I. BACKGROUND AND PURPOSE OF THE JUVENILE JUSTICE AND DELINQUENCY PREVENTION REAUTHORIZATION ACT OF 2008

A. BACKGROUND AND NEED FOR THE LEGISLATION

The Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention Reauthorization Act (JJJPA or “the Act”) sets out Federal policy and standards and authorizes key Federal resources for States to improve their juvenile justice systems and for communities to develop programs to prevent juveniles from entering the juvenile justice system in the first place. For this reauthorization, the Committee has reexamined Federal juvenile justice policy in light of new studies and evidence that have emerged since the last 2002 reauthorization. In setting new Federal standards and refining existing ones, the Committee has also been guided by changes that States have been making to their own juvenile justice systems. As one commentator noted on the critical issue of whether to place juveniles in adult jails:

States are rethinking and, in some cases, retooling juvenile sentencing laws. They’re responding to new research on the adolescent brain, and studies that indicate teens sent to adult court end up worse off than those who are not: They get in trouble more often, they do it faster and the offenses are more serious.<sup>1</sup>

Building on the States’ juvenile justice experiences, this bill makes several changes to the Act that reinforce what has been working in State juvenile justice systems, and changes what has not been working. It seeks to ensure that communities and State juvenile justice systems have the resources they need to prevent juvenile crime and to deal effectively with juvenile offenders in the system to ensure their successful reintegration into their communities. One principal goal of this reauthorization is to foster a return to the strong support for State and local law enforcement that Congress showed in the 1990s, as demonstrated by the Community Oriented Policing Services (COPS) Program and other key grant programs that contributed to historic declines in violent crime. Declining funding for these programs in recent years has contributed to a reversal of that trend and to recent increases in crime rates. Though rates of juvenile crime have continued to decrease, effective prevention programs have faced significant cuts in Federal support, creating a dangerous vacuum. This bill aims to reverse this trend and to help our communities implement programs proven to help juveniles turn their lives around.

A careful examination of how to keep juveniles from entering or reentering the criminal justice system not only makes our communities safer by reducing the number of juveniles who go on to lives of crime as adults, but it also ensures that juveniles will lead safer and more fulfilling lives. For example, the Washington Post reported recently on a study by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, led by an independent Taskforce on Community Preventative Services, that determined that children who are prosecuted as adults commit more crimes, and more serious crimes, considered carefully with this reauthorization whether that policy is working in the face of strong evidence to the contrary. This reauthorization takes steps to ensure that juveniles in States participating in JJDPA programs are held pretrial in adult jails and lock ups only after careful consideration and weighing of all relevant factors. It makes these and other changes with appropriate respect for, and deference to, the varied policy choices, needs, and fiscal realities of the States.

The Committee understands the importance of holding criminals accountable for their crimes. It also recognizes the importance of boosting support for State and local law enforcement and of balancing strong law enforcement with prevention programs aimed at keeping juveniles out of the criminal justice system. This reauthorization recognizes that some problems persist throughout the Nation's juvenile justice systems, including disturbing episodes of mistreatment of children and the continuing disproportionate representation of youth of color in the juvenile justice system. It takes strong steps to address these concerns, and to encourage both the Office of Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Programs (OJJDP) at the Department of Justice and the States that receive Federal funds under the Act to search for ways to solve these troubling patterns and disparities and continue to build upon past successes.

B. SIGNIFICANT CHANGES IN THIS REAUTHORIZATION

This bipartisan bill will strengthen the JJDPA by increasing Federal support to States for juvenile crime reduction and for improvement of State juvenile justice systems, and by encouraging important reforms. Among its most significant changes from the last reauthorization are increases in Federal funding for prevention, intervention and treatment programs designed to reduce the incidence of juvenile crime. These include increased funding for critical title V prevention programs to discourage juvenile contact with the justice system, such as after-school care and mentoring; increased funding to assist States in achieving and maintaining compliance with the JJDPA's goals and particularly its core requirements; and the promotion of evidence-based and promising practices to ensure that Federal dollars have maximum impact.

This bill also encourages States to make critical new improvements to their juvenile justice systems. For example, the bill places significant new emphasis on the crucial issues of mental health and substance abuse, including expanding the allowable use of grant funds for mental health and substance abuse training and treatment, encouraging States to focus more on juveniles with those needs, and providing new incentive grants for these purposes. A recent letter to the editor of the New York Times aptly summed up the dangers of leaving children in need of mental health care untreated: "children with psychiatric disorders were twice as likely to be involved in the criminal justice system as young adults than children with no disorder . . . [y]et less than half of children with multiple psychiatric disorders receive any mental health services."<sup>4</sup> treatment, encouraging States to focus more on juveniles with those needs, and providing new incentive grants for these purposes. A recent letter to the editor of the New York Times aptly summed up the dangers of leaving children in need of mental health care untreated: “children with psychiatric disorders were twice as likely to be involved in the criminal justice system as young adults than children with no disorder . . . [y]et less than half of children with multiple psychiatric disorders receive any mental health services.”<sup>4</sup> This bill seeks to fill this gap by providing new directives to States, together with new authorizations to implement these directives.<sup>5</sup>

The reauthorization compels States to continue working toward reducing racial and ethnic disparities in the juvenile justice systems. Marian Wright Edelman, President of the Children’s Defense Fund, noted in a recent editorial, “Black and Latino teens end up in adult facilities in numbers disproportionately higher than their representation in the general population. Nationally, according to [a] Campaign for Youth Justice report, three out of four young people admitted to adult prison in 2002 were either Black or Latino.”<sup>6</sup> In their landmark report, And Justice for Some, the National Council on Crime and Delinquency recognized that youth of color face a “cumulative disadvantage” in the justice system (where the disparities grow deeper as youth continue through the justice system).<sup>7</sup> Since many data systems fail to disaggregate ethnicity from race, data on the extent to which young people of color are over-represented in the juvenile justice system are generally under-reported. The bill seeks to address this troubling trend by asking States to take concrete steps to reduce these disparities.

