commission shall be elected by the members.

(B) POLITICAL PARTY AFFILIATION.—The Chairperson and Vice Chairperson may not be from the same political party.

(3) INITIAL MEETING.—Once 10 or more members of the Commission have been appointed, those members who have been appointed may meet and, if necessary, select a temporary chairperson, who may begin the operations of the Commission, including the hiring of staff.

(4) QUORUM; VACANCIES.—After its initial meeting, the Commission shall meet upon the call of the Chairperson or a majority of its members. Eight members of the Commission shall constitute a quorum. Any vacancy in the Commission shall not affect its powers, but shall be filled in the same manner in which the original appointment was made.

(5) SENSE OF CONGRESS ON QUALIFICATIONS OF COMMISSION MEMBERS.—It is the sense of Congress that individuals appointed to the Commission should be prominent United States citizens, with national recognition and significant depth of experience in the fields of intelligence, law enforcement, or foreign affairs, or experience serving the United States Government, including service in the Armed Forces.

(d) FUNCTIONS OF THE COMMISSION.—The functions of the Commission are—

(1) to conduct an investigation that—

(A) investigates the development and implementation of policy relating to the treatment of individuals detained during Operation Iraqi Freedom or Operation Enduring Freedom;

(B) determines whether the United States policy related to the treatment of detained individuals has adversely affected the security of the members of the Armed Forces of the United States;

(C) determines the causes and factors contributing to the alleged abuse of detainees, and whether and to what extent the incidences of abuse of detained individuals has affected the standing of the United States in the world;

(D) determines whether and to what extent leaders of the United States Armed Forces were given the opportunity to comment on and influence policy relating to treatment of detained individuals;

(E) assesses the responsibility of leaders for policies and actions, or failures to act, that may have contributed to the mistreatment of detainees; and

(F) determines whether and to what extent policy relating to the treatment of individuals detained during Operation Iraqi Freedom or Operation Enduring Freedom differed from the policies and practices regarding detainees established by the Armed Forces prior to such operations; and

(2) to submit to the President and Congress such report as is required by this section containing such findings, conclusions, and recommendations as the Commission shall determine, including proposing organization, coordination, planning, management arrangements, procedures, rules, and regulations.

(e) POWERS OF THE COMMISSION.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—

(A) HEARINGS AND EVIDENCE.—The Commission or, on the authority of the Commission, any subcommittee or member thereof, may, for the purpose of carrying out this section—

(i) hold such hearings and sit and act at such times and places, take such testimony, receive such evidence, administer such oaths; and

(ii) require, by subpoena or otherwise, the attendance and testimony of such witnesses and the production of such books, records, correspondence, memoranda, cables, electronic messages, papers, and documents, as the Commission or such designated subcommittee or designated member may determine advisable.

(B) SUBPOENAS.—

(i) ISSUANCE.—Subpoenas issued under subparagraph (A)(ii) may be issued under the signature of the Chairperson of the Commission, the Vice Chairperson of the Commission, the chairperson of any subcommittee created by a majority of the Commission, or any member designated by a majority of the Commission, and may be served by any person designated by the Chairperson, subcommittee chairperson, or member.

(ii) ENFORCEMENT.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—In the case of contumacy or failure to obey a subpoena issued under subparagraph (A)(ii), the United States district court for the judicial district in which the subpoenaed person resides, is served, or may be found, or where the subpoena is returnable, may issue an order requiring such person to appear at any designated place to testify or to produce documentary or other evidence. Any failure to obey the order of the court may be punished by the court as a contempt of that court.

(II) ADDITIONAL ENFORCEMENT.—In the case of any failure of any witness to comply with any subpoena or to testify when summoned under authority of this section, the Commission may, by majority vote, certify a statement of fact constituting such failure to the appropriate United States attorney, who may bring the matter before the grand jury for its action, under the same statutory authority and procedures as if the United States attorney had received a certification under sections 102 through 104 of the Revised Statutes of the United States (2 U.S.C. 192 through 194).

(2) CLOSED MEETINGS.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—Meetings of the Commission may be closed to the public under section 10(d) of the Federal Advisory Committee Act (5 U.S.C. App.) or other applicable law.

(B) ADDITIONAL AUTHORITY.—In addition to the authority under subparagraph (A), section 10(a)(1) and (3) of the Federal Advisory Committee Act (5 U.S.C. App.) shall not apply to any portion of a Commission meeting if the President determines that such portion or portions of that meeting is likely to disclose matters that could endanger national security. If the President makes such determination, the requirements relating to a determination under section 10(d) of that Act shall apply.

(3) CONTRACTING.—The Commission may, to such extent and in such amounts as are provided in appropriation Acts, enter into contracts to enable the Commission to discharge its duties under this section.

(4) INFORMATION FROM FEDERAL AGENCIES.—The Commission is authorized to secure directly from any executive department, bureau, agency, board, commission, office, independent establishment, or instrumentality of the Government information, suggestions, estimates, and statistics for the purposes of this section. Each department, bureau, agency, board, commission, office, independent establishment, or instrumentality shall, to the extent authorized by law, furnish such information, suggestions, estimates, and statistics directly to the Commission, upon request made by the Chairperson, the chairperson of any subcommittee created by a majority of the Commission, or any member designated by a majority of the Commission.

(5) ASSISTANCE FROM FEDERAL AGENCIES.—

(A) GENERAL SERVICES ADMINISTRATION.—The Administrator of General Services shall provide to the Commission on a reimbursable basis administrative support and other services for the performance of the Commission's functions.

(B) OTHER DEPARTMENTS AND AGENCIES.—In addition to the assistance prescribed in subparagraph (A), departments and agencies of the United States are authorized to provide to the Commission such services, funds, facilities, staff, and other support services as they may determine advisable and as may be authorized by law.

(6) GIFTS.—The Commission may accept, use, and dispose of gifts or donations of services or property.

(7) POSTAL SERVICES.—The Commission may use the United States mails in the same manner and under the same conditions as departments and agencies of the United States.

(f) STAFF OF THE COMMISSION.—

(1) APPOINTMENT AND COMPENSATION.—The Chairperson and Vice Chairperson, in accordance with rules agreed upon by the Commission, may appoint and fix the compensation of a staff director and such other personnel as may be necessary to enable the Commission to carry out its functions, without regard to the provisions of title 5, United States Code, governing appointments in the competitive service, and without regard to the provisions of chapter 51 and subchapter III of chapter 53 of such title relating to classification and General Schedule pay rates, except that no rate of pay fixed under this subsection may exceed the equivalent of that payable for a position at level V of the Executive Schedule under section 5316 of title 5, United States Code.

(2) PERSONNEL AS FEDERAL EMPLOYEES.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—The executive director and any personnel of the Commission who are employees shall be employees under section 2105 of title 5, United States Code, for purposes of chapters 63, 81, 83, 84, 85, 87, 89, and 90 of that title.

(B) MEMBERS OF COMMISSION.—Subparagraph (A) shall not be construed to apply to a member of the Commission.

(3) DETAILEES.—Any Federal Government employee may be detailed to the Commission without reimbursement from the Commission, and such detailee shall retain the rights, status, and privileges of his or her regular employment without interruption.

(4) CONSULTANT SERVICES.—The Commission is authorized to procure the services of experts and consultants in accordance with section 3109 of title 5, United States Code, but at rates not to exceed the daily rate paid a person occupying a position at level IV of the Executive Schedule under section 5315 of title 5, United States Code.

(g) COMPENSATION AND TRAVEL EXPENSES.—

(1) COMPENSATION.—Each member of the Commission may be compensated at not to exceed the daily equivalent of the annual rate of basic pay in effect for a position at level IV of the Executive Schedule under section 5315 of title 5, United States Code, for each day during which that member is engaged in the actual performance of the duties of the Commission.

(2) TRAVEL EXPENSES.—While away from their homes or regular places of business in the performance of services for the Commission, members of the Commission shall be allowed travel expenses, including per diem in lieu of subsistence, in the same manner as persons employed intermittently in the Government service are allowed expenses under section 5703(b) of title 5, United States Code.

(h) SECURITY CLEARANCES FOR COMMISSION MEMBERS AND STAFF.—The appropriate departments and agencies of the Government shall cooperate with the Commission in expeditiously providing to the Commission members and staff appropriate security clearances in a manner consistent with existing procedures and requirements, except that no person shall be provided with access to classified information under this section who would not otherwise qualify for such security clearance.

(i) REPORT OF THE COMMISSION.—Not later than 9 months after the date of the first meeting of the Commission, the Commission shall submit to the President and Congress a report containing such findings, conclusions, and recommendations as have been agreed to by a majority of Commission members.

(j) TERMINATION.—

(1) TERMINATION.—The Commission, and all the authorities of this section, shall terminate 60 days after the date on which the report is submitted under subsection (i).

(2) ADMINISTRATIVE ACTIVITIES BEFORE TERMINATION.—The Commission may use the 60-day period referred to in paragraph (1) for the purpose of concluding its activities, including providing testimony to committees of Congress concerning its reports and disseminating the second report.

(k) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated to the Commission to carry out this section $5,000,000, to remain available until expended.

Subtitle D—Strategy for the United States Relationship With Afghanistan, Pakistan, and Saudi Arabia

SEC. 2231. AFGHANISTAN.

(a) AFGHANISTAN FREEDOM SUPPORT ACT OF 2002.—Section 108(a) the Afghanistan Freedom Support Act of 2002 (22 U.S.C. 7518(a)) is amended by striking “such sums as may be necessary for each of the fiscal years 2005 and 2006” and inserting “$2,400,000,000 for fiscal year 2007 and such sums as may be necessary for each of the fiscal years 2008 and 2009”.

