(ii) if the President determines that the person or other entity to which the sanctions would otherwise be applied is a sole sources supplier of the defense articles or services, that the defense articles or services are essential, and that alternative sources are not readily or reasonably available; or

(iii) if the President determines that such articles or services are essential to the national security under defense coproduction agreements;

(B) to products or services provided under contracts entered into before the date on which the President publishes his intention to impose sanctions;

(C) to—

(i) spare parts which are essential to United States products or production,

(ii) component parts, but not finished products, essential to United States products or production, or

(iii) routine servicing and maintenance of products, to the extent that alternative sources are not readily or reasonably available;

(D) to information and technology essential to United States products or production; or

(E) to medical or other humanitarian items.

(d) TERMINATION OF SANCTIONS.—The sanctions imposed pursuant to this section shall apply for a period of at least 12 months following the imposition of sanctions and shall cease to apply thereafter only if the President determines and certifies to the Congress that—

(1) reliable information indicates that the foreign person or United States person with respect to which the determination was made under subsection (a)(1) has ceased to aid or abet any individual, group, or foreign government in its efforts to acquire unsafeguarded special nuclear material or any nuclear explosive device, as described in that subsection; and

(2) the President has reason to believe that the foreign person or United States person, as the case may be, will not, in the future, aid or abet any individual, group, or foreign government in its efforts to acquire unsafeguarded special nuclear material or any nuclear explosive device, as described in subsection (a)(1).

(e) WAIVER.—

(1) CRITERION FOR WAIVER.—The President may waive the application of any sanction imposed on any person pursuant to this section, after the end of the 12-month period beginning on the date on which that sanction was imposed on that person, if the President determines and certifies to the Congress that the continued imposition of the sanction would have a serious adverse effect on vital United States interests.

(2) NOTIFICATION OF AND REPORT TO CONGRESS.—If the President decides to exercise the waiver authority provided in paragraph (1), the President shall so notify the Congress not less than 20 days before the waiver takes effect. Such notification shall include a report fully articulating the rationale and circumstances which led the President to exercise the waiver authority.

(f) DEFINITIONS.—For the purposes of this section—

(1) the term "foreign person" means—

(A) an individual who is not a citizen of the United States or an alien admitted for permanent residence to the United States; or

(B) a corporation, partnership, or other entity which is created or organized under the laws of a foreign country or which has its principal place of business outside the United States; and

(2) the term "United States person" means—

(A) an individual who is a citizen of the United States or an alien admitted for permanent residence to the United States; or

(B) a corporation, partnership, or other entity which is created or organized under the laws of the United States or which has its principal place of business inside the United States.

SEC. 3. ROLE OF INTERNATIONAL FINANCIAL INSTITUTIONS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary of the Treasury shall instruct the United States executive director to each of the international financial institutions described in section 701(a) of the International Financial Institutions Act (22 U.S.C. 262d(a)) to use the voice and vote of the United States to oppose any direct or indirect use of the institution's funds to promote the acquisition of unsafeguarded special nuclear material or the development, stockpiling, or use of any nuclear explosive device by any non-nuclear-weapon state.

(b) DUTIES OF UNITED STATES EXECUTIVE DIRECTORS.—Section 701(b)(3) of the International Financial Institutions Act (22 U.S.C. 262d(b)(3)) is amended to read as follows:

"(3) whether the recipient country—
 "(A) is seeking to acquire unsafeguarded special nuclear material (as defined in section 11(5) of the Omnibus Nuclear Proliferation Control Act of 1991) or a nuclear explosive device (as defined in section 11(2) of that Act);

"(B) is not a State Party to the Treaty on Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons; or

"(C) is a country described in both clauses (A) and (B)."

SEC. 4. BASIS FOR DECLARATION OF NATIONAL EMERGENCY.

Section 202 of the International Emergency Economic Powers Act (50 U.S.C. 1701) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(c) For the purpose of this section, the term 'any unusual and extraordinary threat' includes any international event that the President determines may involve the detonation of a nuclear explosive device (as defined in section 11(2) of the Omnibus Nuclear Proliferation Control Act of 1991) or an action or activity that substantially contributes to the likelihood of the proliferation or detonation of such devices, including the acquisition by a non-nuclear-weapon state of unsafeguarded special nuclear material (as defined in section 11(5) of that Act)."

SEC. 5. EXPORT-IMPORT BANK.

Section 2(b)(4) of the Export-Import Bank Act of 1945 (12 U.S.C. 635(b)(4)) is amended by inserting after "device" the following: "(as defined in section 11(2) of the Omnibus Nuclear Proliferation Control Act of 1991), or that any country has willfully aided or abetted any such non-nuclear-weapon state (as defined in section 11(3) of that Act) to acquire a nuclear explosive device or to acquire unsafeguarded special nuclear material (as defined in section 11(5) of that Act)."

SEC. 6. ELIGIBILITY FOR ASSISTANCE.

(a) AMENDMENTS TO THE ARMS EXPORT CONTROL ACT.—(1) Section 3(a) of the Arms Export Control Act is amended—

(A) by striking out "and" at the end of paragraph (3);

(B) by striking out the period at the end of paragraph (4) and inserting in lieu thereof "; and";

(C) by adding at the end thereof the following:

"(5) the President has determined that the country or international organization is in full compliance with its international treaty commitments with respect to the non-proliferation of nuclear explosive devices (as defined in section 11(2) of the Omnibus Nuclear Proliferation Control Act of 1991)."; and

(D) in section 40(d) of such Act, by adding at the end thereof the following new sentence: "For the purposes of this subsection, such acts shall include all activities that the Secretary determines willfully aid or abet the international proliferation of nuclear explosive devices to individuals, groups, or non-nuclear-weapon states (as defined in section 11(3) of the Omnibus Nuclear Proliferation Control Act of 1991) or willfully aid or abet an individual, group, or non-nuclear-weapon state in acquiring unsafeguarded special nuclear material (as defined in section 11(5) of that Act)."

(2) Section 47 of such Act is amended—

(A) by striking out "and" at the end of paragraph (7);

(B) by striking out the period at the end of paragraph (8) and inserting in lieu thereof "; and"; and

(C) by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(9) 'nuclear explosive device' has the same meaning given to that term by section 11(2) of the Omnibus Nuclear Proliferation Control Act of 1991."

(b) AMENDMENTS TO THE FOREIGN ASSISTANCE ACT OF 1961.—

(1) Section 670(a)(2) of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 is amended in the first sentence—

(A) by inserting "in any fiscal year" after "President"; and

(B) by inserting "during that fiscal year" after "certifies in writing".

[(2)(A) Subparagraph (A) of section 670(b)(1) of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 is amended by inserting after "device" the following: ", or any component or design information specially designed or prepared for use in such a device."]

[(B) Subparagraph (B)(1) of section 670(b)(1) of such Act is amended by inserting after "device," the following: "or any component or design information specially designed or prepared for use in such a device."]

(2) [(3)] Section 670 of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 is further amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(d) As used in this section, the term 'nuclear explosive device' has the same meaning given to that term by section 11(2) of the Omnibus Nuclear Proliferation Control Act of 1991."

(3) [(4)] Notwithstanding any other provision of law, Presidential Determination No. 82-7 of February 10, 1982, made pursuant to section 670(a)(2) of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961, shall have no force or effect with respect to any grounds for the prohibition of assistance under section 670(a)(1) of such Act arising on or after the date of enactment of this Act.

(4) [(5)] Section 620E(d) of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 (22 U.S.C. 2375(d)) [is repealed] shall cease to apply to any grounds for the prohibition of assistance under section 669 of such Act arising on or after the date of enactment of this Act.

[SEC. 7. ACDA.

Section 26 of the Arms Control and Disarmament Act (22 U.S.C. 2566) is amended by inserting after the first sentence the following: "These responsibilities shall include the provision to the President of advice on measures to reduce, control, or halt the international spread of nuclear explosive devices (as defined in section 11(2) of the Omnibus Nuclear Proliferation Control Act of 1991) and the acquisition by non-nuclear-weapon states of unsafeguarded special nuclear material (as defined in section 11(5) of that Act)."

SEC. 7. ADDITIONAL AMENDMENTS TO THE FOREIGN ASSISTANCE ACT OF 1961.

(A) TECHNICAL AMENDMENTS.—Section 670(b) of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 922 U.S.C. 2429a(b)) is amended—

(1) in paragraphs (2) and (3), by striking "paragraph (1)" each of the four places it appears and inserting in lieu thereof "paragraph (2)";

(2) in paragraph (2)(A), by striking "paragraph (3)" and inserting "paragraph (4)";

(3) in paragraph (3), by striking "paragraph (2)" and inserting "paragraph (3)"; and

(4) by redesignating paragraphs (2), (3), and (4) as paragraphs (3), (4), and (5), respectively.

(b) ADDITIONAL SANCTIONS.—Section 670(b)(1) of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 (22 U.S.C. 2429a) is amended to read as follows:

"(b)(1) Except as provided in paragraphs (2) and (3), in the event that any country, after the date of enactment of this section—

"(A) transfers a nuclear explosive device, any design information, or any component specially designed or prepared for use in such a device to a nonnuclear-weapon state, or

"(B) is a non-nuclear-weapon state and either—

"(i) receives a nuclear explosive device, and design information, or any component specially designed or prepared for use in a device, or

"(ii) detonates a nuclear explosive device, the President shall forthwith impose sanctions upon that country, including those sanctions specified in paragraph (2).

"(2) Whenever sanctions against a certain nation are required pursuant to paragraph (1), the President shall, as a minimum, impose the following sanctions:

"(A) FOREIGN ASSISTANCE.—The United States Government shall terminate assistance to that country under this Act, except for urgent humanitarian assistance or food or other agricultural commodities.

"(B) ARMS SALES.—The United States Government shall terminate—

"(i) sales to that country under the Arms Export Control Act of any defense articles, defense services, or design and construction services, and

"(ii) licenses for the export to that country of any item on the United States Munitions List.

"(C) ARMS SALES FINANCING.—The United States Government shall terminate all foreign military financing for that country under the Arms Export Control Act.

"(D) DENIAL OF UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT CREDIT OR OTHER FINANCIAL ASSISTANCE.—The United States Government shall deny to that country any credit, credit guarantees, or other financial assistance by any department, agency, or instrumentality of the United States Government, including the Export-Import Bank of the United States.

"(E) MULTILATERAL DEVELOPMENT BANK ASSISTANCE.—The United States Government shall oppose, in accordance with section 701 of the International Financial Institutions Act (22 U.S.C. 262d), the extension of any loan or financial or technical assistance to that country by international financial institutions.

"(F) BANK LOANS.—The United States Government shall prohibit any United States bank from making any loan or providing any credit to the government of that country, except for loans or credits for the purpose of purchasing food or other agricultural commodities.

"(G) FURTHER EXPORT RESTRICTIONS.—The authorities of section 6 of the Export Administration Act of 1979 shall be used to prohibit exports to that country of any goods and technology (excluding food and other agricultural commodities).

"(H) IMPORT PROHIBITION.—The importation into the United States of articles that are the growth, product, or manufacture of that country shall be prohibited."

(c) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—Section 670(b)(2)(A) of such Act is amended—

(1) by striking "furnish assistance which would otherwise be prohibited" and inserting in lieu thereof "delay the imposition of sanctions which would otherwise be required"; and

(2) by striking "termination of assistance" and inserting in lieu thereof "imposition of sanctions".

(d) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—Section 670(b)(3) of such Act is amended by striking "termination of such assistance" and inserting in lieu thereof "imposition of such sanctions".

SEC. 8. REWARD.

Section 36(a) of the State Department Basic Authorities Act of 1956 is amended—

(1) by redesignating paragraphs (1) through (3) as subparagraphs (A) through (C);

(2) by inserting "(1)" immediately after "(a)"; and

(3) by adding at the end thereof the following:

"(2) For purposes of this subsection, the term 'act of international terrorism' includes any act substantially contributing to the acquisition of unsafeguarded special nuclear material (as defined in section 11(5) of the Omnibus Nuclear Proliferation Control Act of 1991) or any nuclear explosive device (as defined in section 11(2) of that Act) by an individual, group, or non-nuclear-weapon state, as defined in section 11(3) of that Act."

SEC. 9. REPORTS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Not later than December 1 of each year, the President shall submit to Congress a report on any noncompliance by foreign governments with their commitments to the United States with respect to the prevention of the spread of nuclear explosive devices.

(b) CONTENTS OF REPORT.—The President shall specifically include in such report the following:

(1) A net assessment of the aggregate military significance of all such violations.

(2) A statement of the compliance policy of the United States with respect to violations of those commitments.

(3) What actions, if any, the President has taken or proposes to take to bring any nation committing such a violation into compliance with its commitments.

(c) REPORTING CONSECUTIVE NONCOMPLIANCE.—If the President in consecutive reports submitted to Congress under this section reports that any designated nation is not in full compliance with its nonproliferation commitments to the United States, then the President shall include in the second such report an assessment of what actions are necessary to compensate for such violations.

(d) FORM OF REPORTS.—Each report under this section shall be submitted in both classified and unclassified versions.

(e) DEFINITION.—As used in this section, the term "commitments" means formal and informal communications that the United States has received from official representatives of foreign governments conveying the national policies of such governments to forswear the acquisition or proliferation of unsafeguarded special nuclear material or of nuclear explosive devices.

(a) CONTENT OF ACDA ANNUAL REPORT.—Section 52 of the Arms Control and Disarmament Act (22 U.S.C. 2592) is amended—

(1) by inserting "(a) IN GENERAL.—" after "SEC. 52";

(2) by striking "and" at the end of paragraph (4);

(3) by striking the period at the end of paragraph (5) and inserting in lieu thereof "; and";

(4) by adding at the end of paragraph (5) the following new paragraph:

"(6) a section of the report shall deal with any noncompliance by foreign governments with their commitments to the United States with respect to the prevention of the spread of nuclear explosive devices, including—

"(A) a net assessment of the aggregate military significance of all such violations;

"(B) a statement of the compliance policy of the United States with respect to violations of those commitments; and

"(C) what actions, if any, the President has taken or proposes to take to bring any nation committing such a violation into compliance with its commitments.";

(5) by adding at the end thereof the following new subsections:

"(b) REPORTING CONSECUTIVE NONCOMPLIANCE.—If the President in consecutive reports submitted to Congress under this section reports that any designated nation is not in full compliance with its nonproliferation commitments to the United States, then the President shall include in the second such report an assessment of what actions are necessary to compensate for such violations.

"(c) DEFINITION.—As used in this section, the term "commitments" means formal and informal communications that the United States has received from official representatives of foreign governments conveying the national policies of such governments to forswear the acquisition or proliferation of unsafeguarded special nuclear material or of nuclear explosive devices."

(b)(f) REPORT ON DEMARCHES.—(1) Not later than July 1, 1992, the Secretary of State shall submit to the Congress a comprehensive report on the effectiveness of the United States diplomatic demarches intended to halt the proliferation of nuclear explosive devices, including the number of specific demarches issued by the United States, and the number of demarches received by the United States from foreign governments, during the 5 years preceding the date of enactment of this subsection. Such report shall identify the proportion of these demarches that the Secretary has deemed to have been successful in attaining their stated objectives and shall identify all measures taken to improve the effectiveness of such demarches.

(2) For purposes of this section, the term "demarche" means any official communication by one government to another, by written or oral means, intended by the originating government to express—

(A) a concern over a past, present, or possible future action or activity of the recipient government, or of a person within the jurisdiction of that government, contributing to the global spread of unsafeguarded special nuclear material or of nuclear explosive devices;

(B) a request for the recipient government to counter such action or activity; or

(C) both the concern and request described in subparagraphs (A) and (B).

SEC. 10. TECHNICAL CORRECTION.

Section 133(b) of the Atomic Energy Act of 1954 (42 U.S.C. 2160c) is amended by striking out "20 kilograms" and inserting in lieu thereof "5 kilograms".

SEC. 11. DEFINITIONS.

For purposes of this Act—

(1) the term "IAEA safeguards" means the safeguards set forth in an agreement between a country and the International Atomic Energy Agency, as authorized by Article III(A)(5) of the Statute of the International Atomic Energy Agency;

(2) the term "nuclear explosive device" means any device that is designed to produce an instantaneous release of an amount of nuclear energy from special nuclear material that is greater than the amount of energy that would be released from the detonation of one pound of trinitrotoluene (TNT);

(3) the term "non-nuclear-weapon state" means any country which is not a nuclear-weapon state, as defined by Article IX (3) of the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons, signed at Washington, London, and Moscow on July 1, 1968;

(4) the term "special nuclear material" has the meaning given to that term by section 11aa of the Atomic Energy Act of 1954 (42 U.S.C. 2014aa); and

(5) the term "unsafeguarded special nuclear material" means special nuclear material which is held in violation of, or not subject to, IAEA safeguards.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the committee amendments en bloc.

The committee amendments were agreed to.

AMENDMENT NO. 1775

Mr. FORD. Mr. President, on behalf of Senator PELL, Senator HELMS, and Senator GLENN, I send a substitute to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Kentucky [Mr. FORD], for Mr. PELL, for himself, Mr. HELMS, and Mr. GLENN, proposes an amendment numbered 1775.

Mr. FORD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

Strike out all after the enacting clause and insert in lieu thereof the following:

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Omnibus Nuclear Proliferation Control Act of 1992".

SEC. 2. IMPOSITION OF SANCTIONS.

(a) DETERMINATION BY THE PRESIDENT.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in subsection (b)(2), the President shall impose the applicable sanctions described in subsection (c) if the President determines that a foreign person or a United States person, on or after the date of the enactment of this section, has materially and with requisite knowledge contributed—

(A) through the export from the United States of any goods or technology that are subject to the jurisdiction of the United States, or

(B) through the export from any other country of any goods or technology that would be, if they were exported from the United States, subject to the jurisdiction of the United States, to the efforts by any individual, group, or non-nuclear-weapon state to acquire unsafeguarded special nuclear material or to use, develop, produce, stockpile, or otherwise acquire any nuclear explosive device, whether or not the goods or technology is specifically designed or modified for that purpose.

(2) PERSONS AGAINST WHICH SANCTIONS ARE TO BE IMPOSED.—Sanctions shall be imposed pursuant to paragraph (1) on—

(A) the foreign person of United States person with respect to which the President makes the determination described in that paragraph;

(B) any successor entity to that foreign person or United States person;

(C) any foreign person or United States person that is a parent or subsidiary of that person if that parent or subsidiary materially and with requisite knowledge assisted in the activities which were the basis of that determination; and

(D) any foreign person or United States person that is an affiliate of that person if that affiliate materially and with requisite knowledge assisted in the activities which were the basis of that determination and if that affiliate is controlled in fact by that foreign person.

(3) OTHER SANCTIONS AVAILABLE.—The sanctions which may be imposed for activities described in this subsection are in addition to any other sanction which may be imposed for the same activities under any other provision of law.

(4) DEFINITION.—For purposes of this subsection, the term "requisite knowledge" includes situations in which a person "knows", as "knowing" is defined in section 104 of the Foreign Corrupt Practices Act of 1977 (15 U.S.C. 78dd-2) or has "reason to know" the effect of such person's actions.

(b) CONSULTATION WITH AND ACTIONS BY FOREIGN GOVERNMENT OF JURISDICTION.—

(1) CONSULTATIONS.—If the President makes the determinations described in subsection (a)(1) with respect to a foreign person, the Congress urges the President to initiate consultations immediately with the government with primary jurisdiction over that foreign person with respect to the imposition of sanctions pursuant to this section.

(2) ACTIONS BY GOVERNMENT OF JURISDICTION.—In order to pursue such consultations with that government, the President may delay imposition of sanctions pursuant to this section for up to 90 days. Following these consultations, the President shall impose sanctions unless the President determines and certifies to the Congress that that government has taken specific and effective actions, including appropriate penalties, to terminate the involvement of the foreign person in the activities described in subsection (a)(1). The President may delay the imposition of sanctions for up to an additional 90 days if the President determines and certifies to the Congress that that government is in the process of taking the actions described in the previous sentence.

(3) REPORT TO CONGRESS.—Not later than 90 days after making a determination under subsection (a)(1), the President shall submit to the Committee on Foreign Relations and the Committee on Governmental Affairs of the Senate and the Committee on Foreign Affairs of the House of Representatives a report on the status of consultations with the appropriate government under this subsection, and the basis for any determination under paragraph (2) of this subsection that such government has taken specific corrective actions.

(c) SANCTIONS.—

(1) DESCRIPTION OF SANCTIONS.—The sanctions to be imposed pursuant to subsection (a)(1) are, except as provided in paragraph (3) of this subsection, that the United States Government shall not procure, or enter into any contract for the procurement of, any goods or services from any person described in subsection (a)(2).

(2) DESCRIPTION OF SANCTIONS ON UNITED STATES PERSONS.—The United States Government shall not procure, or enter into any contract for the procurement of, any goods or services from the United States person or any parent, subsidiary, affiliate, or successor entity thereof, as described in subsection (a)(2).

(3) EXCEPTIONS.—The President shall not be required to apply or maintain sanctions under this section—

(A) in the case of procurement of defense articles or defense services—

(i) under existing contracts or subcontracts, including the exercise of options for production quantities to satisfy United States operational military requirements;

(ii) if the President determines that the person or other entity to which the sanctions would otherwise be applied is a sole source supplier of the defense articles or services, that the defense articles or services are essential, and that alternative sources are not readily or reasonably available; or

(iii) if the President determines that such articles or services are essential to the national security under defense coproduction agreements;

(B) to products or services provided under contracts entered into before the date on which the President publishes his intention to impose sanctions;

(C) to—

(i) spare parts which are essential to United States products or production,

(ii) component parts, but not finished products, essential to United States products or production, or

(iii) routine servicing and maintenance of products, to the extent that alternative sources are not readily or reasonably available;

(D) to information and technology essential to United States products or production; or

(E) to medical or other humanitarian items.

(d) TERMINATION OF SANCTIONS.—The sanctions imposed pursuant to this section shall apply for a period of at least 12 months following the imposition of sanctions and shall cease to apply thereafter only if the President determines and certifies to the Congress that—

(1) reliable information indicates that the foreign person or United States person with respect to which the determination was made under subsection (a)(1) has ceased to aid or abet any individual, group, or non-nuclear-weapon state in its efforts to acquire unsafeguarded special nuclear material or any nuclear explosive device, as described in that subsection; and

(2) the President has received reliable assurances from the foreign person or United States person, as the case may be, that such person will not, in the future, aid or abet any individual group, or non-nuclear-weapon state in its efforts to acquire unsafeguarded special nuclear material or any nuclear explosive device, as described in subsection (a)(1).

(e) WAIVER.—

(1) CRITERION FOR WAIVER.—The President may waive the application of any sanction imposed on any person pursuant to this section, after the end of the 12-month period beginning on the date on which that sanction was imposed on that person, if the President determines and certifies to the Congress that the continued imposition of the sanction would have a serious adverse effect on vital United States interests.

(2) NOTIFICATION OF AND REPORT TO CONGRESS.—If the President decides to exercise the waiver authority provided in paragraph (1), the President shall so notify the Congress not less than 20 days before the waiver takes effect. Such notification shall include a report fully articulating the rationale and circumstances which led the President to exercise the waiver authority.

(f) DEFINITIONS.—For the purposes of this section—

(1) the term "foreign person" means—

(A) an individual who is not a citizen of the United States or an alien admitted for permanent residence to the United States; or

(B) a corporation, partnership, or other entity which is created or organized under the laws of a foreign country or which has its principal place of business outside the United States; and

(2) the term "United States person" means—

(A) an individual who is a citizen of the United States or an alien admitted for permanent residence to the United States; or

(B) a corporation, partnership, or other entity which is not a foreign person.

SEC. 3. ROLE OF INTERNATIONAL FINANCIAL INSTITUTIONS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary of the Treasury shall instruct the United States executive director to each of the international financial institutions described in section 701(a) of the International Financial Institutions Act (22 U.S.C. 262d(a)) to use the voice and vote of the United States to oppose any direct or indirect use of the institution's funds to promote the acquisition of unsafeguarded special nuclear material or the development, stockpiling, or use of any nuclear explosive device by any non-nuclear-weapon state.

(b) DUTIES OF UNITED STATES EXECUTIVE DIRECTORS.—Section 701(b)(3) of the International Financial Institutions Act (22 U.S.C. 262d(b)(3)) is amended to read as follows:

"(3) whether the recipient country—

"(A) is seeking to acquire unsafeguarded special nuclear material (as defined in section 11(6) of the Omnibus Nuclear Proliferation Control Act of 1992) or a nuclear explosive device (as defined in section 11(3) of that Act);

"(B) is not a State Party to the Treaty on Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons; or

"(C) has detonated a nuclear explosive device; and"

SEC. 4. AMENDMENTS TO THE INTERNATIONAL EMERGENCY ECONOMIC POWERS ACT AND THE FEDERAL DEPOSIT INSURANCE CORPORATION IMPROVEMENT ACT OF 1991.

(a) BASIS FOR DECLARATION OF NATIONAL EMERGENCY.—Section 202 of the International Emergency Economic Powers Act (50 U.S.C. 1701) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(c) For the purpose of this section, the term 'any unusual and extraordinary threat' includes any international event that the President determines may involve the detonation by a non-nuclear-weapon state of a nuclear explosive device (as defined in section 11(3) of the Omnibus Nuclear Proliferation Control Act of 1992) or an action or activity that substantially contributes to the likelihood of the proliferation or detonation of such devices, including the acquisition by a non-nuclear-weapon state of unsafeguarded special nuclear material (as defined in section 11(6) of that Act)."

(b) SANCTIONS ON FINANCIAL INSTITUTIONS.—The Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation Improvement Act of 1991 is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new title:

"TITLE VI—SANCTIONS ON FINANCIAL INSTITUTIONS

"SEC. 601. PRESIDENTIAL DETERMINATION.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—The prohibitions in section 603 shall be imposed on a financial institution if the President determines that such financial institution, on or after the date of the enactment of this section, has materially and with requisite knowledge contributed, through provision of financing or other services, to the efforts by any individual, group, or non-nuclear-weapon state to acquire unsafeguarded special nuclear material or to use, develop, produce, stockpile, or otherwise acquire any nuclear explosive device as these standards and terms are defined and would be applied under section 2 of the Omnibus Nuclear Proliferation Control Act of 1992.

"(b) PRESIDENTIAL ORDER.—Whenever the President makes a determination under subsection (a) with respect to a financial institution, the President shall issue an order specifying a date within 180 days of such determination on which the prohibitions in section 603 shall begin to apply to such institution.

"SEC. 602. ADDITIONAL ENTITIES AGAINST WHICH SANCTIONS ARE TO BE IMPOSED.

"The prohibitions described in section 603 shall also be imposed pursuant to section 601, on—

"(1) any successor entity to the financial institution with respect to which the President makes such determination;

"(2) any foreign person or United States person that is a parent or subsidiary of such financial institution if that parent or subsidiary materially and with requisite knowledge assisted in the activities which were the basis of such determination; and

"(3) any foreign person or United States person that is an affiliate of such financial institution if that affiliate materially and with requisite knowledge assisted in the activities which were the basis of such determination and if that affiliate is controlled in fact by such financial institution.

"SEC. 603. PROHIBITIONS.

"The following prohibitions shall apply to a financial institution subject to a determination described in section 601 and to related entities described in section 602:

"(1) BAN ON DEALINGS IN GOVERNMENT FINANCE.—

"(A) DESIGNATION AS PRIMARY DEALER.—Neither the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System nor the Federal Reserve Bank of New York may designate, or permit the continuation of any prior designation of, such financial institution as a primary dealer in United States Government debt instruments.

"(B) GOVERNMENT FUNDS.—Such financial institution shall not serve as agent of the United States Government or serve as repository for United States Government funds.

"(2) RESTRICTIONS ON OPERATIONS.—Such financial institution shall not, directly or indirectly—

"(A) commence any line of business in the United States in which it was not engaged as of the date of the determination; or

"(B) conduct business from any location in the United States at which it did not conduct business as of the date of the determination.

"SEC. 604. CONDITIONS AND TERMINATION OF SANCTIONS.

"The same requirements for consultation with the foreign government of jurisdiction, where appropriate, and for termination of sanctions shall apply under this title as are provided in subsections (b) and (d), respectively, of section 2 of the Omnibus Nuclear Proliferation Control Act of 1992.

"SEC. 605. WAIVER.

"The President may waive the imposition of any prohibition imposed on any financial institution or other person pursuant to section 601 or 602 if the President determines and certifies to the Congress that the imposition of such prohibition would have a serious adverse effect on the safety and soundness of the domestic or international financial system or on domestic or international payments systems.

"SEC. 606. DEFINITIONS.

"As used in this title—

"(1) the term 'financial institution' includes—

"(A) a depository institution, including a branch or agency of a foreign bank;

"(B) a securities firm, including a broker or dealer;

"(C) an insurance company, including an agency or underwriter;

"(D) any other company that provides financial services; or

"(E) any subsidiary thereof; and

"(2) the term 'requisite knowledge' includes situations in which a person 'knows', as 'knowing' is defined in section 104 of the Foreign Corrupt Practices Act of 1977 (15 U.S.C. 78dd-2) or has 'reason to know' the effect of such person's actions."

SEC. 5. EXPORT-IMPORT BANK.

"Section 2(b)(4) of the Export-Import Bank Act of 1945 (12 U.S.C. 635(b)(4)) is amended by inserting after "device" the following: "(as defined in section 11(3) of the Omnibus Nuclear Proliferation Control Act of 1992), or that any country has willfully aided or abetted any such non-nuclear-weapon state (as defined in section 11(4) of that Act) to acquire a nuclear explosive device or to acquire unsafeguarded special nuclear material (as defined in section 11(6) of that Act)."

SEC. 6. ELIGIBILITY FOR ASSISTANCE.

"(a) AMENDMENTS TO THE ARMS EXPORT CONTROL ACT.—(1) The Arms Export Control Act (22 U.S.C. 2751 et seq.) is amended—

"(A) in section 3 of such Act, by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(f) No sales or leases shall be made to any country that the President has determined is in material breach of its commitments to the United States under international treaties or agreements concerning the non-proliferation of nuclear explosive devices (as defined in section 11(3) of the Omnibus Nuclear Proliferation Control Act of 1992) and unsafeguarded special nuclear material"; and

"(B) in section 40(d) of such Act, by adding at the end thereof the following new sentence: "For the purposes of this subsection, such acts shall include all activities that the Secretary determines willfully aid or abet the international proliferation of nuclear explosive devices to individuals or groups or willfully aid or abet an individual or groups in acquiring unsafeguarded special nuclear material (as defined in section 11(6) of that Act)."

(2) Section 47 of such Act is amended—

(A) by striking out "and" at the end of paragraph (7);

(B) by striking out the period at the end of paragraph (8) and inserting in lieu thereof "and"; and

(C) by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(9) 'nuclear explosive device' has the same meaning given to that term by section 11(3) of the Omnibus Nuclear Proliferation Control Act of 1992."

(b) AMENDMENTS TO THE FOREIGN ASSISTANCE ACT OF 1961.—

(1) Section 670(a)(2) of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 (22 U.S.C. 2429a(a)(2)) is amended in the first sentence—

(A) by inserting "in any fiscal year" after "President"; and

(B) by inserting "during that fiscal year" after "certifies in writing";

(2) Section 670 of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 (22 U.S.C. 2429a) is further amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(d) As used in this section, the term 'nuclear explosive device' has the same meaning given to that term by section 11(3) of the Omnibus Nuclear Proliferation Control Act of 1992."

(3) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, Presidential Determination No. 82-7 of February 10, 1982, made pursuant to section 670(a)(2) of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961, shall have no force or effect with respect to any grounds for the prohibition of assistance under section 670(a)(1) of such Act arising on or after the date of enactment of this Act.

(4) Section 620E(d) of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 (22 U.S.C. 2375(d)) is amended to read as follows:

"(d) The President may waive the prohibitions of section 669 of this Act with respect to any grounds for the prohibition of assistance under that section arising before the date of enactment of the Omnibus Nuclear Proliferation Control Act of 1992 to provide assistance to Pakistan if he determines that to do so is in the national interest of the United States."

SEC. 7. ADDITIONAL AMENDMENTS TO THE FOREIGN ASSISTANCE ACT OF 1961.

(a) TECHNICAL AMENDMENTS.—Section 670(b) of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 (22 U.S.C. 2429a(b)) is amended—

(1) by redesignating paragraphs (2), (3), and (4) as paragraphs (3), (4), and (5), respectively;

(2) in paragraph (3)(A) (as so redesignated), by striking "paragraph (3)" and inserting "paragraph (4)"; and

(3) in paragraph (4) (as so redesignated), by striking "paragraph (2)" and inserting "paragraph (3)".

(b) ADDITIONAL SANCTIONS.—Section 670(b)(1) of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 (22 U.S.C. 2429a) is amended to read as follows:

"(b)(1) Except as provided in paragraphs (3), (4), and (5), in the event that any country, after the date of enactment of the Omnibus Nuclear Proliferation Control Act of 1992—

"(A) transfers to a non-nuclear-weapon state—

"(i) a nuclear explosive device, or

"(ii) design information or components known by the transferor to be necessary for the recipient's completion of a nuclear explosive device,

"(B) is a non-nuclear-weapon state and—

"(i) receives a nuclear explosive device,

"(ii) receives design information and components necessary for the completion of a nuclear explosive device, or

"(iii) detonates a nuclear explosive device,

"(C) non-nuclear-weapon state any design information or component (other than described in subparagraph (A)(ii) which is determined by the President to be important to, and known by the transferring country to be intended by the recipient state for use in, the development or manufacture of any nuclear explosive device, or

"(D) is a non-nuclear-weapon state and has sought and received any design information or component (other than described in subparagraph (B)(ii) which is determined by the President to be important to, and intended by the recipient state for use in, the development or manufacture of any nuclear explosive device, the President shall forthwith impose sanctions against that country, including, as a minimum, those sanctions specified in paragraph (2).

"(2) The sanctions referred to in paragraph (1) are as follows:

"(A) FOREIGN ASSISTANCE.—The United States Government shall terminate assistance to that country under this Act, except for urgent humanitarian assistance or food or other agricultural commodities.

"(B) ARMS SALES.—The United States Government shall terminate—

"(i) sales to that country under the Arms Export Control Act of any defense articles, defense services, or design and construction services, and

"(ii) licenses for the export to that country of any item on the United States Munitions List.

"(C) ARMS SALES FINANCING.—The United States Government shall terminate all foreign military financing for that country under the Arms Export Control Act.

"(D) DENIAL OF UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT CREDIT OR OTHER FINANCIAL ASSISTANCE.—The United States Government shall deny to that country any credit guarantees, or other financial assistance by any department, agency, or instrumentality of the United States Government, including the Export-Import Bank of the United States, except that the sanction of this subparagraph shall not apply to any transaction subject to the reporting requirements of title V of the National Security Act of 1947 (relating to congressional oversight of intelligence activities).

"(E) MULTILATERAL DEVELOPMENT BANK ASSISTANCE.—The United States Government shall oppose, in accordance with section 701 of the International Financial Institutions Act (22 U.S.C. 262d), the extension of any loan or financial or technical assistance to that country by international financial institutions.

"(F) BANK LOANS.—The United States Government shall prohibit any United States bank from making any loan or providing any credit to the government of that country, except for loans or credits for the purpose of purchasing food or other agricultural commodities.

"(G) EXPORT PROHIBITION.—The authorities of section 6 of the Export Administration Act of 1979 shall be used to prohibit exports to that country of any goods and technology (excluding food and other agricultural commodities), except that such prohibition shall not apply to any transaction subject to the reporting requirements of title V of the National Security Act of 1947 (relating to congressional oversight of intelligence activities)."

(c) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—Section 670(b) of such Act (22 U.S.C. 2429a(b)) is further amended—

(1) in paragraph (3)(A) (as redesignated)—

(A) by striking "furnish assistance which would otherwise be prohibited" and inserting in lieu thereof "delay the imposition of sanctions which would otherwise be required"; and

(B) by striking "termination of assistance" and inserting in lieu thereof "imposition of sanctions";

(2) in paragraph (4) (as redesignated), by striking "termination of such assistance" and inserting in lieu thereof "imposition of such sanctions";

(3) by redesignating paragraph (5) (as redesignated by subsection (a)) as paragraph (6); and

(4) by inserting after paragraph (4) (as redesignated) the following:

"(5) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the sanctions which are required to be imposed against a country under paragraph (1)(C) or (1)(D) shall not apply if the President determines and certifies in writing to the Committee on Foreign Relations and the Committee on Governmental Affairs of the Senate and the Committee on Foreign Affairs of the House of Representatives that the application of such sanctions against such country would have a serious adverse effect on vital United States interests. The President shall transmit with such certification a statement setting forth the specific reasons therefor."

SEC. 8. REWARD.

Section 36(a) of the State Department Basic Authorities Act of 1956 (22 U.S.C. 2708(a)) is amended—

(1) by redesignating paragraphs (1) through (3) as subparagraphs (A) through (C);

(2) by inserting "(1)" immediately after "(a)"; and

(3) by adding at the end thereof the following:

"(2) For purposes of this subsection, the term 'act of international terrorism' includes any act substantially contributing to the acquisition of unsafeguarded special nuclear material (as defined in section 11(6) of the Omnibus Nuclear Proliferation Control Act of 1991) or any nuclear explosive device (as defined in section 11(3) of that Act) by an individual, group, or non-nuclear-weapon state, as defined in section 11(4) of that Act."

SEC. 9. REPORTS.

(a) CONTENT OF ACDA ANNUAL REPORT.—Section 52 of the Arms Control and Disarmament Act (22 U.S.C. 2592) is amended—

(1) by inserting "(a) IN GENERAL.—" after "SEC. 52.";

(2) by striking "and" at the end of paragraph (4);

(3) by striking the period at the end of paragraph (5) and inserting in lieu thereof "; and";

(4) by adding at the end of paragraph (5) the following new paragraph:

"(6) a section of the report shall deal with any material noncompliance by foreign governments with their commitments to the United States with respect to the prevention of the spread of nuclear explosive devices by non-nuclear-weapon states or the acquisition by such states of unsafeguarded special nuclear material (as defined in section 11(6) of the Omnibus Nuclear Proliferation Control Act of 1992), including—

"(A) a net assessment of the aggregate military significance of all such violations;

"(B) a statement of the compliance policy of the United States with respect to violations of those commitments; and

"(C) what actions, if any, the President has taken or proposes to take to bring any nation committing such a violation into compliance with its commitments."; and

(5) by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(b) REPORTING CONSECUTIVE NONCOMPLIANCE.—If the President in consecutive reports submitted to Congress under this section reports that any designated nation is not in full compliance with its nonproliferation commitments to the United States, then the President shall include in the second such report an assessment of what actions are necessary to compensate for such violations."

(b) REPORTING ON DEMARCHES.—(1) It is the sense of Congress that the Department of State should, in the course of implementing its reporting responsibilities under section 602(c) of the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Act of 1978, include a summary of demarches that the United States has issued or received from foreign governments with respect to activities which are of significance from the proliferation standpoint.

(2) For purposes of this section, the term "demarche" means any official communication by one government to another, by written or oral means, intended by the originating government to express—

(A) a concern over a past, present, or possible future action or activity of the recipient government, or of a person within the jurisdiction of that government, contributing to the global spread of unsafeguarded special nuclear material or of nuclear explosive devices;

(B) a request for the recipient government to counter such action or activity; or

(C) both the concern and request described in subparagraphs (A) and (B).

SEC. 10. TECHNICAL CORRECTION.

Section 133(b) of the Atomic Energy Act of 1954 (42 U.S.C. 2160c) is amended by striking out "20 kilograms" and inserting in lieu thereof "5 kilograms".

SEC. 11. DEFINITIONS.

For purposes of this Act—

(1) the term "goods and technology" includes nuclear materials and equipment and sensitive nuclear technology (as defined in section 4 of the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Act of 1978), all export items designated by the President pursuant to section 309(c) of such Act, and all technical assistance requiring authorization under section 57b. of the Atomic Energy Act of 1954;

(2) the term "IAEA safeguards" means the safeguards set forth in an agreement between a country and the International Atomic Energy Agency, as authorized by Article III(A)(5) of the Statute of the International Atomic Energy Agency;

(3) the term "nuclear explosive device" means any device that is designed to produce an instantaneous release of an amount of nuclear energy from special nuclear material that is greater than the amount of energy that would be released from the detonation of one pound of trinitrotoluene (TNT);

(4) the term "non-nuclear-weapon state" means any country which is not a nuclear-weapon state, as defined by Article IX (3) of the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons, signed at Washington, London, and Moscow on July 1, 1968;

(5) the term "special nuclear material" has the meaning given to that term by section 11aa of the Atomic Energy Act of 1954 (42 U.S.C. 2014aa); and

(6) the term "unsafeguarded special nuclear material" means special nuclear material which is held in violation of IAEA safeguards or not subject to IAEA safeguards (excluding any quantity of material that could, if it were exported from the United States, be exported under a general license issued by the Nuclear Regulatory Commission).

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment (No. 1775) was agreed to.

Mr. PELL. Mr. President, today we have an excellent opportunity to reinvigorate the critically important effort to control the spread of nuclear weapons through the passage of S. 1128, the "Omnibus Nuclear Proliferation Control Act of 1992."

This bill, S. 1128, was introduced by the Senator from Ohio [Mr. GLENN] on May 22, 1991. Following hearings on nuclear proliferation issues and on this bill, S. 1128 was considered, amended and unanimously reported 19-0 by the Foreign Relations Committee on November 22. The bill has the administration's backing and enjoys wide bipartisan public support. In addition to the Senator from Ohio [Mr. GLENN] and myself, cosponsors include the Senators from North Carolina, New York, Tennessee, Iowa, Mississippi, Colorado, Massachusetts, Arizona, Pennsylvania, California, New Mexico, Vermont, Illinois, Oklahoma, and Rhode Island [Messrs HELMS, D'AMATO, GORE, HARKIN, LOTT, WIRTH, KERRY, DECONCINI, SPECTER, CRANSTON, BINGAMAN, JEFFORDS, SIMON, BOREN, and CHAFFEE].

S. 1128, applies to nuclear proliferation some of the same approaches used in comprehensive chemical weapons legislation enacted last year, the "Chemical and Biological Weapons Control and Warfare Elimination Act of 1992," which I authored with the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. HELMS].

The main purpose of the bill is to create strong barriers against illicit exports that would help nations to acquire nuclear arsenals. Accordingly, the bill targets persons and firms that materially and with requisite knowledge contribute through the export of goods or technology to the efforts by any individual, group or nonnuclear-weapons state to acquire unsafeguarded weapons-grade uranium or plutonium or to use, develop, produce, stockpile, or otherwise acquire a nuclear explosive device. Those engaged in such activities would lose, with certain specified exceptions, the right to sell to the U.S. Government for at least a year. Banks, insurers and other financial institutions that willingly back this dangerous nuclear traffic could also be penalized.

In addition, the bill prohibits U.S. support for multilateral aid that would promote the acquisition of unsafeguarded nuclear materials or the acquisition of nuclear explosive devices; provides expanded Presidential authority to impose economic sanctions against foreign firms under the International Emergency Economic Powers Act, and requires that the President ban Export-Import bank credits to countries that willfully aid and abet other countries in the acquisition of nuclear explosive devices or weapon material.

Moreover, the bill authorizes payment of rewards for information useful in halting nuclear proliferation, eliminates Pakistan's special exemption from the Glenn-Symington amendments of the Foreign Assistance Act, and requires recipients of United States arms to comply with their non-proliferation commitments.

The Senator from North Carolina [Mr. HELMS] and I offered an amendment approved by the committee substantially expanding and toughening the sanctions that would be applied against nations transferring or receiving nuclear devices and the means to make them.

At present, section 670 of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 provides for a cutoff of military and economic assistance, except for humanitarian aid, to any nation that transfers a nuclear explosive device to a nonnuclear weapon state and cuts off aid to any nonnuclear weapon state that either receives such a device or detonates one.

Our experience in recent years has demonstrated that section 670 provision should be made to apply to components and design information as well. Moreover, the Iraq experience and other problems have made it abundantly clear that the list of sanctions must be more far reaching so that no nation could doubt the severity of the price to be paid for nuclear misbehavior. Under these new sanctions any nation giving the wherewithal for a nuclear device to a nonnuclear-weapon state or any such state receiving such help would become a pariah among the world's nations so far as the United States was concerned. I would hope other nations would follow our lead, as they have before in proliferation matters.

The new country sanctions would consist of a ban on all foreign assistance except for humanitarian aid, on arms sales and arms sales financing, denial of U.S. Government credit or other financial assistance; opposition to multilateral bank assistance; a ban on bank loans except to buy agricultural commodities and a prohibition on exports to the sanctioned nations.

Mr. President, we will have a committee amendment making certain changes in the bill. Some of these changes are technical, but others are substantive. A major change is the deletion of import sanctions with regard to both companies and countries. This was done pursuant to discussions with the Senator from Texas [Mr. BENTSEN], the distinguished chairman of the Committee on Finance. Moreover, this change was needed since import sanctions affect public revenue, the bill would not be accepted by the House if sent by the Senate with import sanctions. The Senators from Ohio and North Carolina [Mr. GLENN and Mr. HELMS] and I believe that the bill should include import sanctions, and we intend to do our best to ensure that the conference bill include such sanctions. On the basis of staff-level discussions among the Committee on Foreign Relations, Governmental Affairs and Banking, Housing and Urban Affairs, as well as with the administration, we are incorporating in the committee amendment a Helms-Pell amendment punishing banks, insurers, and other financial institutions that support illicit nuclear commerce. The Senator from Utah [Mr. GARN] and his staff were helping in making sure that this provision is both strong and workable.

We have worked extensively with the executive branch on this bill. Our amendment today reflects the mutually satisfactory resolution of several issues raised by the executive branch that do not affect the thrust or purpose of the bill.

I am pleased that we have a very satisfactory outcome of one key issue. The administration wanted Presidential waiver authority for country sanctions in cases of the transfer of weapons components and design information, whereas we were fearful of any waiver that would cause miscreant nations to believe they could fool around with the bomb and escape penalties. As it has been worked out, there will be no waiver of sanctions for components and design information that the transferor knows would open the way to the completion of a nuclear device.

There is a second category of design components and information that would be handled differently. The bill provides for sanctions against a country that transfers bomb components or design information determined by the President to be intended for use in the development or manufacture of a nuclear explosive device and known by the transferor to be intended for that purpose. Sanctions would be applied against a country that sought and received such components and design information if the President makes a similar determination regarding importance and intended use. The President is allowed to issue a waiver if he determines and certifies to the Congress that the application of sanctions "would have a serious adverse effect on vital United States interests." This allows the President limited leeway, but requires that a very tough standard be met.

Mr. President, our recent experience with Iraq, the unsettled situation in the former Soviet Union, and the continued activities in maverick states elsewhere, taken together, make a compelling case for enactment of this legislation. I fear that failure to enact this legislation could lead to a very heavy price later.

With regard to Iraq, we have found in the war's aftermath that Iraq had a clandestine weapons program far greater than any outsider suspected. This effort was willfully supported by exports by companies in Western nations not being regulated adequately by their governments. The International Atomic Energy Agency did not have the backing to inspect comprehensively, including inspections at undeclared facilities, and was, thus, ill-informed as to the scope of the program, and it, unfortunately, became the issuer of false reassurances.

According to testimony in October 1991 before the Committee on Foreign Relations, Dr. David Kay, the Deputy

Leader of the IAEA inspection team, his group discovered:

A large number of key centrifuge components at two sites that, if assembled, could have produced about 25 kilograms of high-enriched uranium—about one bomb's worth each year. There would have been more components found, but the Iraqi military destroyed a large number of the centrifuges in an apparent attempt to destroy the evidence.

Small amounts of plutonium from unreported and unsafe guarded reprocessing.

Many calutrons—an improved version of the World War II technology—for separating uranium-235 by electromagnetic means.

Some work on chemical and "nozzle" enrichment techniques.

Work on lithium-six for possible use in thermonuclear weapons.

Indications that Iraq's Scud-type ballistic missiles were being developed to deliver nuclear weapons at ranges of about 700 kilometers.

A high-explosive facility at Al-Atheer which was most likely part of a nuclear weapons program.

Numerous nuclear weapons documents showing that Iraq was moving toward development of uranium and hydrogen nuclear weapons. It is suspected that some of the most sensitive and revealing documents may have been removed or burned.

Evidence that foreign companies knowingly sold materials for the nuclear weapons programs.

About 40 krytrons, specially developed capacitors for initiating nuclear explosions, were illicitly exported to Iraq, but intercepted during their journey to Iraq.

Evidence that about $4-$8 billion was spent on the secret nuclear program, which employed some 7,000 scientists and 20,000 workers.

The report of the eighth IAEA onsite inspection in Iraq gave the names of a few of the companies—13 were listed—that had sold equipment destined for the Iraqi nuclear program. Much of this equipment is dual-use in the sense that it could be used for nuclear or nonnuclear purposes, but there is no doubt about its intended use in Iraq. Products from eight of the companies were used for the manufacture of gaseous centrifuges. Most of the manufacturers were German firms. One named American firm pointed out that it was given an export license to ship a special vacuum pump oil by the U.S. Government. Several other firms provided equipment that appears to have been intended for pressing shaped explosive charges for use in nuclear weapons. Also two special video cameras, known as streak cameras, were found which were of "sufficient speed and resolution for weaponization work."

Moreover the German Government determined that some 400 tons of aluminum alloy pieces especially designed for use in building centrifuges had been sold by German firms to Iraq. Reportedly, there was enough material for centrifuges capable of producing the nuclear explosive materials for 4 or 5 weapons each year. On January 14, Iraq admitted buying large amounts of components for a previously unknown uranium enrichment complex.

These are precisely the kinds of equipment transfers—with and without export licenses—this legislation is designed to stop.

At this present time, many of these issues remain unresolved in Iraq. The United Nations and the IAEA have destroyed all centrifuge parts it could find, but they have been denied the locations of the additional Iraqi nuclear facilities where they would continue to destroy the Iraqi nuclear equipment. Experts hope that Iraq will, after being threatened with possible further air attacks, yield on the issue and tell where the additional sites are.

Mr. President, there is tremendous potential for difficulty in the former Soviet Union. The administration is pressing the four Republics with nuclear weapons on their soil to resolve a number of nuclear issues in connection with the START Treaty. The United States is working with them on the matter of dismantling and storing thousands of tactical nuclear warheads. We expect that, under START, at least several thousand strategic nuclear warheads will be taken out of the active forces. I would hope we can have an early agreement on much deeper cuts and make arrangements for the destruction of those warheads removed from inventory.

If all goes well, three of the four Republics—Ukraine, Belarus, and Kazakhstan—will become nonnuclear-weapon states party to the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty. Although there remain a number of issues to be resolved, I believe that the way can be opened to this very positive step.

For the nonce, there are very real concerns to be dealt with. For instance, there are 104 SS-18 missiles in Kazakhstan, with a total of 1,040 attributable warheads, each one many times more powerful than the weapons that destroyed Hiroshima and Nagasaki. The diversion of a single one of these warheads would be a disaster. Only its use would be worse.

In addition, we must be alert to the dangers that would be posed if Soviet scientists or design information were to become available to any nation making its own nuclear warhead.

This bill would put necessary safeguards in place. It would make it clear to unscrupulous companies and maverick states throughout the world that the price for nuclear misbehavior has become very high. It would make it unquestionably clear to those seeking good relations and our support that good behavior with regard to nuclear weapons is an imperative. Finally, the bill will set an example for nuclear weapon control that other nations will be impelled to follow.

Mr. President, in closing, I would like to extend my heartiest congratulations for a job done both thoroughly and well by the Senator from Ohio [Mr. GLENN]. It has been a pleasure working with him on this bill. He was a most productive member of the Committee on Foreign Relations until moving to the Committee on Armed Services in the mid-1980's. No one in the Senate has a better grasp of the problems involved in nuclear proliferation and potential solutions to those problems.

Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, I am pleased to support S. 1128 which is being considered for final passage today. The Congress has already passed, and the President has signed, sanctions against those who would sell chemical and biological weapons, and the ballistic missile systems to deliver them.

That is why it is so important to extend this system of sanctions to those who would spread the ultimate weapon, nuclear, to those who may use it. And that is why I joined with the distinguished Senator from Ohio [Mr. GLENN] as an original cosponsor of this very vital legislation.

One part of this legislation needs some explanation—the sanctions on international banking institutions which further nuclear proliferation. Quite frankly, this legislation developed out of the BCCI hearings held by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee in the summer of 1991.

As Time magazine reported in its September 2, 1991, issue, "BCCI is functioning as the owners' representative for Pakistan's nuclear bomb project."

Our interest in the role of international banking institutions was heightened on October 17, 1991, when Mr. David Kay, then deputy head of the U.N.'s Iraq inspection team, confirmed to the distinguished Senator from Colorado [Mr. BROWN] that the International Atomic Energy Agency is pursuing leads on international institutions that provided guarantees of Iraq's ability to pay key suppliers. This exchange occurred during a hearing before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

The sanctions we are proposing on international financial institutions are severe but the issue is critical. Without the facilities of the banks, this nuclear trade cannot take place. Let us be clear: The intention of this Senator is to stop this trade immediately.

The sanctions are triggered by a Presidential determination that a financial institution has materially and knowingly contributed to the acquisition of a nuclear explosive device by any nation. Once that determination is made, the financial institution in question is banned from engaging in dealings in government finance or expansion of operations in the United States. The prohibitions apply to U.S. and foreign institutions which meet the President's determination.

These are severe sanctions, not a mere slap on the wrist. As a practical matter, any financial institution hit with this sort of Presidential determination and sanctions would be in deep trouble. Whether it could continue to operate would be questionable, certainly not in its present form.

But, I repeat, these sanctions are intended to be severe. Nuclear weapons in the hands of the antidemocratic regimes of the Middle East are clearly the most significant threat to national security in this decade and beyond.

Mr. President, I urge the passage of the bill.

Mr. GLENN. On January 21, 1983, President Reagan stated: "I think that we're pretty well on our way to, if not entirely eliminating nuclear proliferation, holding it down to where a country might have a weapon or two, but they're not going to have enough to threaten the world."

Eight years later—to the very day—morning readers of the Washington Post and the New York Times were greeted with the following headlines: "U.S. Claims Iraqi Nuclear Reactors Hit Hard" and "U.S. Claims Hits on Iraqi Nuclear and Gas Sites." Literally overnight, we were living in a different world—a nightmarish world, marked by new evidence that Saddam Hussein may even have been pursuing a hydrogen bomb.

While Iraq's nuclear threat to the world has been checked—at least for now—the job of tightening international controls against the global spread of nuclear weapons has only just begun. I am not, however, here today to lecture on the dangers of nuclear proliferation to our national security—I am here instead to address a new, bipartisan plan of action to combat this threat.

I introduced the legislation now before us, the Omnibus Nuclear Proliferation Control Act of 1992 (S. 1128), on May 22 of last year; it has since been the focus of a hearing of the Foreign Relations Committee on October 17 and was unanimously approved by the committee in markup on November 22. This bill largely parallels sanctions that have recently been enacted to halt the proliferation of chemical and biological weapons and missiles. In particular, S. 1128 requires the President to ban U.S. Government procurements from firms that the President determines have, after enactment of this act, knowingly and materially assisted any nation or group to acquire either a nuclear explosive device or unsafeguarded bomb material.

A committee amendment to the bill also directs the President to apply sanctions against banks, insurers, or other financial institutions that he determines have knowingly assisted non-nuclear-weapon states to acquire any such devices or the special nuclear material needed to make them.

Like the existing CBW sanctions legislation (Public Law 102-138) and missile sanctions legislations (Public Law 101-510), my bill would give the President the authority to trigger sanctions; the President would also be given time to consult with foreign governments before implementing the sanctions. The bill grants the President authority to waive any sanctions against exporters after 1 year, upon certification that a specific sanction would have a serious adverse effect on vital U.S. interests, and other waiver authority for certain types of transfers and banking activities.

THE SUPPLY SIDE OF PROLIFERATION

All of these recent sanctions bills are designed to target what I call the supply side of proliferation—they recognize that proliferation cannot be attacked by only looking at countries that are secretly building bombs; instead, we need to attack the actual incentives that motivate suppliers to meet corrupt demands from around the world. With the enactment of this legislation, illicit nuclear suppliers will be put on notice: if you knowingly sell to such a program, you can forget about doing business with Uncle Sam.

Because nuclear weapons pose an especially grave threat to our security, the global spread of such weapons is a problem that will continue to demand a higher priority on our national security agenda. The immediate and long-term effects of H-bombs are quite unlike the effects of chemical or biological weapons. For these reasons, I have included features in this bill that go beyond those found in recent legislation found in chemical and biological weapons proliferation:

First, the Eximbank and U.S. directors in multilateral funding agencies would be required to oppose any loans that would promote the acquisition of unsafeguarded nuclear material or the development of nuclear explosive devices.

Second, the bill expands the President's powers under the International Emergency Economic Powers Act to impose additional wide-ranging economic sanctions against firms or individuals that engage in illicit nuclear commerce.

Third, nuclear sanctions under the Foreign Assistance Act would be expanded to cover transfers of critical design information and key components of nuclear explosive devices; under existing law, sanctions would only apply if there were a transfer of an actual nuclear explosive device.

Fourth, recipients of U.S. arms exports would have to live up to their commitments to the United States with respect to nuclear nonproliferation.

Fifth, the Secretary of State would be authorized to pay rewards for information relating to any illicit acquisition of unsafeguarded nuclear material or nuclear explosive devices. At present, such authority only exists for information relating to terrorism.

The bill would also establish two reporting requirements: an annual report assessing the compliance of other nations with their nuclear nonproliferation commitments to the United States, and a requirement for Congress to be kept fully and currently informed about demarches that America has issued or received concerning the global spread of nuclear weapons.

Anybody who thinks there is no need for a reporting requirement on demarches, should recall the remark of a German export control official who was quoted in the European press saying that past United States demarches usually land in my wastepaper basket.

LESSONS FROM DEGUSSA AND LEYBOLD

I do not mean to focus only on Germany here, since the German Government has recently taken some noteworthy steps to crack down on illicit nuclear and missile-related exports. Last September, for example, German officials seized a special furnace on its way to Libya; this furnace, which had potential uses in manufacturing missile parts, was made by Leybold, a subsidiary of the giant industrial firm, Degussa.

Mr. President, I will ask unanimous consent to insert into the RECORD at the end of my remarks a table showing the numerous published reports of nuclear and missile-related exports by Degussa and Leybold to hot spots around the world over the last decade. Given that these firms do business in the United States, including with the U.S. Government, I believe enactment of my bill would serve as a useful deterrent to these types of deals in the future. Indeed, I have recently seen some signs that these particular firms are already moving to tighten up their internal controls on the export of sensitive dual-use goods and technology.

I would like to take just a moment to illustrate what I hope will be a coming trend among companies around the world that export dangerous weapon-related technologies. On October 10, 1991—in response to serious allegations about exports by Degussa and Leybold of sensitive dual-use goods to nations in the Middle East, South Asia, and East Asia—I wrote to Secretary of Defense Cheney and urged his department to investigate these claims. On April 1 of this year, I received a response from Mr. William Rudman, the Deputy Under Secretary for Trade Security Policy, which indicated that the Defense Department believes that, and I quote:

Leybold and its parent Degussa may have provided, without authorization, critical manufacturing technology, as well as production technology associated with nuclear weapons and missile development, to certain countries including Iraq, India, Pakistan, North Korea, and Romania.

Mr. President, I will also ask unanimous consent to insert into the RECORD the full text of the letters of October 10 and April 1.

Although the Defense investigation is not yet complete, and United States and German Customs authorities are coordinating their efforts in this case, I am pleased to announce today that Leybold is finally taking some concrete steps to tighten proliferation controls.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to insert into the RECORD a document called "Corporate Principles Governing Internal Export Controls on Nuclear Nonproliferation," which was issued last month by Leybold to its domestic and foreign affiliates. According to this document, the executive board of Leybold "both unequivocally and emphatically * * * affirms the policy of nonproliferation regarding nuclear weapons and nuclear-capable delivery systems." Moreover, the firm has now established a policy under which it will not in the future export any commodity—even if such an export is legally permitted—if the firm knows or has reason to believe that any such item will be used for the development or production of nuclear weapons or their means of delivery.

Moving somewhat beyond a mere statement of policy, the firm has also instituted a new system of forms and checklists to put the new policy into practice. The top officials of the firm have also been recently replaced.

Although I remain deeply concerned about past transactions of this firm, I believe the new reforms are important steps in the right direction—steps, I might add, that many other firms in Germany and in other nations, including our own, would do well to follow and implement. The world community will be watching to see if Leybold's reforms are meant to be something more than a public relations exercise. Fortunately, the bill before us today will help to ensure that firms around the world will take seriously America's commitment to halting illicit nuclear deals. The bill's message could not be more clear and direct: Proliferation must not pay.

AMENDMENTS BY FOREIGN RELATIONS COMMITTEE

Mr. President, this bill contains some substantive amendments proposed by the chairman and ranking member of the Foreign Relations Committee; these amendments have been prepared as a result of consultations with the committees on Banking and Governmental Affairs and with the administration. I wish today to state my support for each of these recommended changes to the original bill.

First, banks, financial institutions, and insurers have been included within the scope of persons subject to the possible sanctions of this act. I can see no reason why any such organization that the President has determined to have knowingly bankrolled the proliferation of nuclear weapons should not be subject to the same type of penalties than would apply to an illicit supplier of sensitive equipment or materials to countries developing such weapons.

The second amendment deletes import sanctions from the current bill—this is being done only to permit the House to take up this issue as an original House bill, as consistent with House rules with respect to legislation affecting public revenues. This procedure has been followed with respect to import sanctions for CBW proliferation and should not, therefore, be seen as any weakening of the proposed nuclear sanctions. I fully expect to see these import sanctions introduced in the House.

Third, the committee amendment grants the President authority to waive sanctions in the event of transfers of certain types of components or designs related to the development or manufacture of nuclear explosive devices—this authority, however, would not extend to transfers of critical components or design information necessary to complete any such device. Instead, transfers of such critical bomb parts or design information to a non-nuclear-weapon state would be treated under U.S. sanctions law as equivalent to the transfer of an actual device. In its committee markup of this bill last November, the full committee expanded the sanctions for these particularly dangerous transfers to include the loss not just of foreign and military aid, but also bank loans, multilateral funding, U.S. credits, and other sanctions.

Fourth, instead of a one-time Executive report on the effectiveness of diplomatic demarches as an instrument of nonproliferation, the committee amendment contains a sense of the Congress that such information should be a regular part of the briefings provided by executive agencies pursuant to the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Act.

Fifth, the committee amendment clarifies the meaning of the requisite knowledge needed by a firm to trigger sanctions. The standard adopted by the committee combines the definition of "knowing" as it is used in the Foreign Corrupt Practices Act—a definition that includes actual knowledge in addition to willful neglect, or what is called head-in-the-sand behavior—with the reason to know standard that has been used over the last decade to regulate U.S. nuclear exports.

Mr. President, the reforms I have proposed will surely not eliminate once and for all the threat of nuclear proliferation—their enactment, however, will herald a new and constructive phase in the evolution of America's efforts to halt the global spread of nuclear weapons. I am pleased to see that my proposal enjoys substantial support in the Senate, and finally, in the administration as well.

In particular, I wish to express my deep appreciation for the work of the distinguished chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, my friend and colleague from Rhode Island, CLAIRBORNE PELL. Under his leadership, Senator PELL has forged a bipartisan coalition of members committed to the goal of tightening penalties against companies that promote the global spread of chemical weapons, biological weapons, and missiles. Anyone who looks over the legislative record of the Foreign Relations Committee over the last 2 years in the field of sanctions against proliferation cannot help but be impressed and Senator PELL deserves full credit for this progress. My legislation today builds on that record by extending these reforms into the area of nuclear proliferation.

In closing, I would also like to express my appreciation to the majority and minority staff members of the Foreign Relations Committee who have assisted in the legislative process of bringing this bill to the floor for tonight's vote. Nuclear proliferation is one problem that will, to be sure, require a strong bipartisan effort and I am pleased to see such a consensus tonight. I now look forward to working with my colleagues in the House and with the administration to ensure the early enactment of this legislation.

In closing, Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to insert into the RECORD the table, the letters, and a Department of Energy letter providing some background on the term nuclear explosive device.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

U.S. SENATE,
 COMMITTEE ON GOVERNMENTAL AFFAIRS,
 Washington, DC, October 10, 1991.
 Hon. DICK CHENRY,
 Secretary, Department of Defense, The Pentagon,
 Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. SECRETARY: I have noticed several articles that have recently appeared in the European press containing allegations of illicit exports by the German firm, Leybold, a subsidiary of Degussa, to Libya and (over recent months) to other nations in the Middle East and South Asia. Through its oversight responsibilities under the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Act of 1978, the Committee has long been aware of similar claims against other European companies, but the most recent reports are especially troubling because of the long history of allegations about these two specific firms.

Degussa and/or Leybold, for example, have reportedly: sold special high-temperature furnaces with potential nuclear or missile uses to Pakistan and Iraq; reexported without authorization U.S.-origin beryllium to India and zirconium to North Korea; sold high-vacuum equipment and fuel fabrication equipment to Pakistan's clandestine nuclear weapons program; and most recently, sold equipment described by Der Spiegel (September 11, 1991) as a "vacuum induction annealing and smelting furnace" to Libya (a shipment was halted by customs officials).

I strongly urge you to direct the Defense Technology Security Administration (DTSA) and such other offices as you deem appropriate to investigate these most recent claims about new sales by Degussa and Leybold. In addition, I would be most grateful if you could please arrange for my staff to receive a preliminary briefing before Tuesday October 15, on the activities of these firms with respect to foreign sales of technology or equipment related to the production of nuclear weapons, missiles, or chemical and biological weapons, and on any enforcement steps that have been taken by the German government against such transactions. If possible on such short notice, I would also appreciate a brief summary of the extent to which Degussa and Leybold market their products in the United States and engage in business with the U.S. government.

You have my continuing support in your efforts to halt all illicit transfers of weapons-related technology and I am very grateful for your assistance in responding to my request today.

Sincerely,

JOHN GLENN,
 Chairman.

OFFICE OF THE
 UNDER SECRETARY OF DEFENSE,
 Washington, DC, April 1, 1992.

Hon. JOHN GLENN,
 U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR GLENN: This is a follow-up response to your 10 October 1991 letter to the Secretary of Defense inquiring about the possible illegal exports by the German firms Leybold AG and its parent Degussa AG to certain countries of concern. Our response also updates our interim briefing to your staff.

Based on our review to date, it appears that Leybold and its parent Degussa may have provided, without authorization, critical manufacturing technology, as well as production technology associated with nuclear weapons and missile development, to certain countries including Iraq, India, Pakistan, North Korea, and Romania. Based on our inquiries, German authorities have initiated investigations into various alleged activities by Leybold and Degussa.

Current information also indicates that the U.S. subsidiary of Leybold exported controlled U.S.-origin technology to Iraq. At the request of the Department of Defense, the U.S. Customs Service, in cooperation with the Department of Commerce, has initiated an investigation of Leybold's U.S. subsidiary. This investigation centers around a 1988 export of an electron beam welder (EBW) to Germany for reexport to Iraq. The EBW is critical in welding components of gas centrifuges used in uranium enrichment.

In the course of our review, we became aware of the integration of a specially designed component into the EBW. The addition of this component left little doubt as to the EBW's direct end-use in support of Iraq's nuclear weapons development program.

The International Atomic Energy Agency has confirmed that this electron beam welder was found in the vicinity of an Iraq-identified centrifuge manufacturing facility, that it came from Leybold, and that it contained the specially designed component. It is impossible that the integration of this component occurred in Germany prior to transshipment to Iraq. For this reason U.S. and German Customs are coordinating their investigations in this case.

It should be noted that the EBW was granted a U.S. license for shipment to Germany for reexport to Iraq subject to restrictions against sensitive nuclear end uses. It is not clear whether the fact that a license was issued will affect the U.S. Attorney's Office decision on whether to prosecute the case if a violation is found. Final results of these investigations will be known in the near future.

As a result of the concerns raised by our analysis, elements of the Department of Defense, for which Leybold is a contractor, are reviewing this information for possible suspension or debarment sanctions.

Sincerely,

WILLIAM N. RUDMAN,
 Deputy Under Secretary,
 Trade Security Policy.

CORPORATE PRINCIPLES GOVERNING INTERNAL EXPORT CONTROLS ON NUCLEAR NON-PROLIFERATION

As a result of global political developments which have occurred since the late 1980s, exports of certain goods—especially those of a highly technical or military nature—have acquired a special significance. Further, because of the possible misuse of some of those products—in particular, so-called "dual-use" items—the relevant export control regulations have been expanded and strengthened. This development has had an especially strong impact on Germany's export-oriented industry.

Leybold AG is primarily active in the area of vacuum technology, vacuum metallurgy and vacuum coating. The company neither manufactures weapons nor any other category of military equipment. Nonetheless, the company has developed and does produce certain types of state-of-the-art equipment and advanced technology, which, in today's complex, industrialized world, could be regarded as so-called "dual-use" items.

With the benefit of the experience gained in the last few years—particularly as a result of the Gulf War—and in recognition of its responsibility, the Executive Board of Leybold AG has resolved as follows:

1. Leybold AG's Executive Board affirms its unequivocal and emphatic support for the policies regarding the non-proliferation of nuclear weapons and nuclear-capable delivery systems.

2. Leybold AG and its worldwide subsidiaries endorse and adhere to the export controls established by the Federal Republic of Germany and its allies—in particular, the United States of America—for the purpose of achieving the goal of an effective nuclear non-proliferation policy.

3. All Leybold employees will actively assist in the achievement of this corporate goal.

In particular, Leybold employees involved in the export of the company's commodities, technology or services will be familiar with, and strictly abide by, all applicable provisions of national and foreign export control laws and regulations.

4. Leybold attaches clear-cut and unambiguous priority to the goal of non-proliferation of nuclear weapons and their delivery systems over commercial interests. In practice, this means that even if a particular export transaction is legal, Leybold—in accordance with its corporate policy of voluntary self-restraint in export matters—will neither directly nor indirectly supply commodities, technology or services if the company knows or has reason to believe that such items will be used by its customer or end-user for the development or production of nuclear weapons or nuclear-capable delivery systems. This policy applies to customers and end-users from non-nuclear weapons countries, as set forth in the Treaty of the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons, if these countries: are not signatories to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons, or have not renounced the possession, acquisition and production of nuclear weapons by other acts binding under international law, or do not have in place full-scope safeguards in accordance with International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) requirements, or if there is any doubt about their implementation, or if these countries are classified as "sensitive" for other reasons.

5. This policy applies to domestic transactions as well, if Leybold knows or has reason to believe that its products are to be diverted to such countries for sensitive projects.

6. In order to ascertain which countries should be regarded as sensitive for the purpose of this policy, Leybold will establish and maintain contact with all responsible federal agencies, i.e., the Foreign Office (Auswartiges Amt), the Ministry of Economics (Bundesministerium fur Wirtschaft) and the Federal Export Control Authority (Bundesamt fur Wirtschaft).

7. In the event of any doubt, the responsible federal agencies will immediately be asked for information and advice. Likewise, if an item is subject to U.S. jurisdiction due to its specific nature (e.g., intermediate products or components from a U.S. source) the U.S. Department of Commerce will be approached for information and counsel.

In the event of any continuing concern regarding the end-use of items to be exported, Leybold AG will not conclude the transaction.

8. This policy applies to all divisions and subsidiaries of Leybold AG worldwide. The principles incorporated herein are to be immediately implemented within the framework of Leybold's existing internal export compliance program. This policy will continuously be reviewed and audited. The Executive Board will ensure that the management of all German and foreign subsidiaries will implement this policy by adopting appropriate export control procedures.

DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY,
Washington, DC, February 21, 1990.

Dr. LEONARD WEISS,
Staff Director, Committee on Governmental Affairs,
United States Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR DR. WEISS: This is in reply to your letters, dated June 29, 1989, to Siegfried Hecker, Director of Los Alamos National Laboratory and John Nuckolls, Director of Lawrence Livermore National Laboratory, concerning certain types of experiments involving high explosives and nuclear materials, often called "hydronuclear" experiments.

We have enclosed a copy of a Los Alamos National Laboratory report, LA-10902-MS, "Hydronuclear Experiments" by Robert N. Thorn and Donald R. Westervelt, issued February 1987, that provides useful background on these nuclear weapons safety-related experiments. In your letters, you asked several questions concerning the nature of these experiments. Although more complete information is contained in the enclosed report, for your convenience, we have answered your specific questions below:

1. How does the laboratory define: (a) a nuclear explosive device and (b) a nuclear explosion? Please specify.

Answer: With regard to the first part of your question, a nuclear explosive device is a device intended to produce a nuclear explosion. The second part of your question (what is a nuclear explosion?) is much more difficult. In fact, no official or generally agreed to definition exists, despite the efforts of many individuals and groups over the years. One possible definition is given in the enclosed report: a nuclear explosion occurs when the energy released in a unit mass of fuel due to nuclear reactions is equal in magnitude to that from a chemical explosive. The report indicates that president Eisenhower agreed that one of these hydronuclear experiments, delivering a total nuclear yield equivalent to less than one pound of high explosives, would not be considered a nuclear explosion. Another potential definition can be derived from the nuclear weapon safety community composed of design and utilization experts from the Department of Energy and its contractors and the Department of Defense. In that context, the nuclear safety criteria states that the nuclear energy release in an accidental detonation of a nuclear weapon should not exceed the equivalent of four pounds of high explosive energy with a probability of one in a million or less. This implies that a nuclear explosion occurs when the nuclear energy release from a detonation exceeds the equivalent of four pounds of high explosive energy.

2. When does a hydronuclear experiment become a nuclear explosion or test of a nuclear explosive device?

Answer: Consistent with the discussion in the enclosed report, if nuclear material were gradually added to one of these test devices and the amount of nuclear energy generated exceeded the equivalent of one pound of high explosive energy, a "nuclear explosion" could be said to have occurred. As indicated in the report, the greatest nuclear output of the nuclear safety experiments conducted in the early sixties was equivalent to about 4/10 of a pound of high explosive.

Hydronuclear experiments have sometimes been loosely referred to as tests of nuclear explosive devices. In fact, they are not since the devices employed are not intended to produce a nuclear explosion.

3. Are high explosive tests involving fissile nuclear materials ever performed for civil research purposes?

Answer: Yes. Through the years, experiments have been conducted involving high explosives to obtain data on the physical properties of fissile materials under dynamic conditions. Some of these have been discussed in the open literature; e.g., those relating to nuclear reactor accident studies. Such data, of course, could have both civilian and military applicability.

4. Are hydronuclear tests still being performed by the United States? On the basis of unclassified technical publications or other open sources, are such tests now being performed by other nations? If so, which nations?

Answer: Hydronuclear experiments such as those described in the report are not now being conducted by the United States. Our Nevada Test Site program incorporates nuclear weapon safety-related experimentation that replaces and extends the capabilities of these previous laboratory tests.

We are not aware of any current open-literature publication of similar experiments by other nations. The experiments conducted in the early 60's by the U.S. were performed to assess the detailed safety margins of specific nuclear weapons in our stockpile. If comparable experiments were being conducted by other nations, we wouldn't necessarily expect them to be openly discussed.

I hope the enclosed report and the above answers are useful to you.

Sincerely,

J.M. BARR,
Rear Admiral, U.S. Navy.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill is open to further amendment. If there be no further amendment to be proposed, the question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, was read the third time, and passed, as follows:

S. 1128

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Omnibus Nuclear Proliferation Control Act of 1992".

SEC. 2. IMPOSITION OF SANCTIONS.

(a) DETERMINATION BY THE PRESIDENT.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in subsection (b)(2), the President shall impose the applicable sanctions described in subsection (c) if the President determines that a foreign person or a United States person, on or after the date of the enactment of this section, has materially and with requisite knowledge contributed—

(A) through the export from the United States of any goods or technology that are subject to the jurisdiction of the United States, or

(B) through the export from any other country of any goods or technology that would be, if they were exported from the United States, subject to the jurisdiction of the United States, to the efforts by any individual, group, or non-nuclear-weapon state to acquire unsafeguarded special nuclear material or to use, develop, produce, stockpile, or otherwise acquire any nuclear explosive device, whether or not the goods or technology is specifically designed or modified for that purpose.

(2) PERSONS AGAINST WHICH SANCTIONS ARE TO BE IMPOSED.—Sanctions shall be imposed pursuant to paragraph (1) on—

(A) the foreign person or United States person with respect to which the President makes the determination described in that paragraph;

(B) any successor entity to that foreign person or United States person;

(C) any foreign person or United States person that is a parent or subsidiary of that person if that parent or subsidiary materially and with requisite knowledge assisted in the activities which were the basis of that determination; and

(D) any foreign person or United States person that is an affiliate of that person if that affiliate materially and with requisite knowledge assisted in the activities which were the basis of that determination and if that affiliate is controlled in fact by that foreign person.

(3) OTHER SANCTIONS AVAILABLE.—The sanctions which may be imposed for activities described in this subsection are in addition to any other sanction which may be imposed for the same activities under any other provision of law.

(4) DEFINITION.—For purposes of this subsection, the term "requisite knowledge" includes situations in which a person "knows", as "knowing" is defined in section 104 of the Foreign Corrupt Practices Act of 1977 (15 U.S.C. 78dd-2) or has "reason to know" the effect of such person's actions.

(b) CONSULTATION WITH AND ACTIONS BY FOREIGN GOVERNMENT OF JURISDICTION.—

(1) CONSULTATIONS.—If the President makes the determinations described in subsection (a)(1) with respect to a foreign person, the Congress urges the President to initiate consultations immediately with the government with primary jurisdiction over that foreign person with respect to the imposition of sanctions pursuant to this section.

(2) ACTIONS BY GOVERNMENT OF JURISDICTION.—In order to pursue such consultations with that government, the President may delay imposition of sanctions pursuant to this section for up to 90 days. Following these consultations, the President shall impose sanctions unless the President determines and certifies to the Congress that that government has taken specific and effective actions, including appropriate penalties, to terminate the involvement of the foreign person in the activities described in subsection (a)(1). The President may delay the imposition of sanctions for up to an additional 90 days if the President determines and certifies to the Congress that that government is in the process of taking the actions described in the previous sentence.

(3) REPORT TO CONGRESS.—Not later than 90 days after making a determination under subsection (a)(1), the President shall submit to the Committee on Foreign Relations and the Committee on Governmental Affairs of the Senate and the Committee on Foreign Affairs of the House of Representatives a report on the status of consultations with the appropriate government under this subsection, and the basis for any determination under paragraph (2) of this subsection that such government has taken specific corrective actions.

(c) SANCTIONS.—

(1) DESCRIPTION OF SANCTIONS.—The sanctions to be imposed pursuant to subsection (a)(1) are, except as provided in paragraph (3) of this subsection, that the United States Government shall not procure, or enter into any contract for the procurement of, any goods or services from any person described in subsection (a)(2).

(2) DESCRIPTION OF SANCTIONS ON UNITED STATES PERSONS.—The United States Government shall not procure, or enter into any contract for the procurement of, any goods or services from the United States person or any parent, subsidiary, affiliate, or successor entity thereof, as described in subsection (a)(2).

(3) EXCEPTIONS.—The President shall not be required to apply or maintain sanctions under this section—

(A) in the case of procurement of defense articles or defense services—

(i) under existing contracts or subcontracts, including the exercise of options for production quantities to satisfy United States operational military requirements;

(ii) if the President determines that the person or other entity to which the sanctions would otherwise be applied is a sole source supplier of the defense articles or services, that the defense articles or services are essential, and that alternative sources are not readily or reasonably available; or

(iii) if the President determines that such articles or services are essential to the national security under defense coproduction agreements;

(B) to products or services provided under contracts entered into before the date on which the President publishes his intention to impose sanctions;

(C) to—

(i) spare parts which are essential to United States products or production,

(ii) component parts, but not finished products, essential to United States products or production, or

(iii) routine servicing and maintenance of products, to the extent that alternative sources are not readily or reasonably available;

(D) to information and technology essential to United States products or production; or

(E) to medical or other humanitarian items.

(d) TERMINATION OF SANCTIONS.—The sanctions imposed pursuant to this section shall apply for a period of at least 12 months following the imposition of sanctions and shall cease to apply thereafter only if the President determines and certifies to the Congress that—

(1) reliable information indicates that the foreign person or United States person with respect to which the determination was made under subsection (a)(1) has ceased to aid or abet any individual, group, or non-nuclear-weapon state in its efforts to acquire unsafeguarded special nuclear material or any nuclear explosive device, as described in that subsection; and

(2) the President has received reliable assurances from the foreign person or United States person, as the case may be, that such person will not, in the future, aid or abet any individual, group, or non-nuclear-weapon state in its efforts to acquire unsafeguarded special nuclear material or any nuclear explosive device, as described in subsection (a)(1).

(1) CRITERION FOR WAIVER.—The President may waive the application of any sanction imposed on any person pursuant to this section, after the end of the 12-month period beginning on the date on which that sanction was imposed on that person, if the President determines and certifies to the Congress that the continued imposition of the sanction would have a serious adverse effect on vital United States interests.

(2) NOTIFICATION OF AND REPORT TO CONGRESS.—If the President decides to exercise the waiver authority provided in paragraph (1), the President shall so notify the Congress not less than 20 days before the waiver takes effect. Such notification shall include a report fully articulating the rationale and circumstances which led the President to exercise the waiver authority.

(f) DEFINITIONS.—For the purposes of this section—

(1) the term "foreign person" means—

(A) an individual who is not a citizen of the United States or an alien admitted for permanent residence to the United States; or

(B) a corporation, partnership, or other entity which is created or organized under the laws of a foreign country or which has its principal place of business outside the United States; and

(2) the term "United States person" means—

(A) an individual who is a citizen of the United States or an alien admitted for permanent residence to the United States; or

(B) a corporation, partnership, or other entity which is not a foreign person.

SEC. 3. ROLE OF INTERNATIONAL FINANCIAL INSTITUTIONS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary of the Treasury shall instruct the United States executive director to each of the international financial institutions described in section 701(a) of the International Financial Institutions Act (22 U.S.C. 262d(a)) to use the voice and vote of the United States to oppose any direct or indirect use of the institution's funds to promote the acquisition of unsafeguarded special nuclear material or the development, stockpiling, or use of any nuclear explosive device by any non-nuclear-weapon state.

(b) DUTIES OF UNITED STATES EXECUTIVE DIRECTORS.—Section 701(b)(3) of the International Financial Institutions Act (22 U.S.C. 262d(b)(3)) is amended to read as follows:

"(3) whether the recipient country—

"(A) is seeking to acquire unsafeguarded special nuclear material (as defined in section 11(6) of the Omnibus Nuclear Proliferation Control Act of 1992) or a nuclear explosive device (as defined in section 11(3) of that Act);

"(B) is not a State Party to the Treaty on Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons; or

"(C) has detonated a nuclear explosive device; and"

SEC. 4. AMENDMENTS TO THE INTERNATIONAL EMERGENCY ECONOMIC POWERS ACT AND THE FEDERAL DEPOSIT INSURANCE CORPORATION IMPROVEMENT ACT OF 1991.

(a) BASIS FOR DECLARATION OF NATIONAL EMERGENCY.—Section 202 of the International Emergency Economic Powers Act (50 U.S.C. 1701) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(c) For the purpose of this section, the term 'any unusual and extraordinary threat' includes any international event that the President determines may involve the detonation by a non-nuclear-weapon state of a nuclear explosive device (as defined in section 11(3) of the Omnibus Nuclear Proliferation Control Act of 1992) or an action or activity that substantially contributes to the likelihood of the proliferation or detonation of such devices, including the acquisition by a non-nuclear-weapon state of unsafeguarded special nuclear material (as defined in section 11(6) of that Act)."

(b) SANCTIONS ON FINANCIAL INSTITUTIONS.—The Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation Improvement Act of 1991 is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new title:

"TITLE VI—SANCTIONS ON FINANCIAL INSTITUTIONS

"SEC. 601. PRESIDENTIAL DETERMINATION.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—The prohibitions in section 603 shall be imposed on a financial institution if the President determines that such financial institution, on or after the date of the enactment of this section, has materially and with requisite knowledge contributed, through provision of financing or other services, to the efforts by any individual, group, or non-nuclear-weapon state to acquire unsafeguarded special nuclear material or to use, develop, produce, stockpile, or otherwise acquire any nuclear explosive device as these standards and terms are defined and would be applied under section 2 of the Omnibus Nuclear Proliferation Control Act of 1992.

"(b) PRESIDENTIAL ORDER.—Whenever the President makes a determination under subsection (a) with respect to a financial institution, the President shall issue an order specifying a date within 180 days of such determination on which the prohibitions in section 603 shall begin to apply to such institution.

"SEC. 602. ADDITIONAL ENTITIES AGAINST WHICH SANCTIONS ARE TO BE IMPOSED.

"The prohibitions described in section 603 shall also be imposed, pursuant to section 601, on—

"(1) any successor entity to the financial institution with respect to which the President makes such determination;

"(2) any foreign person or United States person that is a parent or subsidiary of such financial institution if that parent or subsidiary materially and with requisite knowledge assisted in the activities which were the basis of such determination; and

"(3) any foreign person or United States person that is an affiliate of such financial institution if that affiliate materially and with requisite knowledge assisted in the activities which were the basis of such determination and if that affiliate is controlled in fact by such financial institution.

"SEC. 603. PROHIBITIONS.

"The following prohibitions shall apply to a financial institution subject to a determination described in section 601 and to related entities described in section 602:

"(1) BAN ON DEALINGS IN GOVERNMENT FINANCE.—

"(A) DESIGNATION AS PRIMARY DEALER.—Neither the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System nor the Federal Reserve Bank of New York may designate, or permit the continuation of any prior designation of, such financial institution as a primary dealer in United States Government debt instruments.

"(B) GOVERNMENT FUNDS.—Such financial institution shall not serve as agent of the United States Government or serve as repository for United States Government funds.

"(2) RESTRICTIONS ON OPERATIONS.—Such financial institution shall not, directly or indirectly—

"(A) commence any line of business in the United States in which it was not engaged as of the date of the determination; or

"(B) conduct business from any location in the United States at which it did not conduct business as of the date of the determination.

"SEC. 604. CONDITIONS AND TERMINATION OF SANCTIONS.

"The same requirements for consultation with the foreign government of jurisdiction, where appropriate, and for termination of sanctions shall apply under this title as are provided in subsections (b) and (d), respectively, of section 2 of the Omnibus Nuclear Proliferation Control Act of 1992.

"SEC. 605. WAIVER.

"The President may waive the imposition of any prohibition imposed on any financial institution or other person pursuant to section 601 or 602 if the President determines and certifies to the Congress that the imposition of such prohibition would have a serious adverse effect on the safety and soundness of the domestic or international financial system or on domestic or international payments systems.

"SEC. 606. DEFINITIONS.

"As used in this title—

"(1) the term 'financial institution' includes—

"(A) a depository institution, including a branch or agency of a foreign bank;

"(B) a securities firm, including a broker or dealer;

"(C) an insurance company, including an agency or underwriter;

"(D) any other company that provides financial services; or

"(E) any subsidiary thereof; and

"(2) the term 'requisite knowledge' includes situations in which a person 'knows', as 'knowing' is defined in section 104 of the Foreign Corrupt Practices Act of 1977 (15 U.S.C. 78dd-2) or has 'reason to know' the effect of such person's actions."

SEC. 5. EXPORT-IMPORT BANK.

Section 2(b)(4) of the Export-Import Bank Act of 1945 (12 U.S.C. 635(b)(4)) is amended by inserting after "device" the following: "(as defined in section 11(3) of the Omnibus Nuclear Proliferation Control Act of 1992), or that any country has willfully aided or abetted any such non-nuclear-weapon state (as defined in section 11(4) of that Act) to acquire a nuclear explosive device or to acquire unsafeguarded special nuclear material (as defined in section 11(6) of that Act)."

SEC. 6. ELIGIBILITY FOR ASSISTANCE.

(a) AMENDMENTS TO THE ARMS EXPORT CONTROL ACT.—(1) The Arms Export Control Act (22 U.S.C. 2751 et seq.) is amended—

(A) in section 3 of such Act, by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(f) No sales or leases shall be made to any country that the President has determined is in material breach of its commitments to the United States under international treaties or agreements concerning the non-proliferation of nuclear explosive devices (as defined in section 11(3) of the Omnibus Nuclear Proliferation Control Act of 1992) and unsafeguarded special nuclear material"; and

(B) in section 40(d) of such Act, by adding at the end thereof the following new sentence: "For the purposes of this subsection, such acts shall include all activities that the Secretary determines willfully aid or abet the international proliferation of nuclear explosive devices to individuals or groups or willfully aid or abet an individual or groups in acquiring unsafeguarded special nuclear material (as defined in section 11(6) of that Act)."

(2) Section 47 of such Act is amended—

(A) by striking out "and" at the end of paragraph (7);

(B) by striking out the period at the end of paragraph (8) and inserting in lieu thereof "and"; and

(C) by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(9) 'nuclear explosive device' has the same meaning given to that term by section 11(3) of the Omnibus Nuclear Proliferation Control Act of 1992."

(b) AMENDMENTS TO THE FOREIGN ASSISTANCE ACT OF 1961.—

(1) Section 670(a)(2) of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 (22 U.S.C. 2429a(a)(2)) is amended in the first sentence—

(A) by inserting "in any fiscal year" after "President"; and

(B) by inserting "during that fiscal year" after "certifies in writing".

(2) Section 670 of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 (22 U.S.C. 2429a) is further amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(d) As used in this section, the term 'nuclear explosive device' has the same meaning given to that term by section 11(3) of the Omnibus Nuclear Proliferation Control Act of 1992."

(3) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, Presidential Determination No. 82-7 of February 10, 1982, made pursuant to section 670(a)(2) of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961, shall have no force or effect with respect to any grounds for the prohibition of assistance under section 670(a)(1) of such Act arising on or after the date of enactment of this Act.

(4) Section 620E(d) of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 (22 U.S.C. 2375(d)) is amended to read as follows:

"(d) The President may waive the prohibitions of section 669 of this Act with respect to any grounds for the prohibition of assistance under that section arising before the date of enactment of the Omnibus Nuclear Proliferation Control Act of 1992 to provide assistance to Pakistan if he determines that to do so is in the national interest of the United States."

SEC. 7. ADDITIONAL AMENDMENTS TO THE FOREIGN ASSISTANCE ACT OF 1961.

(a) TECHNICAL AMENDMENTS.—Section 670(b) of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 (22 U.S.C. 2429a(b)) is amended—

(1) by redesignating paragraphs (2), (3), and (4) as paragraphs (3), (4), and (5), respectively;

(2) in paragraph (3)(A) (as so redesignated), by striking "paragraph (3)" and inserting "paragraph (4)"; and

(3) in paragraph (4) (as so redesignated), by striking "paragraph (2)" and inserting "paragraph (3)".

(b) ADDITIONAL SANCTIONS.—Section 670(b)(1) of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 (22 U.S.C. 2429a) is amended to read as follows:

"(b)(1) Except as provided in paragraphs (3), (4), and (5), in the event that any country, after the date of enactment of the Omnibus Nuclear Proliferation Control Act of 1992—

"(A) transfers to a non-nuclear-weapon state—

"(i) a nuclear explosive device, or

"(ii) design information or components known by the transferor to be necessary for the recipient's completion of a nuclear explosive device,

"(B) is a non-nuclear-weapon state and—

"(i) receives a nuclear explosive device,

"(ii) receives design information or components necessary for the completion of a nuclear explosive device, or

"(iii) detonates a nuclear explosive device,

"(C) transfers to a non-nuclear-weapon state any design information or component (other than described in subparagraph (A)(ii) which is determined by the President to be important to, and known by the transferring country to be intended by the recipient state for use in, the development or manufacture of any nuclear explosive device, or

"(D) is a non-nuclear-weapon state and has sought and received any design information or component (other than described in subparagraph (B)(ii) which is determined by the President to be important to, and intended by the recipient state for use in, the development or manufacture of any nuclear explosive device, the President shall forthwith impose sanctions against that country, including, as a minimum, those sanctions specified in paragraph (2).

"(2) The sanctions referred to in paragraph (1) are as follows:

"(A) FOREIGN ASSISTANCE.—The United States Government shall terminate assistance to that country under this Act, except for urgent humanitarian assistance or food or other agricultural commodities.

"(B) ARMS SALES.—The United States Government shall terminate—

"(i) sales to that country under the Arms Export Control Act of any defense articles, defense services, or design and construction services; and

"(ii) licenses for the export to that country of any item on the United States Munitions List.

"(C) ARMS SALES FINANCING.—The United States Government shall terminate all foreign military financing for that country under the Arms Export Control Act.

"(D) DENIAL OF UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT CREDIT OR OTHER FINANCIAL ASSISTANCE.—The United States Government shall deny to that country any credit, credit guarantees, or other financial assistance by any department, agency, or instrumentality of the United States Government, including the Export-Import Bank of the United States, except that the sanction of this subparagraph shall not apply to any transaction subject to the reporting requirements of title V of the National Security Act of 1947 (relating to congressional oversight of intelligence activities).

"(E) MULTILATERAL DEVELOPMENT BANK ASSISTANCE.—The United States Government shall oppose, in accordance with section 701 of the International Financial Institutions Act (22 U.S.C. 262d), the extension of any loan or financial or technical assistance to that country by international financial institutions.

"(F) BANK LOANS.—The United States Government shall prohibit any United States bank from making any loan or providing any credit to the government of that country, except for loans or credits for the purpose of purchasing food or other agricultural commodities.

"(G) EXPORT PROHIBITION.—The authorities of section 6 of the Export Administration Act of 1979 shall be used to prohibit exports to that country of any goods and technology (excluding food and other agricultural commodities), except that such prohibition shall not apply to any transaction subject to the reporting requirements of title V of the National Security Act of 1947 (relating to congressional oversight of intelligence activities)."

(c) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—Section 670(b) of such Act (22 U.S.C. 2429a(b)) is further amended—

(1) in paragraph (3)(A) (as redesignated)—
(A) by striking "furnish assistance which would otherwise be prohibited" and inserting in lieu thereof "delay the imposition of sanctions which would otherwise be required"; and

(B) by striking "termination of assistance" and inserting in lieu thereof "imposition of sanctions";

(2) in paragraph (4) (as redesignated), by striking "termination of such assistance" and inserting in lieu thereof "imposition of such sanctions";

(3) by redesignating paragraph (5) (as redesignated by subsection (a)) as paragraph (6); and

(4) by inserting after paragraph (4) (as redesignated) the following:

"(5) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the sanctions which are required to be imposed against a country under paragraph (1)(C) or (1)(D) shall not apply if the President determines and certifies in writing to the Committee on Foreign Relations and the Committee on Governmental Affairs of the Senate and the Committee on Foreign Affairs of the House of Representatives that the application of such sanctions against such country would have a serious adverse effect on vital United States interests. The President shall transmit with such certification a statement setting forth the specific reasons therefor."

SEC. 8. REWARD.

Section 36(a) of the State Department Basic Authorities Act of 1956 (22 U.S.C. 2708(a)) is amended—

(1) by redesignating paragraphs (1) through (3) as subparagraphs (A) through (C);

(2) by inserting "(1)" immediately after "(a)"; and

(3) by adding at the end thereof the following:

"(2) For purposes of this subsection, the term 'act of international terrorism' includes any act substantially contributing to the acquisition of unsafeguarded special nuclear material (as defined in section 11(6) of the Omnibus Nuclear Proliferation Control Act of 1991) or any nuclear explosive device (as defined in section 11(3) of that Act) by an individual, group, or non-nuclear-weapon state, as defined in section 11(4) of that Act."

SEC. 9. REPORTS.

(a) CONTENT OF ACDA ANNUAL REPORT.—Section 52 of the Arms Control and Disarmament Act (22 U.S.C. 2592) is amended—

(1) by inserting "(a) IN GENERAL.—" after "SEC. 52.";

(2) by striking "and" at the end of paragraph (4);

(3) by striking the period at the end of paragraph (5) and inserting in lieu thereof "; and";

(4) by adding at the end of paragraph (5) the following new paragraph:

"(6) a section of the report shall deal with any material noncompliance by foreign governments with their commitments to the United States with respect to the prevention of the spread of nuclear explosive devices by non-nuclear-weapon states or the acquisition by such states of unsafeguarded special nuclear material (as defined in section 11(6) of the Omnibus Nuclear Proliferation Control Act of 1992), including—

"(A) a net assessment of the aggregate military significance of all such violations;

"(B) a statement of the compliance policy of the United States with respect to violations of those commitments; and

"(C) what actions, if any, the President has taken or proposes to take to bring any nation committing such a violation into compliance with its commitments."; and

(5) by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(b) REPORTING CONSECUTIVE NONCOMPLIANCE.—If the President in consecutive reports submitted to Congress under this section reports that any designated nation is not in full compliance with its nonproliferation commitments to the United States, then the President shall include in the second such report an assessment of what actions are necessary to compensate for such violations."

(b) REPORTING ON DEMARCHES.—(1) It is the sense of Congress that the Department of State should, in the course of implementing its reporting responsibilities under section 602(c) of the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Act of 1978, include a summary of demarches that the United States has issued or received from foreign governments with respect to activities which are of significance from the proliferation standpoint.

(2) For purposes of this section, the term "demarche" means any official communication by one government to another, by written or oral means, intended by the originating government to express—

(A) a concern over a past, present, or possible future action or activity of the recipient government, or of a person within the jurisdiction of that government, contributing to the global spread of unsafeguarded special nuclear material or of nuclear explosive devices;

(B) a request for the recipient government to counter such action or activity; or

(C) both the concern and request described in subparagraphs (A) and (B).

SEC. 10. TECHNICAL CORRECTION.

Section 133(b) of the Atomic Energy Act of 1954 (42 U.S.C. 2160c) is amended by striking out "20 kilograms" and inserting in lieu thereof "5 kilograms".

SEC. 11. DEFINITIONS.

For purposes of this Act—

(1) the term "goods and technology" includes nuclear materials and equipment and sensitive nuclear technology (as defined in section 4 of the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Act of 1978), all export items designated by the President pursuant to section 309(c) of such Act, and all technical assistance requiring authorization under section 57b. of the Atomic Energy Act of 1954;

(2) the term "IAEA safeguards" means the safeguards set forth in an agreement between a country and the International Atomic Energy Agency, as authorized by Article III(A)(5) of the Statute of the International Atomic Energy Agency;

(3) the term "nuclear explosive device" means any device that is designed to produce an instantaneous release of an amount of nuclear energy from special nuclear material that is greater than the amount of energy that would be released from the detonation of one pound of trinitrotoluene (TNT);

(4) the term "non-nuclear-weapon state" means any country which is not a nuclear-weapon state, as defined by Article IX (3) of the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons, signed at Washington, London, and Moscow on July 1, 1968;

(5) the term "special nuclear material" has the meaning given to that term by section 11aa of the Atomic Energy Act of 1954 (42 U.S.C. 2014aa); and could, if it were exported from the United States, be exported under a general license issued by the Nuclear Regulatory Commission).

Mr. DURENBERGER. I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. FORD. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

JOB TRAINING AND BASIC SKILLS ACT

Mr. FORD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the consideration of Calendar No. 430, S. 2055, a bill to amend the Job Training Partnership Act.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 2055) to amend the Job Training Partnership Act to strengthen the program of employment and training assistance under the act, and for other purposes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the immediate consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill, which had been reported from the Committee on Labor and Human Resources, with an amendment to strike all after the enacting clause and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

SEC. 4. DECLARATION OF POLICY AND STATEMENT OF PURPOSE.

(a) DECLARATION OF POLICY.—In recognition of the training needs of low-income adults and youth, the Congress declares it to be the policy of the United States to—

(1) provide financial assistance to States and local service delivery areas to meet the training needs of such low-income adults and youth, and to assist such adults and youth in obtaining unsubsidized employment;

(2) increase the funds available for programs established under title II of the Job Training Partnership Act (29 U.S.C. 1601 et seq.) by not less than 10 percent of the baseline each fiscal year, to provide for growth in the percentage of eligible adults and youth served, in excess of the 5 percent of the eligible population that is currently served; and

(3) encourage the provision of longer, more comprehensive education, training, and employment services to the eligible population, which also requires increased funding in order to maintain current service levels.

(b) STATEMENT OF PURPOSE.—Section 2 (29 U.S.C. 1501) is amended to read as follows:

*SEC. 2. STATEMENT OF PURPOSE.

"It is the purpose of this Act to establish programs to prepare youth and adults facing serious barriers to employment for participation in the labor force by providing job training that will result in increased employment and earnings, increased educational and occupational skills, and decreased welfare dependency, thereby improving the quality of the work force and enhancing the productivity and competitiveness of the Nation."

SEC. 5. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 3 (29 U.S.C. 1502) is amended—

(1) by striking subsections (a) and (b) and inserting the following:

"(a)(1)(A) There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out parts A and C of title II such sums as may be necessary for fiscal year 1993 and for each succeeding fiscal year.

"(B) Of the sums appropriated to carry out parts A and C of title II for each fiscal year, not less than 40 percent shall be made available to carry out part C of such title.

"(2) There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out part B of title II such sums as may be necessary for fiscal year 1993 and for each succeeding fiscal year."

(2) by redesignating subsection (c) as subsection (b);

(3) by inserting after such subsection (b) the following:

"(c)(1) There is authorized to be appropriated to carry out parts A, C, D, E, F, and G of title IV for fiscal year 1993 and each succeeding fiscal year an amount equal to not more than 7 percent of the sum of the amounts appropriated for parts A and C of title II for such fiscal year.

"(2) The Secretary shall reserve from the amount appropriated under paragraph (1) for any fiscal year—

"(A) an amount equal to 7 percent of the amount appropriated under paragraph (1) to carry out part C of title IV; and

"(B) $2,000,000 to carry out part F of title IV.

"(3) There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out part H of title IV $10,000,000 for fiscal year 1993 and such sums as may be necessary for each succeeding fiscal year.

"(4) There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out part I of title IV $100,000,000 for fiscal year 1993 and such sums as may be necessary for each of the fiscal years 1994 through 1996."; and

(4) in subsection (e)—

(A) by striking "(e)(1) Subject to paragraph (2), there" and inserting "(e) There"; and

(B) by striking paragraphs (2) and (3).

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—

(1) Subsections (a) and (e) of section 302, and section 326(h) (29 U.S.C. 1652 (a) and (e) and 1662e(h)) are amended by striking "3(c)" and inserting "3(b)".

(2) Section 326(h) (29 U.S.C. 1662e(h)) is amended by striking "3(c)" and inserting "3(b)".

SEC. 7. PRIVATE INDUSTRY COUNCILS.

(a) COMPOSITION.—

(1) MEMBERSHIP.—Section 102(a) (29 U.S.C. 1512(a)) is amended—

(A) by striking "and" at the end of paragraph (1); and

(B) by striking paragraph (2) and inserting the following:

"(2) representatives of organized labor and community-based organizations, who shall constitute not less than 15 percent of the membership of the council; and

"(3) representatives of—

"(A) educational agencies (which agencies shall be representative of all educational agencies in the service delivery area);

"(B) vocational rehabilitation agencies;

"(C) public assistance agencies;

"(D) economic development agencies;

"(E) the public employment service; and

"(F) local welfare agencies."

(2) NOMINATION.—Section 102(c)(2) (29 U.S.C. 1512(c)(2)) is amended to read as follows:

"(2) Education representatives on the council shall be selected from among individuals nominated by regional or local educational agencies, vocational education institutions, institutions of higher education (including entities offering adult education) or general organizations of such schools and institutions, within the service delivery area."

(3) RECOMMENDATIONS.—Section 102(c)(3) (29 U.S.C. 1512(c)(3)) is amended to read as follows:

"(3) The labor representatives on the council shall be selected from individuals recommended by recognized State and local labor organizations. If the State or local labor organization cannot adequately meet the labor representation on the private industry council, individual workers may be included on the council to complete the labor representation."

(4) ADDITIONAL REPRESENTATIVES.—Section 102(c) (29 U.S.C. 1512(c)) is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(4) The remaining members of the council shall include additional representatives from all sectors described in subsection (a)(3) and individuals recommended by interested organizations."

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—No private industry council shall be considered to be in violation of the amendments made by subsection (a) of this section until the date 3 years after the date of enactment of this Act.

SEC. 8. JOB TRAINING PLAN.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 104(a) (29 U.S.C. 1514(a)) is amended by inserting "under title II" after "appropriated".

(b) CONTENTS.—Section 104(b) is amended to read as follows:

"(b) Each job training plan for the programs conducted under title II shall contain—

"(1) information identifying the entity that will administer the program and be the grant recipient of funds from the State;

"(2) if there is more than one service delivery area in a single labor market area, provisions for coordinating particular aspects of the service delivery area program with other programs and service providers in the labor market area, including—

"(A) assessments of needs and problems in the labor market that form the basis for program planning;

"(B) provisions for ensuring access by program participants in each service delivery area to skills training and employment opportunities throughout the entire labor market; and

"(C) coordinated or joint implementation of job development, placement, and other employer outreach activities;

"(3) a description of methods of complying with the coordination criteria contained in the Governor's coordination and special services plan;

"(4) a description of linkages, established in accordance with sections 205 and 265, designed to enhance the provision of services and avoid duplication, including—

"(A) agreements with educational agencies;

"(B) arrangements with other education, training, and employment programs serving the disadvantaged that are authorized by Federal law;

"(C) if appropriate, joint programs in which activities supported with assistance under this Act are coordinated with activities (such as service opportunities and youth corps programs) supported with assistance made available under the National and Community Service Act of 1990 (42 U.S.C. 12401 et seq.); and

"(D) efforts to ensure the effective delivery of services to participants in coordination with local welfare agencies, other local agencies, community-based organizations, volunteer groups, business and labor organizations, and other training, education, employment, and social service programs;

"(5) goals and objectives for the programs, including—

"(A) a description of the manner in which the program will contribute to the economic self-sufficiency of participants, and the productivity of the local area and the Nation; and

"(B) performance goals established in accordance with standards prescribed under section 106;

"(6) goals for the training and placement of targeted populations, and a description of efforts to be undertaken to accomplish such goals, including—

"(A) efforts to expand outreach to targeted populations who may be eligible for services under this Act;

"(B) efforts to expand awareness of training and placement opportunities for targeted populations; and

"(C) types of services to be provided to address the special needs of targeted populations;

"(7) (A) goals for—

"(i) the training of women in nontraditional employment; and

"(ii) the training-related placement of women in nontraditional employment and apprenticeships; and

"(B) a description of efforts to be undertaken to accomplish the goals described in subparagraph (A), including efforts to increase awareness of such training and placement opportunities;";

"(8) adult and youth budgets for two program years and any proposed expenditures for the succeeding 2 program years, in such detail as is determined necessary, by the entity selected to administer the portion of the plan corresponding to the budgets in accordance with section 103(b)(1)(B), and to meet the requirements of section 108;

"(9) procedures for identifying and selecting participants, procedures for determining eligibility, and methods used to verify eligibility;

"(10) a description of—

"(A) the assessment process that will identify the skill level and service needs of each participant;

"(B) the competency levels to be achieved by participants as a result of program participation;

"(C) the services to be provided, including the estimated duration of service and the estimated training cost per participant; and

"(D) the procedures for evaluating the progress of participants in achieving competencies;

"(11) a description of the procedures and methods used in carrying out title V, relating to incentive bonus payments for the placement of individuals eligible under such title;

"(12) procedures, consistent with section 107, for selecting service providers, which procedures shall take into account—

"(A) past performance of the providers regarding—

"(i) job training, basic skills training, or related activities;

"(ii) fiscal accountability; and

"(iii) ability to meet performance standards; and

"(B) the ability of the providers to provide services that can lead to achievement of competency standards for participants with identified deficiencies;

"(13) fiscal control (including procurement, monitoring, and management information systems requirements), accounting, audit, and debt collection procedures, consistent with section 164, to assure the proper disbursement of, and accounting for, funds received under title II; and

"(14) procedures for the preparation and submission of an annual report to the Governor, which report shall include—

"(A) a description of activities conducted during the program year;

"(B) characteristics of participants;

"(C) information on the extent to which applicable performance standards have been met;

"(D) information on the extent to which the service delivery area has met the goals of the area for the training and training-related placement of women in nontraditional employment and apprenticeships; and

"(E) a statistical breakdown of women trained and placed in nontraditional occupations, including information regarding—

"(i) the type of training received, by occupation;

"(ii) whether the participant was placed in a job or apprenticeship, and, if so, the occupation and wage at placement;

"(iii) the age of the participant;

"(iv) the race of the participant; and

"(v) retention of the participant in nontraditional employment."

SEC. 9. REVIEW AND APPROVAL OF PLAN.

Section 105(a)(1)(B)(ii) (29 U.S.C. 1515(a)(1)(B)(ii)) is amended by inserting "community-based organizations and" after "appropriate".

SEC. 10. PERFORMANCE STANDARDS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 106 (29 U.S.C. 1516) is amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 106. PERFORMANCE STANDARDS.

"(a) CONGRESSIONAL FINDINGS.—Congress finds that—

"(1) job training is an investment in human capital and not an expense; and

"(2) in order to determine whether that investment has been productive—

"(A) it is essential that criteria for measuring the return on the investment be developed; and
 "(B) the criteria should include basic measures of long-term economic self-sufficiency, including measures of increased educational attainment and occupational skills, increased employment and earnings, and reduced welfare dependency.

"(b) PERFORMANCE STANDARDS.—

"(1) ACHIEVEMENT OF BASIC MEASURES.—In order to determine whether the basic measures described in subsection (a)(2)(B) have been achieved by programs under parts A and C of title II, the Secretary, in consultation with the Secretary of Education and the Secretary of Health and Human Services, shall prescribe performance standards for the programs.

"(2) GENERAL OBJECTIVE.—In prescribing performance standards for programs under parts A and C of title II, the Secretary shall ensure that States and service delivery areas will make efforts to increase services and positive outcomes for hard-to-serve individuals.

"(3) FACTORS FOR ADULT STANDARDS.—The Secretary shall base the performance standards for adult programs under part A of title II on appropriate factors, which may include—

"(A) placement in unsubsidized employment;
 "(B) retention for more than 6 months in unsubsidized employment;

"(C) increase in earnings, including hourly wages;

"(D) reduction in welfare dependency; and
 "(E)(i) acquisition of skills, including basic skills, required to promote continued employability in the local labor market (including attainment of the competency levels described in paragraph (5)), or acquisition of a high school diploma or the equivalent of the diploma; and
 "(ii) one or more of the factors described in subparagraphs (A) through (D).

"(4) FACTORS FOR YOUTH STANDARDS.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall base the performance standards for youth programs under part C of title II on appropriate factors described in paragraph (3), and on factors including—

"(i) attainment of employment competencies (including attainment of the competency levels described in paragraph (5));

"(ii) dropout prevention and recovery;

"(iii) secondary and postsecondary school completion or the equivalent of such completion; and

"(iv) enrollment in other training programs, apprenticeships, or postsecondary education, or enlistment in the Armed Forces.

"(B) VARIATIONS.—The Secretary may prescribe variations in the standards described in subparagraph (A) to reflect the differences between in-school and out-of-school programs.

"(5) COMPETENCY LEVELS.—The private industry councils, in consultation with educational agencies, community-based organizations, and the private sector, shall establish youth and adult competency levels, based on such factors as attainment of entry skill levels and other hiring requirements.

"(6) REQUIREMENTS.—The performance standards described in paragraphs (3) and (4) shall include provisions governing—

"(A) the base period prior to program participation that will be used for measurement of the factors described in paragraphs (3) and (4), as appropriate;

"(B) a representative period after termination from the program that is a reasonable indicator of postprogram earnings and cash welfare payment reductions; and

"(C) cost-effective methods for obtaining such data as is necessary to carry out this subsection, which methods—

"(i) notwithstanding any other provision of law, may include access to—

"(I) earnings records;

"(II) State employment security records;

"(III) records collected under the Federal Insurance Contributions Act, chapter 21 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986;

"(IV) records regarding State aid to families with dependent children;

"(V) statistical sampling techniques; and

"(VI) records or techniques similar to the records and techniques described in subclauses (I) through (V); and

"(ii) shall include appropriate safeguards to protect the confidentiality of the data obtained.

"(7) GROSS PROGRAM EXPENDITURES.—The Secretary shall prescribe performance standards for programs under parts A and C of title II relating gross program expenditures to various performance measures. The Governors shall not take performance standards prescribed under this paragraph into consideration in awarding grants under paragraph (8).

"(8) INCENTIVE GRANTS.—From funds available under section 202(c)(2)(C), and under section 262(c) for providing incentive grants under this paragraph, each Governor shall award incentive grants to service delivery areas conducting programs under parts A and C of title II that—

"(A) exceed the performance standards established by the Secretary under this subsection (except for the standards established under paragraph (7)) with respect to services to all participants;

"(B) exceed the performance standards established by the Secretary under this subsection (except for the standards established under paragraph (7)) with respect to services to hard-to-serve populations;

"(C) serve more than the minimum percentage of out-of-school youth required by section 263(f);

"(D) place participants in employment that provides post-program earnings that exceed the appropriate performance criteria; and

"(E) exceed the performance standards established by the Governor under subsection (e) for programs under title II, except that not more than 25 percent of the incentive grants shall be awarded on performance standards established under subsection (e).

"(c) EMPLOYMENT AND TRAINING ASSISTANCE FOR DISLOCATED WORKERS.—

"(1) PERFORMANCE STANDARDS.—The Secretary shall prescribe performance standards for programs under title III based on participant placement and retention in unsubsidized employment.

"(2) NEEDS-RELATED PAYMENTS.—In prescribing performance standards under paragraph (1), the Secretary shall make appropriate allowance for the difference in cost resulting from serving workers receiving needs-related payments under section 314(e).

"(d) VARIATIONS.—

"(1) AUTHORITY OF GOVERNORS.—Each Governor of a State participating in a program governed by standards issued under subsection (b) or (c) shall prescribe, within parameters established by the Secretary, variations in the standards for the State, based on—

"(A) specific economic, geographic, and demographic factors in the State and in service delivery areas and substate areas within the State;

"(B) the characteristics of the population to be served;

"(C) the demonstrated difficulties in serving the population; and

"(D) the type of services to be provided.

"(2) SECRETARY'S RESPONSIBILITIES.—The Secretary shall—

"(A) provide information and technical assistance on performance standards adjustments;

"(B) collect data that identifies hard-to-serve individuals and long-term welfare dependency;

"(C) provide guidance on setting performance goals at the service provider level that encourage increased service to hard-to-serve individuals, particularly long-term welfare recipients; and

"(D) review performance standards to ensure that such standards provide maximum incentive in serving hard-to-serve individuals, particularly long-term welfare recipients, including individuals receiving benefits under part A of title IV of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 601 et seq.) (relating to the aid to families with dependent children program) and individuals receiving benefits under title XVI of such Act (42 U.S.C. 1381 et seq.) (relating to the supplemental security income programs).

"(e) ADDITIONAL PERFORMANCE STANDARDS BY GOVERNORS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—A Governor of a State participating in a program under title II or III may prescribe performance standards for the program in addition to standards established by the Secretary under subsections (b) and (c).

"(2) CRITERIA.—Such additional standards may include criteria requiring establishment of effective linkages with other programs to avoid duplication and enhance the delivery of services, the provision of high quality services, and successful service to target groups.

"(3) REPORT.—The additional performance standards established for title II shall be reported in the Governor's coordination and special services plan.

"(f) NATIVE AMERICAN AND JOB CORPS PROGRAMS.—The Secretary shall prescribe performance standards for programs under parts A and B of title IV, and for programs under title V.

"(g) SYSTEM FOR ADJUSTMENTS.—The Secretary shall prescribe a system for adjustments in performance standards for special populations to be served, including Native Americans, migrant and seasonal farmworkers, disabled and Vietnam era veterans, including veterans who served in the Indochina theater between August 5, 1964, and May 7, 1975, offenders, and displaced homemakers, taking into account their special circumstances.

"(h) MODIFICATIONS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary may modify the performance standards under this section not more often than once every 2 program years and such modifications shall not be retroactive.

"(2) JOB CORPS.—Notwithstanding paragraph (1), the Secretary may modify standards relating to programs under part B of title IV each program year.

"(i) NATIONAL COMMISSION ON EMPLOYMENT POLICY.—The National Commission on Employment Policy shall—

"(1) advise the Secretary in the development of performance standards under this section for measuring results of participation in job training and in the development of parameters for variations of such standards referred to in subsection (d);

"(2) evaluate the usefulness of such standards as measures of desired performance; and

"(3) evaluate the impacts of such standards (intended or otherwise) on the choice of who is served, what services are provided, and the costs of such services in service delivery areas.

"(j) FAILURE TO MEET STANDARDS.—

"(1) UNIFORM CRITERIA.—The Secretary shall establish uniform criteria for determining whether—

"(A) a service delivery area fails to meet performance standards under this section; and

"(B) the circumstances under which remedial action authorized under this subsection shall be taken.

"(2) TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE.—Each Governor shall provide technical assistance to service delivery areas failing to meet performance standards under the uniform criteria established under paragraph (1)(A).

"(3) PROCESS FOR CORRECTION.—Not later than 90 days after the end of each program year, each Governor shall report to the Secretary the final performance standards and performance for each service delivery area within the State, along with the plans of the Governor for providing the technical assistance required under paragraph (2).

"(4) REORGANIZATION PLAN.—

"(A) PLAN REQUIRED FOR CONTINUED FAILURE.—If a service delivery area continues to fail to meet such performance standards for 2 program years, the Governor shall notify the Secretary and the service delivery area of the continued failure, and shall develop and impose a reorganization plan.

"(B) ELEMENTS.—Such plan may restructure the private industry council, prohibit the use of designated service providers, merge the service delivery area into one or more other existing service delivery areas, or make other changes as the Governor determines to be necessary to improve performance, including the selection of an alternative administrative entity to administer the program for the service delivery area.

"(C) ALTERNATIVE ADMINISTRATIVE ENTITY SELECTION.—The alternative administrative entity described in subparagraph (B) may be a newly formed private industry council or any agency jointly selected by the Governor and the chief elected official of the largest unit of general local government in the service delivery area or substate area.

"(5) SECRETARIAL ACTION.—

"(A) PLAN.—If the Governor has not imposed a reorganization plan as required by paragraph (4)(A)(i) within 90 days of the end of the second program year in which a service delivery area has failed to meet its performance standards, the Secretary shall develop and impose such a plan, including the selection of an alternative administrative entity to administer the program for the service delivery areas.

"(B) RECAPTURE OR WITHHOLDING.—The Secretary shall recapture or withhold an amount not to exceed one-fifth of the State administration set-aside allocated under section 202(c)(2)(A) and under section 262(c) for the activities described in section 202(c)(2)(A), for the purposes of providing technical assistance under a reorganization plan as described in paragraph (4).

"(6) APPEAL BY SERVICE DELIVERY AREA.—

"(A) TIMING.—A service delivery area that is the subject of a reorganization plan under paragraph (4) may, within 30 days after receiving notice thereof, appeal to the Secretary to rescind or revise such plan.

"(B) RECAPTURE OR WITHHOLDING.—

"(i) DETERMINATION.—If the Secretary determines, upon appeal under subparagraph (A), that the Governor has not provided appropriate technical assistance as required under paragraph (2), the Secretary shall recapture or withhold an amount not to exceed one-fifth of the State administration set-aside allocated under section 202(c)(2)(A) and under section 262(c) for activities described in section 202(c)(2)(A). The Secretary shall use funds recaptured or withheld under this subparagraph to provide appropriate technical assistance.

"(ii) BASIS.—If the Secretary approved the technical assistance plan provided by the Governor under paragraph (2), a determination under this subparagraph shall only be based on failure to effectively implement such plan and shall not be based on the plan itself.

"(7) APPEAL BY GOVERNOR.—A Governor of a State that is subject to recapture or withholding under paragraph (5) or (6)(B) may, within 30 days of receiving notice thereof, appeal such withholding to the Secretary.

"(k) CLARIFICATION OR REFERENCE.—For the purposes of this section, the term 'employment' means employment for 20 or more hours per week."

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—Sections 311(a), 311(b)(8), and 322(a)(4) (29 U.S.C. 1661(a), 1661(b)(8), and 1662a(a)(4)) are each amended by striking "106(g)" and inserting "106(c)".

SEC. 11. SELECTION OF SERVICE PROVIDERS.

(a) CHILD CARE.—Section 107(a) (29 U.S.C. 1517(a)) is amended by adding at the end the following: "In addition, consideration shall be given to provision of appropriate supportive services, including child care."

(b) SELECTION OF SERVICE PROVIDERS.—Section 107 is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(e) The selection of service providers shall be made on a competitive basis, to the extent practicable, and shall include—

"(1) a determination of the ability of the service provider to meet program design specifications established by the administrative entity that take into account the purpose of this Act and the goals established by the Governor in the Coordination and Special Services Plan; and

"(2) documentation of compliance with procurement standards established by the Governor under section 164, including the reasons for selection."

SEC. 12. LIMITATION ON CERTAIN COSTS.

(a) APPLICATION OF COST LIMITATIONS.—Section 108(a) (29 U.S.C. 1518(a)) is amended to read as follows:

"(a) Except as provided in subparagraphs (A) and (B) of section 141(d)(3), funds expended under this Act shall be charged to the appropriate cost categories."

(b) COST CATEGORIES AND LIMITATIONS.—Section 108(b) is amended to read as follows:

"(b)(1) The cost limitations contained in this subsection shall apply separately to the funds allocated for programs under part A of title II, and to the funds allocated for programs under part C of such title.

"(2) Funds expended under parts A and C of title II shall be charged to one of the following categories:

"(A) Administration.

"(B) Training-related and supportive services.

"(C) Direct training services.

"(3) The Secretary shall, consistent with sections 204(b) and 264(c), define by regulation the cost categories specified in paragraph (2).

"(4) Of the funds allocated to a service delivery area for any program year under part A or C of title II—

"(A) not more than 20 percent shall be expended for the costs of administration; and

"(B) not less than 50 percent shall be expended for direct training services.

"(5) Each service delivery area shall ensure that all contracts, grants, or other agreements with a service provider, for services provided to participants, shall include appropriate amounts necessary for administrative costs and supportive services."

(c) REFERENCE TO TITLE III LIMITATIONS.—Section 108 is further amended by amending subsection (c) to read as follows:

"(c) Funds available under title III shall be expended in accordance with the limitations specified in section 315."

SEC. 13. SERVICE DELIVERY AREA TRANSFER AND AGREEMENT; REALLOTMENT.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Part A of title I (29 U.S.C. 1511 et seq.) is amended by adding at the end the following new sections:

"SEC. 109. SERVICE DELIVERY AREA TRANSFER AND AGREEMENT.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—Any service delivery area may enter into an agreement with another service delivery area to share the cost of educating, training, and placing individuals participating in programs assisted under this Act, including the provision of supportive services. Such agreement shall be approved by an individual representing each private industry council providing guidance to the service delivery area.

"(b) APPLICATION OF APPROPRIATE PERFORMANCE STANDARDS.—Each service delivery area entering into a service delivery area agreement under this section shall be credited under the appropriate performance standards.

"SEC. 110. REALLOCATION AND REALLOTMENT OF UNOBLIGATED FUNDS UNDER TITLE II.

"(a) WITHIN STATE REALLOCATIONS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—For each program year beginning on or after July 1, 1993, the Governor shall, in accordance with the requirements of this subsection, reallocate to eligible service delivery areas within the State funds appropriated for such program year that are available for reallocation.

"(2) AMOUNT.—The amount available for reallocation is equal to the amount by which the unobligated balance of the service delivery area allocation under parts A or C of title II at the end of the program year prior to the program year for which the reallocation is made exceeds 15 percent of such allocation for the prior program year.

"(3) REALLOCATION.—The Governor shall reallocate the amounts available under paragraph (2), to eligible service delivery areas within the State that have the highest rates of unemployment for an extended period of time and to the service delivery areas with the highest poverty rates.

"(4) ELIGIBILITY.—For purposes of this subsection, an eligible service delivery area means a service delivery area that has obligated at least 85 percent of the allocation of the area under part A or C of title II for the program year prior to the program year for which the reallocation is made.

"(b) REALLOTMENT AMONG STATES.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—For each program year beginning on or after July 1, 1993, the Secretary may, in accordance with the requirements of this subsection, reallocate to eligible States funds appropriated for such program year that are available for reallocation.

"(2) AMOUNT.—The amount available for reallocation among States under this subsection shall be equal to the amount by which the unobligated balance of the State allotment under part A or C of title II at the end of the program year prior to the program year for which the reallocation is made exceeds 15 percent of such allotment for the prior program year.

"(3) REALLOTMENT.—From the amount available under paragraph (2), the Secretary shall reallocate to each eligible State an amount based on the relative amount allotted to such eligible State under part A or C of title II for the program year the determination under this subsection is made compared to the total amount allotted to all eligible States under part A or C of title II for such program year.

"(4) ELIGIBILITY.—For purposes of this subsection, an eligible State means a State which has obligated at least 85 percent of its allocation under part A or C of title II for the program year prior to the program year for which the reallocation is made.

"(5) PROCEDURES.—The Governor of each State shall prescribe uniform procedures for the obligation of funds by service delivery areas within the State in order to avoid the requirement that funds be made available for reallocation under this subsection. The Governor shall further prescribe equitable procedures for making funds available from the State and service delivery areas in the event that a State is required to make funds available for reallocation under this subsection."

(b) TECHNICAL AMENDMENT.—The table of contents relating to part A of title I is amended by adding after the item relating to section 108 the following:

"Sec. 109. Service delivery area transfer and agreement.

"Sec. 110. Reallocation and reallocation of unobligated funds under title II."

SEC. 14. GOVERNOR'S COORDINATION AND SPECIAL SERVICES PLAN.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 121(b) (29 U.S.C. 1531(b)) is amended—

(1) in paragraph (1), by striking "Such criteria" and inserting: "The plan shall also include criteria for coordinating activities under this Act with programs and services provided by State and local agencies on aging, and programs operated under title V of the Older Americans Act of 1965 (42 U.S.C. 3056 et seq.). In addition, the plan shall establish criteria for coordinating activities under this Act with programs under the National and Community Service Act of 1990 (42 U.S.C. 12401 et seq.). The criteria described in each of the three preceding sentences";

(2) in paragraph (2) to read as follows: "(2) The plan shall describe the measures taken by the State to ensure coordination and avoid duplication of programs between the State agencies administering the JOBS program and programs under title II in the planning and delivery of services. The plan shall describe the procedures developed by the State to ensure that the State JOBS plan is consistent with the coordination criteria specified in the plan and shall identify the procedures developed to provide for the review of the JOBS plan by the State job training coordinating council."

(3) by redesignating paragraphs (3), (4), (5), and (6) as paragraphs (4), (5), (6), and (7), respectively;

(4) by inserting the following new paragraph after paragraph (2):

"(3) The plan shall describe the projected use of resources, including oversight of program performance, program administration, program financial management, capacity building, priorities and criteria for State incentive grants, and performance goals for State-supported programs. The description of capacity building shall include the Governor's plans for research and demonstration projects, technical assistance for service delivery areas and service providers, interstate technical assistance and training arrangements, and other coordinated technical assistance arrangements for service delivery areas and service providers under the direction of the Secretary"; and

(5) in paragraph (5) (as redesignated in paragraph (3)) by—

(A) striking "and" at the end of subparagraph (A);

(B) striking the period at the end of subparagraph (B) and inserting a semicolon and "and"; and

(C) adding at the end the following new subparagraph (C):

"(C) services to older workers, including plans for facilitating the provision of services across service delivery areas within the State, as provided in section 104(b)(2)."

(b) COORDINATION AND SPECIAL SERVICES ACTIVITIES.—Section 121(c) is amended—

(1) in paragraph (7), by inserting after the paragraph designation the following: "coordination of activities relating to part A of title II with";

(2) by striking "and" at the end of paragraph (10);

(3) by striking the period at the end of paragraph (11) and inserting a semicolon; and

(4) by adding at the end the following new paragraphs:

"(12) initiatives undertaken under the State innovation and coordination program described in section 123; and

"(13) making available to service delivery areas appropriate information and technical assistance to assist in developing and implementing joint programs, including youth corps programs, in which activities supported under this Act are coordinated with activities supported under the National and Community Service Act of 1990 (42 U.S.C. 12401 et seq.)."

SEC. 15. STATE JOB TRAINING COORDINATION COUNCIL.

Section 122(a)(3)(B)(i) (29 U.S.C. 1532(a)(3)(B)(i)) is amended by inserting "the State Advisory Board established under section 178 of the National and Community Service Act of 1990," after "State veterans' affairs agencies or equivalent,".

SEC. 16. STATE EDUCATION COORDINATION AND GRANTS.

Section 123 (29 U.S.C. 1533) is amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 123. STATE EDUCATION COORDINATION AND GRANTS.

"(a) ALLOTMENT.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall allot the funds made available to carry out this section under section 202(c)(2)(D) and under section 262(c) to the Governors for allocation to State educational agencies to pay for the Federal share of carrying out the projects described in paragraph (2).

"(2) PROJECTS.—Funds allocated under paragraph (1) may be used to pay for the Federal share of carrying out projects (in accordance with agreements under subsection (b)) that—

"(A) provide school-to-work transition services of demonstrated effectiveness that increase the rate of graduation from high school, or completion of the recognized equivalent of such graduation, including services that increase the rate at which dropouts return to regular or alternative schooling and obtain a high school degree or equivalent;

"(B) provide literacy and lifelong learning opportunities and services of demonstrated effectiveness that—

"(i) enhance the knowledge and skills of educationally and economically disadvantaged individuals; and

"(ii) result in increasing the employment and earnings of such individuals; and

"(C) provide statewide coordinated approaches, including model programs, to train, place, and retain women in nontraditional employment; and

"(D) facilitate coordination of education and training services for eligible participants in projects described in subparagraphs (A), (B), and (C).

"(3) FEDERAL SHARE.—The Federal share of the cost of carrying out the projects described in paragraph (2) shall be 50 percent.

"(b) AGREEMENTS REQUIRED.—

"(1) PARTIES TO AGREEMENTS.—The projects described in subsection (a)(2) shall be conducted within a State in accordance with agreements between the State educational agency, administrative entities in service delivery areas in the State, and other entities such as other State agencies, local educational agencies, and alternative service providers (such as community-based and other nonprofit or for-profit organizations).

"(2) CONTENTS OF AGREEMENTS.—

"(A) CONTRIBUTION.—The agreements described in paragraph (1) shall provide for the contribution by the State, from funds other than the funds made available under this Act, of a total amount equal to the funds allotted under this section.

"(B) DIRECT COST OF SERVICES.—Such amount may include the direct cost of employment or training services—

"(i) provided by State or local programs or agencies; or

"(ii) provided by other Federal programs or agencies in accordance with applicable Federal law.

"(c) GOVERNOR'S PLAN REQUIREMENTS.—Any Governor receiving assistance under this section shall include in the Governor's coordination and special services plan, in accordance with section 121, a description developed in consultation with the State educational agency of—

"(1) the goals to be achieved and services to be provided by the school-to-work transition programs specified in subsection (a)(2)(A) that will receive the assistance, which description shall, at a minimum, include information regarding—

"(A) the activities and services that will result in increasing the number of youth staying in or returning to school and graduating from high school or the equivalent;

"(B) the work-based curriculum that will link classroom learning to worksite experience and address the practical and theoretical aspects of work;

"(C) the opportunities that will be made available to participants to obtain career-path employment and postsecondary education;

"(D) the integration to be achieved, in appropriate circumstances, in the delivery of services between State and local educational agencies and alternative service providers, such as community-based and nonprofit organizations; and

"(E) the linkages that will be established, where feasible, to avoid duplication and enhance the delivery of services, with programs under—

"(i) title II and part B of title IV;

"(ii) the Elementary and Secondary Education Act (20 U.S.C. 2701 et seq.);

"(iii) the Carl D. Perkins Vocational and Applied Technology Education Act (20 U.S.C. 2301 et seq.);

"(iv) the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (20 U.S.C. 1400 et seq.);

"(v) the Adult Education Act (20 U.S.C. 1201 et seq.);

"(vi) the JOBS program;

"(vii) the Stewart B. McKinney Homeless Assistance Act (Public Law 100-77; 101 Stat. 482); and

"(viii) the National and Community Service Act of 1990 (42 U.S.C. 12401 et seq.).

"(2) the goals to be achieved and services to be provided by literacy and lifelong learning programs specified in subsection (a)(2)(B) that will receive the assistance, which description shall, at a minimum, include information regarding—

"(A) the activities and services that will increase the knowledge and skills of educationally and economically disadvantaged individuals, and result in increased employment and earnings for such individuals;

"(B) the integration to be achieved between projects assisted under this section and the 4-year State plan (and related needs assessment carried out for the plan) developed in accordance with section 342 of the Adult Education Act (20 U.S.C. 1206a);

"(C) the variety of settings, including workplace settings, in which literacy training and learning opportunities will be provided; and

"(D) the linkages that will be established, where feasible, to avoid duplication and enhance the delivery of services, with programs under—

"(i) titles II and III of this Act;

"(ii) the Adult Education Act;

"(iii) the Carl D. Perkins Vocational and Applied Technology Education Act;

"(iv) the Stewart B. McKinney Homeless Assistance Act;

"(v) the JOBS program;

"(vi) the Rehabilitation Act of 1973 (29 U.S.C. 701 et seq.);

"(vii) the National Literacy Act of 1991 (Public Law 102-73);

"(viii) the Emergency Immigrant Education Act of 1984 (20 U.S.C. 3121 et seq.); and

"(ix) the National and Community Service Act of 1990 (42 U.S.C. 12401 et seq.);

"(3) the goals to be achieved and services to be provided by the nontraditional employment for women programs specified in subsection (a)(2)(C) that will receive the assistance; and

"(4) the proportion of funds received under this section that will be used to carry out the programs described in paragraphs (1), (2), and (3), respectively.

"(d) SERVICE REQUIREMENTS.—

"(1) PERMITTED SERVICES.—Services funded under this section to carry out the projects described in subsection (a)(2) may include education and training, vocational education services, and related services, provided to participants under title II. In addition, services funded under this section may include services for offenders, veterans, and other individuals who the Governor determines require special assistance.

"(2) LIMITATIONS ON EXPENDITURES.—

"(A) COORDINATION OF SERVICES.—Not more than 20 percent of the funds allocated under this section may be expended to pay for the Federal share of projects described in subsection (a)(2)(D) at the State and local levels.

"(B) SCHOOL-TO-WORK SERVICES; LITERACY AND LIFELONG LEARNING SERVICES.—Not less than 80 percent of the funds allocated under this section shall be expended to pay for the Federal share of projects conducted in accordance with subparagraphs (A), (B), and (C) of subsection (a)(2).

"(C) ECONOMICALLY DISADVANTAGED INDIVIDUALS.—Not less than 75 percent of the funds allocated for projects under subparagraphs (A), (B), and (C) of subsection (a)(2) shall be expended for projects for economically disadvantaged individuals who experience other barriers to employment. Priority for funds not expended for the economically disadvantaged shall be given to title III participants and persons with other barriers to employment.

"(e) DISTRIBUTION OF FUNDS IN ABSENCE OF AGREEMENT.—If no agreement is reached in accordance with subsection (b) on the use of funds under this section, the Governor shall notify the Secretary and shall distribute the funds to service delivery areas in accordance with section 202(b) for the projects described in subsection (a)(2).

"(f) REPORTS AND RECORDS.—

"(1) REPORTS BY GOVERNORS.—The Governor shall prepare reports on the projects funded under this section, including such information as the Secretary may require to determine the extent to which the projects supported under this section result in achieving the goals specified in paragraphs (1), (2), and (3) of subsection (c). The Governor shall submit the reports to the Secretary at such intervals as shall be determined by the Secretary.

"(2) RECORDS AND REPORTS OF RECIPIENTS.—Each direct or indirect recipient of funds under this section shall keep records that are sufficient to permit the preparation of reports. Each recipient shall submit such reports to the Secretary, at such intervals as shall be determined by the Secretary."

SEC. 17. ADDITIONAL REQUIREMENTS.

(a) IDENTIFICATION OF ADDITIONAL IMPOSED REQUIREMENTS.—Section 124 (29 U.S.C. 1534) is amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 124. IDENTIFICATION OF ADDITIONAL IMPOSED REQUIREMENTS.

"If a State or service delivery area imposes a requirement, including a rule, regulation, policy, or performance standard, relating to the administration and operation of programs funded by this Act (including requirements based on State or service delivery area interpretation of any Federal law, regulation, or guideline) the State or area shall identify the requirement as a State or service delivery area-imposed requirement."

(b) TECHNICAL AMENDMENT.—The table of contents relating to part B of title I is amended by striking the item relating to section 124 and inserting the following:

"Sec. 124. Identification of additional imposed requirements."

SEC. 18. STATE LABOR MARKET INFORMATION PROGRAMS.

Section 125(a) (29 U.S.C. 1535(a)) is amended—

(1) by striking "and" at the end of paragraph (4);

(2) by striking the period at the end of paragraph (5) and inserting "; and"; and

(3) by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(6) provide training and technical assistance to support comprehensive career guidance and participant outcome activities for local programs assisted under this Act."

SEC. 19. GENERAL PROGRAM REQUIREMENTS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 141(d)(3) (29 U.S.C. 1551(d)(3)) is amended by—

(1) inserting "(A)" after the paragraph designation; and

(2) adding at the end the following new subparagraphs:

"(B) Tuition charges for training or education provided by an institution of higher education or postsecondary institution that are not more than the charges for such training or education made available to the general public do not require a breakdown of cost components.

"(C) Funds provided from the allocation to a service delivery area for any fiscal year that are expended by any service provider (with the exception of a State or local agency) for the cost of administering services under part A or C of title II shall not be subject to the limitation contained in section 108(b)(4)(A) if—

"(i) such funds are expended under an agreement under which not less than 90 percent of the funds provided to the service provider are to be expended for the costs of direct training and training-related and supportive services;

"(ii) such expenditures are charged to the appropriate cost category; and

"(iii) the service delivery area is in compliance with the requirement under section 108(b)(4)(B) for such fiscal year."

(b) LIMITATION.—Section 141(g) is amended by—

(1) inserting "(1)" after the subsection designation; and

(2) adding at the end the following new paragraphs:

"(2) On-the-job training authorized under this Act for a participant with respect to a position shall be limited in duration to a period not in excess of the period generally required for acquisition of skills needed for the position within a particular occupation. In no event shall the training exceed 6 months unless the total number of hours of such training is less than 500 hours. In determining the period generally required for acquisition of the skills, consideration shall be given to recognized reference material (such as the Dictionary of Occupational Titles), the content of the training of the participant, the prior work experience of the participant, and the service strategy of the participant.

"(3)(A) Each on-the-job training contract shall—

(i) specify the types and duration of on-the-job training to be developed and other services to be provided in sufficient detail to allow for a fair analysis of the reasonableness of proposed costs; and

(ii) comply with the requirements of section 164.

"(B) Each on-the-job training contract that is not directly contracted by a service delivery area with an employer (but instead is contracted through an intermediary brokering contractor), shall, in addition to meeting the requirements of subparagraph (A), specify the outreach, recruitment, participant training, counseling, placement, monitoring, followup, and other services to be provided directly by the brokering contractor within the organization of the contractor, the services to be provided by the employers conducting the on-the-job training, and the services to be provided, with or without cost, by other agencies and subcontractors.

"(C) If a brokering contractor enters into a contract with a subcontractor to provide training or other services, the brokering contractor shall ensure, through on-site monitoring, compliance with subcontract terms prior to making payment to the subcontractor."

(c) DISPOSAL OF ASSETS.—Section 141(k) is amended to read as follows:

"(k) The Federal requirements governing the title, use, and disposition of real property, equipment, and supplies purchased with funds provided under this Act shall be the Federal requirements generally applicable to Federal grants to States and local governments."

(d) PROGRAM INCOME.—Section 141(m) is amended to read as follows:

"(m)(1) A public or private nonprofit entity administering a program under this Act may retain income under the program if the entity uses such income to continue to carry out such program, and may use the income for such purposes without fiscal year limitation.

"(2) Income subject to the requirements of paragraph (1) shall include—

"(A) receipts from goods or services provided as a result of activity funded under this Act; and

"(B) funds provided to a service provider under this Act that are in excess of the costs associated with the services provided.

"(3) For the purposes of this subsection, each public or private nonprofit entity receiving financial assistance under this Act shall maintain records sufficient to determine the amount of income received and the purposes for which such income is expended."

(e) PUBLIC SERVICE EMPLOYMENT.—Section 141(p) is amended by striking "part B of this title or part A of" and inserting "part A or C of".

SEC. 20. DISPLACEMENT GRIEVANCE PROCEDURE.

Section 144 (29 U.S.C. 1554) is amended by adding at the end the following new subsections:

"(d)(1)(A) If a grievant files a grievance alleging a displacement from employment in violation of paragraph (1) or (3) of section 143(b) and no decision is issued within 60 days of the date on which the grievant filed the grievance, any party to the grievance may submit the grievance to arbitration conducted in accordance with paragraphs (2) through (4) by—

(i) an arbitrator selected in accordance with subparagraph (C); or

(ii) the Governor of the State in which the displacement occurred.

"(B) If a grievant files such a grievance and a decision is issued that is adverse to a party to the grievance, the party may submit the grievance to such arbitration.

"(C) The arbitrator described in paragraph (1)(a)(i) shall be a qualified arbitrator who is independent of the interested parties. The arbitrator shall be jointly selected by the parties. If the parties cannot agree on an arbitrator within 15 days of the date on which the grievance is submitted to arbitration, the Governor shall appoint an arbitrator from a list of qualified arbitrators maintained by the Governor.

"(2) The arbitrator shall conduct an arbitration proceeding not later than 45 days after the date on which a party submitted the grievance to arbitration.

"(3) The arbitrator shall issue a decision concerning such grievance not later than 30 days after the date of such arbitration proceeding.

"(4) The parties to the arbitration shall evenly divide the cost of such arbitration proceeding.

"(e) Remedies available under this section for violations of paragraph (1) or (3) of section 143(b) may include—

"(1) suspension or termination of payments under this Act;

"(2) prohibition of placement of a participant in a program under this Act;

"(3) recapture of payments made under this Act;

"(4) if the grievant requests reinstatement to the position of the grievant prior to displacement, such reinstatement, together with such compensation (including back pay and lost benefits) and such terms, conditions, and privileges of employment, as the grievant enjoyed prior to displacement; and

"(5) such equitable relief as is necessary to make the grievant whole."

SEC. 21. ADVANCE PAYMENT.

Section 162 (29 U.S.C. 1572) is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(f) When contracting with nonprofit organizations of demonstrated effectiveness, the Secretary, States, and service delivery areas may make advance payments, except that such advance payments shall be based on the financial need of such organizations and shall not exceed 20 percent of the total contract amount."

SEC. 22. FISCAL CONTROLS.

(a) PROCUREMENT.—Section 164(a) (29 U.S.C. 1574(a)) is amended to read as follows:

"(a)(1) Each State shall establish such fiscal control and fund accounting procedures as may be necessary to assure the proper disbursement of, and accounting for, Federal funds paid to the recipient under titles II and III. Such procedures shall ensure that all financial transactions are conducted and records maintained in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles applicable in each State.

"(2) The Governor shall prescribe and implement uniform procurement standards to ensure fiscal accountability and prevent fraud and abuse in programs administered under this Act. Such standards shall include provisions to ensure that, for the State, substate areas, and service delivery areas—

"(A) procurements shall be conducted in a manner providing full and open competition;

"(B) the use of sole source procurements shall be minimized to the extent practicable, and in every case shall be justified;

"(C) procurements shall include an analysis of the reasonableness of costs and prices;

"(D) procurements shall not provide excess program income (for nonprofit and governmental entities) or excess profit (for private for-profit entities), and that appropriate factors shall be utilized in determining whether such income or profit is excessive, such as—

"(i) the complexity of the work to be performed;

"(ii) the risk borne by the contractor; and

"(iii) market conditions in the surrounding geographic area;

"(E) procurements shall clearly specify deliverables and the basis for payment;

"(F) written procedures shall be established for procurement transactions;

"(G) no grantee, contractor, subgrantee, or subcontractor shall engage in any conflict of interest, actual or apparent, in the selection, award and administration of a contract or grant under this Act; and

"(H) all grantees and subgrantees shall conduct oversight to ensure compliance with procurement standards.

"(3) The Governor shall annually conduct on-site monitoring of each service delivery area and substate area within the State to ensure compliance with the procurement standards established under paragraph (2).

"(4) If the Governor determines that a service delivery area or substate area is not in compliance with the procurement standards established under paragraph (2), the Governor shall—

"(A) require corrective action to secure prompt compliance; and

"(B) impose the sanctions described in subsections (b) and (e) in the event of failure to take the required corrective action.

"(5) The Governor shall submit to the Secretary the procurement standards established under paragraph (2), and shall annually certify to the Secretary that—

"(A) the State procurement standards fully satisfy the requirements described in paragraph (2);

"(B) the State has monitored substate areas and service delivery areas to ensure compliance with the procurement standards established under paragraph (2); and

"(C) the State has taken appropriate action to secure compliance under paragraph (4).

"(6) The Secretary shall biennially review the procurement standards established under paragraph (2) and notify the appropriate committees of the Congress whether the requirements contained in paragraph (5) have been satisfied.

"(7) If the Secretary determines that a Governor has not fulfilled the requirements of this subsection, the Secretary shall—

"(A) require corrective action to secure prompt compliance; and

"(B) impose the sanctions provided under subsection (f) in the event of failure of the Governor to take the required corrective action.

"(8) The Secretary, in consultation with the Inspector General, shall review the implementation of this subsection and submit a report to the appropriate committees of the Congress, not later than October 1, 1994, evaluating the effectiveness of the subsection in ensuring fiscal accountability and containing such recommendations as the Secretary determines to be appropriate."

(b) CONSEQUENCES OF FAILURES.—Section 164(b) of the Act is amended to read as follows:

"(b)(1) Whenever, as a result of financial and compliance audits or otherwise, the Governor determines that there is a substantial violation of this Act, and corrective action has not been taken, the Governor shall—

"(A) issue a notice of intent to revoke approval of all or part of the plan affected; or

"(B) impose a reorganization plan, which may include—

"(i) restructuring the private industry council involved;

"(ii) prohibiting the use of designated service providers;

"(iii) selecting an alternative administrative entity to administer a program for the service delivery area involved;

"(iv) merging the service delivery area into one or more other existing service delivery areas; or

"(v) making such other changes as the Secretary or Governor determines to be necessary to secure compliance.

"(2)(A) The actions taken by the Governor under paragraph (1)(A) may be appealed to the Secretary under the same terms and conditions as the disapproval of the plan and shall not become effective until—

"(i) the time for appeal has expired; or

"(ii) the Secretary has issued a decision regarding an appeal.

"(B) The actions taken by the Governor under paragraph (1)(B) may be appealed to the Secretary, who shall make a final decision within 60 days of the receipt of the appeal.

"(3) If the Governor fails to promptly take the actions required under paragraph (1), the Secretary shall take such actions."

SEC. 23. REPORTS, RECORDKEEPING, AND INVESTIGATIONS.

(a) RECORDS.—Section 165(a) (29 U.S.C. 1575(a)) is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(3) In order to allow for the preparation of estimates necessary to meet the requirements of subsection (c), recipients shall maintain standardized records for all individual participants, and provide to the Secretary a sufficient number of such records to provide an adequate random sample."

(b) AUDITS.—Section 165(b) is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(3)(A) In carrying out any audit under this Act (other than any initial audit survey or any audit investigating possible criminal or fraudulent conduct), either directly or through a grant or contract, the Secretary, the Inspector General, or the Comptroller General shall furnish to the State, administrative entity, recipient, or other entity to be audited, advance notification of the overall objectives and purposes of the audit, and any extensive recordkeeping or data requirements to be met, not fewer than 14 days (or as soon as practicable) prior to the commencement of the audit.

"(B) If the scope, objectives, or purposes of the audit change substantially during the course of the audit, the entity being audited shall be notified of the change as soon as practicable.

"(C) The reports on the results of such audits shall cite the law, regulation, policy, or other criteria applicable to any finding.

"(D) Nothing contained in this Act shall be construed so as to be inconsistent with the Inspector General Act of 1978 (5 U.S.C. App.) or government auditing standards issued by the Comptroller General."

(c) MONITORING.—Section 165(c) is amended by—

(1) striking "and" at the end of paragraph (1), and inserting a semicolon;

(2) striking paragraph (2); and

(3) adding at the end the following new paragraphs:

"(2) prescribe and maintain comparable management information systems, in accordance with guidelines that shall be prescribed by the Secretary, designed to facilitate the uniform compilation, cross tabulation, and analysis of programmatic, participant, and financial data, on statewide and service delivery area bases, necessary for reporting, monitoring, and evaluating purposes, including data necessary to comply with section 167; and

"(3) monitor the performance of service providers in complying with the terms of grants, contracts, or other agreements made under this Act."

(d) REPORT INFORMATION; RETENTION OF RECORDS.—Section 165 is further amended by inserting at the end the following new subsections:

"(d)(1) The reports required in subsection (c) shall include information pertaining to—

"(A) the relevant demographic characteristics (including race, ethnicity, sex, and age) and other related information about enrollees and participants;

"(B) the activities in which participants are enrolled, and the length of time that participants are engaged in such activities;

"(C) program outcomes, including occupations, for participants;

"(D) specified program costs; and

"(E) information necessary to prepare reports to comply with section 167.

"(2) The Secretary shall ensure that all elements required for the reports described in paragraph (1) are defined and reported uniformly.

"(e) Each Governor of a State participating in a program under this Act shall ensure that procedures are developed for retention of all records pertinent to all grants and agreements made under this Act, including financial, statistical, property, and participant records and supporting documentation. For funds allotted to a State for any program year, records must be retained for 2 years following the date on which the annual expenditure report containing the final expenditures charged to the allotment for such program year is submitted to the Secretary. Records for nonexpendable property shall be retained for a period of 3 years after final disposition of the property."

SEC. 24. DISCRIMINATION.

Section 167 (29 U.S.C. 1577) is amended by adding at the end the following new subsections:

"(e)(1) The head of the office of the Department of Labor referred to as the 'Directorate for Civil Rights' shall annually prepare a report on the administration and enforcement of this section.

"(2) The report required by paragraph (1) shall include—

"(A) an identification of the service delivery areas and States that have determined, during the preceding program year, not to be in compliance with this section;

"(B) for each such identification, the date on which the inquiry was begun and whether the inquiry was initiated on the basis of a complaint or at the initiative of the Department;

"(C) an identification of the service delivery areas and States awaiting findings by the Directorate;

"(D) the number of service delivery areas and States that, during the preceding year, were determined not to be in compliance with this section, and the number for which insufficient data prevented the making of such a determination, and information identifying the type of data that is missing or inadequate;

"(E) a statistical summary, broken down by race, sex, national origin, disability, or age, of the number of inquiries undertaken and the outcomes of the inquiries;

"(F) an identification of any service delivery area or State that has been determined, during the preceding year, to have failed to conduct objective assessments as required by sections 204 and 264 on a nondiscriminatory basis;

"(G)(i) the amount expended by the Department for the administration and enforcement by the Directorate of this section; and

"(ii) the number and percentage of full-time employees, and the full-time equivalent of the part-time employees, engaged in such administration and enforcement;

"(H) the number of onsite visits conducted each year, and whether the visits were initiated by the Department or by complaint;

"(I) the number of cases referred to the Attorney General, and for such cases—

"(i) the civil actions taken by the Attorney General on the cases;

"(ii) the use, by the Secretary, of the authority of title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 (42 U.S.C. 2000d et seq.), the Age Discrimination Act of 1975 (29 U.S.C. 621 et seq.), or section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973 (29 U.S.C. 794); and

"(J) a description of any other actions taken by the Secretary under, or related to the administration and enforcement of, this section.

