Twenty-first century technology has transformed the 2005 Biographical Directory of the United States Congress—a publication with a 16-edition lineage dating to 1859. This is the first edition printed since the entries for the Biographical Directory were published online at http://bioguide.congress.gov/. It also is the first assembled entirely from machine-readable files. Now the complete contents of the Biographical Directory—including valuable Membership rosters of each Congress—also can be made available over the worldwide web, allowing for updates to be published instantly as changes take place.

The Biographical Directory has evolved to reflect the changing face of Congress, in which more than 12,000 individuals have served during the past two centuries. Since the country achieved its independence in 1776, our national legislatures have balanced tradition with the necessity of adapting to new circumstances. The role and procedures of Congress remain the same—to serve as the central lawmaking body of the national government. Many of its practices trace roots back to the British Parliament and beyond.

And yet, like the country it represents, Congress has been transformed—often by the very technologies it helps to promote. The early records of Congress were created with pen and paper, and original documents were bound within leather-covered boards. Today both houses of Congress process most records electronically. Audio-visual broadcasts and recordings supplement proceedings on the floor and in committee. In the 19th century, Members used horses, coaches, or ships to come and go from Congress—spending months at a time in the capital without returning to their districts. Members now jet in or drive from faraway points in a country that spans thousands of miles, often returning to their constituents the very next weekend. Today citizens contact their Members individually by telephone, e-mail, letters, and fax. Rare are the petitions, handwritten or printed, that once arrived in the post signed by many hands.

Where other legislative assemblies have drifted into silence and irrelevance, the House and Senate comprise one of the most powerful and vibrant legislatures in world history. While the secret to this success lies, in part, with the far-sighted Constitutional framework, much of the vitality of Congress also is due to the individuals whom voters have sent to represent themselves. It is with great pleasure, that we present the 2005 edition to the nation.

Introduction

The publication of this volume provides the first revision of the Biographical Directory of the United States Congress since the bicentennial edition of 1989. The present edition includes biographies of each of the nearly 12,000 individuals who have served in the Congress of the United States since 1789 and in the Continental Congresses between 1774 and 1789. In addition to the biographies of Representatives, Senators, Delegates, Resident Commissioners, and Vice Presidents, this volume contains rosters of the state congressional delegations and elected officers in the First through One Hundred Eighth Congresses. The work provides a comprehensive record of the men and women who have served in the Congress of the United States, and its antecedents, over the past 231 years.

I

Predecessor Volumes and Editions

The First Directories. This volume, the Biographical Directory of the United States Congress, 1774–2005, is the sixteenth in a series of such reference works published since 1859. Charles Lanman, author, journalist, and former secretary to Daniel Webster, gathered the first collection of biographies of former and sitting Members of Congress for his Dictionary of Congress, published by J. B. Lippincott & Co. in 1859. Lanman intended his Dictionary of Congress to serve primarily as a guide for sitting Members of Congress, much as the Congressional Directory functions today. The biographical entries reflected Lanman’s care not to offend any potential patrons. The Dictionary also included information on other branches of the federal government, the states, and foreign emissaries to the United States. Following the private publication of the first edition, Lanman sent complimentary copies to all Senators and Representatives and sought congressional support for subsequent editions.

In 1864 the House of Representatives and the Senate approved the publication of an updated version of Lanman’s Dictionary of Congress by the recently established Government Printing Office. Two years later a Senate resolution to publish another update of Lanman’s publication failed in the House Committee on Printing. The Senate, nevertheless, arranged for publication of this update of the Dictionary of Congress, which included for the first time entries on the delegates to the Continental Congresses. After Congress offered Benjamin Perley Poore, a journalist and clerk of the Senate Committee on Printing and Records, the job of preparing a Congressional Directory with biographical sketches and the kind of reference information found in the Dictionary of Congress, Lanman in 1868 prepared a new edition of his work for private publication by T. Belknap and H. E. Goodwin of Hartford, Connecticut. Poor sales of that volume and a further edition from the same publishers in 1869 induced Lanman to discontinue preparation of the Dictionary of Congress.

In anticipation of the centenary of American independence and in search of a market not served by Poore’s Congressional Directory, Lanman prepared the Biographical Annals of the Civil Government of the United States, published by James Anglim of Washington in 1876. This volume combined the biographies of the Dictionary of Congress with entries for other governmental officials since 1776 and expanded reference tables. Poore offered a competing historical volume in 1878 with his Political Register and Congressional Directory, published by Houghton, Osgood and Company of Boston. Although Poore derived much of his biographical information from Lanman’s work, he contributed the first references to party affiliation. Joseph M. Morrison’s revision of Lanman’s Biographical Annals (New York, 1887) was the final directory of congressional biography to be prepared and published privately.

Previous Editions of the Directory. In 1903 Congress authorized the publication of A Biographical Congressional Directory, 1774 to 1903. Compiled under the direction of O. M. Enyart, this was the first volume prepared by congressional staff who drew on the Lanman and Poore editions as well as biographical information printed in the Congressional Directory since the Fortieth Congress. A second A Biographical Congressional Directory, 1774 to 1911, published in 1913, reflected the first serious effort to verify the information contained in the nineteenth-century directories. These initial volumes prepared by congressional staff represented an attempt to provide an authoritative historical record as well as a reference source for sitting Members of Congress.

The most thorough and systematic revision of biographical entries attempted prior to the Bicentennial Edition was conducted in preparation for the Biographical Directory of the American Congress, 1774–1927. Ansel Wold, chief clerk of the Joint Committee on Printing, directed the compilation of this volume published in 1928. In an effort to verify existing data and add pertinent information, the Joint Committee on Printing staff distributed questionnaires through postmasters in the hometowns of former Members, including those from the earliest Congresses. The resulting entries reflected the responses of governmental clerks, descendants, acquaintances of the Members, and local historians. This survey of the 1920s yielded more detailed and consistent biographies than had been found in the nineteenth-century editions or in the earlier volumes compiled by congressional staff. The frequent reliance on family legends and personal recollections, however, introduced dubious information into the volume. Although Congress authorized updates that were published in 1950, 1961, and 1971, the entries from the 1928 edition remained virtually intact in the three subsequent editions.

The creation of the Senate Historical Office in 1975 and the Office for the Bicentennial in the House of Representatives in 1983 provided the first opportunity for professional historians to revise and update the Biographical Directory. A print resolution for a bicentennial edition, approved by the Ninety-ninth Congress in December 1985, directed the Joint Committee on Printing to print an edition for which the two historical office staffs would prepare updated entries. The Congressional Directory staff of the Joint Committee on Printing prepared updated rosters for Congresses since 1971. The Joint Committee also provided the Senate and House offices with drafts of biographical entries compiled since the printing of the 1971 edition.

Whereas earlier editions of the Biographical Directory and their nineteenth-century predecessors offered little information on congressional careers other than terms of service, the bicentennial edition provided a more complete record of the individual Members' years in office. For the first time, entries included all standing committee chairs, and all formal leadership positions. The editors also took advantage of the publication of Kenneth C. Martis's The Historical Atlas of Political Parties in the United States Congress, 1789–1989 (Macmillan, 1988), which provided an authoritative determination of party affiliations for all Members. To guide readers to more biographical information than could be contained in brief entries, the bicentennial edition included bibliographical citations for all Members who have been the subject of scholarly publications. To bring consistency and accuracy to the new edition, the editors devised more uniform categories of information in the biographical entries, created a more consistent and logical sequence to the data presented, and attempted to standardize phrasing.

The Online Edition. The development and growing use of the Internet in the 1990s led to the creation of Websites for the House of Representatives and the Senate. Ray Strong, Assistant to the Clerk of the House, advocated the idea of publishing the entries from the Biographical Directory on the Internet. Through the efforts of Joe Carmel, Cindy S. Leach, and Gary Hahn of Legislative Computer Systems under the Clerk of the House, and Cheri Allen of the Office of the Secretary of the Senate, the entries of the Biographical Directory became available online during the week of November 9, 1998, at http://bioguide.congress.gov/ under the auspices of the House Legislative Resource Center and the Senate Historical Office. Internet technology has allowed the editors to update entries of the Biographical Directory on a daily basis. Besides the biographies, the online database includes extensive bibliographies and a guide to all available research collections for Senate and House entries. The online version, accessible to the public, also has benefited from updated information provided to the House Office of History and Preservation and the Senate Historical Office from scholars, librarians, genealogists, and family members. Senate entries are accompanied by an image of the Senator, when available. Online House entries include images for women Members and Speakers with official oil portraits.

The Sixteenth Edition

The One Hundred Eighth Congress approved on May 8, 2003, H. Con. Res. 138, authorizing the printing of the Biographical Directory of the United States Congress, 1774–2005 as a House document. The House Office of History and Preservation and the Senate Historical Office began the process of preparing materials for the new edition. The online edition allowed for the daily update of individual Member entries as new information became known. The staff compiling the Congressional Directory has maintained an updated chart of the “Apportionment of Representatives” that has been used for this edition.

Three sections of the Biographical Directory were not in updated or electronic format, however, and therefore were scanned from the bicentennial edition. These sections were “Executive Officers 1789–2005,” “The Continental Congress” (meeting information, presiding officers, and delegates), and “The Congress of the United States 1789–2005,” which lists officers and Members by Congress and state. The House Office of History and Preservation took primary responsibility for editing “The Continental Congress” sections while the Senate Historical Office took the lead in editing “Executive Officers.”

The list of Congresses and their Members, which extends to more than 500 pages, was reconstructed through the efforts of other staff. The House Legislative Computer Systems created an initial set of files listing the information from the First through the 100th Congresses. The House Office of Publications Services provided much of the basic information needed for Representatives, Delegates, and Resident Commissioners for the 101st through the 108th Congresses, and the Senate Historical Office did likewise for Senators and Vice Presidents. These efforts provided the foundation upon which the editors of this edition completed this section of the Biographical Directory.

To assist in compiling accurate information for the many living former Members of the House of Representatives, the United States Association of Former Members of Congress provided a mailing list of Association members and of former Members on file to the House Office of History and Preservation. The Senate Historical Office maintains a mailing list of former living Senators. A questionnaire was sent to the individuals on both mailing lists.

III
A User’s Guide to the Biographical Directory

To assist the users of the Biographical Directory, this section identifies the various features associated with this, and in many cases with previous, editions. Each section is discussed in the order found in the Table of Contents.

Executive Officers 1789–2005. Since Lanman’s original Directory of Congress in 1859, the various biographical directories of Congress have included a list of executive cabinet officers. Each roster is presented by President and by term in office. The President and Vice President are followed by the heads of the Cabinet Departments in order of agency seniority. In cases where the Vice President becomes President, prior to the adoption of the 25th Amendment in 1967, the officer next in line in presidential succession is listed. The Department Secretaries are identified, along with their home state, and dates of service. This information has been updated through the 108th Congress.

The Continental Congress. This section lists the places and dates of all sessions of the Continental Congress between 1774 and 1789. Presidents of the Continental Congress are listed with their home state and the date of their election. The table of Delegates lists the names of all Members elected in each state delegation and distinguishes between those who attended and those who declined to attend.

Apportionment of Representatives. The table of apportionment of Representatives indicates the number of House seats granted each state under the constitutional apportionment of 1787 and subsequent reapportionments that reflected each decennial census. This table also indicates the total number of seats in the House of Representatives at any given time. This is the same table that appears in the annual editions of the Congressional Directory, published under the direction of the Joint Committee on Printing.
The Congress of the United States 1789–2005. In this section each Senator, Representative, Delegate, and Resident Commissioner is listed by State, Territory, Commonwealth, and District delegation in the rosters of the First through One Hundred Eighth Congresses. The extensive footnotes provide information about the Member during a particular Congress and about the status of the State or Territory involved. Senators’ names appear within each delegation in order of seniority.

For the first 39 Congresses, House Members are listed in the order that their names appear in the House Journal. After that, from the Fortieth through One Hundred Eighth Congresses, Representatives’ names appear by numerical order of their congressional districts within the state delegation. These rosters also note the method of representation used in the House. When Members represent specific districts, the delegation’s members are listed as “Representatives.” Where Members represent the entire state (whether or not there is more than one Representative), the delegation is labeled “Representatives At Large.” In delegations where the State has Representatives from both district and at-large seats, the at-large Representatives are so designated and follow the list of district-based Members.

The appearance of Representatives’ names has been changed in this edition. Rather than listing Members by their full name, the state delegation rosters now use the form Members used in the Congressional Directory and the House Journal. This change has been made both to reflect more accurately the personal style of a Member’s name used during the time of service, and to indicate how the name appeared on contemporary House documents. Only a few Members have used nicknames or initials, and in five cases the names of Members have changed during their service. In these cases, footnotes indicate their full name in order to allow users of the Directory to get to the appropriate biographical entry.

Biographies. Each entry begins with the individual’s full name printed in bold type, followed by any nickname. The first reference is to the congressional office or offices held and the state or territory represented. Kinship to other Members of Congress is next noted in parentheses. Biographical data begin with the date and place of birth followed by a brief record of education, military service, and career before entering Congress, including occupation and previous political offices. Entries for Representatives include party affiliation, the Congresses to which they were elected, and dates of service. Senators’ entries list party affiliation and dates of service. Dates of election are noted only in cases of special elections. Following the dates of service are leadership positions and committee chairmanships, with Congresses or dates of service for these positions listed in parentheses. Disciplinary actions such as censure and expulsion or other formal, congressional action concerning the Member appear next. The section regarding congressional service closes with an indication of unsuccessful bids for reelection, candidacy for another office, or retirement. Subsequent political offices and career positions are listed in chronological order. In keeping with the form established in the Biographical Directory in 1928, the date and place of death are followed by the place of interment. The city of interment is included only if it differs from the place of death. Whenever possible an appropriate bibliography is cited at the close of each entry.
This edition has made changes to the dates of service for those Representatives elected to fill unexpired terms in the House since 1901. Previous editions of the Biographical Directory would list the start of a Member’s term either as the swearing-in date or the date of the special election. The Speaker of the House, acting upon a House Judiciary Committee report of February 4, 1901 (No. 2656, 56th Cong.), determined that the start of a Member’s term for those Representatives elected to Congress to fill an unexpired term was the date of the special election (see Hinds’ Precedents §500). In 1914 this ruling was codified into law (2 USC §37, July 16, 1914; 38 Stat. 458). As a result, for those Representatives elected by special election since the 56th Congress, their term of service has been changed to the date of the special election. This change has also been made to the information presented in the previous section of the Biographical Directory, “The Congresses of the United States 1789–2005.”

Whenever appropriate, a Member’s entry also includes a brief bibliography. The Senate Historical Office has provided bibliographical citations for Senate entries whenever possible, including notation of inclusion in the Dictionary of American Biography, American National Biography, or The Scribner Encyclopedia of American Lives. In cases where individuals had lengthy bibliographies due to long and wide-ranging careers, citations were chosen to focus on Senate service. The House Office of History and Preservation has concentrated on those citations covering a Member’s House service. In both cases, the online edition of the Biographical Directory at http://bioguide.congress.gov/ provides links to more complete lists of works about individual Members and to Research Collections of Members’ personal papers and oral histories.

Acknowledgements

The editors would like to acknowledge a number of individuals involved in the production of this publication. First and foremost, we would like to thank the people with the House Legislative Computer Systems and Cindy S. Leach and Joe Carmel, in particular, for their professionalism and software expertise that greatly facilitated the production of this hardbound edition and the online version.

A special thanks is extended to Lyle Green, Bob Winters, and the other staff at the Government Printing Office. The House editor wishes to thank Peter M. Weichlein, Executive Director of the United States Association of Former Members of Congress, the staff of the House Legislative Resource Center, and his colleagues in the House Office of History and Preservation: Erin M. Lloyd, Robin Reeder, Laura Turner, Kathleen Johnson, Catherine Wallace, and Kenneth Kato. The Senate editor wishes to thank the reference staff of the Senate Library for its timely and professional assistance, as well as her colleagues in the Senate Historical Office: Richard Baker, Donald Ritchie, Beth Hahn, Heather Moore, Mary Baumann, Karen Paul, and Diane Boyle.

The Biographical Directory of the United States Congress, 1774–2005, presents the composition of state and territorial delegations for each Congress and the biographies of more than 12,000 Members from the Continental Congress through the 108th Federal Congress. Since new information is always becoming available and the Congress is a living institution, this edition and the online publication will always be works in progress. The public is invited to participate in this project, and we welcome any information that will make this publication more accurate and complete.

OF THE GOVERNMENT
EXPLANATORY NOTE

A Cabinet officer is not appointed for a fixed term and does not necessarily go out of office with the President who made the appointment. While it is customary to tender one's resignation at the time a change of administration takes place, officers remain formally at the head of their department until a successor is appointed. Subordinates acting temporarily as heads of departments are not considered Cabinet officers, and in the earlier period of the Nation's history not all Cabinet officers were heads of executive departments. The names of all those exercising the duties and bearing the responsibilities of the executive departments, together with the period of service, are incorporated in the lists that follow.

The dates immediately following the names of executive officers are those upon which commissions were issued, unless otherwise specifically noted. Where periods of time are indicated by dates as, for instance, March 4, 1793, to March 3, 1797, both such dates are included as portions of the time period. On occasions when there was a vacancy in the Vice Presidency, the President pro tempore is listed as the presiding officer of the Senate.

The Twentieth Amendment to the Constitution (effective Oct. 15, 1933) changed the terms of the President and Vice President to end at noon on the 20th day of January and the terms of Senators and Representatives to end at noon on the 3d day of January when the terms of their successors shall begin.

1 Apportionment mandated by the Federal Constitution, which remained in effect for the 1st and 2d Congresses.
2 No apportionment was made in 1920.
3 The following representation was added after the several census apportionments indicated when new States were admitted and is included in the above table.
4 Twenty Representatives were assigned to Massachusetts, but seven of them were credited to Maine when that area became a State.
5 Apportionment temporarily increased by Public Laws 85–508 and 86–3 due to admission of Alaska and Hawaii as States.

Ninth, Colorado, 1.
Tenth, Idaho, 1; Montana, 1; North Dakota, 1; South Dakota, 2; Washington, 1; Wyoming, 1.
Eleventh, Utah, 1.
Twelfth, Oklahoma, 5.
Thirteenth, Arizona, 1; New Mexico, 1.
Fourteenth, Alaska, 1; Hawaii, 1.
Twenty-first, Oklahoma, 2; Oregon, 1.
Eighteenth, Nebraska, 1; Nevada, 1.
TIME AND PLACE OF MEETING

The Constitution (Art. I, sec. 4) provided that “The Congress shall assemble at least once in every year * * * on the first Monday in December, unless they shall by law appoint a different day.” Pursuant to a resolution of the Continental Congress the first session of the First Congress convened March 4, 1789. Up to and including May 20, 1820, eighteen acts were passed providing for the meeting of Congress on other days in the year. Since that year Congress met regularly on the first Monday in December until January 1934. The date for convening of Congress was changed by the Twentieth Amendment to the Constitution in 1933 to the 3d day of January unless a different day shall be appointed by law. The first and second sessions of the First Congress were held in New York City; subsequently, including the first session of the Sixth Congress, Philadelphia was the meeting place; since then Congress has convened in Washington, D.C.

1 Neither a quorum of the Senate nor of the House of Representatives appeared in their respective chambers on Wednesday, March 4, 1789. Eight Senators appeared and the minority adjourned from day to day until Monday, April 6, when a quorum of the Senate was first present. Thirteen Members of the House of Representatives appeared on March 4, and a quorum was not present until April 1, when the body proceeded to the transaction of business. When both Houses were organized on April 6, they met in joint convention in the hall of the Senate and proceeded to open and count the electoral votes for President and Vice President. John Adams, the Vice President-elect, appeared in the Senate Chamber and assumed the duties of the chair on Tuesday, April 21, 1789. On May 15, 1789, the Senate determined by lot the classes into which the membership should be divided agreeably to paragraph 2, section 3, of Article I of the Constitution, as follows: Class 1, term expires March 3, 1791 - Messrs. Carroll, Dalton, Ellsworth, Elmer, Read, and Grayson. Class 2, term expires March 3, 1793 - Messrs. Bassett, Butler, Few, Lee, Strong, Paterson, and Wingate. Class 3, term expires March 3, 1795 - Messrs. Gunn, Henry, Johnson, Izard, Langdon, and Morris. 8 Elected April 6, 1789.

3 Elected April 6, 1789.
4 Elected April 8, 1789.
5 Elected April 7, 1789.
6 Elected April 1, 1789.
7 Elected April 1, 1789.
8 Elected May 12, 1789.
9 Resigned August 14, 1790.
10 Elected to fill vacancy caused by resignation of William Paterson, and took his seat December 6, 1790.
The election of all four Representatives was contested, but owing to the burning of the papers and documents from the First to the Sixth Congress, by the British in 1814, it is not possible to ascertain the grounds upon which the contest was based. It is known that it related to questions of regularity and procedure, and that the decision was favorable to the sitting Members.

Took his seat July 25, 1789; term to expire, as determined by lot, March 3, 1795.

Took his seat July 27, 1789; term to expire, as determined by lot, March 3, 1795.

22 Resigned July 26, 1797.
23 Elected to fill vacancy caused by resignation of Jeremiah Smith, and took his seat December 15, 1797.
24 Resigned November 26, 1798.
25 Appointed to fill vacancy caused by resignation of John Rutherfurd, and took his seat December 19, 1798.
26 Elected on February 14, 1799, to fill vacancy in Senate caused by resignation of John Rutherfurd, but did not take his seat until the following Congress, finishing out his term in the House.
27 Resigned January 3, 1798.
28 Elected to fill vacancy caused by resignation of Philip Schuyler, and took his seat February 2, 1798; resigned April 19, 1798, having been appointed judge of the United States district court of New York.
29 Appointed to fill vacancy caused by resignation of John Shoss Hohart, and took his seat May 21, 1798.
30 Elected to fill vacancy caused by resignation of John Shoss Hohart, and took his seat December 11, 1798.
31 Died August 1, 1798.
32 Elected to fill vacancy caused by death of John Swanwick, and took his seat December 3, 1798.
33 Resigned in October 1797.
34 Resigned July 10, 1797, having been appointed minister plenipotentiary to Portugal.
35 Many biographical errors have resulted from the fact that Smith of Charleston district and Smith of Spartan district both formerly were known as “William Smith.” It was about this time that Smith of Charleston district changed his name to “William Loughton Smith.”
36 Resigned in October 1797.
37 Appointed to fill vacancy in the term beginning March 4, 1797, caused by resignation of Andrew Jackson, but did not present his credentials under term ending March 3, 1799. (See footnote 56.)
38 Expelled for “high misdemeanor” July 8, 1797.
39 Resigned in April 1798.
40 Appointed to fill vacancy in the term beginning March 4, 1797, caused by resignation of Andrew Jackson, and took his seat December 6, 1798; vacancy in this class from April 1798, to October 5, 1798. Joseph Anderson was elected December 19, 1798, to fill vacancy in the term beginning March 4, 1797, caused by resignation of Andrew Jackson, but did not present his credentials under this election until the Sixth Congress, continuing to serve in the other class, and on December 31, 1798, obtained leave of absence for Daniel Smith for the remainder of the session; technically, the term of Smith expired on the election of Anderson.
41 Took his seat November 23, 1797.
42 Resigned October 17, 1797, having been elected governor.
43 Elected to fill vacancy caused by resignation of Isaac Tichenor, and took his seat November 22, 1797.
44 Died January 24, 1799. Letter from governor of Virginia (Senate Journal, p. 584) stating appointment would be deferred until legislature meets.

22 Admitted as a State into the Union March 15, 1820. Previous to March 3, 1820, Maine was a part of Massachusettes, and was called the “District of Maine” and its Representatives were numbered with those of Massachusetts;
by compact between the two States, Maine became a separate and independent State, and by act of Congress of March 3, 1820, was admitted into the Union as such the admission to date from the 15th of the same month.
23 Took his seat November 13, 1820; term to expire, as determined by lot, March 3, 1823.
24 Took his seat November 13, 1820; term to expire, as determined by lot, March 3, 1821.
25 The act of Congress approved April 7, 1820, provided “That in the election of Representatives in the Seventeenth Congress, the State of Massachusetts shall be entitled to choose 13 Representatives only; and the State of Maine shall be entitled to choose seven Representatives,
That if the seat of any of the Representatives in the present Congress (Sixteenth), who were elected in and under the authority of the State of Massachusetts, and who are now inhabitants of the State of Maine, shall be vacated by death, resignation, or otherwise, such vacancy shall be supplied by a successor, who shall, at the time of his election, be an inhabitant of the State of Maine.”
26 Elected to fill vacancy caused by resignation of John Holmes, a Representative from Massachusetts, but residing in the new State of Maine, and took his seat December 11, 1820. (See footnote 21.)
27 Died April 23, 1819.
28 Elected to fill vacancy caused by death of Alexander
C. Hanson, and took his seat January 4, 1820.
29 Elected for the term beginning March 4, 1819, and took his seat December 27, 1819; vacancy in this class was vacated by death, resignation, or otherwise, such vac-cancy shall be supplied by a successor, who shall, at the time of his election, be an inhabitant of the State of Maine.”
30 Resigned May 15, 1820.
31 Elected to fill vacancy caused by resignation of Prentiss
Mellen, and took his seat December 1, 1820.

Vacant

1 Elected to fill vacancy caused by resignation of Representative-elect John C. Wright (March 3, 1821, before the beginning of the congressional term), and took his seat December 3, 1821.
2 In previous issues of this publication this name appears as "John Vance." It is believed that this is an error arising through a printer's blunder in the first issue of the Congressional Directory for the Seventeenth Congress, caused by the typesetter carrying the name of "John" of Shano's down to that of "Vance." The House Journal does not show that a "John Vance" was ever a Representative from Ohio, but in the same directory, under "Alphabetical List of Boarding Houses with the Members in each," the list of boarders at Miss Polk's house included "Joseph Vance, but no "John."
3 Elected for term beginning March 4, 1821, and took his seat December 17, 1821; vacancy in this class from March 4, 1821, to September 26, 1821, caused by recess of legislature.
4 Elected to fill vacancy caused by resignation of Henry Baldwin, and took his seat December 2, 1822.
5 Resigned before Congress assembled.

30 Mississippi elected its Representatives in November of odd numbered years (after the beginning of the congressional term); as Congress had been called to meet in September, the governor issued writs for a special election to fill vacancies until the regular election, John F. H. Claiborne and Samuel J. Gholson presented credentials and were seated September 4, 1837, when, at their request the question of the validity of their election was referred to the Committee on Elections; on October 3, 1837, the House decided they had been elected for the full term; Sergeant S. Prentiss and Thomas J. Word presented credentials on December 27, 1837, and on February 5, 1838, the House rescinded its former decision and declared the seats vacant; Prentiss and Word were subsequently elected, and took their seats May 30, 1838.
31 Died July 27, 1838.

\textbf{REPRESENTATIVES}

Took his seat July 2, 1868; term to expire March 3, 1869.

Took his seat July 1, 1868.

Although Georgia was not formally readmitted to representation until July 15, 1870 (in the succeeding Congress), the Representatives elected to this Congress qualified as indicated.

On December 7, 1868, the credentials of Joshua Hill, elected by the legislature to fill vacancy in the term beginning March 4, 1867, were presented and referred to the Committee on the Judiciary; on January 11, 1869, the credentials of Homer V. M. Miller, elected in the same manner, for the term beginning March 4, 1865, were presented and were similarly referred; on January 25, 1869, the committee reported that the State of Georgia had not presented and were similarly referred; on January 25, 1869, the committee reported that the State of Georgia had not presented the credentials of an act providing for her admission to representation and that Mr. Hill “ought not to be admitted”.

On July 3, 1867, it was proposed to seat all the Members-elect from Kentucky, but protests against the manner of holding the election and charges of disloyal acts by certain individual members of the delegation were presented and a resolution was adopted disapproving an investigation and referring to the Committee on Elections the credentials of Messrs. Lawrence S. Trimble, John Y. Brown, J. Proctor Knott, Asa P. Grover, Thomas L. Jones, James B. Beck, and John D. Young, who were not permitted to qualify pending this investigation; Samuel E. Smith contested the election of John Y. Brown, but the House, on February 15, 1868, decided that neither was entitled to the seat, which remained vacant throughout the Congress.

Electors contested the election of Mr. Hise was subsequently unsuccessfully contested by George V. Symes; took his seat January 10, 1868.

Died May 8, 1867, never having qualified; the election of Mr. Hise was subsequently unsuccessfully contested by George D. Blake; at the time of the election both parties were conceding that the seat was vacant.

Took his seat December 3, 1867.

Charges of disloyalty were unsustained, and took his seat December 4, 1867.

Took his seat July 8, 1867.

Successfully contested the election of John D. Young, and took his seat June 22, 1868.

Resigned to representation July 9, 1868.

Took his seat July 17, 1868; term to expire March 3, 1871.

Took his seat July 17, 1868; term to expire March 3, 1873.

Took his seat July 18, 1868.

Took his seat July 18, 1868; died August 26, 1868.

Elected for term beginning March 4, 1867, and took his seat March 9, 1868. He was elected, instead of Mann, in the first instance. The House decided against all claimants, and the seat remained vacant for the remainder of the session.

Resigned July 10, 1868.

Appointed to fill vacancy caused by resignation of Reverdy Johnson, and took his seat July 14, 1868.

Elected for term beginning March 4, 1867, and took his seat March 9, 1868. The credentials of Senator-elect Philip F. Thomas were presented March 18, 1867, but he was not permitted to qualify; on February 19, 1868, the Senate adopted a resolution that he was not entitled to qualify as he had “voluntarily given aid, countenance, and encouragement to persons engaged in armed hostility to the United States.”

82 Took his seat July 20, 1868; term to expire March 3, 1871.
83 Took his seat July 18, 1868.
84 Took his seat July 25, 1868.
85 The credentials of Thomas A. Hamilton, claiming to be an at large Member-elect, were presented; claimant held that, inasmuch as Tennessee had voluntarily emancipated and enfranchised her slaves, she had added to her representative population a sufficient number to give her nine, instead of eight, Representatives, and he had been elected as such ninth Member. It was the first of many similar claims made by other readmitted States; the majority report was adverse to the claimant and, although the House took no formal action, he was not seated.
86 Elected to fill vacancy caused by death of Charles Denison, and took his seat February 20, 1869.
87 Took his seat July 20, 1869; succeeded by J. Francisco Chaves, who contested his election.
88 Successfully contested the election of Charles P. Clever, and took his seat February 20, 1869.
89 Elected unsuccessfully contested by William McGrory.
90 Successfully contested the election of Charles P. Clever, and took his seat February 20, 1869.

2 Elected March 4, 1869.
3 Reelected March 5, 1869.
4 Elected August 3, 1869.
5 Formally readmitted to representation by act of July 15, 1870.
6 The credentials of Mr. Hill and Mr. Miller, presented in the Fortieth Congress and undisposed of on the files of the Senate, were referred again to the Committee on the Judiciary March 9, 1869; they were reported back without recommendation and ordered to lie on the table March 17, 1869; they were again referred to the committee February 14, 1870. A new election was held in Georgia, and on July 15, 1870, the credentials of Richard H. Whiteley and Henry P. Farrow were presented and ordered to lie on the table, but were subsequently referred; on the same day of their presentation the act was approved readmitting Georgia to representation in Congress. The committee reported upon all the credentials January 23, 1871, resolving that Messrs. Hill and Miller were duly elected; that Mr. Hill should be permitted to take his seat, but that Mr. Miller was disqualified by reason of his service in the Confederate Army; this report was adopted February 1, 1871. A joint resolution prescribing a qualification oath for Mr. Miller was approved February 24, 1871, took his seat the same day.

FORTY-SECOND CONGRESS 185

*Elected January 18, 1870, for the term beginning March 4, 1871, but did not accept or qualify until December 4, 1871, preferring to retain the governorship.
*February 5, 1873, a select committee was appointed to consider matters presented in a communication from the House of Representatives and accompanying testimony, reflecting upon the conduct of certain Senators in connection with the “Credit Mobilier of America”; February 27, 1873, the committee reported, exonerating other Senators mentioned in the report, and a resolution favoring the expulsion of Mr. Patterson; as the Congress and Mr. Patterson’s term expired simultaneously on March 3, 1873, no final action was reached.
*Joseph C. Abbott was a claimant for this seat; the Committee on Privileges and Elections reported February 28, 1872, that Zebulon B. Vance had received a majority of the whole number of votes cast in each house, and that Mr. Abbott had not been elected, and the day following that Mr. Ransom was declared entitled to the seat; took his seat April 24, 1872; resolutions were subsequently adopted allowing mileage and salary to Mr. Abbott from March 4, 1871, to April 23, 1872, and fixing Mr. Ransom’s term and pay as beginning March 4, 1871.
*Took his seat May 23, 1872; election unsuccessfully contested by James H. Harris.
*Resigned in 1872.
*Elected to fill vacancy caused by resignation of Aaron F. Perry, and took his seat December 2, 1872.
*Election unsuccessfully contested by R. C. Schenck.

8 Served until February 20, 1879; succeeded by Jesse J. Finley who contested his election.
9 Successfully contested the election of Horatio Biabee, Jr., and took his seat February 20, 1879.
Mr. Kellogg; the report was adopted November 30, 1877; took his seat the same day. In the succeeding Congress the case was reopened upon petition of Mr. Spofford and a report was made in his favor, but he died August 20, 1879, before action was taken.

In the preceding Congress the Committee on Privileges and Elections twice reported that Pinckney B. S. Pinckney was entitled to the seat upon credentials presented from two elections; the committee, after these decisions, was instructed to pass upon credentials of James B. Eustis and held that, inasmuch as Mr. Pinckney had a clear title, there was no vacancy; the Senate refused to adopt the report of the committee and declared Mr. Pinckney entitled to the seat. The credentials of Mr. Eustis were taken from the files and again referred the committee reported December 1, 1877, holding that the Senate's action in the case of Mr. Pinckney was a final adjudication, and a resolution declaring Mr. Eustis entitled to his seat, his term of service to date from January 12, 1876; this report and resolution were adopted December 10, 1877, and Mr. Eustis appeared, qualified, and took his seat the same day.

Served until February 20, 1878; succeeded by Joseph H. Acklen who contested his election.

Served until February 20, 1878; succeeded by George B. Loring.

Elected to fill the seat of C. B. Darrall, the report was adopted November 30, 1877; his seat was claimed by Henry M. Spofford; March 16, 1878, before action was taken.

Served until February 20, 1878; succeeded by George D. Robinson, Chicopee.

24 Election unsuccessfully contested by Robert Smalls.
25 Elected to fill vacancy caused by resignation of Representative-elect John H. Reagan, in preceding Congress, and took his seat December 5, 1887.
26 The Legislature of West Virginia had met and adjourned without electing a Senator for the term beginning March 4, 1887, on March 5, 1887, the governor appointed Daniel B. Lucas to fill such vacancy; on the same day he issued a proclamation calling the legislature in extraordinary session for eight specific purposes, the election of Senator not being named as one of them; the legislature proceeded to choose a Senator, and Charles J. Faulkner was elected; credentials of both Mr. Lucas and Mr. Faulkner were presented on December 5, 1887, and Mr. Faulkner appeared to be sworn, but objection was made and he was not permitted to qualify; December 14, 1887, the Senate adopted a report from the Committee on Privileges and Elections, to whom all papers were referred on the 12th, declaring Mr. Faulkner duly elected and entitled to the seat; appeared, qualified, and took his seat the same day.
27 Elected on January 18, 1887, to fill vacancy caused by death of Representative-elect William T. Price in preceding Congress, but on account of illness did not take his seat until January 4, 1888.

Berger was declared “not entitled to take the oath of office as a Representative, or to hold a seat therein as such”; election unsuccessfully contested by Joseph P. Carney, and seat declared vacant; Victor L. Berger again presented credentials as Representative-elect to fill vacancy occasioned by resolution of November 10, 1919, declaring Mr. Berger not eligible to hold seat; on January 10, 1920, House again declared Victor L. Berger “not entitled to a seat in the Sixty-sixth Congress and declined to permit him to take the oath or qualify as a Representative.” Henry H. Bodenstab unsuccessfully contested the election of Victor L. Berger who had been declared ineligible, and by resolution of House adopted February 25, 1921, seat was again declared vacant.

Presented credentials as a Delegate-elect to fill vacancy caused by the death of Charles A. Sulzer, and took his seat July 1, 1919, and served until March 1, 1921.

Successfully contested the elections of Charles A. Sulzer and George B. Grigsby, and took his seat March 1, 1921.

Elected for a term of three years beginning March 4, 1920.