The bill further requires States to devise strategies to eliminate the incidence of dangerous practices, unreasonable restraints, and isolation of juveniles through the increased use of training and best practices.<sup>8</sup>

This legislation also places common sense limits on the pretrial detention of juveniles in adult jails and lock ups and the detention of juveniles for status offenses. Youth held in adult jails and lock-<sup>5</sup>The bill also encourages States to provide more services to juvenile inmates with disabilities—a problem recently highlighted in a New York Times editorial. See “Writing Off Disabled Children,” Editorial, the New York Times, Aug. 9, 2008 (noting that Texas public education deficiencies in treating students with disabilities leads to higher numbers of disabled children in the State juvenile justice system.).

<sup>8</sup>In this reauthorization, the Committee defines “restraints” and “dangerous practices.” The term “unreasonable restraints” means the excessive use of restraints or the use of restraints that are not reasonably calculated to meet legitimate correctional needs in managing juvenile detention facilities. Examples of “dangerous practices” would include, but would not be limited to, hogtying, the use of four- or five-point restraints, choking, the use of belly belts or belly chains on pregnant females, the use of psychotropic medication without adherence to appropriate medical standards regarding dosage or for purposes unrelated to medical treatment such as coercion, punishment or convenience, and the use of restraints on a female who is in labor, is delivering a baby, or is in post-delivery recuperation, when such female does not reasonably present a risk of danger or escape. The Committee does not intend to prevent correctional officers from using reasonable physical force, or, in exceptional circumstances, chemical agents, as a matter of last resort in order to meet legitimate correctional needs in managing juvenile detention facilities, nor does the Committee intend to prevent correctional officers from using other reasonable techniques that are necessary to protect the safety of inmates, officers or staff.

ups are at great risk of physical and sexual abuse and 19 times more likely to commit suicide than youth held in juvenile facilities.<sup>9</sup> Adult facilities are also generally less well-equipped to meet the educational and other specialized needs of youth. Under this bill, juveniles charged as adults may not be placed in a jail or lock-up or have any contact with adult inmates without a hearing. A judge must consider meaningful factors and make detailed written findings to ensure that such placement is “in the interest of justice.” This process is intended to ensure that the particular needs of juveniles are taken into account and that youth are not unduly exposed to the risks of being housed with adults.

Similarly, the bill ensures that “status offenders”—juveniles arrested for offenses that would not be criminal if committed by adults (e.g., runaways, truants)—not be placed in secure detention unless absolutely necessary, establishes strict time limits on the length of detention, and contains a provision that will repeal the valid court order provision entirely within three years unless, with due diligence, a State is unable to comply with the Act’s core requirement relating to the deinstitutionalization of status offenders.

Recent research also demonstrates that a large number of youth involved in the juvenile justice system are in need of mental health services. The American Journal of Psychiatry has published a report finding that children with psychiatric disorders were twice as likely to be involved with the criminal justice system as those without a disorder.<sup>10</sup> According to the most recent statistics from the National Center for Mental Health and Juvenile Justice which indicate that nearly 70 percent of youth placed in juvenile justice can be diagnosed with a mental health disorder—one in five of these youths have serious mental health problems, and in the most recent report from the Federal Advisory Committee on Juvenile Justice, 30 States identified mental health treatment for youth in the juvenile justice system to be a major concern.<sup>11</sup>

The facts about the number of children with mental health issues detained in juvenile facilities are truly disturbing and a meaningful response is long overdue. The bill as amended authorizes important grants to support State efforts to conduct a mental health screening for detained juveniles within 24 hours of detention, the period when juveniles are at the highest risk of suicide. These provisions receive the strong support of the American Academy of Pediatrics, Human Rights Watch and the Mental Health Liaison Group, representing over 50 national, professional, research, voluntary, health, consumer, family and citizen advocacy organizations concerned about mental health and addiction disorders.

Finally, the bill reaffirms and strengthens the Federal-State partnership. It supports States’ efforts to comply with JJJPA core requirements by making funds withheld due to non-compliance available to States as improvement grants meant to enable States to become compliant. It also strengthens research and technical assistance by the OJJDP to encourage States to adopt best practices, encourages agencies to look for community-based alternatives, expands training and technical assistance to ensure that the most effective programs and practices are implemented around the country, and increases transparency by making State plans and OJJDP decision-making publicly available.

This bipartisan bill enjoys the support of numerous law enforcement and children's advocacy groups, including the Children's Defense Fund, the National Juvenile Justice & Delinquency Prevention Coalition, the National Juvenile Justice Network, Fight Crime: Invest in Kids, the National Association of Counties, the Coalition for Juvenile Justice, and the Council of Juvenile Correctional Administrators.

II. HISTORY OF THE BILL AND COMMITTEE CONSIDERATION

A. INTRODUCTION OF THE BILL

Senators Leahy, Specter, and Kohl introduced S. 3155, the Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention Reauthorization Act of 2008, on June 18, 2008. The bill was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary. Since the bill's introduction, Senators Collins, Feinstein, Snowe, Durbin, Coleman, and Smith have joined as cosponsors.

