

for comment through a Federal Register notice published on June 23, 2004 (69 FR 35019) (FRL-7362-7); responses to comments; and related documents for 2,4-D. EPA is releasing for public comment its preliminary risk reduction options for 2,4-D. EPA developed the risk assessments for 2,4-D as part of its public process for making pesticide reregistration eligibility and tolerance reassessment decisions. Through these programs, EPA is ensuring that pesticides meet current standards under the Federal Insecticide, Fungicide, and Rodenticide Act (FIFRA) and the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act (FFDCA), as amended by the Food Quality Protection Act (FQPA) of 1996.

2,4-D is a phenoxy herbicide used for selective control of broadleaf weeds in numerous agriculture, forestry, aquatic, and turf applications. Drinking water risk could potentially be of concern from direct application of 2,4-D to water for aquatic weed control unless it can be demonstrated that the 2,4-D concentration in the water is less than 70 parts per billion (ppb) at the time of drinking water diversion. Risk to recreational swimmers maybe of concern for direct aquatic applications of 2,4-D. Preliminary risk reduction options for managing proposal potential drinking water risk and swimmers risk are detailed in the preliminary mitigation proposal document available in the Docket. The primary ecological risk concern for terrestrial use of 2,4-D is to non-target plants, mammals, and birds. The use of 2,4-D for aquatic weed control presents potential risk to aquatic organisms and aquatic plants.

EPA is providing an opportunity, through this notice, for interested parties to provide risk management proposals or otherwise comment on risk management for 2,4-D. Considering EPA's preliminary risk reduction options, such comments and proposals should further discuss ways to manage 2,4-D's potential drinking water and ecological risks resulting from its aquatic and terrestrial use, as discussed in the Agency's risk assessments.

EPA is applying the principles of public participation to all pesticides undergoing reregistration and tolerance reassessment. The Agency's Pesticide Tolerance Reassessment and Reregistration; Public Participation Process, published in the Federal Register on May 14, 2004 (69 FR 26819) (FRL-7357-9), explains that in conducting these programs, EPA is tailoring its public participation process to be commensurate with the level of risk, extent of use, complexity of issues, and degree of public concern associated with each pesticide. Due to its uses, risks, and other factors, 2,4-D is being reviewed through the full 6-Phase public participation process.

All comments should be submitted using the methods in Unit I. of the SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION, and must be received by EPA on or before the closing date. Comments and proposals will become part of the Agency Docket for 2,4-D. Comments received after the close of the comment period will be marked "late." EPA is not required to consider these late comments. After considering comments received, EPA will develop and issue the 2,4-D RED.

B. What is the Agency's Authority for Taking this Action?

Section 4(g)(2) of FIFRA as amended directs that, after submission of all data concerning a pesticide active ingredient, "the Administrator shall determine whether pesticides containing such active ingredient are eligible for reregistration," before calling in product specific data on individual end-use products and either reregistering products or taking other "appropriate regulatory action."

Section 408(q) of the FFDCA, 21 U.S.C. 346a(q), requires EPA to review tolerances and exemptions for pesticide residues in effect as of August 2, 1996, to determine whether the tolerance or exemption meets the requirements of section 408(b)(2) or (c)(2) of FFDCA. This review is to be completed by August 3, 2006.