(b) OTHER AUTHORIZATIONS OF APPROPRIATIONS FOR FOREIGN RELATIONS ACTIVITIES.—

(1) FISCAL YEAR 2007.—There are authorized to be appropriated to the President for providing assistance for Afghanistan in a manner consistent with the provisions of the Afghanistan Freedom Support Act of 2002 (22 U.S.C. 7501 et seq.) for fiscal year 2007—

(A) for “International Military Education and Training”, $1,000,000 to carry out the provisions of section 541 of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 (22 U.S.C. 2347);

(B) for “Foreign Military Financing Program” grants, $444,000,000 to carry out the provisions of section 23 of the Arms Export Control Act (22 U.S.C. 2763); and

(C) for “Peacekeeping Operations”, $30,000,000 to carry out the provisions of section 551 of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 (22 U.S.C. 2348).

(2) FISCAL YEARS 2008 AND 2009.—

(A) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATION.—There are authorized to be appropriated for each of the purposes described in subparagraphs (A) through (C) of paragraph (1) such sums as may be necessary for each of the fiscal years 2008 and 2009.

(B) SENSE OF CONGRESS.—It is the sense of Congress that the amount appropriated for each purpose described in subparagraphs (A) through (C) of paragraph (1) for each of the fiscal years 2008 and 2009 should be an amount that is equal to 125 percent of the amount appropriated for such purpose during the preceding fiscal year.

(c) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS FOR OPERATION AND MAINTENANCE, DEFENSE-WIDE.—There are authorized to be appropriated for fiscal year 2007 for the use of the Armed Forces and other activities and agencies of the Department of Defense for expenses, not otherwise provided for, for operation and maintenance, for Defense-wide activities, $20,000,000 for support to provisional reconstruction teams in Afghanistan.

(d) OTHER FUNDS.—Amounts authorized to be appropriated under this section are in addition to amounts otherwise available for such purposes.

SEC. 2232. PAKISTAN.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress makes the following findings:

(1) Since September 11, 2001, the Government of Pakistan has been an important partner in helping the United States remove the Taliban regime in Afghanistan and combating international terrorism in the frontier provinces of Pakistan.

(2) There remain a number of critical issues that threaten to disrupt the relationship between the United States and Pakistan, undermine international security, and destabilize Pakistan, including—

(A) curbing the proliferation of nuclear weapons technology;

(B) combating poverty and corruption;

(C) building effective government institutions, especially secular public schools;

(D) promoting democracy and rule of law, particularly at the national level; and

(E) effectively dealing with Islamic extremism.

(b) POLICY.—It is the policy of the United States—

(1) to work with the Government of Pakistan to combat international terrorism, especially in the frontier provinces of Pakistan;

(2) to establish a long-term strategic partnership with the Government of Pakistan to address the issues described in subparagraphs (A) through (E) of subsection (a)(2);

(3) to dramatically increase funding for United States Agency for International Development and Department of State programs that assist Pakistan in addressing such issues, if the Government of Pakistan demonstrates a commitment to building a moderate, democratic state; and

(4) to work with the international community to secure additional financial and political support to effectively implement the policies set forth in this subsection and help to resolve the dispute between the Government of Pakistan and the Government of India over the disputed territory of Kashmir.

(c) STRATEGY ON PAKISTAN.—

(1) REQUIREMENT FOR REPORT ON STRATEGY.—Not later than 90 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the President shall submit to the appropriate congressional committees a report, in classified form if necessary, that describes the long-term strategy of the United States to engage with the Government of Pakistan to address the issues described in subparagraphs (A) through (E) of subsection (a)(2) in order to accomplish the goal of building a moderate, democratic Pakistan.

(2) APPROPRIATE CONGRESSIONAL COMMITTEES DEFINED.—In this subsection the term “appropriate congressional committees” means—

(A) the Committees on Appropriations, Armed Services, and Foreign Relations of the Senate; and

(B) the Committees on Appropriations, Armed Services, and International Relations of the House of Representatives.

(d) NUCLEAR PROLIFERATION.—

(1) SENSE OF CONGRESS.—It is the sense of Congress that the national security interest of the United States will best be served if the United States develops and implements a long-term strategy to improve the United States relationship with Pakistan and works with the Government of Pakistan to stop nuclear proliferation.

(2) LIMITATION ON ASSISTANCE TO PAKISTAN.—None of the funds appropriated for a fiscal year to provide military or economic assistance to the Government of Pakistan may be made available for such purpose unless the President submits to Congress for such fiscal year a certification that no military or economic assistance provided by the United States to the Government of Pakistan will be provided, either directly or indirectly, to a person that is opposing or undermining the efforts of the United States Government to halt the proliferation of nuclear weapons.

(e) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—There are authorized to be appropriated to the President for providing assistance for Pakistan for fiscal year 2007—

(A) for “Development Assistance”, $50,000,000 to carry out the provisions of section 103, 105, and 106 of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 (22 U.S.C. 2151a, 2151c, and 2151d.);

(B) for the “Child Survival and Health Programs Fund”, $35,000,000 to carry out the provisions of sections 104 of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 (22 U.S.C. 2151b);

(C) for the “Economic Support Fund”, $350,000,000 to carry out the provisions of chapter 4 of part II of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 (22 U.S.C. 2346 et seq.);

(D) for “International Narcotics and Law Enforcement”, $50,000,000 to carry out the provisions of section 481 of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 (22 U.S.C. 2291);

(E) for “Nonproliferation, Anti-Terrorism, Demining, and Related Programs”, $10,000,000;

(F) for “International Military Education and Training”, $2,000,000 to carry out the provisions of section 541 of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 (22 U.S.C. 2347); and

(G) for “Foreign Military Financing Program”, $300,000,000 grants to carry out the provision of section 23 of the Arms Export Control Act (22 U.S.C. 2763).

(2) OTHER FUNDS.—Amounts authorized to be appropriated under this section are in addition to amounts otherwise available for such purposes.

SEC. 2233. SAUDI ARABIA.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress makes the following findings:

(1) The Kingdom of Saudi Arabia has an uneven record in the fight against terrorism, especially with respect to terrorist financing, support for radical madrassas, and a lack of political outlets for its citizens, that poses a threat to the security of the United States, the international community, and the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia itself.

(2) The United States has a national security interest in working with the Government of Saudi Arabia to combat international terrorists that operate within that nation or that operate outside Saudi Arabia with the support of citizens of Saudi Arabia.

(3) In order to more effectively combat terrorism, the Government of Saudi Arabia must undertake a number of political and economic reforms, including increasing anti-terrorism operations conducted by law enforcement agencies, providing more political rights to its citizens, increasing the rights of women, engaging in comprehensive educational reform, enhancing monitoring of charitable organizations, promulgating and enforcing domestic laws and regulation on terrorist financing.

(b) POLICY.—It is the policy of the United States—

(1) to engage with the Government of Saudi Arabia to openly confront the issue of terrorism, as well as other problematic issues such as the lack of political freedoms, with the goal of restructuring the relationship on terms that leaders of both nations can publicly support;

(2) to enhance counterterrorism cooperation with the Government of Saudi Arabia, if the political leaders of such Government are committed to making a serious, sustained effort to combat terrorism; and

(3) to support the efforts of the Government of Saudi Arabia to make political, economic, and social reforms throughout the country.

(c) STRATEGY ON SAUDI ARABIA.—

(1) REQUIREMENT FOR REPORT ON STRATEGY.—Not later than 90 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the President shall submit to the appropriate congressional committees a report, in classified form if necessary, that describes the long-term strategy of the United States—

(A) to engage with the Government of Saudi Arabia to facilitate political, economic, and social reforms that will enhance the ability of the Government of Saudi Arabia to combat international terrorism; and

(B) to effectively prevent the financing of terrorists in Saudi Arabia.

(2) APPROPRIATE CONGRESSIONAL COMMITTEES DEFINED.—In this subsection the term “appropriate congressional committees” means—

(A) the Committees on Appropriations, Armed Services, and Foreign Relations of the Senate; and

(B) the Committees on Appropriations, Armed Services, and International Relations of the House of Representatives.

TITLE XXIII—PROTECTION FROM TERRORIST ATTACKS THAT UTILIZE NUCLEAR, CHEMICAL, BIOLOGICAL, AND RADIOLOGICAL WEAPONS

Subtitle A—Non-Proliferation Programs

SEC. 2301. REPEAL OF LIMITATIONS TO THREAT REDUCTION ASSISTANCE.

Section 5 of S. 2980 of the 108th Congress (the Nunn-Lugar Cooperative Threat Reduction Act of 2004), as introduced on November 16, 2004, is hereby enacted into law.

SEC. 2302. RUSSIAN TACTICAL NUCLEAR WEAPONS.

(a) REPORT REQUIRED.—Not later than six months after the date of the enactment of this Act, the President shall submit to Congress a report setting forth the following:

(1) An assessment of the number, location, condition, and security of Russian tactical nuclear weapons.

(2) An assessment of the threat that would be posed by the theft of Russian tactical nuclear weapons.

(3) A plan for developing with Russia a cooperative program to secure, consolidate, and, as appropriate, dismantle Russian tactical nuclear weapons.

(b) PROGRAM.—The Secretary of Defense and the Secretary of Energy shall jointly work with Russia to establish a cooperative program, based on the report under subsection (a), to secure, consolidate, and, as appropriate, dismantle Russian tactical nuclear weapons in order to achieve reductions in the total number of Russian tactical nuclear weapons.

(c) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—

(1) DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE.—There are authorized to be appropriated for the Department of Defense, $25,000,000 to carry out this section.

(2) DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY.—There are authorized to be appropriated for the Department of Energy, $25,000,000 to carry out this section.

SEC. 2303. ADDITIONAL ASSISTANCE TO ACCELERATE NON-PROLIFERATION PROGRAMS.

(a) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS FOR THE DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE.—There are authorized to be appropriated to the Department of Defense $105,000,000 for fiscal year 2007 for Cooperative Threat Reduction Activities as follows:

(1) To accelerate security upgrades at nuclear warhead storage sites located in Russia or another country of the former Soviet Union, $15,000,000.

(2) To accelerate biological weapons proliferation prevention programs in Kazakhstan, Georgia, and Uzbekistan, $15,000,000.

(3) To accelerate destruction of Libyan chemical weapons, materials, and related equipment, $75,000,000.