B. COMMITTEE CONSIDERATION

On December 5, 2007, Senator Leahy chaired a Committee hearing on "Reauthorization of the Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention Act: Protecting Our Children and Our Communities." The witnesses were Anne Marie Ambrose, Director of Child Welfare and Juvenile Justice Services, Pennsylvania Department of Public Welfare; Shay Bilchik, Founder and Director, Center for Juvenile Justice Reform, Georgetown University Public Policy Institute; J. Robert Flores, Administrator, Office of Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention, Office of Justice Programs, Department of Justice; Richard Miranda, Chief of Police for the City of Tucson, Arizona; and Deirdre Wilson Garton, Chair of the State Advisory Group for the State of Wisconsin.

Anne Marie Ambrose emphasized in her testimony that "devastating cuts in Federal funding over the past few years have forced the [State Advisory Committee for Pennsylvania] to reevaluate our work and focus even more on prevention as well as on sustainability of programs."<sup>12</sup> Shay Bilchik, the former head of OJJDP, viewed "the recent uptick in juvenile arrests as a possible warning that we cannot safely continue to reduce our commitment to effective programming for at-risk and system involved juveniles if we are to sustain our progress and provide services at a level needed to give every youth the chance to succeed and become a productive and law-aiding citizen.”<sup>13</sup> Tucson Chief of Police Richard Miranda emphasized the need to clarify the disproportionate minority representation provisions of the JJDPA because the current standards are “vague.”<sup>14</sup> He added, “I just can’t arrest away our problems. There have to be other alternatives, there have to be other processes to get these kids on the right track.”<sup>15</sup>

Deirdre Wilson Garton urged the Committee to “substantially increase the training and technical assistance provided to States and communities that will help them embrace evidence-based delinquency prevention programs and intervention programs that work.”<sup>16</sup> And J. Robert Flores, the current head of OJJDP, acknowledged that “much remains to be done to prevent, intervene in, and treat delinquent behavior.”<sup>17</sup>

On July 31, 2008, the Committee on the Judiciary considered S. 3155. Senators Leahy, Specter and Kohl offered an amendment, in the nature of a substitute, which was adopted by unanimous consent. This amendment made a number of changes to clarify and strengthen the bill.

Senator Grassley offered an amendment to require a comprehensive audit of OJJDP as well as grantees that receive funding from OJJDP. This amendment was rejected on a rollcall vote, with opposing Senators expressing concerns that the proposed audit appeared to duplicate oversight requirements already in the bill, to unnecessarily tax scarce State resources, and to inappropriately question the existence of key juvenile justice programs. The vote record is as follows:

III. SECTION-BY-SECTION SUMMARY OF THE BILL<sup>18</sup>

Section 1. Short title

This section cites the short title of the Act as the “Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention Reauthorization Act of 2008.”

Section 2. Table of contents

This section provides the table of contents for the Act.

Section 101. Findings

This section contains congressional findings supporting the need for reauthorization.

Section 102. Purposes

This section contains the Act’s purposes, including a new purpose to support a continuum of programs including delinquency prevention, intervention, mental health and substance abuse treatment, and aftercare, to address the needs of at-risk youth and youth who come into contact with the justice system.

Section 103. Definitions

This section amends certain existing definitions, and adds several new definitions. The term “adult inmate” is amended to give States the authority to retain youth who are placed in juvenile facilities after they reach the age of maximum age of extended jurisdiction. The section also defines for the first time: “core requirements,” “chemical agent,” “isolation,” “restraint,” “evidence based,” “promising,” and “dangerous practice.”

Section 201. Concentration of Federal efforts

This section clarifies the date on which the Administrator must issue the annual plan for coordinating Federal juvenile justice efforts.

Section 202. Coordinating Council on Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention

This section provides for the addition of several members to the Coordinating Council on Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention, including individuals from the mental health fields.

Section 203. Annual report

This section modifies several existing reporting requirements in the OJJDP Administrator’s annual report, including requiring data on conditions of confinement (isolation and restraints), release from custody, and status offenders.

This section also requires that the Administrator include a description of the criteria used to determine what programs qualify as evidence-based and promising programs under JJJPA titles II and V, and a comprehensive list of those programs that have been determined to meet the criteria, as well as a description of funding provided to Indian tribes under this Act.

Section 204. Allocation of funds

This section clarifies that funds should be allocated to States under Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention Act (JJJPA) based on the most recent census data available.

This section authorizes the reinvestment of funds withheld due to noncompliance with one or more of the core requirements as an “incentive grant” aimed at helping States to regain compliance. It also requires that the Administrator provide support and technical assistance to the States in achieving and maintaining compliance with the Act.

Section 205. State plan

This section makes a number of changes to the information that participating States must include in their State plans.

Specifically, this section requires States to publicly disclose their State plan on-line within 30 days of its approval by the Administrator.

This section changes the composition of the State advisory group to include volunteers who work with delinquent youth or youth at risk of delinquency, including volunteers who work with youth of color, the State’s Runaway and Homeless Youth Act executive director, persons with expertise and competence in preventing and addressing mental health or substance abuse problems in juvenile delinquents and those at risk of delinquency, and representatives of victim or witness advocacy groups.

