PURPOSE AND SUMMARY

H.R. 5243 would make Kumi Iizuka-Barcena eligible for adjustment of her status to that of a permanent resident.

BACKGROUND AND NEED FOR THE LEGISLATION

Kumi Iizuka was born on October 28, 1965, in Shibukawa Gumma, Japan. She is currently 42 years old. She entered the United States on an F-1 student visa in 1992. She received a bachelor's degree from West Virginia Wesleyan College and a master's degree from the University of Hartford. In 1998, Ms. Iizuka began working for Elcom, Inc., pursuant to an H-1B specialty worker visa.

While in the United States on the H-1B visa, Ms. Iizuka met and fell in love with Andrew Barcena, a U.S. citizen. She married Mr. Barcena on July 29, 2004, while he was training to be a police officer for the El Paso Police Department. A few weeks later, on August 16, 2004, Mr. Barcena filed immigration petitions for his wife (now Kumi Iizuka-Barcena) based on their marriage (Form I-130, Petition for Alien Relative, and Form I-485, Application for Permanent Residence).

Mr. Barcena graduated from the police academy on August 26, 2004. Just 1 month later, in the early morning hours of September 25, he was shot and killed while attempting to subdue an aggressive spouse during a domestic disturbance call.

Mr. Barcena died before the Department of Homeland Security (DHS) could process and approve the immigration petitions that he had filed on his wife's behalf. Due to the circumstances, however, DHS granted Ms. Iizuka-Barcena deferred action status along with employment authorization. She was thus able to stay in the U.S., where she continued to care for Andrew's father, who was a diabetic and suffered partial paralysis due to a stroke.

In June 2006, less than 2 years after her husband's death, Ms. Iizuka-Barcena was diagnosed with breast cancer. She immediately had surgery to remove cancerous tissue from her breasts, and she required a second procedure when doctors discovered another lump in her breasts. She also engaged in months of chemo and radiation therapy, and she is now on a hormone medication regimen.

Due to the circumstances in Ms. Iizuka-Barcena's case, DHS has granted her deferred action status on an annual basis. As with a stay of removal, grants of deferred action status are temporary and discretionary. Ms. Iizuka-Barcena has no basis to immigrate to the United States other than a private bill.

On February 26, 2008, the Subcommittee on Immigration, Citizenship, Refugees, Border Security, and International Law requested, in accordance with its customary practice for private immigration bills, that DHS' Office of Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE) provide the Subcommittee with information regarding Ms. Iizuka-Barcena relevant to the bill. ICE's report, submitted to the Subcommittee on June 13, 2008, contained no derogatory information about Ms. Iizuka-Barcena. The ICE report is reprinted in full in the "Agency Views" section below.

The application fee stamp is dated August 24, 2004.

ADDITIONAL VIEWS

Meritorious private bills should either represent unique and compelling circumstances or fit within private bill precedent of the modern era (from the 97th Congress onward, following the AB-SCAM private bill scandal).

There is precedent in the modern era for the enactment of private bills where the alien spouse of an American citizen lost the right to immigrate because of the death of the American citizen before the approval of the petition for conditional permanent residence for the alien (usually, but not always, there was also a U.S. citizen child involved). Congress has also passed private bills where the beneficiary was the spouse of a U.S. citizen or legal alien who died while in service to the United States (such as in the military or the State Department).

A DHS report on Ms. Iizuka-Barcena was received on June 13, 2008, and contained no derogatory information. Because H.R. 5243 fits within private bill precedent and the DHS report contained no derogatory information, this is a meritorious private bill.

LAMAR SMITH.