(b) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS FOR THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY.—There are authorized to be appropriated to the Department of Energy $95,000,000 for fiscal year 2007 for nonproliferation activities of the National Nuclear Security Administration as follows:

(1) To accelerate the Global Threat Reduction Initiative, $20,000,000.

(2) To accelerate security upgrades at nuclear warhead storage sites located in Russia or in another country, $15,000,000.

(3) To accelerate the closure of the plutonium producing reactor at Zheleznogorsk, Russia as part of the program to eliminate weapons grade plutonium production, $25,000,000.

(4) To accelerate completion of comprehensive security upgrades at Russian storage sites for weapons-usable nuclear materials, $15,000,000.

(c) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS FOR THE DEPARTMENT OF STATE.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—There are authorized to be appropriated to the Department of State $25,000,000 for fiscal year 2007 for nonproliferation activities as follows:

(A) To accelerate engagement of former chemical and biological weapons scientists in Russia and the countries of the former Soviet Union through the Bio-Chem Redirect Program, $15,000,000.

(B) To enhance efforts to combat bioterrorism by transforming the Soviet biological weapons research and production facilities to commercial enterprises through the Bio-Industry Initiative, $10,000,000.

(2) AVAILABILITY OF FUNDS.—The amount authorized to be appropriated by paragraph (1) shall remain available until expended.

SEC. 2304. ADDITIONAL ASSISTANCE TO THE INTERNATIONAL ATOMIC ENERGY AGENCY.

There are authorized to be appropriated to the Department of Energy $20,000,000 to be used to provide technical and other assistance to the International Atomic Energy Agency to support nonproliferation programs. Such amount is in addition to amounts otherwise available for such purpose.

Subtitle B—Border Protection

SEC. 2311. FINDINGS.

Congress makes the following findings:

(1) More than 500,000,000 people cross the borders of the United States at legal points of entry each year, including approximately 330,000,000 people who are not citizens of the United States.

(2) The National Commission on Terrorist Attacks Upon the United States found that 15 of the 19 hijackers involved in the September 11, 2001 terrorist attacks “were potentially vulnerable to interception by border authorities”.

(3) Officials with the Bureau of Customs and Border Protection and with the Bureau of Immigration and Customs Enforcement have stated that there is a shortage of agents in such Bureaus. Due to an inadequate budget, the Bureau of Immigration and Customs Enforcement has effected a hiring freeze since March 2004, and the Bureau has not made public any plans to end this freeze.

SEC. 2312. HIRING AND TRAINING OF BORDER SECURITY PERSONNEL.

(a) INSPECTORS AND AGENTS.—

(1) INCREASE IN INSPECTORS AND AGENTS.—During each of fiscal years 2007 through 2010, the Secretary of Homeland Security shall—

(A) increase the number of full-time agents and associated support staff in the Bureau of Immigration and Customs Enforcement of the Department of Homeland Security by the equivalent of at least 100 more than the number of such employees in the Bureau as of the end of the preceding fiscal year; and

(B) increase the number of full-time inspectors and associated support staff in the Bureau of Customs and Border Protection by the equivalent of at least 200 more than the number of such employees in the Bureau as of the end of the preceding fiscal year.

(2) WAIVER OF FTE LIMITATION.—The Secretary is authorized to waive any limitation on the number of full-time equivalent personnel assigned to the Department of Homeland Security to fulfill the requirements of paragraph (1).

(b) TRAINING.—The Secretary shall provide appropriate training for agents, inspectors, and associated support staff on an ongoing basis to utilize new technologies and to ensure that the proficiency levels of such personnel are acceptable to protect the borders of the United States.

Subtitle C—First Responders

SEC. 2321. FINDINGS.

Congress makes the following findings:

(1) In a report entitled “Emergency First Responders: Drastically Underfunded, Dangerously Unprepared”, an independent task force sponsored by the Council on Foreign Relations found that “America’s local emergency responders will always be the first to confront a terrorist incident and will play the central role in managing its immediate consequences. Their efforts in the first minutes and hours following an attack will be critical to saving lives, establishing order, and preventing mass panic. The United States has both a responsibility and a critical need to provide them with the equipment, training, and other resources necessary to do their jobs safely and effectively.”.

(2) The task force further concluded that many state and local emergency responders, including police officers and firefighters, lack the equipment and training needed to respond effectively to a terrorist attack involving weapons of mass destruction.

(3) The Federal Government has a responsibility to ensure that the people of the United States are protected to the greatest possible extent against a terrorist attack, especially an attack that utilizes nuclear, chemical, biological, or radiological weapons, and consequently, the Federal Government has a critical responsibility to address the equipment, training, and other needs of State and local first responders.

SEC. 2322. RESTORATION OF JUSTICE ASSISTANCE FUNDING.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress makes the following findings:

(1) State and local police officers, firefighters, and emergency responders play an essential role in the efforts of the United States to prevent terrorist attacks and, if an attack occurred, to address the effects of the attack.

(2) An independent task force has concluded that hundreds of local police offices and firefighting and emergency response units throughout the United States are unprepared for responding to a terrorist attack involving nuclear, chemical, biological, or radiological weapons.

(3) The Edward Byrne Memorial Justice Assistance Grant Program provides critical Federal support for personnel, equipment, training, and technical assistance for the homeland security responsibilities of local law enforcement offices.

(4) The Consolidated Appropriations Act, 2005 (Public Law 108-447) appropriated funding for the Edward Byrne Memorial Justice Assistance Grant Program, a program that resulted from the combination of the Edward Byrne Memorial Grant Program and the Local Law Enforcement Block Grant Program.

(5) Funding for the Edward Byrne Memorial Justice Assistance Grant Program, as provided in the Consolidated Appropriations Act, 2005, has been reduced by nearly 50 percent since fiscal year 2002.

(b) SENSE OF CONGRESS.—It is the sense of Congress that the President should request in the annual budget proposal, and Congress should appropriate, the full amount authorized to be appropriated in subsection (c).

(c) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated for the Edward Byrne Memorial Justice Assistance Grant Program—

- (1) for fiscal year 2007, $1,250,000,000;
- (2) for fiscal year 2008, $1,400,000,000; and
- (3) for fiscal year 2009, $1,600,000,000.

SEC. 2323. PROVIDING RELIABLE OFFICERS, TECHNOLOGY, EDUCATION, COMMUNITY PROSECUTORS, AND TRAINING IN OUR NEIGHBORHOOD INITIATIVE.

(a) COPS PROGRAM.—Section 1701(a) of title I of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968 (42 U.S.C. 3796dd(a)) is amended—

“(C) paragraph (1)(D) may not exceed 5 percent of the funds available for grants pursuant to this subsection for any fiscal year.”.

(c) ADDITIONAL GRANT PROJECTS.—Section 1701(d) of title I of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968 (42 U.S.C. 3796dd(d)) is amended—

- (1) in paragraph (2)—
  - (A) by inserting “integrity and ethics” after “specialized”; and
  - (B) by inserting “and” after “enforcement officers”;

(2) in paragraph (7), by inserting “school officials, religiously-affiliated organizations,” after “enforcement officers”;

(3) by striking paragraph (8) and inserting the following:

“(8) establish school-based partnerships between local law enforcement agencies and local school systems, by using school resource officers who operate in and around elementary and secondary schools to serve as a law enforcement liaison with other Federal, State, and local law enforcement and regulatory agencies, combat school-related crime and disorder problems, gang membership and criminal activity, firearms and explosives-related incidents, illegal use and possession of alcohol, and the illegal possession, use, and distribution of drugs;”;

(4) in paragraph (10), by striking “and” at the end;

(5) in paragraph (11), by striking the period that appears at the end and inserting “; and”;

(6) by adding at the end the following: “(12) develop and implement innovative programs (such as the TRIAD program) that bring together a community’s sheriff, chief of police, and elderly residents to address the public safety concerns of older citizens.”.

(d) TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE.—Section 1701(f) of title I of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968 (42 U.S.C. 3796dd(f)) is amended—

(1) in paragraph (1)—

- (A) by inserting “use up to 5 percent of the funds appropriated under subsection (a) to” after “The Attorney General may”;

(B) by inserting at the end the following: “In addition, the Attorney General may use up to 5 percent of the funds appropriated under subsections (d), (e), and (f) for technical assistance and training to States, units of local government, Indian tribal governments, and to other public and private entities for those respective purposes.”;

(2) in paragraph (2), by inserting “under subsection (a)” after “the Attorney General”;

(3) in paragraph (3)—

(e) TECHNOLOGY AND PROSECUTION PROGRAMS.—Section 1701 of title I of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968 (42 U.S.C. 3796dd) is amended—

- (1) by striking subsection (k);
- (2) by redesignating subsections (f) through (j) as subsections (g) through (k); and
- (3) by striking subsection (e) and inserting the following:

“(e) LAW ENFORCEMENT TECHNOLOGY PROGRAM.—Grants made under subsection (a) may be used to assist police departments, in employing professional, scientific, and technological advancements that will help them—

“(1) improve police communications through the use of wireless communications, computers, software, videocams, databases and other hardware and software that allow law enforcement agencies to communicate more effectively across jurisdictional boundaries and effectuate interoperability;

“(2) develop and improve access to crime solving technologies, including DNA analysis, photo enhancement, voice recognition, and other forensic capabilities; and

“(3) promote comprehensive crime analysis by utilizing new techniques and technologies, such as crime mapping, that allow law enforcement agencies to use real-time crime and arrest data and other related information—including non-criminal justice data—to improve their ability to analyze, predict, and respond pro-actively to local crime and disorder problems, as well as to engage in regional crime analysis.

(f) COMMUNITY-BASED PROSECUTION PROGRAM.—Grants made under subsection (a) may be used to assist State, local or tribal prosecutors’ offices in the implementation of community-based prosecution programs that build on local community policing efforts. Funds made available under this subsection may be used to—

“(1) hire additional prosecutors who will be assigned to community prosecution programs, including programs that assign prosecutors to handle cases from specific geographic areas, to address specific violent crime and other local crime problems (including intensive illegal gang, gun and drug enforcement projects and quality of life initiatives), and to address localized violent and other crime problems based on needs identified by local law enforcement agencies, community organizations, and others;

“(2) redeploy existing prosecutors to community prosecution programs as described in paragraph (1) of this section by hiring victim and witness coordinators, paralegals, community outreach, and other such personnel; and

“(3) establish programs to assist local prosecutors’ offices in the implementation of programs that help them identify and respond to priority crime problems in a community with specifically tailored solutions.