This section requires States to inform stakeholders about the State’s plan and compliance with the core requirements. In addition, the plan must also provide alternatives to detention, including diversion to home-based detention or community-based services or treatment for those youth in need of mental health, substance abuse, or co-occurring disorder services at the time the juvenile first came into contact with the juvenile justice system. And it must include a plan to reduce the number of children housed in secure detention and corrections facilities who are awaiting placement in residential treatment programs, a plan to encourage inclusion of family members in the design and delivery of juvenile delinquency prevention and treatment services, particularly post-placement, and a plan to use community-based services to address the needs of at-risk youth or youth who have come into contact with the juvenile justice system.

This section ensures that States advisory groups use JJDP funds for the provision of training, technical assistance and consultation with State and local juvenile justice and child welfare agencies to develop coordinated dependence and delinquency system plans for early intervention and treatment of youth who have a history of abuse, as well as those juveniles who have prior involvement with the juvenile justice system. JJDP funds must also be used for programs to improve the recruitment, selection, training, and retention of professional personnel in the fields of medicine, law enforcement, judiciary juvenile justice, social work and child protection, education, and other relevant fields who are engaged in, or intend to work in, the field of prevention, identification, and treatment of delinquency. The funds must also go toward expanding access to publicly supported, court-appointed legal counsel and enhancing capacity for the competent representation of every child.

This section encourages the use of community-based alternatives to secure detention.

This section expands the jail removal requirement to keep youth awaiting trial in adult criminal court out of adult lock-ups under certain circumstances. The section requires that a youth be placed in a juvenile facility unless a judge determines it is in the “interest of justice” for the youth to be held in an adult facility. The interest of justice shall be determined by looking at a variety of factors, including the age, physical and mental maturity of the juvenile, the nature and circumstances of the alleged offense, the relative ability of the available adult jails and lock ups and juvenile detention facilities to meet the specific needs of the juvenile, and the protection of the public among other relevant considerations. The procedural protections for juveniles charged as adults are strengthened by, among other new protections, requiring the court to hold a review hearing at least every 30 days, if it determines that it is in the interest of justice to permit a juvenile to be held in any jail or lockup for adults or have contact with adult inmates. The juvenile may not be held for more than 180 days unless the court, in writing, determines that there is a good cause exception.

This section updates the Disproportionate Minority Contact core requirement by providing additional direction to States and localities on how to identify and reduce racial and ethnic disparities among youth who come into contact with the juvenile justice system and by mandating that community-based services are both culturally and linguistically competent.

This section updates the Valid Court Order exception by ensuring that “status offenders”—juveniles arrested for offenses that would not be criminal if committed by adults—are not placed in secure detention unless it is in the best interest of that juvenile. If a juvenile is taken into custody for violating a valid court order issued for committing a status offense, this section requires the court to identify the court order violation, specify the factual basis for the violation, and provide findings of fact that support a determination that there is no appropriate less restrictive alternative available. Juveniles may not be ordered to be detained for a period exceeding seven days.

This section encourages States to ensure that records are shared between the juvenile justice system and the child welfare system for youth who have been abused or neglected.

This section requires that the plan address mental health and substance abuse screening, assessment, referral, and treatment for juveniles in the juvenile justice system. The plan must also include policies and procedures, as well as training for staff, on evidence-based and promising techniques that are designed to eliminate the use of dangerous practices and unreasonable restraints and isolation.

This section creates new procedural safeguards to improve juvenile reentry services. The safeguards include, but are not limited to, a written case plan for each juvenile that describes pre-release and post-release programs; living arrangements after discharge, and post-release support such as behavioral health care, and, as appropriate, a hearing that details the discharge plan for the juvenile that shall take place no earlier than 30 days before the scheduled release.

This section requires States who are out of compliance with the Act to submit a report to the Administrator detailing the reasons for non-compliance and a plan to regain compliance. The report must be posted on a publicly available website. The Administrator must issue a public report detailing the determination of compliance and post it on a publicly available website.

Under current law, OJJDP is empowered to take action against States that fail to comply with a core requirement “in the subsequent fiscal year.” This section strikes that limitation, and allows OJJDP to take action in the current fiscal year, if appropriate.

Section 206. Authority to make grants

This section amends the Administrator’s grant-making authority to add truancy prevention and reduction activities to the list of after-school programs that provide at-risk juveniles and juveniles in the system with a range of age-appropriate activities. Also added to the list are projects that support the establishment of partnerships between a State and a university, institution of higher education, or research center designed to improve the recruitment, selection, training and retention of professional personnel.

Section 207. Research and evaluation; statistical analyses; information dissemination

This section requires the Administrator to provide an annual written and publicly available plan to identify the purposes and goals of all programs carried out with funds. It also requires the Administrator to conduct research or evaluation relating to the prevalence and duration of behavioral needs, including mental health, substance abuse, and co-occurring disorders, among juveniles pre-placement and post-placement when held in the custody of secure detention and corrections facilities, including an examination of the effects of confinement. The research shall also include training efforts and reforms that have produced reductions in, or elimination of, the use of dangerous practices. Finally, the report shall include a description of the best practices in discharge planning and an assessment of living arrangements for juveniles who cannot return to the homes of the juveniles.

This section requires the development of a National Recidivism Measure. It requires the Administrator to establish a uniform method of data collection and technology used to evaluate data on juvenile recidivism, establish a common national juvenile recidivism measure, and make cumulative juvenile recidivism data that is collected from States available to the public.

This section also requires the Administrator to assess the effectiveness of the practice of treating juveniles as adults for purposes in criminal court and submit the findings and conclusions of the assessment to Congress and the President as well as to the public and to conduct a study of adjudicated juveniles and publish a report on the outcomes for juveniles who have reintegrated into the community.

Section 208. Training and technical assistance

This section compels the Administrator to, among other requirements, make publicly available his or her decision-making with respect to grants to States and provide for the development and promulgation of standards of practice for attorneys representing children and ensure the adoption of these standards.

The Administrator must also coordinate training and technical assistance programs with juvenile detention and corrections personnel of States and units of local government to promote evidence based and promising methods for improving conditions of juvenile confinement, including those that are designed to minimize the use of dangerous practices, unreasonable restraints, and isolation, and to promote positive behavioral management techniques.

Section 209. Incentive grants for state and local programs

This section creates a new incentive grant program and sets forth activities that may receive incentive grant funding and the means by which States may apply for the grants. Permissible uses of incentive grant funds include increasing the use of evidence-based or promising prevention programs; improving the recruitment, selection, training and retention of professional personnel; and the establishment of a partnership between juvenile justice agencies of a State or unit of local government and mental health authorities of a State or unit of local government to enhance mental health and substance abuse services for juveniles. At least one-half of the funds allocated under this program must be authorized for evidence-based or promising programs, as those terms are now defined.

Section 210. Authorization of appropriations

This section sets authorization levels for the JJDPA title II programs as follows: (A) $196,700,000 for fiscal year 2009, (B)

$245,900,000 for 2010, (C) $295,100,000 for 2011, (D) $344,300,000 for 2012, and (E) $393,500,000 for 2013.

This section also sets authorization levels for the new incentive grants program at $80,000,000 for each of fiscal years 2009, 2010, 2011, 2012, and 2013. Of the sums appropriated for a fiscal year to carry out the incentive grants program, at least 40% of the funds shall be used for programs that are carrying out an activity described in subparagraph (C), (D), or (E) of section 271(b)(1).

Section 211. Administrative authority

This section strikes the word “requirements” as described in paragraphs (11), (12), and (13) of section 223(a), and replaces it with “core requirements.”

Section 212. Technical and conforming amendments

This section makes several technical and conforming amendments.

Section 301. Definitions

This section adds a definition for the term “mentoring.”

Section 302. Grants for delinquency prevention programs

This section adds mentoring as an allowable use of JJDPA title V delinquency prevention programs.

Section 303. Authorization of appropriations

This section sets authorization levels for the JJDPA title V programs as follows: (1) $272,200,000 for fiscal year 2009; (2) $322,800,000 for fiscal year 2010; (3) $373,400,000 for fiscal year 2011; (4) $424,000,000 for fiscal year 2012; and (5) $474,600,000 for fiscal year 2013.

Section 304. Technical and conforming amendment

This section makes several technical and conforming amendments.

IV. CONGRESSIONAL BUDGET OFFICE COST ESTIMATE

The Committee sets forth, with respect to the bill, S. 3155, the following estimate and comparison prepared by the Director of the Congressional Budget Office under section 402 of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974:

AUGUST 18, 2008.

Hon. PATRICK J. LEAHY,
Chairman, Committee on the Judiciary,
U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: The Congressional Budget Office has completed the enclosed cost estimate for S. 3155, the Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention Reauthorization Act of 2008.

The CBO staff contact for this estimate is Mark Grabowicz.
Sincerely,

PETER R. ORSZAG.

Enclosure.

S. 3155—Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention Act

Summary: S. 3155 would authorize the appropriation of $3.7 billion over the 2009–2013 period for the Department of Justice (DOJ) to make grants to state and local governments for programs to reduce juvenile delinquency and improve the juvenile justice system. In addition, the bill would authorize the appropriation of such sums as may be necessary for juvenile delinquency block grants and state challenge grants.

Assuming appropriation of the necessary amounts, CBO estimates that implementing S. 3155 would cost about $2.3 billion over the 2009–2013 period and another $2 billion in subsequent years. Enacting the legislation would not affect direct spending or revenues.

S. 3155 contains no intergovernmental or private-sector mandates as defined in the Unfunded Mandates Reform Act (UMRA) and would impose no costs on state, local, or tribal governments.

Estimated cost to the Federal Government: The estimated budgetary impact of S. 3155 is shown in the following table. The cost of this legislation falls within budget function 750 (administration of justice).

	By fiscal year, in millions of dollars—					2009–2013
	2009	2010	2011	2012	2013
CHANGES IN SPENDING SUBJECT TO APPROPRIATION
Programs with Specified Funding Levels:

Total Changes:
Estimated Authorization Level .....	646	749	852	954	1,057	4,258
Estimated Outlays .....	78	271	473	669	853	2,344

Basis of estimate: CBO estimates that S. 3155 would authorize a total of nearly $4.3 billion over the 2009–2013 period for the juvenile justice and delinquency prevention programs covered by the bill. That total includes the $3.7 billion specified in the bill for various programs and an estimated $515 million for juvenile justice block grants and state challenge grants. CBO estimated the cost of the block grants and challenge grants by adjusting the amounts appropriated for those programs for 2008 for anticipated inflation.

Assuming appropriation of the necessary amounts, CBO estimates that implementing S. 3155 would cost about $2.3 billion over the 2009–2013 period, with the remaining amounts spent in subsequent years. For this estimate, CBO assumes that the authorized and estimated amounts will be appropriated near the start of each fiscal year and that spending will follow the historical spending patterns for these activities.

Intergovernmental and private-sector impact: S. 3155 contains no intergovernmental or private-sector mandates as defined in UMRA and would impose no costs on state, local, or tribal governments. The bill would add new requirements for governments that participate in certain federal programs related to juvenile justice. Assuming appropriation of the authorized amounts, state, local, and tribal governments would receive about $2.3 billion over the 2009–2013 period.

Estimate prepared by: Federal Costs: Mark Grabowicz, Impact on State, Local, and Tribal Governments: Melissa Merrell; Impact on the Private Sector: MarDestinee C. Perez.

Estimate approved by: Peter H. Fontaine, Assistant Director for Budget Analysis.

V. REGULATORY IMPACT EVALUATION

In compliance with rule XXVI of the Standing Rules of the Senate, the Committee finds that no significant regulatory impact will result from the enactment of S. 3155.

VI. CONCLUSION

This legislation seeks to move the country in new directions to protect our communities and give our children the chance they need to grow up to be productive members of society. But the Committee was careful to do so with full respect for the discretion due to law enforcement and judges, with deference to States, and with a regard for difficult fiscal realities. We urge its prompt passage in the full Senate.

VII. ADDITIONAL AND MINORITY VIEWS

ADDITIONAL VIEWS FROM SENATOR KYL

I submit these additional views simply to note my intent to offer an amendment to this bill on the Senate floor that I had filed but did not have time to offer in the Judiciary Committee. The amendment, a copy of which is attached to this statement, would allow federal prosecutors, without having to seek a judge's permission, to prosecute a 16- or 17-year-old as an adult if that individual is charged with committing murder, forcible rape, or kidnapping, or an attempt to commit such an offense. Under current law, before any juvenile can be prosecuted as an adult in federal court for any offense, the prosecutor must seek the judge's permission, and the judge must decide that such prosecution is "in the interest of justice." Current application of this standard varies widely depending on the ideological predisposition of the presiding judge, and far too many district judges fail to take the interest in public safety into account when applying this test. My amendment would ensure that, for the most serious violent crimes—rape, murder, and kidnapping—prosecutors will have the discretion to seek a sentence that is appropriate to the crime and that will protect the public.

Many states currently allow or even require juveniles as young as 14 years old to be prosecuted as adults for a broad range of offenses. Some critics of the amendment that I circulated in the Judiciary Committee have argued that prosecuting and incarcerating a 16- or 17-year-old as an adult could undermine his rehabilitation; they cite studies indicating that juveniles who were prosecuted as adults are more likely to commit new crimes in the future.

I agree that for many crimes, such as theft or even drug crimes, society ought rightly be concerned with a juvenile offender's rehabilitation. In the case of crimes such as murder or rape, however, the balance of interests tips decisively in favor of protecting society from the offender. The maximum penalty for these crimes is life in prison, and all sentences for these offenses tend to be very long and to cover all of an offender's crime-prone years. When an offender commits a rape or a murder, the interest in his rehabilitation is greatly reduced; society must place greater emphasis on the offender's incapacitation and the prevention of additional crimes. And as for the "studies" cited above, I think that it is obvious that the reason that juveniles who were prosecuted as adults are more likely to commit new crimes in the future is that juveniles who commit the kinds of crimes that typically result in adult prosecution are more criminally inclined to begin with. Under current state law, a juvenile who commits a rape is much more likely to be prosecuted as an adult than one who commits shoplifting or vandalism. Is it any surprise that a 17-year-old who commits a rape is also more likely to commit serious crimes in the future than is a juvenile who has only committed shoplifting or vandalism? The very best indicator of whether an individual is likely to commit a crime in the future is whether he has been convicted of committing a criminal offense in the past.

Does anyone seriously believe that, in the case of a 16-year-old who murders another person, or a 17-year-old who rapes a woman or a child, society should be focused on counseling the offender and releasing him into the public when he is 21 years old? This amendment is necessary for the public safety. Its rejection would inevitably result in the commission of more rapes and murders that easily could have been prevented through appropriate incarceration of the offender.

Some critics have also opposed my amendment on the basis that it applies to inchoate offenses. The version of the amendment that I will offer on the Senate floor will also apply to attempted murder, rape, and kidnapping. I think that this makes sense. The law generally recognizes that an attempt to commit rape or murder, for example, is just as serious as a completed offense, and the fortuity that the victim of an attempted murder survived is a good thing, but not one that should not inure to the benefit of the perpetrator of the offense.

JON KYL.

MINORITY VIEWS FROM SENATORS GRASSLEY, COBURN AND KYL

The Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention Reauthorization Act of 2008 (S. 3155) does not include any major reforms that address problems with grant management by the Office of Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention (OJJDP). Together with the increased spending authorizations contained in S. 3155, this reauthorization misses the mark when it comes to reforming grant management and ensuring that taxpayer dollars that are provided to juvenile justice grantees are free from fraud, waste, or abuse.

The Department of Justice Office of the Inspector General (DOJ Inspector General) has labeled grant management as one of the top management and performance challenges at the Justice Department. For example, the DOJ Inspector General found that “Department components that award grants still lack adequate financial and programmatic oversight of their varied grant programs . . . raising questions about how effectively these grant funds are being spent.”<sup>19</sup> The DOJ Inspector General also stated, “OIG audits continue to identify a variety of management concerns regarding the Department’s oversight of its grant programs, including problems in the grant closeout process, improper use of grant funds, difficulties in meeting grant objectives, and poor performance measurement of grant effectiveness.”<sup>20</sup>

In addition to the Department-wide problems associated with grant management, the DOJ Inspector General has conducted audits of individual grantees that receive funding from OJJDP under the Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention Act (JJDP). These audits reveal a series of problems associated with grant management and performance and are evidence of the need for a comprehensive evaluation of OJJDP grant recipients. For example, a series of audit reports entered into the Committee hearing record at the July 31, 2008, mark-up show that grantees across the country from California to Florida had serious errors and failures in complying with program requirements. These audits found problems such as unauthorized expenditures by grantees, undocumented expenditures, unallowable costs, inadequate supporting documentation, untimely submission of documentations, subgrantees failure to comply with audit requirements, failure to follow competitive bidding requirements, programs failing to accomplish goals, and failure to provide support for staff salaries and fringe benefits. These are serious program failures that need to be corrected so that taxpayer dollars are not lost to fraud, waste, and abuse.

To address the concerns raised with grant management and individual grantee compliance by the DOJ Inspector General, Senator Grassley offered four amendments designed to strengthen accountability and oversight of OJJDP and grantees who are awarded federal funding under the JJJPA. The first amendment offered would have required a top-to-bottom review of OJJDP and an audit and evaluation of a statistically significant sample of grantees who received funds under the JJJPA. Specifically, the amendment would have required the Director of the Office of Audit, Assessment, and Management (OAAM)—the internal auditing arm of the Office of Justice Programs (OJP)—to conduct an audit and evaluation of OJJDP to evaluate whether it has successfully carried out the mission and goals of the original JJJPA.

The amendment provided guidance to the Director of OAAM by setting forth twelve considerations to examine when conducting the audit and evaluation of OJJDP. These twelve considerations were designed to help the Director critically examine OJJDP to determine: (a) whether the goals of the JJJPA were being met, (b) whether OJJDP programs and efforts were duplicative with other DOJ programs, (c) if cost savings could be achieved through program consolidation, (d) how successful grants have been, (e) whether greater oversight of grants was needed. The purpose of adding these specific considerations was to help OAAM structure the audit and evaluation in a manner that would provide Congress with as much information as possible assess whether the concerns regarding grant management and performance raised by the DOJ Inspector General continue to exist in grants managed by OJJDP.

The amendment would have also required OAAM to conduct an audit and evaluation of a statistically significant sample of OJJDP grantees. This audit and evaluation was included in the amendment in an effort to collect a larger sample of information from OJJDP grantees and to verify the results of the individual audits conducted by the DOJ Inspector General. The previous audits conducted by the DOJ Inspector General pointed to significant problems on the part of OJJDP grantees in meeting the requirements of the grant program and in appropriately spending grant monies. If the problems outlined by the individual audits extend to a larger portion of OJJDP grantees, it is possible that hundreds of millions of dollars could be at risk of waste, fraud, or abuse. The amendment required OAAM to complete both audits and evaluations and issue reports to Congress no later than December 2009.

Unfortunately, the amendment was defeated by a roll call vote of 10 nays, 9 yeas. Those who opposed the amendment cited concerns that the amendment would duplicate oversight requirements already in the bill and unduly burden scarce resources. These concerns are without merit; the current bill only requires annual reporting to Congress by OJJDP and not by an independent auditor such as OAAM. While the annual report submitted to Congress by OJJDP is necessary, it does not provide the type of critical analysis that an independent auditor can bring, given the inherent conflict of interest of OJJDP in painting the best picture of their agency and their performance to Congress. Further, the annual report required by the reauthorization does not include considerations that will help Congress obtain the necessary information to determine if the agency is in fact meeting its mission and stated goals of the JJDPA. It is our view that a critical, objective analysis of the program by an independent auditor such as OAAM or the Comptroller General is necessary given the documented problems with grant management and grantee performance, as well as the significant increase to program authorizations included in this bill.

Senator Grassley offered three additional amendments that were accepted by unanimous consent. These three amendments require OJJDP to include new information in their annual report to Congress. Specifically, OJJDP must: (1) report on internal controls that exist to ensure that grantees follow grant program requirements, (2) report a detailed accounting to Congress regarding activities of the Coordinating Council on Juvenile Justice including a cost accounting of expenses for meetings held, (3) provide an analysis of payments made to grantees who violated grant program rules and determine if OJJDP ever recovered the funds that were inappropriately spent. These amendments help to enhance the annual report submitted by OJJDP to Congress; however, they are not a substitute for a comprehensive evaluation to be conducted by a disinterested auditor.

The original JJDPA has been around for over 30 years with the last reauthorization occurring in 2002. While the JJDPA has laudable goals and has helped to create a national policy for the way juvenile offenders are treated, this does not mean that Congress should not require a comprehensive evaluation of the program prior to or as part of any significant reauthorization. The selected audits conducted by the DOJ Inspector General raise serious questions that need to be addressed by Congress. S. 3155 authorizes billions of dollars in new spending that is not offset by any reduction in spending authorized by the Committee in other areas. As such, the Committee continues to authorize new spending without critically reviewing programs or making the tough decisions about where to reduce authorized funding for an offset. The end result of continued authorizations is a loss of control by the authorizing Committee, placing the Appropriations Committee in a position to set policy by choosing which programs to fund and which to ignore. It is our opinion that any significant reauthorization should address the problems highlighted by the DOJ Inspector General before authorizing billions of dollars in new spending of taxpayer dollars.

VIII. CHANGES TO EXISTING LAW MADE BY THE BILL, AS REPORTED

In compliance with paragraph 12 of rule XXVI of the Standing Rules of the Senate, changes in existing law made by S. 3155, as reported, are shown as follows (existing law proposed to be omitted is enclosed in black brackets, new matter is printed in italic, and existing law in which no change is proposed is shown in roman).

UNITED STATES CODE

TITLE 42—PUBLIC HEALTH AND WELFARE

* * * * *

CHAPTER 72—JUVENILE JUSTICE AND DELINQUENCY PREVENTION

[SEC. 101 FINDINGS.

[(a) The Congress finds the following:

[(1) Although the juvenile violent crime arrest rate in 1999 was the lowest in the decade, there remains a consensus that the number of crimes and the rate of offending by juveniles nationwide is still too high.

[(2) According to the Office of Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention, allowing 1 youth to leave school for a life of crime and of drug abuse costs society $1,700,000 to $2,300,000 annually.

[(3) One in every 6 individuals (16.2 percent) arrested for committing violent crime in 1999 was less than 18 years of age. In 1999, juveniles accounted for 9 percent of murder arrests, 17 percent of forcible rape arrests, 25 percent of robbery arrest, 14 percent of aggravated assault arrests, and 24 percent of weapons arrests.

[(4) More than 1/2 of juvenile murder victims are killed with firearms. Of the nearly 1,800 murder victims less than 18 years of age, 17 percent of the victims less than 13 years of age were murdered with a firearm, and 81 percent of the victims 13 years of age or older were killed with a firearm.

[(5) Juveniles accounted for 13 percent of all drug abuse violation arrests in 1999. Between 1990 and 1999, juvenile arrests for drug abuse violations rose 132 percent.

[(6) Over the last 3 decades, youth gang problems have increased nationwide. In the 1970's, 19 States reported youth gang problems. By the late 1990's, all 50 States and the District of Columbia reported gang problems. For the same period, the number of cities reporting youth gang problems grew 843 percent, and the number of counties reporting gang problems increased more than 1,000 percent.

【(7) According to a national crime survey of individuals 12 years of age or older during 1999, those 12 to 19 years old are victims of violent crime at higher rates than individuals in all other age groups. Only 30.8 percent of these violent victimizations were reported by youth to police in 1999.

【(8) One-fifth of juveniles 16 years of age who had been arrested were first arrested before attaining 12 years of age. Juveniles who are known to the juvenile justice system before attaining 13 years of age are responsible for a disproportionate share of serious crimes and violence.

【(9) The increase in the arrest rates for girls and young juvenile offenders has changed the composition of violent offenders entering the juvenile justice system.

【(10) These problems should be addressed through a 2-track common sense approach that addresses the needs of individual juveniles and society at large by promoting—

【(A) quality prevention programs that—

【(i) work with juveniles, their families, local public agencies, and community-based organizations, and take into consideration such factors as whether or not juveniles have been the victims of family violence (including child abuse and neglect); and

【(ii) are designed to reduce risks and develop competencies in at-risk juveniles that will prevent, and reduce the rate of, violent delinquent behavior; and

【(B) programs that assist in holding juveniles accountable for their actions and in developing the competencies necessary to become responsible and productive members of their communities, including a system of graduated sanctions to respond to each delinquent act, requiring juveniles to make restitution, or perform community service, for the damage caused by their delinquent acts, and methods for increasing victim satisfaction with respect to the penalties imposed on juveniles for their acts.

【(11) Coordinated juvenile justice and delinquency prevention projects that meet the needs of juveniles through the collaboration of the many local service systems juveniles encounter can help prevent juveniles from becoming delinquent and help delinquent youth return to a productive life.

【(b) Congress must act now to reform this program by focusing on juvenile delinquency prevention programs, as well as programs that hold juveniles accountable for their acts and which provide opportunities for competency development. Without true reform, the juvenile justice system will not be able to overcome the challenges it will face in the coming years when the number of juveniles is expected to increase by 18 percent between 2000 and 2030.】

SEC. 101. FINDINGS.

Congress finds the following:

(1) A growing body of adolescent development research supports the use of developmentally appropriate services and sanctions for youth in the juvenile justice system and those at risk for delinquent behavior to help prevent youth crime and to suc- cessfully intervene with youth who have already entered the system.

(2) Research has shown that targeted investments to redirect offending juveniles onto a different path are cost effective and can help reduce juvenile recidivism and adult crime.

(3) Minorities are disproportionately represented in the juvenile justice system.

(4) Between 1990 and 2004, the number of youth in adult jails increased by 208 percent.

(5) Every day in the United States, an average of 7,500 youth are incarcerated in adult jails.

(6) Youth who have been previously tried as adults are, on average, 34 percent more likely to commit crimes than youth retained in the juvenile justice system.

(7) Research has shown that every dollar spent on evidence based programs can yield up to $13 in cost savings.

(8) Each child prevented from engaging in repeat criminal offenses can save the community $1,700,000 to $3,400,000.

(9) Youth are 19 times more likely to commit suicide in jail than youth in the general population and 36 times more likely to commit suicide in an adult jail than in a juvenile detention facility.

(10) Seventy percent of youth in detention are held for non-violent charges, and more than  $\frac{2}{3}$  are charged with property offenses, public order offenses, technical probation violations, or status offenses, such as truancy, running away, or breaking curfew.

(11) The prevalence of mental disorders among youth in juvenile justice systems is 2 to 3 times higher than among youth in the general population.

(12) Eighty percent of juveniles in juvenile justice systems have a nexus to substance abuse.

(13) The proportion of girls entering the justice system has increased steadily over the past several decades, rising from 20 percent in 1980 to 29 percent in 2003.

SEC 102. PURPOSE.

The purposes of this subchapter and subchapter II of this chapter are—

(1) to support State and local programs that prevent juvenile involvement in delinquent behavior;

(2) to assist State and local governments in promoting public safety by encouraging accountability for acts of juvenile delinquency; [and]