"(3) The report required by this subsection shall be submitted to the Congress as part of the annual report of the Secretary under section 169(d).

"(f) In addition to any other sums authorized to be appropriated, there are authorized to be appropriated for the operations and expenses of the Directorate such sums as may be necessary for the purpose of increasing the number of full-time equivalent personnel available to the Directorate in order to comply with the requirements of this section."

SEC. 25. ESTABLISHMENT OF ADULT OPPORTUNITY PROGRAM.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Part A of title II (29 U.S.C. 1601 et seq.) is amended to read as follows:

"PART A—ADULT OPPORTUNITY PROGRAM

"SEC. 201. STATEMENT OF PURPOSE.

"It is the purpose of this part to establish programs to prepare adults for participation in the labor force by increasing occupational and educational skills resulting in improved long-term employability, increased employment and earnings, and reduced welfare dependency.

"SEC. 202. ALLOTMENT AND ALLOCATION.

"(a) ALLOTMENT.—

"(1) TERRITORIES.—Of the amount appropriated under section 3(a)(1) for each fiscal year and available to carry out this part, not more than one-quarter of 1 percent shall be allotted among Guam, the Virgin Islands, American Samoa, the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands, the Freely Associated States, and the Republic of Palau.

"(2) ALLOTMENT TO STATES.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—After determining the amounts to be allotted under paragraph (1), the Secretary shall allot the remainder to the States in accordance with subparagraph (B) for allocation to service delivery areas within each State in accordance with subsections (b) and (c).

"(B) BASIS.—Subject to paragraph (3), of the remainder described in subparagraph (A) for each fiscal year—

"(i) 33½ percent shall be allotted on the basis of the relative number of unemployed individuals residing in areas of substantial unemployment in each State as compared to the total number of such unemployed individuals in all such areas of substantial unemployment in all the States;

"(ii) 33½ percent shall be allotted on the basis of the relative excess number of unemployed individuals who reside in each State as compared to the total excess number of unemployed individuals in all the States; and

"(iii)(I) except as provided in subclause (II), 33½ percent shall be allotted on the basis of the relative number of economically disadvantaged individuals within each State as compared to the total number of economically disadvantaged individuals in all States; or

"(II) for any State in which there is any service delivery area described in section 101(a)(4)(A)(iii), 33½ percent shall be allotted on the basis of the higher of the number of adults in families with an income below the low-income level in such area or the number of economically disadvantaged individuals in such area.

"(3) LIMITATIONS ON ALLOTMENTS.—

"(A) STATE MINIMUM.—No State shall receive less than one-quarter of 1 percent of the amount available for allotment to the States under this subsection from the remainder described in paragraph (2)(A) for each fiscal year.

"(B) MINIMUM PERCENTAGE.—No State shall be allotted less than 90 percent of the allotment percentage of the State for the fiscal year preceding the fiscal year for which the determination is made.

"(C) MAXIMUM PERCENTAGE.—No State shall be allotted more than 130 percent of the allotment percentage of the State for the fiscal year preceding the fiscal year for which the determination is made.

"(D) ALLOTMENT PERCENTAGE.—

"(i) IN GENERAL.—For the purposes of this paragraph, the allotment percentage of a State shall be the percentage that the State received of all allotments under this subsection.

"(ii) FISCAL YEAR 1992.—For the purposes of this paragraph, for fiscal year 1992, the allotment percentage of a State shall be the percentage that the State received of all allotments under section 201 as in effect on the day before the date of the enactment of this section.

"(b) ALLOCATION TO SERVICE DELIVERY AREAS.—Of the amounts allotted to each State under subsection (a)(2)(B) for each fiscal year, the Governor shall allocate 77 percent in accordance with this subsection and 23 percent in accordance with subsection (c). Of such 77 percent—

"(1) 33½ percent shall be allocated among service delivery areas within the State on the basis of the relative number of unemployed individuals residing in areas of substantial unemployment in each service delivery area as compared to the total excess number of such unemployed individuals in all such areas of substantial unemployment in the State;

"(2) 33½ percent shall be allocated among service delivery areas within the State on the basis of the relative excess number of unemployed individuals who reside in each service delivery area as compared to the total excess number of unemployed individuals in all service delivery areas in the State; and

"(3)(A) except as provided in clause (ii), 33½ percent shall be allocated among service delivery areas within the State on the basis of the relative number of economically disadvantaged individuals within each service delivery area as compared to the total number of economically disadvantaged individuals in the State; or

"(B) for any service delivery area described in section 101(a)(4)(A)(iii), 33½ percent shall be allotted on the basis of the higher of the number of adults in families with an income below the low-income level in such area or the number of economically disadvantaged individuals in such area.

"(c) STATE ACTIVITIES.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The Governor shall allocate 23 percent of the amounts allotted to each State under subsection (a)(2)(B) for the activities described in paragraph (2).

"(2) USES.—Of the amounts allotted to each State under subsection (a)(2)(B) for each fiscal year—

"(A)(i) except as provided in clause (ii), 5 percent shall be available for overall administration, management, and auditing activities relating to programs under this title and for activities described in sections 121 and 122; and

"(ii) the Secretary shall ensure that the amount available to carry out the activities described in clause (i) is not less than $500,000 by—

"(I) ratably reducing, by an amount necessary to meet the requirement of subclause (II), the amounts available under clause (i) for the States that have amounts available in excess of $500,000; and

"(II) allotting the funds available under subclause (I) to the States that would otherwise have amounts available under clause (i) that are less than $500,000 in amounts necessary to ensure that such States have an amount equal to $500,000 to carry out the activities described in clause (i);

"(B) 2 percent shall be available for technical assistance and capacity building in developing the overall capability of the job training system within the State, including the development and training of State and local service delivery area staff, service provider staff, the development of information and exemplary program activities, and the conduct of research and other activities designed to improve the level, degree, and goals of programs conducted under this Act;

"(C) 3 percent shall be available to provide incentive grants authorized under section 106(b)(8);

"(D) 8 percent shall be available to carry out section 123; and

"(E) 5 percent shall be available to carry out section 204(d).

"(d) DEFINITIONS AND RULE.—

"(1) DEFINITIONS.—As used in this section:

"(A) ECONOMICALLY DISADVANTAGED INDIVIDUAL.—The term 'economically disadvantaged individual' means an individual who is age 22 through 72 and who has, or is a member of a family that has, received a total family income that, in relation to family size, was not in excess of the higher of—

"(i) the official poverty line (as defined by the Office of Management and Budget, and revised annually in accordance with section 673(2) of the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1981 (42 U.S.C. 9902(2)); or

"(ii) 70 percent of the lower living standard income level.

"(B) EXCESS NUMBER.—The term 'excess number' means—

"(i) with respect to the excess number of unemployed individuals within a State—

"(I) the number of unemployed individuals age 22 through 72 in excess of 4.5 percent of the civilian labor force in the State; or

"(II) the number of such unemployed individuals in excess of 4.5 percent of the civilian labor force in areas of substantial unemployment in such State; and

"(ii) with respect to the excess number of unemployed individuals within a service delivery area—

"(I) the number of unemployed individuals age 22 through 72 in excess of 4.5 percent of the civilian labor force in the service delivery area; or

"(II) the number of such unemployed individuals in excess of 4.5 percent of the civilian labor force in areas of substantial unemployment in such area.

"(2) SPECIAL RULE.—For the purposes of this section, the Secretary shall, as appropriate and to the extent practical, exclude college students and members of the Armed Forces from the determination of the number of economically disadvantaged individuals.

"SEC. 203. ELIGIBILITY FOR SERVICES.

"(A) ELIGIBILITY.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—An individual shall be eligible to participate in the program assisted under this part if such individual is—

"(A) 22 years of age or older; and

"(B) economically disadvantaged.

"(2) MINIMUM REQUIREMENT.—Not less than 65 percent of the participants in a program assisted under this part in each service delivery area shall be individuals who, in addition to meeting the requirements of paragraph (1), are included in one or more of the following categories:

"(A) Individuals who are basic skills deficient.

"(B) Individuals who are school dropouts.

"(C) Individuals who are recipients of aid to families with dependent children who either meet the requirements of section 403(l)(2)(B) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 603(l)(2)(B)) or have been provided an employability plan in accordance with section 482(b) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 682(b)).

"(D) Individuals with a disability.

"(E) Individuals who are homeless, as defined by subsections (a) and (c) of section 103 of the Stewart B. McKinney Homeless Assistance Act (42 U.S.C. 11302).

"(F) Individuals who are unemployed for the previous 6 months or longer.

"(G) Offenders.

"(H) Individuals who are limited-English proficient.

"(I) Individuals who are in a category established under subsection (b).

"(3) SPECIAL RULE.—Not more than 10 percent of all participants in a program assisted under this part in each service delivery area shall be individuals who are not economically disadvantaged if such individuals are age 22 or older and within 1 or more categories of individuals who face serious barriers to employment. Such categories may include the categories described in paragraph (2), or categories such as displaced homemakers, older workers, veterans, alcoholics, or addicts.

"(b) ADDITIONAL CATEGORY.—A service delivery area conducting a program assisted under this part may add one category of individuals who face serious barriers to employment to the categories of eligible individuals described in subsection (a)(2) if—

"(1) the service delivery area submits a request to the Governor identifying the additional category of individuals and justifying the inclusion of such category;

"(2) the Governor approves the request submitted under paragraph (1) and transmits the request to the Secretary, as part of the Governor's coordination and special services plan under section 121; and

"(3) the Secretary approves the request submitted under paragraph (2).

"SEC. 204. PROGRAM DESIGN.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—

"(1) PROGRAM REQUIREMENTS.—Each program assisted under this part shall include—

"(A) an objective assessment of the skill levels and service needs of each participant, including such factors as basic skills, occupational skills, prior work experience, employability, interests, aptitudes (including interests and aptitudes for nontraditional employment) and supportive service needs, except that a new assessment of a participant is not required if the program determines that a recent assessment of the participant conducted under another education or training program, such as the JOBS program, is an appropriate assessment;

"(B) development of service strategies that shall identify the employment goal (including, in appropriate circumstances, nontraditional employment), the appropriate achievement objectives, and the appropriate sequence of services for participants, taking into account the assessments conducted under paragraph (1), except that a new service strategy is not required if the program determines a recent service strategy developed for the participant under another education or training program (such as the JOBS program) is an appropriate service strategy;

"(C) a review of the progress of each participant in meeting the objectives of the service strategy; and

"(D) basic skills training and occupational skills training if the assessment and the service strategy indicate such training is appropriate.

"(2) ADDITIONAL REQUIREMENTS.—

"(A) MINIMUM INCOME PARTICIPANTS AND APPLICANTS.—Each service delivery area participating in a program assisted under this part shall ensure that each participant or applicant who meets the minimum income eligibility criteria shall be provided—

"(i) information on the full array of applicable or appropriate services that are available through the service delivery area or other service providers, including providers receiving funds under this Act; and

"(ii) referral to other appropriate training and educational programs that have the capacity to serve the participant or applicant either on a sequential or concurrent basis.

"(B) APPLICANTS NOT MEETING ENROLLMENT REQUIREMENTS.—

"(i) SERVICE PROVIDERS.—Each service provider shall ensure that an eligible applicant who does not meet the enrollment requirements of the particular program of the provider shall be referred to the service delivery area for further assessment, as necessary, and referrals to appropriate programs to meet the basic skills and training needs of the applicant.

"(ii) SERVICE DELIVERY AREA.—The service delivery area shall ensure that appropriate refer-als are made under clause (i) and shall maintain records on the referrals and the reasons for which applicants are referred.

"(b) AUTHORIZED SERVICES.—Subject to the limitations contained in subsection (c), services that may be made available to each participant under this part may include—

"(1) direct training services, including—

"(A) basic skills training, including remedial education, literacy training, and English-as-a-second-language instruction;

"(B) institutional skills training;

"(C) on-the-job training;

"(D) assessment of the skill levels and service needs of participants;

"(E) counseling, such as job counseling and career counseling;

"(F) case management services;

"(G) education-to-work transition activities;

"(H) programs that combine workplace training with related instruction;

"(I) work experience;

"(J) programs of advanced career training that provide a formal combination of on-the-job and institutional training and internship assignments that prepare individuals for career employment;

"(K) training programs operated by the private sector, including programs operated by labor organizations or by consortia of private sector employers utilizing private sector facilities, equipment, and personnel to train workers in occupations for which demand exceeds supply;

"(L) skill upgrading and retraining;

"(M) bilingual training;

"(N) entrepreneurial training, such as training activities for microenterprises;

"(O) vocational exploration;

"(P) training programs to develop work habits to help individuals obtain and retain employment;

"(Q) attainment of certificates of high school equivalency;

"(R) preapprenticeship programs;

"(S) on-site, industry-specific training programs supportive of industrial and economic development;

"(T) customized training conducted with a commitment by an employer or group of employers to employ an individual upon successful completion of the training; and

"(U) use of advanced learning technology for education, job preparation, and skills training; and

"(2) training-related and supportive services, including—

"(A) job search assistance;

"(B) outreach to make individuals aware of, and encourage the use of, employment and training services, including efforts to expand awareness of training and placement opportunities for limited-English proficient individuals and individuals with disabilities;

"(C) outreach, to develop awareness of, and encourage participation in, education, training services, and work experience programs to assist women in obtaining nontraditional employment, and to facilitate the retention of women in nontraditional employment, including services at the site of training or employment;

"(D) specialized surveys not available through other labor market information sources;

"(E) dissemination of information on program activities to employers;

"(F) development of job openings;

"(G) programs coordinated with other Federal employment-related activities;

"(H) supportive services, necessary to enable individuals to participate in the program, and to assist the individuals, for a period not to exceed 12 months following completion of training, to retain employment;

"(I) needs-based payments necessary to participate in accordance with a locally developed formula or procedure;

“(J) followup services with participants placed in unsubsidized employment; and “(K) services to obtain job placements for individual participants.

“(c) SPECIAL RULES.—

“(1) WORKPLACE CONTEXT AND INTEGRATION.—Basic skills training provided under this part shall, in appropriate circumstances, have a workplace context and be integrated with occupational skills training.

“(2) BASIC EDUCATION OR OCCUPATIONAL SKILLS.—

“(A) ADDITIONAL SERVICES.—Except as provided in subparagraph (B), job search, job search skills training, job clubs, and work experience provided under this part shall be accompanied by other services designed to increase the basic education or occupational skills of a participant.

“(B) LACK OF APPROPRIATENESS AND AVAILABILITY.—Each program assisted under this part may provide job search, job search skills training, and job clubs activities to a participant without the additional services described in subparagraph (A) if—

“(i) the assessment and service strategy of a participant indicate that the additional services are not appropriate; and

“(ii) the activities are not available to the participant through the employment service or other public agencies.

“(3) NEEDS-BASED PAYMENTS.—Needs-based payments provided under this part shall be limited to payments necessary for participation in the program assisted under this part in accordance with a locally developed formula or procedure.

“(4) COUNSELING AND SUPPORTIVE SERVICES.—Counseling and supportive services provided under this part may be provided to a participant for a period up to 1 year after the date on which the participant completes the program.

“(5) SERVICE STRATEGY.—The service strategy developed under subsection (a)(2) shall not be considered a contract.

“(6) VOLUNTEERS.—The service delivery area shall make opportunities available for successful individuals who have previously participated in programs under this part to volunteer assistance to participants in the form of mentoring, tutoring, and other activities.

“(d) TRAINING PROGRAMS FOR OLDER INDIVIDUALS.—

“(1) IN GENERAL.—The Governor is authorized to provide for job training programs that are developed in conjunction with service delivery areas within the State and that are consistent with the plan for the service delivery area prepared and submitted in accordance with section 104, and designed to assure the training and placement of older individuals in employment opportunities with private business concerns.

“(2) AGREEMENTS.—In carrying out this subsection, the Governor shall, after consultation with appropriate private industry councils and chief elected officials, enter into agreements with public agencies, nonprofit private organizations, including veterans organizations, and private business concerns.

“(3) CONSIDERATIONS.—The Governor shall give consideration to assisting programs involving training for jobs in growth industries and jobs reflecting the use of new technological skills.

“(4) COORDINATION.—In providing the services required by this subsection, the Governor shall make efforts to coordinate the delivery of such services with the delivery of services under title V of the Older Americans Act of 1965 (42 U.S.C. 3056 et seq.).

“(5) SERVICE PROVIDER SELECTION.—In the selection of service providers to serve older individuals under this subsection, the Governor shall give priority to national, State, and local agencies and organizations that have a record of demonstrated effectiveness in providing training and employment services to such older individuals.

“(6) ELIGIBILITY.—

“(A) ECONOMICALLY DISADVANTAGED.—Except as provided in subparagraph (B), an individual shall be eligible to participate in a job training program under this subsection only if the individual is economically disadvantaged and is age 55 or older.

“(B) SPECIAL RULE.—

“(i) INDIVIDUALS FACING SERIOUS BARRIERS TO EMPLOYMENT.—An individual who is not economically disadvantaged as described in subparagraph (A) shall be eligible to participate in a job training program under this subsection if the individual faces serious barriers to employment, is age 55 or older, and meets income eligibility requirements under title V of the Older Americans Act of 1965 (42 U.S.C. 3056 et seq.) subject to clause (ii).

“(ii) LIMITATION.—Not more than 10 percent of all participants in a program assisted under this subsection shall be such individuals.

“(7) APPLICABLE REQUIREMENTS.—In the event of a conflict between the requirements of this subsection and other requirements of this part, the requirements of this subsection shall apply with respect to programs conducted under this subsection.

“SEC. 205. LINKAGES.

“(a) IN GENERAL.—In conducting the program assisted under this part, the service delivery area shall establish appropriate linkages with other Federal programs. Such programs shall include, where feasible, programs assisted under—

“(1) the Adult Education Act (20 U.S.C. 1201 et seq.);

“(2) the Carl D. Perkins Vocational and Applied Technology Education Act (20 U.S.C. 2301 et seq.);

“(3) the Wagner-Peyser Act (29 U.S.C. 49 et seq.);

“(4) part F of title IV of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 681 et seq.);

“(5) the employment program established under section 6(d)(4) of the Food Stamp Act of 1977 (7 U.S.C. 2015(d)(4));

“(6) the National Apprenticeship Act (29 U.S.C. 50 et seq.);

“(7) the Rehabilitation Act of 1973 (29 U.S.C. 701 et seq.);

“(8) title V of the Older Americans Act of 1965 (42 U.S.C. 3056 et seq.);

“(9) chapter 2 of title II of the Trade Act of 1974 (19 U.S.C. 2271 et seq.); and

“(10) the Stewart B. McKinney Homeless Assistance Act (Public Law 100-77; 101 Stat. 482).

“(b) OTHER APPROPRIATE LINKAGES.—In addition to the linkages required under subsection (a), each service delivery area receiving financial assistance under this part shall establish other appropriate linkages to enhance the provision of services under this part. Such linkages may be established with local educational agencies, local service agencies, public housing agencies, community-based organizations, literacy organizations, business and labor organizations, volunteer groups working with disadvantaged adults, and other training, education, employment, economic development, and social service programs.

“SEC. 206. TRANSFER OF FUNDS.

“A service delivery area may transfer up to 10 percent of the funds provided under this part to the programs under parts B and C if such transfer is—

“(1) described in the job training plan; and

“(2) approved by the Governor.

“SEC. 207. STUDIES RELATING TO PLACEMENT AND TARGET POPULATIONS.

“The Comptroller General of the United States shall conduct a study to determine the number and percentage of adults assisted under this part that remain employed for at least 9 months after receiving assistance under this part. The Comptroller General shall submit a report containing the findings resulting from the study to the appropriate committees of Congress not later than 3 years after the date of enactment of this section.”.

(b) TECHNICAL AMENDMENT.—The table of contents relating to part A of title II is amended to read as follows:

“Sec. 201. Statement of purpose.

SEC. 26. ESTABLISHMENT OF SUMMER YOUTH OPPORTUNITY PROGRAM.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Part B of title II (29 U.S.C. 1631 et seq.) is amended to read as follows:

“PART B—SUMMER YOUTH EMPLOYMENT AND TRAINING PROGRAMS

“SEC. 251. PURPOSE.

“It is the purpose of programs assisted under this part—

“(1) to enhance the basic educational skills of youth;

“(2) to encourage school completion, or enrollment in supplementary or alternative school programs;

“(3) to provide eligible youth with exposure to the world of work; and

“(4) to enhance the citizenship skills of youth.

“SEC. 252. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS; ALLOTMENT AND ALLOCATION.

“(a) TERRITORIAL AND NATIVE AMERICAN ALLOCATION.—From the funds appropriated under section 3(a)(2), the Secretary shall first allocate to Guam, the Virgin Islands, American Samoa, the Freely Associated States, the Republic of Palau, the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands, and entities eligible under section 401 the same percentage of funds as were available to such areas and entities for the summer youth program in the fiscal year preceding the fiscal year for which the determination is made.

“(b) USE OF PART C FORMULA FOR ALLOTMENT AND ALLOCATION.—The remainder of funds appropriated under section 3(a)(2) shall, for each fiscal year, be allotted among States on the basis of the formula specified in section 202(a)(2)(B) and allocated among service delivery areas on the basis of the formula specified in section 202(b). For purposes of the application of the formulas under this subsection, the term ‘economically disadvantaged individual’ means an economically disadvantaged youth, as defined in section 262(d)(1)(A).

“SEC. 253. USE OF FUNDS.

“(a) IN GENERAL.—Funds available under this part may be used for—

“(1) basic and remedial education, institutional and on-the-job training, work experience programs, youth corps programs, employment counseling, occupational training, preparation for work, outreach and enrollment activities, employability assessment, job referral and placement, job search and job club activities, activities under programs described in section 265(b), and any other employment or job training activity designed to give employment to eligible individuals or prepare the individuals for, and place the individuals in, employment;

"(2) supportive services necessary to enable such individuals to participate in the program; and

"(3) administrative costs, not to exceed 15 percent of the funds available under this part.

"(b) BASIC AND REMEDIAL EDUCATION.—
 "(1) IN GENERAL.—A service delivery area shall expend funds (available under this Act or otherwise available to the service delivery area) for basic and remedial education as described in the job training plan under section 104.

"(2) EDUCATION OR TRAINING.—The education authorized by paragraph (1) may be provided by—

"(A) the year-round program under this part;

"(B) the Job Corps;

"(C) the JOBS program;

"(D) youth corps programs;

"(E) alternative or secondary schools; or

"(F) other education and training programs.

"(c) ASSESSMENT.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in paragraph (2), each participant under this part shall be provided with an objective assessment of the skill levels and service needs of the participant, which assessment may include a review of basic skills, occupational skills, prior work experience, employability, interests, aptitudes, and supportive service needs.

"(2) RECENT ASSESSMENTS.—The assessment described in paragraph (1), or a factor of such assessment is not required under a program under this part if the program uses recent assessments conducted under another education or training program (such as the JOBS program).

"(3) SERVICE STRATEGY.—The service delivery area shall develop a service strategy for participants that may identify achievement objectives, appropriate employment goals, and appropriate services for participants, taking into account the assessments conducted under this subsection or under such other education or training program.

"(d) FOLLOWUP SERVICES.—Service delivery areas shall make followup services available for participants if the service strategy indicates such services are appropriate.

"SEC. 254. LIMITATIONS.

"(a) USE DURING SUMMER MONTHS OR EQUIVALENT VACATION PERIOD.—

"(1) SUMMER MONTHS.—Except as provided in paragraph (2), programs under this part shall be conducted during the summer months.

"(2) VACATION PERIOD.—A service delivery area may, within the jurisdiction of any local educational agency that operates schools on a year-round, full-time basis, offer the programs under this part to participants during a vacation period treated as the equivalent of a summer vacation.

"(b) ELIGIBILITY.—An individual shall be eligible to participate in the program assisted under this part if such individual is economically disadvantaged and age 14 through 21.

"(c) CONCURRENT ENROLLMENT.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—An eligible individual participating in a program assisted under this part may concurrently be enrolled in programs under part C. Appropriate adjustment to the youth performance standards (regarding attainment of competencies) under sections 106(b)(4)(A)(i) and (ii) and 106(b)(5) shall be made to reflect the limited period of participation.

"(2) CONCURRENT ENROLLMENT AND TRANSFERS.—Youth being served under this part or part C youth programs are not required to be terminated from participation in one program in order to enroll in the other. The Secretary shall provide guidance to service delivery areas on simplified procedures for concurrent enrollment and transfers for youth from one program to the other.

"SEC. 255. APPLICABLE PROVISIONS.

"(a) COMPARABLE FUNCTIONS OF AGENCIES AND OFFICIALS.—Private industry councils established under title I, chief elected officials, State job training coordinating councils, and Governors shall have the same authority, duties, and responsibilities with respect to planning and administration of funds available under this part as the private industry councils, chief elected officials, State job training coordinating councils, and Governors have with respect to funds available under parts A and C of title II.

"(b) PROGRAM GOALS AND OBJECTIVES.—In accordance with subsection (a), each service delivery area shall establish written program goals and objectives that shall be used for evaluating the effectiveness of programs conducted under this part. Such goals and objectives may include—

"(1) improvement in school retention and completion;

"(2) improvement in academic performance, including mathematics and reading comprehension;

"(3) improvement in employability skills; and

"(4) demonstrated coordination with other community service organizations such as local educational agencies, law enforcement agencies, and drug and alcohol abuse prevention and treatment programs."

"(b) TECHNICAL AMENDMENT.—The table of contents relating to part B of title II is amended to read as follows:

"PART B—SUMMER YOUTH EMPLOYMENT AND TRAINING PROGRAMS

"Sec. 251. Purpose.

"Sec. 252. Authorization of appropriations; allotment and allocation.

"Sec. 253. Use of funds.

"Sec. 254. Limitations.

"Sec. 255. Applicable provisions."

SEC. 27. ESTABLISHMENT OF YOUTH OPPORTUNITY PROGRAM.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Title II (29 U.S.C. 1601 et seq.) is amended by adding at the end the following new part:

"PART C—YOUTH OPPORTUNITY PROGRAM

"SEC. 261. STATEMENT OF PURPOSE.

"It is the purpose of the programs assisted under this part to—

"(1) improve the long-term employability of youth;

"(2) enhance the educational, occupational, and citizenship skills of youth;

"(3) encourage school completion or enrollment in alternative school programs;

"(4) increase the employment and earnings of youth;

"(5) reduce welfare dependency; and

"(6) assist youth in addressing problems that impair the ability of youth to make successful transitions from school to work, apprenticeship, the military, or postsecondary education and training.

"SEC. 262. ALLOTMENT AND ALLOCATION.

"(a) ALLOTMENT.—

"(1) TERRITORIES.—Of the amount appropriated under section 3(a)(1) for each fiscal year and available to carry out this part, not more than one-quarter of 1 percent shall be allotted among Guam, the Virgin Islands, American Samoa, the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands, the Freely Associated States, and the Republic of Palau.

"(2) ALLOTMENT TO STATES.—After determining the amounts to be allotted under paragraph

(1), the Secretary shall allot the remainder to the States in accordance with paragraphs (2) and (3) of section 202(a), except that for purposes of the application of the formula under this subparagraph, the term 'economically disadvantaged individual' means an economically disadvantaged youth.

"(b) ALLOCATION TO SERVICE DELIVERY AREAS.—Of the amounts allotted to each State under subsection (a)(2) for each fiscal year, the Governor shall allocate 82 percent on the basis of the formula specified in section 202(b) and 18 percent in accordance with subsection (c). For purposes of the application of the formula under this subsection, the term 'economically disadvantaged individual' means an economically disadvantaged youth.

"(c) STATE ACTIVITIES.—The Governor shall allocate 18 percent of the amounts allotted to each State under subsection (a)(2) in the same proportions and for the activities, described in subparagraphs (A), (B), (C), and (D) of section 202(c)(2).

"(d) DEFINITIONS AND RULE.—

"(1) DEFINITIONS.—As used in this section:

"(A) ECONOMICALLY DISADVANTAGED YOUTH.—The term 'economically disadvantaged youth' means an individual who is age 16 through 21 and who has, or is a member of a family that has, received a total family income that, in relation to family size, was not in excess of the higher of—

"(i) the official poverty line (as defined by the Office of Management and Budget, and revised annually in accordance with section 673(2) of the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1981 (42 U.S.C. 9902(2)); or

"(ii) 70 percent of the lower living standard income level.

"(B) EXCESS NUMBER.—The term 'excess number' shall have the meaning given the term in section 202(d)(1)(B).

"(2) SPECIAL RULE.—For the purposes of this section, the Secretary shall, as appropriate and to the extent practicable, exclude college students and members of the Armed Forces from the determination of the number of economically disadvantaged youth and the size of the youth population in a service delivery area.

"SEC. 263. ELIGIBILITY FOR SERVICES.

"(a) IN-SCHOOL YOUTH.—An individual who is in school shall be eligible to participate in the program under this part if such individual is—

"(1)(A) age 16 through 21; or

"(B) if provided in the job training plan, age 14 through 21; and

"(2) economically disadvantaged, or participates in a compensatory education program under chapter 1 of title I of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 (20 U.S.C. 2711 et seq.).

"(b) TARGETED GROUPS OF IN-SCHOOL YOUTH.—Not less than 70 percent of the in-school individuals who participate in a program under this part shall be individuals who, in addition to meeting the requirements of subsection (a), are included in one or more of the following categories:

"(1) Individuals who are basic skills deficient.

"(2) Individuals with educational attainment that is one or more grade levels below the grade level appropriate to the age of the individuals.

"(3) Individuals who are pregnant or parenting.

"(4) Individuals with disabilities, including a learning disability.

"(5) Individuals exhibiting a pattern of disruptive behavior or disciplinary problems.

"(6) Individuals who are limited-English proficient.

"(7) Individuals who are homeless or runaway youth.

"(8) Offenders.

"(9) Individuals within a category established under subsection (h).

“(c) OUT-OF-SCHOOL YOUTH.—An individual who is out of school shall be eligible to participate in the program under this part if such individual is—

- “(1) age 16 through 21; and
- “(2) economically disadvantaged.
- “(d) TARGETED GROUPS OF OUT-OF-SCHOOL YOUTH.—Not less than 70 percent of the out-of-school individuals who participate in a program under this part shall be individuals who, in addition to meeting the requirements of subsection (c), are included in one or more of the following categories:

- “(1) Individuals who are basic skills deficient.
- “(2) Individuals who are school dropouts (subject to the conditions described in section 264(d)(2)).
- “(3) Individuals who are pregnant or parenting.
- “(4) Individuals with disabilities, including a learning disability.
- “(5) Homeless or run-away youth.
- “(6) Offenders.
- “(7) Individuals who are limited-English proficient.

“(8) Individuals in a category established under subsection (h).

“(e) EXCEPTIONS.—Not more than 10 percent of participants in the program assisted under this part in each service delivery area shall be individuals who do not meet the requirements of subsection (a)(2) or (c)(2), if such individuals are within one or more categories of individuals who face serious barriers to employment. Such categories may include the categories described in subsections (b) and (d), or categories such as individuals with limited-English language proficiency, alcoholics, or drug addicts.

“(f) RATIO OF OUT-OF-SCHOOL TO IN-SCHOOL YOUTH.—Not less than 50 percent of the participants in the program under this part in each service delivery area shall be out-of-school individuals who meet the requirements of subsection (c), (d), or (e).

“(g) SCHOOLWIDE PROJECTS FOR LOW-INCOME SCHOOLS.—

“(1) IN GENERAL.—In addition to the individuals described in subsection (e), an individual who does not meet the requirements of subsection (a)(2) may participate in the programs assisted under this part if such individual is enrolled in a public school—

- “(A) that is located in a poverty area;
- “(B) that is served by a local educational agency that is eligible for assistance under chapter 1 of title I of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 (20 U.S.C. 2711 et seq.);

“(C) in which not less than 75 percent of the students enrolled are included in the categories described in subsection (b); and

“(D) that conducts a program under a cooperative arrangement that meets the requirements of section 265(d).

“(2) DEFINITION.—For the purposes of paragraph (1), the term ‘poverty area’ means an urban census tract or a nonmetropolitan county with a poverty rate of 30 percent or more, as determined by the Bureau of the Census.

“(h) ADDITIONAL CATEGORY.—A service delivery area conducting a program assisted under this part may add one category of youth who face serious barriers to employment to the categories of eligible individuals specified in subsection (b) and one category to the categories of eligible individuals described in subsection (d) if—

“(1) the service delivery area submits a request to the Governor identifying the additional category of individuals and justifying the inclusion of such category;

“(2) the Governor approves the request submitted under paragraph (1) and transmits the request to the Secretary, as part of the Governor’s coordination and special services plan; and

“(3) the Secretary approves the request submitted under paragraph (2).

“SEC. 264. PROGRAM DESIGN.

“(a) YEAR-ROUND OPERATION.—The programs under this part shall be conducted on a year-round basis.

“(b) ESSENTIAL ELEMENTS.—

“(1) IN GENERAL.—The programs under this part shall include—

“(A) an objective assessment of the skill levels and service needs of each participant, which assessment shall include a review of basic skills, occupational skills, prior work experience, employability, interests, aptitudes (including interests and aptitudes for nontraditional jobs), and supportive service needs, except that a new assessment of a participant is not required if the program determines it is appropriate to use a recent assessment of the participant conducted under another education or training program (such as the JOBS program);

“(B) development of service strategies that shall identify achievement objectives, appropriate employment goals (including, in appropriate circumstances, nontraditional employment) and appropriate services for participants, taking into account the assessments conducted under paragraph (1), except that a new service strategy is not required if the program determines it is appropriate to use a recent service strategy developed for the participant under another education or training program (such as the JOBS program);

“(C) a review of the progress of each participant in meeting the objectives of the service strategy; and

“(D) the following services, which shall be provided either directly or through arrangement with other programs to a participant if the assessment and service strategy indicate such services are appropriate:

- “(i) Basic skills training.
- “(ii) Occupational skills training.
- “(iii) Preemployment and work maturity skills training.

“(iv) Work experience combined with skills training.

“(v) Supportive services.

“(2) ADDITIONAL REQUIREMENTS.—

“(A) MINIMUM INCOME PARTICIPANTS AND APPLICANTS.—Each service delivery area participating in a program assisted under this part shall ensure that each participant or applicant who meets the minimum income eligibility criteria shall be provided—

“(i) information on the full array of applicable or appropriate services that are available through the service delivery area or other service providers, including providers receiving funds under this Act; and

“(ii) referral to other appropriate training and educational programs that have the capacity to serve the participant or applicant either on a sequential or concurrent basis.

“(B) APPLICANTS NOT MEETING ENROLLMENT REQUIREMENTS.—

“(i) SERVICE PROVIDERS.—Each service provider shall ensure that an eligible applicant who does not meet the enrollment requirements of the particular program of the provider shall be referred to the service delivery area for further assessment, as necessary, and referred to appropriate programs to meet the basic skills and training needs of the applicant.

“(ii) SERVICE DELIVERY AREA.—The service delivery area shall ensure that appropriate referrals are made under clause (i) and shall maintain records on the referrals and the reasons for which applicants are referred.

“(c) AUTHORIZED SERVICES.—Services which may be made available to youth with funds provided under this part may include—

“(1) direct training services, including—

- “(A) the services described in section 204(b)(1);
- “(B) tutoring and study skills training;
- “(C) alternative high school services within programs that meet the requirements of section 141(o)(1);

“(D) instruction leading to high school completion or the equivalent;

“(E) mentoring;

“(F) limited internships in the private sector;

“(G) training or education that is combined with community and youth service opportunities in public agencies, nonprofit agencies, and other appropriate agencies, institutions, and organizations, including youth corps programs;

“(H) entry employment experience programs;

“(I) school-to-work transition services;

“(J) school-to-postsecondary education transition services; and

“(K) school-to-apprenticeship transition services; and

“(B) drug and alcohol abuse counseling and referral;

“(C) services encouraging parental, spousal, and other significant adult involvement in the program of the participant; and

“(D) cash incentives and bonuses based on attendance and performance in a program.

“(d) ADDITIONAL REQUIREMENTS.—

“(1) STRATEGIES AND SERVICES.—In developing service strategies and designing services for the program under this part, the service delivery area and private industry council shall take into consideration exemplary program strategies and practices.

“(2) SCHOOL DROPOUTS.—In order to participate in a program assisted under this part, an individual who is under the age of 18 and a school dropout shall—

“(A) reenroll in and attend school;

“(B) enroll in and attend an alternative high school;

“(C) enroll in and attend an alternative course of study approved by the local educational agency; or

“(D) enroll in and attend a high school equivalency program.

“(3) SKILLS TRAINING.—

“(A) PREEMPLOYMENT AND WORK MATURITY SKILLS TRAINING.—Preemployment and work maturity skills training authorized by this part shall be accompanied by either work experience or other additional services designed to increase the basic educational or occupational skills of a participant. The additional services may be provided, sequentially or concurrently, under other education and training programs, including the Job Corps and the JOBS program.

“(B) ADDITIONAL SERVICES.—Work experience, job search assistance, job search skills training, and job club activities authorized by this part shall be accompanied by additional services designed to increase the basic education or occupational skills of a participant. The additional services may be provided, sequentially or concurrently, under other education and training programs, including the Job Corps and the JOBS program.

“(4) NEEDS-BASED PAYMENTS.—Needs-based payments authorized under this part shall be limited to payments necessary to permit participation in the program in accordance with a locally developed formula or procedure.

“(5) COUNSELING AND SUPPORTIVE SERVICES.—Counseling and supportive services authorized under this part may be provided to a participant for a period of up to 1 year after termination from the program.

“(6) NONCONTRACT TREATMENT.—The service strategy developed under subsection (b)(1)(B) shall not be considered a contract.

"(7) VOLUNTEERS.—The service delivery area shall make opportunities available for successful individuals who have previously participated in programs under this part to volunteer assistance to participants in the form of mentoring, tutoring, and other activities.

"SEC. 265. LINKAGES.

"(a) EDUCATIONAL LINKAGES.—In conducting a program under this part, service delivery areas shall establish linkages with the appropriate educational agencies responsible for service to participants. Such linkages shall include—

"(1) formal agreements with local educational agencies that will identify—

"(A) the procedures for referring and serving in-school youth;

"(B) the methods of assessment of in-school youth; and

"(C) procedures for notifying the program when a youth drops out of the school system;

"(2) arrangements to ensure that the program under this part supplements existing programs provided by local educational agencies to in-school youth;

"(3) arrangements to ensure that the program under this part utilizes, to the extent possible, existing services provided by local educational agencies to out-of-school youth; and

"(4) arrangements to ensure that for in-school participants there is a regular exchange of information between the program and the educational agency relating to participant progress, problems, and needs, including, in appropriate circumstances, interim assessment results.

"(b) EDUCATION AND TRAINING PROGRAM LINKAGES.—In conducting the program under this part, the service delivery area shall establish appropriate linkages with other education and training programs authorized under Federal law. Such programs shall include, where feasible, programs authorized by—

"(1) part B of title IV (the Job Corps);

"(2) parts A through D of chapter 1 of title I of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 (20 U.S.C. 2711 et seq.);

"(d) The Secretary shall provide all Job Corps contractors with an equitable and negotiated management fee of not less than 1 percent of the contract amount."

SEC. 32. NATIONAL ACTIVITIES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Part D of title IV (29 U.S.C. 1731 et seq.) is amended—

(1) in section 451, to read as follows:

"SEC. 451. NATIONAL PARTNERSHIP AND SPECIAL TRAINING PROGRAMS.

"(a) STATEMENT OF PURPOSE.—It is the purpose of this section to—

"(1) improve access to employment and training opportunities for individuals with special needs;

"(2) help alleviate skill shortages and enhance the competitiveness of the labor force;

"(3) meet special training needs that are best addressed on a multistate or industry-wide basis; and

"(4) encourage the participation and support of all segments of society to further the purposes of this Act.

"(b) PROGRAM AUTHORIZED.—The Secretary may establish a system of, and award, special grants to eligible entities to carry out programs that are most appropriately administered at the national level.

"(c) PROGRAMS.—Programs that are most appropriately administered at the national level include—

"(1) partnership programs with national organizations with special expertise in developing, organizing and administering employment and training programs at the national, State and local level, such as industry and labor associations, public interest groups, community-based organizations representative of groups that encounter special difficulties in the labor market, and other organizations with special knowledge or capabilities in education and training;

"(2) programs that—

"(A) address industry-wide skill shortages;

"(B) meet training needs that are best addressed on a multistate basis; and

"(C) further the goals of increasing the competitiveness of the United States labor force; and

"(3) programs that require technical expertise available at the national level to serve specialized needs of particular client groups, including at-risk youth, offenders, individuals of limited English language proficiency, individuals with disabilities, women, immigrants, single parents, substance abusers, displaced homemakers, youth, older workers, veterans, individuals who lack education credentials, public assistance recipients, and other individuals whom the Secretary determines require special assistance."

(2) in section 452, to read as follows:

"SEC. 452. RESEARCH, DEMONSTRATION, AND EVALUATION.

"(a) STATEMENT OF PURPOSE.—It is the purpose of this section to assist the United States in expanding work opportunities and ensuring access to such opportunities for all who desire such opportunities.

"(b) PROGRAM ESTABLISHED.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall establish a comprehensive program of training and employment research, utilizing the methods, techniques, and knowledge of the behavioral and social sciences and such other methods, techniques, and knowledge as will aid in the solution of the employment and training problems of the United States.

"(2) STUDIES.—The program established under this section may include studies concerning—

"(A) the development or improvement of Federal, State, local, and privately supported employment and training programs;

"(B) labor market processes and outcomes, including improving workplace literacy;

"(C) policies and programs to reduce unemployment and the relationships of the policies and programs with price stability and other national goals;

"(D) productivity of labor;

"(E) improved means of using projections of labor supply and demand, including occupational and skill requirements and areas of labor shortages at the national and subnational levels;

"(F) methods of improving the wages and employment opportunities of low-skilled, disadvantaged, and dislocated workers, and workers with obsolete skills;

"(G) methods of addressing the needs of at-risk populations, such as youth, homeless individuals and other dependent populations, older workers, and other groups with multiple barriers to employment;

"(H) methods of developing information on immigration, international trade and competition, technological change and labor shortages; and

"(I) methods of easing the transition from school to work, from transfer payment receipt to self-sufficiency, from one job to another, and from work to retirement.

"(c) PILOT AND DEMONSTRATION PROGRAMS.—

"(1) PROGRAM ESTABLISHED.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall establish a program of pilot and demonstration programs for the purpose of developing and improving techniques and demonstrating the effectiveness of specialized methods in meeting employment and training problems. The Secretary may award grants and enter into contracts with eligible entities to carry out the programs.

"(B) PROJECTS.—Such programs may include projects in such areas as—

"(i) school-to-work transition;

"(ii) new methods of imparting literacy skills and basic education;

"(iii) new training techniques (including projects undertaken with the private sector);

"(iv) methods to eliminate artificial barriers to employment;

"(v) approaches that foster participation of groups that encounter special problems in the labor market (such as displaced homemakers, teen parents, welfare recipients, and older individuals);

"(vi) processes that demonstrate effective methods for alleviating the adverse effects of dislocations and plant closings on workers and their communities; and

"(vii) cooperative ventures among business, industry, labor, trade associations, or national organizations to develop new and cost-effective approaches to improving work force literacy.

"(2) DEMONSTRATION PROGRAMS.—Demonstration programs assisted under this subsection shall include a formal, rigorous evaluation component.

"(3) SPECIAL RULE.—No pilot program under this subsection shall be assisted under this section for a period of more than 3 years.

"(d) EVALUATION.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—

"(A) PROGRAMS.—

"(i) JOB TRAINING PROGRAMS.—The Secretary shall provide for the continuing evaluation of programs conducted under this Act, including the cost effectiveness of the program in achieving the purposes of this Act.

"(ii) OTHER PROGRAMS.—The Secretary may conduct evaluations of other federally funded employment-related activities including programs administered under—

"(I) the Wagner-Peyser Act (29 U.S.C. 49 et seq.);

"(II) the National Apprenticeship Act (29 U.S.C. 50 et seq.);

"(III) the Older Americans Act of 1965 (42 U.S.C. 3001 et seq.);

"(IV) chapter 2 of title II of the Trade Act of 1974 (19 U.S.C. 2271 et seq.); and

"(V) the Federal unemployment insurance program under titles III, IX, and XII of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 501 et seq., 1101 et seq., and 1321 et seq.).

"(B) TECHNIQUES.—

"(i) METHODS.—Evaluations conducted under subparagraph (A) shall utilize sound statistical methods and techniques of the behavioral and social sciences, including random assignment methodologies if feasible.

"(ii) ANALYSIS.—Such evaluations may include cost-benefit analysis of programs, the impact of the programs on community and participants, the extent to which programs meet the needs of various demographic groups, and the effectiveness of the delivery systems used by various programs.

"(iii) EFFECTIVENESS.—The Secretary shall evaluate the effectiveness of programs authorized under this Act with respect to—

"(1) the statutory goals;

"(II) the performance standards established by the Secretary; and

"(III) the extent to which such programs enhance the employment and earnings of participants, reduce income support costs, and improve the employment competencies of participants in comparison to comparable persons who did not participate in such programs, and to the extent feasible, increase the level of total employment over the level that would have existed in the absence of such programs.

"(2) ADDITIONAL EVALUATION.—The Secretary shall evaluate the impact of title II programs on participant employment, earnings, and welfare dependency in multiple sites using the random assignment of individuals to—

"(A) groups receiving services under programs authorized under the Job Training and Basic Skills Act of 1992; or

"(B) groups not receiving such services.";

(3) in section 453, to read as follows:

"SEC. 453. TRAINING AND INFORMATION PROGRAMS.

"(a) STAFF TRAINING.—The Secretary, directly or through grants, contracts, or other arrangements, shall—

"(1) develop curricula and provide appropriate training, technical assistance, staff development and other activities at the national, regional, State, and local levels that will—

"(A) enhance the skills, knowledge, and expertise of the personnel who staff employment and training and other closely related human service systems, including service providers;

"(B) improve the quality of services provided to individuals under this Act and other Federal employment and training programs and encourage integrated service delivery;

"(C) improve the planning, procurement, and contracting practices in accordance with this Act; and

"(D) provide broad human services policy and planning training to private industry council volunteers and members of State human investment coordinating councils;

"(2) prepare and disseminate training curricula and materials for employment and training professionals and support staff, which curricula and materials focus on enhancing staff competencies and professionalism, including instruction on the administrative requirements of this Act, such as procurement and contracting standards and regulations; and

"(3) disseminate innovative and successful models, materials, methods, and program information and provide training in the techniques learned from the sources to foster improved program quality and professional growth among managers, service delivery providers, and administrators, involved in the delivery of employment and training services.

"(b) CLEARINGHOUSE.—The Secretary is authorized to establish a clearinghouse to—

"(1) regularly identify, develop, and disseminate innovative materials that enhance the knowledge and quality of performance of employment and training personnel;

"(2) facilitate effective communications and coordination among employment and training personnel;

"(3) establish a computer communications network to share information among employment and training personnel and institutions; and

"(4) establish linkages with existing human resources clearinghouses, including the Education Research Information Centers and the National Network for Curriculum Coordination in Vocational and Technical Education.

"(c) CONSULTATION.—The Secretary shall consult with the Secretaries of Education and Health and Human Services, as appropriate, to coordinate activities under this section with other relevant institutes, centers, laboratories, clearinghouses, or dissemination networks.";

(4) striking sections 454 through 456; and
(5)(A) redesignating section 457 as section 454; and

(b) striking the heading for section 454 (as redesignated by subparagraph (A)) and inserting "NONTRADITIONAL EMPLOYMENT DEMONSTRATION PROGRAM".

(b) TECHNICAL AMENDMENT.—The table of contents relating to part D of title IV is amended to read as follows:

"PART D—NATIONAL ACTIVITIES

"Sec. 451. National partnership and special training programs.

"Sec. 452. Research, demonstration, and evaluation.

"Sec. 453. Training and information programs.

"Sec. 454. Nontraditional employment demonstration program."

(c) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—

(1) Section 161(b)(2) (29 U.S.C. 1571(b)(2)) is amended by striking "452 through 455" and inserting "451 through 454".

(2) Section 433(c)(1) (29 U.S.C. 1703(c)(1)) is amended by striking "452 and 455" and inserting "451 through 454".

SEC. 33. COOPERATIVE LABOR MARKET INFORMATION PROGRAM.

Section 462 (29 U.S.C. 1752) is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(g)(1) The Secretary may engage in research, demonstration, or other activities, including activities that may be carried out by States, designed to determine the feasibility of various methods of organizing and making accessible nationwide information on the quarterly earnings for all individuals for whom such information is collected by the States.

"(2) The Secretary shall submit a report to Congress based on the findings resulting from the activities described in paragraph (1) concerning the costs and benefits of establishing and maintaining a national longitudinal data base utilizing unemployment insurance wage records. Such report shall also address the feasibility of establishing appropriate safeguards for maintaining the confidentiality of information and privacy of individuals."

SEC. 34. NATIONAL OCCUPATIONAL INFORMATION COORDINATING COMMITTEE.

Section 464(a)(1) (29 U.S.C. 1754(a)(1)) is amended by striking "not more than $5,000,000" and inserting "$6,000,000".

SEC. 35. REPLICATION OF SUCCESSFUL PROGRAMS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Title IV (29 U.S.C. 1671 et seq.) is amended by adding at the end the following new part:

"PART H—REPLICATION OF SUCCESSFUL PROGRAMS

"SEC. 485. REPLICATION.

"(a) REPLICATION PROGRAM AUTHORIZED.—The Secretary shall make competitive grants to public or private nonprofit organizations for technical assistance, and to States and service delivery areas for planning and program development, associated with the replication of successful programs under this part.

"(b) AWARDS.—

"(1) FACTORS.—In awarding grants for replication of successful programs to public or private nonprofit organizations, States, or service delivery areas under this part, the Secretary shall select programs that are likely to be successful in improving the employment prospects of economically disadvantaged youths and adults and are replicable on a large scale.

"(2) CONSIDERATIONS.—In selecting such programs the Secretary shall consider—

"(A) the size and scope of the program;

"(B) the length of time that the program has been operating;

"(C) the nature and reliability of measurable outcomes for the program;

"(D) the capacity of the sponsoring organization to provide the technical assistance necessary for States and service delivery areas to replicate the program; and

"(E) the likelihood that the program will be successful in diverse economic, geographic, and cultural environments.

"(c) APPLICATIONS.—

"(1) NONPROFIT ORGANIZATION.—Any public or private nonprofit organization with the capacity to provide the technical assistance necessary for program replication may submit an application to the Secretary at such time, in such manner, and containing or accompanied by such information as the Secretary may reasonably require. Each such application shall describe the program proposed for replication and available evidence of the success of the program in improving the employment prospects of economically disadvantaged youths and adults.

"(2) STATE; SERVICE DELIVERY AREA.—Any State or service delivery area desiring to receive a grant to participate in a replication effort shall submit an application to the Secretary at such time, in such manner, and containing or accompanied by such information as the Secretary may reasonably require.

"(d) GRANT LIMITATIONS.—

"(1) LIMITATION.—In any 3-year period the Secretary shall not approve grants for the same replication activities in more than 10 States or communities. During this 3-year period, the results of such limited replication efforts shall be carefully evaluated and examined by the Secretary regarding the advisability of replicating the model program in more than 10 States or communities or for longer than 3 years.

"(2) WAIVER.—The Secretary may waive the limitation set forth in paragraph (1) for a program if immediate replication efforts on a larger scale are warranted by extensive evaluation of the program prior to designation as a model program under this section."

(b) TECHNICAL AMENDMENT.—The table of contents relating to title IV is amended by adding after the item relating to section 481 the following:

"Sec. 485. Replication."

SEC. 36. FAIR CHANCE YOUTH OPPORTUNITIES UNLIMITED PROGRAM.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Title IV (29 U.S.C. 1671 et seq.) (as amended by section 157) is further amended by adding at the end the following new part:

"PART I—FAIR CHANCE YOUTH OPPORTUNITIES UNLIMITED PROGRAM

"SEC. 491. STATEMENT OF PURPOSE.

"The purposes of this part include—

"(1) ensuring access to education and job training for youth residing in high poverty areas of urban and rural communities;

"(2) enabling communities with high concentrations of poverty to establish and meet goals for improving the opportunities available to youth within the community;

"(3) making provisions for a comprehensive range of education, training, and employment services to disadvantaged youth who are not currently served or are underserved by Federal education and job training programs; and

"(4) facilitating the coordination of comprehensive services to serve youth in such communities.

"SEC. 492. DEFINITIONS.

"As used in this part:

"(1) PARTICIPATING COMMUNITY.—The term 'participating community' means a city in a metropolitan statistical area, the contiguous nonmetropolitan counties in a rural area, or a Native American Indian reservation or Alaska Native village, participating in the Fair Chance Youth Opportunities Unlimited Program established under this part.

"(2) POVERTY AREA.—The term 'poverty area' means an urban census tract, a nonmetropolitan county, a Native American Indian reservation, or an Alaska Native village, with a poverty rate of 30 percent or more, as determined by the Bureau of the Census.

"(3) TARGET AREA.—The term 'target area' means a poverty area or set of contiguous poverty areas that will be the focus of the Fair Chance Youth Opportunities Unlimited Program in a participating community.

"SEC. 493. PROGRAM AUTHORIZED.

"(a) PROGRAM ESTABLISHED.—The Secretary may establish a national program to provide Fair Chance Youth Opportunities Unlimited grants to service delivery areas to pay for the Federal share of providing comprehensive services to youth living in poverty areas in the cities and rural areas of the Nation.

"(b) GRANTS.—

"(1) GRANT RECEIPTS.—The Secretary shall award grants under this part—

"(A) to the service delivery area (on behalf of the participating community) in which a target area is located; or

"(B) in the case of a grant and involving the target area located on a Native American Indian reservation or Alaska Native village, to the grantee designated under subsection (c) or (d) of section 401.

"(2) NUMBER.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary may award not more than 25 grants in the first fiscal year that the program assisted under this part is authorized, and may award not more than a total of 40 grants over the first 5 fiscal years that the program assisted under this part is authorized.

"(B) INDIAN RESERVATIONS AND ALASKA NATIVE VILLAGES.—In awarding grants under this part the Secretary shall award at least 1 grant, and not more than 3 grants, during the first 5 fiscal years that the program is assisted under this part to grantees designated under section 401 representing Native American Indian reservations and Alaska Native villages.

"(c) GRANT TERM.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Grants awarded under this part shall be for a 1-year period. Such a grant shall be renewable for each of the 2 succeeding fiscal years if the Secretary determines the grant recipient complied with conditions of the grant during the previous fiscal year.

"(2) EXTENSION.—The Secretary may extend the renewal period set forth in paragraph (1) for an additional 2 fiscal years on reapplication.

"(d) AWARD CRITERIA.—

"(1) CONSIDERATION.—In awarding grants under this part, the Secretary shall consider the quality of the proposed project, the goals to be achieved by the project, the likelihood of the successful implementation of the project, and the extent of community support for the project.

"(2) PRIORITY.—In awarding grants under this part, the Secretary shall give priority to participating communities with the highest rates of poverty.

"SEC. 494. APPLICATION.

"(a) ELIGIBILITY.—Participating communities that have the highest concentrations of poverty, as determined by the Secretary based on the latest census estimates, shall be eligible to apply for Fair Chance Youth Opportunities Unlimited grants.

"(b) APPLICATION.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Each participating community desiring a grant under this part shall, through the individuals described in subsection (c), submit an application to the Secretary at such time, in such manner and accompanied by such information as the Secretary may reasonably require.

"(2) CONTENTS.—The application described in paragraph (1) shall—

"(A) include a comprehensive plan for a Fair Chance Youth Opportunities Unlimited Program designed to achieve identifiable goals for youth in the target area;

"(B) set forth measurable program goals, which may include increasing—

"(i) the proportion of youths completing high school;

"(ii) the proportion of youths entering into community colleges or other advanced training programs; or

"(iii) the proportion of youths placed in jobs;

"(C) include information on supporting goals for the target area, such as increasing security and safety, or reducing the number of drug-related arrests;

"(D) provide assurances that the applicant will comply with the terms of the agreement described in section 495;

"(E) provide an assurance that all youth in the target areas have access to a coordinated and comprehensive range of education and training opportunities that serve the broadest range of youth interests and needs and simultaneously mobilize the diverse range of education and training providers in the participating community;

"(F) include information demonstrating the manner in which the participating community will make use of the resources, expertise, and commitment of institutions of higher education, educational agencies, and vocational and technical schools and institutes;

"(G) demonstrate how the participating community will make use of the resources, expertise, and commitment of such programs and service providers as—

"(i) community-based organizations providing vocational skills, literacy skills, remedial education, and general equivalency preparation, including community-based organizations serving youth with limited-English proficiency;

"(ii) youth corps programs, including youth conservation and human service corps;

"(iii) Job Corps centers;

"(iv) apprenticeship programs; and

"(v) other projects and programs funded under this Act;

"(H) include an estimate of the expected number of youth in the target area to be served;

"(I) include a description of the resources available in the participating community from private, local government, State, and Federal sources that will be used to achieve the goals of the program;

"(J) include an estimate of funds required to ensure access to appropriate education, training, and support services for all youth in the target area who seek such opportunities; and

"(K) provide evidence of support for accomplishing the stated goals of the participating community from—

"(i) local elected officials;

"(ii) the local school board;

"(iii) applicable private industry councils;

"(iv) local community leaders;

"(v) businesses;

"(vi) labor organizations; and

"(vii) other appropriate organizations.

"(c) APPLICATION LIMITATION.—The application described in subsection (b) may only be submitted to the Secretary on behalf of a participating community by—

"(1) in the case of a community comprised of a city in a metropolitan statistical area, the mayor, after the Governor of the State in which such city is located has had an opportunity to comment on the application;

"(2) in the case of a community comprised of contiguous nonmetropolitan counties in a rural area, the Governor of the State in which the counties are located; or

"(3) in the case of a community comprised of an Indian reservation or Alaska Native village, the grantee designated under section 401.

"SEC. 495. GRANT AGREEMENT.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—Each service delivery area receiving a grant under this part on behalf of a participating community shall enter into an agreement with the Secretary.

"(b) CONTENTS.—Each such agreement shall—

"(1) designate a target area that will be the focus of the program assisted under this part and shall have a population of not more than 25,000;

"(2) contain assurances that funds provided under this part will be used to support education, training, and supportive activities selected from a set of youth program models designated by the Secretary or from alternative models described in the application and approved by the Secretary, such as—

"(A) nonresidential learning centers;

"(B) alternative schools;

"(C) combined activities including—

"(i) summer remediation;

"(ii) work experience and work readiness training; and

"(iii) school-to-work, apprenticeship, or post-secondary education programs;

"(D) teen parent programs;

"(E) special programs run by community colleges;

"(F) youth centers;

"(G) initiatives aimed at increasing rural student enrollment in postsecondary institutions;

"(H) public-private collaborations to assure private sector employment and continued learning opportunities for youth; and

"(I) initiatives, such as youth corps programs, that combine community and youth service opportunities with education and training activities;

"(3) provide that only youth who are age 14 through 21 and reside in the target area shall be eligible to participate in the program;

"(4) contain assurances that the local educational agency and any other educational agency that operates secondary schools in the target area shall provide such activities and resources as are necessary to achieve the educational goals specified in the application;

"(5) contain assurances that the participating community will provide such activities and local resources as are necessary to achieve the goals specified in the application;

"(6) provide that the participating community will carry out special efforts to establish coordination with Federal, State, or local programs that serve the target population; and

"(7) provide assurances that funds provided under this part will be used only to pay the Federal share of the costs of programs and services not otherwise available in the target area and will supplement, and not supplant, funding from other local, State, and Federal sources available to youth in the target area.

"SEC. 496. PAYMENTS; FEDERAL SHARE.

"(a) PAYMENTS.—The Secretary shall pay to each service delivery area having an application approved under section 494 the Federal share of the costs of the activities described in the application.

"(b) FEDERAL SHARE.—The Federal share of the costs shall be 50 percent for each fiscal year a service delivery area receives assistance under this part.

"(c) LIMITATION.—Each service delivery area may provide not more than 50 percent of the non-Federal share of the costs from Federal sources other than funds received under this part.

"SEC. 497. REPORTING.

"The Secretary is authorized to establish such reporting procedures as are necessary to carry out the purposes of this part.

"SEC. 498. FEDERAL RESPONSIBILITIES.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall provide assistance to participating communities in implementing the projects assisted under this part.

"(b) INDEPENDENT EVALUATION.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall provide for a thorough, independent evaluation of the Fair Chance Youth Opportunities Unlimited Program to assess the outcomes of youth participating in programs assisted under this part.

"(2) EVALUATION MEASURES.—In conducting the evaluation described in paragraph (1) the Secretary shall include an assessment of—

"(A) the impact of youth residing in target areas, including the rates of school completion, enrollment in advanced education or training, and employment of the youth;

"(B) the extent to which participating communities fulfilled the goal of guaranteed access to appropriate education, training, and supportive services to all eligible youth residing in target areas who seek to participate;

"(C) the effectiveness of guaranteed access to comprehensive services combined with outreach and recruitment efforts in enlisting the participation of previously unserved or underserved youth residing in target areas;

"(D) the effectiveness of efforts to integrate service delivery in target areas, including systems of common intake, assessment, and case management; and

"(E) the feasibility of extending guaranteed access to comprehensive education, training and support services for youth in all areas of the United States, including possible approaches to incremental extension of such access over time.

"(c) REPORT.—The Secretary shall develop a report detailing the results of the independent evaluation described in subsection (b) and shall submit such report to the President and the appropriate committees of Congress not later than December 31, 1994, along with an analysis of expenditures made, results achieved, and problems in the operations and coordination of programs assisted under this part.

"(d) RESERVATION OF FUNDS.—The Secretary may reserve not more than 10 percent of the amount appropriated under this part in each fiscal year to carry out this section."

(b) TECHNICAL AMENDMENT.—The table of contents relating to title IV is amended by adding after the item relating to section 485 the following:

"PART I—FAIR CHANCE YOUTH OPPORTUNITIES UNLIMITED PROGRAM

"Sec. 491. Statement of purpose.

"Sec. 492. Definitions.

"Sec. 493. Program authorized.

"Sec. 494. Application.

"Sec. 495. Grant agreement.

"Sec. 496. Payments; Federal share.

"Sec. 497. Reporting.

"Sec. 498. Federal responsibilities."

SEC. 37. JOBS FOR EMPLOYABLE DEPENDENT INDIVIDUALS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Title V (29 U.S.C. 1791 et seq.) is amended to read as follows:

"TITLE V—JOBS FOR EMPLOYABLE DEPENDENT INDIVIDUALS INCENTIVE BONUS PROGRAM

"SEC. 501. STATEMENT OF PURPOSE.

"It is the purpose of this title to provide incentives to reduce welfare dependency, promote self-sufficiency, increase child support payments, and increase employment and earnings of individuals by providing to each participating State a bonus for providing job training to—

"(1) absent parents of children receiving aid to families with dependent children under part A of title IV of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 601 et seq.), who subsequent to such training pay child support for their children; and

"(2) blind or disabled individuals receiving supplemental security income under title XVI of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1381 et seq.), who subsequent to such training are successfully placed in and retain employment.

"SEC. 502. PAYMENTS.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—For each program year for which funds are appropriated to carry out this title, the Secretary shall pay to each participating State the amount that State is eligible to receive under this title.

"(b) RATABLE REDUCTIONS.—If the amount so appropriated is not sufficient to pay each State the amount each State is eligible to receive, the Secretary shall ratably reduce the amount paid to each State.

"(c) RATABLE INCREASES.—If any additional amount is made available for carrying out this title for any program year after the application of subsection (b), such additional amount shall be allocated among the States by increasing such payments in the same manner as they were reduced, except that no such State shall be paid an amount that exceeds the amount that the State is eligible to receive under this title.

"SEC. 503. AMOUNT OF INCENTIVE BONUS.

"The amount of the incentive bonus paid to each State shall be the sum of—

"(1) an amount equal to the total of the amounts of child support paid by each individual eligible under section 506(1) within the State, for up to 2 years after the termination of the individual from activities provided under this Act; and

"(2) an amount equal to the total reduction in the Federal contribution to the amounts received under title XVI of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1381 et seq.) by each individual eligible under section 506(2) within the State, for up to 2 years after the termination of the individual from activities provided under this Act.

"SEC. 504. USE OF INCENTIVE BONUS FUNDS.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—

"(1) ALLOCATION.—

"(A) ADMINISTRATIVE COSTS.—During any program year, the Governor may use an amount not to exceed 15 percent of the total bonus payments of a State for administrative costs incurred under this title, including data and information collection and compilation, record-keeping, or the preparation of applications for incentive bonuses.

"(B) DISTRIBUTION OF PAYMENTS.—The amount of incentive bonus payments that remain after the deduction of administrative costs under subparagraph (A) shall be distributed to service delivery areas and Job Corps centers within the State in accordance with an agreement between the Governor and representatives of such areas and centers. Such agreement shall reflect an equitable method of distribution that is based on the degree to which the efforts of such area or center contributed to the qualification of the State for an incentive bonus payment under this title.

"(2) SPECIAL RULE.—Not more than 10 percent of the amounts received under this title in any program year by each service delivery area and Job Corps center may be used for the administrative costs of establishing and maintaining systems necessary for operation of programs under this title, including the costs of providing incentive payments described in subsection (b), technical assistance, data and information collection and compilation, management information systems, post-program followup activities, and research and evaluation activities. The balance of funds not so expended shall be used by each service delivery area for activities described in sections 204 and 264, and by each Job Corps center for activities authorized under part B of title IV.

"(b) INCENTIVE PAYMENTS TO SERVICE PROVIDERS.—Each service delivery area or Job Corps center may make incentive payments to service providers, including participating State and local agencies, and community-based organizations, that demonstrate effectiveness in delivering employment and training services to individuals such as those described in section 506.

"(c) APPLICATION OF SECTION RELATING TO ADMINISTRATIVE ADJUDICATIONS.—Section 166 (relating to administrative adjudication) shall apply to the distribution of incentive bonus payments under this section.

"SEC. 505. NOTICE AND APPLICATION.

"(a) NOTICE OF INTENT TO PARTICIPATE.—Any State seeking to participate in the incentive bonus program established under this title shall notify the Secretary of the intent of the State to participate not later than 30 days before the beginning of the first program year of participation.

"(b) APPLICATION.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Any State seeking to receive an incentive bonus under this title shall submit an application to the Secretary at such time, in such manner, and containing or accompanied by such information as the Secretary may reasonably require in order to ensure compliance with this title.

"(2) CONTENTS.—Each application shall contain, at a minimum—

"(A) a list of the eligible individuals in the State who satisfied the requirements of section 506 during the program year;

"(B) the amount of the incentive bonus attributable to each eligible individual and due the State under section 503; and

"(C) certification that documentation is available to verify the eligibility of participants and the amount of the incentive bonus claimed by the State.

"(c) NOTICE OF APPROVAL OR DENIAL.—The Secretary shall promptly inform a State after receipt of the application as to whether or not the application of the State has been approved.

"SEC. 506. ELIGIBILITY FOR INCENTIVE BONUSES.

"An individual shall be eligible to participate in a program established under this title if—

"(1) the individual—

"(A) is an absent parent of any child receiving aid to families with dependent children under part A of title IV of the Social Security Act at the time such individual was determined to be eligible to participate in activities provided under this Act;

"(B) has participated in education, training or other activities (including the Job Corps) provided under this Act; and

"(C) pays child support for a child specified in subparagraph (A) following termination from activities provided under this Act; or

"(2) the individual—

"(A) is blind or disabled;

"(B) was receiving benefits under title XVI of the Social Security Act (relating to supplemental security income) at the time such individual was determined to be eligible to participate in activities under this Act;

"(C) has participated in education, training, or other activities (including the Job Corps) provided under this Act; and

"(D) earns from employment a wage or income.

"SEC. 507. INFORMATION AND DATA COLLECTION.

"(a) TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE.—In order to facilitate the collection exchange, and compilation of data and information required by this title, the Secretary is authorized to provide technical assistance to the States. Such assistance may include cost-effective methods for using State and Federal records to which the Secretary has lawful access.

"(b) JOINT REGULATIONS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary and the Secretary of Health and Human Services, shall jointly issue regulations regarding the sharing among public agencies participating in the programs assisted under this title of the data and information necessary to fulfill the requirements of this title.

"(2) SUBJECTS.—Such regulations shall ensure—

"(A) the availability of information necessary to verify the eligibility of participants and the amount of the incentive bonus payable; and

"(B) the maintenance of confidentiality of the information so shared in accordance with Federal and State privacy laws.

"SEC. 508. EVALUATION AND REPORT.

"(a) EVALUATION.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall conduct or provide for an evaluation of the incentive bonus program assisted under this title.

"(2) CONSIDERATIONS.—The Secretary shall consider—

"(A) whether the program results in increased service under this Act to absent parents of children receiving aid to families with dependent children under part A of title IV of the Social Security Act and to recipients of supplemental security income under title XVI of the Social Security Act;

"(B) whether the program results in increased child support payments;

"(C) whether the program is administratively feasible and cost effective;

"(D) whether the services provided to other eligible participants under part A of title II are affected by the implementation and operation of the incentive bonus program; and

"(E) such other factors as the Secretary determines to be appropriate.

"(b) REPORT TO CONGRESS.—Not later than January 1, 1997, the Secretary shall submit a report to the appropriate committees of the Congress on the effectiveness of the incentive bonus program assisted under this title. Such report shall include an analysis of the costs of such program and the results of program activities.

"SEC. 509. IMPLEMENTING REGULATIONS.

"The Secretary shall promulgate regulations implementing this title not later than January 31, 1993."

(b) TECHNICAL AMENDMENT.—The table of contents relating to title V is amended to read as follows:

"Sec. 501. Statement of purpose.

"Sec. 502. Payments.

"Sec. 503. Amount of incentive bonus.

"Sec. 504. Use of incentive bonus funds.

"Sec. 505. Notice and application.

"Sec. 506. Eligibility for incentive bonuses.

"Sec. 507. Information and data collection.

"Sec. 508. Evaluation and report.

"Sec. 509. Implementing regulations."

SEC. 38. EFFECTIVE DATE; TRANSITION PROVISIONS.

(a) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this Act shall take effect on December 1, 1992.

(b) PERFORMANCE STANDARDS.—The Secretary of Labor shall issue revised performance standards under the amendments made by section 10 as soon as the Secretary determines sufficient data are available, and not later than July 1, 1994.

(c) GUIDANCE.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall provide guidance and technical assistance to States and service delivery areas relating to the documentation required to verify the eligibility of participants under parts A and C of title II of the Job Training Partnership Act (29 U.S.C. 1601 et seq.).

(2) SPECIAL RULE.—The guidance provided under paragraph (1), while maintaining program integrity, shall—

(A) limit the documentation burden to the minimum necessary to adequately verify eligibility; and

(B) ensure, to the extent practicable, that the documentation requirements shall not discourage the participation of eligible individuals.

(3) DATE.—The Secretary shall provide the guidance described in paragraph (1) not later than December 1, 1992.

(d) RULES AND PROCEDURES.—The Secretary of Labor may establish such rules and procedures as may be necessary to provide for an orderly transition to programs established by, and implementation of, the amendments made by this title.

Mr. GRAHAM. Mr. President, I rise in support of S. 2055, the Job Training and Basic Skills Act of 1992. This reform of the Job Training Partnership Act program is long overdue, and I am pleased that the Senate is taking action on the measure today.

During my tenure as Governor of Florida and now as a U.S. Senator, I have been continually impressed with the cooperative efforts between private citizens and the various levels of government toward the goal of developing a skilled work force.

Study after study shows that our young people and people entering the workplace for the first time need to be better educated and trained to enhance productivity. The JTPA programs provide this foundation to thousands of individuals who otherwise might fall through the cracks and spend their lives unemployed or underemployed.

It is my understanding that this legislation, which has been developed over a course of about 4 years, specifically addresses title I and title II of the Job Training Partnership Act. It has support from both State governments, State university and college systems, and private industry councils.

However, I am concerned that the bill does not address title III of the act which directs funds to workers affected by large layoffs in a particular industry. The Economic Dislocated Workers Act, passed in 1986 and embraced in title III, provides emergency retraining funds to dislocated workers. Funds are made available by formula and grants for additional emergency training programs made to States upon State applications by the Secretary of Labor.

The State of Florida has submitted an application for title III funds and, I am pleased to report, has received $7 million in assistance from the Department of Labor specifically for retraining of workers affected by massive layoffs in the airline industry in south Florida.

Having visited the economic dislocated workers office in Dade County, I can assure Congress that this money is greatly appreciated and will be well spent.

Unfortunately, the restrictions on use of the money may leave many unserved. The Department of Labor has discouraged use of the emergency grant for minor retraining costs. For example, an airline mechanic who worked on one type of an aircraft cannot be retrained to work another aircraft even if the jobs are available in that market. Obviously the cost of providing this sort of minimal retraining is much less than financing training for an entirely new profession.

I realize that the original goal of JTPA titles I and II was to target the unemployable and the long-term unemployed. Individuals, such as the gentleman in the example I have just given, do already have significant skills. But without minor retraining, I fear he will become part one of the long-term unemployed. And then he will require costly retraining to a new position.

It is also my understanding that the Senate Labor Committee has plans in the future to address the title III program. I intend to work with the committee on this effort.

In the meantime, I encourage the Department of Labor to reconsider its implementation of the Economic Dislocated Workers Act, taking into account the issues I have raised.

Finally, Mr. President, there is a provision in the House companion measure to S. 2055 which I hope the Senate will accept in conference. The House bill would change the allocation of administrative funds for title III. Currently, administrative allocations are made based on expenditures under the title III program, rather than based on the overall program allocation as in the case of title I and title II. However, most programs don't know for certain what their expenditures will be at the beginning of the fiscal year, so figuring administrative expenditures based on total expenditures is very difficult. I hope the Senate will see the merits of the House proposal on this point.

I congratulate the sponsor of this bill, Senator SIMON, for years of hard work on the legislation and am hopeful that we will get a conference bill to the President for his approval quickly.

Mr. SIMON. Mr. President, our Nation is suffering from high unemployment and sluggish increase in productivity. Layoff and downsizings during this recession have affected a wider range of the labor force than ever before. Many working people are in daily fear of losing their jobs. By passing this legislation and improving our primary Federal job training program, we can provide real assistance to the unemployed. S. 2055, the Job Training and Basic Skills Act, amends the Job Training Partnership Act [JTPA] to strengthen employment and training assistance programs and to improve the targeting of services to economically disadvantaged adults and youth. JTPA is our primary Federal job training program, and we must do what we can to structure the program to meet the needs of our society.

Our Nation has been fighting the one enemy no peace-time economy has defeated—unemployment. Achieving full employment is the next logical step for a humane society and a society that intends to squarely confront the issues of global competitiveness and productivity. We cannot be competitive or productive when millions of Americans are out of work and companies are leaving the United States. We must meet the challenge to put America back to work for a simple reason. As I have said in the past, we have two options—we can pay people to work, or we can pay them for doing nothing. Obviously, we cannot afford to continue paying them not to work.

America's economy is facing critical human resource trend lines—the supply of unskilled and often uneducated labor is going up and the demand for unskilled labor is declining. As we move toward the 21st century, employment in professional, technical and managerial jobs is increasing substantially relative to the remaining service, operative and laborer positions. Our labor force as a whole is being required to attain higher levels of education and broader ranges of skills. In addition, companies have phased out or relocated high wage, specialized manufacturing jobs to other countries leaving behind lower wage service industry positions. We know these trends exist, yet our work force and our human resource programs are woefully unprepared to meet the challenges.

JTPA has accomplished the goals of increased participation in the private sector, higher placement rates and lower costs per placement. Yet we continue to hear complaints about JTPA. Indeed, overemphasis on achieving some of the goals of the program has led to failure in other areas. For example, increased placement rates have been achieved, in part, by focusing training efforts on those who are easiest to place. Thus, to certain extent, the effort to improve placement numbers resulted in a failure to provide training services to those most in need. In addition, while we sought to reduce the cost per placement, we have reduced the costs to levels so low that participants are often not provided with adequate training. The costs are well below what is needed to provide training in most trade and technical programs, and the training periods are increasingly shorter. Average training periods are currently less than 12 weeks, while under CETA it was 20 weeks.

These amendments are designed to address the criticisms of JTPA, while preserving the successful aspects of the program. The focus of the amendments is on targeting services to those most in need, and on improving the quality of services provided to participants. The bill contains important programmatic changes that will improve services and address perception problems that have led to decreases in funding. We have provided for separate adult and youth programs, with targeting for those with multiple barriers, and out-of-school youth. We have retained the Summer Youth Program that has provided much needed employment for impoverished young people. In addition, the bill provides for individual needs assessment and counseling for each participant, and emphasizes the need for training to provide for long-term employability, not just placement services. The bill also seeks to address concerns about discrimination in the program. Finally, we have included a program for high risk youth—the Fair Chance Youth Opportunities Program. A 1989 report by the National Council of La Raza, "Falling Through the Cracks: Hispanic Underrepresentation in the Job Training Partnership Act," called for the kinds of a JTPA reforms included in the bill. A report by the National Commission on Employment Policy, "Training Hispanics: Implications for the JTPA System," came to similar conclusions.

JTPA has fulfilled an important role since its enactment in 1983. I have a wealth of reports and newsletters from JTPA programs across the country describing the success programs have had in providing the training and supportive services necessary to transition individuals from unemployment or poverty to more stable, productive lives. I was visited recently by members of a consortium of private industry councils [PIC's] in Illinois. This group particularly noted that the local public/private commitment and partnership within JTPA enables this program to be responsive to community needs and produce measurable positive outcomes. While they were very excited about their successes, these PIC members were realistic in looking toward a stronger JTPA system, one that would benefit from the amendments we hope to pass today. Looking to the future they recognized the need for more comprehensive, individualized services and a tighter, better defined operational organization.

JTPA's current structure will not properly respond to current human resource trends or local needs. A program that overall enrolls 37 percent of its participants in short-term training programs will not be able to significantly improve long-term employment and certainly will not be able to meet the goal of providing a productive and skilled work force by the year 2000. Furthermore, the program will not succeed in training the hard to serve if there are no incentives to serve those participants most in need of training and to provide them more comprehensive training services.

We have an opportunity to provide long-term solutions to the very people who suffer first and the most when our Nation experiences economic downturns. If we can provide the basic skills training necessary to enable the chronically unemployed to obtain more stable employment opportunities, we have taken a major step toward full employment and meeting our productivity goals. Mr. President, let's send more than a message to the poor and unemployed, let's pass S. 2055 and send them job training, employment counseling, a support system, and the opportunity to earn a living. The Senate has considered this legislation for over 4 years now, let us not delay the passage of this important legislation any further.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, these amendments to the Job Training Partnership Act will significantly strengthen the services provided under titles II and IV of the act to economically disadvantaged adults and youth.

This is a significant step forward in our efforts to improve the delivery of training and job placement services to the most underserved members of our population, and I commend my colleagues from Illinois and South Carolina—as well as Senator HATCH, with whom we have worked closely on this legislation—for the leading role they have played in helping to craft these amendments.

JTPA is the largest Federal program we have to address a challenge of fundamental importance to this Nation's economic future: the education and training of our work force.

Because services provided under the act are targeted to those who currently face the greatest barriers to successful, productive participation in the work force, JTPA also plays a central role in our efforts to break the cycle of despair and dependency in which too many of our poorest citizens are trapped, by helping them to acquire skills and secure jobs that will enable them to attain self-sufficiency for themselves and their families.

This bill preserves the best features of JTPA as it was originally conceptualized when we created the program some 10 years ago—the public/private partnership that forms the basic delivery system for JTPA, and the emphasis on program outcomes through the use of performance standards. At the same time, these amendments build on the experience we have gained under the act to refine and sharpen program requirements and provide more focussed and higher quality services to the individuals served.

Key provisions of S. 2055 include:

The separation of services for adults and youth into two distinct programs, tailored to meet the special needs of each group;

Modifications of eligibility criteria to ensure that services are targeted to those most at risk;

Requirements that the education, skill level and service needs of participants be individually assessed, so that the service strategy for each participant can be tailored to his or her particular needs;

Modification of the performance standards to emphasize the acquisition of skills that enhance participants' long-term employability, as opposed to simple job placement, which may be short-term;

New requirements designed to improve fiscal accountability by requiring better documentation and reporting of costs and stronger procurement and contracting procedures; and creation of a new Fair Chance/Youth Opportunities Unlimited Program to provide grants to high poverty communities to enable them to provide comprehensive services to low-income youth.

S. 2055 also amends and restructures the Jobs for Employable Dependent Individuals [JEDI] Program, which provides important incentives to States to reduce welfare dependency, promote self-sufficiency, and increase child support payments.

Under the revised JEDI Program, States that provide job training and placement to absent parents of children receiving AFDC are entitled to a bonus equal to the amount of any child support paid by the absent parent for up to 2 years after the parent completes training under the JTPA Program.

Similarly, any State that provides job training and placement to blind or disabled individuals receiving SSI payments can receive a bonus equal to the amount by which Federal payments to such individuals are reduced as a result of their successful job placement through the JTPA Program.

These incentives encourage States to provide services to individuals who are most in need of such assistance. They also reward States for successful efforts that reduce dependency on Federal assistance programs.

Overall, the JTPA amendments reflect a broad consensus among public and private groups involved in the delivery of JTPA services at the Federal, State, and local level on what needs to be done to improve this important program.

Similar amendments have already been adopted in the House, and we have every reason to believe that we will be able to move promptly to enact these changes into law, so that they can be implemented at the State and local level for the next program year, which begins July 1.

I am confident that with our action today we are taking a positive step to strengthen a program that is an essential element of Federal job training policy.

Mr. METZENBAUM. Mr. President, I rise to express my very strong support for these amendments to the Job Training Partnership Act. My colleague from Illinois, Senator SIMON, has labored intensely to craft a set of amendments which improves delivery of services to those in need. He has done an admirable job, and I congratulate him.

This legislation no longer contains the nontraditional employment for women provisions I introduced last year. I am pleased to report that those provisions were enacted and signed into law last December. They will help women break out of existing stereotypes and limited opportunities, and into many occupations from which they have traditionally been excluded.

The sense of urgency for improving the Job Training Partnership Act has never been greater. The experts tell us that as many as half of the 1.5 million jobs our economy has lost in the past year will never be restored. We've lost some jobs to foreign competition, others to American companies relocating overseas to exploit cheap labor, and still others due to the massive debt load American businesses assumed during the merger and acquisition frenzy of the 1980's.

Whatever the causes, it is the American worker who pays the price. Nine million American workers are unemployed. Six million are underemployed, and another million are long-term unemployed who have dropped out of the work force. And hundreds of thousands of American servicemen and women will be looking for work as well over the next few years as the military downsizes.

Since its enactment in 1982, JTPA has provided millions of Americans with a fresh start. In program year 1992 alone, roughly $3 billion was distributed to service delivery areas to help disadvantaged American workers overcome the barriers they face. These funds provide a multitude of services, including job training, education, job referral, counseling, needs related payments, and other supportive services.

These amendments will improve the delivery of services under the act to those who need them most. I pledge to work with Senator SIMON to resolve differences between this bill and the House bill through the conference process as expeditiously as possible.

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, I support the passage of S. 2055.

Traditionally, my State of New Hampshire has been among the States which have received the least amount of return under this program. I was concerned that proposed formula changes would have further disadvantaged my State, even at a time when it is suffering from a severe recession.

I am happy to report the final compromise—coupled with my State's financial circumstances—will result in an increasing share of money under this program going to the benefit of my State.

My office has also been in touch with the Department of Labor in order to insure that the Department will work with economically depressed States such as my own. I understand this is in accord with the intention of the managers. Is that correct?

Mr. SIMON. The Senator from New Hampshire is correct.

Mr. THURMOND. Mr. President, as the ranking minority member of the Subcommittee on Employment and Productivity of the Labor and Human Resources Committee, I am pleased to offer my strong support of S. 2055, a bill which strengthens the program of employment and training assistance provided under the Job Training Partnership Act [JTPA].

Since the enactment of JTPA in 1982, the core program of job training services for the economically disadvantaged has remained basically unchanged. In its 9 years of existence, this law has helped many economically disadvantaged Americans develop needed skills for entering the workforce as productive citizens. This bill builds upon that established foundation.

Mr. President, in 1989 the administration submitted a JTPA proposal to the Congress. Many of the proposals set forth in that legislative were later incorporated into S. 543, a bipartisan bill reported from the Labor and Human Resources Committee in September 1989 by a vote of 15 to 1.

In October 1990, a variation of S. 543 passed the Senate as an amendment to the Departments of Labor, Health and Human Services, and Education and Related Agencies appropriations bill. However, the JTPA measure was dropped during conference.

In June of last year, I was pleased to introduce on behalf of the administration, S. 1404, the Job Training Partnership Act Amendments of 1991. That bill was designed to improve the targeting of JTPA to those facing serious barriers to employment. It would also strengthen program accountability, enhance existing job training services, and promote the coordination of a broad range of programs and resources.

The measure before us today, the Job Training and Basic Skills Act of 1991, represents a consensus of all these prior bills. It is a result of bipartisan negotiations with all sides, and it has been a pleasure to work with the Chairman of the Labor and Human Resources Committee—Senator KENNEDY, the ranking member—Senator HATCH, and the chairman of the Employment and Productivity Subcommittee—Senator SIMON, in crafting this legislation. We have had the benefit of the views of the Department of Labor, the National Governors Association, the National Association of Counties, private industry council members, members of State job training councils, and many others. It does not contain everything I would prefer to see in a bill, but I do believe it represents a consensus, and important step forward. One of the things we have not included—largely as an effort to help expedite the bill—is a Human Resource Investment Council. This will give us more time to work out an agreeable compromise, and I look forward to continuing discussions on it during a conference with the House of Representatives. The National Governors Association has provided great leadership on this issue, and I look forward to continuing to work with them and others in developing workable language.

Some of the things this legislation would do include:

Target services to persons facing serious and multiple barriers to employment;

Enhance program quality through individual assessments and service strategies;

Increase program accountability by enhancing performance standards; and Continue the public-private partnership and local flexibility that make up the foundation of the current JTPA program.

The House of Representatives passed their version of the JTPA amendments in October 1991 by the overwhelming margin of 420 to 6. Now is the time to move in this body and I am pleased to offer my support.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill is open to further amendment. If there be no further amendment to be proposed, the question is on agreeing to the committee amendment in the nature of a substitute, as amended.

The committee amendment in the nature of a substitute, as amended, was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, was read the third time, and passed, as follows:

S. 2055

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Job Training and Basic Skills Act of 1992".

SEC. 3. REFERENCES.

Except as otherwise specifically provided, whenever in this Act an amendment or repeal is expressed in terms of an amendment to, or a repeal of, a section or other provision, the reference shall be considered to be made to a section or other provision of the Job Training Partnership Act (29 U.S.C. 1501 et seq.).

SEC. 4. DECLARATION OF POLICY AND STATEMENT OF PURPOSE.

(a) DECLARATION OF POLICY.—In recognition of the training needs of low-income adults and youth, the Congress declares it to be the policy of the United States to—

(1) provide financial assistance to States and local service delivery areas to meet the training needs of such low-income adults and youth, and to assist such adults and youth in obtaining unsubsidized employment;

(2) increase the funds available for programs established under title II of the Job Training Partnership Act (29 U.S.C. 1601 et seq.) by not less than 10 percent of the baseline each fiscal year, to provide for growth in the percentage of eligible adults and youth served, in excess of the 5 percent of the eligible population that is currently served; and

(3) encourage the provision of longer, more comprehensive education, training, and employment services to the eligible population, which also requires increased funding in order to maintain current service levels.

(b) STATEMENT OF PURPOSE.—Section 2 (29 U.S.C. 1501) is amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 2. STATEMENT OF PURPOSE.

"It is the purpose of this Act to establish programs to prepare youth and adults facing serious barriers to employment for participation in the labor force by providing job training that will result in increased employment and earnings, increased educational and occupational skills, and decreased welfare dependency, thereby improving the quality of the work force and enhancing the productivity and competitiveness of the Nation."

SEC. 5. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 3 (29 U.S.C. 1502) is amended—

(1) by striking subsections (a) and (b) and inserting the following:

"(a)(1)(A) There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out parts A and C of title II such sums as may be necessary for fiscal year 1993 and for each succeeding fiscal year.

"(B) Of the sums appropriated to carry out parts A and C of title II for each fiscal year, not less than 40 percent shall be made available to carry out part C of such title.

"(2) There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out part B of title II such sums as may be necessary for fiscal year 1993 and for each succeeding fiscal year.";

(2) by redesignating subsection (c) as subsection (b);

(3) by inserting after such subsection (b) the following:

"(c)(1) There is authorized to be appropriated to carry out parts A, C, D, E, F, and G of title IV for fiscal year 1993 and each succeeding fiscal year an amount equal to not more than 7 percent of the sum of the amounts appropriated for parts A and C of title II for such fiscal year.

"(2) The Secretary shall reserve from the amount appropriated under paragraph (1) for any fiscal year—

"(A) an amount equal to 7 percent of the amount appropriated under paragraph (1) to carry out part C of title IV; and

"(B) $2,000,000 to carry out part F of title IV.

"(3) There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out part H of title IV $10,000,000 for fiscal year 1993 and such sums as may be necessary for each succeeding fiscal year.

"(4) There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out part I of title IV $100,000,000 for fiscal year 1993 and such sums as may be necessary for each of the fiscal years 1994 through 1996."; and

(4) in subsection (e)—

(A) by striking "(e)(1) Subject to paragraph (2), there" and inserting "(e) There"; and

(B) by striking paragraphs (2) and (3).

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—

(1) Subsections (a) and (e) of section 302, and section 326(h) (29 U.S.C. 1652 (a) and (e) and 1662e(h)) are amended by striking "3(c)" and inserting "3(b)".

(2) Section 326(h) (29 U.S.C. 1662e(h)) is amended by striking "3(c)" and inserting "3(b)".

SEC. 6. DEFINITIONS.

"(F) local welfare agencies."

(2) NOMINATION.—Section 102(c)(2) (29 U.S.C. 1512(c)(2)) is amended to read as follows:

"(2) Education representatives on the council shall be selected from among individuals nominated by regional or local educational agencies, vocational education institutions, institutions of higher education (including entities offering adult education) or general organizations of such schools and institutions, within the service delivery area."

(3) RECOMMENDATIONS.—Section 102(c)(3) (29 U.S.C. 1512(c)(3)) is amended to read as follows:

"(3) The labor representatives on the council shall be selected from individuals recommended by recognized State and local labor organizations. If the State or local labor organization cannot adequately meet the labor representation on the private industry council, individual workers may be included on the council to complete the labor representation."

(4) ADDITIONAL REPRESENTATIVES.—Section 102(c) (20 U.S.C. 1512(c)) is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(4) The remaining members of the council shall include additional representatives from all sectors described in subsection (a)(3) and individuals recommended by interested organizations."

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—No private industry council shall be considered to be in violation of the amendments made by subsection (a) of this section until the date 3 years after the date of enactment of this Act.

SEC. 8. JOB TRAINING PLAN.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 104(a) (29 U.S.C. 1514(a)) is amended by inserting "under title II" after "appropriated".

(b) CONTENTS.—Section 104(b) is amended to read as follows:

"(b) Each job training plan for the programs conducted under title II shall contain—

"(1) information identifying the entity that will administer the program and be the grant recipient of funds from the State;

"(2) if there is more than one service delivery area in a single labor market area, provisions for coordinating particular aspects of the service delivery area program with other programs and service providers in the labor market area, including—

"(A) assessments of needs and problems in the labor market that form the basis for program planning;

"(B) provisions for ensuring access by program participants in each service delivery area to skills training and employment opportunities throughout the entire labor market; and

"(C) coordinated or joint implementation of job development, placement, and other employer outreach activities;

"(3) a description of methods of complying with the coordination criteria contained in the Governor's coordination and special services plan;

"(4) a description of linkages, established in accordance with sections 205 and 265, designed to enhance the provision of services and avoid duplication, including—

"(A) agreements with educational agencies;

"(B) arrangements with other education, training, and employment programs serving the disadvantaged that are authorized by Federal law;

"(C) if appropriate, joint programs in which activities supported with assistance under this Act are coordinated with activities (such as service opportunities and youth corps programs) supported with assistance made available under the National and Community Service Act of 1990 (42 U.S.C. 12401 et seq.); and

"(D) efforts to ensure the effective delivery of services to participants in coordination with local welfare agencies, other local agencies, community-based organizations, volunteer groups, business and labor organizations, and other training, education, employment, and social service programs;

"(5) goals and objectives for the programs, including—

"(A) a description of the manner in which the program will contribute to the economic self-sufficiency of participants, and the productivity of the local area and the Nation; and

"(B) performance goals established in accordance with standards prescribed under section 106;

"(6) goals for the training and placement of targeted populations, and a description of efforts to be undertaken to accomplish such goals, including—

"(A) efforts to expand outreach to targeted populations who may be eligible for services under this Act;

"(B) efforts to expand awareness of training and placement opportunities for targeted populations; and

"(C) types of services to be provided to address the special needs of targeted populations;

"(7)(A) goals for—

"(i) the training of women in nontraditional employment; and

"(ii) the training-related placement of women in nontraditional employment and apprenticeships; and

"(B) a description of efforts to be undertaken to accomplish the goals described in subparagraph (A), including efforts to increase awareness of such training and placement opportunities;

"(8) adult and youth budgets for two program years and any proposed expenditures for the succeeding 2 program years, in such detail as is determined necessary, by the entity selected to administer the portion of the plan corresponding to the budgets in accordance with section 103(b)(1)(B), and to meet the requirements of section 108;

"(9) procedures for identifying and selecting participants, procedures for determining eligibility, and methods used to verify eligibility;

"(10) a description of—

"(A) the assessment process that will identify the skill level and service needs of each participant;

"(B) the competency levels to be achieved by participants as a result of program participation;

"(C) the services to be provided, including the estimated duration of service and the estimated training cost per participant; and

"(D) the procedures for evaluating the progress of participants in achieving competencies;

"(11) a description of the procedures and methods used in carrying out title V, relating to incentive bonus payments for the placement of individuals eligible under such title;

"(12) procedures, consistent with section 107, for selecting service providers, which procedures shall take into account—

"(A) past performance of the providers regarding—

"(i) job training, basic skills training, or related activities;

"(ii) fiscal accountability; and

"(iii) ability to meet performance standards; and

"(B) the ability of the providers to provide services that can lead to achievement of competency standards for participants with identified deficiencies;

"(13) fiscal control (including procurement, monitoring, and management information systems requirements), accounting, audit, and debt collection procedures, consistent with section 164, to assure the proper disbursement of, and accounting for, funds received under title II; and

"(14) procedures for the preparation and submission of an annual report to the Governor, which report shall include—

"(A) a description of activities conducted during the program year;

"(B) characteristics of participants;

"(C) information on the extent to which applicable performance standards have been met;

"(D) information on the extent to which the service delivery area has met the goals of the area for the training and training-related placement of women in nontraditional employment and apprenticeships; and

"(E) a statistical breakdown of women trained and placed in nontraditional occupations, including information regarding—

"(i) the type of training received, by occupation;

"(ii) whether the participant was placed in a job or apprenticeship, and, if so, the occupation and wage at placement;

"(iii) the age of the participant;

"(iv) the race of the participant; and

"(v) retention of the participant in nontraditional employment."

SEC. 9. REVIEW AND APPROVAL OF PLAN.

Section 105(a)(1)(B)(ii) (29 U.S.C. 1515(a)(1)(B)(ii)) is amended by inserting "community-based organizations and" after "appropriate".

SEC. 10. PERFORMANCE STANDARDS.

(A) IN GENERAL.—Section 106 (29 U.S.C. 1516) is amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 106. PERFORMANCE STANDARDS.

"(a) CONGRESSIONAL FINDINGS.—Congress finds that—

"(1) job training is an investment in human capital and not an expense; and

"(2) in order to determine whether that investment has been productive—

"(A) it is essential that criteria for measuring the return on the investment be developed; and

"(B) the criteria should include basic measures of long-term economic self-sufficiency, including measures of increased educational attainment and occupational skills, increased employment and earnings, and reduced welfare dependency.

"(b) PERFORMANCE STANDARDS.—

"(1) ACHIEVEMENT OF BASIC MEASURES.—In order to determine whether the basic measures described in subsection (a)(2)(B) have been achieved by programs under parts A and C of title II, the Secretary, in consultation with the Secretary of Education and the Secretary of Health and Human Services, shall prescribe performance standards for the programs.

"(2) GENERAL OBJECTIVE.—In prescribing performance standards for programs under parts A and C of title II, the Secretary shall ensure that States and service delivery areas will make efforts to increase services and positive outcomes for hard-to-serve individuals.

"(3) FACTORS FOR ADULT STANDARDS.—The Secretary shall base the performance standards for adult programs under part A of title II on appropriate factors, which may include—

"(A) placement in unsubsidized employment;

"(B) retention for more than 6 months in unsubsidized employment;

"(C) increase in earnings, including hourly wages;

"(D) reduction in welfare dependency; and

"(E)(i) acquisition of skills, including basic skills, required to promote continued employability in the local labor market (including attainment of the competency levels described in paragraph (5)), or acquisition of a high school diploma or the equivalent of the diploma; and

"(ii) one or more of the factors described in subparagraphs (A) through (D).

"(4) FACTORS FOR YOUTH STANDARDS.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall base the performance standards for youth programs under part C of title II on appropriate factors described in paragraph (3), and on factors including—

"(i) attainment of employment competencies (including attainment of the competency levels described in paragraph (5));

"(ii) dropout prevention and recovery;

"(iii) secondary and postsecondary school completion or the equivalent of such completion; and

"(iv) enrollment in other training programs, apprenticeships, or postsecondary education, or enlistment in the Armed Forces.

"(B) VARIATIONS.—The Secretary may prescribe variations in the standards described in subparagraph (A) to reflect the differences between in-school and out-of-school programs.

"(5) COMPETENCY LEVELS.—The private industry councils, in consultation with educational agencies, community-based organizations, and the private sector, shall establish youth and adult competency levels, based on such factors as attainment of entry skill levels and other hiring requirements.

"(6) REQUIREMENTS.—The performance standards described in paragraphs (3) and (4) shall include provisions governing—

"(A) the base period prior to program participation that will be used for measurement of the factors described in paragraphs (3) and (4), as appropriate;

"(B) a representative period after termination from the program that is a reasonable indicator of postprogram earnings and cash welfare payment reductions; and

"(C) cost-effective methods for obtaining such data as is necessary to carry out this subsection, which methods—

"(i) notwithstanding any other provision of law, may include access to—

"(I) earnings records;

"(II) State employment security records;

"(III) records collected under the Federal Insurance Contributions Act, chapter 21 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986;

"(IV) records regarding State aid to families with dependent children;

"(V) statistical sampling techniques; and

"(VI) records or techniques similar to the records and techniques described in subclauses (I) through (V); and

"(ii) shall include appropriate safeguards to protect the confidentiality of the data obtained.

"(7) GROSS PROGRAM EXPENDITURES.—The Secretary shall prescribe performance standards for programs under parts A and C of title II relating gross program expenditures to various performance measures. The Governors shall not take performance standards prescribed under this paragraph into consideration in awarding grants under paragraph (8).

"(8) INCENTIVE GRANTS.—From funds available under section 202(c)(2)(C), and under section 262(c) for providing incentive grants under this paragraph, each Governor shall award incentive grants to service delivery areas conducting programs under parts A and C of title II that—

"(A) exceed the performance standards established by the Secretary under this subsection (except for the standards established under paragraph (7)) with respect to services to all participants;

"(B) exceed the performance standards established by the Secretary under this subsection (except for the standards established under paragraph (7)) with respect to services to hard-to-serve populations;

"(C) serve more than the minimum percentage of out-of-school youth required by section 263(f);

"(D) place participants in employment that provides post-program earnings that exceed the appropriate performance criteria; and

"(E) exceed the performance standards established by the Governor under subsection (e) for programs under title II, except that not more than 25 percent of the incentive grants shall be awarded on performance standards established under subsection (e).

"(c) EMPLOYMENT AND TRAINING ASSISTANCE FOR DISLOCATED WORKERS.—

"(1) PERFORMANCE STANDARDS.—The Secretary shall prescribe performance standards for programs under title III based on participant placement and retention in unsubsidized employment.

"(2) NEEDS-RELATED PAYMENTS.—In prescribing performance standards under paragraph (1), the Secretary shall make appropriate allowance for the difference in cost resulting from serving workers receiving needs-related payments under section 314(e).

"(d) VARIATIONS.—

"(1) AUTHORITY OF GOVERNORS.—Each Governor of a State participating in a program governed by standards issued under subsection (b) or (c) shall prescribe, within parameters established by the Secretary, variations in the standards for the State, based on—

"(A) specific economic, geographic, and demographic factors in the State and in service delivery areas and substate areas within the State;

"(B) the characteristics of the population to be served;

"(C) the demonstrated difficulties in serving the population; and

"(D) the type of services to be provided.

"(2) SECRETARY'S RESPONSIBILITIES.—The Secretary shall—

"(A) provide information and technical assistance on performance standards adjustments;

"(B) collect data that identifies hard-to-serve individuals and long-term welfare dependency;

"(C) provide guidance on setting performance goals at the service provider level that encourage increased service to hard-to-serve individuals, particularly long-term welfare recipients; and

"(D) review performance standards to ensure that such standards provide maximum incentive in serving hard-to-serve individuals, particularly long-term welfare recipients, including individuals receiving benefits under part A of title IV of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 601 et seq.) (relating to the aid to families with dependent children program) and individuals receiving benefits under title XVI of such Act (42 U.S.C. 1381 et seq.) (relating to the supplemental security income programs).

"(e) ADDITIONAL PERFORMANCE STANDARDS BY GOVERNORS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—A Governor of a State participating in a program under title II or III may prescribe performance standards for the program in addition to standards established by the Secretary under subsections (b) and (c).

"(2) CRITERIA.—Such additional standards may include criteria requiring establishment of effective linkages with other programs to avoid duplication and enhance the delivery of services, the provision of high quality services, and successful service to target groups.

"(3) REPORT.—The additional performance standards established for title II shall be reported in the Governor's coordination and special services plan.

"(f) NATIVE AMERICAN AND JOB CORPS PROGRAMS.—The Secretary shall prescribe performance standards for programs under parts A and B of title IV, and for programs under title V.

"(g) SYSTEM FOR ADJUSTMENTS.—The Secretary shall prescribe a system for adjustments in performance standards for special populations to be served, including Native Americans, migrant and seasonal farmworkers, disabled and Vietnam era veterans, including veterans who served in the Indochina theater between August 5, 1964, and May 7, 1975, offenders, and displaced homemakers, taking into account their special circumstances.

"(h) MODIFICATIONS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary may modify the performance standards under this section not more often than once every 2 program years and such modifications shall not be retroactive.

"(2) JOB CORPS.—Notwithstanding paragraph (1), the Secretary may modify standards relating to programs under part B of title IV each program year.

"(i) NATIONAL COMMISSION ON EMPLOYMENT POLICY.—The National Commission on Employment Policy shall—

"(1) advise the Secretary in the development of performance standards under this section for measuring results of participation in job training and in the development of parameters for variations of such standards referred to in subsection (d);

"(2) evaluate the usefulness of such standards as measures of desired performance; and

"(3) evaluate the impacts of such standards (intended or otherwise) on the choice of who is served, what services are provided, and the costs of such services in service delivery areas.

"(j) FAILURE TO MEET STANDARDS.—

"(1) UNIFORM CRITERIA.—The Secretary shall establish uniform criteria for determining whether—

"(A) a service delivery area fails to meet performance standards under this section; and

"(B) the circumstances under which remedial action authorized under this subsection shall be taken.

"(2) TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE.—Each Governor shall provide technical assistance to service delivery areas failing to meet performance standards under the uniform criteria established under paragraph (1)(A).

"(3) PROCESS FOR CORRECTION.—Not later than 90 days after the end of each program year, each Governor shall report to the Secretary the final performance standards and performance for each service delivery area within the State, along with the plans of the Governor for providing the technical assistance required under paragraph (2).

"(4) REORGANIZATION PLAN.—

"(A) PLAN REQUIRED FOR CONTINUED FAILURE.—If a service delivery area continues to fail to meet such performance standards for 2 program years, the Governor shall notify the Secretary and the service delivery area of the continued failure, and shall develop and impose a reorganization plan.

"(B) ELEMENTS.—Such plan may restructure the private industry council, prohibit the use of designated service providers, merge the service delivery area into one or more other existing service delivery areas, or make other changes as the Governor determines to be necessary to improve performance, including the selection of an alternative administrative entity to administer the program for the service delivery area.

"(C) ALTERNATIVE ADMINISTRATIVE ENTITY SELECTION.—The alternative administrative entity described in subparagraph (B) may be a newly formed private industry council or any agency jointly selected by the Governor and the chief elected official of the largest unit of general local government in the service delivery area or substate area.

"(5) SECRETARIAL ACTION.—

"(A) PLAN.—If the Governor has not imposed a reorganization plan as required by paragraph (4)(A)(i) within 90 days of the end of the second program year in which a service delivery area has failed to meet its performance standards, the Secretary shall develop and impose such a plan, including the selection of an alternative administrative entity to administer the program for the service delivery areas.

"(B) RECAPTURE OR WITHHOLDING.—The Secretary shall recapture or withhold an amount not to exceed one-fifth of the State administration set-aside allocated under section 202(c)(2)(A) and under section 262(c) for the activities described in section 202(c)(2)(A), for the purposes of providing technical assistance under a reorganization plan as described in paragraph (4).

"(6) APPEAL BY SERVICE DELIVERY AREA.—

"(A) TIMING.—A service delivery area that is the subject of a reorganization plan under paragraph (4) may, within 30 days after receiving notice thereof, appeal to the Secretary to rescind or revise such plan.

"(B) RECAPTURE OR WITHHOLDING.—

"(i) DETERMINATION.—If the Secretary determines, upon appeal under subparagraph (A), that the Governor has not provided appropriate technical assistance as required under paragraph (2), the Secretary shall recapture or withhold an amount not to exceed one-fifth of the State administration set-aside allocated under section 202(c)(2)(A) and under section 262(c) for activities described in section 202(c)(2)(A). The Secretary shall use funds recaptured or withheld under this subparagraph to provide appropriate technical assistance.

"(ii) BASIS.—If the Secretary approved the technical assistance plan provided by the Governor under paragraph (2), a determination under this subparagraph shall only be based on failure to effectively implement such plan and shall not be based on the plan itself.

"(7) APPEAL BY GOVERNOR.—A Governor of a State that is subject to recapture or withholding under paragraph (5) or (6)(B) may, within 30 days of receiving notice thereof, appeal such withholding to the Secretary.

"(k) CLARIFICATION OR REFERENCE.—For the purposes of this section, the term 'employment' means employment for 20 or more hours per week."

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—Sections 311(a), 311(b)(8), and 322(a)(4) (29 U.S.C. 1661(a), 1661(b)(8), and 1662a(a)(4)) are each amended by striking "106(g)" and inserting "106(c)".

SEC. 11. SELECTION OF SERVICE PROVIDERS.

(a) CHILD CARE.—Section 107(a) (29 U.S.C. 1517(a)) is amended by adding at the end the following: "In addition, consideration shall be given to provision of appropriate supportive services, including child care."

(b) SELECTION OF SERVICE PROVIDERS.—Section 107 is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(e) The selection of service providers shall be made on a competitive basis, to the extent practicable, and shall include—

"(1) a determination of the ability of the service provider to meet program design specifications established by the administrative entity that take into account the purpose of this Act and the goals established by the Governor in the Coordination and Special Services Plan; and

"(2) documentation of compliance with procurement standards established by the Governor under section 164, including the reasons for selection."

SEC. 12. LIMITATION ON CERTAIN COSTS.

(a) APPLICATION OF COST LIMITATIONS.—Section 108(a) (29 U.S.C. 1518(a)) is amended to read as follows:

"(a) Except as provided in subparagraphs (A) and (B) of section 141(d)(3), funds expended under this Act shall be charged to the appropriate cost categories."

(b) COST CATEGORIES AND LIMITATIONS.—Section 108(b) is amended to read as follows:

"(b)(1) The cost limitations contained in this subsection shall apply separately to the funds allocated for programs under part A of title II, and to the funds allocated for programs under part C of such title.

"(2) Funds expended under parts A and C of title II shall be charged to one of the following categories:

"(A) Administration.

"(B) Training-related and supportive services.

"(C) Direct training services.

"(3) The Secretary shall, consistent with sections 204(b) and 264(c), define by regulation the cost categories specified in paragraph (2).

"(4) Of the funds allocated to a service delivery area for any program year under part A or C of title II—

"(A) not more than 20 percent shall be expended for the costs of administration; and

"(B) not less than 50 percent shall be expended for direct training services.

"(5) Each service delivery area shall ensure that all contracts, grants, or other agreements with a service provider, for services provided to participants, shall include appropriate amounts necessary for administrative costs and supportive services."

(c) REFERENCE TO TITLE III LIMITATIONS.—Section 108 is further amended by amending subsection (c) to read as follows:

"(c) Funds available under title III shall be expended in accordance with the limitations specified in section 315."

SEC. 13. SERVICE DELIVERY AREA TRANSFER AND AGREEMENT; REALLOTMENT.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Part A of title I (29 U.S.C. 1511 et seq.) is amended by adding at the end the following new sections:

"SEC. 109. SERVICE DELIVERY AREA TRANSFER AND AGREEMENT.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—Any service delivery area may enter into an agreement with another service delivery area to share the cost of educating, training, and placing individuals participating in programs assisted under this Act, including the provision of supportive services. Such agreement shall be approved by an individual representing each private industry council providing guidance to the service delivery area.

"(b) APPLICATION OF APPROPRIATE PERFORMANCE STANDARDS.—Each service delivery area entering into a service delivery area agreement under this section shall be credited under the appropriate performance standards.

"SEC. 110. REALLOCATION AND REALLOTMENT OF UNOBLIGATED FUNDS UNDER TITLE II.

"(a) WITHIN STATE REALLOCATIONS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—For each program year beginning on or after July 1, 1993, the Governor shall, in accordance with the requirements of this subsection, reallocate to eligible service delivery areas within the State funds appropriated for such program year that are available for reallocation.

"(2) AMOUNT.—The amount available for reallocation is equal to the amount by which the unobligated balance of the service delivery area allocation under parts A or C of title II at the end of the program year prior to the program year for which the reallocation is made exceeds 15 percent of such allocation for the prior program year.

"(3) REALLOCATION.—The Governor shall reallocate the amounts available under paragraph (2), to eligible service delivery areas within the State that have the highest rates of unemployment for an extended period of time and to the service delivery areas with the highest poverty rates.

"(4) ELIGIBILITY.—For purposes of this subsection, an eligible service delivery area means a service delivery area that has obligated at least 85 percent of the allocation of the area under part A or C of title II for the program year prior to the program year for which the reallocation is made.

"(b) REALLOTMENT AMONG STATES.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—For each program year beginning on or after July 1, 1993, the Secretary may, in accordance with the requirements of this subsection, reallocate to eligible States funds appropriated for such program year that are available for reallocation.

"(2) AMOUNT.—The amount available for reallocation among States under this subsection shall be equal to the amount by which the unobligated balance of the State allotment under part A or C of title II at the end of the program year prior to the program year for which the reallocation is made exceeds 15 percent of such allotment for the prior program year.

"(3) REALLOTMENT.—From the amount available under paragraph (2), the Secretary shall reallocate to each eligible State an amount based on the relative amount allotted to such eligible State under part A or C of title II for the program year the determination under this subsection is made compared to the total amount allotted to all eligible States under part A or C of title II for such program year.

"(4) ELIGIBILITY.—For purposes of this subsection, an eligible State means a State which has obligated at least 85 percent of its allocation under part A or C of title II for the program year prior to the program year for which the reallocation is made.

"(5) PROCEDURES.—The Governor of each State shall prescribe uniform procedures for the obligation of funds by service delivery areas within the State in order to avoid the requirement that funds be made available for reallocation under this subsection. The Governor shall further prescribe equitable procedures for making funds available from the State and service delivery areas in the event that a State is required to make funds available for reallocation under this subsection."

(b) TECHNICAL AMENDMENT.—The table of contents relating to part A of title I is amended by adding after the item relating to section 108 the following:

"Sec. 109. Service delivery area transfer and agreement.

"Sec. 110. Reallocation and reallocation of unobligated funds under title II."

SEC. 14. GOVERNOR'S COORDINATION AND SPECIAL SERVICES PLAN.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 121(b) (29 U.S.C. 1531(b)) is amended—

(1) in paragraph (1), by striking "Such criteria" and inserting: "The plan shall also include criteria for coordinating activities under this Act with programs and services provided by State and local agencies on aging, and programs operated under title V of the Older Americans Act of 1965 (42 U.S.C. 3056 et seq.). In addition, the plan shall establish criteria for coordinating activities under this Act with programs under the National and Community Service Act of 1990 (42 U.S.C. 12401 et seq.). The criteria described in each of the three preceding sentences";

(2) in paragraph (2) to read as follows:

"(2) The plan shall describe the measures taken by the State to ensure coordination and avoid duplication of programs between the State agencies administering the JOBS program and programs under title II in the planning and delivery of services. The plan shall describe the procedures developed by the State to ensure that the State JOBS plan is consistent with the coordination criteria specified in the plan and shall identify the procedures developed to provide for the review of the JOBS plan by the State job training coordinating council";

(3) by redesignating paragraphs (3), (4), (5), and (6) as paragraphs (4), (5), (6), and (7), respectively;

(4) by inserting the following new paragraph after paragraph (2):

"(3) The plan shall describe the projected use of resources, including oversight of program performance, program administration, program financial management, capacity building, priorities and criteria for State incentive grants, and performance goals for State-supported programs. The description of capacity building shall include the Governor's plans for research and demonstration projects, technical assistance for service delivery areas and service providers, interstate technical assistance and training arrangements, and other coordinated technical assistance arrangements for service delivery areas and service providers under the direction of the Secretary"; and

(5) in paragraph (5) (as redesignated in paragraph (3)) by—

(A) striking "and" at the end of subparagraph (A);

(B) striking the period at the end of subparagraph (B) and inserting a semicolon and "and"; and

(C) adding at the end the following new subparagraph (C):

"(C) services to older workers, including plans for facilitating the provision of services across service delivery areas within the State, as provided in section 104(b)(2)."

(b) COORDINATION AND SPECIAL SERVICES ACTIVITIES.—Section 121(c) is amended—

(1) in paragraph (7), by inserting after the paragraph designation the following: "coordination of activities relating to part A of title II with";

(2) by striking "and" at the end of paragraph (10);

(3) by striking the period at the end of paragraph (11) and inserting a semicolon; and

(4) by adding at the end the following new paragraphs:

"(12) initiatives undertaken under the State innovation and coordination program described in section 123; and

"(13) making available to service delivery areas appropriate information and technical assistance to assist in developing and implementing joint programs, including youth corps programs, in which activities supported under this Act are coordinated with activities supported under the National and Community Service Act of 1990 (42 U.S.C. 12401 et seq.)."

SEC. 15. STATE JOB TRAINING COORDINATION COUNCIL.

Section 122(a)(3)(B)(i) (29 U.S.C. 1532(a)(3)(B)(i)) is amended by inserting "the State Advisory Board established under section 178 of the National and Community Service Act of 1990," after "State veterans' affairs agencies or equivalent."

SEC. 16. STATE EDUCATION COORDINATION AND GRANTS.

Section 123 (29 U.S.C. 1533) is amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 123. STATE EDUCATION COORDINATION AND GRANTS."(a) ALLOTMENT.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall allot the funds made available to carry out this section under section 202(c)(2)(D) and under section 262(c) to the Governors for allocation to State educational agencies to pay for the Federal share of carrying out the projects described in paragraph (2).

"(2) PROJECTS.—Funds allocated under paragraph (1) may be used to pay for the Federal share of carrying out projects (in accordance with agreements under subsection (b)) that—

"(A) provide school-to-work transition services of demonstrated effectiveness that increase the rate of graduation from high school, or completion of the recognized equivalent of such graduation, including services that increase the rate at which dropouts return to regular or alternative schooling and obtain a high school degree or equivalent;

"(B) provide literacy and lifelong learning opportunities and services of demonstrated effectiveness that—

"(i) enhance the knowledge and skills of educationally and economically disadvantaged individuals; and

"(ii) result in increasing the employment and earnings of such individuals; and

"(C) provide statewide coordinated approaches, including model programs, to train, place, and retain women in nontraditional employment; and

"(D) facilitate coordination of education and training services for eligible participants in projects described in subparagraphs (A), (B), and (C).

"(3) FEDERAL SHARE.—The Federal share of the cost of carrying out the projects described in paragraph (2) shall be 50 percent.

"(b) AGREEMENTS REQUIRED.—

"(1) PARTIES TO AGREEMENTS.—The projects described in subsection (a)(2) shall be conducted within a State in accordance with agreements between the State educational agency, administrative entities in service delivery areas in the State, and other entities such as other State agencies, local educational agencies, and alternative service providers (such as community-based and other nonprofit or for-profit organizations).

"(2) CONTENTS OF AGREEMENTS.—

"(A) CONTRIBUTION.—The agreements described in paragraph (1) shall provide for the contribution by the State, from funds other than the funds made available under this Act, of a total amount equal to the funds allotted under this section.

"(B) DIRECT COST OF SERVICES.—Such amount may include the direct cost of employment or training services—

"(i) provided by State or local programs or agencies; or

"(ii) provided by other Federal programs or agencies in accordance with applicable Federal law.

"(c) GOVERNOR'S PLAN REQUIREMENTS.—Any Governor receiving assistance under this section shall include in the Governor's coordination and special services plan, in accordance with section 121, a description developed in consultation with the State educational agency of—

"(1) the goals to be achieved and services to be provided by the school-to-work transition programs specified in subsection (a)(2)(A) that will receive the assistance, which description shall, at a minimum, include information regarding—

"(A) the activities and services that will result in increasing the number of youth staying in or returning to school and graduating from high school or the equivalent;

"(B) the work-based curriculum that will link classroom learning to worksite experience and address the practical and theoretical aspects of work;

"(C) the opportunities that will be made available to participants to obtain career-path employment and postsecondary education;

"(D) the integration to be achieved, in appropriate circumstances, in the delivery of services between State and local educational agencies and alternative service providers, such as community-based and nonprofit organizations; and

"(E) the linkages that will be established, where feasible, to avoid duplication and enhance the delivery of services, with programs under—

"(i) title II and part B of title IV;

"(ii) the Elementary and Secondary Education Act (20 U.S.C. 2701 et seq.);

"(iii) the Carl D. Perkins Vocational and Applied Technology Education Act (20 U.S.C. 2301 et seq.);

"(iv) the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (20 U.S.C. 1400 et seq.);

"(v) the Adult Education Act (20 U.S.C. 1201 et seq.);

"(vi) the JOBS program;

"(vii) the Stewart B. McKinney Homeless Assistance Act (Public Law 100-77; 101 Stat. 482); and

"(viii) the National and Community Service Act of 1990 (42 U.S.C. 12401 et seq.).

"(2) the goals to be achieved and services to be provided by literacy and lifelong learning programs specified in subsection (a)(2)(B) that will receive the assistance, which description shall, at a minimum, include information regarding—

"(A) the activities and services that will increase the knowledge and skills of educationally and economically disadvantaged individuals, and result in increased employment and earnings for such individuals;

"(B) the integration to be achieved between projects assisted under this section and the 4-year State plan (and related needs assessment carried out for the plan) developed in accordance with section 342 of the Adult Education Act (20 U.S.C. 1206a);

"(C) the variety of settings, including workplace settings, in which literacy training and learning opportunities will be provided; and

"(D) the linkages that will be established, where feasible, to avoid duplication and enhance the delivery of services, with programs under—

"(i) titles II and III of this Act;

"(ii) the Adult Education Act;

"(iii) the Carl D. Perkins Vocational and Applied Technology Education Act;

"(iv) the Stewart B. McKinney Homeless Assistance Act;

"(v) the JOBS program;

"(vi) the Rehabilitation Act of 1973 (29 U.S.C. 701 et seq.);

"(vii) the National Literacy Act of 1991 (Public Law 102-73);

"(viii) the Emergency Immigrant Education Act of 1984 (20 U.S.C. 3121 et seq.); and

"(ix) the National and Community Service Act of 1990 (42 U.S.C. 12401 et seq.);

"(3) the goals to be achieved and services to be provided by the nontraditional employment for women programs specified in subsection (a)(2)(C) that will receive the assistance; and

"(4) the proportion of funds received under this section that will be used to carry out the programs described in paragraphs (1), (2), and (3), respectively.

"(d) SERVICE REQUIREMENTS.—

"(1) PERMITTED SERVICES.—Services funded under this section to carry out the projects described in subsection (a)(2) may include education and training, vocational education services, and related services, provided to participants under title II. In addition, services funded under this section may include services for offenders, veterans, and other individuals who the Governor determines require special assistance.

"(2) LIMITATIONS ON EXPENDITURES.—

"(A) COORDINATION OF SERVICES.—Not more than 20 percent of the funds allocated under this section may be expended to pay for the Federal share of projects described in subsection (a)(2)(D) at the State and local levels.

"(B) SCHOOL-TO-WORK SERVICES; LITERACY AND LIFELONG LEARNING SERVICES.—Not less than 80 percent of the funds allocated under this section shall be expended to pay for the Federal share of projects conducted in accordance with subparagraphs (A), (B), and (C) of subsection (a)(2).

"(C) ECONOMICALLY DISADVANTAGED INDIVIDUALS.—Not less than 75 percent of the funds allocated for projects under subparagraphs (A), (B), and (C) of subsection (a)(2) shall be expended for projects for economically disadvantaged individuals who experience other barriers to employment. Priority for funds not expended for the economically disadvantaged shall be given to title III participants and persons with other barriers to employment.

"(e) DISTRIBUTION OF FUNDS IN ABSENCE OF AGREEMENT.—If no agreement is reached in accordance with subsection (b) on the use of funds under this section, the Governor shall notify the Secretary and shall distribute the funds to service delivery areas in accordance with section 202(b) for the projects described in subsection (a)(2).

"(f) REPORTS AND RECORDS.—

"(1) REPORTS BY GOVERNORS.—The Governor shall prepare reports on the projects funded under this section, including such information as the Secretary may require to determine the extent to which the projects supported under this section result in achieving the goals specified in paragraphs (1), (2), and (3) of subsection (c). The Governor shall submit the reports to the Secretary at such intervals as shall be determined by the Secretary.

"(2) RECORDS AND REPORTS OF RECIPIENTS.—Each direct or indirect recipient of funds under this section shall keep records that are sufficient to permit the preparation of reports. Each recipient shall submit such reports to the Secretary, at such intervals as shall be determined by the Secretary."

SEC. 17. ADDITIONAL REQUIREMENTS.

(a) IDENTIFICATION OF ADDITIONAL IMPOSED REQUIREMENTS.—Section 124 (29 U.S.C. 1534) is amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 124. IDENTIFICATION OF ADDITIONAL IMPOSED REQUIREMENTS.

"If a State or service delivery area imposes a requirement, including a rule, regulation, policy, or performance standard, relating to the administration and operation of programs funded by this Act (including requirements based on State or service delivery area interpretation of any Federal law, regulation, or guideline) the State or area shall identify the requirement as a State- or service delivery area-imposed requirement."

(b) TECHNICAL AMENDMENT.—The table of contents relating to part B of title I is amended by striking the item relating to section 124 and inserting the following:

"Sec. 124. Identification of additional imposed requirements."

SEC. 18. STATE LABOR MARKET INFORMATION PROGRAMS.

Section 125(a) (29 U.S.C. 1535(a)) is amended—

(1) by striking "and" at the end of paragraph (4);

(2) by striking the period at the end of paragraph (5) and inserting "; and"; and

(3) by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(6) provide training and technical assistance to support comprehensive career guidance and participant outcome activities for local programs assisted under this Act."

SEC. 19. GENERAL PROGRAM REQUIREMENTS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 141(d)(3) (29 U.S.C. 1551(d)(3)) is amended by—

(1) inserting "(A)" after the paragraph designation; and

(2) adding at the end the following new subparagraphs:

"(B) Tuition charges for training or education provided by an institution of higher education or postsecondary institution that are not more than the charges for such training or education made available to the general public do not require a breakdown of cost components.

"(C) Funds provided from the allocation to a service delivery area for any fiscal year that are expended by any service provider (with the exception of a State or local agency) for the cost of administering services under part A or C of title II shall not be subject to the limitation contained in section 108(b)(4)(A) if—

"(i) such funds are expended under an agreement under which not less than 90 percent of the funds provided to the service provider are to be expended for the costs of direct training and training-related and supportive services;

"(ii) such expenditures are charged to the appropriate cost category; and

"(iii) the service delivery area is in compliance with the requirement under section 108(b)(4)(B) for such fiscal year."

(b) LIMITATION.—Section 141(g) is amended by—

(1) inserting "(1)" after the subsection designation; and

(2) adding at the end the following new paragraphs:

"(2) On-the-job training authorized under this Act for a participant with respect to a position shall be limited in duration to a period not in excess of the period generally required for acquisition of skills needed for the position within a particular occupation. In no event shall the training exceed 6 months unless the total number of hours of such training is less than 500 hours. In determining the period generally required for acquisition of the skills, consideration shall be given to recognized reference material (such as the Dictionary of Occupational Titles), the content of the training of the participant, the prior work experience of the participant, and the service strategy of the participant.

"(3)(A) Each on-the-job training contract shall—

"(i) specify the types and duration of on-the-job training to be developed and other services to be provided in sufficient detail to allow for a fair analysis of the reasonableness of proposed costs; and

"(ii) comply with the requirements of section 164.

"(B) Each on-the-job training contract that is not directly contracted by a service delivery area with an employer (but instead is contracted through an intermediary brokering contractor), shall, in addition to meeting the requirements of subparagraph (A), specify the outreach, recruitment, participant training, counseling, placement, monitoring, followup, and other services to be provided directly by the brokering contractor within the organization of the contractor, the services to be provided by the employers conducting the on-the-job training, and the services to be provided, with or without cost, by other agencies and subcontractors.

"(C) If a brokering contractor enters into a contract with a subcontractor to provide training or other services, the brokering contractor shall ensure, through on-site monitoring, compliance with subcontract terms prior to making payment to the subcontractor."

(c) DISPOSAL OF ASSETS.—Section 141(k) is amended to read as follows:

"(k) The Federal requirements governing the title, use, and disposition of real property, equipment, and supplies purchased with funds provided under this Act shall be the Federal requirements generally applicable to Federal grants to States and local governments."

(d) PROGRAM INCOME.—Section 141(m) is amended to read as follows:

"(m)(1) A public or private nonprofit entity administering a program under this Act may retain income under the program if the entity uses such income to continue to carry out such program, and may use the income for such purposes without fiscal year limitation.

"(2) Income subject to the requirements of paragraph (1) shall include—

"(A) receipts from goods or services provided as a result of activity funded under this Act; and

"(B) funds provided to a service provider under this Act that are in excess of the costs associated with the services provided.

"(3) For the purposes of this subsection, each public or private nonprofit entity receiving financial assistance under this Act shall maintain records sufficient to determine the amount of income received and the purposes for which such income is expended."

(e) PUBLIC SERVICE EMPLOYMENT.—Section 141(p) is amended by striking "part B of this title or part A of" and inserting "part A or C of".

SEC. 20. DISPLACEMENT GRIEVANCE PROCEDURE.

Section 144 (29 U.S.C. 1554) is amended by adding at the end the following new subsections:

"(d)(1)(A) If a grievant files a grievance alleging a displacement from employment in violation of paragraph (1) or (3) of section 143(b) and no decision is issued within 60 days of the date on which the grievant filed the grievance, any party to the grievance may submit the grievance to arbitration conducted in accordance with paragraphs (2) through (4) by—

"(i) an arbitrator selected in accordance with subparagraph (C); or

"(ii) the Governor of the State in which the displacement occurred.

"(B) If a grievant files such a grievance and a decision is issued that is adverse to a party to the grievance, the party may submit the grievance to such arbitration.

"(C) The arbitrator described in paragraph (1)(a)(i) shall be a qualified arbitrator who is independent of the interested parties. The arbitrator shall be jointly selected by the parties. If the parties cannot agree on an arbitrator within 15 days of the date on which the grievance is submitted to arbitration, the Governor shall appoint an arbitrator from a list of qualified arbitrators maintained by the Governor.

"(2) The arbitrator shall conduct an arbitration proceeding not later than 45 days after the date on which a party submitted the grievance to arbitration.

"(3) The arbitrator shall issue a decision concerning such grievance not later than 30 days after the date of such arbitration proceeding.

"(4) The parties to the arbitration shall evenly divide the cost of such arbitration proceeding.

"(e) Remedies available under this section for violations of paragraph (1) or (3) of section 143(b) may include—

"(1) suspension or termination of payments under this Act;

"(2) prohibition of placement of a participant in a program under this Act;

"(3) recapture of payments made under this Act;

"(4) if the grievant requests reinstatement to the position of the grievant prior to displacement, such reinstatement, together with such compensation (including back pay and lost benefits) and such terms, conditions, and privileges of employment, as the grievant enjoyed prior to displacement; and

"(5) such equitable relief as is necessary to make the grievant whole."

SEC. 21. ADVANCE PAYMENT.

Section 162 (29 U.S.C. 1572) is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(f) When contracting with nonprofit organizations of demonstrated effectiveness, the Secretary, States, and service delivery areas may make advance payments, except that such advance payments shall be based on the financial need of such organizations and shall not exceed 20 percent of the total contract amount."

SEC. 22. FISCAL CONTROLS.

(a) PROCUREMENT.—Section 164(a) (29 U.S.C. 1574(a)) is amended to read as follows:

"(a)(1) Each State shall establish such fiscal control and fund accounting procedures as may be necessary to assure the proper disbursement of, and accounting for, Federal funds paid to the recipient under titles II and III. Such procedures shall ensure that all financial transactions are conducted and records maintained in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles applicable in each State.

"(2) The Governor shall prescribe and implement uniform procurement standards to ensure fiscal accountability and prevent fraud and abuse in programs administered under this Act. Such standards shall include provisions to ensure that, for the State, substate areas, and service delivery areas—

"(A) procurements shall be conducted in a manner providing full and open competition;

"(B) the use of sole source procurements shall be minimized to the extent practicable, and in every case shall be justified;

"(C) procurements shall include an analysis of the reasonableness of costs and prices;

"(D) procurements shall not provide excess program income (for nonprofit and governmental entities) or excess profit (for private for-profit entities), and that appropriate factors shall be utilized in determining whether such income or profit is excessive, such as—

"(i) the complexity of the work to be performed;

"(ii) the risk borne by the contractor; and

"(iii) market conditions in the surrounding geographic area;

"(E) procurements shall clearly specify deliverables and the basis for payment;

"(F) written procedures shall be established for procurement transactions;

"(G) no grantee, contractor, subgrantee, or subcontractor shall engage in any conflict of interest, actual or apparent, in the selection, award and administration of a contract or grant under this Act; and

"(H) all grantees and subgrantees shall conduct oversight to ensure compliance with procurement standards.

"(3) The Governor shall annually conduct on-site monitoring of each service delivery area and substate area within the State to ensure compliance with the procurement standards established under paragraph (2).

"(4) If the Governor determines that a service delivery area or substate area is not in compliance with the procurement standards established under paragraph (2), the Governor shall—

"(A) require corrective action to secure prompt compliance; and

"(B) impose the sanctions described in subsections (b) and (e) in the event of failure to take the required corrective action.

"(5) The Governor shall submit to the Secretary the procurement standards established under paragraph (2), and shall annually certify to the Secretary that—

"(A) the State procurement standards fully satisfy the requirements described in paragraph (2);

"(B) the State has monitored substate areas and service delivery areas to ensure compliance with the procurement standards established under paragraph (2); and

"(C) the State has taken appropriate action to secure compliance under paragraph (4).

"(6) The Secretary shall biennially review the procurement standards established under paragraph (2) and notify the appropriate committees of the Congress whether the requirements contained in paragraph (5) have been satisfied.

"(7) If the Secretary determines that a Governor has not fulfilled the requirements of this subsection, the Secretary shall—

"(A) require corrective action to secure prompt compliance; and

"(B) impose the sanctions provided under subsection (f) in the event of failure of the Governor to take the required corrective action.

"(8) The Secretary, in consultation with the Inspector General, shall review the implementation of this subsection and submit a report to the appropriate committees of the Congress, not later than October 1, 1994, evaluating the effectiveness of the subsection in ensuring fiscal accountability and containing such recommendations as the Secretary determines to be appropriate."

(b) CONSEQUENCES OF FAILURES.—Section 164(b) of the Act is amended to read as follows:

"(b)(1) Whenever, as a result of financial and compliance audits or otherwise, the Governor determines that there is a substantial violation of this Act, and corrective action has not been taken, the Governor shall—

"(A) issue a notice of intent to revoke approval of all or part of the plan affected; or

"(B) impose a reorganization plan, which may include—

"(i) restructuring the private industry council involved;

"(ii) prohibiting the use of designated service providers;

"(iii) selecting an alternative administrative entity to administer a program for the service delivery area involved;

"(iv) merging the service delivery area into one or more other existing service delivery areas; or

"(v) making such other changes as the Secretary or Governor determines to be necessary to secure compliance.

"(2)(A) The actions taken by the Governor under paragraph (1)(A) may be appealed to the Secretary under the same terms and conditions as the disapproval of the plan and shall not become effective until—

"(i) the time for appeal has expired; or

"(ii) the Secretary has issued a decision regarding an appeal.

"(B) The actions taken by the Governor under paragraph (1)(B) may be appealed to the Secretary, who shall make a final decision within 60 days of the receipt of the appeal.

"(3) If the Governor fails to promptly take the actions required under paragraph (1), the Secretary shall take such actions."

SEC. 23. REPORTS, RECORDKEEPING, AND INVESTIGATIONS.

(a) RECORDS.—Section 165(a) (29 U.S.C. 1575(a)) is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(3) In order to allow for the preparation of estimates necessary to meet the requirements of subsection (c), recipients shall maintain standardized records for all individual participants, and provide to the Secretary a sufficient number of such records to provide an adequate random sample."

(b) AUDITS.—Section 165(b) is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(3)(A) In carrying out any audit under this Act (other than any initial audit survey or any audit investigating possible criminal or fraudulent conduct), either directly or through a grant or contract, the Secretary, the Inspector General, or the Comptroller General shall furnish to the State, administrative entity, recipient, or other entity to be audited, advance notification of the overall objectives and purposes of the audit, and any extensive recordkeeping or data requirements to be met, not fewer than 14 days (or as soon as practicable) prior to the commencement of the audit.

"(B) If the scope, objectives, or purposes of the audit change substantially during the course of the audit, the entity being audited shall be notified of the change as soon as practicable.

"(C) The reports on the results of such audits shall cite the law, regulation, policy, or other criteria applicable to any finding.

"(D) Nothing contained in this Act shall be construed so as to be inconsistent with the Inspector General Act of 1978 (5 U.S.C. App.) or government auditing standards issued by the Comptroller General."

(c) MONITORING.—Section 165(c) is amended by—

(1) striking "and" at the end of paragraph (1), and inserting a semicolon;

(2) striking paragraph (2); and

(3) adding at the end the following new paragraphs:

"(2) prescribe and maintain comparable management information systems, in accordance with guidelines that shall be prescribed by the Secretary, designed to facilitate the uniform compilation, cross tabulation, and analysis of programmatic, participant, and financial data, on statewide and service delivery area bases, necessary for reporting, monitoring, and evaluating purposes, including data necessary to comply with section 167; and

"(3) monitor the performance of service providers in complying with the terms of grants, contracts, or other agreements made under this Act."

(d) REPORT INFORMATION; RETENTION OF RECORDS.—Section 165 is further amended by inserting at the end the following new subsections:

"(d)(1) The reports required in subsection (c) shall include information pertaining to—

"(A) the relevant demographic characteristics (including race, ethnicity, sex, and age) and other related information about enrollees and participants;

"(B) the activities in which participants are enrolled, and the length of time that participants are engaged in such activities;

"(C) program outcomes, including occupations, for participants;

"(D) specified program costs; and

"(E) information necessary to prepare reports to comply with section 167.

"(2) The Secretary shall ensure that all elements required for the reports described in paragraph (1) are defined and reported uniformly.

"(e) Each Governor of a State participating in a program under this Act shall ensure that procedures are developed for retention of all records pertinent to all grants and agreements made under this Act, including financial, statistical, property, and participant records and supporting documentation. For funds allotted to a State for any program year, records must be retained for 2 years following the date on which the annual expenditure report containing the final expenditures charged to the allotment for such program year is submitted to the Secretary. Records for nonexpendable property shall be retained for a period of 3 years after final disposition of the property."

SEC. 24. DISCRIMINATION.

Section 167 (29 U.S.C. 1577) is amended by adding at the end the following new subsections:

"(e)(1) The head of the office of the Department of Labor referred to as the 'Directorate for Civil Rights' shall annually prepare a report on the administration and enforcement of this section.

"(2) The report required by paragraph (1) shall include—

"(A) an identification of the service delivery areas and States that have determined, during the preceding program year, not to be in compliance with this section;

"(B) for each such identification, the date on which the inquiry was begun and whether the inquiry was initiated on the basis of a complaint or at the initiative of the Department;

"(C) an identification of the service delivery areas and States awaiting findings by the Directorate;

"(D) the number of service delivery areas and States that, during the preceding year, were determined not to be in compliance with this section, and the number for which insufficient data prevented the making of such a determination, and information identifying the type of data that is missing or inadequate;

"(E) a statistical summary, broken down by race, sex, national origin, disability, or age, of the number of inquiries undertaken and the outcomes of the inquiries;

"(F) an identification of any service delivery area or State that has been determined, during the preceding year, to have failed to conduct objective assessments as required by sections 204 and 264 on a nondiscriminatory basis;

"(G)(i) the amount expended by the Department for the administration and enforcement by the Directorate of this section; and

"(ii) the number and percentage of full-time employees, and the full-time equivalent of the part-time employees, engaged in such administration and enforcement;

"(H) the number of onsite visits conducted each year, and whether the visits were initiated by the Department or by complaint;

"(I) the number of cases referred to the Attorney General, and for such cases—

"(i) the civil actions taken by the Attorney General on the cases;

"(ii) the use, by the Secretary, of the authority of title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 (42 U.S.C. 2000d et seq.), the Age Discrimination Act of 1975 (29 U.S.C. 621 et seq.), or section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973 (29 U.S.C. 794); and

"(J) a description of any other actions taken by the Secretary under, or related to the administration and enforcement of, this section.

"(3) The report required by this subsection shall be submitted to the Congress as part of the annual report of the Secretary under section 169(d).

"(f) In addition to any other sums authorized to be appropriated, there are authorized to be appropriated for the operations and expenses of the Directorate such sums as may be necessary for the purpose of increasing the number of full-time equivalent personnel available to the Directorate in order to comply with the requirements of this section."

SEC. 25. ESTABLISHMENT OF ADULT OPPORTUNITY PROGRAM.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Part A of title II (29 U.S.C. 1601 et seq.) is amended to read as follows:

"PART A—ADULT OPPORTUNITY PROGRAM

"SEC. 201. STATEMENT OF PURPOSE.

"It is the purpose of this part to establish programs to prepare adults for participation in the labor force by increasing occupational and educational skills resulting in improved long-term employability, increased employment and earnings, and reduced welfare dependency.

"SEC. 202. ALLOTMENT AND ALLOCATION.

"(a) ALLOTMENT.—

"(1) TERRITORIES.—Of the amount appropriated under section 3(a)(1) for each fiscal year and available to carry out this part, not more than one-quarter of 1 percent shall be allotted among Guam, the Virgin Islands, American Samoa, the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands, the Freely Associated States, and the Republic of Palau.

"(2) ALLOTMENT TO STATES.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—After determining the amounts to be allotted under paragraph (1), the Secretary shall allot the remainder to the States in accordance with subparagraph (B) for allocation to service delivery areas within each State in accordance with subsections (b) and (c).

"(B) BASIS.—Subject to paragraph (3), of the remainder described in subparagraph (A) for each fiscal year—

"(i) 33½ percent shall be allotted on the basis of the relative number of unemployed individuals residing in areas of substantial unemployment in each State as compared to the total number of such unemployed individuals in all such areas of substantial unemployment in all the States;

"(ii) 33½ percent shall be allotted on the basis of the relative excess number of unemployed individuals who reside in each State as compared to the total excess number of unemployed individuals in all the States; and

"(iii)(I) except as provided in subclause (II), 33½ percent shall be allotted on the basis of the relative number of economically disadvantaged individuals within each State as compared to the total number of economically disadvantaged individuals in all States; or

"(II) for any State in which there is any service delivery area described in section 101(a)(4)(A)(iii), 33½ percent shall be allotted on the basis of the higher of the number of adults in families with an income below the low-income level in such area or the number of economically disadvantaged individuals in such area.

"(3) LIMITATIONS ON ALLOTMENTS.—

"(A) STATE MINIMUM.—No State shall receive less than one-quarter of 1 percent of the amount available for allotment to the States under this subsection from the remainder described in paragraph (2)(A) for each fiscal year.

"(B) MINIMUM PERCENTAGE.—No State shall be allotted less than 90 percent of the allotment percentage of the State for the fiscal year preceding the fiscal year for which the determination is made.

"(C) MAXIMUM PERCENTAGE.—No State shall be allotted more than 130 percent of the allotment percentage of the State for the fiscal year preceding the fiscal year for which the determination is made.

"(D) ALLOTMENT PERCENTAGE.—

"(i) IN GENERAL.—For the purposes of this paragraph, the allotment percentage of a State shall be the percentage that the State received of all allotments under this subsection.

"(ii) FISCAL YEAR 1992.—For the purposes of this paragraph, for fiscal year 1992, the allotment percentage of a State shall be the percentage that the State received of all allotments under section 201 as in effect on the day before the date of the enactment of this section.

"(b) ALLOCATION TO SERVICE DELIVERY AREAS.—Of the amounts allotted to each State under subsection (a)(2)(B) for each fiscal year, the Governor shall allocate 77 percent in accordance with this subsection and 23 percent in accordance with subsection (c). Of such 77 percent—

"(1) 33½ percent shall be allocated among service delivery areas within the State on the basis of the relative number of unemployed individuals residing in areas of substantial unemployment in each service delivery area as compared to the total excess number of such unemployed individuals in all such areas of substantial unemployment in the State;

"(2) 33½ percent shall be allocated among service delivery areas within the State on the basis of the relative excess number of unemployed individuals who reside in each service delivery area as compared to the total excess number of unemployed individuals in all service delivery areas in the State; and

"(3)(A) except as provided in clause (ii), 33½ percent shall be allocated among service delivery areas within the State on the basis of the relative number of economically disadvantaged individuals within each service delivery area as compared to the total number of economically disadvantaged individuals in the State; or

"(B) for any service delivery area described in section 101(a)(4)(A)(iii), 33½ percent shall be allotted on the basis of the higher of the number of adults in families with an income below the low-income level in such area or the number of economically disadvantaged individuals in such area.

"(c) STATE ACTIVITIES.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The Governor shall allocate 23 percent of the amounts allotted to each State under subsection (a)(2)(B) for the activities described in paragraph (2).

"(2) USES.—Of the amounts allotted to each State under subsection (a)(2)(B) for each fiscal year—

"(A)(i) except as provided in clause (ii), 5 percent shall be available for overall administration, management, and auditing activities relating to programs under this title and for activities described in sections 121 and 122; and

"(ii) the Secretary shall ensure that the amount available to carry out the activities described in clause (i) is not less than $500,000 by—

"(I) ratably reducing, by an amount necessary to meet the requirement of subclause (II), the amounts available under clause (i) for the States that have amounts available in excess of $500,000; and

"(II) allotting the funds available under subclause (I) to the States that would otherwise have amounts available under clause (i) that are less than $500,000 in amounts necessary to ensure that such States have an amount equal to $500,000 to carry out the activities described in clause (i);

"(B) 2 percent shall be available for technical assistance and capacity building in developing the overall capability of the job training system within the State, including the development and training of State and local service delivery area staff, service provider staff, the development of information and exemplary program activities, and the conduct of research and other activities designed to improve the level, degree, and goals of programs conducted under this Act;

"(C) 3 percent shall be available to provide incentive grants authorized under section 106(b)(8);

"(D) 8 percent shall be available to carry out section 123; and

"(E) 5 percent shall be available to carry out section 204(d).

"(d) DEFINITIONS AND RULE.—

"(1) DEFINITIONS.—As used in this section:

"(A) ECONOMICALLY DISADVANTAGED INDIVIDUAL.—The term 'economically disadvantaged individual' means an individual who is age 22 through 72 and who has, or is a member of a family that has, received a total family income that, in relation to family size, was not in excess of the higher of—

"(i) the official poverty line (as defined by the Office of Management and Budget, and revised annually in accordance with section 673(2) of the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1981 (42 U.S.C. 9902(2)); or

"(ii) 70 percent of the lower living standard income level.

"(B) EXCESS NUMBER.—The term 'excess number' means—

"(i) with respect to the excess number of unemployed individuals within a State—

"(I) the number of unemployed individuals age 22 through 72 in excess of 4.5 percent of the civilian labor force in the State; or

"(II) the number of such unemployed individuals in excess of 4.5 percent of the civilian labor force in areas of substantial unemployment in such State; and

"(ii) with respect to the excess number of unemployed individuals within a service delivery area—

"(I) the number of unemployed individuals age 22 through 72 in excess of 4.5 percent of the civilian labor force in the service delivery area; or

"(II) the number of such unemployed individuals in excess of 4.5 percent of the civilian labor force in areas of substantial unemployment in such area.

"(2) SPECIAL RULE.—For the purposes of this section, the Secretary shall, as appropriate and to the extent practical, exclude college students and members of the Armed Forces from the determination of the number of economically disadvantaged individuals.

"SEC. 203. ELIGIBILITY FOR SERVICES.

"(a) ELIGIBILITY.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—An individual shall be eligible to participate in the program assisted under this part if such individual is—

"(A) 22 years of age or older; and

"(B) economically disadvantaged.

"(2) MINIMUM REQUIREMENT.—Not less than 65 percent of the participants in a program assisted under this part in each service delivery area shall be individuals who, in addition to meeting the requirements of paragraph (1), are included in one or more of the following categories:

"(A) Individuals who are basic skills deficient.

"(B) Individuals who are school dropouts.

"(C) Individuals who are recipients of aid to families with dependent children who either meet the requirements of section 403(1)(2)(B) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 603(1)(2)(B)) or have been provided an employability plan in accordance with section 482(b) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 682(b)).

"(D) Individuals with a disability.

"(E) Individuals who are homeless, as defined by subsections (a) and (c) of section 103 of the Stewart B. McKinney Homeless Assistance Act (42 U.S.C. 11302).

"(F) Individuals who are unemployed for the previous 6 months or longer.

"(G) Offenders.

"(H) Individuals who are limited-English proficient.

"(I) Individuals who are in a category established under subsection (b).

"(3) SPECIAL RULE.—Not more than 10 percent of all participants in a program assisted under this part in each service delivery area shall be individuals who are not economically disadvantaged if such individuals are age 22 or older and within 1 or more categories of individuals who face serious barriers to employment. Such categories may include the categories described in paragraph (2), or categories such as displaced homemakers, older workers, veterans, alcoholics, or addicts.

"(b) ADDITIONAL CATEGORY.—A service delivery area conducting a program assisted under this part may add one category of individuals who face serious barriers to employment to the categories of eligible individuals described in subsection (a)(2) if—

"(1) the service delivery area submits a request to the Governor identifying the additional category of individuals and justifying the inclusion of such category;

"(2) the Governor approves the request submitted under paragraph (1) and transmits the request to the Secretary, as part of the Governor's coordination and special services plan under section 121; and

"(3) the Secretary approves the request submitted under paragraph (2).

"SEC. 204. PROGRAM DESIGN.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—

"(1) PROGRAM REQUIREMENTS.—Each program assisted under this part shall include—

"(A) an objective assessment of the skill levels and service needs of each participant, including such factors as basic skills, occupational skills, prior work experience, employability, interests, aptitudes (including interests and aptitudes for nontraditional employment) and supportive service needs, except that a new assessment of a participant is not required if the program determines that a recent assessment of the participant conducted under another education or training program, such as the JOBS program, is an appropriate assessment;

"(B) development of service strategies that shall identify the employment goal (including, in appropriate circumstances, nontraditional employment), the appropriate achievement objectives, and the appropriate sequence of services for participants, taking into account the assessments conducted under paragraph (1), except that a new service strategy is not required if the program determines a recent service strategy developed for the participant under another education or training program (such as the JOBS program) is an appropriate service strategy;

"(C) a review of the progress of each participant in meeting the objectives of the service strategy; and

"(D) basic skills training and occupational skills training if the assessment and the service strategy indicate such training is appropriate.

"(2) ADDITIONAL REQUIREMENTS.—

"(A) MINIMUM INCOME PARTICIPANTS AND APPLICANTS.—Each service delivery area participating in a program assisted under this part shall ensure that each participant or applicant who meets the minimum income eligibility criteria shall be provided—

"(i) information on the full array of applicable or appropriate services that are available through the service delivery area or other service providers, including providers receiving funds under this Act; and

"(ii) referral to other appropriate training and educational programs that have the capacity to serve the participant or applicant either on a sequential or concurrent basis.

"(B) APPLICANTS NOT MEETING ENROLLMENT REQUIREMENTS.—

"(i) SERVICE PROVIDERS.—Each service provider shall ensure that an eligible applicant who does not meet the enrollment requirements of the particular program of the provider shall be referred to the service delivery area for further assessment, as necessary, and referrals to appropriate programs to meet the basic skills and training needs of the applicant.

"(ii) SERVICE DELIVERY AREA.—The service delivery area shall ensure that appropriate referrals are made under clause (i) and shall maintain records on the referrals and the reasons for which applicants are referred.

"(b) AUTHORIZED SERVICES.—Subject to the limitations contained in subsection (c), services that may be made available to each participant under this part may include—

"(1) direct training services, including—

"(A) basic skills training, including remedial education, literacy training, and English-as-a-second-language instruction;

"(B) institutional skills training;

"(C) on-the-job training;

"(D) assessment of the skill levels and service needs of participants;

"(E) counseling, such as job counseling and career counseling;

"(F) case management services;

"(G) education-to-work transition activities;

"(H) programs that combine workplace training with related instruction;

"(I) work experience;

"(J) programs of advanced career training that provide a formal combination of on-the-job and institutional training and internship assignments that prepare individuals for career employment;

"(K) training programs operated by the private sector, including programs operated by labor organizations or by consortia of private sector employers utilizing private sector facilities, equipment, and personnel to train workers in occupations for which demand exceeds supply;

"(L) skill upgrading and retraining;

"(M) bilingual training;

"(N) entrepreneurial training, such as training activities for microenterprises;

"(O) vocational exploration;

"(P) training programs to develop work habits to help individuals obtain and retain employment;

"(Q) attainment of certificates of high school equivalency;

"(R) preapprenticeship programs;

"(S) on-site, industry-specific training programs supportive of industrial and economic development;

"(T) customized training conducted with a commitment by an employer or group of employers to employ an individual upon successful completion of the training; and

"(U) use of advanced learning technology for education, job preparation, and skills training; and

"(2) training-related and supportive services, including—

"(A) job search assistance;

"(B) outreach to make individuals aware of, and encourage the use of, employment and training services, including efforts to expand awareness of training and placement opportunities for limited-English proficient individuals and individuals with disabilities;

"(C) outreach, to develop awareness of, and encourage participation in, education, training services, and work experience programs to assist women in obtaining nontraditional employment, and to facilitate the retention of women in nontraditional employment, including services at the site of training or employment;

"(D) specialized surveys not available through other labor market information sources;

"(E) dissemination of information on program activities to employers;

"(F) development of job openings;

"(G) programs coordinated with other Federal employment-related activities;

"(H) supportive services, necessary to enable individuals to participate in the program, and to assist the individuals, for a period not to exceed 12 months following completion of training, to retain employment;

"(I) needs-based payments necessary to participate in accordance with a locally developed formula or procedure;

"(J) followup services with participants placed in unsubsidized employment; and

"(K) services to obtain job placements for individual participants.

"(c) SPECIAL RULES.—

"(1) WORKPLACE CONTEXT AND INTEGRATION.—Basic skills training provided under this part shall, in appropriate circumstances, have a workplace context and be integrated with occupational skills training.

"(2) BASIC EDUCATION OR OCCUPATIONAL SKILLS.—

“(A) ADDITIONAL SERVICES.—Except as provided in subparagraph (B), job search, job search skills training, job clubs, and work experience provided under this part shall be accompanied by other services designed to increase the basic education or occupational skills of a participant.

“(B) LACK OF APPROPRIATENESS AND AVAILABILITY.—Each program assisted under this part may provide job search, job search skills training, and job clubs activities to a participant without the additional services described in subparagraph (A) if—

“(i) the assessment and service strategy of a participant indicate that the additional services are not appropriate; and

“(ii) the activities are not available to the participant through the employment service or other public agencies.

“(3) NEEDS-BASED PAYMENTS.—Needs-based payments provided under this part shall be limited to payments necessary for participation in the program assisted under this part in accordance with a locally developed formula or procedure.

“(4) COUNSELING AND SUPPORTIVE SERVICES.—Counseling and supportive services provided under this part may be provided to a participant for a period up to 1 year after the date on which the participant completes the program.

“(5) SERVICE STRATEGY.—The service strategy developed under subsection (a)(2) shall not be considered a contract.

“(6) VOLUNTEERS.—The service delivery area shall make opportunities available for successful individuals who have previously participated in programs under this part to volunteer assistance to participants in the form of mentoring, tutoring, and other activities.

“(d) TRAINING PROGRAMS FOR OLDER INDIVIDUALS.—

“(1) IN GENERAL.—The Governor is authorized to provide for job training programs that are developed in conjunction with service delivery areas within the State and that are consistent with the plan for the service delivery area prepared and submitted in accordance with section 104, and designed to assure the training and placement of older individuals in employment opportunities with private business concerns.

“(2) AGREEMENTS.—In carrying out this subsection, the Governor shall, after consultation with appropriate private industry councils and chief elected officials, enter into agreements with public agencies, non-profit private organizations, including veterans organizations, and private business concerns.

“(3) CONSIDERATIONS.—The Governor shall give consideration to assisting programs involving training for jobs in growth industries and jobs reflecting the use of new technological skills.

“(4) COORDINATION.—In providing the services required by this subsection, the Governor shall make efforts to coordinate the delivery of such services with the delivery of services under title V of the Older Americans Act of 1965 (42 U.S.C. 3056 et seq.).

“(5) SERVICE PROVIDER SELECTION.—In the selection of service providers to serve older individuals under this subsection, the Governor shall give priority to national, State, and local agencies and organizations that have a record of demonstrated effectiveness in providing training and employment services to such older individuals.

“(6) ELIGIBILITY.—

“(A) ECONOMICALLY DISADVANTAGED.—Except as provided in subparagraph (B), an individual shall be eligible to participate in a job training program under this subsection only if the individual is economically disadvantaged and is age 55 or older.

“(B) SPECIAL RULE.—

“(1) INDIVIDUALS FACING SERIOUS BARRIERS TO EMPLOYMENT.—An individual who is not economically disadvantaged as described in subparagraph (A) shall be eligible to participate in a job training program under this subsection if the individual faces serious barriers to employment, is age 55 or older, and meets income eligibility requirements under title V of the Older Americans Act of 1965 (42 U.S.C. 3056 et seq.) subject to clause (ii).

“(ii) LIMITATION.—Not more than 10 percent of all participants in a program assisted under this subsection shall be such individuals.

“(7) APPLICABLE REQUIREMENTS.—In the event of a conflict between the requirements of this subsection and other requirements of this part, the requirements of this subsection shall apply with respect to programs conducted under this subsection.

“SEC. 205. LINKAGES.

“(a) IN GENERAL.—In conducting the program assisted under this part, the service delivery area shall establish appropriate linkages with other Federal programs. Such programs shall include, where feasible, programs assisted under—

“(1) the Adult Education Act (20 U.S.C. 1201 et seq.);

“(2) the Carl D. Perkins Vocational and Applied Technology Education Act (20 U.S.C. 2301 et seq.);

“(3) the Wagner-Peyser Act (29 U.S.C. 49 et seq.);

“(4) part F of title IV of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 681 et seq.);

“(5) the employment program established under section 6(d)(4) of the Food Stamp Act of 1977 (7 U.S.C. 2015(d)(4));

“(6) the National Apprenticeship Act (29 U.S.C. 50 et seq.);

“(7) the Rehabilitation Act of 1973 (29 U.S.C. 701 et seq.);

“(8) title V of the Older Americans Act of 1965 (42 U.S.C. 3056 et seq.);

“(10) the Stewart B. McKinney Homeless Assistance Act (Public Law 100-77; 101 Stat. 482).

“(b) OTHER APPROPRIATE LINKAGES.—In addition to the linkages required under subsection (a), each service delivery area receiving financial assistance under this part shall establish other appropriate linkages to enhance the provision of services under this part. Such linkages may be established with local educational agencies, local service agencies, public housing agencies, community-based organizations, literacy organizations, business and labor organizations, volunteer groups working with disadvantaged adults, and other training, education, employment, economic development, and social service programs.

“SEC. 206. TRANSFER OF FUNDS.

“A service delivery area may transfer up to 10 percent of the funds provided under this part to the programs under parts B and C if such transfer is—

“(1) described in the job training plan; and

“(2) approved by the Governor.

“SEC. 207. STUDIES RELATING TO PLACEMENT AND TARGET POPULATIONS.

“The Comptroller General of the United States shall conduct a study to determine the number and percentage of adults assisted under this part that remain employed for at least 9 months after receiving assistance under this part. The Comptroller General shall submit a report containing the findings resulting from the study to the appropriate committees of Congress not later than 3 years after the date of enactment of this section.”

(b) TECHNICAL AMENDMENT.—The table of contents relating to part A of title II is amended to read as follows:

“Sec. 201. Statement of purpose.

“Sec. 202. Allotment and allocation.

“Sec. 203. Eligibility for services.

“Sec. 204. Program design.

“Sec. 205. Linkages.

“Sec. 206. Transfer of funds.

“Sec. 207. Studies relating to placement and target populations.”

(c) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—

(1) Section 5(1) of the Food Stamp Act of 1977 (7 U.S.C. 2014(1)) is amended by striking “section 204(5)” and inserting “section 204(b)(1)(C)”.

SEC. 26. ESTABLISHMENT OF SUMMER YOUTH OPPORTUNITY PROGRAM.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Part B of title II (29 U.S.C. 1631 et seq.) is amended to read as follows:

“PART B—SUMMER YOUTH EMPLOYMENT AND TRAINING PROGRAMS

“SEC. 251. PURPOSE.

“It is the purpose of programs assisted under this part—

“(1) to enhance the basic educational skills of youth;

“(2) to encourage school completion, or enrollment in supplementary or alternative school programs;

“(3) to provide eligible youth with exposure to the world of work; and

“(4) to enhance the citizenship skills of youth.

“SEC. 252. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS; ALLOTMENT AND ALLOCATION.

“(a) TERRITORIAL AND NATIVE AMERICAN ALLOCATION.—From the funds appropriated under section 3(a)(2), the Secretary shall first allocate to Guam, the Virgin Islands, American Samoa, the Freely Associated States, the Republic of Palau, the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands, and entities eligible under section 401 the same percentage of funds as were available to such areas and entities for the summer youth program in the fiscal year preceding the fiscal year for which the determination is made.

“(b) USE OF PART C FORMULA FOR ALLOTMENT AND ALLOCATION.—The remainder of funds appropriated under section 3(a)(2) shall, for each fiscal year, be allotted among States on the basis of the formula specified in section 202(a)(2)(B) and allocated among service delivery areas on the basis of the formula specified in section 202(b). For purposes of the application of the formulas under this subsection, the term ‘economically disadvantaged individual’ means an economically disadvantaged youth, as defined in section 262(d)(1)(A).

“SEC. 253. USE OF FUNDS.

“(a) IN GENERAL.—Funds available under this part may be used for—

“(1) basic and remedial education, institutional and on-the-job training, work experience programs, youth corps programs, employment counseling, occupational training, preparation for work, outreach and enrollment activities, employability assessment, job referral and placement, job search and job club activities, activities under programs described in section 265(b), and any other employment or job training activity designed to give employment to eligible individuals or prepare the individuals for, and place the individuals in, employment;

"(2) supportive services necessary to enable such individuals to participate in the program; and

"(3) administrative costs, not to exceed 15 percent of the funds available under this part.

"(b) BASIC AND REMEDIAL EDUCATION.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—A service delivery area shall expend funds (available under this Act or otherwise available to the service delivery area) for basic and remedial education as described in the job training plan under section 104.

"(2) EDUCATION OR TRAINING.—The education authorized by paragraph (1) may be provided by—

"(A) the year-round program under this part;

"(B) the Job Corps;

"(C) the JOBS program;

"(D) youth corps programs;

"(E) alternative or secondary schools; or

"(F) other education and training programs.

"(c) ASSESSMENT.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in paragraph (2), each participant under this part shall be provided with an objective assessment of the skill levels and service needs of the participant, which assessment may include a review of basic skills, occupational skills, prior work experience, employability, interests, aptitudes, and supportive service needs.

"(2) RECENT ASSESSMENTS.—The assessment described in paragraph (1), or a factor of such assessment is not required under a program under this part if the program uses recent assessments conducted under another education or training program (such as the JOBS program).

"(3) SERVICE STRATEGY.—The service delivery area shall develop a service strategy for participants that may identify achievement objectives, appropriate employment goals, and appropriate services for participants, taking into account the assessments conducted under this subsection or under such other education or training program.

"(d) FOLLOWUP SERVICES.—Service delivery areas shall make followup services available for participants if the service strategy indicates such services are appropriate.

"SEC. 254. LIMITATIONS.

"(a) USE DURING SUMMER MONTHS OR EQUIVALENT VACATION PERIOD.—

"(1) SUMMER MONTHS.—Except as provided in paragraph (2), programs under this part shall be conducted during the summer months.

"(2) VACATION PERIOD.—A service delivery area may, within the jurisdiction of any local educational agency that operates schools on a year-round, full-time basis, offer the programs under this part to participants during a vacation period treated as the equivalent of a summer vacation.

"(b) ELIGIBILITY.—An individual shall be eligible to participate in the program assisted under this part if such individual is economically disadvantaged and age 14 through 21.

"(c) CONCURRENT ENROLLMENT.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—An eligible individual participating in a program assisted under this part may concurrently be enrolled in programs under part C. Appropriate adjustment to the youth performance standards (regarding attainment of competencies) under sections 106(b)(4)(A) (i) and (ii) and 106(b)(5) shall be made to reflect the limited period of participation.

"(2) CONCURRENT ENROLLMENT AND TRANSFERS.—Youth being served under this part or part C youth programs are not required to be terminated from participation in one program in order to enroll in the other. The Secretary shall provide guidance to service delivery areas on simplified procedures for concurrent enrollment and transfers for youth from one program to the other.

"SEC. 255. APPLICABLE PROVISIONS.

"(a) COMPARABLE FUNCTIONS OF AGENCIES AND OFFICIALS.—Private industry councils established under title I, chief elected officials, State job training coordinating councils, and Governors shall have the same authority, duties, and responsibilities with respect to planning and administration of funds available under this part as the private industry councils, chief elected officials, State job training coordinating councils, and Governors have with respect to funds available under parts A and C of title II.

"(b) PROGRAM GOALS AND OBJECTIVES.—In accordance with subsection (a), each service delivery area shall establish written program goals and objectives that shall be used for evaluating the effectiveness of programs conducted under this part. Such goals and objectives may include—

"(1) improvement in school retention and completion;

"(2) improvement in academic performance, including mathematics and reading comprehension;

"(3) improvement in employability skills; and

"(4) demonstrated coordination with other community service organizations such as local educational agencies, law enforcement agencies, and drug and alcohol abuse prevention and treatment programs."

(b) TECHNICAL AMENDMENT.—The table of contents relating to part B of title II is amended to read as follows:

"PART B—SUMMER YOUTH EMPLOYMENT AND TRAINING PROGRAMS

"Sec. 251. Purpose.

"Sec. 252. Authorization of appropriations; allotment and allocation.

"Sec. 253. Use of funds.

"Sec. 254. Limitations.

"Sec. 255. Applicable provisions."

SEC. 27. ESTABLISHMENT OF YOUTH OPPORTUNITY PROGRAM.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Title II (29 U.S.C. 1601 et seq.) is amended by adding at the end the following new part:

"PART C—YOUTH OPPORTUNITY PROGRAM

"SEC. 261. STATEMENT OF PURPOSE.

"It is the purpose of the programs assisted under this part to—

"(1) improve the long-term employability of youth;

"(2) enhance the educational, occupational, and citizenship skills of youth;

"(3) encourage school completion or enrollment in alternative school programs;

"(4) increase the employment and earnings of youth;

"(5) reduce welfare dependency; and

"(6) assist youth in addressing problems that impair the ability of youth to make successful transitions from school to work, apprenticeship, the military, or postsecondary education and training.

"SEC. 262. ALLOTMENT AND ALLOCATION.

"(a) ALLOTMENT.—

"(1) TERRITORIES.—Of the amount appropriated under section 3(a)(1) for each fiscal year and available to carry out this part, not more than one-quarter of 1 percent shall be allotted among Guam, the Virgin Islands, American Samoa, the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands, the Freely Associated States, and the Republic of Palau.

"(2) ALLOTMENT TO STATES.—After determining the amounts to be allotted under paragraph (1), the Secretary shall allot the remainder to the States in accordance with paragraphs (2) and (3) of section 202(a), except that for purposes of the application of the formula under this subparagraph, the term 'economically disadvantaged individual' means an economically disadvantaged youth.

"(b) ALLOCATION TO SERVICE DELIVERY AREAS.—Of the amounts allotted to each State under subsection (a)(2) for each fiscal year, the Governor shall allocate 82 percent on the basis of the formula specified in section 202(b) and 18 percent in accordance with subsection (c). For purposes of the application of the formula under this subsection, the term 'economically disadvantaged individual' means an economically disadvantaged youth.

"(c) STATE ACTIVITIES.—The Governor shall allocate 18 percent of the amounts allotted to each State under subsection (a)(2) in the same proportions and for the activities, described in subparagraphs (A), (B), (C), and (D) of section 202(c)(2).

"(d) DEFINITIONS AND RULE.—

"(1) DEFINITIONS.—As used in this section:

"(A) ECONOMICALLY DISADVANTAGED YOUTH.—The term 'economically disadvantaged youth' means an individual who is age 16 through 21 and who has, or is a member of a family that has received a total family income that, in relation to family size, was not in excess of the higher of—

"(i) the official poverty line (as defined by the Office of Management and Budget, and revised annually in accordance with section 673(2) of the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1981 (42 U.S.C. 9902(2)); or

"(ii) 70 percent of the lower living standard income level.

"(B) EXCESS NUMBER.—The term 'excess number' shall have the meaning given the term in section 202(d)(1)(B).

"(2) SPECIAL RULE.—For the purposes of this section, the Secretary shall, as appropriate and to the extent practicable, exclude college students and members of the Armed Forces from the determination of the number of economically disadvantaged youth and the size of the youth population in a service delivery area.

"SEC. 263. ELIGIBILITY FOR SERVICES.

"(a) IN-SCHOOL YOUTH.—An individual who is in school shall be eligible to participate in the program under this part if such individual is—

"(1)(A) age 16 through 21; or

"(B) if provided in the job training plan, age 14 through 21; and

"(2) economically disadvantaged, or participates in a compensatory education program under chapter 1 of title I of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 (20 U.S.C. 2711 et seq.).

"(b) TARGETED GROUPS OF IN-SCHOOL YOUTH.—Not less than 70 percent of the in-school individuals who participate in a program under this part shall be individuals who, in addition to meeting the requirements of subsection (a), are included in one or more of the following categories:

"(1) Individuals who are basic skills deficient.

"(2) Individuals with educational attainment that is one or more grade levels below the grade level appropriate to the age of the individuals.

"(3) Individuals who are pregnant or parenting.

"(4) Individuals with disabilities, including a learning disability.

"(5) Individuals exhibiting a pattern of disruptive behavior or disciplinary problems.

"(6) Individuals who are limited-English proficient.

"(7) Individuals who are homeless or run-away youth.

"(8) Offenders.

"(9) Individuals within a category established under subsection (h).

"(c) OUT-OF-SCHOOL YOUTH.—An individual who is out of school shall be eligible to participate in the program under this part if such individual is—

"(1) age 16 through 21; and

"(2) economically disadvantaged.

"(d) TARGETED GROUPS OF OUT-OF-SCHOOL YOUTH.—Not less than 70 percent of the out-of-school individuals who participate in a program under this part shall be individuals who, in addition to meeting the requirements of subsection (c), are included in one or more of the following categories:

"(1) Individuals who are basic skills deficient.

"(2) Individuals who are school dropouts (subject to the conditions described in section 264(d)(2)).

"(3) Individuals who are pregnant or parenting.

"(4) Individuals with disabilities, including a learning disability.

"(5) Homeless or run-away youth.

"(6) Offenders.

"(7) Individuals who are limited-English proficient.

"(8) Individuals in a category established under subsection (h).

"(e) EXCEPTIONS.—Not more than 10 percent of participants in the program assisted under this part in each service delivery area shall be individuals who do not meet the requirements of subsection (a)(2) or (c)(2), if such individuals are within one or more categories of individuals who face serious barriers to employment. Such categories may include the categories described in subsections (b) and (d), or categories such as individuals with limited-English language proficiency, alcoholics, or drug addicts.

"(f) RATIO OF OUT-OF-SCHOOL TO IN-SCHOOL YOUTH.—Not less than 50 percent of the participants in the program under this part in each service delivery area shall be out-of-school individuals who meet the requirements of subsection (c), (d), or (e).

"(g) SCHOOLWIDE PROJECTS FOR LOW-INCOME SCHOOLS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—In addition to the individuals described in subsection (e), an individual who does not meet the requirements of subsection (a)(2) may participate in the programs assisted under this part if such individual is enrolled in a public school—

"(A) that is located in a poverty area;

"(B) that is served by a local educational agency that is eligible for assistance under chapter 1 of title I of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 (20 U.S.C. 2711 et seq.);

"(C) in which not less than 75 percent of the students enrolled are included in the categories described in subsection (b); and

"(D) that conducts a program under a cooperative arrangement that meets the requirements of section 265(d).

"(2) DEFINITION.—For the purposes of paragraph (1), the term 'poverty area' means an urban census tract or a nonmetropolitan county with a poverty rate of 30 percent or more, as determined by the Bureau of the Census.

"(h) ADDITIONAL CATEGORY.—A service delivery area conducting a program assisted under this part may add one category of youth who face serious barriers to employment to the categories of eligible individuals specified in subsection (b) and one category to the categories of eligible individuals described in subsection (d) if—

"(1) the service delivery area submits a request to the Governor identifying the additional category of individuals and justifying the inclusion of such category;

"(2) the Governor approves the request submitted under paragraph (1) and transmits the request to the Secretary, as part of the Governor's coordination and special services plan; and

"(3) the Secretary approves the request submitted under paragraph (2).

"SEC. 264. PROGRAM DESIGN.

"(a) YEAR-ROUND OPERATION.—The programs under this part shall be conducted on a year-round basis.

"(b) ESSENTIAL ELEMENTS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The programs under this part shall include—

"(A) an objective assessment of the skill levels and service needs of each participant, which assessment shall include a review of basic skills, occupational skills, prior work experience, employability, interests, aptitudes (including interests and aptitudes for nontraditional jobs), and supportive service needs, except that a new assessment of a participant is not required if the program determines it is appropriate to use a recent assessment of the participant conducted under another education or training program (such as the JOBS program);

"(B) development of service strategies that shall identify achievement objectives, appropriate employment goals (including, in appropriate circumstances, nontraditional employment) and appropriate services for participants, taking into account the assessments conducted under paragraph (1), except that a new service strategy is not required if the program determines it is appropriate to use a recent service strategy developed for the participant under another education or training program (such as the JOBS program);

"(C) a review of the progress of each participant in meeting the objectives of the service strategy; and

"(D) the following services, which shall be provided either directly or through arrangement with other programs to a participant if the assessment and service strategy indicate such services are appropriate:

"(i) Basic skills training.

"(ii) Occupational skills training.

"(iii) Preemployment and work maturity skills training.

"(iv) Work experience combined with skills training.

"(v) Supportive services.

"(2) ADDITIONAL REQUIREMENTS.—

"(A) MINIMUM INCOME PARTICIPANTS AND APPLICANTS.—Each service delivery area participating in a program assisted under this part shall ensure that each participant or applicant who meets the minimum income eligibility criteria shall be provided—

"(i) information on the full array of applicable or appropriate services that are available through the service delivery area or other service providers, including providers receiving funds under this Act; and

"(ii) referral to other appropriate training and educational programs that have the ca-capacity to serve the participant or applicant either on a sequential or concurrent basis.

"(B) APPLICANTS NOT MEETING ENROLLMENT REQUIREMENTS.—

"(i) SERVICE PROVIDERS.—Each service provider shall ensure that an eligible applicant who does not meet the enrollment requirements of the particular program of the provider shall be referred to the service delivery area for further assessment, as necessary, and referred to appropriate programs to meet the basic skills and training needs of the applicant.

"(ii) SERVICE DELIVERY AREA.—The service delivery area shall ensure that appropriate referrals are made under clause (i) and shall maintain records on the referrals and the reasons for which applicants are referred.

"(c) AUTHORIZED SERVICES.—Services which may be made available to youth with funds provided under this part may include—

"(1) direct training services, including—

"(A) the services described in section 204(b)(1);

"(B) tutoring and study skills training;

"(C) alternative high school services with programs that meet the requirements of section 141(o)(1);

"(D) instruction leading to high school completion or the equivalent;

"(E) mentoring;

"(F) limited internships in the private sector;

"(G) training or education that is combined with community and youth service opportunities in public agencies, nonprofit agencies, and other appropriate agencies, institutions, and organizations, including youth corps programs;

"(H) entry employment experience programs;

"(I) school-to-work transition services;

"(J) school-to-postsecondary education transition services; and

"(K) school-to-apprenticeship transition services; and

"(2) training-related and supportive services, including—

"(A) the services described in section 204(b)(2);

"(B) drug and alcohol abuse counseling and referral;

"(C) services encouraging parental, spousal, and other significant adult involvement in the program of the participant; and

"(D) cash incentives and bonuses based on attendance and performance in a program.

"(d) ADDITIONAL REQUIREMENTS.—

"(1) STRATEGIES AND SERVICES.—In developing service strategies and designing services for the program under this part, the service delivery area and private industry council shall take into consideration exemplary program strategies and practices.

"(2) SCHOOL DROPOUTS.—In order to participate in a program assisted under this part, an individual who is under the age of 18 and a school dropout shall—

"(A) reenroll in and attend school;

"(B) enroll in and attend an alternative high school;

"(C) enroll in and attend an alternative course of study approved by the local educational agency; or

"(D) enroll in and attend a high school equivalency program.

"(3) SKILLS TRAINING.—

"(A) PREEMPLOYMENT AND WORK MATURITY SKILLS TRAINING.—Preemployment and work maturity skills training authorized by this part shall be accompanied by either work experience or other additional services designed to increase the basic educational or occupational skills of a participant. The additional services may be provided, sequentially or concurrently, under other education and training programs, including the Job Corps and the JOBS program.

"(B) ADDITIONAL SERVICES.—Work experience, job search assistance, job search skills training, and job club activities authorized by this part shall be accompanied by additional services designed to increase the basic education or occupational skills of a participant. The additional services may be provided, sequentially or concurrently, under other education and training programs, including the Job Corps and the JOBS program.

"(4) NEEDS-BASED PAYMENTS.—Needs-based payments authorized under this part shall be limited to payments necessary to permit participation in the program in accordance with a locally developed formula or procedure.

"(5) COUNSELING AND SUPPORTIVE SERVICES.—Counseling and supportive services authorized under this part may be provided to a participant for a period of up to 1 year after termination from the program.

"(6) NONCONTRACT TREATMENT.—The service strategy developed under subsection (b)(1)(B) shall not be considered a contract.

"(7) VOLUNTEERS.—The service delivery area shall make opportunities available for successful individuals who have previously participated in programs under this part to volunteer assistance to participants in the form of mentoring, tutoring, and other activities.

"SEC. 265. LINKAGES.

"(a) EDUCATIONAL LINKAGES.—In conducting a program under this part, service delivery areas shall establish linkages with the appropriate educational agencies responsible for service to participants. Such linkages shall include—

"(1) formal agreements with local educational agencies that will identify—

"(A) the procedures for referring and serving in-school youth;

"(B) the methods of assessment of in-school youth; and

"(C) procedures for notifying the program when a youth drops out of the school system;

"(2) arrangements to ensure that the program under this part supplements existing programs provided by local educational agencies to in-school youth;

"(3) arrangements to ensure that the program under this part utilizes, to the extent possible, existing services provided by local educational agencies to out-of-school youth; and

"(4) arrangements to ensure that for in-school participants there is a regular exchange of information between the program and the educational agency relating to participant progress, problems, and needs, including, in appropriate circumstances, interim assessment results.

"(b) EDUCATION AND TRAINING PROGRAM LINKAGES.—In conducting the program under this part, the service delivery area shall establish appropriate linkages with other education and training programs authorized under Federal law. Such programs shall include, where feasible, programs authorized by—

"(1) part B of title IV (the Job Corps);

"(2) parts A through D of chapter 1 of title I of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 (20 U.S.C. 2711 et seq.);

"(3) the Carl D. Perkins Vocational and Applied Technology Education Act (20 U.S.C. 2301 et seq.);

"(4) the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (20 U.S.C. 1400 et seq.);

"(5) the Wagner-Peyser Act (29 U.S.C. 49 et seq.);

"(6) part F of title IV of the Social Security Act (JOBS) (42 U.S.C. 681 et seq.);

"(7) the Food Stamp Act (7 U.S.C. 2011 et seq.);

"(8) the National Apprenticeship Act (29 U.S.C. 50 et seq.);

"(9) the Stewart B. McKinney Homeless Assistance Act (Public Law 100-77; 101 Stat. 482); and

"(10) the National and Community Service Act of 1990 (42 U.S.C. 12401 et seq.); and

"(11) this Act.

"(c) OTHER PROGRAMS.—In addition to the linkages required under subsections (a) and (b), service delivery areas receiving financial assistance under this part shall establish other appropriate linkages to enhance the provision of services under this part. Such linkages may be established with State and local service agencies, public housing agencies, community-based organizations, business and labor organizations, volunteer groups working with at-risk youth, parents and family members, juvenile justice systems, and other training, education, employment and social service programs, including programs conducted under part A of title II.

"(d) SCHOOLWIDE PROJECTS FOR LOW-INCOME SCHOOLS.—In conducting a program serving individuals specified in section 263(g), the service delivery area shall establish a cooperative arrangement with the appropriate local educational agency that shall, in addition to the other requirements of this section, include—

"(1) a description of the ways in which the program will supplement the educational program of the school;

"(2) identification of measurable goals to be achieved by the program and provision for assessing the extent to which such goals are met;

"(3) a description of the ways in which the program will use resources provided under this part and resources provided under other education programs to achieve the goals identified in paragraph (2);

"(4) a description of the number of individuals to be served; and

"(5) assurances that the resources provided under this part shall be used to supplement and not supplant existing sources of funds.

"SEC. 266. TRANSFER OF FUNDS.

"A service delivery area may transfer up to 10 percent of the funds provided under this part to the program under part A if such transfer is—

"(1) described in the job training plan; and

"(2) approved by the Governor."

(b) TECHNICAL AMENDMENT.—The table of contents in title II is amended by adding after the item relating to section 256 the following:

"PART C—YOUTH OPPORTUNITY PROGRAM

"Sec. 261. Statement of purpose.

"Sec. 262. Allotment and allocation.

"(3)(A) The Secretary shall establish an Advisory Council on Native American Indian Job Training Programs (referred to in this section as the "Council"), which shall consist of not fewer than 15 Native American Indians, Alaskan Natives, American Samoans, or Hawaiian Natives appointed by the Secretary from among individuals nominated by Native American Indian tribes or Native American Indian, Alaska Native, American Samoan, or Hawaiian Native organizations. The membership of the Council shall rep-represent diverse geographic areas and include representatives of tribal governments and of nonreservation Native American Indian organizations.

"(B) Each Council member may serve for a term of 2 years, and may be reappointed.

"(C) The Council shall be chaired by a Native American Indian, Alaska Native, or Hawaiian Native Council member elected by a majority of the membership of the Council and shall meet not more than twice each program year.

"(D) The Council shall—

"(i) solicit the views of a wide variety of tribes and Native American Indian and American Samoan groups, including groups operating employment and training programs funded under this section, on issues affecting the operation and administration of such programs;

"(ii) advise the Secretary with respect to all matters concerning the implementation of programs under this section and other programs providing services to Native American Indian youth and adults under this Act;

"(iii) advise the Secretary with respect to the design of all aspects of the system of performance standards developed under this section;

"(iv) advise the Secretary with respect to services obtained by the Department of Labor through contracts or arrangements with non-Federal agencies or entities, which services involve the provision of technical assistance to, or evaluation of, the programs authorized by this section;

"(v) assess the effectiveness of Native American Indian job training programs and make recommendations with respect to the improvement of such programs;

"(vi) advise the Secretary with regard to the recruitment of, identification of, and selection criteria for, candidates for the position of chief of the organizational unit described in subsection (e)(2)(A) whenever a vacancy in such position occurs; and

"(vii) submit a report to the Congress not later than January 1 of each year on the progress of Native American Indian job training programs and recommendations for improving the effectiveness of the programs.

"(E) From amounts appropriated to carry out this section, the Secretary shall make available to the Council such sums as may be necessary to carry out the functions of the Council."

(b) RESERVATION.—Section 401(j) is amended to read as follows:

"(j) For the purposes of carrying out this section, the Secretary shall reserve, from funds available for carrying out this title (other than part B) for the fiscal year, an amount not less than 3.5 percent of the total amount of funds appropriated to carry out parts A and C of title II of this Act for such fiscal year."

(c) COMPETITION GRANTS.—Section 401 is further amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(k) The competition for grants under this section shall be conducted every 2 years, except that if a grantee has performed satisfactorily under the terms of an existing grant agreement, the Secretary may waive the requirement for such competition on receipt from the grantee of a satisfactory 2-year program plan for the succeeding 2-year grant period."

SEC. 30. MIGRANT AND SEASONAL FARMWORKER PROGRAMS.

(a) RESERVATION.—Section 402(f) (29 U.S.C. 1672(f)) is amended to read as follows:

"(f) For the purposes of carrying out this section, the Secretary shall reserve, from funds available for carrying out this title (other than part B) for any fiscal year, an amount not less than 3.2 percent of the total amount of funds appropriated to carry out parts A and C of title II of this Act for such fiscal year."

(b) COMPETITION FOR GRANTS.—Section 402 is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(g) The competition for grants under this section shall be conducted every 2 years, except that if a grantee has performed satisfactorily under the terms of an existing grant agreement, the Secretary may waive the requirement for such competition on receipt from the grantee of a satisfactory 2-year program plan for the succeeding 2-year grant period."

SEC. 31. JOB CORPS.

(a) ELIGIBILITY.—Section 427(a)(2) (29 U.S.C. 1697(a)(2)) is amended—

(1) by striking "10 percent" and inserting "20 percent"; and

(2) by adding at the end the following new sentence: "The Secretary shall not reduce the number of residential participants in Job Corps programs under this part during any program year below the number of residential participants during program year 1989 in order to increase the number of individuals who are nonresidential participants in the Job Corps."

(b) MANAGEMENT FEES.—Section 437 (29 U.S.C. 1707) is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(d) The Secretary shall provide all Job Corps contractors with an equitable and negotiated management fee of not less than 1 percent of the contract amount."

SEC. 32. NATIONAL ACTIVITIES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Part D of title IV (29 U.S.C. 1731 et seq.) is amended—

(1) in section 451, to read as follows:

"SEC. 451. NATIONAL PARTNERSHIP AND SPECIAL TRAINING PROGRAMS.

"(a) STATEMENT OF PURPOSE.—It is the purpose of this section to—

"(1) improve access to employment and training opportunities for individuals with special needs;

"(2) help alleviate skill shortages and enhance the competitiveness of the labor force;

"(3) meet special training needs that are best addressed on a multistate or industry-wide basis; and

"(4) encourage the participation and support of all segments of society to further the purposes of this Act.

"(b) PROGRAM AUTHORIZED.—The Secretary may establish a system of, and award, special grants to eligible entities to carry out programs that are most appropriately administered at the national level.

"(c) PROGRAMS.—Programs that are most appropriately administered at the national level include—

"(1) partnership programs with national organizations with special expertise in developing, organizing and administering employment and training programs at the national, State and local level, such as industry and labor associations, public interest groups, community-based organizations representative of groups that encounter special difficulties in the labor market, and other organizations with special knowledge or capabilities in education and training;

"(2) programs that—

"(A) address industry-wide skill shortages;

"(B) meet training needs that are best addressed on a multistate basis; and

"(C) further the goals of increasing the competitiveness of the United States labor force; and

"(3) programs that require technical expertise available at the national level to serve specialized needs of particular client groups, including at-risk youth, offenders, individuals of limited English language proficiency, individuals with disabilities, women, immigrants, single parents, substance abusers, displaced homemakers, youth, older workers, veterans, individuals who lack education credentials, public assistance recipients, and other individuals whom the Secretary determines require special assistance."

(2) in section 452, to read as follows:

"SEC. 452. RESEARCH, DEMONSTRATION, AND EVALUATION.

"(a) STATEMENT OF PURPOSE.—It is the purpose of this section to assist the United States in expanding work opportunities and ensuring access to such opportunities for all who desire such opportunities.

"(b) PROGRAM ESTABLISHED.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall establish a comprehensive program of training and employment research, utilizing the methods, techniques, and knowledge of the behavioral and social sciences and such other methods, techniques, and knowledge as will aid in the solution of the employment and training problems of the United States.

"(2) STUDIES.—The program established under this section may include studies concerning—

"(A) the development or improvement of Federal, State, local, and privately supported employment and training programs;

"(B) labor market processes and outcomes, including improving workplace literacy;

"(C) policies and programs to reduce unemployment and the relationships of the policies and programs with price stability and other national goals;

"(D) productivity of labor;

"(E) improved means of using projections of labor supply and demand, including occupational and skill requirements and areas of labor shortages at the national and sub-national levels;

"(F) methods of improving the wages and employment opportunities of low-skilled, disadvantaged, and dislocated workers, and workers with obsolete skills;

"(G) methods of addressing the needs of at-risk populations, such as youth, homeless individuals and other dependent populations, older workers, and other groups with multiple barriers to employment;

"(H) methods of developing information on immigration, international trade and competition, technological change and labor shortages; and

"(I) methods of easing the transition from school to work, from transfer payment receipt to self-sufficiency, from one job to another, and from work to retirement.

"(c) PILOT AND DEMONSTRATION PROGRAMS.—

"(1) PROGRAM ESTABLISHED.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall establish a program of pilot and demonstration programs for the purpose of developing and improving techniques and demonstrating the effectiveness of specialized methods in meeting employment and training problems. The Secretary may award grants and enter into contracts with eligible entities to carry out the programs.

"(B) PROJECTS.—Such programs may include projects in such areas as—

"(i) school-to-work transition;

"(ii) new methods of imparting literacy skills and basic education;

"(iii) new training techniques (including projects undertaken with the private sector);

"(iv) methods to eliminate artificial barriers to employment;

"(v) approaches that foster participation of groups that encounter special problems in the labor market (such as displaced homemakers, teen parents, welfare recipients, and older individuals);

"(vi) processes that demonstrate effective methods for alleviating the adverse effects of dislocations and plant closings on workers and their communities; and

"(vii) cooperative ventures among business, industry, labor, trade associations, or national organizations to develop new and cost-effective approaches to improving work force literacy.

"(2) DEMONSTRATION PROGRAMS.—Demonstration programs assisted under this subsection shall include a formal, rigorous evaluation component.

"(3) SPECIAL RULE.—No pilot program under this subsection shall be assisted under this section for a period of more than 3 years.

"(d) EVALUATION.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—

"(A) PROGRAMS.—

"(i) JOB TRAINING PROGRAMS.—The Secretary shall provide for the continuing evaluation of programs conducted under this Act, including the cost effectiveness of the program in achieving the purposes of this Act.

"(ii) OTHER PROGRAMS.—The Secretary may conduct evaluations of other federally funded employment-related activities including programs administered under—

"(I) the Wagner-Peyser Act (29 U.S.C. 49 et seq.);

"(II) the National Apprenticeship Act (29 U.S.C. 50 et seq.);

"(III) the Older Americans Act of 1965 (42 U.S.C. 3001 et seq.);

"(IV) chapter 2 of title II of the Trade Act of 1974 (19 U.S.C. 2271 et seq.); and

"(V) the Federal unemployment insurance program under titles III, IX, and XII of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 501 et seq., 1101 et seq., and 1321 et seq.).

"(B) TECHNIQUES.—

"(i) METHODS.—Evaluations conducted under subparagraph (A) shall utilize sound statistical methods and techniques of the behavioral and social sciences, including random assignment methodologies if feasible.

"(ii) ANALYSIS.—Such evaluations may include cost-benefit analysis of programs, the impact of the programs on community and participants, the extent to which programs meet the needs of various demographic groups, and the effectiveness of the delivery systems used by various programs.

"(iii) EFFECTIVENESS.—The Secretary shall evaluate the effectiveness of programs authorized under this Act with respect to—

"(I) the statutory goals;

"(II) the performance standards established by the Secretary; and

"(III) the extent to which such programs enhance the employment and earnings of participants, reduce income support costs, and improve the employment competencies of participants in comparison to comparable persons who did not participate in such programs, and to the extent feasible, increase the level of total employment over the level that would have existed in the absence of such programs.

"(2) ADDITIONAL EVALUATION.—The Secretary shall evaluate the impact of title II programs on participant employment, earnings, and welfare dependency in multiple sites using the random assignment of individuals to—

"(A) groups receiving services under programs authorized under the Job Training and Basic Skills Act of 1992; or

"(B) groups not receiving such services.";

(3) in section 453, to read as follows:

"SEC. 453. TRAINING AND INFORMATION PROGRAMS.

"(a) STAFF TRAINING.—The Secretary, directly or through grants, contracts, or other arrangements, shall—

"(1) develop curricula and provide appropriate training, technical assistance, staff development and other activities at the national, regional, State, and local levels that will—

"(A) enhance the skills, knowledge, and expertise of the personnel who staff employment and training and other closely related human service systems, including service providers;

"(B) improve the quality of services provided to individuals under this Act and other Federal employment and training programs and encourage integrated service delivery;

"(C) improve the planning, procurement, and contracting practices in accordance with this Act; and

"(D) provide broad human services policy and planning training to private industry council volunteers and members of State human investment coordinating councils;

"(2) prepare and disseminate training curricula and materials for employment and training professionals and support staff, which curricula and materials focus on enhancing staff competencies and professionalism, including instruction on the administrative requirements of this Act, such as procurement and contracting standards and regulations; and

"(3) disseminate innovative and successful models, materials, methods, and program information and provide training in the techniques learned from the sources to foster improved program quality and professional growth among managers, service delivery providers, and administrators, involved in the delivery of employment and training services.

"(b) CLEARINGHOUSE.—The Secretary is authorized to establish a clearinghouse to—

"(1) regularly identify, develop, and disseminate innovative materials that enhance the knowledge and quality of performance of employment and training personnel;

"(2) facilitate effective communications and coordination among employment and training personnel;

"(3) establish a computer communications network to share information among employment and training personnel and institutions; and

"(4) establish linkages with existing human resources clearinghouses, including the Education Research Information Centers and the National Network for Curriculum Coordination in Vocational and Technical Education.

"(c) CONSULTATION.—The Secretary shall consult with the Secretaries of Education and Health and Human Services, as appropriate, to coordinate activities under this section with other relevant institutes, centers, laboratories, clearinghouses, or dissemination networks.;

(4) striking sections 454 through 456; and

(5)(A) redesignating section 457 as section 454; and

(B) striking the heading for section 454 (as redesignated by subparagraph (A)) and inserting "NONTRADITIONAL EMPLOYMENT DEMONSTRATION PROGRAM".

(b) TECHNICAL AMENDMENT.—The table of contents relating to part D of title IV is amended to read as follows:

"PART D—NATIONAL ACTIVITIES

"Sec. 451. National partnership and special training programs.

"Sec. 452. Research, demonstration, and evaluation.

"Sec. 453. Training and information programs.

"Sec. 454. Nontraditional employment demonstration program."

(c) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—

(1) Section 161(b)(2) (29 U.S.C. 1571(b)(2)) is amended by striking "452 through 455" and inserting "451 through 454".

(2) Section 433(c)(1) (29 U.S.C. 1703(c)(1)) is amended by striking "452 and 455" and inserting "451 through 454".

SEC. 33. COOPERATIVE LABOR MARKET INFORMATION PROGRAM.

Section 462 (29 U.S.C. 1752) is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(g)(1) The Secretary may engage in research, demonstration, or other activities, including activities that may be carried out by States, designed to determine the feasibility of various methods of organizing and making accessible nationwide information on the quarterly earnings for all individuals for whom such information is collected by the States.

"(2) The Secretary shall submit a report to Congress based on the findings resulting from the activities described in paragraph (1) concerning the costs and benefits of establishing and maintaining a national longitudinal data base utilizing unemployment insurance wage records. Such report shall also address the feasibility of establishing appropriate safeguards for maintaining the confidentiality of information and privacy of individuals."

SEC. 34. NATIONAL OCCUPATIONAL INFORMATION COORDINATING COMMITTEE.

Section 464(a)(1) (29 U.S.C. 1754(a)(1)) is amended by striking "not more than $5,000,000" and inserting "$6,000,000".

SEC. 35. REPLICATION OF SUCCESSFUL PROGRAMS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Title IV (29 U.S.C. 1671 et seq.) is amended by adding at the end the following new part:

"PART H—REPLICATION OF SUCCESSFUL PROGRAMS

"SEC. 485. REPLICATION.

"(a) REPLICATION PROGRAM AUTHORIZED.—The Secretary shall make competitive grants to public or private nonprofit organizations for technical assistance, and to States and service delivery areas for planning and program development, associated with the replication of successful programs under this part.

"(b) AWARDS.—

"(1) FACTORS.—In awarding grants for replication of successful programs to public or private nonprofit organizations, States, or service delivery areas under this part, the Secretary shall select programs that are likely to be successful in improving the employment prospects of economically disadvantaged youths and adults and are replicable on a large scale.

"(2) CONSIDERATIONS.—In selecting such programs the Secretary shall consider—

"(A) the size and scope of the program;

"(B) the length of time that the program has been operating;

"(C) the nature and reliability of measurable outcomes for the program;

"(D) the capacity of the sponsoring organization to provide the technical assistance necessary for States and service delivery areas to replicate the program; and

"(E) the likelihood that the program will be successful in diverse economic, geographic, and cultural environments.

“(c) APPLICATIONS.—

“(1) NONPROFIT ORGANIZATION.—Any public or private nonprofit organization with the capacity to provide the technical assistance necessary for program replication may submit an application to the Secretary at such time, in such manner, and containing or accompanied by such information as the Secretary may reasonably require. Each such application shall describe the program proposed for replication and available evidence of the success of the program in improving the employment prospects of economically disadvantaged youths and adults.

“(2) STATE; SERVICE DELIVERY AREA.—Any State or service delivery area desiring to receive a grant to participate in a replication effort shall submit an application to the Secretary at such time, in such manner, and containing or accompanied by such information as the Secretary may reasonably require.

“(d) GRANT LIMITATIONS.—

“(1) LIMITATION.—In any 3-year period the Secretary shall not approve grants for the same replication activities in more than 10 States or communities. During this 3-year period, the results of such limited replication efforts shall be carefully evaluated and examined by the Secretary regarding the advisability of replicating the model program in more than 10 States or communities or for longer than 3 years.

“(2) WAIVER.—The Secretary may waive the limitation set forth in paragraph (1) for a program if immediate replication efforts on a larger scale are warranted by extensive evaluation of the program prior to designation as a model program under this section.”

(b) TECHNICAL AMENDMENT.—The table of contents relating to title IV is amended by adding after the item relating to section 481 the following:

“Sec. 485. Replication.”

SEC. 36. FAIR CHANCE YOUTH OPPORTUNITIES UNLIMITED PROGRAM.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Title IV (29 U.S.C. 1671 et seq.) (as amended by section 157) is further amended by adding at the end the following new part:

“PART I—FAIR CHANCE YOUTH OPPORTUNITIES UNLIMITED PROGRAM

“SEC. 491. STATEMENT OF PURPOSE.

“The purposes of this part include—

“(1) ensuring access to education and job training for youth residing in high poverty areas of urban and rural communities;

“(2) enabling communities with high concentrations of poverty to establish and meet goals for improving the opportunities available to youth within the community;

“(3) making provisions for a comprehensive range of education, training, and employment services to disadvantaged youth who are not currently served or are underserved by Federal education and job training programs; and

“(4) facilitating the coordination of comprehensive services to serve youth in such communities.

“SEC. 492. DEFINITIONS.

“As used in this part:

“(1) PARTICIPATING COMMUNITY.—The term ‘participating community’ means a city in a metropolitan statistical area, the contiguous nonmetropolitan counties in a rural area, or a Native American Indian reservation or Alaska Native village, participating in the Fair Chance Youth Opportunities Unlimited Program established under this part.

“(2) POVERTY AREA.—The term ‘poverty area’ means an urban census tract, a non-metropolitan county, a Native American Indian reservation, or an Alaska Native village, with a poverty rate of 30 percent or more, as determined by the Bureau of the Census.

“(3) TARGET AREA.—The term ‘target area’ means a poverty area or set of contiguous poverty areas that will be the focus of the Fair Chance Youth Opportunities Unlimited Program in a participating community.

“SEC. 493. PROGRAM AUTHORIZED.

“(a) PROGRAM ESTABLISHED.—The Secretary may establish a national program to provide Fair Chance Youth Opportunities Unlimited grants to service delivery areas to pay for the Federal share of providing comprehensive services to youth living in poverty areas in the cities and rural areas of the Nation.

“(b) GRANTS.—

“(1) GRANT RECEIPTS.—The Secretary shall award grants under this part—

“(A) to the service delivery area (on behalf of the participating community) in which a target area is located; or

“(B) in the case of a grant and involving the target area located on a Native American Indian reservation or Alaska Native village, to the grantee designated under subsection (c) or (d) of section 401.

“(2) NUMBER.—

“(A) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary may award not more than 25 grants in the first fiscal year that the program assisted under this part is authorized, and may award not more than a total of 40 grants over the first 5 fiscal years that the program assisted under this part is authorized.

“(B) INDIAN RESERVATIONS AND ALASKA NATIVE VILLAGES.—In awarding grants under this part the Secretary shall award at least 1 grant, and not more than 3 grants, during the first 5 fiscal years that the program is assisted under this part to grantees designated under section 401 representing Native American Indian reservations and Alaska Native villages.

“(c) GRANT TERM.—

“(1) IN GENERAL.—Grants awarded under this part shall be for a 1-year period. Such a grant shall be renewable for each of the 2 succeeding fiscal years if the Secretary determines the grant recipient complied with conditions of the grant during the previous fiscal year.

“(2) EXTENSION.—The Secretary may extend the renewal period set forth in paragraph (1) for an additional 2 fiscal years on reapplication.

“(d) AWARD CRITERIA.—

“(1) CONSIDERATION.—In awarding grants under this part, the Secretary shall consider the quality of the proposed project, the goals to be achieved by the project, the likelihood of the successful implementation of the project, and the extent of community support for the project.

“(2) PRIORITY.—In awarding grants under this part, the Secretary shall give priority to participating communities with the highest rates of poverty.

“SEC. 494. APPLICATION.

“(a) ELIGIBILITY.—Participating communities that have the highest concentrations of poverty, as determined by the Secretary based on the latest census estimates, shall be eligible to apply for Fair Chance Youth Opportunities Unlimited grants.

“(b) APPLICATION.—

“(1) IN GENERAL.—Each participating community desiring a grant under this part shall, through the individuals described in subsection (c), submit an application to the Secretary at such time, in such manner and accompanied by such information as the Secretary may reasonably require.

“(2) CONTENTS.—The application described in paragraph (1) shall—

“(A) include a comprehensive plan for a Fair Chance Youth Opportunities Unlimited Program designed to achieve identifiable goals for youth in the target area;

“(B) set forth measurable program goals, which may include increasing—

“(i) the proportion of youths completing high school;

“(ii) the proportion of youths entering into community colleges or other advanced training programs; or

“(iii) the proportion of youths placed in jobs;

“(C) include information on supporting goals for the target area, such as increasing security and safety, or reducing the number of drug-related arrests;

“(D) provide assurances that the applicant will comply with the terms of the agreement described in section 495;

“(E) provide an assurance that all youth in the target areas have access to a coordinated and comprehensive range of education and training opportunities that serve the broadest range of youth interests and needs and simultaneously mobilize the diverse range of education and training providers in the participating community;

“(F) include information demonstrating the manner in which the participating community will make use of the resources, expertise, and commitment of institutions of higher education, educational agencies, and vocational and technical schools and institutes;

“(G) demonstrate how the participating community will make use of the resources, expertise, and commitment of such programs and service providers as—

“(i) community-based organizations providing vocational skills, literacy skills, remedial education, and general equivalency preparation, including community-based organizations serving youth with limited-English proficiency;

“(ii) youth corps programs, including youth conservation and human service corps;

“(iii) Job Corps centers;

“(iv) apprenticeship programs; and

“(v) other projects and programs funded under this Act;

“(H) include an estimate of the expected number of youth in the target area to be served;

“(I) include a description of the resources available in the participating community from private, local government, State, and Federal sources that will be used to achieve the goals of the program;

“(J) include an estimate of funds required to ensure access to appropriate education, training, and support services for all youth in the target area who seek such opportunities; and

“(K) provide evidence of support for accomplishing the stated goals of the participating community from—

“(i) local elected officials;

“(ii) the local school board;

“(iii) applicable private industry councils;

“(iv) local community leaders;

“(v) businesses;

“(vi) labor organizations; and

“(vii) other appropriate organizations.

“(c) APPLICATION LIMITATION.—The application described in subsection (b) may only be submitted to the Secretary on behalf of a participating community by—

"(1) in the case of a community comprised of a city in a metropolitan statistical area, the mayor, after the Governor of the State in which such city is located has had an opportunity to comment on the application;

"(2) in the case of a community comprised of contiguous nonmetropolitan counties in a rural area, the Governor of the State in which the counties are located; or

"(3) in the case of a community comprised of an Indian reservation or Alaska Native village, the grantee designated under section 401.

"SEC. 495. GRANT AGREEMENT.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—Each service delivery area receiving a grant under this part on behalf of a participating community shall enter into an agreement with the Secretary.

"(b) CONTENTS.—Each such agreement shall—

"(1) designate a target area that will be the focus of the program assisted under this part and shall have a population of not more than 25,000;

"(2) contain assurances that funds provided under this part will be used to support education, training, and supportive activities selected from a set of youth program models designated by the Secretary or from alternative models described in the application and approved by the Secretary, such as—

"(A) nonresidential learning centers;

"(B) alternative schools;

"(C) combined activities including—

"(i) summer remediation;

"(ii) work experience and work readiness training; and

"(iii) school-to-work, apprenticeship, or postsecondary education programs;

"(D) teen parent programs;

"(E) special programs run by community colleges;

"(F) youth centers;

"(G) initiatives aimed at increasing rural student enrollment in postsecondary institutions;

"(H) public-private collaborations to assure private sector employment and continued learning opportunities for youth; and

"(I) initiatives, such as youth corps programs, that combine community and youth service opportunities with education and training activities;

"(3) provide that only youth who are age 14 through 21 and reside in the target area shall be eligible to participate in the program;

"(4) contain assurances that the local educational agency and any other educational agency that operates secondary schools in the target area shall provide such activities and resources as are necessary to achieve the educational goals specified in the application;

"(5) contain assurances that the participating community will provide such activities and local resources as are necessary to achieve the goals specified in the application;

"(6) provide that the participating community will carry out special efforts to establish coordination with Federal, State, or local programs that serve the target population; and

"(7) provide assurances that funds provided under this part will be used only to pay the Federal share of the costs of programs and services not otherwise available in the target area and will supplement, and not supplant, funding from other local, State, and Federal sources available to youth in the target area.

"SEC. 496. PAYMENTS; FEDERAL SHARE.

"(a) PAYMENTS.—The Secretary shall pay to each service delivery area having an application approved under section 494 the Federal share of the costs of the activities described in the application.

"(b) FEDERAL SHARE.—The Federal share of the costs shall be 50 percent for each fiscal year a service delivery area receives assistance under this part.

"(c) LIMITATION.—Each service delivery area may provide not more than 50 percent of the non-Federal share of the costs from Federal sources other than funds received under this part.

"SEC. 497. REPORTING.

"The Secretary is authorized to establish such reporting procedures as are necessary to carry out the purposes of this part.

"SEC. 498. FEDERAL RESPONSIBILITIES.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall provide assistance to participating communities in implementing the projects assisted under this part.

"(b) INDEPENDENT EVALUATION.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall provide for a thorough, independent evaluation of the Fair Chance Youth Opportunities Unlimited Program to assess the outcomes of youth participating in programs assisted under this part.

"(2) EVALUATION MEASURES.—In conducting the evaluation described in paragraph (1) the Secretary shall include an assessment of—

"(A) the impact of youth residing in target areas, including the rates of school completion, enrollment in advanced education or training, and employment of the youth;

"(B) the extent to which participating communities fulfilled the goal of guaranteed access to appropriate education, training, and supportive services to all eligible youth residing in target areas who seek to participate;

"(C) the effectiveness of guaranteed access to comprehensive services combined with outreach and recruitment efforts in enlisting the participation of previously unserved or underserved youth residing in target areas;

"(D) the effectiveness of efforts to integrate service delivery in target areas, including systems of common intake, assessment, and case management; and

"(E) the feasibility of extending guaranteed access to comprehensive education, training and support services for youth in all areas of the United States, including possible approaches to incremental extension of such access over time.

"(c) REPORT.—The Secretary shall develop a report detailing the results of the independent evaluation described in subsection (b) and shall submit such report to the President and the appropriate committees of Congress not later than December 31, 1994, along with an analysis of expenditures made, results achieved, and problems in the operations and coordination of programs assisted under this part.

"(d) RESERVATION OF FUNDS.—The Secretary may reserve not more than 10 percent of the amount appropriated under this part in each fiscal year to carry out this section."

(b) TECHNICAL AMENDMENT.—The table of contents relating to title IV is amended by adding after the item relating to section 485 the following:

"PART I—FAIR CHANCE YOUTH OPPORTUNITIES UNLIMITED PROGRAM

"Sec. 491. Statement of purpose.

"Sec. 492. Definitions.

"Sec. 493. Program authorized.

"Sec. 494. Application.

SEC. 37. JOBS FOR EMPLOYABLE DEPENDENT INDIVIDUALS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Title V (29 U.S.C. 1791 et seq.) is amended to read as follows:

"TITLE V—JOBS FOR EMPLOYABLE DEPENDENT INDIVIDUALS INCENTIVE BONUS PROGRAM

"SEC. 501. STATEMENT OF PURPOSE.

"It is the purpose of this title to provide incentives to reduce welfare dependency, promote self-sufficiency, increase child support payments, and increase employment and earnings of individuals by providing to each participating State a bonus for providing job training to—

"(1) absent parents of children receiving aid to families with dependent children under part A of title IV of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 601 et seq.), who subsequent to such training pay child support for their children; and

"(2) blind or disabled individuals receiving supplemental security income under title XVI of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1381 et seq.), who subsequent to such training are successfully placed in and retain employment.

"SEC. 502. PAYMENTS.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—For each program year for which funds are appropriated to carry out this title, the Secretary shall pay to each participating State the amount that State is eligible to receive under this title.

"(b) RATABLE REDUCTIONS.—If the amount so appropriated is not sufficient to pay each State the amount each State is eligible to receive, the Secretary shall ratably reduce the amount paid to each State.

"(c) RATABLE INCREASES.—If any additional amount is made available for carrying out this title for any program year after the application of subsection (b), such additional amount shall be allocated among the States by increasing such payments in the same manner as they were reduced, except that no such State shall be paid an amount that exceeds the amount that the State is eligible to receive under this title.

"SEC. 503. AMOUNT OF INCENTIVE BONUS.

"The amount of the incentive bonus paid to each State shall be the sum of—

"(1) an amount equal to the total of the amounts of child support paid by each individual eligible under section 506(1) within the State, for up to 2 years after the termination of the individual from activities provided under this Act; and

"(2) an amount equal to the total reduction in the Federal contribution to the amounts received under title XVI of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1381 et seq.) by each individual eligible under section 506(2) within the State, for up to 2 years after the termination of the individual from activities provided under this Act.

"SEC. 504. USE OF INCENTIVE BONUS FUNDS.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—

"(1) ALLOCATION.—

"(A) ADMINISTRATIVE COSTS.—During any program year, the Governor may use an amount not to exceed 15 percent of the total bonus payments of a State for administrative costs incurred under this title, including data and information collection and compilation, recordkeeping, or the preparation of applications for incentive bonuses.

"(B) DISTRIBUTION OF PAYMENTS.—The amount of incentive bonus payments that remain after the deduction of administrative costs under subparagraph (A) shall be distributed to service delivery areas and Job Corps centers within the State in accordance with an agreement between the Governor and representatives of such areas and centers. Such agreement shall reflect an equitable method of distribution that is based on the degree to which the efforts of such area or center contributed to the qualification of the State for an incentive bonus payment under this title.

"(2) SPECIAL RULE.—Not more than 10 percent of the amounts received under this title in any program year by each service delivery area and Job Corps center may be used for the administrative costs of establishing and maintaining systems necessary for operation of programs under this title, including the costs of providing incentive payments described in subsection (b), technical assistance, data and information collection and compilation, management information systems, post-program followup activities, and research and evaluation activities. The balance of funds not so expended shall be used by each service delivery area for activities described in sections 204 and 264, and by each Job Corps center for activities authorized under part B of title IV.

"(b) INCENTIVE PAYMENTS TO SERVICE PROVIDERS.—Each service delivery area or Job Corps center may make incentive payments to service providers, including participating State and local agencies, and community-based organizations, that demonstrate effectiveness in delivering employment and training services to individuals such as those described in section 506.

"(c) APPLICATION OF SECTION RELATING TO ADMINISTRATIVE ADJUDICATIONS.—Section 166 (relating to administrative adjudication) shall apply to the distribution of incentive bonus payments under this section.

"SEC. 505. NOTICE AND APPLICATION.

"(a) NOTICE OF INTENT TO PARTICIPATE.—Any State seeking to participate in the incentive bonus program established under this title shall notify the Secretary of the intent of the State to participate not later than 30 days before the beginning of the first program year of participation.

"(b) APPLICATION.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Any State seeking to receive an incentive bonus under this title shall submit an application to the Secretary at such time, in such manner, and containing or accompanied by such information as the Secretary may reasonably require in order to ensure compliance with this title.

"(2) CONTENTS.—Each application shall contain, at a minimum—

"(A) a list of the eligible individuals in the State who satisfied the requirements of section 506 during the program year;

"(B) the amount of the incentive bonus attributable to each eligible individual and due the State under section 503; and

"(C) certification that documentation is available to verify the eligibility of participants and the amount of the incentive bonus claimed by the State.

"(c) NOTICE OF APPROVAL OR DENIAL.—The Secretary shall promptly inform a State after receipt of the application as to whether or not the application of the State has been approved.

"SEC. 506. ELIGIBILITY FOR INCENTIVE BONUSES.

"An individual shall be eligible to participate in a program established under this title if—

"(1) the individual—

"(A) is an absent parent of any child receiving aid to families with dependent children under part A of title IV of the Social Security Act at the time such individual was determined to be eligible to participate in activities provided under this Act;

"(B) has participated in education, training or other activities (including the Job Corps) provided under this Act; and

"(C) pays child support for a child specified in subparagraph (A) following termination from activities provided under this Act; or

"(2) the individual—

"(A) is blind or disabled;

"(B) was receiving benefits under title XVI of the Social Security Act (relating to supplemental security income) at the time such individual was determined to be eligible to participate in activities under this Act;

"(C) has participated in education, training, or other activities (including the Job Corps) provided under this Act; and

"(D) earns from employment a wage or income.

"SEC. 507. INFORMATION AND DATA COLLECTION.

"(a) TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE.—In order to facilitate the collection exchange, and compilation of data and information required by this title, the Secretary is authorized to provide technical assistance to the States. Such assistance may include cost-effective methods for using State and Federal records to which the Secretary has lawful access.

"(b) JOINT REGULATIONS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary and the Secretary of Health and Human Services, shall jointly issue regulations regarding the sharing among public agencies participating in the programs assisted under this title of the data and information necessary to fulfill the requirements of this title.

"(2) SUBJECTS.—Such regulations shall ensure—

"(A) the availability of information necessary to verify the eligibility of participants and the amount of the incentive bonus payable; and

"(B) the maintenance of confidentiality of the information so shared in accordance with Federal and State privacy laws.

"SEC. 508. EVALUATION AND REPORT.

"(a) EVALUATION.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall conduct or provide for an evaluation of the incentive bonus program assisted under this title.

"(2) CONSIDERATIONS.—The Secretary shall consider—

"(A) whether the program results in increased service under this Act to absent parents of children receiving aid to families with dependent children under part A of title IV of the Social Security Act and to recipients of supplemental security income under title XVI of the Social Security Act;

"(B) whether the program results in increased child support payments;

"(C) whether the program is administratively feasible and cost effective;

"(D) whether the services provided to other eligible participants under part A of title II are affected by the implementation and operation of the incentive bonus program; and

"(E) such other factors as the Secretary determines to be appropriate.

"(b) REPORT TO CONGRESS.—Not later than January 1, 1997, the Secretary shall submit a report to the appropriate committees of the Congress on the effectiveness of the incentive bonus program assisted under this title. Such report shall include an analysis of the costs of such program and the results of program activities.

"SEC. 509. IMPLEMENTING REGULATIONS.

"The Secretary shall promulgate regulations implementing this title not later than January 31, 1993."

"(b) TECHNICAL AMENDMENT.—The table of contents relating to title V is amended to read as follows:

SEC. 38. EFFECTIVE DATE; TRANSITION PROVISIONS.

(a) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this Act shall take effect on December 1, 1992.

(b) PERFORMANCE STANDARDS.—The Secretary of Labor shall issue revised performance standards under the amendments made by section 10 as soon as the Secretary determines sufficient data are available, and not later than July 1, 1994.

(c) GUIDANCE.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall provide guidance and technical assistance to States and service delivery areas relating to the documentation required to verify the eligibility of participants under parts A and C of title II of the Job Training Partnership Act (29 U.S.C. 1601 et seq.).

(2) SPECIAL RULE.—The guidance provided under paragraph (1), while maintaining program integrity, shall—

(A) limit the documentation burden to the minimum necessary to adequately verify eligibility; and

(B) ensure, to the extent practicable, that the documentation requirements shall not discourage the participation of eligible individuals.

(3) DATE.—The Secretary shall provide the guidance described in paragraph (1) not later than December 1, 1992.

(d) RULES AND PROCEDURES.—The Secretary of Labor may establish such rules and procedures as may be necessary to provide for an orderly transition to programs established by, and implementation of, the amendments made by this title.

Mr. FORD. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed.

Mr. DURENBERGER. I move to lay that motion on the table.

TITLE I—CHILD ABUSE PREVENTION AND TREATMENT ACT

Subtitle A—General Provisions

SEC. 101. AMENDATORY REFERENCES.

Except as otherwise provided, whenever in this title an amendment or repeal is expressed in terms of an amendment to, or repeal of, a section or other provision, the reference shall be considered to be made to that section or other provision of the Child Abuse Prevention and Treatment Act (42 U.S.C. 5101 et seq.).

SEC. 102. FINDINGS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Act is amended by inserting after section 1 the following new section:

“SEC. 2. FINDINGS.

“Congress finds that—

“(1) each year, hundreds of thousands of American children are victims of abuse and neglect with such numbers having increased dramatically over the past decade;

“(2) many of these children and their families fail to receive adequate protection or treatment;

“(3) the problem of child abuse and neglect requires a comprehensive approach that—

“(A) integrates the work of social service, legal, health, mental health, education, and substance abuse agencies and organizations;

“(B) strengthens coordination among all levels of government, and with private agencies, civic, religious, and professional organizations, and individual volunteers;

“(C) emphasizes the need for abuse and neglect prevention, investigation, and treatment at the neighborhood level;

“(D) ensures properly trained and support staff with specialized knowledge, to carry out their child protection duties; and “(E) is sensitive to ethnic and cultural diversity;

“(4) the failure to coordinate and comprehensively prevent and treat child abuse and neglect threatens the futures of tens of thousands of children and results in a cost to the Nation of billions of dollars in direct expenditures for health, social, and special educational services and ultimately in the loss of work productivity;

“(5) all elements of American society have a shared responsibility in responding to this national child and family emergency;

“(6) substantial reductions in the prevalence and incidence of child abuse and neglect and the alleviation of its consequences are matters of the highest national priority;

“(7) national policy should strengthen families to remedy the causes of child abuse and neglect, provide support for intensive services to prevent the unnecessary removal of children from families, and promote the reunification of families if removal has taken place;

“(8) the child protection system should be comprehensive, child-centered, family-focused, and community-based, should incorporate all appropriate measures to prevent the occurrence or recurrence of child abuse and neglect, and should promote physical and psychological recovery and social re-integration in an environment that fosters the health, self-respect, and dignity of the child;

“(9) because of the limited resources available in low-income communities, Federal aid for the child protection system should be distributed with due regard to the relative financial need of the communities;

“(10) the Federal government should ensure that every community in the United States has the fiscal, human, and technical resources necessary to develop and implement a successful and comprehensive child protection strategy;

“(11) the Federal government should provide leadership and assist communities in their child protection efforts by—

“(A) promoting coordinated planning among all levels of government;

“(B) generating and sharing knowledge relevant to child protection, including the development of models for service delivery;

“(C) strengthening the capacity of States to assist communities;

“(D) allocating sufficient financial resources to assist States in implementing community plans;

“(E) helping communities to carry out their child protection plans by promoting the competence of professional, paraprofessional, and volunteer resources; and

“(F) providing leadership to end the abuse and neglect of the nation's children and youth.”.

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—The table of contents of the Act is amended by inserting after the item relating to section 1 the following new item:

“Sec. 2. Findings.”.

Subtitle B—General Program

SEC. 111. ADVISORY BOARD ON CHILD ABUSE AND NEGLECT.

(a) DUTIES.—Section 102(f) (42 U.S.C. 5102(f)) is amended—

ing programs and development of model programs for dissemination and replication nationally.".

SEC. 114. GRANT PROGRAM FOR CHILD ABUSE NEGLECT PREVENTION AND TREATMENT.

(a) DEVELOPMENT AND OPERATION GRANTS.—Section 107(a) (42 U.S.C. 5106a(a)) is amended to read as follows:

"(a) DEVELOPMENT AND OPERATION GRANTS.—The Secretary, acting through the Center, shall make grants to the States, based on the population of children under the age of 18 in each State that applies for a grant under this section, for purposes of assisting the States in improving the child protective service system of each such State in—

"(1) the intake and screening of reports of abuse and neglect through the improvement of the receipt of information, decisionmaking, public awareness, and training of staff;

"(2)(A) investigating such reports through improving response time, decisionmaking, referral to services, and training of staff;

"(B) creating and improving the use of multidisciplinary teams and interagency protocols to enhance investigations; and

"(C) improving legal preparation and representation;

"(3) case management and delivery services provided to families through the improvement of response time in service provision, improving the training of staff, and increasing the numbers of families to be served;

"(4) enhancing the general child protective system by improving assessment tools, automation systems that support the program, information referral systems, and the overall training of staff to meet minimum competencies; or

"(5) developing, strengthening, and carrying out child abuse and neglect prevention, treatment, and research programs.

Not more than 15 percent of a grant under this subsection may be expended for carrying out paragraph (5). The preceding sentence does not apply to any program or activity authorized in any of paragraphs (1) through (4).".

(b) ESTABLISHMENT OF CERTAIN REQUIREMENT.—Section 107 (42 U.S.C. 5106a) is amended—

(1) by redesignating subsections (c) through (f) as subsections (d) through (g), respectively; and

(2) by inserting after subsection (b) the following new subsection:

"(c) STATE PROGRAM PLAN.—To be eligible to receive a grant under this section, a State shall submit every four years a plan to the Secretary that specifies the child protective service system area or areas described in subsection (a) that the State intends to address with funds received under the grant. The plan shall describe the current system capacity of the State in the relevant area or areas from which to assess programs with grant funds and specify the manner in which funds from the State's programs will be used to make improvements. The plan required under this subsection shall contain, with respect to each area in which the State intends to use funds from the grant, the following information with respect to the State:

"(1) INTAKE AND SCREENING.—

"(A) STAFFING.—The number of child protective service workers responsible for the intake and screening of reports of abuse and neglect relative to the number of reports filed in the previous year.

"(B) TRAINING.—The types and frequency of pre-service and in-service training programs available to support direct line and supervisory personnel in report-taking, screening, decisionmaking, and referral for investigation.

"(C) PUBLIC EDUCATION.—An assessment of the State or local agency's public education program with respect to—

"(i) what is child abuse and neglect;

"(ii) who is obligated to report and who may choose to report; and

"(iii) how to report.

"(2) INVESTIGATION OF REPORTS.—

"(A) RESPONSE TIME.—The number of reports of child abuse and neglect filed in the State in the previous year where appropriate, the agency response time to each with respect to initial investigation, the number of substantiated and unsubstantiated reports, and where appropriate, the response time with respect to the provision of services.

"(B) STAFFING.—The number of child protective service workers responsible for the investigation of child abuse and neglect reports relative to the number of reports investigated in the previous year.

"(C) INTERAGENCY COORDINATION.—A description of the extent to which interagency coordination processes exist and are available State-wide, and whether protocols or formal policies governing interagency relationships exist in the following areas—

"(i) multidisciplinary investigation teams among child welfare and law enforcement agencies;

"(ii) interagency coordination for the prevention, intervention and treatment of child abuse and neglect among agencies responsible for child protective services, criminal justice, schools, health, mental health, and substance abuse; and

"(iii) special interagency child fatality review panels, including a listing of those agencies that are involved.

"(D) TRAINING.—The types and frequency of pre-service and in-service training programs available to support direct line and supervisory personnel in such areas as investigation, risk assessment, court preparation, and referral to and provision of services.

"(E) LEGAL REPRESENTATION.—A description of the State agency's current capacity for legal representation, including the manner in which workers are prepared and trained for court preparation and attendance, including procedures for appealing substantiated reports of abuse and neglect.

"(3) CASE MANAGEMENT AND DELIVERY OF ONGOING FAMILY SERVICES.—For children for whom a report of abuse and neglect has been substantiated and the children remain in their own homes and are not currently at risk of removal, the State shall assess the activities and the outcomes of the following services:

"(A) RESPONSE TIME.—The number of cases opened for services as a result of investigation of child abuse and neglect reports filed in the previous year, including the response time with respect to the provision of services from the time of initial report and initial investigation.

"(B) STAFFING.—The number of child protective service workers responsible for providing services to children and their families in their own homes as a result of investigation of reports of child abuse and neglect.

"(C) TRAINING.—The types and frequency of pre-service and in-service training programs available to support direct line and supervisory personnel in such areas as risk assessment, court preparation, provision of services and determination of case disposition, including how such training is evaluated for effectiveness.

"(D) INTERAGENCY COORDINATION.—The extent to which treatment services for the child and other family members are coordinated with child welfare, social service, mental health, education, and other agencies.

"(4) GENERAL SYSTEM ENHANCEMENT.—

"(A) AUTOMATION.—A description of the capacity of current automated systems for tracking reports of child abuse and neglect from intake through final disposition and how personnel are trained in the use of such system.

"(B) ASSESSMENT TOOLS.—A description of whether, how, and what risk assessment tools are used for screening reports of abuse and neglect, determining whether child abuse and neglect has occurred, and assessing the appropriate level of State agency protection and intervention, including the extent to which such tool is used statewide and how workers are trained in its use.

"(C) INFORMATION AND REFERRAL.—A description and assessment of the extent to which a State has in place—

"(i) information and referral systems, including their availability and ability to link families to various child welfare services such as home-makers, intensive family-based services, emergency caretakers, home health visitors, daycare and services outside the child welfare system such as housing, nutrition, health care, special education, income support, and emergency resource assistance; and

"(ii) efforts undertaken to disseminate to the public information concerning the problem of child abuse and neglect and the prevention and treatment programs and services available to combat instances of such abuse and neglect.

"(D) STAFF CAPACITY AND COMPETENCE.—An assessment of basic and specialized training needs of all staff and current training provided staff. Assessment of the competencies of staff with respect to minimum knowledge in areas such as child development, cultural and ethnic diversity, functions and relationship of other systems to child protective services and in specific skills such as interviewing, assessment, and decisionmaking relative to the child and family, and the need for training consistent with such minimum competencies.

"(5) INNOVATIVE APPROACHES.—A description of—

"(A) research and demonstration efforts for developing, strengthening, and carrying out child abuse and neglect prevention, treatment, and research programs, including the inter-agency efforts at the State level; and

"(B) the manner in which proposed research and development activities build on existing capacity in the programs being addressed."

(c) TECHNICAL CORRECTION.—Section 107(d), as redesignated by subsection (b) of this section, is amended in the matter preceding subparagraph (A) by striking "this subsection" and inserting "subsection (a)".

(d) DELAYED EFFECTIVE DATE FOR NEW REQUIREMENTS.—The amendments described in subsections (a) and (b) are made upon the date of the enactment of this Act. Such amendments take effect on October 1, 1993, or on October 1 of the first fiscal year for which $40,000,000 or more is made available under subsection (a)(2)(B)(ii) of section 114 of the Child Abuse Prevention and Treatment Act (as amended by section 117 of this Act), whichever occurs first. Prior to such amendments taking effect, section 107(a) of the Child Abuse Prevention and Treatment Act, as in effect on the day before the date of the enactment of this Act, continues to be in effect.

"(2) work with family law judges, Child Protective Services agencies, and children's advocates to develop appropriate responses to child custody and visitation issues in domestic violence cases as well as cases where domestic violence and child abuse are both present, including—

"(A) the inappropriateness of mutual protection orders;

"(B) the prohibition of mediation where domestic violence is involved;

"(C) the inappropriate use of marital or conjoint counseling in domestic violence cases;

"(D) the use of training and technical assistance for family law judges and court personnel;

"(E) the presumption of custody to domestic violence victims;

"(F) the use of comprehensive protection orders to grant fullest protections possible to victims of domestic violence, including temporary support and maintenance;

"(G) the development by Child Protective Service of supportive responses that enable victims to protect their children;

"(H) the implementation of supervised visitations that do not endanger victims and their children; and

"(I) the possibility of permitting domestic violence victims to remove children from the State when the safety of the children or the victim is at risk;

"(3) conduct public education campaigns regarding domestic violence through the use of public service announcements and informative materials that are designed for print media, billboards, public transit advertising, electronic broadcast media, and other vehicles for information that shall inform the public concerning domestic violence; and

"(4) participate in planning and monitoring of the distribution of grants and grant funds to their State under section 303(a).

"(b) ELIGIBILITY.—To be eligible for a grant under this section, an entity shall be a statewide nonprofit State domestic violence coalition meeting the following conditions:

"(1) The membership of the coalition includes representatives from a majority of the programs for victims of domestic violence in the State.

"(2) The board membership of the coalition is representative of such programs.

"(3) The purpose of the coalition is to provide services, community education, and technical assistance to such programs to establish and maintain shelter and related services for victims of domestic violence and their children.

"(4) In the application submitted by the coalition for the grant, the coalition provides assurances satisfactory to the Secretary that the coalition—

"(A) has actively sought and encouraged the participation of law enforcement agencies and other legal or judicial entities in the preparation of the application; and

"(B) will actively seek and encourage the participation of such entities in the activities carried out with the grant.

"(c) ALLOTMENT OF FUNDS.—From amounts appropriated under this section for each fiscal year, the Secretary shall allot to each State, the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, and the combined U.S. Territories an amount equal to 1/53 of the amount appropriated for such fiscal year. For purposes of this section, the term 'combined U.S. Territories' means Guam, American Samoa, the U.S. Virgin Islands, the Northern Mariana Islands, and the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands and shall not receive less than 1.5 percent of the funds appropriated for each fiscal year.

"(d) PROHIBITION ON LOBBYING.—No funds made available to entities under this section shall be used, directly or indirectly, to influence the issuance, amendment, or revocation of any executive order or similar promulgation by any Federal, State or local agency, or to undertake to influence the passage or defeat of any legislation by Congress, or by any State or local legislative body, or State proposals by initiative petition, except that the representatives of the entity may testify or make other appropriate communication—

"(1) when formally requested to do so by a legislative body, a committee, or a member thereof; or

"(2) in connection with legislation or appropriations directly affecting the activities of the entity.

"(e) REPORTING.—Each State domestic violence coalition receiving amounts under this section shall submit a report to the Secretary describing the coordination, training and technical assistance and public education services performed with such amounts and evaluating the effectiveness of those services.

"(f) DEFINITION.—For purposes of this section, a State domestic violence coalition may include representatives of Indian tribes and tribal organizations, as defined in section 4 of the Indian Self-Determination and Education Assistance Act.

"(g) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated to be used to award grants under this section $8,000,000 for fiscal year 1992, and such sums as may be necessary for each of the fiscal years 1993 through 1995.

"(h) REGULATIONS.—Not later than 90 days after the date of enactment of this section, the Secretary shall publish proposed regulations implementing this section. Not later than 120 days after such date of enactment, the Secretary shall publish final regulations implementing this section."

The Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

"SEC. 314. GRANTS FOR PUBLIC INFORMATION CAMPAIGNS.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary may make grants to public or private nonprofit entities to provide public information campaigns regarding domestic violence through the use of public service announcements and informative materials that are designed for print media, billboards, public transit advertising, electronic broadcast media, and other vehicles for information that shall inform the public concerning domestic violence.

"(b) APPLICATION.—No grant, contract, or cooperative agreement shall be made or entered into under this section unless an application that meets the requirements of subsection (c) has been approved by the Secretary.

"(c) REQUIREMENTS.—An application submitted under subsection (b) shall—

"(1) provide such agreements, assurances, and information, be in such form and be submitted in such manner as the Secretary shall prescribe through notice in the Federal Register, including a description of how the proposed public information campaign will target the population at risk, including pregnant women;

"(2) include a complete description of the plan of the application for the development of a public information campaign;

"(3) identify the specific audiences that will be educated, including communities and groups with the highest prevalence of domestic violence;

"(4) identify the media to be used in the campaign and the geographic distribution of the campaign;

"(5) describe plans to test market a development plan with a relevant population group and in a relevant geographic area and give assurance that effectiveness criteria will be implemented prior to the completion of the final plan that will include an evaluation component to measure the overall effectiveness of the campaign;

"(6) describe the kind, amount, distribution, and timing of informational messages and such other information as the Secretary may require, with assurances that media organizations and other groups with which such messages are placed will not lower the current frequency of public service announcements; and

"(7) contain such other information as the Secretary may require.

"(d) USE.—A grant, contract, or agreement made or entered into under this section shall be used for the development of a public information campaign that may include public service announcements, paid educational messages for print media, public transit advertising, electronic broadcast media, and any other mode of conveying information that the Secretary determines to be appropriate.

"(e) CRITERIA.—The criteria for awarding grants shall ensure that an applicant—

"(1) will conduct activities that educate communities and groups at greatest risk;

"(2) has a record of high quality campaigns of a comparable type; and

"(3) has a record of high quality campaigns that educate the population groups identified as most at risk.

"(f) For purposes of this section, the term 'public or private nonprofit entity' includes an 'Indian tribe' or 'tribal organization', as defined in section 4 of the Indian Self-Determination and Education Assistance Act."

"SEC. 315. MODEL STATE LEADERSHIP GRANTS FOR DOMESTIC VIOLENCE INTERVENTION.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary, in cooperation with the Attorney General, shall award grants to not more than 10 States to assist such States in becoming model demonstration States and in meeting the costs of improving State leadership concerning activities that will—

"(1) increase the number of prosecutions for domestic violence crimes;

"(2) encourage the reporting of incidences of domestic violence; and

"(3) facilitate 'arrests and aggressive' prosecution policies.

"(b) DESIGNATION AS MODEL STATE.—To be designated as a model State under subsection (a), a State shall have in effect—

"(1) a law that requires mandatory arrest of a person that police have probable cause to believe has committed an act of domestic violence or probable cause to believe has violated an outstanding civil protection order;

"(2) a law or policy that discourages 'dual' arrests;

"(3) statewide prosecution policies that—

"(A) authorize and encourage prosecutors to pursue cases where a criminal case can be proved, including proceeding without the active involvement of the victim if necessary; and

"(B) implement model projects that include either—

"(i) a 'no-drop' prosecution policy; or

"(ii) a vertical prosecution policy; and

"(C) limit diversion to extraordinary cases, and then only after an admission before a judicial officer has been entered;

"(4) statewide guidelines for judges that—

"(A) reduce the automatic issuance of mutual restraining or protective orders in cases where only one spouse has sought a restraining or protective order;

"(B) discourage custody or joint custody orders by spouse abusers; and

"(C) encourage the understanding of domestic violence as a serious criminal offense and not a trivial dispute; and

"(5) develop and disseminate methods to improve the criminal justice system's response to domestic violence to make existing remedies as easily available as possible to victims of domestic violence, including reducing delay, eliminating court fees, and providing easily understandable court forms.

"(c) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—In addition to the funds authorized to be appropriated under section 310, there are authorized to be appropriated to make grants under this section $25,000,000 for fiscal year 1992, and such sums as may be necessary for each of the fiscal years 1993 through 1995.

"(2) LIMITATION.—A grant may not be made under this section in an amount less than $2,000,000.

"(3) DELEGATION AND TRANSFER.—The Secretary shall delegate to the Attorney General the Secretary's responsibilities for carrying out this section and shall transfer to the Attorney General the funds appropriated under this section for the purpose of making grants under this section."

SEC. 322. EDUCATING YOUTH ABOUT DOMESTIC VIOLENCE.

(a) GENERAL PURPOSE.—For purposes of this section, the Secretary of Education, hereinafter referred to as the "Secretary" shall develop model programs for education of young people about domestic violence and violence among intimate partners.

(b) NATURE OF PROGRAM.—The Secretary, in consultation with the Secretary of Health and Human Services, shall through grants or contracts develop three separate programs, one each for primary and middle schools, secondary schools, and institutions of higher education. Such model programs shall be developed with the input of educational experts, law enforcement personnel, legal and psychological experts on battering, and victim advocate organizations such as battered women's shelters. The participation of each such group or individual consultants from such groups is essential to the development of a program that meets both the needs of educational institutions and the needs of the domestic violence problem.

(c) REVIEW AND DISSEMINATION.—Not later than 9 months after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary shall transmit the model programs, along with a plan and cost estimate for nationwide distribution, to the relevant committees of Congress for review.

(d) AUTHORIZATION.—There are authorized to be appropriated under this section for fiscal year 1992, $200,000 to carry out the purposes of this section.

TITLE IV—REAUTHORIZATION OF PROGRAMS WITH RESPECT TO ADOPTION

SEC. 401. FINDINGS AND PURPOSE.

Section 201 of the Child Abuse Prevention and Treatment and Adoption Reform Act of 1978 (42 U.S.C. 5111) is amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 201. CONGRESSIONAL FINDINGS AND DECLARATION OF PURPOSE.

"(a) FINDINGS.—Congress finds that—

"(1) the number of children in substitute care increased by nearly 50 percent between 1985 and 1990, as our Nation's foster care population included more than 400,000 children at the end of June 1990;

"(2) increasingly children entering foster care have complex problems which require intensive services;

"(3) an increasing number of infants are born to mothers who did not receive prenatal care, are born addicted to alcohol and other drugs, and exposed to infection with the etiologic agent for the human immunodeficiency virus, are medically fragile, and technology dependent;

"(4) the welfare of thousands of children in institutions and foster homes and disabled infants with life-threatening conditions may be in serious jeopardy and some such children are in need of placement in permanent, adoptive homes;

"(5) many thousands of children remain in institutions or foster homes solely because of local and other barriers to their placement in permanent, adoptive homes;

"(6) the majority of such children are of school age, members of sibling groups or disabled;

"(7) currently one-half of children free for adoption and awaiting placement are minorities;

"(8) adoption may be the best alternative for assuring the healthy development of such children;

"(9) there are qualified persons seeking to adopt such children who are unable to do so because of barriers to their placement; and

"(10) in order both to enhance the stability and love of the child's home environment and to avoid wasteful expenditures of public funds, such children should not have medically indicated treatment withheld from them nor be maintained in foster care or institutions when adoption is appropriate and families can be found for such children.

"(b) PURPOSE.—It is the purpose of this title to facilitate the elimination of barriers to adoption and to provide permanent and loving home environments for children who would benefit from adoption, particularly children with special needs, including disabled infants with life-threatening conditions, by—

"(1) promoting model adoption legislation and procedures in the States and territories of the United States in order to eliminate jurisdictional and legal obstacles to adoption; and

"(2) providing a mechanism for the Department of Health and Human Services to—

"(A) promote quality standards for adoption services, pre-placement, post-placement, and post-legal adoption counseling, and standards to protect the rights of children in need of adoption;

"(B) maintain a national adoption information exchange system to bring together children who would benefit from adoption and qualified prospective adoptive parents who are seeking such children, and conduct national recruitment efforts in order to reach prospective parents for children awaiting adoption; and

"(C) demonstrate expeditious ways to free children for adoption for whom it has been determined that adoption is the appropriate plan."

SEC. 402. MODEL ADOPTION LEGISLATION AND PROCEDURES.

Section 202 of the Child Abuse Prevention and Treatment and Adoption Reform Act of 1978 (42 U.S.C. 5112) is repealed.

SEC. 403. INFORMATION AND SERVICE FUNCTIONS.

Section 203 of the Child Abuse Prevention and Treatment and Adoption Reform Act of 1978 (42 U.S.C. 5113) is amended—

(1) in subsection (a)—

(A) by inserting “, on-site technical assistance” after “consultant services” in the second sentence;

(B) by inserting “including salaries and travel costs,” after “administrative expenses,” in the second sentence; and

(C) by adding at the end thereof the following new sentence: “The Secretary shall, not later than 12 months after the date of enactment of this sentence, prepare and submit to the committees of Congress having jurisdiction over such services reports, as appropriate, containing appropriate data concerning the manner in which activities were carried out under this title, and such reports shall be made available to the public.”; and

(2) in subsection (b)—

(A) by striking out paragraph (1) and redesignating paragraph (2) as paragraph (1);

(B) by inserting after paragraph (1) (as so redesignated) the following new paragraph:

“(2) conduct, directly or by grant or contract with public or private nonprofit organizations, ongoing, extensive recruitment efforts on a national level, develop national public awareness efforts to unite children in need of adoption with appropriate adoptive parents, and establish a coordinated referral system of recruited families with appropriate State or regional adoption resources to ensure that families are served in a timely fashion;”;

(C) in paragraph (4), by inserting before the semicolon the following: “, and to promote professional leadership training of minorities in the adoption field”; and

(D)(i) in paragraph (7), by striking “and” after the semicolon at the end;

(ii) by redesignating paragraph (8) as paragraph (9); and

(iii) by inserting after paragraph (7) the following new paragraph:

“(8) maintain (directly or by grant to or contract with public or private nonprofit agencies or organizations) a National Resource Center for Special Needs Adoption to—

“(A) promote professional leadership development of minorities in the adoption field;

“(B) provide training and technical assistance to service providers and State agencies to improve professional competency in the field of adoption and the adoption of children with special needs; and

“(C) facilitate the development of interdisciplinary approaches to meet the needs of children who are waiting for adoption and the needs of adoptive families; and”.

SEC. 404. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

Section 205 of the Child Abuse Prevention and Treatment and Adoption Reform Act of 1978 (42 U.S.C. 5115) is amended—

(1) by striking out subsection (a) and inserting in lieu thereof the following new subsection:

“(a) There are authorized to be appropriated, $10,000,000 for fiscal year 1992, and such sums as may be necessary for each of the fiscal years 1993 through 1995, to carry out programs and activities under this Act except for programs and activities authorized under sections 203(b)(9) and 203(c)(1).”; and

(2) in subsection (b), by striking out “$3,000,000”, the first place that such appears, and all that follows through the end thereof, and inserting in lieu thereof the following: “$10,000,000 for fiscal year 1992, and such sums as may be necessary for each of the fiscal years 1993 through 1995, to carry out section 203(b)(9), and there are authorized to be appropriated $10,000,000 for fiscal year 1992, and such sums as may be necessary for each of the fiscal years 1993 through 1995, to carry out section 203(c)(1).”.

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, as chairman of the Subcommittee on Children,

Family, Drugs, and Alcoholism, I am particularly pleased that today the Senate completes passage of urgently needed legislation to assist and protect American children and families. Responding to a national crisis, S. 838, the Child Abuse, Domestic Violence, Adoption, and Family Services Act of 1992 reauthorizes and increases support for essential services over the next 4 years.

The safety of our children presents a peculiar and glaring paradox. While we recognize its utmost priority, we—as a nation—have done so little to safeguard our next generation. Even as poverty encompasses 20 percent of American children and abuse and neglect has become epidemic, we have been ever so slow to respond. All of us—society in general and government in particular—have been distracted by other problems. The problems of our families and children, however, are now paramount.

Approximately 2.5 percent of American children are abused or neglected each year. In 1991, more than 1,300 died. For each of the last 3 years, more infants died from abuse than from auto accidents. And the situation is getting worse. A study released last week by the National Committee for Prevention of Child Abuse shows that child abuse reports have risen, on average, 6 percent annually since 1985. The 1991 fatalities were 10 percent higher than in 1990 and 54 percent higher than 7 years ago.

The terms “national emergency” and “crisis” are clearly both valid and apt—though I hesitate to use them. The largest problems are the most difficult to convey. It is hard to comprehend great numbers and multiple variables. Far easier to identify with a small child stuck in a well than it is to contemplate that 2.6 million reports of child mistreatment were filed in 1991.

Many factors are responsible. Substance abuse incapacitates and leads to disability and abandonment. There were 2,400 drug-exposed newborns in Los Angeles in 1989 and possibly 375,000 nationwide each year. Data from 14 States indicate that one-third of all maltreatment cases involve substance abuse. Teen pregnancy means that children—who have neither the skills nor the resources—become parents.

Our societal response, meanwhile, has been piecemeal and inadequate. Child protection services are short-handed and underfunded. The caseload of Connecticut’s Department of Children and Youth Services has increased 53 percent since 1986. We spend billions of dollars on programs that belatedly attempt to remedy what we could have prevented, detected, and treated far more effectively early on.

That is why this legislation seeks to prevent abuse and neglect within families. The thrust of the community-based prevention grant provisions is to increase support for State-funded primary prevention programs. The States Grants Program focuses on the improvement of overburdened child protective services—including staff training, case management, and record systems, as well as augmenting the numbers of social workers.

Family violence is another critical, related problem that is addressed. Battering is the single largest cause of injury to women in the United States—an estimated 3 to 4 million American women are injured each year by their husbands or male partners. Wife-beating results in more injuries requiring medical treatment than rape, auto accidents, and muggings combined. The medical costs related to domestic violence exceed $100 million a year. Over 1 million women seek medical assistance annually for injuries caused by battering. The Centers for Disease Control considers violence against women to be a widespread public health problem, affecting families of all classes and backgrounds.

Domestic violence, moreover, continues to increase. There were nearly 23,000 incidents of family violence in Connecticut in 1990 in which at least one person was arrested—a 3.2-percent increase over 1989. Especially worrisome is that children were present or involved in 44 percent of these cases. As we have come to realize, family violence and child abuse are closely intertwined. An estimated 3.3 million children witness domestic violence every year. These children, in turn, are at higher risk of suffering physical abuse or neglect themselves—1,500 percent higher, to be precise, than among the general population. Children from violent homes, furthermore, are at heightened risk for substance abuse and juvenile delinquency.

The family violence provisions of this legislation improve direct services, such as shelters and counseling, for family violence victims and their children. Funding for the State domestic violence coalitions has been included in recognition of their critical successes in coordinating services, training, and strengthening of State services and legal protection.

Meanwhile, 400,000 children were in foster care at the end of June 1990—up from 276,000 in 1985. Many of these children are eligible for adoption, but adoptive families for these children are relatively few. And increasingly, children in foster care have special needs that require intensive services—children born after exposure to illicit drugs or with the human immunodeficiency virus.

The adoption opportunities provisions support the recruitment of prospective adoptive families. Fifty percent of children awaiting adoption are minorities. This legislation promotes professional leadership development, especially within the minority community, to unite minority children with families of like ethnicity and culture. The bill provides for adoption training for professional agency staff and parents, and therapy services to help families cope with post-adoption problems.

We should be proud of this legislation—the provisions are critically needed. In addition to improving the means by which child protective service agencies intervene in a crisis, this legislation invests, through efforts at prevention, in families that are at risk for crisis.

Our present predicament is the result of two longstanding failures. As a society, we have failed to invest public money in our children. And the American family—fragile from divorce, threatened by unemployment, and overburdened by the need to work more hours on the job—has been unable to provide the necessary time.

Our collective failure to make these investments in past years have contributed mightily to many of the problems we confront today: crime, substance abuse, an ill prepared work force, and withering educational achievement. No longer can we afford to postpone the care and protection of America's children and families. And no longer can we afford to approach our society's ills as isolated issues that can be addressed by individual, unrelated legislation and programs—or for that matter, as something for Government alone to solve.

At the end of the 20th century, our country's dilemma is that of the family and child. And we must prevent child maltreatment and domestic violence in the same manner by which we prevent crime, drug abuse, and prepare our next generation for the leadership of an uncertain world. We must work together in our communities and neighborhoods to create networks of services to strengthen families and to give them the support and resources they need to raise, prepare, and protect our children.

Mr. COATS. Mr. President, I am pleased to join Senator DODD in recommending passage of S. 838, the Child Abuse, Domestic Violence, Adoption and Family Services Act of 1992. This bill is intended to address a very serious and unfortunately growing problem of abuse and neglect of our most vulnerable citizens—children and women.

For too many children, Mr. President, their nightmares are real. In the words of a 1990 national commission, "never before has one generation of American children been less healthy, less cared for, or less prepared for life than their parents were at the same age." Poverty, drugs, teen sexual activity, and family disintegration are shattering the lives of our young children and crippling their future. Child abuse and neglect have increased in virtually every State in the Nation—large and small, urban and rural. In many instances, this abuse kills. At the very least, it warps and maims—creating legacies of violence and neglect that are passed through generations. In Indiana for example, 48 of our children are known to have died at the hands of their parents. And we have witnessed a 22-percent increase in the amount of abuse that is being reported in our State. That is significantly higher than the 6 percent overall increase we experienced as a nation last year. I am not arguing that this 22 percent increase is a result of increased incidence. It may be that awareness to this crime has been heightened. Whatever the reason—it points to the fact that we as adults are falling far short of the mark when it comes to the love and nurture of our children.

Over the weekend one Indiana paper's headline read, "family service workers see the worst and keep fighting it." The article then went on to describe some of the horrors our Nation's social workers face and fight. Physical injuries. Sexual abuse. Neglect. Dysfunctional violence families. Living conditions that no animal should have to endure. It is into this environment that we are sending our child protective caseworkers. They are overworked and underpaid—some making less than $16,000 a year after investing 4 to 6 years in college and graduate school. Low pay and high caseloads have in many instances made it impossible for child protective workers to do their jobs effectively. Caseloads in many instances are now two or three times above a manageable level.

S. 838 provides needed additional resources to State child protective services to support and improve State CPS systems—specifically intake and screening of reports—report investigation and follow through, case management, and general system enhancement.

However, we must remember that child abuse is not ultimately caused by a failure of Government or of Government funds, but by a failure and lack of strong and loving families. And this is infinitely more disturbing.

There is no comfort when the family becomes a hostile place. Wounds suffered early seldom heal completely. But wounds suffered later in life are also deeply painful. I am speaking of the issue of domestic violence. Unfortunately, we have been slower to address it.

Every 15 seconds a woman is beaten by her husband or boyfriend. Every 6 minutes a woman is forcibly raped. One-fifth to one-half of American women were sexually abused as children, most by an older male relative. The Federal Bureau of Investigation's uniform crime reports found that almost 30 percent of female murder victims are killed by their husbands or boyfriends.

These statistics disturb us. They should and they must. Being abused by one you love or trust is the deepest kind of violation. Closing our ears and eyes, and closing the doors to our homes, has not helped the thousands of women who have been forced from their homes by abusive husbands—14,000 in Indiana last year alone. Families whose children have endured abuse. Whose lives have been distorted by fear. Whose homes have become prisons.

Many women sought shelter, only to be turned away because of a lack of space. Others found shelter, but their husbands still found them.

I want to thank Senator DODD for working with me to include several provisions in this legislation addressing the issue of family violence and encouraging States to look more closely at what they can do to correct it. Public information, increased access to shelters, training of law enforcement personnel to recognize domestic violence—all these things are important steps we can and have taken in this legislation to help make the home once again a safe haven.

Mr. President, S. 838 is the product of over a year's work and attempts to address some very difficult and troubling areas. It is not a total solution to the problems I have raised, but it goes a long way toward addressing issues raised by violence within the home. Violence in the home is not so simple that government can end it with a law. It is a failure of the heart, a sickness in the soul. But government can play an important part in defending the weak and comforting the victim. I believe this legislation is thoughtful, realistic, and above all, compassionate. And I urge its adoption.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, the family represents the most important human relationship in our society. It is through the family that the basic values of our culture are passed through the generations. Domestic violence tears at the fabric of the family. This bill is a profamily bill that seeks to assist those families beset by the serious problems of family violence.

Unfortunately, domestic violence continues to increase in the United States. Such violence takes many forms, including the battered child syndrome, women battering, inter-spousal violence, and various forms of sexual abuse of women and children.

In 1962, the battered child syndrome was first described by Prof. Henry Kempe, writing in the Journal of the American Medical Association. In 1973, 11 years later, Public Law 93-247 was passed and signed into law by President Richard Nixon, creating the National Center on Child Abuse and Neglect within the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

In 1985, reauthorizing legislation was passed by the U.S. Congress that more broadly defined child abuse to include situations in which handicapped infants may be denied the medical care necessary to assure survival of the battered child.

Although limited data are available on the true size of the child abuse problem in our Nation, information clearly demonstrates that the problem—perhaps because we have at least begun to recognize the problem—has escalated. Data collected by David Gil of Brandeis University and by the American Humane Association have powerfully illustrated the increase in reported child abuse. In 1967 and 1968, Gil could document only 6,000 to 7,000 reports of child abuse per year in the United States. Yet, in 1986—about 20 years later—nearly 2 million reports of abuse children were found by the American Humane Association. This represents over a 3,000-fold increase in the reported cases of child abuse.

The gut-wrenching problems of domestic violence also include violence between spouses. The most egregious forms of this violence are seen in the sexual abuse and battering of women by their male partners. Psychologists describe battering as a "syndrome of control and increasing entrapment attendant upon spouse abuse and characterized by a history of injury, general medical complaints, isolation, stress-related psychological problems, and unsuccessful help seeking."

Although precise data are lacking, estimates consistently indicate that approximately 20 percent—or as many as 15 million—of adult women in America have been abused at least once in their lifetime by an intimate male partner. The experts also tell us that this problem rarely resolves itself spontaneously. I find this statistic sobering and tragic.

There are measures underway to address this problem. In the National Health Promotion and Disease Prevention Objective for Healthy People 2000, the Department of Health and Human Services has a number of objectives for reducing the burden of domestic violence. For example, one objective is to "reverse to less than 25.2 per 1,000 children the rising incidence of maltreatment of children under the age of 18." Another objective is to "reduce physical abuse directed to women by male partners to no more than 27 per 1,000 couples." A third objective is to "increase to at least 50 percent the proportion of elementary and secondary schools that teach nonviolent conflict resolution skills, preferably as part of quality school health education."

Obviously, the ultimate goal is to reduce the incidence of such violence to zero.

I am convinced that the legislation we are considering today makes a very important contribution to resolving the emotionally searing problems that stem from domestic violence. In addition, such violence contributes directly and indirectly to the soaring health care costs of this country. More than 1 million women seek medical care each year as a result of injuries caused by domestic beating. And, domestic violence undermines the productive capacity of this country, cutting into our international economic competitive edge.

Of course, many other problems of society that may contribute to such violence must also be recognized and dealt with, including alcohol and other drug abuse—and we are doing something about that.

Child abuse, spousal violence, wife battering—these all invade and destroy the refuge, the sanctuary, that a home is supposed to be. Improved domestic tranquility—and reduced domestic violence—is what this legislation can help to foster.

Mr. FORD. Mr. President, I move that the Senate concur in the amendment of the House.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the motion.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. FORD. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the motion was agreed to.

Mr. DURENBERGER. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

MEASURES PLACED ON THE CALENDAR—S. 2557 AND H.R. 3292

Mr. FORD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Commerce Committee be discharged from further consideration of S. 2557, a bill relating to closed captioning requirement for television commercials of candidates eligible to receive funds from the Presidential election campaign fund be placed on the calendar; further, that H.R. 3292 a House companion measure now at the desk be placed on the calendar.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

MEASURE INDEFINITELY POSTPONED—SENATE CONCURRENT RESOLUTION 12

Mr. FORD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that Calendar No. 120 (S. Con. Res. 12) expressing the sense of the Congress regarding civil rights and civil liberties for all Americans, including Arab-Americans, be indefinitely postponed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

AUTHORITY FOR COMMITTEES TO REPORT

Mr. FORD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that during the recess/adjournment of the Senate, that on Wednesday, April 22, from 12 noon to 4 p.m., Senate committees may file reported Legislative and Executive Calendar business.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

LOWER MERCED RIVER STUDY ACT

Mr. FORD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the immediate consideration of Calendar No. 368, H.R. 2431, a bill to designate a portion of the Lower Merced River in California as wild as scenic.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (H.R. 2431) to amend the Wild and Scenic Rivers Act by designating a segment of the Lower Merced River in California as a component of the National Wild and Scenic Rivers System.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the immediate consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill.

AMENDMENT NO. 1776

Mr. FORD. Mr. President, I send Senator JOHNSTON's substitute amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Kentucky [Mr. FORD], for Mr. JOHNSTON, proposes an amendment numbered 1776.

Mr. FORD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

Strike all after the enacting clause and insert:

SECTION 1. DESIGNATION OF THE LOWER MERCED RIVER FOR INCLUSION IN THE WILD AND SCENIC RIVERS SYSTEM.

Section 3(a)(62) of the Wild and Scenic Rivers Act (16 U.S.C. 127(a)(62)) is hereby amended—

(1) by striking "The main stem" and inserting in lieu thereof, "(A) The main stem";

(2) by striking "paragraph" whenever it appears and inserting in lieu thereof "subparagraph"; and

(3) by adding the following new subparagraph at the end thereof:

"(B)(1) The main stem from a point 300 feet upstream of the confluence with Bear Creek downstream to the normal maximum operating pool water surface level of Lake McClure (elevation 867 feet mean sea level) consisting of approximately 8 miles, as generally depicted on the map entitled 'Merced Wild and Scenic River', dated April, 1990. The Secretary of the Interior shall administer the segment as recreational, from a point 300 feet upstream of the confluence with Bear Creek downstream to a point 300 feet west of the boundary of the Mountain King Mine, and as wild, from a point 300 feet west of the boundary of the Mountain King Mine to the normal maximum operating pool water surface level of Lake McClure. The requirements of subsection (b) of this section shall be fulfilled by the Secretary of the Interior through appropriate revisions to the Sierra Management Framework Plan for the Sierra Planning Area of the Folsom Resource Area, Bakerfield District, Bureau of Land Management. There are authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary to carry out the purposes of this subparagraph.

“(i) To the extent permitted by, and in a manner consistent with section 7 of this Act (16 U.S.C. 1278), and in accordance with other applicable law, the Secretary of the Interior shall permit the construction and operation of such pumping facilities and associated pipelines as identified in the Bureau of Land Management right-of-way application CACA 26084, filed by the Mariposa County Water Agency on November 7, 1989, and known as the ‘Saxon Creek Project’, to assure an adequate supply of water from the Merced River to Mariposa County.

“(C) With respect to the segments of the main stem of the Merced River and the South Fork Merced River designated as recreational or scenic pursuant to this paragraph or by the appropriate agency pursuant to subsection (b), the minerals to Federal lands which constitute the bed or bank or are situated within one-quarter mile of the bank are hereby withdrawn, subject to valid existing rights, from all forms of appropriation under the mining laws and from operation of the mineral leasing laws including, in both cases, amendments thereto.”

SEC. 2. STUDY OF THE NORTH FORK OF THE MERCED RIVER.

Section 5(a) of the Wild and Scenic Rivers Act, as amended, (16 U.S.C. 1276(a)), is further amended by adding the following new paragraph at the end thereof:

“() NORTH FORK MERCED, CALIFORNIA.—The segment from its headwaters to its confluence with the Merced River, by the Secretary of Agriculture and the Secretary of the Interior.”

SEC. 3. NEW EXCHEQUER PROJECT.

The designation of the river segments referred to in section 1 of this Act as components of the Wild and Scenic Rivers System shall not affect the continued operation and maintenance of the New Exchequer Project (Project No. 2179) as licensed by the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission (including flood control operations) or the Commission's authority to relicense such project within the project boundaries set forth in the license on the date of enactment of this Act: Provided, That if the Commission relicenses such project, the normal maximum operating pool water surface level authorized in the project's license shall not exceed elevation 867.0 feet mean sea level.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the engrossment of the amendment and third reading of the bill.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read a third time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill having been read the third time, the question is, Shall the bill pass?

So the bill (H.R. 2431), as amended, was passed.

Mr. FORD. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the bill as amended, was passed.

Mr. DURENBERGER. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

RECESS UNTIL 9:30 TOMORROW

Mr. FORD. Mr. President, there being no further business, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate now stand in recess as previously ordered.

There being no objection, the Senate, at 11:48 p.m., recessed until Friday, April 10, 1992, at 9:30 a.m.

NOMINATIONS

Executive nominations received by the Senate April 9, 1992:

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES—Thursday, April 9, 1992

The House met at 11 a.m.
The Chaplain, Rev. James David Ford, D.D., offered the following prayer:

We sense what seems wrong with our communities and our world, O God, and we measure how we miss the mark in our lives. Yet we are grateful, when people not only speak the words of reconciliation and talk about the goals of understanding, but commit themselves to actions that build a future unity and solidarity and a shared respect between peoples. We are thankful, gracious God, that people can grow in sensitivity and tolerance toward each other and share a common resolve to do the works of justice and mercy. This is our earnest prayer. Amen.

THE JOURNAL

The SPEAKER. The Chair has examined the Journal of the last day's proceedings and announces to the House his approval thereof.

Pursuant to clause 1, rule I, the Journal stands approved.

Mr. FRANK of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, pursuant to clause 1, rule I, I demand a vote on agreeing to the Speaker's approval of the Journal.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the Chair's approval of the Journal.

The question was taken; and the Speaker announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

Mr. FRANK of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground that a quorum is not present and make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER. Evidently a quorum is not present.

The Sergeant at Arms will notify absent Members.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—yeas 283, nays 121, not voting 30, as follows:

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. McNULTY). The Chair will recognize the gentleman from California [Mr. DOOLITTLE] to lead us in the Pledge of Allegiance.

Mr. DOOLITTLE led the Pledge of Allegiance as follows:

I pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America, and to the Republic for which it stands, one nation under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A message from the Senate by Mr. Hallen, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed without amendment bills of the House of the following titles:

H.R. 3686. An act to amend title 28, United States Code, to make changes in the places of holding court in the Eastern District of North Carolina; and H.R. 4449. An act to authorize jurisdictions receiving funds for fiscal year 1992 under the HOME Investment Partnerships Act that are allocated for new construction to use the funds, at the discretion of the jurisdiction, for other eligible activities under such Act and to amend the Stewart B. McKinney Homeless Assistance Amendments Act of 1988 to authorize local governments that have financed housing projects that have been provided a section 8 financial adjustment factor to use recaptured amounts available from refinancing of the projects for housing activities.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed a bill of the following title, in which the concurrence of the House is requested:

S. 1882. An act to authorize extensions of time limitations in a FERC-issued license.

The message also announced that the Senate disagrees to the amendments of the House to the bill (S. 1150) "An act to reauthorize the Higher Education Act of 1965, and for other purposes," agrees to the conference asked by the House on the disagreeing votes of the two houses thereon; and appoints Mr. KENNEDY, Mr. PELL, Mr. METZENBAUM, Mr. DODD, Mr. SIMON, Mr. HARKIN, Mr. ADAMS, Ms. MIKULSKI, Mr. BINGAMAN, Mr. WELLSTONE, Mr. HATCH, Mrs. KASSEBAUM, Mr. COCHRAN, Mr. JEFFORDS, Mr. THURMOND, Mr. COATS, and Mr. DURENBERGER, to be the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The message also announced that the Senate agrees to the amendment of the House to the bill (S. 606) "An act to amend the Wild and Scenic Rivers Act by designating certain segments of the Allegheny River in the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania as a component of the National Wild and Scenic Rivers System, and for other purposes."

The message also announced that the Senate agrees to the amendments of the House to the bill (S. 985) "An act to assure the people of the Horn of Africa the right to food and the other basic necessities of life and to promote peace and development in the region."

The message also announced that the Senate agrees to the amendments of the House to the bill (S. 1743) "An act to amend the Wild and Scenic Rivers Act by designating certain rivers in the State of Arkansas as components of the National Wild and Scenic Rivers System, and for other purposes."

REPORT ON RESOLUTION PROVIDING AMOUNTS FROM CONTINGENT FUND FOR CONTINUING EXPENSES OF INVESTIGATIONS AND STUDIES BY STANDING AND SELECT COMMITTEES

Mr. GAYDOS, from the Committee on House Administration, submitted a privileged report (Rept. No. 102-491) on the resolution (H. Res. 429) providing amounts from the contingent fund of the House for continuing expenses of investigations and studies by the standing and select committees of the House from May 1, 1992, through May 31, 1992, which was referred to the House Calendar and ordered to be printed.

REMOVAL OF NAME OF MEMBER AS COSPONSOR OF H.R. 330

Mr. ROSE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that my name be removed as a cosponsor from H.R. 330.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from North Carolina?

There was no objection.

PERMISSION FOR COMMITTEE ON SCIENCE, SPACE, AND TECHNOLOGY TO FILE LATE REPORT ON H.R. 4364, NATIONAL AERONAUTICS AND SPACE ADMINISTRATION MULTIYEAR AUTHORIZATION ACT OF 1992

Mr. BROWN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Science, Space, and Technology may have until April 27, 1992, to file a late report on H.R. 4364, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration Multiyear Authorization Act of 1992.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, unfortunately we just could not hear what the gentleman from California [Mr. BROWN] was requesting unanimous consent for. If the gentleman would just briefly tell us what it is?

Mr. BROWN. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman will yield, we are seeking permission to file a late report on the NASA bill.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

Mr. DE LA GARZA of Texas, chairman;
Mr. YATRON of Pennsylvania, vice chairman;

Mr. RANGEL of New York;

Mr. GLICKMAN of Kansas;
Mr. GEJDENSON of Connecticut;
Mr. COLEMAN of Texas;
Mr. TALLON of South Carolina;
Mr. LAGOMARSINO of California;
Mr. DREIER of California;
Mr. DELAY of Texas;
Mr. GOODLING of Pennsylvania; and
Mr. KOLBE of Arizona.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Speaker announces that he will entertain 10 1-minute statements on each side of the aisle.

IN SUPPORT OF REFORM

(Ms. DELAURO asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. DELAURO. Mr. Speaker, this country today faces enormous challenges and historic opportunities. Yet at this crucial moment, when we need bold and imaginative leadership, we face a crisis of confidence in Government. The American people do not believe that their leaders understand their concerns, share their vision, or feel their pain.

If this Government is to guide our great country we must clean out the vestiges of privilege in Washington and clean up the electoral process nationally. Today we have the opportunity to begin to radically reform this system and rebuild that lost trust. Through comprehensive campaign reform, we are taking strong steps to limit campaign spending and to pare back the power of special interests in the political process.

We are also changing the management structure of the House, which badly needs modernization, to make it run more effectively as well as to address the concerns brought about by revelations regarding the House bank and post office.

I would go further, which is why I support H.R. 3555, a bill that would prohibit undue privileges and exemptions for Members. The privilege of serving people should be privilege enough.

We should support the two measures on the floor today. Only then will we begin to restore respect for our Government institutions and concentrate our energies on the problems facing us.

CONFERENCE REPORT ON H.R. 3750

(Mr. BALLENGER asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. BALLENGER. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to express my opposition to the conference report on H.R. 3750, the so-called campaign finance reform bill. I do so because, quite simply, it is not reform.

In fact, the measure should more accurately be named the incumbent protection bill. And after some of the scandals we have witnessed here in the Democratic-controlled House, it is no wonder the Democrat leadership wants to protect their incumbents.

Instead of true reform, the Democrats have decided to force taxpaying citizens to pay for their campaigns. If this bill becomes law, the Federal Government will reach into the pockets of hardworking citizens and take money to finance congressional campaigns.

Also, this bill does nothing to curb one of the biggest abuses in the current campaign finance system: It does not include the Beck reforms. This bill will not stop the millions and millions of dollars of unreported funds that unions take from their members and funnel to Democrat candidates.

Mr. Speaker, as written, H.R. 3750 is not reform. It gives further advantages to incumbents. Instead, the Congress should be focusing on requiring Members of Congress to raise a majority of their campaign funds from within their districts from individuals, limiting the amount of the individual PAC contributions, and inclusion of the Beck reforms.

I hope my colleagues will join me in opposing the conference report on H.R. 3750.

AMERICA NEEDS AN ENERGY POLICY

(Mr. THOMAS of Wyoming asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. THOMAS of Wyoming. Mr. Speaker, yesterday and today, the House Interior Committee dealt with an energy bill. There is no doubt we need an energy policy but that one is not the ticket.

In the last 10 years, more than 300,000 jobs in the oil industry alone have been lost—quality jobs that provided for families and health care and security. And those jobs were lost because the Democrat leadership in this Congress is not willing to implement a responsible energy policy, a policy that:

Encourages domestic oil production through incentives and tax credits so the United States is not held hostage by other energy-rich countries.

Let us get to work in the Congress and set a policy that uses our abundant resources of clean natural gas.

Let us burn environmentally conscious low-sulfur coal.

Let us find ways to handle safety and storage aspects so we can take advantage of the benefits of nuclear power.

Let us honestly encourage renewable energy alternatives with a consistent commitment to the future.

Most of all, instead of dealing with a philosophy that says burning candles and watching windmills turn is the answer, let us adopt sensible legislation that offers opportunity instead of being gridlocked by the possibility of risk.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair announces that it will entertain twelve 1 minutes on each side of the aisle.

STRIKER REPLACEMENT MUST BE STOPPED

(Mr. RAHALL asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. RAHALL. Mr. Speaker, in the past few days, all we have heard about is the ultimatum issued by Caterpillar management to more than 13,000 United Auto Workers who are striking for a new contract. Caterpillar management told 13,000 union workers this:

Come back to work immediately, or we will hire replacements and you will never work for Caterpillar again.

Mr. Speaker, it has been only since the early 1980's that we have become a nation that belittles labor—that belittles collective bargaining rights—instead of remaining a nation whose labor laws were founded upon the right to bargain collectively for new wages and benefits, and the right to strike if protracted negotiations failed.

How many people know that the National Labor Relations Act protects employees from being fired because they join a union. Both the National Labor Relations Act [NLRA] and the Railway Labor Act [RLA] guarantee the right to strike for economic reasons. Because of rapid congressional intervention, railroad strikes are often of short duration, and so the practice of hiring replacement workers for rail workers has seldom arisen. But H.R. 5 will still protect rail workers because their exemption from being replaced by permanent workers has not always been the case, and could happen again. For example, in 1963 the Florida East Coast Railroad was able to continue operations during a strike by hiring a whole new work force composed of permanent replacement workers. The protracted strike lasted 10 years, and was very bitter.

Labor-management disputes in the United States were for many years settled through good faith bargaining on contracts that at least started out offering something substantive.

Today, employers ignore good faith negotiating in favor of offering contracts that are so deliberately lacking in substance as to provoke a strike, rather than avoid one. And when the strike occurs, management wastes little time replacing strikers with permanent hires.

When did all the new nonsense start? With Ronald Reagan when he fired 11,400 air traffic controllers across the United States when their union brought them out on strike after long-standing negotiations had failed.

After the air traffic controllers were fired, there came thousands of workers replaced at Continental Airlines, at TWA, the Chicago Tribune, Magic Chef, and Phelps Dodge; striking workers were replaced by the thousands at the International Paper Co., Eastern Airlines, and at Greyhound.

Mr. Speaker, in the past few years the United States has watched helplessly and wrung its hands as tens of thousands of jobs have gone south of the border or otherwise offshore. The jobs have moved out of our country because it is said that labor is cheaper elsewhere.

But you mark my words, if union busting and striker replacement continues unchecked in this country at the rate it is now being utilized by management to resolve contract disputes, we won't have to move jobs south of the border in order to find cheaper labor.

We will have created our own south of the border right here at home.

AMERICAN PEOPLE WANT REAL REFORM IN THE HOUSE

(Mr. NUSSLE asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. NUSSLE. Mr. Speaker, I have had it. I have had it because I have participated for the very first time in the Committee on Rules.

I went up there last night to talk about reform, real reform, reform that people from all over the country have talked to me about, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker, I have received letters from all over the country from people that want to participate in the reform debate of their House of Representatives. And the Speaker has closed them out today by not providing an open rule.

Yes, Mr. Speaker, you are going to talk about reform. The Democrats are going to create the official House officer of the scapegoat. So that when there is a problem that comes up in the future, we can blame somebody. That is not going to work, Mr. Speaker, because there are people out there that want to participate.

If we do not let them participate today, next year that 150-Member class of freshmen or more are going to come marching in here with these kind of cards and letters, and they are going to reform this House once and for all.

AMERICAN WORKERS WILL STRIKE FOR JOBS AND JOB SECURITY

(Mr. TRAFICANT asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. TRAFICANT. Mr. Speaker, striking Caterpillar workers must either return to work or lose their jobs, after 28 years of service, to a scab, and Congress has done nothing about this, and Congress has done nothing about the loss of American jobs overseas.

I predict here today, Mr. Speaker, that because Congress has done nothing on this issue we will see a massive national labor strike in America in the near future to get our Congress to wise up, because the way it is going, if you want to have a job you are going to have to move to Mexico to get one.

Congress had better wake up before those workers exercise the only weapon they really have, the right to strike. I think it is time to put our foot down on these so-called replacements.

ONLY AN OPEN RULE WILL ALLOW TRUE REFORM IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

(Mr. DOOLITTLE asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. DOOLITTLE. Mr. Speaker, America is not working. The reason it is not working is because the Congress is not working. Today, in the Washington Post, we read "Inquiry on House Bank Case May Focus on Use of Money." Thank goodness.

I quote:

The special counsel who is conducting a preliminary inquiry into possible criminal wrongdoing at the House bank said today that he might examine how some lawmakers spent the money that they obtained from overdrawing on their accounts. Judge Wilkie said he was hiring four lawyers and several accountants and already had seven agents from the Federal Bureau of Investigation to help him look into the murky practices of the House bank.

This, of course, is not the only controversy with which we are afflicted. We also have the House post office. There we have a Federal grand jury.

Mr. Speaker, we need an open rule today to debate real reform for this House, but instead we will have a Democrat-imposed closed rule. We need real reform. I urge the Members to support that.

IN SUPPORT OF THE CLEAN AND FAIR ELECTION ACT

(Mr. SWETT asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. SWETT. Mr. Speaker, today we will consider the House-Senate conference report on the Congressional Spending Limit and Election Reform Act—one of the most critical bills in this session of Congress.

The legislation—supported by Common Cause and other organizations supporting electoral reform—will have a decisive impact upon our election process. It deals with the root of numerous problems—it sets voluntary spending limits, restricts PAC contributions, limits large individual contributions, limits the use of soft money by which political parties get around contribution limits. It evens the playing field. It gives legislators independence from special interests and significantly reduces the money chase that has so distorted our political system.

Unfortunately, on this issue, Mr. Speaker, the President is being a spoil sport who is saying, in essence, that if he cannot have things his way, he is going to take his marbles and go home. He postures about the need for campaign reform, yet threatens a veto if the legislation is not his bill.

Mr. Speaker, the American people want campaign practices cleaned up—not covered up. I urge the President to stop the political posturing. The American people want reform and results, not recriminations from the White House. I urge my colleagues—and the President—to support the Congressional Spending Limit and Election Reform Act.

LET US MOVE FROM RECRIMINATIONS TO RECONCILIATION

(Mr. DORNAN of California asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. DORNAN of California. Mr. Speaker, the last gentleman spoke of recrimination, and one of the gentlemen over here, I tried to get him elected Governor down in Cajun country, the gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. HOLLOWAY]. I asked him if people were feeling the same frustration down there as they are in California, and he said "yes."

Those of us who are Christians are about to go home to celebrate the Resurrection and think of redemption, reconciliation, and all we hear about is defoliation, revolution in the election, resignation.

What I am saying is, Mr. Speaker, salvation is at hand. Things have been worse. Today is the 127th anniversary of Appomattox. This Nation was torn asunder; 618,000 of our finest young people on both sides, Americans all, were dead, and 50 years ago today was the beginning of the Bataan Death March, the largest number of Americans ever taken prisoner, over 12,000; 64,000 of our Filipino brothers in arms, and over 2,000 were murdered on that long death march to Cabanatuan.

Things have been worse, Mr. Speaker. Think of the vacation and look toward reconciliation.

CONGRESSIONAL CAMPAIGN SPENDING LIMIT AND ELECTION REFORM

(Mr. RICHARDSON asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. RICHARDSON. Mr. Speaker, I rise to day to congratulate Chairman GEJDENSON and the other members of his task force on campaign finance reform as well as our colleagues in the other body who joined forces and agreed on a final conference report on this critical issue. It is a very difficult and controversial matter—you are simply not going to please everyone—compromises have to be made and they were. This bill is not perfect. But, it represents our best chance to reform a campaign finance system that desperately needs changing.

This bill attacks the root problem of campaigns—too much money—by imposing voluntary spending limits on congressional campaigns, restricting the amount of money that can be raised from PAC's and restricting fundraising and spending by party committees. The measure also prohibits the bundling of contributions, eliminates leadership PAC's and calls for television advertising discounts for those candidates who comply with the spending limits. This measure also encourages candidates to seek small home State contributions by providing matching funding for these contributions. While the funding mechanism is not yet in place, no Federal funds will be used.

The bottom line is this bill goes a long way to help challengers by putting them on a more level playing field. Right now, incumbents have a lockhold on fundraising—the American people are demanding reform, and rightly so. I urge my colleagues to support his package—if you want to bring honor back to this institution, vote "yes" on S. 3.

Mr. Speaker, we need to pass campaign finance reform to clear the reputation of the Congress and the political process. This is not a perfect bill because we can never get rid of money in politics, but this bill sets up some needed controls, controls that the public wants.

The atmosphere is such around here that anytime we vote we are accused of doing so because of a certain contribution. Just recently I was accused by a group opposed to environmental concerns that I was in the pocket of the Sierra Club because of a $500 contribution.

Mr. Speaker, here I voted environmental, yet I am accused of being in the pocket of an environmental organization because of a contribution. It is just not worth the hassle. I am not voting "yes" just to please Common Cause, but simply to remove a sleazy perception, baggage that we are all carrying around here.

THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES NEEDS LEADERSHIP AND ACCOUNTABILITY, NOT MORE BUREAUCRACY

(Mr. NICHOLS asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. NICHOLS. Mr. Speaker, one of the perks enjoyed by the majority party, is getting to appoint their friends to plum positions—who earn $119,000.

Now, the Democrats want to be able to appoint two more positions to oversee the operations of the people they appointed in the first place. In other words, because their first appointments were incompetent, they need to appoint two more people to keep an eye on them.

My colleague, the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. GLICKMAN], said in introducing this bill that:

The current system is accountable to no one, but every one of us is held accountable when something goes wrong.

Well, there you have it, the problem is that no one is being held accountable. That is not a problem of the management system, that is a problem of the House management—the Democrats.

The last thing this body needs is another layer of bureaucracy for a quarter of a million dollars per year. This body needs leadership and accountability. I will not support this bill. I will play no role in establishing a congressional scapegoat for the majority party.

THE HOUSE MUST ACT TODAY AND PASS CAMPAIGN REFORM LEGISLATION

(Mr. MAZZOLI asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. MAZZOLI. Mr. Speaker, the American people feel that when it comes to campaign finance reform, Congress is all show and no go. It is all talk but no action. As someone said, "There is no there there."

Today by passing campaign reform legislation, which has been very professionally produced by the gentleman from Connecticut and others, we can start putting action where talk has been, and we can start putting some "there there."

This bill limits campaign spending. It does put some hobbles on political action committees and how influential they can be in campaigns. It does basically limit or prohibit bundling of campaign contributions, and the use of that soft money which is properly called sewer money.

Unfortunately, Mr. Speaker, I am told the President feels he must veto this bill. I hope the President will reconsider. This is not a great bill, but it is a good, solid first step toward campaign reform. I do hope that the President signs it into law.

THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES: AN UNDEMOCRATIC INSTITUTION

(Mr. SANTORUM asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. SANTORUM. Mr. Speaker, I have been asked as a freshman Member of Congress by my folks back home many times, "What thing surprised you most about being a new Member of Congress? What was the most shocking thing?" I always say, at least recently, that the thing that surprised me most was how undemocratic, with a small d, how undemocratic this institution was.

I thought this was an institution where we came here and we debated the great issues of the day, that it was free and open debate, that we could offer amendments, that we could construct legislation, and the House would work its will. That is not what happens, Mr. Speaker. That does not occur in the people's House.

Today we are going to vote on reforming this House. We have two options. I will not be able to offer amendments. No one else will be able to offer amendments. There is going to be a very limited debate, a half hour each side and that is it. We will sweep it under the rug.

I am glad you are having a closed rule. For once the American public is going to see how you ram things down the American public's throat about something they care about. Do it. Do it. You are only doing it to yourselves.

WE WILL DO THE RIGHT THING

(Mr. ECKART asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. ECKART. Mr. Speaker, to my re-districted colleague, the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. SANTORUM], let me say we are going to do it. We are going to do it in the manner that Mark Twain taught us 93 years ago when he admonished a bunch of politicians to "Do the right thing. You will amaze your friends and astonish your enemies."

□ 1150

The fact of the matter is that if you have a complaint about the rule, take it up with the Republican leader. Indeed, it is BOB MICHEL's substitute that can encompass anything he chooses.

But what this House needs to do is to get about an end to the partisan bickering on the perks and privileges. The wake-up call that George Bush got in New Hampshire has been heard here in this dome, and that wake-up call includes a double dose of medicine. The first dose is to sweep away the corrosive residue of mismanagement and patronage, and it is an end to business as usual with the passage of House Administration Reform Act.

The fact is that you want it your way or you tell us to take the highway, hardly a way to lead in this Nation. Campaign finance reform is also the second dose of that medicine. We are going to put limits, limits that this President opposes on campaign spending, on campaign PAC's and on parties. We are going to do it the right way.

I know about millionaires. They have their own PAC's and we do not want millionaires to be the only ones who can run for office. We frankly think our candidates for office are a lot better than those who put bags over their heads on the other side of the aisle.

EXTENDING MORATORIUM ON REGULATORY REFORM

(Mr. DELAY asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. DELAY. Mr. Speaker, today is the last day before we take our Easter break. Before we return, the President's 90-day moratorium on Federal regulations will expire.

You know, Mr. Speaker, in primary after primary, in State after State, from newspaper headlines to radio talk show call ins, the evidence is mounting that the American people have had it up to here—with the way we are running the country.

The only thing they are even more upset about is the way we are running them—regulating their businesses, raising consumer prices and just plain standing in the way of America's ability to compete.

We members of the Republican regulatory team have tried over the past weeks to bring to the public's attention some examples of regulations which cry out for common sense reform.

While some of them are being changed, the number of regulations already on the books and the number waiting in the wings, greatly exceed the amount of any bureaucracy could wade through in a mere 90 days. That is why today we are calling on President Bush to extend the moratorium.

UTILIZE EXPERIENCED TEACHERS FOR OUR CHILDREN'S BENEFIT

(Mr. STEARNS asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. STEARNS. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to introduce an important bill for our Nation's children, the Older Americans Educational Participation Act.

Throughout America, school budgets are being strained to the breaking point. The Nation's children need to receive instruction from the best teachers who are available. However, the Social Security earnings limitation test discourages experienced teachers who have reached age 65 from continuing to work on either a part- or full-time basis. This legislation would repeal the earnings limitation test for Americans who apply their expertise for our children's benefit in the public schools.

There is a frightening shortage of teachers in critical fields such as math, science, and foreign language, and our senior population represents a huge untapped resource.

Like the majority of the Members of this House, I support outright repeal of the earnings limitation test. The House will take a giant step forward today by raising the limits on the earnings test. But, I believe that allowing outstanding teachers who happen to be Social Security recipients to continue teaching, without any undue tax penalty, should be something we can all agree to.

Please join me in support of this important legislation.

POWER OF THE PRESS: ONE REPORTER'S VENDETTA

(Mr. HUBBARD asked and was given permission to extend his remarks at this point in the RECORD and to include extraneous matter.)

Mr. HUBBARD. Mr. Speaker, this is the first of a series of three presentations to point out how vindictive, vicious, and vitriolic one member of the media can be in his ongoing goal to destroy a Member of Congress.

This series of entrees in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, to be followed by a 60-minute speech on the House floor, was prompted by an excellent article last Sunday in the New York Times by reporter Adam Clymer entitled "Citing Rise in Frustration, Dozens of Lawmakers Quit."

The article begins with:

Redistricting, frustration with legislative gridlock and worries over scandals both real and imagined are causing more members of the House of Representatives to choose to leave than at any time within memory.

Last week, I visited with a dozen of the House Members who are retiring. Ten of them mentioned frustration with media representatives who appear to be determined to present U.S. Representatives in the worst possible way.

Last Thursday night, at a Kentucky Derby reception at the Carlton Hotel in Washington, DC, Mike Brown, a reporter for the Courier-Journal, a daily newspaper in Louisville, KY, arrived shortly after 6 p.m. and began boasting:

As soon as Carroll Hubbard and his wife arrive I'll embarrass them with questions about cold checks and I'll follow them around the room until they leave. Wait and see.

My wife Carol and I were unable to attend the reception. Carol was in eastern Kentucky. I was en route to Paducah, KY.

Six members of my staff attended the reception. Reporter Mike Brown, upon learning that Carroll Hubbard and his wife would not be attending, noticeably and obviously was following two of my staff—listening to their conversations, taking in every word.

My wife Carol and I are accustomed to seeing Mike Brown at receptions. He attends our fundraising receptions. He is always the uninvited guest who pays nothing, naturally, but stands at the front table where those attending announce their names and receive name tags. When most of the crowd have arrived he then stands inside the reception room and then walks around taking names and their affiliations. Then, over the next several days, he calls individuals who were at the fundraising receptions and asks, in an intimidating way, why they were there.

For years, when I have filed my financial disclosure report with the Office of Records and Registration, reporter Mike Brown calls the corporations, trade associations, companies, businesses, colleges or schools to ask why they invited me.

On July 16, 1991, George Gill, publisher of the Courier-Journal, asked me: "Why does Mike Brown hate you so much?" My reply: "That's what I'm asked by Washington journalists."

My staff and I realize we are wasting our time contacting Mike Brown about grants or legislation benefiting western Kentucky—as he has told us he is not interested.

Mike Brown attended 2 full days of a June 1991 markup of the House Banking Committee regarding the Treasury Department's banking reform legislation, but, naturally, he chose not to attend the markup session when my amendment, successful days earlier in the Financial Institutions Subcommittee by an 18-to-17 vote, was the subject of four competing amendments, several hours debate and four rollcall votes. My amendment was not altered by any of the votes. The Hubbard amendment was news in the major national media and the subject of editorials in the Washington Post and the New York Times. But of course, there was nothing about my amendment at any time in the Courier-Journal.

In 1985 reporter Mike Brown interviewed at least 10 House Members as to whether I owned real estate in Panama. I have never even considered owning real estate in any foreign country.

Ever since January 1977, I have either been appointed or elected to the House Democratic whip organization. In 1989 and 1991 the Democratic House Members from West Virginia, Virginia, Maryland, Delaware, and Kentucky elected me as their regional whip for the House Democratic whip organization. Naturally, Mike Brown and the Courier-Journal have never written a news article regarding my being appointed or elected as a member of the House Democratic whip organization.

On July 15, 1991, Mike Brown tried his best to damage my wife's credibility by questioning the accuracy of Carol's financial disclosure statement, calling her employer, telling Barbara Bayus of Computer Sciences Corp. at Falls Church, VA.: "Mrs. Hubbard has filled out a form for our newspaper and has listed her title and salary and we just want to verify it." Naturally, Mike Brown changed his comments when Joel Goins of Computer Sciences Corp. called Mike Brown regarding his strange inquiry and false comments about my wife's signing a Courier-Journal form.

In July of last year, reporter Mike Brown made telephone calls on Capitol Hill and in downtown Washington, trying to tie me with Charles Keating, the convicted Phoenix, AZ, savings and loan official. I finally wrote Mike Brown, assuring him I had never stayed at nor even seen the Phoenician Hotel in Phoenix, and that I had never met with Charles Keating at any time.

This is just a portion of the actions of one reporter named Mike Brown, representing the Courier-Journal. He believes freedom of the press is a license to destroy a Congressman he has tortured for many years.

SUPPORT INDEPENDENCE FOR KOSOVA

(Mr. ENGEL asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. ENGEL. Mr. Speaker, 2 days ago, finally reading that Yugoslavia was no longer a viable entity, President Bush finally recognized the independence of Croatia, Slovenia, and Bosnia-Herzegovina. I fully supported his decision to recognize these peoples seeking self-determination. Unfortunately, he did not see fit to recognize the independence of the Republic of Kosova, a country that was also part of the former Yugoslavia.

Last September, the Kosovars held a referendum in which 99.9 percent of those voting supported independence. The Serbian Government attempted to squelch the referendum, but 87 percent of those eligible to vote did so. My question to the Bush administration is why the double standard? Why does Slovenia, which is 90 percent ethnic Slovenian, get such different treatment than Kosova, which is 90 percent ethnic Albanian?

The Kosovar people want nothing more than to be free of Serbian oppression and to be allowed to govern themselves. They have agreed to abide by the human rights standards laid down by the European Committee despite the fact that Serbian oppression has reached unprecedented proportions. The State Department's own Country Report on Human Rights Practices for 1991 states that in Kosova, and I quote:

Serbian authorities intensified repressive measures against the majority Albanian population, and arrested and beat hundreds of Albanians on trumped up charges * * *.

Mr. Speaker, if the United States is going to support self-determination of peoples in Eastern Europe, it must support the legitimate rights of the people of Kosova to independence.

DELAYING IMPLEMENTATION OF REGULATIONS UNDER COMMERCIAL MOTOR VEHICLE SAFETY ACT OF 1986

(Mr. HOLLOWAY asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. HOLLOWAY. Mr. Speaker, the Commercial Motor Vehicle Safety Act of 1986, which took effect April 1, established national licensing standards for commercial motor vehicle drivers.

Mr. Speaker, although there is no reason to question the intent of the law, it imposes significant, and excessive costs upon hundreds of thousands of farmers, agribusiness people, truckers, transporters, retailers and loggers throughout our Nation.

The timing of the regulation's effective date is crating widespread havoc with many agriculture-related businesses. There is a backlog at many if not all of the licensing facilities in Farm Belt States and the loss of pay for many professional truckers and drivers all over the country. Many truck drivers have failed the written test and are now unable to take any trucking business. Now, farmers and small businessmen are unable to ship their products. This is going to cost millions of dollars to producers and consumers over the next 6 months.

Mr. Speaker, we must not impose these hardships right now on the American truckers and small business people. That is why I am petitioning the President to encourage the Secretary of Transportation to waive these costly licensing requirements for 90 days. Mr. Speaker, it is the least we can do.

Mr. Speaker, I am forwarding today a "Dear Colleague," asking for signatures on a letter to the President and the Secretary of Transportation to delay this for one time only for 90 days.

CAMPAIGN FINANCE REFORM

(Mr. SANDERS asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. SANDERS. Mr. Speaker the United States today is one of two nations in the industrialized world without national health care; the gap between the rich and the poor grows wider every day; and while the salaries of the chief executive officers of the major corporations continue to soar, 10 million of our workers are unemployed, 5 million of our children go hungry and 2 million Americans sleep out on the streets.

Mr. Speaker, it is no secret that the President of the United States and the U.S. Congress do not represent the needs of ordinary Americans, and one of the major reasons for that is that we have an approach to campaign financing which, to a very large degree, allows wealthy people and major corporations to buy and sell politicians. The rich get richer and the poor get poorer, and ordinary people get shut out of the political system.

Mr. Speaker, as Common Cause has recently said, the legislation we have before us today is not perfect—but it does constitute real and fundamental reform. Most importantly it limits the amount of money that can be spent in an election; it limits huge soft-money contributions; and it increases restrictions on PAC's.

Mr. Speaker, if President Bush vetoes this legislation, as he threatens to do, then all Americans should understand that he is far more interested in maintaining the political oligarchy of the rich, which presently exists, than allowing for a vibrant responsive, political system which represents the needs of ordinary people.

If President Bush vetoes this important legislation, then the voters of America should be prepared to veto him in November.

WAITING FOR GODOT

(Mr. RIGGS asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. RIGGS. Mr. Speaker, for the last 2 days we have seen the House's version of "Waiting for Godot." Only in this case we have been waiting for a rule, a rule on congressional reform, and it is just about as existentialistic in experience anyway.

What we finally get from the Committee on Rules, of course, are straight party-line votes on Republican amendments which would bring about real reform of the House of Representatives, an amendment to ban proxy voting in committees, where committee chairmen and subcommittee chairmen routinely vote the proxies of Democrat members in order to advance their legislative agenda, and, second, real reform of the Committee on Rules so it reflects the makeup of the House of Representatives.

The Committee on Rules at present has a 9-to-4 Democrat-Republican majority that is 2 to 1 plus 1 to maintain their partisan advantage at all times. It should be changed to a 9-to-6 makeup, Democrat to Republican, to more accurately reflect the makeup of the House itself.

Mr. Speaker, that is what real reform is all about, not the exercise, the feel-good exercise that we are going to see here later today so that Democrat Members can run home for their Easter townhall meetings and point to this transparent package.

HOUSE REQUIRES BIPARTISAN REFORM

(Mr. BOEHNER asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. BOEHNER. Mr. Speaker, this institution is under indictment by the American people. The American people have lost confidence in our ability to govern, and if we are going to have a Congress that the American people have confidence in and respect for, we need real reform.

But if we are going to get real reform, it has to be done in a bipartisan way. That is not what we are going to have today.

We have been closed out of the process. We are going to have the leadership bill from the Democrat majority, and that is it. We are not going to have full and open debate.

If we really want reform in this Congress, it has to be done in a bipartisan way, and without bipartisan reform, the tyranny on this House imposed by the Democrat majority will continue.

CONFERENCE REPORT ON S. 3, CONGRESSIONAL CAMPAIGN SPENDING LIMIT AND ELECTION REFORM ACT OF 1992

Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Rules, I call up House Resolution 426 and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

H. RES. 426

Resolved, That upon the adoption of this resolution it shall be in order to consider the conference report to accompany the bill (S. 3) to amend the Federal Election Campaign Act of 1971 to provide for a voluntary system of spending limits for Senate election campaigns, and for other purposes. All points of order against the conference report and against its consideration are waived. The conference report shall be considered as read when called up for consideration.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. McNULTY). The gentleman from Texas [Mr. FROST] is recognized for 1 hour.

Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, for purposes of debate only, I yield 30 minutes to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. McEWEN], pending which I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, all time yielded during debate on House Resolution 426 is yielded for the purposes of debate only.

Mr. Speaker, House Resolution 426 provides for the consideration of the conference report to accompany S. 3, the Congressional Campaign Spending Limit and Election Reform Act of 1992. The resolution waives all points of order against the conference report and against its consideration and provides that the conference report shall be considered as read when called up for consideration.

Mr. Speaker, House Resolution 426 provides the House the opportunity to consider the conference report on campaign spending prior to the April district work period. Since the conference report has essentially been available for nearly 1 week, the Committee on Rules has recommended the waiver of the 3-day layover rule.

As Members know, there has been significant public support for the reform of congressional campaign practices; the Congress has responded with this legislation. Whether individual Members agree with the reforms recommended in this conference report, or whether they believe alternative reforms would be more appropriate, the will of the House will be determined when we vote on passage of this conference report. In any case, it is important that the House be allowed the opportunity to work its will on this proposal and I recommend the passage of this resolution.

Mr. Speaker, for purposes of debate only, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. GEJDENSON].

Mr. GEJDENSON. Mr. Speaker, I would be very brief. If there is not going to be great debate on the other side, I would hope that we could quickly go to passing the conference report.

I would like to make a few brief statements on the impact of this legislation.

This legislation would limit political action committees. It would go beyond any bill that has ever been before the Congress, because it would also limit the money the very wealthy could give so that no more than one-third of an individual's campaign could come from contributions over $200. It limits soft money. It limits independent expenditures.

It has been universally, by papers and organizations interested in the reform of the political process, endorsed. The New York Times calls it landmark legislation. It suggests that the President should sign it. The Fort Worth Morning Star says that this is a bill in the public interest, and the public should demand no less. The Chattanooga Times, Americans, known for common sense, know that too much money is spent on political campaigns; supports the bill. The Birmingham News supports the bill with an editorial. The Atlanta Constitution argues strongly for campaign spending limits as a critical aspect of reform and an essential aspect of reform. On and on and on, from the League of Women Voters to Common Cause to Public Citizen and hundreds of other organizations who believe that it is time to limit the money chase, to limit spending in campaigns, so that we can go back to a debate about the fundamental beliefs of the two parties and the two candidates rather than a fundamental chase for dollars.

Let me tell you that it makes no difference whether you design the dollars to come from one group or another, essentially it is the chase for dollars, the unlimited spending that is damaging the system here.

I want to commend again the Speaker of this House, Speaker FOLEY, for his support for this legislation, the majority leader and his staff as well as the Speaker's staff for the work they have done in helping us get this bill to the floor, the chief deputy whip, the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. BONIOR], and his efforts and so many on my committee, particularly the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. ROSE], the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. KLECZKA], the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. SYNAR], not on the committee, who have done so much work in making sure that we could bring this product of reform to the Congress.

I hope we would quickly pass the rule.

The articles referred to follow:

[From the New York Times, Apr. 6, 1992]

DEMOCRACY AND HYPOCRISY

Landmark legislation that would finally slow the endless pursuit of favor seeking money by the nation's top lawmakers and the special treatment it buys has cleared a House-Senate Conference committee and is headed for the House floor—The President who's trying to woo voters by wearing the cloak of reform would look a lot less selfish, and a lot more sincere, if he changed his mind and signed the bill.

[From the Fort Worth Morning Star—
Telegram, Nov. 20, 1991]

CAMPAIGN REFORM—CONGRESS NO LONGER HAS ANY OTHER CHOICE

Seats in Congress should be the ultimate preserve of the public interest, and the public should demand no less. Matching funds, combined with limits on total spending and the removal of the cancerous blight of power brokers' massive contributions, offers a healthy remedy to the current notion of public policy being for sale.

[From the Chattanooga Times, Feb. 22, 1992]

TAKE CAMPAIGN REFORM SERIOUSLY

Americans know by common sense that too much money is spent on political campaigns. They know that means candidates and incumbents spend too much time and energy raising campaign funds. And that means they have too little time and energy to devote to the business of government.

[From the Birmingham News, Mar. 15, 1992]

MONEY VERSUS IDEAS

Campaigns are not just about candidates. They are also about ideas. With all that campaign money choking off any real challenges, the competition of ideas so necessary for new policies is strangled. And the policies we do get are molded far too much by the wants of the money men.

[From the Atlanta Constitution, Nov. 27,
1991]

HOUSE TRIES TO CLEAN UP ACT

The House of Representatives gave honest government an important boost on Monday [November 25th, 1991] when it passed its version of the 1991 campaign finance reform bill. Then why do most Congressional Republicans continue to oppose spending limits?

It's never easy to explain irrational behavior, but the answer seems to be threefold. (1) They can't get it out of their heads that raising money is the GOP's strong suit. (2) They are ideologically committed to the private corporate interests that subvert the current system—even at the expense of their party's interests. (3) They are themselves incumbents who profit from the current system.

[From the San Jose Mercury News, Dec. 2,
1991]

HOPE FOR REFORM

Spending limits are essential, because the fear of being outspent is what drives incumbents to raise to raise money throughout their terms in office. Campaign reform without spending limits becomes an endless attempt to limit contributions, which, by itself, is doomed to fail.

[From the Washington Post, Apr. 6, 1992]

MR. BUSH ON CAMPAIGN FINANCE

[Mr. Bush] is trying here to create a self-fulfilling prophecy: to blame the Congress even as he blocks reform. The Democrats are right to pass the bill. If he vetoes it, the corrupting system that it seeks to replace is at his doorstep.

U.S. CONGRESS,

CONGRESSIONAL BUDGET OFFICE,

Washington, DC, April 8, 1992.

Hon. CHARLIE ROSE,
Chairman, Committee on House Administration,
U.S. House of Representatives, Washington,
DC.

DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: The Congressional Budget Office has reviewed S. 3, the Congressional Campaign Spending Limit and Election Reform Act of 1992, as reported by the committee of conference on April 3, 1992. Assuming appropriation of the authorized amounts, CBO estimates that implementing this bill would cost $35 million to $70 million for Senate elections and $50 million to $100 million for House elections every two years. These costs are approximate because they depend on how many candidates choose to participate, which is very uncertain and could vary significantly from year to year. Overall, implementing S. 3 is likely to cost between $100 million and $150 million each election cycle. Because this bill would not affect direct spending or receipts, pay-as-you-go procedures would not apply.

S. 3 would establish separate campaign reform systems for candidates for the Senate and the House of Representatives. For elections for each house, the bill would set voluntary campaign spending limits and would authorize certain benefits for eligible candidates. To become entitled to receive the benefits, a candidate would have to meet certain requirements, but none of the benefits or other provisions in the bill would take effect until the Congress enacts subsequent legislation providing the necessary funding.

Senate Campaign System: On April 9, 1991 CBO prepared a cost estimate for S. 3 as ordered reported by the Senate Committee on Rules and Administration, March 20, 1991. The conference version of S. 3 makes three changes affecting the costs of the benefits for Senate candidates authorized by S. 3. First, an eligible candidate would receive one-third (rather than two-thirds) of the general election spending limit if the ineligible opponent spends more than the limit. The candidate would receive an additional one-third when the opponent spends 33 percent more than the limit, and would receive a final one-third when the opponent spends 67 percent more than the limit. Thus, under the conference agreement, eligible candidates would be less likely to receive the entire amount of the spending limit because not all opponents are likely to spend 67 percent more than the limit.

Another change reduces the amount of voter communication vouchers that eligible candidates can receive from 50 percent of the spending limit to 20 percent of the limit. Finally, the conference report on S. 3 would replace the limited first-class postal subsidy provided by the reported bill with a third-class discount limited to one piece of mail per voting age person in the eligible Senate candidate's state. Other changes in the Senate system would not significantly affect its cost. The following table summarizes the costs for 1994 and 1996 under two different assumptions—if every state's Senate election has just one eligible candidate and if every state's Senate election has two eligible candidates.

ESTIMATED COST OF AUTHORIZED BENEFITS FOR ELIGIBLE SENATE CANDIDATES
(In millions of dollars)

	Just one eligible candidate		Both candidates eligible
	1994	1996	1994	1996
Excess expenditure payment:
Candidate 1	50	50
Candidate 2
Voter communication voucher:
Candidate 1	12	12	12	12
Candidate 2			12	12
Reduced mailing rate:
Candidate 1	6	6	6	6
Candidate 2			6	6
Total	68	68	36	36

House of Representatives Campaign System: On November 19, 1991, CBO prepared a cost estimate for H.R. 3750, the House of Representatives Campaign Spending Limit and Election Reform Act of 1991, as ordered reported by the Committee on House Administration on November 14, 1991. The provisions extending benefits to House candidates are nearly the same in the conference report on S. 3 as they were in H.R. 3750. The one difference is that the third-class discount postal rate that eligible candidates could receive would be limited to one piece of mail per eligible voter in the district rather than three pieces of mail. Thus, assuming that one-half the candidates for House races were eligible, the cost of the discount would be about $8 million per election cycle, or one-third of the cost in the previous estimate. The cost of the matching payments benefit would not change. Assuming that half the candidates would be eligible, matching payments would range from $45 million to $90 million every two years. Other changes in the House system are not likely to affect its cost significantly.

Federal Election Commission: S. 3 would require the Federal Election Commission (FEC) to perform new functions including certifying candidates' eligibility and auditing their compliance with the new system. Based on information from the FEC, CBO estimates that enactment of S. 3 would cost the commission about $2 million annually to implement its new responsibilities, assuming appropriation of the necessary funds.

If you wish further details on this estimate, we will be pleased to provide them. The CBO staff contact is James Hearn, who can be reached at 226-2860.

Sincerely,

ROBERT D. REISCHAUER,
Director.

Mr. MCEWEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, this rule really is not much different than 62 percent of the rules that we have considered this Congress. Once again, the Republicans are being denied the right to see the legislation three days before it is considered on the floor.

But frankly, there are more grievous problems with the campaign finance reform bill than the rule. So I think it is important that we move forward so that we can expose the charade that those on the other side plan to perpetrate on the American voters.

Mr. Speaker, I happen to believe that the term limit movement in this country was born out of frustration with the political system and its lack of accountability to the public. The House bank, restaurant, and post office fiascos have only heightened public awareness that this body, in particular, is incapable of addressing the high priority items that the American people want us to resolve.

I have always felt that we can alleviate that frustration by enacting three things: Equitable campaign finance reform, fair redistricting, and a reduction in the powers of incumbency. Unfortunately, the conference report does nothing to eliminate the institutional protections of incumbency. If anything, it widens the advantage that incumbents have over challengers.

For example, the legislation originally adopted by the conference committee prohibited mass mailings in an election year. But we were told in the Rules Committee on Tuesday that this was an inadvertent technical glitch, so the provision was changed.

While prohibiting mass mailings in an election year may appear to be a technical glitch to some of my colleagues, it was the only real campaign reform in the conference report. By limiting campaign spending to $600,000 per election cycle, challengers will be at a permanent disadvantage if incumbents can send mass mailings for free.

The conference report also opens the door to public financing of congressional campaigns. This prompted one of our colleagues in the other body to proclaim that the bill "writes the biggest rubber check in history to finance our campaigns for reelection."

It also ignores altogether Republican suggestions that we eliminate special interest money funneled through political action committees.

Mr. Speaker, the Democratic leadership would like the American people to believe it is doing everything possible to reform this institution and restore voter confidence in the House of Representatives.

Unfortunately, this legislation proves that it is business as usual when it comes to the ultimate perks of incumbency. The President said he will veto this legislation, and I will support that decision.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, for purposes of debate only, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. OBEY].

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Speaker, I simply wanted to take this time to congratulate the committee and the gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. GEJDENSON] for doing what I really had great doubts was possible, to actually bring a conference report back which represented an agreement between the Senate and the House. It has been a long time since we have seen any campaign reform vehicle get that far.

As the gentleman knows, I have had some concerns about it, and I think there are some additional things we will need to do to strengthen what we are doing here today. But I do think it is important for the public and the press to understand that the existing campaign law which we are today trying to reform is not the product of the Congress. I think the public has the impression that somehow the Congress put together the legislation we are operating under for the past 15 or 20 years. It did not.

Existing campaign laws are the unfortunate rubble that was left when the Supreme Court gutted the campaign reform package that the Congress passed in the seventies. It was the Supreme Court in its unfortunate equating of money with free speech which gave us a situation in which it is virtually impossible for us to limit phony independent expenditures, which has meant that we have had to go through all these convoluted activities in order to try to square ourselves with the Buckley versus Valeo decision while trying to protect the public interest; so I congratulate the gentleman.

The Supreme Court has given anyone who deals with the this situation, and God knows I have been dealing with this since 1975, the Court has given anyone who deals with this issue an impossible task because of their naive understanding of what constitutes campaign practices in this country.

My own guess is that in the end we are not going to be able to make further progress unless we actually amend the Constitution itself to correct the Court's mistake; but absent our ability to do that, I congratulate the committee for its work today.

Mr. MCEWEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. WALSH].

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Ohio for yielding me this time.

Mr. Speaker, this is an issue that I certainly have given a great deal of thought, and time, and effort to as a member of the House Administration Committee and the task force on election reform.

I am very disappointed at the result of all that work. We have before us another closed rule which denies the minority the opportunity to have further impact on this legislation, much as I believe our ideas have been shut out throughout the process.

Mr. Speaker, this bill is based on public financing, and yet there is not one single dollar allocated for that public financing scheme. There is no funding mechanism in this bill. I want the American public to understand that we are passing a bill calling for public financing of congressional campaigns without any financing scheme.

This bill conceivably could cost $1 billion in public financing over the next 10 years, depending on how it is funded.

Now, in our task force, we traveled around the country to various places. We had a couple hearings in Minnesota and Wisconsin to presumably look into the future where they have these public financing laws in place. What we found was that the vote in those States, the funding was running out. It was drying up, that serious candidates were not accepting public financing because they could not get enough money and because they were perceived as weak if they took the money.

More and more the State legislatures required stronger and stronger penalties against those who did not take public financing to shore up public support for this effort.

The Presidential campaign financing scheme is about broke, and it will be after this election.

Americans are participating less and less in public financing. It is down to less than 20 percent of the American public who pay taxes who are contributing on the check off.

Mr. Speaker, I intend to offer a motion later on in the debate to recommit to the conference, and I would urge all Members to give that recommittal motion an opportunity to pass.

Mr. MCEWEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. LEACH].

Mr. LEACH. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

Let me just say, with a great sense of discomfort, I am going to vote for this bill, but I must tell the distinguished chairman who led this effort that I do think there are elements of his bill that are a sham and that in totality the majority approach is a shame. Let me explain why.

What we have here is a bill that involves spending limits. I like that principle, but who thinks between $600,000 and $1 million—we do not know precisely because there are open-ended caps in some of this spending—is significant? For example, there are no caps on legal fees, which means that a candidate who employs the most dicey techniques under the law will be entitled to spend more money under this bill because legal fees are uncapped. These simply are not serious limits.

The second point I would like to make is that this bill is supposed to put new limits on PAC's, which would be a great progressive step forward. Actually, I think it is guaranteed to keep citizen watchdog groups, like Common Cause, in business for a long time to come.

When you think about it, the House went with the status quo, $5,000 caps, to be donated twice in the election cycle. The Senate proposed the elimination of all PAC's, which was very progressive, and then provided that, if the Supreme Court threw such limits out, a thousand dollar per PAC limit would be established.

What did our conference committee do? Our conference committee said, "Gosh, let's keep to the House position. Let's not be progressive like the Senate, and then let's let the Senate partially off the House and allow the Senate to go above their voted position to $2,500 per PAC."

But of real interest to this Member, of extraordinary interest, we now have two standards—one for the House and one for the Senate. House Members will be allowed $5,000 from each individual PAC, the Senate $2,500. The Senate will be under presumably more pristine, more principled rules than the House in this fundamental regard, although I understand in other ways there might be an argument that the House has gone further. This is like saying that we in the House are going to be less hurt or less influenced by these large amounts of money than those in the Senate.

Why could not the House conference have gone backward, and by backward I mean accept lower limits?

Now, we are talking about a rule here, and one of the reasons that the minority objects is that there are no amendments allowed, which is a classic circumstance around here; but let me tell you what happened when this bill came to the floor. Very serious Members of this body, led by the distinguished gentleman from California [Mr. BEILENSEN] had a wonderful approach that I identified with, that the Rules Committee did not even allow to be voted on. That is, a senior member of the Rules Committee on the majority side wanted to offer substantive reform, but this bill was considered so sensitive to the self-serving needs of reelection of Members that real reform could not even be voted on in this body.

This kind of rules arrogance is the reason so many in this country are so upset. The country has concluded, properly when that incumbents write proincumbent bills.

Mr. Speaker, all I would say to this body in conclusion is this is a very serious issue. We are taking a step, maybe two steps, in a hundred-yard trek, and these steps are zigs or zags. They are not straight. As every Member of the majority knows, this is reform that is single-party oriented. It is more disciplined for Republicans than Democrats. I happen to think that this discipline is a step in the right direction.

But why do you not have the courage to put discipline on yourselves? Why do you keep these $5,000 nonlimit limits? Why do you put on a spending limit that is way beyond statistically what the average Member is currently spending in their race?

This is not reform. This is what gives reform a bad name, but it does have, and I must say to the majority, some points that are very thoughtful. We are finally doing something about leadership PAC's; we are doing something about containment of some kinds of fundraising and campaign spending. But it is a small step, and should not be sold as anything bigger than a small step.

The next time around, if you are in the majority, I hope you have the decency to put similar limits on the kinds of PAC's that help you as the kinds of limits you are putting on the minority.

□ 1220

Mr. MCEWEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from California [Mr. RIGGS].

Mr. RIGGS. Mr. Speaker, as the House prepares to take up the campaign finance bill conference committee report, it is very interesting to read comments attributed in the Washington press to the bill's sponsors and the House Democratic leadership. This illustrious group has made it quite clear in their public comments that they plan to put the onus back on the President by forcing him to veto this incumbent protection bill. I find this supremely cynical, that these senior Democrats say that they expect and want the President to veto the bill. And why do they say this? To divert the public and media attention away from the scandals enveloping this Congress and the scandals that have occurred on the watch of the House, the present House, leadership and to divert attention away from the need for fundamental reforms of this place to make it accountable to the average citizen again.

Mr. Speaker, if our Democratic friends were genuinely interested in crafting bipartisan campaign finance reform, they would, No. 1, eliminate public financing of congressional campaigns, which will only increase our deficit problems; two, replace artificial and arbitrary reforms which limit total spending in congressional campaigns as $600,000 for both primary and general elections and $200,000 for total PAC contributions, both figures, by the way, which were indexed for inflation, and they would be willing to look at other reforms proposed by House Republicans.

Our reforms are very simple, commonsense reforms. First, we would require all candidates for Congress, challenger and incumbent alike, to raise at least 50 percent of their campaign funds back home in their district, theoretically from the same people who will be voting for those candidates in the next election. We would reduce PAC contributions from $5,000 to $1,000, basically creating a level field between PAC contributions and individual contributions because the last time we attempted campaign finance reform in the late 1970's, we gave rise to the prominence of PAC's by allowing PAC's to contribute $5,000 and limiting individuals to $1,000, and, lastly, the House Democrat leadership will entertain our reforms on banning soft money and franked mail reform, particularly the franked mail reform that ought to be put before this House for an up-or-down vote in this election cycle. We have Members who are now using the frank privilege to blatantly and widely mail outside their district, and why? This is blatant electioneering, pure and simple, and this is a practice that ought to be banned in the name of restoring some credibility and accountability to Congress.

One other aspect that I would like to suggest is a linkage. If we are going to have public financing for congressional campaigns, then why do we not, as it was entertained in the other body, why do we not consider at least a debate on term limits for those Members of Congress who accept financing for their congressional campaigns? I think this is a linkage that the American people would very much like to see debated in this House.

Mr. Speaker, given the present low opinion of Congress by the American people, I cannot understand why a more serious attempt at campaign finance reform has not been placed before us today. I urge defeat of the rule and defeat of the conference committee report.

Mr. MCEWEN. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time, and I move the previous question on the resolution.

The previous question was ordered.

The resolution was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

Mr. GEJDENSON. Mr. Speaker, I call up the conference report on the Senate bill (S. 3) to amend the Federal Election Campaign Act of 1971 to provide for a voluntary system of spending limits for Senate election campaigns, and for other purposes.

The Clerk read the title of the Senate bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. MCCURDY). Pursuant to House Resolution 426, the conference report is considered as having been read.

(For conference report and statement, see Proceedings of the House of April 8, 1992, at page 8462.)

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. GEJDENSON] will be recognized for 30 minutes, and the gentleman from California [Mr. THOMAS] will be recognized for 30 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. GEJDENSON].

Mr. GEJDENSON. Mr. Speaker, it is my great privilege at this time to yield such time as he may consume to the chairman of the full Committee on House Administration, the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. ROSE], a gentleman without whom we would not be here today with this bill in its present form, and I personally, as the chairman of the task force, would like to thank him and his staff for their great assistance throughout this process.

Mr. ROSE. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. GEJDENSON], and we would not have a campaign finance reform bill if I had not had the good luck to have the gentleman as chairman of this task force. So I appreciate his saying those nice things about me, but this is his handiwork, and I think the whole House clearly understands that.

Mr. Speaker, I am proud to be here today to join with my colleague from Connecticut in presenting virtually the most comprehensive reform of this Nation's election laws ever to be written. I particularly want to commend my friend from Connecticut for a job well done in chairing the Task Force on Campaign Finance Reform and guiding this complex legislation through rocky waters.

I am here today because I believe that changes in the way we finance campaigns are long overdue. The American public is clamoring for us to manage our elections in a fair and responsible manner. And what the public wants most is for Congress to control the skyrocketing amounts spent to run for office. Instead, they see candidates, both incumbents and challengers, spending millions of dollars without limit, simply to get elected and re-elected.

The only way to regain the public's respect is to limit and control campaign spending. It is time to establish once and for all that public offices cannot be bought by the highest bidder. It should not be the amount of money spent by candidates which wins elections, but, rather, the quality of the candidates' message. That is why I consider spending limits so important.

This conference report limits spending in a fair and reasonable manner; $600,000 every 2 years is more than enough to cover 80 percent of our races.

By supporting this conference report, we can stop uncontrolled spending. And, most importantly, this conference report does not take funds from any existing Federal program or from the taxpayer. This conference report does not increase the Federal budget deficit.

I believe that it is time to take this important step to restore the public's confidence in our elections. This is real reform, and I urge all of my colleagues to support this conference report.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pending the return to the floor of the gentleman from California [Mr. THOMAS], the Chair recognizes the gentleman from New York [Mr. WALSH] to manage the time on the Republican side.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Speaker, I will, as time allows, yield time to members and, if the gentleman from California [Mr. THOMAS] returns, I will relinquish the time to him.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from New York [Mr. WALSH].

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Speaker, I would like to thank also the chairman of the task force that I worked with all these long months in order to discuss this very, very important issue.

Mr. Speaker, we have a bill before us that I believe is seriously flawed. I think there are a number of major problems, but the No. 1 problem with this bill is it is called a public financing bill, and it contains no public financing. There is no funding scheme to fund this bill. The second problem is that the House and Senate are allowed to operate under different rules in terms of elections financing, and, third, it places spending limits on incumbents, and challengers, but the spending limit is set at $600,000; $600,000. Mr. Speaker, that is hardly a limit. It becomes more and more a rich man's game when we read into the bill and determine that $60,000 in individual personal funds are also called a limit.

As I mentioned earlier, we traveled to Minnesota and Wisconsin to look at the public financing laws that those States have, and we heard legislator after legislator come before us and tell us that there was not enough money in the system, that individuals who took advantage as challengers of public financing were perceived as weak, as if to say that they could not raise money in the private sector, so they had to come to the public sector to raise that money.

We have also seen in our experience that the Presidential public financing scheme, the checkoff, is becoming less and less supported by the American public, to the degree that we had to take emergency action earlier this year to make sure there was enough money to get through this Presidential election. But in fact that fund will be bankrupt at the end of this election year.

The Senate took a hard line position on PAC's, eliminating PAC's, and then they folded and gave up on that. Now they allow funding by PAC's.

The bill that we have before us continues to allow free mass mailings in an election year. Mr. Speaker, there are demonstrated statistics that show that incumbent Members of Congress spend more taxpayer dollars. In the last cycle it was $130 million in taxpayer-financed franking; $130 million was literally twice as much as all other challengers spent on all of their campaigns. So there is a tremendous incumbent protection program built into this bill.

Mr. Speaker, I offered a bill in the midst of this process that I consider to be real reform. It would have required fully 100 percent of all money raised for a congressional campaign to come from the district; 100 percent. There would be no fundraising in Washington, no fundraising in Hollywood, unless you represented that district, and no fundraising in New York, unless you represented that area.

If you cannot get support from your home district, then you should not be able to raise money anywhere else. Your first responsibility is to the people of your home district that elect you.

I also felt that we should have a limit of $200 on all campaign contributions, whether they are individual, whether they are corporate, whether they are PAC, whether they are personal. That, unfortunately, did not pass. But I consider that to be real reform, not the complex set of conditions and issues that are put before us today.

Mr. Speaker, as I mentioned, I will offer a motion to recommit at the end of this debate that will allow for the further discussion by the conference committee of issues that I consider to be real reform. I would urge all Members to give that motion the opportunity to pass.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. HENRY].

Mr. HENRY. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, I urge a "no" vote on the conference report. This is a sham. I say it again: This is a sham. This is not reform, it is a fraud.

Machiavelli instructed his students of politics that what was important in political life was not to do good, but to appear to do good. That is exactly what this bill does, it appears to do good while it does not.

This House is racked with scandal. We didn't pay our restaurant bills and we have had to clean up that mess. We did not clean up the postal system. Then we had the problem with our bank. Now we come up with the ultimate in perks, a new perk, where every Member of this Congress gets $200,000 every election cycle from the taxpayer. That is the ultimate perk.

How dumb do you think the American public is? To get the perk, you do not have to raise one bloody dime, not 10 cents, not 1 cent from people inside your congressional district. To get the $200,000 perk from the new House bank, to be administered by the same Committee on House Administration that put locks on the doors of the minority just yesterday when they were trying to investigate the House post office abuses, under the same administration, to get the $200,000 biannual perk from the taxpayers, not 1 penny has to be matched from the voters in your district.

If you want to stand up and defend that, do it. If you want to stand up and defend that kind of abuse in the name of good, in the name of trying to make this House and these Members more directly responsible to the people who vote for them, go ahead and vote for it. But I would be ashamed to put up a green light for this vote.

All you are going to do is organize more committees with mail solicitation where you get 1,000 people to send in a $100 contribution from party activists or special interest activists around the country. It comes in, and then you get a 100-percent Government match, taxpayer match.

Mr. Speaker, it is a new bank. It makes the bank at the Sergeant at Arms look like nothing in comparison. It gets to the heart of what this institution is, a heck of a lot more than whether or not we have a gym. It reaches into the depths of what this body does a heck of a lot more than whether we have airport parking.

Mr. Speaker, you ought to be ashamed of calling this good if you do not require that the funds that qualify for any kind of match are raised by voters in your own legislative district. This is not reform; it is fraud.

Mr. GEJDENSON. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, there are battles in legislatures and congresses and parliaments across the globe, but there are still so many people that do not have a democratic institution to bring their grievances. Sometimes in the heat of debate and seeking political advantage, I get the sense that some of my colleagues hope they can burn this institution down, and in its ashes they can rule.

None of us will gain by destroying the Congress. None of us will gain by constitutionally trying to put this House in the worst light.

Mr. Speaker, it seems to me that if we care about democracy and democratic institutions, that we ought to lower the rhetoric on this institution just one notch, because this is the premier legislative body on the globe. It is the cleanest and the least corrupted Legislature anywhere on the face of this Earth, and that is what we ought to understand.

Mr. Speaker, my parents fled the Soviet Union while it was still under Stalin. They fled a government that gave no one the right to speak out and gave no one the right but the few in the party to participate in the political system.

As dangerous as that was, we are in the same kind of danger if we only allow those with money and power to affect the political process in America.

What we need is a political system that gives the average voter more ability to feel that their voice is heard, and not just those who are most wealthy or those who are organized to the greatest degree.

The critics on the other side of the aisle say that we have not cut down on Democratic advantages in the system. Well, let me tell Members, it took some effort on my side to convince my colleagues to not take even more than we were taking from Republicans. In political action committee money, the Democrats on the majority received 53 percent of their dollars from those political action committees. We cut that to one-third. The Republicans got 41 percent on average from political action committee money. We cut that to one-third. We cut the Democrats more.

When you take a look at leadership committees, which are done away with in this bill, there are virtually none on the Republican side. We do away with them, and that only affects Democrats. We also limit how much money wealthy people can put into the system.

Do not stand before us and tell us that Members are somehow pure if they lock out political action committees, an act that most people feel would be unconstitutional—political action committees that range from unions and oil companies to the Sierra Club—and then turn around and say that if all the money comes from the board of directors of the big corporations that somehow a Member is pure.

Everybody knows the game around here. We stand up and announce we are not going to take PAC money, and then we write to all these corporations and say, listen, I do not take PAC money. I would like to get the board of directors of all of the companies to send me the money directly.

We had one Member the other day talking about how spending limits were bad. I could not figure this out. Then he said, "I have got $2 million in my account."

Of course, those who have access to wealthy people and wealth would like to have campaigns determined by a race for dollars.

The Magna Carta, which we have a copy of in the Statuary Hall, started the process by giving rights to people who had wealth and property. We got rid of the poll tax in this country because it restricted the involvement of the public to only those who had cash on hand. Do not make campaign finance reform contingent on raising money and only in your district, because then only those with wealth will have the ability to enter the political process.

On average, 80 percent of the money in campaigns is raised in districts by Democrats and Republicans. It is a phony issue.

But what it does in some districts, it precludes those who represent the poor, those who represent environmentalists against corporations like Exxon from being able to participate in the debate.

Let us not set up something we call reform that then skews it so only one side can enter the dialog and the debate of the campaign.

Different rules for the House and the Senate. We have different rules for the House and the Senate. We have a Committee on Rules. They do not. The State with the largest district has 52 congressional districts. The smallest in the House is barely a congressional district by any standard.

What we need to do is focus on a system that works for each of the Houses. Most of what we do is similar. We deal with the issue of PAC's. We do a little more in the House, frankly, because we limit it to one-third PAC's and one-third of the money can come from contributions of $200 or more and no more.

The Republican reform bill that was offered would have allowed a Member to raise $4 million from political action committees in one race. That is not my idea of reform.

We limit soft money. We limit independent expenditures. We limit the contributions from the wealthy, and that may be the most important innovation in the House bill.

Lastly, I would like to go back again to not what we have said here but what others have said about the work we have done, quotes from people who have written to us from newspapers across the country, from organizations that are committed to reforming the political process.

They have called this the most important reform bill that has been before the U.S. Congress. Let us not hope that entrance to heaven is based on perfection because I can guarantee my colleagues, there are not many of us or our constituents that would get in. But perfect cannot be the enemy of the good, and this is a major step forward in reforming the political process in this country.

From the New York Times and the Washington Post, from Texas to California, the papers that have looked at this legislation say, no, it is not perfect. They say it is the best thing we in elective Government have ever done, that this is a major step forward.

The groups outside the Congress that watch the reforms of Congress say the same thing, that these are major strides forward.

And lastly, when I asked the administration to participate in the debate, when a representative of the White House was in the conference committee room in our final day, I took even that opportunity to ask them to participate, as I did the minority members of the committee with their proposals. The White House declined to participate in a reform package of campaign spending.

The President, who gets over $200 million in public funds, says he is against spending limits, says he is against a bill that would limit spending and PAC's and soft money.

We have to work together, but we cannot respond to a President whose only answer is the veto pen, whether it is on unemployment compensation, on taxes, on health care, on education, and campaign finance reform. There is no national consensus on many issues, but where there is Presidential leadership, we can move forward.

The only thing we have heard from this President is no, and no, and no again. And that cannot be the answer for reform. We can work together, but we will not be bullied by this White House.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I would remind the gentleman on the other side of the aisle that the President not only has offered a national health care plan, but he also signed into law an extension of unemployment benefits. I would hardly call those "noes."

Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. SANTORUM].

Mr. SANTORUM. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me.

I would first love to ask the gentleman from Connecticut how he can have a statistic that says that incumbents raise 80 percent of their money from their districts and yet he also quoted that the Democrats raised 53 percent of their money from PAC's. That to me, that does not fit.

Mr. GEJDENSON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SANTORUM. I yield to the gentleman from Connecticut.

Mr. GEJDENSON. Mr. Speaker, many of these political action committees do represent the workers and environmentalists in their district.

Additionally, if we take a look at the individual contributions, it is 80 percent of the individual contributions and probably as much as 90 percent of the political action committee money.

Mr. SANTORUM. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman is going to say just because there happens to be a union member in the district that somehow or another that political action committee is in the district, that is a farce.

We are talking about where the money is coming from, from individuals, people who vote in our districts.

Just because someone maybe contributed $5 to a political action committee that in turn gave $5,000 to the candidate, that is hardly raising money in your district.

The point is that we need a system that focuses in on the people who live in the district. I won an election 1½ years ago, outspent 3-to-1. I raised more money from individuals in my district than the person who outspent me 3-to-1.

We did it with volunteers. That is what American wants. They are tired of these big money, $600,000 political action committee campaigns. They want people who are going to go out and talk to them, who are going to go on their doorstep or town halls and meet with them and see them and hear them. They want the people from the communities to contribute and support candidates. They do not want people from Washington giving big bucks down here to prop up candidates back home. They want the people to contribute at home who judge these candidates on what they are doing for the people in that district.

That is all we are trying to say on this side of the aisle. We are saying, "Don't continue the games down here. This is an incumbent protection plan."

The gentleman says, we are going to limit PAC contributions to $200,000. What a limitation, my colleagues. The average contribution from political action committees to Members of Congress, incumbent Members, is $213,000. Wow, we are going to cut back $13,000 on average. What a sacrifice. What reform. Wonderful.

We are really going after these folks. This is a joke. This is no reform. Two times today we are going to be debating bills that are called reform packages that do absolutely nothing to change the status quo, to do anything to address the concerns that the American public has with this institution.

We are guaranteeing incumbency, and then we are going to put new paint down on the Sergeant at Arms office and say we have cleaned it up. It is a joke. We are not doing anything today.

People are mad. What they want is real reform. What they are getting is a new coat of paint.

Mr. GEJDENSON. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. SYNAR], who has really led the effort for some time on campaign finance reform.

Mr. SYNAR. Mr. Speaker, being a Member of Congress is about making choices. When we are in session, we dutifully troop into this Chamber each and every day, sometimes a dozen times a day, and make a choice. And we are not unused to the process.

My fellow Representatives, do not shrink from the choice which faces us today. The choice goes to the very heart of representative democracy and that will underlie every subsequent time from this day forward.

□ 1250

It would be ironic, indeed, as the emerging nations of Eastern Europe slowly return power to their citizens, that this Congress which, for the dark days of Communist rule was the bright beacon of hope for those behind the Iron Curtain, is seen as moving away in the opposite direction.

We cannot be seen as countenancing a situation in which the wishes and wants of the people of our districts once again take a distant second place to the clangor and crush of the special interests and their awesome power of concentrated money to corrupt the system the Founding Fathers envisioned for this House.

If we reject campaign finance reform today, I do not know when we will be able to return here again. But I do know that the House of Representatives will be a diminished place, its ideals tarnished, and its noble origins betrayed.

To my fellow citizens, it has taken us a decade to get to this moment. If we truly are committed to beginning to rebuild the public confidence which is so necessary to the fabric of this democracy, let us accept this challenge today and pass this legislation. Then we can say that we have made this democracy more competitive, we have improved the access of its citizens to the democracy, and we have enhanced this democracy the way our Founding Father would have wanted it.

That done, we will have served this Republic, we will have served this institution, but most of all we will have served this country. I urge the Members' support.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. LEACH].

Mr. LEACH. Mr. Speaker, this is an insipid brew that has just enough "sip" in it that I will feel compelled to support it. But the public must understand that this reform package places greater restraint on the Senate than the House, on Republicans than Democrats, and at the same time continues a system that gives stark advantages to incumbents over challengers.

As has been referenced by the majority, this Congress has a great history; yet the fact of a distinguished history should not blind us to the clear need for reform today.

The American people are understandably frustrated. One reason this is the case is that Madison's creation, the U.S. Congress, had less turnover in the last decade than Lenin's fraudulent single-party parliament, the Supreme Soviet.

It would be an exaggeration to analogize Congress to any Soviet institution. But it might not be going too far to suggest that a Congress that is unwilling or unable to change, that serves up the status quo, is as vulnerable to citizen rebellion as King George's Parliament was two centuries ago.

It is no accident reelection rates have been in the 98-percent range in recent years. The House, which our Founding Fathers intended and expected to respond quickly to change, has been stultified by a campaign system that gives too many advantages to incumbents and too little opportunity to challengers.

PAC's turn upside down the nature of our democracy. They indebted candidates, especially incumbents, who by more than a 10-to-1 margin receive PAC contributions, to the interest groups that provide the resources to influence the electorate rather than to the voters themselves. They also nationalize rather than localize elections. One of the oldest truisms of government—all politics is local—is no longer valid. Candidates, especially incumbents, have in the last two decades tapped into a national fundraising spigot that causes rural representatives, for instance, to rely on organized labor and big business largess that has little in common with the economic interests of their districts.

If the trend toward more expensive races and thus heavier financial obligations for candidates is not curbed, Congress will become a legislative body where the small businessman, the farmer, the worker, and the ordinary citizen are only secondarily represented.

As for the poor, more than any other group in our society, they have the greatest vested interest in campaign reform. In a system where money buys access, the voices of the moneyless become muffled by the clanging coins of political action committees.

What is needed is a campaign reform agreement analogous to international arms control agreements. Just as reducing arms on a mutual basis enhances national security, reducing conflicts of interest advances the public interest. If business and labor can be reined in equally, the public debate can concentrate on the merits of arguments rather than the size of campaign war chests.

Lord Acton, the British statesman, immortalized his public service with the observation that power corrupts, with absolute power tending to corrupt absolutely.

It strikes me that a fitting corollary to the Acton dictum is the notion that even more corrupting than aspiring to power is fear of losing it. That is why Congress is so hesitant to reform itself. That is why, despite speeches to the contrary, every serious effort at campaign reform has been thwarted. That is why this year's efforts, in particular on the House side, are so lacking in substance.

A second, more limited, corollary to the Acton dictum is that the longer power is held by a single party in a legislative institution, the greater its abuse. Lack of competition induces arrogance of both subtle and no-so-subtle natures. It is this arrogance of power that is responsible for the collapse in public confidence in Congress. If one believes, as I do, that it is competition in the political environment that reins in excess, it is reasonable to conclude that ending PAC's, putting on stiff spending limits, is a responsible goal. Unfortunately, this bill doesn't do it. It is an exercise in cynicism that will invoke a presidential veto.

The strength of the American system is the institutionalization of change. What the country needs to go forward is for Congress to look backward and return to old-fashioned values. We need a new competitiveness, legislative checks and balances, not stultified incumbency; serious restraints on campaign spending and political action committees, not more self-perpetuating political IOU's.

Let's quit the quarter steps and dare stride to comprehensive reform: Containment of spending, the abolition of PAC's, restriction of donations to those who can vote for a candidate, with the possible exception of matching small contributions with public funds.

Campaign reform is the unfinished business of a Congress in disrepute. Let's get serious instead of remaining steadfast in fractious, hortatory, nonstarting efforts of the nature served up this afternoon.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. CLINGER].

Mr. CLINGER. Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to the conference report.

This version of the bill, just like the earlier versions, fails to eliminate the built-in fundraising advantage held by incumbents.

Not a day goes by on Capitol Hill that a Member of Congress, or the staff, does not have some form of contact with a lobbyist who can influence PAC donations.

Is it surprising, then, that incumbents received more than 80 percent of all PAC contributions in the last election? Or that incumbents received more money from PAC's than from individuals in the last election?

If the majority of an incumbent's war chest comes from PACs, challengers will not be able to compete.

On the other hand, if most of a candidate's campaign funds were to come not from Washington, but from the district, the challengers would be on an equal footing with the incumbent.

If control of campaign financing were to be shifted from Washington to the real America, constituents would be more important than special interest groups. This place would be, in reality, the peoples' House.

It will not happen under this bill. Why not? Because this bill was drafted by good 'ole boys who were looking out for each other, who think of the House of Representatives as their own personal House. And they want to put up a barbed wire fence around that House.

I say it is time to unlock the front door and put out a welcome mat. Veto no, and then we can get started on a real reform bill.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Speaker, I yield three minutes to the gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. LIVINGSTON].

Mr. LIVINGSTON. Mr. Speaker, this legislation is the ultimate free lunch long championed by congressional Democrats. The bill has plenty of benefits, or payments to candidates, but it is painlessly free from a funding source.

The Democrats receive kudos from Common Cause and the League of Woman Voters for including public funding in their bill. The Washington Post commends the Democrats for providing public funding, or its equivalent in kind to candidates. The New York Times lauds the landmark legislation for its sensible public financing.

But the Democrats are reluctant to take credit for including public funding in their bill. Apparently, the Democratic leadership gained support from the conservative members of their caucus by promising that the bill did not contain public financing.

So, the Democrats want the credit for giving free money to politicians, but they do not want the responsibility for paying for it.

This bill is celebrated as a sweeping reform measure. However, none of the alleged reform in the bill will go into effect until estimated costs are offset by subsequent funding legislation, or a tax-raising bill.

Under the paygo restrictions of the Budget Enforcement Act, any increase in entitlement programs must be deficit-neutral. This bill sets the precedent for expanding entitlement programs with the stipulation that we'll pay for it later. The American people have had enough of this smoke and mirrors.

This conference report also includes a Sense of the Congress resolution that provides that the alleged funding source will not come from a general revenue increase, or from cuts in other programs, or from an increase in the Federal deficit. This would be comical if it were not so dishonest.

Funding for any Government program must come from either raising taxes, cutting other spending, or increasing the deficit. Magically, this conference report bill will do none of these unpopular things, but it will provide the popular benefits. This bill represents modern day alchemy—Democrat chemists have produced golden benefits for politicians, seemingly out of thin air. This is a miracle.

Just as Wimpy tells Popeye, "I'll gladly pay you on Tuesday, for a hamburger today," the Democrat leadership tells the American people that they will gladly find a funding source on Tuesday, in exchange for a public financing bill today. Old Popeye was smart enough to know that Wimpy was pulling a fast one, and the American people are smart enough to see through this free lunch scam.

While the inclusion of public financing is enough to force my opposition to the conference report, I also oppose the spending limits that are the cornerstone of this legislation. Spending limits will simply prevent a well-organized challenger from raising sufficient funds to overcome the numerous advantages enjoyed by incumbents.

Incumbents are already given the use of the frank, staff allowances, and media exposure which challengers do not enjoy. In the 1989-90 congressional cycle, Members of the House of Representatives spent $130 million on franked mail. By contrast, all of the challengers to these privileged incumbents spent a total of $37.9 million on their campaigns. How can a challenger compete when the taxpayers already provide incumbents with free mail that costs three times more than challengers spend in total.

By limiting the amount that a challenger can spend to compensate for these disadvantages, the Democrats protect their majority status in Congress. This conference report maintains advantages for incumbents, while limiting the support challengers are able to generate.

The Senate version of the bill prevented Senators from sending franked mass mailings during an election year. By including this provision, the Senate admitted that taxpayer-funded mass mailings in an election year are an unacceptable incumbent perk. By mistake, the original conference report applied this provision to the House, and yesterday, we came to the House floor to make sure that House Members were exempt from the franking ban. Apparently, franked mass mailings during an election year are an abuse on the other side of the Capitol, but they are a necessity on the House side. This is a very curious reform bill. How ironic that the only true reform was an error and was quickly corrected by the House Democrats.

In contrast, the Republican substitute that was defeated on the House floor last November would have required that a majority of a candidate's funds be raised from local district sources. Therefore, candidates would respond to their own constituents instead of special interests.

Second, we would have reduced the allowable PAC contribution from $5,000 per election to $1,000 per election, the same level currently imposed on individuals.

Third, we would have banned soft money contributions that are loopholes in the Federal election campaign law. The Democrat bill allows soft money from unions and maintains the widely used building fund loophole.

We all know that this conference report is going nowhere fast. President Bush clearly stated he would not sign a bill that contains public financing, spending limits, and treated the House and Senate differently. Well, this conference report contains all three objectionable elements and is headed for a certain veto.

Somehow, the Democrats think the American people support public financing and this bill represents a great campaign issue. Maybe they haven't seen the results of the other public financing program, the Presidential checkoff system. Last year, 19.5 percent of the American people elected to divert one of their tax dollars into the campaigns of Presidential candidates through the checkoff on tax forms.

This is a clear referendum on public financing. The House should represent the will of the American people and reject this second public financing scheme.

Mr. GEJDENSON. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. BROWDER], who has been of great assistance to us in fashioning this legislation.

Mr. BROWDER. Mr. Speaker, some people may get the idea that this is all a game, a political game of who can shout the loudest, about spending limits versus public financing, about bashing the Congress or bashing the President, about fair or unfair debate rules.

So let us be honest with ourselves and America. This particular bill is not going to become the law of the land. We will probably pass it and the President will probably veto it. But our action today, if not the final conclusive solution, is a critical step on the road to campaign finance reform. Today, with our vote, we will send a loud message about our dissatisfaction with the role of big money in congressional elections. As one of my homestate newspapers said:

Campaigns are not just about candidates. They are also about ideas. With all that campaign money choking off any real challenges, the competition of ideas so necessary for new policies is strangled. And the policies we do get are molded far too much by the wants of the money men.

I urge support for the conference report and spending limits on congressional campaigns.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from California [Mr. HERGER].

Mr. HERGER. Mr. Speaker, this conference report is not campaign reform, it is welfare for politicians. Among the outrages included in this bill is a $200,000 taxpayer-financed slush fund for congressional candidates. The American people oppose their tax dollars being used to pay for attack ads and polls by overwhelmingly checking no each year on their tax forms when asked if $1 from the Treasury should go to Presidential campaigns.

The $1 billion in political welfare checks that this bill expends in the next decade will come from the Federal Treasury, which already faces an annual $400 billion budget deficit.

Mr. Speaker, this bill is another congressional rubber check. In recent Presidential elections, millions of taxpayer dollars have gone to convicted felon Lyndon LaRouche, racial extremists, and other bizarre candidates. If this bill passes, you can bet they will have slates of candidates in subsidized congressional races as well.

Mr. Speaker, enough is enough. We need real reform that does not bilk the American taxpayer. Vote no.

Mr. GEJDENSON. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3½ minutes to the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. SLATTERY].

Mr. SLATTERY. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, I rise today to make some general observations about this legislation which I intend to support. I do so knowing that it is far from perfect, but I appreciate the effort that has been made to bring this legislation to this point.

When we engage in this debate about campaign finance legislation, it is important for us to see this issue in historical context. When we do so, it is helpful for us all in this country today to realize that the whole issue of campaign finance reform is a relatively recent issue. As recently as 25 years ago the public had little idea as to who was financing congressional campaigns.

In fact, if we go back into Presidential history, no one really knows for sure, who financed Franklin Roosevelt. No one knows who financed Harry Truman. No one knows who financed Dwight Eisenhower. No one knows who financed President Kennedy. No one knows who financed his campaign in the West Virginia primary in 1960. No one knew who was financing Lyndon Johnson, and no one really knew for sure as recently as the Nixon years who was financing President Nixon.

I make these historical observations only to make the point that perhaps the single most important bit of information that the public has a right to know and is ultimately very helpful in determining who they want to support in a political race is to know where their financial support is coming from. I contend that whatever we do in this area should be done in such a way as to make sure that the public has full disclosure, so they know that your support is coming from labor unions, or bankers, or rubber workers, or farmers, or lawyers, or whoever is helping you. That is what people ultimately need to know.

I would just also observe that there has been a lot of lambasting of political action committees. Let us keep in mind that the PAC's, as we know them today, were originally a reform. They were a reform designed to reduce the influence of large contributions coming from very wealthy people in this country. The theory was we could get more people involved making smaller contributions to a pot of money that would be contributed to a candidate.

I ask my colleagues: How can we pretend that we are going to eliminate PAC's when the first amendment to the Constitution clearly guarantees our citizens the right to freely associate, it guarantees them the right to free speech and free press. How can we restrict that right? I don't think we can. And if we say we are going to eliminate a PAC that represents rubber workers, or farmers, or teachers, then are we not just a step from saying we do not like the philosophy of the Republican Party or the Democratic Party so, therefore, we are going to restrict their right of freedom of expression?

I would suggest to my friends that we would do this country a great service if we would spend a little bit of time trying to inform our constituents and the citizens of this great democracy about the fundamental rights they have as citizens, and to remind them that today in this country the political system, as crazy as this may sound, is probably cleaner, more open and providing our citizens with more information about who is supporting political candidates than ever before in history.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to our distinguished Republican conference leader, the gentleman from California [Mr. LEWIS].

Mr. LEWIS of California. Mr. Speaker, I appreciate my colleague yielding the time.

Ladies and gentlemen of the House, I would suggest that all of us should indeed beware of a bill described as a reform when we are talking about an item like campaign finance, an item that is most important to incumbents in the Congress who so desperately, above and beyond all else, want to get reelected. The public does know that this Congress has been run for the last 38 years by the same party and the Democrat leadership and the Democrats sponsoring this bill are concerned about campaign reform because they want to assure that campaign finance legislation moves in a fashion to ensure their reelection.

They had to correct their bill yesterday because they discovered a mistake in it. The mistake was it cut out their ability to use taxpayer funds to send mass mailings in the 12 months preceding an election. Free pictures—free promotional mailing—they did not want to lose that perk, indeed.

As they went forward with fixing the campaign bill, they now have designed a provision that calls for taxpayer financing of campaigns in the future. Essentially they are saying look, on the one hand we want to be able to use the perks around here for making sure we are reelected by way of mass mailings in-house, and beyond that we also want to create the grandest of perks and is that they want taxpayers to pay for our campaigns.

This bill, in the name of campaign reform, is nothing but a design to secure incumbent reelection, and the incumbents who care most are the liberal Democrats who run this place.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the distinguished Republican whip, the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. GINGRICH].

Mr. GINGRICH. Mr. Speaker, let me say today we are seeing the real Democratic Party machine in action after all of the talk about reform. What we have is a proposal to have a new House bank with a new line of credit for incumbents. It is a very simple system.

First you go to some centers of influence—Hollywood, New York—you raise the $250 apiece, and then you go to the taxpayers through the Treasury and you raise the matching money, and then you go to the political action committees and you round it all out. You did not have to raise a penny in the district you represent, did not have to raise a penny from the normal working Americans.

Or, you set up a framework where every law firm in Washington makes sure that its associates get in the habit of coming to your reception at $250 apiece so that the taxpayer will then match them, so then you can go back to the PAC that the law firms represent and you can raise all of the money in Washington. It is bizarre that in a period when we are talking about reform, in a period when we are talking about perks, that we are going to create a brand new system of financing by the taxpayer to give the incumbents a dramatic new amount of money to allow them to lean on the taxpayer without ever having to go home. Now you can just go down to your favorite special interest, raise the first unit of $250 from the individual, get the money from the Treasury, and then go back to get the PAC money and never leave Washington. It is the perfect Democratic incumbent protection account. Or it could be called the Law Firm Empowerment Act. Do all of your business with a handful of law firms. They will give you the cash on the personal side, and they will make sure their PAC friends give you the cash on the PAC side and the Treasury provides the rest.

It is an astonishing example of why 73 percent of the country are sick of the current system and want radical change, and it is no wonder that people like Jerry Brown survive and keep moving, because this is an atrocity.

Mr. GEJDENSON. Mr. Speaker, how much time do I have remaining?

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. ECK-ART). The gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. GEJDENSON] has 9½ minutes remaining and the gentleman from New York [Mr. WALSH] has 11 minutes remaining.

Mr. GEJDENSON. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 30 seconds to answer the last two speakers.

What we have is a system where the gentleman from Georgia in his own race had to raise $1.5 million. He went out and got $433,000 in PAC money. I wonder if the gentleman does not think the system would be improved if instead of having to raise $1.5 million he could run his campaign on $600,000? I would yield to the gentleman a part of my 30 seconds for a response. Does the gentleman not think it would be better instead of having to go out and raise $1.5 million?

Mr. GINGRICH. Actually, I do.
Mr. GEJDENSON. And raise $600,000 instead of that? We have a limit. We have no public financing.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Vermont [Mr. SANDERS].

Mr. SANDERS. Mr. Speaker, why is campaign finance reform important? The United States today is one of two nations in the industrialized world without a national health care system; the gap between the rich and the poor is growing wider every day; and while the salaries of the chief executive officers of the major corporations continue to soar, 10 million of our workers are unemployed, 5 million of our children go hungry, and 2 million Americans sleep out on the streets.

Mr. Speaker, it is no secret that the President of the United States and the U.S. Congress do not represent the needs of ordinary Americans, and one of the major reasons for that is that we have an absurd approach to campaign financing which, to a very large degree, allows wealthy people, and major corporations to buy and sell politicians.

Mr. Speaker, as Common Cause has recently said, the legislation we have before us today is not perfect—but it does constitute real and fundamental reform. Most importantly, it limits the amount of money that can be spent in an election. What this means is that wealthy people, and candidates who are representing big money interests, will no longer be allowed to outspend their opponents 5 to 1 or 10 to 1. What it means is that there will be a level playing field, with all candidates having a fair shot at victory, and that is a victory for democracy.

Second, this legislation limits huge soft-money contributions from both political parties as well as special-interest groups. This is a real step forward. For those of us, for example, who are fighting for national health care, there is a real concern that the AMA and the insurance companies will spend millions of dollars in independent expenditures in order to defeat us, and prevent changes to our collapsing health care system. This is absurd and undemocratic, and this legislation goes a long way toward eliminating that practice.

Mr. Speaker, if the President vetoes this legislation, as he threatens to do, then all Americans should understand that he is far more interested in maintaining the political oligarchy of the rich, which presently exists, than allowing for a vibrant, responsive political system which represents the needs of ordinary people.

If President Bush, who is himself a recipient of millions of dollars of campaign contributions from the rich and the powerful, and tens of millions of dollars of public funds throughout his political career, vetoes this vitally important legislation, then the American voters should be prepared to veto him in November.

□ 1310

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Speaker, I yield 4 minutes to the distinguished Republican leader, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MICHEL].

Mr. MICHEL. Mr. Speaker and my colleagues, the majority's decision to bring this bill to the floor today is an example of bad timing unmatched since General Custer told his troops, "Hurry up, boys, or we will arrive late at Little Bighorn."

The House is lacerated with self-inflicted wounds, mocked and scorned by the American people for its insider excesses, and exactly at this historic moment, the Democrats tell us that what the taxpayer needs right now is the ultimate congressional insider's vision of campaign reform.

Does this bill really contain public financing? The League of Women Voters thinks so. They say the legislation would provide for the first time public financing for congressional elections. The New York Times has given its blessing to the Democratic bill, and that is like one establishment saluting another, and refers to sensible public financing.

The Democratic leadership, trying to please all factions, tiptoes around that question coyly whispering that only partial public financing is involved.

I leave it up to the philosophers and the lawyers to determine exactly when public financing is not public financing. But whatever it is, the Democrats will not tell us how they are going to pay for it. Maybe they want us to believe the tooth fairy will leave money under the pillows of candidates. Maybe we will all hit the lottery. Maybe the taxpayers will be gouged again. Maybe.

But why go on?

The majority used its muscle to force us to choose between two big opposing bills, instead of trying to find some kind of amicable middle ground.

PAC reforms, franking, local funding for campaigns, soft money, and spending limits, every one of those issues was denied a separate vote by the Democrats. Why not debate each one of those individually and have the decision rest with a majority vote of this House regardless of how it falls?

The majority, with a sneer that could have graced the lips of young Elvis, in effect said, "Our bill or no bill." No wonder the President is going to veto this measure.

You know as well as I do it is never going to become law. It is just a gesture. Even with the ground shifting beneath their feet, the majority cannot do anything but go through the same old motions.

In a way, that is kind of sad. Here the Democrats, the lords of the House for almost four decades, with their stewardship of the House under attack from all quarters, their confidence is in question, their ranks are in disarray, and yet they come back to us from conference with a bill that says to the American people, "Trust us insiders to take care of ourselves. We will figure out some way you can pay for it later."

This is exactly at the time that the American people are demanding participation and responsiveness, and the Democrats tell us they know best when it comes to campaign reform.

I tell you, the Big Daddy Democrats are striking again. I am certainly forced to vote against this conference report. I hope Members will join me in that opposition vote.

Mr. GEJDENSON. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. MAZZOLI].

Mr. MAZZOLI. Mr. Speaker, I rise in very strong support of the bill on the floor. I think it is a major step forward toward the ultimate of reform which I would hope to be the elimination of political action committees and the very severe reduction of the amount of contributions we, running for Federal office, can take.

I want to take a moment to salute the gentleman from Connecticut who has waged a wonderful battle over these many months and his colleague, the gentleman from North Carolina as well, because I really think they have done credit to this body.

This bill does limit spending. It does reduce the influence of political action committees. It does curtail the use of soft money and the practice of bundling.

I would like to mention to those who disparage the idea of public financing. I think it is the only real hope we have of returning politics to the people. The people have been evicted from the center of the process by big money and big special interests and big political action committees. The only way to return them to the heart of the process is to encourage small donations and to encourage the use of public financing.

I certainly support the bill and commend the gentlemen.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Maryland [Mr. GILCREST] for a unanimous consent request.

Mr. GILCREST. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that I go on the record as being against this bill. When I first ran my campaign, $300 that I earned went toward my primary victory, and I think public financing in all of its ramifications is not a good idea.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. ECKART). This is a more than a unanimous-consent request. A unanimous-consent request must be confined to a simple request to insert a statement in the RECORD and may not include a speech without yielding to time.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Speaker, I yield 6 minutes to the gentleman from California [Mr. THOMAS], the leader of the Republican task force.

Mr. THOMAS of California. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

Mr. Speaker, I want to compliment the gentleman for his long and arduous trip in participating in the task force, at least during the hearing stage.

As most of you know, Republicans were not allowed to participate in the structuring of the actual bill itself, nor were we able to participate in any meaningful way in the conference report.

I find it ironic, however, that the Democrats found a use for this gentleman from California, and his interest in the frank, to bail them out of one of the fundamental problems they have around here, and that is making mistakes. It was my pleasure to bail you out of a mistake you folks make in your conference report. What was the mistake? It accidentally treated the House and the Senate in exactly the same fashion.

They have been very, very careful to make sure that the House and the Senate are not treated in the same fashion in this bill.

You know, if this were only real reform, if all of the speeches that were being given about the bright new day was actually going to occur. But words are cheap, and we all know that the Democrats are not serious in the proposal that they are pushing to a veto.

Why? You have heard the Democrats talk about soft money, so-called sewer money, how bad it is. You would think that in the conference report soft money, money not eligible to be spent in a Federal election, would be banned. The truth? It is not banned. That portion that the Democrats tend to use more frequently is not banned. Union money is not banned. The so-called building fund using soft money is not banned.

The Republican proposal, on the contrary, banned soft money, no ifs, ands, or buts. It banned soft money.

If the Democrats were serious, they would ban soft money. They do not.

The Democrats propose to have the taxpayers pay for elections. Of course, not in this bill. There is no money in this bill. There is no provision for the requirement that money be present. It is a shell. It is an empty house. It is a gesture. It is for political reasons that they move this bill forward.

You know, folks say that there are only three things wrong with taxpayer-paid finances: First, the Democrats are not for it; second, Republicans are not for it; and third the people are not for it. But you have heard the Democrats stand up and say they are for it.

Let me tell you just 2 years ago, when an amendment was passed by a voice vote to include real taxpayer financing in the bill, the Democrats voted it down. The Democrats took it out of their bill.

Why? Because at that time they were trying to seriously fashion a package. Why in the world do they include it in this one? And remember there is no money in it. Because they know it is not going anywhere. They have fashioned it for political purposes so that the President will veto it and they have an issue.

They would much rather box with shadows than deal with substance, and that is what the American people are sick and tired of, and frankly we already have taxpayer-financed elections. Take a look.

□ 1320

This is a comparison, not of the incumbents' war chests, not of individual contributions to incumbents, not of political action committee money being sent to incumbents. Over on the far right, that $130 million is what you, the taxpayers, paid for franking by Members of Congress.

Take a look at the blue line. Not even $40 million possessed by all the challengers, both Democrats and Republicans from all sources. Yet they want to set up another structure that takes taxpayers' money to finance their election campaigns, when they are already overwhelmingly into the taxpayers' pockets for the frank.

Now, you are going to tell me that the frank is an essential communication device between Members and constituents, and that this is, after all, an appropriate thing for taxpayers to pay for. They should pay for mailings from Members of Congress. Take a look at the way in which Members mail.

Now, are you going to be shocked if I tell you that these low points in the cost of mailing occur in years in which there is no election? And are you going to be shocked if I tell you that the high points, including almost $80 million, $70 to $80 million in a single year is spent during the year in which there is an election? That this saw-toothed pattern of franking is based upon constituents' letters coming in and the Member mailing out in an ordinary fashion of communicating with the electorate?

You know it is hogwash. I know it is hogwash. They think they can fool you.

Yet again, the frank, that $130 million, that amount that completely wipes out any of the money the challengers now have, which is not even taken into consideration in their bill, is used for campaign purposes. And they stand up and tell you over and over again that what they are doing is because the American people want it done, that we want to control campaigns, that there is too much money being spent in the system. They complain about the time that is consumed because they have to go out and raise money.

Guess what? They spend literally all their time raising money outside their districts.

Why do we not do something real simple, like telling candidates they have to raise the money from the people in the districts they seek to represent?

And do you know what? You the American people agree. Take a look. Over 80 percent of the American people say yes, the bulk of the money should come from the district or at least the State.

Do you know how much is required to come from the district or the State in the Democrats' bill? Oh, you guessed it, zero. Not one dime.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. ECK-ART). The time of the gentleman from California [Mr. THOMAS] has expired.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 additional minutes to the gentleman from California.

Mr. THOMAS of California. Not one dime, Mr. Speaker, needs to come from the people who participate in the election.

Now, why wouldn't the Democrats create a structure which requires Members and candidates to try to raise at least the bulk of their money, a majority of the money, from people in the district? Do you know why? Because that would be real reform.

And do you know that all of their committee chairmanships, and all of the power that they possess back here in terms of running the place, and all of the gavels in their hands that produce money from PAC's rushing to them to try to influence the decisions that they make, would not be worth as much if they had to go to the district and ask an ordinary person to give them money. They want to keep a stacked deck. They want their power concentrated where it is, in their positions in Washington and elsewhere outside their districts. They can go to New York, and let New Yorkers give them money, because they are powerful.

The American people want them to go back home.

The Republican proposal said a majority of your money needs to come from the district, local control of campaign finance.

If you want something radical, this is it. They do not want something radical. They do not want something real. They want a partisan political gimmick which they are going to move forward to the President.

Oh, listen to their words, listen to their pleadings. They want to do it, if it is possible, with your money. They certainly do not want to do it with the money of the people back home, where they would have to go, back home, and be accountable.

Mr. Speaker, I would ask my colleagues, please, if you want to get serious, let us sit down and talk. Let us talk about the taxpayers' money already being spent in campaigns through the frank. Let us include that in the total, so that the challenger has a real opportunity.

And fundamentally and most importantly, if you want real reform, let us let the people back home decide how much money should be spent in an election. Let the people back home determine how much you get to spend. Let us have local control of campaign finance. Let us let a majority of the money come from the people who are, after all, going to vote for you. That is real reform. You ought to vote down this conference report.

Greenberg-Lake survey of March 3, 1990.

Mr. GEJDENSON. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MURPHY].

Mr. MURPHY. Mr. Speaker, I believe that both sides of the aisle really want to add additional campaign reform. I would like to remind my colleagues to my left that 14 years ago this House was operated by a Democratic Congress and we did have campaign reform. Members from both sides joined in that reform; however, I must oppose this particular conference report, and I say that it is the most unusual conference report that I have seen since I have been in the Congress.

It seems as though the conferees agreed to disagree. The Senate would have their rules and the House would have its rules, and they are not identical by any stretch. There are partial franking limits on the Senate and partial franking limits on the House. I think they should be coincidental. They should be identical.

We do not limit or reduce the PAC contributions for the House. The Senate says they will reduce PAC contributions. I think we should operate under identical rules.

We have different percentages of limits that may be spent in a Senatorial or a House election. I know the dollars are different, but the percentages are also different. When we come to percentages, the dollar amounts, $600,000 for a House election, is quite a lot of money, and particularly when we are asking the taxpayers to pay for the House elections and we are not asking the taxpayers to pay for the Senate elections.

I really would hope, Mr. Speaker, that the reformers on both sides would go back into conference, talk over the possibility of a compromise and come out with a better conference report.

Mr. GEJDENSON. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to my colleague, the gentlewoman from Connecticut [Mrs. KENNELLY].

Mrs. KENNELLY. Mr. Speaker, this is a good conference report. This is a necessary reform. And I want to commend my colleague, the gentleman from Connecticut, for all of his hard work and diligence in bringing this product before us.

As a former secretary of the State for Connecticut, I believe this is an important opportunity for us to solve some of the major problems in the current campaign finance system. This bill sets up a system for voluntary spending limits to control ever escalating campaign costs, reduces the role of political action committees and steers the system toward smaller individual contributions, and curbs so-called soft money which is the biggest loophole in the system today.

Mr. Speaker, no bill is perfect. Over the last 100 years Congress has periodically risen to the challenge presented by emerging problems in the current system of the time and the public's disenchantment with those problems, and renewed itself and the public's faith by rising to the challenge and implementing reform. Now is a time for renewal. Now is a time for hope. It is not the time to vote against these important strides forward. It is not the time for a Presidential veto.

I urge all of my colleagues to vote for this conference report. Let us all vote for reform.

Mr. GEJDENSON. Mr. Speaker, it is a great privilege for me to yield the remaining time to the majority leader of the House, the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. GEPHARDT], who has worked with us in the field to make sure we could be here today with this piece of legislation.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Missouri is recognized for 4 minutes.

Mr. GEPHARDT. Mr. Speaker, I listened with interest to my friend, the gentleman from California, who is an excellent debater and speaker, but I must say if I had his case I would do what he did, and that is try to confuse the issue.

The issue we all know here is how much money is spent on campaigns and how we can limit it, how we can get the amount of money to go down.

I do not think my friends want to talk about that on the other side, because I think they know they are on the wrong side of that issue, so they bring up other issues that are extraneous and irrelevant.

Dozens of newspapers and reform-minded civic organizations have endorsed this proposal because it replaces the foot race for financing with a competition of ideas. The New York Times has called this bill a breathtaking departure from the discredited business as usual. It is certainly that, and much, much more.

There are no subjects more susceptible to hyperbole and exorbitant rhetoric than the issue of campaign finance and the persistent belief that special interest contributions exert control over the legislative process.

I believe we serve with good people who want to do the right thing, and even as we disagree on basic matters of philosophy and principle, we reach those judgments independently and without the weight of improper influence.

But the contrary perception is deeply ingrained in the minds of the media and general public.

□ 1330

Mr. Speaker, if this bill was nothing more than a symbolic effort to contest those perceptions, our debate today would be a charade. The reality, however, is damning enough, and that is why we must act by passing a good bill to solve a real problem.

The costs of financing and conducting campaigns are exploding. Fundraising and campaigning have become marathons without end.

Legislating, thinking, and serving our people at home have been reduced to a series of sprints. Our citizens feel isolated and locked out of the process, and we feel insulated from the authenticity of their experience. We should have ended this dollar chase years ago, but now we have an opportunity, I would say a special opportunity to act and to restore faith in our democratic system.

The centerpiece of this proposal, the strongest and most effective election reform in a generation, is a cease-fire in the proliferating arms race of campaign spending.

We limit PAC contributions to campaigns, we encourage contributions by average citizens, we limit the influence of wealthy donors, and we reduce the costs of communicating with our citizens through television. In short, these reforms are real reforms and they offer the country what I think our people deserve and want more truly competitive elections.

It is easy to talk about reform and change, it is easy to posture and politic, but the American people are wearied by those who give voice to their frustrations without taking the necessary actions to end them.

If you want to be obstacles to reform, if you want to identify with the special interests, if you are dedicated to business as usual, if you favor money over ideas, side with the President and his $100,000 givers and vote "no" on this legislation.

But if you believe the voices of average citizens should ring loudest, if you want to depart from the current system which favors incumbents, if you are truly ready for change and I mean substantial change, and if you are prepared to make government believable again, vote for this legislation. It is right, it is needed, it is time. I urge adoption of the conference report.

Mr. THOMAS of California. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. Eck-ART). The time of the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. GEPHARDT] has expired.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. ZIMMER].

Mr. ZIMMER. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the conference report.

Mr. Speaker, the need to reform the Federal campaign finance system is indisputable. But the decision whether or not to vote for this legislation is a close call.

The main objective of campaign finance reform should be to eliminate the opportunity for any donor to make a contribution to a candidate that is so large that it creates an actual or apparent obligation on the part of the recipient.

The soft money loophole in existing law is the principal means by which contribution limits can currently be evaded. Unlike the campaign finance bill that earlier passed the House and which I opposed, this legislation effectively closes that loophole, which is a significant achievement in itself and a strong reason to support the entire package despite its shortcomings.

The bill contains a number of other salutary features. It curtails the undue influence of independent expenditures in a practical manner, given the constraints of the first amendment. It restricts the ability of wealthy candidates to overwhelm their opponents financially, and it prohibits the use of franked mass mailings outside of our congressional districts.

However, the bill still has serious deficiencies.

It offers only nominal reform with respect to PAC's. Setting a $200,000 aggregate limit for PAC contributions will have little effect on most incumbents, who raise little more than that now. And the bill does not reduce the excessive $5,000 contribution limit per PAC. As a result, powerful incumbents would be able to raise their $200,000 PAC allotment with ease from a mere 20 PAC's, each of which could still contribute $5,000 for the primary and $5,000 for the general election. Each of those lucky PAC's would have more, not less, relative importance to the candidate than it does now.

While the spending caps in this bill are relatively generous, flexible, and voluntary, they still put a challenger at a relative disadvantage because no challenger has all the resources that an incumbent has, such as the franking privilege, Government office space, official staff, and routine access to the media. Nor do these spending limits take into account the enormous differences in the cost of running a campaign in different media markets.

Unlike most of my Republican colleagues, I do not oppose public financing of elections in principle. Public financing can play an important role in a well-thought-out program that limits the clout of the largest contributors and that does not give an undue advantage to incumbents. For this reason, the Democrats' unconvincing claim that this bill does not provide for public financing strikes me as disingenuous at best, and the suspension of its provisions until its sponsors can cook up a funding mechanism could well make this legislation an exercise in futility.

Nevertheless, this vote poses the important question of whether limited reform is better than no reform. To me it is.

I will vote for this bill today with the hope that it will become the basis for a better bill in the future.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Florida [Mr. LEWIS].

Mr. LEWIS of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to the campaign finance reform conference report.

Mr. Speaker, I support campaign finance reform, spending limits, limiting PAC contributions, eliminating franked mass mailings in an election year, prohibiting franked mail outside current districts, and limiting the influence of soft money.

I support and practice campaign reform. That is precisely why I cannot support this bill. This so-called reform means the public financing of campaigns. Americans already have tax policies which caused the current recession—we do not need an additional excuse to spend taxpayers' money.

Today's agreement will require taxpayer dollars to foot the bill. Certainly, it would be easier to vote for supposed campaign reform and pat myself publicly on the back. But it would be an injustice to my constituents to send them a tax bill next year for this righteous act.

Polls show only one in five Americans willing to publicly finance campaigns. It is foolish to believe that this percentage will increase to support this shortsighted goal of public financing.

Therefore, I urge my colleagues to join me in opposing this bill. Campaign reform makes a great headline, but this bill proclaims much and offers little.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Florida [Mr. STEARNS].

Mr. STEARNS. Mr. Speaker, I submit my statement for the RECORD.

Mr. Speaker, the American people have just been witnesses to an embarrassing spectacle—the 1992 New York Presidential primary.

Two candidates hurled seemingly endless strings of accusations at each other and managed to encourage almost one-third of the New Yorkers who voted in 1988's Democratic primary to stay at home this year.

The truly appalling fact is that the American people helped finance this farce through matching campaign funds for Presidential candidates. In my town meetings, I have met citizens who mentioned literally hundreds of things this country needs. Not one has included taxpayer subsidies for negative campaign ads in that list. But, if we pass this bill before the Congress today that's exactly what we will have in every congressional district in the country.

Even the archliberal American Civil Liberties Union opposes this legislation. The ACLU notes that "the legislation's imposition of contribution and expenditure caps in return for partial public financing amount to an unconstitutional condition on freedom of speech." Worse than that, every member of this House knows the real goal behind this limitation on free speech—incumbency protection.

What do we really need in order to improve public participation in the political system?

Accountability and open debate in Congress. We also need the press to report the Members votes on a regular basis. Local funding, privately raised from each Members voters, to ensure candidates represent their constituents, not outside special interests.

Limitation on terms so that we have a citizen Congress, not a Congress of career politicians.

The majority's bill is simply food stamps for politicians. It fulfills the detached incumbent's wildest dreams of staying in office without having to earn the support of the people he or she represents; $200,000 of public funding for every member every election year, amounts to the ultimate perk.

The mass apathy and unwillingness to vote we have just witnessed in New York shows us that it's time to get serious about campaign reform. We cannot afford to become a Nation where good citizens are too disgusted to vote. But that's the road we're headed down when we detach average citizens from the campaign process and force taxpayers to finance elections.

Mrs. LLOYD. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the conference report on S. 3, the Congressional Spending Limit and Election Reform Act. This bill is a compromise which should afford every American greater access to the electoral process. It's not a perfect package but it does contain some elements which should go forth.

The conference agreement does not contain public financing which I strongly oppose. The bill is not funded through tax increases, increasing the deficit or taking money from other programs. None of the provisions of the act are effective until subsequent legislation is enacted providing a source of funds. The measure contains sense-of-the-Congress language that funds should not raise general revenues, cut Federal programs, or increase the Federal deficit. This is key language I strongly support.

Time and time again I have heard from Third District residents who feel shut out by the political system. They feel that high-priced campaigns have made it difficult for hard-working men and women, of limited financial means, to run for public office and make a real contribution to government. This has got to stop.

The American public wants to see spending limits put on campaigns and reforms made to campaign practices. This bill attempts to address these concerns. I hope that it will help bring more people into the system and encourage more viable candidates to run for public office.

The conference report controls campaign costs by establishing voluntary spending limits of $600,000 for House candidates per election cycle, and limits ranging from $950,000 to $5.5 million for Senate candidates, based on State population.

The bill limits the role of political action committees [PAC's] by curtailing PAC contributions to candidates. It provides that House candidates may raise up to one-third of the limit from PAC contributions, one-third in large individual contributions ranging from $250 to $1,000, and unlimited amounts of individual contributions less than $250 up to the election cycle limit.

Candidates who agree to spending limits will become eligible for up to $200,000 in matching campaign funds after raising a threshold of $60,000—10 percent of the election cycle limit—from individual donors. Only the first $250 of an individual contribution is matched. These provisions will be funded through subsequent legislation providing a source of revenue.

The conference report also prohibits the use by political parties of unregulated soft money for Federal elections, and caps such spending through a state-by-state population formula. Soft money which may indirectly influence the outcome of Federal elections but which is raised and spent outside of Federal election law. The measure requires all State and some local party committees to report all receipts and disbursements in connection with a Federal election.

Bundling, which involves collecting and forwarding checks for a specific candidate by an intermediate, such as a political action committee or political party, is restricted. New restrictions are also placed on independent expenditures. These provisions close unfair fundraising loopholes and widely enhance disclosure of all money raised and spent on Federal elections.

There is a strong, growing sentiment among the American people that among the many reforms in the way the House proceeds with its business should be to change the way elections are conducted. I agree. Solid, strict campaign finance reform must be put in place. I urge my colleagues to join with me in supporting its passage.

Mr. WEISS. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in strong support of the conference report on S. 3, the Congressional Spending Limit and Election Reform Act.

Americans regard this institution, and for their elected officials in general—hardly sterling in the best of times—has sunk to new depths. When people no longer trust in the integrity of those they have called forth to represent them, when the public sees the actions of our government as captive to private, parochial interests, the legitimacy of all that we do is called into question. When cynicism prevails, leadership becomes impossible.

The cloud of malaise that has descended over so much of American public life contains a silver lining, however, in that it offers us profound impetus for change. So powerful is this drive that across the Nation, Americans have shown themselves willing to abrogate their own constitutional right to choose their own representatives by succumbing to the siren song of the term-limits movement. Such measures, of course, merely attack a symptom, leaving the malady imposed by a convoluted, often corrupt system of campaign finance to fester and grow.

The bill before us today stands as the best chance we have had in years to improve the openness and integrity of our congressional elections. In this time of restlessness and discontent among our constituents, it is essential that we send this bill to the President's desk with enough votes to deter the veto that he has promised.

I have been an ardent and vocal supporter of campaign finance reform since I arrived in Congress 16 years ago. The act before us today, which includes public financing provisions similar to those instituted for Presidential elections in 1974, takes great strides to reduce the power and importance of money in congressional elections by curbing both the prerogatives of incumbency, and the ability of special interests to capture the loyalty of a Member. In 1990, the top spending House incumbent spent $1.5 million to hold his seat in Congress; sitting Members regularly outspend challengers by an average of 4 to 1. The mounting costs involved in a run for public office ensures that worthy challengers remain sidelined by the deep pockets of many incumbents. Meanwhile, sitting Members must spend night after night on the reception circuit, tin cups in hand, seeking the favor of Washington lobbyists.

The act before us today caps overall campaign costs at $600,000 for House candidates who accept the bill's voluntary limits, ensuring that challengers and incumbents will meet each other on equal terms. In Senate races, the ceiling ranges from $950,000 to $5.5 million, depending on the size of the State. Candidates will spend less time chasing money, and more time addressing the issues facing our country, and their communities.

This act will also curtail the influence of big, private interest money by limiting PAC and large donor contributions to no more than 20 percent of all funds raised by Senate candidates, and 33 percent in House races. At the same time, the injection of matching funds underscores the notion that an election truly is a public event, and a responsibility in which we all must share. Limiting the match to small, individual contributions of no more than $250, we will once again open the system to ordinary, working people. Wealthy candidates, meanwhile, would be forced to limit personal expenditures to no more than 10 percent of total general election limits.

Some of the more egregious and inventive efforts to sidestep existing Federal campaign laws would be eliminated under the new act. Loopholes allowing for the flow of bundled contributions and the back channels through which unregulated, unreported political soft-money flows will be closed. To guarantee the success of these steps, the bill expands disclosure requirements for campaign contributions, and sharpens the teeth of the Federal Election Commission by enhancing its enforcement authority.

Mr. Speaker, the American people have repeatedly expressed a will and a desire to reform the system by which we elect our leaders. The current climate of distrust and frustration stands as a warning to us all about the state of our democracy; it has also given us a lever to advance a critical reform that has been bottled up in this house for a decade and a half. I urge Members on both sides of the aisle to lend their strong support to this conference report, the most effective piece of campaign reform legislation we have seen in years.

Mr. PANETTA. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of S. 3, the Congressional Campaign Spending Limit and Election Reform Act of 1992. I would like to commend Chairman ROSE and Chairman GEJDENSON of the Task Force on Campaign Finance Reform for their leadership and work on this important legislation.

The integrity of the Congress is under attack from the administration, the press, and—most importantly—the voters. Many in this body have responded to these attacks by joining the bandwagon of Congress bashing. I believe this type of response is ultimately self-defeating and will haunt all in this body by further degrading the reputation of Congress.

Voters are frustrated with what they view as an insulated and unresponsive Federal Government. Voters are disillusioned by an electoral process which alienates them in favor of the wealthy donor and the special interests. It is my belief that the single most important step the Congress can take to restore voter confidence in the government and voter enthusiasm in the electoral process is to enact strong campaign finance reform legislation.

As such, I feel that it is unfortunate that the Congress and the President were unable to reach a consensus on an approach for campaign finance reform. In an election year, perhaps that is an unrealistic goal. I would hope, however, that both the Democrats and the Republicans would share the common goal of enacting real reform that will serve to restore the trust of the American people in government.

To restore this trust we must stop the rising costs of campaigns, limit contributions of special interest and the wealthy, and provide voters with a meaningful role in campaign fundraising. S. 3 achieves these goals.

First, S. 3 seeks to control campaign costs by establishing a voluntary spending limit of $600,000 per election cycle for House races. Capping campaign expenditures is perhaps the most important and long-lasting reform which the Congress can enact. The $600,000 limit will help stop the ever-increasing money chase for both incumbents and challengers, and level the playing field for challengers by allowing them to run competitive, even-matched races.

Second, S. 3 reduces the influence of special interests and wealthy donors in House elections by limiting amounts political action committees [PAC's] and large donors may contribute to House candidates. These limits will also serve to encourage individual participation in the campaign by bolstering the importance of small individual donors in House campaigns.

Third, the legislation helps level the playing field for challengers and reduce the time candidates spend fundraising by offering matching funds to candidates that abide by the voluntary spending limits. Matching funds will also encourage candidates to seek local, small donor contributions necessary to qualify for matching funds. This will provide candidates with the incentive to raise contributions from local, small donors without raising constitutional concerns by statutorily requiring in-district fundraising.

Incidentally, as chairman of the House Budget Committee, I would like to clarify that S. 3 does not violate pay-as-you-go procedures as it would not result in any direct spending. None of the benefits or other provisions of the bill would take effect until subsequent legislation is enacted to provide the necessary funding.

It is my hope that the bill's combination of the contribution limits and emphasis on small donor donations will serve to rejuvenate voters' participation and trust in our electoral system. While it is regrettable that this bill will not be passed with bipartisan support, I am very pleased with the Congress' progress on this important legislation. The passage of this legislation marks the first time for nearly two decades that the Congress has passed strong campaign finance reform legislation. If the bill is not enacted in this Congress, at a minimum it will provide us with a strong base to work from next year—hopefully with the participation of the Republican Members of Congress.

So I encourage my colleagues to join me in supporting the passage of S. 3. The House must act on this opportunity to show the American public that we hear their concerns, that we understand their frustration, and that we are serious about campaign finance reform. Let us turn the attention of the Congress and the American people forward through the adoption of this important reform legislation.

Mr. LAGOMARSINO. Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to the conference report on S. 3. This bill, which is called the Campaign Spending Limit and Election Reform Act of 1992, is a sham. It's a hollow shell masquerading as reform. It's nothing more than a cynical attempt to pacify the public's well-justified demand for campaign reform, which has gone unheeded by this body for the past decade.

For proof of the lack of serious purpose behind this report, you need look no further than the provision that says nothing in the bill takes effect unless Congress passes subsequent legislation to fund it. What kind of reform is that—a dubious promissory note from Congress? And the reform that this promissory note will fund is nothing less than having the taxpayers pick up the tab for our reelection campaigns, or as the Democratic leadership prefers to call it, public financing, a scheme which has been rejected by the voters time and again.

Mr. Speaker, the public is fed up with Congress, and rightly so, for lining its nest with perks. Are we to enact yet another perk, direct taxpayer financing of our campaigns? I think not. The President has said he will veto this bill, and we should save him the trouble by defeating it here today.

What we need to do, as I said on this floor last December when we first considered this legislation, is to enact true campaign reform, as embodied in the substitute offered by the Republican leader, BOB MICHEL, which includes three key reforms: First, to require that at least half of a candidate's funds be raised from individual contributors living within his or her district; second, to cut the limit on political action committee [PAC] contributions from $5,000 to $1,000; and third, to ban so-called soft money contributions to State political parties.

Failing that, we should reject this proposal, which is a reform in name only.

Mr. KLECZKA. Mr. Speaker, I would like to take a few moments to share with my colleagues some thoughts on the campaign finance reform conference report we are now debating.

As a member of the task force which has been examining this issue for the past 12 months, as well as a member of the conference, I would first like to compliment the chairman, SAM GEJDENSON, and ranking member, BILL THOMAS, for all of their efforts in this very complex area of the law, as well as CHARLIE ROSE, chairman of the full House Administration Committee.

While the gentleman from Connecticut and the gentleman from California quite often had legitimate differences of opinion on how to approach this topic, I believe the task force successfully completed its mission of examining the countless suggestions as to how we can restrain the power of money as a force in our electoral process.

Mr. Speaker, when the task force held its first hearing last March, I stated that the goal of this process should be to craft a new system of campaign financing which will meet three goals. First, curtail the campaign money chase; second, reduce the influence of special interests; and third, stimulate vigorous campaigns. I believe this legislation meets these goals, and the conference report has my full support.

To say this bill has my support is not to say this is a perfect bill. This is not a perfect bill, and I doubt anyone, including the gentleman from Connecticut, would argue that it is. The most resounding lesson we learned from our Member Day hearings—during which every Member was invited to share their views with the task force—is that there are 435 people in this Chamber who are experts in campaign financing, each having their own ideas on how to improve the system.

Despite differences of opinion, it is clear that comprehensive reform with spending limits is long overdue. The measure before us is a solid first step. Since 1972, total expenditures in congressional elections has increased by more than 600 percent. During the last election cycle, average winning House candidates in competitive races had to spend more than $500,000. This high cost not only eliminates your average citizen from running for office, but it forces many elected officials to engage in perpetual fundraising.

Mr. Speaker, recently released census data shows that voter participation is continuing to drop. It has become clear that the large sums of money spent in congressional elections have created an appearance of corruption in the electoral process. The general public is falling under the assumption that dollars at a fundraiser are more important than their votes on election day.

The conference report's limit of $200,000 in PAC contributions and $200,000 in large contributions, for House elections, allows for competitive races while reducing the influence of special interest money.

Unfortunately, we are considerably restricted by the 1976 Supreme Court decision, Buckley versus Valeo, which ruled that limitations on campaign contributions and spending were constitutional only when voluntary. The only effective way to induce candidates to accept these limits, therefore, is to provide them with incentives—namely matching funds.

A system of spending limits and public financing is not some radical idea the authors of this bill thought up last week. This is the system which now funds our Presidential elections. It has also worked in elections for legislative, executive, and judicial seats in my home State of Wisconsin since the early 1970's. This system has helped reduce the influence of money on these elections.

Some of my colleagues are charging that a public financing system will be perceived as the ultimate in congressional perks—using taxpayer dollars to pay for their campaigns. Let me state very clearly, nothing could be further from the truth.

Nonpartisan groups such as the League of Women Voters, Common Cause, Ralph Nader's Public Citizen have all contacted me urging my support of public financing. Mr. Speaker, if SAM GEJDENSON somehow convinced Ralph Nader to support a bill which would use taxpayer dollars for incumbent benefits, he must be the most persuasive individual to ever step foot in this district.

Public financing is not an incumbent protection program, but the only way that truly effective campaign reform can be brought about in congressional races.

The President has already stated he will veto legislation containing public financing. I find this disturbing, given the fact he used taxpayer dollars and public financing to win in 1988, and will most likely accept public financing in 1992.

The public is justifiably concerned over the way elections are run in the United States. Low voter turnout and the extraordinary talk of limitations on the terms of Members of Congress signal the erosion of the confidence the American people have in our electoral process.

A vote for this conference report is a vote to restore this confidence.

A vote for this conference report is a vote to return congressional campaigns to barbecues and rallies and a $10 contribution from the guy down the street, rather than $500-a-plate breakfasts for special interests.

A vote for this conference report is a vote for fairness for incumbents, fairness for challengers, but most importantly, fairness for the American people.

I hope you will join me in supporting this legislation.

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. Speaker, today our Nation is awash in political cynicism and apathy. Americans are frustrated by the influence of big money in politics. Congress has a responsibility to rebuild the people's faith in our electoral system. I rise in support of the Congressional Campaign Spending Limit and Election Reform Act of 1992 which will be a giant step forward.

High costs are changing the way campaigns in this country are run. The costs of campaigns are rising faster than the rate of inflation. Aggregate costs of House and Senate campaigns have raised by four times since 1976. These high cost are discouraging talented people from running for office. And these costs are creating disgust and doubt among the voters. It would be tragic if only those capable of raising or giving their campaigns large sums of money were the ones running for office. And it's going that way.

Yet, those of us who wish to change the system are caught in a bind. To get into position to reform the system, we must get elected. And to get elected, we must raise money.

I have joined with one of my primary election opponents to challenge our third opponent to abide voluntarily by the provisions of this bill. This third opponent has declined. I urge my colleagues to issue similar challenges to their opponents. Let the voters know our real stand on the issue of campaign finance reform.

This legislation leads us in the direction of reform in several ways.

First, it places voluntary spending limits on campaigns. Just as we must control health care costs, we must control skyrocketing campaign costs. Second, by limiting PAC contributions, we increase the importance of small donors, placing campaigns back in the hands of the American people.

Third, by limiting a candidate's own contribution to her or his race, we prevent wealthy individuals from buying races.

Fourth, this bill will limit the abuses of soft money in Federal campaigns.

Today, by voting for this landmark bill, we have the opportunity to rebuild the voters' faith in the electoral system. I truly believe that most of us run for office because we want to make a positive difference for our district, our State, and our Nation. Yet because of the system, people fear that our agenda is for the special interest money that comes into campaigns. This perception is debilitating to a democracy.

By voting "yes" for campaign finance reform, we move toward a better and brighter day for electoral politics.

Let me also speak for a moment as a woman who believes we need more women in the House and Senate. There is no doubt that the system as it is currently structured discourages many women from running for office because historically women have had a harder time raising the huge contributions. A vote for this bill is a vote to open the door to the many women who I believe are desperately needed in today's America.

Mr. BEILINSON. I rise in support of the conference report on S. 3, the Congressional Campaign Spending Limit and Election Reform Act, but I do so with the strong hope that this measure is only a first step toward enacting the more far-reaching changes that our campaign finance system really needs.

The gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. GEJDENSON], the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. ROSE], and the other members of the House Administration Committee deserve a great deal of credit for the work they have done to get us where we are today on this difficult and complex issue. But, unfortunately, the product before us is far too modest. While it includes some important provisions—most notably, a curb on soft money—it does not do nearly enough to solve the major problems with our system: the large role of special-interest contributions, the high cost of campaigns, the huge amount of time candidates spend raising money, and the advantages the system gives to incumbents over challengers. Unless far more is done to solve those problems, we will not succeed in restoring public confidence in our electoral process and in Congress.

First, S. 3, which allows candidates to accept as much as $200,000 in political action committee [PAC] contributions per election cycle, does not do nearly enough to reduce the role of special interests in congressional campaigns. We ought to be eliminating PAC contributions altogether.

Second, the $600,000 voluntary per-cycle spending limit in S. 3 is too high, especially since that figure is augmented by the mailing discounts and the higher limit available to candidates who have close primary elections. It is possible for even the most highly contested elections to be waged without spending more than a few hundred thousand dollars, so a more reasonable limit would be $400,000 per cycle.

Third, S. 3 does not do much to reduce the amount of time candidates spend raising funds; and, by allowing candidates to accept $200,000 in PAC contributions, it virtually guarantees that incumbent candidates, in particular, will continue to raise money from Washington-based special interests rather than from the people they represent.

And, fourth—again, because a sizable amount of PAC contributions are permitted—this bill does very little to make House elections more competitive. PAC's gave 13 times as much money to House incumbents as to challengers in the 1990 elections. Unless PAC contributions are more tightly curbed—or better yet, completely banned—we will not have eliminated one of the key impediments to having more competitive elections.

Finally, as a strong supporter of public financing of campaigns, I am disturbed that this measure takes such a small step in that direction, and that its provisions for subsidies for candidates who accept spending limits are dependent upon enactment of a subsequent measure. I am further concerned that S. 3 severely limits our options for raising the funds needed to pay for the subsidies.

Mr. Speaker, S. 3 is an important first step toward reforming our campaign system. But this issue must not be put to rest with the passage of this legislation. I urge my colleagues to continue pursuing a better campaign finance system than the measure before us will produce.

Mr. MARKEY. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in strong support of the conference report on S. 3, the Congressional Campaign Spending Limit and Election Reform Act. Passage of the conference report will ensure that the arms-race approach of spending in congressional campaigns comes to an end. By all measures, confidence in the political process and in public servants has dropped to record lows as the cost of congressional campaigns has skyrocketed and the importance of political action committees [PAC's] has increased. Only by dramatically changing the system, as S. 3 does, can we hope to reclaim the public's trust.

The combination of spending caps, restrictions on political action committee contributions, and public financing included in the conference report will create a system that will restore public confidence and trust in our political campaigns. Key to this transformation will be the coupling of voluntary spending with other reforms intended together to keep the cost of congressional campaigns within reason. Our constituents are disgusted by million dollar campaigns for House seats made necessary by the lack of comprehensive campaign finance reform. This legislation will keep spending under control. Furthermore, there will be real incentives both to adhere to the spending limits and to raise money through individual contributions, rather than by courting PAC's. The rise of PAC's, more than any other single factor, has led to public fury over the way in which we raise and spend campaign funds. I am pleased that the conference report will help reduce the role of PAC's but as one of a handful of Members who refuse PAC contributions altogether, I think it should be possible to go further as long as additional PAC restrictions are linked to other reforms.

Finally, the bill deals effectively with the issues of independent expenditures, soft money and bundling. Mr. Speaker, the conference report is truly landmark legislation, deserving of our support, and its author, Sam Gejdenson, deserves our thanks for a job well done.

I am also pleased that S. 3 includes a requirement that Presidential candidates participate in debates as a condition of receiving public campaign funds—a provision I have advocated for years. This section was added by the Senate in an amendment offered by Senator Bob GRAHAM. Senator GRAHAM and I have offered the National Presidential Debates Act, which is identical to section 803 of the conference report, in both this and the previous Congress. The bill is currently designated H.R. 1112/S. 491.

Debates represent one of the few instances in a campaign when voters are able to hear from the candidates themselves, in their own words, rather than through the thicket of speechwriters, spin doctors, and journalists that too often shape public perceptions of the candidates. This year's Presidential primaries have once again shown debate viewers that regardless of how well coached or prepped a candidate may be prior to taking the stage, he or she is alone, unfiltered, and eye-to-eye with the voter once the debate begins. And that's the way voters like to judge candidates.

The public overwhelmingly wants real debates, but with each Presidential election they have become less of a sure thing. Debateless elections, like those from 1964 until 1976, could happen again.

When our constituents complete their 1991 income tax returns over the next week, fewer than ever will decide to check the box that directs $1 to the Presidential Election campaign fund. And we should not be surprised by their decision, when they see their money spent on negative campaign advertising and issue-less photo opportunities. If Presidential candidates are going to continue to take $100 million in taxpayer money from this fund to run their campaigns, then there ought to be some assurance that they will stand up on stage, face their opponent, and engage in a true discussion of the issues. The American electorate deserves no less.

Mr. Speaker, I urge my colleagues to support this excellent piece of legislation and urge the President to sign the bill.

Mr. RAY. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in support of S. 3, the Congressional Spending Limit and Election Reform Act.

I will vote for this bill today because I believe it is important to enact reform in our campaign and elections system. However, I want to state that I am adamantly opposed to any taxpayer funds being used to finance campaigns. This legislation does not include any reference to how it will fund any envisioned benefits. However, it does include language expressing the sense of Congress that funding should not provide for a general revenue increase, reduce spending for existing programs, or increase the deficit.

We have a $400 billion deficit, and we should not put in place a public financing system to elect Members of Congress. This legislation does not do so, and that is why I am supporting it.

Public financing is a fight which will be fought on another day. In the meantime, I believe it is important to put in place the reforms which this bill includes. It puts in place voluntary spending limits and limits on the contributions from political action committees. The bill increases enforcement authority of the Federal Election Commission and enhances disclosure of all campaign contributions and expenditures. These are positive changes which deserve our support.

Mr. Speaker, this is not a perfect bill, but it is a step in the right direction. I will vote for S. 3 today, but I am making my colleagues aware that I will not support public financing.

Mr. POSHARD. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the conference agreement on S. 3, for I see it as a modest step in the right direction to reform our system of financing campaigns.

There is no reform more needed in this country, to bring back the sense of respect and trust between those of us who are elected representatives and the people who sent us here, than campaign finance reform.

Congress is currently engaged in an effort to purge a variety of perks and practices which no doubt should be abolished. But I would suggest that campaign finance reform goes much further to correct the abuses of money and incumbency than any of those measures could ever hope to achieve.

I come here as a member who at one time accepted political action committee donations. I came to Congress and found that despite what I had told those groups about how I would vote on a particular bill, that vote might not be in the best interest of the country, based on the contents of the legislation and the needs of the nation at the time.

I found a system that wasn't working, and rather than living with it, I decided to try and change it, and have declined PAC contributions ever since. The limits on PAC contributions in this bill are worth supporting, and I think it's appropriate they apply regardless of whether a candidate accepts voluntary spending limits, but we can and should do much more to reduce the influence of special interest donations.

The voluntary spending limits included in S. 3 are still well above what it takes most people to win an election, and are still much more than the average challenger can manage to raise and spend. While a voluntary $600,000 limit is better than unlimited spending, again, we can and should do much more to reduce the influence of money on our campaign and political system.

I also do not see enough reform in the area of franking. I voted yesterday against sending this bill back to conference to correct a technical mistake, which had the effect of banning mass mailings of House members during an election year. That has been substituted by a ban against mailing into another congressional district, an outrageous practice which should have never been allowed in the first place, but a far better approach was the one mistakenly included in the bill. In fact, I have introduced legislation to go one step further, and eliminate newsletters altogether. If we're really serious about reform and eliminating perks, we'll cut out the hundreds of thousands of dollars available to incumbents to send out bogus newsletters.

Mr. Speaker, I have been a candidate for public office on several occasions. I have at times enjoyed a fundraising advantage, and I have been outspent many times over. In each circumstance, I found it really didn't make the difference. Of course, it's easier to run when you have greater financial resources. But when I talk about reform, I'm not suggesting candidates should spend no money at all. Candidates have a right, perhaps an obligation, to raise money from people who believe as they do on the issues. I simply think we can move away from the consultant dominated, television driven campaigns we see today, and revert back to the personal touch.

People are waiting to hear from us what we will do about educating their children, taking care of the sick and elderly, providing decent jobs and housing, and reducing the Federal debt which threatens our future.

My colleagues, I rise today in support of this bill because it is truly the kind of reform we need. We need to allow people with good ideas and the desire to serve to throw their hat in the ring and see what happens. But we should not rest on this achievement alone. More of us should, voluntarily, limit our spending and acceptance of special interest donations. More of us should, voluntarily, reject the supposed wisdom of consultants and negative campaigns and get back to telling the people what they deserve to know.

I have great faith in this body, in my colleagues with whom I am so privileged to serve. I know we have the capacity to achieve great things. I urge us to listen to the people of this country, who are crying out for reform, and follow their lead. This is a justifiable first step.

Mr. OLIVER. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to strongly support campaign finance reform.

While people are angry at the abuse of perks, the central reform facing this Congress is campaign finance reform. While this bill is not perfect, there is agreement in both Chambers.

We need to restore people's trust in their government. Unemployment is back over 9 percent in my district in western Massachusetts. People are out of work, health care costs are crippling our small business, and education lags farther and farther behind our economic competitors. It is essential for politicians to put aside personal political interest and put the American people's interest first.

By limiting campaign costs and the influence and power of large wealthy contributors, by reducing the amount of time spent on fundraising and by guaranteeing a level playing field for candidates for Congress, this campaign finance reform legislation makes real changes in our political system.

Let's pass this bill and get on with putting the interests of the American people first.

The President should stop posturing about change and sign this bill. Political posturing, and empty rhetoric does very little in bringing about change. This bill controls campaign costs with some public financing. The President is opposed to public financing for congressional campaigns. Yet, once this presidential campaign is concluded, the president will be the single greatest benefactor of the public financing.

I am very pleased that restrictions against mass mailing into new congressional districts are in place. We were all elected to represent our present districts for a full term and its our duty to continue to communicate without constituents. Mass mailing into districts Member of Congress don't yet represent would merely be for political gain at taxpayer expense and that's wrong.

The time for real campaign reform is now, the American people want it and deserve nothing less.

Mrs. ROUKEMA. Mr. Speaker, I rise in reluctant opposition to the conference report on the Congressional Campaign Spending Limit and Election Reform Act of 1992.

My opposition is truly reluctant because I firmly believe this outmoded system is badly in need of reform. While this legislation is an improvement on current law, it falls far short of what is necessary to end the ceaseless money chase that campaigns have come to represent and remove the perception of the people that the special interests run the Nation.

My record demonstrates a history of strong support of comprehensive campaign finance reform. Clearly, this system needs meaningful limits on political action committee [PAC] spending, restrictions on out-of-State contributions, and restrictions on so-called soft money, if not an outright ban. I heartily endorse the prohibition of soft money contained in the legislation before us. This legal laundering of campaign contributions through the State and local parties diminishes ability of everyday people to participate in the electoral process.

When we first considered this bill in the House last fall, it was hailed as the first comprehensive effort to set voluntary spending limits, restrict PAC contributions and provide public funding for campaigns in order to set a level playing field for challengers. However, upon further review, the bill lives up to few of these expectations.

I do agree that the public financing proposal contained in the legislation did represent substantial progress. However, the financing offered no flexibility to compensate for the inherent powers of incumbency. And most important, the financing mechanism was not a financing mechanism at all—just a concept with no direction as to where the Federal funding would come from. I cannot, in good conscience, endorse such a blank check for the taxpayers to pick up later. Finally, I would add the associated spending limits were across the board and ignores the stark differences in the cost of campaigning between geographic areas, that is, northern New Jersey versus the Midwest.

In addition, while the bill claimed to limit PAC expenditures, in practice it would have little effect. Under the legislation as passed, Members could receive no more than $200,000 in total PAC contributions per election. However, in a typical election, most candidates do not raise $200,000 from PAC's. I maintain that we should move toward real PAC reform by cutting individual PAC contribution limits from $5,000 per election to $1,000. We should also require that at least 50 percent of all money raised must come from a candidate's home State.

Finally, it is my conviction that the cost of campaigning is out of control. Special interest money is corrupting the system and is contributing to the gridlock in Congress. Unfortunately, this being the election season, true comprehensive reform is not in the cards.

It is my intention to work with the leadership to enact comprehensive reform in the next Congress, well in advance of the next election. Unfortunately, in the present political climate, that goal is today beyond our reach.

Mr. STUDDS. Mr. Speaker, in an editorial in yesterday's paper, the Boston Globe wrote that today's vote on campaign finance legislation "will show whether all the talk about reform in Washington is serious."

The Globe is absolutely right. The public is angry, it is cynical. And rightfully so. Washington is perceived to be in gridlock, with the critical problems facing our Nation—the economy, health care, education—remaining unaddressed.

We cannot tolerate this state of affairs. One of the reasons I ran for Congress was to reform the seniority system, which valued longevity over competence. We were successful in changing that system, and we must make every effort now to make the necessary reforms in the way we operate that will allow us to effectively and efficiently perform our jobs.

Yes, we must change the way the House does business. Yes, we must streamline the way we set the Federal budget. This place is indeed in need of a variety of reforms, but unless we make drastic changes in our system of campaign financing, we will have missed a large part of the problem.

Americans have lost faith in the electoral process. They have concluded that the successful pursuit of public office is limited to those who are independently wealthy. And, to a growing extent, they are right.

Campaigns have become extraordinarily expensive. To pay for them, too many candidates are forced to spend a lot of their time chasing money, rather than focusing on—and solving—the critical problems facing our Nation.

If we are to restore the trust of the American voter, we must level the playing field. We must take action now to stop the rising costs of campaigns, to limit contributions from wealthy donors of all kinds and give small contributors a much more important role in campaign financing.

The bill before us today will do just that. First, it establishes a voluntary spending limit of $600,000 per election cycle. As an incentive to participate in the voluntary spending limits system, candidates would be given reduced postal rates for mailings to voters. All candidates would be entitled to lowest available television advertising rates.

Second, candidates who abide by the spending limits would be entitled to matching funds—matching contributions of up to $250 from individuals, to a maximum of $250,000. These matching funds would reduce the influence of special interests, cut down on the enormous time spent fundraising, and offer additional resources to viable challengers.

Third, the bill would limit PAC contributions and prohibit House candidates from accepting more than $200,000 from major donors—individuals who contribute over $250. And to prevent anyone from buying a congressional seat, it would bar candidates from donating more than $50,000 in personal wealth to their own campaign.

Mr. Speaker, this bill will help restore public confidence that Congress is representing the interests of those who elect them, not those with the deepest pockets. It will put campaign fundraising in its rightful place—an unavoidable chore, but not one that unconscionably detracts from the time we must devote to critical national issues and to addressing the needs of our constituents.

As an original cosponsor, I want to join with Common Cause, Public Citizen, and Citizen Action in urging my colleagues to support this conference report, to allow us to get on with the business of governing. And if George Bush vetoes this far-reaching, much-needed reform legislation, he will have to answer to the American people in November.

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of S. 3, the Congressional Spending Limit and Election Reform Act. This legislation is a major breakthrough in how congressional campaigns are conducted, and should be signed into law.

Not since the Campaign Reform Act of 1974 has Congress and the Nation had such an opportunity for meaningful reforms. The conference report before us combines many of the strongest elements of the House and Senate bills. Under the agreement, voluntary spending limits are established for House and Senate candidates. In addition, the legislation sets strict limits on the total contributions that a candidate can receive from special interest political action committees [PAC's] and from big-dollar individual contributors. Limiting independent expenditures, restricting soft money, and eliminating leadership PAC's are other important provisions in this landmark legislation.

Mr. Speaker, I have long advocated the philosophy that political campaigns should be the campaign of competing ideas and not the campaign of media sound bites. S. 3 will help to reestablish that guiding principle.

Frankly, this legislation is not perfect. I personally believe that the spending limit for House candidates established in this legislation is much too high. I would have preferred a lower limit. In my own State of Minnesota, a voluntary spending limit of $400,000 has been established for congressional elections. While my own campaigns have never even approached that spending amount, it is a more reasonable upper spending limit.

In addition, it is unfortunate that this legislation does not do more to address independent expenditures. These campaign expenditures by individuals or special interest groups are not limited by current law or by the pending legislation. This is the result of the unfortunate Supreme Court decision of Buckley versus Valeo. That decision overturned limits on independent expenditures and granted constitutional freedom-of-speech protections to the ability to spend money. I am certain that many of my colleagues have seen independent expenditures at work. Too often this type of campaign spending has been negative ads, attacking an individual candidate. Since this is an independent expenditure, the candidate's opponent is able to disavow any connection to these negative and often false ads. A new version of the independent expenditure is the puff piece that promotes an individual's candidacy. No matter whether positive or negative, these independent contributions can play a crucial and unfair role in campaigns. While the legislation before us does provide for greater disclosure on independent expenditures, further limits may be necessary before this loophole in campaign limits is exploited.

Mr. Speaker, I urge my colleagues to vote for this needed legislation. I believe that the reforms provided in this act are crucial to restoring public confidence in our electoral process and breaking the grip of apathy that marks modern-day elections. Hopefully, a strong vote today in support of campaign finance reform and the growing public outcry about the way today's campaigns are run will force President Bush to end his opposition to this legislation and to sign this crucial campaign spending limit bill into law.

Mr. CARDIN. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of the conference report on the Congressional Campaign Spending Limit and Election Reform Act of 1992.

The current high level of public cynicism and dissatisfaction with Congress has many causes, but none of us can doubt the failure to address major policy problems facing our country ranks high among those causes. Neither can we doubt the widely held public perception that the corrosive influence of special interest campaign contributions helps to explain the policy gridlock.

Those of us who have the privilege of serving in the House have a solemn responsibility to conduct ourselves in a manner which brings credit to the institution. Enactment of this conference report would significantly improve the public's confidence in Congress to solve the problems facing this country.

This conference report is a strong reform package. It would place firm but reasonable limits on the amount of money candidates could spend on campaigns. It would also place a premium on small, individual contributions.

Since the last major campaign finance reform, the amount of money spent by candidates running for Congress has risen dramatically—from $88.2 million in 1974 to $445 million in 1990. Successful candidates for Congress raised an average of $17,000 every month for 2 years prior to the election.

Contributions from political action committees [PAC's] and large contributors are each limited to one-third of the overall spending limit. To qualify for matching funds, candidates must raise $60,000 in contributions of $250 or less. In addition, only the first $250 of individual contributions is eligible to be matched. The cumulative effect of these provisions is to encourage candidates to seek small contributions from individual constituents.

The conference report includes several provisions I have advocated for some time. The conference report prohibits candidates from spending more than $500,000 during the general election period. This prevents candidates with tough primary contests from being significantly outspent in their general election. At the same time, candidates with tough primaries are free to spend whatever amount of money they feel is necessary, within the $600,000 limit. This will help put challengers emerging from tough primaries on an even footing with incumbents.

The conference report also provides matching funds to qualifying House candidates. Providing a limited and targeted amount of matching funds is a commonsense approach to addressing the serious public concern over the influences of large contributors and the constitutional restrictions of the Supreme Court's decision in Buckley versus Valeo.

The Congressional Campaign Spending Limit and Election Reform Act of 1992 would limit the spiraling costs of campaigns, lessen the impact of special interest groups through PAC's and large contributions, and infuse competition back into the system.

Mr. Speaker, I hope my colleagues will join me in supporting this legislation. The enactment of comprehensive campaign finance reform legislation will help stop the erosion of public confidence in our democratic system. The cost of congressional campaigns, the influence of special interests and large contributors, and the lack of competition in elections must be addressed. This conference report addresses all three issues.

Mr. CAMP. Mr. Speaker, the United States has a national debt of nearly $4 trillion, which is growing every day. To spend tax dollars on campaigns is irresponsible and a slap in the face to every American citizen. The campaign finance reform bill put forward by the Democrats, shows just how out of touch they are with reality. Taxpayers' hard earned dollars should not be used to pay for campaign bumper stickers.

We should be considering legislation that provides true reform—legislation that requires a larger share of campaign contributions to come from individual Member's congressional districts, closing loopholes that allow incredibly large contributions to be funnelled through national parties to candidates, and a prohibition on franked mail outside of a member's congressional district. Congress and candidates for Congress should not campaign on the taxpayer's dollar.

Mr. KOLBE. Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to S. 3, the conference report on campaign finance before us today. I'm afraid that the bill Democrats proudly claim paternity for is the child of scandal and unlikely to survive an expected veto.

The House bank and post office scandals have consumed this Chamber in recent weeks as well as coffee houses across this country. In this environment, everyone is grasping for reform measures large and small, with campaign finance an obvious target.

Would we be here today considering sweeping reform measures for campaign finance and House administration if the scandals of the last year had not happened? I doubt it. Republicans have been calling for reforms for years. Instead, what we and the American people have endured for the last half century is a majority party patronage system that says "don't rock the boat," "keep members happy at any price," particularly the party elite. Well the boat has been rocked and reform can no longer be ignored. It is essential. And it must be sweeping.

Yet, the campaign finance conference report is not reform. It remains a sham. Aren't the Democrats listening to the outcry from the public for real reform of perks and privileges? Even after conference, S. 3 remains an incumbent protection plan, requiring taxpayers dollars for campaigns, through disguised public fi-ancing provisions. This bill writes the biggest rubber check in history to finance campaigns for reelection—and I refuse to endorse any such proposal.

S. 3 imposes spending limits on House races that will disadvantage challengers. These limits ignore the vast differences between congressional districts. The agreement will thwart challengers by holding them to the same spending levels as incumbents, even though challengers need more money to overcome incumbent name recognition. These spending limits ignore the considerable advantage that incumbents have through the use of the frank, staff allowances, and free media exposure.

The agreement will inevitably require taxpayer dollars, because it requires enactment of future legislation to pay for the politicians' benefits in the bill. For House candidates, the agreement provides public financing in the reform of matching funds and reduced mail costs. Recent polling shows that over 70 percent of the American people strongly oppose public financing—and rightly so.

S. 3 conveniently continues the current high limits on PAC contributions for House races. The $200,000 PAC limit would only affect those House candidates receiving more than $200,000 from PAC, when the average candidate received $209,000 in PAC funds in 1990. In effect, it will be business as usual with respect to PAC contributions at a time when the American public is justifiably angry about the undue influence of PAC's and special interests.

My constituents want reform, but they want reforms which will restore competition to the political process, limit the power of incumbency, curb the power of special interests and effectively increase the role of individuals in elections. S. 3 does not meet these mandates. It is not reform—it is status quo.

Mr. PORTER. Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to this conference report.

The problem with this legislation is that it fails to address the problem of special interest money and negative politics. Moreover, it locks these problems in by indexing spending limits to inflation.

The $600,000 voluntary limit—indexed annually to inflation—is simply too much money. It does nothing to squeeze the professional marketers out of the election process. These marketers do their job effectively. But they view that job only as getting their client elected and they care not a whit for the fabric of our electoral system. It is the professional marketers who have turned negative politics—epitomized in the 30-second television attack spot—into a science. The unprecedented onslaught of negativism we are experiencing today has serious implications. The American people are left with the belief that no candidate is honest or capable. The result is that people are turned off by politics and become disinterested in and distrustful of government. This development does not augur well for the future of our democracy.

Many object to the notion of public campaign financing of any kind. But this objection does not acknowledge the reality of the Supreme Court's Buckley decision wherein mandatory campaign spending limits were held to violate the first amendment. As a result of this decision, the only way to control campaign spending is through voluntary limits and some form of incentive. My central concern with this legislation is not its use of a voluntary system, but its failure to implement lower spending caps. Good legislation introduced earlier this Congress in the House would have capped spending at $400,000 and reduced maximum PAC contributions to $1,000. Both these ideas make good sense and should have been included in this legislation. Unfortunately, neither is present. As a result, big money will continue to flow into campaigns to fuel the professional marketer's negative media campaigns. And taxpayers will be asked to foot part of the large bill for this attack on Democracy. With this I cannot agree and I for this reason I cannot support this legislation.

Mr. OWENS of Utah. Mr. Speaker, this is a day devoted to reform in the House of Representatives. We are taking important steps toward repairing both the credibility of the Congress and our own personal credibility. Campaign finance reform is decades overdue. And events of the last several months have accentuated the need for administrative reform of the House. These reforms are important. We need to enact them so we can move on with resolving the important issues which confront the American people daily—their jobs, incomes, access to health care, crime in their streets, the education of their children, the quality of their environment.

As my good friend from Connecticut, Mr. GEJDESON, knows, I have long advocated a similarly balanced campaign finance reform plan with voluntary spending limits. I commend him and chairman ROSE for their diligence and commitment in keeping campaign finance reform at the forefront of the House's agenda. More than $3 billion was spent in 1990 on all elections in the United States. House and Senate races alone cost $450 million in 1990. Campaign costs are spiralling into orbit, but this bill brings them back down to earth. S. 3 represents real reform, and I urge my colleagues to support its passage.

Some, including our President, object to the limited public financing which is possible under this bill. For my part, I can think of few better bargains for the taxpayer than helping to wean the political system from the influence of special interests—and at the same time leveling the electoral playing field by granting challengers the financial opportunity to get their message across to the voters. Partial public financing of elections is nothing new, as President Bush must admit. It is somewhat disingenuous for the all-time leader in Federal matching funds to threaten a veto of a bill primarily because it contains a provision on public financing.

I am very supportive of the portions of the conference report that deal with the Senate as well, including the provision that limits personal spending of candidates to $250,000. The fact that the Senate already has at least 27 millionaires is not coincidental, but the natural outgrowth of the current election financing structure which encourages the participation of the very wealthy, to the exclusion of those with more limited resources. There's nothing wrong with being a millionaire—in fact, it is a burden I could bear—but it should never turn into a prerequisite for public service. The Senate recognizes this danger, and I commend that body for their foresight.

Mr. Speaker, even with these reforms, campaigns will still take far too much time and draw attention away from our legislative duties. I still contend that a constitutional amendment for 4-year terms for Congress should be given serious consideration. But under this bill, at least the perpetual campaign will be less burdensome and fairer to our challengers.

Reform of the House itself is also long overdue, as has become painfully obvious over the past few months. We don't need to debate whether all the recent criticisms of Congress have been justified or whether some have been overblown—there's surely been some of both. But the simple truth is that the people demand that we reform the Institution. And when they require it of us, we must respond. That is our job. My only complaint is that we have not devoted equal attention, energy, and emotion to resolving the great questions of the day, like health care, like education, like fiscal reform, like economic competitiveness. This would be a very different body if we would feel as compelled to work until three in the morning debating and resolving the health care crisis, instead of spending our time and energy bandaging self-inflicted wounds. The people should require that same firm commitment from us to dealing with genuine issues, Mr. Speaker. More importantly, we must require it of ourselves.

The substantive differences between the Democratic and Republican alternatives are minimal. Both give the minority significantly more power in the operations of the House. I join Norman Ornstein in calling for establishment of an independent commission to review congressional, executive, and judicial perks. This commission, which could include former Members of Congress and executive branch officials, representatives from the business community, labor, advocacy groups from all sides of the political spectrum, and ordinary citizens, would have the responsibility of determining which so-called perks are truly necessary to enable a Member to perform his or her duties, and which are merely outdated symbols of privilege.

Such an objective review cannot possibly come from within the Congress. Some Members will try to hold on to outdated symbols of privilege. Others will, for purely political reasons, say that any reform, even if legitimate, is not comprehensive enough. Only such an independent commission would be able to review perks in such an objective, nonpartisan manner, and such a review will hopefully have been completed by this year.

Let us keep in mind, Mr. Speaker, that today's campaign finance and administrative reform efforts represent important, but merely symbolic change. Absent changes in the rules governing the actions of Members, simple administrative changes will not suffice.

The intra-House rules governing the legislative process and the course of legislation should undergo major revision. Pieces of broadsweeping legislation, such as banking reform, energy policy, and wetlands policy are subject to so many committees and so many interests that substantive reform is impossible, the process stagnated. And new, fresh ideas—which abound in the Congress—take far too long to have an impact because of the power accrued by committee chairmen.

I have introduced a resolution which, if implemented, would amend the rules of the House such that committee chairpersons are limited to 8 years of service in that position. Diversity and innovative ideas already exist in the Congress—and I say that in the spirit of bipartisanship. This resolution, if implemented, would give more Members the authority to implement those ideas while ensuring that discipline within the committee and institutional memory in the Congress are retained. Though not a panacea, this or a similar measure should be a part of a broader, more comprehensive revision of House rules.

There might be some merit to a limitation on proxy voting. It could not be absolute, since other constituent and committee meetings often take place at the same time. But it might foster a richer debate and encourage participation if we set reasonable limits on the number of proxies that a committee could provide to a Member during a Congress.

We must also streamline standing committees and rules governing the referral of legislation. Yesterday, the Interior Committee on which I serve passed our part of the Energy bill—but seven other committees share jurisdiction. This is ridiculous. I have joined LEE HAMILTON and others of my colleagues in an effort to revise this unwieldy process.

Mr. Speaker, I hope today's debate will be a prelude to substantive debate on issues of true importance. Let's clean up the House, get our problems behind us, and, for Heaven's sake, move forward to the issues that touch all our constituents—health care, budget reform, energy policy, the economy, protection of the environment. We have expended enough time and energy on internal housekeeping. Now let's finally get on with our jobs.

Mr. YOUNG of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to this conference report which purports to provide for campaign finance reform but which in reality is a fraud and a scam that does not make a single change to our Nation's campaign finance laws without the adoption of subsequent legislation.

This legislation is a travesty and one of the phoniest bills ever considered by this House. It is simply an attempt to manipulate the public into thinking that they are getting reform when all they are getting is a good sounding title for an empty legislative promise. Americans are and should be fed up with this abuse of power by the majority party in Congress.

I supported passage of the House bill on November 25, 1991, not because it was perfect, but because it kept alive debate on efforts to limit the cost of congressional campaigns. It gave the Senate, and House and Senate conferees, an opportunity to come up with an acceptable final package that would provide for true reform and strict spending limits.

But they either could not or would not bring us true campaign reform and we now have before us legislation that in section after section conflicts with its title and every stated objective. First, supporters of the bill say it provides for voluntary spending limits of $600,000, a level of spending which is far too high. Yet, in subsequent sections of the bill, it allows an additional $100,000 in campaign spending for candidates in runoff elections, an additional $150,000 for candidates who won closely contested primaries, $200,000 for attorney and accounting fees, and up to $52,500 for fundraising costs.

So in reality, a candidate, observing the voluntary spending limits in this campaign finance reform and spending limitation bill, can really spend up to $1,102,500 per election.

The sponsors of the bill also claim that one of the primary reforms in this bill is that it lessens the influence of political action committees, or PAC's. Still, it allows House candidates to accept $200,000 in PAC contributions, plus $50,000 for runoff elections, and another $50,000 for candidates who won close primaries. This means that the PAC spending limit is actually $300,000, a figure far too high and far more than I have ever accepted in an election cycle.

Another major so-called reform in this bill, and a provision I opposed during House consideration last year, is the public financing of congressional elections. This bill would allow congressional candidates to receive $200,000 per election from the already overtaxed taxpayers. And listen to this. In some cases, candidates would actually be eligible to receive up to $600,000 of the public's money for their campaigns.

But even if the limit was only $200,000, in a year in which 435 House seats were contested, the cost to the American taxpayers in just one election year could be as high as $174 million. This at a time when the national debt approaches $4 trillion.

Finally, the bill is silent on how to pay for the cost of public financing of congressional campaigns. Instead, it says that none of the bill's provisions take effect until such time as the Congress enacts legislation to pay for it. What a fraud. Where might the money come from? The majority party won't tell us. Might it come from the Medicare or Social Security trust funds? How about education or health care? We don't know what the majority party has in mind. How sad.

This is not a time for the Congress to be establishing new spending programs that will cost the American taxpayers hundreds of millions of dollars. It is a time for each of us to demonstrate fiscal restraint, not only during the consideration of legislation before this House, but in the conduct of our own campaigns.

Throughout my career, I have consistently maintained a self-imposed campaign limit on contributions and expenditures which is well below the levels suggested in this legislation. Instead, I have run true people-to-people campaigns in which I take my message directly to the voters, not through 30-second radio or television advertisements, but through personal appearances, speeches, and debates. This is how the voters can best learn what they want to know about my position on the issues, not what a slick campaign consultant, pollster, or television producer tells them what they want to know.

Mr. Speaker, this 102d Congress had a real opportunity to reform congressional campaigning to take the campaigns back to the people and provide for fiscal restraint. This legislation, however, fails in every way to meet this goal and the public's expectations. And even worse, it tries to cover up the real truth about what this scheme does to the U.S. Treasury.

The American people are too smart. They will see through this attempt to deceive them. They know that what we are voting on is an empty promise, a charade, and a travesty. Those who support this legislation will have an opportunity to answer to the people they represent in just a few short months.

Mr. Speaker, if we want true reform, we should vote this conference report down today and send it back to the committee to start over. In the meantime, each Member of this House, and every candidate for Congress, can make their own personal commitment, as I have done year after year, to limit campaign spending and take their campaigns directly to the people where they belong.

Mr. REED. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in support of the conference report on S. 3, the Congressional Campaign Spending Limit and Election Reform Act. This bill is a step forward on the road to real reform of our current campaign process.

This legislation is a reasonable attempt to control out-of-control spending in Federal campaigns by setting spending limits for House and Senate candidates. The average cost of winning a House seat has doubled in 10 years to $410,000. When I talk to my constituents about the campaign process, time and again people tell me there is too much money in the election process. This bill recognizes these concerns and challenges candidates for Federal office to meet spending limits.

The measure before us also limits the influence of special interest money by putting a cap on the contributions of political action committees and wealthy individuals. These caps, together with the overall voluntary spending limits, will lessen the focus on money in campaigns and will encourage candidates to concentrate on raising small contributions close to home in their own States and home districts.

This legislation gets tough on one of the worst abuses of the current system: soft money. Campaign contributions meant to support Federal candidates are sometimes routed through State parties to avoid the restrictions of Federal law. State parties run legitimate and necessary campaign programs, however, funds directly benefitting Federal candidates should meet Federal standards. S. 3 achieves this objective.

This measure also prohibits House Members from using the frank for mass mailings outside of their current congressional district—an unfair election year advantage. This is a provision inspired by legislation introduced by Mr. THOMAS of California that I cosponsored and that has the support of many on both sides of the aisle.

This is not a perfect bill. I believe it should go farther in limiting money from special interest organizations. And I do not believe it should exempt legal and accounting fees, and funds spent on soliciting contributions. Spending limits must anticipate and include all costs.

But clearly, after years of trying, there is a bill on the floor that at the very least heads in the right direction. A broad coalition of non-partisan, watchdog organizations such as Citizen Action, Common Cause, and the League of Women Voters supports this legislation. At a time when the public is crying out for reform, these organizations understand that this legislation represents a good beginning.

The President has threatened to veto this bill because he opposes spending limits. I hope that he hears the pleas of the people and has a change of heart. Campaign finance reform should not be a political football and spending limits are not a reason to veto the bill.

I urge my colleagues to take a step to control the skyrocketing costs of campaigns and support the conference report.

Mr. SANDERS. Mr. Speaker, the United States today is one of two nations in the industrialized world without a national health care system; the gap between the rich and the poor is growing wider every day; and while the salaries of the chief executive officers of the major corporations continue to soar, 10 million of our workers are unemployed, 5 million of our children go hungry and 2 million Americans sleep out on the streets.

Mr. Speaker, it is no secret that the President of the United States and the U.S. Congress do not represent the needs of ordinary Americans, and one of the major reasons for that is that we have an absurd approach to campaign financing which, to a very large degree, allows wealthy people and major corporations to buy and sell politicians.

Mr. Speaker, as Common Cause has recently said, the legislation we have before us today is not perfect—but it does constitute real and fundamental reform. Most importantly, it limits the amount of money that can be spent in an election. What this means is that wealthy people, and candidates who are representing big money interests, will no longer be allowed to outspend their opponents 5 to 1 or 10 to 1. What it means is that there will be a level playing field, with all candidates having a fair shot at victory.

Second, this legislation limits huge soft money contributions from both political parties as well as special-interest groups. This is a real step forward. When I ran for Congress in 1988 and 1990, as an Independent, not only did my opponent outspend me heavily, in terms of the amount of money attributed to his own campaign committee, but his campaign was helped additionally by hundreds of thousands of dollars from the Republican Party in terms of literature and polling which was not attributed to his own campaign finance statement. This is clearly true for elections all over the country. For those of us, for example, who are fighting for national health care, there is a real concern that the American Medical Association and the insurance companies will spend millions of dollars in independent expenditures in order to defeat us. This is absurd and undemocratic, and this legislation goes a long way toward eliminating that practice.

Mr. Speaker, if the President vetoes this legislation, as he threatens to do, then all Americans should understand that he is far more interested in maintaining the political oligarchy of the rich, which presently exists, than allowing for a vibrant, responsive political system which represents the needs of ordinary people.

If President Bush, who is himself a recipient of millions of dollars of campaign contributions from the rich and the powerful, and tens of millions of dollars throughout his political career of public funding, vetoes this vitally important legislation, then the American voters should be prepared to veto him in November.

Mr. McMILLEN of Maryland. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of S. 3, the Congressional Campaign Spending Limit and Election Reform Act. The legislation before us today represents the most sweeping campaign reform since the changes made by Congress in 1974 in response to the Watergate scandal. This reform proposal is essential if we are to restore the faith of the American people in the election system and to get the skyrocketing cost of campaigns under control. Passage of this legislation will send a clear signal that this Congress is serious about reform, that we recognize that there are problems, and that we as elected officials have courage to make the changes that are needed.

Congressional campaign spending is out of control. Candidates winning a House seat in 1990 spent twice what they spent in 1980. Even worse, the cost of winning a Senate seat has more than tripled in the past decade. In order to keep up, candidates for Congress have been forced to raise ever increasing amounts of money, spending more and more time fundraising. Mandatory spending limits for congressional campaigns were passed by the Congress in 1974, but the Supreme Court struck down these limits as unconstitutional. It is for this reason that the 102d Congress is seeking to enact voluntary spending limits linked with incentives for candidates to stick to these limits.

S. 3 establishes voluntary spending limits for Senate candidates based upon the population of each State; ranging from $950,000 to $5.5 million. House limits are $600,000 per election cycle. In addition, the bill sets up limits on funding sources. Political Action Committee [PAC] contributions are limited to 20 percent for Senate candidates and 33 percent for House candidates. Large contributions from individuals are limited to 33 percent of the total spending limit for House Members and smaller individual contributions, less than $250, are unlimited up to the aggregate cap. These provisions will bring greater equity to fundraising sources placing increased emphasis on small, individual contributions.

S. 3 provides various incentives to candidates who agree to abide by the spending limits established in the bill. Lower postal rates, matching funding, and broadcast vouchers are all offered both as an incentive to control spending and as a way to help to reduce the real cost of running for Congress.

This legislation is drafted to ensure that we will not be throwing money at nonviable candidates. House and Senate candidates must reach a predetermined fundraising threshold before receiving matching funding. This is similar to the current requirement for Presidential candidates.

Mr. Speaker, I want to stress that this reform package is not funded through a tax increase. This proposal will not increase the Federal deficit, nor will money be shifted from other worthwhile programs to help defray the cost to candidates running for Congress. This legislation specifically states that none of these avenues is the appropriate way to help pay for this much needed reform proposal. There are other financing options and they will be considered under a separate bill.

To close, let me quickly note some of the other important provisions in this bill. S. 3 cracks down on soft money. It increases Federal reporting requirements for candidates. This legislation provides for a prohibition on the bundling of contributions and eliminates leadership PAC's.

Mr. Speaker, the enactment of this reform package will dramatically alter, for the better, the way that congressional election campaigns are run. It will decrease the amount of money that is needed to run for Congress, it will increase the importance of small contributors in the process, and it will enhance the ability of all candidates to run for Congress by creating a level playing field. I urge my colleagues to vote in favor of this conference report. If you care about showing your constituents that you want to see the system changed and that you are willing to be part of the solution, you will vote in favor of this reform package.

Mr. GEJDENSON. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the conference report.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on ordering the previous question.

The question was taken; and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground that a quorum is not present and make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Evidently a quorum is not present.

The Sergeant at Arms will notify absent Members.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—yeas 260, nays 161, not voting 13, as follows:

So the previous question was ordered. The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. ECK-ART). The question is on the conference report.

MOTION TO RECOMMIT OFFERED BY MR. WALSH
Mr. WALSH. Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion to recommit.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is the gentleman opposed to the conference report in its present form?

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Speaker, I am.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the motion to recommit.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. WALSH moves to recommit the conference report on the bill S. 3 to the Committee of Conference with instructions to the managers on the part of the House to include in the conference report the provisions of H.R. 3770 including:

1. The requirement that a majority of a candidate's contributions come from individuals residing in the candidate's district.

2. A limit of $1,000 on PAC contributions to candidates.

3. A total ban on soft money contributions to political parties.

And to further include the requirement that no taxpayer dollars may be used to finance congressional campaigns.

POINT OF ORDER

Mr. GEJDENSON. Mr. Speaker, I rise to a point of order.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman will state his point of order.

Mr. GEJDENSON. Mr. Speaker, I would make a point of order that the instructions exceed the scope of the conference report. It is clear that the requirement of in-district funding is beyond the scope of the conference report, and I would move that therefore the motion to recommit should be ruled out of order.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Does the gentleman from New York [Mr. WALSH] wish to be heard in opposition to the point of order?

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Speaker, I believe that this motion adds to the fairness of the conference report, and I would urge that it be added.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Does the gentleman from New York [Mr. WALSH] concede the point of order?

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Speaker, I do not. The SPEAKER pro tempore. Does anyone else wish to be heard on the point of order?

Mr. HENRY. Mr. Speaker, I wish to be heard on the point of order.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The point of order is contested. The gentleman from Michigan [Mr. HENRY] is recognized on the point of order.

Mr. HENRY. Mr. Speaker, I want to be sure we understand what the point of order is and what the question is and what the contest is.

Mr. Speaker, my understanding is that the gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. GEJDENSON] objects to the motion to instruct because the motion contains a provision that would require that in order to get Federal taxpayer match, one would have to raise campaign funds in one's district.

Mr. Speaker, if I understand it, that is what the objection is.

Mr. GEJDENSON. Mr. Speaker, the objection is because it is beyond the scope of the conference. At this stage of the game to try to rewrite the whole conference is really in fact an attempt to kill campaign finance reform, at least at this session, in my perspective.

Mr. HENRY. Mr. Speaker, I would ask what is the point of order? It is simply a motion to recommit or refer back to the conference committee to address the issue as to whether or not in the existing legislation the proposal that the gentleman has put before us, not changing the taxpayer match at all, as I understand it, not changing any of the provisions relative to PAC limitations, is simply whether or not in order to get taxpayer match the moneys to be matched would have to be raised within our States and within our districts.

□ 1400

I just do not understand what the point of order is or the objection. I wanted to be sure the Speaker understood and the Members understood as they deal with the Speaker's ruling as to exactly what is at issue.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. (Mr. ECKART). Does the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. LEACH] wish to be heard on the point of order?

Mr. LEACH. Mr. Speaker, I do think this body ought to understand what is taking place here. The minority resolution talked about a $1,000 cap on PAC's. The House bill passed a $5,000 limit. The Senate bill passed a zero or up to a thousand, if the court threw it out.

So what the majority is attempting to do is stifle a very thoughtful amendment of the minority for real reform of the political action system and is using the Rules of the House against real reform. And there is nothing more germane to this bill.

The subject matter of this bill is containing political action committees. I think the public record ought to indicate it.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Iowa [Mr. LEACH] is entitled to be heard on the point of order under the rules of the House. That does not entitle the gentleman to be heard on the merits of the bill.

If the gentleman has remarks to make, they should be confined to the point of order before the House.

Mr. LEACH. Mr. Speaker, there are two issues that this Member would like to make. One is that in his belief this is thoroughly and utterly germane.

The second point is how extraordinary it is that the party of alleged reform may or may not want to block real reform.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. (Mr. ECKART). The Chair is prepared to rule.

The gentleman from Connecticut makes a point of order against the motion offered by the gentleman from New York on the ground that the instructions therein exceed the scope of the conference.

The motion offered by the gentleman from New York proposes to instruct the managers on the part of the House to include in the conference report three features of a separate bill, H.R. 3770. Each of these three initiatives falls outside the matters committed to the conference as disagreements between the Senate bill and the House amendment thereto.

Therefore, under clause 3 of rule XXVIII, a conference report may not include a matter although germane that was not committed to the conference of either House.

In the opinion of the Chair, the instructions proposed in the motion offered by the gentleman from New York exceed the scope of the differences committed to the conference, and the point of order is sustained.

MOTION TO RECOMMIT OFFERED BY MR. WALSH

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion to recommit.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is the gentleman opposed to the bill?

Mr. WALSH. In its present form, I am, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the motion to recommit.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. WALSH moves to recommit the conference report on the bill S. 3 to the committee of conference with instructions to the managers on the part of the House to strip all sections from the bill that allow for public financing of subsidies of congressional campaigns, to wit sections providing for matching payments to candidates, voter communication vouchers, and reduced postal rate subsidies for candidates.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion to recommit.

The question was taken; and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the noes appeared to have it.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Speaker, on that I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—yeas 179, nays 243, not voting 12, as follows:

PRIVILEGES OF THE HOUSE—REQUIRING EXPLANATION OF CERTAIN ALLEGATIONS INVOLVING AD HOC COMMITTEE INVESTIGATING THE POST OFFICE OF COMMITTEE ON HOUSE ADMINISTRATION

Mr. DOOLITTLE. Mr. Speaker, I rise to a question of the privileges of the House, and I send to the desk a privileged resolution (H. Res. 430) and ask for its immediate consideration.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. MURTHA). The Clerk will report the resolution.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

H. RES. 430

Whereas, pursuant to H.R. 340, the House directed the Committee on House Administration to investigate the operation and management of the Office of the Postmaster and;

Whereas, H.R. 340, required the committee to report its findings and recommendations no later than May 30, 1992 and;

Whereas, the chairman of the Committee on House Administration pledged before the House that the investigation would be handled equally by the majority and minority parties and;

Whereas, the chairman of the Committee on House Administration in a letter to the ranking minority members wrote that "decisions will be made by a majority of the Task Force" and;

Whereas, the Associated Press reported on April 9, 1992, an article that stated that a Member of the Committee had ordered aides/ or committee staff to remove locks to a room and replace the locks where witnesses were being interviewed by members of the Ad Hoc investigating committee and;

Whereas, the integrity of House proceedings and the integrity of investigations must be protected from deliberate interference: Now therefore, be it

Resolved, That the chairman and vice chairman of the Ad Hoc Committee investigating the Post Office appear before the House by close of business on April 9, 1992 and explain the reported attempt to interfere with the ongoing investigation.

Resolved, That House again affirms the need for an expedited investigation into the Office of the Postmaster and condemns any attempt to interfere or impede this investigation.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair finds that the resolution does constitute a question of the privileges of the House, and the gentleman from California [Mr. DOOLITTLE] is recognized for 1 hour.

Mr. DOOLITTLE. Mr. Speaker, I wonder if the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. ROBERTS] could come to the well and shed some light on the incidents that transpired in the committee yesterday.

Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Kansas.

Mr. ROBERTS. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman will yield, if the gentleman could ask me some specific questions, perhaps I could respond.

Mr. DOOLITTLE. Yes; I would like to do that.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask, is there any assurance the Democrats will allow the post office investigation to continue so that it may report its findings to the House?

Mr. ROBERTS. In discussing this matter with the chairman of the full committee, the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. ROSE] and all members of the task force, we have resolved to go ahead. There are some differences, but we have resolved them. I think it is the intention of the task force, without question, to proceed along the lines of the resolution that was passed by the House.

Mr. DOOLITTLE. What was the reason given by the Democrat majority leadership on the committee for terminating the investigation yesterday?

Mr. ROBERTS. Well, obviously, when you have a task force investigation of this nature, you have strong differences of opinion. Obviously, you are going to have some discussions where skins wear a little thin.

I am from Dodge City, KS, and I am used to some rough and ready treatment. I understand that, but I think the two concerns were in reference to some reform discussions we were having in regard to current reform legislation, and then the sanctity of the investigation itself in regards to some alleged leaks; but having said that, let me say that hopefully those differences are resolved and we are proceeding.

Mr. DOOLITTLE. Mr. Speaker, in just a minute, I want to yield to the gentleman from North Carolina, but I would like to ask just one more question.

Can the gentleman tell us what actually happened? Did in fact the chairman order this staff to remove people from the room and change the locks?

Mr. ROSE. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield to me? The gentleman is asking the gentleman from Kansas questions about me. Why not let me answer them?

Mr. DOOLITTLE. Mr. Speaker, I am happy to yield to the gentleman from North Carolina for purposes of debate only.

Mr. ROSE. Mr. Speaker, I have read this for the first time, the gentleman's resolution.

Let me say to the gentleman that the minority leader, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MICHEL], the Speaker, Mr. FOLEY, the gentleman from California [Mr. THOMAS], and I signed a letter to the Justice Department several days ago informing them that despite the objection of the Justice Department, that we were going to continue our investigation of the activities that took place in the post office by the continuation of the interview of witnesses.

We made it abundantly clear to ourselves, the six of us, the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. ROBERTS], the gentleman from California [Mr. THOMAS], and I, the gentleman from Wisconsin

[Mr. KLECZKA], the gentleman from Washington [Mr. SWIFT], and the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. BARRETT] that one of the things we were very concerned about was leaks.

In Saturday's Cleveland Plain Dealer, there was a paragraph that said that the paper had a task force memo. Now, that would certainly have been a leak if in fact they had a task force memo.

I asked the staff not to go forward with any more interviews of witnesses until we resolved that matter. I asked that they not interview anybody else.

Now, we were moving so fast that some of the staff was determined to go forward with those interviews. Somebody determined the best way to stop that was to lock the door.

The gentleman from California [Mr. THOMAS] scheduled a press conference where he was going to complain about the activity, as well he might have, but cooler heads prevailed. We got together. The six of us explained to one another our concerns.

I said that I am convinced for the time being that we do not have a leak problem and I am willing to proceed.

The gentleman from California [Mr. THOMAS] said, "Then I will call for the press conference," and we went back to our own business.

But if there is a leak in our task force or by our staff, the work of our task force is in jeopardy.

The gentleman from California [Mr. THOMAS] and I have worked very patiently together to try to make this thing work. He puts up with my questions and has been very fair to me, and I hope and believe that he thinks most of the time that I have been real fair to him.

Mr. THOMAS of California. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DOOLITTLE. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. THOMAS of California. Mr. Speaker, as in a marriage, you never want these sorts of things done in public. You would like to be able to do them in private, because you have joined together in a bipartisan structure.

This is an example of what happens when it is true bipartisanship; that is, you will have disagreements.

I hope that we do not have to air these in public.

However, I guess I actually thank the gentleman for allowing us to come to the floor and talk about this a little bit. But you will not get any specifics out of us other than to say that the chairman and I have entered into an agreement. He has honored the agreement, which is unique in this postplantation era, of not only saying that we are going to produce a bipartisan structure, and doing so in form, but by actually doing so in substance.

There are times in which we have to kind of work it out. It is not going to be all smooth. But who ever thought it was going to be, if we are going to be precedent-setting in terms of shared power in an investigation, just like it could have been in the resolution that we are going to be discussing, when it was going to be shared power in a bipartisan oversight subcommittee?

But let me hasten to add, the structure that the chairman has entered into is a fair, truly bipartisan structure.

The structure we are about to look at in terms of the reform measure is phony. I would urge the gentleman to take a look at the so-called bipartisan structure in the measure that is going to come forward. Because in that one if there is a tie; that is, if the Democrats are on one side and the Republicans are on the other, it is elevated to some partisan structure to decide it.

In the task force that the chairman has agreed to, if there is a tie the issue loses, as in any other body. Therefore we have to work out our differences.

Unfortunately, sometimes they spill out into the open a little bit. We try not to have that happen.

The point that the House needs to know is that we are moving forward. As in any marriage, if it is to last, you have to talk out your differences.

The structure that we have here allows us to talk out our differences. The structure that is supposedly bipartisan, which is phony, does not allow you to talk out your differences. A tie moves it forward. There is no need to come to a resolution.

I would tell the gentleman that he saw the resolution of a conflict in action. That is not bad. That is not something that people should worry about. It is something that people should applaud. We came to a difference, we worked together, and we resolved it. We are moving forward. That is positive. That is good.

It is not going to happen under the structure that you are going to see in a minute.

Mr. ROBERTS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DOOLITTLE. I yield to the gentleman from Kansas.

Mr. ROBERTS. Mr. Speaker, what was the question that the gentleman had for me? I would be happy to respond.

Mr. DOOLITTLE. Could the gentleman tell us what happened? I want to know what happened. The gentleman was there. What happened? Were the locks changed?

□ 1450

Mr. ROBERTS. We were going to proceed with the investigation as outlined by the gentleman from California [Mr. THOMAS] and as outlined by the chairman [Mr. ROSE]. It was 10 in the morning. There was a witness, there was a witness scheduled. We received a phone call from counsel indicating the investigation had been called off. However, we decided at that point that we would proceed with the investigation.

At that particular time, staff arrived from the chairman's office, indicating to us that the investigation had been concluded or terminated, and in fact that there would be a locksmith to change the locks on the doors.

At that particular time, we still made the decision to proceed with the investigation. Mr. THOMAS called the press gallery or called for a press conference at 11, the thought being if we were going to be removed from the investigation, that that might be a matter of some interest to the press, and at that particular time we all went over to the chairman's office to discuss this matter at some length.

As has been indicated, there was a difference of opinion in regards to what reform measures should be taken here in the House, how those reform measures applied to the post office investigation. I think that is to be expected in regards to the strong differences of opinion we have around here.

There also was a considerable discussion in regards to alleged leaks. I would tell the gentleman that, having been in the newspaper business, having been a working reporter, it is my experience that if something is leaked that is detrimental to any individual, that is a leak. If something is leaked and it is not detrimental to an individual but they think it is certainly within the realm of news, then it is not a leak. And there have been a great many stories in the press in regards to the bank, or the restaurant or the post office, with the working press actually doing their job, trying to shine the light of truth in the darkness.

It is because of those stories and because the public disclosure that we have had an investigation. It is because of that effort by a free press, if you will, that we have reached an agreement where we have a bipartisan investigation. And I can speak for every Member on the Republican side and this Member and our staff, the notes of that investigation stay in that room and are locked up. Any Members' notes go into their safe or they go into that lockup. And there has been no conversation on the part of any staff member or any Member to any newspaper in regards to the specifics of this investigation.

Now, having said that, you can detect I have a little blood pressure on this because every time there is an alleged leak and somebody gets wet around here, it is always the minority that is blamed. Usually, it is the other way around when we have a majority investigation.

So, I want to make the record perfectly clear that as far as I am able to determine, there has not been a leak, an alleged leak or any other leak. And I can also say that if there were leaks, for goodness sakes, it would not be the kind that has been in the press. The truth will come out at the conclusion of the investigation when the chips fall where they may. As the gentleman from North Carolina has indicated; when I took my special order and said we needed an independent investigation, he said we can do this within the House Administration Committee. We are trying to do it. There are problems. But as I have indicated before, we are trying to work them out.

We are proceeding even as I speak. I cannot speak to the specifics, will not speak to the specifics, but I can say I am encouraged by the chairman and my ranking member for putting together this task force. I think we will get to the bottom of it. We will let the chips fall where they may, and we will come with a report to the House so we can better effectively manage the post office and the operation of the post office.

So, from that standpoint I think we have made some progress.

Now I know, I am from Dodge City, we have Front Street, we have confrontations, we have face-offs. Shots were fired but no one was mortally wounded. There were some tempers and they flared.

As a Republican Member of this Congress, I do not like to be told by any staff member that I cannot proceed with an investigation. More specially, I do not like to be told that the door is going to be shut and the locks are going to be changed. I have a little feeling about that.

But I knew if I went over to the chairman and we talked about it in a rational way, we could settle the differences. We have done that, and the investigation is proceeding.

Mr. ROSE. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DOOLITTLE. I had indicated to the gentleman from Pennsylvania, but I will yield to the gentleman from North Carolina.

Mr. ROSE. I thank the gentleman for yielding, and I will be very brief.

Mr. DOOLITTLE. This is for purposes of debate only.

Mr. ROSE. Mr. Speaker, I think I have said my part, and the gentleman from Dodge City has characterized it accurately from his perspective. There is just one thing I would like to clear up: From my perspective, the thing I was concerned about was not the contents of any investigation being revealed, because as far as I am concerned the subject matter of the story in the Plain Dealer was not the issue.

As far as I am concerned, my friend and my colleague, MARY ROSE OAKAR, is a fine Member of this House and she is not the subject of what we were investigating or talking about. But it was the fact that there was listed in that paper as having a memo from the task force. The contents of it was irrelevant. We have determined there was—in our discussion there was no such memo. I certainly did not have one. They did not have one.

And when I, as the leader of the Democratic side of this task force, determined that we should bring the questioning of witnesses to a halt until that question was solved and the staff said, "No, we are not," I had no alternative but to take such action as I thought was required to stop the questioning of further witnesses.

Now we probably understand each other a little better, for the future, and I think we are going to be doing all right.

Mr. ROBERTS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DOOLITTLE. I yield to the gentleman from Kansas.

Mr. ROBERTS. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, just for the record, there is no staff memo, no staff memo was ever—

Mr. ROSE. That is right.

Mr. ROBERTS. At least to my knowledge, there has been no staff memo in regard to the issue that the gentleman has raised.

Mr. ROSE. Exactly right.

Mr. ROBERTS. So, consequently, any reference to that as far as the post office investigation is concerned is not pertinent and it is not right. And that is the sum of it.

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Ms. OAKAR. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield to me, since my name was mentioned?

Mr. DOOLITTLE. I promised—I will yield, but first I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. WALKER. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, the thing that puzzles me, I guess, in this whole discussion is if all of this was worked out after there was the threat of the doors, to have the locks changed, why could we not have found all of this out in a bipartisan sense before those kinds of threats were on the table? It seems to me if we are going to have an investigation here go forward unimpeded, the thing that worries some of us is the fact that in the midst of something that was ongoing and that we thought was being conducted in a bipartisan way, evidently an order was issued to clear the room and change the locks, and my concern about that is that if these matters can all be worked out, why would they not be worked out before such orders were issued?

Mr. ROSE. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DOOLITTLE. I yield to the gentleman from North Carolina.

Mr. ROSE. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, I am concerned about the fact that we have told the Justice Department that we are not going to stop interviewing witnesses, as they have asked us to do. We have not slowed down for 1 day. They said stop interviewing for 90 days. We have not slowed down for 1. The one thing we could do to hurt the Justice Department investigation would be to have leaks. And I do not want any part of anything with leaks.

So, when I see that and I ask the staff, the bipartisan staff, to stop interviews and they thumb their nose at me, I have no alternative but to take another action.

Now, if we all had telephones in our ears and the six of us were communicating quickly with each other, I am sure that they would have concurred for a momentary pause in the interviews. That got cleared up, and we went on. I do not think that will happen again in the future.

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DOOLITTLE. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. WALKER].

Mr. WALKER. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, I just want to follow up because, as I understood the situation, one of the people being thrown out of the room, potentially, was the vice chairman of the committee, who was attempting to be a part of the interview. Now, that does not sound to me as though there was very much attempt to do any consultation before this took place.

Mr. ROBERTS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DOOLITTLE. I yield to the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. ROBERTS].

Mr. ROBERTS. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, well, as the vice chairman who was in the room, let me make it clear there would not be anybody throwing me out of that damn room. All right?

No. 2: What happened here is there were four members on the previous day present for the investigation and that particular witness. At the end of that presentation, there was considerable discussion, as there is among the task force members when we conclude our business, if somebody has a special concern or got a little blood pressure on an item, why, we bring it up.

□ 1500

Now that lasted about what; maybe 30 minutes, and it has been referenced to in these discussions. The gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. ROSE] was not present. One other member was not present. Most of us who were there at that particular meeting thought we had everything reconciled, no need to close it down, no need to change the locks, no need to get into allegations as to who is leaking what, why or wherefore, or the sanctity, or whatever. It was a surprise to the vice chairman; that is, this Member, at 10 o'clock to find that situation. But in fact Mr. ROSE had not had an opportunity to discuss all of that with the Members concerned, and there was concern. There is going to be differences of opinion as we go down this path.

So, I would say to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. WALKER] that, while it was very disconcerting there for a short period of time, and we got into short, jerky sentences, and adjectives and adverbs that I cannot repeat on the floor, that things were worked out, and they were worked out in good faith.

As the gentleman from California has indicated, if you have a marriage of this type, which is unique, sometimes it is a rocky road, but we are still on the road. I may file for divorce later.

Mr. THOMAS of California. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DOOLITTLE. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. THOMAS of California. Mr. Speaker, I think one has to understand that when one says "bipartisan," if my colleagues will read the agreement, not only is it equal numbers in terms of the Members, that is, Democrat and Republican, but the staff is equal. This is unprecedented, and what happens is that some folks on our side of the aisle have new-found powers. They have never been able to exercise them before. And sometimes they get a little exuberant. On the other side of the aisle we have new-found jealousies that have never been checked by anybody before, and, as we get into these relationships, we are going to have to make adjustments.

Again, I have committed to the chairman, and the chairman has committed to me, that the press is not going to drive this. The outsider who wants to destroy the first truly bipartisan structure is going to destroy this opportunity. We are going to move forward.

Why is anyone surprised that we have some difficulty in this unique relationship in moving forward totally harmoniously? The point that people need to remember is we are moving forward. We will continue to move forward, and we will move forward together.

Ms. OAKAR. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield to me?

Mr. DOOLITTLE. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio for the purposes of debate only.

Ms. OAKAR. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from California [Mr. DOOLITTLE] for yielding to me.

I want to say to the gentleman, having served with him on the Committee on House Administration, I think he knows I respect him, and he asked the question, "Why, when there's three and three," and I agree with him that this task force should be three and three, and I was once part of it and declined to serve any longer. But what is the rub with me personally is with not only leaks, but false leaks, lies, lies that are told to the press for whatever reason, and I do not know who did it, and I cannot prove it.

But I have to say to my colleagues that it is very disconcerting, not only to this Member, but it is equally disconcerting to those of my colleagues who are on a fictitious restaurant list that was leaked to the press that some members of the press still buy as an absolute truthful list that has ruined the reputations of people around here. There are very few things that people have in their lives besides their good name, and that to me is where the problem lies.

So, do not trivialize, and I do not mean this to the gentleman directly, but I would say to my friend, the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. ROBERTS], and my chairman and others about particularly the kind of talk that I heard about leaks, "Don't trivialize leaks. Identify the type you're talking about. If someone takes an oath, as the staff did, to not divulge any information, that person should be held accountable if he or she does, and the person who should hold that person accountable is the Member who hired that person."

But, second, that is bad enough if it is truthful. But if it is untruthful and it is a rumored leak, then that is malicious, and I think some people know a little bit about malice around this place, and so I thank the gentleman for yielding.

I hope that this task force which has been charged with the very profound duty, and there are 145 people who work at that post office, and most of them are very decent staff people. They do not deserve to have their reputations maligned because of some guerrilla warfare that is going on with some people, certainly not all, and that is not to say that it is partisan. I do not know who is doing it; OK? But I do not approve of it, and I think it is intrinsically evil and wrong.

Mr. DOOLITTLE. Mr. Speaker, I have been concerned; the reason I raised this question: There has been so many allegations about the House post office, the various investigations that are going on, when I read this newspaper article that really gave me cause for concern. It is a very unusual thing to have a hearing going on and staff people showing up attempting to change the locks and telling people the investigation is at an end.

I appreciate the explanation of the chairman and the vice chairman explaining their desire to make sure that things were done in a proper order. It still sounds like an odd set of circumstances.

Mr. SWIFT. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DOOLITTLE. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Washington for purposes of debate only.

Mr. SWIFT. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from California [Mr. DOOLITTLE] for yielding to me.

I think it is very important to know that the six of us who were working on this task force know each other and have worked together. The gentleman from Kansas, the gentleman from California in particular, I have worked with over the years. These are difficult issues.

All of our disagreements, incidentally, do not happen to be between Republicans and Democrats. There are some disagreements between Republicans, and there are some disagreements between Democrats. We are experienced people. We are working them out.

There is not the slightest question in my mind, and it seems to me there should not be the slightest question in anybody's mind on the other side of the aisle that the Republican representatives on this task force are perfectly capable of vigorously pursuing their interests and the interests of their party. They certainly have not give me any indication that they are going to do other than vigorously pursue their perspectives.

Now, when we talk about communication, it seems to me that short of going and making a legislative initiative such as this, if the gentleman wanted to know what was going on, he could have picked up the phone or walked across the floor and talked to the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. ROBERTS] or the gentleman from California [Mr. THOMAS], which I think would have saved the body a great deal of trouble. But what really disturbs me here is that under the guise of questioning, I think, whether the Democrats are doing the appropriate thing, it seems to me that intrinsically the gentleman is raising serious questions about the Republicans on the task force who I think are doing a fine job defending their perspective on the issue and that there is certainly no need for them to be hauled to the well of the House and quizzed about their ability to carry out their role, their responsibilities intelligently, and competently and vigorously.

Mr. DOOLITTLE. Reclaiming my time, Mr. Speaker, I have confidence on the Republican side that frankly it is not our side that controls access to the rooms and controls the procedure around here, and we do not run the House, and we did not run the post office, or the bank or these other things, and that is what gives rise for this concern.

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DOOLITTLE. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Speaker, I think the gentleman from California [Mr. DOOLITTLE] makes a good point, and I have checked with the various Republicans in the course of the day, and none of them ordered the locks changed. So, I do not think that is a problem.

But let me say that, as my colleagues know, the gentleman, I think, has already managed to get the one resolved clause taken care of. We have had a good discussion about this. But what occurs to me is, out of the discussion of this, it is very important that the House does what the gentleman resolves in the second part of his clause, and that is that the House again affirm the need for an expedited investigation into the office of the postmaster and condemns any attempt to interfere or impede this investigation. I think in light of all of this that that would be a very useful thing for the House to have on the record, and I would urge the passage of the resolution simply to make certain that that resolved clause is entered into the RECORD of the proceedings today.

Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from California [Mr. DOOLITTLE] for having yielded to me.

Mr. ROSE. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DOOLITTLE. I yield to the gentleman from North Carolina for the purposes of debate only.

Mr. ROSE. Mr. Speaker, I say to the gentleman, if you're satisfied that we have adequately explained this matter to you, I have no problem in agreeing to the last paragraph.

Fair enough?

Mr. DOOLITTLE. That would be acceptable to us.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. MCNULTY). Does the gentleman from California [Mr. DOOLITTLE] yield back the balance of his time?

Mr. DOOLITTLE. Mr. Speaker, I would like to yield first to the gentleman from New York [Mr. SOLOMON].

□ 1510

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, I have listened carefully to this debate. I have been standing by to begin the leadoff debate on the so-called congressional reform package, the Democrat package, which is going to be laid before us in a few minutes.

I have noticed that this debate has drawn considerable attention in the press galleries and from others. I cannot help but look at the parallel between this debate and the resolution which we are going to be considering in a few moments.

As I read that resolution, I see that the Democrats give us a new House Director, who is really under the direction and control of the Democrat partisan Committee on House Administration. That is a cosmetic change. That is no real change.

The Democrat resolution, if you read through it, gives us a new inspector general, who is not independent but under the direction and control of the Democrat partisan Committee on House Administration. The Democrats absolutely refuse to give us a 50-50 bipartisan Committee on House Administration that would deal with the administrative duties of operating this Congress.

Mr. Speaker, the Democrat resolution gives us a new bipartisan oversight subcommittee, which is really under the ultimate control of the Democrat partisan Committee on House Administration. They give us a new general counsel, now, listen to this, a new general counsel with unlimited assistance, all under the control of the Democrat partisan Committee on House Administration.

Mr. Speaker, I could go on and on and on in reading this, but I hope that those Members listening, will really pay attention to the upcoming debate. Because if we were to adopt the Michel substitute, which truly makes the administrative activities of this Congress bipartisan, we would never again get into this kind of crisis situation.

Mr. Speaker, we all know what is going to happen. We Republicans are going to be voted down on a party line vote and the House is going to be right back in the same position we were in yesterday. That means a year from now, or 2 years from now, we can expect to be subject to the same old kinds of scandals. I, for one, would be embarrassed to be a Member of this House if that is allowed to happen.

Mr. Speaker, I just wanted to call to the attention of Members the parallel between this debate and what we are about to debate about a half hour from now when the Democrat resolution comes up.

Mr. ROSE. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DOOLITTLE. I yield to the gentleman from North Carolina.

Mr. ROSE. Mr. Speaker, I want to thank the gentleman from California [Mr. DOOLITTLE] for all his questions. I would urge Members to vote in favor of the resolution, should the gentleman call for a vote. If the gentleman does not, I will certainly speak in favor of it.

Mr. DOOLITTLE. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I would just like to indicate that in light of the comments of the gentleman from Washington [Mr. SWIFT], it is not my intent to admonish the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. ROBERTS].

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time, and I move the previous question on the resolution.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. MURTHA). The question is on ordering the previous question.

The question was taken; and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground that a quorum is not present and make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Evidently a quorum is not present. The Sergeant at Arms will notify absent Members. The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—yeas 417, nays 1, not voting 16, as follows:

So the resolution was agreed to. The result of the vote was announced as above recorded. A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

REMOVAL OF NAME OF MEMBER AS COSPONSOR OF H.R. 3221

Mrs. COLLINS of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that my name be removed as a cosponsor of H.R. 3221.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. MURTHA). Is there objection to the request of the gentlewoman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

PRIVILEGES OF THE HOUSE—REQUIRING INVESTIGATION INTO ALLEGATIONS OF ILLEGAL HIRING PRACTICES IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Mr. RIGGS. Mr. Speaker, I rise to a question of the privileges of the House, and I offer a privileged resolution (H. Res. 431) and ask for its immediate consideration.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the resolution.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

H. RES. 431

Whereas recent press accounts have cited allegations of illegal hiring practices and ghost employees in the House of Representatives and;

Whereas such allegations violations reflect upon the integrity of the House of Representatives and;

Whereas the Code of Ethics for Government Services (H. Con. Res. 175, 72 Stat. Part 2, B 12) calls on each government official to: "Never discriminate unfairly by the dispensing of special favors or privileges to anyone, whether for remuneration or not; and never accept for himself or his family, favors or benefits under circumstances which might be construed by reasonable persons as influencing the performance of his governmental duties." and;

Whereas such allegations would constitute violations of Rule XLIII, clauses 8, of the Code of Official Conduct which states that "A member or officer of the House shall retain no one under his payroll authority who does not perform official duties commensurate with the compensation received * * *". Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Speaker and Minority Leader shall appoint an ad hoc committee of an equal number of Democrats and Republicans under the jurisdiction of the Committee of Standards of Official Conduct to investigate the published reports and report within 90 days to the full House any violations of House rules.

Resolved, This ad hoc committee is authorized to appoint a special counsel to assist in this investigation and that the funds necessary for this investigation shall be provided by specific resolution.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair rules that the resolution does constitute a question of privilege.

MOTION OFFERED BY MR. GEPHARDT

Mr. GEPHARDT. Mr. Speaker, I move to lay the resolution on the table.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion to lay on the table the resolution offered by the gentleman from California [Mr. RIGGS].

The question was taken; and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

RECORDED VOTE

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Speaker, I demand a recorded vote.

A recorded vote was ordered.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—ayes 231, noes 181, not voting 22, as follows:

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. MURTHA). The Chair will announce. Members should appear in 15 minutes so the House can proceed. Members are waiting until the last minute. The next roll call will last 15 minutes.

□ 1553

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. MURTHA). Are there additional Members who wish to cast their vote? Are there any Members who wish to change their vote? Are there Members who wish to change their vote?

The Chair will announce, in order not to inconvenience the vast number of Members, that the Chair is going to close the voting after a minimum of 15 minutes. The vast majority of Members vote on time, and a few Members consistently come in late.

Are there Members who wish to change their vote? Are there any Members who wish to vote or change their vote?

Let the Chair announce again that the Members who are coming in late are inconveniencing the vast, vast number of Members, and the Chair appreciates the cooperation of Members.

All time has expired.

Messrs. MOODY, GLICKMAN, and BENNETT changed their vote from "aye" to "no."

Mr. LAROCO and Mr. HARRIS changed their vote from "no" to "aye."

So the motion to lay the resolution on the table was agreed to.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

PROVIDING FOR CONSIDERATION OF HOUSE RESOLUTION 423, HOUSE ADMINISTRATIVE REFORM RESOLUTION OF 1992

Mr. MOAKLEY. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Rules, I call up House Resolution 427 and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

H. RES. 427

Resolved, That upon adoption of this resolution it shall be in order to consider in the House the resolution (H. Res. 423) amending the Rules of the House of Representatives to provide for certain changes in the administrative operations of the House. The resolution shall be debatable for not to exceed one hour, to be equally divided and controlled by the majority and minority leaders. The previous question shall be considered as ordered on the resolution to find adoption without intervening motion except an amendment to be offered by Representative Michel of Illinois, consisting of the text printed in the report of the Committee on Rules accompanying the resolution, which shall be debatable for not to exceed one hour, to be equally divided and controlled by the proponent and a Member opposed thereto. All points of order against consideration of and against the resolution, and against the amendment are hereby waived.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. MOAKLEY] is recognized for 1 hour.

Mr. MOAKLEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield the customary one-half hour of debate time to the gentleman from New York [Mr. SOLOMON], pending which I yield myself such time as I may consume.

During consideration of this resolution, all time yielded is for the purpose of debate only.

Mr. Speaker, House Resolution 427 is the rule providing for the consideration of House Resolution 423, the House Administrative Reform Resolution of 1992. The rule provides that consideration of the resolution will be in the House. The rule waives all points of order against the resolution and against its consideration. The resolution will be debatable for 1 hour equally divided and controlled by the majority and minority leaders.

Mr. Speaker, the rule makes in order only one amendment to be offered by Representative MICHEL and debatable for 1 hour. The amendment is contained in the report accompanying this rule.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, the rule waives all points of order against the Michel amendment.

House Resolution 423 proposes major unprecedented reform of the administrative and financial operations of the House. This reform will bring the administration of the House up to professional standards. The resolution provides for the appointment of a Director of Nonlegislative and Financial Services who will be charged with running the daily nonlegislative and financial operations of the House.

The resolution also provides for the appointment of an independent inspector general who will be responsible for conducting audits of the financial operations of all the House officers. These reforms will ensure that the events that have placed a dark cloud over the House during the last year will not occur again.

Mr. Speaker, the majority party will today be accused of partisan tactics. However, I would point out that the resolution allows the minority party to take part in the selection of these two professionals by giving the minority leader veto power over their nomination.

The resolution takes bipartisanship one step further in that it establishes a financial oversight subcommittee with equal representation of majority and minority members to receive the inspector general's audits.

Mr. Speaker, the debate today will also include calls for legislative reform. Accusations will probably be made that the majority party is dragging its feet on matters relating to the reform of the legislative process. Some will claim that now is the proper time to consider major reform.

My response is that the Speaker and I have given Members of both parties our commitment to establish the Hamilton-Gradison Commission which will make an in-depth study of ways to allow the legislative process to function more smoothly.

All Members will agree that the process is very complicated. That is the main reason we should take a long constructive look at what steps could be taken to improve the process.

Mr. Speaker, yesterday during consideration of this matter in the Rules Committee, I emphasized that now more than ever, the American people are looking to Congress for help and relief from the problems that currently plague our society. These are problems ranging from untenable unemployment levels; to adequate research funding for AIDS; to finding ways to help those currently without health insurance face the crisis of illness. But instead of seeing legislative action on these pressing concerns, the American people grow weary and disgusted as they watch us squabble and position and point fingers on embarrassing internal housekeeping concerns.

The true damage caused by our flawed administrative procedures results in the continuing erosion of public confidence in elected leaders, and the lost opportunities for this House to act on the issues of the day because our Members are preoccupied with these embarrassing episodes.

We are not Members of a royal pedigree with a birthright to govern, complete with kingly perks and special privileges. We are regular men and women who are freely elected by the public to serve their interests and maintain their trust.

But due to distracting issues, such as those addressed in this reform package, we are prevented from serving the public's interest and maintaining their trust, that—sadly—has been eroding for years.

We have no one to blame for this current state of affairs but ourselves. And, quite frankly, I am tired of the senseless bickering and finger-pointing that has gone on in the last months—be it at our honorable Speaker, each other, the media, or even our spouses. For that kind of behavior gets us no closer to reform, but merely continues to distract this House from the business it must conduct.

Make no mistake about it—this reform package is a major step forward. It reflects thoughtful discussions by both Republicans and Democrats. It may not be what every one wants and it may not be as all-encompassing as some in this chamber might prefer; but it is, without a doubt, a major step forward. It will bring the House management into the 21st century and it will help this institution avoid the embarrassing, degrading and time-consuming episodes that have taken up so much of this House's valuable time.

The flawed policies and perks that have been part of this institution for over a century are being phased out—and that's a good thing.

However, I hope with my whole heart that once these reforms are made this House will move onto the real business at hand—the stuff we were elected to do. Quite frankly, when you get down to it, whether or not we raise prices in the House stationary store or whether we ask H&R Block to manage this place makes no difference to the lives of the people we represent.

That is not to say that the American people do not want us to run a tight ship; they do. And I know they are frustrated as hell at the stories about the House disbursing office and the post office and other internal embarrassments.

But I would respectfully suggest that the American people are far more frustrated at this Government's inability to deal with issues that impact them. People are really hurting out there.

As important as this reform package is—and, believe me, it is important—nothing we are doing today will put anyone to work; will provide anyone with health care; or will put anyone through school.

It is time to move on. I do not want this House to become mired for weeks and months on end with debate on internal housekeeping issues to the exclusion of all others.

I just hope that those who have talked about the House disbursing office and the House post office and other internal matters as if they were the defining issues of the century—will now take that same energy and passion and direct it towards addressing the urgent needs of the people of this country.

Where is the energy and passion to help the unemployed?

Where is the energy and passion on the health care debate?

And, today, just one day after the great athlete—Arthur Ashe—announced that he has the AIDS virus, where is the energy and passion to get adequate funding for AIDS research?

Mr. Speaker, I do not want this House to become a place where comparatively trivial issues are debated passionately and important ones not at all.

What we are doing today is very important. But it pales in comparison to the significance of the more pressing needs of our country.

Mr. Speaker, the American people are demanding change that goes beyond our internal housekeeping affairs. They need solutions to the problems that plague them. And to find those solutions—it will require this House and its Members to work long and hard. And let us not lose sight of that fact.

So, let us improve this institution with this reform package and let us continue to look at ways to make this place better.

But the House's principal concern should be issues that impact the lives of our constituents. And I sincerely hope that once we have dispensed with this very important legislation, we get back on track and do what we were elected to do.

I urge my colleagues to support this rule and the reform resolution so we can get on to doing what we were sent here to do and that is to serve the people.

□ 1600

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, I thank my good chairman for yielding the time.

Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I might consume.

Mr. Speaker, it is with some reluctance and a great deal of sadness that I stand up here and oppose this rule and the resolution that it makes in order. I say that in all sincerity because I had the privilege of serving with my chairman, the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. MOAKLEY] on the bipartisan leadership task force that was charged with developing a proposal to reform the operations of this House, reforms which we all so desperately want.

I can think of no finer group of men and women in this House than the 16 who comprised that group, from the Speaker himself to our Republican leader and all the rest of them. I know that both sides went into those negotiations with some suspicions about the motives and the agendas of the other side, but we all came out of those deliberations with increased respect for our counterparts in the other party and a realization that everyone had negotiated in good faith and good will; I really mean that.

Unfortunately, we did not come out of that task force with a bipartisan agreement, because there came a point when neither side would yield further for fear that they would lose the support of their respective party caucuses. Perhaps that is not too difficult to understand when we consider that the two parties were coming at this from really different perspectives.

To the Democrats, this was simply a matter of trying to make minimal changes that would take some heat off so that they could go home at Easter-time, coming up soon, and tell the people back home that they had fixed the problems that gave us the House bank scandal and the post office scandal. To Republicans, the administrative problems of this House are only a small part of a larger institutional problem that must be addressed now.

That is the breakdown of the legislative process and the growing procedural unfairness that has also come with 38 consecutive years of one-party control around here. And that happens when any party controls anything for 38 years. I am sure it happened under the Republicans years before that.

You know, we Republicans felt these were all part and parcel of the basic problem and should be addressed simultaneously with administrative reforms since this is probably the best window of opportunity for accomplishing some real reforms in the House.

Mr. Speaker, it is not enough to bring the House into the 20th century administratively if we do not design a streamlined legislative process to carry this Nation into the 21st century and address the real problems of the House.

And let us make no mistake about it because some people are under some kind of delusion around here. The American people are more concerned about our legislative performance, or lack of it, than how we run this place administratively.

Long before the bank and the post office matters burst onto the scene, this Congress had an abysmal public approval rating of under 30 percent. That was before the bank and before the post office scandal. And it has gone down since then even more.

The people were judging us on our job performance, which has to do with making laws, and they were correctly observing that we do a doggone poor job of it, for various reasons.

Mr. Speaker, this institution is in legislative gridlock for the simple reason that we have become so muscle-bound with all of our committees and our subcommittees, our select committees and thousands of employees stepping all over each other. All of this costs the taxpayers of this Nation $3 billion. Do you know how much money that is? That is $3,000 million. Do you know how much that breaks down per Member of Congress? About $6 million apiece.

Do you think we are worth that?

Mr. Speaker, this congressional bureaucracy has become so entangled with overlapping and duplicative jurisdictions and turf fights among our little fiefdoms that we cannot legislate ourselves out of a paper bag. And that is the real scandal around here.

Mr. Speaker, the Republican members of the bipartisan task force asked for one simple thing, and that is some ironclad linkage now between administrative and procedural reforms. Let us demonstrate to the American people that we are not only serious about running our Capital subway trains on time, but that we are just as interested and serious about running the national legislative agenda as well.

What did we get in that regard in this legislation? We got nothing but vague promises that they will discuss it. They, the Democrats, will discuss it. They will think about it, they will hold hearings on it and maybe 2 years from now, they will even vote on it.

Well, that is just not enough. It is not enough for me, it is not enough for any Member of this House, and it is certainly not enough for the American people.

The American people are not willing to wait around here for another 2 years to clean up our House. Mr. Speaker, while we do have a comprehensive proposal for administrative and procedural reforms in the Republican leader's substitute, which is made in order by this rule, we all know that the Democrats are not going to let us pass it. It is going to be voted down.

Mr. Speaker, you and the other Democrats refuse to even let us offer a few modest changes to demonstrate that we want to put this legislative train back on track. We asked, for instance, to have a bipartisan task force on legislative process reform to address the problems of our committees and to report back to this body by July 31 and give the House a vote on these recommendations by September 30, 6 months from now, before we adjourn. That was just rejected summarily on grounds that we should not try to impose our will on the next House, even though that is exactly what we are doing, ladies and gentlemen, with this package we are passing today.

We asked for an amendment as a gesture of good faith now, today, to abolish proxy voting in committees. Proxy voting is the practice whereby a member can ghost-vote in committee by giving a piece of paper to another member.

Why is it wrong to have ghost employees and yet all right for Members of Congress, paid at $130,000 a year, to practice ghost voting? Mr. Speaker, what are we being paid for if it is not to attend to the legislative business we were sent here to do by the 575,000 people that we represent, to perform our jobs?

You know, in the private sector an employee would get docked in his pay for not showing up at work. And yet Members are encouraged by the rules of this House to paper over their absenteeism with proxies.

The majority party on the task force offered some vague hints about outlawing proxy voting to report measures from full committee. But is that proposal, is that proposal in the Democrat resolution? Pick it up over there, show it to me; it is not even in there.

Mr. Speaker, it might not be so bad if we could claim this resolution at least does half a job, which is that it adequately carries out real administrative reform of this House. But while we were tantalized with all sorts of promising concepts, and I was taken in by it—I am a little gullible and naive and I believe people—during our discussions, those were somehow lost when this was finally put in bill form on Monday of this week. To quote an ancient Greek proverb, there was “many a slip between the cup and the lip.”

Mr. Speaker, we Republicans were initially encouraged in the task force by all the talk about a professional, competent and nonpartisan House administrator, about doing away with patronage and about having a tough, independent inspector general, which we demanded.

But when we finally got the actual draft language of this resolution 3 days ago, those noble concepts had vanished. Something had been lost between that cup and the lip, and we were left with a resolution that really just pays lip service to those concepts.

Not only did we find that the emperor had no clothes, but we found he had lost his teeth as well.

Mr. Speaker, I am not one to take up the time of the House on this rule by detailing all of the sins, of commission or omission, in the resolution. We will have time to do that during general debate.

Instead let me bring things back to this rule and this process to make my main point about this whole task force exercise. The task force is its own best proof that things are still broken around here and the majority has not learned one darned thing.

Here we are on this floor supposedly talking about institutional reform under a gag rule that does not allow Members on your side or this side to offer their amendments to a resolution which has not had the benefit of going through the normal committee process of hearings and deliberations. Nobody has sat on a committee that gave this resolution any consideration.

We are told instead that it is more important for us to pass something, pass anything, before Easter so that we can point to reform. Mr. Speaker, we can do better than this. We are capable of doing better than this. We have committees that were created to give us better than this. Unless we can pass the Michel substitute, which gives us real administrative reform and real legislative reform, we have once again booted away a golden opportunity. And that is not all that is going to get booted around here unless we start doing something about true reform.

So, Mr. Speaker, I urge Members to vote down this rule and, failing that, I hope we vote down the resolution.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. MOAKLEY. Mr. Speaker, for purposes of debate only, I yield 4 minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. FRANK].

Mr. FRANK of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, even by the standard set by my friend from New York, we have just seen an unusual gap between rhetoric and reality. Let us take as an example the gentleman, bemused by the words, who says, “What is the difference between ghost voting and ghost employees?” The difference is, of course, enormous. And I think this stands as a good example of the degree of logical rigor that the other side is bringing to this debate.

□ 1620

Now the accusation of ghost employees made without the slightest shred of evidence on the other side earlier by those with a Dan Aykroyd fantasy who see themselves as ghostbusters, they argue that there were some ghost employees, but evince no evidence for it whatsoever.

Now a ghost employee is, of course, someone who gets paid not to work. Proxy voting is a different issue. No one seriously thinks paying someone who does not show up for work is the same as proxy voting, but it is an example of the kind of slipshod rhetoric that we are getting from the other side on this, that the gentleman would have made that kind of an analogy. Proxy voting is something very different.

The gentleman suggests that, when people vote by proxy, they are somehow absent from their duties. Most of us understand, and I have seen meetings when there were proxy votes being cast by Republicans and Democrats. I was in a meeting on the consumer bill the other day when one Republican was there and cast all the proxies for all the others. Were they off larking somewhere? Were they stealing the money or cheating? No. They were doing other things.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FRANK of Massachusetts. No.

The point is that the gentleman from New York, having set the precedent of having never yielded to me, for a while I will not yield. I will yield later.

Mr. SOLOMON. Just a minute. I yielded to the gentlemen all the time in the committee the other day.

Mr. FRANK of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman's record for inaccuracy, the gentleman from New York, is unbroken today.

The point is this: When people are voting by proxy, they are often at other committee meetings, they are meeting with constituents, they are on the floor of the House. I want to take this as an example of the accuracy of what we are being told today.

When the gentleman from New York [Mr. SOLOMON] says proxy voting means people are absentees and not working, people voting by proxy, he said, are taking money, and they are not doing their work for it.

Now, no one who understands the way this place works thinks that is true much of the time. Proxy voting occurs because there are multiple committee meetings. Proxy voting occurs when Members may be meeting with constituents, when they may be on the floor, when they may be in their districts meeting with people. The argument may or may not be a good one against proxy voting, but to equate people voting by proxy with people neglecting their jobs simply has no validity.

Mr. LEWIS of California. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FRANK of Massachusetts. I will yield first to the gentleman from California.

Mr. LEWIS of California. Mr. Speaker, I appreciate my colleague yielding.

I am just confused, and maybe he can help a little bit.

Mr. FRANK of Massachusetts. Yes, I understand it.

Mr. LEWIS of California. The gentleman can understand that.

I say to the gentleman, “Let's see. We're talking about proxy voting, and somebody probably related that to ghost voting or something, and that was disconcerting to you. I thought in the last vote we took care of the fact that you and your colleagues on that side of the aisle want to do nothing about ghost employees.”

Mr. FRANK of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, reclaiming my time, now this is again an example of the absence of any kind of logical coherence. What we had was a resolution that says, "We don't know about any ghost voting, but we read somewhere in the paper we shouldn't have any." It is already illegal, and what we said was, "If people came up with any allegations of it, that would be a different story."

The point that I made was when the gentleman from New York [Mr. SOLOMON] analogizes ghost employees, people who are fraudulently taking money, with proxy voting, we are seeing an example of illogic at its greatest.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FRANK of Massachusetts. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. SOLOMON. I say to the gentleman from Massachusetts, "You know, you just made my point, Mr. FRANK, because I think it's outrageous that someone would be back in their district while they are casting proxy votes here in Washington. I've never done that in my life, and I think this practice is outrageous."

Mr. SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. FRANK] has expired.

Mr. MOAKLEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield an additional 2 minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. FRANK of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. MOAKLEY], but the difference is this. The gentleman may think it is outrageous to be in the district when someone is also voting by proxy. I do not. I think efficiency is important. I think it is relevant for Members to be working as hard as they can on a lot of things. There are votes that go on in committee that are routine. There are duties in the districts. People have to sometimes miss votes on the floor of the House because there are pressing matters in the district. But to allow people to be voting in committees while they are also in the districts violates no principle of democracy I know of.

But I will also make this point. The point that I was alluding to was the point the gentleman from New York [Mr. SOLOMON] makes. To analogize fraudulently taking money for not working to being in your district, meeting with your constituents while voting by proxy, simply has no logic to it, and the proxy voting focus gets to what we have here. People who cannot gain the majority through the electoral process are trying to gain it through the procedural process. The fact is that not having proxy voting would either force a reduction in the extent to which Members would be available to meet with constituents, or it would require Members to cut down on the work they do.

The final point I would like to make is this: If the gentleman is correct, that proxy voting is somehow cheating people, we ought to be clear that it is equally indulged in by both sides. The fact is that proxy voting is indulged in by Republicans and Democrats. I do not think that Republicans, when they are voting by proxy, feel they are cheating people. They may feel it is a procedure they want changed.

This is an example of the kind of debate we have, an example the gentleman from California says, "Oh, you people don't want to do anything about ghost employees." If Members want to come forward with any evidence of ghost employees, it will be acted on. Instead what we have is the kind of McCarthyism which says, "I read something in the paper, I will offer no evidence, here we come forward."

What we have here is part of a diversion, and we will be able to discuss that for the rest of the afternoon.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, I am tempted to yield to my good friend, the Democrat gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. OBEY] to answer the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. FRANK] on proxy voting, but instead I yield such time as he may consume to the ranking Republican on the Committee on House Administration, the gentleman from California [Mr. THOMAS], to respond.

Mr. THOMAS of California. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from New York [Mr. SOLOMON] for yielding to me. I do want to respond to my friend, the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. FRANK] specifically, not vaguely, and I do not want to analogize. I want him to pick up the resolution, and I want him to look at page 8, and I want him to look at line three. In that section is constructed a bipartisan Subcommittee of House Administration, and the decisionmaking process is thus, according to his resolution:

Any matter that, by reason of a tie vote, cannot be resolved by the Subcommittee shall be reported to the Committee on House Administration * * *.

Mr. Speaker, I say to my colleagues, "Individually you people are OK. But collectively, when you come into this place after drinking the aphrodisiac of absolute power, you folks go whacko. Look at that single issue. Who do you think is going to swallow this placebo of shared power?"

Mr. FRANK of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. THOMAS of California. Mr. Speaker, I am citing specific examples.

Mr. FRANK of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. THOMAS of California. The gentleman wants an opportunity to speak he is getting one. Let me finish my statement.

Nowhere in the world, in any parliamentary body, in any parliamentary rules, does a tie move forward to be decided by someone else.

In Jefferson's Manual, under which this House is run, a tie loses.

Robert's Rules of Order, a tie loses.

German Bundestag, a tie loses.

House of Commons, a tie loses.

The Boston downtown Rotary, a tie loses.

In the Security Council of the United Nations, a tie loses.

Nowhere in the world does a tie move on.

Mr. Speaker, this is a bipartisan subcommittee, and in a tie it moves on to the partisan full committee.

Mr. FRANK of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. THOMAS of California. Nowhere, nowhere but in the palace of partisanship, in the Kingdom of Foley, does a tie move forward.

Mr. FRANK of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. THOMAS of California. The gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. FRANK] wanted specific examples. I am giving him only one.

Mr. FRANK of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. THOMAS of California. Mr. Speaker, I say to the gentleman, "I'll yield when I finish."

Is this the gentleman's idea of a meaningful debate, trying to continually and repeatedly say, "Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?"

Mr. Speaker, I will yield when I am finished with my statement.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, I do not want this time counted.

Mr. THOMAS of California. And I expect the Chair to defend my time. Who has the time, Mr. Speaker?

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. MURTHA). The gentleman from California [Mr. THOMAS] has the time.

Mr. THOMAS of California. Mr. Speaker, I say to the gentleman, "You stood up there and in your marvelous logic criticized us for not being on point. I am on point. Your resolution is phony. It's a sham." Now somebody is going to buy the argument that it is bipartisan, but the gentleman has set up a structure in which the bipartisan committee has a tie moving forward to a partisan structure. If the gentleman understands that, he understands that his resolution is phony in terms of a bipartisan structure. Nowhere does a tie move forward, nowhere but in the cockamamie thing those folks have established, trying to sell it as a bipartisan operation.

Mr. FRANK of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. THOMAS of California. No.

Now I yield to the gentleman because I have decided to yield to him.

□ 1630

Mr. FRANK of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I hope the gentleman feels better now. The point I wanted to make is this.

Mr. THOMAS of California. Mr. Speaker, I reclaim my time.

Mr. Speaker, I will now yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. FRANK] if he wants to carry on specific dialog about the phony resolution. Does the gentleman want to discuss the specifics over which I am speaking, or does he want to make cute statements?

Mr. FRANK of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I do want to discuss the specifics, which is why I will wait until the gentleman from California [Mr. THOMAS] is through, so I can have a rational conversation.

Mr. THOMAS of California. Mr. Speaker, obviously the gentleman cannot have a rational conversation with someone else talking specifics. You have to wait until I am through so you can have it with yourself. That is an example of the absolute arrogance of power. The only time Democrats can have a rational conversation is with themselves. The only time they can have a bipartisan structure is when they have a fallback so there is a fail-safe partisan structure.

Do not think you are fooling anybody by this. This is stupid. Why are you doing it?

Mr. MOAKLEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. FRANK].

Mr. FRANK of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, the point I wanted to make to the gentleman from California [Mr. THOMAS] before he was playing his yo-yo game was that in his response on specifics he was not responding to anything I asked for. I did not ask him for specifics about everything. He may have come into the middle of the conversation. I was responding when I talked about specifics, particularly as I made clear to the question of ghost employees.

So the gentleman's bravado about giving me specifics was a response to a question I never asked. I was not doubting that there were specifics in the resolution. Of course there are. There are specifics about which we disagree.

What the gentleman totally misunderstood was that my point was that we had had a lot of bravado about ghost employees with no specifics about that. So his response to me was wholly irrelevant to the question I posed.

Second—

Mr. THOMAS of California. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FRANK of Massachusetts. No.

Mr. THOMAS of California. Would the gentleman yield?

Mr. FRANK of Massachusetts. My objection was to the gentleman from New York—

Mr. THOMAS of California. Will the gentleman yield? Will the gentleman yield?

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. MURTHA). The gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. FRANK] controls the time.

Mr. FRANK of Massachusetts. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. THOMAS of California. Would the gentleman yield?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair would advise Members it does not meet with the decorum of the House for a gentleman when he knows, and asked for order himself, to then repeatedly raise the same question at another time after the Member controlling the time declines to yield.

Mr. THOMAS of California. Mr. Speaker, I would have enjoyed this speech earlier.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman is out of order. The gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. FRANK] controls the time.

Mr. FRANK of Massachusetts. Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The points I wanted to make were simply these.

Mr. THOMAS of California. Would the gentleman yield?

Mr. FRANK of Massachusetts. First, the request I made for specifics has nothing to do with the answer I got from the gentleman from California.

Mr. THOMAS of California. Would the gentleman yield?

Mr. FRANK of Massachusetts. Second, my point was that there was a total lack of logic in analogizing proxy voting, whether one likes it or not, with ghost employees.

Mr. THOMAS of California. Would the gentleman yield?

Mr. FRANK of Massachusetts. My time has expired.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I cannot believe that I hear people standing on this floor defending proxy voting. I just wanted to show for the RECORD that we Republicans offered to ban proxy voting by an amendment we offered in the Committee on Rules last night. It was voted down on a party line vote, with all Democrats voting against banning proxy voting.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. ROBERTS], a member of the Committee on House Administration.

Mr. ROBERTS. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding. I am going to complete my statement, so if anyone wants me to yield, I am sorry, we are just not going to do that at this particular time.

Mr. Speaker, I hope we can bring some logical coherence to an effort to establish congressional reform.

I have got a horse that you can ride; an amendment that can be pertinent to what we are trying to do around here. I tried to offer the amendment and make it in order before the Committee on Rules as of yesterday, but, unfortunately, on a 9-to-4 vote it was not made in order.

I agree with the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. MOAKLEY] when he says that we must exercise passion and commitment to health care, to the unemployed, in my case to farmers and ranchers out in Kansas, all the regulatory burdens that are placed upon them. But I will tell the gentleman this: Every country elevator, every church, every meeting that I have attended, the No. 1 question is the faith and confidence of the American people in the institution of this Congress. So while it is an internal matter, while it is an inside-the-beltway matter, it has become the number one issue of concern on the hearts and minds of the American people, and we must settle it. We must achieve reform.

How to do that: Regardless of the problem, whether it has been the House bank, whether it has been the restaurant, whether it is the post office and the ongoing investigation in that regard, the one culprit that has come back time and time again is an outdated patronage system that does not work.

It is a sad, sordid tale. Perhaps ghost employees, I cannot comment on that, but ghost employees and Dan Ackroyd may or may not have worked in the post office, I can assure the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. FRANK].

Why can we not get rid of the patronage system? I had an amendment that would deal with the services of the House in 13 separate functions that should in no way have pertinence in regard to individual Members and the patronage system. We should not be involved with it.

My amendment would have saved $25.6 million and eliminated 1,015 patronage jobs.

The Speaker of the House has already indicated that the patronage days or the days of partisan patronage as controlled by the Democrat patronage committee are numbered, and it ought to be a House run in these particular functions by what you know, not who you know. There should be a degree of professionalism, at least some degree of being able to do the job. Not the case where we have determined we have illiterate people in the post office trying to sort the mail. How do you do that? That does not make any sense.

We can contract that out. We can do a very reasonable job. We have in the past with other functions of the House.

It is a reasonable amendment. All it would have done was to instruct the Speaker to go down these 13 functions and contract them out to the lowest and best bid. We get out of the patronage business. You do not want to be in the patronage business.

Before the Committee on Rules the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. MOAKLEY] said the happiest day in his life was when he got off the patronage committee. I wish I was off the patronage committee in regard to the Republican side. But the rule did not allow my amendment, and the rule should be defeated.

Mr. MOAKLEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. OBEY].

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Speaker, I would like to simply say that I just heard the news that the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. WEBER] had indicated he was not going to run again. I hope that is not true. If it is, I simply want to say that I think that this House is losing a number of tremendously qualified quality Members on both sides of the aisle. I think that given that fact we have a special obligation to debate this issue with profound seriousness. I hope that we can avoid turning this debate into a House version of the Clarence Thomas hearings. I just hope we will all be a little more sober today in dealing with this issue.

Mr. Speaker, having said that, let me say that before I came to the Congress my family ran a restaurant. If I had wanted to worry about running a restaurant, a barber shop, the carpenter shop, or anything like that, I would not have run for Congress in the first place. I would have stayed in my family's restaurant business in Wausau, WI.

But I think we were elected to deal with the public's business, and the public's business right now is attacking the economic, health care, job, and family security issues that they are all worried about.

So I think we have an institutional obligation to deal with these issues, to deal with them today, and move on to their business, rather than ours.

I think the resolution which we are going to be debating shortly will do that. The resolution does establish a very tight system to protect the financial integrity of this institution in terms of the supply and service agencies that we deal with.

That is the issue here today. The issue is whether we are going to assure that the support services of this House are going to be organized and overseen in a way which guarantees the financial integrity of this institution, and that is all we ought to be doing in this resolution.

Now, there are those on the Republican side who are suggesting that we ought to turn this also into a power issue so that we can redress the balance of power between different groups in the House.

□ 1640

That, too, is a legitimate issue. But in my view it ought to be handled in a different forum, and that is why we are suggesting the creation of the Hamilton Committee.

I just ask my colleagues to remember this: I was appointed by a previous Speaker, 16 years ago, to chair a commission to deal with the need for ethics reform in this House and the need for administrative reform. We passed that ethics reform in 1977, but then when we came back to this House to finish the job by proposing a House administrator, we proposed an administrator, an auditor. We proposed giving them the authority to eliminate all discount prices for perks around here.

We needed that to pass, but it did not pass. We got 160 votes for it on the Democratic side of the aisle, 113 voted against it. On the Republican side of the aisle, there were zero votes for it and 139 against it.

Now, there were a number of reasons for that. The minority did not like the way that the resolution was being handled. They wanted to drag in additional things, just as is the case today.

I ask my colleagues not to make the mistake that was made 15 years ago. Fifteen years ago when we brought that package to the floor, it was probably loaded up with too many items because we tried to attach the legislative reform items along with the financial reform items. And as a result, we lost the package.

If we had had that package, I am convinced that the House would not have gone through the excruciating embarrassment it has gone through the last month on these administrative matters.

So I think our obligation today is to put first things first. Our obligation is to do what we tried to do and lost on 15 years ago, reform the financial structure that oversees the administrative support system of this House and then move on in the next step in the creation of the Hamilton Committee to review the long-term power issues that divide us.

The issue today should not be the power issues. The issue today ought to be the financial integrity of the administrative support system of the House. That is what this resolution tries to focus on. It is proper to do so. It is necessary to do so, if we want to see progress.

I urge my colleagues to keep their eye on the ball. Do not make the mistake that was made 15 years ago.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, I would like to point out that the Committee on Rules Democrats voted last night to not let us ban Congress from being exempt from the same laws that American citizens are on a party line 9-to-4 vote.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. WALKER].

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me.

A few minutes ago the House voted against an investigation of ghost employment in the House. Why does that relate to the bill that we have before us?

I would invite the Members to turn to page 4 of the bill and look at section 4 and discover that patronage is not eliminated in this bill. In fact, there is only one place in this bill that patronage is covered, and that is in the new director of nonlegislative services.

Other than that, all the patronage in the House is allowed to continue, in the Doorkeeper's Office, in the Sergeant at Arms Office, in the Clerk's Office, all of the places that are now suspected of having ghost employees will continue to be allowed to have ghost employees because the House voted a few minutes ago not to investigate it, and this bill allows it to continue.

Last night I went before the Committee on Rules and asked for an amendment, one simple amendment, to be put in this bill that would cover the rest of the offices under patronage. I attended every minute of every meeting of the task force.

In those meetings on repeated occasions, the Democrats, and particularly the gentleman from Washington, Speaker FOLEY, said, "I want to get rid of patronage. I want all patronage ended."

But when the bill came forward, that is not what they did. The bill only eliminated patronage in a narrow framework.

The broader framework of the other three constitutional officers is not covered at all.

I wanted to offer a simple amendment to cover everything. I was turned down, turned down flat on a party-line vote.

We do not have an open rule out here, and we have a badly flawed bill. This is not a reform bill. The Democrats have just proved to us a few minutes ago, they are not reformers. They want to keep the patronage system in place, and then want the patronage system to continue to employ ghosts.

I would suggest to the House that it is now time to turn down this package and get us a package that is truly bipartisan and is truly reform. We are not reforming the patronage system here, and we will not allow an amendment on the floor to reform the patronage system, and then we vote to continue to employ ghosts.

I think it is appalling. This is not any kind of reform that we can agree to at all.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I would just like to call to the attention of the membership that the majority just notified me that there were not nine Democrats voting to continue to exempt Members of Congress from those laws the American people have to abide by. It was only eight Democrats instead. The gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. GORDON] was the only one that was not there voting against it. We cannot vote proxies in our committee. That is why.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. NUSSLE].

Mr. NUSSLE. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me.

I had the opportunity to listen a minute ago to my friend from Wisconsin [Mr. OBEY] indicate about the friend to all of us, the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. WEBER], who has indicated he is not going to run again. I think we ought to dedicate this procedure and this process to those Members who are not running again because they are frustrated, Members like the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. WEBER], Members like Senator RUDMAN, Members who are frustrated with this process.

But we cannot do it today because we have a closed rule. We saw what happened on the floor of the House just minutes ago when Members were not allowed to debate, to discuss, to discover, to have ingenuity, a new process. We are closed out.

I have got hundreds of letters. These are just the letters from outside Iowa. I cannot even carry the letters from inside Iowa down here of people who have come up with ideas for reform.

I have ideas for how to change this place, the people's House of Representatives. Yet the people up in the gallery, Mr. Speaker, the people back home listening cannot do anything about it because their representatives, like me, are closed out of the process.

I had four amendments, four, I thought, well-thought-out amendments given to me as ideas from Iowans. And the chairman of the Committee on Rules gave me the opportunity to at least discuss it at Rules. But I thought we also needed to at least have the opportunity to discuss it in the full House.

The four amendments were simple. Stop the special treatment of Congress. We also needed to have merit pay for Members of Congress. If we cannot balance the budget, we ought to have our pay cut.

The next one was just simply use a stamp instead of the frank, eliminate the incumbent advantage of the franking privilege.

The last one, my colleagues will love this one, is called "Go home." If we cannot get our business done here in Congress by the end of the fiscal year, September 30, we ought to go home. We ought to go home. And if we cannot, we ought to get our pay docked 1 day's pay for every day we stay here.

Those are just some ideas. There are many Members of Congress, both Republicans and Democrats, who want to participate. And yet we are closed out.

Vote against the rule. This is unfair. Mr. MOAKLEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. TRAFICANT].

Mr. TRAFICANT. Mr. Speaker, we are not here today because of proxy votes, legislative quirks, or patronage. If we were here today about patronage, I would have to ask the question, who is doing the hiring at the White House? I do not think they are selecting anybody from the Democrat Congressional Campaign Committee over there.

Let me say this, we are here today about perks. And there was a good recent article in the Roll Call. Two things I think very important. No. 1, whenever there is pressure put on the Congress, the Congress turns into a bunch of wimps. Whenever, the microscope comes out, we have more self-righteousness than 10 TV preachers around here.

But the second thing I think is very important.

Legislative elected bodies of people never threaten any democracy or republic. But monarchs, kings and powerful individuals with excessive powers have knocked off a lot of them.

Now, I do not know about my colleagues, but I am here to serve constituents, and that means I cannot have a booth in the Rayburn rest room as an office.

□ 1650

It means I should have a parking place. I do not want to jump my car in the reflecting pool. It means we need a frank. We should not abuse it, but town criers do not cut it any more. Word-of-mouth is not going to service the people.

Article I, the first article of the Constitution, sets out the most important people in our democracy, the only people that cannot be appointed, and they are sitting in our seats. We are so important we are No. 1 in the Constitution, and we are the most important links to our people.

The only problem is, Congress does not act like it. Congress will give it up to the Chief Executive. He cannot carry out foreign policy. Show that to me in the Constitution. He cannot even appoint an ambassador without having it approved by the people. He cannot enter a treaty without having it approved by the people. We are the most important. I cannot serve my constituents from a phone booth.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. DELAY].

Mr. DELAY. Mr. Speaker, let me try to put some of this in perspective. The people of the United States have been watching what is going on in this House for months now. To me they are demanding openness and honesty and integrity. They have looked at the Democrats' mismanagement of the restaurant system in this House, the House Bank, that has hurt a bunch of Members. They are having the House Post Office investigated. I think we just set a record over the last few weeks of mismanagement that cannot even write bills that can come down to the floor and pass their own pieces of legislation.

The American people are looking for true reform. What do we get? It is just amazing to me. We get more bureaucrats, two new officers, with more staff. They are not eliminating any officers or staff. We are going to layer on some more. As one Member has already said, we are appointing two new scapegoats.

In fact, they even took out the very portion of authority for the inspector general that would have saved us from the bank, the performance audit. They took that out of their own bill. I guess they do not want performance audits around here.

It just amazes me. Why don't they just go to the existing officers they have now and say, "Do your job. If you need additional authority, we will give it to you, and then we will follow up to see that you are doing your job." That is what we are elected to do. That is what the leadership and the majority are elected to do.

What they want to do is another coverup. They want to keep their old boy network. We talked about keeping the old boy patronage. We have amendments to stop that. I had an amendment to stop the ghost voting. They want to keep their old boy abilities to allow Members to ghost vote through proxy systems. Members should go to work. They should go to the committees, participate and vote, sitting there. Yet they do not want us to have those kinds of amendments on this floor.

We should have the privilege to vote on each one of these issues individually, but they will not allow us to do that because they close the rules and gag the Members of this House.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. SANTORUM].

Mr. SANTORUM. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me.

Mr. Speaker, I have just been informed by the ranking Member that this House of Representatives in 1992 has not seen an open rule. In all of 1992, all of the bills we have debated, we have not debated an open rule.

For those who do not understand what an open rule is, that means that we can come to the House, and a Member of Congress who is elected by the same number of people who elected all the people on the Committee on Rules cannot come to the House of Representatives in the well and offer an amendment to the bill that is here. They cannot offer a substitute. They cannot get a vote on what the people back in their districts would like to see done.

That is what an open rule is, to allow open debate, to allow amendments, to allow discussion. That is what open rules are for.

In 1992, we have had no open rules, none. And we wonder why we need reform. We wonder why the people on this side of the aisle stand here and scream and holler that we are not part of the process and that we do not get a chance. It is because we have no opportunity to debate the great issues of the day.

Mr. MOAKLEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to my friend, the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. FORD].

Mr. FORD of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, I do not know the gentleman that was just in the well very well, and I do not know how long he has been here, but I would remind him that as recently as 2 weeks ago we spent 2 days on this floor with a wide-open rule writing the Higher Education Reauthorization Act, and 365 Members of the House, and the gentleman, I presume, included, voted for it.

Mr. HENRY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FORD of Michigan. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. HENRY. Mr. Speaker, once again there was a preprinting requirement.

Mr. FORD of Michigan. A preprinting requirement? The gentleman made the flat statement he had never seen an open rule. All he has got to do is go back and read the rule.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, there has not been one this year on the floor.

Mr. FORD of Michigan. You are on the Rules Committee. I don't mind debating you people when you tell the truth, but when you let a young man come up here and say—

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Speaker, I demand the gentleman's words be taken down.

□ 1700

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. MURTHA). The Clerk will report the words.

Because there was so much shouting and lack of decorum in the House the Clerk will report all the words that could be recorded.

The Clerk read as follows:

You are on the Rules Committee. I don't mind debating you people when you tell the truth, but when you let a young man come up here and say—

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my motion.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Pennsylvania withdraws his demand.

The gentleman from Michigan [Mr. FORD] may proceed in order.

Mr. MOAKLEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Delaware [Mr. CARPER].

Mr. CARPER. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the rule.

Mr. Speaker, in recent years we have witnessed the embrace of democracy by people of the world from the Soviet Union, from Eastern Europe, to Latin America, Southeast Asia and to South Africa, and ironically, that embrace of democracy is occurring at the very time when a number of Americans here in this cradle of democracy are losing their faith in our basic democratic institutions, including our Nation's Congress. And as I sit here this afternoon listening to this debate, I must confess I am losing some of my faith as well.

A number of steps must be taken if we are to begin to restore the confidence of the American people. I know that, you know that; confidence in this institution, confidence in our ability to govern. Today we have the opportunity to take one of those steps, not all of the steps, not the last step, but a good first step, one that we should take.

I believe the reforms that are before us today, while they are long overdue, represent genuine change and incorporate some of the best ideas of both Democrats and Republicans.

Let me just also say I did not come here 10 years ago to enjoy the perks of Congress, I did not come here 10 years ago to proxy vote. I came here 10 years ago to help govern our Nation, and I think all of us came here feeling the same way. There is much that needs to be done. Availability and affordability of health care benefits, deficits that have reached $400 billion, stagnant productivity, a declining standard of living, dysfunctional families and schools where too little learning is taking place.

Let us pass this reform package today. But let us also pledge here and now that we will work together we will work together, for some reforms in the way we finance our campaigns, in the way we legislate through this House of Representatives. And while we do that, while we debate those issues, let us get back to work on the issues and concerns that brought me here and that brought each and every one of us here.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. LIVINGSTON], who was a member of this bipartisan task force.

Mr. LIVINGSTON. Mr. Speaker, I just want to say that I totally agree with my friend who just addressed the House. He is absolutely right. We should be here trying to reform the procedures of the House of Representatives. Unfortunately, we are not. We are not. This bill, House Resolution 423, does not do it.

It could have. I was proud to have been named as a member of the task force to try to rewrite these rules and revise them. I felt deeply tarnished, and I felt like my integrity was impugned by the problems that this House of Representatives has faced over the last 6 to 8 weeks. We have the post office problems, we have the banking problems. I did not even bounce a check, but I go home and people say, "You're a crook."

Folks, I want to tell you we have problems, and it is important that we revise the rules. But this does not do it.

We had some good task force meetings. We came very close to agreeing. But finally when the chips were down the majority went back to their caucus and could not put a package together that their members would vote for, so they came back with this flimsy excuse for reform.

I want to tell Members that I believe that a change in this administration is needed. I believe it is needed, and this bill does make some steps toward changing the administration of the House. I agree with that. But it does not go far enough.

Whose fault is that? Whose fault were the problems of the administration? They are not the fault of Republicans because we have not run the House of Representatives or anything like it in 40 years. The Democrats have.

Now they have a broken system, and it seems to me that we ought to be working together to repair it. But the fact is this bill does not do it.

We offered some suggestions to try to improve the system. We had a whole package of proposals in the Michel amendment. We tried to narrow them down to about two or three, but they were not accepted. We tried to improve the checks and balances in the House, because we do believe that a two-party system, an active, conflicting two-party system will improve the overall level of performance of the House of Representatives and improve the integrity of the House of Representatives. But they did not want our improvements. So in the final analysis, they dictated to us what they were going to give us, and they wrote this bill which is inadequate.

As an example of what they gave us, I want to refer the House to "The Office of General Counsel." That says, "The Committee on House Administration shall provide for an Office of General Counsel in the House in a manner which shall ensure appropriate coordination and participation with both the majority and minority leaderships on representational and litigational matters." All we wanted was a co-equal voice in the Office of the General Counsel. We wanted to be warned ahead of time when legal problems came up that would affect all of us and affect our integrity.

What do we get? A namby-pamby paragraph with so many loopholes you could drive a battleship through it. That paragraph says absolutely nothing, and it is absolutely typical of this entire bill.

I want bipartisan change. But I think that you owe it to us to let us be part of that bipartisan change and take some of our suggestions and not dictate to us what we are supposed to like.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, I yield the remainder of my time to the very distinguished gentleman from California, [Mr. DREIER], a Member and my colleague, the gentleman from Massachusetts, respects.

Mr. DREIER of California. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding the time and I appreciate the kindness.

Mr. Speaker, this bill is being touted as a measure which is going to reform and open up this institution. As our colleague on the House Administration Committee, the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. ROBERTS] likes to say, sunshine is the horse that we are trying to ride here so that everyone can see what is going on. And the real tragedy is that we do have business as usual.

The gentleman from Michigan [Mr. FORD] was trying to claim earlier that we had an open rule on the education bill. Mr. Speaker, it was not an open rule. If we go back and look at 1977, only 15 percent of the rules that have come before this House have been restrictive rules. In this 102d Congress 64 percent of the rules which have come before this House are restrictive, and Mr. Speaker, not one open rule this calendar year until 2 hours ago, and we have yet to consider it here on the House floor. I am happy to say that the NASA rule up in the Rules Committee is going to be open. But the example that often is used as to why we should have restrictive rules is that legislation is so complex we cannot open it up on the House floor. Sometimes that may be apropos, may be apropos in the case of a very complex tax bill. But this bill in which we are trying to let every single Member have the opportunity to reform this institution is a closed and a restrictive rule.

We are trying to open up the institution, and yet we are preventing members from having the opportunity to amend it. We had a litany of very good, decent amendments offered by Members on our side of the aisle, freshman Members like the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. NUSSLE], who bring ideas from their constituents to the Rules Committee. And no, I do not think that every single idea should be able to have an amendment on the floor. But on a bill like this in which we are trying to open up this institution, it seems to me that we have very little choice other than to allow Members to do it, and tragically it is business as usual.

This measure, Mr. Speaker, appears to be doing nothing more than rearranging the deck chairs on the Titanic. We need to do everything that we can to open it up.

Oppose this rule and oppose this sham.

Mr. MOAKLEY. Mr. Speaker, for our last speaker to close debate, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. DURBIN].

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. Speaker, I am proud to be a Member of the U.S. House of Representatives. Only 12,000 Americans in the history of this Nation have had this honor. And despite what has taken place in this city and on this Hill over the last few months in reference to this institution, I am still very proud of this opportunity.

I am saddened by what has occurred in this debate and what has occurred in the months preceding it. There is a divisive and venomous atmosphere here that is not just claiming Members of the majority party, but today claimed one of your more distinguished Members of the minority, VIN WEBER, a conservative with whom I disagree many times, but whom I respect very much.

This atmosphere which the newer Members and some of the older Members are engendering is not making this a better institution.

□ 1710

We were not sent here as Members of the House to count the silverware in the House dining room. We were sent here to be counted on issues like jobs and health care and education. I was sent here by a half a million people to fight for them, not to stand by the time clocks in the post office to see if the employees show up on time.

Let me say something about the people who work here: They have been discredited by this debate, and they should not be. For every one person who misuses his job on this Capitol Hill, there are hundreds who work very hard and are a credit to this institution, and we do not take a moment to recognize the fine work of thousands of men and women who work on Capitol Hill.

I introduced a bill several weeks ago with the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. GLICKMAN] and the gentleman from California [Mr. MILLER] asking for a professional administrator. We have got it with this bill, and the minority has the veto power over that administrator. That is a step forward, a major step forward.

I hope we will put an end to this venomous atmosphere, the privileged motions that sound like the rankest form of McCarthyism. For goodness sakes, let us get down to business.

The people watching this debate have to wonder how we can generate this level of anger and interest over house-keeping responsibilities and ignore the basic issues that face this Nation. Let us put this important administrative reform behind us and get to work on the legislative agenda we were sent here to address.

Mr. DORGAN of North Dakota. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in support of legislation to initiate administrative reform of the U.S. House of Representatives. We should pass House Resolution 423 today in order to strengthen management of nonlegislative and financial services in the House.

There has been some mismanagement in Congress. We need some changes because there is no excuse for poor management. The resolution responds to the problem by putting in place a series of management reforms.

ADMINISTRATIVE REFORMS

The legislation creates a new position of Director of Non-Legislative and Financial Services. The Director will be a professional manager with extensive management and financial experience. The Director will be jointly appointed by the Speaker, minority leader, and majority leader to ensure that no partisan agenda is pursued in running the administrative affairs of the House. The Director will supervise a wide range of activities including salaries and benefits for Members and staff, House internal mail, and office furnishings and supplies.

The resolution also establishes the position of House inspector general, who will conduct audits of the financial operations of the director and elected House officers. This position will also be filled on a bipartisan basis through a joint appointment by the Speaker, minority leader, and majority leader.

The measure further abolishes the position of House Postmaster. Outside mail operations—including stamp sales—will now be managed by the U.S. Postal Service itself, which will set up substations in House office buildings.

The House will oversee these changes with a bipartisan Subcommittee on Administrative Oversight, composed of an equal number of Democrats and Republicans. This again will help to ensure that partisan politics do not undercut appropriate administration of the House. To that end, this arrangement must be bipartisan in fact and not just in name.

Moreover, the resolution authorizes the House Administration Committee to eliminate perquisites—perks, in accordance with directives of the Speaker.

THE REMAINING AGENDA

The resolution before the House provides useful authority but it leaves undone the pressing and immediate need to wipe out all perks right away. This is something on which the House must act with dispatch. I have already cosponsored several bills to accomplish this and will actively seek approval of these measures.

We have already closed the so-called House bank. We should also abolish patronage hiring; barber shops, beauty shops, and gift shops; and the chauffeur-driven cars for the Democratic and Republican leaders in Congress. We should also get rid of the Capitol physician and health care for public officials in military hospitals.

We must end these perks to show the public that we are serious about dealing with the Nation's business.

Congress must also move ahead with reforming its legislative operations. This is needed to expedite the public's business and to reduce costs for staffing and support services. If Congress is to lead the charge for overall reform of Federal management, it must set the example by improving its own performance.

For example, Congress must accept responsibility for poorly drafted legislation, which exacerbates and causes some management breakdowns. As a House Budget Committee report concluded, "a law, if it is to improve the political and economic well-being of the republic, must be based on sound managerial principles." To achieve this end, Congress should make appropriate investments in legislative drafting.

Moreover, Congress should not only pass better laws, it should stop passing needless bills. A recent Washington Post article pointed out that nearly 30 percent of all legislation enacted during the first session of the 102d Congress was for commemorative. Reform is needed to remove commemorative from Congress by passing appropriate legislation.

Finally, Congress should prune and simplify its own committee system. Too many committees and subcommittees compete with each other for jurisdiction over the same issues. I support efforts to bring about a comprehensive overall of legislative operations in Congress.

Even as Congress reforms its own administrative and legislative operations and eliminates perks, it must insist that the executive and judicial branches do likewise. The Federal Government has lost control of many programs. The result is enormous waste and reductions in essential services to users. Bold management reforms are needed for all branches so that the entire Federal Government can work more effectively and efficiently for the American people. These reforms should strengthen program management and program accountability.

But the bottom line today is passing this resolution to modernize House administration and moving ahead with the other reforms of Congress which I have outlined.

Mr. MOAKLEY. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the resolution.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. MURTHA). The question is on the resolution.

The question was taken; and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground that a quorum is not present and make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Evidently a quorum is not present.

The Sergeant at Arms will notify absent Members.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—yeas 257, nays 159, not voting 18, as follows:

The Clerk announced the following pair:

On this vote:

Mr. Yates for, with Mr. Dornan of California against.

Mrs. JOHNSON of Connecticut and Mr. GILMAN changed their vote from "yea" to "nay."

So the resolution was agreed to.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

Mr. GEPHARDT. Mr. Speaker, pursuant to House Resolution 427, I call up House Resolution 423 and ask for its immediate consideration.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the resolution.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

Resolved,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This resolution may be cited as the "House Administrative Reform Resolution of 1992".

SEC. 2. AMENDMENTS TO RULE II RELATING TO THE ELECTION OF OFFICERS OF THE HOUSE.

Rule II of the Rules of the House of Representatives (relating to the election of officers) is amended—

(1) by striking "Postmaster,"; and

(2) by adding at the end the following new sentence: "The Clerk, Sergeant-at-Arms, and the Doorkeeper may be removed by the House or by the Speaker."

SEC. 3. AMENDMENTS TO RULE III RELATING TO THE DUTIES OF THE CLERK.

Clause 3 of rule III of the Rules of the House of Representatives (relating to duties of the Clerk) is amended—

(1) in the first sentence by striking "make or approve all contracts, bargains, or agreements relative to furnishing any matter or thing, or for the performance of any labor for the House of Representatives in pursuance of law or order of the House, keep full and accurate accounts of the disbursements of the contingent fund of the House, keep the stationery account of Members, Delegates, and the Resident Commissioner from Puerto Rico, and pay them as provided by law," and inserting a period; and

(2) by striking the second sentence.

SEC. 4. AMENDMENTS TO RULE IV RELATING TO THE DUTIES OF THE SERGEANT-AT-ARMS

Clause 1 of rule IV of the Rules of the House of Representatives (relating to duties of the Sergeant-at-Arms) is amended by striking "and keep the accounts for the pay and mileage of Members, Delegates, and the Resident Commissioner from Puerto Rico, and pay them as provided by law".

SEC. 5. REPEAL OF RULE VI TO ELIMINATE THE POSITION OF POSTMASTER.

Rule VI of the Rules of the House of Representatives (relating to duties of the Postmaster) is repealed.

SEC. 6. AMENDMENT TO THE RULES TO CREATE THE POSITION OF DIRECTOR OF NON-LEGISLATIVE AND FINANCIAL SERVICES.

The Rules of the House of Representatives are amended by adding at the end the following new rule:

"RULE LII

"DIRECTOR OF NON-LEGISLATIVE AND FINANCIAL SERVICES

"1. The Director of Non-legislative and Financial Services shall be appointed for a Congress by the Speaker, the majority leader, and the minority leader, acting jointly. The Director may be removed by the House or by the Speaker. The Director shall be paid at the same rate of basic pay as the elected officers of the House.

"2. The Director of Non-legislative and Financial Services shall have extensive managerial and financial experience.

"3. Subject to the policy direction and oversight of the Committee on House Administration, the Director shall have operational and financial responsibility for functions assigned by resolution of the House.

"4. Subject to the policy direction and oversight of the Committee on House Administration, the Director shall develop employment standards that provide that all employment decisions for functions under the Director's supervision be made in accordance with the non-discrimination provisions of clause 9 of rule XLIII and of rule LI, without regard to political affiliation, and solely on the basis of fitness to perform the duties involved. No adverse personnel action may be taken by the Director without cause."

SEC. 7. TRANSFER OF FUNCTIONS TO THE DIRECTOR OF NON-LEGISLATIVE AND FINANCIAL SERVICES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—As soon as practicable, but not later than the ninetieth day beginning after the date of adoption of this resolution, the functions and entities specified in subsection (d) shall be transferred to the Director of Non-legislative and Financial Services.

(b) REGULATIONS.—The Committee on House Administration shall have authority to prescribe regulations providing for—

(1) the orderly transfer of the functional and entities specified in subsection (d); and

(2) such additional transfers of functions and entities specified in subsection (d) with respect to the Clerk, Sergeant-at-Arms, Doorkeeper, and the Director as may be necessary for the improvement of non-legislative and financial services in the House.

(c) Except as provided in subsection (d), functions and entities within the jurisdiction of the Committee on House Administration under rule X of the Rules of the House of Representatives may not be transferred to the Director.

(d) SPECIFICATION.—The functions and entities referred to in subsection (a) are: Office of Employee Assistance, Finance Office, pay and mileage of Members, House Information Systems, Office Furnishings, Office Supply Service, Office Systems Management, Placement Office, Special Services Office, Telecommunications, Telephone Exchange, Type-writer Repair, Barber Shop, Beauty Shop, House Restaurant System, Office of Photography, Inside Mail and Internal Mail Operations (including coordination with postal substations to be operated by the United States Postal Service), Guide Service, and Child Care Center, and the non-legislative functions of the Printing Services, Recording Studio, and Records and Registration.

SEC. 8. AMENDMENTS TO THE RULES TO CREATE THE OFFICE OF INSPECTOR GENERAL.

The Rules of the House of Representatives are amended by adding at the end the following new rule:

"RULE LIII

"OFFICE OF INSPECTOR GENERAL

"1. There is established the Office of Inspector General.

"2. The Inspector General shall be appointed for a Congress by the Speaker, the Majority leader, and the minority leader, acting jointly.

"3. Subject to the policy direction and oversight of the Committee on House Administration, the Inspector General shall be responsible only for—

"(A) conducting periodic audits of the financial functions under the Director of Non-legislative and Financial Services, Clerk, Sergeant-at-Arms, and Doorkeeper;

"(B) informing the Director or other officer who is the subject of an audit of the results of that audit and suggesting appropriate curative actions;

"(C) notifying the Speaker, the majority leader, the minority leader, and the chairman and ranking minority party members of the Committee on House Administration in the case of any financial irregularity discovered in the course of carrying out responsibilities under this rule; and

"(D) submitting to the Speaker, the majority leader, the minority leader, and the chairman and ranking minority party member of the Committee on House Administration and to the Subcommittee on Administrative Oversight of the Committee on House Administration a report of each audit conducted under this rule."

SEC. 9. SUBCOMMITTEE ON ADMINISTRATIVE OVERSIGHT.

Clause 3 of rule X of the Rules of the House of Representatives is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(j)(1) There is established a bipartisan Subcommittee on Administrative Oversight of the Committee on House Administration, to be chaired by the chairman of the Committee on House Administration. All of the members of the subcommittee shall be members of the Committee on House Administration, one-half from the majority party and one-half from the minority party.

"(2) The subcommittee shall receive all audit reports of the Inspector General and shall be responsible for providing oversight of the Clerk, Sergeant-at-Arms, Doorkeeper, Director of Non-legislative and Financial Services, and Inspector General.

"(3) Any matter that, by reason of a tie vote, cannot be resolved by the subcommittee shall be reported to the Committee on House Administration for its consideration. The Speaker, the majority leader, the minority leader, and the chairman and ranking minority party member of the Committee on House Administration shall be informed by the chairman of the subcommittee of any such matter."

SEC. 10. ADDITIONAL FUNCTIONS OF THE COMMITTEE ON HOUSE ADMINISTRATION.

Clause 4(d) of rule X of the Rules of the House of Representatives is amended—

(1) in subparagraph (2), by striking "Sergeant-at-Arms" and inserting "Director of Non-legislative and Financial Services";

(2) by repealing subparagraph (3); and
(3) by adding after subparagraph (2) the following new subparagraphs:

"(3) providing for transfers of functions and entities with respect to the Clerk, Sergeant-at-Arms, Doorkeeper, and Director of Non-legislative and Financial Services as may be necessary for the improvement of non-legislative and financial services in the House; and

"(4) providing policy director for, and oversight of, the Clerk, Sergeant-at-Arms, Doorkeeper, Director of Non-legislative and Financial Services, and Inspector General."

SEC. 11. ELIMINATION OF PERQUISITES IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

The Committee on House Administration shall, in accordance with directives received from the Speaker, take such actions as may be necessary to eliminate designated perquisites in the House.

SEC. 12. OFFICE OF GENERAL COUNSEL.

The Committee on House Administration shall provide for an Office of General Counsel to the House in a manner which shall insure appropriate coordination with and participation by both the majority and minority leaderships and representational and litigation matters.

SEC. 13. TRANSITION AND EFFECTIVE DATE RULE.

Notwithstanding the amendments made by sections 3, 4, and 5, until the functions and entities referred to in section 7(d) are transferred, those functions and entities shall continue to be the responsibility of the officer responsible for those functions and entities on the day before the date of adoption of this resolution. The amendments made paragraph (1) of section 2 and section 5 shall take effect when all of the duties of the Postmaster have been transferred.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. MURTHA). Pursuant to House Resolution 427, the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. GEPHARDT] will be recognized for 30 minutes, and the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MICHEL] will be recognized for 30 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. GEPHARDT].

Mr. GEPHARDT. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, 15 years ago, out of the reform commission process chaired by Congressman DAVID OBEX, the House of Representatives had an opportunity to alter radically the manner in which this body is organized and managed.

For several complicated and unfortunate reasons unique to that time, his proposal for a House administrator was not adopted by the House.

Had it passed, the sweeping reforms it envisioned would have stood this institution in good stead, and would likely have obviated the need for us to be here today.

In the wake of abuses and management inefficiencies that have arisen in the House restaurant, banking and postal services, it has become increasingly obvious to all of us that significant improvements in the organization, administration and supervision of nonlegislative functions were long overdue.

As a consequence of these developments, Members of the Congress from both sides of the aisle developed and introduced a variety of important and worthy reform proposals. To consolidate and reach agreement on the best among them, the Speaker and the minority leader decided some weeks ago to appoint a bipartisan task force to fashion a consensus proposal.

Although we were not able to reach a final accord among all the Democrats and Republicans who served on this task force, the House Administrative Reform Resolution of 1992 represents, in my judgment, a series of far ranging and necessary changes in our operations on which there was broad agreement.

In our discussions, we did acknowledge some basic truths. We need to modernize our operations, make them more efficient and business-like, and provide for more aggressive and active oversight for the nonlegislative functions of the House.

We did agree that there was no need for partisan conflict over most basic management functions.

We did agree that the majority party could do a far better job in sharing responsibility over and information about many of the financial and institutional aspects of running the House.

We agreed, in the words of Speaker FOLEY, that the age of patronage was behind us, and that only the competence and the qualifications of workers should matter in the appointment of employees in these nonlegislative areas.

We agreed that some perquisites had accumulated over time that provided benefits to the few and burdens to the many, that they isolated and insulated Members from the experiences of average Americans, and that they should be abolished.

And most important, that since all Members suffer when the integrity and character of House operations are called into question, all Members should be represented in the selection of individuals who run the nonlegislative affairs of the House.

Those agreements, and other needed reforms, are before the House today in House Resolution 423, the House Administrative Reform Resolution of 1992.

The resolution proceeds from the premise that future problems in the operation of the House could be substantially avoided by the appointment of an individual to manage the nonlegislative functions of the body. And the selection of an inspector general who would have the authority to audit the financial operations of the Director and any financial operations of elected officers.

The resolution thus provides for the appointment of a Director of Nonlegislative and Financial Services.

The Director is to be jointly appointed by the Speaker, the majority leader and the minority leader, and that individual must have extensive management and financial experience.

Under the resolution, the Director, subject to policy direction and oversight of the House Administration Committee, would ultimately receive responsibility for the finance office, inside mail and internal mail operations, House information systems, office furnishings, office supply, office systems management, typewriter, the House restaurant system, telecommunications and telephone exchange, the barber shop and beauty shop, the nonlegislative functions of printing services, the recording studio, and the records and registration office, the office of photography, the guide service, and the House child care center.

One qualified person would receive responsibility for the orderly functioning of all of these operations.

Patronage appointments to these offices would be prohibited.

Beyond ensuring these services are well managed, the resolution establishes a process by which they will be regularly audited.

The resolution creates the position of House inspector general, charged with conducting audits of the financial operations of the Director, as well as of any remaining financial functions of elected House officers.

As with the Director, the inspector general is to be jointly appointed by the Speaker, the majority leader, and the minority leader.

Any audits performed by the House inspector general will be shared with the leaders of both parties, and reported to a newly created bipartisan House Administration Subcommittee on Oversight, which would be responsible for the inspector general's overall policy direction and oversight.

As I have described, the resolution makes groundbreaking changes in the responsibilities of the parties for the management of the House.

The Director and the inspector general receive their positions through co-appointment; that is, their appointments are subject to the veto power of the minority leader.

The resolution orders the creation of the Bipartisan Administrative Oversight Subcommittee, consisting of an equal number of Democratic and Republican members, charged with providing oversight over the clerk, Sergeant at Arms, Doorkeeper, Director of Nonlegislative and Financial Services, and inspector general, with conflicts and deadlocks, should they occur within the Bipartisan Subcommittee, to be referred to a Leadership Management Committee.

New requirements are established for the sharing of information and audits.

The resolution goes farther; it orders the House Administration Committee to create an Office of General Counsel to provide for appropriate majority and minority party participation on representational and litigation matters of concern to the House.

To provide certainty and finality to the process of ending perquisites which have outlived their usefulness, the resolution provides authority for the House Administration Committee to effect the elimination of designated perks.

The resolution envisions a substantial change in the House's mail operations.

Specifically, the U.S. Postal Service will be brought in to take over the so-called outside mail postal operations, especially functions such as selling stamps and managing cash drawers.

So-called inside mail functions will be assumed by the Director of Nonlegislative and Financial Services. Consequently, the office of the House postmaster is being abolished.

The consolidation of the House's nonlegislative functions in the office of the Director necessarily means that the duties and responsibilities of the continuing, elected House officers will be altered.

The Doorkeeper, the Sergeant at Arms, and the Clerk will be restored to their historic and constitutional assignments.

Especially as these changes regard the offices of the Doorkeeper and Clerk, they reflect a determination by Members that our operations need to be modernized, and they in no way reflect upon the honor and effectiveness of the leaders of those offices.

The Members of this body have profound disagreements over principle, philosophy and the future direction of the country. Those disagreements are natural, and they will endure.

But there are two things upon which we can agree.

First, when the financial, administrative or managerial operations of this body do not function at the highest level expected by the public, all Members suffer along with the institution as whole.

Second, while there are clearly Democratic and Republican positions on all variety of legislative matters, there is no abiding partisan interest or advantage in managerial disputes over the functioning of offices like the paint shop or the House restaurant. Qualified individuals who are not responsible to half a million or more constituents should worry about those operations; we should not.

It is in the spirit of those ideas that this resolution is offered.

As a result of a constructive, ongoing national dialog on how we can improve the functioning of the legislative branch, our colleagues LEE HAMILTON and BILL GRADISON, joined by colleagues in the other body, formulated a resolution on congressional reform.

In spite of the fact our bipartisan task force did not complete its work, we did agree during those discussions to schedule the so-called Hamilton-Gradison resolution for House consideration.

Upon the adoption of that legislation, I know that many of the issues on how Congress could better function, involving the organization of committees and the review of our rules, will be fully discussed.

During debate on the substitute offered by my good friend the minority leader, I will address myself to the substance of some of the issues which ended up dividing Republicans and Democrats on the task force.

Pending that discussion, let me simply say that this task force process was useful. And I hope it opened some lines of communication between the parties that can be used again in the days and weeks ahead.

Over the last months, as difficult as they have been, I think we have learned that Republicans and Democrats, divided as we may be on issues, do have a common interest in protecting the integrity and reputation of the House of Representatives. I thank the members of the task force on both sides of the aisle for the contributions they made.

Before reserving my time, let me conclude with this thought:

Nearly 3 years ago, when Congressman TOM FOLEY was sworn in as our Speaker, her said, and I quote "We need to strengthen his House. I do not share the views of some that we should attempt to tear it down. On the contrary, I think we must strengthen and build it." He promised in his address to this Chamber as Speaker-elect, "to be responsible to the whole House and to each and every individual Member, undivided by that center aisle."

Against great odds, and in the face of much unfair criticism, the Speaker has kept his promise to us.

Exhibiting great decency and fairness, and displaying unflinching good humor, he has been a builder, he has been a reformer, and he has sought to preserve the character of Congress as an institution, even as he has navigated this body through some difficult and troubling times.

I think it is a measure of his personal strength, and his love for the Congress, that he has persevered throughout this process and brought us to the point that we could make some substantial, fundamental and, yes, even radical and revolutionary reforms in the way the House of Representatives is managed and operated.

If we fail, it will not be for his lack of vision or trying. If we succeed in this endeavor, it will be a testament to his fortitude. Because of his leadership, I think we will succeed.

□ 1740

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. MICHEL. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from California [Mr. THOMAS], who serves so ably as our ranking member on the Committee on House Administration.

Mr. THOMAS of California. Mr. Speaker, I think people better understand that this is getting serious.

In the Associated Press: "A Federal grand jury alleged there has been a broad drug conspiracy at the House post office." An indictment has been made by the Federal grand jury for a drug conspiracy at the post office, the House post office, that post office run by the Democrats, that post office which apparently is to be cleaned up under this resolution.

The indictment of the House post office and the solution is supposedly contained within the pages of House Resolution 423. One of these solutions is, as the majority leader, the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. GEPHARDT] indicated, a bipartisan task force, a shared responsibility task force, that will assume oversight of this new, non-legislative administrator.

A bipartisan subcommittee with a kicker, and I ask my colleagues, "You knew there was a kicker; didn't you?"

It could not be fairer. Democrats created it. My colleagues know it is not going to be equitable. They cannot stand it.

Listen. Federal indictments are coming down, and I say to my colleagues, "You are fools not to involve us in an institutional change. You are fools to put up a phony gimmick, and then think that we're going to participate in it."

Please understand what is in this resolution. It says, "a bipartisan subcommittee, equal numbers of Democrats and Republicans," but then the kicker. The kicker is that any tie goes to the full committee, which is a partisan structure.

I ask my colleagues, "Didn't you just know it?"

Rule I, clause 6, of the House Rules says that in cases of a tie vote the question shall be kicked to a higher authority? No. It says the question shall be lost. The Chair, under Deschler's and Brown's Precedents, may vote to make a tie and thus defeat a measure. A tie defeat a measure.

□ 1750

As I said earlier, in every parliamentary body in the world a tie loses. Anywhere in the world, a tie loses. In the German Bundestag, a tie loses. The House of Commons, a tie loses. Everywhere a tie loses but one place: in the palace of partisanship, in the kingdom of FOLEY, ties win.

Mr. GEPHARDT. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. GLICKMAN].

Mr. GLICKMAN. Mr. Speaker, first of all I want to pay tribute to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. OBEY] who had this idea about 15 years ago. I did not have the wisdom to support the proposal at that time, but I will tonight.

The second point I would make before I deal with my remarks is there is such extraordinary partisanship in this institution that no wonder the public believes that we cannot accomplish the common good, to deal with the problems and issues that they face. Hopefully this bill can be debated on its merits, as we try to improve the operations of the Congress so that we can get on to the people's problems.

This bill is an important first step to modernize the House, to make changes in the way we operate, so as to make it easier to deal with the very real substantive problems facing the country.

If a big institution like ours, or a company, city government, school system, a church, or whatever, does not have good operational or management systems in effect, then failures will result in operation.

Our Congress essentially has operated in the same way for decades, without making fundamental changes in our systems, and we now have operational failures. Clearly the House bank and post office and other things are to some extent the result of not having modern operational systems.

To put it into a context that maybe a lot of folks at home might understand, look at the failure of the Challenger, the space shuttle that blew up several years ago. Experts found that it blew up largely because of operational systems failures within NASA. A big organization like ours will fail if it is locked in gridlock; if it does not change with the times; if it does not have modern systems in order to keep it functioning well.

This bill will restore accountability. Someone will be in charge of the basic services here. With respect to many functions around here, no one now is in charge. No business could function that way, and neither can the U.S. Congress.

This will work, however, and I support it strongly, only if the Director, the Administrator, is given the clout and authority to do what he or she needs to do in that job, if the Director is not arbitrarily restricted by the officers of the House or Members of this body.

Second, the oversight of this officer and auditor by the Speaker's Office and the Committee on House Administration must not render the Director helpless to do the job.

Finally, the Director, which is authorized in this bill, should be encouraged to recommend further changes and revisions to the systems, including further mergers of House officers and reductions in staff, which will then be considered by the full House.

This is the first step in revolutionary reform, but only the first step. The next step, as the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. GEPHARDT] talked about, is to examine the legislative side of the picture, to look at the committee and subcommittee structures, to reduce and make more efficient the size of this place, to examine the reasons for so many turf battles and jurisdictional fights which make it difficult to get substantive things done.

Process changes, which we are doing today, are very important, but only to the extent that they make the place work better so that substantive changes which affect people's lives can happen.

This bill is a means to an end. The means will modernize the systems so that the public can have confidence that this House is running honestly, competently, and effectively. It will help restore confidence that the House will work, that the trains will run on time. But the end is to do a proper job on issues like health care, energy, the environment, jobs, and reducing the budget deficit. That is why we are here. Hopefully these reforms will make it easier for us to do our job.

Above us there is a quotation from Daniel Webster. It reads as follows:

Let us develop the resources of our land, call forth its powers, build up its institutions, promote all its great interests, and see whether we also in our day and generation may not perform something worthy to be remembered.

Mr. Speaker, I think that today we are doing that. Today we are attempting to perform something worthy to be remembered for generations to come, so that this House can do the public will and do it in a way that will give us and this country great honor.

Mr. MICHEL. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Washington [Mr. CHANDLER].

Mr. CHANDLER. Mr. Speaker, I think we all know why we are here today. We are here because the people at home are frustrated. I can tell you I share their frustration with this entire process.

We are doing nothing more today than rearranging the deck chairs on a sinking ship. Let me tell you something. The people at home do not care about hiring administrators, changing the management of the restaurant, or giving new titles for old jobs.

They are saying to us, "Congress, you don't get it." What they want us to do is change the course of the ship.

They are frustrated when they find out that the very laws that we pass and impose on them, Congress is exempt from. The minimum wage, Fair Labor Standards Act, antidiscrimination laws.

What they are saying is, let Congressmen fill out the paperwork. Let Congressmen work under those wage and hour and hiring practice laws, under OSHA standards, and suffer the fines when the paperwork is late.

That is what they are telling us. Are they frustrated? You bet they are. They are frustrated when they see a Congress this very day, with a $400 billion deficit staring us in the face, adding that to a $4.2 trillion debt, tell the American people that you Democrats want them to finance your campaigns with their tax dollars.

The people are telling us, "You don't get it." You can pass all this so-called reform you want to and maybe some of it will help. But let me tell you something. Until there is a balanced budget amendment to the Constitution, a line-item veto, term limits to get some turnover in this place, campaign finance reform, the people at home are going to continue to be frustrated. And they are going to continue to tell you one thing: you just don't get it.

Mr. GEPHARDT. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. ROSE], the distinguished chairman of the Committee on House Administration.

Mr. ROSE. Mr. Speaker, I want my colleagues to understand what this resolution does.

This resolution does reform the administration of the House.

It does require the appointment of an experienced and business-wise director.

It does require that employees of the director be fully qualified for their jobs.

It does require employees to be hired without regard to political affiliation.

It does require hiring practices which are nondiscriminatory.

It does require bipartisan oversight—so both parties are directly involved.

It does require the appointment of an experienced inspector general.

It does require that the minority participate in the selection of both the director and the inspector general—in fact it gives them a veto.

It does require the inspector general to conduct timely and thorough financial audits—so that the American people can have confidence in the integrity of the financial operations of the House.

It does require that any financial irregularities be referred immediately to the leadership of both parties, and a bipartisan committee.

It does require that perks be eliminated—and the House and Senate have already started that process.

It does require bipartisan coordination on legal matters relating to the House.

It does require the elimination of the office of postmaster of the House.

It does require the U.S. Postal Service to operate the stamp windows in the House—so they will be run the same as for our constituents.

It does return the remaining officers of the House to their traditional legislative roles.

And it does ensure the American people that we are serious about both the financial integrity and proper management of the operations of the House.

Mr. Speaker, if this is not real reform, then I do not know what is. Some of our colleagues say it goes too far—that the Members of the House lose control of the institution.

Some say it does not go far enough—that we need to distance ourselves from our surroundings.

I believe that this resolution does everything that could have been done in the short time that was available. It is responsive to the demands of the American people. And it is genuine reform.

There will be separate legislation dealing with thorough and comprehensive reform of both operational and procedural activities of both the House and the Senate. Today our concern is with the management and the financial procedures in the House. This resolution works, and works well.

While this resolution may not satisfy the minority party—largely because it doesn't address legislative procedures—I believe the resolution does go to the heart of the issue which the American people want us to address—and address right now—and that is the financial aid management integrity of the House.

When there is an important issue, such as this, which needs to be resolved, my inclination is to act on it—the sooner the better. As a member of the majority party, I believe we have the responsibility to act on behalf of the American public. Even if minority party refuses to go forward with us, it is the responsible thing to do.

So I urge the adoption of this resolution—which restores integrity, ends perks, and moves this institution forward—toward a bipartisan approach in operating the nonlegislative affairs of the House.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. DARDEN). The Chair will announce that the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. GEPHARDT] has 7½ minutes remaining, and the gentleman from California [Mr. THOMAS] has 25 minutes remaining.

Mr. THOMAS of California. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 1 minute.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to engage in a very brief colloquy with my friend and colleague, the chairman of the Committee on House Administration.

As the chairman knows, the Committee on Standards of Official Conduct, the only bipartisan committee in the House, has rules that say a tie vote loses.

The gentleman and I are currently serving on the Joint Bipartisan Task Force on the Post Office. Would the chairman indicate to me what happens in that truly bipartisan structure on a tie vote.

Mr. ROSE. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. THOMAS of California. I yield to the gentleman from North Carolina.

Mr. ROSE. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman knows that we have agreed to agree on all the procedures of the bipartisan task force.

Mr. THOMAS of California. Mr. Speaker, and if there is a tie vote?

Mr. ROSE. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman will continue to yield, nothing will happen until we agree by a majority vote.

Mr. THOMAS of California. In the Bipartisan Task Force on the Post Office, a tie vote loses?

Mr. ROSE. Mr. Speaker, that is right.

Mr. THOMAS of California. In the Committee on Standards of Official Conduct, a tie vote loses?

And in this resolution, a tie vote goes forward to a bipartisan committee. It is a sham. It is a phoney. The gentleman should be ashamed.

Mr. GEPHARDT. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. BONIOR], the distinguished majority whip.

Mr. BONIOR. Mr. Speaker, this bill represents the most important reform measure taken up by this House in nearly two decades. It will place the day-to-day management of this institution on a nonpartisan, purely professional basis.

It will transfer the purely administrative functions from the elected officers of the House to a new director of nonlegislative and financial services which must be appointed with the full support of the minority leader. It will provide for a professional inspector general for the House, and inspector general with full authority to audit the financial operations of the administrator and all other officers of the House.

The inspector general also must be appointed with the full support of the minority leader. And it implements the elimination of perks.

It is a bill that is worthy of unanimous support. But what are we hearing today from the other side?

On the one hand, in negotiations they tell us if we just accept one or two small rule changes, disallowing proxies, maybe changing the committee ratio on the House Committee on Rules, that we would have their support.

On the other hand they say this bill is not really reform. Which is it?

Here is the truth. The Republicans are not really interested in reform at all. That is why they stonewalled every serious reform effort in the last two decades.

In 1977, we had before this institution a proposal and a recommendation by the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. OBEY], the Obey commission recommendations.

Let me read to my colleagues just a couple of the things that were in it that every Republican, 139 of them, voted against, including 40 sitting Members, the minority leader, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MICHEL], the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. VANDER JAGT], and Mr. QUAYLE.

The Obey commission would "create a professional House manager who will be in overall charge of planning, directing and coordinating all administrative support."

It would have established a position of comptroller, who would serve as the chief financial officer. It would instruct an administrator to raise prices to reasonable levels for auxiliary services. It would establish a new select committee on committees to study the committee structure.

It would abolish free plants, free framing. Greater public accountability for travel. And they stood in unison and voted against it.

Then we heard 2 minutes ago the distinguished gentleman from Washington take the floor and tell us, tell us, scold us for voting for a public finance reform bill, said we were taking public dollars. Not one Congressman in this institution now or in the past has done that. And the President of the United States, the President of their own party has taken tens of millions of dollars. Be real.

And if we need any further evidence today, any evidence, just look at the paper today, the headlines in the New York Times, "U.S. Jets Ferried Quayle for Golf."

Turns out that while the White House was posturing about ethics, DAN QUAYLE and Sam Skinner were commanding airplanes around the world to play golf and tennis. And of course, there is nothing new in this.

The chief of staff for the President, Mr. Sununu, we know about his travels, going to see his dentist in Boston, skiing in Colorado, stamp collections in New York. Who needs this?

Maybe my colleagues on the other side of the aisle feel that if we get our house in order, Republicans will have to get the White House and the Cabinet in order as well. And let me tell my colleagues, the issue of mismanagement does not stop at the White House. Remember all those months last summer during the recession when they were saying there was no recession, when they were saying it was no big deal?

Last week we got a clue of why they felt that way. Turns out the Labor Department forgot 4 out of 10 workers who lost their jobs during that period. They forgot about 650,000 people in this country who were put out of work. Talk about a government out of touch.

Stop the hypocrisy. Stop the posturing. Stop the political games. This is real reform. This is important reform.

Let us get it done. Let us reform the way we do business here, and then let us get down to doing something about this Republican recession.

Mr. THOMAS of California. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Florida [Mr. JAMES].

Mr. JAMES. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in strong opposition to House Resolution 423 and in equally strong support of the substitute being offered by the distinguished minority leader, Mr. MICHEL.

The proposal being advanced by the majority, House Resolution 423, purports to be a reform measure. But it leaves a great deal to be desired.

For instance, under House Resolution 423, the Sergeant at Arms would still supervise the Capitol Police and other security personnel. And he or she would remain a member of the Capitol Police Board.

But nothing in House Resolution 423 suggests the Sergeant at Arms to be a well-recognized law enforcement professional.

To put it bluntly, that combination doesn't sound like reform. That combination smacks of a continuing cover-up.

As I have suggested before, the Sergeant at Arms should be a seasoned law enforcement pro. In fact, if House Resolution 423 passes, I will introduce a resolution calling for a search committee to identify and recommend such a person to the House.

But there will be no need for such a resolution if the House rejects House Resolution 423 and adopts the Michel substitute. The Michel substitute specifically proposes that the Sergeant at Arms should be a nationally respected law enforcement professional.

In addition, the Michel substitute calls for a chief financial officer for the House.

I would think that concerning the issue that has been discussed as to who has control, it is obviously clear that the minority party does not, since a vote does not fail if there is a tie vote. I think we would have learned better in recent months, because we are having an Attorney General investigate actions that will clearly be described in some quarters as possibly an embezzlement or the loaning of Federal funds without interest, both of which are serious felonies. Those who had acknowledge of the House bank's procedure from the GAO report may well have to answer to the inquiries, hopefully after they have consulted with their attorneys.

I think we should recognize that the blame will fall on the Democratic Party, because I think they were the only ones that had knowledge of those facts. So I would anticipate that you would learn from that lesson and not shoulder all of the responsibility. I do not understand why you choose to expose yourselves in such a way.

The average Congressman did not have that knowledge, but certain people did have knowledge of what was going on, which was clearly wrong under our felony statutes.

Mr. ROSE. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Oregon [Mr. KOPETSKI].

Mr. KOPETSKI. Mr. Speaker, I have found that, clearly, it is the hardest job, but it is still the highest honor a public servant can have.

I did not come here to run a post office or to run a barber shop or a paint shop. I came here to address the problems facing the people of my district and our country. But I also came here to upgrade the credibility of this institution. I find myself in the position where, in order to restore the credibility of this institution, I do have to deal with who is going to run the barber shop and the post office. I hope I never have to vote on this kind of issue again in my career.

The administrative officer position is an important one. It is reform and it addresses the issue of financial and administrative reform. This is important. It is reform that takes into consideration the wishes of the minority as well, for the minority leader will have a veto authority over the appointment of this particular person.

Let me just say something about the gentleman from Washington [Mr. FOLEY], our Speaker. He is a relatively new Speaker. He has a great understanding and affection for the House as an institution and as a living body as well, and this is important to have in our leadership. He is inheriting, as we are all inheriting, practices that have grown up over decades, if not over centuries.

President Lincoln once said that a house divided cannot stand. He was talking, of course, about our Nation during the Civil War. But these words are true for this institution here today, the U.S. House of Representatives, the people's House.

Other reforms, legislative reforms, can and will come, but this is the first of that series, clearly important. I urge the Members' support for this resolution.

Mr. THOMAS of California. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Florida [Mr. GOSS].

Mr. GOSS. Mr. Speaker, one of the best parts of being a Member of Congress is meeting with the young people from my district. They are excited about life—they see it as an unending adventure—and they look at this historic city, the U.S. Government, and Members of Congress with some admiration. I want that look to continue. It is up to us to make sure that it does. That is why I rise in support of the Michel substitute.

One of the standard questions I get asked by the young people I represent is, why am I a Member of Congress? It is a question every Member faces—why are we here and for what purpose do we hold the office of Member of the House of Representatives? If the answer is that we are in Congress to serve, not to be served, than we are on the right track toward restoring credibility for this institution.

These past weeks and months have been wrenching and unpleasant not only for us, but for our families and the American public. The problems we are experiencing are not new, they have been part of this institution for years. We may not have created these problems, but by not correcting them, we did allow them to grow and become further entrenched. For us as an institution, it is time to stop pointing fingers and looking for a scapegoat. Agreeing with the constituency that Congress is out of control may be politically correct, but it alone will not fix the problem. We have to work together. This is our opportunity to right a wrong, make positive and meaningful changes in the operation of this House and restore credibility to this institution. I think the Michel substitute does this.

Many of us have introduced legislation that may just be small pieces of congressional reform, but in and of themselves are worthy. For instance, I do not believe Congress should be above the law and I have introduced a resolution that it will be our policy to adhere to all past and future laws that we pass that affect the private sector and other Federal agencies.

As many know, I am also a strong advocate of national term limits and I will continue to promote legislation to this effect until it is heard on the House floor. We should at least have the debate.

I also do not believe in the endless perpetuity of the offices of the former Speakers at the expense of the American taxpayer. Therefore, I introduced a bill to limit this privilege to 3 years. I am honored that this measure was included in Mr. MICHEL's reform bill.

There are as many ideas for reform as there are Members of Congress. I do not see that as a problem—I see it as a positive start—a meeting ground for all of us to share our ideas, listen to one another and make decisions that are good for this institution as a whole.

When we accomplish major reform in this House, I feel confident that the young people who look to Congress for motivation and inspiration will once again put their faith in this institution and its ability to serve—rather than be served. And that is really why we are here. Please support the Michel substitute.

Mr. THOMAS of California. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. TAYLOR], who worked hard to get here.

Mr. TAYLOR of North Carolina. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

Mr. Speaker, I speak to an average of one school per week and hope that we can offer some hope of change to young people who are becoming so cynical about this institution. This body is responsible, as has been said here, for things great and major, but the young people recognize that we cannot be honest in the great things if we are not honest in the little things.

A closed rule on this major legislation is a fraud. We have shrouded this debate in the beginning in an area that does not reflect positively on debating what is necessary to change this institution, and it goes downhill from there.

The majority party now has total control of the House restaurant, the House post office. It had total control of the House bank. Under this legislation it will continue to have total control of the entire institutions of this House. That is not reform. That is the status quo.

I support the Michel substitute, and urge the Members to do so.

Mr. THOMAS of California. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from California [Mr. DOOLITTLE].

Mr. DOOLITTLE. Mr. Speaker, we have heard a lot of talk about the procedures, and I happen to be in favor of the Michel substitute. I think it is a good piece of legislation.

But I do not think the American people for a minute are particularly interested in just the internal reforms that we make here. I think what they are really upset about is the lack of performance when it comes to jobs for Americans, relieving the burden on families, doing something to reduce the burdens on businesses that are struggling to make a profit.

We in the House of Representatives, controlled by the Democrats for 38 straight years, every committee chairman, every Speaker controlled by them, we have not done anything meaningful in this regard except to make matters worse.

□ 1820

People then see incidents like the House bank or the House post office where we have indictments today and they wonder what are these people doing to justify what we pay them. People are upset. They deserve true reform, and true reform is not going to come with the measure before us, and I urge its defeat.

Mr. THOMAS of California. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. SANTORUM].

Mr. SANTORUM. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding the time.

Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Oregon just came up here and said, "I hope that I never have to vote on the issue of institutional reform again." I would suggest to the gentleman from Oregon that he vote no on this proposal being put forth by the Democrats, because if he votes yes, I guarantee if he has any tenure in this House of Representatives he will be back here again to vote on institutional reform, because there is really nothing substantive in the changes.

Sure, we have a couple of new officers around here that are supposed to clean things up that we have some say in. But after we have the say, we go on and it is business as usual. I mean we have a say in the initial appointment of someone we probably have never heard of. But once the person is put in that position, it is back to normal, nothing changes.

We have a bipartisan committee which, as the gentleman from California [Mr. THOMAS] has already said is nothing more than a partisan committee in bipartisan clothing. Nothing changes under this reform. We will be back to the same old thing. All we have is a House that is structurally deficient, and we put on a new coat of paint to make it look good.

Mr. THOMAS of California. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from California [Mr. RIGGS].

Mr. RIGGS. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me the time and thank him for his hard work on this proposal.

It is interesting to note in reading this proposal that the proponents of it, the House Democrats, are all but tacitly admitting that our current hiring practices are not up to legal standards. That is particularly ironic in light of the vote that we had just a little bit earlier to table my privileged motion that would have commenced a special investigation in the House into allegations of illegal hiring practices and further allegations of ghost employees.

Here they are actually describing their proposal as revolutionary. Are they serious? Get real. If you want to talk about revolutionary reform, read the words of the Revolutionaries themselves, the Federalist Papers, Hamilton and Madison. We have a long way to go before we reform this House and make it once again the House of the people.

Let us be clear about one other thing. The Democrats are here for one reason and one reason only. They can stall no longer. It took an ever-widening House bank and post office scandal and insistent pressure from our side of the aisle just to get them here to the table, and now that they are here we see evidence of bad faith negotiations, and frankly we have a very watered-down proposal that will not take us near far enough to make the Congress and the House of Representatives responsible and accountable to the American people again.

Mr. THOMAS of California. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. ROBERTS].

Mr. ROBERTS. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me the time.

Mr. Speaker, I am rising in support of the Michel substitute and in opposition to the Democrat reform package. The gentleman from Oregon [Mr. KOPETSKI] said he did not come here to run a post office, barber shop, or House restaurant. We should take the Democrat reform plan and go forward to more important issues.

I agree with that last part. As a matter of fact, as I said before during the debate on the rules, I had an amendment that would have ended the current patronage system and would have contracted out the many administrative functions, the so-called services of this House, that by the way involves over 1,000 people. We should not be involved in that business.

My colleague from Kansas [Mr. GLICKMAN] said he supported the Democratic reform package to get us out of the bank, restaurant, and post office swamps, and he hoped that we could do it without partisanship. I hope so too. But the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. GLICKMAN] went on to say that the House administrator would work only if he or she had the clout, the independence, and the professionalism that would do the job, and that is the problem. You folks have the answer you want to hear, but you do not have the problem defined. The problem is you select your House officers every 2 years. You have told them what to do. You have asked them to do their job and then saddled them with a patronage system that is out of control and does not work, and we have a mess on our hands. I am talking about the total House.

We have a rather sordid and shabby record. Mr. Rota, Mr. Russ, despite their shortcomings, did exactly what Members told them to do, exactly what Members told them to do and also tried to run the police force and the post office. When the bad stuff became public, you shot them in the back.

I tell you what; if you appoint some hapless administrator in charge of the current patronage swamp without serious reform, structural reform, I do not think I would apply for that job, at least not without a flak jacket or a rearview mirror.

The Michel substitute represents real reform. The current Democrat plan just continues the current business as usual with an administrator on top.

Mr. THOMAS of California. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. MCCREERY].

Mr. MCCREERY. Mr. Speaker, I go back to my district in Louisiana almost every week. I go to Lion's Club meetings, Rotary, Kiwanis Club, VFW, American Legion meetings, I hold town meetings, and no matter how much I may try to paint the Democrats as the cause of the problems in our Nation's Capital, it just does not take. The people in my district do not know or do not care that the Democrats have controlled the U.S. House of Representatives, lock, stock, and barrel for nearly 40 years. They do not know or do not care that that control means that the Democrats control all administrative functions of the House, functions like the House bank, the House restaurant, the barber shop. They do not know or do not care that that control by Democrats for 40 years means that all of the committees of the House are controlled, indeed stacked by the Democrats, that all patronage is controlled by the Democrats, that committee staffing is shamelessly stacked in favor of the Democrats in Congress. They just do not know or they do not care.

Mostly, they just want the mess cleaned up. They want Congress to do something positive and constructive.

We had a chance to work together to clean up the mess, to do something on a bipartisan basis, to do something constructive. Eight good Democrats and eight good Republicans have been meeting as a group, trying to develop a bipartisan approach to total reform, administrative and legislative, of the House of Representatives. I am told that the group was very close to agreement. But for some reason, that agreement was not pursued by the Democrats in their legislation. The Democrats' legislation is only partial reform and not much reform at that. It does not reform the legislative process at all. It continues a high level of patronage and it creates an inspector general with no teeth. Well, you need more than gums to clean this place up.

Mr. Speaker, the people in my district may not know or may not care that the Democrats have controlled the House for 40 years, but they are going to continue to hear it, because after this lame attempt at reform, the Democrats will continue the tyranny of dictatorship on the Hill, and maybe, just maybe, the people will one day recognize that fact, will care, and will do something about it. Then maybe the mess will be cleaned up and something positive and constructive will be done in this city.

Mr. THOMAS of California. Mr. Speaker, I yield 4 minutes to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. GUNDERSON].

Mr. GUNDERSON. Mr. Speaker, as my friend from Wisconsin [Mr. OBEY] said earlier, when the likes of DENNIS ECKART and VIN WEBER say enough is enough, that ought to be a message to each and every one of us. To me it is a personal loss because they are both classmates and friends. To this institution and to this country it is an even greater loss because of the contributions and the quality of gentlemen like them.

But, unfortunately, House Resolution 423, which is in front of us, probably tells us more about why they are leaving than anything else.

□ 1830

If Members have listened to the rhetoric thus far, some of our speakers have suggested that it was not what you say, it is how loud you can yell it here in the well of the House.

I had a father who spent 12 years on the local school board. The last few years he was president, and he said on controversial issues if you do not have at least a consensus, you cannot move the issue.

I am startled and disappointed that for something as important as the future integrity of this House where we had a task force of eight Democrats and eight Republicans, when there was an absolute total partisan division, that the Democratic leadership would choose to move this forth, because I think that says more about the commitment to bipartisanship than I wish it would.

The second concern that I have had all along is that to simply create a new level of patronage bureaucracy in the House to administer the present levels of patronage bureaucracy does not seem to make a lot of sense. Yes, to their credit, we are going to eliminate most of the post office, but we are going to keep some parts of it, and we are going to take other responsibilities of the present House officers and move them into this new chief financial officer. And, mark my words, ladies and gentlemen, when we get to legislative appropriations, they are going to be down here asking for more money, because they are going to need it for the additional staff that was created as a result of this particular resolution.

Third, and perhaps most important, I would like to follow the concerns raised by the gentleman from California [Mr. THOMAS] when he talks about partisanship as a result of this resolution. There has been a lot of talk here in this debate that the Speaker, the majority leader, and the minority leader are going to appoint all of these new positions, but do not kid yourself 1 second. Read the resolution. Read page 3, lines 19 and 20, and I am going to quote from the resolution where it says, "The director may be removed by the House or by the Speaker."

Ladies and gentlemen, listen to that. You say the minority leader has an equal right in appointing these bipartisan officers? Well, who are you kidding? The Speaker interviews and chooses, the majority leader speaks and interviews and chooses, and then they say, "Well, minority leader, will you go along and get along with us on this one," and once the person is appointed, the only person that non-partisan officer answers to is the Speaker. The majority leader cannot remove him. The minority leader has nothing to say in removing a person for malconduct.

I wish, I deeply wish you would take this resolution back and start over again on a bipartisan basis.

Mr. THOMAS of California. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from California [Mr. CUNNINGHAM].

Mr. CUNNINGHAM. Mr. Speaker, I sat a moment ago and listened to the majority whip ranting, but he fails to see the solution to a very simple problem. It is that this is called the House administration reform bill, not what the President is doing.

It would take merely business 12 hours to come up with an administrative control and accountability. The bill offered by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MICHEL], amendment, is asking for an inspector general to oversee fraud, waste, and abuse, and that is what the American people want. They want us to clean up our act and take a look at it.

The public does not expect us to work as a power broker to shoot the blame for the administration, and they mentioned that the minority leader would have the veto power. The President has veto power, but he is almost powerless over this House floor, and so with the minority leader itself.

We had the bank coverups, the post office coverups, and, yes, the Sandinista coverups, and the gang of 7 has turned to a gang of 70, and we are going to bring that up just as well.

Mr. THOMAS of California. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes and 50 seconds, to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. RIDGE].

Mr. RIDGE. Mr. Speaker, my colleagues, when I was asked to participate in the reform task force, I was quite hopeful that maybe, just maybe, just one time in the 10 years that I have been here we could get together on an issue that did not infringe on the legitimate rights of the Democratic majority to set a political agenda, because they have the majority number of votes. I hoped we could get together on a truly bipartisan basis to deal with some of the problems that plague this institution and that have eroded the credibility and confidence of the men and women that we serve in the institutions of democratic government. I was hopeful that we could accomplish something along that end. I was hopeful that both parties could walk away with something they were both proud of and still scratching their heads saying, "We probably gave in a little bit too much to the other side," an old-fashioned political compromise. I was hopeful that we could reach an agreement between the parties, not on a political agenda, not with a legislative agenda, but simply on how we as Republicans and Democrats together conduct the people's business in the House of Representatives.

We failed. We failed for a lot of reasons. It is painful. It is disappointing. It is frustrating.

This House does not belong to the Democratic leadership. It does not belong to the Democratic Party. And, for that matter, it does not belong to us on the Republican side of the aisle either.

You all refer in your speeches to this chamber as the People's House, and in truth and in fact and in history, that is exactly and precisely what it is and what it should be. But when we had the opportunity over the past 2 or 3 weeks to come together just to discuss how we operate the House of Representatives, not a social agenda, not an economic agenda, just simply getting together to decide how we operate the House, we could not agree.

I have to tell you that I think it smacks of arrogance. It smacks of a party that has been in control too long. I am talking to you, honestly knowing that I have personal and political friends on the Democratic side of the aisle with whom I have worked. We have identified problems affecting people and communities, and we have worked together to solve them. So I know what bipartisan is, because you have been it with me and I have been it with you. But this reform package is not bipartisan. This is not bipartisan.

Everything in this partisan package gets channeled back to the Committee on House Administration, and when Republicans said simply share, share the responsibility, give us coequal status since we are going to be held accountable as Members of the institution, not as Republicans or Democrats, but as Americans, as proud elected officials who under attack from all quarters. We said share with us the enormous responsibility not on an economic agenda, not on a social or political agenda, just share with us the responsibility to run, to operate, to conduct the affairs of the people's House. You said no.

I have heard the word "unprecedented" used much too often. It is not unprecedented or magnanimous for the Democratic leadership to suggest to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MICHEL] or whoever the minority leader would be in future years that he or his successor could exercise a veto over the individual that the House will appoint to conduct its affairs. You want us to give you credit for something you should have done a long time ago. There is nothing political in that appointment and we should have a role in appointing that person. It is for us to get together, not as Republicans or Democrats, but as Americans with a collective responsibility to operate the affairs and conduct the affairs of this institution in a bipartisan way. You failed to give us the chance for meaningful and bipartisan reform.

I serve on that task force with men and women whom I respect, whom I have supported in legislative action. I know what bipartisan is.

But Mr. Speaker, there is a troubling attitude in this chamber. You have basically said it Republicans, "Let them eat cake. We will give them what we think they should have."

You have the majority, Mr. Speaker, but it is not a monopoly. It is not your House of Representatives. I represent as many Democrats as I do Republicans. When I tell you I am concerned about proxy voting, I am telling you that my Democrats who elect and support me do not want a fistful of paper on the hands of some committee chairman, do not want a fistful of paper to reject an idea that I am promising. The Republicans and Democrats I represent want the power of a better idea to defeat the legislation or approach that I have taken, but they do not want a fistful of paper to do it.

They want an inspector general that has the independence and authority to audit and to investigate this institution, not the figleaf you have offered. A title does not an inspector general make. This official will be subservient to the Democratic leadership. It's business as usual and that is precisely what got us into trouble and brought this institution and its members into disrepute in the first place. My Democrats wanted an aggressive watchdog, a pit bull, and you have given us a toothless lapdog.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. (Mr. MURTHA). The time of the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. RIDGE] has expired.

Mr. THOMAS of California. Mr. Speaker, I yield the balance of our time to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. RIDGE. It could have been bipartisan, Mr. Speaker. We are not trying to affect the prerogatives that you have, legitimately have as the majority party, but you failed. You may have taken upon yourselves again exclusive control of the vestiges of power, but you failed the people. You may enjoy an inside the beltway victory, but you failed the people. You failed the Democrats in my district, you failed the Republicans. You failed the American people.

Mr. ROSE. Mr. Speaker, I yield the remainder of our time to the gentleman from New York [Ms. SLAUGHTER].

Ms. SLAUGHTER. Mr. Speaker, I was a member of the bipartisan committee, and I can hardly recognize it from what we have been hearing here today. The fact is that our charge was to come up with a House Administrator and to deal with perks, and we did it, and we did it in a spirit of bipartisanship, the likes of which I have not seen since I have been here. This is the first experience I had in sitting down around the table, talking over the things in the House that I thought we had gone into with extremely good faith, and I am sorry that my colleagues on the other side do not agree with that. It was an effort, and I think has achieved the elimination of politics and patronage from the administration of the House support operations, and it is unprecedented, in that it has never been done before in the 203 years of history of this House.

Ms. LLOYD. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of House Resolution 423, which makes a number of important reforms in the administrative structure of the House.

These reforms represent genuine change and should substantially improve the management of house operations. This is what the American people have called for. Many of our constituents believe that Congress has lost touch with them, and that we no longer understand their everyday needs and frustrations. Passage of this bill should follow us to work together, move forward and address the issues and concerns facing the Nation.

There are those who would like to take this genuine attempt at administrative reform and turn it into a partisan debate. This does not serve this Nation or this Chamber well. We have to stop the posturing and political games and get back to work.

This measure could not be more timely. I've been hearing from many folks in the Third Congressional District who feel betrayed by the Government. They think the Congress is out of touch with the working men and women of this country who sent them here. They feel that congress is above the law and they resent it. They want their congressional representatives to play by the same rules they live by. I agree wholeheartedly.

Clearly, more needs to be done to increase the respect and credibility of the Chamber. That's why this bill is so important. It comes on the heels of a letter I wrote to Speaker FOLEY on March 20, formally urging him to implement badly needed congressional reforms.

My letter stated, in part, that "we must institute new management of House operations. This is essential to restore confidence in this institution. The American people are calling for changes in business as usual around here. This is the people's house and reforms must be made." I am very pleased that such steps are being taken today.

This legislation will change for the better the way the business of the House is conducted.

First of all, the bill creates a Director of Non-Legislative and Financial Services, and transfers administrative and financial responsibilities from elected House officers to this new Director. The resolution calls for the Director to be someone with "extensive management and financial experience."

The measure establishes a position of House inspector general, charged with conducting audits of the financial operations of the director and any remaining financial functions of elected house officers. The inspector general is required to report the results of all audits to leaders of both parties, as well as to a bipartisan House Administration oversight subcommittee.

The bill abolishes the position of the House Postmaster. In my letter to the Speaker of March 20 I stated that "we must make sure that reported improprieties in the Post Office are fully and vigorously prosecuted by outside forces if necessary." I am pleased that the House Post Office is being abolished and the investigation of its activities pursued. The U.S. Postal Service will set up substations on Capitol Hill to process mail.

The resolution establishes a bipartisan subcommittee on administrative oversight within the House Administration Committee, similar to that called for in the Hamilton-Gradison concurrent resolution I cosponsored last year and urged the Speaker to put in place.

This subcommittee would be composed of an equal number of Democrats and Republicans and is charged with providing oversight of the clerk, Sergeant-At-Arms, doorkeeper, Director of non-Legislative and Financial Services, and inspector general. All audit reports of the inspector general must be provided to this subcommittee. This subcommittee is necessary to bring about bipartisan change and show that Congress is willing to consider improvements in how it works.

The measure also authorizes the House Administration Committee to take necessary action to eliminate House perks. Members of Congress should have no privileges not available to the American people. We must do away with congressional privileges which are unnecessary and unjustified.

No one would disagree that the time for congressional reform is now. The challenge that faces us is to reform Congress in a responsible manner. This bill is a good first start. I urge my colleagues to join with me in supporting its passage.

Mr. KOLBE. Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to House Resolution 423, the majority's plan to reform our House because, quite simply, it stops short of the goal line. What House Resolution 423 does is place a Band-Aid over an institutional wound when surgery is needed.

The questions of reform, anti-incumbency and political change are inextricably linked in the minds of our citizens. Let's make no mistake; the bulk of voter anger belongs on the doorstep of the Democrat Party that has controlled the House for 56 of the last 60 years. This institution has grown and developed under a majority party patronage system that has said, "don't rock the boat," "keep Members happy at any price," particularly the party elite. Well, the boat has been rocked. The American people are demanding change. And only sweeping reforms will mute the cries of public ridicule.

The sad fact is that had the House bank and post office scandals not occurred, we most likely would not be here today trying to correct the ways of an institution that has gotten so far out of step with the American people. Majority party patronage can no longer be the rule of the day. The Democrats have missed the point of reform because the plan presented by the majority deals only with the administration of the House. But real reform must go to the heart of what this body is all about; it must reform the way we manage legislation. It must be fundamental.

Republicans have been calling for administrative and legislative reform for years, reform that would guarantee the existence of open debate, budget accountability, organizational control, and discipline. The Michel substitute incorporates these reforms. Managerially, this includes creating a chief financial officer who would have all financial and managerial responsibilities including the power to audit and investigate. It would eliminate the Doorkeeper and Postmaster offices and transferring Doorkeeper duties to the Clerk of the House. The Sergeant at Arms would be a nationally respected law enforcement professional, with accountability to both the Speaker and minority leader.

Legislatively, Republicans propose slashing committee staffs by 50 percent, applying certain worker safety and antidiscrimination laws to the House, abolishing select committees, and requiring that the membership on each committee and subcommittee reflect the ratio of majority and minority Members in the House overall at the beginning of each Congress. Most importantly, we proposed to eliminate the nefarious practice of proxy voting in committee and to increase minority representation on the Rules Committee to reflect proportional numbers in the whole House.

Predictably, the majority would not accept any of these reform measures.

Republicans, and their constituents, have much to offer the political process. Yet, over the last 38 years of Democratic control of the House, our views have been effectively ignored. House Resolution 423 has proved no different.

Don't be fooled by the rhetoric. The reforms in House Resolution 423 will not fundamentally change the way we do business in this institution.

Mr. BACCHUS. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of House Resolution 423. This resolution is a real beginning toward the fundamental and much more comprehensive reform that we need of the entire legislative process. It is a positive step toward ensuring the proper financial management and operation of the House of Representatives.

The next step must be the adoption of House Concurrent Resolution 192, the Hamilton-Gradison resolution, to establish a bipartisan committee to streamline and modernize the committee structure of the Congress to better reflect the needs and realities of our country today. The Hamilton-Gradison resolution will allow us to take a careful, deliberative approach toward implementing the many needed reforms that are not included in House Resolution 423. I vote today for this resolution with the understanding and with the assurance of the Speaker and the leadership of my party that we will be voting also as soon as possible on House Concurrent Resolution 192. I support many of the reforms included in the Michel resolution, but I believe the deliberative, bipartisan initiative envisioned by the Hamilton-Gradison resolution is by far the better approach.

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of House Resolution 423, the House administrative reform bill.

It has become abundantly clear that, while many of us were trying to focus on issues like choice and child care, the House and its facilities were being operated in a manner that was, to put it charitably, unprofessional. These unprofessional operations have come to reflect on each and every one of us.

At a time when many of our constituents are hurting, the time has come to act.

The bill before us now makes several critical, overdue reforms. Among them are the creation of two positions to ensure that the financial affairs of the House will be managed in a professional, nonpartisan manner:

It establishes a Director of Non-Legislative and Financial Services, so that we can finally place control of House financial matters in the hands of a professional; and

It establishes a position of inspector general for the House, so that House financial operations will be subject to professional audits.

I would like to emphasize that appointments to these positions are to be made jointly by the Speaker, the majority leader, and the minority leader, ensuring that the minority will have veto power over candidates for these jobs.

This bill also takes the critical step of authorizing the House Administration Committee to eliminate congressional perks.

As strongly as I support reform, I cannot support the Republican substitute. The Republican substitute goes beyond reform in attempt to win for the Republicans battles they have been unable to win at the ballot box. Among other things, the Republican amendment would eliminate the Select Committee on Children, Youth and Families, and the Select Committee on Hunger. These two committees have played a key role in fighting for—and winning—important changes in our Nation's priorities. Together, these committees have educated Washington—and the Nation—on the importance of the WIC Program and made WIC funding one of the highest priorities for Congress and, I believe, the White House. It also eliminates the Select Committees on Narcotics and Aging, which are addressing some of the most critical problems facing our society.

Mr. CAMP. Mr. Speaker, the Democrat's so-called reform legislation is not a serious attempt to address the desperate need for reform. This bill is just a bandage to cover a gaping wound, when we need critical emergency surgery. It is simply political cover for the misdeeds of a party which has run the House of Representatives for most of the last 40 years. Changing the way this body operates will take more than minor administrative adjustments.

We need to do more. The American people want structural change in the way this institution operates and they deserve it. Mere managerial changes are not enough. More bureaucracy doesn't mean more effectiveness.

The Republican plan is the plan that makes improvements in conducting the business of this House. This body should get out of the business of running a post office and conducting investigations into its own conduct. There should be an inspector general to conduct independent, and I underline independent, audits and investigations of the operations of this body.

We need to set an example. We need to spend less on ourselves as an institution. Reducing spending on committees and making changes in the procedures of the House will help this body operate more effectively for the people who elected us to serve. We have a job to do and let's get it done.

Mr. EWING. Mr. Speaker, I oppose the so-called House reform legislation offered by the majority because it contains little more than cosmetic changes which will not alter the very fundamental problems in the House of Representatives. These changes are simply cosmetic and will not reform this institution.

One major problem with Congress is that only a handful of very powerful chairmen have strict control of the House. The fact that they are unwilling to make any real changes is illustrated by the fact that this reform legislation itself is being considered under a closed rule which allows only one amendment. No other Members are allowed to offer amendments to this legislation. We cannot try to change this legislation. This is a terrible way for a legislative body to work, and this is a fundamental problem with the House of Representatives. We cannot adequately represent our constituents.

The reason we cannot amend this legislation is because the Rules Committee, which dictates how legislation will be considered by the House, is controlled by the majority party by a ratio of 2-to-1, plus 1. It is a small clique of very powerful senior Members. It represents all that is wrong with the House, a small number of senior Members hold virtually dictatorial power. This so-called reform legislation does nothing to change the status quo. The makeup of the Rules Committee should reflect the makeup of the House, but again those few who wield power do not want to give up their throne.

The reform legislation sponsored by the majority party, in an attempt to make this proposal look bipartisan, creates an oversight House administration subcommittee of equal representation for both parties. However, unresolved issues in that body would be referred to the full House Administration Committee, which certainly is fully controlled by the majority party. This is not true reform. Again we see that those in power are trying to create the appearance of reform without actually changing how the House is managed.

Mr. Speaker, this legislation is grossly inadequate. It is a cosmetic change, and will do little to truly change the very serious problems in how this House is run.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. (Mr. MURTHA). It is now in order to consider the amendment printed in House Report 102-490.

For what purpose does the gentleman from California [Mr. THOMAS] rise?

Mr. THOMAS of California. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to present for the minority leader the amendment in the nature of a substitute.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

AMENDMENT IN THE NATURE OF A SUBSTITUTE OFFERED BY MR. THOMAS OF CALIFORNIA

Mr. THOMAS of California. Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment in the nature of a substitute.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment in the nature of a substitute offered by Mr. THOMAS of California: Strike all after the resolving clause and insert the following:

TITLE I—CHIEF FINANCIAL OFFICER, GENERAL COUNSEL, AND CERTAIN OTHER REFORMS

Subtitle A—Chief Financial Officer Amendments to the Rules of the House and Related Provisions

SECTION 101. AMENDMENTS TO RULE II RELATING TO THE ELECTION OF OFFICERS OF THE HOUSE.

Rule II of the Rules of the House of Representatives (relating to the election of Officers of the House) is amended—

(1) by striking "Doorkeeper, Postmaster,"; and

(2) by adding at the end the following new sentence: "The individual chosen for election as the Sergeant-at-Arms should be a nationally-respected law enforcement professional."

SEC. 102. AMENDMENTS TO RULE III RELATING TO THE DUTIES OF THE CLERK.

Clause 3 of rule III of the Rules of the House of Representatives (relating to the duties of the Clerk) is amended—

(1) by striking "make or approve all contracts, bargains, or agreements relative to furnishing any matter or thing, or for the performance of any labor for the House of Representatives in pursuance of law or order of the House, keep full and accurate accounts of the disbursements of the contingent fund of the House, keep the stationery account of Members, Delegates, and the Resident Commissioner from Puerto Rico, and pay them as provided by law." in the first sentence and inserting a period; and

(2) by amending the second sentence to read as follows: "He shall cause to be announced at the door all messengers from the President and the Senate and, when requested by the Speaker, visitors to the floor of the House during joint meetings or joint sessions of the two Houses. He shall superintend the House document room and the Publications Distribution System (the folding rooms), the cloakrooms of the House and the telephone service available to Members therein. He shall supervise the pages that serve the House and various other facilities to Members."

SEC. 103. AMENDMENTS TO RULE IV RELATING TO THE DUTIES OF THE SERGEANT-AT-ARMS.

Clause 1 of rule IV of the Rules of the House of Representatives (relating to the duties of the Sergeant-at-Arms) is amended by striking "and keep the accounts for the pay and mileage of Members, Delegates, and the Resident Commissioner from Puerto Rico, and pay them as provided by law".

SEC. 104. AMENDMENTS TO RULES V AND VI TO ELIMINATE THE POSITIONS OF DOORKEEPER AND POSTMASTER AND TO CREATE THE POSITION OF CHIEF FINANCIAL OFFICERS.

Rule V of the Rules of the House of Representatives (relating to the duties of the doorkeeper) and rule VI of the Rules of the House of Representatives (relating to the duties of the Postmaster) are amended to read as follows:

"RULE V

"CHIEF FINANCIAL OFFICER

"1. There shall be elected, by not less than two-thirds of Members voting, a quorum being present, the Chief Financial Officer of the House.

"2. The Chief Financial Officer should have appropriate education and training, have demonstrated an ability to manage large and complex administrative activities and resources, and have experience that is relevant to the management of the financial operations of the House.

"3. The Chief Financial Officer shall be responsible for—

"(A) reviewing and analyzing the financial operations of the House, including the efficiencies of its operations, the functions of its offices, and the cost-effectiveness of its operations, and providing periodic recommendations to the Speaker and minority leader respecting these operations;

"(B) conducting periodic audits of the financial operations of the House, simultaneously sending audit reports to the Speaker and minority leader, and making these audit reports available to the public;

"(C) keeping the accounts for the pay and mileage of Members, Delegates, and the Resident Commissioner from Puerto Rico, and paying them as provided by law; and

"(D) carrying out all other financial functions and operations that were exercised by the Clerk before the date of the adoption of this rule, including, but not limited to—

"(i) keeping full and accurate accounts of the disbursements of the contingent fund of the House,

"(ii) keeping the stationery account of the Members, Delegates, and Resident Commissioner of Puerto Rico,

"(iii) paying the salaries of officers and employees of the House, and

"(iv) making or approving all contracts, bargains, or agreements relative to furnishing any matter or thing, or for the performance of any labor for the House of Representatives in pursuance of law or order of the House.

"(E)(i) reviewing existing and proposed rules of the House to determine the effect of such rules on the economy and efficiency of the financial operations of the House, taking into consideration the need to prevent fraud, waste, and abuse in such operations;

"(ii) based on such review, providing periodic recommendations to the Speaker and the minority leader with respect to the Rules of the House;

"(F) keeping the House fully and currently informed of any instance of fraud, waste, or abuse, or any other serious deficiency in the financial operations of the House, including corrective actions taken or recommended;

"(G) reporting to the Speaker and the minority leader—

"(i) any such instance that, because of its particularly serious nature, requires immediate attention; and

"(ii) any lack of cooperation by a Member, officer, or employee of the House that inhibits the carrying out of the responsibilities of the Chief Financial Officer;

"(H) not later than October 31 of each year, submitting to the House with respect to the financial operations of the House in the preceding fiscal year a report of the activities of the Chief Financial Officer, including—

"(i) a description of significant problems, abuses, and deficiencies in the financial operations of the House, the recommendations made, the corrective actions completed, and the corrective actions uncompleted;

"(ii) a summary of matters the Chief Financial Officer referred to the Committee on Standards of Official Conduct and the actions which have resulted from such referrals; and

"(iii) a summary of each recommendation by the Chief Financial Officer to the Speaker and minority leader under these Rules;

"(I) receiving and investigating complaints from employees of the House with respect to fraud, waste, and abuse in the financial operations of the House, if such complaints assert the existence of a violation of law, a violation of these Rules, mismanagement, gross waste of funds, or abuse of authority; and

"(J) developing and maintaining an integrated accounting and financial management system for the House, including financial reporting and internal controls to provide performance measurement, cost information, and integration of accounting and budgeting information; and

"(K) directing, managing, providing policy guidance for, and conducting oversight of, financial management personnel and operations, including preparation of a 5-year financial system plan, development of financial management budgets, recruitment, selection and training of personnel to carry out financial management functions, and implementation of asset management systems, such as cash and credit management, debt collection, and property and internal controls.

"4. (a) In carrying out clause 3(I), the Chief Financial Officer may not disclose the identity of a complaining employee without the consent of the employee, unless the Chief Financial Officer determines such disclosure is unavoidable.

"(b) Any intimidation of, or reprisal against, an employee of the House by an employing authority because of a complaint made by the employee is a violation of rule LI.

"5. In accordance with policies and procedures approved by the Committee on House Administration, the Chief Financial Officer shall appoint such employees as may be necessary for the prompt and efficient performance of the duties of the Chief Financial Officer under these Rules. Such employees shall serve at the pleasure of the Chief Financial Officer.

"RULE VI

"HOUSE POSTAL SERVICES

"The Chief Financial Officer shall superintend the post office in the Capitol and in the respective office buildings of the House for the accommodation of Representatives, Delegates, the Resident Commissioner from Puerto Rico, and officers of the House and shall be held responsible for the prompt and safe delivery of their mail."

SEC. 105. CONFORMING AMENDMENT TO RULE XIV RELATING TO DECORUM AND DEBATE.

Clause 7 of the rule XIV of the Rules of the House of Representatives (relating to decorum and debate) is amended by striking "and Doorkeeper".

SEC. 106. OVERSIGHT REFORM.

Rule XI of the Rules of the House of Representatives is amended by adding at the end the following:

"7. (a) By March 1, of the first session of any Congress, each committee shall adopt and submit to the Committee on House Administration an oversight plan for that Congress.

"(b) No primary expenses resolution for a committee may be considered in the House unless and until it has adopted and submitted to the Committee on House Administration an oversight plan for the Congress involved.

"(c) After consultation with the majority and minority leaders, the Committee on House Administration shall report the plans to the House, together with its recommendations and those of the majority and minority leaders, to assure coordination between committees.

"(d) The Speaker is authorized to appoint ad hoc oversight committees for specific tasks from the memberships of committees with shared legislative jurisdictions.

"(e) Each committee shall include an oversight section in this final activity report at the end of a Congress."

SEC. 107. MAKING THE COMMITTEE ON HOUSE ADMINISTRATION BIPARTISAN.

Clause 6(a) of rule X of the Rules of the House of Representatives is amended by adding at the end the following:

"(3)(A) One-half of the members of the Committee on House Administration shall be from the majority party and one-half shall be from the minority party.

"(B) In the case of the Committee on House Administration, subpoenas may be authorized and issued as provided 2(m) of rule XI, except that either the chairman or ranking minority party member of that committee may authorize and issue subpoenas under that clause."

SEC. 108. EQUALITY OF MAJORITY AND MINORITY PARTY REPRESENTATION ON THE SUBCOMMITTEE ON LEGISLATIVE APPROPRIATIONS.

The membership of the Subcommittee on Legislative Appropriations of the Committee on Appropriations shall be divided equally between the majority party and the minority party. Staff positions for the subcommittee shall be divided in the same manner.

SEC. 109. TASK FORCE ON REFORM OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Not later than 10 days after the date on which this resolution is agreed to, the Speaker shall appoint a task force for the purpose of recommending institutional reforms necessary to restore public confidence in the House of Representatives. The task force shall—

- (1) be composed of 10 Members of the House of whom 5 Members shall be appointed upon the recommendation of the majority upon recommendation of the minority leader; and
- (2) report its recommendations to the House not later than the end of the One Hundred Second Congress.

SEC. 110. LIMITATION ON REPROGRAMMING OF FUNDS IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

No funds may be reprogrammed or otherwise transferred between appropriation accounts of the House of Representatives without the written approval of the Speaker and the minority leader of the House of Representatives.

SEC. 111. LIMITATION ON INITIAL HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES APPROPRIATIONS FOR FISCAL YEAR 1993

In the second session of the One Hundred Second Congress, it shall not be in order to consider in the House any measure containing an appropriation for the House, if the measure provides appropriations for that purpose for any period after March 31, 1993.

SEC. 112. INSPECTOR GENERAL.

The Speaker, upon the recommendation of the majority leader and the minority leader, acting jointly, shall appoint an Inspector General for the House. The Inspector General shall—

- (1) receive and investigate complaints from employees of the House with respect to fraud, waste, and abuse in the nonlegislative operations of the House, if such complaints assert the existence of a violation of law, a violation of the Rules of the House, mismanagement, gross waste of funds, or abuse of authority; and
- (2) report the results of such investigations to the Speaker, the majority leader, and the minority leader.

Subtitle B—Office of the General Counsel

SEC. 121. ESTABLISHMENT.

There is established in the House of Representatives an office to be known as the Office of the General Counsel, referred to hereinafter in this title as the "Office".

SEC. 122. ACCOUNTABILITY.

The Office shall be directly accountable to the Leadership Group, composed of—

- (1) the Speaker of the House of Representatives;
- (2) the majority leader and minority leader of the House of Representatives;
- (3) the majority whip and minority whip of the House of Representatives;
- (4) the chairman and ranking minority party member of the Committee on the Judiciary of the House of Representatives; and
- (5) 2 Members of the house to be appointed by the Speaker of the House of Representatives, one of whom shall be appointed upon the recommendation of the majority leader and one of whom shall be appointed upon the recommendation of the minority leader.

SEC. 123. PURPOSE AND POLICY.

The purpose of the Office is to provide legal assistance to Members, officers, and employees of the House of Representatives on matters directly related to their duties, other than matters committed by law, rule, or other authority to the Office of the Parliamentarian, the Office of the Legislative Counsel, the Office of the Law Revision Counsel, the Legislative Classification Office, the Congressional Research Service, the Comptroller General, or the Office of Fair Employment Practices, or to another office, officer, or employee of the House of Representatives. The Office shall maintain—

- (1) impartiality as to issues of policy to be determined by the House of Representatives; and
- (2) the attorney-client relationship with respect to all communications between it and any Member or committee of the House.

SEC. 124. SPECIFIC APPROVAL REQUIREMENTS.

(a) APPROVAL BY RESOLUTION.—Unless approved by unanimous vote of the Leadership Group, the following actions of the Office require prior approval by resolution of the House of Representatives:

- (1) Entering an appearance before any court.
- (2) Filing a brief in any court.
- (3) Representing any Member of the House of Representatives in any contested matter that will result in formal legal proceedings.

(b) APPROVAL BY THE LEADERSHIP GROUP.—The following activities of the Office require prior approval by the Leadership Group:

- (1) Preparation of any legal memorandum or other item of legal research that requires more than 4 hours of preparation time.
- (2) Work other than in the routine course of business of the Office.

(c) SPECIAL RULE.—In carrying out any action under this title, the Office, in the case of any matter that affects an area of responsibility committed to another office, officer, or employee referred to in section 123, shall consult the office, officer, or employee involved and coordinate such action with the office, officer, or employee.

SEC. 125. GENERAL COUNSEL.

The management, supervision, and administration of the Office are vested in the General Counsel, who shall be appointed by the Speaker of the House of Representatives, upon the recommendation of the majority leader and the minority leader of the House of Representatives, acting jointly, without regard for political affiliation and solely on the basis of fitness to perform the duties of the position. The General Counsel shall serve at the pleasure of the Leadership Group.

SEC. 126. STAFF.

With the approval of the Leadership Group or in accordance with policies and procedures approved by the Leadership Group, the General Counsel may employ such attorneys and other employees as may be necessary for the performance of the functions of the Office, except that not more than 4 attorneys and 3 other employees may be so employed and at least one attorney in the Office shall be appointed upon the recommendation of the minority leader. Any individual employed under this section may be removed by the General Counsel, with the approval of the Leadership Group.

SEC. 127. COMPENSATION.

(a) GENERAL COUNSEL.—The General Counsel shall be paid at a per annum gross rate fixed by the Leadership Group, but not more than the rate payable for positions at Level III of the Executive Schedule, under section 5314 of title 5, United States Code.

(b) STAFF.—Members of the staff of the Office shall be paid at per annum gross rates fixed by the General Counsel, with the approval of the Leadership Group or in accordance with policies and procedures approved by the Leadership Group, but not more than the rate payable for positions at level IV of the Executive Schedule, under section 5315 of title 5, United States Code.

SEC. 128. EXPENDITURES.

Subject to appropriation and in accordance with policies and procedures approved by the Leadership Group, the General Counsel may make such expenditures as may be appropriate for the functioning of the Office.

SEC. 129. TIME SHEETS.

The attorneys and professional staff in the Office shall maintain regular, written records of the time expended on legal matters, consistent with generally accepted practices in private law firms. Such time records shall be maintained on forms and according to procedures established by the General Counsel, and shall provide for the recordation of time allotted to legal work in increments of no more than one-quarter hour. The time records shall be reviewable by the Leadership Group and may not be made public other than by direction of the Leadership Group or resolution of the House.

TITLE II—LEGISLATIVE PROCESS REFORMS

SEC. 201. HOUSE SCHEDULING REFORM.

Rule I of the Rules of the House of Representatives is amended by adding at the end the following new clause:

"11. (a) At the beginning on each session of the Congress the Speaker shall, after consultation with the minority leader and the chairmen of the committees of the House, announce a legislative program for the session which shall include (1) target dates for the consideration of specified major budgetary, authorization, and appropriations bills; (2) an indication of those weeks during which the House will be in session (which, unless otherwise indicated, shall be assumed to be full, 5-day work weeks for the conduct of committee and House floor business); (3) those weeks set aside for district work periods (which shall be scheduled at periodic intervals), holidays, and other recesses; and (4) the target date for the adjournment of that session.

"(b) The Speaker shall ensure that the minority leader is fully consulted in developing the legislative program for the House each week."

SEC. 202. TREATMENT OF VETOED BILLS.

Rule I of the Rules of the House of Representatives is amended by adding at the end the following:

"11. Immediately after the receipt of a bill returned by the President, the Speaker shall state the question on the reconsideration of that bill, without intervening motion, and the House shall proceed to vote on the reconsideration of that bill."

SEC. 203. MULTIPLE REFERRAL OF LEGISLATION.

Clause 5(c) of rule X of the Rules of the House of Representatives is amended to read as follows:

"(c) In carrying out paragraphs (a) and (b) with respect to any matter, the Speaker shall initially refer the matter to one committee which he shall designate as the committee of principal jurisdiction; but, he may also refer the matter to one or more additional committees, for consideration in sequence (subject to appropriate time limitations), either on its initial referral or after the matter has been reported by the committee of principal jurisdiction; or refer portions of the matter to one or more additional committees (reflecting different subjects and jurisdictions) for the exclusive consideration of such portion or portions; or refer the matter to a special ad hoc committee appointed by the Speaker, with the approval of the House, from the members of the committees having legislative jurisdiction, for the specific purpose of considering that matter and reporting to the House thereon; or make such other provisions as may be considered appropriate."

SEC. 204. PRESENTMENT OF BILLS TO THE PRESIDENT.

The Rules of the House of Representatives are amended by adding at the end the following:

"RULE LII.

"PRESENTMENT OF BILLS

"Not later than the tenth calendar day beginning after the date upon which a bill has been agreed to in identical form by the House of Representatives and the Senate, in the case of a bill originating in the House of Representatives, the bill shall be presented to the President."

SEC. 205. COMMITTEE RATIOS.

(a) Clause 6(a) of rule X of the Rules of the House of Representatives is amended by adding at the end the following new subparagraph:

"(3) The membership of each committee (and each subcommittee, task force, or other subunit thereof), shall reflect the ratio of majority to minority party Members of the House at the beginning of the Congress. This subparagraph shall not apply to the Committee on Standards of Official Conduct which shall be constituted as provided for in subparagraph (2). For the purposes of this clause, the Resident Commissioner from Puerto Rico and the Delegates to the House shall not be counted in determining the party ratio of the House."

(b) Clause 6(f) of rule X of the Rules of the House of Representatives is amended by inserting after the first sentence the following: "The membership of each such select committee (and of any subcommittee, task force, or subunit thereof), and of each such conference committee, shall reflect the ratio of the majority to minority party Members of the House at the time of its appointment."

SEC. 206. SUBCOMMITTEE LIMITS.

(10) Clause 6(d) of rule X of the Rules of the House of Representatives is amended to read as follows:

"(d)(1) Each standing committee of the House (except the Committee on the Budget) that has more than 20 members, shall establish at least 4 subcommittees; but, in no event shall any standing committee (except the Committee on Appropriations) establish more than 6 subcommittees.

"(2) No member may serve at any one time as a member of more than 4 subcommittees of committees of the House.

"(3) For the purposes of this paragraph, the term 'subcommittee' includes any panel, task force, special subcommittee, or any subunit of a standing committee, or any select committee which is established for a period of longer than 6 months in any Congress."

SEC. 207. PROXY VOTING BAN.

Clause 2(f) of rule XI of the Rules of the House of Representatives is amended to read as follows:

"(f) No vote by any member of any committee or subcommittee with respect to any measure or matter may be cast by proxy."

SEC. 208. OPEN MEETING.

Clause 2(g)(1) of rule XI of the Rules of the House of Representatives is amended by striking the colon in the first sentence and all that follows thereafter and inserting the following: "because disclosure of matters to be considered would endanger national security, would tend to defame, degrade, or incriminate any person or otherwise would violate any law or rule of the House, or involves committee personnel matters."

SEC. 209. MAJORITY QUORUMS.

Clause 2(h)(2) of rule XI of the Rules of the House of Representatives is amended to read as follows:

"(2) A majority of the members of each committee or subcommittee shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of any business, including the markup of legislation."

SEC. 210. REPORT ACCOUNTABILITY.

Clause 2(1)(2)(B) of rule XI of the Rules of the House of Representatives is amended to read as follows:

"(B) With respect to each rollcall vote on a motion to report any bill or resolution of a public character, the total number of votes cast for and against reporting, and the names of those Members voting for and against, shall be included in the committee report on the measure."

Clause 2(1)(2) of rule XI of the Rules of the House of Representatives is further amended by adding at the end the following:

"(C) With respect to each nonrecord vote on a motion to report any bill or resolution of a public character, the names of those members of the committee actually present at the time the bill or resolution is ordered reported shall be included in the committee report."

SEC. 211. COMMITTEE DOCUMENTS.

Clause 2(1) of rule XI of the Rules of the House of Representatives is amended by redesignating subparagraphs (6) and (7) as subparagraphs (7) and (8), respectively, and by inserting after subparagraph (5) the following new subparagraph:

"(6)(A) Any committee or subcommittee print, document, or other material, other than reports subject to the preceding provisions of this clause, prepared for public distribution, shall either be approved by the committee or subcommittee prior to such public distribution, and opportunity shall be afforded for the inclusion of supplemental, minority, or additional views in accordance with the provisions of subparagraph (5), of such print, document, or other material shall contain on its cover the following disclaimer in bold face type:

'This material has not been officially approved by the committee [or subcommittee, as the case may be] on [name of committee or subcommittee] and may not therefore necessarily reflect the views of its members.'

and any such print, document, or other material not approved by the committee or subcommittee may not include the names of its members, other than the name of the committee or subcommittee chairman releasing the document, but shall be made available to all of the members of the committee not less than three calendar days (excluding Saturdays, Sundays, and public holidays) prior to its being made public.

"(B) The provisions of this subparagraph do not apply to prints of bills or resolutions, summaries thereof, or prints containing the names of committee or subcommittee members, staff, or other factual information regarding the committee or its subcommittees, their jurisdictions or rules, or any matters pending before such committee or its subcommittees, provided that such documents do not also contain opinions, views, findings, or recommendations.

"(C) Nothing in this subparagraph shall be construed to authorize any subcommittee or chairman thereof to issue any print, document or other material not otherwise authorized by the rules of the committee."

SEC. 212. SAME DAY CONSIDERATION OF RULES COMMITTEE REPORTS.

The first sentence of clause 4(b) of rule XI of the Rules of the House of Representatives is amended by striking the matter in parentheses and inserting the following: "(except that it shall not be called up for consideration on the same calendar day, nor on the subsequent calendar day of the same legislative day, that it is presented to the House, unless so determined by a vote of not less than two-thirds of the members voting, but this provision shall not apply during the last three days of the session)"

SEC. 213. PERMITTING INSTRUCTIONS IN MOTIONS TO RECOMMIT.

The second sentence in clause 4(b) of rule XI of the Rules of the House of Representatives is amended by striking "nor" and all that follows thereafter and by inserting the following: "nor shall it report any rule or order which would prevent the motion to recommit from being made as provided in clause 4 of rule XVI, including a motion with amendatory instructions (except in the case of a Senate measure for which the language of a House-passed measure has been submitted)."

SEC. 214. RESTRICTIVE RULE LIMITATION.

Clause 4 of rule XI of the Rules of the House of Representatives is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(e) It shall not be in order to consider any resolution reported from the Committee on Rules providing for the consideration of any bill or resolution otherwise subject to amendment under House rules if that resolution limits the right of Members to offer germane amendments to such bill or resolution unless the chairman of the Committee on Rules has orally announced in the House, at least four legislative days prior to the scheduled consideration of such matter by the Committee on Rules, that less than an open amendment process might be recommended by the Committee for the consideration of such bill or resolution."

SEC. 215. LIMITATION ON SELF-EXECUTING RULES.

Clause 4 of rule XI of the Rules of the House of Representatives is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(f) It shall not be in order to consider any order of business resolution reported from the Committee on rules which provides that, upon the adoption of such resolution, the House shall be considered to have automatically adopted a motion, amendment, or resolution, or to have passed a bill, joint resolution, or conference report thereon, unless the consideration of such order of business resolution is agreed to by not less than two-thirds of the Members voting, and the yeas and nays shall be considered as ordered when the Speaker puts the question on consideration."

SEC. 216. BUDGET WAIVER LIMITATION.

Clause 4 of rule XI of the Rules of the House of Representatives (as amended by sections 214 and 215) is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(g)(1) It shall not be in order to consider any resolution reported from the Committee on Rules for the consideration of any measure which waives any specified provisions of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974, unless the report accompanying such resolution includes an explanation of, and justification for, any such waiver, an estimated cost of the provisions to which the waiver applies, and a summary or text of any written comments on the waiver received by the committee from the Committee on the Budget.

"(2) It shall be in order after the previous question has been ordered on any such resolution, to offer motions proposing to strike one or more such waivers from the resolution, and each such motion shall be decided without debate and shall require for adoption the requisite number of affirmative votes as required by the Budget Act or the rules of the House. After disposition of any and all such motions, the House shall proceed to an immediate vote on adoption of the resolution.

"(3) It shall not be in order to consider a resolution which waives all House rules except by a vote of two-thirds of those Members voting."

SEC. 217. COMMITTEE STAFFING.

Clause 5 of rule XI of the Rules of the House of Representatives is amended by redesignating paragraphs (a) through (f) as paragraphs (b) through (g), respectively, and by inserting at the beginning the following new paragraph:

"(a)(1) It shall not be in order to consider any primary expense resolution until the Committee on House Administration has reported, and the House has adopted, a resolution establishing an overall ceiling for House committee staff personnel for that year, and any such resolution shall be privileged.

"(2) In developing any primary expense resolution, the Committee on House Administration shall specify in the resolution the number of staff positions authorized by the resolution. The committee shall verify in the report accompanying any such primary expense resolution that the number of staff positions authorized by such resolution is in conformity with the overall ceiling on such positions established by the House.

"(3) In no event shall the total number of additional staff positions authorized by all such primary expense resolutions, taken together with the number of staff positions authorized by clause 6 of this rule (providing for professional and clerical staff), exceed the ceiling established by the House for that year.

"(4) In allocating staff positions pursuant to the overall ceiling established by the House, the committee shall take into account the past and anticipated legislative and oversight activities of each committee.

"(5) In any supplemental expense resolution, and in any amendment thereto, the committee shall specify the number of additional staff positions, if any, authorized by such resolution, and shall indicate in the report accompanying any such resolution whether the additional staff positions are in conformity with or exceed the overall ceiling established by the House.

"(6) It shall not be in order to consider any supplemental expense resolution, or any amendment thereto, authorizing additional staff positions in excess of the overall ceiling established by the House except by a vote of two-thirds of the Members voting, a quorum being present.

"(7) It shall not be in order to consider any primary or supplemental expense resolution for one or more committees unless the report on such resolution includes a statement verifying that each such committee has adopted and complied with a committee rule entitling the minority party on such committee, upon the request of a majority of such minority, to not less than one-third of the funds provided for committee staff pursuant to each primary or supplemental expense resolution.

"(8) For the purposes of the One Hundred Third Congress, the overall ceiling for committee staff in a resolution reported by the committee pursuant to subparagraph (1), or contained in any amendment thereto, shall not exceed 50 percent of the total committee staff personnel employed at the end of the One Hundred Second Congress."

SEC. 218. COMMEMORATIVE CALENDAR.

Rule XIII of the Rules of the House of Representatives is amended by redesignating clauses 6 and 7 as clauses 7 and 8, respectively, and by inserting after clause 5 the following new clause:

"6. There shall also be a Commemorative Calendar to be comprised of unreported bills and resolutions respecting commemorative holidays and celebrations referred to the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service and requested by the chairman and ranking minority member of such committee, in writing, to be placed thereon. On the first and third Tuesdays of each month, after the disposal of such business on the Speaker's table as requires reference only and resolutions called on the Private Calendar, the Speaker shall direct the Clerk to call the bills and resolutions on the Commemorative Calendar. Should objection be made by two or more Members to the consideration of any bill or resolution so called, it shall be removed from such Calendar. Such bills and resolutions, if considered, shall be considered in the House."

SEC. 219. AUTOMATIC ROLL CALL VOTES.

Rule XV of the Rules of the House of Representatives is amended by adding at the end the following new clause:

"7. The yeas and nays shall be considered as ordered when the Speaker puts the question upon final passage of any bill, joint resolution, or conference report thereon, making general appropriations, providing revenue, or adjusting the statutory rate of pay of Members of Congress, or on final adoption of any concurrent resolution on the budget or conference report thereon which provides an increase in the statutory debt limit."

SEC. 220. APPROPRIATION REFORMS.

Clause 2 of rule XXI of the Rules of the House of Representatives is amended by striking the second sentence of paragraph (c) and by amending paragraph (d) to read as follows:

"(d)(1) For the purposes of House Rules, a 'general appropriation bill' shall include any bill or joint resolution making continuing appropriations in a fiscal year for a period in excess of 30 days, and any such measure shall include the full text of the language proposed to be enacted (as opposed to mere references to measures, or amendments thereto, which have been reported or passed by either House, or agreed to by a committee of conference).

"(2) The provisions of clause 2(1)(3)(B) of rule XI shall apply to any 'general appropriation bill' as defined in subparagraph (1).

"(3) For the purposes of this clause, all points of order shall be considered as having been reserved against any general appropriation bill at the time it was reported."

(b) Clause 2 of rule XXI of the Rules of the House of Representatives is amended by inserting after paragraph (d) the following new paragraph:

"(e) It shall not be in order to consider any bill or joint resolution making continuing appropriations for a period of 30 days or less unless such measure only provides appropriations in the lesser amount and under the more restrictive authority of each pertinent appropriations measure: as passed by the House; as passed by the Senate; as agreed to by a committee of conference; or enacted for the preceding fiscal year."

(c) Clause 3 of rule XXI of the Rules of the House of Representatives is amended by inserting ", and shall contain a list of all appropriations contained in the bill for any expenditure not previously authorized by law" before the period.

(d) Clause 2(1)(3)(B) of rule XI of the Rules of the House of Representatives is amended by striking "(other than continuing appropriations)" and inserting in lieu thereof "(other than continuing appropriations, except as provided by clause 2(d) of rule XXI)".

(e) Clause 4 of rule XI of the Rules of the House of Representatives is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(h) It shall not be in order, except by a vote of not less than 3/4 of the Members of the House duly chosen and sworn, to consider any rule or order from the Committee on Rules which waives the provisions of clause 2 of rule XXI against the consideration of any short-term, continuing appropriations measure as defined therein; or which waives the provisions of clause 2 of rule XXI against, or denies amendment to, any provision in a long term, continuing appropriation measure as defined therein if that provision has not been previously considered and agreed to by the House."

SEC. 221. RECONCILIATION LIMITATION.

Rule XXI of the Rules of the House of Representatives is amended by adding at the end the following new clause:

"8. (a) No provision shall be reported in the House in any reconciliation bill pursuant to the most recently agreed to concurrent resolution on the budget, or be in order as an amendment thereto in the House or Committee of the Whole, which is not related to achieving the purposes of the directives to House committees contained in such concurrent resolution.

"(b) Nothing in this clause shall be construed to prevent the consideration of any provision in a reconciliation bill, or any amendment thereto, which achieves savings greater than those directed of a committee and which conforms to paragraph (c) of this clause, or to prevent the consideration of motions to strike made in order by the Committee on Rules to achieve the purposes of the directives.

"(c) For the purposes of this clause, a provision shall be considered related to achieving the purposes of directives contained in the most recently agreed to concurrent resolution on the budget if it is estimated by the House Committee on the Budget, in consultation with the Congressional Budget Office, to effectuate or implement a reduction in budget authority or in new spending authority described in section 401(c)(2)(C) of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974, or to raise revenues or both, and, in the case of an amendment, if it is within (in whole or in part) the jurisdiction of any committee instructed in the concurrent resolution.

"(d) The point of order provided for by this clause shall not apply to Senate amendments or to conference reports.

"(e) For the purposes of this clause, all points of order shall be considered as having been reserved against a reconciliation bill at the time it was reported."

SEC. 222. AUTHORIZATION REPORTING DEADLINE.

Rule XXI of the Rules of the House of Representatives (as amended by section 221) is amended by adding at the end the following new clause:

"9. It shall not be in order to consider in the House any bill or joint resolution which directly or indirectly authorizes the enactment of new budget authority for a fiscal year unless that bill or joint resolution is reported in the House on or before May 15 preceding the beginning of such fiscal year."

SEC. 223. PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE.

Clause 1 or rule XXIV of the Rules of the House of Representatives is amended by inserting after the second order of business the following new order of business (and by redesignating succeeding orders accordingly):

"Third. The Pledge of Allegiance to the Flag."

SEC. 224. SUSPENSION OF THE RULES.

Clause 1 of rule XXVII of the Rules of the House of Representatives is amended by inserting "(a)" after "1", and by inserting at the end the following new paragraphs:

"(b) It shall not be in order to entertain a motion to suspend the rules and pass or agree to any measure or matter unless by direction of the committee or committees of jurisdiction over the measure or matter, or unless a written request is filed with the Speaker by the chairman and ranking minority member of the committee or committees having jurisdiction over the measure or matter, asking for its consideration under suspension of the rules.

"(c) A motion to suspend the rules and pass or agree to any measure or matter shall not be in order if the measure or matter would enact or authorize the enactment of new budget authority or new spending authority in excess of $50,000,000 for any fiscal year; nor shall it be in order to entertain a motion to suspend the rules to pass any joint resolution which proposes to amend the Constitution.

"(d) It shall not be in order to entertain a motion to suspend the rules and pass or agree to any measure or matter unless written notice is placed in the Congressional Record of its scheduled consideration at least one calendar day prior to its consideration, and such notification shall include the numerical designation of the measure or matter, its short title, and the text of any amendments to be offered thereto, and the date on which the measure or matter is scheduled to be considered.

SEC. 225. DISCHARGE MOTION.

Clause (4) of rule XXVII of the Rules of the House of Representatives is amended by inserting after the fourth sentence the following new sentence: "When 100 Members have signed the motion, the Clerk shall cause to be printed in the Congressional Record the name of each member who has signed or withdrawn a signature to the motion, and shall thereafter publish an updated list in the Congressional Record at the end of each succeeding week the House is in session."

SEC. 226. INCLUSION OF VIEWS WITH CONFERENCE REPORTS.

Clause 1 of rule XXVIII of the Rules of the House of Representatives is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(e) If, on the day a report of any committee of conference has received the requisite number of signatures for approval by House conferees, any House conferee gives notice of intention to file supplemental, minority, or additional views, that Member shall be entitled to not less than 3 calendar days (excluding Saturdays, Sundays and legal holidays) in which to file such views with the principal manager on the part of the House, such views shall be in writing and signed by that Member. All such views so filed by one or more Members of the committee shall be published in the same volume as the report of the committee of conference and the joint explanatory statement filed in the House, and the volume shall bear on its cover a recital that any such supplemental, minority, or additional views are included as part of that volume. This paragraph shall not preclude the immediate filing or printing of a conference report if a timely request to file such view was not made as provided by this paragraph."

SEC. 227. INTELLIGENCE COMMITTEE OATH.

(a) Clause 1 of rule XLVIII of the Rules of the House of Representatives is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(d) At the time a Member is appointed to serve on the select committee, or within 30 days after the adoption by the House of this provision, whichever is later, the Member shall take the following oath:

"I do solemnly swear (or affirm) that I will not directly or indirectly disclose to any unauthorized person any classified information received in the course of my duties on the Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence, except with the formal approval of the committee or of the House."

The oath shall be administered by the Speaker of the House of Representatives. The Clerk of the House of Representatives of the One Hundred Second Congress and each succeeding Congress shall cause this oath to be printed, furnishing 2 copies to each Member appointed to the select committee who has taken this oath, which shall be subscribed to by the Member who shall deliver them to the Clerk, one to be filed in the records of the House of Representatives, and the other to be recorded in the Journal of the House and the Congressional Record."

(b) Clause 5 of rule XLVIII of the Rules of the House of Representative is amended by adding at the end the following new sentences: "Each employee of the select committee and any person engaged by contract or otherwise to perform services for or at the request of the select committee who is required to subscribe to the agreement in writing referred to in the first sentence of this clause shall, at the time of the signing or within 30 days after the adoption of this provision, whichever is later, also take the oath set out in clause 1(d) of this rule. The oath shall be administered by the chairman or by any Member of the committee or of the committee staff designated by the chairman. The Clerk of the House of Representatives of the One Hundred Second Congress and each succeeding Congress shall cause this oath to be printed, furnishing 2 copies to each such person taking this oath, which shall be subscribed to by such person, who shall deliver them to the Clerk, one to be filed in the records of the House of Representatives, and the other to be recorded in the Journal of the House and in the Congressional Record."

(c) Clause 7(d) of rule XLVIII of the Rules of the House of Representatives is amended by inserting "or the oath required by clause 1(d) of by clause 5," after "paragraph (c)" and by adding after the last sentence the following new sentences: "The select committee may refer cases of unauthorized disclosure and violations of the required oaths to the Committee on Standards of Official Conduct for investigation. While a member of the committee is the subject of such a pending investigation, the select committee may determine by majority vote that the Member shall not be given access to classified information."

SEC. 228. ENHANCED RESCISSION AUTHORITY.

(a) The Committee on Rules and the Committee on Government Operations shall, not later than May 31, 1992, report legislation granting the President enhanced rescission authority with respect to any budget authority not authorized by law. Such legislation shall provide that any such budget authority shall be considered to be permanently canceled unless a joint resolution disapproving such rescission is enacted within 45 calendar days of continuous session of Congress (as defined by section 1011 of the Impoundment Control Act of 1974) after the date on which the President's special rescission message is received.

(b) If such legislation is not reported by the committees named above by the date specified, the committees not reporting shall be considered as having been discharged from the further consideration of the first such bill introduced and it shall be in order on any day after June 3, 1992, for any Member of the House (after consultation with the Speaker as to the most appropriate time for consideration), as a matter of highest privilege, to move to resolve into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for its consideration, and the bill shall be subject to 2 hours of general debate to be equally divided and controlled by the majority and minority leaders, or their designees, followed by consideration of the measure for amendment under the five-minute rule.

SEC. 229. BIENNIAL BUDGET-APPROPRIATIONS PROCESS.

The Committee on Rules is directed to conduct a complete and thorough study of the advisability and feasibility of converting to a biennial budget and appropriations process and corresponding multiyear authorizations, and to report its findings and recommendations to the House not later than December 31, 1992.

SEC. 230. APPLICABILITY OF CERTAIN LAWS TO THE HOUSE.

(a) It is the policy of the House that the laws of the United States set forth in subsection (b) should be amended to apply to the House of Representatives in the same or similar manner as such laws apply to the Executive Branch.

(b) Not later than June 30, 1992, the standing committees of the House with subject matter jurisdiction over the following laws of the United States shall report to the House legislation to implement subsection (a):

- (1) The National Labor Relations Act.
- (2) The Occupation Safety Act and Health Act of 1970.
- (3) The Equal Pay Act of 1963.
- (4) The Age Discrimination in Employment Act of 1967.
- (5) Section 552 of title 5, United States Code (popularly known as the Freedom of Information Act).
- (6) Section 552a of title 5, United States Code (popularly known as the Privacy Act of 1974).
- (7) Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 (relating to equal employment opportunity).
- (8) Chapter 39 of title 28, United States Code (relating to an independent counsel).

(c) The Committee on Rules shall, not later than 10 legislative days after any such legislation has been reported, report a resolution providing for the consideration of such measure in the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union under an open amendment process.

(d) If such legislation is not reported by all the committees named above by the date specified, the first bill introduced which implements the policy referred to in subsection (a) and which encompasses all the laws referred to in subsection (b) shall be considered as having been discharged from all the committees to which it was referred. It shall be in order on any day after July 15, 1992, for any Member of the House (after consultation with the Speaker as to the most appropriate time for consideration), as a matter of highest privilege, to move to resolve into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for its consideration, and the bill shall be subject to four hours of general debate to be equally divided and controlled by the majority and minority leaders, or their designees, followed by consideration of the measure for amendment under the five-minute rule.

SEC. 231. EQUITABLE COMMITTEE STAFF RATIOS.

Effective at the beginning of the One Hundred Third Congress, except as provided in sections 107 and 108, the ratio of majority party to minority party staff positions, consultants, details, and funding for each committee of the House of Representatives shall be the ratio of majority party to minority party Members of the House of Representatives.

SEC. 232. ELIMINATION OF CERTAIN SELECT COMMITTEES.

(a) SELECT COMMITTEE ON AGING.—Clause 6(i) of rule X of the Rules of the House of Representatives is repealed.

(b) ADDITIONAL SELECT COMMITTEES.—The Select Committee on Hunger, the Select Committee on Children, Youth, and Families, and the Select Committee on Narcotics Abuse and Control shall cease to exist upon the adoption of this resolution.

(c) TREATMENT OF RECORDS AND FILES.—The records, files, and materials of the select committees referred to in subsections (a) and (b) shall be transferred to the Clerk of the House.

SEC. 233. APPLICATION OF INFORMATION DISCLOSURE REQUIREMENTS TO CONGRESS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Effective upon the enactment of this section into permanent law, notwithstanding any other provision of law, and subject to the amendment made by subsection (c), the provisions of section 552 of title 5, United States Code (popularly known as the "Freedom of Information Act"), shall apply to the Congress.

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—Effective upon the enactment of this section into permanent law, section 551(1)(A) of title 5, United States Code (relating to the exclusion of the Congress from, among other matters, laws requiring the disclosure of public information), is amended to read as follows:

"(A) except as that term is used in section 552, the Congress;"

(c) LIMITATION AMENDMENT.—Effective upon the enactment of this section into permanent law, section 552 of title 5, United States Code (relating to the disclosure of public information), is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(f) In the case of an authority of the Government of the United States (as that term is used in section 551(1) of this title) who is a Member of the House of Representatives or the Senate, this section shall not apply to information that is related to casework or consistent correspondence."

SEC. 234. LIMITATION ON THE DURATION OF PAYMENTS OF EXPENSES OF FORMER SPEAKERS OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The period for which expenses of former Speakers of the House of Representatives may be paid shall end 3 years after the date of the expiration of the term of office as Representative of the former Speaker involved, except that, in the case of a former Speaker who is receiving such expenses on the date of the enactment of this Act, the period shall end 3 years after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(b) DEFINITION.—As used in this section, the term "expenses of former Speakers of the House of Representatives" means the office, allowance, and other expenses provided for former Speakers of the House of Representatives under House Resolution 1238, Ninety-first Congress, enacted into permanent law by chapter VIII of the Supplemental Appropriations Act, 1971 (2 U.S.C. 31b-1 et seq.).

SEC. 235. PROHIBITION ON FRANKED MASS MAILINGS BY MEMBERS OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES OUTSIDE THEIR CONGRESSIONAL DISTRICTS.

(a) AMENDMENT TO TITLE 39.—Effective upon the enactment of this section into permanent law, section 3210 of title 39, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in subsection (a)(7), by striking out "except that—" and all that follows through the end of subparagraph (B) and inserting in lieu thereof a period; and

(2) in subsection (d)(1), by striking out "delivery—" and all that follows through the end of subparagraph (B) and inserting in lieu thereof "delivery within that area constituting the congressional district or State from which the Member was elected."

(b) OFFICIAL FUNDS LIMITATION.—The Committee on House Administration of the House of Representatives may not approve any payment, nor may a Member of the House of Representatives make any expenditure from, any allowance of the House of Representatives or any other official funds if any portion of the payment or expenditure is for any cost related to a mass mailing by a Member of the House of Representatives outside the congressional district of the Member.

SEC. 236. REQUIREMENT THAT LEGISLATION ADJUSTING PAY FOR MEMBERS OF CONGRESS BE CONSIDERED SEPARATELY.

Section 225 of the Federal Salary Act of 1967 (2 U.S.C. 351 and following) is amended by adding at the end the following:

"(c) LEGISLATION ADJUSTING MEMBERS' PAY TO BE CONSIDERED SEPARATELY.—It shall not be in order in the House of Representatives to consider any bill or resolution that would adjust, or have the effect of adjusting, the rate of pay of Members of Congress if the bill of resolution contains any item which does not relate to adjusting Members' rates of pay."

SEC. 237. LEGISLATIVE BRANCH APPROPRIATIONS TO BE FOR ONE YEAR ONLY.

It shall not be in order to consider in the House of Representatives any measure appropriating amounts for the legislative branch of the Government if such measure permits any such amount to remain available for obligation beyond the end of the fiscal year for which such amount is appropriated.

SEC. 238. ONE ATTORNEY IN THE OFFICE OF THE PARLIAMENTARIAN TO BE APPOINTED UPON THE RECOMMENDATION OF THE MINORITY LEADER.

Notwithstanding section 3 of House Resolution 502, Ninety-fifth Congress, agreed to April 20, 1977, as enacted into permanent law by section 115 of Public Law 95-94 (2 U.S.C. 278b), or any other law or other authority, at least one attorney appointed by the Parliamentarian under that section shall be appointed upon the recommendation of the minority leader.

SEC. 239. ROTATION OF CHAIRMANSHIP OF COMMITTEE ON STANDARDS OF OFFICIAL CONDUCT.

Clause 6(c) of rule X of the Rules of the House of Representatives is amended by inserting "(1)" after "(c)" and by adding at the end the following:

"(2) In the case of the Committee on Standards of Official Conduct—

"(A) the chairman elected under subparagraph (1) shall only be for the first session of a Congress; and

"(B) at the beginning of the second session of a Congress, one of the members of that committee shall be elected its chairman for that session by the House from nominations submitted by the minority party caucus or conference."

SEC. 240. EACH RULE OF THE HOUSE TO BE AGREED TO BY SEPARATE RESOLUTION OF THE HOUSE.

In adopting the Rules of the House of Representatives in the One Hundred Third Congress and any subsequent Congress, each rule shall be agreed to by separate resolution of the House.

Mr. THOMAS of California (during the reading). Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the amendment in the nature of a substitute be considered as read and printed in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from California [Mr. THOMAS] will be recognized for 30 minutes, and a member opposed, the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. ROSE], will be recognized for 30 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from California [Mr. THOMAS].

Mr. THOMAS of California. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. SOLOMON], a member of the task force.

Mr. ROSE. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman defer to me so I may yield time to the gentlewoman from New York [Ms. SLAUGHTER] to allow her to complete her statement?

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, I defer to the gentleman from North Carolina.

Mr. ROSE. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentlewoman from New York [Ms. SLAUGHTER].

Ms. SLAUGHTER. Mr. Speaker, recent events involving the Sergeant at Arms' bank and the post office have shown the need for professional management and businesslike personnel policies. In addition, we have the responsibility to spend every dollar wisely and efficiently.

In this resolution, the House creates a Director of Nonlegislative and Financial Services. The mandate we give the holder of this new position is to sweep the House clean of waste, and inefficiency. The Director will be responsible for providing in the most cost-efficient manner the support services any large organization needs: from paying the employees to ensuring that the phones work.

The resolution provides that the Director have extensive managerial and financial experience. And more than that, it provides that both the majority and minority parties must agree on the selection of the person to fill this post. This will ensure that only relevant experience and skills will count, not the politics of those who apply.

The goal of removing politics from employment decisions is also mandated in the resolution for all employees hired by the Director. Only the applicants' fitness for the job will count.

And this reform effort doesn't stop there. This resolution sets up an Office of Inspector General to audit the financial operations of the House support operations.

The Inspector General will be directed by a new bipartisan Subcommittee on Administrative Oversight of the House Administration Committee. The subcommittee will have equal representation from each party. In addition, all the Inspector General's reports will go not only to the Speaker and majority leadership, but also, simultaneously, to the minority leader and ranking minority members of the House Administration Committee.

All these provisions add up to a bold and totally bipartisan approach to managing House support services. An independent, professional manager will be carefully watched by an independent, and nonpartisan auditor. Both will be overseen by a subcommittee with equal representation from both parties.

We know that these innovations are not enough to solve all the problems of the House. We are committed to moving beyond these important administrative changes to examining how we could better organize our core legislative functions and expedite the business of the House. We are committed to assuring real changes.

It is far easier, and perhaps more politically advantageous, to stand outside and carp about Congress. It is far more difficult to take responsibility and build anew. But history will judge all of us harshly if we do not take this opportunity to start afresh.

Mr. Speaker, I urge my colleagues to join in this first revolutionary and bipartisan step toward revitalizing the House. Vote for House Resolution 423.

Mr. MICHEL. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from New York [Mr. SOLOMON], our ranking member on the Committee on Rules, who has been an outstanding member of this task force.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, I thank the Republican leader for yielding this time.

Mr. Speaker, George Bernard Shaw once said that, "The best reformers the world has ever seen are those who commence on themselves."

Mr. Speaker, if we use that simple litmus test today on these two alternatives, there can be no doubt that the Michel substitute is far and away the best reform—indeed, the only real reform—because it commences on ourselves.

The Democrats' package, on the other hand, is a feeble attempt at House reform that really does not begin to do the job of overhauling this institution the way it really needs to be done.

Instead, the Democrats' thin little nine-page resolution is an attempt to give the majority cover from the scandals that have been laid at their doorstep.

But, Mr. Speaker, it is all pretty transparent: The Democrats are trying to paper over the problems of this House with cellophane siding. Not only is it easy to see through, but it is just as fragile—it is bound to be ripped away by another storm of scandals in a year or two, and how embarrassing that is going to be all of us. Is that the kind of cover Members really want?

The Michel substitute, on the other hand, rejects the cellophane siding approach to House reform and instead calls for major restoration, from the basement to the attic, from committee room to committee room.

It recognizes and exterminates the termites of corrupt power that have been eating away at our foundation for the past four decades, and rebuilds this House on a strong and solid new foundation.

The Michel substitute is far superior to the Democrats' vague outline because it gives us a detailed plan for both administrative and procedural reform of this House which is so badly needed.

The Democrats give us a new House Director, who is really under the direction and control of the Democrat partisan House Administration Committee; they give us a new inspector general who is not independent but under the direction and control of who?—the Democrat partisan House Administration Committee; they give us a new bipartisan oversight subcommittee that is really under the ultimate control of who?—the Democrat partisan House Administration Committee. Nothing has changed, and they give us a new general counsel, with unlimited assistance. Think of all the jobs that creates for all the new young Democrat lawyers in town. Who is really in charge of all this? The Democrat partisan House Administration Committee.

Keep in mind that this is the same Democrat partisan House Administration Committee which was supposed to have been preventing these scandals in the first place.

So, Mr. Speaker, where is the change? Where is the reform? All we are doing in the Democrats' package is to rearrange the jokers in the same old House of cards.

The Michel substitute, on the other hand, abolishes two existing offices of the House and creates a Chief Financial Officer with real powers, and real teeth, accountable to the bipartisan leadership. That is teeth.

It gives us a bipartisan House Administration Committee to oversee House operations rather than a partisan one to cover them up. That is teeth.

It gives us a real inspector general with authority to investigate waste, fraud, and abuse, not just another House Administration Committee auditor. That is real teeth.

Mr. Speaker, I could go on; but finally, let me say that while the Democrat package is silent on the real scandal of this House, the breakdown in the legislative process, the Michel substitute gives us comprehensive House procedural reform by reducing subcommittees and staff, abolishing joint bill referrals, and abolishing proxy voting. Right now, Members can be back home in their district casting proxy votes here in Washington. Finally, the Michel substitute brings the House under the same laws we impose on our constituents.

□ 1850

Members, let us be true reformers by commencing on ourselves today. Let us cooperate, let us adopt the Michel substitute. It is real reform.

SUNDRY MESSAGES FROM THE PRESIDENT

Sundry messages in writing from the President of the United States were communicated to the House by Mr. McCathran, one of his secretaries.

HOUSE ADMINISTRATIVE REFORM RESOLUTION OF 1992

Mr. ROSE. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. OBEY].

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Speaker, I get awful tired of the partisan games that go on around this House and on this issue; I have seen them for 15 years. As I said earlier in the debate, 15 years ago, in the middle of the Hays affair, I was asked by the then-Speaker to chair a commission which brought forth an ethics reform package, which this House passed on a bipartisan basis.

Then I was asked to bring forward an administrative reform package, and that package wound up recommending the creation of a House administrator to oversee the House services, recommended a House auditor, and recommended an end to cut-rate prices for perks, everything from haircuts to you name it.

It recommended the reestablishment of the Committee on Committees to review the committee structure in this House. It recommended the creation of a Fair Employment Practices panel. It recommended creating maternity and sick leave for our employees.

It was beat for two reasons. On the Democratic side the Democratic Party split. We got 160 votes for the package, we got 113 against it. The 113, I presume, in the main, voted against it because they did not want to see us give up the old ways.

And the second reason we got beat was that on the Republican side of the aisle we got absolutely no help. We had 139 votes against the package and zero votes for it. In those days they had a lot of argument just as the Democrats did, but in the end what it meant is that they preferred to have a partisan debate rather than a bipartisan solution. So, we lost the bill.

I am convinced if that reform package had passed, we would have not seen the scandals in this House that embarrassed this institution in the last year.

Now we have a second chance, and we have resurrected those reforms. This package recommends the creation of an administrator—I do not care what you call him, that is what he is going to be—for support services; an inspector general or auditor, I do not care what you call him, again the function is going to be the same. And the reform is that the minority leader is given an absolute veto of who occupies those positions. Now, if the minority does not like the way they have been handled, if you do not think they have done a decent job, the minority leader does not cooperate on the reappointment of that individual, and he is out.

Therein comes the reform; therein comes his independence.

But, again, what we are seeing today is that we are again seeing that the minority would prefer to turn this issue from an issue of financial reform into an issue of who has what power.

Now, the public does not care who has what power. They want to see us correct the problems that have embarrassed the institution and then they want to see us move on to deal with their health care problems, their education problems, their jobs problems. And that is what we ought to do.

I regret very much that we are not going to have the support of the minority party in supporting these very tough and very meaningful reforms. But I do want to make one observation, because there has been a lot of talk about responsibility around here, including the responsibility of the Speaker.

I want to read one paragraph from our report of 15 years ago. We were trying to explain the necessity of giving the leadership more power over the support services in this House, and we said this:

Ironically enough, however, whatever his actual power, the public and the press will generally hold the Speaker accountable for anything and everything related to the administrative system. This may not be defensible logically, but the Speaker's importance and public prominence are such that politics inevitably conquers logic. Politically, the Speaker will be held accountable for performance even though he may be more the prisoner of events than their master.

I would suggest those words were prophetic and they indicate the situation we are in today because the Speaker, frankly, inherited an old system and this is the device by which we change that old system and bring it from the Stone Age into the 20th century.

Now, I just want to say one other thing. I deeply regret the partisanship that has plagued this debate. I do not think it is constructive, I do not think it is helpful. I think we need to quit playing politics on this issue and get on to the business of dealing with the problems facing the country. I just have to say one more thing; it is not just the Speaker who is held accountable if we do not make these reforms, it is all of us.

So, I would ask the minority, do not do what you did 15 years ago, do not prefer a partisan debate to a bipartisan solution. I would ask the Members of the majority, do not fail in your duty this time to pass this package. If we get no help from the minority, we have to do it on our own, but we have to do it.

Mr. MICHEL. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. LIVINGSTON], who also served on the bipartisan task force.

Mr. LIVINGSTON. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, I would tell my friend who just preceded me that I also regret this has turned into a partisan wrangle. I would like to have been here to be part of a joint solution, not bickering about inadequate reform. But that is what we have here. We have a package that went oh, so far, and came oh, so close to a genuine bipartisan reform package, and then all of a sudden, because the Members of the majority side could not deliver the votes on their side, they backed up and went the other way.

You know, I think it is significant that this very day the Justice Department has returned an indictment against an employee of the House of Representatives. According to the wire services, one of the people in the post office was indicted as a coconspirator to distribute cocaine.

That is just symptomatic of the lousy administration that has gone in this House of Representatives for oh, so long. Why has it gone on? Have the Republicans been to blame for the problems of administration? They have not played a scintilla of a role. The Democrat side of the aisle has to accept responsibility for the bank and for the post office and for every other agency that has been poorly run.

So, we are here today, trying to hammer out what was to be a bipartisan solution to the administrative and other problems that confront the House of Representatives.

I suggest to you that the problems are not solely administrative. They are administrative and procedural.

Yes, the bill that is before the House will go maybe a little bit toward improving the administration of the House, but it will not do much to solve the real underlying problems of this House of Representatives, the ones that make this place so patently unfair.

The fact that this bill would emerge under the circumstances that it has shows that this is a patently unfair place.

The majority party controls the House Administration Committee, and all but one of the subcommittees under this bill, so it is not a change. The majority party will still be the final arbiter of appeal if there is a dispute on the one evenly split subcommittee, whether governing the bank, the post office, the folding room or any other office.

The majority party represents 60 percent of the vote in the House of Representatives, the minority party, the Republicans, represent 40 percent. Yet, on the Committee on Rules which governs every piece of legislation that hits the floor of the House, the Democrats make up 70 percent of the membership, while Republicans are 30 percent of the membership. With a 9-to-4 vote in Rules, Republicans do not have a prayer of getting anything on the floor, if they ever wanted to.

Finally, we talk about proxy voting. For the people who do not understand what proxy voting is, it is very simple: A chairman of a committee or a subcommittee could be sitting there with a stack of papers in his hand.

□ 1900

The room could be filled with Republican members and it would not matter because the chairman would have the pieces of paper, or proxies, to outvote all of the Republicans in the room, no matter what the debate was, no matter what the merits were, no matter what the contingencies of the legislation may have been.

So I would hope that the Members of the majority would look at the Michel package. It is not too late. We can do it tomorrow. We can do it next month. Sit down and pick out what is good from the Michel package that they can accept, and let us go a little bit further toward truly bringing out a bipartisan package of meaningful reform.

If that does not happen, then this bill that we have before us is not worth the paper it is written on, because it is going to do no good and we are going to be facing another scandal in another few weeks or months or years.

Mr. Speaker, I hope that Members will vote this down, and let us bring back something that counts.

Mr. ROSE. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MURPHY].

Mr. MICHEL. Mr. Speaker, I am happy to yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. MURTHA). The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MURPHY] is recognized for 2 minutes.

Mr. MURPHY. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding. I regret that I have only been given a short period of time.

Mr. Speaker, when I cast my vote against this measure tonight I want my constituents to know that I am just as concerned with the reformation of the procedures of this Congress as I am sure every Member is. But if we examine the provisions of this measure tonight, we will find that what this measure calls for is the elimination of one office, moving back into that office a career post office personnel, removing no other officers of the House, creating two more offices of the House, and those two offices I am sure under the legislation will be paid over $100,000 each per year.

Mr. Speaker, they will want staff. They will be in here in the next 2 years asking for $2- or 3 million each, space in the office buildings, and vehicles to operate with.

Mr. Speaker, I say to the formers of this measure, if the Clerk of this House is capable of doing his job, we need not create additional jobs. If the Clerk of this House, if the Sergeant at Arms of this House, if the Doorkeeper of this House, are not capable of performing their tasks, then let us call upon them to perform those duties. We would not be in this difficulty had they done so during the past years.

Mr. Speaker, the only other provisions in this measure are the selection of a bipartisan subcommittee of the Committee on House Administration. We all know from service on committees that each committee selects its own ratio. The Committee on House Administration can create that committee now. We do not need the expense of creating another subcommittee. The chairman of the Committee on House Administration is here. He could do that. He could accomplish that without legislation.

Mr. Speaker, when we talk about the elimination of perks, we do not need this act to be spending millions of dollars tonight and tomorrow creating new offices of the House to eliminate the perks. The Speaker has taken it upon himself and the chairman of the Committee on House Administration has taken it upon himself to regulate and eliminate some perks. I think we could continue in that direction very well.

Mr. MICHEL. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Wyoming [Mr. THOMAS].

Mr. THOMAS of Wyoming. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the Michel amendment.

Mr. MICHEL. Mr. Speaker, I am happy to yield 3½ minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. BARRETT].

Mr. BARRETT. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the Michel substitute, and urge each of my colleagues on the majority side to slap yourself in the face, and wake up, and smell the coffee.

Democrats have held the majority in the House for 38 consecutive years. You've been at the helm, but obviously asleep at the helm for some time, and the ship has run aground.

Scandals under your watch have disgraced the House, and still you apparently are not convinced that major reforms are needed now.

The public demands no less. And if we are going to get any work done on the real bread-and-butter issues effecting our constituents, we can demand no less of ourselves.

The door was opened for real reform when the Speaker and the minority leader appointed our 16-member bipartisan task force. As a member of that task force, I know that our side came to the table with high hopes that a bipartisan reform package could be developed.

In fact, we were ready to support a reform package that was something less than the Michel substitute, if only the majority would have agreed to meet us half way.

Our requests were few and reasonable: Delineate the independence and accountability of the new House officers; appoint a bipartisan, independent House counsel; make only two or three immediate legislative changes, with only a commitment for a task force for more extensive reforms later; and call an immediate vote on the Hamilton-Gradison resolution.

But our willingness to do some real horse trading, was not enough and, Mr. Speaker, you slammed that door shut again, and have brought up a resolution that only takes the first, small steps toward House reform.

The Democrat resolution puts a couple of new, warm bodies in place with impressive new titles, but avoids outlining their responsibilities to ensure their independence and accountability, to both the majority and minority. And the resolution makes no attempt to change the way we legislate.

On the other hand, among its legislative reforms:

The Michel substitute would eliminate proxy voting. So my Democrats colleagues vote no, and tell your constituents that they sent you to Congress to represent them, by filling out a piece of paper and giving their vote to another Member to cast.

The Michel substitute would change the ratio of the Rules Committee. So, my Democrat colleagues, vote "no" and tell the voters that if their opinion differs from that of the majority leadership of the House, tough. We'll continue to operate under closed rules, that shuts out debate and amendments from the other side of the issues.

The Michel substitute would require the full House Administration Committee to have an equal number of Democrats and Republicans. So, my Democrat colleagues, vote "no" and tell your constituents that it is business as usual—that the internal operations of the House that effect all Members alike, should continue to be a partisan affair.

And I dare you, my Democrat colleagues, to vote "no" on the Michel substitute, and tell your constituents that there is no need to have a system of accounting and reporting in place, to avoid future bank and post office scandals.

With such a poor record plaguing Democrat stewardship of the House, one would think that the majority would be as anxious as the minority to enact reforms to restore your reputation and that of the House.

Today you have the chance to do just that, by voting yes for the Michel substitute for real reform.

Mr. ROSE. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentlewoman from Colorado [Mrs. SCHROEDER].

Mrs. SCHROEDER. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, I must say I got sent here by the people of Colorado to do the people's business and not the House's business. They are upset about how some of the House business has unraveled, and in fact, of late, after all the shrieking and noise we have heard, I go home and I introduce myself in speeches saying, "Please don't tell my mother I am a politician; she thinks I am a prostitute."

People are trying to make it sound like we are the worst creatures around. Part of that is because we are not doing the people's business because they have got us tied in knots.

Mr. Speaker, this is the way to go. Tonight we are going to fix the problem and move on to the people's business, and that is what we should be doing. If there is a partisan way to run the electrical shop, to run the plumbing shop, to run the restaurant, the paint shop, and everything else, let me know what it is.

Mr. Speaker, what is this? If we came in here and demanded 40 percent or more of the White House plumbing shop, the White House electrical shop, running the airplanes when Sununu was abusing them, you would be yelling "partisan."

Now, come on. You have got veto power over this. There is veto power, and we know how important that is. We have an inspector general to make sure this never messes up again, and we know how important that is.

But the other parts of the reforms coming from the other side could really damage this democracy. If you do away with proxies, you make the precedent for doing away with absentee ballots when people go to the polls. I think every State in the Union allows absentee ballots because they realize there may be times that people could not vote on election day.

Mr. Speaker, let me also talk about the different ratios we hear over here. They want different ratios on the committee.

If you want a higher ratio, elect more Republicans. That is how you get a higher ratio. But if we went into the White House and demanded higher ratios on the same percentage that we won in the Presidential election, you would think we were crazy.

Mr. Speaker, let me conclude by saying the other thing that Republicans do in their substitute is kill four of the important committees that do the people's business: the Committee on Drugs, the Committee on Hunger, the Committee on the Elderly and Aging, and the Committee on Children, Youth, and Families. No, they do not want to deal with that. We can do away with those committees, and we are going to spend all our time debating how to run the plumbing shop, the electrical shop, and everything else.

□ 1910

This administrator is the way we should go. Tonight we will fix this, and let us move on to the business we were sent here to do.

Mr. MICHEL. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Michigan [Mr. HENRY], who also served on the bipartisan task force with great distinction.

Mr. HENRY. Mr. Speaker, as I reflect on the situation of the House, I am reminded of the television ad where the frail lady calls out: "Help me! I've fallen, and I can't get up."

The differences between our parties, is that we have different remedies as to how we can best get back on our feet. Your Democratic majority believes that a partial restructuring of the administrative functions of the House is adequate to the challenge of the day. Our Republican minority believes that the problems of this institution reach much deeper.

We are all tired and wearied by the onslaught of public criticism and the internal fratricide of these last months. In my heart, I want to lay down my arms and call for peace. But peace at any price, Mr. Speaker, will not do.

For 38 years, your party has controlled this institution. You own it. You run it. And you bear responsibility for it. You've had power over this body far longer than Fidel Castro has run Cuba. And under the watch of your party, power has grown arrogant. The institution has become overly bureaucratized. Governance has become fragmented. And now you come to the minority, asking us to share in granting absolution for the practices which have put the Congress in a political freefall.

Three years ago, we faced a similar crisis in confidence in this institution. And your Democratic leadership said "I'm sorry, it won't happen again." Once again, Mr. Speaker, the House is in a state of political crisis. And the Democratic leadership says: "I'm sorry, it won't happen again."

The reforms you propose are fine as far as they go. The problem is, they simply do not go very far. To simply say to the American people, once again, "I'm sorry, it won't happen again, now that we have an 'administrator for nonlegislative affairs' watching over us, "does not reach deep enough into the practices for which we now suffer the political indictment of the American people.

The Democrat proposal is worthy of David Copperfield. It is a master of illusion. You have turned your back on those of us who sought to bargain with you in good faith in the effort to really restructure what is wrong with this House. And let me warn you that when you go home for your Easter recess, there will be no "hallelujahs" being shouted in our hometowns over this attempt at masking what is fundamentally wrong with this House. And there will be no political resurrection from the grave of political ignomy which now holds us all in its grasp.

Next November, you will wish you had listened to those of us in the minority who wished to use this opportunity to put the House back in order. And next January, I predict there will be somebody else sitting in the Speaker's chair—somebody who understands that politics as usual is no longer enough.

Mr. ROSE. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. GEJDENSON].

Mr. GEJDENSON. Mr. Speaker, the failure we have in our Government is a failure to address the critical issues of the day: health care, universal college education, and putting people back to work.

The failure here is that the minority does not want to resolve the operational issues of the House. There was agreement on that. What the minority wants is to be able to have the tyranny of the minority over the majority.

This side of the aisle is against quotas, except for when it comes to Republican Members of Congress.

Now, we got 46 percent of the vote in the last Presidential election. If we walked down to the White House and said, "Give us 46 percent of the staff, give us the ability to not let the Departments make any decisions unless the Democrats get half the decision-making on EPA regulations and all the other actions" they would say that is silly. The President won the election. He gets to win the policy decisions from the White House.

We are the majority here. The responsibility for getting a bill through the floor is the majority's.

Let us take a look at what the minority does with its power. Remember the October Surprise? Ronald Reagan's campaign chief, the accusation that he cut a deal with the Iranians to make sure that the hostages did not get out till after the election?

Well, the minority is blocking the funds so that we can do the investigation. So what would happen if we gave the minority the ability to veto every legislative issue? What would happen is even more gridlock.

Mr. Speaker, the disruption is understandable. They do not want to hear the truth about the issues. On the issues they are on the wrong side; on health care, on education, on putting people back to work. And that is why they want a diversion.

Let us move forward on this and come back after the recess and find proposals from our Republican colleagues to put Americans back to work and get a job.

Mr. ROSE. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1½ minutes to the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. TANNER].

Mr. TANNER. Mr. Speaker, the first task of this 102d Congress was to consider the most difficult of all questions to come before this body; namely, would the brave young Americans of our Armed Forces be placed in harm's way to defeat the aggression of a third world thug?

It has been widely observed that the debate over that momentous decision was one of this Chamber's finest hours. Regrettably, we have fallen far from that lofty plateau.

The question before us today is how to restore the credibility of this great institution of democracy. In 15 months, this body of sincere and devoted men and women has turned from struggling with the most important question it can confront to cleaning up an intramural mess that has stained the one institution that is the cornerstone of our system of representative self-government. The people to whom we are responsible watch with justifiable dismay. Instead of seeing their elected Representatives confronting and solving important problems facing our Nation and affecting every American, they see finger pointing as if the political campaigns of the fall have begun and are being conducted on the floor of this House.

It is time that partisan political posturing be set aside. There is an appropriate time and place for partisanship later this year. The time is not now. The place is not this Chamber.

This is the time and this is the place to do the people's business as each of us swore when we took the oath of of-office. The resolution before us is an important first step in reforming the administration of this body.

And should be passed. But, it will not substitute for an honest response to the escalating crises of budget deficits out of control; education for the next generations that follow; the resuscitation of a sick economy; a choking trade imbalance; and the development of a health care system that is affordable and accessible to all Americans.

Restoring public confidence in this House demands more than reorganizing administrative offices.

Our credibility rests not on form but on our willingness to confront issues of our day critical to the strength of our Nation and essential to the future of our children.

Mr. MICHEL. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. WALKER], who served so ably, again, on the bipartisan task force and daily does a very herculean job in keeping the House in order.

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me.

Mr. Speaker, fairly or unfairly, the public has come to see this institution as a house of ill repute. Sadly, in this resolution the Democrats seek not to fire the prostitutes but to hire a couple of new madams.

And if that sounds a little bit harsh, then let me take my colleagues to the resolution that they have brought to us and tell them what the problem is.

If we take a look at page 4 in their resolution, what we find is that they are not really ending patronage in the House. Instead, they are simply ending patronage in one aspect, the new Director's office; and they are allowing the Doorkeeper, the Sergeant at Arms, the Clerk, and other to keep their patronage.

So we are not really reforming anything there.

If we go through the resolution, we will find that their checks and balances system leaves a lot to be desired, too. Get this for a checks and balance system. Under this resolution—and I would refer my colleagues to page 8 of the resolution—under this resolution the chairman of the Committee on House Administration reports to the chairman of the Committee on House Administration and then informs the chairman of the Committee on House Administration that he has reported to the chairman of the Committee on House Administration.

□ 1920

Now there is a check and balance system that should make every reformer feel good. I mean, we have one guy on here who simply shuffles papers across his desk, and we are all supposed to feel good about the process. Yet that is precisely what the legislation says.

I think we need to look at the details of the proposal to understand how bad it is.

The Republicans did want something done about an inspector general. We wanted a real inspector general. We wanted a fiscal watchdog. What did we get? We got a housebroken puppy, because in this particular resolution this housebroken puppy could ask the Committee on House Administration whether he can conduct an audit, and then, having gotten their permission, he can conduct the audit only under their oversight to make certain that he does not do anything that might get in the way of the political problems of the Democrats.

That is not exactly what most of us would call an inspector general or a fiscal watchdog, yet that is what is in this resolution.

We asked about a House counsel to make certain that the legal matters of the House take place in a bipartisan sense. What did we get? We got a House counsel that is held by the Committee on House Administration and can only give to the minority those things which are appropriate, understanding that when the present counsel of the House was asked recently about why he did not inform the minority about these matters before the House Committee on Post Office and Civil Service, he said he was not legally obligated to do so.

He is not legally obligated to do so in this document, either. He is only going to have to do what the Committee on House Administration regards as appropriate.

I have heard a number of Members come here today to tell us to quit playing politics on this issue and get about the real issues facing the country. These are the same people who brought us the October Surprise investigation, the partisan October Surprise investigation.

Mr. ROSE. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1½ minutes to the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. HOAGLAND].

Mr. HOAGLAND. Mr. Speaker, today the House of Representatives should enact legislation to create a Director of Non-Legislative and Financial Services, an inspector general, reform the House post office, eliminate additional perks, and establish a bipartisan Administrative Oversight Subcommittee to improve the internal operations of the U.S. House of Representatives.

We have an opportunity today to enact significant reform in the way the U.S. House of Representatives conducts its business.

Others have described and will describe during this debate the details of the proposal.

None of us thinks it is perfect. All of us can find additional things to do or things to leave undone.

But that is the nature of democracy.

In a country of 250 million people—or in its representative legislative body of 435—none of us can expect to have everything exactly the way we want it.

Only in a dictatorship can someone expect something to be precisely as he or she would want it, but then it is only one person who is in that position.

But most pertinent to me in the debate tonight, let us set aside partisanship. Let us objectively evaluate this proposal against the current system.

The issue is not proxy voting. We will have ample opportunity to address that when we go forth with the Hamilton-Gradison process.

I have been a legislator for nearly 12 years now, and in my experience, the key question is: "Is this procedural change better than the system it replaces?"

Not—is it perfect from my personal point of view? Not can it be improved upon? But instead, the question is: is it better?

Clearly, it is. And as legislators, our duty today should be to support this long-overdue reform.

Mr. ROSE. Mr. Speaker, I yield three minutes to the gentleman from Maryland [Mr. HOYER].

Mr. HOYER. Mr. Speaker, I thank the chairman for yielding time.

Mr. Speaker, one of the unfortunate aspects of this debate is that the American public does not get the opportunity to see us working in committee, where we are much more rational, much less vindictive, much less partisan. Men and women of good will trying to do best by their country and by this institution.

It is unfortunate that we then come to this floor and act out a very partisan disagreement. The American public wants this problem solved.

I rise today in strong support of House Resolution 423. I was a member of the bipartisan task force that sat down with our colleagues on the other side of the aisle with mutual respect, with civility, and for the most part, with general agreement, to draft administrative improvements. Yes, there was a desire to go further. I sat down at the table in good faith and in hopes that we could indeed work together.

Members of this House, I believe this proposal is a very substantive one that moves us forward to do what we all want to see done. This proposal professionalizes the administration of the nonpolitical facets of the House of Representatives. I think we want to keep that on a bipartisan basis.

I do not think there is anybody that really believes this is a bad proposal. There are clearly those who believe it does not go far enough, that it ought to deal with other facets of the administration of this House.

I have heard some Members in the most animated of tones come to this House today in this debate. Yet when we were in the room and on this floor, as we walked out of the meeting, said to me, "STENY, we need to work out some things. Can we talk about these things in the future? We really need to do that." I understand there may have been political problems with saying, "We will talk about some of these in the future."

There are some things that have been talked about I agree with them on. But I will not go into for instances at this time.

Mr. SOLOMON. I was waiting for that.

Mr. HOYER. I know you were. I thought I did not want to go down that track right yet. But I am going down that track, because I want to see this House run, as I said when we had the problem at the post office, as well as we can possibly have it run.

Then I want to debate with you a vigorously as I know how on policy questions. That is what we ought to be talking about: health care in America for every American; the education of every child in America so we can be competitive with the rest of the world, when we know our kids are not getting the kind of education they need; on environment; on energy; on infrastructure; on the agenda that the American public wants their House working on. Let us move on with that.

This, I believe, takes us a very significant step forward. I congratulate the chairman and the Speaker for their leadership.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. MURTHA). The Chair will announce that in its opinion the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MICHEL] has the right to close debate.

Mr. ROSE. Mr. Speaker, I would ask the Chair how much time we have remaining.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. ROSE] has 12½ minutes remaining, and the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MICHEL] has 11½ minutes remaining.

Mr. ROSE. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. PENNY].

Mr. PENNY. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the legislation.

I want to commend the leadership on a good job. Clearly, the administration reform bill is not all that we must do to reform the non-legislative operations of the House—but it is a big step in the right direction. We need professional management to better oversee the operations of this institution. This individual—appointed by both the Democratic and Republican leadership—can help to identify reforms in the various services here on the Hill ranging from the Capitol Police to the interoffice mail.

These services can and must be run more efficiently—and in some cases out-dated services must be eliminated.

I also applaud the provision in this bill which will turn back to the U.S. Postal Service the responsibility to handle mailings on Capitol Hill. That's as it should be.

More reforms must come but this proposal is a good start. I urge a yes vote on House Resolution 423.

Mr. ROSE. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to our colleague, the gentleman from California [Mr. FAZIO].

Mr. FAZIO. Mr. Speaker, somebody once said that in a legislative body the role of the minority is to become the majority. I think we are seeing good evidence today that that admonition is being fully practiced by our friends of the Republican side of the aisle.

That is exactly, by the way, what their position was in 1977 when the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. OBEY], a foresightful gentleman who has already spoken at some length and with eloquence, brought before this body a similar concept of an administrator. It was sponsored, by the way, by our Speaker, the gentleman from Washington [Mr. FOLEY], and it was opposed unanimously by the Republicans. They took the same position then that they take today, and that is that they do not want to share in the burden or the blame of running this institution, and why should they? They are the minority. The minority's job is to become the majority, and they use every opportunity they have to win that battle.

I think we understand that. Perhaps some of us on this side do not understand it as well as others. Maybe we have not served in the minority capacity in prior legislative service. Some of us have.

I think we all understand that we get as much as we can in negotiation, and if we do not get a little more, we come back and try again. I understand the strategy of our minority here.

I think we dealt in good faith with people on this task force who were never in position, really, to make the kind of deal that was acceptable in the middle of a legislative session to the majority. Given the temperature in the Republican conference, it certainly was not likely that any sort of compromise would be readily agreed to there. That is why legislative bodies deal with these issues at the beginning of a session.

I think it is most important that we understand that the gentleman from Washington, Speaker FOLEY, and the leadership of the Democrats in this House of Representatives have embraced publicly the Hamilton-Gradison proposal that would study needed reforms, because within it lies perhaps the outlines of some changes in the way this institution functions. And I believe in the content of the incoming Congress, which is going to be a volatile institution, those suggestions may well be in some form brought before us for adoption.

But had we had the foresight in 1977 to have the kind of administrative structure in place that we did not have in recent months, we could well have avoided problems in our governance. We would not be embarrassed as some of us are, we would not be seeing some of our better Members on both sides of the aisle throwing it in, calling it a day and walking away from legislative service. Not enough of us had the foresight in the Democratic Party to agree with the recommendations of the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. OBEY] and of course, Republicans did not have a position once again that would permit compromise on something even as basic as the administrative aspects of this body.

But we have taken the step to pursue, this time with a full Democratic majority, some steps that need to be taken. We do indeed need to share the burden, the blame, and the responsibility for running this institution in a bipartisan way. And so I urge defeat of the Michel substitute and enactment of the task force recommendation to establish an inspector general and the nonlegislative administrator. Let's put an end to patronage and vote "aye" on final passage.

Mr. MICHEL. Mr. Speaker, I yield 4 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from California [Mr. LEWIS], chairman of our caucus and also a member of our bipartisan task force.

Mr. LEWIS of California. Mr. Speaker, I appreciate my colleague yielding the time.

We are on the floor of the House this evening to discuss the hopes for fundamental reform in the House for no light reason. At this moment in our history, the House itself is at a crossroads. The public is well aware of the fact that the House has been wracked by scandal, problems relating to the way this House is run internally. These scandals have cast a shadow that indeed threatens the survival of many an incumbent because of the way the House has been run, dominated by a Democrat majority for some 38 years. Clearly their power, has gone to the point where essentially many would describe it as a corrupt administration.

The House bank scandal is no small scandal. It does not reflect well upon this institution. That which has taken place in other parts of our organizational side reflects poorly upon the people's body. We come here to talk about reorganization and reform to avoid another scandal.

I became a member of this bipartisan task force in hopes that the crisis itself would provide a very narrow window of opportunity for real change. Over a couple of weeks we rolled up our sleeves and went to work hoping that we could reach an agreement on some real and substantive change of a bipartisan nature. A week ago tonight we were very close to dealing with important items beginning to address procedural reforms. We were very close to some basic procedural change. Unfortunately, it was those changes that the Speaker could not see himself going forward with, and because of that, tonight we have a partisan presentation of a facelift, only a Band-Aid which gives no assurance whatsoever that the current situation will not lead to another major scandal somewhere else.

I would like to spend a moment talking about just one of those reforms that we were about that is very important and critical to the future of the people's body. Within our initial discussions we talked about the prospect of eliminating, at least partially, a thing called proxy voting. The public will better know it as a thing called ghost voting. I was astonished today on the floor to hear one of my respected colleagues from Massachusetts say to us that he saw nothing wrong with leaving a proxy in a committee while he was home in his State. To suggest that it is all right to ghost vote when we all know our constituents send us to this body because they cannot be here, they asked us to serve in committee, to listen to testimony, participate in debate and represent their interests. Our constituents know that bills are written in committee and the public expects us to cast our votes during the process. But the way this House is run instead, the Democrats often win an issue by casting pieces of paper, proxies by ghost members who may be home in their districts or somewhere else of their choosing. Nevertheless, we are beyond the point where we could reestablish the credibility of this institution. When the majority believes it is OK for someone to be a ghost instead of a real Member elected by the people to listen to the issues and represent their views in Congress.

The House is in disrepair, my friends. The scandal before us is the way the people's House has been run. It is time we changed the way this House is being run.

Mr. HOYER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield? Did the gentleman receive any absentee ballots in the last election?

Mr. LEWIS of California. If the gentleman will yield me 30 seconds I will be glad to respond.

Mr. HOYER. I do not have any time. The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. MURTHA). The time of the gentleman from California [Mr. LEWIS] has expired.

Mr. ROSE. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2½ minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. FRANK].

Mr. FRANK of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, it is fortunate that the Oscars have already been given, because my colleagues, in their attempt to portray their absolute shock that people actually vote by proxy when they have been doing it themselves for all of these years, would have qualified.

Mr. Speaker, one of the things we heard earlier today was that the minority leader's power under the majority resolution will not amount to much. One of his own colleagues said, "Well, he would just go along to get along," a shocking denigration of the minority leader. The suggestion was that well, he would appoint or vote to appoint this person and have no further control. The appointments are renewed every 2 years and the minority leader has the right fully, with or without cause, on any basis whatsoever, to withhold consent every 2 years. The notion that that does not mean anything is the most unfair denigration of the minority leader I have heard. To suggest that when you say to him that he will have an absolute right to say yes or no to who shall be the director of nonlegislative services and the inspector general every 2 years, that that means nothing, no one takes that seriously.

Members have suggested, Mr. Speaker, that power corrupts, and sometimes it does. But do Members know what else the absence of power can do? It makes people very cranky, and that is what we have here. Our colleagues on the other side have actually called this a substitute because you know what it is a substitute for, it is a substitute for winning elections.

We have heard over and over again that we have controlled the House for 38 years. How? By inheritance? Did we find it here?

Their problem they have made clear. The American people time after time after time do not vote for them in sufficient numbers, and they are unhappy about that. I understand that. That is not fun. But it is not a constitutional right to win an election.

The problem has been that with a lack of power comes irresponsibility. They do not want to talk about the merits of the issues. That is why we have an overblown focus on proxy voting, people who vote by proxy and then act as if it is a terrible thing. This is the party that would not vote for the budget, and most of the Republicans would not vote for a budget, including the President's budget. This is the party where the President sent up an RTC bill last week, and they overwhelmingly voted against it. This is the party that has gotten so unused to being constructive that when a bill comes forward and says the minority leader has absolute assent freely to be given, freely to be withheld every 2 years as the basis for whether or not we get these important officers, they say that does not mean anything because they have forgotten how to be useful. They resent being asked to be useful.

Mr. Speaker, we have here Members who are unhappy that they have lost elections. I am sorry for them, but it does not drive my vote.

FURTHER MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT

A further message in writing from the President of the United States was communicated to the House by Mr. McCathran, one of his secretaries.

HOUSE ADMINISTRATIVE REFORM RESOLUTION OF 1992

Mr. ROSE. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Missouri [Mr. GEPHARDT], the majority leader.

□ 1940

Mr. GEPHARDT. Mr. Speaker, as other speakers have said, this is good reform. It is reform that was achieved in a bipartisan way about how we will manage the nonlegislative services in this place. It is not the end of reform. It is the beginning.

We said in the meetings that we were willing and wanting to talk about legislative reform as well. We are. We are going to proceed on that track with the Hamilton-Gradison motion, but tonight, to go forward with many, many, many more reforms that the minority is asking, almost a wish list that they would bring in an organizing period for the House is simply unreasonable. It would change the result of the election, and I do not think anyone believes that we are able or prepared to take on all of those questions tonight.

I urge Members to vote for the very, very important changes that are here.

The gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. OBEY], as was said, tried to do these changes in 1977. I voted with him for them. I wish our friends on the minority had been with us on that day or night, whenever it was, and we could have passed them, because if we had passed them, we would not be here tonight talking about these matters, and maybe we could have spent time talking about the legislative solutions that our friends on the minority tonight want to talk about.

This is real reform. This is real power sharing on very important functions of this House, and it is a beginning. It is a beginning that will lead to other meetings, other discussions, other negotiations, and other reforms in the days ahead.

I urge Members to vote against the Michel substitute and to vote for this resolution.

Mr. MICHEL. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as she may consume to the gentlewoman from Nevada [Mrs. VUCANOVICH].

Mrs. VUCANOVICH. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding his time to me.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the Michel substitute.

Mr. Speaker, today we are voting on what has been labeled a campaign finance reform bill. Unfortunately, for the voters in my district, what we are voting on is a publicly financed, incumbent protection bill. The conference report on H.R. 3750 and S. 3 would alter the system of financing House congressional campaigns. More specifically, it would set a $600,000 voluntary spending limit for House races in primary and general elections. Candidates agreeing to obey this limit would get benefits, including cutrate postage and up to $200,000 in public financing doled out to match the first $200 of each individual contribution. In addition, this bill would place a $200,000 aggregate cap on how much a candidate could accept from political action committees and a $200,000 aggregate cap on individual contributions of more than $200.

The bill before us today does not even address the issue of its own cost. How typical: It passes the buck for us to consider at another time. How will we pay for the estimated $1 billion that this measure will cost over the next 10 years? In this time of fiscal crisis, our financial needs in the areas of education, health, and housing certainly outweigh the need for the incumbent politician. For these reasons, I cannot support the conference report on this bill.

While I believe that fundamental and important changes are needed in campaign financing, I am concerned about certain provisions of this measure including giving politicians cheaper political advertising rates and subsidizing the cost of postage for candidates. I simply cannot endorse such measures which make it the responsibility of the taxpayer to provide for an entitlement program for politicians. It is my understanding that over 70 percent of the American people are strongly opposed to public financing because tax dollars may be distributed inequitably, or worse yet, end up paying for negative campaign ads.

I do support the substitute bill which was offered by the distinguished minority leader, Mr. MICHEL of Illinois, during the original debate of this bill. This substitute would have required candidates to raise at least half of all their campaign money from people living in their own district. Certainly, the majority of campaign dollars should be raised within the State in which the candidate resides. An accurate reflection of the voter's intentions can easily be distorted by an inpouring of outside money. In addition, this measure would have cut the amount a single PAC could give a candidate from $5,000 per election to $1,000. This measure would both effectively reduce the role of special interest and enhance the role of individuals in financing campaigns. This substitute will be rejected.

I am also interested in other issues of campaign reform, not addressed by H.R. 3750 or the substitute. Specifically, I am concerned about the amount of time which is used for the purpose of fundraising for congressional elections. One solution, which I support, is to strengthen political parties by increasing the amounts they may spend on behalf of congressional candidates. This source of funds would permit legislators to spend less time fundraising, would ensure that challengers have greater financial resources, and would limit the role of special economic interests in elections.

Lastly, I am supportive of measures which require full disclosure of all funds spent by political parties, labor unions, corporations, and trade associations which are used in Federal elections. Disclosure requirements should also apply to independent expenditures with disclaimers on media presentations. To my mind, this is the best method to discourage the use of campaign dollars as influence selling.

Mr. MICHEL. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the distinguished gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. RIDGE].

Mr. RIDGE. Mr. Speaker, my colleagues, one of the truly bipartisan reforms that we were on the verge of accepting in the bipartisan task force, and it did have real bipartisan sponsorship, was a congressional inspector general similar to that imposed by Congress on departments and agencies in the executive branch. It is a piece of legislation that I have authored and have been promoting for the past few months. I know its contents, its purpose, and its impact. As I said, it enjoyed bipartisan support.

I would tell you, Mr. Speaker, that while the Democratic package names an individual as inspector general nothing else has been added from my bill. It is very similar to the children's story about the emperor who has no clothes. No matter what you say about this position, it has been stripped naked of any real authority. It may be called an inspector general, but he has none of the authority I wanted him or her to have when I drafted the legislation.

We are engaged in the debt today because we had problems with the House bank, the House post office, and the Members' dining room. There is nothing in this legislation that would give the inspector general the independent auditing and investigative authority to have done anything differently, with these peripheral institutions, than was done in the past.

I would tell my colleagues that the inspector general, that I wanted and this institution desperately needs, was an independent nonpartisan watchdog, a pit bull. The Democratic leadership has given us a toothless lap dog.

There is one thing worse than no reform. That is the charade, the pretense, the illusion of significant reform where none existed. I wanted to support this reform package, but without a real inspector general with real independence and authority, I can not.

Mr. ROSE. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. ROEMER].

Mr. ROEMER. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of House Resolution 423.

Mr. Speaker, I rise today in strong support of the bill, House Resolution 423, House administrative reform. In the wake of the recent events which transpired at the House bank, the need for reform of Congress' administrative procedures is clear. The status quo at the House of Representatives is simply not acceptable to me, my constituents, or to the taxpayers of this country. We must restore credibility to this institution and restore confidence among the people we serve.

House Resolution 423 makes significant changes in the existing administrative structure of the House in order to improve the management of nonlegislative and financial functions, and ensure strict accountability for such operations. The resolution establishes a new House position, the Director of Nonlegislative and Financial Services, who would be appointed jointly by the Speaker, the majority leader and the minority leader, and have responsibility for the operations and financial services in the House of Representatives.

The resolution also establishes an Office of the Inspector General, who would be appointed jointly by the Speaker, the majority leader and the minority leader, and who would be charged with conducting audits of the financial operations of the House, and reporting any irregularities or abuses resulting from audits.

The legislation also abolishes the position of the House postmaster. Internal mail operations would be handled by the new Director of Nonlegislative Affairs and Financial Service, while the outside mail operations would be run by the U.S. Postal Service.

Mr. Speaker, the American people are losing confidence in our ability to govern. We need to institute real reform in Congress. While I support the legislation before us today, I believe that we should use this opportunity to push forward further congressional reforms. I am a cosponsor of Representative HAMILTON and GRADISON's bipartisan resolution which calls for a review of our current system and recommends drastic reforms to improve and strengthen the legislative operations of the Congress. Similar reorganization efforts were undertaken in 1946 and 1970, and recent events in the House clearly indicate that review and reform of the current system is long overdue.

Mr. Speaker, I believe that House Resolution 423 represents a good beginning in the process of much needed congressional reform. I urge my colleagues to support this first step in restoring Congress' credibility with the American people, and to remain resolute in pursuing further substantive reform this year.

Mr. ROSE. Mr. Speaker, I yield the balance of our time to the Speaker of the House of Representatives, the gentleman from Washington [Mr. FOLEY].

Mr. FOLEY. Mr. Speaker, this is the most far-reaching reorganization of the nonlegislative activities of the House of Representatives in the history of this country. There is no precedent, to my knowledge, of such a sweeping change in the administration of the nonlegislative services that exist in this institution for the benefit of all Members.

Frankly, it comes to me as a bit of a surprise to hear some of the debate reflecting opinions about this resolution which I did not hear in the constructive, even cordial, discussions that we had over a period of 2 weeks' time. It is very surprising for me, for example, to hear Members suggesting that the independent inspector general is not truly independent, that he is some kind of a lap dog.

In fact, the inspector general is given the responsibility of auditing not only the Nonlegislative Services Director but all the officers of the House and to do so as an appointee of the Republican leader, the Democratic leader, and the Speaker jointly. It is very hard for me to imagine that the leaders of the Republican and Democratic parties and the Speaker could not agree on a person who would have, by that very reason, enormous independence.

The resolution, for the first time brings together under the newly created Director of Nonlegislative Services, virtually every nonlegislative service that this House provides to Members. Again, why would one not want to see the modernization, the efficiency, and the review of these activities improved in the way that this bill does?

In fact, during our discussions which were begun at the request of the distinguished Republican leader, it was my sense that we had, if not perfect, virtual agreement on the terms of this resolution as it refers to the inspector general, the Director of Nonlegislative Services and the other features that deal with the management and operation of the House.

It was the wish of the Members on the other side, however, to go into questions of rule changes and legislative changes that we felt were beyond the scope of the immediate need to bring legislation making administrative reform to the floor that led to these discussions not being fruitful in the end. As for House Resolution 423, this is a bill that, I think, reflected a very, very strong consensus from Republicans as well as Democrats as to where the House should go in providing efficient business like management of its nonlegislative operations so that, in those areas no Member, Republican or Democrat, would have to worry that this House was being conducted with anything but the highest integrity and efficiency. That is what Members deserve. They do not get elected to come here to be a management committee for this institution. They come here primarily to deal with the public's business, with education, and health, and the other critical issues that are facing the Nation as we go forward into the next decade.

This is a sound bill that can be voted on proudly by Members in either party, and in both parties, and I strongly urge all Members to come together and give it your support.

We attempted to enact reform in 1977, and many Members still here are proud that they supported that effort then. Let us finally achieve it now. Let us put this problem of management behind us. Let us put the House on a sound basis of management and operation, and then we will be able to direct our energies where they should rightly be, to the business of the people of this country.

Mr. MICHEL. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the distinguished gentleman from California [Mr. LAGOMARSINO].

Mr. LAGOMARSINO. Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to House Resolution 423 and in support of House Resolution 419, the Michel substitute.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to House Resolution 423 and in support of House Resolution 419, the Republican substitute.

Mr. Speaker, the American public is fed up with excuses about the mess in Congress, as well they should be. The Democrats have controlled this House with an iron fist for 38 years; 38 years of Democrat rule have led to this mess. With an arrogance born of power, the Democrat majority has run roughshod for decades over the concept of democracy and bipartisanship. Now the chickens are coming home to roost.

A cosmetic facelift is not going to satisfy the American public. You have been found out. The press will no longer look the other way. The only action that will satisfy the public is a thorough house cleaning, a quick dusting will not do it. We need to institute real reforms, institutional reforms, legislative reforms. Changing the nameplate on the door, or firing a few people, is not the answer. The reforms have to be built in, permanent, irrevocable. That's why we need to vote for the Michel resolution. It's the only choice for real reform.

Mr. MICHEL. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself the remainder of my time.

Mr. Speaker and Members of the House, in preparing my remarks for tonight, some lines of poetry half remembered from my school days came back to me: "For of all sad words of tongue or pen, the saddest are these." "It might have been!"

I am reminded of the remarks of the distinguished gentleman from Louisiana who said it so eloquently earlier during the course of this debate, and that is the tragedy that confronts the House today: What might have been.

At one time the Democratic majority could have reformed out of principle. Today they are forced to reform out of panic. At one time bipartisan reform of the House would have been a sign of renewal. Today the majority's attempt at reform is correctly seen as a sign of remorse.

□ 1950

On January 3, 1989, as Speaker Jim Wright was sworn in, I said to this House:

 It is my belief that this 101st Congress is one that should deal right up front in a bipartisan and comprehensive way with reforms ***.

Six months later, on June 6, 1989, when we swore in the new Speaker, Mr. FOLEY, I said to all my colleagues:

Today we have that rare, most precious and improbable of gifts—a second chance for comprehensive, bipartisan institutional reform that will set the course for a new century.

I must say that I was somewhat taken aback when I was hissed in this very Chamber by some Members of the majority for making just that statement.

Let us face it. The recent House scandals have brought us to this juncture. I was first told about the bank scandal in the form of a list of Members and the number of bounced or overdraft checks in the latter part of 1989.

I said then and continue to strongly believe the existence of such a list was outrageous, I sent it back without going beyond the first page, with the suggestion that all offending Members be notified of their overdrafts and that if it were my call, they would all be summarily cut off from the use of the bank.

I was later told the problem was solved. Guidelines would be implemented; but they were dropped on the doorstep of the Sergeant at Arms and nothing was done. No oversight. Nobody minding the store. And look how much disgrace it brought upon the House and the problems for Members on both sides of the aisle. Incomprehensible.

When I think in terms of a dear friend this afternoon who announces that he will not run again, a bright future in this House.

A year later when the next audit revealed that indeed nothing had been done, we were outraged and expressed ourselves so. Unfortunately, time passed and still nothing was being done to correct the situation.

Finally I sent to the Speaker a proposed question of privilege, asking the Ethics Committee to investigate and focus on the disclosure question and political campaign use. The Speaker agreed on jointly acting on a revised resolution, which was ultimately adopted by this House.

I waited until the committee acted to examine their work and listened to their recommendations, and of course, by next week that scenario will have played itself out.

Again last year the majority was told of problems in the House post office. We in the minority were kept in the dark until just before it was to be made public by the press.

I do not get those GAO reports, as the minority leader. We ought to change that, and that is one of the reforms that ought to be fundamental, that if there is real bipartisanship around here, we get coequal treatment on matters of that importance.

The Postal Service investigated and found that many postal regulations had not been followed, and there were in fact indictable offenses committed by employees of that facility.

Members were told at that time corrective actions were going to be taken.

Months later, we found again that nothing had been done. Where was the House Administration Committee that was to be overseeing this mess?

Eventually, and predictably enough, the House walls came tumbling down all around this place, and now at long last our Democratic friends are attempting to jump on the bandwagon of reform; but what is at the heart of this debate is not just one scandal, it is indeed stewardship, not only at the top, but through our ranks. It has to be that way, because we rely so much on support around here.

It is the way the majority discriminates in the legislative process, quite frankly, that to us is the biggest scandal of all.

My colleagues have said it so eloquently time after time during the day in the course of the rule and general debate, and yes, in the deliberations on this substitute. This very bill is being debated under a closed rule, the very symbol of inequity.

My Democratic friends said the Republicans wanted them to give up their rights as a majority. They said we were being unreasonable.

Is it unreasonable to ask for fair representation on the House Rules Committee, which is the traffic cop for legislation around here? Is it unreasonable to ask that committee ratios of Members and staff reflect the actual makeup of the House? Is it unreasonable to ask that the General Counsel's Office be headed by a constitutional scholar, independent of political judgments, but with deputies for the two parties?

Is it unreasonable to ask that the Congress be subject to the same rules, regulations, and laws we impose legislatively upon the American people?

We did not expect the majority to accept every procedural reform we proposed, but sadly, they could not accept even one, not one.

It has been stated many times in our discussions that the proposals the Democrats have offered are unprecedented. We are supposed to be grateful for that, but unprecedented is not enough.

These are unprecedented times, Mr. Speaker and my colleagues, in which the public is demanding extraordinary actions.

If Republicans control the House of Representatives in the 103d Congress, we intend to have a bipartisan committee on House Administration, and a majority-minority membership of 9 to 6 on the Rules Committee. We ask nothing that we ourselves are not willing to abide by if we were in the majority.

Mr. Speaker, you have before you the Republican blueprint for House reform, and you have my word that if given the opportunity we will implement these reforms.

I ask you to support our substitute that not only addresses the problems of administration, ministerial, and financial responsibilities around here, but also addresses the real procedural reforms necessary to put this House back on the right track once again.

I hope you will support the resolution. I am not all that enthused about what kind of support we are going to get from the majority side in view of the kind of things that have been said during the course of the debate, and if it should go down, well, obviously it bears out our frustration. These very limited changes in nonlegislative services, while being an improvement, oh, so minuscule in form, are woefully short of the real comprehensive reform that we espouse on this side. So if it comes to that point on final passage, quite frankly, yes, I want to be for those minuscule things that may help to bring us together here administratively, but again to express our utter frustration at being closed out from doing the kind of things that would bring about broad comprehensive reform.

Frankly, on final passage, this Member will take a walk.

Mr. Speaker, I include a copy of my resolution, material relating to and correspondence regarding reform in the RECORD.

H. RES. 419

Resolved,

TITLE I—CHIEF FINANCIAL OFFICER, GENERAL COUNSEL, AND CERTAIN OTHER REFORMS

Subtitle A—Chief Financial Officer Amendments to the Rules of the House and Related Provisions

SECTION 101. AMENDMENTS TO RULE II RELATING TO THE ELECTION OF OFFICERS OF THE HOUSE.

Rule II of the Rules of the House of Representatives (relating to the election of Officers of the House) is amended—

(1) by striking "Doorkeeper, Postmaster,"; and

(2) by adding at the end the following new sentence: "The individual chosen for election as the Sergeant-at-Arms should be a nationally-respected law enforcement professional."

SEC. 102. AMENDMENTS TO RULE III RELATING TO THE DUTIES OF THE CLERK.

Clause 3 of rule III of the Rules of the House of Representatives (relating to the duties of the Clerk) is amended—

(1) by striking " , make or approve all contracts, bargains, or agreements relative to furnishing any matter or thing, or for the performance of any labor for the House of Representatives in pursuance of law or order of the House, keep full and accurate accounts of the disbursements of the contingent fund of the House, keep the stationery account of Members, Delegates, and the Resident Commissioner from Puerto Rico, and pay them as provided by law." in the first sentence and inserting a period; and

(2) by amending the second sentence to read as follows: "He shall cause to be announced at the door all messengers from the President and the Senate and, when requested by the Speaker, visitors to the floor of the House during joint meetings or joint sessions of the two Houses. He shall superintend the House document room and the Publications Distribution System (the folding rooms), the cloakrooms of the House and the telephone service available to Members therein. He shall supervise the pages that serve the House and various other facilities to Members."

SEC. 103. AMENDMENT TO RULE IV RELATING TO THE DUTIES OF THE SERGEANT-AT-ARMS.

Clause 1 of rule IV of the Rules of the House of Representatives (relating to the duties of the Sergeant-at-Arms) is amended by striking " ; and keep the accounts for the pay and mileage of Members, Delegates, and the Resident Commissioner from Puerto Rico, and pay them as provided by law"

SEC. 104. AMENDMENTS TO RULES V AND VI TO ELIMINATE THE POSITIONS OF DOORKEEPER AND POSTMASTER AND TO CREATE THE POSITION OF CHIEF FINANCIAL OFFICER.

Rule V of the Rules of the House of Representatives (relating to the duties of the doorkeeper) and rule VI of the Rules of the House of Representatives (relating to the duties of the Postmaster) are amended to read as follows:

"RULE V

"CHIEF FINANCIAL OFFICER

"1. There shall be elected, by not less than two-thirds of Members voting, a quorum being present, the Chief Financial Officer of the House.

"2. The Chief Financial Officer should have appropriate education and training, have demonstrated an ability to manage large and complex administrative activities and resources, and have experience that is relevant to the management of the financial operations of the House.

"3. The Chief Financial Officer shall be responsible for—

"(A) reviewing and analyzing the financial operations of the House, including the efficiencies of its operations, the functions of its offices, and the cost-effectiveness of its operations, and providing periodic recommendations to the Speaker and minority leader respecting these operations;

"(B) conducting periodic audits of the financial operations of the House, simultaneously sending audit reports to the Speaker and minority leader, and making these audit reports available to the public;

"(C) keeping the accounts for the pay and mileage of Members, Delegates, and the Resident Commissioner from Puerto Rico, and paying them as provided by law; and

"(D) carrying out all other financial functions and operations that were exercised by the Clerk before the date of the adoption of this rule, including, but not limited to—

"(i) keeping full and accurate accounts of the disbursements of the contingent fund of the House,

"(ii) keeping the stationery account of the Members, Delegates, and Resident Commissioner of Puerto Rico,

"(iii) paying the salaries of officers and employees of the House, and

"(iv) making or approving all contracts, bargains, or agreements relative to furnishing any matter or thing, or for the performance of any labor for the House of Representatives in pursuance of law or order of the House.

"(E)(i) reviewing existing and proposed rules of the House to determine the effect of such rules on the economy and efficiency of the financial operations of the House, taking into consideration the need to prevent fraud, waste, and abuse in such operations;

"(ii) based on such review, providing periodic recommendations to the Speaker and the minority leader with respect to the Rules of the House;

"(F) keeping the House fully and currently informed of any instance of fraud, waste, or abuse, or any other serious deficiency in the financial operations of the House, including corrective actions taken or recommended;

"(G) reporting to the Speaker and the minority leader—

"(i) any such instance that, because of its particularly serious nature, requires immediate attention; and

"(ii) any lack of cooperation by a Member, officer, or employee of the House that inhibits the carrying out of the responsibilities of the Chief Financial Officer;

"(H) not later than October 31 of each year, submitting to the House with respect to the financial operations of the House in the preceding fiscal year a report of the activities of the Chief Financial Officer, including—

"(i) a description of significant problems, abuses, and deficiencies in the financial operations of the House, the recommendations made, the corrective actions completed, and the corrective actions uncompleted;

"(ii) a summary of matters the Chief Financial Officer referred to the Committee on Standards of Official Conduct and the actions which have resulted from such referrals; and

"(iii) a summary of each recommendation by the Chief Financial Officer to the Speaker and minority leader under these Rules;

"(I) receiving and investigating complaints from employees of the House with respect to fraud, waste, and abuse in the financial operations of the House, if such complaints assert the existence of a violation of law, a violation of these Rules, mismanagement, gross waste of funds, or abuse of authority; and

"(J) developing and maintaining an integrated accounting and financial management system for the House, including financial reporting and internal controls to provide performance measurement, cost information, and integration of accounting and budgeting information; and

"(K) directing, managing, providing policy guidance for, and conducting oversight of, financial management personnel and operations, including preparation of a 5-year financial system plan, development of financial management budgets, recruitment, selection and training of personnel to carry out financial management functions, and implementation of asset management systems, such as cash and credit management, debt collection, and property and internal controls.

"4. (a) In carrying out clause 3(I), the Chief Financial Officer may not disclose the identity of a complaining employee without the consent of the employee, unless the Chief Financial Officer determines such disclosure is unavoidable.

"(b) Any intimidation of, or reprisal against, an employee of the House by an employing authority because of a complaint made by the employee is a violation of rule LL.

"5. In accordance with policies and procedures approved by the Committee on House Administration, the Chief Financial Officer shall appoint such employees as may be necessary for the prompt and efficient performance of the duties of the Chief Financial Officer under these Rules. Such employees shall serve at the pleasure of the Chief Financial Officer.

"RULE VI

"HOUSE POSTAL SERVICES

"The Chief Financial Officer shall superintend the post office in the Capitol and in the respective office buildings of the House for the accommodation of Representatives, Delegates, the Resident Commission from Puerto Rico, and officers of the House and shall be held responsible for the prompt and safe delivery of their mail."

SEC. 105. CONFORMING AMENDMENT TO RULE XIV RELATING TO DECORUM AND DEBATE.

Clause 7 of the rule XIV of the Rules of the House of Representatives (relating to decorum and debate) is amended by striking "and Doorkeeper".

SEC. 106. OVERSIGHT REFORM.

Rule XI of the Rules of the House of Representatives is amended by adding at the end the following:

"7. (a) By March 1 of the first session of any Congress, each committee shall adopt and submit to the Committee on House Administration an oversight plan for that Congress.

"(b) No primary expense resolution for a committee may be considered in the House unless and until it has adopted and submitted to the Committee on House Administration an oversight plan for the Congress involved.

"(c) After consultation with the majority and minority leaders, the Committee on House Administration shall report the plans to the House, together with its recommendations and those of the majority and minority leaders, to assure coordination between committees.

"(d) The Speaker is authorized to appoint ad hoc oversight committees for specific tasks from the memberships of committees with shared legislative jurisdictions.

"(e) Each committee shall include an oversight section in its final activity report at the end of a Congress."

SEC. 107. MAKING THE COMMITTEE ON HOUSE ADMINISTRATION BIPARTISAN.

Clause 6(a) of rule X of the Rules of the House of Representatives is amended by adding at the end the following:

"(3)(A) One-half of the members of the Committee on House Administration shall be from the majority party and one-half shall be from the minority party.

"(B) In the case of the Committee on House Administration, subpoenas may be authorized and issued as provided by clause 2(m) of rule XI, except that either the chairman or ranking minority party member of that committee may authorize and issue subpoenas under that clause."

SEC. 108. EQUALITY OF MAJORITY AND MINORITY PARTY REPRESENTATION ON THE SUBCOMMITTEE ON LEGISLATIVE APPROPRIATIONS.

The membership of the Subcommittee on Legislative Appropriations of the Committee on Appropriations shall be divided equally between the majority party and the minority party. Staff positions for the subcommittee shall be divided in the same manner.

SEC. 109. TASK FORCE ON REFORM OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

Not later than 10 days after the date on which this resolution is agreed to, the Speaker shall appoint a task force for the purpose of recommending institutional reforms necessary to restore public confidence in the House of Representatives. The task force shall—

(1) be composed of 10 Members of the House, of whom 5 Members shall be appointed upon the recommendation of the majority leader and 5 Members shall be appointed upon recommendation of the minority leader; and

(2) report its recommendations to the House not later than the end of the One Hundred Second Congress.

SEC. 110. LIMITATION ON REPROGRAMMING OF FUNDS IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

No funds may be reprogrammed or otherwise transferred between appropriation accounts of the House of Representatives without the written approval of the Speaker and the minority leader of the House of Representatives.

SEC. 111. LIMITATION ON INITIAL HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES APPROPRIATIONS FOR FISCAL YEAR 1993.

In the second session of the One Hundred Second Congress, it shall not be in order to consider in the House any measure containing an appropriation for the House, if the measure provides appropriations for that purpose for any period after March 31, 1993.

SEC. 112. INSPECTOR GENERAL.

The Speaker, upon the recommendation of the majority leader and the minority leader, acting jointly, shall appoint an Inspector General for the House. The Inspector General shall—

(1) receive and investigate complaints from employees of the House with respect to fraud, waste, and abuse in the nonlegislative operations of the House, if such complaints assert the existence of a violation of law, a violation of the Rules of the House, mismanagement, gross waste of funds, or abuse of authority; and

(2) report the results of such investigations to the Speaker, the majority leader, and the minority leader.

Subtitle B—Office of the General Counsel

SEC. 121. ESTABLISHMENT.

There is established in the House of Representatives an office to be known as the Office of the General Counsel, referred to hereinafter in this title as the "Office".

SEC. 122. ACCOUNTABILITY.

The Office shall be directly accountable to the Leadership Group, composed of—

(1) the Speaker of the House of Representatives;

(2) the majority leader and minority leader of the House of Representatives;

(3) the majority whip and minority whip of the House of Representatives;

(4) the chairman and ranking minority party member of the Committee on the Judiciary of the House of Representatives; and

(5) 2 Members of the House to be appointed by the Speaker of the House of Representatives, one of whom shall be appointed upon the recommendation of the majority leader and one of whom shall be appointed upon the recommendation of the minority leader.

SEC. 123. PURPOSE AND POLICY.

The purpose of the Office is to provide legal assistance to Members, officers, and employees of the House of Representatives on matters directly related to their duties, other than matters committed by law, rule, or other authority to the Office of the Parliamentarian, the Office of the Legislative Counsel, the Office of the Law Revision Counsel, the Legislative Classification Office, the Congressional Research Service, the Comptroller General, or the Office of Fair Employment Practices, or to another office, officer, or employee of the House of Representatives. The Office shall maintain—

(1) impartiality as to issues of policy to be determined by the House of Representatives; and

(2) the attorney-client relationship with respect to all communications between it and any Member or committee of the House.

SEC. 124. SPECIFIC APPROVAL REQUIREMENTS.

(a) APPROVAL BY RESOLUTION.—Unless approved by unanimous vote of the Leadership Group, the following actions of the Office require prior approval by resolution of the House of Representatives:

(1) Entering an appearance before any court.

(2) Filing a brief in any court.

(3) Representing any Member of the House of Representatives in any contested matter that will result in formal legal proceedings.

(b) APPROVAL BY THE LEADERSHIP GROUP.—The following activities of the Office require prior approval by the Leadership Group:

(1) Preparation of any legal memorandum or other item of legal research that requires more than 4 hours of preparation time.

(2) Work other than in the routine course of business of the Office.

(c) SPECIAL RULE.—In carrying out any action under this title, the Office, in the case of any matter that affects an area of responsibility committed to another office, officer, or employee referred to in section 123, shall consult the office, officer, or employee involved and coordinate such action with the office officer, or employee.

SEC. 125. GENERAL COUNSEL.

The management, supervision, and administration of the Office are vested in the General Counsel, who shall be appointed by the Speaker of the House of Representatives, upon the recommendation of the majority leader and the minority leader of the House of Representatives, acting jointly, without regard for political affiliation and solely on the basis of fitness to perform the duties of the position. The General Counsel shall serve at the pleasure of the Leadership Group.

SEC. 126. STAFF.

With the approval of the Leadership Group or in accordance with policies and procedures approved by the Leadership Group, the General Counsel may employ such attorneys and other employees as may be necessary for the performance of the functions of the Office, except that not more than 4 attorneys and 3 other employees may be so employed and at least one attorney in the Office shall be appointed upon the recommendation of the minority leader. Any individual employed under this section may be removed by the General Counsel, with the approval of the Leadership Group.

SEC. 127. COMPENSATION.

(a) GENERAL COUNSEL.—The General Counsel shall be paid at a per annum gross rate fixed by the Leadership Group, but not more than the rate payable for positions at level III of the Executive Schedule, under section 5314 of title 5, United States Code.

(b) STAFF.—Members of the staff of the Office shall be paid at per annum gross rates fixed by the General Counsel, with the approval of the Leadership Group or in accordance with policies and procedures approved by the Leadership Group, but not more than the rate payable for positions at level IV of the Executive Schedule, under section 5315 of title 5, United States Code.

SEC. 128. EXPENDITURES.

Subject to appropriation and in accordance with policies and procedures approved by the Leadership Group, the General Counsel may make such expenditures as may be appropriate for the functioning of the Office.

SEC. 129. TIME SHEETS.

The attorneys and professional staff in the Office shall maintain regular, written records of the time expended on legal matters, consistent with generally accepted practices in private law firms. Such time records shall be maintained on forms and according to procedures established by the General Counsel, and shall provide for the recordation of time allotted to legal work in increments of no more than one-quarter hour. The time records shall be reviewable by the Leadership Group and may not be made public other than by direction of the Leadership Group or resolution of the House.

TITLE II—LEGISLATIVE PROCESS REFORMS

SEC. 201. HOUSE SCHEDULING REFORM.

Rule I of the Rules of the House of Representatives is amended by adding at the end the following new clause:

"11. (a) At the beginning on each session of the Congress the Speaker shall, after consultation with the minority leader and the chairmen of the committees of the House, announce a legislative program for the session which shall include (1) target dates for the consideration of specified major budgetary, authorization, and appropriations bills; (2) an indication of those weeks during which the House will be in session (which, unless otherwise indicated, shall be assumed to be full, 5-day work weeks for the conduct of committee and House floor business); (3) those weeks set aside for district work periods (which shall be scheduled at periodic intervals), holidays, and other recesses; and (4) the target date for the adjournment of that session.

"(b) The Speaker shall ensure that the minority leader is fully consulted in developing the legislative program for the House each week."

SEC. 202. TREATMENT OF VETOED BILLS.

Rule I of the Rules of the House of Representatives is amended by adding at the end the following:

"11. Immediately after the receipt of a bill returned by the President, the Speaker shall state the question on the reconsideration of that bill, without intervening motion, and the House shall proceed to vote on the reconsideration of that bill."

SEC. 203. MULTIPLE REFERRAL OF LEGISLATION.

Clause 5(c) of rule X of the Rules of the House of Representatives is amended to read as follows:

"(c) In carrying out paragraphs (a) and (b) with respect to any matter, the Speaker shall initially refer the matter to one committee which he shall designate as the committee of principal jurisdiction; but, he may also refer the matter to one or more additional committees, for consideration in sequence (subject to appropriate time limitations), either on its initial referral or after the matter has been reported by the committee of principal jurisdiction; or refer portions of the matter to one or more additional committees (reflecting different subjects and jurisdictions) for the exclusive consideration of such portion or portions; or refer the matter to a special ad hoc committee appointed by the Speaker, with the approval of the House, from the members of the committees having legislative jurisdiction, for the specific purpose of considering that matter and reporting to the House thereon; or make such other provisions as may be considered appropriate."

SEC. 204. PRESENTMENT OF BILLS TO THE PRESIDENT.

The Rules of the House of Representatives are amended by adding at the end the following:

"RULE LII.

"PRESENTMENT OF BILLS

"Not later than the tenth calendar day beginning after the date upon which a bill has been agreed to in identical form by the House of Representatives and the Senate, in the case of a bill originating in the House of Representatives, the bill shall be presented to the President."

SEC. 205. COMMITTEE RATIOS.

(a) Clause 6(a) of rule X of the Rules of the House of Representatives is amended by adding at the end the following new subparagraph:

"(3) The membership of each committee (and each subcommittee, task force, or other subunit thereof), shall reflect the ratio of majority to minority party Members of the House at the beginning of the Congress. This subparagraph shall not apply to the Committee on Standards of Official Conduct which shall be constituted as provided for in sub-paragraph (2). For the purposes of this clause, the Resident Commissioner from Puerto Rico and the Delegates to the House shall not be counted in determining the party ratio of the House."

(b) Clause 6(f) of rule X of the Rules of the House of Representatives is amended by inserting after the first sentence the following: "The membership of each such select committee (and of any subcommittee, task force, or subunit thereof), and of each such conference committee, shall reflect the ratio of the majority to minority party Members of the House at the time of its appointment."

SEC. 206. SUBCOMMITTEE LIMITS.

(10) Clause 6(d) of the rule X of the Rules of the House of Representatives is amended to read as follows:

"(d)(1) Each standing committee of the House (except the Committee on the Budget) that has more than 20 members, shall establish at least 4 subcommittees; but, in no event shall any standing committee (except the Committee on Appropriations) establish more than 6 subcommittees.

"(2) No member may serve at any one time as a member of more than 4 subcommittees of committees of the House.

"(3) For the purposes of this paragraph, the term 'subcommittee' includes any panel, task force, special subcommittee, or any subunit of a standing committee, or any select committee which is established for a period of longer than 6 months in any Congress."

SEC. 207. PROXY VOTING BAN.

Clause 2(f) of rule XI of the Rules of the House of Representatives is amended to read as follows:

"(f) No vote by any member of any committee or subcommittee with respect to any measure or matter may be cast by proxy."

SEC. 208. OPEN MEETINGS.

Clause 2(g)(1) of rule XI of the Rules of the House of Representatives is amended by striking the colon in the first sentence and all that follows thereafter and inserting the following: "because disclosure of matters to be considered would endanger national security, would tend to defame, degrade, or incriminate any person or otherwise would violate any law or rule of the House, or involves committee personnel matters."

SEC. 209. MAJORITY QUORUMS.

Clause 2(h)(2) of rule XI of the Rules of the House of Representatives is amended to read as follows:

"(2) A majority of the members of each committee or subcommittee shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of any business, including the markup of legislation."

SEC. 210. REPORT ACCOUNTABILITY.

(a) Clause 2(1)(2)(B) of rule XI of the Rules of the House of Representatives is amended to read as follows:

"(B) With respect to each rollcall vote on a motion to report any bill or resolution of a public character, the total number of votes cast for and against reporting, and the names of those Members voting for and against, shall be included in the committee report on the measure."

(b) Clause 2(1)(2) of rule XI of the Rules of the House of Representatives is further amended by adding at the end the following:

"(C) With respect to each nonrecord vote on a motion to report any bill or resolution of a public character, the names of those members of the committee actually present at the time the bill or resolution is ordered reported shall be included in the committee report."

SEC. 211. COMMITTEE DOCUMENTS.

Clause 2(1) of rule XI of the Rules of the House of Representatives is amended by re-designating subparagraphs (6) and (7) as subparagraphs (7) and (8), respectively, and by inserting after subparagraph (5) the following new subparagraph:

"(6)(A) Any committee or subcommittee print, document, or other material, other than reports subject to the preceding provisions of this clause, prepared for public distribution, shall either be approved by the committee or subcommittee prior to such public distribution, and opportunity shall be afforded for the inclusion of supplemental, minority, or additional views in accordance with the provisions of subparagraph (5), of such print, document, or other material shall contain on its cover the following disclaimer in bold face type:

'This material has not been officially approved by the committee [or subcommittee, as the case may be] on [name of committee or subcommittee] and may not therefore necessarily reflect the views of its members.'

and any such print, document, or other material not approved by the committee or subcommittee may not include the names of its members, other than the name of the committee or subcommittee chairman releasing the document, but shall be made available to all of the members of the committee not less than three calendar days (excluding Saturdays, Sundays, and public holidays) prior to its being made public.

"(B) The provisions of this subparagraph do not apply to prints of bills or resolutions, summaries thereof, or prints containing the names of committee or subcommittee members, staff, or other factual information regarding the committee or its subcommittees, their jurisdictions or rules, or any matters pending before such committee or its subcommittees, provided that such documents do not also contain opinions, views, findings, or recommendations.

"(C) Nothing in this subparagraph shall be construed to authorize any subcommittee or chairman thereof to issue any print, document or other material not otherwise authorized by the rules of the committee."

SEC. 212. SAME DAY CONSIDERATION OF RULES COMMITTEE REPORTS.

The first sentence of clause 4(b) of rule XI of the Rules of the House of Representatives is amended by striking the matter in parentheses and inserting the following: "(except that it shall not be called up for consideration on the same calendar day, nor on the subsequent calendar day of the same legislative day, that it is presented to the House, unless so determined by a vote of not less than two-thirds of the members voting, but this provision shall not apply during the last three days of the session)".

SEC. 213. PERMITTING INSTRUCTIONS IN MOTIONS TO RECOMMIT.

The second sentence in clause 4(b) of rule XI of the Rules of the House of Representatives is amended by striking "nor" and all that follows thereafter and by inserting the following: "nor shall it report any rule or order which would prevent the motion to recommit from being made as provided in clause 4 of rule XVI, including a motion with amendatory instructions (except in the case of a Senate measure for which the language of a House-passed measure has been substituted)".

SEC. 214. RESTRICTIVE RULE LIMITATION.

Clause 4 of rule XI of the Rules of the House of Representatives is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(e) It shall not be in order to consider any resolution reported from the Committee on Rules providing for the consideration of any bill or resolution otherwise subject to amendment under House rules if that resolution limits the right of Members to offer germane amendments to such bill or resolution unless the chairman of the Committee on Rules has orally announced in the House, at least four legislative days prior to the scheduled consideration of such matter by the Committee on Rules, that less than an open amendment process might be recommended by the Committee for the consideration of such bill or resolution."

SEC. 215. LIMITATION ON SELF-EXECUTING RULES.

Clause 4 of rule XI of the Rules of the House of Representatives is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(f) It shall not be in order to consider any order of business resolution reported from the Committee on Rules which provides that, upon the adoption of such resolution, the House shall be considered to have automatically adopted a motion, amendment, or resolution, or to have passed a bill, joint resolution, or conference report thereon, unless the consideration of such order of business resolution is agreed to by not less than two-thirds of the Members voting, and the yeas and nays shall be considered as ordered when the Speaker puts the question on consideration."

SEC. 216. BUDGET WAIVER LIMITATION.

Clause 4 of rule XI of the Rules of the House of Representatives (as amended by sections 214 and 215) is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(g)(1) It shall not be in order to consider any resolution reported from the Committee on Rules for the consideration of any measure which waives any specified provisions of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974, unless the report accompanying such resolution includes an explanation of, and justification for, any such waiver, an estimated cost of the provisions to which the waiver applies, and a summary or text of any written comments on the waiver received by the committee from the Committee on the Budget.

"(2) It shall be in order after the previous question has been ordered on any such resolution, to offer motions proposing to strike one or more such waivers from the resolution, and each such motion shall be decided without debate and shall require for adoption the requisite number of affirmative votes as required by the Budget Act or the rules of the House. After disposition of any and all such motions, the House shall proceed to an immediate vote on adoption of the resolution.

"(3) It shall not be in order to consider a resolution which waives all House rules except by a vote of two-thirds of those Members voting."

SEC. 217. COMMITTEE STAFFING.

Clause 5 of rule XI of the Rules of the House of Representatives is amended by redesignating paragraphs (a) through (f) as paragraphs (b) through (g), respectively, and by inserting at the beginning the following new paragraph:

"(a)(1) It shall not be in order to consider any primary expense resolution until the Committee on House Administration has reported, and the House has adopted, a resolution establishing an overall ceiling for House committee staff personnel for that year, and any such resolution shall be privileged.

"(2) In developing any primary expense resolution, the Committee on House Administration shall specify in the resolution the number of staff positions authorized by the resolution. The committee shall verify in the report accompanying any such primary expense resolution that the number of staff positions authorized by such resolution is in conformity with the overall ceiling on such positions established by the House.

"(3) In no event shall the total number of additional staff positions authorized by all such primary expense resolutions, taken together with the number of staff positions authorized by clause 6 of this rule (providing for professional and clerical staff), exceed the ceiling established by the House for that year.

"(4) In allocating staff positions pursuant to the overall ceiling established by the House, the committee shall take into account the past and anticipated legislative and oversight activities of each committee.

"(5) In any supplemental expense resolution, and in any amendment thereto, the committee shall specify the number of additional staff positions, if any, authorized by such resolution, and shall indicate in the report accompanying any such resolution whether the additional staff positions are in conformity with or exceed the overall ceiling established by the House.

"(6) It shall not be in order to consider any supplemental expense resolution, or any amendment thereto, authorizing additional staff positions in excess of the overall ceiling established by the House except by a vote of two-thirds of the Members voting, a quorum being present.

"(7) It shall not be in order to consider any primary or supplemental expense resolution for one or more committees unless the report on such resolution includes a statement verifying that each such committee has adopted and complied with a committee rule entitling the minority party on such committee, upon the request of a majority of such minority, to not less than one-third of the funds provided for committee staff pursuant to each primary or supplemental expense resolution.

"(8) For the purposes of the One Hundred Third Congress, the overall ceiling for committee staff in a resolution reported by the committee pursuant to subparagraph (1), or contained in any amendment thereto, shall not exceed 50 percent of the total committee staff personnel employed at the end of the One Hundred Second Congress."

SEC. 218. COMMEMORATIVE CALENDAR.

Rule XIII of the Rules of the House of Representatives is amended by redesignating clauses 6 and 7 as clauses 7 and 8, respectively, and by inserting after clause 5 the following new clause:

"6. There shall also be a Commemorative Calendar to be comprised of unreported bills and resolutions respecting commemorative holidays and celebrations referred to the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service and requested by the chairman and ranking minority member of such committee, in writing, to be placed thereon. On the first and third Tuesdays of each month, after the disposal of such business on the Speaker's table as requires reference only and resolutions called on the Private Calendar, the Speaker shall direct the Clerk to call the bills and resolutions on the Commemorative Calendar. Should objection be made by two or more Members to the consideration of any bill or resolution so called, it shall be removed from such Calendar. Such bills and resolutions, if considered, shall be considered in the House."

SEC. 219. AUTOMATIC ROLL CALL VOTES.

Rule XV of the Rules of the House of Representatives is amended by adding at the end the following new clause:

"7. The yeas and nays shall be considered as ordered when the Speaker puts the question upon final passage of any bill, joint resolution, or conference report thereon, making general appropriations, providing revenue, or adjusting the statutory rate of pay of Members of Congress, or on final adoption of any concurrent resolution on the budget or conference report thereon which provides an increase in the statutory debt limit."

SEC. 220. APPROPRIATION REFORMS.

Clause 2 of rule XXI of the Rules of the House of Representatives is amended by striking the second sentence of paragraph (c) and by amending paragraph (d) to read as follows:

"(d)(1) For the purposes of House Rules, a 'general appropriation bill' shall include any bill or joint resolution making continuing appropriations in a fiscal year for a period in excess of 30 days, and any such measure shall include the full text of the language proposed to be enacted (as opposed to mere references to measures, or amendments thereto, which have been reported or passed by either House, or agreed to by a committee of conference).

"(2) The provisions of clause 2(1)(3)(B) of rule XI shall apply to any 'general appropriation bill' as defined in subparagraph (1).

"(3) For the purposes of this clause, all points of order shall be considered as having been reserved against any general appropriation bill at the time it was reported."

(b) Clause 2 of rule XXI of the Rules of the House of Representatives is amended by inserting after paragraph (d) the following new paragraph:

"(e) It shall not be in order to consider any bill or joint resolution making continuing appropriations for a period of 30 days or less unless such measure only provides appropriations in the lesser amount and under the more restrictive authority of each pertinent appropriations measure: as passed by the House; as passed by the Senate; as agreed to by a committee of conference; or enacted for the preceding fiscal year."

(c) Clause 3 of rule XXI of the Rules of the House of Representatives is amended by inserting "and shall contain a list of all appropriations contained in the bill for any expenditure not previously authorized by law" before the period.

(d) Clause 2(1)(3)(B) of rule XI of the Rules of the House of Representatives is amended by striking "(other than continuing appropriations)" and inserting in lieu thereof "(other than continuing appropriations, except as provided by clause 2(d) of rule XXI)".

(e) Clause 4 of rule XI of the Rules of the House of Representatives is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(h) It shall not be in order, except by a vote of not less than 3/5 of the Members of the House duly chosen and sworn, to consider any rule or order from the Committee on Rules which waives the provisions of clause 2 of rule XXI against the consideration of any short-term, continuing appropriations measure as defined therein; or which waives the provisions of clause 2 of rule XXI against, or denies amendment to, any provision in a long-term, continuing appropriation measure as defined therein if that provision has not been previously considered and agreed to by the House."

SEC. 221. RECONCILIATION LIMITATION.

Rule XXI of the Rules of the House of Representatives is amended by adding at the end the following new clause:

"8. (a) No provision shall be reported in the House in any reconciliation bill pursuant to the most recently agreed to concurrent resolution on the budget, or be in order as an amendment thereto in the House or Committee of the Whole, which is not related to achieving the purposes of the directives to House committees contained in such concurrent resolution.

"(b) Nothing in this clause shall be construed to prevent the consideration of any provision in a reconciliation bill, or any amendment thereto, which achieves savings greater than those directed of a committee and which conforms to paragraph (c) of this clause, or to prevent the consideration of motions to strike made in order by the Committee on Rules to achieve the purposes of the directives.

"(c) For the purposes of this clause, a provision shall be considered related to achieving the purposes of directives contained in the most recently agreed to concurrent resolution on the budget if it is estimated by the House Committee on the Budget, in consultation with the Congressional Budget Office, to effectuate or implement a reduction in budget authority or in new spending authority described in section 401(c)(2)(C) of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974, or to raise revenues or both, and, in the case of an amendment, if it is within (in whole or in part) the jurisdiction of any committee instructed in the concurrent resolution.

"(d) The point of order provided for by this clause shall not apply to Senate amendments or to conference reports.

"(e) For the purposes of this clause, all points of order shall be considered as having been reserved against a reconciliation bill at the time it was reported."

SEC. 222. AUTHORIZATION REPORTING DEADLINE.

Rule XXI of the Rules of the House of Representatives (as amended by section 221) is amended by adding at the end the following new clause:

"9. It shall not be in order to consider in the House any bill or joint resolution which directly or indirectly authorizes the enactment of new budget authority for a fiscal year unless that bill or joint resolution is reported in the House on or before May 15 preceding the beginning of such fiscal year."

SEC. 223. PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE.

Clause 1 of rule XXIV of the Rules of the House of Representatives is amended by inserting after the second order of business the following new order of business (and by redesignating succeeding orders accordingly):

"Third. The Pledge of Allegiance to the Flag."

SEC. 224. SUSPENSION OF THE RULES.

Clause 1 of rule XXVII of the Rules of the House of Representatives is amended by inserting "(a)" after "1." and by inserting at the end the following new paragraphs:

"(b) It shall not be in order to entertain a motion to suspend the rules and pass or agree to any measure or matter unless by direction of the committee or committees of jurisdiction over the measure or matter, or unless a written request is filed with the Speaker by the chairman and ranking minority member of the committee or committees having jurisdiction over the measure or matter, asking for its consideration under suspension of the rules.

"(c) A motion to suspend the rules and pass or agree to any measure or matter shall not be in order if the measure or matter would enact or authorize the enactment of new budget authority or new spending authority in excess of $50,000,000 for any fiscal year; nor shall it be in order to entertain a motion to suspend the rules to pass any joint resolution which proposes to amend the Constitution.

"(d) It shall not be in order to entertain a motion to suspend the rules and pass or agree to any measure or matter unless written notice is placed in the Congressional Record of its scheduled consideration at least one calendar day prior to its consideration, and such notification shall include the numerical designation of the measure or matter, its short title, and the text of any amendments to be offered thereto, and the date on which the measure or matter is scheduled to be considered."

SEC. 225. DISCHARGE MOTION.

Clause (4) of rule XXVII of the Rules of the House of Representatives is amended by inserting after the fourth sentence the following new sentence: "When 100 Members have signed the motion, the Clerk shall cause to be printed in the Congressional Record the name of each Member who has signed or withdrawn a signature to the motion, and shall thereafter publish an updated list in the Congressional Record at the end of each succeeding week the House is in session."

SEC. 226. INCLUSION OF VIEWS WITH CONFERENCE REPORTS.

Clause 1 of rule XXVIII of the Rules of the House of Representatives is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(e) If, on the day a report of any committee of conference has received the requisite number of signatures for approval by House conferees, any House conferee gives notice of intention to file supplemental, minority, or additional views, that Member shall be entitled to not less than 3 calendar days (excluding Saturdays, Sundays and legal holidays) in which to file such views with the principal manager on the part of the House, such views shall be in writing and signed by that Member. All such views so filed by one or more Members of the committee shall be published in the same volume as the report of the committee of conference and the joint explanatory statement filed in the House, and the volume shall bear on its cover a recital that any such supplemental, minority, or additional views are included as part of that volume. This paragraph shall not preclude the immediate filing or printing of a conference report if a timely request to file such views was not made as provided by this paragraph."

SEC. 227. INTELLIGENCE COMMITTEE OATH.

(a) Clause 1 of rule XLVIII of the Rules of the House of Representatives is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(d) At the time a Member is appointed to serve on the select committee, or within 30 days after the adoption by the House of this provision, whichever is later, the Member shall take the following oath:

'I do solemnly swear (or affirm) that I will not directly or indirectly disclose to any unauthorized person any classified information received in the course of my duties on the Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence, except with the formal approval of the committee or of the House.'

The oath shall be administered by the Speaker of the House of Representatives. The Clerk of the House of Representatives of the One Hundred Second Congress and each succeeding Congress shall cause this oath to be printed, furnishing 2 copies to each Member appointed to the select committee who has taken this oath, which shall be subscribed to by the Member who shall deliver them to the Clerk, one to be filed in the records of the House of Representatives, and the other to be recorded in the Journal of the House and the Congressional Record."

(b) Clause 5 of rule XLVIII of the Rules of the House of Representatives is amended by adding at the end the following new sentences: "Each employee of the select committee and any person engaged by contract or otherwise to perform services for or at the request of the select committee who is required to subscribe to the agreement in writing referred to in the first sentence of this clause shall, at the time of the signing or within 30 days after the adoption of this provision, whichever is later, also take the oath set out in clause 1(d) of this rule. The oath shall be administered by the chairman or by any Member of the committee or of the committee staff designated by the chairman. The Clerk of the House of Representatives of the One Hundred Second Congress and each succeeding Congress shall cause this oath to be printed, furnishing 2 copies to each such person taking this oath, which shall be subscribed to by such person, who shall deliver them to the Clerk, one to be filed in the records of the House of Representatives, and the other to be recorded in the Journal of the House and in the Congressional Record."

(c) Clause 7(d) of rule XLVIII of the Rules of the House of Representatives is amended by inserting "or the oath required by clause 1(d) of by clause 5," after "paragraph (c)" and by adding after the last sentence the following new sentences: "The select committee may refer cases of unauthorized disclosure and violations of the required oaths to the Committee on Standards of Official Conduct for investigation. While a member of the committee is the subject of such a pending investigation, the select committee may determine by majority vote that the Member shall not be given access to classified information."

SEC. 228. ENHANCED RESCISSION AUTHORITY.

(a) The Committee on Rules and the Committee on Government Operations shall, not later than May 31, 1992, report legislation granting the President enhanced rescission authority with respect to any budget authority not authorized by law. Such legislation shall provide that any such budget authority shall be considered to be permanently canceled unless a joint resolution disapproving such rescission is enacted within 45 calendar days of continuous session of Congress (as defined by section 1011 of the Impoundment Control Act of 1974) after the date on which the President's special rescission message is received.

(b) If such legislation is not reported by the committees named above by the date specified, the committees not reporting shall be considered as having been discharged from the further consideration of the first such bill introduced and it shall be in order on any day after June 3, 1992, for any Member of the House (after consultation with the Speaker as to the most appropriate time for consideration), as a matter of highest privilege, to move to resolve into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for its consideration, and the bill shall be subject to 2 hours of general debate to be equally divided and controlled by the majority and minority leaders, or their designees, followed by consideration of the measure for amendment under the five-minute rule.

SEC. 229. BIENNIAL BUDGET-APPROPRIATIONS PROCESS.

The Committee on Rules is directed to conduct a complete and thorough study of the advisability and feasibility of converting to a biennial budget and appropriations process and corresponding multiyear authorizations, and to report its findings and recommendations to the House not later than December 31, 1992.

SEC. 230. APPLICABILITY OF CERTAIN LAWS TO THE HOUSE.

(a) It is the policy of the House that the laws of the United States set forth in subsection (b) should be amended to apply to the House of Representatives in the same or similar manner as such laws apply to the Executive Branch.

(b) Not later than June 30, 1992, the standing committees of the House with subject matter jurisdiction over the following laws of the United States shall report to the House legislation to implement subsection (a):

(1) The National Labor Relations Act.

(2) The Occupational Safety Act and Health Act of 1970.

(3) The Equal Pay Act of 1963.

(4) The Age Discrimination in Employment Act of 1967.

(5) Section 552 of title 5, United States Code (popularly known as the Freedom of Information Act).

(6) Section 552a of title 5, United States Code (popularly known as the Privacy Act of 1974).

(7) Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 (relating to equal employment opportunity).

(8) Chapter 39 of title 28, United States Code (relating to an independent counsel).

(c) The Committee on Rules shall, not later than 10 legislative days after any such legislation has been reported, report a resolution providing for the consideration of such measure in the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union under an open amendment process.

(d) If such legislation is not reported by all the committees named above by the date specified, the first bill introduced which implements the policy referred to in subsection (a) and which encompasses all the laws referred to in subsection (b) shall be considered as having been discharged from all the committees to which it was referred. It shall be in order on any day after July 15, 1992, for any Member of the House (after consultation with the Speaker as to the most appropriate time for consideration), as a matter of highest privilege, to move to resolve into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for its consideration, and the bill shall be subject to four hours of general debate to be equally divided and controlled by the majority and minority leaders, or their designees, followed by consideration of the measure for amendment under the five-minute rule.

SEC. 231. EQUITABLE COMMITTEE STAFF RATIOS.

Effective at the beginning of the One Hundred Third Congress, except as provided in sections 107 and 108, the ratio of majority party to minority party staff positions, consultants, details, and funding for each committee of the House of Representatives shall be the ratio of majority party to minority party Members of the House of Representatives.

SEC. 232. ELIMINATION OF CERTAIN SELECT COMMITTEES.

(a) SELECT COMMITTEE ON AGING.—Clause 6(i) of rule X of the Rules of the House of Representatives is repealed.

(b) ADDITIONAL SELECT COMMITTEES.—The Select Committee on Hunger, the Select Committee on Children, Youth, and Families, and the Select Committee on Narcotics Abuse and Control shall cease to exist upon the adoption of this resolution.

(c) TREATMENT OF RECORDS AND FILES.—The records, files, and materials of the select committees referred to in subsections (a) and (b) shall be transferred to the Clerk of the House.

SEC. 233. APPLICATION OF INFORMATION DISCLOSURE REQUIREMENTS TO CONGRESS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Effective upon the enactment of this section into permanent law, notwithstanding any other provision of law, and subject to the amendment made by subsection (c), the provisions of section 552 of title 5, United States Code (popularly known as the "Freedom of Information Act"), shall apply to the Congress.

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—Effective upon the enactment of this section into permanent law, section 551(1)(A) of title 5, United States Code (relating to the exclusion of the Congress from, among other matters, laws requiring the disclosure of public information), is amended to read as follows:

"(A) except as that term is used in section 552, the Congress:"

(c) LIMITATION AMENDMENT.—Effective upon the enactment of this section into permanent law, section 552 of title 5, United States Code (relating to the disclosure of public information), is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(f) In the case of an authority of the Government of the United States (as that term is used in section 551(1) of this title) who is a Member of the House of Representatives or the Senate, this section shall not apply to information that is related to casework or constituent correspondence."

SEC. 234. LIMITATION ON THE DURATION OF PAYMENTS OF EXPENSES OF FORMER SPEAKERS OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The period for which expenses of former Speakers of the House of Representatives may be paid shall end 3 years after the date of the expiration of the term of office as Representative of the former Speaker involved, except that, in the case of a former Speaker who is receiving such expenses on the date of the enactment of this Act, the period shall end 3 years after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(b) DEFINITION.—As used in this section, the term "expenses of former Speakers of the House of Representatives" means the office, allowance, and other expenses provided for former Speakers of the House of Representatives under House Resolution 1238, Ninety-first Congress, enacted into permanent law by chapter VIII of the Supplemental Appropriations Act, 1971 (2 U.S.C. 31b-1 et seq.).

SEC. 235. PROHIBITION ON FRANKED MASS MAILINGS BY MEMBERS OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES OUTSIDE THEIR CONGRESSIONAL DISTRICTS.

(a) AMENDMENT TO TITLE 39.—Effective upon the enactment of this section into permanent law, section 3210 of title 39, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in subsection (a)(7), by striking out "except that—" and all that follows through the end of subparagraph (B) and inserting in lieu thereof a period; and

(2) in subsection (d)(1), by striking out "delivery—" and all that follows through the end of subparagraph (B) and inserting in lieu thereof "delivery within that area constituting the congressional district or State from which the Member was elected."

(b) OFFICIAL FUNDS LIMITATION.—The Committee on House Administration of the House of Representatives may not approve any payment, nor may a Member of the House of Representatives make any expenditure from, any allowance of the House of Representatives or any other official funds if any portion of the payment or expenditure is for any cost related to a mass mailing by a Member of the House of Representatives outside the congressional district of the Member.

SEC. 236. REQUIREMENT THAT LEGISLATION ADJUSTING PAY FOR MEMBERS OF CONGRESS BE CONSIDERED SEPARATELY.

Section 225 of the Federal Salary Act of 1967 (2 U.S.C. 351 and following) is amended by adding at the end the following:

"(c) LEGISLATION ADJUSTING MEMBERS' PAY TO BE CONSIDERED SEPARATELY.—It shall not be in order in the House of Representatives to consider any bill or resolution that would adjust, or have the effect of adjusting, the rate of pay of Members of Congress if the bill of resolution contains any item which does not relate to adjusting Members' rates of pay."

SEC. 237. LEGISLATIVE BRANCH APPROPRIATIONS TO BE FOR ONE YEAR ONLY.

It shall not be in order to consider in the House of Representatives any measure appropriating amounts for the legislative branch of the Government if such measure permits any such amount to remain available for obligation beyond the end of the fiscal year for which such amount is appropriated.

SEC. 238. ONE ATTORNEY IN THE OFFICE OF THE PARLIAMENTARIAN TO BE APPOINTED UPON THE RECOMMENDATION OF THE MINORITY LEADER.

Notwithstanding section 3 of House Resolution 502, Ninety-fifth Congress, agreed to April 20, 1977, as enacted into permanent law by section 115 of Public Law 95-94 (2 U.S.C. 287b), or any other law or other authority, at least one attorney appointed by the Parliamentarian under that section shall be appointed upon the recommendation of the minority leader.

SEC. 239. ROTATION OF CHAIRMANSHIP OF COMMITTEE ON STANDARDS OF OFFICIAL CONDUCT.

Clause 6(c) of rule X of the Rules of the House of Representatives is amended by inserting "(1)" after "(c)" and by adding at the end the following:

"(2) In the case of the Committee on Standards of Official Conduct—

"(A) the chairman elected under subparagraph (1) shall only be for the first session of a Congress; and

"(B) at the beginning of the second session of a Congress, one of the members of that committee shall be elected its chairman for that session by the House from nominations submitted by the minority party caucus or conference."

SEC. 240. EACH RULE OF THE HOUSE TO BE AGREED TO BY SEPARATE RESOLUTION OF THE HOUSE.

In adopting the Rules of the House of Representatives in the One Hundred Third Congress and any subsequent Congress, each rule shall be agreed to by separate resolution of the House.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
Washington, DC, March 11, 1992.

Hon. THOMAS S. FOLEY,
Speaker of the House, House of Representatives,
Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. SPEAKER: I am aware of your desire to quickly bring to the Floor legislation that would create the position of House Administrator.

While I recognize the crisis of confidence in the House that has caused such a move, I want to take the opportunity to tell you, before a vote is taken, of my opposition to any such proposal without careful study and analysis. We would like to help solve the problems of the institution in an institutional way. But, the scandals of the last year demand that we make fundamental changes in the way this institution operates. I am not convinced that a newly-created House Administrator would make those changes.

I am, quite frankly, distressed that at this crucial time the Majority is bringing before the House such an important measure without a series of hearings. Yes, the entire system of House administration needs reform—but what is needed is sweeping reform. Let me suggest such an alternative.

My plan will remove the patronage that has brought us to this tragic state. In its stead will be competence and professionalism.

We currently have five elected officers of the House of Representatives: The Doorkeeper, the Postmaster, the Sergeant at Arms, the Clerk, and the Chaplain.

I would propose that we eliminate the Offices of the Doorkeeper and the Postmaster. The Office of the Doorkeeper is responsible for guarding the doors to the House. This function should be fulfilled by the Sergeant at Arms.

The Office of the Postmaster oversees the House Post Office. That function should be replaced by a professional postal operation.

Over the 38 years of total Democratic control of every aspect of the House, the functions of the Officers of the House have grown beyond their original legislative intent. I propose that they return to those original functions.

The Sergeant at Arms should be in charge of protecting the House Members, their staffs, and the Capitol and House Office buildings. He should have no financial role whatsoever.

I propose that we hire a nationally respected law enforcement professional as the Sergeant at Arms to carry out that role.

The Clerk should only be in charge of legislative activities: Making sure the Journal is kept, making sure the votes are tallied correctly, and making sure amendments are in order.

The Clerk should not have control over the financial activities of the House. There should be a clear demarcation between financial and legislative roles within the House.

Instead, a Chief Financial Officer of the House should be created to carry out those financial functions such as paying the Members, balancing the books, and disbursing health insurance. These would be the activities of the CFO.

It has been traditional to have the Majority Caucus nominate and elect all the Officers of the House.

My proposal would change that system.

I would remove the partisanship by requiring a two-thirds vote for the appointment and subsequent re-appointment of the Chief Financial Officer.

We must radically change the management of this House. A House Administrator may look good, but it doesn't go to the real heart of the problem.

I understand why the Majority wants to move quickly on this matter, but I must question the wisdom of acting too hastily.

Instinctively adding another layer of bureaucracy to an already over-bureaucratized House is no solution.

We need careful, long-term reform of this House, and I am doubtful that the hasty, partisan appointment of a House Administrator will achieve that goal.

Sincerely,

ROBERT H. MICHEL,
Republican Leader.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
Washington, DC, March 23, 1992.

Hon. THOMAS S. FOLEY,
Speaker, House of Representatives, Washington,
DC.

DEAR MR. SPEAKER: Our recent conversations about the need for comprehensive and bipartisan reform in the House of Representatives have been useful in providing a starting point for such reform. Media reports about public reaction to recent House scandals make it clear that our mutual desire to help the institution we love must move forward quickly. I want to take this opportunity, therefore, to suggest a means by which reform can advance on an efficient and responsible bipartisan basis.

My proposal is that both of us should choose several representative members from our respective sides of the aisle to form a bipartisan panel, chaired by the two of us, in which the issue of House reform can be examined and discussed in its complex entirety. While we cannot guarantee that the panel will reach agreement on all issues, we can at least find out where we do agree and narrow the areas of disagreement. If such a plan seems useful to you, as I hope it does, please let me know and we can then choose our members and proceed immediately.

Before we meet, however, there is one point on which I would like to get your commitment. You may recall that during our conversation about reform, I proposed that the House should have a chief financial officer, and that such an officer should be chosen by a two-thirds vote of the House. As I said, the creation of the post of chief financial officer of the House is absolutely necessary as the foundation upon which other reforms can be built. The two-thirds vote would help convince the American people that we in the House are not conducting "business as usual" but are committed to a new path for the House. I believe your agreement to such an idea before our panel meets would help me to communicate to our members the seriousness and the bipartisan nature of this movement toward reform.

Mr. Speaker, once again I want to assure you of my support for true, comprehensive, bipartisan reform of the House of Representatives, and of my pledge to do all I can to cooperate with policies and plans that reflect that ideal.

Sincerely,

BOB MICHEL,
Republican Leader.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
Washington, DC, March 24, 1992.

Hon. THOMAS S. FOLEY,
Speaker, House of Representatives, Washington,
DC.

DEAR MR. SPEAKER: As we seek to begin a process that can lead to comprehensive House reform, it is clear that such reform cannot be arrived at immediately or instituted in a piecemeal fashion. The problems facing the House today have been in existence for quite a long time. What we need is serious thought and reflection to be brought into the discussions.

We have tried to examine the problem, set goals for reform, examine resistance to change and propose possible solutions for reforms. Enclosed is our work product which I share with you in the desire that it form the basis for any future discussions.

Sincerely,

BOB MICHEL,
Republican Leader.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
Washington, DC, April 7, 1992.

Hon. THOMAS S. FOLEY,
Speaker, House of Representatives,
Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. SPEAKER: Our Bipartisan Task Force discussions on House reform have been frank, useful and in many instances constructive. Because of your insistence to bring a reform package to the Floor before the Easter recess, we want to tell you where we think we are.

For the record, Republicans have not been increasing the playing field but rather narrowing it in hopes of reaching an agreement. While there has been progress towards incorporating some of the Republican ideas the devil remains in the details. As we discussed yesterday, the legislative language must be made more explicit in several areas.

We lament the fact that the majority could not bring themselves to make the purely administrative Committee on House Administration bipartisan. The only non-legislative committee of the House with oversight functions of the entire House operations can, we believe, be made bipartisan with little or no sacrifice of the majority's prerogative.

The change you made to have tie votes of the Oversight Subcommittee subject to appeal to the full committee is a significant departure from your previous offer and in our mind dramatically lessens the significance of even having a bipartisan oversight subcommittee. What incentive will there be for this subcommittee to reach any type of bipartisan agreement when any deadlock will go to the full committee or even the joint leadership group? Having an appeal to the joint leadership group does not resolve the problem since the idea was to force the subcommittee into a bipartisan compromise.

We appreciate your willingness to agree to the need for an Inspector General but we believe legislative language assuring his independence is necessary.

We also believe the responsibilities of the Director of Non-legislative and Financial Services should require development and maintenance of an integrated accounting and financial management system for the House; improving the economy and efficiency of our operations as well as prevent possibilities of waste, fraud and abuse. We believe the language in our resolution, H. Res. 419 accomplishes these goals.

Any proposal must specifically move to end all non-legislative support services patronage. Your proposal eliminated patronage in the office of the Director of Non-legislative and Financial Services but we believe more inclusive language is appropriate.

With respect to the Office of General Counsel, the language presented yesterday falls far short of the mark. Even if you do not want to agree to the creation of a separate Office as we proposed, there is still more than enough justification to delineate the purposes and policies of the current Office as well as who they would be accountable to.

Our side further requires, at a minimum, a position of equal status with access to the information and operations of the Office.

As we have represented many times in our private discussions, any true reform cannot focus solely on administrative or managerial aspects of the House. We believe our legislative procedures and process to be equally in need of reform.

Last night in the spirit of compromise and in an effort to reach agreement in accordance with your timetable, we had our staff communicate to you our minimum requirements for reform at this time.

We believe it is necessary for us to formally transfer these proposals in addition to the previous discussions.

We agree to drop the joint appointment power by the Speaker, Majority and Minority Leaders for the Director of Non-legislative and Financial Services and the Inspector General.

We insist on either a ban on proxy voting in full committee or creation of a 9-6 Rules Committee membership, and agreement that:

The Solomon Task Force on Reform report to party caucuses by July 31; and

The House vote on Hamilton-Gradison this week; and Language clarifying the minority counsel position, clarifying the responsibilities and reporting authority of the Inspector General and Director of Non-legislative and Financial Services, and clarifying the appeal process to the Joint Leadership Group or the Committee on House Administration.

Your staff transmitted back to us that there was no way you could agree to any such proposal.

With your insistence on action this week, it is clear to us that we need not meet any further unless you will reconsider the proposal as we presented.

We hope there is adequate opportunity for each Member to express themselves fully on these important issues when reform is considered on the Floor.

It has been stated many times in our discussions that the proposals you have offered are "unprecedented." These are unprecedented times Mr. Speaker in which the public is demanding extraordinary actions. If Republicans control the House of Representatives in the 103rd Congress, we intend to have a partisan Committee on House Administration and a majority-minority membership of 9-6 on the House Rules Committee. We ask nothing that we ourselves are not willing to abide by if we were in the majority.

Sincerely,

BOB MICHEL.

HOUSE REFORM PROPOSALS SIDE BY SIDE

	Republican	Democrat
Reform goals	Want managerial and procedural reform.	Want only administrative reform.
Chief Financial Officer.	CFO would have all financial responsibilities (payroll, vouchers, travel, pension) and management (office supply, property supply, furniture shops, barber and beauty salon, folding room), as well as power to audit and investigate.	Call CFO the Director of Non-legislative and Financial Services. Would have same responsibility except for audit or investigation powers.
Appointment of CFO.	Elected by two-thirds vote of House.	Appointed by unanimous vote of Speaker, majority and minority leaders.
Inspector general.	Create inspector general to conduct independent audits and investigations.	Added inspector general concept—has audit authority.
Doorkeeper and postmaster.	Eliminates both positions	Retains Doorkeeper, eliminates postmaster.
Sergeant at Arms.	Takes away all financial duties, assigned only security duties.	Same.
Clerk	Takes away all financial duties, returns to original legislative role.	Same.
House Administration Committee.	Full committee and Appropriations Subcommittee on Legislative Branch to be bipartisan.	Only Oversight Subcommittee on House Administration to be bipartisan. Tie votes in subcommittee get referred to full committee.

	Republican	Democrat
Office of General Counsel.	Constitutional scholar as Chief Counsel, appoints Democrat and Republican deputies, legal advisory group approval required before action taken on behalf of House. Need approval of full House to file briefs and make court appearances.	Creates minority counsel position, appointment by minority leader "in consultation with the General Counsel," language in resolution restricts role of minority counsel.
Reprogramming of funds.	Joint approval between Speaker and minority leader.	Through legislative appropriations process.
Other reform proposals.	Ban proxy voting, committee ratio reform, staffing and rules changes, enhanced rescission authority, biennial budgeting, reconciliation reform, discharge petition reform, imposing laws on Congress that it has imposed on the private sector, limiting franked mail outside districts, limiting funds for former Speakers, and creating bipartisan task force to review other rules for reform.	No similar proposals.

MICHEL REFORM BILL, SECTION BY SECTION
TITLE I CHIEF FINANCIAL OFFICER, GENERAL COUNSEL, AND OTHER REFORMS

Section 123 Purpose and Policy: The purpose of the Office is to provide legal assistance to Members, officers, and employees of the House on matters directly related to their duties.

Section 124 Specific Approval Requirements: The Office shall seek prior approval by resolution of the House regarding entering an appearance before any court, filing a brief in any court, or representing any member of the House in any contested matter that will result in formal legal proceedings.

The Office must seek the approval of the Leadership Group where preparation of any legal memorandum or other legal research which requires more than four hours of preparation time.

In carrying out any action where the matter affects an area of responsibility committed to another office, officer, or employee, the Office shall consult and coordinate such action with the office, officer or employee.

Section 125 General Counsel: The General Counsel shall be appointed by the Speaker from among individuals recommended by the Majority leader and the Minority Leader, without regard to political affiliation.

The General Counsel shall serve at the pleasure of the Leadership Group.

Section 126 Staff: The General Counsel may employ such attorneys and other employees as may be necessary for the performance of the functions of the Office. At least one attorney in the Office shall be appointed upon the recommendation of the minority leader.

TITLE II LEGISLATIVE REFORM

Section 201 House Scheduling Reform: Requires the Speaker to announce the legislative program for the year including target dates for consideration of specified major budgetary, authorization, and appropriation bills. The Speaker must also indicate weeks during which the House will be in session, weeks set aside for District Work Periods and the target date for adjournment.

Section 202 Treatment of Vetoed Bills: Immediately after the receipt of a bill returned by the President, the Speaker shall state the question on the reconsideration of that bill, without intervening motion, and the House shall proceed to vote on the reconsideration of that bill.

Section 203 Multiple Referral of Legislation: Ends joint referrals.

The Speaker must designate the committee of principal jurisdiction.

Section 204 Presentation of Bills to the President: Sets a time certain (10 days) for bills to be presented to the President.

Section 205 Committee Ratios: The membership of each committee, subcommittee, must reflect the ratio of majority to minority party Members of the House at the beginning of the Congress.

Section 206 Subcommittee Limits: Each standing committee that has over 20 members may establish at least four subcommittees but not more than six.

Section 207 Proxy Voting Ban: Eliminates proxy voting in committee and subcommittees.

Section 208 Open Meetings: Meetings are to be open unless "because disclosure of matters to be considered would endanger national security, would tend to defame, degrade, or incriminate any person or would otherwise violate any law or rule of the House."

Section 209 Majority Quorums: A majority of the members of each committee or subcommittee shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of any business, including the markup of legislation.

Section 210 Report Accountability: On a roll call vote to report a bill or resolution, the names of those voting for and against, are to be included in the committee report on the measure.

Section 211 Committee Documents: Committee documents are to either be approved by the committee or subcommittee prior to public distribution with appropriate opportunity for minority views and supplemental information, or else the document must contain a disclaimer that the document "may not necessarily reflect the views of [the committee] members."

Section 212 Same Day Consideration of Rules Committee Reports: There must be a two-third vote for same calendar day consideration of Rules Committee reports, or subsequent calendar day of the same legislation day.

Section 213 Permitting Instructions in Motions to Recommit: Prohibits any rule or order which would prevent the motion to recommit from being made as provided by clause 4 of rule XVI, including a motion with amendatory instructions.

Section 214 Restrictive Rules Limitation: A bill could not be considered under a closed rule unless the Chairman of the Rules Committee announced on the House floor four legislative days prior that less than an open amendment process might be recommended by the Committee.

Section 215 Limitation on Self-Executing Rules: Self-executing rules would have to be adopted by a two-third vote.

Section 216 Budget Waiver Limitation: It will not be in order to consider any resolution reported from the Committee on Rules which waives any specified provision of the Budget Act unless the committee report includes an explanation of, and justification for, any such waiver, an estimated cost of the provisions to which the waiver applies.

Section 217 Committee Staffing: Reduces committee staffing for the 103rd Congress by 50%.

Section 218 Commemorative Calendar: Creates a Commemorative Calendar. Objections by two or more Members may remove the bill from the Calendar.

Section 219 Automatic Roll Call Votes: On any appropriation bill, or other measure providing revenue, or adjusting Members pay, the yeas and nays will be considered ordered.

Section 220 Appropriation Reforms: A continuing appropriations bill shall not exceed 30 days, shall reflect the lesser amount of the House passed, Senate passed or conference agreement or enacted for the preceding fiscal year. Such bill must contain a list of all appropriations contained in the bill for any expenditure not previously authorized by law. A 3/5 vote is required to waive the provisions of clause 2 of rule XXI against the consideration of any continuing appropriation measure.

Section 221 Reconciliation Limitation: A reconciliation bill shall not contain provisions which are not related to achieving the purposes of the directives to the committees. Amendments which achieve greater savings than those directed of a committee shall be made in order.

Section 222 Authorization Reporting Deadline: It will not be in order to consider any bill or joint resolution authority for a fiscal year unless that bill or joint resolution is reported in the House on or before May 15.

Section 223 Pledge of Allegiance: The second order of business shall be the pledge of allegiance.

Section 224 Suspension of the Rules: The Chairman of the committee of jurisdiction must request the measure be considered under suspension of the rules. Any bill which authorizes over $50,000,000 in any fiscal year shall not be made in order under suspension of the rules.

Section 225 Discharge Motion: When 100 Members have signed the motion to discharge, the Clerk must print in the Record the names of Members signing the motion.

Section 226 Inclusion of Views with Conference Reports: Any conferee shall have three calendar days to file supplemental or minority views.

Section 227 Intelligence Committee Oath: Each member of the Intelligence Committee shall take an oath not to disclose any classified information.

Section 228 Enhanced Rescission Authority: The Committee on Rules and the Committee on Government Operations shall report legislation granting the President enhanced rescission authority. Such legislation shall provide that any such budget authority shall be considered to be permanently canceled unless a joint resolution disapproving such rescission is enacted within 45 calendar days.

Section 229 Biennial Budget Appropriations Process: Committee on Rules is directed to conduct a complete and thorough study of a biennial budget and appropriation process.

Section 230 Applicability of Certain Laws to the House: Legislation must be reported to the House to implement: the National Labor Relations Act; the Occupational Safety Act and Health Act; the Equal Pay Act of 1963; the Age of Discrimination in Employment Act of 1967; Section 552 of title 5, United States Code (Freedom of Information Act); Section 552a of title 5 (Privacy Act of 1974); Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964; Chapter 39 of title 28 (independent counsel).

Section 231 Equitable Committee Staff Ratios: The ratio of majority party to minority party staff positions shall reflect the ratio of majority party to minority party Members of the House.

Section 232 Elimination of Certain Select Committees: Eliminates the Select Committees on Aging, Hunger, Narcotics and Children, Youth and Families.

Section 233 Application of Information Disclosure Requirements to Congress: Brings Congress under the Freedom of Information Act.

Section 234 Limitation on the Duration of Payments of Expenses of Former Speakers of the House of Representatives: Former Speakers are authorized three staff positions for no more than three years.

Section 235 Prohibition on Franked Mass Mailings by Members Outside their Congressional Districts.

Section 236 Requirement that Legislation Adjusting Pay for Members of Congress be Considered Separately.

Section 237 Legislative Branch Appropriations to be for One Year Only.

Section 238 One Attorney in the Office of the Parliamentarian to be Appointed Upon the Recommendation of the Minority Leader.

Section 239 Chairmanship of Committee on Standards of Official Conduct shall Rotate with each New Session.

Section 240 Rules of the House must be adopted by Individual Roll Call Votes.

ANALYSIS

I. STATEMENT OF THE PROBLEM

The Administrative operations of the House of Representatives are a direct by-product of the structure and culture that have developed over time. The institution has grown and developed under a majority party patronage system. The incentives and the rewards associated with that system clearly say "don't rock the boat", "keep members happy at any price", particularly the party elite. Any organization will face significant problems if its internal development is too far out of step with its size and needs. The greater the degree of difference between scope and operation needs and the development of its management systems, the greater is the probability for major problems. Our view is that this organization functions on an ad hoc basis, which makes it easy to blame problems on other people or levels in the organization.

The Institution is marked by the following:

A. Culture: poor performers are tolerated; managers avoid conflict; productivity and effectiveness are loosely defined; patronage.

B. Roles and Responsibilities: are not clearly defined; lack independent responsibility; lack accountability.

C. Planning: no formal planning process exists; no clear management goals and objectives.

D. Budget and Accounting System: the ad hoc budget process is only an "exercise"; accounting information available is often inaccurate or incomplete; the accounting system is undeveloped; very few internal controls are in place.

E. Organizational Control: a diffuse system with too many bosses; management control is often ineffective.

F. Communication: poor communication with members, particularly those in the minority; majority party dominates rather than by concurrent majority.

G. Performance Evaluations: ad hoc review with no standards, no goals by which to measure effectiveness; only positive feedback is given; little effort is made to improve performance.

II. GOALS OF ANY REFORM EFFORT

Planning and implementing any changes in the overall capabilities of an enterprise, in order to increase its effectiveness, requires a clear statement of goals. Rather than addressing organizational problems in a piecemeal manner, one must think about the organization as a whole.

Therefore the goals of this "new" Administrative structure should: be managerial under a participative-bipartisan style of leadership; promote increased accountability; have a decentralized system of responsibility with strong managers; professionally oriented; not patronage oriented.

Mr. RINALDO. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of the minority leader's substitute reform package, and I urge my colleagues on both sides of the aisle to adopt it.

At no time since I was first elected to the House 20 years ago have I seen the public so disgusted with the Federal Government. Back in the early 1970's, it was the executive branch that was under fire. Now, however, it is this institution with which the public is unhappy. Many of our constituents see us as completely out of touch with the serious problems they have to contend with—unemployment, the failure of businesses, the growing economic and social strains on families, and an American dream that seems increasingly out of reach for many working people. They look at this Congress, and they see an institution which has done virtually nothing about the Federal budget deficit, the need for better access to health care, or any of the other major issues that we were elected to confront and resolve.

For far too long, this House has operated under a system of perks and patronage that has tended to cushion Members from reality. The monopoly on power that has been enjoyed by one party in this House for almost four decades has enabled them to ignore any and all calls for changes in the way we do business. Accountable to no one, the majority leadership has let go of the reins of management and gone to sleep in the driver's seat.

The justifiable public outrage over the scandals involving the House bank and the embezzlement and drug trafficking that were allowed to take place at the House post office should provide a wake-up call. The public demands and expects to see real changes made in the way Congress operates.

The majority's reform plan is a step in the right direction, particularly with regard to the hiring of a qualified professional to handle the financial affairs of the House. We need to eliminate the system under which political proteges and cronies of the leadership have been permitted to build their own little empires.

The majority's plan does not go far enough, however, in eliminating the bloated bureaucracy that has developed in the House. The distinguished minority leader has offered an alternative that would eliminate highly compensated House officers whose functions should be handled by the new chief financial officer and the Clerk of the House. The minority leader's plan would get rid of excess committee staff and allocate staffing more equitably between the majority and minority. The explosion in the number of staffers, particularly on committees, has been justly criticized as contributing to the rapidly escalating cost of running Congress. Committee membership and staffing would also have to be in proportion to the ratio between the majority and minority in the House. The operation of the Rules Committee would be reformed, so that Members have the opportunity to actually read legislation before it is considered on the floor and to prevent the routine waiver of Budget Act restrictions on new spending.

We need to give the public back a legislative institution in which they can take pride. This is supposed to be the greatest legislative body in the world, and yet we appear to be powerless to get our own House in order. If we cannot even get rid of waste and abuse in our own operations, what hope do we have of eliminating the $400 billion Federal budget deficit? I urge the majority as well as my minority colleagues to support this sound and far-reaching plan to thoroughly clean House and restore the faith of the American people in their Representatives.

Mr. REED. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in support of House Resolution 423, House administrative reform, a proposal that will make long overdue changes to the way Congress operates.

This bill will create the position of Director of Nonlegislative and Financial Services to have operational and financial responsibility for such internal House services as the finance office, office furnishings, and records and registration. This legislation also establishes the Office of Inspector General to conduct periodic audits of financial operations of the House.

For my constituents in Rhode Island, today's actions may not seem particularly revolutionary: It is only sound logic to hire someone with significant accounting and managing experience to provide greater management and oversight of House operations.

My constituents also know something else: Discipline begins at home. If we as a Congress are going to have the discipline, strength and courage to tackle the difficult issues that face this country today—creating new jobs, reforming the health care system, providing college tuition assistance for middle-class families—Congress is going to have to get its own House in order first.

It will be a shame if such simple and essential reform does not receive the support from my colleagues on both sides of the aisle. It would be an even greater mistake to attempt partisan exploitation of the public's dismay with Congress as a whole. Such exploitation only sends a signal that the people's representatives in Congress are more concerned with playing politics than attending to the Nation's business.

It's not too late to take necessary steps to reform the Congress. But we must act today. I urge my colleagues to support this important reform package.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. MURTHA). All time has expired.

Pursuant to House Resolution 427, the previous question is ordered.

The question is on the amendment in the nature of a substitute offered by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MICHEL].

The question was taken; and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the yeas appeared to have it.

Mr. MICHEL. Mr. Speaker, on that I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—yeas 159, nays 254, not voting 21, as follows:

So the resolution was agreed to.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

REPORT ON RESOLUTION PROVIDING FOR CONSIDERATION OF H.R. 4364, NATIONAL AERONAUTICS AND SPACE ADMINISTRATION

Mr. MOAKLEY, from the Committee on Rules, submitted a privileged report (Rept. No. 102-497) on the resolution (H. Res. 432) providing for the consideration of the bill (H.R. 4364) to authorize appropriations to the National Aeronautics and Space Administration for research and development, space flight, control and data communications, communications, construction of facilities, research and program management, and inspector general, and for other purposes, which was referred to the House Calendar and ordered to be printed.

PRIVILEGES OF THE HOUSE—REQUIRING COUNSEL TO THE CLERK OF THE HOUSE RECUSE HIMSELF FROM LEGAL REQUESTS OF DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE REGARDING INVESTIGATION OF THE OFFICE OF POSTMASTER

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Speaker, I rise to a question of the privileges of the House, and I offer a privileged resolution (H. Res. 434) requiring the counsel to the Clerk of the House recuse himself from the any and all legal requests made by the Department of Justice concerning its investigation into the office of the postmaster, and ask for its immediate consideration.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the resolution.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

Whereas, the Department of Justice is conducting a criminal investigation into the activities of the Office of the House Postmaster; and

Whereas, the investigation of criminal conduct includes allegations of the sale of narcotics, the embezzlement of public funds, and obstruction of justice by employees and officers of the House; and

Whereas, allegations have been made publicly that officers of the House or employees may have engaged in obstructing justice by delaying or impeding an investigation by the Capitol police into alleged improprieties in the Office of the Postmaster; and

Whereas, public allegations have been made concerning conduct of the counsel to the Clerk of the House and the investigation by the Capitol police; and

Whereas, the Code of Conduct requires " * * * employee * * * shall conduct himself at all times in a matter which shall reflect creditably on the House of Representatives"; and

Whereas, the allegations of illegal activities and of obstruction of justice impugn the integrity of the House; and

Whereas, the counsel to the Clerk of the House or any employee or officer of the House should refrain from potential conflicts of interest; and

Whereas, the Clerk of the House is authorized to receive judicial writs, warrants and subpoenas and thereby be involved with the specifics of any legal proceedings including the investigation by the Department of Justice: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the House of Representatives directs the Clerk of the House to recuse his counsel from receiving, reviewing or drafting of any, and all, writs, warrants, subpoenas, and documents requested from or issued by the Department of Justice surrounding the legal proceedings on the criminal investigations of the Office of the Postmaster. The Clerk of House is further directed to instruct his counsel to refrain from participating in discussions with other employees or officers of the House with any matters with respect to the Department of Justice criminal investigation into the Office of the Postmaster.

□ 2040

The SPEAKER. The resolution constitutes a statement of privilege.

Mr. GEPHARDT. Mr. Speaker, I move to lay the resolution on the table.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. GEPHARDT] to lay the resolution on the table.

The question was taken; and the Speaker announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Speaker, on that I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—yeas 239, nays 170, not voting 25, as follows:

Mr. HUBBARD changed his vote from "yea" to "nay."

Mr. ALEXANDER and Mr. POSHARD changed their vote from "nay" to "yea."

So the motion to lay the resolution on the table was agreed to.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

REMOVAL OF NAME OF MEMBER AS COSPONSOR OF H.R. 4617

Mr. FAWELL. Mr. Speaker, as chief sponsor of the bill, H.R. 4617, I ask unanimous consent to have the name of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. PORTER], at his request, removed as a cosponsor of the bill, H.R. 4617.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. (Mr. SYNAR). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois?

There was no objection.

OLDER AMERICANS ACT AMENDMENTS OF 1992

Mr. GORDON. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Rules, I call up H.R. 425 and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

H. RES. 425

Resolved, That it shall be in order for the Speaker on Thursday, April 9, 1992, to entertain a motion to suspend the rules to dispose of the Senate amendment to the bill (H.R. 2967) to amend the Older Americans Act of 1965 to authorize appropriations for fiscal years 1992 through 1995; to authorize a 1993 National Conference on Aging; to amend the Native American Programs Act of 1974 to authorize appropriations for fiscal years 1992 through 1995; and for other purposes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. GORDON] is recognized for 1 hour.

Mr. GORDON. Mr. Speaker, during consideration of this resolution, all time yielded is for the purpose of debate only. At this time I yield the customary 30 minutes for the purpose of debate only to the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. QUILLEN]; and pending that, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, H.R. 425 is simple and straightforward. It authorizes the Speaker on Thursday, April 9, 1992, to entertain one motion to suspend the rules and consider the Senate amendment to H.R. 2967, the Older Americans Act.

Passage of H.R. 425 will allow for the expeditious consideration of the House amendment to the Senate amendment to H.R. 2967 which consists of compromise language developed by the House and Senate Committees of jurisdiction in lieu of a conference committee.

Mr. QUILLEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, as the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. GORDON] has stated, this rule authorizes another suspension day. The rule would allow the Older Americans Act to be brought up with the possibility of a House amendment that would modify the Social Security earnings test. Bringing this bill up under suspension, Mr. Speaker, would not allow the minority our motion to recommit. I believe this issue is too important to come up under suspension. I disagree with this procedure. However, it is something that the leadership has agreed on and, therefore, I will not oppose it.

Mr. Speaker, the version of the bill that will be brought to the floor today reflects the agreement worked out between Members of the House and Senate on the Older Americans Act in November of last year. H.R. 2967 authorizes older Americans programs through fiscal year 1995. It provides $2 billion in fiscal year 1992 for programs providing preventive health care for the elderly, increased services to poor and minority elderly; and training and counseling for those desiring to care for elderly family members in their own homes.

I do want to point out that the rule provides for a House amendment to the Senate amendment to the bill. It would improve Social Security benefits for working senior citizens by nearly doubling the retirement earnings test for persons age 65 through 69 from $10,200 under current law in 1992 to $20,000 in 1997. The amendment would also improve the benefits for widows age 80 and over who were under 65 when their husbands died or who were affected by the widow's limit.

Mr. Speaker, again, I disagree with the procedure under which this legislation is being brought to the floor but I will not oppose the rule.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. ARCHER], the ranking member of the Committee on Ways and Means.

Mr. ARCHER. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

Mr. Speaker, this is indeed a very unusual rule. We had a suspension day earlier this week and now we have a rule that provides for the suspension of one bill only. It further provides, not knowing what would be in the amendment, carte blanche authorization to add new language to the Senate bill. The Senate bill that came over has complete repeal of the earnings limitation, which I believe would be healthy for this country and very, very good for senior citizens; but now this new amendment that has been constructed, after the Rules Committee met, is put before us today without full debate, without amendment, without a motion to recommit, and on suspension.

There is significant controversy on the content of this bill as the new amendment changes it. I will be talking about that if we get to the substance of the bill; but in the meantime, I think it denies the House its rightful opportunity to fully debate this bill, debate the amendment, debate a motion to recommit, and fully understand what we are doing.

Mr. Speaker, I hope we will defeat this rule so that we can come back with open debate to fully discuss the merits of the items that are in this bill and have an opportunity to change them.

So Mr. Speaker, I urge a "no" vote on the rule.

Mr. GORDON. Mr. Speaker, for purposes of debate only, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. FORD].

Mr. FORD of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the rule which will permit us to continue a vital and important program which has served millions of senior citizens in this country—the Older Americans Act of 1965.

The act has meant nutrition for seniors in need and support services including legal assistance, housing assistance, and in-home care. The act has meant an opportunity for this Nation's senior citizens to live out their golden years in dignity.

Mr. Speaker, we must not turn our back on this critical program. Our delay imperils services this Nation's seniors depend on.

I urge my colleagues to vote in favor of the rule and give the House the opportunity to serve those who have given so much to this Nation—America's senior citizens.

Mr. QUILLEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GOODLING].

□ 2110

Mr. GOODLING. Mr. Speaker, like Chairman FORD, I take this time during the rule because I will be giving my 20 minutes to our ranking member on the Committee on Ways and Means, since the fight is with the Committee on Ways and Means and not with those of us who did our job on the Committee on Education and Labor.

But, Mr. Speaker, today we have an opportunity to reassure the aging community that our commitment to providing services to senior citizens is still as strong as ever.

For many months, we have been working on a House/Senate agreement on the Older Americans Act, which provides many important, beneficial services to senior citizens.

If you don't think seniors in your district appreciate this act, talk to them. Homebound seniors will tell you of the wonderful person who helps them get to the grocery store, or the doctor's office, or the person who brings them meals several times a day. They might talk about the congregate meals program or the activities they participate in at their local senior center. Others might tell you how the low-cost or free services provided through their local area agency on aging helped them with home repairs or something as simple as taking out their storm windows and putting in their screens in the Spring.

These services allow senior citizens to remain in their homes longer and enjoy continuing independence. They let them know they are still a vital part of their community.

Many of the changes outlined in the House/Senate agreement will improve and expand services to seniors. I am particularly pleased to see a provision requiring the commissioner to participate and provide leadership within the Federal Government regarding the development and implementation of a national community-based long-term care program for older individuals. As my colleagues know, I have a long-term care proposal and the main thrust of my proposal is to keep senior citizens in their homes and in their community as long as possible, partially by using programs supported by the Older Americans Act. Needless to say, I am delighted to see this provision.

One of the major changes in law contained in this agreement is not even related to the Older Americans Act. It is, however, very important, particularly to low-income senior citizens who must work to supplement their Social Security income. I am speaking, of course, of the change in the Social Security earnings test. Under the agreement worked out by the Ways and Means and Senate Finance Committees, by 1997, senior citizens will be able to earn up to $20,000 without having their Social Security income subject to an offset. This provision will provide many senior citizens with just cause for celebration.

In closing, I would be remiss if I did not mention the fine services provided by the Area Agencies on Aging in York, Adams, and Cumberland Counties in my congressional district. I have often telephoned their offices to see how I can best respond to a letter from a senior constituent requesting help. More often than not, I am told, "No problem. Give us the information. We can handle it."

Mr. Speaker, enactment of this agreement will help insure our Nation's senior citizens will continue to receive high-quality services from their local area agencies on aging. I urge its passage.

Mr. GORDON. Mr. Speaker, for purposes of debate only, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from California [Mr. PANETTA], the distinguished chairman of the Committee on the Budget.

Mr. PANETTA. Mr. Speaker, I normally do not rise in opposition to rules here. But when it involves the budget and it involves adding $7.3 billion to the deficit, I am obligated to rise in opposition to the rule and to the procedure proposed here in putting it on suspension.

I do not question the merits of the legislation, certainly with regard to the Older Americans Act, and even with regard to some of the benefit increases that are provided here with regard to senior citizens. But I am obligated to question whether or not we ought to provide these benefits without paying for them. To do this is to break faith not only with the budget agreement but with the pay-as-you-go requirement as well as our obligation to protect the Social Security trust fund.

This proposal violates the budget agreement. When we set the budget agreement in place, we put Social Security to the side, but we developed a point of order in the budget agreement that said we cannot raid the Social Security trust fund because our fear was that if you set Social Security aside then all kinds of efforts would be made to take money out of the fund. So we have a point of order.

Mr. Speaker, that point of order would be waived by this procedure by putting it on suspension. In addition to that, we are putting something on suspension that violates normally what we have on suspension. We normally provide bills on suspension that involve $1 million. So, we allow that to happen.

This is a $7.3 billion ticket here that we are putting on suspension.

Second, it violates the pay-as-you-go requirement.

The leadership on both sides has been very good about saying to this House that we ought not to move anything to the floor unless it is paid for. And every day there are chairmen here who face the challenge of trying to move legislation to the floor and finding ways to pay for it, whether it is unemployment insurance or unemployment compensation, whether it is health care, whether it is higher education.

The chairman of the Subcommittee on Higher Education fought strongly to try to find ways to pay for that bill so it could be brought to the floor.

There were issues related to hunger, the Mickey Leland hunger bill is being held in the Committee on Ways and Means because they are having a hard time finding ways to pay for it. In addition to that, we are looking at child welfare being held up, the jobs bill, trying to find ways to pay for that.

Right now as we speak, there is an effort to achieve $5.7 billion in savings on rescissions. That is going to involve a lot of pain in this institution as we try to find savings.

Are we going to say forget all of that, forget all of that effort and simply go ahead and add $7.3 billion to the deficit without worrying about how it is going to be paid for? What a terrible signal that sends to this institution, to the chairmen, to the committees and to the country.

Third, we have an obligation to protect the Social Security fund. The purpose of protecting the Social Security fund now is so that these working families who retire later on have some benefits. That is the purpose of the Social Security fund. And to suddenly rob those benefits and spend them now is to undercut the security of the Social Security trust fund itself.

Mr. TRAXLER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PANETTA. I yield briefly to the gentleman from Michigan, Mr. TRAXLER.

Mr. TRAXLER. I thank the chairman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, if I understand our procedure in connection with the Social Security fund, what we are doing is, we are borrowing from the fund to pay current expenses, we are putting IOU's in the cashbox, not money from Social Security taxes. We are borrowing the money to pay for the operation of Government. It's the President, the Congress, they take the Social Security funds, the taxes and apply them to operating the Government and an IOU is put in the trust fund and future generations of Americans after 2015 are not going to have the money there to pay their Social Security with or without this bill. The gentleman will agree with that, will he not?

Mr. PANETTA. The gentleman is correct.

Mr. TRAXLER. I thank the chairman.

Mr. PANETTA. The purpose for which we have fought time and time again when we passed the Social Security reforms, is to insure that those trust funds would be there. To do this not only violates the point of order, it violates the commitment we made to protect those funds.

My friends, there are a lot of lectures in this institution about the need to deal with the deficit, and there are a lot of proposals to try to deal with the deficit, whether it is a balanced-budget amendment, line item veto or other proposals. But there is only one way you deal with the deficit: It is to make the tough choices. I know this is a tough choice, I know this is a tough vote. We spend a lot of time, we have spent a lot of time today talking about reforms, talking about perks, talking about management, but there is only one signal that the American people really care about, and that is whether or not we have the courage to make the tough choices.

Please make the right choice by voting against this rule. It is right for the budget, it is right for the deficit, and it is right for all of the American citizens both young and old.

Mr. QUILLEN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3½ minutes to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. HASTERT].

Mr. HASTERT. I thank the gentleman from Tennessee for yielding this time to me.

Mr. Speaker, it is interesting tonight to sit and listen to the arguments on both sides of the aisle. Sometimes I think roles must be reversed. Let me tell you a couple of things.

First of all, I have been a proponent of the repeal of the earnings test for 4½ years, and many people, many years before that, have worked in this chamber on that. I have always said that I was willing to sit down with the Committee on Ways and Means and the chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means and work out the differences, not for pure repeal but there has to be a middle ground.

I have done that. Let me tell you a couple of things about what this bill does. This bill doubles the earnings limit on Social Security from $10,000 to $20,000.

It is not greens fees for the rich. It is not something for doctors who are very, very wealthy. It is for working-class people, working-class seniors, that have to work to make a living, that have not had the luxuries over their life of raising a family by the sweat of their brow. They did not have the ability to make pensions or, maybe, investments, or all those things that many people enjoy once they reach age 65. People have to work in McDonald's and Sears & Roebuck, and they have to work down at the corner flower shop to make things go for themselves in today's economy.

So what we do here is we raise, we double, the limit on the earnings test for working people. The second thing we do is, we take all the revenue that is created by this, the increase in income taxes, the increase in FICA taxes and any other taxes, and we put them back in the trust fund, and I say to my colleagues, "That's the first time to my knowledge that that's been done."

So, the thing that we are violating pay-go, that we are violating the agreement, just does not wash.

The third thing that we do is, we come in with a dynamic study and say, "If this does pay for itself, the Treasury will report back to us every year for the next 5 years and tell us if it makes money or, heaven forbid, if it doesn't make money."

But I believe it will create money. It will create wealth in this country.

The third thing it will do is it will help people who need the help, people who right now are earning $10,000, and they get $7,000 in Social Security, and all of a sudden they are up against the envelope of earnings, and, once they go over that $10,200, all of a sudden they are hit with a marginal tax because they are penalized $1 out of every $3 of Social Security they get. They are penalized at a marginal tax rate of 56 percent, 56 percent, twice the amount that millionaires pay.

My colleagues, the earnings test is not a repeal. It is an increase to the earnings test. It is something that is needed. It is something that is needed today. It is something that is needed by our senior citizens, and I ask that we have our colleagues' support to move this legislation so that we move it now, and let us not wait any longer.

Mr. Speaker, we have reached a milestone in the evolution of our efforts to give desperately needed tax relief to working seniors by liberalizing the Social Security earnings limit. Never have we been so close to achieving freedom to work for older Americans.

The need for pro-growth economic policies is more important now than ever. We need to encourage, not discourage, older Americans who want to work and contribute to society now if we want to see the economy begin expanding again. Raising the limit on the earnings test is one of the most critical steps Congress needs to take to jump start the economy, because continued penalizing of seniors who need to work is simply unsound economic policy and unfair social policy.

The Social Security earnings test is a Depression-era relic that discriminates against senior citizens who wish to work after they reach retirement age and begin to receive Social Security benefits. Under earnings test limits for 1992, seniors aged 65 to 69 who make more than $10,200 a year lose $1 in Social Security benefits for every $3 they earn over that limit. For a senior earning only $10,000 a year, that will mean an effective 56-percent marginal tax rate—nearly twice that of millionaires. That is just not fair.

No other demographic group in the country is so blatantly discriminated against; no other group faces such obstacles when they attempt to become productive and financially self-reliant.

We don't reduce Social Security benefits for those seniors receiving unearned interest or dividend income. Why should we penalize those seniors who want, or more important, who need—to remain in the work force to supplement their income?

We as a nation can no longer afford to inhibit an entire group of people from remaining active in the labor force. The goal of remaining competitive in the global market demands that we reform our labor laws to meet the challenges of the future. Liberalizing the antiquated and discriminatory Social Security earnings test is one very large step American can take to achieve this.

Thank you, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. EMERSON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HASTERT. I yield to the gentleman from Missouri.

Mr. EMERSON. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. HASTERT] for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, the gentleman has been a premier leader in the House on the subject, and I want to associate myself with his remarks.

Mr. GORDON. Mr. Speaker, for the purposes of debate only, I yield 4 minutes to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI], the distinguished chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means.

Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI. Mr. Speaker, there comes a time in every debate where we are watching the proverbial mother-in-law ride over the cliff with the brandnew Cadillac. I think we are at that point here. Either we are going to increase the deficit by $28 billion, as proposed by the Senate, or we are going to increase the deficit by $7.3 billion. That is what the negotiations with the leaders of the opposition, or the leaders of the minority, surrounding this bill have been about.

On three separate occasions, I have offered a bill which addressed the points that the gentleman from California [Mr. PANETTA] makes. I have offered bills which would have paid for the liberalization of the retirement test. There are at least two ways to finance these benefits. One, we could raise payroll taxes on working Americans; that would pay for the provision of this program, or we could raise taxes on senior citizens by taxing their Social Security benefits, and that would pay for the program. The alternative we are debating here is whether we are going to accept a $7 billion hit or a $28 billion hit.

Now what we are trying to do here, in my opinion, is work out a compromise with those proponents of the earnings test of limitation who are satisfied with raising the level to $20,000 over a 5-year period for our senior citizens. The biggest argument made here is not over the retirement test but is whether or not we are going to provide $3 billion for poor widows at the age of 80. That is what the argument here is. The Senate amendment does nothing for elderly widows. The issue here is not whether or not we can agree on a $20,000 limitation; it is whether or not we are going to give poor widows $3 billion.

There is nobody in this Chamber, I repeat, nobody in this Chamber, that can compare their record to mine concerning efforts to bring balance to the Federal budget. The Committee on Ways and Means for the last 12 years, as long as I have been the chairman, has paid for every bill that it has reported. That is why, when the Budget Act took place in 1990, I was thrilled that George Bush recanted on his new-taxes pledge, his "Read my lips" pledge. We simply have to raise money if we are going to provide services for people of this country.

So, Mr. Speaker, we are trying to satisfy the demands of senior citizens who want a more liberal program, that want to be able to earn more money.

I say to my colleagues that it is not my President who made that pledge. It is not my President that is worried about a $28 billion hit if what we are proposing tonight fails. It is the minority's President, and, if they push us too far, we will give them the $28 billion hit. As a matter of fact, we will also go the full way on helping widows. We will give widows a full $5 billion benefit increase, and we will give them a $33 billion hit.

As far as I am concerned, I have negotiated honorably with Members on the other side, and I think those gentlemen and ladies that I have negotiated with are honorable. But we had better figure out how we are going to get together to run this country. The American people out there are getting darned tired of us sitting here and bickering about every nickel and every dime, about the check kiting scandal, but not about whether we are servicing our people.

Let us get off our duffs here and take care of senior citizens. We must do, in my opinion, what is necessary to compromise, and that is what this legislation stands for: Compromise.

Mr. QUILLEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. BALLENGER].

Mr. BALLENGER. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. QUILLEN] for yielding this time to me, and let me just say to start with that I think bringing this bill under suspension is a lousy way to go about it. But lifting the earnings test, in my considered opinion, is probably one of the greatest things we can do for people in this country.

Mr. Speaker, it is unfair for people who have to try to earn a living to live under this rule. Nobody can live a worthwhile life with their Social Security, and so they have got to try to earn money somewhere else.

I do not know how many of my colleagues know this, but I was in the manufacturing business for 50 years so far—40 years; let us put it that way—and every year that I have been in business I have had people come to me and say, "I'd like to continue to work this year, but I can't stand the additional taxes that I am going to have to pay," and just this last year in my own company I had an individual who had already reached 65 and wanted to continue to work, but he says, "Why should I pay 56 percent? I'll come back and see you next year, and, if you like it, if you like me, I'd love to have you back."

I went through a cafeteria line in Hickory, NC, and there were four little old ladies standing by the cafeteria line, and I just brought this up, this earnings test, to those ladies, and they said, "Please, can you get rid of it? We can possibly work until maybe July, August, or September, and then we've got to quit, and we can't live off of what Social Security pays us. We need to be allowed to work, and yet everything we earn is going to be charged a 56 percent tax."

As my colleagues know, this is absolute destruction to the best working people that we have got in this country today. The best trained workers we have got are the elderly, and, if they want to work, they should be allowed to work.

We have set up a system in this country today that is destructive, completely destructive, of people that would like to work for a living after they reach the age of 65, and this estimated cost in my opinion is an absolute joke.

If we sat down and figured it out, we do not do anything in this place except examine things in a static situation. GAO cannot figure out anything except how much it is going to cost, and we do something. They do not look on the other side of it and the fact that the number of people that would love to work, that would continue to work, and they will pay income taxes, more income taxes. They will pay more Social Security taxes, and they will be allowed to live the life that they can afford.

□ 2130

What we have got now is a very destructive system as far as the elderly are concerned, and I think we should allow the people that are the best qualified people in this country to continue to work.

Mr. COLEMAN of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BALLENGER. I yield to the gentleman from Missouri.

Mr. COLEMAN of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I want to rise in support of the conference report. I, too, have been a supporter of outright appeal. This certainly is a step in the right direction. I think it is very appropriate we do this on the Older Americans Act.

Mr. Speaker, I commend the statement of the gentleman from North Carolina.

Mr. Speaker, I am disappointed we do not have before us, as part of this reauthorization of the Older Americans Act, language to outright repeal the Social Security earnings test. My commitment to repeal notwithstanding, I am pleased that Congress is at least acting to dramatically ease the burden of this unfair income restriction.

Under current law, those persons between 65 and 69 years of age and working can earn only $10,200 and still receive their full Social Security benefits. Because of the earnings test, for every $3 a senior citizen earns over that amount, his or her Social Security benefits are reduced by $1—in effect, seniors still working are subject to a surtax of 33 percent. According to some sources, this earnings surtax, combined with Federal, State, local, and other Social Security taxes can result in a marginal tax rate of some 70 percent for those seniors still in the work force. This is the highest marginal tax rate paid in America. And it is being paid by senior citizens.

The language before us will nearly double the amount senior citizens ages 65 through 69 can earn without penalty, raising the limitation from the current $10,200 to $20,000 in 1997. While I would have preferred complete elimination of the earnings limitation, this certainly is a positive step.

Frankly, I believe it outrageous that our current system penalizes older Americans who want to continue to work past the age of 65, and I will continue to fight, in spite of this effort to ease the earnings test, for outright repeal. Federal law that discourages any segment of our society able and willing to take an active and productive role in the workplace is discriminatory and therefore objectionable. In the case of the earnings test, Federal law is also seriously out of step with the economic realities that confront older Americans when the bills come due every month. Paying for the basic necessities of life—food, electricity, transportation, is a struggle for many seniors, not to mention the economic devastation many face as a result of unanticipated illness and astronomical health care costs.

Some have argued that a repeal of the surtax will result in a revenue loss to the Treasury. Those projections, however, do not take into account the fact that some 700,000 seniors would enter the work force if the unfair limit were repealed. These seniors would earn additional money and generate billions of dollars worth of goods and services, and would pay additional taxes—directly into the Social Security trust fund.

These programs are of vital importance to the well being of America's seniors, providing, in addition to nutrition, social services, and job opportunities, the invaluable benefits of dignity and independence. Our goal in the House, throughout the reauthorization process, has been to ensure that America's older citizens continue to be well served by the Older Americans Act. The language to modify the Social Security earnings test is a welcome addition.

Again, I urge my colleagues to support this effort.

Mr. BALLENGER. Mr. Speaker, reclaiming my time, if I had the choice I would love to be able to do away with the whole test. But you have to be able to take what you can get in this place, and I am willing to take what I can get.

Mr. GORDON. Mr. Speaker, for purposes of debate only, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from California [Mr. MARTINEZ].

Mr. MARTINEZ. Mr. Speaker, I listened to the frustration of the gentleman from California [Mr. PANETTA], and there is no greater frustration I feel than to have a bill passed out of the House on September 12 with 385 votes in favor and none against, and because on the other side they have no germaneness rule, to take and have an amendment that has nothing to do with the basic thrust of the bill, the Older Americans Act, which, incidentally, has in its reauthorization contained many improvements that are really desperately needed by the seniors of our country.

To take this and do this was bad enough in itself. But then to bring it back over here to ask for the people who have jurisdiction over that particular issue to try to work out a compromise, as the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI] has said, whether from a $28 billion deficit to a $7.3 billion deficit, I think is a great tribute to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI] to be able to do that.

The point is the authorization ran out last year, last September. Here we are still trying to get an older Americans' bill out.

When are we going to get it out? Or are we going to get it out at all? If we talk about, as the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI] said, the frustrations across this country of us not being able to do our business, this is a good example of it. We have not been able to do the business of the seniors because of this amendment that is stuck on there by the other side.

Mr. Speaker, I am for the rule because the rule at least moves us forward. The rule at least moves us to a point where we can get the reauthorization of the Older Americans Act, which is desperately needed.

The other issue is something that our committee and our jurisdiction had nothing to do with. But in my personal opinion, I share the belief that many do, that the cap should be raised. The cap has not been raised in a long time. The fact is that a lot of these people paid into this premium, thinking at some point in time they were going to receive a benefit. Then they were told that that amount of money that would be received would only be a subsidy to anything they provided for themselves.

Mr. Speaker, let me tell Members something. There are a lot of poor people in this country living off of a pittance they are getting. They are not working and are not able to make it. Those that are able to find employment and go ahead and work and then have what we intended it to be, a subsidy, the Social Security be a subsidy, then they are penalized if they make over a certain amount.

Mr. Speaker, I am sure that no one in this country believes that anybody making $20,000 is living in grand style, even with that which they get from Social Security. I really believe it is time to move forward and raise the cap and at least move this bill to the point where we can get the Older Americans Act reauthorized.

Mr. QUILLEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Arizona [Mr. RHODES].

Mr. RHODES. Mr. Speaker, a lot of people have worked very hard to get us to the point where we are tonight, where we can actually take a meaningful vote on the Social Security earnings limitation. But two Members definitely deserve to be singled out, the two gentlemen from Illinois, the chairman of the Ways and Means Committee [Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI], and the gentleman from suburban Chicago [Mr. HASTERT], who crafted, put together, the compromise that we are here on.

Mr. Speaker, there are 277 Members of this body who in the course of last year have recognized the need for us to deal with this anachronism and have cosponsored legislation for us to do so. The legislation we are dealing with here tonight is not what we cosponsored, but it is as good as we can get. And it is good.

Mr. Speaker, I do not want to deal too much with the implications of raising the limitation to $20,000 because I think there is an even more important element in this bill. We can, by the passage of this legislation, force the green eye-shade people who work in this Government, your green eyeshade people in CBO and our green eyeshade people in OMB, to look at the way the world really works.

Mr. Speaker, they do not realize, they do not believe, that if people work, they contribute to the economy. They do not realize and they do not believe that if people work they pay taxes. They do not realize and do not believe that contributing to the economy and paying taxes raises revenues for the United States.

Mr. Speaker, this legislation forces them to look at the world in the way it works. We say to them: We are raising this earnings limitation, and every dime in extra revenue to the Internal Revenue Service that is raised as a virtue of this legislation goes into the trust fund and has to be accounted for to the Congress, and you have to conduct a study. You have to determine by a study what the effects on a change in human behavior will be if you let people work and what the effect will be on our economy and what the effects will be upon revenues to the United States if you just let them go and just let them work.

Mr. Speaker, put your imaginative mind to work. Think about how we can change the way we do business around here, if we can get the green eyeshades to stop looking at photographs and start looking at moving pictures; to stop looking at things as they were and start looking at things as they can be.

Mr. FRANK of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RHODES. I am happy to yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. FRANK of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I am inclined to agree with the gentleman from Arizona [Mr. RHODES]. Is the gentleman telling us that OMB should not be given a lot of deference in its estimates of things around here?

Mr. RHODES. Mr. Speaker, reclaiming my time, I believe I said there were green eyeshades on both parts.

Mr. GORDON. Mr. Speaker, for purposes of debate only, I yield 4 minutes to the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. SLATTERY].

Mr. SLATTERY. Mr. Speaker, I do not often rise in opposition to rules, but this evening I find myself in the position where I believe I have to. The reason I say this is because we are clearly violating the budget agreement that we entered into several years ago.

This body just several weeks ago voted not to tear down the walls in the budget agreement. I joined the majority of this body in taking that vote. I am glad we did that.

It is very easy for us to sit here this evening and splash out $7½ billion on senior citizens in this country. There are many provisions of this bill that I like. I think some things need to be done to deal with needy widows in this country and some adjustments perhaps need to be made in the earnings test.

But I believe as the chairman of the Committee on the Budget has eloquently stated earlier this evening, that we have to make choices. We have to figure out how we are going to pay for these changes.

Mr. Speaker, there is no one from OMB, there is no one from CBO, that tells us that these changes will not in fact increase the deficit.

So the question before us tonight is a very simple one: Are we going to stick to the agreement and say that we are going to pay as we go as we have agreed to, or are we going to set that agreement aside because we are talking about senior citizens?

Mr. Speaker, let me just share something with my colleagues. During the 1980's, do you know how many times we raised Social Security taxes in this country? Keep in mind these taxes hit that younger worker that is going to McDonald's, and we tax that person's first dollar of income. Do you know how many times we raised the Social Security tax?

I went back and checked today. We raised the amount of taxable earnings subject to Social Security tax during the 1980's 11 times. Eleven times!

□ 2140

We did it every year, my friends. And then do my colleagues know what we did with the Social Security tax rate? We raised that seven times, seven times. We increased the Social Security tax rate 20 percent during the 1980's.

These are the taxes, my friends, that hit middle income America, hit the working poor every day all across this country.

For some reason we seem to ignore that. We do not want to acknowledge that the $7.3 billion that we are about to splash out on 60,000 senior citizens in this country is coming out of the pockets of McDonald's workers and young Americans.

I am just suggesting to my friends here this evening that we should find the courage, once in a while around here, to pay the bills.

I know how politically popular it is to just go ahead and spend more money, splash it out there as we leave town for the Easter recess or Passover recess. I know that is very popular. But for goodness' sake, let us stick to the budget agreement that we have entered into. Let us pay the bills.

I would just say to the chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means, I appreciate what he did. The other body passed on a voice vote, a voice vote, a $27 billion change in our Social Security laws. And we wonder why the American public is upset with us.

That is why they are upset with us, because they do those kinds of ridiculous things on a voice vote. And we are doing it here this evening on suspension.

As far as I am concerned, we have a choice to make this evening. It is a very simple one. Are we going to continue this fundamentally immoral fiscal policy of spend and borrow or are we going to say no? I hope we find the courage to do what is right and say "no" until we find a way to pay for the changes.

I urge my colleagues to say "no."

Mr. QUILLEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. ARMEY].

Mr. ARMEY. Mr. Speaker, I am fond of pointing out to my seniors that they have a great relationship with their children and a genuine affection because they and their grandchildren have a common enemy. The amendment that is made in order by this rule reflects that common enemy. It is our responsibility to not make mistakes. And for us to deal with this subject tonight, dealing with our senior citizens and their grandchildren with no more knowledge than we have about this deal is a mistake.

This is not the right time. This deal, irrespective of what it does to the Older Americans Act which has laid here since last February, and how many of my colleagues remember what was in it, now perpetuates an unjust, inequitable treatment of seniors by this rule and inevitably increases the deficit and taxes on our children. This rule gives us what is conservatively, and most often by CBO incorrectly, underestimated increases in the deficit of at least $7 billion, the largest piece of which is alleged to give benefits to poor widows that they do not now have. That is not true.

Poor widows today get the benefits they would get under this bill currently, under SSI, at no tax to the Social Security trust fund.

What this thing will do is to give those same benefits to all widows at the expense of the trust fund.

If we pass this rule, we are putting ourselves in a position where we must make a vote that will be a mistake. Either we are going to vote to perpetuate injustice to our seniors, we are going to vote against a bill that would end that injustice to our seniors, we are going to vote to increase the deficit, we are going to vote to increase taxes on the grandchildren of those seniors, or we are going to vote to redefine Social Security from a benefits program to a means-tested entitlement program. That is what it was not intended to do.

I say vote "no," let us save ourselves the embarrassment.

Mr. GORDON. Mr. Speaker, for the purposes of debate only, I yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from Ohio [Ms. OAKAR].

Ms. OAKAR. Mr. Speaker, I intended to use this time to talk about a bill that I am pleased to say, after 11 years of working on it, the Elderly Abuse bill, is in the Elder Americans Act.

I want to thank the gentleman from California [Mr. MARTINEZ] for passing that bill. There are 1.5 million elderly who are abused, and we worked very hard on that.

But I will be darned if I am going to sit here and listen to the Members who are saying that when I correct inequities toward women, somehow we cannot afford it.

I want to tell my colleagues, and I testified yesterday before the committee of the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. JACOBS], the Social Security system unintentionally, nonmaliciously discriminates against every woman in America, and that includes widows.

Now, I thought last year we took Social Security off budget. So you fellows who say we are contributing to the deficit when we are spending the money within that trust fund that is $376 billion in surplus on inequities toward women and 2 out of 3 people who are on Social Security are women, we should really, let us view it as a pay-as-you-go.

Spend the money that is in surplus. And what we are doing is spending a few billion to correct an inequity. We give those women more spending power. That will regenerate the trust fund. They are going to spend the money and create new jobs.

So I want to tell my colleagues something, it is not just widows who are discriminated against. What about the people who have their pensions offset because they are a public employee and see Social Security reduced? Who do we think they are? Women.

Vote for the rule. It is the right thing to do.

Mr. QUILLEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GEKAS].

Mr. GEKAS. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me.

Eventually we are going to be passing this piece of legislation. There will not be very many negative votes when the final bill comes up for final consideration.

When it does, there will be many benefits conferred on our senior citizens, which we owe to them and which they expect, and that is right to do.

Among those provisions is one that is very near and dear to my heart and grew out of an incident that occurred in my district where the spectacle of a 90-year-old lady, who was being forcibly evicted from her residence was cast across the Nation on evening television and in newspapers and was horrible to contemplate.

One of the features for which I received a tremendous amount of help from the gentleman from California [Mr. MARTINEZ] and the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. KILDEE] and the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GOODLING] would take a giant step toward preventing forever that horrible spectacle of an elderly person being forcibly evicted from one's residence.

That is the kind of provision which will compel all of us in the final analysis to vote in favor of the reauthorization of the Older Americans Act, notwithstanding the argument and debate that we will have and will continue to have on the money portion of this legislation.

Mr. GORDON. Mr. Speaker, for purposes of debate only, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. PENNY].

Mr. PENNY. Mr. Speaker, columnist Robert Samuelson this week describes "The dilemma of democracy as  the hard tasks  to maintain a crude balance between popular pressures and  national interest." This describes our dilemma today as we consider the Senate amendments to the Older Americans Act.

When the House took up the Older Americans Act last year, I supported the reauthorization wholeheartedly. The programs in this act are programs that touch people's lives directly and do much to enhance the status of our senior citizens.

The Senate added to the bill a highly popular provision that would totally eliminate the so-called Social Security earnings test for retirement benefits. While I have favored a liberalization of the earnings test—as ultimately agreed to by the conferees—my support has always been contingent on honest financing of the provision.

That is not the case. This provision—costing $7 billion over 5 years—is not paid for. Why should we accept this provision with a coy wink at the budget act when we have asked other equally worthy groups to wait? I can't believe that those older Americans who would benefit from the liberalization provision would want to pass on the payment for this benefit to their grandchildren.

So, we must make a choice—perhaps an unpopular choice. But I believe it is in the interest of all Americans to vote against the amendments unless or until they are paid for.

□ 2150

Mr. QUILLEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. BATEMAN].

Mr. BATEMAN. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me the time.

I do not frequent the well of the House often, Mr. Speaker, and I do so with great reluctance tonight. I do it more in sorrow than in anger, but not a very large difference between the two. I am genuinely offended by how we come to be in the posture we are in on this late hour on the last day before recess, dealing with an amendment to a bill passed unanimously in this House last year, because contending forces have come together and put together some kind of an arrangement, the real nature of which I know not and the Members know not, but this is the opportunity by which that arrangement gets tacked into something that has unanimous support in this House to do. That offends me.

If people believe that this subject matter is so good, why can they not bring it from the committee as a bill and let me and others make our choice as to whether or not it is good? Do not cobble things together, seizing strategic moments, as we do repeatedly in this body, to the detriment of this body so continually.

We would not need to pass this rule suspending the rules if we were not violating the budget summit agreement. There would be no occasion for doing that which we are asked to do if that were not the case. There would be no occasion to do it if we were not violating the pay-as-you-go provisions. That is the very reason we are asked to vote for this rule, to suspend the rules. Why else would they dare to do such a thing when, by nature, putting it on a suspension calendar, it also calls for a two-thirds majority?

Do not cobble together for political pandering what you are cobbling together without giving me and all the Members of this House the opportunity to deliberate on the merits of what is being done. Let it stand on its own footing. Do not take advantage in this cheap and shoddy way that they are going about doing this, even if it needs to be done.

The distinguished chairman on the Committee on Ways and Means, and I thank him, saves us apparently at least $19 billion by what he describes as a compromise. Well, thanks a lot. But he is still admitting $7.3 billion of additional deficit that he has not told us how it will be financed.

I can go and look my senior citizens in the eye and say to them, "Would you rather have a little bit more in the earnings test, even if it meant that your children and grandchildren will be deprived of their Social Security benefits when they reach your age?" I think they would agree with me that we ought to defeat this rule.

Mr. GORDON. Mr. Speaker, for purposes of debate only, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. PEASE].

Mr. PEASE. Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to the rule and in opposition to the motion, if it comes to that. I oppose the rule because of the reasons you have heard.

Normally we limit suspensions around here to maybe $1 million, maybe $100 million, but $7.3 billion? I don't think we have ever done that before on a suspension in the 16 years that I have been here.

On the substance, this is painted as an aid to hard-working low income people who do not make much on Social Security and have to work. Baloney. Do not believe that. Of those people in this country on Social Security earning below $15,000 a year, if those are the people we would consider needy, only 1 in 20, 1 in 20, has earnings above the exempt amount.

On the other hand, if the earnings limit is raised to $20,000, as this measure would do, 50 percent of the net benefits would go to families with incomes above $42,000 a year.

We should not kid ourselves; this is not a measure to help poor, struggling working-class people who have retired and are collecting modest Social Security benefits. Most of the benefit of this proposal will go to people earning over $42,000 a year, and to do that we will put the Social Security trust fund $7.3 billion in debt and raise that money eventually from the backs of middle-income people and low-income people, sons and daughters and grandchildren of ordinary people so those at the high end can get this benefit.

I think it is unconscionable to do this, to follow this procedure. I think it is unconscionable to do this as a matter of policy.

Mr. QUILLEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. GILMAN].

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to rise in support of the rule for the Senate amendments to the Older Americans Act Amendments of 1991.

The House Senate agreement contains several significant provisions of importance to our seniors. In particular, I draw attention of my colleagues to the importance of the provisions providing preventive health care for our elderly. Our Nation continues to be burdened by preventable illness, injury and disability. Health promotion and disease prevention offer the opportunity to contain health care costs, to prevent the premature onset of disease and disability, and to help all Americans achieve healthier, more productive lives.

Additionally, the Senate amendments contain another vital provision, an increase in the Social Security earnings test cap from $10,200 to $20,000. Currently seniors lose $1 for every $3 which they earn over the income cap.

I was pleased to have introduced a measure which will provide all of these services. My bill, the Comprehensive Preventive Health Care Act of 1992 (H.R. 4092) provides periodic health exams, screenings and services under the Medicare program, the Federal Employees Health Insurance Program, the Department of Veterans Affairs Medical System, and through a demonstration project involving 50 of our Nations Health Clinics. I was therefore gratified that this compromise version of the Older Americans Act contains preventive health care.

Additionally, and even more significantly, the Senate amendments contain a particularly vital provision, an increase in the Social Security earnings test cap from $10,200 to $20,000. Currently senior citizens lose $1 for every $3 which they earn over the income cap. While that was an improvement over the previous 1:2 reduction, that present reduction still translates into a draconian tax rate of 33 percent upon our Nation's seniors * * * a tax rate that our seniors are little able to afford.

Our seniors already bear too heavy a financial burden. This coupled with the fact that seniors have continually stressed their desire and need to return to work underscores the need to revise and repeal the anachronistic earnings test.

Our Nation's senior citizens are highly productive, skilled, knowledgeable, reliable and eager to work, at a time that our Nation is experiencing a shortage of workers in many industries; shortages which our seniors can help to alleviate.

Furthermore, today's labor situation is significantly different from the industrial society of the early 20th century. In particular, our seniors are able to meet the increasing demand for service oriented workers, and they enjoy working.

Raising the earnings test cap to $20,000 will remove the disincentive forced upon our Nation's seniors to return to the workforce. Furthermore, this amendment will provide many benefits to our Nation such as increased tax revenues, and alleviating the depression and loneliness that often accompanies the later years in one's life.

Moreover, I would like to note a study prepared by the National Center for Policy Analysis and the Institute for Policy Innovation which finds that as the earnings limit is increased, net Federal Revenue also increases. Allowing seniors to return to work would reduce not increase the Federal budget deficit.

With well over 200 Members of Congress currently in favor of revising the earnings test, we have the opportunity and the moral obligation to accept the Senate amendments and thereby helping our Nation's seniors.

Finally, this measure includes a requirement that the administration convene a White House Conference on Aging in 1993 to examine the important and difficult issues confronting our Nation's elderly.

Accordingly, I urge my colleagues to support these Older American amendments.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. (Mr. KLECZKA). The gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. QUILLEN] has 5 minutes remaining, and the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. GORDON] has 6 minutes remaining.

Mr. GORDON. Mr. Speaker, for purposes of debate only, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. FRANK].

Mr. FRANK of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me.

Mr. Speaker, I am for this bill. I was going to follow the advice of my friend, the gentleman from Minnesota, and practice my coy wink, but it is hard to do with contact lenses.

I am not a great friend of the budget agreement. I have often found myself in disagreement with CBO and OMB.

For instance, particularly, say, OMB, when we wanted to take some more money out of the unemployment compensation trust fund, because we had some money in there, and pay unemployment compensation to people who need it, and many of you argued that that would be for the economy, I thought that was a good thing to do.

The same reasoning applies to this bill. I am going to vote for it. I do think we have a surplus in the Social Security trust fund and it would be a good thing to get this money out to people.

I do want to remind my friends that disregard of the OMB view of the budget agreement is not a cold water tap that can be turned on and off.

□ 2200

I am for the bill. I am voting for it. I am a cosponsor. I think older people who go out and work deserve consideration.

But they are not the only people in this country who deserve consideration, and those who vote with me today in favor of needy older people, in favor of this good proposal, in favor of the good work that was done on the Older Americans Act, I will be fascinated when they get up to explain why the same logic does not apply when we deal with unemployment compensation, and when we deal with other social needs. I hope we are not going to be establishing by this vote a hierarchy of needy elderly who get help, and the needy who are unemployed get the back of our hands. If we are going to say to the green eyeshades that we have a superior public policy sense when we take into account the overall economic effect, let us not let it be confined to one particular group.

I think this is fair. I think it is good for society and good for the economy. But I also think there ought to be some minimum consistency in what we do.

And I must say to some of my friends on the other side, their advocacy of this bill seems to be at variance with their opposition to bills that are similarly structured. I am for this, but I am for the other analogs as well.

Mr. QUILLEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from California [Mr. CUNNINGHAM].

Mr. CUNNINGHAM. Mr. Speaker, some people call it the Older Americans Act, some people call it senior citizens. Back in San Diego we call it chronologically gifted folks. But however you put it, I would hate to have someone tell me when I reach 65 that I am no longer productive.

And they pay a Social Security tax when they work like we do, they get taxed on their actual Social Security check, and then are either taxed on $1 to $3 or $1 to $2 based on how much they make all the way up to $9,700.

Senior citizens actually improve the quality of life. Many of them contribute to their children's education and their grandchildren's education. They pay into the general fund. When they work they actually help pay for some of the original Social Security dollars that they are getting, so the drain on the general fund or the tax burden is not as high I think as indicated.

I am going to support removing the earnings test, and I would like to remove all the earnings tests if it was possible.

Mr. GORDON. Mr. Speaker, for purposes of debate only, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Connecticut [Ms. DELAURO].

Ms. DELAURO. Mr. Speaker, I rise tonight, proud of the work we have done here to help our Nation's seniors, and committed to seeing this bill pass the House.

I see the seniors of Connecticut every week, I hear them talk about their concerns, about the difficulty of living on fixed incomes, about the strains this recession places on them, and about the soaring costs of prescription drugs and health care that they cope with daily.

These are people who deserve our help and respect. They have made great contributions to this country and have brought us victorious through two world wars and the cold war.

This bill helps hard-working, productive seniors—people who are struggling to survive. In an effort that is long overdue, this bill modifies the so-called earnings test, which has for so many years penalized seniors who have to continue to work to earn a living.

These are not people with comfortable retirements or easy lives. These are people who scrimp every month to make ends meet. People who often can't afford to fill the expensive prescriptions that might keep them healthy. By modifying the earnings test, we let seniors keep the money they work so hard for, instead of penalizing earnings over $10,000.

This bill also helps the poorest group of seniors—widows over 80—through a modest increase in their Social Security benefits. That small amount of money will make a large difference to many elderly women living on the margins.

Mr. Speaker, we ought to measure ourselves as a nation by how we treat our senior citizens. This bill will go a long way toward proving how much we care for those who have cared so much for us. Vote to pass the rule, and vote to pass the conference report on the Older Americans Act.

Mr. QUILLEN. Mr. Speaker, we all know that we have to do something for our elderly citizens. Actually longevity is increasing for our citizens throughout the country. This is a good bill and I favor eliminating the earnings limitation altogether. I think it is sad indeed when a husband died before his spouse reaches 65 and now she is 80, and we cannot lend a helping hand.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. RITTER].

Mr. RITTER. Mr. Speaker, this bill is about putting Americans to work. That is what it is about, putting people over 65, who are not millionaires, to work. On behalf of whom? On behalf of themselves and their families and the United States of America. These are highly productive, often extremely skilled people who we need in the work force.

Now listen to this: In 1930, 54 percent of people over 65 were working, and the average life span was under 60 years old. Today, 16 percent of people over 65 are working even though people are living longer and they are living healthier longer. So many seniors don't work because they don't want to face punitive taxes on their effort. So they quit work after they reach the limit and deprive the system of needed FICA and income tax revenue. They just collect Social Security with no added return to the treasury.

The projected deficit increase is based on a static model which does not incorporate the earnings for general revenue and for Social Security taxes that these people will bring to the system when they work past the earning limit. Is it not amazing that this high tax rate of about 56 percent is double that on millionaires, and so you can earn $200,000 in interest and dividends and get your full Social Security, but if you work and make $11,000 you pay a 56 percent tax rate on every dollar above $10,000. It makes no sense.

The idea is to generate employment, to generate economic activity, to put people to work on behalf of themselves, their families and their country, and that is exactly what raising this income limit does. I support this rule and I urge my colleagues to do likewise.

Mr. GORDON. Mr. Speaker, for purposes of debate only, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. STENHOLM].

Mr. STENHOLM. Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to this rule. The words that come to me are "here we go again."

How many of us truly believe that this $7.3 billion we are talking about that is coming out of the trust fund is really not coming from our grandkids? In this body 267 of us say we want a balanced budget constitutional amendment.

Pay as you go must become a sacred rule in this body, not a political slogan if there is going to be any future whatsoever for our grandchildren.

This is another seniors versus grandkids issue. We are spending in this body $12,000 for senior citizens and less than $900 on the kids. It is time we start making balance.

I will vote for this compromise if we pay for it, but we must pay for it. We cannot continue to borrow on our grandkids' future and expect this country to have a future.

Mr. QUILLEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield my final 1½ minutes to the gentleman from California [Mr. LAGOMARSINO].

Mr. LAGOMARSINO. Mr. Speaker, it would be quite fitting if repeal of the Social Security earnings test had been included in reauthorization of the Older Americans Act Amendments of 1991. I am sorry that the conferees removed Senator MCCAIN's amendment and instead increased the limit on the amount of outside income seniors receiving Social Security may earn. But that is certainly better than the present situation.

What better way to help our senior citizens to achieve the goals of this legislation than by offering them the opportunity to have the same chance for economic freedom that is afforded to all other pension recipients?

I have long supported total repeal of this outdated law which is counterproductive in nature. It not only prevents Social Security recipients from earning extra money which most people on fixed incomes need to make ends meet, but it deprives the U.S. economy of the additional income tax which would be generated by these elderly workers. I think it is long overdue that Congress be allowed to vote on repealing this discriminatory law.

The benefits of repealing this unjust law would be immediately evident to working seniors. The improvement in our Nation's economy, which would result from repealing the Social Security earnings test, would also be another positive end result of taking such action. Unfortunately, we will not have such an opportunity today. Despite the fact that conferees chose to modify the McCain amendment by raising the ceiling on the outside income seniors can earn, I remain optimistic that eventually the Social Security earnings test will be repealed entirely and that we will afford older Americans the economic rights and freedoms to which they are entitled.

As I previously stated, I fully support the goals of the Older Americans Act and believe the repeal of the earnings test would only have strengthened our commitment to the elderly.

Mr. QUILLEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from California [Mr. CAMPBELL].

Mr. CAMPBELL of California. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in support of the Older Americans Act amendments. These amendments will help update the Older Americans Act, enacted in 1965, that is the major vehicle for the organization and delivery of social services to senior citizens. These amendments will help improve the lives of our seniors in areas related to income, health, housing, long-term care, and transportation. While there was broad agreement on the merits of these provisions, both Houses of Congress were locked in a bitter disagreement over a Senate provision to repeal the earnings test—a position that I have long supported.

An estimated 750,000 senior citizens lose some or all of their benefits because they work and bump up against the earnings test. Those workers aged 65 to 69 forfeit $1 for every $3 they earn above $10,200 this year. This law is a disincentive to work and it is discriminatory. Equally disheartening, it denies our economy of the productive work of skilled, experienced workers. Hence, the pressure on Congress to repeal the earnings test was intense. Seniors from all over the country contacted their representatives and forced the recalcitrant Members of the House to relent and agree to a limited reform of the earnings test. While I would have preferred a complete repeal of this law, the compromise legislation is a good start. It will help thousands of seniors take home more of their hard-earned money.

This legislation will improve the Social Security benefits for working senior citizens by nearly doubling the retirement earnings test from $10,200 under current law in 1992, to $20,000 in 1997. Critics of such reform have argued that it would deplete the Social Security trust fund. In response to these types of arguments I drafted a bill, that was included in the current agreement, that helps solve this problem and thus helps make reform legislation fiscally sound, a vital goal at a time of record budget deficits. I believe that as the earnings test is increased, many senior citizens will increase their work efforts, bringing in substantial new income tax revenues. My legislation directs that these new revenues be deposited in the Social Security trust fund, offsetting the funds lost from reform of the earnings test, and ensuring the continued solvency of the trust fund for future generations.

By including the provisions of my bill, the bill before us guarantees that the fiscal soundness of the Social Security trust fund will not be imperiled by the extension of the cap on the earnings limit. The summary sheet prepared by the Ways and Means Committee notes that the cost of lifting that cap is $3.8 billion; but I wish to note that when my provision is fully implemented, the actual cost will be zero. The Department of Treasury is instructed to create a formula to ensure that all of the gain in revenue from the income tax, and Social Security withholding tax, from the additional earnings by seniors be placed in the Social Security trust fund. This increase will more than offset the payment of additional Social Security benefits. It may even result in a net increase in the Social Security trust, which would be helpful in offsetting the loss to that fund from the unrelated part of this bill extending benefits to certain surviving spouses.

I would like to thank Congressmen HASTERT, ARCHER, and MICHEL for including my bill in their efforts to reach agreement on the earnings test. Indeed, I would like to pay a special tribute to the work of Congressman DENNY HASTERT for his tireless efforts on behalf of our seniors. His skill in developing a coalition of over 218 supporters of a bill to repeal the earnings test forced opponents in the House to agree to a bill which is morally right and economically sound.

Mr. GORDON. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute, the remainder of my time, to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. COX].

Mr. COX of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

In my short political career, I have found that if you give respect to your constituents, they will give respect back to you.

The truth is a yes vote on this rule and on final passage raises the deficit $7.3 billion. It is irresponsible to do that and not pay for it.

Not one senior citizen that I know would vote yes for this bill if they knew my children and your children, your grandchildren and my grandchildren are going to pay for it.

I urge the Members to do the right thing here at this late hour. Vote no on this rule, and if you have to vote no on final passage, it is the right, it is the responsible, it is the fiscally responsible thing to do.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. KLECZKA). All time has expired.

Without objection, the previous question is ordered.

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the resolution.

The question was taken; and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the yeas appeared to have it.

Mr. GORDON. Mr. Speaker, I demand a recorded vote.

A recorded vote was refused.

Mr. HASTERT. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground that a quorum is not present and make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Evidently a quorum is not present.

The Sergeant at Arms will notify absent Members.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—yeas 269, nays 139, not voting 26, as follows:

Section 101(4) of the Older Americans Act of 1965 (42 U.S.C. 3001(4)) is amended by inserting "including support to family members and other persons providing voluntary care to older individuals needing long-term care services" after "homes".

SEC. 102. DEFINITIONS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 102 of the Older Americans Act of 1965 (42 U.S.C. 3002) is amended by adding at the end the following:

"(13) The term 'abuse' means the willful—

"(A) infliction of injury, unreasonable confinement, intimidation, or cruel punishment with resulting physical harm, pain, or mental anguish; or

"(B) deprivation by a person, including a caregiver, of goods or services that are necessary to avoid physical harm, mental anguish, or mental illness.

"(14) The term 'Administration' means the Administration on Aging.

"(15) The term 'adult child with a disability' means a child who—

"(A) is 18 years of age or older;

"(B) is financially dependent on an older individual who is a parent of the child; and

"(C) has a disability.

"(16) The term 'aging network' means the network of—

"(A) State agencies, area agencies on aging, title VI grantees, and the Administration; and

"(B) organizations that—

"(i) are providers of direct services to older individuals; or

"(ii) are institutions of higher education; and

"(iii) receive funding under this Act.

"(17) The term 'area agency on aging' means an area agency on aging designated under section 305(a)(2)(a) or a State agency performing the functions of an area agency on aging under section 305(b)(5).

"(18) The term 'art therapy' means the use of art and artistic processes specifically selected and administered by an art therapist, to accomplish the restoration, maintenance, or improvement of the mental, emotional, or social functioning of an older individual.

"(19) The term 'board and care facility' means an institution regulated by a State pursuant to section 1616(e) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1382(e)).

"(20) The term 'caregiver' means an individual who has the responsibility for the care of an older individual, either voluntarily, by contract, by receipt of payment for care, or as a result of the operation of law.

"(21) The term 'caretaker' means a family member or other individual who provides (on behalf of such individual or of a public or private agency, organization, or institution) uncompensated care to an older individual who needs supportive services.

"(22) The term 'care management service'—

"(A) means a service provided to an older individual, at the direction of the older individual or family member of the individual—

"(i) by an individual who is trained or experienced in the care management skills that are required to deliver the services and coordination described in subparagraph (B); and

"(ii) to assess the needs, and to arrange, coordinate, and monitor an optimum package of services to meet the needs, of the older individual; and

"(B) includes services and coordination such as—

"(i) comprehensive assessment of the older individual (including the physical, psychological, and social needs of the individual);

"(ii) development and implementation of a service plan with the older individual to mobilize the formal and informal resources and services identified in the assessment to meet the needs of the older individual, including coordination of the resources and services—

"(I) with any other plans that exist for various formal services, such as hospital discharge plans; and

"(II) with the information and assistance services provided under this Act;

"(iii) coordination and monitoring of formal and informal service delivery, including coordination and monitoring to ensure that services specified in the plan are being provided;

"(iv) periodic reassessment and revision of the status of the older individual with—

"(I) the older individual; or

"(II) if necessary, a primary caregiver or family member of the older individual; and

"(v) in accordance with the wishes of the older individual, advocacy on behalf of the older individual for needed services or resources.

"(23) The term 'dance-movement therapy' means the use of psychotherapeutic movement as a process facilitated by a dance-movement therapist, to further the emotional, cognitive, or physical health of an older individual.

"(24) The term 'elder abuse' means abuse of an older individual.

"(25) The term 'elder abuse, neglect, and exploitation' means abuse, neglect, and exploitation, of an older individual.

"(26) The term 'exploitation' means the illegal or improper act or process of an individual, including a caregiver, using the resources of an older individual for monetary or personal benefit, profit, or gain.

"(27) The term 'focal point' means a facility established to encourage the maximum collocation and coordination of services for older individuals.

"(28) The term 'frail' means, with respect to an older individual in a State, that the older individual is determined to be functionally impaired because the individual—

"(A)(i) is unable to perform at least two activities of daily living without substantial human assistance, including verbal reminding, physical cueing, or supervision; or

"(ii) at the option of the State, is unable to perform at least three such activities without such assistance; or

"(B) due to a cognitive or other mental impairment, requires substantial supervision because the individual behaves in a manner that poses a serious health or safety hazard to the individual or to another individual.

"(29) The term 'greatest economic need' means the need resulting from an income level at or below the poverty line.

"(30) The term 'greatest social need' means the need caused by noneconomic factors, which include—

"(A) physical and mental disabilities;

"(B) language barriers; and

"(C) cultural, social, or geographical isolation, including isolation caused by racial or ethnic status, that—"(i) restricts the ability of an individual to perform normal daily tasks; or

"(ii) threatens the capacity of the individual to live independently.

"(31) The term 'information and assistance service' means a service for older individuals that—

"(A) provides the individuals with current information on opportunities and services available to the individuals within their communities, including information relating to assistive technology;

"(B) assesses the problems and capacities of the individuals;

"(C) links the individuals to the opportunities and services that are available;

"(D) to the maximum extent practicable, ensures that the individuals receive the services needed by the individuals, and are aware of the opportunities available to the individuals, by establishing adequate followup procedures; and

"(E) serves the entire community of older individuals, particularly—

"(i) older individuals with greatest social need; and

"(ii) older individuals with greatest economic need.

"(32) The term 'institution of higher education' has the meaning given the term in section 1201(a) of the Higher Education Act of 1965 (20 U.S.C. 1141(a)).

"(33) The term 'legal assistance'—

"(A) means legal advice and representation provided by an attorney to older individuals with economic or social needs; and

"(B) includes

"(i) to the extent feasible, counseling or other appropriate assistance by a paralegal or law student under the direct supervision of an attorney; and

"(ii) counseling or representation by a non-lawyer where permitted by law.

"(34) The term 'long-term care facility' means—

"(A) any skilled nursing facility, as defined in section 1819(a) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1395i-3(a));

"(B) any nursing facility, as defined in section 1919(a) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1396r(a));

"(C) for purposes of section 307(a)(12) and 712, a broad and care facility; and

"(D) any other adult care home similar to a facility or institution described in subparagraphs (A) through (C).

"(35) The term 'multipurpose senior center' means a community facility for the organization and provision of a broad spectrum of services, which shall include provision of health (including mental health), social, nutritional, and educational services and the provision of facilities of recreational activities for older individuals.

"(36) The term 'music therapy' means the use of musical or rhythmic interventions specifically selected by a music therapist to accomplish the restoration, maintenance, or improvement of social or emotional functioning, mental processing, or physical health of an older individual.

"(37) The term 'neglect' means—

"(A) the failure to provide for oneself the goods or services that are necessary to avoid physical harm, mental anguish, or mental illness; or

"(B) the failure of a caregiver to provide the goods or services.

"(38) The term 'older individual' means an individual who is 60 years of age or older.

"(39) The term 'physical harm' means bodily injury, impairment, or disease.

"(40) The term 'planning and service area' means an area designated by a State agency under section 305(a)(1)(E), including a single planning and service area described in section 305(b)(5)(A).

"(41) The term 'poverty line' means the official poverty line (as defined by the Office of Management and Budget, and adjusted by the Secretary in accordance with section 673(2) of the Community Services Block Grant Act (42 U.S.C. 9902(2)).

"(42) The term 'representative payee' means a person who is appointed by a governmental entity to receive, on behalf of an older individual who is unable to manage funds by reason of a physical or mental incapacity, any funds owed to such individual by such entity.

"(43) The term 'State agency' means the agency designated under section 305(a)(1).

"(44) The term 'supportive service' means a service described in section 321(a)."

(b) TECHNICAL AND CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—

(1)(A) Sections 102(2), 201(c)(1), 211, 301(b)(1), 402(a), and 411(b) of the Older Americans Act of 1965 (42 U.S.C. 3002(2), 3011(c)(1), 3020b, 3021(b)(1), 3030bb(a), and 3031(b)) are amended by striking "Administration on Aging" and inserting "Administration".

SEC. 211. STUDY OF EFFECTIVENESS OF STATE LONG-TERM CARE OMBUDSMAN PROGRAMS.

Not later than January 1, 1994, the Commissioner on Aging shall, in consultation with State agencies, State Long-Term Care Ombudsmen, the National Ombudsman Resource Center established under section 202(a)(21) of the Older Americans Act of 1965 (as added by section 202(b)(2) of this Act), and professional ombudsmen associations, directly, or by grant or contract, conduct a study, and submit a report to the committees specified in section 207(b)(2) of such Act, analyzing separately with respect to each State—

(1) the availability of services, and the unmet need for services, under the State Long-Term Care Ombudsman programs in effect under sections 307(a)(12) and 712 of the Older Americans Act of 1965 (42 U.S.C. 3001 et seq.) to residents of long-term care facilities (as defined in section 102 of such Act);

(2) the effectiveness of the programs in providing the services to the residents of board and care facilities (as defined in section 102 of such Act) and of similar adult care facilities;

(3) the adequacy of Federal and other resources to carry out the programs on a statewide basis in each State;

(4) compliance and barriers to such compliance of the States in carrying out the programs.

(5) any actual and potential conflicts of interest in the administration and operation of the programs; and

(6) the need for and feasibility of providing ombudsman services to older individuals (as defined in section 102 of such Act) who are not in long-term care facilities and who use long-term care services and other health care services, by analyzing and assessing current State agency practices in programs in which the State Long-Term Care Ombudsmen provide services to older individuals in settings in addition to long-term care facilities, taking into account variations in—

(A) settings where services are provided;

(B) the types of clients served;

(C) the types of complaints and problems handled;

(D) State regulation of long-term care provided in settings other than long-term care facilities; and

(E) possible conflicts of interest between the State Long-Term Care Ombudsman programs under such Act and area agencies on aging (as defined in section 102 of such Act) who provide to older individuals long-term care services both in such settings and in long-term care facilities.

SEC. 212. STUDY ON BOARD AND CARE FACILITY QUALITY.

(a) Arrangement for Study Committee.—The Secretary of Health and Human Services shall enter into an arrangement, in accordance with subsection (d), to establish a study committee described in subsection (c) to conduct a study through the Institute of Medicine of the National Academy of Sciences on the quality of board and care facilities for older individuals (as defined in section 102 of the Older Americans Act of 1965 (42 U.S.C. 3001 et seq.)) and the disabled.

(b) SCOPE OF STUDY.—The study shall include—

(1) an examination of existing quality, health, and safety requirements for board and care facilities and the enforcement of such requirements for their adequacy and effectiveness, with special attention to their effectiveness in promoting good personal care;

(2) an examination of, and recommendations with respect to, the appropriate role of Federal, State, and local governments in assuring the health and safety of residents of board and care facilities; and

(3) specific recommendations to the Congress and the Secretary, by not later than 20 months after the date of the enactment of this Act, concerning the establishment of minimum national standards for the quality, health, and safety of residents of such facilities and the enforcement of such standards.

(c) COMPOSITION OF STUDY COMMITTEE.—The study committee shall be composed of members as appointed from among the following:

(1) NATIONAL ACADEMY OF SCIENCES.—The members of the National Academy of Sciences with experience in long-term care. The members so appointed shall include—

(A) physicians;

(B) experts on the administration of drugs to older individuals, and disabled individuals receiving long-term care services; and

(C) experts on the enforcement of life-safety codes in long-term care facilities.

(2) RESIDENTS.—Residents of board and care facilities (including privately owned board and care facilities), and representatives of such residents or of organizations that advocate on behalf of such residents. Members so appointed shall include—

(A) residents of a nonprofit board and care facility; or

(B) individuals who represent—

(i) residents of nonprofit board and care facilities; or

(ii) organizations that advocate on behalf of residents of nonprofit board and care facilities.

(3) OPERATIONS.—Operators of board and care facilities (including privately owned board and care facilities), and individuals who represent such operators or organizations that represent the interests of such operators. Members so appointed shall include—

(A) operators of a nonprofit board and care facility; or

(B) individuals who represent—

(i) operators of nonprofit board and care facilities; or

(ii) organizations that represent the interests of operators of nonprofit board and care facilities.

(4) OFFICERS.—

(A) STATE OFFICERS.—Elected and appointed State officers who have responsibility relating to the health and safety of residents of board and care facilities.

(B) REPRESENTATIVES.—Representatives of such officers or of organizations representing such officers.

(C) OTHER INDIVIDUALS.—Other individuals with relevant expertise.

(d) USE OF INSTITUTE OF MEDICINE.—The Secretary shall request the National Academy of Sciences, through the Institute of Medicine, to establish, appoint, and provide administrative support for the study committee under an arrangement under which the actual expenses incurred by the Academy in carrying out such functions will be paid by the Secretary. If the National Academy of Sciences is willing to do so, the Secretary shall enter into such arrangement with the Academy.

(e) INVOLVEMENT OF OTHERS.—

(1) GOVERNMENT OFFICIALS.—The study committee shall conduct its work in a manner that provides for the consultation with Members of Congress or their representatives, officials of the Department of Health and Human Services, and officials of State and local governments who are not members of the study committee.

(2) EXPERTS.—The study committee may consult with any individual or organization with expertise relating to the issues involved in the activities of the study committee.

(f) REPORT.—Not later than 20 months after an arrangement is entered into under subsection (d), the study committee shall submit, to the Secretary, the Speaker of the House of Representatives, and the President pro tempore of the Senate, a report containing the results of the study referred to in subsection (a) and the recommendations made under subsection (b).

(g) BOARD AND CARE FACILITY DEFINED.—In this section, the term "board and care facility" means a facility described in section 1616(e) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1372e(e)).

(h) AUTHORIZATION.—There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out this section $1,500,000 for fiscal year 1992 and such sums as may be necessary for subsequent fiscal years.

SEC. 213. STUDY ON HOME CARE QUALITY.

(a) ESTABLISHMENT STUDY OF COMMITTEE.—The Secretary of Health and Human Services shall enter into an arrangement, in accordance with subsection (d), to establish a study committee described in subsection (c) to conduct a study through the Institute of Medicine of the National Academy of Sciences on the quality of home care services for older individuals and disabled individuals.

(b) SCOPE OF STUDY.—The study shall include—

(1) an examination of existing quality, health and safety requirements for home care services and the enforcement of such requirements for their adequacy, effectiveness, and appropriateness;

(2) an examination of, and recommendations with respect to, the appropriate role of Federal, State, and local governments in ensure the health and safety of patients and clients of home care services; and

(3) specific recommendations to the Congress and the Secretary, not later than 20 months after the date of the enactment of this Act, concerning the establishment of minimum national standards for the quality, health, and safety of patients and clients of such services and the enforcement of such standards.

(c) COMPOSITION OF STUDY COMMITTEE.—The study committee shall be composed of members appointed from among—

(1) individuals with experience in long-term care, including nonmedical home care services;

(2) patients and clients of home care services (including privately provided home care services and services funded under the Older Americans Act of 1965) or individuals who represent such patients and clients or organizations that advocate on behalf of such patients and clients;

(3) providers of home care services (including privately provided home care services and services funded under the Older Americans Act of 1965) or individuals who represent such providers or organizations that advocate on behalf of such providers;

(4) elected and appointed State officers who have responsibility relating to the health and safety of patients and clients of home care services, or representatives of such officers or of organizations representing such officers; and

(5) other individuals with relevant expertise.

(d) USE OF INSTITUTE OF MEDICINE.—The Secretary shall request the National Academy of Sciences, through the Institute of Medicine, to establish, appoint, and provide administrative support for the committee under an arrangement under which the actual expenses incurred by the Academy in carrying out such functions will be paid by the Secretary. If the National Academy of Sciences is willing to do so, the Secretary shall enter into such arrangement with the Academy.

(e) INVOLVEMENT OF OTHERS.—

(1) MEMBERS AND OFFICIALS.—The committee shall conduct its work in a manner that provides for consultation with Members of Congress or their representatives, officials of the Department of Health and Human Services, and officials of State and local governments who are not members of the committee.

(2) INDIVIDUAL OR ORGANIZATION WITH EXPERTISE.—The committee may consult with any individual or organization with expertise relating to the issues involved in the activities of the committee.

(f) REPORT.—Not later than 20 months after an arrangement is entered into under subsection (d), the committee shall submit, to the Secretary, the Speaker of the House of Representatives, and the President pro tempore of the Senate, a report containing the results of the study referred to in subsection (a).

(g) AUTHORIZATION.—There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out this section $1,000,000 for fiscal year 1992 and such sums as may be necessary for subsequent fiscal years.

(n) REQUIREMENTS.—Section 307(a) of the Older Americans Act of 1965 (42 U.S.C. 3027(a)) is amended by striking paragraph (31) and inserting the following:

“(31)(A) If 50 percent or more of the area plans in the State provide for an area volunteer services coordinator, as described in section 306(a)(12), the State plan shall provide for a State volunteer services coordinator, who shall—

“(i) encourage area agencies on aging to provide for area volunteer services coordinators;

“(ii) coordinate the volunteer services offered between the various area agencies on aging;

“(iii) encourage, organize, and promote the use of older individuals as volunteers to the State;

“(iv) provide technical assistance, which may include training, to area volunteer services coordinators; and “(v) promote the recognition of the contribution made by volunteers to the programs administered under the State plan.

“(B) If fewer than 50 percent of the area plans in the State provide for an area volunteer services coordinator, the State plan may provide for the State volunteer services coordinator described in subparagraph (A).

“(32) The plan shall provide assurances that special efforts will be made to provide technical assistance to minority providers of services.

“(33) The plan—

“(A) shall include the statement and the demonstration required by paragraphs (2) and (4) of section 305(d); and “(B) may not be approved unless the Commissioner approves such statement and such demonstration.

“(34) The plan shall provide an assurance that the State agency will coordinate programs under this title and title VI, if applicable.

“(35) The plan shall—

“(A) provide an assurance that the State agency will pursue activities to increase access by older individuals who are Native Americans to all aging programs and benefits provided by the agency, including programs and benefits under this title, if applicable; and “(B) specify the ways in which the State agency intends to implement the activities.

“(36) If case management services are offered to provide access to supportive services, the plan shall provide that the State agency shall ensure compliance with the requirements specified in section 306(a)(20).

“(37) The plan shall identify for each fiscal year, the actual and projected additional costs of providing services under this title, including the cost of providing access to such services, to older individuals residing in rural areas in the State (in accordance with a standard definition of rural areas specified by the Commissioner).

“(38) The plan shall provide assurances that funds received under this title will not be used to pay any part of a cost (including an administrative cost) incurred by the State or an area agency on aging to carry out a contract or commercial relationship that is not carried out to implement this title.

“(39) The plan shall provide assurances that preference in receiving services under this title will not be given by the area agency on aging to particular older individuals as a result of a contract or commercial relationship that is not carried out to implement this title.

“(40) The plan shall provide assurances that if the State receives funds appropriated under section 303(g) the State agency and area agencies on aging will expend such funds to carry out part G.

“(41) The plan shall provide assurances that demonstrable efforts will be made—

“(A) to coordinate services provided under this Act with other State services that benefit older individuals; and

“(B) to provide multigenerational activities, such as opportunities for older individuals to serve as mentors or advisers in child care, youth day care, educational assistance, at-risk youth intervention, juvenile delinquency treatment, and family support programs.

“(42) The plan shall provide assurances that the State will coordinate public services within the State to assist older individuals to obtain transportation services associated with access to services provided under this title, to services under title VI, to comprehensive counseling services, and to legal assistance.

“(43) The plan shall provide that the State agency shall issue guidelines applicable to grievance procedures required by section 306(a)(6)(P).

“(44) The plan shall include assurances that the State has in effect a mechanism to provide for quality in the provision of in-home services under this title.”

(c) APPROVAL OF STATE PLAN.—Section 307(b)(1) of the Older Americans Act of 1965 (42 U.S.C. 3017(b)(1)) is amended by inserting before the period at the end the following: “, except the Commissioner may not approve such plan unless the Commissioner determines that the formula submitted under section 305(a)(2)(D) complies with the guidelines in effect under section 305(a)(2)(C)”.

(d) DETERMINATION OF DISAPPROVAL.—Section 307(c) of the Older Americans Act of 1965 (42 U.S.C. 3027(c)) is amended—

(1) by inserting “(1)” after “(c)”;

(2) by adding at the end the following:

“(2) Not later than 30 days after such final determination, a State dissatisfied with such final determination may appeal such final determination to the Secretary for review. If the State timely appeals such final determination in accordance with subsection (e)(1), the Secretary shall dismiss the appeal filed under this paragraph.

“(3) If the State is dissatisfied with the decision of the Secretary after review under paragraph (2), the State may appeal such decision not later than 30 days after such decision and in the manner described in subsection (e). For purposes of appellate review under the preceding sentence, a reference in subsection (e) to the Commissioner shall be deemed to be a reference to the Secretary.”

(e) REPEAL OF EXPIRED PROVISION.—Section 307(f) of the Older Americans Act of 1965 (42 U.S.C. 3027(f)) is repealed.

(f) PROTECTION OF COMMERCIAL INFORMATION.—Section 307(g) of the Older Americans Act of 1965 (42 U.S.C. 3027(g)) is amended—

(1) by striking “(g)” and inserting “(f)(1)”;

(2) by adding at the end the following:

“(2) Information disclosed under section 306(a)(14)(B)(i) or subsection (a)(7)(C)(ii)(I) may be disclosed to the public by the State agency or the State only if such information could be disclosed under section 552 of title 5, United States Code, by an agency of the United States.”

SEC. 308. PLANNING, COORDINATION, EVALUATION, AND ADMINISTRATION OF STATE PLANS.

Section 308 of the Older Americans Act of 1965 (42 U.S.C. 3028) is amended—

(1) in subsection (a)(3) by inserting “been” after “which has”; and

(2) in subsection (b)—

(A) in paragraph (4)—

(i) by inserting “(A)” after “(4)”;

(ii) in the first sentence—

(I) by inserting “and except as provided in subparagraph (B)” after “this title”;

(II) by striking “received under section 303(b) (1) and (2), a” and inserting “received by a State and attributable to funds appropriated under paragraph (1) or (2) of section 303(b), the”; and

(III) by striking “a portion of the funds appropriated” and inserting “not more than 30 percent of the funds so received”; and

(iii) by adding at the end the following:

“(B) If a State demonstrates, to the satisfaction of the Commissioner, that funds received by the State and attributable to funds appropriated under paragraph (1) or (2) of section 303(b), including funds transferred under subparagraph (A) without regard to this subparagraph, for fiscal year 1993, 1994, 1995, or 1996 are insufficient to satisfy the need for services under subpart 1 or subpart 2 of part C, then the Commissioner may grant a waiver that permits the State to transfer under subparagraph (A) to satisfy such need—

“(i) an additional 18 percent of the funds so received for fiscal year 1993;

“(ii) an additional 15 percent of the funds so received for each of the fiscal year 1994 and 1995; and

“(iii) an additional 10 percent of the funds so received for fiscal year 1996.”; and

(B) by striking paragraph (5) and inserting the following:

“(5)(A) Notwithstanding any other provision of this title and except as provided in subparagraph (B), of the funds received by a State attributable to funds appropriated under subsection (a)(1), and paragraphs (1) and (2) of subsection (b), of section 303, the State may elect to transfer not more than 30 percent for fiscal year 1993, not more than 25 percent for fiscal year 1994, not more than 25 percent for fiscal year 1995, and not more than 20 percent for fiscal year 1996, between programs under part B and part C, for use as the State considers appropriate. The State shall notify the Commissioner of any such election.

“(B)(i) If a State demonstrates, to the satisfaction of the Commissioner, that funds received by the State and attributable to funds appropriated under part B or part C (including funds transferred under subparagraph (A) without regard to this paragraph) for fiscal year 1994 or 1995 are insufficient to satisfy the need for services under such part, then the Commissioner may grant a waiver that permits the State transfer under subparagraph (A) to satisfy such need an additional 5 percent of the funds so received for such fiscal year.

“(ii) If a State demonstrates, to the satisfaction of the Commissioner, that funds received by the State and attributable to funds appropriated under part B or part C (including funds transferred under subparagraph (A) without regard to this subparagraph) for fiscal year 1996 are insufficient to satisfy the need for services under such part, then the Commissioner may grant a waiver that permits the State to transfer under subparagraph (A) to satisfy such need an additional 8 percent of the funds so received for such fiscal year.

“(C) At a minimum, the application described in subparagraph (A) shall include a description of the amount to be transferred, the purposes of the transfer, the need for the transfer, and the impact of the transfer on the provision of services from which the funding will be transferred. The Commissioner shall approve or deny the application in writing.

“(6) A State agency may not delegate to an area agency on aging or any other entity the authority to make a transfer under paragraph (4)(A) or (5)(A).

“(7) The Commissioner shall annually collect, and include in the report required by section 207(a), data regarding the transfers described in paragraphs (4)(A) and (5)(A), including—

“(A) the amount of funds involved in the transfers, analyzed by State;

“(B) the rationales for the transfers;

“(C) in the case of transfers described in paragraphs (4)(A) and (5)(A), the effect of the transfers of the provision of services, including the effect on the number of meals served, under—

“(i) subpart 1 of part C; and “(ii) subpart 2 of part C; and “(D) in the case of transfers described in paragraph (5)(A)—

“(i) in the case of transfers to part B, information on the supportive services, or services provided through senior centers, for which the transfers were used; and

“(ii) the effect of the transfers on the provision of services provided under—

“(I) part B; and
 “(II) part C, including the effect on the number of meals served.”

SEC. 309. DISASTER RELIEF REIMBURSEMENTS.

"(b) ESTABLISHMENT.—The Commissioner shall establish and carry out pension rights demonstration projects.

"(c) PENSION RIGHTS INFORMATION PROGRAMS.—

"(1) USE OF FUNDS.—In carrying out the projects specified in subsection (b), the Commissioner shall, to the extent appropriations are available, award grants to six eligible entities to establish programs to provide outreach, information, counseling, referral, and assistance regarding pension and other retirement benefits, and rights related to such benefits.

"(2) AWARD OF GRANTS.—

"(A) TYPE OF ENTITY.—The Commissioner shall award under this subsection—

"(i) four grants to State agencies or area agencies on aging; and

"(ii) two grants to nonprofit organizations with a proven record of providing—

"(I) services related to retirement of older individuals; or

"(II) specific pension rights counseling.

"(B) PANEL.—In awarding grants under this subsection, the Commissioner shall use a citizen advisory panel that shall include representatives of business, labor, national senior advocates, and national pension rights advocates.

"(C) CRITERIA.—In awarding grants under this subsection, the Commissioner, in consultation with the panel, shall use as criteria—

"(i) evidence of commitment of an agency or organization to carry out a proposed pension rights information program;

"(ii) the ability of the agency or organization to perform effective outreach to affected populations, particularly populations identified as in need of special outreach; and

"(iii) reliable information that the population to be served by the agency or organization has a demonstrable need for the services proposed to be provided under the program.

"(3) APPLICATION.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—To be eligible to receive a grant under this subsection, an entity shall submit an application to the Commissioner at such time, in such manner, and containing such information as the Commissioner may require, including, at a minimum—

"(i) a plan for the establishment of a pension rights information area; and

"(ii) an assurance that staff members (including volunteer staff members) have no conflict of interest in providing the services described in the plan.

"(B) PLAN.—The plan described in paragraph (1) shall provide for a program that—

"(i) establishes a State or area pension rights information center;

"(ii) provides counseling (including direct counseling and assistance to individuals needing information) and information that may assist individuals in establishing rights to, obtaining, and filing claims or complaints related to, pension and other retirement benefits;

"(iii) provides information on sources of pension and other retirement benefits, including the benefits under programs described in subsection (a)(1);

"(iv) makes referrals to legal services and other advocacy programs;

"(v) establishment a system of referral to State, local, and Federal departments or agencies related to pension and other retirement benefits;

"(vi) provides a sufficient number of staff positions (including volunteer positions) to ensure information, counseling, referral, and assistance regarding pension and other retirement benefits;

"(vii) provides training programs for staff members, including volunteer staff members of the programs described in subsection (a)(1);

"(viii) makes recommendations to the Administration, the Department of Labor and other local, State, and Federal agencies concerning issues for older individuals related to pension and other retirement benefits; and

"(ix) establishes an outreach program to provide information, counseling, referral, and assistance regarding pension and other retirement benefits, with particular emphasis on outreach to women, minorities, and low-income retirees.

"(d) TRAINING PROGRAM.—

"(1) USE OF FUNDS.—In carrying out the projects described in subsection (b), the Commissioner shall, to the extent appropriations are available, award a grant to an eligible entity to establish a training program to provide—

"(A) information to the staffs of entities operating pension rights information programs; and

"(B) assistance to the entities and assist such entities in the design of program evaluation tools.

"(2) ELIGIBLE ENTITY.—Entities eligible to receive grants under this subsection include nonprofit private organizations with records of providing national information, referral, and advocacy in matters related to pension and other retirement benefits.

"(3) APPLICATION.—To be eligible to receive a grant under this subsection, an entity shall submit an application to the Commissioner at such time, in such manner, and containing such information as the Commissioner may require.

"(e) DURATION.—The Commissioner may award grants under subsection (c) or (d) for periods not to exceed 18 months.

"(f) REPORT TO CONGRESS.—

"(1) PREPARATION.—The Commissioner shall prepare a report that—

"(A) summarizes the distribution of funds authorized for grants under this section and the expenditure of such funds;

"(B) summarizes the scope and content of training and assistance provided under a program carried out under this section and the degree to which the training and assistance can be replicated;

"(C) outlines the problems that individuals participating in programs funded under this section encountered concerning rights related to pension and other retirement benefits; and

"(D) makes recommendations regarding the manner in which services provided in programs funded under this section can be incorporated into the ongoing programs of State agencies, area agencies on aging, multipurpose senior centers, and other similar entities.

"(2) SUBMISSION.—Not later than 30 months after the date of the enactment of this section, the Commissioner shall submit the report described in paragraph (1) to the Committee on Education and Labor of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Labor and Human Resources of the Senate.

"(g) ADMINISTRATIVE EXPENSES.—Of the funds appropriated under section 431(a)(1) to carry out this section for a fiscal year, not more than $100,000 may be used by the Administration for administrative expenses in carrying out this section."

Perkins Vocational and Applied Technology Education Act (20 U.S.C. 2301 et seq.)."

SEC. 504. EQUITABLE DISTRIBUTION OF ASSISTANCE.

(a) ALLOCATION.—Paragraphs (1) and (2) of section 506(a) of the Older American Community Service Employment Act (42 U.S.C. 3056d(a)) are amended to read as follows:

"(1)(A) Subject to subparagraph (B) and paragraph (2), from sums appropriated under this title for each fiscal year, the Secretary shall first reserve such sums as may be necessary for national grants or contracts with public agencies and public or nonprofit private organizations to maintain the level of activities carried on under such grants or contracts at least at the level of such activities supported under this title and under any other provision of Federal law relating to community service employment programs for older Americans in fiscal year 1978.

"(B)(i)(I) For each fiscal year in which the sums appropriated under this title exceed the amount appropriated under this title for fiscal year 1978, the Secretary shall reserve not more than 45 percent of such excess, except as provided in subclause (II), to carry out clauses (ii), (iii), and (v).

"(II) The Secretary shall reserve a sum sufficient to carry out clauses (ii) and (v).

"(III) The Secretary in awarding grants and contracts under this paragraph from the sum reserved under this paragraph shall, to the extent feasible, assure an equitable distribution of activities under such grants and contracts designed to achieve the allotment among the States described in paragraph (3) of this subsection.

"(ii) The Secretary shall reserve such sums as may be necessary for national grants or contracts with public or nonprofit national Indian aging organizations with the ability to provide employment services to older Indians and with national public or nonprofit Pacific Island and Asian American aging organizations with the ability to provide employment services to older Pacific Island and Asian Americans.

"(iii) If the amount appropriated under this title for a fiscal year exceeds 102 percent of the amount appropriated under this title for fiscal year 1991, for each fiscal year described in clause (iv), the Secretary shall reserve for recipients of national grants and contracts under this paragraph such portion of the excess amount as the Secretary determines to be appropriate and is—

"(I) at least 25 percent of the excess amount; or

"(II) the portion required to increase the amount made available under this paragraph to each of the recipients so that the amount equals 1.3 percent of the amount appropriated under this title for fiscal year 1991.

"(iv) From the portion reserved under clause (iii), the Secretary shall increase the amount made available under this paragraph to each of the recipients

"(I) for each fiscal year before the fiscal year described in subclause (II), so that such amount equals, or more closely approaches, such 1.3 percent; and

"(II) for the first fiscal year for which the portion is sufficient to make available under this paragraph to each of the recipients the amount equal to such 1.3 percent, so that such amount is not less than such 1.3 percent.

"(v) For each fiscal year after the fiscal year described in clause (iv)(II), the Secretary shall make available under this paragraph to each of the recipients an amount not less than such 1.3 percent.

"(C) Preference in awarding grants and contracts under this paragraph shall be given to national organizations, and agencies, of proven ability in providing employment services to eligible individuals under this program and similar programs. The Secretary, in awarding grants and contracts under this section, shall, to the extent feasible, assure an equitable distribution of activities under such grants and contracts, in the aggregate, among the States, taking into account the needs of underserved States, subject to subparagraph (B)(i)(III).

"(2)(A) From sums appropriated under this title for each fiscal year after September 30, 1978, the Secretary shall reserve an amount which is at least 1 percent and not more than 3 percent of the amount appropriated in excess of the amount appropriated for fiscal year 1978 for the purpose of entering into agreements under section 502(e), relating to improved transition to private employment.

"(B) After the Secretary makes the reservations required by paragraph (1)(B) and subparagraph (A), the remainder of such excess shall be allotted to the appropriate public agency of each State pursuant to paragraph (3)."

(b) APPORTIONMENT WITHIN STATES.—Section 506(c) of the Older American Community Service Employment Act (42 U.S.C. 3056d(c)) is amended—

(1) by striking "and (2)" and inserting "(2)"; and

(2) by inserting before the period at the end the following: ", and (3) the relative distribution of (A) such individuals who are individuals with greatest economic need, (B) such individuals who are minority individuals, and (C) such individuals who are individuals with greatest social need".

(c) TECHNICAL AND CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—

(1) Section 502(c)(1), paragraphs (3) and (4) of section 506(a), and section 507(1) of the Older American Community Service Employment Act (42 U.S.C. 3056(c)(1), 3056d(a) (3) and (4), and 3056e(1)) are amended by striking "per centum" each place the term appears and inserting "percent".

TITLE VII—VULNERABLE ELDER RIGHTS PROTECTION ACTIVITIES

SEC. 701. ALLOTMENTS FOR VULNERABLE ELDER RIGHTS PROTECTION ACTIVITIES.

The Older Americans Act of 1965 (42 U.S.C. 3001 et seq.) is amended by adding at the end the following:

TITLE VII—ALLOTMENTS FOR VULNERABLE ELDER RIGHTS PROTECTION ACTIVITIES

"Subtitle A—State Provisions "CHAPTER 1—GENERAL STATE PROVISIONS

"SEC. 701. ESTABLISHMENT.

"The Commissioner, acting through the Administration, shall establish and carry out a program for making allotments to States to pay for the cost of carrying out vulnerable elder rights protection activities.

"SEC. 702. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

"(a) OMBUDSMAN PROGRAM.—There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out chapter 2, $40,000,000 for fiscal year 1992 and such sums as may be necessary for fiscal years 1993, 1994, and 1995.

"(b) PREVENTION OF ELDER ABUSE, NEGLECT, AND EXPLOITATION.—There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out chapter 3, $15,000,000 for fiscal year 1992 and such sums as may be necessary for fiscal years 1993, 1994, and 1995.

"(c) STATE ELDER RIGHTS AND LEGAL ASSISTANCE DEVELOPMENT PROGRAM.—There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out chapter 4, $10,000,000 for fiscal year 1992 and such sums as may be necessary for fiscal years 1993, 1994, and 1995.

"(d) OUTREACH, COUNSELING, AND ASSISTANCE PROGRAM.—There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out chapter 5, $15,000,000 for fiscal year 1992 and such sums as may be necessary for fiscal years 1993, 1994, and 1995.

"SEC. 703. ALLOTMENT.

"(A) IN GENERAL.—

"(1) POPULATION.—In carrying out the program described in section 701, the Commissioner shall initially allot to each State, from the funds appropriated under section 702 for each fiscal year, an amount that bears the same ratio to the funds as the population of older individuals in the State bears to the population of older individuals in all States.

"(2) MINIMUM ALLOTMENTS.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—After making the initial allotments described in paragraph (1), the Commissioner shall adjust the allotments on a pro rata basis in accordance with subparagraphs (B) and (C).

"(B) GENERAL MINIMUM ALLOTMENTS.—

"(i) MINIMUM ALLOTMENT FOR STATES.—No State shall be allotted less than one-half of 1 percent of the funds appropriated under section 702 for the fiscal year for which the determination is made.

"(ii) MINIMUM ALLOTMENT FOR TERRITORIES.—Guam, the United States Virgin Islands, and the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands, shall each be allotted not less than one-fourth of 1 percent of the funds appropriated under section 702 for the fiscal year for which the determination is made. American Samoa and the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands shall each be allotted not less than one-sixteenth of 1 percent of the sum appropriated under section 702 for the fiscal year for which the determination is made.

"(C) MINIMUM ALLOTMENTS FOR OMBUDSMAN AND ELDER ABUSE PROGRAMS.—

"(i) OMBUDSMAN PROGRAM.—No State shall be allotted for a fiscal year, from the funds appropriated under section 702(a), less than the amount allotted to the State under section 304 in fiscal year 1991 to carry out the State Long-Term Care Ombudsman program under title III.

"(ii) ELDER ABUSE PROGRAMS.—No State shall be allotted for a fiscal year, from the funds appropriated under section 702(b), less than the amount allotted to the State under section 304 in fiscal year 1991 to carry out programs with respect to the prevention of elder abuse, neglect, and exploitation under title III.

"(D) DEFINITION.—For the purposes of this paragraph, the term 'State' does not include Guam, American Samoa, the United States Virgin Islands, the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands, and the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands.

"(b) REALLOTMENT.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—If the Commissioner determines that any amount allotted to a State for a fiscal year under this section will not be used by the State for carrying out the purpose for which the allotment was made, the Commissioner shall make the amount available to a State that the Commissioner determines will be able to use the amount for carrying out the purpose.

"(2) AVAILABILITY.—Any amount made available to a State from an appropriation for a fiscal year in accordance with paragraph (1) shall, for purposes of this subtitle, be regarded as part of the allotment of the State (as determined under subsection (a)) for the year, but shall remain available until the end of the succeeding fiscal year.

"(c) WITHHOLDING.—If the Commissioner finds that any State has failed to carry out this title in accordance with the assurances made and description provided under section 705, the Commissioner shall withhold the allotment of funds to the State. The Commissioner shall disburse the funds withheld directly to any public or nonprofit private institution or organization, agency, or political subdivision of the State submitting an approved plan containing the assurances and description.

"SEC. 704. ORGANIZATION.

"In order for a State to be eligible to receive allotments under this subtitle—

"(1) the State shall demonstrate eligibility under section 305;

"(2) the State agency designated by the State shall demonstrate compliance with the applicable requirements of section 305; and

"(3) each area agency on aging designated by the State agency and participating in such a program shall demonstrate compliance with the applicable requirements of section 305.

"SEC. 705. ADDITIONAL STATE PLAN REQUIREMENTS.

"(a) ELIGIBILITY.—In order to be eligible to receive an allotment under this subtitle, a State shall include in the State plan submitted under section 307—

"(1) an assurance that the State, in carrying out any chapter of this subtitle for which the State receives funding under this subtitle, will establish programs in accordance with the requirements of the chapter and this chapter;

"(2) an assurance that the State will hold public hearings, and use other means, to obtain the views of older individuals, area agencies on aging, recipients of grants under title VI, and other interested persons and entities regarding programs carried out under this subtitle;

"(3) an assurance that the State, in consultation with area agencies on aging, will identify and prioritize statewide activities aimed at ensuring that older individuals have access to, and assistance in securing and maintaining, benefits and rights;

"(4) an assurance that the State will use funds made available under this subtitle for a chapter in addition to, and will not supplant, any funds that are expended under any Federal or State law in existence on the day before the date of the enactment of this subtitle, to carry out the vulnerable elder rights protection activities described in the chapter;

"(5) an assurance that the State will place no restrictions, other than the requirements referred to in clauses (i) through (iv) of section 712(a)(5)(C), on the eligibility of entities for designation as local Ombudsman entities under section 712(a)(5);

"(6) an assurance that, with respect to programs for the prevention of elder abuse, neglect, and exploitation under chapter 3—

"(A) in carrying out such programs the State agency will conduct a program of services consistent with relevant State law and coordinated with existing State adult protective service activities for—

"(i) public education to identify and prevent elder abuse;

"(ii) receipt of reports of elder abuse;

"(iii) active participation of older individuals participating in programs under this Act through outreach, conferences, and referral of such individuals to other social service agencies or sources of assistance if appropriate and if the individuals to be referred consent; and

"(iv) referral of complaints to law enforcement or public protective service agencies if appropriate;

"(B) the State will not permit involuntary or coerced participation in the program of services described in subparagraph (A) by alleged victims, abusers, or their households; and

"(C) all information gathered in the course of receiving reports and making referrals shall remain confidential except—

"(i) if all parties to such complaint consent in writing to the release of such information;

"(ii) if the release of such information is to a law enforcement agency, public protective service agency, licensing or certification agency, ombudsman program, or protection or advocacy system; or

"(iii) upon court order;

"(7) an assurance that the State agency—

"(A) from funds appropriated under section 702(d) for chapter 5, will make funds available to eligible area agencies on aging to carry out chapter 5 and, in distributing such funds among eligible area agencies, will give priority to area agencies on aging based on—

"(i) the number of older individuals with greatest economic need, and older individuals with greatest social need, residing in their respective planning and service areas; and

"(ii) the inadequacy in such areas of outreach activities and application assistance of the type specified in chapter 5;

"(B) will require, as a condition of eligibility to receive funds to carry out chapter 5, an area agency on aging to submit an application that—"(i) describes the activities for which such funds are sought;

"(ii) provides for an evaluation of such activities by the area agency on aging; and

"(iii) includes assurances that the area agency on aging will prepare and submit to the State agency a report of the activities conducted with funds provided under this paragraph and the evaluation of such activities;

“(C) will distribute to area agencies on aging—

“(i) the eligibility information received under section 202(a)(20) from the Administration; and

“(ii) information, in written form, explaining the requirements for eligibility to receive medical assistance under title XIX of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1396 et seq.); and

“(D) will submit to the Commissioner a report on the evaluations required to be submitted under subparagraph (B); and

“(8) a description of the manner in which the State agency will carry out this title in accordance with the assurances described in paragraphs (1) through (7).

“(b) PRIVILEGE.—Neither a State, nor a State agency, may require any provider of legal assistance under this subtitle to reveal any information that is protected by the attorney-client privilege.

“SEC. 706. DEMONSTRATION PROJECTS.

“(a) ESTABLISHMENT.—From amounts made available under section 304(d)(1)(C) after September 30, 1992, each State may provide for the establishment of at least one demonstration project, to be conducted by one or more area agencies on aging within the State, for outreach to older individuals with greatest economic need with respect to—

“(1) benefits available under title XVI of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1381 et seq.) (or assistance under a State program established in accordance with such title);

“(2) medical assistance available under title XIX of such Act (42 U.S.C. 1396 et seq.); and “(3) benefits available under the Food Stamp Act of 1977 (7 U.S.C. 2011 et seq.).

“(b) BENEFITS.—Each outreach project carried out under subsection (a) shall—

“(1) provide to older individuals with greatest economic need information and assistance regarding their eligibility to receive the benefits and assistance described in paragraphs (1) through (3) of subsection (a);

“(2) be carried out in a planning and service area that has a high proportion of older individuals with greatest economic need, relative to the aggregate number of older individuals in such area; and

“(3) be coordinated with State and local entities that administer benefits under such titles.”.

SEC. 702. OMBUDSMAN PROGRAMS.

Title VII of the Older Americans Act of 1965 (as added by section 701 of this Act) is amended by adding at the end the following:

“CHAPTER 2—OMBUDSMAN PROGRAMS

“SEC. 711. DEFINITIONS.

“As used in this chapter:

“(1) OFFICE.—The term ‘Office’ means the office established in section 712(a)(1)(A).

“(2) OMBUDSMAN.—The term ‘Ombudsman’ means the individual described in section 712(a)(2).

“(3) LOCAL OMBUDSMAN ENTITY.—The term ‘local Ombudsman entity’ means an entity designated under section 712(a)(5)(A) to carry out the duties described in section 712(a)(5)(B) with respect to a planning and service area or other substate area.

“(4) PROGRAM.—The term ‘program’ means the State Long-Term Care Ombudsman program established in section 712(a)(1)(B).

“(5) REPRESENTATIVE.—The term ‘representative’ includes an employee or volunteer who represents an entity designated under section 712(a)(5)(A) and who is individually designated by the Ombudsman.

“(6) RESIDENT.—The term ‘resident’ means an older individual who resides in a long-term care facility.

“SEC. 712. STATE LONG-TERM CARE OMBUDSMAN PROGRAM.

“(a) ESTABLISHMENT.—

“(1) IN GENERAL.—In order to be eligible to receive an allotment under section 703 from funds appropriated under section 702(a), a State agency shall, in accordance with this section—

“(A) establish and operate an Office of the State Long-Term Care Ombudsman; and “(B) carry out through the Office a State Long-Term Care Ombudsman program.

“(2) OMBUDSMAN.—The Office shall be headed by an individual, to be known as the State Long-Term Care Ombudsman, who shall be selected from among individuals with expertise and experience in the fields of long-term care and advocacy.

“(3) FUNCTIONS.—The Ombudsman shall serve on a full-time basis, and shall, personally or through representatives of the Office—

“(A) identify, investigate, and resolve complaints that—

“(i) are made by, or on behalf of, residents; and

“(ii) relate to action, inaction, or decisions, that may adversely affect the health, safety, welfare, or rights of the residents (including the welfare and rights of the residents with respect to the appointment and activities of guardians and representative payees), of—

“(I) providers, or representatives of providers, of long-term care services;

“(II) public agencies; or

“(III) health and social service agencies;

“(B) provide services to assist the residents in protecting the health, safety, welfare, and rights of the residents;

“(C) inform the residents about means of obtaining services provided by providers or agencies described in subparagraph (A)(i) or services described in subparagraph (B);

“(D) ensure that the residents have regular and timely access to the services provided through the Office and that the residents and complainants receive timely responses from representatives of the Office to complaints;

“(E) represent the interests of the residents before governmental agencies and seek administrative, legal, and other remedies to protect the health, safety, welfare, and rights of the residents;

“(F) provide administrative and technical assistance to entities designated under paragraph (5) to assist the entities in participating in the program;

“(G)(i) analyze, comment on, and monitor the development and implementation of Federal, State, and local laws, regulations, and other governmental policies and actions, that pertain to the health, safety, welfare, and rights of the residents, with respect to the adequacy of long-term care facilities and services in the State;

“(ii) recommend any changes in such laws, regulations, policies, and actions as the Office determines to be appropriate; and

“(iii) facilitate public comment on the laws, regulations, policies, and actions;

“(H)(i) provide for training representatives of the Office;

“(ii) promote the development of citizen organizations, to participate in the program; and

“(iii) provide technical support for the development of resident and family councils to protect the well-being and rights of residents; and

“(I) carry out such other activities as the Commissioner determines to be appropriate.

“(4) CONTRACTS AND ARRANGEMENTS.—

“(A) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in subparagraph (B), the State agency may establish and operate the Office, and carry out the program, directly, or by contract or other arrangement with any public agency or nonprofit private organization.

“(B) LICENSING AND CERTIFICATION ORGANIZATIONS; ASSOCIATIONS.—The State agency may not enter into the contract or other arrangement described in subparagraph (A) with—

“(i) an agency or organization that is responsible for licensing or certifying long-term care services in the State; or “(ii) an association (or an affiliate of such an association) of long-term care facilities, or of any other residential facilities for older individuals.

“(5) DESIGNATION OF LOCAL OMBUDSMAN ENTITIES AND REPRESENTATIVES.—

“(A) DESIGNATION.—In carrying out the duties of the Office, the Ombudsman may designate an entity as a local Ombudsman entity, and may designate an employee or volunteer to represent the entity.

“(B) DUTIES.—An individual so designated shall, in accordance with the policies and procedures established by the Office and the State agency—

“(i) provide services to protect the health, safety, welfare and rights of residents;

“(ii) ensure that residents in the service area of the entity have regular, timely access to representatives of the program and timely responses to complaints and requests for assistance;

“(iii) identify, investigate, and resolve complaints made by or on behalf of residents that relate to action, inaction, or decisions, that may adversely affect the health, safety, welfare, or rights of the residents;

“(iv) represent the interests of residents before government agencies and seek administrative, legal, and other remedies to protect the health, safety, welfare, and rights of the residents;

“(v)(I) review, and if necessary, comment on any existing and proposed laws, regulations, and other government policies and actions, that pertain to the rights and well-being of residents; and

“(II) facilitate the ability of the public to comment on the laws, regulations, policies, and actions;

“(vi) support the development of resident and family councils; and “(vii) carry out other activities that the Ombudsman determines to be appropriate.

“(C) ELIGIBILITY FOR DESIGNATION.—Entities eligible to be designated as local Ombudsman entities, and individuals eligible to be designated as representatives of such entities, shall—

“(i) have demonstrated capability to carry out the responsibilities of the Office;

“(ii) be free of conflicts of interest;

“(iii) in the case of the entities, be public or nonprofit private entities; and “(iv) meet such additional requirements as the Ombudsman may specify.

“(D) POLICIES AND PROCEDURES.—

“(i) IN GENERAL.—The State agency shall establish, in accordance with the Office, policies and procedures for monitoring local Ombudsman entities designated to carry out the duties of the Office.

“(ii) POLICIES.—In a case in which the entities are grantees, or the representatives are employees, of area agencies on aging, the State agency shall develop the policies in consultation with the area agencies on aging. The policies shall provide for participation and comment by the agencies and for resolution of concerns with respect to case activity.

“(iii) CONFIDENTIALITY AND DISCLOSURE.—The State agency shall develop the policies and procedures in accordance with all provisions of this subtitle regarding confidentiality and conflict of interest.

“(b) PROCEDURES FOR ACCESS.—

“(1) IN GENERAL.—The State shall ensure that representatives of the Office shall have—

“(A) access to long-term care facilities and residents;

“(B)(i) appropriate access to review the medical and social records of a resident, if—

“(I) the representative has the permission of the resident, or the legal representative of the resident; or

“(II) the resident is unable to consent to the review and has no legal representative; or “(ii) access to the records as is necessary to investigate a complaint if—

“(I) a legal guardian of the resident refuses to give the permission;

“(II) a representative of the Office has reasonable cause to believe that the guardian is not acting in the best interests of the resident; and

“(III) the representative obtains the approval of the Ombudsman;

“(C) access to the administrative records, policies, and documents, to which the residents have, or the general public has access, of long-term care facilities; and “(D) access to and, on request, copies of all licensing and certification records maintained by the State with respect to long-term care facilities.

“(2) PROCEDURES.—The State agency shall establish procedures to ensure the access described in paragraph (1).

“(c) REPORTING SYSTEM.—The State agency shall establish a statewide uniform reporting system to—

“(1) collect and analyze data relating to complaints and conditions in long-term care facilities and to residents for the purpose of identifying and resolving significant problems; and

“(2) submit the data, on a regular basis, to—

“(A) the agency of the State responsible for licensing or certifying long-term care facilities in the State;

“(B) other State and Federal entities that the Ombudsman determines to be appropriate;

“(C) the Commissioner; and “(D) the National Ombudsman Resource Center established in section 202(a)(21).

“(d) DISCLOSURE.—

“(1) IN GENERAL.—The State agency shall establish procedures for the disclosure by the Ombudsman or local Ombudsman entities of files maintained by the program, including records described in subsection (b)(1) or (c).

“(2) IDENTITY OF COMPLAINANT OR RESIDENT.—The procedures described in paragraph (1) shall—

“(A) provide that, subject to subparagraph (B), the files and records described in paragraph (1) may be disclosed only at the discretion of the Ombudsman (or the person designated by the Ombudsman to disclose the files and records); and

“(B) prohibit the disclosure of the identity of any complainant or resident with respect to whom the Office maintains such files or records unless—

“(i) the complainant or resident, or the legal representative of the complainant or resident, consents to the disclosure and the consent is given in writing;

“(ii)(I) the complainant or resident gives consent orally; and

“(II) the consent is documented contemporaneously in a writing made by a representative of the Office in accordance with such requirements as the State agency shall establish; or “(iii) the disclosure is required by court order.

“(e) CONSULTATION.—In planning and operating the program, the State agency shall consider the views of area agencies on aging, old individuals, and providers of long-term care.

“(f) CONFLICT OF INTEREST.—The State agency shall—

“(1) ensure that no individual, or member of the immediate family of an individual, involved in the designation of the Ombudsman (whether by appointment or otherwise) or the designation of an entity designated under subsection (a)(5), is subject to a conflict of interest;

“(2) ensure that no officer or employee of the Office, representative of a local Ombudsman entity, or member of the immediate family of the officer, employee, or representative, is subject to a conflict of interest;

“(3) ensure that the Ombudsman—

“(A) does not have a direct involvement in the licensing or certification of a long-term care facility or of a provider of a long-term care service;

“(B) does not have an ownership or investment interest (represented by equity, debt, or other financial relationship) in a long-term care facility or a long-term care service;

“(C) is not employed by, or participating in the management of, a long-term care facility; and

“(D) does not receive, or have the right to receive, directly or indirectly, remuneration (in cash or in kind) under a compensation arrangement with an owner or operator of a long-term care facility; and

“(4) establish, and specify in writing, mechanisms to identify and remove conflicts of interest referred to in paragraphs (1) and (2), and to identify and eliminate the relationships described in subparagraphs (A) through (D) of paragraph (3), including such mechanisms as—

“(A) the methods by which the State agency will examine individuals, and immediate family members, to identify the conflicts; and

“(B) the actions that the State agency will require the individuals and such family members to take to remove such conflicts.

“(g) LEGAL COUNSEL.—The State agency shall ensure that—

“(1)(A) adequate legal counsel is available, and is able, without conflict of interest, to—

“(i) provide advice and consultation needed to protect the health, safety, welfare, and rights of residents; and

“(ii) assist the Ombudsman and representatives of the Office in the performance of the official duties of the Ombudsman and representatives; and

“(B) legal representation is provided to any representative of the Office against whom suit or other legal action is brought or threatened to be brought in connection with the performance of the official duties of the Ombudsman or such a representative; and

“(2) the Office pursues administrative, legal, and other appropriate remedies on behalf of residents.

“(h) ADMINISTRATION.—The State agency shall require the Office to—

“(1) prepare an annual report—

“(A) describing the activities carried out by the Office in the year for which the report is prepared;

“(B) containing and analyzing the data collected under subsection (c);

“(C) evaluating the problems experienced by, and the complaints made by or on behalf of, residents;

“(D) containing recommendations for—

“(i) improving quality of the care and life of the residents; and

“(ii) protecting the health, safety, welfare, and rights of the residents;

“(E)(i) analyzing the success of the program including success in providing services to residents of board and care facilities and other similar adult care facilities; and

“(ii) identifying barriers that prevent the optimal operation of the program; and

“(F) providing policy, regulatory, and legislative recommendations to solve identified problems, to resolve the complaints, to improve the quality of care and life of residents, to protect the health, safety, welfare, and rights of residents, and to remove the barriers;

“(2) analyze, comment on, and monitor the development and implementation of Federal, State, and local laws, regulations, and other government policies and actions that pertain to long-term care facilities and services, and to the health, safety, welfare, and rights of residents, in the State, and recommend any changes in such laws, regulations, and policies as the Office determines to be appropriate;

“(3)(A) provide such information as the Office determines to be necessary to public and private agencies, legislators, and other persons, regarding—

“(i) the problems and concerns of older individuals residing in long-term care facilities; and

“(ii) recommendations related to the problems and concerns; and

“(B) make available to the public, and submit to the Commissioner, the chief executive officer of the State, the State legislature, the State agency responsible for licensing or certifying long-term care facilities, and other appropriate governmental entities, each report prepared under paragraph (1);

“(4)(A) not later than 1 year after the date of the enactment of this title, establish procedures for the training of the representatives of the Office, including unpaid volunteers, based on model standards established by the Associate Commissioner for Ombudsman Programs, in consultation with representatives of citizen groups, long-term care providers, and the Office, that—

“(i) specify a minimum number of hours of initial training;

“(ii) specify the content of the training, including training relating to—

“(I) Federal, State, and local laws, regulations, and policies, with respect to long-term care facilities in the State;

“(II) investigative techniques; and

“(III) such other matters as the State determines to be appropriate; and

“(iii) specify an annual number of hours of in-service training for all designated representatives; and

“(B) require implementation of the procedures not later than 21 months after the date of the enactment of this title;

“(5) prohibit any representative of the Office (other than the Ombudsman) from carrying out any activity described in subparagraphs (A) through (G) of subsection (a)(3) unless the representative—

“(A) has received the training required under paragraph (4); and

"(B) has been approved by the Ombudsman as qualified to carry out the activity on behalf of the Office;

"(6) coordinate ombudsman services with the protection and advocacy systems for individuals with developmental disabilities and mental illnesses established under—

"(A) part A of the Developmental Disabilities Assistance and Bill of Rights Act (42 U.S.C. 6001 et seq.); and

"(B) the Protection and Advocacy for Mentally Ill Individuals Act of 1986 (42 U.S.C. 10801 et seq.);

"(7) coordinate, to the greatest extent possible, ombudsman services with legal assistance provided under section 306(a)(2)(C), through adoption of memoranda of understanding and other means; and

"(8) permit any local Ombudsman entity to carry out the responsibilities described in paragraphs (1), (2), (3), (6), or (7).

"(1) LIABILITY.—The State shall ensure that no representative of the Office will be liable under State law for the good faith performance of official duties.

"(j) NONINTERFERENCE.—The State shall—

"(1) ensure that willful interference with representatives of the Office in the performance of the official duties of the representatives (as defined by the Commissioner) shall be unlawful;

"(2) prohibit retaliation and reprisals by a long-term care facility or other entity with respect to any resident, employee, or other person for filing a complaint with, providing information to, or otherwise cooperating with any representative of, the Office; and

"(3) provide for appropriate sanctions with respect to the interference, retaliation, and reprisals.

"SEC. 713. REGULATIONS.

"The Commissioner shall issue and periodically update regulations respecting—

"(1) conflicts of interest by persons described in paragraphs (1) and (2) of section 712(f); and

"(2) the relationships described in subparagraphs (A) through (D) of section 712(f)(3)."

SEC. 703. PROGRAMS FOR PREVENTION OF ELDER ABUSE, NEGLECT, AND EXPLOITATION.

(a) PURPOSE.—The purpose of this section is to assist States in the design, development, and coordination of comprehensive services of the State and local levels to prevent, treat, and remedy elder abuse, neglect, and exploitation.

(b) PROGRAMS.—Title VII of the Older Americans Act of 1965 (as added by section 701, and amended by section 702) is amended by adding at the end the following:

"CHAPTER 3—PROGRAMS FOR PREVENTION OF ELDER ABUSE, NEGLECT, AND EXPLOITATION

"SEC. 721. PREVENTION OF ELDER ABUSE, NEGLECT, AND EXPLOITATION.

"(a) ESTABLISHMENT.—In order to be eligible to receive an allotment under section 703 from funds appropriated under section 702(b), a State agency shall, in accordance with this section, and in consultation with area agencies on aging, develop and enhance programs for the prevention of elder abuse, neglect, and exploitation.

"(b) USE OF ALLOTMENTS.—The State agency shall use an allotment made under subsection (a) to carry out, through the programs described in subsection (a), activities to develop, strengthen, and carry out programs for the prevention and treatment of elder abuse, neglect, and exploitation, including—

"(1) providing for public education and outreach to identify and prevent elder abuse, neglect, and exploitation;

"(2) ensuring the coordination of services provided by area agencies on aging with services instituted under the State adult protection service program;

"(3) promoting the development of information and data systems, including elder abuse reporting systems, to quantify the extent of elder abuse, neglect, and exploitation in the State;

"(4) conducting analyses of State information concerning elder abuse, neglect, and exploitation and identifying unmet service, enforcement, or intervention needs;

"(5) conducting training for individuals, professionals, and paraprofessionals, in relevant fields on the identification, prevention, and treatment of elder abuse, neglect, and exploitation, with particular focus on prevention and enhancement of self-determination and autonomy;

"(6) providing technical assistance to programs that provide or have the potential to provide services for victims of elder abuse, neglect, and exploitation and for family members of the victims;

"(7) conducting special and on-going training, for individuals involved in serving victims of elder abuse, neglect, and exploitation, on the topics of self-determination, individual rights, State and Federal requirements concerning confidentiality, and other topics determined by a State agency to be appropriate; and

"(8) promoting the development of an elder abuse, neglect, and exploitation system—

"(A) that includes a State elder abuse, neglect, and exploitation law that includes provisions for immunity, for persons reporting instances of elder abuse, neglect, and exploitation, from prosecution arising out of such reporting, under any State or local law;

"(B) under which a State agency—

"(i) on receipt of a report of known or suspected instances of elder abuse, neglect, or exploitation, shall promptly initiate an investigation to substantiate the accuracy of the report; and

"(ii) on a finding of elder abuse, neglect, or exploitation, shall take steps, including appropriate referral, to protect the health and welfare of the abused, neglected, or exploited older individual;

"(C) that includes, throughout the State, in connection with the enforcement of elder abuse, neglect, and exploitation laws and with the reporting of suspected instances of elder abuse, neglect, and exploitation—

"(i) such administrative procedures;

"(ii) such personnel trained in the special problems of elder abuse, neglect, and exploitation prevention and treatment;

"(iii) such training procedures;

"(iv) such institutional and other facilities (public and private); and

"(v) such related multidisciplinary programs and services, as may be necessary or appropriate to ensure that the State will deal effectively with elder abuse, neglect, and exploitation cases in the State;

"(D) that preserves the confidentiality of records in order to protect the rights of older individuals;

"(E) that provides for the cooperation of law enforcement officials, courts of competent jurisdiction, and State agencies providing human services with respect to special problems of elder abuse, neglect, and exploitation;

"(F) that enables an older individual to participate in decisions regarding the welfare of the older individual, and makes the least restrictive alternatives available to an older individual who is abused, neglected, or exploited; and

"(G) that includes a State clearinghouse for dissemination of information to the general public with respect to—

"(i) the problems of elder abuse, neglect, and exploitation;

"(ii) the facilities described in subparagraph (C)(iv); and

"(iii) prevention and treatment methods available to combat instances of elder abuse, neglect, and exploitation.

"(c) APPROACH.—In developing and enhancing programs under subsection (a), the State agency shall use a comprehensive approach, in consultation with area agencies on aging, to identify and assist older individuals who are subject to abuse, neglect, and exploitation, including older individuals who live in State licensed facilities, unlicensed facilities, or domestic or community-based settings.

"(d) COORDINATION.—In developing and enhancing programs under subsection (a), the State agency shall coordinate the programs with other State and local programs and services for the protection of vulnerable adults, particularly vulnerable older individuals, including programs and services such as—

"(1) area agency on aging programs;

"(2) adult protective service programs;

"(3) the State Long-Term Care Ombudsman program established in chapter 2;

"(4) protection and advocacy programs;

"(5) facility and long-term care provider licensure and certification programs;

"(6) medicaid fraud and abuse services, including services provided by a State medicaid fraud control unit, as defined in section 1903(q) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1396b(q));

"(7) victim assistance programs; and

"(8) consumer protection and law enforcement programs, as well as other State and local programs that identify and assist vulnerable older individuals.

"(e) REQUIREMENTS.—In developing and enhancing programs under subsection (a), the State agency shall—

"(1) not permit involuntary or coerced participation in such programs by alleged victims, abusers, or members of their households;

"(2) require that all information gathered in the course of receiving a report described in subsection (b)(8)(B)(i), and making a referral described in subsection (b)(8)(B)(ii), shall remain confidential except—

"(A) if all parties to such complaint or report consent in writing to the release of such information;

"(B) if the release of such information is to a law enforcement agency, public protective service agency, licensing or certification agency, ombudsman program, or protection or advocacy system; or

"(C) upon court order; and

"(3) make all reasonable efforts to resolve any conflicts with other public agencies with respect to confidentiality of the information described in paragraph (2) by entering into memoranda of understanding that narrowly limit disclosure of information, consistent with the requirement described in paragraph (2).

"(f) DESIGNATION.—The State agency may designate a State entity to carry out the programs and activities described in this chapter."

SEC. 704. STATE ELDER RIGHTS AND LEGAL ASSISTANCE DEVELOPMENT PROGRAM.

Title VII of the Older Americans Act of 1965 (as added by section 701 and amended by the preceding sections) is amended by adding at the end the following:

CHAPTER 4—STATE ELDER RIGHTS AND LEGAL ASSISTANCE DEVELOPMENT PROGRAM

SEC. 731. STATE ELDER RIGHTS AND LEGAL ASSISTANCE DEVELOPMENT.

“(a) ESTABLISHMENT.—

“(1) IN GENERAL.—In order to be eligible to receive an allotment under section 703 from funds appropriated under section 702(c), a State agency shall, in accordance with this section and in consultation with area agencies on aging, establish a program to provide leadership for improving the quality and quantity of legal and advocacy assistance as a means for ensuring a comprehensive elder rights system.

“(2) COORDINATION AND ASSISTANCE.—In carrying out the program established under this chapter, the State agency shall coordinate, and provide assistance to, area agencies on aging and other entities in the State that assist older individuals in—

“(A) understanding the rights of the older individuals;

“(B) exercising choice;

“(C) benefiting from services and opportunities authorized by law;

“(D) maintaining the rights of the older individuals and, in particular, of the older individuals with reduced capacity; and “(E) solving disputes.

“(b) FUNCTIONS.—In carrying out this chapter, the State agency shall—

“(1) establish a focal point for elder rights policy review, analysis, and advocacy at the State level, including such issues as guardianship, age discrimination, pension and health benefits, insurance, consumer protection, surrogate decisionmaking, protective services, public benefits, and dispute resolution;

“(2) provide an individual who shall be known as a State legal assistance developer, and other personnel, sufficient to ensure—

“(A) State leadership in securing and maintaining legal rights of older individuals;

“(B) State capacity for coordinating the provision of legal assistance;

“(C) State capacity to provide technical assistance, training and other supportive functions to area agencies on aging, legal assistance providers, ombudsmen, and other persons as appropriate; and “(D) State capacity to promote financial management services for older individuals at risk of conservatorship;

“(3)(A) develop, in conjunction with area agencies on aging and legal assistance providers, statewide standards for the delivery of legal assistance to older individuals; and

“(B) provide technical assistance to area agencies on aging and legal assistance providers to enhance and monitor the quality and quantity of legal assistance to older individuals, including technical assistance in developing plans for targeting services to reach the older individuals with greatest economic need and older individuals with greatest social need, with particular attention to low-income minority individuals;

“(4) provide consultation to, and ensure, the coordination of activities with the legal assistance provided under title III, services provided by the Legal Service Corporation, and services provided under chapters 2, 3, and 5, as well as other State or Federal programs administered at the State and local levels that address the legal assistance needs of older individuals;

“(5) provide for the education and training of professionals, volunteers, and older individuals concerning elder rights, the requirements and benefits of specific laws, and methods for enhancing the coordination of services;

“(6) promote, and provide as appropriate, education and training for individuals who are or might become guardians or representative payees of older individuals, including information on—

“(A) the powers and duties of guardians or representative payees; and “(B) alternatives to guardianship;

“(7) promote the development of, and provide technical assistance concerning, pro bono legal assistance programs, State and local bar committees on aging, legal hot lines, alternative dispute resolution, programs and curricula, related to the rights and benefits of older individuals, in law schools and other institutions of higher education, and other methods to expand access by older individuals to legal assistance and advocacy and vulnerable elder rights protection activities;

“(8) provide for periodic assessments of the status of elder rights in the State, including analysis—

“(A) of the unmet need for assistance in resolving legal problems and benefits-related problems, methods for expanding advocacy services, the status of substitute decision-making systems and services (including systems and services regarding guardianship, representative payeeship, and advance directives), access to courts and the justice system, and the implementation of civil rights and age discrimination laws in the State; and

“(B) of problems and unmet needs identified in programs established under title III and other programs; and

“(9) for the purpose of identifying vulnerable elder rights protection activities provided by the entities under this chapter, and coordinating the activities with programs established under title III and chapters 2, 3, and 5, develop working agreements with—

“(A) State entities, including the consumer protection agency, the court system, the attorney general, the State equal employment opportunity commission, and other State agencies; and

“(B) Federal entities, including the Social Security Administration, Health Care Financing Administration, and the Department of Veterans' Affairs, and other entities.”

SEC. 705. OUTREACH, COUNSELING, AND ASSISTANCE PROGRAMS.

(a) PURPOSE.—The purpose of this section is to provide outreach, counseling, and assistance in order to assist older individuals in obtaining benefits under—

(1) public and private health insurance, long-term care insurance, life insurance, and pension plans; and

(2) public programs under which the individuals are entitled to benefits, including benefits under—

(A) the supplemental security income program established under title XVI of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1381 et seq.);

(B) the medicare program established under title XVIII of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1395 et seq.);

(C) the medicaid program established under title XIX of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1396 et seq.);

(D) the program established under the Food Stamp Act of 1977 (7 U.S.C. 2011 et seq.); and

(E) the program established under the Low-Income Home Energy Assistance Act of 1981 (42 U.S.C. 8621 et seq.).

(b) PROGRAM.—Title VII of the Older Americans Act of 1965 (as added by section 701, and amended by the preceding sections) is amended by adding at the end the following:

CHAPTER 5—OUTREACH, COUNSELING, AND ASSISTANCE PROGRAM

SEC. 741. STATE OUTREACH, COUNSELING, AND ASSISTANCE PROGRAM FOR INSURANCE AND PUBLIC BENEFITS.

“(a) DEFINITIONS.—As used in this section:“(1) INSURANCE BENEFIT.—The term ‘insurance benefit’ means a benefit under—

(3) after section 803A (42 U.S.C. 2991b-1) by inserting the following:

"ESTABLISHMENT OF ADMINISTRATION FOR NATIVE AMERICANS

"SEC. 803B. (a) There is established in the Department of Health and Human Services (referred to in this title as the 'Department') the Administration for Native Americans (referred to in this title as the 'Administration'), which shall be headed by a Commissioner of the Administration for Native Americans (referred to in this title as the 'Commissioner'). The Administration shall be the agency responsible for carrying out the provisions of this title.

"(b) The Commissioner shall be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate.

"(c) The Commissioner shall—

"(1) provide for financial assistance, loan funds, technical assistance, training, research and demonstration projects, and other activities, described in this title;

"(2) serve as the effective and visible advocate on behalf of Native Americans within the Department, and with other departments and agencies of the Federal Government regarding all Federal policies affecting Native Americans;

"(3) with the assistance of the Intra-Departmental Council on Native American Affairs established by subsection (d)(1), coordinate activities within the Department leading to the development of policies, programs, and budgets, and their administration affecting Native Americans, and provide quarterly reports and recommendations to the Secretary;

"(4) collect and disseminate information related to the social and economic conditions of Native Americans, and assist the Secretary in preparing an annual report to the Congress about such conditions;

"(5) give preference to individuals who are eligible for assistance under this title, in entering into contracts for technical assistance, training, and evaluation under this title; and

"(6) encourage agencies that carry out projects under this title, to give preference to such individuals in hiring and entering into contracts to carry out such projects.

"(d)(1) There is established in the Office of the Secretary the Intra-Departmental Council on Native American Affairs. The Commissioner shall be the chairperson of such Council and shall advise the Secretary on all matters affecting Native Americans that involve the Department. The Director of the Indian Health Service shall serve as vice chairperson of the Council.

"(2) The membership of the Council shall be the heads of principal operating divisions within the Department, as determined by the Secretary, and such persons in the Office of the Secretary as the Secretary may designate.

"(3) In addition to the duties described in subsection (c)(3), the Council shall, within 180 days following the date of the enactment of the Native American Programs Act Amendments of 1992, prepare a plan, including legislative recommendations, to allow tribal governments and other organizations described in section 803(a) to consolidate grants administered by the Department and to designate a single office to oversee and audit the grants. Such plan shall be submitted to the committees of the Senate and the House of Representatives having jurisdiction over the Administration for Native Americans.

"(e) The Secretary shall assure that adequate staff and administrative support is provided to carry out the purpose of this title. In determining the staffing levels of the Administration, the Secretary shall consider among other factors the unmet needs of the Native American population, the need to provide adequate oversight and technical assistance to grantees, the need to carry out the activities of the Council, the additional reporting requirements established, and the staffing levels previously maintained in support of the Administration."

(4) by striking section 804 (42 U.S.C. 2991c) and inserting the following:

"TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE AND TRAINING

"SEC. 804. The Commissioner shall provide, directly or through other arrangements—

"(1) technical assistance to the public and private agencies in planning, developing, conducting, and administering projects under this title;

"(2) short-term in-service training for specialized or other personnel that is needed in connection with projects receiving financial assistance under this title; and

"(3) upon denial of a grant application, technical assistance to a potential grantee in revising a grant proposal.";

SEC. 836. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

Section 207 of the Older Americans Act Amendments of 1987 (42 U.S.C. 3001 note) is amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 207. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

"(a) AUTHORIZATION.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—There are authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary for fiscal years 1992 and 1993 to carry out this title.

"(2) CONTRACTS.—Authority to enter into contracts under this title shall be effective only to the extent, or in such amounts as are, provided in advance in appropriations Acts.

"(b) AVAILABILITY OF FUNDS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in paragraph (3), funds appropriated to carry out this title and funds received as gifts under section 203(c) shall remain available for obligation or expenditure until January 1, 1995, or the expiration of the one-year period beginning on the date the Conference adjourns, whichever occurs earlier.

"(2) UNOBLIGATED FUNDS.—Except as provided in paragraph (3), any such funds neither expended nor obligated before January 1, 1995, or the expiration of the one-year period beginning on the date the Conference adjourns, whichever occurs earlier, shall be available to carry out the Older Americans Act of 1965 (42 U.S.C. 3001 et seq.).

"(3) CONFERENCE NOT CONVENED.—If the Conference is not convened before January 1, 1994, such funds neither expended nor obligated before such date shall be available to carry out the Older Americans Act of 1965."

SEC. 837. SAVINGS PROVISION.

All personnel assigned or engaged under section 202(b) or section 203(a)(5) of the Older Americans Act Amendments of 1987 (42 U.S.C. 3001 note) as in effect immediately before the date of the enactment of this Act shall continue to be assigned or engaged under such section after such date notwithstanding the amendments made by this subtitle.

SEC. 838. SENSE OF THE CONGRESS.

It is the sense of the Congress that the 1993 White House Conference on Aging should consider the impact of the earnings test in effect under section 203 of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 403) on older individuals who are employed.

Subtitle E—Benefit Improvements

SEC. 841. ADJUSTMENTS IN EXEMPT AMOUNT FOR PURPOSES OF THE RETIREMENT TEST.

(a) INCREASE IN EXEMPT AMOUNT FOR INDIVIDUALS WHO HAVE ATTAINED RETIREMENT AGE.—Section 203(f)(8)(D) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 403(f)(8)(D)) is amended to read as follows:

"(D)(i) Notwithstanding any other provision of this subsection, the exempt amount which is applicable to an individual who has attained retirement age (as defined in section 216(1)) before the close of the taxable year involved—

"(I) shall be $1,000.00 for each month of any taxable year ending after 1992 and before 1994.

"(II) shall be $1,166.66% for each month of any taxable year ending after 1993 and before 1995.

"(III) shall be $1,333.33% for each month of any taxable year ending after 1994 and before 1996.

"(IV) shall be $1,500.00 for each month of any taxable year ending after 1995 and before 1997, and

"(V) shall be $1,666.66% for each month of any taxable year ending after 1996 and before 1998.

"(ii) For purposes of subparagraph (B)(ii)(II), the increase in the exempt amount provided under clause (i)(V) shall be deemed to have resulted from a determination which shall be deemed to have been made under subparagraph (A) in 1996."

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—Section 223(d)(4) of such Act (42 U.S.C. 423(d)(4)) is amended by striking "the exempt amount under section 203(f)(8) which is applicable to individuals described in subparagraph (D) thereof" and inserting the following: "an amount equal to the exempt amount which would have been applicable under section 203(f)(8), to individuals described in subparagraph (D) thereof, if section 841 of the Older Americans Act Amendments of 1992 had not been enacted".

(c) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply with respect to taxable years ending after 1992.

(d) CREDITING TO FEDERAL OLD-AGE AND SURVIVORS INSURANCE TRUST FUND.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—There are hereby appropriated to the Federal Old-Age and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund amounts equivalent to the net increase in tax liabilities under chapter 1 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 attributable to remuneration for employment (as defined in section 3121(b) of such Code) and net earnings from self-employment (as defined in section 1402(a) of such Code) which results from the amendments made by this section.

(2) TRANSFERS.—The amounts appropriated by paragraph (1) shall be transferred from time to time (but not less frequently than quarterly) from the general fund of the Treasury on the basis of estimates made by the Secretary of the Treasury of the amounts referred to in such paragraph. Proper adjustments shall be made in the amounts subsequently transferred to the extent prior estimates were in excess of or less than the amounts required to be transferred.

(3) REPORTS.—The Secretary of the Treasury shall submit annual reports to the Congress and to the Secretary of Health and Human Services on—

(A) the transfers made under this subsection during the year, and the methodology used in determining the amount of such transfers, and

(B) the anticipated operation of this subsection during the next 5 years.

SEC. 842. IMPROVEMENTS IN WIDOW'S AND WIDOWER'S INSURANCE BENEFITS.

(a) ELIMINATION OF ACTUARIAL REDUCTION FOR EARLY RETIREMENT IN WIDOW'S OR WIDOWER'S INSURANCE BENEFITS FOR INDIVIDUALS WHO HAVE ATTAINED AGE 80.—Section 202(a) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 402(a)) is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(12) No widow's or widower's insurance benefit shall be reduced under this subsection for any month ending after the date on which the individual entitled to such benefit attains age 80."

(b) INCREASE UPON ATTAINMENT OF AGE 80 IN LIMITATION ON REDUCTION BY REASON OF DECEASED SPOUSE'S EARLY RETIREMENT.—

(1) WIDOW'S INSURANCE BENEFITS.—Section 202(e)(2)(D)(ii) of such Act (42 U.S.C. 402(e)(2)(D)(ii)) is amended by inserting "(90 percent in the case of a widow or surviving divorced wife who has attained age 80)" after "82½ percent".

(2) WIDOWER'S INSURANCE BENEFITS.—Section 202(f)(3)(D)(ii) of such Act (42 U.S.C. 402(f)(3)(D)(ii)) is amended by inserting "(90 percent in the case of a widower or surviving divorced husband who has attained age 80)" after "82½ percent".

(c) EFFECTIVE DATE AND TRANSITION RULE.—

(1) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply with respect to benefits for months after November 1992.

(2) TRANSITION RULE.—Section 1634 of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1383c) is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(e)(1) An individual receiving benefits under this title who—

"(A) as a result of the amendments made by subsection (a) or (b) of section 842 of the Older Americans Act Amendments of 1992—

"(i) becomes entitled to an increase in the amount of his or her widow's or widower's insurance benefit under subsection (e) or (f) of section 202, or

"(ii) becomes entitled, upon filing an application, to a widow's or widower's insurance benefit under subsection (e) or (f) of section 202 for the later of—

"(I) December 1992, or

"(II) the month in which such individual attains age 80, in any case in which the death of the individual on whose wages and self-employment income such benefit is based occurs prior to such later month,

and

"(B) ceases to be eligible for a benefit under this title because of such entitlement or increase (or because of any subsequent cost-of-living adjustments in such benefit under section 215(i)), shall be treated for purposes of title XIX as an individual with respect to whom a benefit under this title is paid so long as he or she would be eligible for benefits under this title in the absence of such widow's or widower's insurance benefits or such increase.

"(2) For purposes of this subsection, the term 'benefit under this title' means—

"(A) a supplemental security income benefit under this title, or

"(B) a State supplementary payment of the type referred to in section 1616(a) (or a payment of the type referred to in section 212(a) of Public Law 93-66)."

(1) by redesignating paragraphs (1) and (2) as subparagraphs (A) and (B), respectively

(2) by inserting "(1)" after "(c)", and

(3) by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(2) For purposes of this subsection, the term 'benefit under this title' means a supplemental security income benefit under this title, and a State supplementary payment of the type referred to in section 1616(a) (or a payment of the type referred to in section 212(a) of Public Law 93-66) which is paid by the Secretary under an agreement referred to in section 1616(a) (or in section 212(b) of Public Law 93-66)."

(d) EFFECTIVE DATES; REENTITLEMENT.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in paragraphs (2) and (3), the amendments made by this section shall apply with respect to marriages occurring on or after September 1, 1992.

(2) CONTINUATION OF MEDICAID.—The amendments made by subsection (c) shall take effect on the date of the enactment of this Act.

(3) REENTITLEMENT.—

(A) SOCIAL SECURITY BENEFITS.—

(i) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in clause (ii), any individual described in section 202(d)(1)(B)(ii) of the Social Security Act whose entitlement to benefits under section 202(d) of such Act terminated by reason of marriage before September 1, 1992, may reapply for such benefits, and, if such individual is so determined to be under a disability, such individual shall be entitled to such benefits (and such benefits shall be computed) as if such termination had not occurred.

(ii) REENTITLEMENT PERIOD.—Clause (i) shall apply with respect to benefits for months beginning after the later of—

- (I) August 31, 1992,
- (II) 5 full calendar months after the onset of the disability, or
- (III) 12 months before the date of reapplication.

(B) MEDICARE BENEFITS.—

(i) REENTITLEMENT.—Any individual who becomes entitled to benefits under subparagraph (A) in a month and was entitled to benefits under title XVIII of the Social Security Act (before marriage) shall be entitled to benefits under such title effective as of the first day of such month.

(ii) APPLICABILITY OF UNEXPIRED PORTION OF 24-MONTH WAITING PERIOD.—For purposes of determining the entitlement of an individual, who is not described in clause (i) and who becomes entitled to benefits under subparagraph (A), to benefits under title XVIII of such Act pursuant to section 226(b)(2)(A) of such Act, the individual shall be considered to have been entitled to child's insurance benefits under section 202(d) by reason of a disability during a period of months preceding the first month referred to in subparagraph (A)(ii) equal to the number of months (before the month in which occurred the marriage upon which the termination of the individual's entitlement to benefits under section 202(d) of such Act was based) which counted towards the 24-month waiting period described in section 226(b)(2)(A) of such Act.

(C) NOTICE.—The Secretary of Health and Human Services shall make all reasonable efforts to identify individuals described in section 202(d)(1)(B)(ii) of the Social Security Act whose entitlement to benefits under section 202(d) of such Act terminated by reason of marriage before September 1, 1992, and inform such individuals of the reapplication procedure under subparagraph (A).

SEC. 846. STUDY BY GENERAL ACCOUNTING OFFICE OF DISABILITY DETERMINATION PROCESS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—As soon as practicable after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Comptroller General of the United States shall conduct a study under this section of the disability determination process, and the appeals process applicable to disability determinations, under titles II and XVI of the Social Security Act.

(b) ANALYSIS OF EXTENT TO WHICH REVERSALS OF INITIAL DENIALS OF CLAIMS ARE BASED ON CERTAIN FACTORS.—The study under this section shall include an analysis of the extent to which reversals on appeal of initial disability determinations which deny claims to benefits under title II or XVI of the Social Security Act are attributable to the following factors:

- (1) the absence of adequate medical evidence in the claimant's case file on which to base a determination of disability;
- (2) initial disability determinations that do not take into account the medical evidence obtained by the Social Security Administration;
- (3) the development of new medical evidence as the claimant's medical condition worsens during the course of an appeal;
- (4) differences between the instructions that the Social Security Administration provides its disability examiners in the Program Operations Manuals and the law and regulations applied by administrative law judges of the Administration on appeal;

(5) the lack of face-to-face meetings by disability examiners with claimants before initial disability determinations are made; and

(6) such other factors as the Comptroller General determines to be relevant.

(c) REPORT.—The Comptroller General shall submit a report of the results of the study under this section to the Committee on Ways and Means of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Finance of the Senate not later than December 1, 1992.

SEC. 847. COORDINATION OF RULES UNDER TITLES II AND XVI RELATING TO FEES FOR REPRESENTATIVES OF CLAIMANTS WITH ENTITLEMENTS UNDER BOTH TITLES.

(a) CALCULATION OF FEE OF CLAIMANT'S REPRESENTATIVE BASED ON AMOUNT OF PAST-DUE SUPPLEMENTAL SECURITY INCOME BENEFITS AFTER APPLICATION OF WINDFALL OFFSET PROVISION.—Section 1631(d)(2)(A)(i) of the Social Security Act (as amended by section 5106(a)(2) of the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1990) (42 U.S.C. 1383(d)(2)(A)(i)) is amended to read as follows:

“(i) by substituting, in subparagraphs (A)(ii)(I) and (D)(i), the phrase ‘(determined before any applicable reduction under section 1631(g), and reduced by the amount of any reduction in benefits under this title or title II made pursuant to section 1127(a)’ for the parenthetical phrase contained therein; and”.

(b) CALCULATION OF PAST-DUE BENEFITS FOR PURPOSES OF DETERMINING ATTORNEY FEES IN JUDICIAL PROCEEDINGS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Section 206(b)(1) of such Act (42 U.S.C. 406(b)(1)) is amended—

(A) by inserting “(A)” after “(b)(1)”; and

(B) by adding at the end the following new subparagraph:

“(B) For purposes of this paragraph, the term ‘past-due benefits’ shall have the same meaning, and such benefits shall be calculated in the same manner, as provided in subsection (a).”.

(2) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—The last sentence of section 1127(a) of such Act (as added by section 5106(b) of the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1990) (42 U.S.C. 1320a-6(a)) is amended by striking “section 206(a)(4)” and inserting “subsection (a)(4) or (b)(1) of section 206”.

(c) APPLICATION OF SINGLE $4,000 CEILING TO CONCURRENT CLAIMS UNDER TITLES II AND XVI.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Section 206(a)(2) of such Act (as amended by section 5106(a)(1) of the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1990) (42 U.S.C. 406(a)(2)) is amended—

(A) by redesignating subparagraph (C) as subparagraph (L); and

(B) by inserting after subparagraph (B) the following new subparagraph:

“(C) The agreement referred to in subparagraph (A) may not be approved unless it provides that, in the case of a claimant receiving a favorable determination who is entitled to past-due benefits under this title and title XVI, the total of the fee or fees payable to the person representing the claimant in connection with the determinations of such entitlements may not exceed the dollar amount under subparagraph (A)(ii)(II).”.

(2) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—Section 206(a)(3)(A) of such Act (as amended by section 5106(a)(1) of the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1990) (42 U.S.C. 406(a)(3)(A)) is amended by striking “paragraph (2)(C)” and inserting “paragraph (2)(D)”.

(d) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall be effective as if they had been included in the enactment of section 5106 of the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1990.

TITLE IX—GENERAL PROVISIONS

SEC. 901. LIMITATION ON AUTHORITY TO ENTER INTO CONTRACTS.

Any authority to enter into contracts under this Act or an amendment made by this Act shall be effective only to the extent or in such amounts as are provided in advance in appropriations Acts.

(6) VULNERABLE ELDER RIGHTS PROTECTION ACTIVITIES.—The amendments made by title VII shall not apply with respect to fiscal year 1992.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. KLECZKA). Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. FORD] will be recognized for 20 minutes, and the gentleman from Texas [Mr. ARCHER] will be recognized for 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. FORD].

Mr. FORD of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support for the effort we make today to write the final chapter in this year's reauthorization of the Older Americans Act of 1965.

Our action today carries on a program which serves as a lifeline to millions of our Nation's seniors in the delivery of nutrition services, in the delivery of critical supportive services in the home and out, and in the delivery of a human touch and words with peers in social settings.

The Older Americans Act has a long history of targeting resources to seniors in this country with the greatest economic and social needs. This overriding theme has served to make our senior citizens more self-sufficient—letting us all enjoy the benefits of their experience while they enjoy more productive golden years.

With the limited resources budget agreements have left us, the changes proposed by these amendments to the Older Americans Act will go far toward achieving the widest distribution of the most critical services to those most in need.

Today's action, so very long in coming, would not be possible without the tireless efforts of Mr. MARTINEZ, chairman of the Subcommittee on Human Resources and the contributions of Mr. FAWELL, the ranking minority member of the subcommittee. To them I offer thanks for a job well done. The fruits of their labors will serve this Nation's seniors well over the better part of this decade.

I am also particularly pleased to act on this reauthorization as a continuing testimonial to the foresight and perseverance of two great Americans, Senator Pat McNamara and Representative Jim O'Hara, both of Michigan—the pioneers of the Older Americans Act.

Mr. Speaker, the details of the extensive improvements will be included in the RECORD at length. I commend those details to the attention of my colleagues and urge them to support this critical effort in a nation whose aging population is growing by leaps and bounds each year.

Mr. Speaker, I yield the majority's time to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI], chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means, and I ask unanimous consent that he be permitted to yield time to Members.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI] is recognized for 20 minutes.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks and include extraneous matter on the legislation presently under consideration.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois?

There was no objection.

Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from California [Mr. MARTINEZ].

Mr. MARTINEZ. Mr. Speaker, I thank the chairman for yielding time to me.

Mr. Speaker, I will be brief.

The thrust of the bill has been gone over many times. The bill that comes back to us out of the conference has only one major change in it. That is the change that was debated thoroughly during approval of the rule.

Mr. Speaker, we are very pleased to finally bring to the floor the reauthorizing the Older Americans Act of 1965.

After months of waiting through negotiations to address critical Social Security earnings offset issues, we have finally come forward with a legislative package to reauthorize the Older Americans Act, a program vital to the good health and well-being of senior citizens of our Nation.

The reauthorization contains many improvements desperately needed, if we are to meet the ever-increasing needs of the growing aged population.

The Older Americans Act, which was passed in 1965, 27 years ago, continues to adapt to the modern needs of our senior citizens. The Older Americans Act programs have been the life-blood to our senior communities, assisting the poor, the undernourished, the vulnerable, and the isolated.

The 1991 amendments renews authority for the act for an additional 4 years, and attempts to look ahead to the needs of the older individuals in the years ahead. For that reason, we have devised improvements in the delivery system of the act along with new program authorizations.

The amendments strengthen the Commissioner on Aging's authority over the administration's budget and personnel, it increase's staffing levels to administer the program and to improve data collection in order to monitor and target services, it requires specific evaluations to improve the effectiveness of services, and forge new coordination of services in the act.

In addition, services to assist older individuals for health prevention, and assure nutrition intake quality, were added. Programs to prevent elder abuse, provide legal assistance language assistance, and intergenerational support were also added.

And, for the first time, the amendment makes Congress and the private sector equal participants with the administration in setting the policy agenda of the White House Conference on Aging. The joining together of two branches of Government, along with the private sector to set the aging policy agenda of the Nation for the next 10 years is historical precedent.

The amendments also include a 4-year renewal of the Native American Programs Act authority. The well-regarded HHS program, funded at $30 million, makes grants to Indian tribes to assist development of economic and social self-sufficiency.

Mr. Speaker, these authorizing amendments include major improvements to meet the service needs of senior citizens in our Nation. I am relieved that the difficult Social Security earnings issue has been resolved to balance the financial concerns of middle-Americans in this country. I thank the leadership, Chairman ROSTENKOWSKI, Chairman FORD, and the aging community for their help.

Finally, it is my hope that we have improved the Older Americans Act programs to assist our senior citizens to attain access to services in the golden years of their lives. The fight for the quality of life for all Americans begins in our communities. By finally bringing this bill to the floor today, we have won a major victory for the senior citizens of our country. I urge my colleagues to support the final passage of the Older Americans Act.

In an effort to complete a rather exhaustive legislative history leading up to the enactment of the Older Americans Act Amendments of 1992, I am entering into the RECORD at this point a short explanatory statement of the amendments made to the Older Americans Act. This statement has the approval and concurrence of the chairman of the Committee on Education and Labor, Mr. FORD, the ranking minority member, Mr. GOODLING, and the ranking minority member of the Subcommittee on Human Resources, Mr. FAWELL.

JOINT EXPLANATORY STATEMENT OF THE COMMITTEES OF JURISDICTION

This joint explanatory statement explains new provisions of the version being considered and states the legislative intent of the members of the committees of jurisdiction. Provisions not discussed in this statement are fully discussed in the Senate report (S. Rpt. 102-151), the House report (H. Rpt. 102-199), or both.

TITLE I—DECLARATION OF OBJECTIVES; DEFINITIONS

1. Objectives: Section 101 modifies the objectives of the Act to include support to family members and others who provide voluntary long-term care services.

2. Definitions: Section 102 adds new, and relocates existing, definitions to title I.

By including physical and mental disabilities within the definition of "greatest social need" it is intended that when using such a definition for the purpose of developing statistics for older individuals with physical and mental disabilities, the Commissioner and States should not use age as a substitute criteria to determine the number of such older individuals in the State. Statistics on older individuals with physical and mental disabilities will be gathered in accordance with guidelines issued by the Commissioner.

Such guidelines will ensure that a State's statistics are drawn from relevant data bases that consider older individuals with disabilities and restricted access to services, and may include the use of Medicaid and Medicare data, as well as other pertinent available and verifiable State data for determining the number of older individuals with physical, and mental, disabilities.

Development of such frailty statistics and their use to target services must not result in discrimination against low-income minority older individuals in the State.

The bill includes definitions of "art", "dance-movement", and "music" therapies. It is intended that therapists administering, providing or otherwise involved in such therapies shall be individuals trained in such therapies or otherwise having educational qualifications or experience to provide such services. In particular, music therapists shall be board-certified by the National Association of Music Therapists.

It is intended that case management services will not be provided in a manner which overrides the wishes of the older individual or the older individual's guardian.

TITLE II—ADMINISTRATION ON AGING

1. Administration on Aging: Section 201 provides that functions of the Commissioner carried out through regional offices shall not be delegated.

The bill requires the Associate Commissioner on Native Americans to be an advocate with the Indian Health Services; to collect information on problems unique to older Native Americans; to promote better coordination between the programs and administration of titles III and VI; and to be an effective and visible advocate on the state level.

The bill establishes in AoA an Office of Long-Term Care Ombudsman Programs to be headed by an Associate Commissioner for Ombudsman Services.

The bill requires the Ombudsman to have expertise and background in the field of long-term care advocacy and management. It is intended that the person selected by the Commissioner to serve as Associate Commissioner for Ombudsman Services will have sufficient training and experience relevant to the functions and responsibilities of the Office of Long-Term Care Ombudsman Programs. Examples of areas of training and experience considered relevant include gerontology, knowledge of long-term care facility requirements and the needs of residents of such facilities, and skills and techniques relating to investigation, negotiation and dispute and complaint resolution. The bill disallows the appointment of an Associate Commissioner who has a conflict of interest.

The bill lists the functions the Ombudsman should perform. It is intended that the Secretary of Health and Human Services, the inspector general, the Attorney General of the United States, and other Federal and State agencies shall work cooperatively with the Associate Commissioner for Ombudsman programs in securing needed information that has been willfully withheld and for which non-disclosure might result in physical or monetary harm to residents of long-term care facilities, including board and care facilities. Such agencies shall exercise whatever legal authority, including subpoena power, they possess to satisfy the Associate Commissioner's request for information in a timely fashion.

2. Functions of the Commissioner: Section 202 clarifies the functions of the Commissioner to include assisting the Secretary directly in aging matters, and coordinating federal programs and activities relating to the Act. It also clarifies that technical assistance be given regarding those in greatest need with particular attention to low-income minorities.

The bill requires the National Ombudsman Resource Center to establish a national program for the recruitment of ombudsman volunteers, to conduct research, and assist State Ombudsmen. The bill requires the Commissioner to fund such Center at not less than it received in FY 1990.

The bill requires the Commissioner to issue regulations and monitor State compliance with the prohibition on conflicts of interest. The bill also requires area Agencies on Aging (AAAs) to disclose to the Commissioner information regarding public/private partnerships required in Sec. 306.

The bill requires the Commissioner to establish information and assistance as a priority service, to develop guidelines and a model job description for AAAs when choosing legal assistance developers, and to study ways to more effectively target low-income, minority, and rural older individuals, as well as States with a disproportionate number of older individuals.

The bill requires the Commissioner to encourage and provide technical assistance to State Units on Aging (SUAs) and AAAs regarding SSI, Medicaid, and Food Stamp outreach; to design (with assistance from the DHHS Assistant Secretary of Planning and Evaluation and consultation from others) and implement uniform data collection procedures for SUAs within one year of the OAA amendments' enactment; to ensure that all federal grants and contracts made under title II and IV be made in accordance with a competitive bidding process established by the Commissioner; to participate and provide leadership within the Federal government regarding the development and implementation of a national community-based long-term care program for older individuals; and to assist State and area volunteer service coordinators.

The bill establishes in statute a National Center on Elder Abuse administered by the Commissioner.

The bill requires the Commissioner to establish a National Aging Information Center. The Center is to annually compile, publish, and disseminate data regarding older individuals (including older Native Americans), and SUA and AAA staffing and funding patterns. The Center will also provide training and technical assistance regarding data collection and analysis and disseminate title IV reports. The Center should be funded at $1,000,000 for FY 1992 and then such sums as may be necessary.

3. Federal Agency Consultation: Section 203 adds the Department of Labor (DOL) and ACTION to the list of federal agencies to consult and requires the DOL to consult and cooperate with the commissioner on the Job Training Partnership Act.

The bill requires the head of each Federal agency administering aging-related programs to collaborate with the Commissioner and to develop a written analysis of the impact of these programs on older individuals. The bill requires the Commissioner to "coordinate" with other Federal agencies, including the Edward Byrne Memorial State and Local Law Enforcement Assistance Programs.

4. Consultation with SUA's, AAA's, and Native Americans Grant Recipients: Section 204 requires the Commissioner to consult with SUA's, AAA's, and title VI grantees.

5. Federal Council on the Aging: Section 205 defines the terms of Members and adds new functions to the Federal Council on the Aging and requires Council members to have aging expertise and experience.

6. Nutrition Officer: Section 206 requires the Commissioner to designate an officer or employee with nutritional science and planning expertise to coordinate nutrition services under the Act. The Secretary must issue regulations within 120 days of the enactment of the OAA Amendments of 1992.

7. Evaluation: Section 207 requires the Secretary to evaluate the Act's effectiveness in targeting unserved individuals with greatest economic and social need.

The bill requires the Commissioner to evaluate nutrition services provided under the Act and issue interim guidelines and specific nutrition standards in regulation to ensure service provider compliance of Sections 331 and 336 of the Act.

An advisory council should be established to advise the Commissioner. The council, described in Sec. 206(g)(2)(A)(1), shall develop recommendations on the need for minimum standards for meals, particularly when a project provides more than one meal each day.

The bill authorizes up to $3,000,000 for such evaluation, of which no greater than $1.5 million shall come from title III and no greater than $1.5 million from title IV.

8. Reports: Section 208 requires the Commissioner to describe the implementation of the national plan for training personnel in the field of aging, changes the Commissioner's reporting deadline regarding the Ombudsman program to March 1 of each year, requires the Commissioner to report on the evaluation of the effectiveness of targeting those in greatest need, and requires the Commissioner to provide training and technical assistance regarding data collection and analysis.

9. Nutrition Education: Section 209 authorizes the Commissioner and Secretary of Agriculture to provide technical assistance and appropriate material to agencies that carry out nutrition education programs.

10. Authorization of Appropriations: Section 210 authorizes for Sec. 205 of the Act such sums as may be necessary for each of the fiscal year 1992 through 1995.

The bill authorizes $17,000,000 in FY 1992, $20,000,000 in FY 93, $24,000,000 in FY 94, and $29,000,000 in FY 95 for Administration on Aging (AoA) salaries and expenses and such sums as may be necessary in each fiscal year to provide for 300 full-time (or equivalent) AoA employee's.

11. Studies: Section 211 requires the Commissioner to study the effectiveness of State Long-Term Care Ombudsman Programs.

Section 212 requires the Commissioner to make arrangements with the Institute of Medicine to study board and care facility quality and home care quality.

The Board and Care study to be conducted by the Institute of Medicine should include representatives with expertise on state legislation. The recent DHHS/IG report (OEI-02-89-01860) includes reference to the American Bar Association's model Act as a resource to measure state legislation and compliance, which should also be considered as part of the Institute of Medicine study. The study of home care quality to be conducted by the Institute of Medicine should encompass the range of entities providing home care services, including public, nonprofit, and privately owned entities and examine the quality of services provided by such entities either directly or through contract with other entities.

Section 212 also authorizes $1,500,000 in FY 1992 and such sums as may be necessary in fiscal years 1993, 1994 and 1995 for a study of board and care quality.

Section 213 authorizes $1,000,000 for FY 1992 for a study of home care quality and such sums as may be necessary in subsequent fiscal years.

TITLE III—GRANTS FOR STATE AND COMMUNITY PROGRAMS ON AGING

1. Purpose: Section 301 adds as a purpose of this title to secure the opportunity for older individuals to receive managed in-home and community-based long-term care services.

2. Definitions: Section 302 modifies the definition of "comprehensive and coordinated system" to include encouraging entities with "unrealized potential" to serve older individuals.

3. Authorizations of Appropriations; Uses of Funds: Section 303 sets authorization levels for title III.

The bill authorizes $461,376,000 for FY 1992 and then such sums as may be necessary for fiscal years thereafter for Part B, $505,000,000 for FY 1992 and then such sums as may be necessary for fiscal years thereafter for congregate meals, $120,000,000 for FY 1992 and then such sums as may be necessary for fiscal years thereafter for home-delivered meals, $15,000,000 for FY 1992 and then such sums as may be necessary for fiscal years thereafter for school-based meals, $45,388,000 for FY 1992 and then such sums as may be necessary for fiscal years thereafter for Part D, such sums as may be necessary for fiscal years thereafter for Part E, $25,000,000 for FY 92 and then such sums as may be necessary for fiscal years thereafter for Part F, and $15,000,000 for FY 1992 and then such sums as may be necessary for fiscal years thereafter for Part G—supportive services for caregivers.

The bill deletes all limitations on authorizations of appropriations (i.e. triggers) and repeals Sec. 303(h).

4. Allotment; Federal Share: Section 304 changes the hold harmless level for state allotments from 1984 to 1987, increases minimum allotment for SSI, Medicaid, and Food Stamp outreach to $150,000, and sets a minimum allotment of $50,000 per State for Supportive Services for Individuals Who Provide In-home Services under Part G added by the bill.

The bill also requires the Commissioner to use Census Bureau and "other reliable demographic data" to determine the number of 60+ individuals and to withhold a State's allotment if the Commissioner disapproves its intrastate funding formula.

The bill requires there to be allotted to each State not less than $150,000 and not more than 4 percent of the State's title III-B 1991 appropriations on demonstration projects regarding SSI, Medicaid, and Food Stamp outreach from the States' allotment. Program requirements for the demonstration projects are described in title VII.

The bill also allows title III grants to be used to pay State and area volunteer services coordinators.

5. Organization: Sec. 305 requires the SUA to be primarily responsible for the planning, policy development, administration, coordination, priority setting, and evaluation of all State activities related to the OAA.

The bill requires intrastate funding formulas to be developed in consultation with AAAs and in accordance with the Commissioner's guidelines. The formula should take into account distribution of older individuals within the State and distribution of individuals with the greatest economic need and individuals with the greatest social need with particular attention to low-income minority individuals. The SUA must submit its formula to the Commissioner for approval.

The bill requires SUAs to use special outreach efforts to also identify certain targeted populations and clarifies that older individuals with the greatest economic need (with particular attention to low-income minority individuals), individuals with greatest social need, who are frail, and who are of limited English-speaking ability should be identified through outreach efforts.

The bill requires SUAs to set special objectives and describe actions used to increase participation of low-income minority older individuals.

The bill requires SUAs to establish due process procedures when the SUA revokes an AAA's designation, adds additional PSAs, divides PSAs, or otherwise affects the boundaries of PSAs. These procedures shall include providing notice, documenting need, conducting a public hearing, involving those affected, and allowing the Commissioner to hear appeals. A decision may be appealed based on the facts and merits of the matter or on procedural grounds. The Commissioner may affirm or set aside an SUA's decision.

6. Area Plans: Sec. 306 requires the area plan to provide assurances to adequately fund "case management services" as a type of access service.

The bill allows community action agencies who operate multipurpose senior centers to receive special consideration in the designation of focal points. The bill also requires the identity of focal points to be specified in AAA's grants, contracts, and agreements.

The bill requires information and assistance services to emphasize linking services for older individuals (and their uncompensated caregivers) who are isolated or have Alzheimer's disease.

The bill requires area plans to include specific service objectives for minority targeting and provide assurances that providers serve low-income minority individuals in accordance with their need for service, instead of (current law) their proportion in the population. The providers must meet specific objectives for minority targeting set by the AAA. The bill also requires area plans to include information on the extent to which minority targeting objectives were met in the preceding fiscal year. Additionally, all AAA activities must include a focus on the needs of low-income minority older individuals.

The bill requires AAAs to provide "timely information" in a timely manner; to advocate for older individuals in cooperation with agencies, local governments, organizations, and individuals involved with the area plan; to enter into arrangements and coordinate with community action agencies and programs, if possible; to coordinate entities that receive OAA funds within the PSA and other programs serving older individuals which receive Federal funds; to establish grievance procedures for individuals who are dissatisfied or denied service;¹ to identify the transportation needs of older individuals and to coordinate planning and delivery of transportation services; to assist providers of housing for older individuals develop and expand housing, support services, referrals, and living arrangements for older individuals; to list the AAA in a uniform manner in telephone listings; and to fund the State Long-Term Care Ombudsman program at not less than 1991 funding levels for ombudsman programs.

AAAs have been given this discretion in establishing such grievance procedures in the interest of providing administrative flexibility. However, if the AAAs fail to act in good faith to provide grievance procedures that respond to the complaints of older individuals, a requirement for AAAs to establish specific formal procedures for responding to such complaints will be considered in the next reauthorization.

The bill allows the AAA to provide an area volunteer services coordinator.

The bill adds provisions regarding public/private partnerships and adds requirements for AAAs to coordinate programs under title III and VI and to increase access to programs and services by older Native Americans.

The bill requires AAAs to provide assistance to nutrition projects to reasonably accommodate individuals with special health or religious requirements or ethnic backgrounds.

¹With respect to developing such grievance procedures, it is intended that denial of service to an older individual is a legitimate action if the service provider or the AAA has insufficient resources to provide services requested by such an individual.

The bill specifies how AAAs should provide case management services and clarifies that case management services may be offered by nonprofit, not "non-public" agencies.

The bill allows States to withhold an AAA's funds. The State agency will provide an AAA with a due process procedure (as established by the State agency but to include at a minimum, notification of action to withhold funds, documentation of need, and, if requested, a public hearing) before withholding any funds. It also provides for the administration of programs in areas in which funds have been withheld.

7. State Plans: Sec. 307 adds new state plan requirements.

The bill allows the Commissioner to require States not in compliance with title III to submit a State plan for a 1-year period until the Commissioner determines the State is in compliance.

The bill requires State agencies to evaluate the need for supportive services using a standard method to determine unmet needs; to evaluate the unmet need for transportation services; to establish and publish procedures for requesting and conducting hearings regarding plans submitted to the State agency; and to include assurances in their State plans that would prohibit conflicts of interest within SUAs and AAAs.

Over the past several years, a small number of local governments, which have been designated as AAAs by their respective States, have successfully provided a full range of direct services in a cost-efficient manner. Congress does not wish to foster or construct barriers to the provision of such services by these local governments, which have long and proven records of efficiently providing direct services.

Current law prohibits AAAs from providing services directly, but allows State agencies to waive the prohibition under certain circumstances. This current law provision has not been changed. The law provides sufficient flexibility to accommodate circumstances where waivers may be needed. While it is not the intent of the members of the committees of jurisdiction to encourage the granting of waivers, the members note that the law should not be construed to prevent the granting of waivers to local government-based AAAs with a proven record of providing services of comparable quality more efficiently, and a commitment to contribute significant amounts of local resources to the provision of services for older individuals, or otherwise meet the other waiver conditions set forth in the law.

The bill requires SUAs to disclose to the Commissioner the identity and nature of each nongovernmental entity with which it has a contract or commercial relationship to provide services to older individuals and demonstrate that such contract or relationship has not and will not decrease, but enhance, the quantity or quality of services provided. The Commissioner may request SUAs to disclose all sources and expenditures of funds that the agency receives or expends to provide services to older individuals.

The bill requires SUAs and AAAs to give special consideration to hiring individuals with formal training or professional experience in the field of aging. In providing special consideration to hiring individuals with formal training or professional experience in the field of aging, it is not intended that individuals without certifications, diplomas, degrees, or other formal credentials be excluded from such consideration.

The bill requires SUAs to carry out a State Long-Term Care Ombudsman program. Specific provisions relating to the ombudsman program are moved to the new title VII, added by the bill.

The bill exempts title III C-3 funds from being used for home-delivered meals.

The bill requires nutrition projects to be administered with the advice of "dietitians"; to provide nutrition education on a semi-annual basis to all III C-1 and C-2 participants; and to comply with State and local sanitation laws.

The bill requires SUAs to monitor, coordinate and assist in the planning of nutrition services, with the advice of a dietician or Case management services were added to the category of access services under section 306(a)(2)(A). Such services are one of four types of services listed in the category of access services that can be provided in meeting the requirement that funds must be allotted for the category of "services associated with access to services."

The bill requires a SUA to identify the actual and projected additional costs of providing services in rural areas and prohibits SUAs from using title III funds to carry out a contract or commercial relationship which does not relate to title III.

The bill also requires State plans to provide assurances that AAAs will not give preference to individuals as a result of a contract or commercial relationship which does not relate to title III.

The bill requires SUAs to coordinate OAA and other State aging programs; to provide multi-generational activities; to coordinate transportation services to increase access to services; and to provide in informal procedure to review refusals to serve older individuals and issue guidelines regarding such procedures.

The bill includes a provision for SUAs to provide a mechanism to ensure quality in the provision of in-home services as part of the State plan requirements.

It is expected that the Commissioner will provide guidance and assistance to the States in developing and implementing such mechanisms.

The bill requires the Commissioner to approve the intrastate funding formula described in the State Plan and establishes further appeal processes for States whose plans have been disapproved.

The bill deletes requirements for SUAs regarding the distribution of outreach funds to AAAs, submission of area plans, distribution of Food Stamp, SSI, and Medicaid information, and submission of AAA evaluations to the Commissioner.

8. Planning, Coordination, Evaluation, and Administration of State Plans: It is the intent of the members of the committees of jurisdiction that nothing in the Act or this reauthorization precludes states from coordinating services for senior citizens at the state or local levels.

Section 308 adds a limitation for FY 1993 on the amount of funds which may be transferred between title III B and C to 30%. The bill allows SUAs to apply for a waiver from the transfer limitations between Parts B and C. Such limitation on transfer amounts decrease to 25% in FY 1994 and 1995, and 20% in FY 1996. SUAs may also apply for an additional waiver of 5% in FY 1994 and FY 1995 and 8% in 1996.

The bill also adds limitations on the amount of funds which may be transferred between sub-parts 1 and 2 of title III-C to 30%. The bill limits the extra amount waived to 18% in FY 1993, 15% in FY 1994 and 1995, and 10% in FY 1996.

The bill also adds waiver application requirements for transfers between Parts B and C, and Subparts C1 and C2. The bill requires State agencies to demonstrate to the satisfaction of the Commissioner that funds allotted are insufficient to meet the needs for services under this title. It is intended that the Commissioner use the strictest scrutiny in reviewing the application made by each state seeking such transfer. It is intended that the Commissioner specifically evaluate the impact of such a transfer on the states' nutrition programs. For example, such an application shall not be to the satisfaction of the Commissioner if such a transfer will reduce the number of meals served or result in the closure of any congregate or home-delivered meal facility or service.

The bill prohibits SUAs from delegating transfer authority and requires the Commissioner to collect information on the amount, rationale, and effect of all transferred funds.

9. Disaster Relief Reimbursements: Section 309 allows SUAs to be reimbursed for supportive services (and related supplies) provided during disaster relief programs.

The bill allows the Commissioner to advance up to 75% of funds available for disaster relief of SUAs within 5 working days after a disaster has been declared.

The bill limits the amount SUAs may be reimbursed for disasters to 2% of title IV funds. This new requirement directly responds to the Administration's legislative proposal to determine funds available for disaster relief services to the amount appropriated to carry out title IV instead of amounts appropriated to carry out Section 422 Demonstration Projects. The 2 percent amount, linked to the aggregate level of title IV funding, reflects the equivalent of spend-outs in previous years, which never exceeded $500,000 per fiscal year.

10. Availability of Surplus Commodities: Section 310 sets the USDA per meal reimbursement rate for FY 1992 at the amount appropriated divided by the number of meals served or at a rate of 61 cents per meal, whichever is greater. In subsequent years, the 61 cent rate shall be adjusted annually to reflect changes in the CPI food away from home series based on the prior July.

11. Rights Relating to In-Home Services for Frail Older Individuals: Section 311 directs the Commissioner to require entities that provide in-home services under this title to promote the rights of individuals who receive such services.

12. Supportive Services: Section 312 adds the following services as supportive services: information and assistance, language translation, services which receive applications from older individuals for section 202 housing, advice, and informational services regarding elder rights, permanency planning for older individuals with adult children with disabilities and other services designed to help older individuals who are caretakers of adult children with disabilities, second career counseling, information on age-related diseases and chronic disabling conditions, support for voluntary long-term care caretakers, information and training on guardianship or representative payees, and multigenerational activities.

The bill clarifies pre-retirement counseling and assistance.

The bill also defines counseling on pension rights and benefits as a type of financial counseling.

The bill includes representation of wards, individuals who are allegedly incapacitated, and, under certain circumstances, older individuals seeking to become guardians as types of legal assistance.

The bill adds music, art, and dance-movement therapy as services designed to enable older individuals attain and maintain physical and mental well-being.

The members of the committees of jurisdiction are concerned about reports that older residents of board and care facilities and other older individuals with disabilities may be denied access to this Act's programs and services in some communities. The members believe it is important to stress that the Act's programs are intended to be available to all older individuals, with particular emphasis on those in greatest economic and social need, including those who reside in various residential environments such as section 202 housing, public housing and board and care facilities.

In circumstances where board and care residents (or other older individuals in similar living environments) wish to participate in OAA meals programs, it would not be inappropriate for such residents to contribute to the cost of such meals and, in such cases, to be reimbursed by the board and care provider for meals consumed outside the board and care facility.

13. Congregate Nutrition Services and Home Delivered Nutrition Services: Sections 313 and 314 allow congregate and home-delivered nutrition projects in rural areas to serve fewer than five meals a week and delete current law requirements regarding recommended daily allowances.

14. Criteria: Section 315 adds the Dietary Managers Association to the list of organizations to be consulted regarding home-delivered meals. An individual with comparable skills and experience of a dietician.

The bill requires SUAs to develop non-financial criteria for home-delivered meals eligibility and to periodically evaluate recipients to determine if they meet the criteria.

The bill requires SUAs to give priority to certain legal problems, including age discrimination. The members of the committees of jurisdiction recognize that litigating age discrimination cases is difficult and costly and may legal assistance providers are prohibited from accepting fee-generating cases. Therefore direct legal assistance providers should help identify cases of age discrimination and, where appropriate, refer older individuals to other legal channels, including the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission.

The bill requires SUAs to designate a legal assistance developer.

The bill requires SUAs to spend on ombudsman programs not less than what was spent on such programs in FY 1991; to require outreach efforts especially to older individuals and their caretakers who are rural residents, isolated, or have Alzheimer's.

The bill requires assurances regarding compliance with the Elder Rights Title requirements to be included in the State's Plan.

The bill requires that if one-half or more of the area plans provide for an area volunteer coordinator, then the State plan must provide for a State volunteer coordinator who will, among other things, provide technical assistance to area volunteer service coordinators. If fewer than half of area plans provide for volunteer service coordinators, then the State has the option to support a State volunteer service coordinator.

The bill adds a requirement for SUAs to provide technical assistance to minority service providers.

The bill requires SUAs to spend funds on supportive services for providers of in-home services if they receive funds for such services.

The bill requires State plans to include a funding formula with a demonstration of the allocation of funds. The Commissioner must approve each formula for the entire State plan to be approved.

The bill requires the State agencies to establish a State advisory group; to coordinate programs under titles III and VI; to specify how they plan to increase access by older Native Americans to title III programs and benefits; and to comply with case management service requirements when case management services are provided as an access service.

15. School-Based Meals for Volunteer Older Individuals and Multigenerational Programs: Section 316 establishes a new nutrition program: school-based meals for volunteer older individuals and multigeneration programs.

Title VI grantees have been included as eligible entities for this program. Their inclusion is intended to encourage Title VI grantees to seek grants to operate such programs in cooperation with Bureau of Indian Affairs schools. SUAs are encouraged to approve the grant applications of eligible Title VI grantees.

Monies for administrative costs cannot be taken from title III-C.

This program is added in response to the concern that:

(1) there are millions of older individuals who could benefit from congregate nutrition services, but live in areas where meals are unavailable or limited;

(2) there are millions of elementary and secondary school students who need positive role models, tutors, enhancement of self-esteem, and assistance with multiple and complex economic, health, and social problems;

(3) older individuals have a unique range of knowledge, talents, and experience, which can be of immeasurable value to students as a part of the educational process;

(4) multigenerational programs can provide older individuals with the opportunity to contribute skills and talents in the public schools;

(5) programs that create and foster communication between older individuals and youth are effective in improving awareness and understanding of the aging process, promoting more positive and balanced views of the realities of aging, and reducing negative stereotyping of older individuals;

(6) unused or underused space in school buildings can be used for multigenerational programs serving older individuals in exchange for good faith commitments by older individuals to provide volunteer assistance in the public schools; and

(7) school districts need broad-based community support for school initiatives, and multigenerational programs can help to enrich that support.

It is intended that such program shall:

(1) create and foster multigenerational opportunities for older individuals and elementary and secondary students in the schools, where meals and social activities are provided;

(2) create school-based programs for older individuals to assist elementary and secondary students who have limited-English proficiency or are at risk of—

- (A) dropping out of school;
- (B) abusing controlled substances;
- (C) remaining illiterate; and
- (D) living in poverty.

(3) provide older individuals with opportunities to improve their self-esteem and make major contributions to the educational process of the youth of the United States by contributing the unique knowledge, talents, and sense of history of older individuals through roles as volunteer tutors, teacher aides, living historians, special speakers, playground supervisors, lunchroom assistants, and many other school support roles;

(4) provide an opportunity for older individuals to obtain access to school facilities and resources, such as libraries, gymnasiums, theaters, cafeterias, audiovisual resources, and transportation; and

(5) create other programs for group interaction between students and older individuals, including class discussions, dramatic programs, shared school assemblies, field trips, and mutual classes.

16. Dietary Guidelines, Payment Requirement: Section 317 adds requirements regarding nutrition programs funded under this title. Meals provided by a project must comply with the Dietary Guidelines for Americans. Additionally, if a project serves one meal a day, each meal—whether provided in a congregate setting or home-delivered—must provide one-third of the daily RDA established by the Food and Nutrition Board of the National Research Council of the National Academy of Sciences. If a project provides two meals a day to the same individual, the meals must contain two-thirds of these allowances; and if three meals a day are provided to the same individual, the meals must contain 100 percent of these allowances.

This provision was included to offer providers of nutrition services greater flexibility in the planning of meals and to encourage more providers to offer two and three meals each day. It is not expected that providers will dramatically change the content or amount of food provided in any meal provided. It is also expected that they will assure that all food components provided are adequate to provide nutritious, satisfying, and attractive second and/or third meals as well as meeting % or 100 percent of the RDA requirements.

Furthermore, it is expected that the USDA will continue to reimburse providers for all meals provided, as long as the average RDA is met.

The members of the committees of jurisdiction are concerned that some nutrition providers may be using dietary supplements in lieu of food to meet the present requirement that each meal served contain at least one-third of the daily recommended dietary allowances as established by the Food and Nutrition Board of the National Academy of Science—National Research Council. Therefore the members direct the Commissioner to address potential abuse of this practice as part of the Commissioner's requirement to oversee nutrition services under the Act.

17. In-Home Services: Section 318 adds personal care services and other in-home services defined by SUAs and AAAs in their respective plans.

18. Preventive Health Services: Section 319 adds several new sites to the list of sites where preventive health services can be provided.

The bill deletes current prohibitions against providing Medicare-reimbursable preventive health services and makes a conforming amendment. In deleting the present prohibition against providing Medicare-reimbursable preventive health services, it is intended that AAAs will not offer, when feasible, services that are generally available through private health services or reimbursable under private or public health insurance.

The bill clarifies existing, and adds new, definitions of disease prevention and health promotion services. The bill also renames

Part F of title III as "Disease Prevention and Health Promotion Services".

19. Supportive Services for Caretakers Who Provide In-Home Services to Frail Older Individuals: Section 320 adds a new Part G to title III for the purpose of providing supportive services to caretakers who provide in-home services to frail older individuals.

TITLE IV—TRAINING, RESEARCH, AND DISCRETIONARY PROJECTS AND PROGRAMS

1. Statement of Purpose: Section 401 clarifies that the purpose of this title is also to include dissemination of innovative ideas for replication.

2. Priorities: Section 402 requires the Commissioner to consult with SUAs and AAAs to develop funding priorities. The Commissioner is also required to ensure title IV grants and contracts benefit older individuals and OAA programs, and comply with OAA requirements.

This new requirement for the Commissioner is to ensure that title IV grants and contracts benefit older individuals and other programs under the Act. The grants and contracts are to be used only for those purposes within the scope of the Act.

3. Purpose: Section 403 clarifies the purpose of title IV training grants by placing emphasis on attracting qualified minority personnel.

4. Grants and Contracts: Section 404 adds gerontologists to the list of practitioners who may receive training and education under the title. The bill also adds an emphasis on using culturally sensitive practices in-service training. Counseling programs may receive such in-service training.

The bill provides for annual national meeting to train directors of title VI grants. For the past several years, the Commissioner has convened a national meeting to train directors of title VI grants. This event has proved to be very beneficial to all involved. By adding this requirement, it is intended that the training should continue to occur on a national basis, not just on a state or regional level.

A new training program has been added to train service providers who serve older individuals (including family physicians, clergy and other professionals).

5. Multidisciplinary Centers of Gerontology: Section 405 adds "counseling service" to the kinds of emphasis gerontology centers receiving grants may have. The bill also adds schools of social work and psychology to the schools that develop training programs with title IV funds. "Counseling services" are added as a special emphasis of multidisciplinary centers of gerontology.

6. Demonstration Projects: Section 406 authorizes several new demonstration projects, including projects that: furnish multigenerational services by older individuals addressing the needs of children; meet the service needs of older individuals who are caretakers with disabled adult children; provide music, art, dance-movement therapy and gerontological education and training on music therapy; or establish model volunteer service credit projects to demonstrate methods to improve or expand supportive or nutrition services or otherwise promote the well-being of older individuals.

The members of committees of jurisdiction strongly endorse the concept of voluntary service credit programs which have been successfully implemented in a number of States. Therefore the members encourage the Commissioner on Aging to fund innovative voluntary service credit programs.

7. Special Projects in Comprehensive Long-Term Care: Section 407 deletes the current provision regarding special projects in comprehensive long-term care; adds a new section that requires the Commissioner to fund not fewer than four or more than seven resource centers for long-term care; specifies the functions of the centers; lists areas of specialty for resource centers; requires the Commissioner to fund at least 10 such projects; prescribes the use of funds, reimbursable direct services, preference in awarding grants, application and report requirements, and eligible entities; and requires the Commissioner to fund these projects at not less than the amount awarded for long-term care centers in FY 1991, and to obligate funds within 60 days after the enactment of the bill.

8. Ombudsman and Advocacy Demonstration Projects: Section 408 adds legal assistance agencies to the agencies coordinating within ombudsman and advocacy demonstration projects.

9. Demonstration Projects for Multigenerational Activities: Section 409 requires the Commissioner to award funds for demonstration projects for multigenerational activities affording older individuals opportunities to serve as mentors or advisors in child care, youth day care, educational assistance, at-risk youth intervention, juvenile delinquency treatment, and family support programs.

10. Supportive Services in Federally Assisted Housing Demonstration Program: Section 410 requires the Commissioner to award funds to establish demonstration programs to provide supportive services in federally assisted housing. The bill specifies that agencies eligible to receive grants under this section include SUAs and AAAs.

The members of the committees of jurisdiction intend that these demonstration programs will demonstrate the involvement of the aging network in the development of the Comprehensive Housing Affordability Strategies and other programs serving older individuals under the Cranston-Gonzalez National Affordable Housing Act of 1990 (Public Law 101-625, 104 Stat. 4079);

11. Neighborhood Senior Care Program: Section 411 authorizes the Commissioner to award grants to establish neighborhood senior care programs to draw on the professional and volunteer services of local residents; requires the Commissioner to give preference to applicants experienced in operating community programs and those meeting the independent living needs of older individuals; and requires the Commissioner to establish an Advisory Board and a technical resource center on neighborhood senior programs.

To support the addition of a Neighborhood Senior Care Program in the Act, the Commissioner should consult with the director of ACTION, the Points of Light Foundation, and other organizations that advocate and administer volunteer services.

12. Information and Assistance Systems Development Projects: Section 412 authorizes the Commissioner to make grants to support Section 412 authorizes the Commissioner to make grants to support improvement of information and assistance services at the State and local levels and to continue to support and evaluate the national telephone information access service.

13. Senior Transportation Demonstration Program Grants: Section 413 requires the Commissioner to award at least five grants (not less than 50 percent to be used in rural areas) to improve the mobility and transportation services of older individuals. Eligible agencies include SUAs, AAAs, and other public agencies and nonprofit organizations.

14. Resource Centers on Native American Elders: Section 414 requires the Commissioner to establish between two and four Resource Centers on Native American Elders.

15. Demonstration Programs for Older Individuals With Developmental Disabilities: Section 415 requires the Commissioner to establish demonstration projects for older individuals with developmental disabilities.

16. Housing Demonstration Programs: Section 416 requires the Commissioner to award funds to establish housing ombudsman demonstration projects and add specific provisions regarding eviction and foreclosure notification.

The members of the committees of jurisdiction are concerned that there are not adequate programs available to assist older tenants of publicly assisted housing to resolve their complaints and problems. Such problems include but are not limited to: legal and nonlegal issues, housing quality issues, security and suitability problems, and issues related to regulations of the Department of Housing and Urban Development and the Farmers Home Administration.

This demonstration project will demonstrate a mechanism to assist such older residents in resolving their problems, and protecting their rights, safety, and welfare of the individuals;

The members note that the State Long-Term Care Ombudsman programs established under the Older Americans Act of 1965 have exhibited great success in protecting the rights and welfare of nursing home residents through work on complaint resolution and advocacy and that a similar approach could be used to address the housing problems experienced by these older residents.

17. Private Resource Enhancement Projects: Section 417 authorizes the Commissioner to fund SUAs and AAAs to establish demonstration projects that generate non-Federal resources in order to increase resources available to provide additional title III services.

18. Career Preparation for the Field of Aging: Section 418 adds new requirements for the Commissioner to make grants to educational institutions (including historically Black colleges or universities and Hispanic Centers of Excellence with programs of applied gerontology) that serve the needs of minority students to prepare them for careers in aging.

19. Pension Information and Counseling Demonstration Projects: Section 419 requires the Commissioner to fund pension information and counseling demonstration projects.

20. Authorization of Appropriations: Section 420 authorizes $72 million to be appropriated to carry out this title for fiscal year 1992 and such sums as may be necessary in subsequent years.

There are also authorized to be appropriated $450,000 for each fiscal year 1992, 1993, 1994, and 1995 to carry out a program to train service providers as described in Section 411(e).

21. Payments of Grants for Demonstration Projects: Section 421 requires the Commissioner when issuing grants and contracts within a State to inform the SUA of their purpose.

22. Responsibilities of Commissioner: Section 422 specifies that the annual report on title IV awards be submitted to Congress not later than January 1 following each fiscal year, expands the required content of the report, and requires the Commissioner to evaluate the activities funded under title IV, make the evaluations available to the public, and use the evaluations to improve service delivery or program operation.

TITLE V—COMMUNITY SERVICE EMPLOYMENT FOR OLDER AMERICANS

1. Older American Community Service Employment Program: Title V of the Older Americans Act authorizes the Senior Community Service Employment Program (SCSEP), which provides part-time employment and training opportunities for low-income persons 55 years of age and older. As enrollees in a Federal employment and training program, participants in the SCSEP historically have not been considered "employees" of grantees. The members of the committees of jurisdiction believe that benefits associated with employment should be funded by the Federal government.

Section 501 adds a provision which includes individuals with poor employment prospects as potential title V participants; requires projects to hire individuals with greatest economic need, and prepare an assessment of participants; requires the Secretary of Labor to consult with the Secretary of Health and Human Services on the cost of programs; requires national contractors to consult with and submit project descriptions to SUAs and AAAs in areas where they are operating; and requires the Secretary to issue criteria for experimental projects and require projects in such experiments to coordinate with JPTA programs.

2. Coordination: Section 502 requires the Secretary to consult with the Commissioner to increase job opportunities for older individuals. Section 502(c)(1) of the Act requires that Community Service Employment for Older Americans (CSEOA) sponsors pay 10 percent of the cost of CSEOA projects. It is the intent of the Committees of Jurisdiction that whenever an Indian tribal entity, or an association representing such entities, with which the Secretary has an agreement under Section 502(b) of the Act, demonstrates to the Secretary that a project serving primarily Indians or on an Indian Reservation, located in an economically depressed area, does not have adequate non-Federal resources available, the Secretary may pay all of the costs of any such project.

3. Interagency Cooperation: Section 503 requires the Secretary to coordinate this program with other Federal jobs programs and other titles of the OAA.

4. Equitable Distribution of Assistance: Section 504 establishes a minimum funding base for all title V national contractors of 1.3 percent of FY 91 total appropriations (i.e., $5,135,000). The base will help to ensure that all contractors have a minimum level of funds to administer effectively the program on a national basis. Currently, only two of the ten national contractors are funded at below this minimum funding base; in FY 1992, they each received a little over $1.3 million. By contrast, the next smallest contractors received approximately $11 million; the largest contractor received over $100 million.

This amendment gradually increases these contractors to the minimum funding base by reserving a portion (at least 25 percent) of increased appropriations. This reservation cannot occur until appropriations exceed 102 percent of FY 91 appropriations (i.e., $398,000,000). Since this was not achieved for FY 92 (final title V appropriation is $395,181,000), the amendment would not be triggered in FY 1992. By requiring that the reserved portion be taken only from increased appropriations, the funding levels for national contractors essentially are being held harmless to their FY 92 appropriations. Importantly, given that only a portion of increased appropriations will be reserved, all national contractors will still receive increased funding if appropriations increase.

Once a national contractor has achieved the minimum funding base, it is intended that such base shall, at a minimum, be maintained.

Some individuals have indicated that the problem of inadequate funding for these two contractors is best addressed through an administrative solution. Normally, the members of the committees of jurisdiction would agree. However despite congressional efforts to assure an adequate funding amount, the Department of Labor has shown no intentions of addressing the current funding disparity.

The bill also requires the Secretary to take into account the distribution of older individuals with the greatest social and economic need and minority individuals when apportioning funds within the states.

5. Authorizations of Appropriations: Section 505 authorizes $470,671,000 for FY 1992 and such sums as may be necessary in fiscal years 1993, 1994, and 1995. The bill also authorizes enough appropriations to fund 70,000 title V positions in each fiscal year.

6. Dual Eligibility and Treatment of Assistance Provided Under This Title: Section 506 requires that when title V projects are carried out jointly with JTPA programs, title V participants will be eligible for JTPA. It also stipulates that assistance from title V will not be considered financial assistance under the Immigration and Nationality Act.

TITLE VI—GRANTS FOR NATIVE AMERICANS

1. Applications by Tribal Organizations: Section 601 adds provisions requiring title VI applicants to assure coordination with other title III programs.

2. Distribution of Funds Among Tribal Organizations: Section 602 requires the Commissioner to first fund FY 1991 title VI grantees at their FY 1991 levels before funding new title VI grants. By including this provision, the members of the committees of jurisdiction emphasize that the participation of new tribal organizations in this program is not precluded.

The bill also requires the Commissioner to direct any additional appropriations to organizations who received title VI grants in FY 1980 and received lower funding in succeeding years or to organizations who did not receive a grant in FY 1980 or FY 1991.

3. Applications by Organizations Serving Native Hawaiians: Section 603 requires applicants to assure they will coordinate with title III programs.

4. Distribution of Funds Among Organizations: Section 604 requires the Commissioner to fund native Hawaiian organizations at least at their FY 1991 level.

5. Authorizations of Appropriations: Section 605 authorizes $30,000,000 in FY 1992 and then such sums as may be necessary for fiscal years thereafter for title VI: 90% to go to Part A, 10% to go to Part B.

TITLE VII—ELDER RIGHTS SERVICES

The bill creates a new title VII regarding elder rights services. The new title is based, in part, upon a finding that there is a need to consolidate and expand State responsibility for the development, coordination, and management of statewide programs and services directed toward ensuring that older individuals have access to, and assistance in securing and maintaining, benefits and rights.

While more than persons in any other age group, older individuals rely on public benefit programs and services to meet income, housing, and health and supportive services needs, the members of the committees of jurisdiction are concerned that: it is estimated that only half of older individuals eligible for benefits under the supplemental security income program are currently enrolled; it is estimated that only half of older individuals eligible for food stamps receive assistance; and that it is estimated that less than half of older individuals eligible for benefits under the medicaid program are currently enrolled.

Critical purposes for establishing this title include, but are not limited to, the need to:

(1) assist States in securing and maintaining for older individuals dignity, security, privacy, the exercise of individual initiative, access to resources and benefits to which the individuals are entitled by law, and protection from abuse, neglect, and exploitation;

The bill requires States to provide additional assurances related to title VII as part of the state plan submitted under section 307. However, the current title III requirements governing the allocation of funds within states are not applicable to funds made available under any part of title VII nor are area agencies the only entities eligible to receive grants from states under any part of title VII. In addition states may use funds available under title VII to directly carry out vulnerable elder rights protection activities;

(2) require States to undertake a comprehensive approach in developing and maintaining elder rights programs;

(3) require States to give priority to protecting the rights of, and securing and maintaining benefits and services for, older individuals with the greatest economic or social need;

(4) require States, in making grants and entering into contracts to carry out programs to protect elder rights, to give preference as appropriate to AAAs and other entities with a proven track record in performing elder rights activities; and

(5) authorize States to plan and develop programs and systems of individual representation, investigation, advocacy, protection, counseling, and assistance from older individuals.

The State agency is required to submit annually to the Commissioner on Aging and to other appropriate State agencies a report of elder rights activities and issues. Such report shall include an analysis of data regarding elder rights based on reports of abuse, neglect, or exploitation; complaints regarding long-term care or from residents of long-term care facilities; reports of consumer fraud and abuse; reports of requests for and the provision of emergency protective services; reports of legal assistance and advocacy required to provide protection; and reports regarding the failure of older individuals to secure benefits for which the persons are eligible.

1. Authorizations for Vulnerable Elder Rights Protection Activities: Section 701 authorizes appropriations of $40,000,000 for the ombudsman provisions for FY 1992 and then such sums as may be necessary for fiscal years thereafter; $15,000,000 for the prevention of abuse, neglect, and exploitation of older individuals in FY 1992 and then such sums as may be necessary for fiscal years thereafter; $10,000,000 for state elder rights and legal assistance development programs for FY 1992 and such sums as may be necessary for fiscal years thereafter; and $15,000,000 for the outreach, counseling, and assistance program for FY 1992 and then such sums as may be necessary for fiscal years thereafter.

The bill also authorizes $5,000,000 for FY 1992 and such sums as may be necessary for fiscal years thereafter for a program to fund organizations who serve Native Americans to protect the rights of vulnerable elderly.

Title VII funds are to be allotted differently than allotments in title III. It is the intent of the members of the committees of jurisdiction that funds should first be allotted on the basis of population and then adjusted on a pro rata basis to ensure that minimum amounts have been allotted. The bill also allows confidential information to be given to a licensing or certification agency, ombudsman program, protection or advocacy system, or upon court order.

2. Ombudsman Programs: Section 702 adds new requirements regarding residents receiving timely access to the Ombudsman service, representation of residents' rights, the provision of administrative and technical assistance, the procedures of access and consent for Ombudsmen, protection of the Ombudsman from retaliation, and the training of Ombudsman and her/his representatives.

Because of the responsibility of Ombudsmen to investigate and resolve complaints pertaining to the health, safety, welfare and rights of long-term care facility residents, the members of the committees of jurisdiction emphasize that it is essential that such ombudsmen have full access to facilitate, residents and appropriate records, including the records of facility residents.

Nothing in this Act is intended to preclude or deter States from providing additional authorities to the Ombudsmen if deemed appropriate or necessary. A State may find it appropriate and necessary to provide Ombudsmen with a right of access to such records in a manner at least consistent with the access authority of State's long-term care facility licensing and certification officials. In the event a State provides the Ombudsman with such authority it is incumbent upon the SUA to vigorously protect the Ombudsman program's ability to thoroughly investigate and resolve complaints.

TITLE VIII—AMENDMENTS TO OTHER LAWS; RELATED MATTERS

Subtitle A—Long-term health care workers

The bill requires the Directors of the National Center for Health Statistics and the Centers for Disease Control to collect data and prepare a report regarding long-term care health care workers, including those employed by adult day care centers and other community-based settings.

Subtitle B—National School Lunch Act

The bill amends the National Student Lunch Act to clarify a USDA interpretation that classified group homes in the community as "institutions" under the School Lunch Act. This amendment goes into effect as if it were part of the 1987 Older Americans Act amendments.

Subtitle C—Native American Programs

Sections 821 and 822 amend the Native American Programs Act of 1974.

The bill establishes within the DHHS the Administration for Native Americans to be headed by a Commissioner. The Commissioner shall be appointed by the President and approved by the Senate. The Commissioner's duties shall include administration of grant programs, coordination of departmental activities affecting Native Americans, service as their active and visible advocate within the Department and compilation of information for the Secretary's annual report on social conditions of Native Americans.

The bill also requires that the Secretary assure that staff and administrative support is provided adequately to the Administration to meet responsibilities described in this legislation and to establish within the Secretary's Office, the Intra-Departmental Council on Native American Affairs, made up of the heads of principal operating divisions within the Department and others designated by the Secretary.

The bill identifies the Office of Hawaiian Affairs of the State of Hawaii as a revolving loan fund recipient (described in Sec. 803(a)(1) of the Act), by ending the prohibition against loans after a five year period, by authorizing the Native Hawaiian Revolving Loan Fund through 1994 and requiring matching contributions from the Office of Hawaiian Affairs. These amendments also repeal 1987 amendments that would have required certain funds to be deposited in the Treasury and the Secretary to deliver certain reports in 1989 and 1991, and prescribe new requirements for annual reports to the Congress from the Commissioner with respect to the loan fund.

The bill requires the Commissioner to provide technical assistance to potential applicants for funding and to applicants initially denied awards, and to provide short term training for persons carrying out funded projects.

The bill requires the Secretary of HHS to report annually by January 31 to the Congress on the social and economic conditions of Native Americans and to make recommendations as appropriate.

The bill provides for Secretarial review of the Commissioner's finding that an organization or proposed activity is ineligible for funding and gives the authority of providing procedure for appeals, notice and hearing to the Commissioner instead of the Secretary. The bill also changes the authority to provide financial assistance through grants or contracts for research, demonstration, or pilot projects, and the authority to make public announcements regarding such projects from the Secretary of HHS to the Commissioner.

The bill authorizes the Commissioner to extend employment preference to Native Americans, based upon the Office of Indian Education preference provision (P.L. 100-297).

The bill requires the Commissioner of the Administration for Native Americans (ANA) to give preference in contracting to individuals who are eligible for assistance under this title, and requiring the Commissioner to encourage agencies receiving grants to give preference to such individuals.

The bill requires evaluations of ANA-assisted projects to be evaluated at least every three years.

The bill authorizes "such sums as may be necessary" for fiscal year 1992 for all programs under this Act with certain exceptions.

The bill eliminates the threshold for eligibility for grants to Pacific Islanders.

In addition, no statutory change is required to assure the eligibility of the Office of Hawaiian Affairs and Department of Hawaiian Homelands, as both are clearly eligible as "public . . . agencies serving Native Hawaiians" (42 U.S.C. 2991b). Further, it is hoped that provisions in the bill expanding the amount of discretionary funding available to the ANA will enable the Administration to provide improved levels of technical assistance to applicants and grantees in non-contiguous areas through contractors or sub-contractors in those areas.

Finally, the Department of Health and Human Services through ANA is directed to enter into discussions as soon as possible with appropriate officials of the Department of Defense to develop and execute a memorandum of understanding, memorandum of agreement, interagency agreement or other appropriate vehicle to provide procedures for disbursement of the $8 million appropriated for the Department of Defense for mitigation of environmental damage to Indian tribes from defense operations. The disbursement of these funds through competitive grants to tribes and tribal membership organizations will assist in their planning, development and implementation of programs for such environmental defense mitigation.

Subtitle D—White House Conference on Aging

As demographers project that the portion of the population age 55 or older will continue to increase well into the next century, the need for a national strategy session to address the implications of an aging population is imperative. With these changes private individuals and groups representing the field of aging will, for the first time, participate equally in the development of Federal aging policy.

It is intended that the mission of this Conference will continue to be that of assessing the most appropriate public policies to meet the needs and to enhance the contributions of older Americans. The Conference must be free to make any recommendations for action which are necessary to realize the goals of health, happiness, and security for all older Americans. Such recommendations for action should be considered in the light of the overall aging of the population and in the context of the relationship of generations. Recommendations from the Conference should consider the overall aging of the population in the context of the relationship between the generations.

It is the intent of the members of the committees of jurisdiction that the Conference includes a conference on the needs of older Indians and that such conference be conducted on a national basis in coordination with national entities having expertise in the needs of older Indians. Furthermore, in conducting such conference on older Indians, the White House Conference on Aging is to provide such resources as are necessary to support such a conference.

Section 832 requires the President to convene a White House Conference on Aging in 1993. It also requires delegates to the Conference to include professionals, nonprofessionals, minorities, and low-income family members.

Sections 833, 834, and 835 add new requirements regarding the administration of the Conference, including the composition and duties of the Policy Committee, necessary record keeping, and approval of the Conference report.

Section 836 authorizes such sums as may be necessary for FY 92 and FY 93, with funds available until Jan. 1, 1995 or one year after the Conference adjourns, whichever is earlier. Funds not expended or obligated shall go to carry out the Older Americans Act.

Section 838 states the sense of the Congress that impact of the Social Security earnings test should be considered by the Conference.

TITLE IX—GENERAL PROVISIONS

Section 905 states these amendments shall take effect upon enactment of this Act, except that Sections 303(a)(2), 303(a)(3), 303(f), 304, 305, 306, 307, 316, 317, 320, 410, 411, 413, 414, 415, 416, 418, 419, 501, 504, 506, 601, 603, and all sections in title VII shall not apply for fiscal year 1992.

Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume. I rise in support of the Older Americans Act and the pending amendment. With this amendment, we will make life a bit more comfortable for thousands of senior citizens who need our help. We will assure the passage of the Older Americans Act amendments—which target funds for meals and other services for senior citizens in the greatest need; we will improve Social Security benefits for very old widows—those widows who are among the poorest of all the elderly; and we will liberalize the Social Security retirement earnings test in a way that helps middle-income working seniors—by focusing the maximum retirement test relief on those who need it most.

The proposed amendment also includes a provision effectively restoring the previous FICA exemption for election workers. I have received many letters about this provision from Members of the House—asking the Ways and Means Committee to pass this provision as expeditiously as possible.

The compromise reflected in the pending amendment deserves the support of my colleagues for two reasons. First, it liberalizes the Social Security retirement earnings test in a way that benefits middle-income Social Security beneficiaries. This is in contrast to the proposal in the Senate amendment to repeal the retirement test completely. That proposal would increase spending by nearly $28 billion over the next 5 years.

Second, the compromise would make life easier for elderly widows. From hearings in the Ways and Means Subcommittee on Social Security, we know that older women living alone are among the poorest Social Security beneficiaries. Many of these women are widows in their eighties and nineties who lost their husbands at a time when they were too old to enter the labor force, yet young enough to face several decades of widowhood. As a consequence of living alone for many years, they may have depleted their resources and thus are relying on Social Security as their sole source of income. The compromise would make life easier for this group by increasing Social Security benefits for widows who are 80 and over—who now receive actuarially reduced payments.

Mr. Speaker, I want to stress that the increase in widows' benefits in this bill is modest. About 800,000 widows will receive about $50 a month in additional benefits. This is in contrast to the benefit increase associated with raising the retirement earnings limit—800,000 working senior citizens will receive a maximum increase in benefits of over $200 a month—or four times the amount we are providing for widows who are unable to work to supplement their incomes.

While I know that many of my colleagues have become convinced of the need for this increase in benefits for working senior citizens, I hope they will be equally sensitive about the need for an increase in benefits for those who are widowed and are generally past the age where they are able to work.

Mr. Speaker, I include for the RECORD a section-by-section summary of the Ways and Means provisions of the pending amendment, and urge adoption of the Older Americans Act as amended.

SECTION-BY-SECTION DESCRIPTION OF THE WAYS AND MEANS PROVISIONS OF THE AMENDMENT

1. INCREASE IN RETIREMENT EARNINGS TEST

The social security retirement earnings test exempt amount for individuals age 65-69 would be nearly doubled over 5 years, from $10,200 in 1992 under current law to $20,000 in 1997 under the provision. The exempt amount would be set at $12,000 in 1993, $14,000 in 1994, $16,000 in 1995, $18,000 in 1996 and $20,000 in 1997. In addition, the social security trust fund would be credited with the net increase in revenues (income taxes on earnings from wages and self-employment) attributable to the increase in the retirement test. The provisions would be effective beginning in 1993.

2. DECREASE IN ACTUARIAL REDUCTIONS FOR WIDOWS

Under current law, widow(er)s who first file for benefits before age 65 (or at age 50-59 in the case of disabled widow(er)s) have their basic benefit permanently reduced for every month before age 65 in which they receive benefits. The reduction amounts to 5.7 percent per year, for a maximum reduction of 28.5 percent at age 60. The provision would eliminate this reduction for widow(er)s age 80 and over.

Under current law, if the deceased spouse of a widow(er) received a reduced retirement benefit because he or she retired before age 65, the widow(er) cannot receive a benefit that exceeds the higher of the spouse's reduced benefit or 82.5 percent of the benefit the spouse would have received had he or she retired at age 65. The 82.5 percent limit is known as the "widows' limit." The provision would increase the widows' limit to 90 percent for widow(er)s age 80 and over.

Widow(er)s who would otherwise lose their supplemental security income (SSI) and medicaid benefits as a result of the increase in social security widow(er)s' benefits would be held harmless with respect to their medicaid benefits.

The provision would be effective for benefits payable for months after November, 1992 and would apply to both current and future eligible beneficiaries.

3. ELIMINATION OF 7-YEAR RULE FOR DISABLED WIDOW(ER)S

Under current law, a disabled widow(er) age 50-59 is not eligible for widow(er)s' benefits if the disability began more than seven years after the date of the spouse's death or more than seven years after entitlement to mother's or father's benefits (which are paid to a widow(er) who has a child under age 16 in his or her care) ends. The provision would eliminate this limitation on eligibility for disabled widow(er)s' benefits. The provision would be effective for benefits payable for months after August, 1992, but only on the basis of applications filed or pending on or after September 1, 1992.

4. SOCIAL SECURITY EXCLUSION FOR ELECTION WORKERS

Under current law, elections workers who earn less than $100 per year are subject to three social security exclusions: (a) at the option of a State, they may be excluded from the State's voluntary coverage agreement with the Secretary of Health and Human Services (HHS); (b) they are excluded from the requirement that State and local workers hired after March 31, 1986, pay the hospital insurance portion of the social security tax (1.45 percent); and (c) they are excluded from the requirement in the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1990 (P.L. 101-508) that State and local workers who are neither covered by a State or local retirement system nor a voluntary agreement pay the full social security tax (7.65 percent).

Effective January 1, 1993, these three exclusions would be increased to apply to election workers with annual earnings of up to $1,000, rather than the current $100. Beginning in 1994, they would be indexed for increases in wages in the economy.

5. MARRIAGE OF DISABLED ADULT CHILDREN (DACs)

Under current law, a disabled adult child (DAC) loses eligibility for title II social security benefits when he or she marries, unless the spouse is also a title II social security beneficiary. The provision would eliminate this restriction, permitting DACs to marry any person (beneficiary or non-beneficiary) without losing their social security and medicare benefits.

In addition, DACs who previously lost benefits because of marriage would be permitted to reapply; and those whose disabilities continue to exist would resume receiving benefits. The amount of their benefits would be updated to include all cost-of-living increases provided since they last received benefits. Those DACs who were previously eligible for medicare would have it reinstated simultaneously with their cash benefits. Those who were not would receive medicare after completing the time remaining in their two-year waiting period. The Social Security Administration would be required to make all reasonable efforts to locate DACs who previously lost benefits because of marriage and inform them of their reapplication rights.

The provision would be effective with respect to marriages occurring after September 1, 1992. For DACs who lost benefits because they married prior to that date, the provision would apply with respect to benefits for months beginning after the later of: (a) August 31, 1992, (b) five full calendar months after the onset of the disability, or (c) 12 months before the date of reapplication.

6. STUDY BY THE GENERAL ACCOUNTING OFFICE OF THE DISABILITY DETERMINATION PROCESS

The General Accounting Office would be required to investigate the reasons for the high rate of reversal of the Social Security Administration's initial disability determinations on appeal and to report its findings by December 1, 1992.

7. TECHNICAL AMENDMENT

The provision would clarify current law relating to fees for social security claimants' representatives in concurrent title II/title XVI cases to prevent approval of excessive fees. The provision would take effect as if it had been included in the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1990.

□ 2240

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. ARCHER. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, on the surface, the amendment before the House tonight is extremely seductive. When we scratch beneath its tempting outer layers, however, it is nothing more than election year politics as usual. As the House author for more than 20 years of legislation to repeal the onerous Social Security earnings limitation, I would like personally nothing more than to claim victory tonight and join in supporting this amendment, even though it falls short of complete repeal. I cannot in conscience do so. The price is too high. I care too deeply about the preservation of a sound Social Security system, not just for today's retirees, but for our children and our grandchildren who will have to pay the price now and in the future for the new benefits attached to this package.

I have no problem whatsoever with the partial earnings repeal contained in the amendment, although I continue to strongly favor total repeal. It is the fiscally and economically prudent thing to do. Official actuarial projections of the Social Security Administration show that even total repeal would be, for all practical purposes, a financial wash to the fund over the long-term period that the actuaries are required to project under the law. Repeal, or a substantial increase in the earnings limit, is a very smart thing to do given the aging American population and our need to keep the talents, experience, and energy of seniors in the work force.

What troubles me, Mr. Speaker, are the other provisions of the amendment which will place a permanent drain on the trust funds during the same actuarial period. The widows benefit, which is politically so tantalizing, is purely and simply an election year expansion of benefits. Mr. Speaker, I watched this over and over again in the 1960's and the early 1970's, until finally there was the culmination, that reform which initiated the COLA's that were put into effect to curb the political spending appetites of the Congress. And now here is a new entitlement program for which no premium has ever been paid. We are back to the races.

Let us fully understand, Mr. Speaker, how this amendment changes the current law. Under the current law the widow or widower of a deceased worker can elect to take an actuarially reduced benefit by beginning to draw the benefit at age 60 instead of either 62 or 65. That election is available under the current law to every widow and widower.

Now this amendment provides that if that widow or widower lives to be 80 years of age, he or she automatically is jumped up to the full benefit, as if the beneficiary had never made the election to receive reduced benefits earlier. The beneficiary could receive the full benefit that he or she would have received by waiting until 65 to start drawing the benefits. The actuarially reduced benefit is smaller for those who elect to take it early because the years that it will be paid will be longer. Under this amendment, if they live to 80, those beneficiaries would receive gratuitously the full benefit that they elected earlier not to wait until age 65 to receive.

Moreover, this amendment is being falsely advertised as helping the poorest of the poor. It simply does not do that. The poorest of the poor receive supplemental security income benefits in addition to their Social Security benefits. But they must file a financial statement and comply with a means test. If this amendment is passed, the recipients who are poor will lose dollar for dollar from their SSI benefits those additional Social Security benefits they receive. It is of no help to the poorest of the poor.

In fact, Mr. Speaker, the greatest benefit in this proposal goes to those widows and some widowers, as I said, who least need it. The appropriate way to help those in need is by revising SSI, reforming the means test program, not by an election year increase in Social Security benefits.

Members should also be alert to the fact that the structure of this new widows entitlement program creates a notch problem similar to the other Social Security notch about which we have received so much mail.

□ 2250

Those who have been outspoken on the issue of tax fairness should take special heed. The expanded benefits in this amendment apply to widows and widowers aged 80 and older regardless of income. Nothing is provided for those who are 79 years of age or younger, regardless of need.

How can a Congressman go to his district and defend giving extra benefits to one who is 80 who is financially well off and denying them to one who is 79 who is truly in financial need?

It will not be long before you are hearing about the unfairness of providing a new benefit to wealthy 80-year-olds, while denying needy 79-year-olds similar help. The program will be expanded with a bigger and bigger drain on the Social Security fund.

Mr. Speaker, this amendment represents exactly the kind of pandering we were trying to get away from when we substituted the automatic COLA's for election year benefit increases that were passed over and over again back in the sixties and seventies. Now here we are again, legislating unfunded benefit increases in an election year in the hope of currying the favor of senior citizens.

Mr. Speaker, we have a greater responsibility than that. If this bill passes, there will be a new entitlement spending program which will steadily drain the trust funds and increase the deficit, not just for the short term, but for all years to come.

That point was made clearly and effectively by the chairman of the Committee on the Budget, the gentleman from California [Mr. PANETTA]. I know his concern over the budgetary impact of this amendment is shared by many in this Chamber.

Ironically, in 1989 all 23 Democrat members of the Committee on Ways and Means sponsored legislation to create the point of order in current House rules against legislation that increases Social Security benefits without offsetting deposits in the trust fund. We should wait to consider this legislation when we know the answers to these important budget questions. We should not waive that very point of order today under the gag rule that we are operating under.

Mr. Speaker, I do not know what choice others are going to make, but for my part, I am going to do what I think is right; vote for both the short-term and the long-term health of our Social Security System. It may or may not be the political thing to do in this election year, but that is the way I have always approached the tough Social Security problems, with a concern for the young, as well as the old.

Mr. Speaker, it is not fair to the young. I happen to believe that saying "no" to political pandering and instead fighting for responsible answers to problems is good politics, too. Defeat this amendment. It's the responsible thing to do.

Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentlewoman from Ohio [Ms. OAKAR].

Ms. OAKAR. Mr. Speaker, I am amazed at what I just heard. One would think widows in this country are fat cats. Let me tell you something: Women who are 80 and over are the poorest people in the country.

Mr. Speaker, I am proud to say that I voted against the Reagan budget of 1981 which reduced and eliminated a minimum benefit for Social Security recipients who were getting a minimum benefit of $128 a month. By eliminating that, you put them on a schedule that would give them $98 a month.

The fact is most displaced homemakers are between 52 and 60, and very often they do not have any other source of income. So if you want to give them the $50 more a month that they deserve and put them up to $175 a month, I want the gentleman who just spoke to tell us how he would like to live on $175 a month or $200 a month. So I am proud that the widows benefit is in the bill.

Mr. Speaker, I also want to thank again the gentleman from California [Mr. MARTINEZ] and the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. FORD], because finally after 11 years we have passed the Elder Abuse Act that Claude Pepper and I introduced in 1981. We found then that there were 1 million older Americans who were abused, and these abused were never reported. Ten years later we waited for this bill to pass. The abuse incident was up by 50 percent to 1.5 million.

In this bill we say that we grant immunity to people who report abuse. Most abuse is done by children, unfortunately, who are alcoholics, drug addicts, have problems and long-term financial difficulties. Unfortunately, older people cannot get out of an abusive situation.

Mr. Speaker, finally in this Congress we are doing something humane about passing the Older American Act, which includes the Elder Abuse Prevention Identification and Treatment Act. This is finally one of the few terrific bills that we have had on the floor. It is about time we get back to issues. I congratulate the Chairs for their support.

Mr. ARCHER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5½ minutes to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. ARMEY].

Mr. ARMEY. Mr. Speaker, we have brought ourselves to the point where we have a very complex and difficult decision to make. In the final analysis we will be able to identify gainers and we will be able to identify losers. We will have to assess both in the long run and in the short run whether the gains of the gainers more than compensate for the losses to the losers.

So let us look at it. We all agree that we wanted the Older Americans Act to be passed and enacted as quickly as possible for so many good reasons. That is not what the debate here is tonight.

What we are debating tonight is this new amendment that only a few of us have seen and studied. The amendment deals first and foremost with this business of age discrimination. Mr. Speaker, it is age discrimination that we have in the form of the earnings limitation we imposed on senior citizens.

The earnings limitation imposition on the right to work of American senior citizens is fundamentally wrong. It is a blatant act of age discrimination perpetrated against all senior citizens by the Federal Government. It is fundamentally wrong, and we should have had a vote as to whether or not we wanted to repeal it outright and eliminate that fundamental immoral act of this Government. But we voted that option away when we passed this rule.

Now we have an opportunity to look at the chance that we might raise that cap from roughly $10,000 to $20,000. That is the thing we can do if we vote yes, something that is fundamentally wrong with a more generous number, rather than a more stingy number.

So we can be less stingy in our immorality, and that makes us feel somewhat better.

Mr. Speaker, I think we ought to do that. We ought to give the seniors some chance. For many it makes an enormous difference.

Then in addition to that we have what is in fact the real controversial aspect of this amendment and the one that is so potentially devastating to the Social Security Program in the long run, to your children's rights under that program in the long run, that it must require your serious and sober consideration, because here is where the losers come. Here is where we default on the whole concept of Social Security as a paid benefits program, where people can look at the program benefits in their older years with pride, that they are getting what they paid for.

In order to redefine this program and take Social Security on that first tragic step in the direction of an entitlement program that is means tested, which it never was intended to be, we are offering our needy widows no more than what they are able to get today under current law.

□ 2300

What increase in Social Security benefits they will get, if they are needy widows, under this program will be totally offset by the reduction in benefits they have in SSI. So make no mistake, the needy widows are not gainers in the amendment. They are not losers. They get nothing in terms of a change from current law.

Who does benefit by this change? The nonneedy widows who today do not qualify for benefits under SSI.

Whoever defines the needs test under SSI today defines who is and who is not a needy widow. And by that definition, we will be adding to these benefits those who do not qualify under current law.

Now, that is a generous and a kind thing to do on the face of it, but it is an enormously expensive thing to do. At the same time, even by CBO, an organization of this body that is chronically wrong, at $3.2 billion, I would suggest that it will be at least twice that every year forever and growing.

And we also create a new notch. If there is anything that is more inequitable, unfair, unkind, unjust by America's seniors than the earnings limitation, if there is anything that they resent more than the earnings limitation, it is the notch. We are going to have a new group of notch babies created by this law.

It is fundamentally wrong. It is not correct. It is not moral. And we are going to put in the Social Security benefits for our children in jeopardy while we impose on them during their working years the inevitable increase in Social Security taxes at the job.

Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Florida [Mr. SMITH].

Mr. SMITH of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me.

I rise today to support H.R. 2967 for all of the wonderful programs it brings to the elderly people of this country as well as for Chairman ROSTENKOWSKI's amendment liberalizing the Social Security earnings test.

The present structure of the Social Security earnings test creates a disincentive for people to work or continue working, which keeps millions of qualified, competent seniors out of the labor market. The earnings test forces many skilled workers to abandon their careers and seek lower paying or part-time work in order to protect their Social Security benefits. A raise in the maximum allowed income will stimulate significant economic growth which will lead to an increase in Federal revenue in excess of billions of dollars.

I have been firmly committed to repealing the earnings test for years. In the previous Congress and this one, I introduced legislation that would repeal the earnings test and allow seniors to work and earn as much as they possibly could. A repeal of this test would allow our Nation to fully tap into the network of older workers. While I would prefer a total repeal of the earnings test, I welcome this liberalization of the current means test as it is a step in the right direction.

Over the past two decades we have seen a dramatic change in our work force, and the next 20 years will bring about even more change. Currently, about two-thirds of male workers 62-65 are employed and about half of female workers 62-65 are employed. Older workers are less likely to leave their current employer or occupation than younger workers. Older workers are represented in larger percentages than younger workers in executive, administrative, and managerial occupations, professional specialties, sales occupations, farming, forestry, and fishing.

We talk about helping those who are most in need. We talk and talk about helping people to help themselves. Here we can do both. We can permit the people who want and need to work, work. We can raise the maximum earning level and allow seniors to stay productive in their jobs, earning a salary without paying the punishment of losing their Social Security benefits. I urge all Members to support the Rostenkowski earnings test compromise.

Mr. ARCHER. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he many consume to the gentleman from New York [Mr. SOLOMON].

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, I rise to speak on the legislation.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in the strongest possible support of this legislation which has taken a major step toward finally resolving the earnings test that penalizes older Americans for earned income while drawing Social Security.

Mr. Speaker, the Federal Government has no right to tax the Social Security check of anyone. American workers have worked all their lives, paid taxes, and paid into the Social Security trust fund. The money they paid into the Social Security trust fund has already been taxed and should not be taxable again when those funds are paid back to them in the form of Social Security checks.

There are millions of elderly Americans who for one reason or another were unable to save enough to provide a decent return income. This legislation will allow more of them to earn up to $20,000 annually without being penalized by losing part of their Social Security benefits. That is why I support this legislation and I urge all Members to vote with me on this vital legislation.

Mr. ARCHER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes and 30 seconds to the gentleman from Arizona [Mr. KOLBE].

Mr. KOLBE. Mr. Speaker, this is a dilemma for us tonight. I suspect not only for myself but, I think, for a lot of my colleagues on both sides of the aisle.

I strongly support reauthorization of the Older Americans Act. The programs that are in there are good programs. I have been around my district. I have seen those programs. I know what it does.

I am also an original cosponsor of the bill that would have eliminated the earnings test for Social Security recipients, but I have never advocated repealing that without consideration of the affect that it would have on the Social Security trust fund. And in CBO's own budget estimate, shown here this evening, it is not insubstantial at $3.7 billion over the next 5 years.

I suspect it could be more than that, but this evening I want to direct my remarks to my colleagues on this side of the aisle.

Just a few days ago, we attacked some Members on the other side. We attacked the legislation that was brought to the floor because it did away with the budget summit agreement when it removed the cap on domestic discretionary, international, and defense spending.

We said that it violated the budget summit agreement, and we were right. It did do that. It violated that budget summit agreement.

But somehow here tonight, we are now willing to set aside that budget summit agreement in order to do something for a group of constituents that we know are going to vote. We are going to do it, and toss it out on the Social Security trust fund and on this creation of a new entitlement.

The Summit Agreement said that any change to benefits and beneficiaries under the Social Security trust fund had to meet two tests: that it did not destroy the viability of the trust fund in a 5-year timeframe or a 75-year timeframe, but tonight with the rule we adopted, we waived both of those tests. That is wrong.

And then as my colleague from Texas has pointed out, this creates another notch and raises the benefit for widows, but only those widows, once they reach the age of 80.

And for that, the cost is going to be another $3.2 billion.

How long do we think it is going to be before we hear from people who say, let us reduce that number to 75, then to 70, and then down to 65? And what is going to be the cost of that?

My colleague, the gentlewoman from Ohio [Ms. OAKAR] earlier in the debate on the rule talked about the fact that there was a surplus in the Social Security trust fund and that this was good, that we should spend some of this money on this. I can remember the debate when we removed the Social Security trust fund from the budget. We said that this was exactly what would happen, that Members would argue, indeed, let us spend some of that money for immediate gratification, immediate benefits.

But we are robbing our children. We are robbing our grandchildren in order to get votes today. So here we are, Mr. Speaker, with this dilemma. We are faced with this dilemma of what should we do. I say that we should defeat this bill tonight so that we can have an opportunity to vote on a clean reauthorization of the Older Americans Act and that we can have an opportunity to vote on elimination or change to the earnings test for Social Security recipients but one that does not violate the budget summit agreement and one that we can all go home and hold our head up high on.

Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute and 30 seconds to the gentlewoman from Ohio [Ms. OAKAR].

Ms. OAKAR. Mr. Speaker, I thank the chairman for yielding time to me. Since the previous speaker misquoted me, I want to say what I mean and what I said.

The Social Security trust fund should be a fund that exists on its own the way it was when Roosevelt signed it into law.

□ 2310

Unfortunately, some people would like it used, if there is a surplus, to offset the deficit. The fact is that we have a huge deficit because of the largest item in the budget, which is the military budget. That is right. Members can boo me all they want, but I think most senior citizens want the Social Security trust fund on its own out of the budget. So do not go using their money to offset the deficit that is being spent by other items in the budget like the biggest item, which is the defense budget.

Second, the Social Security budget is being paid for, the Social Security trust fund is paid for by people who pay into the system, whether they are employers or employees. That is their money, not ours to borrow for other items.

So the fact is there is a surplus, and we are using the surplus, part of it, a very small part, to correct a gross inequity. I think it is about time we did.

Mr. Speaker, I rise today in very strong support of this conference report. I would like to begin by commending the conferees, especially Chairman FORD, for their outstanding leadership in public policy as it relates to the quality of life of older Americans. The conference report before us today provides for the continuation of a number of services which are vital to our senior citizens. These include supportive services, congregate and home-delivered meals, the community service employment programs, and other initiatives dedicated to maintaining the health, vitality, and independence of older Americans. Current statistics indicate that malnutrition has been reported in 52 to 85 percent of all long-term care patients, and the focus of this conference report on nutrition among the elderly comes at a very critical time.

I also commend Chairman ROSTENKOWSKI for his leadership in taking a giant step in the right direction on two issues related to Social Security that are included in this report. I have always advocated the elimination of the unfair Social Security earnings test on Americans age 65 to 70. This report goes a long way toward alleviating the unfairness of that provision. Today our Nation faces many new global challenges while a great number of Americans are approaching retirement age. We should encourage these Americans with all their talent and experience to remain in the work force—not discourage them.

Yesterday, I testified before Mr. JACOBS' Social Security Subcommittee in my capacity as Chair of the Aging Subcommittee Task Force on Social Security and Women. I urged passage of several bills I have carried for some time related to the economic status of older women—including legislation to provide more adequate benefits to widows who enter Social Security coverage before age 65. Chairman JACOBS promised me that the subcommittee would work to eliminate some of these inequities. I certainly did not anticipate such immediate results, but I am delighted that the improvements made in this bill take a step in that direction. It is a small but significant beginning, and I thank the members of the committee on Ways and Means who made the improvements in widows' benefits a part of this conference report.

Mr. Speaker, I must especially thank Chairman FORD and Mr. MARTINEZ for adopting the critical provisions of my legislation, H.R. 385, the Elder Abuse Prevention, Identification, and Treatment Act of 1991. I would also like to take this opportunity to thank Chairman ROYBAL who has always displayed tremendous leadership on these issues, and also worked on this bill. I am delighted that the distinguished chairman of the Education and Labor Committee, Mr. FORD of Michigan, along with my good friend, Human Resources Subcommittee Chairman MARTINEZ, has included in this legislation all of the critical elements of my bill, H.R. 385, the Elder Abuse Prevention, Identification, and Treatment Act of 1991.

I also wish to thank Members of the other body, especially Senator ADAMS and Senator DECONCINI, for their efforts to include the same provisions. Chairman FORD worked to include the critical elements of the initiative as it is detailed in my bill, H.R. 385. This elder abuse provision represents a bold new policy direction in dealing with this tragic problem in our Nation. It has always been the intention of the House Select Aging Committee that national policy on elder abuse be patterned after our successful efforts to deal with the problem of child abuse. The primary goal is to promote vigorous, extensive coordination among public authorities, health providers, social workers, and others who encounter elder abuse where 70 percent of it occurs—in the home.

I am now closer than ever to seeing the completion of my 10-year effort, which I began with the support of our late colleague, Senator Claude Pepper, who first coined the term "elder abuse." Over a decade has passed since the Aging Committee's first report on the problem which called for the passage of my legislation. Last year, a new report, issued under the leadership of our Aging Committee Chairman ROYBAL, found that since that first committee report the incidence of elder abuse has increased 50 percent. In the 10 years it has taken to get this bill enacted there have been 10 to 15 million cases of elder abuse in the United States.

This conference report contains all of the essential provisions of my legislation, H.R. 385. As I have mentioned, my legislation is patterned after very successful Federal programs which address the terrible problem of child abuse. The bill calls for the creation of a national center on elder abuse to conduct research and disseminate information to the States on all aspects of the problem. The bill before us authorizes funding for State grants and demonstration projects to address the problem of elder abuse, which like child abuse, occurs most often, not in institutional settings, but in the home. Grant funding will be used in a comprehensive effort to promote coordination among State and local authorities, social workers, and health professionals who are in a position to prevent, identify, or treat the problem. The funding will also be available for training programs that give such people the tools they need to prevent elder abuse from occurring, identify the problem when it does occur, and to assist those who are affected.

It is difficult to believe that this problem is so prevalent in our Nation—we hate to even think about it. Yet, an estimated 1.5 million cases occurred in the United States last year. One out of every twenty older Americans fell prey to some form of serious abuse or neglect. It is an even greater shame that while only one out of every three child abuse cases is reported every year, only one out of every eight elder abuse cases gets reported to the proper authorities.

Mr. Speaker, this is truly a watershed day for the victims of elder abuse, fraud, and neglect in the United States. Again I would say to Chairman FORD, the conference report is a tribute to his continued concern for the quality of life of our Nation's senior citizens. This is consistent with all of the great work we have done together on the Post Office and Civil Service Committee in support of our Nation's Federal retirees.

I repeat my thanks to Mr. MARTINEZ of California, House Aging Committee Chairman ROYBAL, and the entire Education and Labor Committee for this excellent bill before us today. I must also thank all those who have cosponsored my legislation, H.R. 385. I support the entire bill and I urge passage of this critical legislation.

The following is a summary of what the bill does. In addition is a summary of the two reports and other information. I wish to thank my current staff including former staff member Carol Miller, R.N. and the Aging Committee staff, especially Kathy Gardner.

SUMMARY OF H.R. 385, THE ELDER ABUSE PREVENTION, IDENTIFICATION, AND TREATMENT ACT OF 1991

NATIONAL CENTER ON ELDER ABUSE

H.R. 385 calls for the creation of a National Center on Elder Abuse. The Center will perform the following functions:

1. Compile, publish and disseminate a summary annually of recently conducted research on elder abuse, neglect, and exploitation;
2. Develop and maintain an information clearinghouse on all programs, including private programs, showing promise of success, for the prevention, identification, and treatment of elder abuse, neglect, and exploitation;
3. Compile, publish and disseminate training materials for personnel who are engaged or intend to engage in the prevention, identification, and treatment of elder abuse, neglect, and exploitation;
4. Provide technical assistance (directly or through grant or contract) to public and nonprofit private agencies and organizations to assist them in planning, improving, developing, and carrying out programs and activities relating to the special problems of elder abuse, neglect, and exploitation;
5. Conduct research into the causes of elder abuse, neglect, and exploitation, and into the prevention, identification, and treatment of elder abuse; and
6. Make a complete study and investigation of the national incidence of elder abuse, neglect, and exploitation, including a determination of the extent to which incidents of elder abuse, neglect, and exploitation are increasing in number or severity.

DEMONSTRATION PROGRAMS AND PROJECTS

The Secretary of Health and Human Services, through the Center is authorized to make grant to, and enter into contracts with, public agencies or nonprofit (or combinations thereof) for demonstration programs and projects designed to prevent, identify, and treat elder abuse, neglect, and exploitation. Grants may be used for:

1. The development and establishment of training programs for professional and paraprofessional personnel, in the fields of health, law, gerontology, social work, and other relevant fields, who are engaged in or, who intend to work in, the field of prevention, identification, and treatment of elder abuse;
2. The establishment and maintenance of centers, serving defined geographic areas, staffed by multidisciplinary teams of personnel trained in the special problems of elder abuse, neglect, and exploitation cases, to provide a broad range of services related to elder abuse, neglect, and exploitation, including direct support and supervision of sheltered housing programs, as well as providing advice and consultation to individuals, agencies, and organizations which request such services; and
3. Furnishing services of teams of professional and paraprofessional personnel who are trained in the special problems of elder abuse, neglect, and exploitation cases, on a consulting basis, to small communities where such services are not available.

The Secretary of Health and Human Services, through the Center, is authorized to make grants to the States for the purpose of assisting the States in developing, strengthening, and carrying out elder abuse, neglect, and exploitation programs.

Appropriations are authorized.

REQUIREMENTS FOR ASSISTANCE TO STATE PROGRAMS

1. States shall have in effect elder abuse, neglect, and exploitation laws which shall include provisions for immunity from prosecution for persons reporting instances of elder abuse.
2. States shall provide for the establishment of adequately staffed and trained adult protective services in order to substantiate the accuracy of reported neglect, abuse and exploitation, and must take steps in order to protect the health and welfare of the abused, neglected, or exploited elder.
3. States shall provide for methods to protect the confidentiality of records, in order to protect the rights of the elder.
4. States shall provide that the elder who is abused, neglected or exploited, participate in discussions regarding his or her own welfare, and provide that the least restrictive alternatives are available to such elder.
5. States shall provide matching funds, from non-federal sources, to pay 50 percent of the cost of assistance programs funded under the bill.

FACTS AND STATISTICS ON ELDER ABUSE

Based on the Aging Committee Report, "Elder Abuse: A Decade of Shame and Inaction."—May 1, 1990:

About 5 percent of the nation's elderly may be the victim of some form of abuse—physical, financial or emotional each year. About 1.5 million older Americans, or 1 in 20, are abused by family, loved ones, and caregivers each year.

The victims of elder abuse are likely to be old, age 75 or older.

Women are more likely to be abused than men—This is due, in part to their life expectancy—women, on average live longer than men—and are often less able to resist abusive treatment.

The victims are generally in a position of dependency. Most elder abuse occurs in the home setting.

The abused elder is less likely to report the incident of abuse than abused persons in other age groups.

Since the release of the Aging Committee's first report on elder abuse in 1981, the percentage of elder abuse cases reported has decreased from one in six to one in eight.

43 States and D.C. have what they consider to be adult protective service laws which require mandatory reporting of abuse—prior to 1980 only 16 States had such laws. However, there is little consistency among States as to penalties and who is required to report.

Since 1981, the primary source of Federal funding for adult protective services, the Social Services Block Grant, has been cut in real terms, one-third by direct cuts and inflation.

While some 40 percent of all reported abuse cases involve adults and elderly adults, only 4 percent of State budgets for protective services are committed to elderly protective services. The average state expenditure was $3.80 per elderly resident.

Some 70 percent of all adult abuse cases reported annually involve elderly victims.

The types of physical abuse include deliberate physical injury, sexual abuse and negligence. Other forms of abuse include financial abuse, psychological and emotional abuse.

Common profiles of elder abusers—experiencing great stress due to alcoholism, drug addition, marital problems, or long-term financial difficulties. The son of the victim is the most likely abuser, followed by the daughter of the abuser. It is apparent that the abused person is often ashamed to admit their child or loved ones abuse them and they often fear reprisals.

1981 AGING COMMITTEE REPORT

In 1981 an investigation was undertaken by the House Select Committee on Aging resulting in the report entitled "Elder Abuse: An Examination of a Hidden Problem." This report documented the committee's tragic finding that over 1,000,000 Americans are physically, financially, and emotionally abused by relatives or loved ones annually.

The committee found that elder abuse was a hidden problem. Out of fear or dependence on their abusers, only one of every six elder abuse victims were likely to come to the attention of authorities. It was recommended that States enact statutes, analogous to State child abuse statutes, designating an agency to identify and assist elder abuse victims. In addition Congress was urged to enact legislation which would provide financial assistance to those States with elder abuse statutes in place.

1990 COMMITTEE REPORT

In May of 1990, the House Aging Committee released a new report, aptly titled, "Elder Abuse: A Decade of Shame and Inaction." The report endorsed the passage of my legislation. The report found that 1.5 million (1 in 20) older Americans fell prey to serious abuse or neglect in 1988—a 50 percent increase over the findings of the committee's landmark 1980 study.

Most elder abuse occurs in the home and is committed by family members. 40 percent of all reported abuse in the U.S. is adult abuse—70 percent of adult abuse is elder abuse. Most of the abused are dependent upon their abusers, and many fear reprisal, or merely cannot overcome their instinctive love for their children to turn them in.

The problems that exist in our Nation's long-term care institutions represent only a small portion of the problem. Most elder abuse occurs in the home setting and is much more difficult to detect.

The likelihood is that the incidence of elder abuse is likely to continue to worsen in our Nation. The 85 year-old-and-older group in our Nation is the fastest growing segment of our society. By the year 2020 the over 65 population will double to over 65 million.

Mr. ARCHER. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. RAMSTAD].

Mr. RAMSTAD. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of this legislation.

Mr. Speaker, today I rise in strong support of H.R. 2967, which would reauthorize the Older Americans Act.

I am proud to support reauthorization of this important measure, which will provide essential programs for older Americans, such as preventive health care services, senior citizen centers, meals-on-wheels, and in-home care for frail, elderly persons.

In addition, this measure increases benefits for widows over the age of 80, allows disabled adult children to marry without losing Social Security or Medicare benefits, and requires the President to convene a White House conference on aging next year.

H.R. 2967 also includes a provision to address the Social Security earnings test. As a cosponsor to repeal this unfair tax on working senior citizens, I am pleased that H.R. 2967 would increase the earnings limit for working Americans aged 65-69 from $10,200 to $20,000.

Although this measure is an important step in the right direction, it is still not enough. Instead of penalizing older Americans for working, the Federal Government should encourage them to continue being a productive part of our work force. I will not rest until Congress enacts full repeal of the earnings test for working Americans over the age of 62.

Again, I want to reiterate my strong support for reauthorizing the Older Americans Act, and I urge my colleagues to pass this measure.

Mr. ARCHER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. BATEMAN].

Mr. BATEMAN. Mr. Speaker, 25 years ago when I first sought public office, my wife and I concluded that if I won, and as long as I ran, it ought to be more important why I got elected than whether I got elected. I would like for more of my colleagues in this House to think long and hard about that, because I see in what we are doing tonight the worst kind of political pandering in an election year which brought us the crisis of the insolvency, the bankruptcy of the Social Security system in 1983, which we have gone to great pains to fix but new seem bound and determined to undo.

There is no cover on this one, Members of the house. We have just adopted a rule for one reason only, that reason being to get around the fact that this violates the budget agreement, it violates the pay-go provisions, and we would not be dealing with this on suspensions of the rule except for that very purpose.

The American people are not dumb. They will know that what you are doing is being done at the price of either increased taxes on their children and grandchildren, or the unavailability of funds to pay their benefits when they retire.

I do not know any group of senior citizens in my district who would think that that was a responsible, even a decent act, even if it helps us get elected.

Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI. Mr. Speaker, I yield 8 minutes to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. HASTERT].

Mr. HASTERT. Mr. Speaker, it is not very often that I take the well of this House, but this is an issue that I have worked on since I have been a Member and have become a Member in this Congress. It is an issue that has been floating around this Congress for over three decades. It is time that we come and deal with it and make sure that we can use a benefit that senior citizens deserve.

Let me tell the Members something. I have been the sponsor, as well as the gentleman from Texas [Mr. ARCHER] and other people, of the total repeal of Social Security as long as I have been in this Congress. But I have always said that the body and the committee that will deal with this ultimately is the Committee on Ways and Means. I have always said that I will sit down with the members of the Committee on Ways and Means and try to work out whatever agreement we can work out.

The reason we are here tonight, beyond all the arguments about this is a last-minute and a last-ditch attempt, is that there was an amendment put on the Older Americans Act in the Senate, not in this House but in the Senate.

The reason we are here tonight, we have to deal with the earnings test removal on Social Security or an increase in Social Security because of legislation that was put on in the Senate, legislation that has been promised a Presidential veto if it passes. So we need to come to some agreement. We need to put the pieces together in the best and most logical way that we can.

What we have before us is an agreement. Some people call it a deal. Some people call it a compromise. I think it is an agreement, an agreement where two bodies come together, two ideas come together, and we come out with some type of reasonable way to work things out.

What we have before us is an increase in the earnings test from $10,000 to $20,000. We also have a provision in this bill that takes all increased revenues, income taxes, FICA taxes, corporate income taxes, unemployment taxes, and runs those taxes back, that income back into the Social Security trust fund, which is the first time that we have had a dynamic way of taking new income that is created by an economic action of this body and bringing it back into the trust fund.

It is reported back to this Congress every year for the next 5 years, which says, "Now we have a study. We have a way to track where value is created, where wealth is created, and we can begin to look at this not just with guesses or CBO guesstimates or OMB guesses, or somebody talked about the green shades."

We have real significant numbers on what this bill does and how it affects this body and this country and senior citizens.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, there were previous speakers up here who said that only a very small percentage of people who work over the age of 65 actually take advantage or go over, earn over the earnings test. Why? Because they are intimidated not to work and not to earn over $10,200. They are intimidated by the earnings test because they do not want to lose $1 out of every $3 of their Social Security.

They do not want to have to be in that marginal tax bracket of 36 percent, which is twice as much as millionaires pay in this country. They do not want to be discriminated against, so they do not work. They do not go over the earnings test.

What we are saying by this bill is, "Give people a chance to work," not the wealthy people, not the millionaires, not people who have invested thousands and thousands of dollars in pensions and thousands and thousands of dollars in investment and reaped those benefits back. They are not limited by the earnings test on Social Security. Unearned income is not tested. They can earn all they want.

Who receives the penalty? People who work, people who sweat and earn income by the sweat of their brow. Those are the people that we are discriminating against in the earnings test. People who earn $10,000 and get another $7,000 in Social Security, those are the people that we discriminate against and say, "You do not get a break. You have a marginal tax rate, more than millionaires pay."

□ 2320

Mr. Speaker, the time has come to address this issue. The time has come to address and pass the increase in the earnings test in Social Security, and yes, it is time to pass the Older Americans Act.

I ask for an affirmative vote.

Mr. ROYBAL. Mr. Speaker, as chairman of the Select Committee on Aging, I rise in support of the amendments to the Older Americans Act.

The history of the Older Americans Act is one of great challenge and accomplishment. The act has grown through 25 years and numerous reauthorizations. These reauthorization provisions have strengthened the Older Americans Act and improved the ability of the aging network to deliver a full range of services to the older population. Today, the Older Americans Act encompasses programs that were barely thought of in 1965, but which were developed as the aging community learned more about the aging process and the hopes and expectations of older Americans.

Throughout the last year the Select Committee on Aging and its Subcommittee on Health and Long-Term Care reviewed the most recent proposals to amend the act and examined recent developments in the aging network. I am glad that many of the Aging Committee's recommendations made to the authorizing committee have been incorporated into this bill, they include:

Translating services for elders with limited English-speaking ability.

Career preparation for minorities in the field of aging.

The eligibility for those individuals, who under the Immigration Reform and Control Act [IRCA] of 1986, were granted resident status to participate in the programs under title V of the act.

The creation of a new title to protect the vulnerable elderly by strengthening the ability of the State ombudsman to respond to abuse complaints expeditiously and without undue influence.

Establishes within the Administration on Aging [AOA] an Office of the Long-Term Care Ombudsman to advocate, monitor and coordinate Federal and State long-term care ombudsman activities.

Instructions for the Institute of Medicine to conduct a study to develop uniformed national standards to protect the right of those residing in boarder and care homes.

Additionally, throughout the act key language has been inserted to promote and increase the services and the participation of elderly minorities and those of low income.

In short, these amendments provide greater focus in the act on the needs of the minorities and the frail and disabled elderly. I firmly believe that these amendments will enhance the aging network's ability to fulfill the critical role it now plays, and will increasingly play, in the lives of over 43 million Americans who are over the age of 60 and their families. I urge you to join me in supporting this bill and demonstrating the Congress' commitment to a stronger Older Americans Act and to the people it serves.

Mr. FRANKS of Connecticut. Mr. Speaker, as a member of the Aging Committee, I rise in strong support of the reauthorization of the Older Americans Act. H.R. 2967 reauthorizes funding through fiscal year 1995 for the elderly programs and services operated under the Older Americans Act.

This legislation will strengthen and expand the services supporting the senior citizens of this country. H.R. 2767 authorizes $461 million in fiscal year 1992 for supportive services and senior centers program of the Older Americans Act. Additional funds will be provided for a number of programs which provide school-based and home-delivered means, nutrition programs, and surplus commodities.

Another $471 million in fiscal year 1992 is authorized for the community service employment programs which assists low-income individuals, who are over 55 years old, with part-time jobs. Funding which supports in-home services and caregivers is also authorized.

The compromise version of H.R. 2967 which is being voted on today, includes an important provision which will eliminate the earnings test for retirement benefits. As a cosponsor of H.R. 2967, the Older Americans Freedom to Work Act, I am pleased to see this measure included in H.R. 2967. While it does not eliminate the earnings test, it sets a new limit before benefits begin to be reduced and increases the limit by $2,000 until 1997. This change will allow seniors to continue to be productive members of our society.

Again Mr. Speaker, I strongly support passage of H.R. 2967 and I urge my colleagues to do the same.

Mr. GREEN of New York. Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to this motion to suspend the House rules.

All of us support passage of the Older Americans Act. That is not at issue. What is at issue is the future of the Social Security System.

What is also at issue is the procedure on which the Democratic leadership is insisting. That procedure denies the House the right to amend this bill. That right is denied to those who would totally eliminate the earnings test. That right is also denied to those who would stand by the 1990 Budget Act and insist that any increase in entitlement spending be made up for by increased taxes or reduction of other entitlement spending. And that right is also denied to those who are concerned that we not disrupt the stability and security that the 1983 Social Security Amendment brought to the Social Security System.

Plainly an important debate on the future of the Social Security System should not be foreclosed by the gag rule the Democratic leadership is imposing on us. Let's defeat that motion, let's separately pass the Older Americans Act reauthorization, and then let's have a full debate on changes to the Social Security System.

Mr. EWING. Mr. Speaker, I feel constrained to speak out about the amendments to the Older Americans Act which are being considered by the House today. Unfortunately my statement must also reflect upon how poorly this House operates.

Mr. Speaker, I have long been a supporter of increasing the Social Security earnings limit, which unjustly penalizes older Americans who wish to continue working during their retirement years. While some opponents of increasing the limit have said that this would increase Federal costs without corresponding increases in revenue, I do not believe that is true. With more seniors in the work force, they are earning more and paying more taxes. Indeed, a joint study by the Institute for Policy Innovation and the National Center for Policy Analysis has found that by raising the earning limit to $20,000, as this legislation would do, tax revenues would actually increase by about $2.3 billion.

What has me irate, Mr. Speaker, is that included with this good policy is a very poor and irresponsible policy which would increase other payments, costing several billion dollars and draining Social Security funds. This type of legislation plays right into the hands of those who believe that Social Security is not a retirement program but part of a retirement program but part of our social welfare system. The new provision will continue to threaten the future solvency of the Social Security system by continuing to use Social Security for social programs, something it was not designed for. Those who stuck this provision in this legislation are making promises which the Congress cannot keep. This is highly irresponsible.

Mr. Speaker, the only way for me to vote for increasing the earnings test is by also voting for the provision I just mentioned. I am forced to vote for something which I believe is unwise public policy or be seen as opposing something which I have long supported. Mr. Speaker, this is a form of institutional blackmail and it is a disgrace. Unfortunately, this is how the House operates every day.

Mr. Speaker, I want an opportunity to vote on an adjustment to the Social Security earnings test, period. But I don't have the opportunity to do that and I know I will never be allowed a straight up or down vote on this issue by the majority. In fact, because the majority party maintains dictatorial control of the House and maintain strict control of the terms of debate on legislation, Members rarely even have the chance to offer amendments on legislation brought before the House.

Mr. Speaker, what is happening here is a perfect example of the need to drastically reform the way Congress operates.

Mr. HOUGHTON. Mr. Speaker, I rise to express my strong support for the liberalizing of the Social Security earnings limitation test—included in the reauthorization of the Older Americans Act we are considering today.

Although this provision does not go as far as many of us had hoped, it embraces a concept some of us have supported for years. In other words, seniors should be able to earn more while not suffering a loss in their Social Security benefits.

The information I get from my ex-employer, Corning, Inc., tells me that many retirees return to work part time. They want to work, they are experienced, valuable contributions, but they often must quit well before their assignment is completed. Why? They have reached their earnings limit. Most of them have already worked as much as they can for the year—right at vacation time when the company needs them most. This situation, I must believe, is duplicated over and over again in other occupations.

Now the argument we all hear so frequently about liberalizing the earnings test is that we will further increase our already out of control deficit. I am suspicious of the figures that have been tossed around. They are too near—too simple.

Consider these facts:

Today, 90 percent of all senior citizens are retired completely. This means they make no contribution to the Nation's annual output of goods and services;

If one-third of the men and women aged 65 and over reentered the labor market, and earned as little as $5 per hour, national income would be increased by more than $100 billion; and

As producers, these men and women would generate as much as $25 billion a year in Social Security and income taxes.

Isn't our best course to come to grips with the issue, not dodge it, which means to suit action to the word and harness the unused pool of the best talent there is anywhere. This talent is dedicated and experienced. Let's repeal the earnings limit. Let's do it now.

Mr. REED. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in strong support of the conference report of the Older Americans Act, H.R. 2967. When the Older Americans Act was introduced in 1965, many believed it would not survive its first reauthorization. Yet this year we celebrate its 26th anniversary by reaffirming our commitment to this successful program. I am proud to have been involved in the drafting of this important reauthorization as a member of the House Education and Labor Committee.

The Older Americans Act provides both essential social services to our Nation's elderly and a system to assure that older Americans are able to maintain their health, live independently, and continue to contribute to society.

I am especially pleased that the conference report includes a revision in the earnings limit for seniors. I believe that the earnings limit is unfair. Older Americans deserve independence, dignity, and the opportunity to remain part of the work force. This is extremely difficult when seniors age 65 to 69 are able to earn only $9,720, after which they are penalized $1 for every $3 earned. Seniors add a great deal through their lifetime of experience and productivity. They represent a valuable resource we cannot afford to exclude. In addition, many seniors use this income to supplement their Social Security which allows them to stay out of poverty and remain independent.

The programs contained in this legislation are an integral part of the lives of many seniors. The senior centers in Rhode Island and throughout the country are mainstays in the lives of thousands of my constituents. The meal programs sometimes provide the only well-balanced meal a senior may get that day.

Another important part of this legislation is the establishment of a National Center on Elder Abuse. Elder abuse, exploitation, and neglect is a growing problem. More than 1 million seniors are victims of elder abuse every year. This center will coordinate efforts to provide information to law enforcement authorities regarding violations of elder abuse laws and make recommendations to Congress and the President on elder abuse policies.

Our Nation's over-55 population has increased dramatically in the past decade. This greying of America has made this reauthorization more important than ever, and I am pleased that Congress has recognized this. The well-being of our Nation's seniors represents a challenge which promises benefits for us all.

Mr. GOSS. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to rise in support of H.R. 2967 with the perfecting amendment we are considering today. If we can pass this act today, we will be providing $2 billion for indispensable research and support programs for the rapidly growing elderly population in this country. I am also highly gratified that this body has recognized the economic constraints the Social Security earnings test has placed upon senior citizens trying to make ends meet. The amendment we are considering today addresses the unfairness of the Social Security earnings test and—although it's not a complete repeal—it is at least a meaningful step in the right direction.

When I was elected to Congress more than 3 years ago, I brought with me the desperation of seniors who walk a fine line each month, trying to earn enough to pay for prescription drugs, rent, and food, while staying beneath the earnings limitation so they can avoid the penalty. I did not forget that desperation, once inside the beltway. Living on a fixed income in these times of uncertain interest rates is not an easy task, as thousands of my constituents can assure you. If they are able to earn a living, they should be allowed to do so, unencumbered with the earnings test penalty.

Our senior citizens are a valuable, useful resource. This Government should not stand in the way of a senior who can help stimulate our Nation's economy with their earnings and their tax dollars while remaining productive as long as they are able. Multigenerational demonstration activities, a National Conference on Aging, nutritional services and many other programs that celebrate age—its wisdom and value—are contained in this legislation. We have made progress. I urge my colleagues to support and pass H.R. 2967 as amended—it will give future generations of elderly Americans hope.

Mr. DARDEN. Mr. Speaker, today the House will vote to amend a bill reauthorizing the Older Americans Act. In part, this measure will double over the next 5 years the amount that Social Security beneficiaries may earn without having their benefits reduced by the Social Security earnings test.

Today, the earnings test deals a crippling blow to those senior citizens who want to work to supplement their benefits. In 1992, Social Security recipients under age 65 may not earn more than $7,440 without losing their right to full benefits. For every $2 earned above that amount, they lose $1 in benefits. Workers aged 65 to 69 may not earn more than $10,200 without losing $1 in benefits for every $3 in outside income. Only beneficiaries aged 70 and over are not subject to a limitation on outside earnings.

Since my arrival in Congress, I have made repeal of the earnings test one of my foremost goals. To that end, I have introduced the relief for Older Workers Act, H.R. 1368, which would completely repeal this test and thereby allow senior citizens to be as productive as possible without jeopardizing their right to full Social Security benefits.

To me, the earnings test is anti-American. Why should our Government penalize those Older Americans who want to enrich our American workplace with their experience, their expertise, and their eagerness to help others? And why should we deprive our elder citizens of the proven mental and physical benefits of work, not to mention the extra dollars that may be critical to someone trying to survive on meager Social Security benefits? Our Government should not be in the business of discouraging the American work ethic that we hold so dear.

I am glad that today we are afforded an opportunity to provide significant assistance to those senior citizens who must work to supplement their benefits. I favor complete repeal of the earnings test. However, I support today's measure, which, by increasing the amount that senior citizens may earn that is not subject to the earnings test, is a step in the right direction. Let's keep moving in that direction to ensure that we do not place roadblocks in the way of those older Americans who are willing, able—and eager—to work alongside their younger colleagues.

Ms. NORTON. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to rise in strong support of the final passage of H.R. 2967, the Older Americans Act.

It is difficult to think of a piece of legislation in the post-World War II period that has performed so well for its recipients. Its programs have literally been life lines, enabling millions of older Americans to live meaningful and purposeful lives. Home care, legal services, meals-on-wheels, and community service employment are among the many programs that continue. Added are major new provisions, for example, modifications of eligibility to permit individuals beginning at age 65 to earn up to $10,200 in income without having their Social Security retirement benefits reduced, and another provision increasing Social Security benefits for many widows and widowers who are age 80 or older.

Here in the Nation's Capital, more than 18 percent of the total population is over 60 years of age—up 4 percent since 1980. In 1985, 17 percent of the District's elderly population was living below the poverty level. We cannot imagine being without the Older Americans Act. Only through today's reauthorization of the act, however, can local governments continue to serve our seniors.

The District of Columbia Office on Aging, the local agency created to administer Federal funds from the Older Americans Act, served over 30,000 seniors in fiscal year 1990. Through that office, 42 community based agencies provide essential social and supportive services. Their efforts and these funds help many older Americans maintain a vital and active life style and continue contributing to their communities and their families. Others need the services provided under the Act just to get through each day.

Mr. Speaker, this body unanimously approved this legislation when we last considered it. Let us do no less on final passage here today. I call upon each and every one of my colleagues to cast a vote in support of the Older Americans Act.

Ms. SNOWE. Mr. Speaker, I am very pleased to join my colleagues today in support of the legislation before us today for the 1991–92 reauthorization of the Older Americans Act. I am also pleased that we are considering a modification of the Social Security earnings test as I have long been concerned about the way in which it penalizes older individuals who remain in the workforce.

Since 1965, the landmark Older Americans Act has evolved from authorizing a program of small grants to the only national infrastructure of programs—such as nutrition, homemaking, transportation and legal services—to assist older persons in remaining self-sufficient, in their own homes and communities. This extensive, complex and sophisticated aging network, which the Older Americans Act supports through the Administration on Aging, consists of 57 State agencies on aging, 670 area agencies on aging, 25,000 service providers under title III, and 194 Native American grantees under title VI. In addition, the Older Americans Act supports an extensive research, training and discretionary grant program under title IV and the Community Service Employment Program for Older Americans under title V.

Through the 13 reauthorizations of the Older Americans Act, Congress has substantially expanded the mission and responsibilities of the Act, in response to the increasing needs of the rapidly expanding aging population. Advocacy and coordination functions are key elements of these mandated responsibilities. Because of shrinking resources, Congress has also become increasingly concerned about targeting services to older populations most in need, such as low-income minorities.

It has been over 2 years since the Select Committee on Aging's Human Services Subcommittee, under the leadership of Chairman DOWNEY, and of which I am the ranking Republican member, began to hold oversight hearings to examine key issues in preparation for this reauthorization. Since then, an extensive process has culminated in the legislation before us today. Concerns and recommendations were heard from a wide range of individuals and groups—including constituents, local area agencies on aging, service providers, constituents, aging organizations, research experts, and the administration. These concerns are reflected in this reauthorization bill.

I want to commend my colleagues, Chairman FORD and MARTINEZ, and ranking Republican members GOODLING and FAWELL, and their able staffs on the House Education and Labor Committee, and the Human Resources Subcommittee, for their fine work in negotiating and drafting this comprehensive bill. I also want to commend the fine contributions of Chairmen KENNEDY and ADAMS, and ranking Republican members HATCH and COCHRAN of the Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee, and the Subcommittee on Aging and the excellent work of their staff on this comprehensive bill.

I also particularly want to thank the committee leaders and their staff of both the House and Senate who incorporated into this reauthorization bill the language or intent of almost all of the nine bills which I introduced in April, 1991, to amend the Older Americans Act.

The bills I introduced addressed a wide range of concerns such as: supportive services for family caregivers, preventive health services for osteoporosis and medication management, services for guardianship, equity for rural elderly, coordination of transportation services and requiring a White House Conference on Aging in 1993.

Through my many years of work on behalf of family caregivers, I have found them to be in great need of our support. Family members, primarily female, provide 80 percent of the care and assistance needed by the frail elderly, often in addition to a full time job. This supportive care is crucial in allowing older individuals to remain in their own homes and retain their independence and dignity. Providing this care is usually very rewarding, but stress and competing demands on the caregiver can also be physically, financially and emotionally exhausting. I introduced legislation to address some of these problems, so I am very gratified that H.R. 2967 authorizes a new program of supportive services for caregivers, and incorporates my bill for increased emphasis on outreach efforts to older individuals and their caretakers who are rural residents, isolated, or have Alzheimer's disease.

In today's complex, mobile society, the ability to easily access information about available services is crucial for caregivers, older persons, and adult children who may be trying to find assistance for their parents in their own community—or across the country. Services through area agencies on aging are often difficult to find because area agencies across the country use different names and are located in different public and private sites. Therefore, I am pleased that my bill to require area agencies on aging to list themselves as such as telephone books is included in H.R. 2967. This uniform listing would assure that persons who wish to attain services can find them wherever they are.

I recently held a subcommittee hearing and a forum in my district on the needs of the rural elderly. My district is the largest east of the Mississippi and it is predominately rural. Nationally, 25 to 30 percent of the Nation's older persons live in rural areas. The poverty rate of rural elderly is considerably higher and they usually have less access to services than older individuals who live in urban areas. During the events held in my district, constituents testified about these problems, and also the key element that it usually costs more to provide access to services in rural areas, because of transportation needs and long distances. Therefore, I am very pleased that H.R. 2967 requires state agencies to identify the actual and projected additional costs of providing services in rural areas.

Rural elderly residents and service providers at events in my district strongly emphasized that adequate transportation is critical if older persons are to get the necessary medical, nutrition, and other services they need. In order to eliminate unnecessary duplication and stretch scarce resources, increased coordination of transportation services for social service programs are essential. H.R. 2967 reflects a bill of mine by requiring coordination of planning and delivery of transportation services.

Health promotion and disease prevention programs for older Americans at congregate meal programs, senior centers and other sites have been greatly expanded under H.R. 2967. These additional services should play a significant role in leading to a healthier older population, as well as preventing some illnesses and reducing the need for medical services. I am very pleased that the intent of two provisions that I introduced are included in this package: Specifically medication management screening and education to prevent incorrect medication and adverse drug reactions; and expanded services for osteoporosis, an age-related disease.

I have also long been concerned about the many problems and abuses regarding guardianship, the judicial process which transfers the decisionmaking responsibility from a person who has been declared incapable of handling his or her own affairs to another person. At least 500,000 persons, particularly the elderly, are affected by this system, which severely limits their autonomy. H.R. 2967 includes several provisions which I introduced to help improve the guardianship system which include information and training for guardianship; and legal assistance for representation of wards—individuals who are allegedly incapacitated—and older individuals who are seeking to become guardians.

Mr. Speaker, I am also pleased that H.R. 2967 includes a waiver provision for additional authority to transfer funds between the congregate and home-delivered meals programs. Maine invests more in home-delivered meals than any other state since it is the most practical way to reach elderly in remote rural areas. This is necessary because of geography, lack of public transportation and the needs of frail elders. This waiver, although it is capped, is important in preserving State flexibility to design services to meet the special needs of its older population.

H.R. 2967 would also require a White House Conference on Aging in 1993, which was the intent of bills introduced by Representative DOWNEY and myself. I am hopeful that H.R. 2967 will be passed by the full Congress soon so that the conference staff will have the authority to plan and proceed towards this essential national aging conference to identify current and future problems, needs and potential of older persons, and to develop recommendations for policy and action.

Mr. Speaker, there are many major contributions to this reauthorization of the Older Americans Act, as well as essential fine tuning. In particular, I would like to stress the bill's new title VII for elder rights services, which gives special emphasis to elder abuse and ombudsman programs. H.R. 2967 also incorporates needed provisions to strengthen the Administration on Aging's administrative capabilities, and to require uniform data collection procedures in order to obtain valid information about services provided and needed under the Older Americans Act.

Mr. Speaker, for almost 27 years, the Older Americans Act has provided the strength, basic principles and flexibility to support and affirm the dignity and independence of millions of older Americans. Today, one out of every six Americans is age 60 or older. By the year 2030, one out of every four persons in this country will be age 60 or older. This dramatic population shift will greatly increase the need for community-based care and services for frail older persons and support for family caregivers. As we move toward the 21st century, the leadership and resources of the aging network will be increasingly challenged. As a keystone law, the Older Americans Act today, and in the future, is poised to meet the growing needs of our aging Nation. I am pleased to have played a role in this step, the 13th, 1991-92 reauthorization of the Older Americans Act.

Mr. PACKARD. Mr. Speaker, today we will consider legislation which will liberalize the amount of wages an older person may earn without having to forfeit part of their Social Security benefits.

This is a sign that the Congress is finally willing to address a grave injustice suffered by working seniors. The Social Security earnings cap was instituted during the depression in order to create jobs by discouraging older Americans from remaining in the work force. Under present legislation, seniors forfeit $1 of their Social Security benefits for every $3 they earn over $10,200 a year. This legislation we are now considering will gradually raise the earnings limit over 5 years to $20,000 by 1997.

The last thing we should do is penalize Americans who want to work. Senior citizens are one of the most valuable resources in our society. Their experience and training are a priceless commodity which must not be wasted.

I have been a strong supporter of repealing the earnings test, and during my service have introduced several pieces of legislation to accomplish this. However, I believe that this legislation is a step in the right direction.

For too long, the Federal Government has discouraged those 65 and older from working by limiting the amount of money they can make while receiving benefits that are rightfully theirs. While I would prefer to see the earnings test abandoned altogether, any relaxation of the limit should be good news to seniors who are simply trying to remain productive members of our society.

Mr. Speaker, I will continue to fight for the total repeal of the earnings limit. I urge my colleagues to support this measure, to allow older Americans to contribute to our economy and remain productive elements in our society.

Mrs. LOWEY of New York. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks.

Mr. Speaker, as a member of the Human Resources Subcommittee and an original co-sponsor of H.R. 2967, I would like to rise in strong support of this legislation and to commend Chairman MARTINEZ and ranking member FAWELL for the fine job that they have done in crafting a compromise with the Senate that will truly be of great benefit to senior citizens all across this Nation.

This bill will significantly strengthen the Older Americans Act by authorizing funding for successful existing programs and necessary new initiatives.

Throughout the entire reauthorization process, the chairman and ranking member's strong commitment to our Nation's senior citizens has been self-evident. The bill before us today clearly reflects their hard work and devotion to their cause, and I want to congratulate them for a job well done.

I am especially pleased that the bill incorporates several important new initiatives which I have advocated.

First, the bill includes the language of the Older Americans Health Promotion and Disease Prevention Act, H.R. 1739, which I introduced to significantly increase access to and participation in health promotion and disease prevention services.

The subcommittee's hearings made it clear that older Americans are able to benefit significantly from health promotion and disease prevention services. Moreover, at a time when health care costs continue to skyrocket, a strong emphasis on preventive health programs can cut health care costs significantly in the long run.

I believe the expansion of preventive health programs is an essential direction for the Older Americans Act to take at the present time, and I am extremely pleased that this important initiative is contained in H.R. 2967.

Second, this reauthorization bill makes clear that title III supportive services may include information and counseling regarding private pension rights, and it contains a key new demonstration project aimed at creating models for expanding information and counseling services for older Americans regarding their private pension rights.

These amendments are of great importance. Many older Americans—particularly surviving spouses—have little or no understanding of their private pension rights, and do not have anywhere to turn to get this essential information. I am hopeful that these new provisions of the act will help make a difference—by shedding much-needed light on this complex and difficult subject, and by creating models for the provision of more comprehensive pension-related services in the future.

The bill also makes important changes with respect to the ability of senior citizens to continue working without compromising their Social Security benefits.

Since the inception of the Social Security Program, recipients have had to satisfy an earnings test. This requirement effectively penalizes senior citizens who choose to supplement their Social Security earnings by working. Americans between the ages of 65 and 69 lose $1 in benefits for every $3 earned over the current annual limit of $10,200.

Continuing to work and contribute valuable skills and experience to our economy should be a viable option for older Americans. Practically speaking, continued employment also helps seniors respond to their health care needs through employer-provided benefits as well as the income that is derived. In this day and age, that is a critically important consideration.

The bill before us today makes significant inroads toward solving this problem by nearly doubling the exempt earnings amount over the next 5 years. It sets the exempt amount at $12,000 for 1993, and raises it by $2,000 annually to $20,000 in 1997.

In another important provision, the bill increases the amount that election workers can earn per year that is not subject to Social Security tax. Current law sets a limit of $100 on such earnings, and the bill would increase this exclusion to $1,000 for 1993, and require that the figure be indexed in subsequent years to account for increases in applicable wages.

Many election workers in my district have been affected by the very low earnings limitation in current law, and this change will go a long way toward helping them fulfill their civic duty without being penalized unfairly for it.

Mr. Speaker, the Older Americans Act sets forth important goals for our Nation—goals of providing our senior citizens with lives of freedom, opportunity, and dignity. I am convinced that the bill before us today will move our Nation significantly closer to meeting these goals, and I am proud to strongly support it. I urge all of my colleagues to do so as well.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H.R. 2967, the Older Americans Reauthorization Amendments.

Earlier this year, I authored legislation (H.R. 2653) calling on the Commissioner of the Administration on Aging to carry out a Volunteer Service Credit Program. This legislation was incorporated in the House version of H.R. 2967 and, though modified, adopted by the Senate as well.

The Volunteer Service Credit Program encourages seniors to volunteer in their communities and guarantees volunteers that they will receive services when needed at a later time. The program provides important home services such as housekeeping, shopping, respite care, and meal preparation. These are precisely the types of services senior citizens need in order to remain in their homes and live their lives more independently.

H.R. 2967 contains many worthy provisions which I have supported in the past and am pleased to see that they have been incorporated into this bill. H.R. 2967 increases benefits for widows over age 80, increases the earnings test, enables disabled individuals to marry without losing Social Security disability benefits or Medicare, and it allows workers to keep more of the income they earn while working at election polls.

As a cosponsor of the original House bill, I am supportive of H.R. 2967 and encourage my colleagues to approve the legislation.

Mr. RINALDO. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of the amendments to the Older Americans' Act reauthorization bill.

The quick reauthorization of this act is crucial to the many programs benefiting senior citizens. It is particularly important to ensure the success of the 1993 White House Conference on Aging, planning for which has been delayed for several months while the details of this bill has been worked out.

In addition, Mr. Speaker, I am very pleased that this measure now includes the significant reforms of the Social Security earnings test which I have proposed in my bills, H.R. 3833 and H.R. 3834. My legislation would raise the earnings limit to $20,000 and phase in changes in the law over several years to reduce the cost to the trust funds. These simple changes to the law will make it possible for the majority of working seniors to remain employed, and I commend the chairman and ranking member of the Education and Labor Committee for including these reforms in their amendments.

The Social Security earnings test keeps our Nation's most accomplished, most capable and most mature workers from remaining active and productive members of our workforce. This policy is wrong. I strongly believe that no one should ever be discouraged from remaining a productive part of our society, particularly on the basis of age.

For many years, my colleagues and I have fought for a repeal of this unfair restriction on the earnings of America's senior citizens. Through our determined efforts, legislation to repeal this penalty has attracted the support of a majority of Members. Now, we have the opportunity to make real and substantial changes in the way the Federal Government treats working seniors.

At one time, there may have been a legitimate reason to prohibit senior citizens from working, but that time has clearly passed. The Social Security earnings test is a dinosaur, and I believe that we must seize this opportunity to make it extinct. Mr. Speaker, the time has come to begin dismantling these restrictions on the work efforts of older Americans, and I urge my colleagues to support these amendments.

Mr. DOWNEY. Mr. Speaker, I am happy to see the reauthorization of the Older Americans Act on the floor of the House today. I know that this is good news for the millions of older Americans who receive so many vital services from this program. As chairman of the Select Committee on Aging's Subcommittee on Human Services, I also know that this is welcome news to the many Members of the House and the other body who drafted the current amendments. At this time, I would like to express my appreciation to Chairman FORD and Chairman MARTINEZ for their work and the consideration they have shown me in accepting my amendments. In addition, I must thank Congresswoman OLYMPIA SNOWE, my friend and the ranking Republican member of the Subcommittee on Human Services, who worked closely with me in carrying out the subcommittee's agenda of oversight hearings on the act.

Perhaps the most important advance in these amendments is the adoption of a major set of elder rights provisions in a new title VII. Senator ADAMS, chairman of the Subcommittee on Aging of the Committee on Labor and Human Resources, is to be strongly commended for creating this new title. With it, we strengthen the long-term care ombudsmen program, giving the thousands of volunteer ombudsmen across the country more resources and better tools to help them fill the role of protecting vulnerable older individuals in nursing homes. We also honor Claude Pepper's commitment to older Americans to protect them from the scourge of elder abuse and neglect. Over the past decade many Members have worked to forge a Federal role in elder abuse prevention and treatment. Today, we build on those first steps taken in the 1987 Older Americans Act amendments and we establish a National Center on Elder Abuse. I am particularly pleased that the act continues to allow the States broad latitude in designing their own elder abuse education, reporting and treatment programs.

As Congress addresses the issue of long-term care in the more comprehensive manner, it is important that we do not lose sight of the need to ensure that individuals who provide in-home services are qualified and properly supervised. Because of this concern Congressman GEORGE MILLER and I introduced a provision to assure quality of care for recipients of in-home services. The legislation today, in section 212, requires the Commissioner on Aging to work with the Institute of Medicine on a study of the quality of home care. The results of this study should provide us with a base of information with which to consider whether additional changes are needed in the act.

The amendments before us today also address the issue of personnel training and development for all Older Americans Act programs. Section 202(a)(17) of the Act requires the Commissioner on Aging to develop, in coordination with other Federal agencies, a national plan for personnel training and development. Regrettably, the plan was never drafted despite the critical need for personnel training for so many of the services provided under the act. I suggested an amendment which requires the Commissioner to report to Congress on progress in implementing section 202(a)(17), and I am grateful that the committee accepted this amendment. I intend to follow this issue closely in the future.

Another provision which I offered is included in the legislation before us today, and that is the requirement for the Commissioner on Aging to publish an annual report of completed research funded under title IV, Training, Research, and Discretionary Projects and Programs. The Subcommittee on Human Services is particularly concerned about shortcomings in the dissemination of information on outcomes of demonstration and research projects. The General Accounting Office testified that the Administration on Aging lacked a comprehensive dissemination effort and that this was the genesis of that provision. This provision is aimed at remedying that situation.

Mr. Speaker, for the past 3 years older Americans and their advocates have been eagerly awaiting the White House Conference on Aging. This Conference is important because it provides older Americans with the opportunity to set the broad agenda for public policy affecting elderly individuals for the next decade. Although the 1987 amendments to the act authorized the President to hold the Conference in 1991, 1991 came and went without President Bush holding the Conference. The Subcommittee on Human Services, and other Members repeatedly urged the President to proceed with the Conference, to no avail. Thus, I introduced H.R. 1504 which called for a National Conference on Aging with strong congressional participation in the planning and oversight process. I am pleased to note that following the introduction of that bill, the President did announce that he would hold a conference in 1993. I am also encouraged that the legislation before us strengthens Congress' role in the Conference by including congressional representation on the Policy Committee, a feature I introduced in H.R. 1504. By giving Congress a role in the White House Conference on Aging, we hope to be able to avoid a situation where, either through neglect or oversight, future conferences are put off. Furthermore, since Congress will have to pass any legislative recommendations which arise out of the Conference, congressional involvement from the outset is appropriate. The Policy Committee will give congressional representatives the opportunity to work directly on the Conference with representatives of the aging communities from across the country. I thank Chairmen FORD and MARTINEZ again for their willingness to adopt this reform.

As I noted when this bill first came to the floor in September, 1991, the legislation is notable for what it does not contain—mandatory cost sharing. The legislation proposed by the Bush administration recommended that Older Americans Act programs be converted to a fee-for-service basis. This radical break with the tradition of the Older Americans Act was proposed without any data that would allow us to evaluate its effect on the act's programs. The subcommittee was deeply concerned about the effect of the proposal and carried out a study, published as "Cost Sharing for the Elderly: A Survey of Current Incidence and Practice." The subcommittee found a great diversity of practice and opinion on the usefulness and impact of cost sharing. I am happy to note that this legislation today rejects mandatory cost sharing.

Adoption of these amendments today is but one more step in improving the services available to older Americans. We must monitor their implementation and we must continue to see that older Americans have a strong and effective advocate in the Administration on Aging. To that end, the General Accounting Office continues to follow developments with regard to the reorganization of the Administration on Aging within the Department of Health and Human Services. Secretary Louis Sullivan has done a great deal to improve the status of the Administration on Aging and we need to continue to provide the fiscal support to the Administration on Aging so that it can regain the ground it lost during the 1980's.

Once again, I thank all my colleagues who worked so hard on this bill; and I thank the many staffs of the various committees and subcommittees, as well as the General Accounting Office, the Congressional Research Service and the Office of Legislative Counsel, who make it possible for us to bring these amendments before you today. Finally, the continuing process of improving the Older Americans Act would not be possible without the hard work and day-by-day dedication of Older Americans Act service providers and older Americans themselves, who are the most eloquent spokespeople for the act. I urge my colleagues to support this bill.

Mr. McCANDLESS. Mr. Speaker, I want to express my strong support for H.R. 2967, the Older Americans bill which will raise the earnings test for Social Security beneficiaries ages 65 to 69 gradually from $10,200 to $20,000 beginning in 1997.

For the past 7 years, I have been working for repeal of the Social Security earnings test, and have taken every opportunity to support efforts to abolish this holdover from the Great Depression. The earnings limit was originally set up to keep older people out of the workplace and to allow more jobs to be filled by younger people. In the thirties, when jobs were scarce and very few jobs were being created, it seemed like an economic necessity. In these days, however, we have more job opportunities, and many companies are eager to hire experienced older workers.

Many retirees would like to continue to do some type of work to supplement their Social Security benefits, but the Social Security earnings test acts as a deterrent. It's a very high tax on older workers at a time when they are least able to afford it.

Mr. Speaker, H.R. 2967 will raise the earnings limit to a more manageable size, and will give retirees more opportunity to reenter the job market and do valuable work. It does not repeal the earnings limit, as I believe should be done, but it is a good step in the right direction, and I urge all my colleagues to support it.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. DE LA GARZA). All time has expired.

The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI] that the House suspend the rules and agree to the resolution, House Resolution 433.

The question was taken.

Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground that a quorum is not present and make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER. Evidently a quorum is not present.

The Sergeant at Arms will notify absent Members.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—yeas 340, nays 68, not voting 26, as follows:

Messrs. CONYERS, LEWIS of California, FAZIO, and DUNCAN changed their vote from "nay" to "yea".

So (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the resolution was agreed to.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

Mr. CLINGER. Mr. Speaker, this evening I voted against the rule providing for consideration of the Older Americans Act conference report. I did this because the bill violates the 1990 budget agreement by not paying for the $7.3 billion in additional Social Security spending that would result from its enactment. In addition, a bill that authorizes spending of more than $100 million should not be placed on the suspension calendar—a special House process to expedite consideration of noncontroversial legislation.

The Older Americans Act conference report contains a provision liberalizing the earnings test to $20,000 by fiscal year 1997. Currently, a Social Security beneficiary can earn up to $10,000 each year without incurring a reduction in Social Security benefits. Although I am a cosponsor of legislation to repeal the earnings test, I cannot support legislation that does not meet the requirements of the 1990 budget agreement. This legislation increases the deficit, breaks the 1990 budget agreement, and threatens the Social Security Trust Fund.

For background, the 1990 budget deficit agreement requires Congress to pay for the legislation it enacts. In other words, any increase in spending must be offset by tax increases or spending cutbacks. Unfortunately, this bill ignores these criteria.

Furthermore, legislation that is considered on the suspension calendar is usually noncontroversial, such as naming post offices and Federal buildings. In my view, this bill should be rejected by the House and referred back to the Committee on Ways and Means until an acceptable way can be found to pay for it.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

CONDEMNING THE EXTRACONSTITUTIONAL AND ANTIDEMOCRATIC ACTIONS OF PRESIDENT FUJIMORI OF PERU

Mr. GEJDENSON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Foreign Affairs be discharged from further consideration of the concurrent resolution (H. Con. Res. 306) condemning the extraconstitutional and antidemocratic actions of President Fujimori of Peru, and ask for its immediate consideration in the House.

The Clerk read the title of the concurrent resolution.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Connecticut?

Mr. LAGOMARSINO. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, and I do not intend to object, but I will ask the gentleman from Connecticut to explain the resolution very briefly.

Mr. GEJDENSON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LAGOMARSINO. I yield to the gentleman from Connecticut.

Mr. GEJDENSON. Mr. Speaker, this resolution is very straightforward. I would like to commend the gentleman from New York [Mr. WEISS] for his great leadership on this issue and the gentleman from California.

We had a situation where the democratically elected Government of Peru has been taken over by the President in an extraconstitutional manner. It is one of the real setbacks for democracy in Central and South America, a goal that both the Congress and the administration supports. The administration supports the resolution.

I hope those who might have some concern would hold back that concern so that we can be on record, as we have been in the Soviet Union and in Eastern Europe and throughout Latin America in favor of democratic institutions.

If we stand for anything here, Mr. Speaker, it is for democratic institutions.

Mr. Speaker, I commend my friend, the gentleman from California, for his support.

Mr. LAGOMARSINO. Further reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from New York [Mr. GILMAN].

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased that the House is addressing the crisis in Peru today. The latest assault on democracy in our hemisphere cannot go unanswered. President Fujimori with the Peruvian military has blatantly thrown democracy out the window—and now they must be made to pay a price.

For many years, I have followed events in Peru closely. As the largest producer of coca in the world, Peru is the key to the cocaine supply problem. Despite many public statements of support for counternarcotics—and despite a cynical effort to cloak his coup in anti-narcotics garb—President Fujimori's record on the drug issue has been abysmal.

It took a year for President Fujimori to even agree to accept U.S. counternarcotics aid. Since that time, little has been done with that aid. President Fujimori consistently refused to consider an eradication component in the antinarcotics package, thereby ignoring the explosion of coca production in the Upper Huallaga Valley. At the San Antonio drug summit, he vetoed supply reduction goals proposed by Colombia. Instead, he engaged in slanders against the Drug Enforcement Agency to divert attention from his own lack of effort.

I would like to inform my colleagues that I have been very seriously considering introducing a resolution decertifying Peru under section 481 of the Foreign Assistance Act because of their lack of effort on narcotics. Obviously, that has not been overtaken by events. I believe the coup in Peru must lead to a fundamental reexamination of our Andean strategy. It is now obvious that Peru has not been and cannot be a reliable partner in our war on drugs.

Mr. Speaker, I support this resolution and urge my colleagues to do the same.

Mr. LAGOMARSINO. Further reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from New York [Mr. WEISS].

Mr. WEISS. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding to me.

Mr. Speaker, President Fujimori and the Peruvian military have decimated freely elected government for the expedient ease of military rule.

For a nation weighted down with poverty, corruption and the frightening threat of the Shining Path, this action has effectively destroyed any hope of social and economic progress. For the hemisphere, it renders a staggering blow to regional stability. And for the world, it adds an additional burden on the backs of young democracies struggling to neutralize their own militaries.

House Concurrent Resolution 306 acknowledges our commitment to the restoration of majority rule in Peru and democratic government in general. It commends the President's swift response to the crisis, and urges him to continue to suspend economic and military assistance until the legal government is restored. It ensures the maintenance of humanitarian programs to guarantee that sanctions do not affect the poorest Peruvians. It recognizes the regional implications of this action, and calls on the President to take steps in the international community, and particularly the OAS, to end this illegitimate regime.

Mr. Speaker, the self-imposed coup of Alberto Fujimori resurrects the worst fears of those who have remained wary of the Peruvian military since it was deposed more than 12 years ago. For Peruvians, the action puts into question the future of democratic government and the progress of economic development. For the United States, it raises serious questions about the future direction and impact of United States policy in Latin America.

In the short term, we can take the steps to address these nagging questions by continuing to pressure change in Peru. But in the long run, we must recognize the implications of the events in Peru, Haiti, and Venezuela and strongly support the institutions that promote, instead of threaten, young as well as traditional democracies. We must identify new priorities and proactively respond to everyday policies that affect civil liberties, freedom of the press and assembly, and other fundamental rights wherever they may occur.

In closing, I would once again call on President Fujimori to do what is best for the Peruvian people by releasing all detained persons; restoring the Congress and judiciary; reestablishing the press and other civil liberties; and returning the Government to civilian control.

Mr. LAGOMARSINO. Further reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. ROTH].

Mr. ROTH. Mr. Speaker, it is not always pleasant to go against the entire U.S. Congress, but sometimes you have to, because the facts are these: Peru was in a state of total chaos. Murder, fear, massive drug smuggling, and guerrilla violence were rampant throughout the land. Terrorism, political violence, unprecedented suffering by the people, and corruption was the norm of the day.

Fujimori, the duly elected President, had to act or sit by and let the country dissolve. He acted.

Peru did not have democracy. Peru had chaos. Ruled by the Shining Path and the drug dealers our friends are talking about here, they ruled Peru, not the people, the very drug dealers who were sending tons and tons of drugs into our country, destroying the lives of our people and our children.

The people of Peru applauded Fujimori's action, and Fujimori said that the life of his country was more dear than his own life.

How many Members in this Congress could say that? How many in this Congress could honestly say that about our country?

This resolution states what? That the U.S. Congress is on the side of the Shining Path and the guerrillas, that the U.S. Congress is for corruption and the drug traffickers?

A judge could be bought in Peru for $5,000 to $10,000.

The Shining Path is running the prisons. Is that the kind of government you want? Do you call that democracy?

The people of Peru are with their elected President, Alberto Fujimori. They elected him. He is their spokesman, not the U.S. Congress.

The U.S. Congress does not have to go all over the world to stick its nose into other people's affairs, where quite frankly it is not wanted.

The U.S. Congress cannot take care of its own business right here at home.

Much can be said, but this Congress before it dictates to other people, should sweep in front of its own door.

When we can balance our budget, when we can handle crime right here on the streets of Washington, DC, then maybe we can tell other people how to live, but not now.

A private poll indicated that 75 percent of Lima's population favored Mr. Fujimori's actions, while 19 percent disapproved and 5 percent had no opinion.

□ 2350

Seventy-five percent approved his action. I wish members in the United States Congress could say that our people approved 75 percent of our actions. Or I wish we had a President who could say 75 percent of the people approved of my action. But that is what is happening in Peru, and you want to tell those people how to live. You want to set the standard for them.

The people of Peru decide their own fate. They do not need or want the unsolicited advice of the U.S. Congress, and I think the message to the U.S. Congress and the American people also would be, "Mind your own business. Let us see you do your job."

Mr. Speaker, this resolution is an insult to thinking people and to the people of Peru. Let us be men and women of honor and integrity and vote down this arrogant resolution. It is not our place to tell the people how they should live in Peru. Let them decide their own fate.

Mr. LAGOMARSINO. Mr. Speaker, further reserving the right to object, I yield to the gentleman from Connecticut.

Mr. GEJDENSON. Mr. Speaker, I know my friend has the best intentions, and I am not sure what the polls were in 1933 in Germany when democracy was swept aside. I am not sure if we had a balanced budget or a going economy then. I am not sure if the American people supported their Government, but it seems to me that the institution that we are part of, we ought to believe in and it ought not just be for North Americans, it ought not just be for Europeans, it ought to be for all citizens of this planet.

Mr. LAGOMARSINO. Mr. Speaker, further reserving the right to object, I support the resolution. I understand the frustration that President Fujimori was under and was facing; the Shining Path, the drug dealers, the corrupt judiciary, a corrupt legislature, perhaps. But it is not the right way to go.

Mr. Speaker, many of us who have met President Fujimori and held discussions with him about the grave threats facing his government, including those represented by the Shining Path guerrillas, the illicit drug trade, the deplorable economic conditions, corruption and inefficiency in the judiciary and legislature have sympathized with him on the need for major reform efforts to bring change to his beleaguered nation.

Probably the greatest threat to Peru's peace and security is that represented by the Sendero Luminoso, the radical leftist guerrilla group the Shining Path. That guerrilla group has carried out a campaign of murder, torture, repression and terror, to a degree not seen in previous guerrilla campaigns in Latin America. The impact of the Shining Path, first in rural areas of Peru and now in urban areas, has created for government leaders a challenge which has threatened the very existence of the State President Fujimori has cited the clear and present posed by Sendero as one of the primary reasons for the actions he has taken.

It is unfortunate though, that President Fujimori's actions may play into the hands of the Sendero Luminoso guerrillas.

However sympathetic we might be with President Fujimori's problems, we cannot condone the actions he has taken to suspend constitutional principles.

I am pleased this resolution recognizes the swift response of President Bush in reaching to the actions by the Peruvian President and the decision to suspend assistance. We should make it clear that the United States supports democratic government.

This resolution merits our support and I urge my colleagues to act quickly so that we can send an unambiguous message to the chief executive in Peru that he must restore constitutional rights and seek political and economic reform through constitutional means.

Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. DE LA GARZA). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Connecticut?

Mr. MARLENEE. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I really hate to rise with an objection, but due to the mismanagement, due to the partisanship that we have seen, due to the fact that we have a lack of coherent scheduling, we adjourned at 1:30 yesterday without votes the rest of the afternoon and we are here at almost midnight.

Mr. Speaker, I do object.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Objection is heard.

Mr. GEJDENSON. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my unanimous-consent request saddened, Mr. Speaker, that we have disagreements here.

Mr. DREIER of California. Mr. Speaker, objection is heard.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Objection is heard.

ADJOURNMENT OF THE SENATE FROM FRIDAY, APRIL 10, 1992, OR SATURDAY, APRIL 11, 1992, TO TUESDAY, APRIL 28, 1992, AND ADJOURNMENT OF THE HOUSE FROM THURSDAY, APRIL 9, 1992, TO TUESDAY, APRIL 28, 1992

The SPEAKER laid before the House the following Senate concurrent resolution (S. Con. Res. 109) providing for adjournment of the Senate from Friday, April 10, 1992, or Saturday, April 11, 1992, to Tuesday, April 28, 1992, and adjournment of the House from Thursday, April 9, 1992, to Tuesday, April 28, 1992.

The Clerk read the Senate concurrent resolution, as follows:

S. CON. RES. 109

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That when the Senate recesses or adjourns at the close of business on Friday, April 10, 1992, or Saturday, April 11, 1992, pursuant to a motion made by the Majority Leader, or his designee, in accordance with this resolution, it stand recessed or adjourned until 9:30 a.m. on Tuesday, April 28, 1992, or until 12 o'clock noon on the second day after members are notified to reassemble pursuant to section 2 of this resolution, whichever occurs first; and that when the House of Representatives adjourns on the legislative day of Thursday, April 9, 1992, pursuant to a motion made by the Majority Leader, or his designee, in accordance with this resolution, it stand adjourned until 12 o'clock noon on Tuesday, April 28, 1992, or until 12 o'clock noon on the second day after Members are notified to reassemble pursuant to section 2 of this resolution, whichever occurs first.

SEC. 2. The Majority Leader of the Senate and the Speaker of the House, acting jointly after consultation with the Minority Leader of the Senate and the Minority Leader of the House, shall notify the Members of the Senate and the House, respectively, to reassemble whenever, in their opinion, the public interest shall warrant it.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, the Senate concurrent resolution is concurred in.

There was no objection.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

FURTHER MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A further message from the Senate by Mr. Hallen, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed a concurrent resolution of the following title, in which the concurrence of the House is requested:

S. Con. Res. 109. Concurrent resolution providing for a conditional recess or adjournment of the Senate from Friday, April 10, 1992, or Saturday, April 11, 1992, until Tuesday, April 28, 1992, and an adjournment of the House on the legislative day of Thursday, April 9, 1992, until Tuesday, April 28, 1992.

DIRECTING SECRETARY OF HEALTH AND HUMAN SERVICES TO WAIVE CERTAIN REQUIREMENTS UNDER MEDICAID PROGRAM DURING 1992 AND 1993

Mr. WAXMAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration in the House of the bill (H.R. 4572) to direct the Secretary of Health and Human Services to waive certain requirements under the Medicaid Program during 1992 and 1993 for health maintenance organizations operated by the Dayton area health plan in Dayton, OH.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. DE LA GARZA). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

Mr. OXLEY. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I shall not object, but I take this time in order to yield to my friend, the gentleman from California [Mr. WAXMAN] for an explanation of the legislation before us.

Mr. WAXMAN. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding to me.

Mr. Speaker, the purpose of this bill is to prevent the disruption of the Dayton area health plan, a mandatory enrollment program for about 42,600 women and children who live in Montgomery County, OH, and who are eligible for Medicaid because they receive cash assistance under the Aid to Families with Dependent Children Program. Currently, these beneficiaries have a choice of receiving health care from one of three health maintenance organizations. If this bill is not sent to the President and signed into law by April 30, the State of Ohio will lose its current waivers and will have to convert the plan to a fee-for-service program in order to continue receiving Federal Medicaid matching funds.

This legislation was introduced on March 25 by Mr. HALL and seven other Members of the Ohio delegation, including my committee colleagues, Mr. ECKART and Mr. OXLEY. On Tuesday, April 7, the full Energy and Commerce Committee, at my request, discharged the Subcommittee on Health and the Environment from further consideration of the bill, adopted an amendment in the nature of a substitute which I developed with Mr. HALL, and ordered the bill, as amended, reported by voice vote, with the support of the committee minority.

Under current law, HMO's that contract with Medicaid must meet an enrollment mix requirement. After 3 years, no more than 75 percent of an HMO's enrollment can consist of individuals eligible for Medicaid or Medicare; the remaining 25 percent must be private patients. The purpose of this 75/25 rule is to assure that the HMO is providing adequate quality care by applying a market test—if 1 out of every 4 enrollees is a commercial enrollee with other options, then the HMO is probably providing an acceptable level of care to its Medicaid patients.

The Dayton area health plan is currently operating under a number of waivers granted by the Secretary of HHS relating to freedom of choice. These waivers are scheduled to run through January 31, 1994. However, they are contingent on the HMO's participating in the plan meeting the 75/25 rule by April 30. The Secretary is not authorized to waive the 75/25 rule administratively. The problem here is that one of the HMO's is currently at 90 Medicaid enrollment and will be out of compliance as of April 30. Unless we act by that date, the waivers under which the Dayton area health plan is now operating will expire, and the plan will have to convert to a nonrisk, fee-for-service basis in order to continue receiving Federal Medicaid matching funds.

As amended by the committee, the bill would direct the Secretary to waive the 75/25 rule with respect to Health Plan Network, one of the HMO's participating in the Dayton area health plan, for the period May 1, 1992, through January 31, 1994. The 75/25 rule, as interpreted by the Federal court in Oglesby versus Barry, would continue to apply to the other two HMO's affiliated with the plan. However, in computing the enrollment composition of the DAYMED Health Maintenance Plan, Inc., the Secretary would be prohibited from counting up to 4,000 children born after September 30, 1983, who are eligible for Medicaid because their families' incomes are at or below 100 percent of the Federal poverty level. These children would not count either as Medicaid or as private patients from May 1, 1992, through January 31, 1994.

According to the Congressional Budget Office, this legislation would not result in any increase in Federal Medicaid outlays.

It is my understanding that the administration does not oppose this legislation.

I also understand that both the chairman and the ranking minority member of the Senate Finance Committee will support the adoption of this bill as amended by the Committee on Energy and Commerce.

Mr. OXLEY. Mr. Speaker, further reserving the right to object, I am pleased to yield to the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. FORD].

Mr. FORD of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to have a colloquy with my friend, the gentleman from California [Mr. WAXMAN], on the bill.

Mr. Speaker, there are several other organizations who have similar waiver problems, especially the one here in the District of Columbia, the District of Columbia chartered health care plan.

We had already notified the committee we were not able to get the committee to add any additional HMO's on the list. I totally agree with the Dayton plan getting immediate help. But I certainly hope that the committee will see fit, some time in the near future, to look at other waivers for additional HMO's who have similar problems and that their operations of the health care plan will not be interrupted similar to the plan in Dayton that we are trying now to solve the problem with.

Mr. OXLEY. Mr. Speaker, further reserving the right to object, I yield to the gentleman from California so that he may respond.

Mr. WAXMAN. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, unlike the situation in Dayton, if the chartered health plan of the District of Columbia does not get a 75-25 waiver by April 30, 1992, nothing changes for the HMO or its enrollees. In Dayton's case, the health plan would have to be restructured. The District does not lose any waivers. In Dayton's case, the State of Ohio would lose the waivers it has to restrict enrollment for AFDC recipients in Montgomery County to the Dayton plan. That is why I feel that we have to act on this particular matter. But I know that there are those who would like to urge changes in the Medicaid law that would allow HMO's to either get a waiver or not have the 75-25 requirement. That is something we are going to continue to look at.

Mr. OXLEY. Mr. Speaker, further reserving the right to object, I yield to the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. FORD].

Mr. FORD of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, the Health and Human Services, HCFA, I guess, indicated that the D.C. chartered plan expired some 12 months ago and they are still in operation, I guess, on the cost reimbursement schedule. Hopefully, that will continue with HCFA in the D.C. human resource affiliation here in the District.

□ 2400

But I just want to be assured that at some point the gentleman's committee, as well as the full Committee on Energy and Commerce, will give us an opportunity to make sure that the home maintenance organizations will be protected when their dates have already expired, similar to the date in the latter part of the month that will happen to the Dayton HMO.

Mr. WAXMAN. Mr. Speaker, we will continue to look at the issue of the 75-25 requirements under Medicaid, which I consider an important safeguard for quality in managed case plans. The chartered health plan has not met that 75-25 requirement since October 1, 1991, and the District of Columbia has been paying on an interim negotiated rate base rather than on a risk base for the service it provides to Medicaid enrollees. I know that they would like to and prefer to return to payment on a risk basis. There is no provision in Federal law that prevents the District from continuing to pay the chartered health plan on a nonrisk basis. We will continue to get further input on the matter.

Mr. FORD of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from California very much.

Mr. OXLEY. Further reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, I yield to my friend the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. HALL].

Mr. HALL of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I want to thank the gentleman from Ohio for yielding to me. I will just be very brief.

Mr. Speaker, this plan takes place in my district. It is a very unique plan that has very strong support from all parts of my community. It serves poor people, it saves money, and at the same time it delivers good health care. I know that sounds impossible, but in fact this program does do that. We are asking for a temporary waiver for 18 months for the purposes that the gentleman from California [Mr. WAXMAN] has already addressed, and I want to thank him and his very, very able staff, the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. DINGELL] and his staff, the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. OXLEY], and the gentleman from New York [Mr. LENT], and certainly the cosponsor of the bill, the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. HOBSON], and Gail and Karen of my staff, for the great work they have done.

Mr. Speaker, I would urge the Members to support it.

Mr. OXLEY. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. HOYER). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

H.R. 4572

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. APPLICABILITY OF ENROLLMENT MIX REQUIREMENT TO CERTAIN HEALTH MAINTENANCE ORGANIZATIONS PROVIDING SERVICES UNDER DAYTON AREA HEALTH PLAN.

(a) HEALTH PLAN NETWORK.—With respect to the unincorporated association affiliated with the Dayton Area Health Plan, Inc., that is known as the Health Plan Network, the Secretary of Health and Human Services (hereafter referred to as the "Secretary") shall waive the requirement described in section 1903(m)(2)(A)(ii) of the Social Security Act for the period described in section 2.

(b) DAYMED, INC.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Subject to paragraph (2), for purposes of determining the compliance of the DAYMED Health Maintenance Plan, Inc., with the requirement described in section 1903(m)(2)(A)(ii) of the Social Security Act for the period described in section 2, the Secretary may not treat individuals enrolled with the Plan who are described in section 1902(1)(1)(D) of such Act as individuals enrolled with the Plan on a prepaid basis.

(2) LIMITATION ON NUMBER OF INDIVIDUALS EXEMPTED.—The number of individuals enrolled with the DAYMED Health Maintenance Plan, Inc., whom the Secretary may not treat as individuals enrolled with the Plan on a prepaid basis pursuant to paragraph (1) may not exceed 4,000.

SEC. 2. PERIOD OF APPLICABILITY.

The period referred to in subsections (a) and (b)(1) of section 1 is the period that begins on May 1, 1992, and ends on January 31, 1994.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed.

TITLE AMENDMENT OFFERED BY MR. WAXMAN

Mr. WAXMAN. Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment to the title.

The Clerk read as follows:

Title amendment offered by Mr. WAXMAN: Amend the title so as to read: "A bill to direct the Secretary of Health and Human Services to grant a waiver of the requirement limiting the maximum number of individuals enrolled with a health maintenance organization who may be beneficiaries under the medicare or medicaid programs in order to enable the Dayton Area Health Plan, Inc., to continue to provide services through January 1994 to individuals residing in Montgomery County, Ohio, who are enrolled under a State plan for medical assistance under title XIX of the Social Security Act."

Mr. WAXMAN (during the reading). Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the title amendment be considered as read and printed in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the amendment to the title offered by the gentleman from California [Mr. WAXMAN].

The title amendment was agreed to.

The motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. WAXMAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks on the bill just passed.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

APPOINTMENT OF CONFEREES ON H.R. 2507, NATIONAL INSTITUTES OF HEALTH REVITALIZATION AMENDMENTS OF 1991

Mr. WAXMAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (H.R. 2507) to amend the Public Health Service Act to revise and extend the programs of the National Institutes of Health, and for other purposes, with a Senate amendment thereto, disagree to the Senate amendment and agree to the conference asked by the Senate.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California? The Chair hears none and, without objection, appoints the following conferees:

From the committee on Energy and Commerce, for consideration of the House bill, and the Senate amendment, and modifications committed to conference: Messrs. DINGELL, WAXMAN, WYDEN, LENT, and BLILEY.

As additional conferees from the Committee on Education and Labor, for consideration of section 1114 of the Senate amendment, and modifications committed to conference: Messrs. FORD of Michigan, GAYDOS, and BALLENGER.

There was no objection.

ACCOUNTABILITY IN GOVERNMENT ACT OF 1992—MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES

The Speaker pro tempore laid before the House the following message from the President of the United States; which was read and, together with the accompanying papers, without objection, referred to the Committee on Education and Labor, the Committee on the Judiciary, the Committee on House Administration, the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service and the Committee on Government Operations, and ordered to be printed.

To the Congress of the United States:

I am pleased to transmit today for your immediate consideration and enactment the "Accountability in Government Act of 1992".

The legislation would extend to the Congress and the White House the relevant portions of five laws that apply to the private sector. The laws in question are the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938 (minimum wage law), the Civil Rights Act of 1964, the Age Discrimination in Employment Act of 1967, the Rehabilitation Act of 1973, and the damages remedy created by the Civil Rights Act of 1991. The proposal also makes available the remedies currently available to other employees for violations of these laws, rather than special remedial schemes based entirely or in large part on internal congressional grievance mechanisms.

The legislation would also extend to the analogous portions of Congress five laws that presently apply to various portions of the executive branch. The laws in question are Title VI of the Ethics in Government Act, conflicts of interest laws, the Hatch Act, the Freedom of Information Act, and the Privacy Act. The scope of this proposal has been carefully tailored to take into account the unique characteristics of the Congress and its Members. Moreover, none of the provisions of this legislation except those implicating criminal penalties calls for executive branch enforcement. Rather, all are to be enforced either by private suit, entities within the General Accounting Office (an instrumentality of the legislative branch), or both. This legislation therefore does not present the constitutional separation-of-powers questions that might be presented by general executive branch administration of laws applied to the legislative branch.

I urge the Congress to give this legislation prompt and favorable consideration.

GEORGE BUSH.

THE WHITE HOUSE, April 9, 1992.

DESIGNATION OF HON. STENY H. HOYER TO ACT AS SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE TO SIGN ENROLLED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS THROUGH APRIL 28, 1992

The Speaker pro tempore laid before the House the following communication from the Speaker:

THE SPEAKER'S ROOMS,
U.S. HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
Washington, D.C., April 9, 1992.

I hereby designate the Honorable STENY H. HOYER to sign enrolled bills and joint resolutions through April 28, 1992.

THOMAS S. FOLEY,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.

FURTHER INFORMATION ON BNL DEALINGS

(Mr. FRANK of Massachusetts asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to include extraneous material.)

Mr. FRANK of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, from time to time I have wanted to call attention here to the extraordinarily important information that is being brought forward by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. GONZALEZ], who chairs the House Committee on Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs, about the outrageous pattern of cover-up by this administration involving the abuses of the Iraqi regime in 1989-90.

Recently the gentleman from Texas pointed out that by the intervention of the State Department, a Jordanian who should have been indicted was not indicted.

The use of the BNL to launder funds for Iraq, the diversion by Iraq of American taxpayers' money into illegal purposes that include weapons purchases, all led to a misunderstanding on the part of the Iraqi Government as to what this Government would tolerate.

At a time when people are interested in understanding patterns of abuse, the information that has been compiled and made public by the gentleman from Texas about a systematic effort by this administration to protect illegal activities by Iraq deserves a lot of attention.

I include for the RECORD an article from the Washington Post on this indictment.

WELL-CONNECTED JORDANIAN AVOIDED INDICTMENT

(By George Lardner, Jr.)

The Justice Department decided last year not to indict a Jordanian businessman in a $5 billion Iraqi loan fraud scheme after the State Department pointed out that he was "well connected" to the King of Jordan and to U.S. grain exporters, according to records made public in the House yesterday.

Government prosecutors had been planning to name the middle-man, Wafai Dajani, as one of the defendants in a conspiracy to funnel billions of dollars in illegal bank loans to Iraq, but decided not to do so shortly before the indictment was returned on Feb. 28, 1991—the day allied forces were ordered to stop fighting in the Persian Gulf War.

In a secret internal memo that day, the State Department said it had "no objections" to indictment of any of the individuals on the prosecution's list, including Dajani, but it expressed reservations about proceeding against him in light of his connections.

Iraq received more than $5 billion worth of what the government says were "unauthorized 'off book' loans and credit commitments" from the Atlanta branch of Italy's Banco Nazionale del Lavoro (BNL) between 1985 and 1989, including some $900 million guaranteed by the U.S. Government's Commodity Credit Corp. Dajani's firms handled most of the CCC agricultural commodities once they arrived at the port of Aqaba in Jordan, according to Rep. Henry B. Gonzalez (D-Tex.), chairman of the House Banking Committee, who discussed the matter yesterday on the floor.

Gonzalez said Dajani also helped obtain arms for Iraq from firms in Portugal and Cyprus. The Banking Committee, Gonzalez added, is investigating "whether or not the Dajani's grain handling facility in Aqaba were diverted to pay for these weapons or others."

In its memo, the State Department noted that Dajani was a businessman, not a government official, but observed that "his brother is a former minister of the interior [in Jordan] and Wafai himself is considered well connected to the king and to U.S. grain exporters." The memo added that Dajani's "indictment would be seen as a further U.S. attempt to 'punish' Jordan" for siding with Iraq in the gulf war.

Gonzalez called the decision not to indict Dajani "probably the most blatant example of State Department intervention" in the case.

Justice Department officials said State's views had nothing to do with their decision not to indict Dajani last year. They said Dajani was still "a target" of their ongoing inquiries.

"If State expressed reservations about Dajani, that was not a factor in his being included in the indictment," said Gerrilyn Brill, chief of the criminal division of the U.S. Attorney's office in Atlanta.

In internal administration deliberations, the State Department along with the National Security Council continued to argue in favor of courting Iraq until shortly before the August 1990 invasion of Kuwait, despite disclosure of the BNL scandal in August 1989 and the strenuous misgivings of other government agencies about the extent of the fraud.

A confidential State Department report, for instance, about a meeting Oct. 13, 1989, with Agriculture officials said there were 10 separate investigations underway of BNL-Atlanta's dealings. The memo said Agriculture expected "the investigation could 'blow the roof off the CCC,'" and added that chances were "more and more likely that CCC guaranteed funds and/or commodities may have been diverted from Iraq to third parties in exchange for military hardware."

"In the cases where adequate documentation exists," the memo went on, "CCC commodities can be traced as far as Jordan and Turkey, [but] in many cases it is not clear that they ever reached Iraq. Where documents indicate shipments arrived in Baghdad, the timing appears improbable—shipments arrive in Baghdad prior to arriving at interim ports.

"If smoke indicates fire, we may be facing a four-alarm blaze in the near future," the memo concluded.

The next month, at the urging of the State Department and NSC, the Agriculture Department approved a new $1 billion CCC program for Iraq for fiscal 1990.

In a related matter, the Los Angeles Times reported yesterday that the United States has paid $360.7 million to a Persian Gulf bank partly owned by Iraq to make good on CCC-guaranteed loans that Iraq left in default after the invasion. Senate Agriculture Committee Chairman Patrick J. Leahy (D-Vt.) called for an explanation in a letter to Agriculture Secretary Edward R. Madigan.

"At a time when we are all concerned that the government of Iraq continues to act in an outlaw fashion under the leadership of Saddam Hussein, I am very concerned that this payment sends a dangerous signal," Leahy wrote.

NATIONAL PAY EQUITY POLL

(Ms. OAKAR asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to include extraneous matter.)

Ms. OAKAR. Mr. Speaker, today I joined with the National Committee on Pay Equity in announcing the results of a national bipartisan poll which shows that 77 percent of the voting public, male, female, black, white, Democrat, Republican support fairness in pay.

We know that there are two groups of people whose jobs are undervalued and underpaid, women and minorities and particularly aging men as well. I think it is about time we enact legislation that results in pay equity. I also feel very strongly that our Presidential candidates, both Republicans and Democrats, ought not to be afraid of economic security measures like fairness in pay.

Why is a woman the poorest person in the country when she is 65? She is the poorest because when she works for a living in her younger years her job is undervalued and underpaid. Ask any nurse, teacher, secretary.

So the American people, male and female, want fairness and this poll, which I will submit for the RECORD, shows it.

The poll referred to follows:

OAKAR ANNOUNCES RESULTS OF NATIONAL PAY
EQUITY POLL

Congresswoman Mary Rose Oakar (D-OH), today joined with the national committee on pay equity in announcing the results of a national, bipartisan poll which shows that 77 percent of the voting public supports pay equity. Oakar said, "this poll offers indisputable evidence that pay equity is an idea embraced by the vast majority of the American public. It is time that the leaders of this country listen to what the people are saying."

Sighting results from the poll, Congresswoman Oakar pointed out that pay equity, or the concept of elimination of sex and race-based wage discrimination, has broad, bipartisan support. According to the survey, 81 percent of individuals who identify with the Democratic Party support pay equity, as do 72 percent of those individuals who identify with the Republican Party, and 79 percent of those who consider themselves Independent.

Oakar noted, "for decades, employers have been using gender and race to determine pay. The problem has been exacerbated by the fact that, by and large, women remain in the low-paying, traditionally female occupations. The fact that women remain in these positions is not at fault. The cause seems to be that women, by virtue of the fact that they occupy certain jobs such as nursing, teaching, library sciences, service industry, clerical and retail work have been almost victimized. The stigma of 'women don't have to work, because someone else is supporting them' has remained a part of the marketplace, but not our society."

Author of H.R. 386, the pay equity technical assistance act, legislation that calls for the creation of a clearinghouse on pay equity, Congresswoman Oakar has waged a 16 year battle in Congress to address the inequities in the work place.

In conclusion Oakar states, "I believe that the study conducted by the national committee on pay equity will be the added ammunition needed to convince the government that pay equity is an idea whose time has come."

PACIFIC OCEAN SALMON FISHING
DISASTER RELIEF ACT

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from California [Mr. PANETTA] is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. PANETTA. Mr. Speaker, today I am introducing legislation prompted by the Pacific Fisheries Management Council's recent proposal to either ban or severely restrict Pacific Ocean salmon fishing along the west coast from the Mexican border to Canada. Commercial fishermen from California, Oregon, and Washington will suffer tremendous losses as a result of these restrictions. For many of these commercial fishermen, Pacific Ocean salmon fishing is their primary or sole source of income.

Although there is an extreme scarcity of Pacific Ocean salmon and restricting the salmon season is essential to the long-term vitality of the fishery, these fishermen are going to suffer harsh economic hardships through no fault of their own. The salmon deficiency is a result of a number of things including coastal floods, droughts, coastal urbanization, and the warming of eastern Pacific waters.

This legislation declares that the Pacific Fisheries Management Council's ban or restriction on the harvest of Pacific Ocean salmon is a disaster. This bill will provide Federal disaster assistance to commercial fishermen in the western United States adversely affected by the ban or restriction on the harvest of Pacific Ocean salmon imposed by the Pacific Fisheries Management Council.

The bill is fashioned after existing agricultural disaster relief and would work much the same way. Federal disaster assistance would be provided to commercial fishermen at a rate of 65 percent of any losses in excess of 40 percent. The economic loss will be determined by calculating the average harvest of Pacific Ocean salmon and the average price received during the years 1986 through 1990.

Mr. Speaker, this disaster relief is desperately needed. I invite my colleagues' review and cosponsorship of this important legislation and urge its timely adoption by the full House. For the convenience of my colleagues the text of the bill is printed below.

H.R. —

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Pacific Ocean Salmon Fishing Disaster Relief Act".

SEC. 2. DECLARATION OF DISASTER FOR PACIFIC OCEAN SALMON FISHING OPERATIONS.

The Congress finds that the imposition by the Pacific Fishery Management Council of a total ban or other severe restrictions on the harvest of Pacific Ocean salmon within the 200 miles exclusive economic zone of the United States off the coast of California, Oregon, and Washington—

(1) will result in an economic disaster for commercial salmon fishing operations operating out of ports in these States; and

(2) requires the provision of disaster assistance under this section to alleviate in part the resulting economic hardship to these operations.

SEC. 3. DISASTER ASSISTANCE FOR PACIFIC OCEAN SALMON FISHING OPERATIONS.

(a) DEFINITION.—For purposes of this section, the term "commercial salmon fishing operation" means a fishing operation that—

(1) is owned or operated by a citizen or national of the United States;

(2) operates out of California, Oregon, or Washington;

(3) is engaged in the harvest of Pacific Ocean salmon through ocean or river fishing; and

(4) has harvested Pacific Ocean salmon during each of the five preceding calendar years.

(b) OPERATIONS ELIGIBLE FOR ASSISTANCE.—A commercial salmon fishing operation shall be eligible for assistance under this section if the Secretary of Commerce determines that the operation harvests during calendar year 1992 is less than 60 percent of the average annual weight of Pacific Ocean salmon harvested by the operation during calendar years 1986 through 1990.

(c) AMOUNT OF DISASTER PAYMENT.—The Secretary of Commerce shall make a disaster payment to a commercial salmon fishing operation eligible under subsection (b) in an amount equal to the product of—

(1) the payment rate determined under subsection (d); and

(2) the deficiency in harvest of Pacific Ocean salmon in calendar year 1992 greater than 40 percent of the average annual harvest for the operation, as determined under subsection (e).

(d) PAYMENT RATE.—For purposes of subsection (c) the payment level for Pacific Ocean salmon shall be equal to 65 percent of the simple average price received by eligible salmon fishing operations, as determined by the Secretary of Commerce, during calendar years 1986 through 1990, excluding the year in which the average price was the highest and the year in which the average price was lowest.

(e) DETERMINATION OF AVERAGE HARVEST.—The Secretary of Commerce shall determine the average annual weight of Pacific Ocean salmon harvested by a commercial salmon fishing operation during calendar years 1986 through 1990 from information provided by the operation, excluding the year in which the harvest was the largest and the year in which the harvest was the lowest. In the absence of sufficient records, the Secretary may base the determination on the average annual harvest determined for similarly situated operations.

(f) ADJUSTMENTS FOR SUBSTITUTED HARVESTS.—The Secretary of Commerce shall adjust the determination of the actual harvest of a commercial salmon fishing operation to the extent the Secretary determines that the operation—

(1) compensated for the reduction in salmon harvest by harvesting other commercial fish; or

(2) failed to take reasonable methods to alleviate the economic hardship resulting from the ban or restrictions on salmon fishing.

(g) TIME FOR PAYMENTS.—The Secretary of Commerce shall make the payments required by this section not later than 30 days after the later of—

(1) the effective date of this Act; and

(2) the close of the 1992 Pacific Ocean salmon fishing season.

SEC. 4. EFFECTIVE DATE.

This Act shall take effect on October 1, 1992.

WILD BIRD CONSERVATION ACT OF 1992

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. STUDDS] is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. STUDDS. Mr. Speaker, I am today introducing legislation to curtail imports of wild-caught birds for the pet trade, and promote the captive breeding of exotic birds at home and abroad to supply the pet industry.

Although habitat loss is the single most significant factor in the decline of wild bird populations around the world, trade has contributed significantly to the decline. The United States alone imports more than 500,000 birds annually, more than half of which belong to species listed as threatened under the Convention on the International Trade in Endangered Species.

The extent of the damage that has been done to wild bird populations is not known precisely, because many exporting countries lack the resources needed to protect their bird resources or to analyze the ecological impacts of the trade. What is clear is that some of the world's greatest breeding grounds for beautiful and unusual birds have been systematically plundered in order to supply house pets for people in America and Western Europe. The trade in wild birds is also characterized by a high degree of mortality, causing an estimated 16 percent of birds harvested for trading purposes to die in transit or quarantine.

This bill is not intended to deprive pet stores or prospective pet owners of birds. Rather, it is designed to encourage the growth of an industry for breeding and raising exotic birds in captivity for the specific purpose of supplying the pet trade.

The general concept of this legislation was endorsed by the pet industry, bird breeders, veterinarians, zoos, wildlife conservation groups, and animal welfare groups. Last year, representatives of those groups worked together to draft legislation that would reform the international bird trade. Two bills, similar in purpose, but different in detail, emerged from that effort. In order to spur debate and give all sides a chance to state their views, I introduced both bills. The bill I am introducing today is an attempt to provide common ground which can be supported by the proponents of both of the original bills.

This bill is patterned closely after a legislative proposal drafted by the Office of the Assistant Secretary of the Interior for Fish and Wildlife and Parks. It is the product of a dedicated effort by his office and the Fish and Wildlife Service to find some effective middle ground on this issue and I commend both the Assistant Secretary and the Service for their efforts. I would note that questions have been raised about whether this type of legislation might be challenged under the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade. I personally believe that such a challenge would have very little chance of succeeding. First, the European Community has implemented a system for regulating the trade in wild birds that is very similar to that established for the United States in this bill, and it has not been challenged under GATT. Second, there is absolutely no intention on the part of its proponents or sponsor to run afoul of the obligations of the United States under the GATT. And finally, it is clear that this type of legislative proposal is absolutely necessary to conserve the wild bird populations that are so clearly imperiled.

The United States is the world's largest importer of wild-caught birds. It is incumbent upon us to restrict this trade to ensure that we do not continue to contribute to the decline in populations of these magnificent birds. I hope that the administration, after further review of this issue, will agree to join other nations which have made a commitment to solve this problem and support this legislation.

HEALTH ADMINISTRATIVE SIMPLIFICATION ACT OF 1992

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from California [Mr. STARK], is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. STARK. Mr. Speaker, I am today introducing the Health Administrative Simplification Act of 1992. My bill will save tens of billions of dollars a year which currently are spent on excessive paperwork by consumers, employers, and government, which could be eliminated from the health system. My bill is based on testimony presented to the Subcommittee on Health of the Committee on Ways and Means in a hearing held April 2, 1992, and on my own observations of the health care delivery system.

In recent months, we have spent a great deal of time focusing on how to cure the ills of our health care system. As we are all very much aware, health care is far too expensive, consumes too great a share of our Nation's wealth, and leaves too many of our citizens either unprotected, or inadequately protected, from the catastrophic impact of illness. We need to start moving now to address these issues through comprehensive health reform legislation.

Administrative simplification is a particularly important part of our health reform discussions. Reducing the administrative costs, and the burdens, of the health insurance system is one place where consensus already exists.

Reducing administrative costs in health care through the use of electronic billing, uniform bills, smart cards, and other similar measures is something on which we can all agree. Whether we support a Canadian-style system, Medicare for all, pay or play, or some other plan, we need to move aggressively to put these measures in place.

There is wide agreement on what could be done to reduce the administrative expenses of the health care system. Much of what needs to be done is based on existing information processing technology. This is not an area in which we need to invent a new set of policies or processes in order to achieve our goals.

My bill sets forth a framework for administrative simplification by addressing the key administrative hassles of the health care system.

My bill would require the use of a standard health insurance card by all insurers and payers. The card would be able to read electronically, and would contain a universal and unique numbering system for identification of beneficiaries, through use of Social Security numbers. The card would be capable of electronically addressing an online system which would allow doctors and hospitals to verify eligibility and benefits for each insured person prior to services being rendered.

The use of universal insurance cards and the online electronic system for verification of eligibility and benefits would reduce substantially one of the most costly administrative bottlenecks in the current health financing system. Insured persons are not always sure which group health plan is responsible for paying their health care bills; a patient almost never knows how much of their deductible and copayments are still owed for a given year. Sending claims to the wrong payer, and chasing down the party responsible for payment, costs hospital and doctors a great deal of money. Creation of a system which lets all parties know in advance who is going to pay the bill, and what restrictions on coverage may apply, will reduce the administrative expenses of providers dramatically.

The second important reduction in unnecessary administrative expense envisioned by my bill is the creation of electronic billing systems based on standard bill formats and standard coding of diagnoses and procedures. Currently, there are literally hundreds of different bill formats which insurers demand of providers. Maintenance of multiple bill formats requires providers to spend literally billions of dollars on staff to process these claims, and interferes with the development of electronic billing systems.

In fact, the best way to assure that claims are processed in the fastest, most efficient way is to establish regional claims clearinghouses to process all claims. Similarly to the way in which bank checks are processed through the regional Federal Reserve System, a regional claims processing system will assure that provider costs for submitting claims will be minimized. My bill would require the Secretary of Health and Human Services to establish regional clearinghouses throughout the country, and to establish an interclearinghouse communications network. Through such a system, all claims will be handled in an identical manner, and coordination between multiple payers will be assured. Such a system will also allow for electronic transfer of funds between payers and providers, thus removing paper checks from the system.

My bill would also require the Secretary to develop standards for claims adjudication to make sure that the payment audits and screens applied to claims are uniform. Standards would also be developed for the data required to support utilization reviews and analysis. Under current practice, payers screen bills using widely different criteria. Dealing with these idiosyncratic rules costs providers a great deal. Standardization of these screens and audits would simplify both the process of submitting bills and the claims processing system. Both providers and insurers would save as a result. Similarly, providers face conflicting demands for large amounts of data from the patient medical record in order to support utilization review. Standardization would allow automation of many of these data requests and would reduce provider hassle to a minimum.

Consensus exists on most of these issues; moreover, the information processing technology exists to achieve a high degree of automation in each of these areas.

Where consensus breaks down is on how far we should go in developing uniform approaches in each of these areas, and what should be the role of Government in assuring that uniform approaches are in fact used by all payers and providers. Although I believe it may be possible to establish a uniform, regional health claims processing system on a voluntary basis, I am skeptical. Unfortunately, unlike the banking system, we do not have decades in which we can slowly develop the system. The skyrocketing costs of health care demand that we move much faster than was the case in banking.

Our experience to date suggests that voluntary efforts based in the private sector do not work. The history of the UB-82, the uniform bill for hospitals, makes clear that uniform approaches which are not backed up by legal requirements quickly disintegrate into idiosyncratic systems which place enormous burdens, and costs, on the system.

My bill is mandatory in nature. It requires the Secretary to establish the regional system and the uniform standards for billing, claims adjudication, and utilization review. It requires providers and insurers to participate in the system or to face penalties. I have taken this approach because I don't believe that we can develop the system any other way. We need to move quickly to get this system up and running. However, I do not want these penalties to be viewed as anything other than a way to jump start the process; for this reason, the penalties sunset after 3 years, at which time participation for other than Medicare and Medicaid would be voluntary. If those who believe a totally voluntary approach can realistically be expected to deliver a working system in the shortest possible time, I am willing to drop even the short-term enforcement provisions of my bill.

The bottom line is that the costs of health care continue to rise at unconscionable rates. Whether we favor broad change or something less sweeping, we all share the goal of reducing overhead costs and hassle.

A summary of my bill follows:

SUMMARY—HEALTH ADMINISTRATIVE SIMPLIFICATION ACT OF 1992

I. UNIVERSAL HEALTH INSURANCE CARDS

Each beneficiary of a health insurance plan, including public plans, would be issued a universal health insurance card by plans participating in the health insurance claims network.

1. Cards would be similar to ATM cards, and would be readable by electronic card readers.

2. Each card would include a universal health insurance identification number, which would be the social security number of the beneficiary.

II. UNIFORM ELECTRONIC CLAIMS

1. All claims submitted by providers would be transmitted using a uniform electronic format to be developed by the Secretary.

2. Coding of procedures and diagnoses would follow uniform formats based on the CPT-4 and the ICDM-9 with additional coding developed as necessary by the Secretary.

III. PROVIDER SUBMISSION OF CLAIMS

1. For insurers voluntarily participating in a regional health claims network, providers would be required to submit all claims for payment to the regional network.

2. Each provider would be required to submit claims using a unique provider identification number similar to the UPIN used for Medicare.

3. Claims for Medicare, Medicaid, and other public programs would be submitted through a regional health claims network.

IV. VERIFICATION OF ELIGIBILITY AND BENEFITS

A. Verification of eligibility and benefits by providers

1. For insurers participating in a regional network, providers could inquire regarding which health plan covered a patient and the benefits to which the patient was entitled under the plan.

2. Each health insurer participating in the network would provide, and regularly update, information on the eligibility of covered persons for benefits.

B. Type of communications

1. Each clearinghouse would be required to accept inquiries electronically through the use of electronic card readers, touchtone telephones, or computer modems.
2. For an additional fee, clearinghouses would accept voice inquiries not using electronic equipment.

V. UNIFORM HOSPITAL REPORTING

All hospitals would be required to submit cost reporting data based on uniform hospital reports required to be developed under OBRA '87.

VI. STANDARDS FOR CLAIMS ADJUDICATION AND UTILIZATION REVIEW

In consultation with the Agency for Health Care Policy and Research the Secretary would be required to develop uniform standards for medical audits and screens used for claims adjudication, and utilization review.

VII. PUBLIC DOMAIN SOFTWARE

The Secretary would develop public domain software which could be used by hospitals, physicians, and other providers to submit claims to the health claims network.

VIII. CREATION OF HEALTH CLAIMS NETWORK

A. Health claims clearinghouses

Health claims clearinghouses would be established in each region of the country by the Secretary of HHS.

1. Clearinghouses would process all claims for payment by providers by plans participating in the network.
2. Clearinghouses would primarily assure that each claim was "clean" and could be paid by the payer.
3. Clearinghouses would be authorized to impose a charge on payers and providers for processing of claims.
 - a. The amount of the charge would be limited to an amount determined in the clearinghouse's contract with the Secretary.
4. Payers could also arrange for the clearinghouse to pay the claims directly.

B. Inter-clearinghouse network

1. Clearinghouses would be linked together electronically to allow for out-of-area claims processing and eligibility determinations.

IX. SELECTION OF CLEARINGHOUSE CONTRACTORS

A. Contracts with clearinghouses

1. The Secretary will contract with a public or private organization to serve as the health claims clearinghouse for each region of the country.
2. Regions will be designated by the Secretary and will encompass areas of approximately 5 million people.

B. Selection of organizations to serve as clearinghouses

The Secretary would consider:

1. The price charged by the organization to process health claims.
2. The organization's ability to process, and experience in processing, claims.
3. The organization's experience in relating to the various providers in the region.

X. ENFORCEMENT

Insurers and employer-sponsored plans would be required to issue universal health insurance cards, provide standardized benefits, and participate in the health claims network. Insurers would be subject to an excise tax on premiums, and providers would be subject to civil monetary penalties, if they did not comply. The excise tax and civil monetary penalties would sunset three years after they applied to insurers and providers.

XI. EFFECTIVE DATES

The Secretary would be required to develop standards within eighteen months of enactment, enter into contracts within 24 months of enactment, and have the network in operation within 27 months of enactment. Hospitals would be required to use uniform hospital reports during FY 1993.

TRIBUTE TO CARMEN E. TURNER

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Maryland [Mr. HOYER] is recognized for 60 minutes.

Mr. HOYER. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to inform the House of the loss of a dear friend both to me and many in this institution. This morning at 11 a.m., Carmen Turner, Under Secretary of the Smithsonian Institution, and former General Manager to the Washington Metropolitan Area Transit Authority, succumbed to the cancer that she had battled day in and day out these past few years.

Mr. Speaker, Carmen Turner was a giant of a person. Her leadership, her grace, and her strength of character were second to none. Every one of us here, who had the honor and the pleasure of working with Carmen Turner, can call these qualities to mind, as we can her warmth and personality that lit up every room she entered.

From 1983 to 1990, Carmen established a legacy of quality and excellence at the Washington Metropolitan Area Transit Authority through her service as General Manager. More than any other single person, she deserves credit for shepherding the authorization through the Congress necessary to complete the 103-mile Metrorail system.

Carmen's greatest skill was that of building a consensus that would not only work, but that would last. She knit together diverse local governments and built a regional approach to mass transit that has led Metro through rapids that have swamped less skillfully captained projects. She was able to work with Members from both parties in this institution, spanning even an ideology that was less supportive of mass transit during the Reagan administration.

There were not many people who could bring Ralph Stanley, former UMTA Administrator under President Reagan, to yield. But on more than one occasion, I saw firsthand how Carmen's command of detail, style and wit turned someone who many termed an adversary to an admirer.

Under her leadership, the rapid rail system doubled in size, and WMATA was honored with the title of the No. 1 transit system in North America by the American Public Transit Association. It was an honor that could well have been termed the No. 1 general manager in the country as well.

Mr. Speaker, it is impossible to summarize the accomplishments of one life, so precious and valuable, in any statement on this floor: Carmen Turner's life was one of public service. She gave of herself to this region and this country—and made America greater by her contribution.

For 26 years, Carmen served in the Federal Service. And today, when public servants are taking a beating in the eyes of many of the public, it is important to note that public service is still this country's highest calling—whether it be in the military or in the Civil Service. Day in and day out, public servants educate our children, protect our families, defend our rights, and improve the quality of our lives. Carmen Turner was the epitome of public service.

In her short tenure as Under Secretary at the Smithsonian, Carmen Turner's firm hand brought order and her vision brought direction to an institution that finds itself often pulled in many directions. The Smithsonian has suffered a great loss today as well. It will sorely miss her guidance and direction.

Mr. Speaker, let me close by saying this. Carmen Turner was my friend. She touched my life and made me the better for it. In these last few months, Carmen fought a long and terrible battle with cancer. And the courage and strength that I witnessed in this battle made it all the clearer to me what a friend I had, and what a giant that friend was.

Mr. Speaker, I rise today to mourn our loss, my loss, and the loss to this great country. There is a void in this town this day. A void that will not be filled again.

I commend my friend Carmen Turner, who, in the words of St. Paul, "has run the good race and kept the faith." God bless you, Carmen. God bless your family. Our prayers go out to you, to your family, and for all of us. We have lost a friend, a great lady. We will remember her always.

Mr. DELLUMS. Mr. Speaker, I rise to pay tribute to Carmen E. Turner, who passed today, Thursday, April 9, 1992, here in Washington, DC.

Mrs. Carmen Turner was the Under Secretary of the Smithsonian Institution. She was formerly the general manager of the Washington Metropolitan Area Transit Authority, the metrorail system. It is in that capacity that I and many Members of the House of Representatives knew her. Many of my colleagues have paid tribute to her here on the floor of this body for her outstanding leadership and superb management for 7½ years of the Washington Metrorail System, universally recognized as one of the finest in the world.

It is a tribute to her inspiring leadership and ability that we in the Congress were successful in 1990 in passing Public Law 101-551, the additional authorization of Federal funds to complete the total 103-mile regional metrorail system. The metrorail system is an essential part of our National Capital transportation system and because she ran it so well it made our task so much easier here in Congress, to pass supportive legislation. As I recall, the Washington Metro System won the 1988 American Public Transit Association's highest honor.