At least 75 percent of the funds made available under this subsection shall be reserved for grants under paragraphs (1) and (2) and of those amounts no more than 10 percent may be used for grants under paragraph (2) and at least 25 percent of the funds shall be reserved for grants under paragraphs (1) and (2) to units of local government with a population of less than 50,000.”.

(f) RETENTION GRANTS.—Section 1703 of title I of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968 (42 U.S.C. 3796dd-2) is amended by adding at the end the following:

“(d) RETENTION GRANTS.—The Attorney General may use no more than 50 percent of the funds under subsection (a) to award grants targeted specifically for retention of police officers to grantees in good standing, with preference to those that demonstrate financial hardship or severe budget constraint that impacts the entire local budget and may result in the termination of employment for police officers funded under subsection (b)(1).”.

(g) DEFINITIONS.—

(1) CAREER LAW ENFORCEMENT OFFICER.—Section 1709(1) of title I of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968 (42 U.S.C. 3796dd-8) is amended by inserting after “criminal laws” the following: “including sheriffs deputies charged with supervising offenders who are released into the community but also engaged in local community policing efforts.”.

(2) in subparagraph (B)—

(A) by striking “3 percent” and inserting “5 percent”;

(B) by striking “1701(f)” and inserting “1701(g)”;

(C) by striking the second sentence and inserting “Of the remaining funds, if there is a demand for 50 percent of appropriated hiring funds, as determined by eligible hiring applications from law enforcement agencies having jurisdiction over areas with populations exceeding 150,000, no less than 50 percent shall be allocated for grants pursuant to applications submitted by units of local government or law enforcement agencies having jurisdiction over areas with populations exceeding 150,000 or by public and private entities that serve areas with populations exceeding 150,000, and no less than 50 percent shall be allocated for grants pursuant to applications submitted by units of local government or law enforcement agencies having jurisdiction over areas with populations less than 150,000 or by public and private entities that serve areas with populations less than 150,000.”;

(D) by striking “85 percent” and inserting “$600,000,000”; and

(E) by striking “1701(b),” and all that follows through “of part Q” and inserting the following: “1701 (b) and (c), $350,000,000 to grants for the purposes specified in section 1701(e), and $200,000,000 to grants for the purposes specified in section 1701(f).”.

SEC. 2324. ASSURED COMPENSATION FOR FIRST RESPONDERS INJURED BY EXPERIMENTAL VACCINES AND DRUGS.

(a) REPEAL.—The Public Readiness and Emergency Preparedness Act (division C of the Department of Defense, Emergency Supplemental Appropriations to Address Hurricanes in the Gulf of Mexico, and Pandemic Influenza Act, 2006 (Public Law 109-148)) is repealed.

(b) NATIONAL BIODEFENSE INJURY COMPENSATION PROGRAM.—

(1) ESTABLISHMENT.—Section 224 of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 233) is amended by adding at the end the following:

“(q) BIODEFENSE INJURY COMPENSATION PROGRAM.—

“(1) ESTABLISHMENT.—There is established the Biodefense Injury Compensation Program (referred to in this subsection as the ‘Compensation Program’) under which compensation may be paid for death or any injury, illness, disability, or condition that is likely (based on best available evidence) to have been caused by the administration of a covered countermeasure to an individual pursuant to a declaration under subsection (p)(2).

“(2) ADMINISTRATION AND INTERPRETATION.—The statutory provisions governing the Compensation Program shall be administered and interpreted in consideration of the program goals described in paragraph (4)(B)(iii).

“(3) PROCEDURES AND STANDARDS.—The Secretary shall by regulation establish procedures and standards applicable to the Compensation Program that follow the procedures and standards applicable under the National Vaccine Injury Compensation Program established under section 2110, except that the regulations promulgated under this paragraph shall permit a person claiming injury or death related to the administration of any covered countermeasure to file either—

“(A) a civil action for relief under subsection (p); or “(B) a petition for compensation under this subsection.

“(4) INJURY TABLE.—

“(A) INCLUSION.—For purposes of receiving compensation under the Compensation Program with respect to a countermeasure that is the subject of a declaration under subsection (p)(2), the Vaccine Injury Table under section 2114 shall be deemed to include death and the injuries, disabilities, illnesses, and conditions specified by the Secretary under subparagraph (B)(ii).

“(B) INJURIES, DISABILITIES, ILLNESSES, AND CONDITIONS.—

“(i) INSTITUTE OF MEDICINE.—Not later than 30 days after making a declaration described in subsection (p)(2), the Secretary shall enter into a contract with the Institute of Medicine, under which the Institute shall, within 180 days of the date on which the contract is entered into, and periodically thereafter as new information, including information derived from the monitoring of those who were administered the countermeasure, becomes available, provide its expert recommendations on the injuries, disabilities, illnesses, and conditions whose occurrence in one or more individuals are likely (based on best available evidence) to have been caused by the administration of a countermeasure that is the subject of the declaration.

“(ii) SPECIFICATION BY SECRETARY.—Not later than 30 days after the receipt of the expert recommendations described in clause (i), the Secretary shall, based on such recommendations, specify those injuries, disabilities, illnesses, and conditions deemed to be included in the Vaccine Injury Table under section 2114 for the purposes described in subparagraph (A).

“(iii) PROGRAM GOALS.—The Institute of Medicine, under the contract under clause (i), shall make such recommendations, the Secretary shall specify, under clause (ii), such injuries, disabilities, illnesses, and conditions, and claims under the Compensation Program under this subsection shall be processed and decided taking into account the following goals of such program:

“(I) To encourage persons to develop, manufacture, and distribute countermeasures, and to administer covered countermeasures to individuals, by limiting such persons’ liability for damages related to death and such injuries, disabilities, illnesses, and conditions.

“(II) To encourage individuals to consent to the administration of a covered countermeasure by providing adequate and just compensation for damages related to death and such injuries, disabilities, illnesses, or conditions.

“(III) To provide individuals seeking compensation for damages related to the administration of a countermeasure with a non-adversarial administrative process for obtaining adequate and just compensation.

“(iv) USE OF BEST AVAILABLE EVIDENCE.—The Institute of Medicine, under the contract under clause (i), shall make such recommendations, the Secretary shall specify, under clause (ii), such injuries, disabilities, illnesses, and conditions, and claims under the Compensation Program under this subsection shall be processed and decided using the best available evidence, including information from adverse event reporting or other monitoring of those individuals who were administered the countermeasure, whether evidence from clinical trials or other scientific studies in humans is available.

“(v) APPLICATION OF SECTION 2115.—With respect to section 2115(a)(2) as applied for purposes of this subsection, an award for the estate of the deceased shall be—

“(I) if the deceased was under the age of 18, an amount equal to the amount that may be paid to a survivor or survivors as death benefits under the Public Safety Officers’ Benefits Program under subpart 1 of part L of title I of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968 (42 U.S.C. 3796 et seq.); or

“(II) if the deceased was 18 years of age or older, the greater of—

“(aa) the amount described in subclause (I); or

“(bb) the projected loss of employment income, except that the amount under this item may not exceed an amount equal to 400 percent of the amount that applies under item (aa).

“(vi) APPLICATION OF SECTION 2116.—Section 2116(b) shall apply to injuries, disabilities, illnesses, and conditions initially specified or revised by the Secretary under clause (ii), except that the exceptions contained in paragraphs (1) and (2) of such section shall not apply.

“(C) RULE OF CONSTRUCTION.—Section 13632 (a)(3) of Public Law 103-66 (107 Stat. 646) (making revisions by Secretary to the Vaccine Injury Table effective on the effective date of a corresponding tax) shall not be construed to apply to any revision to the Vaccine Injury Table made under regulations under this paragraph.

“(5) APPLICATION.—The Compensation Program applies to any death or injury, illness, disability, or condition that is likely (based on best available evidence) to have been caused by the administration of a covered countermeasure to an individual pursuant to a declaration under subsection (p)(2).

“(6) SPECIAL MASTERS.—

“(A) HIRING.—In accordance with section 2112, the judges of the United States Claims Court shall appoint a sufficient number of special masters to address claims for compensation under this subsection.

“(B) BUDGET AUTHORITY.—There are appropriated to carry out this subsection such sums as may be necessary for fiscal year 2006 and each fiscal year thereafter. This subparagraph constitutes budget authority in advance of appropriations and represents the obligation of the Federal Government.

“(7) COVERED COUNTERMEASURE.—For purposes of this subsection, the term ‘covered countermeasure’ has the meaning given to such term in subsection (p)(7)(A).

“(8) FUNDING.—Compensation made under the Compensation Program shall be made from the same source of funds as payments made under subsection (p).”

(2) EFFECTIVE DATE.—This subsection shall take effect as of November 25, 2002 (the date of enactment of the Homeland Security Act of 2002 (Pub. L. 107-296; 116 Stat. 2135)).

Subtitle D—Strengthening America's Hospitals and Health Agencies

SEC. 2325. STRENGTHENING HOSPITAL EMERGENCY PREPAREDNESS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary of Health and Human Services shall carry out activities to ensure that every community in the United States has adequate hospital capacity to respond effectively to a biological attack or a naturally occurring epidemic.

(b) REPORT REQUIRED.—Not later than 180 days after the date of enactment of this section, the Secretary of Health and Human Services shall submit to the appropriate committees of Congress a report that—

(1) describes whether every community in the United States has adequate hospital capacity to respond effectively to a biological attack or a naturally occurring epidemic and, if not, the reasons for the failure to achieve such result; and

(2) outlines steps the Secretary will take during the 180-day period beginning on the date of the report to ensure that every community in the United States has adequate hospital capacity to respond effectively to a biological attack or a naturally occurring epidemic.

