AGENCY: National Park Service, Interior.

ACTION: Public Notice.

SUMMARY: Public notice is hereby given that the National Park Service proposes to award a concession contract authorizing continued operation of the Nauset Knoll Motor Lodge facilities and services for the public at Cape Cod National Seashore for a period of five (5) years from January 1, 1995, through December 31, 1999.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION: This contract renewal has been determined to be categorically excluded from the procedural provisions of the National Environmental Policy Act and no environmental document will be prepared.

The existing concessioner has performed its obligations to the satisfaction of the Secretary under an existing contract which expired by limitation of time on December 31, 1993, and therefore pursuant to the provisions of section 5 of the Act of October 9, 1965 (79 Stat. 969; 16 U.S.C. 20), is entitled to be given preference in the renewal of the contract and in the negotiation of a new contract, providing that the existing concessioner submits a responsive offer (a timely offer which meets the terms and conditions of the Prospectus). A limited number of copies of the DEIS are available on request from the Superintendent, Olympic National Park, at the above address.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION: Mountain goats are not native to Washington's Olympic Peninsula, but were introduced there in the 1920's apparently to develop a population for hunting. Olympic National Park was established in 1938 and hunting was subsequently prohibited on park lands. The introduced goat population grew in size and dispersed throughout suitable areas of the peninsula, with most concentrating within the National Park. By 1983, the goat population on the peninsula was estimated to be approximately $1,175 \pm 171$ (Standard Error). During the 1980's, Olympic National Park staff conducted experimental and operational management programs to reduce goat populations using translocation and reproductive control methods. A census conducted in 1990 documented a population of 389 ± 106 (Standard Error). Results from an additional census in 1994 showed no statistical difference from the 1990 results. The non-native goats are causing significant impacts to native ecosystem processes and components within Olympic National Park. Documented goat impacts on vegetation include changes in dominance and competitive relationships between plant species which alter the relative abundance of species in native communities. Goats directly and indirectly alter plant communities through changes in plant structure, reproductive patterns, growth rates, and seedling establishment. Threats to 33 known rare and/or endemic plant taxa from goat trampling, wallowing, and grazing include risks to individual plants, subpopulations, and populations. The Olympic Mt. milkvetch (Astragalus australis var. olympicus) is proposed for listing by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service as threatened or endangered and is listed as threatened by the Washington Natural Heritage Program. The world's entire known population of this species contains only 3,800-4,000 plants, all of which are within goat habitat of the Olympic Mountains. Soil impacts from goats include wallows and trailing.

The Draft Environmental Impact Statement describes and analyzes three alternatives for future management of mountain goats within Olympic National Park. Alternative 1 (the proposed action) is the National Park Service's preferred alternative. This alternative proposes elimination of mountain goats from the park by shooting from helicopters. Ecosystem impacts from goats would cease in approximately three years. Alternative 2 (the no-action alternative) identifies no active management of the park's mountain goats, other than monitoring. The goat population would likely increase to approximately 1,400 animals and impacts to native ecosystems would increase dramatically. Alternative 3 is similar to Alternative 1 except that it allows for a short-term, live-capture program before elimination by shooting.

Ecosystem impacts from goats would cease in approximately four years.

Dated: March 10, 1995.

Acting Regional Director, Pacific Northwest Region, National Park Service.