(c) GRANTS.—The Secretary of Health and Human Services shall establish, expand, or improve programs to strengthen hospital emergency preparedness, taking into account the particular needs of hospitals and hospital personnel in different regions, that will—

(1) strengthen and sustain trauma care systems;

(2) enhance emergency department, trauma center, and inpatient surge capacity through training programs, equipment purchases, staff expansion, and other appropriate means;

(3) design and disseminate evidence-based training programs;

(4) enhance decontamination infrastructure including increasing access to—

(A) decontamination showers;

(B) standby intensive care unit capacity;

(C) negative pressure rooms; and

(D) appropriate personal protective equipment; and

(5) periodically evaluate the state of hospital emergency preparedness and make recommendations for improvements to and the sustainability of such programs.

(d) APPROPRIATIONS.—To carry out this section, there are authorized to be appropriated, and there are appropriated, $5,000,000,000 to remain available until expended.

SEC. 2326. TRAINING AND EDUCATION OF PUBLIC HEALTH PROFESSIONALS.

Section 319H of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 274d-7a) is amended by—

(1) striking the section heading and inserting “TRAINING AND EDUCATION OF PUBLIC HEALTH PROFESSIONALS”;

(2) striking “(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary” and inserting the following: “(a) GRANTS REGARDING TRAINING AND EDUCATION OF CERTAIN PUBLIC HEALTH PROFESSIONALS.—

“(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary”

(3) redesignating subsections (b) and (c) as paragraphs (2) and (3) and indenting appropriately;

(4) in paragraph (2), as so redesignated, by—

(A) striking “subsection (a)” and inserting “paragraph (1)”; and

(B) striking “such subsection” each place it appears and inserting “such paragraph”;

(5) in paragraph (2), by striking “this section” and inserting “this subsection”; and

(6) by adding at the end the following: “(b) PUBLIC HEALTH WORKFORCE LOAN REPAYMENT PROGRAM.—

“(1) ESTABLISHMENT.—The Secretary shall establish the Public Health Workforce Loan Repayment Program (referred to in this subsection as the ‘Program’) to assure an adequate supply of public health professionals to eliminate critical public health preparedness workforce shortages in State, local, and tribal public health agencies.

“(2) ELIGIBILITY.—To be eligible to participate in the Program, an individual shall—

“(A)(i) be accepted for enrollment, or be enrolled, as a full-time or part-time student in an accredited academic educational institution in a State or territory in the final year of a course of study or program offered by that institution leading to a public health degree or other degree suitable for serving in a public health department, as determined by the Secretary;

“(ii) have graduated, within 5 years, from an accredited educational institution in a State or territory and received an undergraduate or master’s degree in public health; or

“(iii) be accepted for enrollment, or be enrolled, in a residency program in preventive medicine or public health at an accredited academic educational institution in a State or territory;

“(B)(i) in the case of an individual described clause (i) or (iii) of subparagraph (A), have accepted employment with a State, local, or tribal public health agency, located in a health professional shortage area (as defined in section 332(a)), a medically underserved area or as a medically underserved population (as defined in section 330(b)(3)) as recognized by the Secretary, to commence upon graduation; or

“(ii) in the case of an individual described in subparagraph (A)(ii), be employed by, or have accepted employment with, such a State, local, or tribal public health agency described in clause (i), as recognized by the Secretary;

“(C) be a United States citizen;

“(D) submit an application to the Secretary to participate in the Program; and

“(E) sign and submit to the Secretary, at the time of the submittal of such application, a written contract (described in paragraph (4)) to serve for the applicable period of obligated service in the full-time employment of such a State, local, or tribal public health agency described in clause (i).

“(3) DISSEMINATION OF INFORMATION.—

“(A) APPLICATION AND CONTRACT FORMS.—The Secretary shall disseminate application forms and contract forms to individuals desiring to participate in the Program. The Secretary shall include with such forms—

“(i) a fair summary of the rights and liabilities of an individual whose application is approved (and whose contract is accepted) by the Secretary, including in the summary a clear explanation of the damages to which the United States is entitled to recover in the case of the individual’s breach of the contract; and

“(ii) information relating to the service obligation and such other information as may be necessary for the individual to understand the individual’s prospective participation in the Program.

“(B) INFORMATION FOR SCHOOLS.—The Secretary shall distribute to accredited academic institutions and relevant State, local, and tribal public health agencies described in paragraph (2), materials providing information on the Program and shall encourage such schools, institutions, and agencies to disseminate such materials to potentially eligible students.

“(C) UNDERSTANDABILITY AND TIMING.—The application form, contract form, and all other information furnished by the Secretary under this subsection shall—

“(i) be written in a manner calculated to be understood by the average individual applying to participate in the Program; and “(ii) be made available by the Secretary on a date sufficiently early to ensure that such individuals have adequate time to carefully review and evaluate such forms and information.

“(4) CONTRACT.—The written contract (referred to in this section) between the Secretary and an individual shall contain—

“(A) an agreement on the part of the Secretary that the Secretary will repay on behalf of the individual loans incurred by the individual in the pursuit of the relevant public health degree in accordance with the terms of the contract;

“(B) an agreement on the part of the individual that the individual will serve, immediately upon graduation in the case of an individual described in paragraph (2)(A)(i) or (2)(A)(iii) service, or in the case of an individual described in paragraph (2)(A)(ii) continue to serve, in the full-time employment of a State, local, or tribal public health agency described in paragraph (2) for a period of time (referred to in this subsection as the ‘period of obligated service’) equal to the greater of—

“(i) 2 years; or

“(ii) such longer period of time as determined appropriate by the Secretary and the individual;

“(C) an agreement, as appropriate, on the part of the individual to relocate for the entire period of obligated service to an area or population described under paragraph (2) in exchange for an additional loan repayment incentive amount that does not exceed 20 percent of the individual’s eligible loan repayment award per academic year;

“(D) in the case of an individual described in paragraph (2)(A)(i) or (2)(A)(iii) who is in the final year of study or residency and who has accepted employment with a State, local, or tribal public health agency described in paragraph (2) upon graduation, an agreement on the part of the individual to complete the education or training, maintain an acceptable level of academic standing (as determined by the education institution offering the course of study or training), and agree to the period of obligated service;

“(E) a provision that any financial obligation of the United States arising out of a contract entered into under this subsection and any obligation of the individual that is conditioned thereon, is contingent on funds being appropriated for loan repayments under this subsection;

“(F) a statement of the damages to which the United States is entitled, under this section for the individual’s breach of the contract; and “(G) such other statements of the rights and liabilities of the Secretary and of the individual, not inconsistent with this subsection.

“(5) PAYMENTS.—

“(A) IN GENERAL.—A loan repayment provided for an individual under a written contract under the Program shall consist of payment, in accordance with subparagraph (B), on behalf of the individual of the principal, interest, and related expenses on government and commercial loans received by the individual regarding the undergraduate, master’s, or graduate medical education of the individual, which loans were made for—

“(i) tuition expenses; or

“(ii) all other reasonable educational expenses, including fees, books, and laboratory expenses, incurred by the individual.

“(B) PAYMENTS FOR YEARS SERVED.—

“(i) IN GENERAL.—For each year of obligated service that an individual contracts to serve under paragraph (4) the Secretary may pay up to $35,000 on behalf of the individual for loans described in subparagraph (A). The total eligible loan repayment award shall be divided by 2 and repaid in each year of service. If the total eligible loan repayment award is greater than $70,000, the individual may be awarded up to $2917 per month for up to 12 additional months of service.

“(ii) REPAYMENT SCHEDULE.—Any arrangement made by the Secretary for the making of loan repayments in accordance with this paragraph shall provide that any repayments for a year of obligated service shall be made no later than the end of the fiscal year in which the individual completes such year of service.

“(C) TAX LIABILITY.—For the purpose of providing reimbursements for tax liability resulting from payments under subparagraph (B) on behalf of an individual—

“(i) the Secretary shall, in addition to such payments, make payments to the individual in an amount not to exceed 39 percent of the total amount of loan repayments made for the taxable year involved; and

“(ii) may make such additional payments as the Secretary determines to be appropriate with respect to such purpose.

“(D) PAYMENT SCHEDULE.—The Secretary may enter into an agreement with the holder of any loan for which payments are made under the Program to establish a schedule for the making of such payments.

“(6) POSTPONING OBLIGATED SERVICE.—With respect to an individual receiving a degree from a school of medicine, public health, nursing, osteopathic medicine, dentistry, veterinary medicine, optometry, podiatry, pharmacy, psychology, or social work, the date of the initiation of the period of obligated service may be postponed, upon the submission by the individual of a petition for such postponement and approval by the Secretary, to the date on which the individual completes an approved internship, residency, or other relevant public health preparedness advanced training program.

“(7) ADMINISTRATIVE PROVISIONS.—

“(A) HIRING PRIORITY.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, State, local, and tribal public health agencies described in paragraph (2) may give hiring priority to any individual who has qualified for and is willing to execute a contract to participate in the Program.

“(B) EMPLOYMENT CEILINGS.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, individuals who have entered into written contracts with the Secretary under this subsection, who are serving as full-time employees of a State, local, or tribal public health agency described in paragraph (2), or who are in the last year of public health education or preventive medicine residency, shall not be counted against any employment ceiling affecting the Department or any other Federal agency.

“(8) BREACH OF CONTRACT.—An individual who fails to comply with the contract entered into under paragraph (2) shall be subject to the same financial penalties as provided for under section 338E for breaches of loan repayment contracts under section 338B.

“(9) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out this subsection $75,000,000 for fiscal year 2007 and such sums as may be necessary for each of fiscal years 2008 through 2011.”

SEC. 2327. COMPENSATING HOSPITALS FOR EMERGENCY CARE.

(a) IN GENERAL.—For the purposes of assisting hospitals and certain other emergency care providers to recoup a portion of their expenditures associated with providing emergency and trauma services to individuals without health care coverage, the Secretary of Health and Human Services shall establish a Hospital Emergency Care Fund (referred to in this section as the “Fund”).

(b) USE OF FUNDS.—To the extent that amounts are appropriated under subsection (c), the Secretary of Health and Human Services shall make payments to health care providers for legitimate uncompensated care provided during a public health emergency (as declared under section 319 of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 247d)). Payments under the preceding sentence shall not be made to any entity if such entity has received payments from any other source for the services involved, including the individual treated or an insurance company.

(c) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated to the Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, $50,000,000 for each of fiscal years 2006 through 2010 to be used for the Fund.

SEC. 2328. REGIONAL COORDINATION OF EMERGENCY MEDICAL SERVICES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—To improve and expand emergency medical services and to improve regional coordination, the Secretary of Health and Human Services shall strengthen existing programs and establish new programs in accordance with this section.

(b) DEMONSTRATION GRANT.—

(1) ESTABLISHMENT OF PROGRAM.—Not later than 1 year after the date of enactment of this Act, the Administrator of the Health Resources and Services Administration, in collaboration with the Director of the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, shall establish an emergency medical care regional coordination demonstration grant program.

(2) PURPOSE.—It is the purpose of the grant program established under paragraph (1) to promote regionalized, coordinated, and accountable emergency care systems throughout the United States. Grants shall be made available to promote the coordination of regional emergency medical and trauma care assets to improve the performance of such systems.

(3) USE OF FUNDS.—Funds made available under this subsection may be used to—

(A) enhance communication to promote coordination of emergency medical and trauma care services and develop centralized communications centers at the State and regional levels;

(B) establish planning functions convening regional or State-wide stakeholders for purposes of improving emergency communication and coordination;

(C) hire consultants and staff to manage such functions;

(D) collect, analyze, and report data related to emergency communication and coordination; and

(E) procure other items required for the development of regionalized, coordinated, and accountable emergency systems.

(4) ELIGIBILITY.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—To be eligible to receive a grant under paragraph (1), an entity shall submit an application to the Secretary at such time, in such manner, and containing such information as the Secretary may require.

(B) PREFERENCE.—In awarding grants under this subsection, the Administrator shall give preference to States submitting applications to carry out cross-State collaborative activities that promote regional coordination of care.

(5) APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated, and there are appropriated, $88,000,000 to carry out this subsection.

(c) RESTORING EMERGENCY MEDICAL SERVICES.—To restore the capacity of State and local governments to carry out and coordinate emergency medical services-related disaster preparedness activities, there are authorized to be appropriated, and there are appropriated, to the Department of Health and Human Services $687,500,000, of which $100,000,000 shall be made available for fiscal year 2006 and each of the 4 succeeding fiscal years to fund emergency medical services-related disaster preparedness, and of which $37,500,000 shall be made available for fiscal year 2006 and each of the 4 succeeding fiscal years to fund the Emergency Medical Services for Children Program.

(d) COMMISSION.—The Secretary of Health and Human Services shall establish a commission—

(1) to examine the factors responsible for the declining availability of providers in high-risk emergency and trauma care specialties; and

(2) to recommend targeted Federal and State actions to mitigate the adverse impact of the responsible factors and ensure quality of care.

(e) STUDY.—The Secretary of Health and Human Services, in cooperation with Federal agencies involved in emergency and trauma care research, shall—

(1) conduct a study to examine the gaps and opportunities in emergency and trauma care research that considers—

(A) the training of new investigators;

(B) the development of multi-center research networks;

(C) the involvement of emergency medical services;

(D) researchers in the grant review and research advisory processes; and

(E) improved research coordination through a dedicated center or institute; and

(2) recommend a strategy for the optimal organization and funding of emergency and trauma care research efforts.

SEC. 2329. EMERGENCY AND PUBLIC HEALTH PREPAREDNESS EDUCATION.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Director of the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, in conjunction with State and local health departments, shall—

(1) revise and expand public health preparedness and emergency response educational materials;

(2) facilitate the use of such materials by health care providers, State and local officials and agencies, and the public;

(3) make use of multiple media, including the Internet, television broadcasts, radio broadcasts, and printed materials; and

(4) coordinate such educational efforts with nonprofit organizations, as appropriate.

(b) TARGETED VACCINE OUTREACH.—The Secretary of Health and Human Services shall establish targeted outreach programs to educate the general public, health care providers, and businesses about the importance of recommended vaccines and vaccines distributed in response to a pandemic, including special programs for outreach to youth with information about annual flu vaccinations, disease prevention, and good health habits.

(c) EMERGENCY RESPONSE EDUCATION.—For the purposes of establishing a well informed public that is capable of an effective and efficient response to a pandemic or other national emergency, the Secretary of Health and Human Services shall establish plans and programs to provide timely, accurate information that will minimize panic and disruption in the case of a national emergency. Such activities shall include—

(1) research on communication and behavioral strategies to assist the general public during public health emergencies; and

(2) education and awareness campaigns for pandemics and other public health emergencies, conducted jointly by Federal agencies and State and local health departments.

(d) APPROPRIATIONS.—For carrying out activities under this section, there are authorized to be appropriated, and there are appropriated, to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention $50,000,000 to remain available until expended.

SEC. 2330. RESTORING THE CAPACITY OF CDC TO ENHANCE HEALTH SECURITY.

To restore the capacity of the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention to promote public health preparedness, there are authorized to be appropriated $88,000,000, of which—

(1) $25,000,000 shall remain available until expended for the purchase of vaccines under section 317 of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 247b);

(2) $30,000,000 shall remain available until expended for the purchase of bulk vaccines to build seasonal market stability;

(3) $11,000,000 shall remain available until expended for environmental health and occupational safety programs; and

(4) $11,000,000 shall remain available until expended for global disease detection programming.

SEC. 2331. SECURING THE HEALTH CARE WORKFORCE.

To restore the capacity of the Health Services and Resources Administration to build the health care and public health workforce and to provide adequate workforce surge capacity during a national emergency, there are authorized to be appropriated (in addition to amounts already appropriated for such purposes) to the Health Services and Resources Administration $416,000,000, of which—

(1) $29,000,000 shall remain available until expended for emergency preparedness of the Area Health Education Centers;

(2) $50,000,000 shall remain available until expended for public health workforce development programs;

(3) $15,000,000 shall remain available until expended for Bioterrorism curriculum development and training;

(4) $75,000,000 shall remain available until expended for programs to enhance the emergency preparedness of Federally-Qualified Health Centers;

(5) $64,000,000 shall remain available until expended for health professions diversity programs;

(6) $100,000,000 shall remain available until expended for the children's graduate medical education program; and

(7) $83,000,000 shall remain available until expended for the Healthy Communities Access Program.

Subtitle E—Responsible Incentives for Manufacturers and Protections for Consumers of New Vaccines and Drugs

SEC. 2335. INDEMNIFICATION FOR MANUFACTURERS AND HEALTH CARE PROFESSIONALS WHO ADMINISTER MEDICAL PRODUCTS NEEDED FOR BIO-DEFENSE.

Section 224(p) of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 233(p)) is amended—

(1) in the subsection heading by striking “SMALLPOX”;

(2) in paragraph (1), by striking “against smallpox”;

(3) in paragraph (2)—

(A) in the paragraph heading, by striking “AGAINST SMALLPOX”; and

(B) in subparagraph (B), by striking clause (ii);

(4) by striking paragraph (3) and inserting the following:

“(3) EXCLUSIVITY; OFFSET.—

“(A) EXCLUSIVITY.—With respect to an individual to which this subsection applies, such individual may bring a claim for relief under—

“(i) this subsection;

“(ii) subsection (q); or

“(iii) part C.

“(B) ELECTION OF ALTERNATIVES.—An individual may only pursue one remedy under subparagraph (A) at any one time based on the same incident or series of incidents. An individual who elects to pursue the remedy under subsection (q) or part C may decline any compensation awarded with respect to such remedy and subsequently pursue the remedy provided for under this subsection. An individual who elects to pursue the remedy provided for under this subsection may not subsequently pursue the remedy provided for under subsection (q) or part C.

“(C) STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS.—For purposes of determining how much time has lapsed when applying statute of limitations requirements relating to remedies under subparagraph (A), any limitation of time for commencing an action, or filing an application, petition, or claim for such remedies, shall be deemed to have been suspended for the periods during which an individual pursues a remedy under such subparagraph.

“(D) OFFSET.—The value of all compensation and benefits provided under subsection (q) or part C of this title for an incident or series of incidents shall be offset against the amount of an award, compromise, or settlement of money damages in a claim or suit under this subsection based on the same incident or series of incidents.”;

(5) in paragraph (6)—

(A) in subparagraph (A), by inserting “or under subsection (q) or part C” after “under this subsection”; and

(B) by redesignating subparagraph (B) as subparagraph (C);

(C) by inserting after subparagraph (A), the following:

“(B) GROSSLY NEGLIGENT, RECKLESS, OR ILLEGAL CONDUCT AND WILLFUL MISCONDUCT.—For purposes of subparagraph (A), grossly negligent, reckless, or illegal conduct or willful misconduct shall include the administration by a qualified person of a covered countermeasure to an individual who was not within a category of individuals covered by a declaration under subsection (p)(2) with respect to such countermeasure where the qualified person fails to have had reasonable grounds to believe such individual was within such a category.”; and

(D) by adding at the end the following:

“(D) LIABILITY OF THE UNITED STATES.—The United States shall be liable under this subsection with respect to a claim arising out of the manufacture, distribution, or administration of a covered countermeasure regardless of whether—

“(i) the cause of action seeking compensation is alleged as negligence, strict liability, breach of warranty, failure to warn, or other action; or

“(ii) the covered countermeasure is designated as a qualified anti-terrorism technology under the SAFETY Act (6 U.S.C. 441 et seq.).”

“(E) GOVERNING LAW.—Notwithstanding the provisions of section 1346(b)(1) and chapter 171 of title 28, United States Code, as they relate to governing law, the liability of the United States as provided in this subsection shall be in accordance with the law of the place of injury.

“(F) MILITARY PERSONNEL AND UNITED STATES CITIZENS OVERSEAS.—

“(i) MILITARY PERSONNEL.—The liability of the United States as provided in this subsection shall extend to claims brought by United States military personnel.

“(ii) CLAIMS ARISING IN A FOREIGN COUNTRY.—Notwithstanding the provisions of section 2680(k) of title 28, United States Code, the liability of the United States as provided for in the subsection shall extend to claims based on injuries arising in a foreign country where the injured party is a member of the United States military, is the spouse or child of a member of the United States military, or is a United States citizen.

“(iii) GOVERNING LAW.—With regard to all claims brought under clause (ii), and notwithstanding the provisions of section 1346(b)(1) and chapter 171 of title 28, United States Code, and of subparagraph (C), as they relate to governing law, the liability of the United States as provided in this subsection shall be in accordance with the law of the claimant's domicile in the United States or most recent domicile with the United States.”; and

(6) in paragraph (7)—

(A) by striking subparagraph (A) and inserting the following:

“(A) COVERED COUNTERMEASURE.—The term ‘covered countermeasure’, means—

“(i) a substance that is—

“(I)(aa) used to prevent or treat smallpox (including the vaccinia or another vaccine); or “(bb) vaccinia immune globulin used to control or treat the adverse effects of vaccinia inoculation; and

“(II) specified in a declaration under paragraph (2); or “(ii) a drug (as such term is defined in section 201(g)(1) of the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act), biological product (as such term is defined in section 351(i) of this Act), or device (as such term is defined in section 201(h) of the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act) that—

“(I) the Secretary determines to be a priority (consistent with sections 302(2) and 304(a) of the Homeland Security Act of 2002) to treat, identify, or prevent harm from any biological, chemical, radiological, or nuclear agent identified as a material threat under section 319F-2(c)(2)(A)(ii), or to treat, identify, or prevent harm from a condition that may result in adverse health consequences or death and may be caused by administering a drug, biological product, or device against such an agent;

“(II) is—

“(aa) authorized for emergency use under section 564 of the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act, so long as the manufacturer of such drug, biological product, or device has—

“(AA) made all reasonable efforts to obtain applicable approval, clearance, or licensure; and “(BB) cooperated fully with the requirements of the Secretary under such section 564; or

“(bb) approved or licensed solely pursuant to the regulations under subpart I of part 314 or under subpart H of part 601 of title 21, Code of Federal Regulations (as in effect on the date of enactment of the National Bio-defense Act of 2005); and

“(III) is specified in a declaration under paragraph (2).”; and

(B) in subparagraph (B)—

(i) by striking clause (ii), and inserting the following:

“(ii) a health care entity, a State, or a political subdivision of a State under whose auspices such countermeasure was administered;” and

(ii) in clause (viii), by inserting before the period “if such individual performs a function for which a person described in clause (i), (ii), or (iv) is a covered person”.

SEC. 2336. PROHIBITING PRICE GOUGING ON NEEDED MEDICINES.

Section 319F-2 of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 247d-6b) is amended by adding at the end the following:

“(g) UNFAIR OR DECEPTIVE ACTS OR PRACTICES IN COMMERCE RELATED TO TREATMENTS.—

“(1) SALES TO CONSUMERS AT UNCONSCIONABLE PRICE.—

“(A) IN GENERAL.—During any public health emergency declared by the Secretary under section 319, it shall be unlawful for any person to sell any drug (including an anti-viral drug), device, or biologic for the prevention or treatment of the disease or condition that is the subject of such declaration in, or for use in, the area to which that declaration applies at a price that—

“(i) is unconscionably excessive (as determined by the Secretary); or “(ii) indicates the seller is taking unfair advantage of the circumstances to increase prices unreasonably.

“(B) FACTORS TO BE CONSIDERED.—In determining whether a violation of subparagraph (A) has occurred, a court shall take into account, among other factors, whether—

“(i) the amount charged represents a gross disparity between the price of a drug, device, or biologic and the price at which the drug, device, or biologic was offered for sale in the usual course of the seller's business immediately prior to the public health emergency involved; or

“(ii) the amount charged grossly exceeds the price at which the same or similar drug, device, or biologic was readily obtainable by other purchasers in the area in which the declaration applies.

“(C) MITIGATING FACTORS.—In determining whether a violation of subparagraph (A) has occurred, the court shall take into account, among other factors, the price that would reasonably equate supply and demand in a competitive and freely functioning market and whether the price at which the drug, device, or biologic was sold reasonably reflects additional costs, not within the control of the seller, that were paid or incurred by the seller.

“(2) FALSE PRICING INFORMATION.—It shall be unlawful for any person to report information related to the wholesale price of any drug, device, or biologic to the Secretary if—

“(A) that person knew, or reasonably should have known, the information to be false or misleading;

“(B) the information was required by law to be reported; and

“(C) the person intended the false or misleading data to affect data compiled by the department or agency involved for statistical or analytical purposes with respect to the market for drugs, devices, or biologics for the prevention or treatment of influenza.

“(3) MARKET MANIPULATION.—It shall be unlawful for any person, directly or indirectly, to use or employ, in connection with the purchase or sale of drugs, devices, or biologics at wholesale, any manipulative or deceptive device or contrivance, in contravention of such rules and regulations as the Secretary may prescribe as necessary or appropriate in the public interest or for the protection of United States citizens.”.

TITLE XXIV—PROTECTING TAXPAYERS

SEC. 2401. REPORTS ON METRICS FOR MEASURING SUCCESS IN GLOBAL WAR ON TERRORISM.

(a) REQUIREMENT FOR REPORTS.—The Comptroller General of the United States shall submit to Congress reports on the metrics for use in tracking and measuring acts of global terrorism, international counterterrorism efforts, and the success of United States counterterrorism policies and practices including specific, replicable definitions, criteria, and standards of measurement to be used for the following:

(1) Counting and categorizing acts of international terrorism.

(2) Monitoring counterterrorism efforts of foreign governments.

(3) Monitoring financial support provided to terrorist groups.

(4) Assessing the success of United States counterterrorism policies and practices.

(b) SCHEDULE OF REPORTS.—The Comptroller General shall submit to Congress an initial report under subsection (a) not later than 1 year after the date of the enactment of this Act and a second report not later than 1 year after the date on which the initial report is submitted.

SEC. 2402. PROHIBITION ON PROFITEERING.

(a) PROHIBITION.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Chapter 47 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

“§ 1A1039. War profiteering and fraud relating to military action, relief, and reconstruction efforts

“(a) PROHIBITION.—

“(1) IN GENERAL.—Whoever, in any matter involving a contract or the provision of goods or services, directly or indirectly, in connection with a war, military action, or relief or reconstruction activities within the jurisdiction of the United States Government, knowingly and willfully—

“(A)(i) executes or attempts to execute a scheme or artifice to defraud the United States; or

“(ii) materially overvalues any good or service with the specific intent to defraud and excessively profit from the war, military action, or relief or reconstruction activities; shall be fined under paragraph (2), imprisoned not more than 20 years, or both; or

“(B)(i) falsifies, conceals, or covers up by any trick, scheme, or device a material fact;

“(ii) makes any materially false, fictitious, or fraudulent statements or representations; or

“(iii) makes or uses any materially false writing or document knowing the same to contain any materially false, fictitious or fraudulent statement or entry; shall be fined under paragraph (2) imprisoned not more than 10 years, or both.

“(2) FINE.—A person convicted of an offense under paragraph (1) may be fined the greater of—

“(A) $1,000,000; or

“(B) if such person derives profits or other proceeds from the offense, not more than twice the gross profits or other proceeds.

“(b) EXTRATERRITORIAL JURISDICTION.—There is extraterritorial Federal jurisdiction over an offense under this section.

“(c) VENUE.—A prosecution for an offense under this section may be brought—

“(1) as authorized by chapter 211 of this title;

“(2) in any district where any act in furtherance of the offense took place; or

“(3) in any district where any party to the contract or provider of goods or services is located.”.

(2) TABLE OF SECTIONS.—The table of sections for chapter 47 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

“1039. War profiteering and fraud relating to military action, relief, and reconstruction efforts.”.

(b) CIVIL FORFEITURE.—Section 981(a)(1)(C) of title 18, United States Code, is amended by inserting “1039,” after “1032.”.

(c) CRIMINAL FORFEITURE.—Section 982(a)(2)(B) of title 18, United States Code, is amended by striking “or 1030” and inserting “1030, or 1039”.

(d) RICO.—Section 1956(c)(7)(D) of title 18, United States Code, is amended by inserting the following: “. section 1039 (relating to war profiteering and fraud relating to military action, relief, and reconstruction efforts)” after “liquidating agent of financial institution.”.

TITLE XXV—OTHER MATTERS

SEC. 2501. SENSE OF CONGRESS ON MILITARY COMMISSIONS FOR THE TRIAL OF PERSONS DETAINED IN THE GLOBAL WAR ON TERRORISM.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress makes the following findings:

(1) The Constitution of the United States grants to Congress the power “To define and punish . . . Offenses against the Law of Nations”, as well as the power “To declare War . . . To raise and support Armies . . . [and] To provide and maintain a Navy.”.

(2) On November 13, 2001, the President issued a military order establishing military commissions to try individuals detained in the global war on terrorism.

(3) On June 29, 2006, the Supreme Court held in Hamdan v. Rumsfeld (126 S. Ct. 2749 (2006)) that—

(A) the authority to establish military commissions “can derive only from the powers granted jointly to the President and Congress in time of war”;

(B) the military commission established by the President to try Hamdan “lacks the power to proceed” because the procedures governing the commission departed impermissibly from the procedures governing courts martial and the requirements of Common Article 3 of the Geneva Conventions; and

(C) procedures governing military commissions may depart from the procedures governing courts martial “only if some practical need explains deviations from court-martial practice”.

(b) SENSE OF CONGRESS.—It is the sense of Congress that—

(1) aliens detained by the United States who are alleged to have violated the law of war should be tried for their offenses;

(2) it is in the national interest for Congress to exercise its authority under the Constitution to enact legislation authorizing and regulating the use of military commissions to try and punish offenders against the law of war;

(3) procedures established by Congress for the use of military commissions should be consistent with the decision of the Supreme Court in Hamdan v. Rumsfeld;

(4) in drafting legislation for the use of military commissions, the Committees on Armed Services of the Senate and the House of Representatives should take into account the views of professional military lawyers who have experience in prosecuting, defending, and judging cases under chapter 47 of title 10, United States Code (the Uniform Code of Military Justice);

(5) the Committee on Armed Services of the Senate is drafting a bipartisan proposal on military commissions that reflects the views of senior military lawyers, and this process must be allowed to move forward; and

(6) as the Judge Advocate General of the Navy explained in testimony before the Committee on Armed Services of the Senate on July 13, 2006, “[w]e need to think in terms of the long view, and to always put our own sailors, soldiers, Marines, and airmen in the place of an accused when we’re drafting these rules to ensure that these rules are acceptable when we have someone in a future war who faces similar rules”.

DIVISION C—INTELLIGENCE AUTHORIZATIONS

SEC. 3102. CLASSIFIED SCHEDULE OF AUTHORIZATIONS.

(a) SPECIFICATIONS OF AMOUNTS AND PERSONNEL CEILINGS.—The amounts authorized to be appropriated under section 3101, and the authorized personnel ceilings as of September 30, 2007, for the conduct of the intelligence and intelligence-related activities of the elements listed in such section, are those specified in the classified Schedule of Authorizations prepared to accompany the conference report on the bill _____ of the One Hundred Ninth Congress and in the Classified Annex to such report as incorporated in this division under section 3103.

(b) AVAILABILITY OF CLASSIFIED SCHEDULE OF AUTHORIZATIONS.—The Schedule of Authorizations shall be made available to the Committees on Appropriations of the Senate and House of Representatives and to the President. The President shall provide for suitable distribution of the Schedule, or of appropriate portions of the Schedule, within the executive branch.

SEC. 3103. INCORPORATION OF CLASSIFIED ANNEX.

(a) STATUS OF CLASSIFIED ANNEX.—The Classified Annex prepared by the Select Committee on Intelligence of the Senate to accompany its report on the bill S. ____ of the One Hundred Ninth Congress and transmitted to the President is hereby incorporated into this division.

(b) CONSTRUCTION WITH OTHER PROVISIONS OF DIVISION.—Unless otherwise specifically stated, the amounts specified in the Classified Annex are not in addition to amounts authorized to be appropriated by other provisions of this division.

(c) LIMITATION ON USE OF FUNDS.—Funds appropriated pursuant to an authorization contained in this division that are made available for a program, project, or activity referred to in the Classified Annex may only be expended for such program, project, or activity in accordance with such terms, conditions, limitations, restrictions, and requirements as are set out for that program, project, or activity in the Classified Annex.

(d) DISTRIBUTION OF CLASSIFIED ANNEX.—The President shall provide for appropriate distribution of the Classified Annex, or of appropriate portions of the annex, within the executive branch of the Government.

SEC. 3104. PERSONNEL CEILING ADJUSTMENTS.

(a) AUTHORITY FOR ADJUSTMENTS.—With the approval of the Director of the Office of Management and Budget, the Director of National Intelligence may authorize employment of civilian personnel in excess of the number authorized for fiscal year 2007 under section 3102 when the Director of National Intelligence determines that such action is necessary to the performance of important intelligence functions, except that the number of personnel employed in excess of the number authorized under such section may not, for any element of the intelligence community, exceed 2 percent of the number of civilian personnel authorized under such section for such element.

(b) NOTICE TO INTELLIGENCE COMMITTEES.—The Director of National Intelligence shall promptly notify the Select Committee on Intelligence of the Senate and the Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence of the House of Representatives whenever the Director exercises the authority granted by this section.

SEC. 3105. INTELLIGENCE COMMUNITY MANAGEMENT ACCOUNT.

(a) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There is authorized to be appropriated for the Intelligence Community Management Account of the Director of National Intelligence for fiscal year 2007 the sum of $648,952,000. Within such amount, funds identified in the classified Schedule of Authorizations referred to in section 3102(a) for advanced research and development shall remain available until September 30, 2008.

(b) AUTHORIZED PERSONNEL LEVELS.—The elements within the Intelligence Community Management Account of the Director of National Intelligence are authorized 1,575 full-time personnel as of September 30, 2007. Personnel serving in such elements may be permanent employees of the Intelligence Community Management Account or personnel detailed from other elements of the United States Government.

(c) CLASSIFIED AUTHORIZATIONS.—

(1) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—In addition to amounts authorized to be appropriated for the Intelligence Community Management Account by subsection (a), there are also authorized to be appropriated for the Intelligence Community Management Account for fiscal year 2007 such additional amounts as are specified in the classified Schedule of Authorizations referred to in section 2102(a). Such additional amounts for research and development shall remain available until September 30, 2008.

(2) AUTHORIZATION OF PERSONNEL.—In addition to the personnel authorized by subsection (b) for elements of the Intelligence Community Management Account as of September 30, 2007, there are also authorized such additional personnel for such elements as of that date as are specified in the classified Schedule of Authorizations.

(d) REIMBURSEMENT.—Except as provided in section 113 of the National Security Act of 1947 (50 U.S.C. 404h), during fiscal year 2007 any officer or employee of the United States or a member of the Armed Forces who is detailed to the staff of the Intelligence Community Management Account from another element of the United States Government shall be detailed on a reimbursable basis, except that any such officer, employee, or member may be detailed on a nonreimbursable basis for a period of less than one year for the performance of temporary functions as required by the Director of National Intelligence.

SEC. 3106. INCORPORATION OF REPORTING REQUIREMENTS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Each requirement to submit a report to the congressional intelligence committees that is included in the joint explanatory statement to accompany the conference report on the bill _____ of the One Hundred Ninth Congress, or in the classified annex to this division, is hereby incorporated into this division, and is hereby made a requirement in law.

(b) CONGRESSIONAL INTELLIGENCE COMMITTEES DEFINED.—In this section, the term “congressional intelligence committees” means—

(1) the Select Committee on Intelligence of the Senate; and

(2) the Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence of the House of Representatives.

SEC. 3107. AVAILABILITY TO PUBLIC OF CERTAIN INTELLIGENCE FUNDING INFORMATION.

(a) AMOUNTS REQUESTED EACH FISCAL YEAR.—The President shall disclose to the public for each fiscal year after fiscal year 2007 the aggregate amount of appropriations requested in the budget of the President for such fiscal year for the National Intelligence Program.

(b) AMOUNTS AUTHORIZED AND APPROPRIATED EACH FISCAL YEAR.—Congress shall disclose to the public for each fiscal year after fiscal year 2006 the aggregate amount of funds authorized to be appropriated, and the aggregate amount of funds appropriated, by Congress for such fiscal year for the National Intelligence Program.

(c) STUDY ON DISCLOSURE OF ADDITIONAL INFORMATION.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Director of National Intelligence shall conduct a study to assess the advisability of disclosing to the public amounts as follows:

(A) The aggregate amount of appropriations requested in the budget of the President for each fiscal year for each element of the intelligence community.

(B) The aggregate amount of funds authorized to be appropriated, and the aggregate amount of funds appropriated, by Congress for each fiscal year for each element of the intelligence community.

(2) REQUIREMENTS.—The study required by paragraph (1) shall—

(A) address whether or not the disclosure to the public of the information referred to in that paragraph would harm the national security of the United States; and

(B) take into specific account concerns relating to the disclosure of such information for each element of the intelligence community.

(3) REPORT.—Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Director shall submit to Congress a report on the study required by paragraph (1).

SEC. 3108. RESPONSE OF INTELLIGENCE COMMUNITY TO REQUESTS FROM CONGRESS FOR INTELLIGENCE DOCUMENTS AND INFORMATION.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Title V of the National Security Act of 1947 (50 U.S.C. 413 et seq.) is amended by adding at the end the following new section:

“RESPONSE OF INTELLIGENCE COMMUNITY TO REQUESTS FROM CONGRESS FOR INTELLIGENCE DOCUMENTS AND INFORMATION

“SEC. 508. (a) REQUESTS OF COMMITTEES.—The Director of National Intelligence, the Director of the National Counterterrorism Center, the Director of a national intelligence center, or the head of any other department, agency, or element of the Federal Government, or other organization within the Executive branch, that is an element of the intelligence community shall, not later than 15 days after receiving a request for any intelligence assessment, report, estimate, legal opinion, or other intelligence information from the Select Committee on Intelligence of the Senate, the Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence of the House of Representatives, or any other committee of Congress with jurisdiction over the subject matter to which information in such assessment, report, estimate, legal opinion, or other information relates, make available to such committee such assessment, report, estimate, legal opinion, or other information, as the case may be.

“(b) REQUESTS OF CERTAIN MEMBERS.—(1) The Director of National Intelligence, the Director of the National Counterterrorism Center, the Director of a national intelligence center, or the head of any other department, agency, or element of the Federal Government, or other organization within the Executive branch, that is an element of the intelligence community shall respond, in the time specified in subsection (a), to a request described in that subsection from the Chairman or Vice Chairman of the Select Committee on Intelligence of the Senate or the Chairman or Ranking Member of the Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence of the House of Representatives.

“(2) Upon making a request covered by paragraph (1)—

“(A) the Chairman or Vice Chairman, as the case may be, of the Select Committee on Intelligence of the Senate shall notify the other of the Chairman or Vice Chairman of such request; and

“(B) the Chairman or Ranking Member, as the case may be, of the Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence of the House of Representatives shall notify the other of the Chairman or Ranking Member of such request.

“(c) ASSERTION OF PRIVILEGE.—In response to a request covered by subsection (a) or (b), the Director of National Intelligence, the Director of the National Counterterrorism Center, the Director of a national intelligence center, or the head of any other department, agency, or element of the Federal Government, or other organization within the Executive branch, that is an element of the intelligence community shall provide the document or information covered by such request unless the President certifies that such document or information is not being provided because the President is asserting a privilege pursuant to the Constitution of the United States.”.

(b) CLERICAL AMENDMENT.—The table of contents in the first section of that Act is amended by inserting after the item relating to section 507 the following new item:
