PROCEEDINGS AND DEBATES OF THE 103<sup>d</sup> CONGRESS, SECOND SESSION

SENATE—Wednesday, September 28, 1994

(Legislative day of Monday, September 12, 1994)

The Senate met at 10 a.m., on the expiration of the recess, and was called to order by the Honorable BEN NIGHTHORSE CAMPBELL, a Senator from the State of Colorado.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The prayer today will be offered by our guest chaplain, Bishop Cousin, of Philadelphia, PA.

PRAYER

The guest chaplain, the Reverend Philip R. Cousin, presiding bishop, First Episcopal District AME Church, Philadelphia, PA, offered the following prayer:

Let us pray:

Almighty God, Thou who has dominion over Earth, sea, and sky, look with favor upon our Nation and the persons responsible for our Government. We pray for the President of these United States, those in his Cabinet, and all others in positions of authority and trust. We especially ask that guidance and wisdom be given to those public servants who work in these prestigious legislative halls. Take from them all thoughts of personal or political aggrandizement. Enable them to be keenly sensitive to the public trust that is within their keeping.

We ask that You will empower our legislators with love and justice for all the inhabitants of our great Republic. Help us as a nation to be good enough and strong enough for the challenges of our times. Confound and thwart the efforts of those who would sacrifice public good for personal gain. Give to our citizens the courage to continue the pursuit of a world fashioned and structured by Your peace and love. We pray that we will always do justly, love mercy, and walk humbly with You as we strive to usher in Your kingdom. Amen.

APPOINTMENT OF ACTING PRESIDENT PRO TEMPORE

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will please read a communication to the Senate from the President pro tempore [Mr. BYRD].

The legislative clerk read the following letter:

U.S. SENATE,
PRESIDENT PRO TEMPORE,
Washington, DC, September 28, 1994.

To the Senate:

Under the provisions of rule I, section 3, of the Standing Rules of the Senate, I hereby appoint the Honorable BEN NIGHTHORSE CAMPBELL, a Senator from the State of Colorado, to perform the duties of the Chair.

ROBERT C. BYRD,
President pro tempore.

Mr. CAMPBELL thereupon assumed the chair as Acting President pro tempore.

RESERVATION OF LEADER TIME

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Under the previous order, the leadership time is reserved.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR AND RELATED AGENCIES APPROPRIATIONS ACT, 1995—CONFERENCE REPORT

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senate will now proceed to consideration of the conference report accompanying H.R. 4602, which the clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The committee on conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H.R. 4602) making appropriations for the Department of the Interior and related agencies for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1995, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses this report, signed by all of the conferees.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the Senate will proceed to the consideration of the conference report.

(The conference report is printed in the House proceedings of the RECORD of September 22, 1994.)

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Who seeks recognition?

Mr. BYRD addressed the Chair.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair recognizes the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. BYRD].

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, the Senate is now considering the conference report on H.R. 4602, the fiscal year 1995 Department of the Interior and related agencies appropriation bill. This conference report and accompanying statement of the managers appeared in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD on September 22, 1994, on pages 25271 through 25287.

The agreements before the Senate today total $13.573 billion in budget authority, and $13.965 billion in outlays, as scored by the Congressional Budget Office. These amounts include $450 million in emergency appropriations above the normal appropriations for firefighting due to the devastating fire season occurring this year. The recommendations of this conference agreement represent a total decrease below the amounts requested in the budget of $196.9 million in budget authority and $157.9 million in outlays. And in the end, when all of the required scorekeeping adjustments are made, this bill is $210.6 million below the level of funding provided for these programs in fiscal year 1994.

I hope that Senators will take note. Let me repeat. The recommendations of this conference agreement represent a total decrease below the amounts requested in the budget of $196.9 million in budget authority and $157.9 million in outlays. And in the end, when all of the required scorekeeping adjustments are made, this bill is $210.6 million below—let me repeat, below—the level of funding provided for these programs in fiscal year 1994.

In order to comply with the 602(b) allocation, an across-the-board reduction of 0.191 percent has been taken. This reduction will be applied to all programs, projects, and activities, except for mandated settlement payments and certain smaller accounts in the bill.

Mr. President, reaching agreement between the House and Senate is never easy on appropriations bills, and this bill is no exception. Each Senator would probably recommend a different compromise than that before the Senate today. I would remind all Senators, however, that this package attempts to address the many different priorities of all Senators, and House Members. No one is 100 percent satisfied, nor does any Member get everything exactly the way he or she might prefer.

● This "bullet" symbol identifies statements or insertions which are not spoken by a member of the Senate on the floor.

The conference had to resolve nearly 1,000 items of discrete difference between the House and the Senate. The bill had a total of 119 Senate amendments. The formal conference met on 2 different days, which was preceded by many hours of preliminary negotiations. This bill has been the subject of a great deal of scrutiny. Most Members have a direct interest in projects in the bill that affect their States, as well as the numerous policy issues.

Mr. President, I thank Senator NICKLES for his assistance on the Interior bill throughout our consideration of these matters this year. The Senate bill and the conference agreements were fashioned in a bipartisan manner. Obviously, not every request can be fulfilled. But we have done our best to maintain program continuity while also addressing items of interest to Members.

Mr. President, I would like to highlight some of the items in the conference agreement.

The bill contains a 1-year moratorium on the issuance of mining patents on the public lands. The provision is repealed if mining law reform legislation now in a House-Senate conference is enacted prior to sine die adjournment of the 103d Congress. The amendment provides that the Secretary of the Interior shall continue to process patent applications that were filed prior to the date of enactment of this Act, if the applicant had complied fully with all of the requirements under the general mining laws for such patent.

The subcommittee has attempted to protect the operational base of the agencies funded in the bill, while at the same time these agencies are having to take their share of administrative and personnel reductions.

Total funding in the bill for Federal land acquisition and State outdoor recreation grants is $235.6 million. This amount is $18.7 million below the fiscal year 1994 level and $18.7 million above the President's request for fiscal year 1995.

Total funding for construction in the land management agencies amounts to nearly $454.1 million. This total is about $84.4 million, or 16 percent, below the fiscal year 1994 appropriation for these same construction accounts.

Funding for energy conservation programs grows by $102.8 million, or 15 percent, over the fiscal year 1994 enacted level. Funding for the energy weatherization grants program is recommended at $226.8 million, and funding is included to allow for the transition to a new formula for distribution of such funds.

Mr. President, before I yield the floor, in addition to my thanks to Mr.

NICKLES, the very able ranking member on the minority side for the subcommittee, I wish to thank all the members of the subcommittee on both sides of the aisle. I also wish to pay my sincere respects to the chairman of the House conferees, Mr. YATES. Mr. YATES is a very, very able protagonist. He knows this bill from beginning to end, upside down and crossways. He carries with him to conference always the courage of his convictions. I have enjoyed working with Mr. YATES over these many, many years, and I look forward to working with him in the future.

Also, I thank and express my admiration for RALPH REGULA, the ranking minority member on the House side. Mr. REGULA is always considerate, courteous, and ably presents the views of his constituents. I always count it a joy to sit across the conference table from RALPH REGULA. And I compliment the other members of the House conference as well.

I close by thanking the members of our staffs. Sue Masica is preeminently capable and did an excellent, excellent job on this bill. She knows it from beginning to end. I get many compliments on her from other Members of the Senate on both sides of the aisle.

I also compliment Cherie Cooper, who is likewise an extremely able, courteous, and considerate member of the staff. She is top staff assistant to Mr. NICKLES. Others on the Interior Subcommittee majority staff are Rusty Mathews, Kathleen Wheeler, Ellen Donaldson, Dan Salisbury, on assignment from the National Park Service. On the minority side, Ginny James. Others I wish to thank are Jim English, the director of the Appropriations Committee staff in the Senate, Marry Dewald, Barbara Videnieks, Marsha Berry, and Anne Miano. And I thank Keith Kennedy, who is the minority staff director. He is a fine individual, who is always most considerate and is very able. It is a pleasure to work with minority staff members such as these whom I have named.

Mr. President, I shall yield the floor. Mr. NICKLES addressed the Chair.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. NICKLES] is recognized.

Mr. NICKLES. Mr. President, I wish to thank Senator BYRD for his comments and most of all for his leadership in managing the Interior appropriations bill, and particularly through conference. As usual, he has handled himself in this subcommittee very professionally and I think he has done an outstanding job.

I might mention, this has not been an easy job, because we have less money to spend than we did last year, as Senator BYRD mentioned, about $200 million less than we had last year in budget authority. That is about a 1.5-percent reduction for 1995 as compared to 1994. So that makes it difficult.

As my colleagues know, we are dealing with agencies that affect a lot of States, a lot of constituencies and, therefore, there are a lot of requests, with individual Members trying to assist their constituents.

So we have worked together. And I appreciate the fact that Senator BYRD is willing to work with all members of the committee, Democrat and Republican.

I also wish to thank all the other members of the committee. This subcommittee probably has a more active membership within the subcommittee than most others because, again, it affects individual States significantly.

Mr. President, Senator BYRD outlined the overall impact of this bill, but let me just touch on a few things so my colleagues will have a little bit better flavor of some of the individual items.

Senator BYRD mentioned that this year we actually have $213 million less budget authority than we did in fiscal year 1994. I will touch on a few things.

The Bureau of Land Management is plus $34 million; the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service is down $5.7 million. The Park Service—and I regret we were not able to do more in this regard—the Park Service total is about $1.7 million less than 1994; the USGS, the U.S. Geological Survey, $12 million less than last year; the Bureau of Mines, $16.7 million less than last year in budget authority.

Mr. President, the Bureau of Indian Affairs, while we have the operation of Indian programs going up by about $36 million, construction for a variety of programs is down by $36 million. And the total net for BIA is down $27.3 million, compared to last year in budget authority.

The total for the Department of Interior is down by $51 million, compared to last year, that is to $6.5 billion, a reduction overall.

Senator BYRD mentioned that in the Department of Agriculture we do funding for the Forest Service. We have an increase basically under the nomenclature of emergency forest firefighting supplemental because of all the forest fires we have had out in the West. That is an emergency declared off budget, you might say, of $450 million. The total increase of Department of Agriculture including that $450 million is $439 million. So there is actually a reduction in the Forest Service of about $11 million, compared to last year if you did not have the emergency supplemental.

The Department of Energy has a total reduction of $148 million. And that is also including the fact, as Senator BYRD mentioned, energy conservation will go up by $102 million. So other programs are reduced by about $250 million in the Department of Energy.

The total in Indian health services, I might mention to the Presiding Officer, goes up by about $24 million, for a total of little less than $2 billion for Indian health services.

I might mention, too, Smithsonian goes up by $29.6 million, and the National Endowment for the Arts received a 2 percent reduction, for a reduction of about $2.5 million.

Mr. President, that is just a thumbnail sketch. If you added all those changes together and many others in smaller detail, you see that we have a total budget authority for the fiscal year 1995 of $13.5 billion. That is $213 million less than we had in 1994. That made our task very difficult.

So, again, I wish to thank and compliment the chairman of the subcommittee and the chairman of the full committee, Senator BYRD, for his cooperation.

I would also like to echo his comments concerning our staff. I think Cherie Cooper, working on our side, has done an outstanding job; as well as Sue Masica on the majority side. They are both a pleasure to work with. They have handled this bill in a very competent and a very professional manner.

I think we have a product that we can be proud of.

I yield the floor.

AMERICAN INDIANS IN THE FIELD OF PSYCHOLOGY

Mr. BURNS. Will the chairman of the Interior Appropriations Subcommittee yield for a question?

Mr. BYRD. I will be pleased to yield for a question from the Senator from Montana.

Mr. BURNS. On July 25, when this appropriations bill was on the Senate floor, Senator BYRD, the chairman of the subcommittee, offered an amendment in my behalf which made $250,000 available for the recruitment and training of American Indians in the field of psychology. In conference with the House, the bill language was dropped and report language was to be written about this program. Does the chairman recall the agreement we made on this item in conference?

Mr. BYRD. Yes.

Mr. BURNS. I was pleased but also somewhat concerned that the statement of the managers language on this item—page 52—indicated that the initiative should be considered for funding in fiscal year 1996. I appreciate this language and I believe that the initiative should be considered for funding in fiscal year 1996. My concern, however, is about what happens to this program in fiscal year 1995.

Does the chairman agree that this initiative, the initiative to recruit and train American Indians in the field of psychology, should be considered for funding in fiscal year 1995?

Mr. BYRD. The committee would have no objection if IHS were to identify funds and propose a reprogramming to initiative this specific program in fiscal year 1995. The statement of the managers notes that in fiscal year 1995 the IHS scholarship program will support 18 continuing students and 6 new scholarship awards in the area of clinical psychology. These programs have compatible objectives as the Indians-into-psychology program.

Mr. NICKLES. I agree with the chairman of the committee. The agreement on this item focused on fiscal year 1995.

Mr. BURNS. I thank the Senators.

Mrs. MURRAY. Mr. President, I rise in strong support of the conference report on H.R. 4602. I would also like to commend the conferees of both Houses, and especially the chairman and ranking members of the House and Senate Interior subcommittees, Senator BYRD, Senator NICKLES, Representative YATES, and Representative REGULA. Finalizing this conference report took a lot of hard work and difficult decisions.

Mr. President, I would like to reiterate a few themes from my statement during the Senate consideration of this bill last July. This may be the first year in a long time that nearly every appropriations bill has included spending reductions. I serve on both the Budget and Appropriations Committees, so I've had a hands-on opportunity to see this shift take place over the past year and a half.

We have already completed work on several appropriations bills this year. They each carry a similar profile. They try to hold a line on important programs; they reduce FTE's; they phase down programs at, or close to, the end of their usefulness.

The Interior appropriations bill is no different. In this bill, the committee has provided funds for only the most important programs, to achieve only the most critical goals. Critical conservation goals. Critical resource management goals. Critical investment goals. As you can imagine, Mr. President, this has required a lot of tough decisions.

Coming from a Western State, I can appreciate the difficulty in making these choices. I know the maintenance backlog at our national parks. I know the demand for tourist services and public education. I know the pressing need to repair culverts and restore habitat in the national forests.

The agencies under the jurisdiction of the bill are a big part of communities all over Washington. When they lost employees, the communities lose neighbors. When they lack funds to implement laws or regulations, they create controversy. Each time the Senate considers even the obscure little provision in a bill like this, we send a ripple effect through States like mine.

Against this backdrop, H.R. 4602 is an attempt to balance competing demands under difficult circumstances. While there are many worthy projects and important issues which the committee could not address, I feel this bill reflects an effort to be fair. Now that the committee has made these choices, now that we have identified our priorities, it is terribly important—to my State and many others—that we move quickly to pass this bill.

Briefly, I would like to highlight some of the reasons H.R. 4602 is important to Washington State. First and foremost, it provides critical funding necessary to implement the Clinton forest plan.

Funds are provided for this purpose to the Forest Service, the Fish and Wildlife Service, the Bureau of Land Management, the National Biological Survey, and the Bureau of Indian Affairs. Although the committee was only able to provide about 75 percent of the needs identified by the agencies, H.R. 4602 contains enough for these agencies to legally implement the plan. These funds are sufficient to allow planning, watershed assessment, and Endangered Species Act consultations to proceed. In other words, to get things moving and keep them moving. The Senate conferees receded to the House position on this latter point to ensure maximum resources are devoted to the consultation process.

In addition, funds are provided for watershed restoration. This work provides much-needed jobs throughout the national forests in my State. It is also a solid investment to make sure the forests of the future remain healthy and productive.

Many people have criticized the President's plan. Believe me, it is easy to criticize, because multiple-use forest management is very complicated. But it's also easy to oversimplify the problem when things aren't going well.

Those of us elected in 1992 inherited a train wreck. This administration was asked to correct for a decade of overcutting, followed by 5 years of mismanagement, inaction, litigation, and division. Who in their right mind would believe this problem could be repaired overnight?

To use President Clinton's words, his plan will bring the 25 million acres of national forest into a scientifically credible, legally responsible, and economically sustainable management plan. There is a lot at stake; I think we, in Congress, need to support the effort.

Posed with the choice between jobs and the environment, the President said, "both." The goal is to keep the forest healthy and the harvest rate sustainable. That way, we will know how much timber can be cut while maintaining biological diversity. It will take some time yet to know if the plan will work. If it does, the Pacific Northwest forest plan will be a national model for multispecies ecosystem management. I certainly hope all my colleagues will recognize the significance; this administration is willing to take the heat to demonstrate that the choice between jobs and the environment is false.

There are several other issues addressed in this conference report that are important to Washington State. It contains $3.5 million for the Park Service to conduct an environmental impact statement on the acquisition and removal of two hydroelectric dams on the Elwha River. In May 1994, the Park Service completed a feasibility study on restoring salmon runs to the Elwha River pursuant to Public Law 102-495, the Elwha River Ecosystem and Fisheries Restoration Act. This study concludes it would be feasible to restore the salmon runs by removing the dams. Such course of action would enable the Federal Government, the Lower Elwha S'Klallam Tribe, and certain private interests to avoid lengthy, contentious, and expensive litigation.

I recognize that proceeding with dam removal in future years would force the Federal Government to incur significant costs. However, I believe the costs of such action would be less than exposing the Government to a costly, court-imposed settlement. I have introduced legislation to authorize involvement on the part of the Bureau of Reclamation in the future. For now, I hope the Federal Government will continue to proceed with implementation of Public Law 102-495.

H.R. 4602 also provides funds for several important local Federal Government obligations. For example, it includes $2.5 million under State and private forestry special projects to complete the Federal obligation to Skamania County, WA, related to construction of the Skamania Lodge. This is an extremely important item given the historic relationship of Skamania County to the Federal Government under the Columbia Gorge National Scenic Area Act. Non-Federal funds were raised and expended on this project with the understanding the Forest Service would contribute to community efforts. It is doubly important considering the reduction in timber production on the Gifford Pinchot National Forest, which comprises over 85 percent of the county landbase.

In addition, the conference report includes $3.3 million to continue work at the Johnston Ridge Observatory at Mount St. Helens National Volcanic Monument. This amount should be sufficient for the agency to complete all work on the facility except road viewpoints, trailheads, and backcountry facilities. In the first 7 months, it was open, 800,000 people visited the Coldwater Visitor Center. Overall, 3.3 million visitors saw the monument during 1993. During this time, a shuttle bus service has been operated enabling people to reach Johnston Ridge. However, full road and parking facilities have not been completed. Such facilities will be necessary to accommodate anticipated visitation to Johnston Ridge.

Finally, there are funds in the bill to address several land acquisition projects that will ensure important conservation goals are met. In the Alpine Lakes area, $3.105 million will be used to acquire two sections of land from the Plum Creek Timber Co., L.P., a willing seller. These lands are part of the last undisturbed north-south migration corridor from many species.

The sum of $1.4 million is provided to acquire lands from a willing seller adjacent to the Nisqually National Wildlife Refuge; the Fish and Wildlife Service has concluded a purchase agreement in this regard.

The sum of $1.1 million is included to acquire lands in the Skagit Wild and Scenic River management area from a willing seller. This acquisition will help conserve winter forage habitat for the largest population of bald eagles in the lower 48 States.

The sum of $440,000 is included to acquire lands in the White Salmon Wild and Scenic management area. These funds are to be used to purchase the 37-acre Tillotson property, a critical tract that hosts sensitive late successional species such as the pileated woodpecker, the gray squirrel, and the bald eagle. This parcel is available under a short-term purchase agreement that expires in fiscal year 1995. The funds provided are consistent with the Forest Service-approved appraised value for this property.

Mr. President, funds are also included to acquire lands on Lopez Island, at Fishtrap Lake, the Black River, the Olympic National Forest, and the Columbia Gorge. I am grateful to the chairman for the inclusion of these funds. They are critical to the conservation goals of the people of Washington State.

The Land and Water Conservation Fund [LWCF] has been hit particularly hard by spending reductions. This is truly unfortunate, as it offers the best opportunity for nuts and bolts conservation activities. For example, the I-90 corridor in the Cascade Mountains is comprised of checkerboard ownership in some of the most biologically diverse old growth forests of the region. LWCF funds could be used to consolidate Federal ownership to ensure wildlife conservation and recreational opportunities are maintained.

As I mentioned, the bill includes funding to acquire land in the Silver Creek drainage. However, funds are scarce, and this project only represents the tip of the iceberg. I encourage the Forest Service to work with the principal landowner in the corridor to determine whether a comprehensive land exchange is possible. This would be the best way to protect the corridor and relieve pressure on scarce LWCF resources.

Mr. President, there are many more important provisions in H.R. 4602. Every State with significant public lands, every State with an interest in energy conservation, every State with a national park needs this conference report to pass. It is a good, tough agreement. It reflects our need for tight purse strings, but it also supports so many worthy programs. I urge all of my colleagues to support the conference report on H.R. 4602.

STATEMENT ON THE FISCAL YEAR 1995 INTERIOR APPROPRIATIONS BILL

Mr. SASSER. Mr. President, the Senate Budget Committee has examined H.R. 4602, the Interior appropriations bill and has found that the bill is under its 602(b) budget authority allocation by $4 million and under its 602(b) outlay allocation by $138,000.

I compliment the distinguished manager of the bill, Senator BYRD, and the distinguished ranking member of the Interior Subcommittee, Senator NICKLES, on all their hard work.

Mr. President, I have a table prepared by the Budget Committee which shows the official scoring of the Interior appropriations bill and I ask unanimous consent that it be inserted in the RECORD at the appropriate point.

There being no objection, the table was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

THE IMPORTANCE OF COAL RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, I commend the chairman, ranking member, and the members of the Interior appropriations conference committee for providing $155 million for Energy Department research and development funds for coal, an amount considerably higher than the $128 million sought in the administration's budget request. I have worked with the Interior Appropriations Subcommittee to ensure that H.R. 4602 provides sufficient funding for coal research and development because of its importance to Pennsylvania and the Nation.

The energy and water appropriations bill for fiscal year 1995 contained sizeable increases in Energy Department funding for a diverse group of energy sources, such as solar, geothermal, hydropower, and hydrogen. It is important to study applications of these energy sources, but with coal our Nation's most abundant energy resource, Congress should not underestimate the importance of continuing research on environmentally beneficial uses of coal.

There is no question about the indispensable nature of the coal industry in the United States. Especially when one considers our Nation's dependence on foreign energy sources, including foreign oil cartels, coal remains an absolute necessity.

In considering this conference report, Congress should note that the United States has a 300-year supply of coal. Further, coal is a proven source of energy, as evidenced by the fact that 56 percent of electricity is currently generated from coal.

As any Pennsylvanian knows, coal represents jobs. According to a coal industry study, each mining job is supported by 11 other individuals, meaning that this abundant natural resource helps countless families put food on the table, pay the mortgage, and send their children to school.

Pennsylvania's coal mining jobs have declined from 35,000 in 1979 to only 12,659 in 1992. But coal's future may be brighter as a result of the research and development funding in this legislation. Electric utilities across the Nation are relying on clean coal technology derived from a research program that Congress created in recent years and funds annually through this appropriations act. Under the Clean Air Act Amendments of 1990 and with adequate funding, even more utilities will be using such beneficial technology.

Much of the valuable research on clean and efficient uses for coal is performed at the Pittsburgh Energy Technology Center. Working with private sector partners, the center has made much progress on projects designed to evaluate new uses for coal and to promote environmentally beneficial methods of burning it. I would note that the center suffered a tragic loss this month when several of its key officials and researchers died in the September 8, 1994, plane crash at Pittsburgh as they returned from a Chicago conference on clean coal technologies. I know that their dedication continues to live on at the center and that we shall continue to see quality research and development projects from this valued Pittsburgh institution.

Mr. President, I would reiterate the importance of funding research on all types of energy sources and urge my colleagues to support the Interior Department appropriations conference report, which continues support for our Nation's most abundant energy resource through coal research and development.

Mr. JEFFORDS. Mr. President, I rise today to commend my colleague from West Virginia for his leadership in guiding this bill both through the Senate and the conference committee. I especially would like to applaud his careful consideration of the options for funding the National Endowment for the Arts and for deciding on a less damaging across-the-board reduction of 2 percent rather than the previous 5 percent targeted reductions.

The final appropriations level will still allow the Endowment to continue, substantially, its beneficial work in supporting arts and culture in every corner of every State of the Nation.

The NEA is a modest agency; one whose successes are pervasive but difficult to measure. Throughout its history, it has provided critical seed money to aspiring young artists, newly created dance companies, and local arts centers. Indeed, Federal contribution to the arts have reached into the most destitute inner cities, and the most remote rural areas.

In my mind, this is the most important mission of the NEA. It brings the arts to areas of the country that, without NEA support, would do without. Vermonters have always valued the arts, but I highly doubt many of our Nation's renowned artists and arts companies would travel to Vermont if it weren't for the support of the NEA.

Thus, it is a shame that our yearly consideration of funding for the NEA is reduced to assaults upon the agency because of the controversy generated by some questionable performance, past or present. Yet, all the controversy is about a minuscule number of unfortunate incidents—approximately 10 grants out of the over 100,000 issued since the NEA's creation in 1965.

I believe the NEA's work is valuable and worthy of Federal support. If only the arts touched more Americans, maybe our country would be a better place with fewer drugs, less crime, and more self-esteem. As founder and vice-chair of the Congressional Arts Caucus, I have seen first-hand the effects the arts have had on children through our visits with the Dance Theater of Harlem, the New York Public Theater, and our annual art competition. Those children strengthen my belief in the arts, and the work of the NEA.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there further debate?

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, there was no vote on the bill when it passed the Senate. Senators do want to vote on the conference report.

I ask for the yeas and nays on the conference report.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there a sufficient second? There is a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. NICKLES. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. BYRD. Yes.

Mr. NICKLES. I am informed that we have at least one Senator who wishes to come and speak briefly on the bill before we vote.

Mr. BYRD. Very well. I hope he will not be too tardy and we can dispose of this bill quickly.

But, in the face of that fact, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The absence of a quorum has been suggested. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be dispensed with.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, I did not intend to come and speak on this conference report but felt, on reflection, that I wanted to do that.

I would agree with the comments that have been made about the value of the work of the chairman of the Appropriations Committee and the ranking member on this subcommittee. I know they have worked hard on these issues, they care a great deal about these issues, and there is not enough money to go around. That is a fact.

We are dealing with discretionary funding, a category in which there have been real cuts—cuts to levels below last year's spending—time after time after time. So I understand the dilemma. We have unlimited needs and limited resources.

I must say, however, I was disappointed when I saw this conference report come back from the conference and I want to explain why.

I think there is a need out there that is unmet in a very significant way. That deals especially with the question of Indian health, and most especially with the question of the Federal Government's trust responsibility to protect native American children. I want to talk about that for just a couple of minutes.

I do not raise this issue to be critical of the chairman. I understand what happened. We went to conference and the House prevailed on a number of issues, and the result was there was less money for some of the things that represented the priorities in the Senate bill.

I had worked with the chairman, the staff, and others to put just a couple of million dollars in this piece of legislation, as it passed the Senate, to deal with Indian child abuse issues in the Aberdeen region of the Bureau of Indian Affairs. I was very hopeful that we would be able to keep that in conference. Regrettably, we did not.

I am not here to blame anybody for that, but I am here to express profound disappointment that this happened. At least one of the reasons it must have happened is that, when the bill came back from conference, it had $8 million more for the National Endowments for the Arts and the Humanities than we had passed in the Senate version. It has millions of dollars more in a whole range of other areas, for museums and other issues.

But it excludes a number of other things the Senate supported. Especially important to me was a couple of million dollars the Senate put in to address the issue of child abuse and neglect on Indian reservations.

I would like to take just a moment to describe why that was important and why tomorrow, when this conference report has been sent to the President for his signature, those needs still will be important and Indian children still will be at risk.

About 2 or 3 weeks ago, I was on a reservation in North Dakota talking to the young woman in charge of this issue, as director of social services, dealing with child protection issues such as child abuse and neglect, including physical and sexual abuse of Indian children.

Let me tell you what I saw in those offices. And I knew about this situation because this same young woman had testified at a hearing of the Indian Affairs Committee that I chaired about a month before. In fact, during the hearing, she broke down crying, this experienced social worker, because, to paraphrase what she said: You know, just the littlest thing during the day is a struggle. Just getting a ride for somebody who has to go to a clinic, trying to beg a ride because we do not have a car to get some young person to a clinic someplace. Just the smallest thing is a problem for us. We have files sitting on the floor—files covering 2 and 3 years' worth of reports of sexual abuse against children, physical abuse against children, neglect of children—and I don't have any idea whether they are even being investigated because there have been 13 or 14 people in and out of this two-person office for 2 years. There is no system. There is no file system. We know someone reported a child being physically abused, and we do not know whether that child—age 2, age 4, age 6, age 8—is still in that home, being abused, because we do not even know whether the report was investigated. And that is the problem."

Let me tell you how I got involved and interested in this. I met a young girl named Tamara Demaris one day on the Standing Rock Sioux Reservation. She had been living with her grandfather, Reginald Burnthorse.

I read about this tragic young child, age 2, put in a foster home by a social worker. This social worker handled about 150 cases. The standard caseload is about 15 or 20 in most rural States in this country. This social worker had 150 cases to follow. This little girl was taken out of a home that was unsafe and put in a foster home. Except, because the social worker was handling 150 cases, she did not have any capability to investigate the foster home where she was putting this young 2-year-old girl. Was it safe? Was it a good home? Would this child be treated well?

Well, Tamara was put in this new home and it turned out to be a home with alcohol and parties and eventually child abuse. Tamara, age 2, was beaten, her arm was broken, her nose was broken; her hair was pulled out by the roots in a fit of violence by Tamara's foster parents, because the person responsible for this 2-year-old child, the social worker, did not have the time to investigate where she was placing the 2-year-old. We did not have enough money to do that. We did not have enough social workers to be sure that our responsibility to protect the life of a 2-year-old was being met. It just did not fit into the priorities; we did not have enough money.

Well, on the Standing Rock Sioux Indian Reservation, they now have some more resources that I recently helped them get, so there are more people investigating where they place these children.

But I on that reservation and others the needs still are unmet.

Let me tell you just about a young woman that I learned about on the Fort Totten Reservation a couple weeks ago. And this is not altogether unusual.

A 15-year-old girl, who now is missing, stole a car and left. This is a young girl who has been in the social service system on that reservation since she was just a tot able to walk. She is an alcoholic. She had a baby at age 14. Her mother is dead from alcohol. Her father is in prison, an alcoholic who committed crimes in the stupor of alcohol. And all of her brothers and sisters are placed out in other homes. This young girl has been in trouble and addicted to alcohol for years, has a baby, and now is missing—and she is only 15.

Is it unusual? No. I saw file, after file, after file of that kind of a problem.

And the Presiding Officer, (Mr. CAMPBELL) knows well of these problems. The Presiding Officer knows that we have all of these unmet needs and he, more than anybody in this Chamber, has fought to try to meet them.

And by talking about them, I am not suggesting that somehow this problem is unique to native Americans or that the problem of child abuse is unique with respect to other vexing problems. But I must say this: those who live on this Nation's reservations are so shorted, in my judgment, in the provision of basic resources that we are failing to meet the Federal Government's trust responsibilities—including the responsibility to investigate foster homes and do the other things necessary to make sure that these children are safe.

A social worker on the Fort Berthold Reservation told me that in a 2-week period, eight young people attempted suicide. Something is fundamentally wrong. Something is fundamentally wrong when we trade off money to protect America's children, especially America's children who are most vulnerable, to put another $8 million into the arts.

I have supported the arts. They may not be able to count on that much longer, however. I have been here a number of years and supported the arts because I think much of a society's legacy is represented by the arts. If you go to Europe, ask yourself what is left of the 14th century in Europe? Some old duffer walking around with a long beard? No, they did not live that long. Their art, their culture, that is what is left. I support the arts.

I have always thought that those who say let us slash this, let us spend nothing on the arts were being shortsighted. But I must say this: when those who support the arts and humanities do it so strongly that they do it at the expense of a few million dollars that is needed to address the issue of sexual abuse or physical abuse against young, defenseless, innocent children for whom we have a trust responsibility, then I say I am not sure I am in their corner anymore. That is not trading with the kind of balance we ought to be trading with to meet real human needs in this country.

I could not let this moment pass without saying that this conference report, in my judgment, makes tradeoffs—tradeoffs apparently the House insisted upon—that do not reflect my priorities with respect to where our limited resources ought to go.

Having said all that, let me hasten to add once again that I am not standing here to suggest, somehow, the chairman of the Senate conferees has let us down or the ranking member has let us down. That is not my message. When you go to conference, you compromise. That is the process. I understand all that.

But I am saying, in my judgment, that the compromise on the issue of funding for the arts, as a tradeoff for other things that I think are critically necessary for some very vulnerable young children in this country, is not a compromise that makes sense to me. I hope we will decide, if not this year then next year or the year after, that it is not a question of how much we have but rather how much we must devote to protect the lives of these kids.

When you look at a 2-year-old or 4-year-old living in conditions that are dangerous to their lives, it is not a question of saying we cannot afford it. That is not an answer that is acceptable. We can afford it. We must afford it. We have an obligation to afford the resources to make sure those children are safe and to make sure we do what is necessary to fulfill our responsibility for the lives of those children.

So, let me again say I hope in the next year or the next 2 years we will decide that some of these priorities insisted upon by the House conferees are not priorities we share and not priorities we will accept. And next year, when we go through this process again, I hope I will be able to stand on this floor and say we made a difference, a real difference, in the lives of children. There are not enough resources, in the broader scheme, for the Indian Health Service or to address the kinds of problems I just described.

I have only given a thumbnail sketch. I could give chapter and verse, case after case after case, and it would break your heart to hear it.

We talk about statistics and we talk about philosophy and we talk about a lot of things on the floor in this Congress, but it all relates to real people suffering real problems. Children are the innocent victims of policies that do not do enough to protect them, when they and everyone else in this country should be able to expect that we will meet our obligations in that regard.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Oklahoma.

Mr. NICKLES. Mr. President, first, I compliment our friend and colleague from North Dakota for expressing some real concerns about some of his Native American constituents. I happen to share some of those concerns.

The Senator talked about some actual cases where people have been abused sexually and had drug problems. We find that all too prevalent on some of the reservations and some of the Indian lands we have in our States across the country. We tried to address that. In the Senate we did have an earmark, a couple of million dollars, trying to address it.

I might make sure my colleague is aware we did put some language in the conference report that says IHS and the Bureau of Indian Affairs "should prepare a coordinated plan for addressing the unmet need for child sexual abuse treatment and prevention programs for American Indians and Alaska Natives, along with cost estimates, and the report should be delivered to the House and Senate legislative and Appropriations Committees within 90 days of enactment * * *." We lost the Senate's earmark, which was targeted toward Indian child sexual abuse.

I want to tell my friend and colleague from North Dakota I share some of those same concerns. I will tell my friend from North Dakota, too, I have a horror story I could tell. As a matter of fact, I have a lot more than one, and they are sickening. I do not know if by appropriating money it is going to go away. I do not know by calling for a study by IHS and BIA, the problem is going to go away. But I know there are problems.

I found outside an Indian school in my State, Riverside, where a teenager under the age of 16 was abused significantly—under the influence of alcohol and so on. And it bothers me. And I have given those officials maybe kind of a hard time trying to clean up their act to where those things would not be repeated.

I also tell my friend and colleague, though, I want to correct him if he thinks there is a tradeoff between the arts and Indian Health Services because that is not the case. That was not the case in any of the negotiations. Let me bring my colleague up to date to where we are on Indian Health Service. The administration, originally their budget proposed cutting Indian health services by $244 million, a reduction from 1994. And I expressed outrage. You can ask other colleagues on our committee, when they testified and brought their budget before the Senate, I said, "How in the world—that is a 12.5-percent reduction when Indian health services have, probably, the most deplorable health care delivery system in this country." When I say "deplorable," I am talking about quality of health care. It is pathetic. It is some of the worst health care in this country. It is a good example, in my opinion, if you want to look at socialized medicine, national health care, whatever you want to call it, that the quality of health care is terrible.

The solution may not be throwing away more money, more money toward the programs. But the administration proposed cutting it by $244 million. We expressed enough outrage that they came back and they reduced the reduction to only $124 million, which still, I think, is about a 5-percent decrease. We ended up with an increase of $23 million, almost $24 million, which is not much, only a little over 1 percent in almost a $2 billion program; but the administration was going to cut it $244 million. That is not just for Indian children. That is for all the Indians in this country.

So we did not do as much as I think we should do. But I assure my colleague it was not because we were trading off money for the National Endowment for the Arts or anything else. I might mention on National Endowment for the Arts, the Senate passed a reduction of 5 percent; the House passed a reduction of 2 percent. That was one of the real sticky points in conference. Ultimately the House prevailed, the 2 percent reduction was agreed upon. Congressman YATES felt very strongly about that, and that was one of the final things in conference, and ultimately it was agreed upon. But it had nothing to do whatsoever with the Indian Health Service.

Mr. DORGAN. Will the Senator yield on that point?

Mr. NICKLES. Just one second. Some of us did fight, so my colleague will know, we did fight energetically to restore the Indian Health Services' funds. We did reduce the cuts that were proposed by the administration and have a modest increase. But if the original proposal would have gone forward with a $244 million cut, which is a 12.5-percent reduction, or even the administration's modified budget which they sent up which still called for $124 million reduction compared to last year—no increase for inflation or anything—I think the Senator's outrage would be even stronger.

Finally, my concluding comment is again I strongly share the outrage and disgust of the Senator from North Dakota at some of the problems we have on our Indian reservations, including substance abuse, alcohol abuse, sexual abuse, and particularly amongst minors. We have to do something about it. I am not sure we are going to solve that problem by appropriating $2 million or $10 million, but I tell my colleague and friend I will be happy to do anything with him to help try to alleviate and solve some of those problems because I recognize there are lives that are being destroyed every day. We need to do a better job. Frankly, under Indian Health Services, under BIA, under some of these schools, they have been pathetic failures and we need significant improvements. I am not sure dollars are the improvements, but maybe some other alternatives for Indian youth across the country would be welcome. And I will be happy to work with my colleague, the Presiding Officer, and the chairman of the committee to try to make some of those changes. I appreciate the Senator's bringing this to our attention.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from North Dakota.

Mr. DORGAN. I will make a couple of comments, and then I know the chairman wants to move this piece of legislation and I know there is another Member who wants to speak.

The Senator is correct, the administration, I think, erred in its original budget request for the Indian Health Service. I think in fact the administration admitted that they erred, and they sent a budget modification back to the Congress. But, notwithstanding their modification and notwithstanding what we currently are funding, I am saying we are still woefully short.

The Senator makes the point, "I am not sure money will solve it." Let me respond to that.

I was on a reservation not too long ago. They are trying to do alcoholism treatment in a building that would be deemed uninhabitable anyplace else in the country. They simply do not have the money. They do not have the resources.

When you have the kind of alcoholism and addiction rates you have in some of these areas, if you cannot provide the resources to hire counselors and others to treat people, you are never going to solve these problems. I agree that we ought not throw money at things. But if we do not have the fundamental resources to deal with addiction, hire social workers to deal with child abuse, or put children in safe foster homes, then we do not have a chance of thoughtfully discussing what the long-term solution is.

We often pass legislation, as we did in 1990 with the Indian Child Protection and Family Violence Protection Act, that makes a wonderful authorization bill. I was not in the Senate in 1990, I was in the House. But I guess if I went back and read all the debate on the 1990 act, I would find people talked about what a wonderful thing that legislation is. But the problem is, if you do not fund it, if you do not have the resources to implement the Indian Child Protection Act, children do not get protection.

It is not my intention to tell a horror story on the floor of the Senate about a particular tragedy, or half a dozen tragedies. It is only my intention to say there is a recurring, relentless condition out there that threatens the lives of children, and I do not intend to stand here and allow us not to address that, in one way or another. We address almost everything else. But this is more important than most of the other things we are talking about in this legislation, at least in the lives of those children who may not live much longer unless we address these problems.

So I am hoping that, with the cooperation of the chairman and the ranking member and the Presiding Officer and others who care about this, we actually can begin to make some progress in these areas.

Let me make one final comment. The ranking member is absolutely right, that taking the budget request for Indian health and building that to an increase over last year is some feat. I would compliment the chairman of the committee and the ranking member for doing that. That is not easy because, as I said when I started, this is being squeezed like a lemon, this area of discretionary spending. I fully understand the dilemma of trying to meet unlimited wants with limited resources.

But I just say, when we begin listing the priorities, whether it is arts and humanities, or a hundred other things you can name that are important to someone in this room, I hope somewhere near the top will be a priority that says that when the lives of children are threatened and they are vulnerable and cannot help themselves, then we have a responsibility to intervene. Not with words, not with authorizations, but with the kind of resources that will give Native American children an opportunity to overcome the circumstances and conditions in which they now find themselves.

Again, let me thank the chairman for his indulgence in allowing me to take this time. I do hope that when we go through this process next year and the conference report comes back, I am going to be able to stand up and talk about what the chairman and I and the ranking member and others did that was significantly different from what we have done in the past, that will provide some bright hope in the lives of some young children in this country who desperately need that hope.

I yield the floor.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from West Virginia.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, let me say I sympathize with the concerns that have been expressed by the able Senator from North Dakota. He has been zealous in his work in this regard. And upon several occasions he called the matter to my attention and reminded me of it. And I can appreciate his sadness with respect to what the conferees did. But he also stated a truism when he pointed out that discretionary funding is being squeezed like a lemon.

When compared to the discretionary spending levels that would have been provided under the 1993 budget reconciliation bill, the amounts available for discretionary spending in fiscal year 1995 were reduced by $500 million in outlays as a result of the Exon-Grassley amendment to the 1995 budget resolution. And this is just a drop in the bucket as compared to the pain that will come next year and other out-years as a result of that amendment.

In fiscal year 1996, discretionary outlays are reduced $5.4 billion. So right now, up front next year, Mr. Chairman, when I have to make allocations to the various subcommittees, I will be faced with that sad fact.

This year $500 million. Next year, 10 times that budget. Over 10 times that budget. Over 10 times as deep a reduction in discretionary funding allocations, $5.4 billion below the amounts recommended in the 1993 budget reconciliation as a result of the Exon-Grassley amendment.

Over the 5 years, 1995, 1996, 1997, 1998, 1999, the total reduction will be $13 billion in outlays.

Now, when the budget resolution came to the Senate, it was $26 billion. The cut in the committee amounted to $26 billion in discretionary funding. And we went to conference. When the budget conferees met from both Houses that $26 billion reduction in discretionary outlays was reduced by half. So it actually amounted to, in the final analysis, $13 billion. Even operating on the basis of a freeze. And that is where we are. A freeze over the next several years. But this is $13 billion below the freeze.

You know how eager Members are to be able to say to their constituents that they have cast economy votes. They have made cuts. And as I said to the Senate, when we had the resolution before the Senate, the budget resolution, I have said it on previous hearings, once you pass this budget resolution and it comes back from conference and is adopted, you have cut right then. You have cut the appropriations. You will not have to wait 1 week, 1 month, 6 months. You have cut, when you cast that vote.

Therefore, that's the situation we are confronted with. It is going to be worse. It is going to be worse next year. I know that many Members are going to be disappointed when the appropriations bill comes along. But what goes around, comes around. And when those massive cuts are administered in the Budget Committee, as they were last year, and they are sustained throughout the course of the votes on the budget bills in both Houses and in the conference, then will come the pain.

It reminds me of a quotation from Shakespeare's "Hamlet":

A man may fish with the worm that hath eat of a king, and eat of the fish that hath fed of that worm.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Idaho [Mr. CRAIG].

Mr. CRAIG. Mr. President, for just a few moments I want to reflect on what the chairman of the full committee of the subcommittee has just said, and my colleagues here on the floor that express frustration about this particular Interior appropriations bill.

I think the uniqueness of this dialog this morning is the diversity that has been the appropriations bill, from Indian Health Services to the issue I'm going to talk about, and that is the money to build roads to log public timber.

And in that diversity we have some very real problems. But that is the nature of the Interior appropriations bill that we have to deal with. I know that the chairman of the subcommittee, Senator BYRD, and the ranking member, Senator NICKLES, have done their very best to deal with the limitations that they are put under by discretionary spending in the budget process.

I am one Senator who for a good number of years has expressed my concern that we let entitlement programs go on automatic pilot. And we shift the money from discretionary programs over to the entitlement programs.

We go home to our States and tell certain constituencies that budgets have been cut, and yet they look at the sum of the total Federal budget and they do not understand because it does not appear to have been cut. It has gone up by hundreds of billions of dollars annually. The deficit seems to get larger, and oftentimes does, and the debt certainly does get larger.

And there is a contradiction here that we are sending forth in our communication to our constituents that doesn't make a lot of sense to them. And while we may understand the internal workings of the budget process, I would have to tell you that it does not make a lot of sense to me either that we have good public policy, Indian Health is one of many of those public policies that make sense, and yet we have constantly cut in the name of a different form of funding that we are politically less than courageous in our willingness to deal with. And that is, of course, entitlement programs that somehow have developed a sense of sacredness around here, that nobody wants to walk forward and deal with.

The point I would like to make that's embodied in H.R. 4602, which is the Interior appropriations bill that we are debating now, is the issue of Forest Service roadless area entry and the funding necessary.

Mr. President, I noted that the conference report on this bill has reduced the level of road funding below that needed to accomplish the full timber sales program that is part of the public policy of this country; that is within the forest plans on a forest-by-forest basis across this country.

Accomplishing the timber objective certainly will be a great deal more difficult, and probably impossible. And while I know there are some interest groups that would cheer that, there are a good many communities in my State and your State in which the economy will shut down and people will be without work because they had built their economies on a forest plan that allowed a certain number of board feet of timber to be harvested annually. And now the Congress, in their policy, by their funding is saying, "No, we're not going to let that happen, because we're going to disallow the necessary amount of money to build the roads to enter the areas in which the timber would be logged."

Accomplishing the timber objective clearly is not going to be met here, and the conference report language will not allow it.

Now I've been troubled that roadless area entry continues to not be addressed. And though we have completed the forest plans, and we are going now in my State, and probably in yours Mr. President, into the second cycle of planning, and we have not even met the goals and the objectives of the first cycle of planning, and we are talking 10-year cycles, and the impacts are very real.

On July 26, when the Senate originally considered the passage of this bill, I addressed this concern along with Senator BYRD and Senator NICKLES in a colloquy stating the intent to give the Forest Service as much flexibility as possible to enter roadless areas, as directed by their forest plans.

In a letter dated June 9, Forest Service Chief Jack Ward Thomas described the adverse impact of a prohibition on roadless area entry. He expressed the concern at that time, as the primary person responsible for the carrying out of our forest plan, the Chief of the Forest Service.

He particularly noted the importance of access to released roadless areas for the purposes of remedying forest disease, the fuel buildup that has threatened and caused the massive forest fires that we have had throughout the intermountain west this year, and in the whole issue of forest health.

In other words, if man cannot get into the forest to apply reasonable management practices, we run the risk of what has happened in the Pacific Northwest and primarily the intermountain area this year. Massive unchecked forest fires that have burned unbelievable acreages, at tremendously intense heat. Heat that has actually destroyed the land and the ground itself. That ground will not be productive for years to come, largely because of forest practices and man's ability to do, or not do, certain things that this appropriation bill, I hope, would address and yet has failed to address this year.

We have forest fires burning today in Idaho, as we speak, in an unprecedented way. Very seldom in the history of our State have we had fires burning in the last week of September or the first week of October. We have lost hundreds of thousands of acres this year of valuable trees, habitat, watershed, all of it very damaging to the environment. All of it attributable to our inability, or our unwillingness to manage our own public land resource.

The Payette National Forest in my State, are suggesting to us now, that these fires will go unchecked, until we have our first snowstorm this winter. Now that is almost impossible for people to understand here on the floor of the Senate, but that is reality.

Part of the reason is we have not entered those roadless areas, even though our forest plans have suggested we should, and we have not extracted the trees. We have seen a huge buildup of fuel.

What am I talking about? I am suggesting that the normal capacity on an acre-by-acre basis of these forested lands to sustain tree growth was somewhere around 10 or 12 trees per acre. Over the last 50 years, because of our ability to put out fires, we have allowed a tree growth in some instances near 300 or 400 or 500 trees per acre.

Then along comes a decade of drought. The trees are tremendously stressed, subject to disease, and they burn. And they are burning now. And we cannot even put the fires out, and we have spent millions of dollars. We have lost lives. We lost several lives in your State, this year, Mr. President; several of them from my State of Idaho. We have lost more human beings this year fighting forest fires than we have in recent history. Can that be attributable to public policy?

Tragically enough, it may be. History may say that is the cause.

Well, I believe I made my point.

The Chief has indicated that new road construction is critical toward addressing wildfire, disease infestation, forest management problems, and forest health. I recognized that on June 26, as did the ranking member and the Chairman. And yet this bill does not reflect that interest at all. Only 29 percent of the road appropriations is for new roads, construction, and 71 percent is for reconstruction of existing roads. Only a few miles of new roads are planned in roadless areas in the 1995 appropriation. The forest plan is the guiding document providing direction for new roads on how we manage our roadless areas, and yet we are abrogating our responsibility to the forest planning process, and to the new concepts of ecosystem management, and to the new vision that the Chief of the Forest Service, Jack Ward Thomas, is attempting to articulate to our country. We have not taken heed to his call. We are not addressing the problems of our forests. And they will continue to burn, and we will continue to lose millions of acres of valuable public land and public habitat for wildlife because we lack the vision in a very limited budget to direct the appropriations in the way I think many of us would feel necessary and appropriate.

This is an important budget to my State. While I have expressed concern over this frustration, I will support the appropriations bill that I am addressing because it has such powerful impact upon my State that is owned by the amount of 63 percent of the total land mass by the citizens of our country.

So this budget has very real impact, as the ranking member, Senator NICKLES, and as certainly the chairman, Senator BYRD, know. I would hope in the coming years we can do better. If we do not, our forests will burn and someday we will awaken to ask the question: What happened? Why did it happen? Why did somebody not do something about it?

Mr. NICKLES. Mr. President, I appreciate the comments of the Senator from Idaho dealing with the Forest Service, dealing with fires that we have, his urging our support of the urgent supplemental for $450 million to replenish funds and also have a fund that can respond quickly to future fires.

I also would echo his concern and his statements about our past practices of allowing some of the old forests to accumulate, which is nothing but fuel for future fires, instead of allowing those forests to be harvested. I think the Senator from Idaho is exactly correct. We have not done as much as we should in forest roads and harvesting old forests and timber in part because of lawsuits and in part because of endangered species. The Senator from Idaho has made an excellent statement, and I very much appreciate his input as well as his support.

Mr. President, I do not know of anybody else who wishes to speak on this legislation. The yeas and nays have already been asked for, and I hope that we would vote on it in the very near future.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, I rise in support of the Department of the Interior and related agencies appropriations bill for fiscal year 1995.

The conference report provides $13.2 billion in new budget authority and $8.9 billion in new outlays for the Department of the Interior and related agencies for fiscal year 1995.

When outlays from prior year budget authority and other completed actions are taken into account, the final bill totals $13.6 billion in budget authority and $14.0 billion in outlays for fiscal year 1995.

The Senate subcommittee is $3.7 million in budget authority below its 602(b) allocation and essentially at its outlays allocation.

The conference report is $196.9 million in budget authority below and $157.9 million in outlays below the President's request.

I appreciate the subcommittee's support for a number of ongoing projects and programs important to my home State of New Mexico as it has worked to keep this bill within its budget allocation.

I urge the adoption of the bill.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that upon the disposition of the pending conference report, the Senate then proceed to consideration of the Treasury-Postal Service appropriations bill, H.R. 4539.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered. Is there further debate?

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The absence of a quorum has been suggested. The clerk will call the roll.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the vote on the conference report occur at the hour of 11:10 a.m.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

RECESS UNTIL 11:10 A.M.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate stand in recess until the hour of 11:10 a.m.

There being no objection, the Senate, at 11:04 a.m., recessed until 11:10 a.m.; whereupon, at 11:10 a.m., the Senate reassembled when called to order by the Presiding Officer (Mr. MATHEWS).

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR AND RELATED AGENCIES APPROPRIATIONS ACT, 1995—CONFERENCE REPORT

The Senate continued with the consideration of the conference report.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The hour of 11:10 having arrived, the question before the Senate is on agreeing to the conference report for the Department of the Interior and related agencies. The yeas and nays have been ordered. The clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk called the roll.

Mr. FORD. I announce that the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. SASSER] is necessarily absent.

I further announce that, if present and voting, the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. SASSER] would vote "aye."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there any other Senators in the Chamber who desire to vote?

The result was announced—yeas 92, nays 7, as follows:

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The report will be stated.

PRIVILEGE OF THE FLOOR— CONFERENCE REPORT ON H.R. 4539

Mr. DECONCINI. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that John Libonati, a fellow in my office be granted floor privileges during consideration of the conference report to H.R. 4539, the Treasury, Postal Service, and general government appropriations bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. DECONCINI. Mr. President, I am pleased to bring before the Senate the conference report accompanying H.R. 4539, the fiscal year 1995 appropriations bill for the Department of the Treasury, the U.S. Postal Service, the Executive Office of the President, and certain independent agencies. The bill as reported by the conference, totals $23.5 billion in new budget authority or approximately $136.8 million less than the Senate-passed bill.

Mr. President, I will have a longer statement which outlines in greater detail the provisions contained in the conference report. I want to take a few minutes to briefly summarize the conference report.

The conference agreement includes $39 million for Treasury law enforcement activities as authorized in the Violent Crime Control and Law Enforcement Act of 1994. These funds will be used in fiscal year 1995 to enhance criminal investigations into the counterfeiting of U.S. currency; to beef up port and border enforcement activities; and to permit ATF to undertake compliance measures to ensure proper implementation of the firearms provisions of the crime bill. The bill also includes $9 million to expand the number of gang resistance education and training projects in communities throughout the country where gangs pose a serious threat. This is a very successful gang prevention program which is modeled after the DARE Program. GREAT projects are currently operating in eight cities nationwide as a direct result of the Federal funds previously appropriated to ATF. The additional $9 million in fiscal year 1995 will be used to expand the number of GREAT projects to approximately 12 high-risk communities.

With reference to pay, the conference agreement authorizes a 2-percent ECI, or Employment Cost Index increase, for Federal employees in fiscal year 1995 and a locality pay adjustment of an estimated 0.6 percent nationwide. This provision was included in the House-passed bill and since the time the Senate acted, the President has announced that he intends to provide a 2-percent ECI raise and a portion of the second-phase implementation of locality pay to Federal employees. The provision in the conference agreement includes a prohibition on these pay raises for Members of Congress and Federal judges. Mr. President, this was a very contentious issue in the conference. While I have always voted against pay increases for Members of Congress, I believe that issue was laid to rest several years ago by only providing Members of Congress to receive nothing more than a cost of living increase. I think that was a reasonable approach. I was prepared to accept that approach, as I know the ranking member was. I am disappointed we got caught up in the hysteria, once again, that Members of Congress are not worth being paid an adequate salary and that they and judges should be singled out, for no cost of living increase.

I do not believe we should continue to browbeat ourselves over the cost-of-living adjustments. That is not a pay raise. The same goes for the judges.

How can we expect a quality justice system if we cannot at least give a cost-of-living pay raise?

However, it was clear that there would be no conference agreement without a provision banning a raise for Members of Congress.

With respect to the construction of Federal courthouses and Federal office buildings, in the past, this has been a controversial issue. The conference agreement includes $601 million for new construction of GSA projects. For those Federal building projects which have not been authorized by the Senate Environment and Public Works Committee or the House Public Works and Transportation Committee, a provision has been included which prohibits the expenditure of funds by the GSA unless and until such authorization is approved.

The conferees took this action to avoid the continuing jurisdictional disputes with the authorizing committees.

As everyone in this body knows, this is my last year in the Senate. I have to say one of the most rewarding experiences of my career has been serving on the Appropriations Committee with the distinguished chairmen that we have had, particularly the current chairman, the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. BYRD].

I have served on this committee for the entire 18 years I have been in the Senate. I have been either the ranking member or chairman of the Treasury Subcommittee for the past 12 years. My service on this subcommittee has given me an opportunity to understand and evaluate many diverse agencies ranging from the Department of the Treasury and Executive Office of the President to the General Services Administration, and the Office of Personnel Management.

I have been fortunate, when I was the ranking member and when I have been chairman, to have a chairman or a ranking member who wanted to cooperate and was willing to be a participant in helping find solutions to difficult budgeting problems. In particular, the current ranking member, Mr. BOND, from Missouri, has been an excellent partner in the process. I thank him and his staff for their cooperation and their efforts to help us find solutions to many problems which are the result of a difficult and shrinking budget.

We have done a lot. Working in a bipartisan fashion, we have been able to formulate and fund initiatives to interdict the flow of illegal drugs coming into the United States; upgrade and modernize border stations along the United States-Mexico border; redesign the antiquated automated tax systems of the Internal Revenue Service; enhance the investigative and compliance capabilities of the Treasury law enforcement bureaus; and ensure proper work space for the operation of all Government agencies. Over the years, it has been a lot of work, but work where the labor has been stimulating and satisfying. We have done a lot of positive things. The Appropriations Committee is one of the finest in this body. The members, from the chairman and ranking minority, to the staff, in my view, are the most professional in Government. They work under less than ideal circumstances and always try to put the needs of the country and the American people before partisan politics. I will miss this committee.

Mr. President, in closing, I want to compliment my very fine and able ranking member, Senator BOND, and his staff, Chuck Parkinson and Julie Dammann. They have been a pleasure to work with and I wish them well in the coming years. They have worked so hard to see this bill is finally going to pass today.

Mr. President, I also want to thank Patty Lynch, Cybele Cobb, and John Lebonate of my majority staff.

To reiterate, the conference report totals $23.5 billion in new budget authority. This amount is $915 million above the fiscal year 1994 enacted level, but $1.1 billion below the President's budget request. Of the increase above the 1994 level, $695 million is for mandatory programs over which the committee has little control. For domestic discretionary programs, the conference report totals $11.8 billion, which is $1.1 billion below the budget request. When you take out the IRS compliance initiative, totaling $405 million, which was provided for in the budget resolution outside of the discretionary caps, the discretionary funding in the bill is actually $1.5 million below the President's requested level.

As a result, this year the conference committee had a difficult task of trying to formulate an agreement which adequately funds the President's priorities, law enforcement, personnel management, taxpayer service, and returns processing, and meet Federal building requirements. I think we have done an excellent job, under the circumstances. The bill reported by the conference committee provides funding of: $10.5 billion for the Department of the Treasury; $92 million for the payment to the Postal Service Fund for free mail for the blind and overseas voters and payment on the debt to the Postal Service for subsidies to certain preferred rate mailers; $148.9 million for funds appropriated to the President for Federal drug control programs; $601 million for the construction of new Federal office buildings and courthouses through the General Services Administration; $11.7 billion in various mandatory Government payments through the Office of Personnel Management for annuitant and employee health, disability, retirement, and life insurance benefits; and $338 million for various independent agencies.

The bill also contains a new title, title VII, which provided funding to Treasury law enforcement agencies for implementation of the provisions of the recently enacted Violent Crime Control and Law Enforcement Act of 1994. As authorized under title 31 of that act, $39 million has been made available for the following Treasury enforcement activities: $2.4 million for the Departmental Offices for the Office of Enforcement to oversee the implementation of the crime bill provisions; $2.7 million for the Financial Crimes Enforcement Network to enhance the investigation of financial crimes; $7 million for the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms for the enforcement of the firearms provisions of the crime bill, including the assault weapons ban; $9 million for the implementation of additional gang resistance education and training [GREAT] programs nationwide; $4 million for the U.S. Customs Service for expanding border and port enforcement; $7 million for the Criminal Investigation Division of the Internal Revenue Service for combating public corruption and expanding illegal tax enforcement activities; and $6.6 million for the U.S. Secret Service for expanding investigations into the counterfeiting of U.S. currency and enhancing forensics capabilities to aid in the investigation of missing and exploited children.

For the Treasury law enforcement bureaus, the conference report includes an additional $12 million for the restoration of 212 full-time equivalent positions which were proposed for reduction in fiscal year 1995 to comply with the President's Executive order on the reduction of the Federal work force. The only way that so-called war on crime can be effective is through the combined efforts of Federal, State, and local law enforcement. I believe it is a big mistake to cut the strength of our Federal law enforcement agencies at a time when the American public is telling us that crime is the No. 1 problem in the country.

With reference to illegal drugs, the conference report bill includes $98 million for support of Federal, State, and local law agency activities in the six designated high-intensity drug trafficking areas [HIDTA's]. Over the past 5 years, we have witnessed the success of coordinated law enforcement efforts through the HIDTA Program in Miami, New York, Los Angeles, Houston, and on the Southwest border. These funds go to support multiagency law enforcement operations aimed at disrupting major trafficking organizations.

In fiscal year 1995, the Baltimore-Washington Metropolitan Area will receive the funding assistance of this program to reduce drug trafficking and distribution. Also, in fiscal year 1995, the conference report provided an additional $9 million for the Puerto Rico-U.S. Virgin Islands area. These funds can only be expended if the Director of the Office of National Drug Control Policy determines that this area meets the criteria for a HIDTA designation and so designates this area. I have received every indication from the drug czar's office that this in fact will occur.

The conference report also includes $1.5 billion for the U.S. Customs Service. This includes the restoration of roughly one-half of the reduction proposed by the President for Customs air and marine interdiction activities. The President's budget proposed a $52.6 million cut based on the revised interdiction strategy which will focus increased attention on the source countries and reduce interdiction in the transit zones, the theory being that if you build a fence around the area where the flights are originating from, you won't have to worry about interdiction through the area where the drugs would transit. Realistically, however, we are never going to have a solid wall around the source countries. In fact, the current impasse with the Department of Defense's legal interpretation over surveillance flights in Colombia and Peru has left the entire area wide open.

Mr. President, I hope the new strategy works. But, I am really skeptical. For this reason, the conferees restored certain funds to Customs to maintain an adequate level of border and transit zone interdiction capabilities and has provided $15 million to the drug czar for a contingency if in fact the threat increases as a result of the new policy.

With reference to GSA building construction and repairs and alterations, the conference report includes funding for certain projects which have not been authorized. However, the conference report includes a provision which prohibits the obligation of funds for these projects until the Senate Environmental and Public Works Committee and the House Public Works and Transportation Committee authorizes funding for these building projects.

The conference report contains $405 million to implement the President's tax compliance initiative for the IRS. Funding for this initiative was provided for in the budget resolution outside the discretionary caps. This initiative will produce additional revenues of between $9 and $10 billion over the next 5 years and will cost the Government $405 million in fiscal year 1995.

I think this is a good and responsible conference report, Mr. President, and I commend the House subcommittee chairman, Mr. HOYER, for working closely with the Senate to formulate a bill which is not only good legislation but fiscally responsible as well. I also want to thank the ranking member, Mr. BOND, and the other members of the Senate subcommittee, for working with us in a bipartisan fashion to formulate a bill which funds the highest priorities.

I now yield to the ranking member, Mr. BOND, for any opening statement he may wish to make.

Mr. BOND. Mr. President, I rise to support the conference report on Treasury-Postal Service and general Government appropriations that is now before us. I also want to extend my sincere thanks to the chairman for the great work he has done on this bill in the past years. I have some further remarks I will reserve to the end of the consideration of this bill. But I want my colleagues to know that I truly appreciate the professional and able manner in which the chairman has handled this matter.

The chairman has outlined the highlights of this piece of legislation. It was not without some detours and a tortuous path, that we reached the point we are today. I do not wish to take a great deal of the time of the Senate, but there are a few points I think should be made with respect to this measure.

As I said, the bill is not perfect. Very few pieces of legislation are. But this bill does a lot with very limited resources. It is $1.117 billion, $1,117,000,000, below the President's request. It contains a $405 million initiative for the Internal Revenue Service collection initiative which was not included in the President's budget. If that was not included in this bill, the legislation would be $692 million in outlays below the President's.

There will be those who will say that is great but you still exceed by almost $1 billion the 1994 budget. That is true, but when you take into account the mandatory increases which total $695.4 million, and the IRS collection initiative, this bill would be almost $220 million below the fiscal year 1994 level.

I am very happy that we have been able to restore the law enforcement reductions the President slated for this budget. And again, I commend the chairman for being very strong and resolute in seeing that we did not make unwarranted and unwise cuts in law enforcement. The restorations are not large. But I strongly believe the personnel and assistance we are providing in this bill to Customs, ATF, and to the Secret Service, will have a very positive impact on the battle currently being waged against crime, against drugs, money laundering, counterfeiting and the other matters which the agencies under the jurisdiction of this bill deal with.

As I indicated earlier, we did the best we could with limited resources, but there were a few things we were not able to accomplish. One very important issue, one that we will have to address next year, and I will serve notice on the members of this subcommittee as well as my colleagues, we have to do something about the IRS tax system modernization program. If the IRS is to perform its duties, adequate funding for TSM's, tax system modernization it is called, is essential.

This bill does not include the funding necessary for the IRS to proceed at the pace which is the most effective. The IRS projects that TSM will help process returns more efficiently, and will identify taxes which are not being paid. Some will ask if TSM is so important, why have we not provided the amount requested. The answer is, the manner in which the President's budget was set up. This goes back to OMB, and the problem lies at their doorstep.

Let me discuss for a moment the budget request. The President's request exceeded the budget cap by $3 billion. All of the appropriations subcommittees were impacted in order to accommodate the reductions necessary by this excessive request.

The budget for the Treasury Department also requested over $250 million in user fees to offset appropriations for the Department. Those fees fall within the jurisdiction of other committees. This is an appropriations committee. It is not a tax increase committee. These fees are not fees that we can produce in this bill. If we would have funded TSM at the requested level, we would have had to reduce every discretionary account in this bill by about 15 percent. A reduction some might argue for, but it is practically impossible. I would hope the President's next budget will be more realistic and recognize the realities of the budget process and the need for tax system modernization.

I believe that including the IRS collection initiative will provide that revenue. We had significant argument on the floor over that measure. People were saying, well, we are trying to collect more taxes. My answer to that is, for the 85 percent of the American people who pay their taxes voluntarily and honestly, it is an outrage that some in the remaining 15 percent are not paying taxes that are owed, and the burden that they shirk falls on the backs of those who voluntarily pay. And I think we owe it to the people who comply with the law to see that those who do not are pursued and that taxes are collected.

Mr. President, as I indicated, this bill has taken some interesting turns in the process. Maybe "interesting" is an overly-generous characterization. But we have the bill before us, and it contains the needed appropriations.

I express my sincere thanks to the chairman, to all of the members of the subcommittee for the hard work necessary to get this conference report to the Senate. I express thanks to the majority staff members, Patty Lynch and Cybele Cobb, and to Chuck Parkinson on the appropriations staff, and to Julie Dammann on my staff.

Mr. DECONCINI addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Arizona.

Mr. DECONCINI. I urge the adoption of the conference report.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there further debate?

If not, the question is on agreeing to the conference report.

So the conference report was agreed to.

Mr. DECONCINI. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. BOND. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. DECONCINI. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

Mr. BOND. Mr. President, I ask if the gentleman would withhold.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Will the Senator from Arizona withhold?

Mr. DECONCINI. I will withhold.

Mr. BOND. Mr. President, now that this measure is passed I do want to take just a moment to express in more detail my thanks to the chairman. As has already been mentioned, this is the last regular appropriations bill that Senator DECONCINI will bring to the Senate floor. We will miss working with him next year, but I have the feeling that when we visit some of the installations, the vital Customs installations and other facilities around the country which are funded by this bill, we may not see the good Senator, but we will certainly see the result of his work and his efforts to make sure that these vitally important agencies are well-funded.

He has been a strong member of this subcommittee, serving the last 9 years as chairman. I have only had the pleasure of serving as a ranking member with him for the past 2 years, but it has been a great learning experience.

I think it is easy for me to speak for all of the members of the subcommittee, when I say that Senator DECONCINI has been exceedingly fair in his dealings with members. He has worked hard to ensure the agencies funded in this bill get what they need to operate and, quite frankly, Mr. President, that is not as easy as one would think.

When you look at what we fund in this bill, the operations of vital Government agencies, the Internal Revenue Service, the Postal Service, they are not a lot of things that warm the juices or stimulate the heart throbs of our colleagues, but this bill is vitally important to the effective operation of Government. It is not easy, when there are many other competing demands.

Throughout the year, Senator DECONCINI has worked hard to ensure these funds provided to the agencies, which are so critical in the operation of Government, are there. It would have been easy to make reductions for the sake of reductions, but all of us, as Americans would have suffered if the work of those vital agencies had been short-changed.

Of all of the legacies that Senator DECONCINI leaves, Mr. President, none looms larger than the tremendously positive impact he has had on Federal law enforcement. As I talked to Federal law enforcement officials, I saw many sad faces when they learned of the coming retirement of Senator DECONCINI. He has been a tireless champion of Federal law enforcement, especially Treasury law enforcement.

He was on the front line when the war on drugs began. In the 1980's, that was easy. Drugs were nightly news. But the problem remains the same today and in some ways it is much greater, but the news does not seem to notice it as much. Senator DECONCINI's fervor has not waned. He has been criticized, many times. He has had to take on budget requests from an OMB of his own party, but he has persevered.

That continued effort is reflected in this bill. And with the adoption of this conference report, we are keeping up the fight.

Mr. President, we will all miss the Senator from Arizona, but I hope and trust and pledge that we will continue to carry on his commitment, especially to law enforcement.

Mr. President, I thank the Chair.

Mr. DECONCINI addressed the Chair. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Arizona.

Mr. DECONCINI. I thank my colleague. He is very gracious and kind. Everyone likes to hear those nice things about themselves.

Law enforcement is important, not just to this Senator, but also to the Senator from Missouri. Sometimes law enforcement gets forgotten because it does not have the constituents as many other efforts do. It is extremely important. And coming from a law-enforcement background as a former prosecutor, I found this subcommittee extremely interesting.

Serving on the Judiciary Committee, having wide jurisdiction over the Justice Department, much can be done to improve the fine law enforcement that we have today in the Federal Government. Much has been done. And much of it, I must say, has come from congressional initiatives. We need dramatic and positive leadership that is not afraid to come up here and lobby on behalf of law enforcement. So I thank my colleague from Missouri, and I appreciate his friendship, more than I can express here today, and the cooperative effort we have had together.

AVAILABILITY PAY

Section 633 of the conference report includes a provision which authorizes availability pay for criminal investigators. Availability pay will replace the administratively uncontrollable overtime [AUO] payments which are currently in effect. Because the conferees were concerned about the costs that would accrue to those agencies who currently do not pay their 1,811 agents AUO but would be required to pay 25-percent availability pay as a result of section 633, the conferees included a provision which permits the offices of inspectors general to forgo availability pay to their criminal investigators until any pay period within the last quarter of fiscal year 1995. The provision in the bill appears unclear and the conferees wish to express their intent that the head of the employing Office of Inspector General, and not the criminal investigators themselves, shall make the decision on when to make the availability compensation payments in fiscal year 1995.

Criminal investigators shall receive no less than the rate previously provided to them, up to date of enactment of this act, under the provision commonly referred to as administratively uncontrollable overtime [AUO] until such time as the maximum rate shall be paid as mandated by provisions of the Availability Act of 1994.

FORT MYERS COURTHOUSE AND FEDERAL BUILDING

Mr. GRAHAM. Mr. President, I ask if the distinguished chairman of the Treasury, Postal Service, and General Government Subcommittee would be willing to turn his attention to the subjects of the Tampa Courthouse and Fort Myers Courthouse and Federal Building.

Mr. DECONCINI. I am familiar with these issues and would be pleased to discuss them.

Mr. GRAHAM. As you may be aware, in August the General Services Administration [GSA] received bids for a courthouse Federal building construction project in Fort Myers, FL. The lowest of these bids was approximately $7 million over the $27 million authorized by the Environment and Public Works Committee pursuant to GSA's cost estimate. I understand the GSA must now amend the building's prospectus and resubmit it to the Environment and Public Works Committee for approval.

Concurrently, GSA has indicated that it will not need $7.5 million of funds appropriated for a Federal courthouse project in Tampa, FL. It seems sensible to me that the $7.5 million once intended for the Tampa courthouse, now idle, be made available for the purpose of covering the $7 million shortfall in the Fort Myers project. Does the chairman agree that these funds should be made available for reprogramming by GSA for the Fort Myers project?

Mr. DECONCINI. Yes. It is my understanding that if GSA does not use the funds for the Tampa project, the agency will reprogram that excess to meet the unanticipated needs of the Fort Myers facility.

Mr. GRAHAM. That is most welcome guidance, and I hope the GSA will be mindful of the interpretation made by the chairman of the subcommittee.

I appreciate the chairman's indulgence and offer my thanks for his attention to the needs of Florida's Federal space needs.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, I rise in strong support of the conference agreement on H.R. 4539, the Treasury, Postal Service, and general Government appropriations bill for fiscal year 1995.

This bill provides new budget authority of $23.2 billion and new outlays of $20.9 billion to finance operations of the Department of the Treasury; including the Internal Revenue Service, U.S. Customs Service, Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, and the Financial Management Service; as well as the Executive Office of the President, the Office of Personnel Management, and other agencies that perform central government functions.

I congratulate the chairman and ranking member for producing a bill that is substantially within the subcommittee's 602(b) allocation. When outlays from prior year budget authority and adjustments for IRS compliance and mandatory programs are taken into account, the bill totals $23.6 billion in budget authority and $24.2 billion in outlays. The total bill is under the Senate subcommittee's 602(b) allocation by $0.2 billion in budget authority and $40 million in outlays.

I would like to thank the subcommittee for including funding for a new Federal courthouse in Albuquerque, NM. This project has been in the planning stage for several years and now that it has been reviewed and approved in GSA's Time Out and Review, we are ready to start the long process of actual construction.

I would also like to thank the conferees for retaining my amendment which requires OMB to report to Congress on the manner in which procurement savings are achieved. Procurement reform is an important part of the National Performance Review's recommendations to reinvent Government and we should make sure that these savings are achieved in a proper manner.

I urge the speedy adoption of this bill.

STATEMENT ON TREASURY-POSTAL APPROPRIATIONS

Mr. SASSER. Mr. President, the Senate Budget Committee has examined H.R. 4539, the Treasury-Postal appropriations bill and has found that the bill is under its 602(b) general purpose allocation by $166 million in budget authority and by $40 million in outlays. This conference report is below its 602(b) crime allocation by $1 million in budget authority and exactly meets its allocation in outlays.

I compliment the distinguished manager of the bill, Senator DECONCINI, and the distinguished ranking member of the Treasury-Postal Subcommittee, Senator BOND, on all of their hard work.

Mr. President, I have a table prepared by the Budget Committee which shows the official scoring of the Treasury-Postal appropriations bill and I ask unanimous consent that it be inserted in the RECORD at the appropriate point.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I would like to ask the distinguished chairman of the Treasury, Postal Service and General Government Appropriations Subcommittee to clarify the intent of the conferees with respect to a provision in this conference report.

Since becoming chairman of the Environment and Public Works Committee, the committee with jurisdiction over the General Services Administration's public buildings program, I have worked long and hard to ensure that prospectus-level public buildings projects receiving appropriated funds are first authorized. The Senator from Arizona has been very cooperative in this effort and I appreciate his work.

While I am pleased that the fiscal year 1995 Treasury, Postal Service appropriations conference report does require approval of unauthorized projects prior to expenditure of appropriated funds, I am concerned that there is no reference made as to whom should make such approval.

I want to clarify that all unauthorized, prospectus-level public buildings projects, as defined by the Public Buildings Act of 1959, require authorization and approval of both the Senate Committee on Environment and Public Works and the House Committee on Public Works and Transportation. Is it the intent of the conferees that all unauthorized, prospectus-level projects in this fiscal year 1995 conference report are to be authorized and approved in a positive manner by both authorizing committees before any appropriated funds may be expended for any construction, repair, alteration, and acquisition for which a prospectus is required?

Mr. DECONCINI. I would be pleased to respond to the Senator's question. It is the intent of the conferees that all unauthorized, prospectus-level projects, as defined by the Public Buildings Act of 1959—with the exception of projects funded through grants—are to be authorized and approved in a positive manner by both the Senate Environment and Public Works Committee and the House Public Works and Transportation Committee before any funds appropriated in this fiscal year 1995 conference report are to be available for any construction, repair, alteration, and acquisition activities.

Mr. BAUCUS. I thank the chairman. Let me also mention that I have enjoyed working with him on this issue and many other issues in the past. I thank him again for his cooperation.

REDUCTION OF REGIONAL IRS OFFICES

Mr. D'AMATO. Would the chairman yield in order that I might clarify an issue regarding the Internal Revenue Service?

Mr. DECONCINI. Certainly.

Mr. D'AMATO. I thank the Senator. Mr. President, the committee is aware that the Internal Revenue Service is contemplating, based on studies conducted by the Service, reducing the number of regional offices from seven to five. The committee has been advised about the potential impacts this plan may have on the regional offices throughout the country, particularly on the large number of women and minority employees.

I believe that the potential costs associated with the Internal Revenue Service's reorganization plan and the impact that such a plan would have on the affected communities should be fully justified in writing by the Service prior to any action to close, move, or transfer functions from the current regional offices.

I wonder if the chairman would agree that, therefore, a thorough and complete analysis on the cost effectiveness of closing the regional offices and the potential impacts on the employees should be undertaken, completed, and reported to the Congress before further action is taken on this matter.

Mr. DECONCINI. I would agree with the Senator from New York, and urge the Internal Revenue Service to undertake such analysis before any closings occurred.

Mr. D'AMATO. I thank the chairman, and appreciate his consideration in this matter.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

DEPARTMENTS OF LABOR, HEALTH AND HUMAN SERVICES, AND EDUCATION AND RELATED AGENCIES APPROPRIATIONS ACT, 1995—CONFERENCE REPORT

The Senate resumed consideration of the conference report.

Pending: House amendment to Senate amendment No. 148.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, what is the pending business before the Senate?

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. ROBB). The pending business is the conference report on the Departments of Labor and Health and Human Services.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I just have one item.

INTERNATIONAL EDUCATION PROGRAM

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I say to the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr.

PELL], we are pleased to be able to provide support in the amount of $3 million in fiscal year 1995 for the International Education Program in title VI of the Goals 2000: Educate America Act. Since this sum is $7 million less than the authorization of $10 million for fiscal year 1995, we would appreciate any guidance that the Senator, as chairman of the Education Subcommittee and author of this legislation, might be able to provide on the use of these funds.

Mr. PELL. Mr. President, at the outset, I want to express my deepest appreciation for the strong support the Senator has given this important program. Without his leadership, we would not be on the threshold of beginning an important program to aid the emerging democracies of Central Europe and the New Independent States that were formerly part of the Soviet Union.

I also appreciate the opportunity to clarify the intent of the authorizers of this legislation. As Senators know, the program is intended to provide a coordinated education and exchange program among highly successful civic and economic education programs in the United States and leaders in the same fields from Central Europe and the New Independent States which were part of the former Soviet Union. Although the legislation authorizes the U.S. Department of Education to make up to three grants each in the fields of civic education and economic education, we believe, in light of the limited appropriations, that the Department should award only one grant in each area—one in civic education and one in economic education. Each grant should be awarded on a competitive basis to the most qualified organization or consortium in each field. We believe a single grant is important in order to make sure that the program undertaken is of sufficient size and scope to be effective in accomplishing the objectives of this program.

Mr. HARKIN. Since I also serve as a member of the authorizing subcommittee, I both understand and agree with the clarification the Senator has provided and will be pleased to advise the Department accordingly.

I yield the floor.

Mr. METZENBAUM addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Ohio.

Mr. METZENBAUM. Mr. President, last evening, in discussion with the manager of the Labor-HHS appropriations bill, who I might say has done a magnificent job in bringing this matter to the floor as well as on the floor, I indicated that I was prepared to offer an amendment having to do with the issue of baseball, having to do with removing the antitrust exemption from the law so far as the pending issue was concerned and giving the players the right to go into court. It would be a limited exemption from the antitrust laws. The players had indicated and have indicated that, if that legislation is passed, they would be prepared to go back to work.

I think the American people want to see baseball played. I do not think we can have a World Series anymore this year, but I think there is a real concern about whether the players will go into spring training. And if that not be the case, we might have a total shutdown of professional baseball in this country.

The question last night had to do with an amendment that I was prepared to offer and whether or not it was germane. The Senator from Nebraska had indicated he had objections and would probably move to table it. In the interim, there have been some new developments. I am informed that the House subcommittee on this issue intends to report out a bill pretty much similar to the legislation that Senator HATCH and I have offered in the Senate and that there is every likelihood the House Judiciary Committee, if it comes out of the subcommittee, then would move forward with the passage of that legislation through the House, or at least report it to the floor for passage.

Those being the circumstances and not wishing to delay my colleague, Senator HARKIN's efforts in connection with the passage of this bill and knowing that the D.C. appropriations bill is standing in line to come to the floor, and having been advised by the Parliamentarian that the question of germaneness is probably equally applicable to putting it on this bill or that bill, I do not want to stand in the way of passing the Labor-HHS bill. I think it is a very important piece of legislation. I think those who have managed it, Senator HARKIN and Senator SPECTER, have done a good job. And so I just want to say I will not offer it, but I will offer it, in connection with Senator HATCH as well as other cosponsors, on the D.C. appropriations bill.

I wish the managers of this bill good luck.

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, I am delighted to hear the statement by the distinguished Senator from Ohio [Mr. METZENBAUM]. I thank him for that. It is true that if we do not proceed now to finish this bill, there will be a very substantial impact on the important accounts in education, health and human services and labor, taking the lower figure between the 1994 budget and the conference report.

I share the sentiments that the Senator from Ohio has expressed about baseball. He and I have worked on the Judiciary Committee during my 14 years here, and we were very deeply involved in the antitrust issue way back in 1981 when the Oakland Raiders moved to Los Angeles, and we had Judiciary Committee hearings to discuss the issue in great depth and have on many occasions since—back in 1984 when the Eagles were about to move to Phoenix.

My own view is that professional sports has a status of being affected with the public interest, so that the fans have a very unique interest in baseball and in football, and those sports and others enjoy a special status under the antitrust laws—full exemption for baseball, which was founded on an opinion by Justice Holmes in 1922 that baseball was a sport, a situation which has long since changed and admitted by all the participants in baseball itself.

We have had the issue come up as to football and its limited antitrust exemption as to pay-per-view on the Super Bowl and have gotten concessions from the leaders of the league. Former Commissioner Rozelle, now Commissioner Tagliabue, have made a commitment as to the year 2000.

There is no doubt about the indignation of the American people as to what is happening today in professional sports. We have just had the magnificent series on public television about baseball, and I personally made inquiries of the Commissioner of Baseball, the players representatives, Dan Fehr and Richard Ravitch. I have a very substantial interest in baseball as two major league teams are located in Pennsylvania, as does the Senator from Ohio. The Senator from Iowa ought to get a couple of major league teams as well.

The prospect of having no baseball next year and the consequence of no season this year and no World Series is really very, very regrettable. I do not know that the proposed legislation is going to have the desired result. I have searched the laws, the antitrust laws and the labor laws, from nook to cranny, and have been unable, nor has Mr. Fehr, Mr. Selig, or Mr. Ravitch, or the owners in Pennsylvania, to find an answer. But I am glad we are able to move ahead and get this bill completed.

I did not have an opportunity yesterday to thank the distinguished Senator from Maine [Mr. COHEN] for withdrawing his amendment, and other Senators who were going to put amendments on the bill, so we can move ahead with this very important legislation.

I would like to give special note, while I am on my feet—I know the chairman, Senator HARKIN, will as well—to extraordinary staff work. We were able to work this out in a minimum time. We had a conference—how long did it last, I ask the Senator? Eight minutes, which probably set a record because we were able to work together. And the majority staff of Ed Long, Jim Sourwine, Carol Mitchell, Susan McGovern, Bill Cordes, Ellen Murray, Gladys Clearwaters, and Antonio Clinkscales, along with Republican staff Craig Higgins, Bettilou Taylor, and Meg Snyder did extraordinary work. They did outstanding work last year but this was even better.

I again express my profound and heartfelt thanks to my colleague, Senator HARKIN.

Mr. HATFIELD. Mr. President, as the Senate completes action on the conference report accompanying H.R. 4606, the Labor, HHS, and Education and related agencies appropriations bill for fiscal year 1995, I would like to highlight several items in the conference agreement. Before I do, let me congratulate the chairman, Senator HARKIN, and the ranking member, Senator SPECTER, for their work on this bill. The conference agreement carefully balances the competing needs facing the subcommittee. This is no easy task. I am especially grateful for their support on several matters of concern to me and to the people of Oregon.

DISLOCATED WORKERS

As many of my colleagues know, dramatic changes in Federal environmental policy in the Pacific Northwest have led to significant worker dislocations within the timber and fishing industries in that region. Thousands of families, and many communities, have had their livelihoods and economic base uprooted.

Earlier this year, I chaired a special hearing of the Appropriations Committee in Portland, OR, to examine whether existing Federal worker retraining programs are sufficient to meet the needs of workers. What became clear during the hearing was that they are not. The most compelling testimony was received from Kevin Browning, a dislocated worker from Roseburg, OR. Mr. Browning outlined for the committee how the current system of support fails to meet the needs of workers like himself. The central problem identified is the restriction on the use of Job Training Partnership Act funds for income support payments.

We cannot expect a worker to spend 2 years in training if their income support is limited to only 26 weeks of unemployment insurance. Yet the Job Training Partnership Act limits at 25 percent, the amount of dislocated worker funds that States can use for income support payments. State officials from Oregon testified to the need for greater flexibility in the use of Federal dislocated worker funds in order to better respond to the needs of workers, like Kevin Browning, who are involved in long-term retraining programs.

I am pleased to report to the Senate that the conference agreement includes language which will give States this flexibility. By easing restrictions on the use of funding, States have greater discretion to deliver additional income support, or needs-based payments, to dislocated workers. The language also extends the period of time in which workers could qualify to receive needs-based payments. Current eligibility restrictions require workers to be enrolled in training within 13 weeks after being laid off. The review and award of supplemental Federal grant requests often comes well after the 13 week period. The conference agreement would make individuals eligible for needs-based payments, provided that they are enrolled in training within 6 weeks of the date the State received the supplemental retraining funds.

The conference agreement also includes $1.29 billion in funding for the dislocated worker retraining program. This is an increase of $178 million over the level appropriated by the Congress last year.

SCHOOL TO WORK

The conference agreement includes $250 million for the recently authorized School-to-Work Program, an increase of $150 million over last year. The School-to-Work Program will assist non-college-bound students make the transition from high school to the workplace. I am proud that Oregon was one of eight States to be awarded an implementation grant under this program this year and that Coos, Curry, and Douglas Counties in Oregon successfully competed for one of the locality grants. The funds provided in this bill will assist both existing and new grantees to fully carry out their proposed programs.

MEDICAL RESEARCH

Few Federal activities rise to the level of importance of medical research. For over 100 years, the Federal Government has supported research into the cause, treatment, and cure of disease. This research has yielded dramatic results over the years. Today, we are poised at the threshold of the worldwide elimination of polio, we have vaccines which immunize our children from diseases that once produced death and disability for thousands of children each year, and we have significantly reduced the mortality rate of heart disease. It is because of this support over the past century that the United States is the world leader in biomedical research and can boast the best health care services in the world.

These developments in genetics, molecular biology, and biochemistry, have spawned tremendous optimism and opportunity for advancing understanding and new treatments for disorders, such as Huntington's disease, cystic fibrosis, certain rare disorders and some forms of breast and colon cancers. The conference agreement includes $11.3 billion to keep faith with our commitment to medical research. This is $395 million, or 3 percent, above the level appropriated by the Congress last year. While I am pleased by this increase, I am concerned that at 3 percent it will not be sufficient even to cover the growth in costs due to inflation in the research sector.

As a member of the Appropriations Committee for over 20 years, I know that the stability we need in medical research cannot, and will not, be accomplished solely through the regular appropriations process. A dedicated funding source is required to ensure annual appropriations are sufficient to meet the challenges of reduced health costs and improved quality of life for millions of Americans suffering from disease and disability. It is for this reason that I joined with Senator HARKIN earlier this year in introducing legislation that would establish a fund for health research. The fund would be financed through a 1-percent surcharge on private insurance premiums. When fully implemented, Federal funding for medical research supported by the National Institutes of Health would increase by 50 percent, approximately $5 billion annually. While I do not expect final action on this legislation this year, I expect to be back pressing for enactment of a fund for health research next year.

RURAL HEALTH

It isn't enough to solve the problem of affordability of health insurance for the millions of Americans who reside in rural communities. Access to health care facilities and providers by rural residents is an equally alarming problem. The conference agreement builds upon the committee's efforts of the past to help improve the availability of health care services and providers in underserved areas. Over $201.8 million is included for programs to assist rural communities in recruiting and retaining health care providers, and in establishing and operating local clinics, hospitals, and other health care facilities. This is an increase of $4.5 million over last year's level.

Of particular note is the $24.6 million for the support of the Area Health Education Centers [AHEC] Program, $2.4 million over the 1994 level. The AHEC Program provides assistance to schools of medicine to improve the distribution, supply, quality, utilization, and efficiency of health personnel in rural communities through establishing statewide regional centers for community based planning, and educational and clinical resource development. The conference agreement also includes language which permits the increase in funding, above $18.7 million, to be allocated equally between "core" and "model" AHEC programs. Without this provision no additional funding would be available over the 1994 level for States, such as Oregon, which have a core center grant or States competing for new grants.

AIDS PREVENTION AND SERVICES

In addition to the $1.337 billion appropriated to the Office of AIDS Research at the National Institutes of Health for research, the conference agreement includes $1.283 billion for AIDS prevention and service programs.

Over $590 million, an increase of $47 million over fiscal year 1994, is provided to expand Federal HIV prevention activities. This increase in funding, coupled with the intense community planning activities which States have undertaken in the last year, should materially improve the effectiveness of federally supported HIV prevention programs. The conference agreement also includes $633 million for AIDS services under the programs of the Ryan White CARE Act, including $356.5 million for emergency assistance grants to cities most heavily impacted by AIDS. Fiscal year 1995 will be the first year Portland, OR, will qualify for these funds. While I had hoped that a cure for this disease could have been found before Portland, or any other city for that matter, became eligible for these funds, I know the funding will be welcome to the individuals, community based appropriations, and city officials who struggle on a daily basis to cope with the services needs of persons with AIDS.

COMMUNITY AND HUMAN SERVICES PROGRAMS

The conference agreement includes funding for a number of programs which provide essential support services to members of our communities who are poor, homeless, hungry, uneducated, and/or victims of domestic violence. Included is $391.5 million for the Community Services Block Grant Program, $32.6 million for family violence prevention activities, and $399 million for assisting States and localities to resettle refugees. The agreement also includes $3.534 billion for the Head Start Program, an increase of $210 million over 1994.

EDUCATION

Our ability as a nation to compete in the global market in the future is largely dependent upon the ability of our education system to prepare the workers of the next century. This requires that the Federal Government maintain its education funding partnership with State, local governments, parents, and students. The bill before the Senate includes $27.4 billion for programs supported by the Department of Education. This is an increase of $868 million over the level appropriated last year.

Within the amount for the Department of Education is over $7.2 billion to assist State and local education agencies in providing the educational services to disadvantaged children and their families, nearly $1.6 billion is provided for elementary and secondary school improvement activities, and $3.2 billion is included to provide appropriate educational services to children who need special education services.

I am particularly pleased that the conference agreement builds upon the progress achieved over the last several years in expanding Federal support for strengthening math and science education and for improving the math and science skills of both teachers and students. The bill appropriates $320.3 million for the Eisenhower Professional Development State Grant Program. The bulk of these funds will be used to provide grants to States for math and science professional development, with the remaining funds devoted to teacher training in the remaining core subjects. In addition, $36.3 million is appropriated to support national math and science development initiatives.

Over $7.7 billion is appropriated to provide financial aid to students involved in postsecondary education at colleges, universities, and trade schools across the country. This will provide Pell grants to over 4 million students and work-study assistance to over 700,000 students in the 1995-96 academic year.

Urban universities across the Nation are a critical component to the systems of higher education in their communities. The bill provides $13 million, an increase of $2.3 million over the fiscal year 1994 appropriated level to help these universities strengthen their community involvement in helping to solve the social and economic problems of the urban area in which they serve.

LIBRARIES

Finally, the conference agreement includes $144 million to help our Nation's public libraries deliver services to the residents of their communities. Libraries play an important role in our education system. Children and adults depend upon libraries as a resource both for expanding knowledge and understanding, and for recreation. The conference agreement does not endorse the reductions proposed in the President's budget, but instead, maintains support for library services, construction, career training, and literacy programs.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate concur in the amendment of the House to the amendment of the Senate numbered 148.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, that finishes the Labor, Health and Human Services, and Education appropriations bill. Again, I want to express my thanks to the Senator from Ohio for his understanding and his cooperation in not offering his amendment dealing with the antitrust exemptions for baseball to this pending bill. I am not an expert in that area at all.

I just got handed a button by my colleague, Senator SPECTER, which says, "Free Amendment No. 148," which we just passed.

Mr. SPECTER. It came from Craig English, a staffer. This is not quite as important as freeing the 103d Congress, but this frees this important bill, so it is for the chairman, I say to the Senator.

Mr. HARKIN. I thank the Senator. I thank the staff for that. But I just want to again thank the Senator from Ohio for his understanding and cooperation. I know he feels deeply about this. And I think it goes without saying here that when the Senator from Ohio appears in the Chamber to offer an amendment, he is doing the people's work.

Mr. METZENBAUM. I thank the Senator.

Mr. HARKIN. He represents people and he represents working people. As I said, I am not an expert on this issue. I do not serve on the committee. I must plead some lack of knowledge of this whole issue. But I know that when Senator METZENBAUM comes here to fight as tenaciously as he has done all the years he has been in the Senate, he is usually—not usually, he is always—fighting for the little person. He is usually fighting for the person who does not have a lot of economic clout, a lot of money, and a lot of lobbyists and everything else around this town.

So, as I said, I do not understand the issue that well, but I know that if HOWARD METZENBAUM feels strongly about it, more often than not he is on the right side of the issue. So I appreciate that. I reserve judgment how I will eventually vote on it because I have to get briefed on the issue myself. But I appreciate his cooperation very much.

Mr. METZENBAUM. I thank the Senator. Good luck.

Mr. HARKIN. Again, Mr. President, I join with Senator SPECTER in thanking our staffs, both Republican and Democratic staffs. They have a great working relationship. We worked very closely from beginning to end in developing our appropriations bill. That is one of the reasons why we have had such, I think, good work in our conference committees. As Senator SPECTER said, it was a record—8 minutes—this year. Obviously, no one gets everything they want. It has been a tough year. We have had some very tough budget constraints, but we have been able to work them out. And it has over the last couple of years introduced a real strain of discipline on this subcommittee. With Senator SPECTER, I think we have responded to that discipline by trimming and cutting out waste and abuse, fat, whatever else we knew. We have tightened down on programs. We have gotten rid of programs. We have streamlined. And, quite frankly, I think we have come out of it in pretty decent shape.

So, again, Mr. President, I thank the staffs for their diligent and hard work. I thank Senator SPECTER for his close cooperation and close work in getting this bill through all of the stages from early this year until right now.

Again, I look forward to working with him again next year on another bill, and I hope we can set another record next year. I wish to thank Craig and Bettilou for making up that button because I did not know how long we were going to be on amendment No. 148. We could have been here for a long time on it. We just got through, and now we can be assured that when the new fiscal year hits—what, this Saturday—all of those programs that we care so much about in education, in health, biomedical research, Head Start programs, low-income heating energy programs, we can move ahead to respond to real human needs out there in our country.

So, again, I thank Senator SPECTER for being such a good friend and for his close cooperation in working with us to get this bill through.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

MORNING BUSINESS

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that there now be a period for morning business with Senators permitted to speak for up to 10 minutes each.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. HARKIN. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The absence of a quorum has been suggested. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from Iowa is recognized for up to 10 minutes.

Mr. HARKIN. I thank the Chair for that recognition.

HAITI

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I am going to be giving a little longer talk on Haiti a little bit later on this afternoon, but since we are in morning business right now I thought I would take a few minutes just to discuss a couple of items that appeared in the morning press this morning about Haiti, one directly on point and one sort of halfway on point.

I see on the front page of the New York Times this morning that there is a story that Congress is going to do a complete study of the need for the CIA and reformulating the CIA. I will just read the first few paragraphs from the New York Times this morning. It says:

Having concluded that Central Intelligence Agency cannot ably chart its course in the post-cold war world, Congress is creating an independent commission to rethink the agency's role and review its continued existence in its present form.

The new commission, being formed despite active opposition by the CIA's leaders * * * will have the broadest possible mandate to propose changes in the structure, the power and the budget as well as the very existence of the CIA * * *

"The place just needs a total overhaul." said Senator Arlen Specter, a Pennsylvania Republican who served six years on the Senate Select Committee in the Intelligence Committee and will be the senior Republican in January.

It goes on to quote Senator SPECTER: "We are spending a lot of money on the CIA and there have been doubts for years as to whether we are getting our money's worth."

You may ask: What does that have to do with Haiti?

Well, on the inside of the New York Times there is another article that says the CIA is reportedly taking a role in Haiti.

Well, I read the article. Basically, it says that the CIA may be involved in Haiti in terms of gathering intelligence on those that may seek to assassinate or to bring harm to Aristide and his supporters.

Now, again, Mr. President, I understand the need for intelligence, and especially in Haiti. We have 15,000 troops there, and they are at risk. So far, things have gone very well in Haiti. The people of Haiti are looking upon us as liberators. We see it every day in the paper. They are overjoyed that we have come to take over this terrible yoke of repression of their military and their ruthless police force that they have had in Haiti.

There may be instances where in the future those who wish to disrupt this process will provoke violence. It may happen soon. There may be instances where our own troops are put at an even greater risk. So we do need that intelligence and I understand that. And I am fully supportive of actions taken by our Government to get that kind of intelligence to protect our forces, to protect those now in Haiti, the parliamentarians who are bravely meeting to discuss the amnesty law, to protect President Aristide once he returns to Haiti, to make sure that we have knowledge of any actions that may be taken to provoke violence, to assassinate, to disrupt the process to restore democracy to Haiti.

But I am concerned about the CIA doing it. More specifically, I am concerned about who in the CIA will be doing it.

This Senator had an occasion a little over a year ago to have many meetings with the Director of the CIA and the people in the CIA about reports that they had come up with about President Aristide—reports which were given in secret session here with Senators just about a year ago in which it was put out. And this has all been in the popular press, so I am not divulging anything that was said in that room. In fact, I was not in that room during that meeting. I went up later on for a different meeting. But I had countless hours of meetings with the head of the CIA and the people that work under him who had been working on Haiti for some years.

Mr. President, all I can tell you is I was greatly disturbed by the misinformation and, I think, the total distortion of the record of President Aristide that was given out by the CIA. I will not go into it at any great length than that here, but I could point to instances, documented, where the CIA, quite frankly, was taking certain untruths and then passing them on as though they were indeed factual.

So my concern, Mr. President, is that the very CIA operatives and people who were involved before, first of all, in opposing President Aristide when he ran for office and who were actively involved perhaps in supporting another candidate for that office who did not win, and later on the operatives who were involved in picking up and moving erroneous, false information about President Aristide and then putting it out as though it was fact; that these same people will now operate in Haiti. That concerns me greatly.

And so I am hopeful that the legitimate need for the intelligence that we have will be carried out by individuals in the CIA or in Defense Intelligence who do not have some previous ax to grind, who maybe were divorced from this operation in the past. Because I am concerned that if we just go down that same path again with these same individuals who have shown their true colors that they have some certain ideological bent, that they have close connections with other elements in the Haitian military, that we might find ourselves, first, gaining erroneous information and erroneous intelligence information or, second, getting good intelligence information and not acting on it or diverting it in some way that will not be helpful to President Aristide and his supporters in Haiti.

So, I am very concerned about this report the CIA is now taking a role in Haiti.

It is reported here in the New York Times that the officials briefing Congress told lawmakers that one of the goals was to create a political climate that would help put into effect the agreement that former President Jimmy Carter reached with Lt. Gen. Raoul Cedras, Haiti's military leader, on September 18.

I do not know what that means, "to create a political climate." And I do not know that the CIA ought to be involved in creating a political climate. If this is true, then someone better put the reins on the CIA. Their job is not to create political climates. Their role is not to support one candidate over another. Their role is to collect information and intelligence and to pass it on to policymakers—that is us, that is the President—the policymakers who then act upon that intelligence. But I dare say their role is not to create a political climate.

So, Mr. President, the Congress is now reviewing the role of the CIA, with comments from both sides of the aisle as to whether or not the CIA is effective or whether we are getting our money's worth or whether it ought to be revised and restructured. We are, right in the middle of this, in a very tense situation in a country close to our borders in which we have 15,000 troops. We have a lot at stake in ensuring that we continue on this process peacefully, that we continue on the process of returning President Aristide to his rightful place as the elected President of Haiti, in returning the parliamentarians who were elected in 1990, setting up the electoral structure in Haiti so they can again have free and fair and open elections sometime before the end of this year for their Parliament next year. We have a lot at stake. And while doing all this, I dare say it causes me a great deal of concern to think the CIA, now, is "creating a political climate." That is not their role.

I call upon the President of the United States to rein in the CIA, to make sure that those who are gathering intelligence in Haiti not be those who were charged with that before. I think they have basically established themselves as not being credible.

We need new people down there: Defense intelligence, Navy, Army, Air Force intelligence, those who have not been tainted by any of this. I am not saying everyone in the CIA is bad, do not get me wrong. There are good intelligence people in the CIA.

So I call upon the President and Director Woolsey to make sure we have a new team down there, that we have new people gathering this intelligence, and that they are not charged with creating a political climate but only charged with what they should do: That is gathering intelligence information so our policymakers can act upon that.

So, I will have more to say about Haiti later on. I just wanted to take this time during morning business to raise these very serious questions about the role of the CIA in Haiti. After all we have done, after all our military has done in Haiti—and I do not think there is any American who does not just get a great sense of pride from what our military has done in Haiti. We see the Haitian people turning over their arms to the military, treating them like liberators, the liberators they really are, and it gives us a great sense of satisfaction and pride in our military. I do not want that undermined by people in our intelligence agencies, especially in the CIA, who have some other ax to grind.

So I hope—again I just say for emphasis sake—I hope this report is not true. I hope the CIA is not involved in creating a political climate in Haiti.

I yield the floor. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

Mr. SIMPSON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Chair recognizes the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. SIMPSON].

FILIBUSTER

Mr. SIMPSON. Mr. President, I wish to briefly respond to various Senators' comments in the past days concerning the supposed Republican love affair with the filibuster. At a later date I intend to address the Senate in greater detail, armed with book, page and hymn number, and to provide a more detailed statistical corroboration to my comments.

For those observers of the legislative process here on the floor of the Senate, it may be apparent to all, as I said last week, that we Republicans are portrayed as a bunch of rabid Cro-Magnon individuals, wielding clubs in the mouths of our musty caves while utilizing arcane legislative procedures to disrupt the greatest and loftiest ideas of the enlightened who wish to assure an ever-expanding Federal role in our daily lives.

The implication by Senators who have criticized our use of this procedural check on a Government controlled by one party is that somehow we are acting in bad faith, considering "what the American people truly want us to do," which is the usual pitch.

It is unfortunate that such a view is incredibly narrow and simplistic and does not reflect the several different reasons we have to avail ourselves of this procedural right and, may I also add, "procedural defense."

It is in fact used as "a defense," but you do not read about that in the civics texts. Republicans were duly elected, too. I know that is strange to hear. The voters elected us, too, based on the principles we believe in. We ought to have the same right to have those principles judged by a majority of this Senate. However, that is not often the case. It is not true in every committee, but it is true in more of them than I would prefer, that Republican ideas for legislation are not allowed to see the light of day. Bills we introduce are frequently not given a place on some committee agendas. Amendments that we think are excellent never breathe. And, believe it or not—"Believe it or not," as Ripley said—some of the things that Republicans believe in are very popular with the American people and are darned good policy, too. But in the area where most of the legislative work takes place—committees—we Republicans too often get stifled. We get stifled.

Frequently, our only opportunity after being stifled is to have our legislation judged on the merits on the floor of the Senate. Under our rules, an amendment does not have to specifically relate to the underlying bill, meaning it need not be germane. The majority party calculates and fully realizes that some of our ideas are worthwhile and are supported by most Americans. Yet they may not enjoy the full-throated support of certain liberal activists in the Democratic Party. Therefore, one option available to the majority is to eliminate even the possibility of voting on the Republican initiatives. How is that done? It is done by the filing of a cloture motion. That is what happens here. Because if they win that one, with 60 votes to invoke cloture, then only those amendments which are germane to the underlying bill are allowed. No more playing around with those embarrassing and pesky non-germane amendments, which probably would pass.

And, be clearly aware that some of these cloture petitions which have been so swiftly filed are cited as evidence of the horrid proliferation of the filibuster. We do not even have to wait anymore. You put up a bill and they say, "uh, oh, with their nongermane amendments, get them." These are really nothing more than offensive maneuvers—both meanings of the word—by the majority to prevent a minority from having our amendments offered to legislation and considered on the merits at the only juncture of the process that is left to us, and that is the Senate floor.

An example is product liability. I was on the other side of that one. Democrats filibustered that one, a lot of them. In order to get a vote on that issue, that measure had to be offered as a nongermane amendment. The fact we could defeat cloture is also the way we were able to get a vote on this administration's absolutely absurd policy proposal on admitting HIV-positive persons under our immigration system, and similar popular measures that we could not have raised without a nongermane amendment.

So what is the real underlying problem that leads to this frequent use of the filibuster? It is the lack of consultation. When our party had the White House, or at least one body in the Congress, consultation was critical. It was necessary. During the course of this Congress, consultation has too often been the exception and not the rule. It is very understandable to a politician how this happens. It is, "We have the White House. We have the Senate. We have the House of Representatives. So let us stiff them. We don't need them. We've got the horses."

It has not worked. It has been a very drastic and dramatic failure. And I am not talking about those old, tired, rhetorical statements about how we are going to consult with Republicans. We have all heard those. We hear it on the floor quite often. I mean real, honest-to-God consultation. That is what I am talking about.

Republicans in the Senate have grown accustomed to being partners in the process—yes, sometimes junior partners, sometimes senior partners—but always we have had some higher level of participation.

Let us look at the record of this Congress, and there is quite a sizable positive record of legislation passed. You would never know that because all we hear about is gridlock and filibuster. That is not even part of it. We disagreed on the merits of the so-called stimulus package. What is worse is that we were not consulted about our views. Our compromise efforts—with certain Democrats joining us were stifled. The signal went up very clearly in this body as to what was going to happen to that bill. So we were stifled. We were closed off from even offering amendments. Ultimately we defeated that ill-conceived package, and I think the record has shown that we did the right thing.

Let us take another example, western Senators, both Democrats and Republicans. We felt aggrieved by the rangeland reform initiatives which were plopped down in the middle of the night in the Interior appropriations bill without sufficient hearings. This was not about grazing fees. What great revenue source is going to come to America from adding to the grazing fees currently paid by a bunch of Westerners? Let's say two or three bucks an AUM—it could get the Government $30 million? But I have to stand here and watch $5.2 billion in subsidies go to the corn guys, come on.

Much of that was an effort to get cattle off the western range, and to get human beings off the public lands. Certain people have been waiting 12 years, salivating at the chops to get rid of Reagan and Bush so they could get on with an agenda which they have not been able to pursue successfully. That proposal was plopped down in front of us without sufficient hearings, and in a bipartisan fashion that effort was rejected.

Striker replacement was another bipartisan effort to derail what even the Washington Post editorialized was a "bad bill." Of course, that was not obstructionist, that was just "good policy."

So in order to force good-faith modifications and force consultation on legislation we have utilized the filibuster to save billions of dollars in Federal spending this Congress.

Examples are the reduced spending levels we obtained in the so-called "Competitiveness Act." That was the only way we could get those changes.

As to the National Service Act, we were told: "Here it is. It is all yours. You are not players."

We said, Yes, we are. There are 44 of us, and we are players." So, we changed that to a more rational bill, and I think with the honest approval of many of our reasonable and thoughtful colleagues on the other side of the aisle.

We cannot have any major impact on committee votes, and when we go to conference committee, you really can be gunned down in this league. Maybe that is going to change next year, by virtue of some of the already announced retirements. Sometimes in conference committee our efforts ignored even when our amendments pass 100 to 0. Now that is pretty sad. We get tired of it. So we are going to use what tools we can to try to improve a bill on the floor, since we cannot have any major impact on the votes in committee.

Some committees are much better than others. I serve on the Judiciary, and JOE BIDEN is extremely fair with us, even though I do not concur with him with regard to some matters. MAX BAUCUS on Environment and Public Works, tries very desperately to work in a bipartisan way. Other committees, just line them up, tee them up, and knock them down the fairway. There you are. Sorry, we could not consider your amendment. Sorry you feel that way. We have the horse. They flash their proxies and then move on. Then they wonder what happens to their product here on the floor. You know what happens to it here. Here the rules assure that we get heard.

So we were able to force consultation in improving the Hatch Act, which I did think was a turkey, but nevertheless we made some changes in it to make it better.

Motor voter—which we refer to as “auto fraudo” in our party—we improved that bill, too.

The crime bill was not what I wanted, but it was a better bill when it left the Senate. A good, bipartisan crime bill left the Senate. It got 93 votes. When it got over there, they just whooped it up. “We have the horses. Wait until we get to conference and really stiff them.” That is the way it works. The American people have to understand that.

So we stick together, when we can. I use the word “we” a little bit loosely, perhaps. Most successful efforts to defeat cloture are bipartisan. We have a few in our party, different ones each time, who choose to not support cloture efforts, for very valid reasons, but we usually get some bipartisan support for our efforts.

So let us look at what happened yesterday. Five Democrats joined 38 Republicans to prevent the so-called campaign finance bill from going to conference. Senators of the other faith who criticized the use of the filibuster in their statements did not utter a peep, or mention the five Democrat colleagues who had defected only the Republicans. “Those wretched, rascal Republicans.” This is not the U.S. House of Representatives. I think too many people may have come here thinking this is some continuation of the U.S. House of Representatives, and the way they conduct the Nation’s business there. This is not. This is not where a majority party has abused the minority for nearly 50 years.

It is odd, to me, that the Democrat-controlled House of Representatives, at least in all of my dealings with them in conference activity, is there to protect every minority known to the human mind. Every single minority, whether flora, fauna, ethnic, whatever. But there is one minority that is impossible for them to accede to, and they are called “Republicans” and they are an abused minority.

This is not the House. This is the U.S. Senate. And it has a proud history of protecting the rights of a minority, and even a minority within a minority, whether based on party, philosophy, religion, or ideology.

If the complaining Senators want to see less frequent use of the filibuster, I respectfully suggest that those in the majority consider the idea of greater consultation with us, the Republicans.

When we work together, the entire institution benefits. Remember NAFTA. That was consultation. Honest-to-God consultation between the White House and the Democrats and the Republicans in both Houses. We helped pass that. And at no time had the popularity of this President been higher. No time. That is what people expected.

So now he sinks in the polls as his party’s stick-it-to-’em partisanship rises. It rises in the Senate, it rises in the House, and is hurting the President of their party.

I wanted to share those things.

We are here. You cannot shake us. We are part of this body. You really will not be able to escape us. I know you would like to, perhaps.

So, since we are here, every day, and draw the same pay, and do the same work, all indoors, no real heavy lifting, why not work with us? Then you would see less filibusters. And we are ready to do that. I think that is very important for the American people to understand.

I thank the Chair, and appreciate the courtesies. I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who seeks recognition?

Mr. PRYOR. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The absence of a quorum has been suggested. The Clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. I ask to be recognized to speak as if in morning business.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. I thank the Chair.

CALIFORNIA DESERT PROTECTION ACT

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. Mr. President, I listened with great interest to the comments in the Chamber a very short time ago by someone I have learned to respect, and that is the minority whip. I happen to have the privilege of serving with him on the Judiciary Committee, and I have a great respect for him. We have tried to work together on matters involving immigration, with which he is a recognized expert. In his comments in the Chamber, he indicated he did not believe that the Republicans were really responsible for the gridlock facing this Senate at this particular point in time and that very often they felt their amendments did not see the light of day; that they felt stifled, I think the word was, on some occasions.

I tried to apply his tests and his criteria to a piece of legislation that I authored which is being held hostage at this particular point in time and see if it was true. The bill is the California Desert Protection Act, which is a major bill which impacts California.

As I thought about it, as I listened to the distinguished Senator, I thought how can the minority, if this is true, be holding hostage the Desert Protection Act? And I began to look back.

Have I worked in a bipartisan way on the Desert Protection Act? The answer is yes. Sixteen Republicans voted for the bill when it passed the Senate. I worked in a bipartisan way with the House as well. The House has also passed the legislation. The legislation has been here for 7 years. And when I took it over, I talked with various Members of this body on both sides of the aisle. I said, “What do you need to vote for this legislation?”

I made more than 60 amendments in the bill to accommodate what I felt were legitimate needs the Cranston bill did not accommodate. I worked with the committee, attended the committee hearings, heard the comments of the committee, agreed to further amendments, heard amendments by the Republican side, agreed to many of them.

So when the bill left here, it passed by a substantial margin. It passed the House of Representatives a slightly different bill. And now I find the bill is being blocked from going to conference. So I went back and I found out. What does it usually take, when a bill affects one State and has passed both Houses, to stop it?

What I learned is, well, if one of the two Senators do not like the bill, that is usually enough to stop it. Is that true in this case? No, it is not. The bill from the beginning has had the strong and active support of my colleague and friend, Senator BARBARA BOXER. So both Democratic Senators from the State of California support this bill.

If the bill could get to conference, I know the issues could be reconciled in a way that I could keep the bill's integrity and the commitments to the Republican Members who voted for and are concerned with the bill. I know we could produce a good bill for the people of California.

So I have worked in a bipartisan way. We have both Senators of the affected State supporting the bill. And not only that, we have support from the Association of Southern California Governments which includes the affected counties: Los Angeles, Riverside, Orange, Ventura, San Bernardino, and Imperial Counties. We have the support of 16 boards of supervisors representing 16 counties in our State. We have the support of 36 city councils representing 36 cities, including the 8 largest in California; 15 California newspapers have endorsed the bill; 118 conservation groups including the Sierra Club, the Wilderness Society, the National Parks and Conservation Association, the Garden Clubs, the National Audubon Society, Friends of the Earth, the Natural Resources Defense Council, and the Fund for Animals all support the bill. Public support in my State is very strong.

An independent Field Institute Poll showed that 75 percent of the residents of the impacted areas support the bill, and about the same number do statewide. The bill has 47 cosponsors in this body—47. Not 5 or 6 or 12 or 15 or 20 but 47 people have asked to cosponsor this bill. It passed, as I said, overwhelmingly on April 13. On April 13 of this year this bill passed the Senate by a vote of 69 to 29. Two Democratic Senators, who I believe would be in support of the bill, namely, Senators SHELBY and BIDEN, were not present. If they were, that would have brought the total to 71. The House passed a similar version by a vote of 298 to 128; a substantial victory in the House.

This is, as I say, a balanced bill. It protects some very significant resources and yet it recognizes important use of desert lands.

Over 60 amendments have been made to it. They provide reasonable vehicle access to important routes. They protect all private property. No private property is taken in the Senate bill. It permits all active mines to continue; and all livestock grazing to continue. It maintains hunting opportunities on over 10 million acres. And I have indicated that I have agreed to accept the House language on the preserve. It satisfies all military and law-enforcement needs. So accommodations have been made for this bill.

Well, I found that Republican holds had been put on the bill. The chairman of the committee made an offer to the Republicans to put some bills that he thought the Republican side wanted on top of this bill to get it moving. Then the hold became revolving and it continues to this day. So it could be one Member holding a bill that has been overwhelmingly voted on by this body and by the other body that has the support of both Senators.

And I must tell you, Mr. President, I do not understand this. I do not understand how one or two or three or four or five people can effectively kill a piece of legislation which has been discussed in this body for 7 years, amended, and with which I did everything that I felt someone should do, which is consult on a bipartisan basis, bring in Republicans.

I placed phone calls before the cloture vote to 16 Republicans. I know I have better than 60 votes on every cloture motion. The first cloture motion on this bill had 73 votes to grant cloture. I know I have at least 60 on any other motion that is made. And yet, the minority will not let the bill pass.

So perhaps, as these speeches are made on the floor, it can be understood that there is frustration on both sides of the aisle. This is a bill that Republicans in the State of California support. It is a bill that Democrats in the State of California support. It is a bill that both Senators from the State of California support. It is a bill that has passed this House overwhelmingly. It is a bill that has passed the other House overwhelmingly. It is a bill we know the President will sign. It is a bill we know that can be confederated successfully and come back to this House and be passed successfully.

And yet, one, or two, or three, perhaps, hold up an entire piece of legislation which for 7 years we have tried to pass in this body, the largest wilderness protection bill since the passage of the Alaska Lands Act. And it is held hostage, for reasons I do not understand, by a very few people.

If it is to deny me a victory, Mr. President, I would submit to you that that is not the case. I got this bill through the Senate. My predecessors could not get this bill through the Senate. That victory is already there.

What the people who are holding this bill hostage are doing are denying a victory to the people of the State of California, 75 percent of whom want this bill passed by an independent poll—not my poll, but the California Field Poll. I have worked literally with hundreds of groups and individuals to remove their objections. I have tried to see that residents of the desert are protected and will not lose their property. The Senate bill does this. And yet the bill is held hostage. It is a good bill, Mr. President.

And so what I want to say to the distinguished minority whip is there is certainly frustration on both sides of the aisle. And I do not know what the solution is. For those of us who come to this body, bringing Democratic ideals, Republican ideals, I have always thought the challenge was to reconcile our differences, come together, bring our perspectives, try to develop a consensus. And we have done it on this bill. We have done it on the California Desert Protection Act.

There is consensus. True, it is not unanimous, but support is overwhelming. We know we will get cloture. And yet, just a few Members can stop something which is of major impact and importance to a major area of the great State of California.

Perhaps it can be understood why frustration exists on both sides of the aisle.

I thank you, Mr. President.
I yield the floor. I note the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The absence of a quorum is noted. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. KOHL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA APPROPRIATIONS ACT, 1995, DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA SUPPLEMENTAL APPROPRIATIONS AND RESCIS-SIONS ACT, 1994—CONFERENCE REPORT

Mr. KOHL. Mr. President, I ask the Chair lay before the Senate a message from the House on H.R. 4649.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the message.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 3 to the bill (H.R. 4549) entitled "An act making appropriations for the Government of the District of Columbia and other activities chargeable in whole or in part against the revenues of said District for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1995 and for other purposes and concur therein with an amendment.

The Senate resumed consideration of the amendments in disagreement to the conference report.

Pending:
Gramm amendment No. 2585 (to House amendment to Senate amendment number 3), to strengthen the Violent Crime Control and Law Enforcement Act of 1994 by reducing the number of social programs and increasing the penalties for criminal activity.

Mr. KOHL. Mr. President, I would like to remind Senators where we are on this bill. On Wednesday September 21, 1994, the Senate began consideration of the conference report on D.C. appropriations. On that day the Senate voted 71 to 27 to adopt the conference report.

After adopting the conference report we then took up the amendments in disagreement. On the first such amendment the Senator from Texas offered an amendment. Certainly any Senator has that right, however, the amendment offered has nothing to do with the D.C. appropriations bill.

I understand that other amendments may be offered, and that while they may be germane under Senate rules, have nothing to do with the D.C. bill.

Mr. President, the end of the fiscal year is rapidly approaching. I can assure you that the D.C. government will have serious cash flow problems if the Federal payment contained in this bill is not received October 1. The city must balance its budget each year, the amount and timing of cash flow is very important.

Mr. President, I hope that my colleagues will find another way to accomplish their legislative needs and allow us to send this bill to the President without delay.

Mr. President, I yield the floor and suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Will the Senator withhold?

Mr. KOHL. I will.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair would like to point out the pending question is on the Gramm amendment No. 2585 to the House amendment to Senate amendment No. 3.

That is the current position of the Senate.

The Chair recognizes the Senator from Montana.

Mr. BURNS. Mr. President, we do have to work our way through these amendments. But I just want to remind the Senate that, if we do not have this bill or a continuing resolution, as of the first day of October the District of Columbia is, in essence, broke. So it may be a bill of convenience for a handful of Senators, but imagine the inconvenience to the city if we do not have any public schools, garbage collection, street cleaning, public libraries, youth services, child day care, classes at UDC, and so on.

So I urge my colleagues come to the floor, present their amendments, and let us get this bill passed—either that or a continuing resolution, whichever is the delight of the Senate.

I thank my chairman for his work on this and I yield the floor.

Mr. KOHL. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. GORTON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that further proceedings under the quorum call be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. HARKIN). The Chair, in his capacity as a Senator from Iowa, is forced to object. Will the clerk please call the roll.

The legislative clerk continued the call of the roll.

Mr. GORTON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. GORTON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that I be allowed to speak as in morning business.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

REAUTHORIZATION OF SUPERFUND

Mr. GORTON. Mr. President, as the number of days left in this 103d Congress dwindle, so does the opportunity to pass legislation to fix the Superfund, a law which almost everyone agrees is broken and is in dire need of repair.

The legislation reported by the Senate Committee on Environment and Public Works to reauthorize the Superfund law is obviously not perfect and not totally agreeable to everyone. Even many of its strongest supporters can think of areas in which they would like improvement. I believe we could probably improve upon this bill, but I am firmly convinced that the legislation is both needed and a great improvement over present law and should be passed this year.

After months and months of hard work on the part of this administration and various interested groups, I am truly disappointed that it now seems more likely than not that the Senate will miss this opportunity to take up and to pass legislation to fix what primarily is broken with the Superfund.

Earlier this year, I joined with a bipartisan group of Senators in sending a letter to the chairman and ranking Republican on the Environment and Public Works Committee urging the enactment of legislation to reform Superfund during the 103d Congress. I signed this letter because I was encouraged by the results of the bipartisan efforts of the administration and others to craft a strong coalition of interested parties to reform the current Superfund law.

Mr. President, the administration deserves a great deal of credit for bringing together environmentalists, industry groups, other business groups, insurance companies, cities, and others to work through a myriad of complex and important issues and to produce a good piece of proposed legislation.

I believe the following to be true: When the administration works from the beginning in a bipartisan effort, the end result is often a good one. For example, the North American Free Trade Agreement passed by an impressive margin because it had the support not only of the administration but of large numbers of members of both parties. I supported the administration on the North American Free Trade Agreement and worked hard to see that it was passed.

Another example of the good results the administration finds when it works with both parties is perhaps the proposed reauthorization of the Safe Drinking Water Act. Legislation to reauthorize the Safe Drinking Water Act, which passed the Senate last May, was the result of the hard work of a bipartisan group of Senators, a broad coalition of State, local and national groups and the willingness of the administration to listen to the concerns of the people who have to deal with this law on a daily basis. The end result of these bipartisan efforts was a bill that passed the Senate by a huge margin and had the strong support of this Senator and his constituents.

Whether that is true with the Safe Drinking Water Act amendments which have passed the House of Representatives, I am uncertain at this point. But at least we have the opportunity to do a strong bipartisan job.

I hope the administration will learn from its past bipartisan successes. I encourage the administration to reach out to members of both political parties and to work with affected groups to produce legislation not developed in a vacuum but which, instead, reflects the careful balance of competing ideas and points of view.

The administration's Superfund bill perhaps will not reach the Senate floor before we adjourn in spite of strong support on the part of this Senator and many of his colleagues in both parties. That will be a great disappointment, because the bill does address many of the problems which plague the current statute.

In particular, the bill will allow for faster cleanup of Superfund sites by establishing a national risk protocol. The bill will also transform the current system of looking for the deepest pockets at a given site, to one which seeks to assign cleanup liability in a fair and equitable manner.

RISK ASSESSMENT

S. 1834 would provide a mechanism for the faster cleanup of Superfund sites, which, after all, is the ultimate goal. This would be accomplished by the establishment of a national risk protocol and formula. According to the Senate report accompanying S. 1834,

[The] methods EPA currently uses for conducting risk assessments under the Superfund program have been criticized for inconsistency and for over-estimating the actual risks associated with such sites.

I have had countless meetings with big and small business owners on the issue of Superfund and they tell me that risk assessment is one of the most frustrating aspects of the current law. How clean is clean? How clean should a site be if it will continue to be used for industrial purposes? How clean should a site be if it will be used for residential purposes? Simple questions, and questions which deserve careful answers given the future use, and the contamination of, a given site. These are the questions which will be answered with a greater degree of certainty and flexibility than is currently provided by the law at the present time.

S. 1834 would require that the Administrator develop and promulgate a national risk protocol to govern the methods and application of all Superfund risk assessments, thereby establishing a more reasonable and standardized process for conducting risk assessments. The risk protocol will put forward both standardized exposure scenarios and a formula for assessing public health and environmental risks.

The legislation does include risk assessment flexibility if the prescribed protective concentration level is too costly or technologically infeasible to achieve.

LIABILITY ALLOCATION

S. 1834 will also provide for the more equitable distribution of remedial costs at sites. S. 1834 will put an end to the nightmares of small business owners and other potentially responsible parties [PRP's] who fear being listed on the national priority list of Superfund sites. The bill would change the way in which liability amongst PRP's is allocated.

According to the committee report, An estimated 25-30 percent of all Superfund-related expenses go toward litigation. That litigation is divided between insurer/policyholder litigation, and suits by the government, or suits by PRP's against other PRP's to adjudicate and apportion liability.

S. 1834 seeks to put an end to the finger-pointing and endless legal expenses by using an out-of-court settlement in which a neutral allocator can be used to assign liability shares at a site. Each of the PRP's at a site would come to the table, and a neutral allocator would assign shares responsibility based on available information about each PRP's contribution to that site.

The bill would also address the concerns of hundreds of thousands of small business owners across the United States by allowing for the exemption of parties which contributed small amounts of waste and capping the liability of those determined to have had little to do with contamination at a site or have a limited ability to pay. The bill would also give small businesses and small contributors the opportunity to settle quickly.

Payments of an orphan share from the Superfund will go to those PRP's which are unable to pay for their cleanup costs because it is defunct or qualifies for an exemption under the bill.

And lastly, the bill also establishes the Environmental Insurance Resolution Fund to resolve disputes over Superfund liability between insurance companies and their policyholders.

Mr. President, the current Superfund process is one filled with uncertainty and fear for many small business owners, finger-pointing, and inaction. The current law has resulted in the listing of hundreds of sites, but has resulted in the cleanup of very few sites. This Senator is greatly disappointed that it appears as if the status quo will prevail for yet another year.

I hope that I am wrong. I hope that in the last week of this session we will have the opportunity to pass such a bill.

But, in any event, I look forward to working with the administration and my colleagues to promptly solve a very serious problem for many people and many places in the United States.

Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to proceed as if in morning business.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the Senator is recognized as if in morning business.

TRIBUTE TO MARIE DAVIS

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I wish to pay a tribute to the hard work, dedication, and loyalty of Marie Davis.

Since 1980, Marie has held the title of computer operator in my office. Yet Marie has been much more than a worker who simply enters names into the computer. It would be much more accurate to call Marie a quality assurance expert. While few Montanans know Marie, she has been the final—and the strongest—link in the chain of my office mail operation.

For 14 years, Marie has worked long and hard to see that the people of Montana received a prompt, high-quality response to their calls and letters. If the tone or the content of a letter fell short of Marie's high standards, she was never reluctant to let me and the rest of my staff know.

With her strong work ethic and attention to detail, Marie has rendered an important service to me and to the people of Montana. As one of the few members of my staff older than I, she has also been a source of wisdom, stability, and common sense for all of us.

Over the years she has broken in—and sometimes played the role of mother to—many young staffers who grew and learned under her wing. With 6 children and 13 grandchildren, Marie knows more than a little bit about keeping young people in line.

I would like to say that Marie is from Montana. Yet she was born and raised in the Washington area. But, if Marie were from Montana, I suspect she would come from Butte. And that, in my mind, is about the highest compliment you can pay a person. Like the people of Butte, Marie is fiercely loyal, speaks her mind, works hard, and has a heart of gold. And, like so many of the people of Butte, Marie is Irish—adamantly Irish. So it seems appropriate to close this tribute with a blessing that so many of the Irish in Butte recite by heart:

May the road rise up to meet you
May the wind be always at your back
May the sun shine warm upon your face
May the rain fall soft upon your fields
And until we meet again
May God hold you in the palm of His hand.

Marie's retirement will be a major change for that extended family that is the Baucus office. But I know that she and her husband Dick are looking forward to spending more time with their friends and their family—especially the grandchildren. I wish them well.

SUPERFUND REFORM ACT

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, the Finance Committee has just completed markup of title 9 of the Superfund Reform Act. As a result, we are now in a position to reform Superfund this year.

The Superfund Program was created for all the right reasons, but the program is a mess. We've all seen examples back in our States. Local communities don't have a fair say in decisions. Cleanups are costly and slow. And Superfund generates huge, endless lawsuits that would make the lawyers in Charles Dickens' "Bleakhouse" blush with envy.

The Superfund Reform Act is designed to address these problems. The bill does several important things:

It makes it easier for States to run the Superfund Program, and involves the people who live in the neighborhood where a Superfund site is located.

It makes cleanups faster and cheaper. It reduces litigation, by reforming the liability system and establishing a settlement process for policyholders and insurance companies.

Overall, the bill will reduce cleanup costs, reduce the time that cleanups take, and reduce transaction costs by 50 percent. That is why the bill is supported by an extraordinary coalition of community groups, business groups, and environmental groups. Everyone from the Chemical Manufacturers Association, to the National Association of Counties, to the NFIB, to the Sierra Club.

Despite the broad support to reform Superfund, there are some who complain that we simply do not have enough time to act. I believe that, despite the nay-sayers, there is enough time to act.

And it is important that we act this year. If we delay, not only would we be squandering the best opportunity to reform Superfund in years—we also would be putting many businesses in jeopardy.

I received a letter from the National Federation of Independent Businesses, as did many of my colleagues. These small businesses—600,000 in all—may have best expressed how important it is to reform Superfund this year:

Small business owners * * * are facing liability today; they may be facing bankruptcy tomorrow.

I urge my colleagues to work together to pass the Superfund Reform Act this year.

Mr. President, I yield the floor and suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BROWN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is heard. The clerk will continue the call of the roll.

Mr. BROWN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to proceed and the quorum call be suspended for the purpose of going into morning business.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, reserving the right to object.

Mr. President, I withdraw my objection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the order for the quorum call is rescinded.

The Senator is recognized as in morning business.

HAITI

Mr. BROWN. Mr. President, it is my intention at the appropriate time to offer an amendment on the bill that is before the Senate which would involve a sense-of-the-Senate resolution with regard to the withdrawal of our forces from Haiti. Mr. President, I have wanted to offer an amendment dealing with Haiti for some time and at the request of the various members of the Appropriations Committee have held off on offering this to accommodate their concerns that, indeed, the consideration of those issues might delay some of those appropriations measures.

The reason I intend to proceed on this bill is, after discussion with a number of members of the Appropriations Committee, they have advised me that this amendment being offered on this particular bill would not unduly delay the appropriations process.

It had been my hope that the leadership amendment that was offered with regard to Haiti would have dealt with the withdrawal of our troops. It was a feeling of leadership that agreement could be reached only if this issue was held off. So I agreed at that time to hold off. But we should not go out of session without dealing with Haiti and without making our intentions clear as a body. There are some Members who believe that it makes sense to send our troops into Haiti to run that country and to do it without some termination date—but I am not one of them. I think it would be remiss of us to deal with the subject and not note that this Congress had expressed its feelings that before United States troops were sent to Haiti, before we invaded that country, that we at least have a vote of Congress to authorize that action.

Unfortunately, the President did not come to Congress to receive authorization to invade that country. And this Congress has not acted decisively on that issue. But out in front of us, I think, are some very important questions. Reasonable men and women will disagree whether or not it makes sense to invade Haiti. Reasonable men and women will disagree on whether it makes sense to try to occupy that country and run it. I believe it is a great mistake. And I believe it is a mistake that reflects upon mistakes of the past. This country surely learned in our experience in Vietnam that half-hearted commitments of military forces where we do not make our intentions clear can be mistakes. Surely this country learned from our experiences in Lebanon that sending United States troops in without a commitment to win and without a clear purpose can be disastrous.

No one needs to be reminded of the several hundred American marines who lost their lives because, incredibly, the guards at the gate did not have bullets for their guns. This country had subjected those marines to danger because they were afraid of the political ramifications, if the guards had bullets for their guns, if there was an accident.

How can anybody forget the tragedy in Somalia where, having received a request from the commander in the field for armored military vehicles as essential to perform their mission in Somalia, the Secretary of Defense refused to allow the commander in the field to have the equipment he said was needed for his operation. Resulting from that were the deaths of a number of American military personnel when their helicopter went down. They virtually ran out of bullets before they were killed by enemy forces. They would have had that ammunition if reinforcements had been able to get to them. And they held out for as long as they could, but eventually they ran out of ammunition. And the reason the reinforcements could not get to them—the reason reinforcements could not get to them was because we did not have armored personnel vehicles which could withstand the sniper fire. Attempts were made to get to those fighting men but, because the reinforcements went in open cars and were subjected to snipers, they could not get through. So the fact that the Secretary of Defense had refused to provide the vehicles requested by the commander on site, Americans lost their lives.

Using U.S. forces is something I believe should be done with great care. Not so many years ago, former Secretary of Defense Weinberger issued six points that he felt were essential before U.S. forces are committed to combat. I will not deal with all of them. But I think several are worth mentioning and worth focusing on.

Secretary Weinberger, first of all, indicated that before we send U.S. troops into a combat zone or into harm's way we ought to make sure that it is vital to our national interest; that it should not be a casual act. I do not believe the administration has spelled out why occupying Haiti is vital to our national interest.

Let me remind the Members that occupying Haiti is not an adventure that is unknown or unheard of or untried. The Haitians are very proud of the fact that they broke off the yoke of colonialism. The Haitians survived 19 years of United States occupation earlier in this century, from 1915 through 1934. It is quite clear from the reports of that occupation that, far from bringing democracy, a viable long-lived democracy to Haiti, that we failed. I do not believe the Weinberger guidelines have been met with regard to Haiti. To suggest it is vital to our national interest to occupy that island—I do not believe the case has been made for that.

Former Secretary Weinberger also spelled out that any time we use U.S. troops, the mission ought to be clearly defined. Have we clearly defined what the mission is in Haiti? We have put young men and women at risk of their very lives but we have not spelled out clearly what the mission is. I draw the attention of the membership to a couple of facts. Far from having clearly defined what the mission is, it appears that this country is in a state of vacillation. Originally, the President pointed out that the purpose of the mission was to restore democracy and not to engage in nation building—a clear commitment of the President—not to engage in nation building and to restore democracy.

But the reality is that we have taken over Haiti and we have changed the mission. From not providing police support we are now actively involved in providing police, with our military forces in Haiti. From a commitment that said no nation building, we are now actively involved in the distribution of food. We are actively involved in a wide range of governmental functions. We even have equipment that has been sent to Haiti that is capable and designed to build their roads. It appears that the commitments of the President—that is, to restore democracy and not be involved in nation building—have been violated and violated within a few days of when those commitments were made.

Some have called it mission creep, but the simple fact is we have committed our forces in a dangerous area without clearly defining the mission that they are to perform. Secretary Weinberger's guidelines, that were meant to protect us from that, have clearly been violated. Secretary Weinberger also spelled out that we should not commit military forces unless we have a clear commitment to win. It is a mistake we tragically made as a country in Vietnam. We never made our intentions clear and, as a consequence, almost 50,000 American lives were lost in South Vietnam without achieving victory and without ever a clear commitment from the United States—clear objectives, clear missions, clear commitment to win.

How many times do we have to learn the lesson? How many times must American men and women die before the leadership of this country understands the seriousness of committing U.S. troops to combat areas? Do the men and women who put on the uniform of this country not deserve a clear mission before their lives are put in danger? Do the men and women who put on the uniform of this country not at least deserve the political leaders to commit to win the combat that they are engaged in before we risk their lives?

Do not the American people have a right to demand before we put men and women in the field, that it be essential to our national interest? I believe they do.

One thing I do know; the judgment of this body may be that they want to have troops in Haiti. Without a clear mission. Without clear objectives. Without a commitment to win or achieve those objectives. And without seeing that our national interests—our vital national interest is involved. That is their discretion.

But this Member believes that we at least ought to go on record, and we at least ought to make clear when this mission is completed.

Almost every military adviser that has looked at these kind of adventures has advised that we ought to have some clear ending date. We ought to have some clear definition of when the commitment is over. When the battle is won. When we can bring our men and women home. It is why I offered an amendment that sets a date for withdrawal. It will be a sense-of-the-Senate resolution, but it will make clear to the executive and the American people a target date when they will bring them home.

Now the Senate has already acted to spell out to the President that we want them brought home as soon as possible. Yet, we have heard conflictive stories from the executive. Originally they would only be there until we have restored democracy. And then some said it would be a couple of months. Now lately we hear stories that it could be several years.

Before, Mr. President, before we make policy, before we make policy through neglect, we ought to make policy through planning. To send troops into another country and to occupy it, without at least spelling out clear objectives and clear goals and a time certain for the withdrawal, is folly.

Some will say, well, there are too many contingencies. There are too many unknowns. Mr. President, at least we ought to let the young men and women who go in harms way know that we insist that what they are there for be spelled out before we ask them to surrender their lives.

I, for one, think it is a mistake for us to have invaded and occupied that country at all. Others may think it was worthwhile. Perhaps we will never know a final judgment on whether that made sense.

But one thing I do know. To leave Americans there with no clear mission, and to leave Americans there with no departure date, is to invite disaster.

It will be my hope to have a record vote on a measure that sets a departure date.

Ultimately my hope is that this Nation learn from its mistakes in the past, not simply repeat them. That we not only honor those who gave their lives in Somalia, but that we make sure it does not happen again.

Americans understand that when we send troops into harms way that some can be killed. Some injured. And while that is tragic, we understand it may well involve the responsibilities of a greater power in this world. But what I believe is inexcusable, is to risk those lives without clearly spelling out a mission for them. Without clearly spelling out an objective. And without clearly making every effort possible to defend themselves and protect themselves and accomplish that objective.

Surely the U.S. Congress has that responsibility to those who wear the uniform of this Nation.

Mr. President, I yield the floor, and make a point of order that a quorum is not present.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mrs. MURRAY). Without objection, it is so ordered.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA APPROPRIATIONS ACT, 1995, DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA SUPPLEMENTAL APPROPRIATIONS AND RESCIS-SIONS ACT, 1994—CONFERENCE REPORT

The Senate continued with the consideration of the conference report.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Madam President, I desire to speak on the pending business before the Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has that right.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Madam President, I support the Gramm amendment. I am a cosponsor of the legislation that forms the basis for the amendment because I believe that if we are going to actually reduce crime, tough provisions like these are needed.

This amendment will strike the Local Partnership Act. The Local Partnership Act has nothing to do with fighting crime. It never had and it never will. The program was designed to be an economic stimulus. Now, it has been dressed up as an effort to prevent crime, but this is a hoax.

This money is for education, drug prevention, and jobs, all in the name of fighting crime. The vague language of this program provides no guidance on what this money can be spent for. We do not know exactly how the money will be used, but most likely we will pour money into the same old programs that have never worked.

In any other area of human endeavor, if something is tried and paid for, and does not work, and then more money is spent and it does not produce results, we try another approach. This Local Partnership Act rests on a different theory: Federal programs can only fail because the Government has just not spent enough to make them succeed. This makes no sense.

Vice President GORE's Reinventing Government report criticized the Government's redundant jobs programs. It concluded that there needs to be a better focus for these programs, and that they should be consolidated. I agree with the Vice President that Government needs to be reinvented.

And I see no reason why we should create additional jobs programs in a crime bill that would just increase the problems the Vice President discussed.

We need to set the right priorities for our crime bill. Social spending is exactly the wrong priority.

There is no evidence that any of the programs that will be cut by the Gramm amendment will reduce crime. Philosophically, the parties have a strong disagreement: Democrats believe that society is responsible for crime. Republicans believe that individuals lacking a sense of right and wrong commit crimes.

These individuals must be punished to keep us safer, and be held responsible, so as to discourage others from committing crimes.

We should also vote to eliminate the $625 million waste that is the Model Intensive Grant Program. Under this program, 15 cities that are hand-picked by the administration would receive the grants.

The cities have complete discretion on how to spend this money, and it may be spent on anything to reduce crime. Anything but punishment or law enforcement.

That is a lot of money to spend on 15 cities. And I am sure that Iowa will not receive its share of this money.

I do not see any good reason why Iowa, with the lowest unemployment rate in decades, should be punished from receiving its share of this money. The entities that would be aided by this money are already involved in preventing crime.

Of course, if these organizations are unable to prevent crime using the techniques they are using, there is no reason to think that merely increasing the amount of money they spend on these failed programs will cause them to succeed. We should focus on crime control, not poorly thought out boondoggles based on earlier failed efforts.

The Gramm amendment will cut the pork out of the crime bill. There is plenty of pork in the crime bill that we should eliminate, and the Family and Community Endeavor Schools Program is a good place to cut. This money is to be applied toward sports programs, cultural activities, arts and crafts, dance, and health services. The money can be spent on a wide variety of activities. About the only thing that the money cannot be spent on is religious instruction. That is expressly in the language. So, in other words, the money can be spent to give children condoms, but not to teach them the Ten Commandments. Teaching morality and personal responsibility is real crime prevention. The Family and Community Endeavor Schools Program has nothing to do with crime.

Do not just take my word for it. Look at the legislation the President signed. At least the Local Partnership Act had the fig leaf of saying that it was education to prevent crime. But this section does not even mention the word "crime."

It has nothing whatsoever to do with crime by its own admission. This is pork barrel social spending plain and simple. And it has no place being on a crime bill. On the merits, even its sponsors admit that.

The pork in the crime legislation is not limited to the $7 billion in here that is expressly labeled as prevention pork. We were told how tough this law supposedly is. We were told how so much of the bill is really for law enforcement, especially prisons.

We should take a close look at the prison money.

What a close look shows is that the prison money is mostly pork, too. The language governing the prison money will not ensure that any money at all will be spent on prisons. The bill permits the money to be spent entirely on alternatives to prison. The grants can be used for boot camps, halfway houses, or alternative facilities to free up prison space.

I believe that people think that the prison money in this law is designed to incarcerate new prisoners. But it will merely make more existing prison space available.

It is bad enough that the law does not require that money be used for prisons. Worse, the prison language requires that as a condition of receiving money, States enact further social spending. The States must include drug diversion programs, community corrections programs, prisoner rehabilitation, and jobs skills programs. This is social spending, not prison spending.

Additionally, there is no truth in the truth-in-sentencing language. Under truth-in-sentencing, a criminal serves the length of time to which he is sentenced. This has been accomplished in the Federal system, and the Senate bill was designed to provide incentives for States to do the same.

Today, States make their prisoners serve only about 40 percent of the time for which they are sentenced.

The bill the President signed cut back substantially on the truth-in-sentencing portion of the Senate crime bill. The incentives for States to abolish parole now only take effect for imprisonment of second-time violent offenders. And while the bill supposedly makes a 50-50 split in prison grants between general grants and truth-in-sentencing grants, this is not the case. The law contains a reverter clause. Money not used for truth-in-sentencing will be shifted to the general grants. Obviously, if States know they can get the prison money even if they do not enact truth-in-sentencing, then the incentive we created to create truth-in-sentencing will disappear. The Gramm amendment substitutes tough language to override these misguided approaches that the American people know will not make anyone safer.

We also need to be tough by restoring tough Senate crime provisions that were knocked out in conference. We should include mandatory minimum sentences for those who sell illegal drugs to minors or who use minors in drug trafficking activities. A person over 21 who distributed drugs to a minor would face a 10-year mandatory minimum sentence. A second offense would mean life imprisonment.

This amendment would also restore Senate language imposing mandatory minimum sentences for carrying firearms during commission of a crime of violence or drug trafficking crime.

For a first offense, the mandatory minimum is 10 years, 20 years if the firearm is discharged. Second offenses carry mandatory 20-year, 30-year, and life sentences.

These sentences are sorely needed. Drug use is a leading factor in crime. Surveys of inmates show that 50 percent committed their crime while under the influence of illegal drugs or alcohol. Strict penalties are necessary to punish those who distribute these drugs, particularly when the buyer is a juvenile.

Young people are especially vulnerable to drug use. We need to enact tough penalties to prevent drug dealers from hooking young people into a life of addiction, crime, despair, and possibly death.

This mandatory minimum, which this body has already adopted once, will serve to prevent drug dealers from taking advantage of young people, and the threat of life imprisonment for subsequent offenses will make all drug dealers take notice.

Too often, persons have sought to avoid tough drug penalties by employing minors to do the dirty work for them. Mandatory minimum sentences are appropriate for those who seek to avoid punishment by putting children in harm's way.

To me, there is no close question: The interests of our children are far more important than the interests of those who profit from involving them in a life of crime.

The crime legislation that recently became law will not accomplish nearly enough to address the overriding public concern about crime. The Gramm amendment will cut the wasteful social spending contained in that bill, and it will make sure that tough penalties are enacted. I strongly support its adoption.

I yield the floor and suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. COHEN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. WELLSTONE). Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. COHEN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the pending amendment be laid aside.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Without objection, it is so ordered.

AMENDMENT IN DISAGREEMENT TO THE SENATE
AMENDMENT NUMBERED 6

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the next amendment in disagreement.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 6 to the aforesaid bill, and concur therein with an amendment as follows:

In lieu of the matter proposed by said amendment, insert: "Provided, That the District of Columbia shall provide to the Committees on Appropriations of the House of Representatives and the Senate quarterly reports by the 15th day of the month following the end of the quarter showing how monies provided under this fund are expended with a final report providing a full accounting of the fund due October 15, 1995 or not later than 15 days after the last amount remaining in the fund is disbursed."

AMENDMENT NO. 2594 TO AMENDMENT IN DISAGREEMENT TO THE SENATE AMENDMENT NUMBERED 6

(Purpose: To provide for enhanced penalties for health care fraud)

Mr. COHEN. Mr. President, I now send to the desk an amendment and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Maine [Mr. COHEN] proposes an amendment numbered 2594 to the amendment of the House to the amendment of the Senate numbered 6.

Mr. COHEN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection it is so ordered.

Mr. COHEN. Mr. President, yesterday, during the Senate's consideration of the Labor, HHS, and Education appropriations bill, I offered an amendment to crack down on fraud that is rampant throughout our health care system. And while I believe that the amendment that I offered yesterday and have now reoffered today enjoys broad bipartisan support, I agreed with the managers of the bill to withdraw that amendment in order to allow for the expeditious acceptance of the conference report on Labor and HHS yesterday by the House.

I am now back on the floor, Mr. President, with the same amendment, because I believe we cannot afford to delay any longer the risks to our health care system by the fraud that is being perpetrated against it.

I know that there are pundits and politicians who are still arguing about who killed health care reform for this year. But one thing is certain. We should not wait a single minute longer to crack down on health care fraud.

There is strong agreement between Republicans and Democrats on the need to address this issue that is costing taxpayers dearly, is driving up the cost of the entire health care system for all of us.

As I told my colleagues on the floor yesterday, a year-long investigation of health care fraud and abuse that was conducted by my staff on the Senate Special Committee on Aging found that health care fraud and abuse is rampant throughout the Federal, State, and private health care programs. Losses to health care fraud and abuse over the past 5 years are almost four times the total cost to date of the entire savings and loan crisis.

What is perhaps most shocking is how easy, how shockingly easy, it is to defraud both the Federal programs, Medicare and Medicaid, and private insurers; that all of us are leaving wide open the doors to abuse, inviting scam artists to rip off the system.

According to the General Accounting Office—the GAO—and the FBI, as much as 10 percent of the entire health care budget is being lost to fraud and abuse each year. That amounts to roughly $100 billion a year. If we start calculating out the numbers it means we are losing $275 million a day; $11.5 million an hour in health care dollars lost to fraud and abuse. While I must say the overwhelming majority of health care providers are honest individuals, the vulnerabilities to fraud exist throughout the entire health care system, and defrauding the system itself has become a routine way of doing business for many of the unscrupulous providers.

There are major patterns of abuse that plague the system and they are in the form of overbilling or billing for services not rendered; unbundling—for example you take a wheelchair and you unbundle the components by billing separately for the tires, the spokes as such, the seat, the arm rests, the back. And you suddenly build up the entire cost for that one wheelchair—unbundling is a very common practice for many, many devices sold to the Federal Government and private insurers; and upcoding services to receive higher reimbursements. In other words, if you have a product which you furnish, you simply upcode it to get a much higher level of reimbursement from the insurer or the Federal Government; or even providing inferior products to patients. There are other widespread scams involving the payment of kickbacks and inducements for referrals of patients, falsifying claims and medical records or fraudulently certifying an individual for Government benefits, billing for ghost patients, and even paying drug addicts or other patients to have their blood drawn or have unnecessary medical tests performed so the fraudulent doctor or clinic can be reimbursed by Medicaid or private health care insurance.

So, our health care system is filled with abuse and Medicare/Medicaid and private insurers are simply ill-equipped and understaffed to deal adequately with the extent of this health care fraud. The formula for fraud is a very familiar one. There are too few investigators and overseers, a complex and unwieldy and burdensome system that is easily manipulated, there are big dollars at stake, and a very small chance that these unscrupulous providers, the professional patients, and the other scam artists are going to be caught.

To give an example, there are more than 4 billion claims that are processed annually. The two major law enforcement agencies with primary jurisdictions over health care fraud, the FBI and the Health and Human Services IG, however, have combined just under 450 full-time positions devoted to investigating health care fraud. That translates to one full-time investigator for every 8 million claims.

Think about that. One full-time investigator to oversee, investigate 8 million claims. The effect is that Federal, State, and private health plans are sorely outnumbered when it comes to detecting and protecting against fraudulent practices. I would like to share just a few examples of fraud against the health care system.

Two durable medical equipment owners stole $1.4 million from the New York Medicaid Program by repeated billing for expensive orthotic back supports that were never prescribed by the physicians. The supplies were rarely delivered. An aggressive telemarketing campaign that offered inducements was a part of this scheme in order to obtain beneficiary Medicaid numbers.

A durable medical equipment company billed Medicaid for expensive incontinence liners when in fact it was providing only simple disposable wash cloths. Another example of upcoding. The company misrepresented the products in order to receive that higher reimbursement. The owner of a rehabilitation service operated a scheme to defraud Medicare by providing false claims for speech therapy provided to patients at nursing homes. The employees of the service were accused of falsifying billing, including certification by doctors that patients needed continuous speech therapy and they also falsified the patients' medical records.

A physician used fake diagnoses to justify billings for treatments never provided to patients. The billing practices included billing for treatment of appendicitis in a patient who previously had his appendix removed; billing for office visits that never took place; and billing for laboratory tests that were never performed.

These are just a very few samples, just the tip of a very large iceberg that is lurking below the surface. It is freezing out millions of Americans from affordable health care coverage.

There are many other examples that I could provide. They are all documented in this report that I filed on July 7, 1994. It is called "Gaming the Health Care System." From pages 12, 13—on through—we have given more examples of the kinds of abuse. I talked about them yesterday. I talked about the pad, the transparent dressing. I have a chart that I can perhaps demonstrate that transparent dressing with, but it is a waterproof transparent dressing. Basically it is a waterproof pad. There was an elderly lady who fell down in a boarding home in Maine. A local supplier found out that she had injured herself. She had received a cut of less than an inch long in her forearm. It did not require the services of a doctor.

That local supplier sent up these pads, waterproof pads. There is an example of it here. They are worth about $2.50—that is the cost. She received and used 14 of these. The supplier continued to send them, over 50 of them, to her. In addition to the pads he sent up gels and other volumes of these pads.

Do you know what the bill was? Mr. President, at $2.50, I think she used 14—let us say at a maximum $40. The bill came close to $3,800 for this one-inch cut that required no doctor's services.

I mentioned these orthotic body jackets: A piece of plastic that is wrapped around patients who have some spinal surgery. I think they cost somewhere between $30 or $40 to manufacture. You could probably acquire them from a catalog for a little more than that price. Yet they were billed at $550 or $560 apiece.

I also mentioned yesterday the most glaring example of the prosthesis. It looked like it was taken off one of the dummies in a department store window—just a piece of plastic—a piece of plastic. It was supposed to be from the knee down, to cover people who had lost their leg in an accident or through disease. What was fascinating about this one prosthesis is that it had a right calf on a left foot—a right calf and a left foot. The supplier of that particular device billed you and me and all the American taxpayers $8,800. HCFA then said it could not possibly be worth that much money—how about $1,400 as a reasonable price for that?

As I said yesterday, it was not worth 14 cents. It was completely useless to anyone. But this is what is going on day after day after day, to the tune of $11.5 million an hour; $275 million a day; or $100 billion a year.

I mentioned, again yesterday, that I offered an amendment to the crime bill dealing with criminal activity, title 18. It was agreed to without even a vote because I think it enjoys broad support in this Chamber. It was dropped in the House of Representatives because the House said: No, no, we cannot possibly take this up on a crime bill even though we are trying to combat crime in this legislation because it really belongs on a health care bill, health care reform. So let us strip it out of the crime bill and wait until we get health care reform.

Of course, here we stand at the end of September and we have no health care reform bill, not for this year. It will be months before we ever agree—here, then in the other body, then with the President. We are looking at months of debate and negotiation before we finally have health care reform that is a reality for the Nation.

So we are told it does not belong here—right church, wrong pew. It is crime but not on the crime bill, wait until we get on health care reform. So I wanted to get to health care reform and we have no health care bill. Now I am told do not put it on anything coming from appropriations, wait until next year. Just wait another year, wait until we lose another—by the way, we have lost about $85 billion since I offered the amendment to the crime bill and we passed the crime bill in the Senate and it was stripped out in the House. So we have lost roughly $85 billion to date. By the end of the year it will also total up to $100 billion. And we are told once again, let us just wait a few more months. We will be back at it again in January.

Of course, we all know we do not come in until the end of January. We go out almost immediately for the Lincoln Day recess. We come back in the latter part of February and we do not begin serious debate on legislation—we have to go through the committees once again with hearings after hearings and joint referrals to other committees, sequential referrals. We finally may get a bill to the floor and then we have to go through the same process in the House, then we have a conference, we come back and maybe by this time next year we will finally have a health care bill and we will say we finally dealt with health care fraud.

I do not think we can wait that long. I do not think it is fair to the American people. I think they are justifiably outraged when they look to us and say: We have a problem; you have identified the problem. Frankly, the President agrees. This legislation was in the President's health care bill. This amendment was in Senator MITCHELL's bill. This amendment was in Senator DOLE's bill. This amendment was in the so-called mainstream coalition group. Everybody agrees; everybody agrees we have a major problem. This will help fix the problem.

But because of procedural requirements we cannot take any action. Because those in the House say, "It does not belong on a crime bill, let us put it on health care." We do not put it on health care, we have no health care bill. We cannot put it on Health and Human Services appropriations because, after all, that will clutter up the legislation. It will have to go back to the House. So let us just wait until next year.

The amendment I am offering today will:

Give prosecutors stronger tools and tougher statutes to combat criminal health care fraud. It would, for example, provide a specific health care offense in title 18 so that prosecutors are not forced to prosecute under the mail and wire fraud statutes;

Allow injunctive relief and forfeiture for criminal health care fraud; allow health care plans and the Government to kick the bad apples out of the system entirely through authority to exclude violators from Medicare and other health care programs; create tougher civil penalties and remedies for fraud and abuse;

Coordinate enforcement programs and beef up investigative resources, which are now woefully inadequate.

The amendment does this by financing additional health care fraud enforcement resources with proceeds derived from forfeiture, fines, and other health care fraud enforcement efforts.

This amendment also gives guidance to health care providers and industries on how to comply with fraud rules, so that they will know what is and what is not prohibited activity.

There is broad agreement on both sides of the aisle on the changes proposed by this amendment in order to stop fraudulent providers from bleeding billions of dollars from our health care system.

The provisions of this amendment, for example, were included in legislation I first introduced last year. They are also included in the so-called mainstream coalition health care reform bill and very similar provisions are included in Senator DOLE's health care reform bill and Senator MITCHELL's reform plan. Many of these provisions are also included in the administration's health care reform package.

Many of the proposals I am offering in this amendment are based on recommendations of a Health Care Fraud Task Force convened by the Bush administration, and have been endorsed by the current administration, numerous law enforcement agencies, and many health care provider groups.

In addition, as the distinguished chairman of the Judiciary Committee, Senator BIDEN, indicated on the floor yesterday, some of the provisions included in this amendment were passed as part of the Senate crime bill. Unfortunately, those amendments were dropped in conference by the House because House conferees argued that we should wait until health care reform to deal with this problem.

They are back here now in this amendment.

Federal and State law enforcement is making some progress in cracking down on health care fraud, but the current enforcement scheme has resulted in a system whereby the mouse has outsmarted the mousetrap. Those defrauding the system are ingenious and motivated, while the Government and private sector responses cannot keep pace with the sophistication and cunning of those they pursue.

I expect this amendment is going to be opposed by those who argue we have to wait until next year once again because this is really outside the scope of the pending bill. I must agree. D.C. appropriations—this is not where this legislation belongs. But I have run out of opportunities. I have nowhere else to bring this up. I tried on crime. I wanted it on health care. I wanted it on Health and Human Services and Education appropriations. Everywhere I turned they say, "Not here." You all agree, the President agrees, Senator MITCHELL agrees, Senator DOLE agrees, everybody on both sides of the aisle—we all agree, but we cannot attach it here.

So, it is a point of frustration with me. There is anger out there amongst the American people. They say why are you not doing something? I stand up here on the floor and say, "Here is something. Here is something that is noncontroversial." Everybody agrees: Justice agrees, the FBI agrees, Senator BIDEN agrees, everybody agrees, but we cannot pass it.

So we have to watch another $100 billion being lost to these people who are simply bleeding us dry. If you had to call them—I was thinking of even a book entitled "Fast Bucks." Boy, are people out there making fast bucks at our expense. Millions, billions of dollars that they are scamming, and we sit idly by waiting for the right procedural mechanism to come along so that we can do something about it.

Mr. President, if I had my choice, I would not be offering it on the D.C. appropriations bill. I think D.C. appropriations is as important as any of the other appropriations bills. I thought it was more germane to the Health and Human Services appropriation. I thought it was more germane to the crime bill. Obviously it is germane to health care reform. But none of those are available. None are available. So this is a last resort.

We are going out presumably next week or the week thereafter. I have heard rumblings about a lameduck session—which I think would be a mistake—but nonetheless, we do not have any more vehicles. We do not have another chance this session to pass legislation that will, hopefully, stem the tide. It cannot stop it altogether. But we can stem the tide of this kind of blatant, fraudulent activity, that is destroying our health care system in the sense that it is robbing people who need health care coverage, who cannot get it and we cannot afford to provide it.

How many more "60 Minutes," "Prime Time Live," or other types of expose shows are we going to have to watch, where they reveal how easy it is to rip off the health care system and have taxpayers just simply sit by and watch Congress fiddle up here while nothing gets done?

How much longer can some health care providers' groups delay in cracking down on health care fraud by this jurisdictional shell game? Do not put health care fraud in the crime bill, it is a health care issue. Do not address health care fraud until you pass health care reform. Do not fix the enforcement holes in the current system now, just wait until next year. And do not put these fraud measures on the appropriations bills.

Mr. President, I think we have got to stop hiding behind these jurisdictional arguments that justify doing nothing now. The only ones that benefit from this delay on this important issue are the ones that bilk billions of dollars from the system.

The very big losers will be the American taxpayers, the patients, the families who cannot afford health care coverage, because premiums and health care costs are being padded to cover the exorbitant costs of fraud and abuse.

So Mr. President, I hope that my colleagues who have had an opportunity to look at the legislation will agree that it is worthwhile and worthy of their support. I hope in time that we have a chance to vote on it and to vote in favor of it now.

I would now yield the floor, and I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BUMPERS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. CONRAD). Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BUMPERS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that I be permitted to proceed for up to 15 minutes as if in morning business, and that the pending business be set aside and immediately taken back up at the conclusion of my remarks.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

THE MOOD OF THE COUNTRY

Mr. BUMPERS. Mr. President, I have made a few speeches in the last 60 days dealing with the mood of the country—which, incidentally, I do not fully understand. And I do not think I am alone. I do not think there are very many people in the U.S. Congress that really quite understand what has precipitated the mood of the country, which is admittedly hostile; a good portion of it directed at the U.S. Congress and certainly toward the President.

It is a unique and unprecedented thing in this country for the electorate to be in such a hostile mood while at the same time the economy is perking along at a clip of about 3.5 to 3.8 percent; inflation as low as it ever gets; interest rates within a reasonable range, low enough not to impede business development; people are working and the jobless rate is down about 1.7 percent from where it was the day President Clinton was inaugurated.

And the best news of all, the deficit is going down more dramatically than ever before in the history of the country. The deficit, as a percentage of our GNP, is approximately half what it was when President Clinton was sworn in.

It has been a short 14 years since Ronald Reagan was elected President almost solely on the promise that he would balance the budget. And, without recounting the details of that promise and the terrible results of that 12-year period, we all know what they were.

Yet yesterday, on the steps of the U.S. Capitol, at what I would call the Snake Oil Convention, the same proposals that President Reagan ran on in 1980 were thrown out again to the American people like a lure on the end of a fishing line, waiting for the American people to bite on it in November's elections—something in the program for every person in America, particularly those who are mad.

Three hundred Republican incumbent House Members and challengers promised to reinstate the dream IRA savings account. IRA's are very popular in this country. An awful lot of people have them. And the Republicans are going to take the cap off of the $50,000 earnings limit for IRA's and say any and everybody can have them. So we know who is going to be able to establish IRA's under that plan yesterday by Mr. GINGRICH and the Republican incumbents and challengers. It will go to the top 20 percent of the wage earners in the country. And the cost 5 years from now will be $8 billion per year.

Then they are going to provide a $500 tax credit for every child. That has some merit at the lower income levels, though it does nothing for people who make under $16,000 a year, no matter how many children they have because they are not in a taxable category. It does nothing for them. And it gives twice the amount of tax cut to a couple making $180,000 as it does a couple making $40,000. And I suspect that one of the ways they are going to try to pay for this is to either cut or do away with the earned income tax credit which actually did give lower middle-income and poor people in this country a substantial tax break.

So while I champion the idea of a middle-class income tax cut—and you can do it with increasing the tax credits for children; that is one way of doing it—it still has to be paid for. I have no idea what the cost of that is.

They want to cut the corporate tax, even though corporate profits are at an all time high.

There is just a goody in there for everybody. And it is estimated that it will cost, I guess, over the next 5 years, $388 billion.

And then you get down to the really interesting part of the proposal, and that is: How are you going to pay for it?

People in the country that are paying attention ought to be euphoric about the conditions of the economy but especially about this dramatic reduction in the deficit.

Let me just digress a moment to say, virtually everybody on this side of the aisle voted for the budget reconciliation bill last year which raised taxes $250 billion and cut spending $250 billion and was calculated to reduce the deficit by $500 billion over a 5-year period—not balance the budget, but cut it $500 billion below what it otherwise would be. And now that figure is up to about $670 billion in deficit reduction. It was a very courageous vote by the 50 people on this side of the aisle who voted for it.

You know, the people send mixed signals to Members of Congress. They say, on the one hand, "Why don't you people stiffen your spine and make the tough votes? Why don't you vote courageously for a change?"

But, Mr. President, do you know what a tough, courageous vote is? It is, by definition, an unpopular vote. And so when you cast that unpopular vote, as we did last summer to raise taxes on the richest 1.2 percent of the people in this country in an effort to do something about the deficit, because they are the ones who can best afford it, when you do that and you go home, there is not a dirt farmer in Arkansas that did not think we had raised his taxes. It took a lot of tall explaining because it was an unpopular vote.

But, Mr. President, you cannot deal with a $4 trillion debt by making everybody happy. The happy talk that we got in 1980 cost us $3 trillion in 12 years. What a siren song we got in 1980—increase defense spending, cut taxes, and balance the budget. And that is the same siren song you heard yesterday afternoon on the steps of the U.S. Capitol, the same snake oil. We tried that $3 trillion ago.

But back to the courageous vote. When you cast that courageous vote, then you go home and your constituents say, "You clowns don't care what I think. You just vote the way you want to." It is an ambivalent signal.

So where is all of this money going to come from to keep the deficit from soaring again?

Well, I will tell you. They say they are going to use the $124 billion, I guess, that we were going to get under President Clinton's health care reform for Medicare $114 billion from Medicaid. That is all well and good. The problem is, we did not get the Clinton health care bill. If you want to cut Medicare by that amount and Medicaid by that amount, that is just fine, but be prepared for an outcry.

And if you want to do welfare reform, which they refer to in quotes, "welfare reform," and pick up $100 billion, tell the States, tell my Governor and your Governor who are on us constantly about mandating programs that they have to pay for. We mandate it. They have to figure out how to pay for it.

You tell them where they are going to find the money to provide health care for the poorest of the poor in their State under Medicaid when we cut $114 billion. You tell them what they are going to do for the poor people when we cut food stamps and Aid for Families with Dependent Children by $50 billion.

We have a bill that we are going to consider before we leave here to provide some relief to the States from the kind of mandates they have been squawking about.

When I was Governor of my State, we were forever and eternally requiring the cities of my State to raise the salaries of firemen. I came from a town so small we did not have a fire department, so that was all a mystery to me. But we were always raising the salaries of firemen, because it was popular with the firemen, but we did not send them any money. And the mayors would converge on my office and say, "Look, you're requiring us to raise the salaries of our people by cutting their work week. We don't have the money."

All I could do was stand there with a blank face.

And that is what Congress is doing to the States and that is what has Governors absolutely livid.

So to those people who stood on the steps yesterday afternoon, I invite you to tell the Governors of this Nation where they are going to find the money to make up for this $388 billion that you are going to cut to pay for all these wonderful tax cuts for the well-to-do.

Well, if you ask for a more specific, definitive method of cutting spending, they have the best answer I have ever heard. "How are we going to cut $388 billion?"

"Why, we are going to amend the Constitution of the United States to say that Congress has to provide for a balanced budget."

"Ain't" that beautiful—just write a little provision into the Constitution saying, "Ye shall have a balanced budget."

I have never voted for a constitutional amendment to balance the budget in my life. But if that is all there were to it, I would be for it. If all I had to do was stand on the floor and say I know that some mysterious thing was going to happen to balance the budget, count me in. Unhappily, you have to be a big snake oil buyer to believe that.

Well, they said we are also going to add the line-item veto which transfers more and more power to the President of the United States and away from the legislative branch.

I do not feel nearly as strongly, and I do not oppose the line-item veto nearly to the extent I do the balanced budget amendment, but neither one of them will balance the budget.

What will balance the budget is a majority—strike that—60 U.S. Senators standing on their hind legs, and saying, "I care about the future of the country. I deplore the lack of hope and the lack of faith that exists across this great land."

I have said this before, and it is not smart for a politician to say it, but I am going to say it anyway. If I had a goal of being carried out of the U.S.

Senate in a pine box, I know exactly how to vote. I would do like a lot of people do. I would get out of bed in the morning. I would walk out on my front porch and decide which way the wind was blowing and what the overnight polls showed, and that is the way I would vote.

But sometimes that can be very, very, wrong; not only sometimes, but often is wrong.

I do not believe the people elected a single Member of the U.S. Senate to simply do what is popular at any given moment.

It was irresistible in 1980. The people found it irresistible to believe that you could actually increase defense spending—yea, double it—and cut taxes and balance the budget.

One old farmer in Arkansas said, "What a dynamite idea, I wonder why nobody ever thought about that before." We now know why we have a $4 trillion debt to show for it. Let the same people who stood on the steps yesterday take a poll among their number—see how many of them are willing to vote against the space station. Ask them how many of them are willing to torpedo Milstar, a worthless communications system down at the Defense Department that costs billions and billions of dollars. How many of them would be willing to cut back on D-5 missile purchases, which costs billions. And I guarantee you most of the people who stood on those steps yesterday support another 20 B-2 bombers, more aircraft carriers, more everything. Because they are scared to death if they do not when they go home their opponent is going to say they are soft on defense.

And what is this group out on the Capitol steps going to do about those mandates we are going to be imposing on the States? They take care of that, too. They are going to pay the States for all the mandates. We are going to cut welfare, AFDC, food stamps, all of those programs and dump it back on the States—but tell them we will reimburse them for it. Where is the savings? Of course it is popular with the Governors of the States to say we are going to fund all these mandates. It is popular with the people of this country to say you are going to cut welfare by $50 billion.

If you want to get a big standing ovation at the banquet, just tell them that. There are 100 people here who are pretty savvy. They know what the applause lines are. They know how to play a crowd. Tell them you can have it all. There is no tomorrow.

One of the Congressmen who stood on the steps yesterday afternoon said, "If we do not do what we say the people ought to throw us out."

I would change that and say, "If you do what you say the people will surely throw you out." But the deficit will be up another $2 trillion when they get around to it.

Then they call for a balanced budget by the year 2003. We are not only going to balance the budget in 2003 by cutting Medicare and Medicaid and unspecified welfare reform and other unspecified cuts, we are going to do it through economic growth. Does that sound familiar? That was always the answer in 1980.

How are you going to cut taxes, raise defense spending and balance the budget?

When you cut people's taxes there is going to be so much economic activity and they are going to pay so much in income tax the whole thing will just balance out.

I think maybe we are getting ready to get back on the bill and I do not want to take up more time, but I just want to issue this admonition. It sounds a bit preachy, but so be it. If the American people should, by some stretch of the imagination, buy into what I saw in the paper this morning and what I have seen from the Budget Committee about that proposal, they are saying "We do not really care how big the deficit is."

I can remember when they did. It is a strange anomaly, is it not? That for years the catalyzing political issue in this country was the deficit. And last year the deficit was down about $50 billion. And this year it is going to be down almost $100 billion less than it was projected to be 18 months ago. And back to the people who voted that courageous vote last summer, I have told those who are up for reelection this year—and every one of them is getting hammered by his opponents about it—I would not wait for my opponent to bring it up. I would bring it up first. I would say to my constituents: You want responsible Government? You want fiscal responsibility? You want your children and grandchildren to grow up in a Nation that is fiscally responsible and can educate its children and feed its poor and provide for a strong military? We are doing every bit of it right now and reducing the deficit at the same time.

Why are people not dancing in the streets? I do not know. So I close where I started by saying the mood of the people of the country is unfathomable to me. I know where a lot of it started: Term limits. It is an expression of the people's frustration about gridlock here in the U.S. Senate. It is a frustration about scandals from time to time. It is a frustration about the fact that real personal income is 20 percent less today than it was in 1970. It is because they don't believe their children will have as good a life as they have had.

My parents told me they wanted a better life for me than they had when they were growing up. When I was a child during the Depression, of course, that was easy. It was almost impossible not to have a better life than we had when we were children. But my father told me so many times: "Son, I want all of you children to have every opportunity for a good education because I want you to have a better life than I've had."

He and my mother had worked hard, tilled the soil, taught school, ran a business, scraped up enough money so that together with the GI bill all three of us could get a good education.

Today parents cannot look at their children and honestly say you are going to have a better life than I had. An awful lot of children and young adults have lost faith in the future of this Nation, and there is not a Member of the U.S. Senate who does not know what to do about that. It is a question of whether we have the moral courage, the political stamina, and the intellectual honesty to do what it takes to say: Yes, things are going to be better for your children and here is why.

All over the world people are scratching and clawing, incidentally, to get to this country with all its flaws. We are still the oldest democracy on Earth. It is not working too well right now, but we still have it. We have that magnificent Constitution. We have these great institutions called the Supreme Court, the Department of Justice—which is not always fair but at least you get a shot at a fair trial by a jury of your peers. Those institutions and others are all in place and people all over the world are scratching and clawing to get to the shores of this Nation. And we are trashing the system as never before. What a paradox.

I made a graduation speech about 3 weeks ago and I made these points, that those clowns in Congress that you hear talked about in coffee shops all across America—this is the good part of the speech because it is complimentary of Congress—those clowns in Washington, for all of their foibles and their failures and their lack of courage, have provided this Nation with 205 years of uninterrupted, unfettered freedom. No other nation on Earth can even come close to that claim. So why are people not dancing in the streets?

One of the reasons is Rush Limbaugh does not think that. He does not think people have any reason to dance in the streets. There must be 500 little Rush Limbaughs across the country who believe that everything is wrong every day.

Jefferson said one time, "The price of freedom is eternal vigilance." That means different things to different people. But we have it and I do not want to lose it. I do not want to lose our economic freedoms. I do not want to lose our political freedoms. I want to see our culture mean something. I want us to spend money on educating our children and providing health care for our people. I want more people to appreciate the Constitution of the United States and their right and privilege to vote.

I took my family to the Eastern Shore the weekend after Labor Day. I could not afford to rent any of that property on Labor Day weekend, I had to wait until the weekend after Labor Day, but it was not nearly as crowded and a lot more pleasant. I have three great children—all married to in-laws that we love, believe it or not—and two wonderful grandchildren. We spent 4 days at the beach, and on the way home Betty and I were returning home through two States; I will not mention which ones. I stopped to get gas and this fellow was pumping gas into my car. I said, "How is the Senate race going over here?"

He said, "You asking me?"

"Yeah."

"I ain't never voted in my life and ain't never going to."

"Really?"

"No, it don't make no difference. Just like that place right over there."

"What place right over there?"

"That place over there where they are supposed to take in old folks. Half of them over there are 35 and under."

"You don't want to vote to change that if that is true?"

"No, it wouldn't make no difference."

I did not really want to pursue this conversation with this gentlemen any further. But I did tell him, I said, "You know, every time we have an election and you do not vote you are voting against the system that has provided you with all these freedoms."

I am getting off the beaten path. I just want to say the price of freedom really is eternal vigilance. And it also requires a few courageous votes from time to time around here. If you look at civilization, and read Barbara Tuchman's book "The March of Folly," and see what has happened to civilizations that ignore a lot of voices crying in the wilderness it has often been fatal. Do not do that. Even Yamamoto said: "Do not bomb Pearl Harbor. You people do not know anything about the United States. You will not win that war."

The warlords ran over him like a Mack truck. He could not stop them.

Even the Trojan horse, when the Greeks put the Trojan horse outside Troy's bastille, the debate was, "Should we let that horse in here?" One man spoke up and said, "That is a Greek trick. Don't do it." It's a long story, but they let the Trojan horse in, and the rest is history.

In World War I, a couple of German U-boat commanders said "You are depending on us to sink all that Allied shipping and we cannot do it."

You ought to read that book, "March of Folly," by Barbara Tuchman. She just died a couple years ago. She was a magnificent historian. And throughout the book, cool, collected intelligent voices said: "Don't do that. Politically it is wonderful, but in effect it is going to be disastrous."

So, I worry about what happened on the Capitol steps yesterday but I cannot imagine people's memories being so short that they would buy into Voodoo Economics II after we tried it 12 years ago—14 years ago, now—at a terrible, staggering cost to all of us.

I yield the floor, Mr. President, and suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA APPROPRIATIONS ACT, 1995, DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA SUPPLEMENTAL APPROPRIATIONS AND RESCIS-SIONS ACT, 1994

The Senate continued with the consideration of the amendments in disagreement to the conference report.

Mr. BURNS addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Montana.

Mr. BURNS. I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection.

Mr. BURNS. Mr. President, I want to associate myself with the remarks of my friend from Maine, Senator COHEN, and I want to commend him for his work on the Select Committee on Aging, of which I serve on that committee, and the work that he and his staff has done with regard to the fraud in the Medicare and Medicaid system. We have seen many examples of where fraud has taken place in that program, and, yes, even where our elderly have been taken advantage of by just plain old down-to-earth shysters.

We also heard a lot of testimony to that effect. If you couple with the figures—and there is no reason to believe that the figures that the Senator has shown us here today with regard to fraud in that system, and what it costs us—if you couple that with what we know as to be defensive medicine in our health care system, then we are talking about at least a 25- to 35-percent savings in our Medicare system. And you know right now we have probably taken some moneys out of the Medicare system to provide moneys to other programs. The President's tax plan did call for that.

And what essentially we did, every time we rolled back and put caps on services, fee for services, then we find ourselves in this business of—especially among the elderly—of selecting who is going to receive the services in health care.

We all hate to say it, but rationing does take place whenever we lower the caps down to below the cost of providing the service with our health care system.

So I want to commend my friend, the ranking member on the Select Committee on Aging, and the work that he has done.

And I would hope that the Members of this body, and the other body, would take a look and see what he is trying to do, what we are trying to do when we talk about fraud in a system.

When I was home on this last trip I was talking to the physical therapists of Montana, and they are bringing up some bad things that are happening in their industry or their part of the health care system. Whether it be through licensing and certifying those people who are equipped to do the work.

I congratulate my friend from Maine, and the work he has done, and I would hope that this body and the other body would take very seriously what we are trying to do with this amendment as this bill moves forward.

Mr. SASSER. Mr. President, I rise in support of an amendment offered by my colleague from Maine, Mr. COHEN, that would help the Government detect health care fraud while discouraging fraudulent practices by health providers.

For years I have held hearings and introduced legislation in an effort to reduce the stunning amount of waste and fraud in our health care system. Many of my proposals have been adopted either legislatively or through regulation. I believe Senator COHEN's amendment, of which I am a cosponsor, builds on some of the changes I have worked for and offers some fresh ideas for improvement.

Among its more noteworthy provisions, the amendment would establish a national fraud control group to act as a sort of clearinghouse and facilitator for all public and private fraud control efforts. In other words, efforts by the HHS inspector general, the FBI, Medicaid fraud control units and private companies could be coordinated under one umbrella. Such a centralized fraud control group would dramatically improve our current scatter-shot of good intentions that duplicates efforts while leaving some trouble spots untouched.

The amendment would also increase civil and criminal penalties for those convicted of fraud. And it would establish an account, dedicated to fraud prevention, into which a percentage of those proceeds would be placed.

Finally, the amendment would bar those convicted of fraud felonies from participating in Federal health programs in the future. It would also assist providers by offering them guidance for new regulations and making them familiar with new fraud and abuse laws.

Mr. President, this amendment will be a welcome tool for fraud control agents on the front lines of the battle against wasteful health care spending. I am pleased to be a cosponsor, and I urge its swift adoption.

I thank the President, and I would suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. COHEN. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Ms. MOSELEY-BRAUN). Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. COHEN. Madam President, while we are awaiting decision as to whether any Member of the Senate wishes to raise a point of order against this amendment, I thought I would take a few more moments to try and demonstrate the magnitude of the problem we face.

I have several charts that were prepared by my staff on the Aging Committee, and you can see from this chart alone the dimensions of the problem.

In 1990, the health care fraud and abuse losses totaled some $66.6 billion. In 1991, it went up to $73.8 billion. In 1992, it climbed to $80.9 billion. In 1993, it is up to $93.9 billion. And the estimate for this year is $103.4 billion.

This other chart shows, I think in very dramatic terms, exactly how much we are losing and have lost through health care fraud and abuse in the past 5 years.

By way of comparison, the losses in the savings and loan scandal was $119 billion. We have lost, over the past 5 years, $418 billion to health care fraud and abuse.

As I have tried to demonstrate, the ways in which the taxpayers are being robbed are shockingly easy.

The Aging Committee minority staff conducted a year-long investigation. I have a rather colorful cover of this report called, Gaming the Health Care System. It more or less looks like a monopoly board.

The types of things that take place are upcoding; prescription drug diversion; billing for professional patients; inflating charges for ambulance and taxi services; paying kickbacks for referrals; phony medical billing services; untrained home care workers; targeting nursing home residents; money laundering; falsifying prescriptions for supplies; fraudulent providers; making false claims; falsifying diagnoses; "phantom" therapy sessions; exorbitant prices for supplies; billing for inferior products; billing for items never provided; ghost patients; billing for excessive or unnecessary services; and unbundling.

Those are just a few examples.

I thought I would read portions of the executive summary of the Aging Committee Investigative Report to give a bit more detail of what we are talking about.

Physicians-owners of a clinic in New York stole over $1.3 million from the State Medicaid program by fraudulently billing for over 50,000 "phantom" psychotherapy sessions never given to Medicaid recipients.

A speech therapist submitted false claims to Medicare for services "rendered to patients" several days after they had died;

A home health care company stole more than $4.6 million from Medicaid by billing for home care provided by unqualified home care aides. In addition to cheating Medicaid, elderly and disabled individuals were at risk from untrained and unsupervised aides;

Nursing home operators charged personal items such as swimming pools, jewelry, and the family nanny to Medicaid cost reports;

1,500 workers lost their prescription drug coverage because a scam drove up the cost of the insurance plan for their employer. The scam involved a pharmacist who stole over $370,000 from Medicaid and private health insurance plans by billing over one thousand times for prescription drugs that he did not actually dispense;

Large quantities of sample and expired drugs were dispensed to nursing home patients and pharmacy customers without their knowledge. When complaints were received from nursing home staff and patient relatives regarding the ineffectiveness of the medications, one of the scam artists stated "those people are old, they'll never know the difference and they'll be dead soon anyway";

Durable medical equipment suppliers stole $1.45 million from the New York State Medicaid program by repeatedly billing for expensive orthotic back supports that were never prescribed by physicians;

A scheme involved the distribution of $6 million worth of reused pacemakers and mislabeled pacemakers intended for "animal use only."

How about that, Madam President. You are a patient who needs a pacemaker and one is installed that is intended for animal use only or one is installed when the time for the batteries has expired.

The scheme involved kickbacks to cardiologists and surgeons to induce them to use pacemakers that had already expired; and

A clinical psychologist was indicted for having sexual intercourse with some of his patients and then seeking reimbursement from a federal health plan for these encounters as "therapy" sessions.

Madam President, we have been at this a long time. Back in 1981, the Senate Special Committee on Aging sought out an expert in health care fraud—in 1981. Let me repeat that date. Here it is 1994, we are still talking about health care fraud. We are still pointing to charts in which the numbers are going off the chart. And yet, Members say, "We can't act now."

But in 1981, the committee turned to a cardiologist from Philadelphia. Let me tell you, Madam President, his credentials were impeccable. He was a noted physician. He also happened to be a convicted felon who had defrauded both the public and private insurers in three States for more than $500,000 by submitting more than $1.5 million in medical services he had never performed. Here is what he told the committee. He said:

The problem is nobody is watching. Because of the nature of the system, I was able to do what I did. The system is extremely easy to evade. The forms I sent in were absolutely outrageous. I was astounded when some of the payments were actually made.

This is a physician/convicted felon testifying as an expert witness before the Senate Aging Committee.

Well, we did not learn very much from this doctor's testimony, because now, 13 years later, he allegedly is up to his old tricks. Several months ago, he was arrested by FBI agents in Philadelphia and once again he was charged with defrauding health insurers for millions of dollars by filing claims for procedures that were never performed. Bail was set at $2 million, and apparently he is currently awaiting trial.

I raise this point because, according to the U.S. attorney in Philadelphia, since 1974 this physician has had a total of seven arrests and five convictions for fraud in New York, Connecticut, and Texas. And despite his record, 4 years ago he was able to get his Pennsylvania physician's license reinstated, and he might still be in business today if a former patient who was angry about the false billings had not agreed to go undercover.

But I raise all of this late this afternoon, early evening, to point out that we have been dealing with this issue over and over again. That was in 1981. In 1994, we still do not have the kind of antifraud legislation that is desperately needed. And here we are this evening waiting to see whether someone is going to raise a point of order to say this is either not germane or it violates the Budget Act because it may cost a couple of million to implement, when in fact we are losing $100 billion a year.

Explain that one to the American people. We are losing $100 billion a year and yet we are standing here paralyzed and do not know whether to take action or not.

No one wants to put it on the crime bill. It does not belong on the crime bill. Where does it belong? We have Government people engaging in fraudulent criminal activities, but we cannot put it on the crime bill. They dropped it out of the crime bill.

We cannot put it on Health and Human Services appropriations. That is not appropriate. We cannot put it on the health care reform bill. We do not have a bill.

So here we are looking for some vehicle to say, "Can't we take one large step on behalf of the American taxpayers and at least try to stop the overt, outrageous forms of abuse with measures that the Justice Department would like to see, that the FBI would like to see, that attorney generals would like to see, that President Clinton would like to see, that Senator MITCHELL would like to see, that Senator DOLE would like to see." And we all agree.

I am still waiting here this afternoon for someone to say, "Well, there might be a point of order or some technicality that we don't want to vote on this."

So I hope in the next several minutes, perhaps the next hour, or within the hour, someone will either raise the objection so we can vote or express the sentiment that we ought to pass this unanimously and let it go to the House.

I am told that, even if we pass this measure, it will be stripped out by the House of Representatives. Well, if that is the case, so be it. At least the Senate will go on record as saying we need this legislation. If the House of Representatives once again wants to take it out, as they took it out of the crime bill, let them do it. If they want to strip it out of this bill, let them do it again and be accountable to the American people.

I know a great deal has been raised about the Contract with America, with a group of Republicans who say if we are elected and being allowed to occupy the majority position in the House we will do the following things. And that has been attacked and criticized by a number of editorial observers.

But I must say, aside from their criticism, this is one thing we can all agree on. Republicans and Democrats alike, we can all agree. This is an issue we have not measured up to meeting. This is an issue which there is no disagreement upon. This is an issue which ought to have overwhelming support in both Houses.

But, we are told, "Wait until next year." We were told that last year. I introduced a bill over a year ago. A loss of $100 billion again last year. We have lost $85 billion this year so far and counting.

So, Madam President, just think of those numbers. I keep repeating them over and over again—$100 billion a year. That is $275 million a day, $11.5 million an hour. That is what is going out in fraud and abuse.

So we have an opportunity to pass legislation which will give the tools to our Justice Department and to our enforcement agencies to say we are going to do our level best to stop this. They are certainly overwhelmed with cases, as I mentioned earlier this afternoon—one full-time investigator for every 8 million claims.

But, Madam President, this legislation will give some measure of hope to those who are charged with investigating these claims, some measure of hope that they will have added resources; that the fines and the penalties and forfeitures will go into a working fund and these funds distribution will be decided upon by both the Attorney General and the Secretary of HHS. No bounty hunting here. That is what some are worried about, that we are going to set up a bounty-hunting mechanism. This is just something that the Department of Justice and the Department of Health and Human Services will agree upon, to put the fines and forfeitures into a working account to expand the ability of these agencies to oversee the millions and millions of claims they are required to process.

So I hope that whoever has reservations about this will come to the floor and express them. And if a point of order is to be raised, we will have an opportunity to vote on that point of order. And if there are no points of order to be raised, that we go forward and take up other amendments.

I hope we can do that certainly within the hour.

Mr. BURNS. Madam President, will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. COHEN. I yield to the Senator from Montana.

Mr. BURNS. I say to the Senator, the last time I was home, we were talking to some people who offered specialty services in the health care system, like physical therapists. It was their idea that, maybe in our certification and licensing of those people, we could do ourselves a big favor by tightening down those rules of certification and licensing, because they feel that it is too easy for some people to get into the field—and I think this is with all specialty fields—that there has to be something, a code of ethics or something, that goes along with this licensing and this certification.

Did the Senator find that in his hearings? Because I know he has held extensive hearings with regard to this.

Mr. COHEN. What we did find was that in a number of cases people who are untrained and unqualified to be delivering services are in fact being hired and their services are being billed out at professional rates.

So, indeed there has to be some tightening up at the State level. We are not seeking to impose Federal standards. This is something the State historically has regulated and should continue to regulate; that is, the licensing of individuals who qualify for these various specialties.

But it seems to me that is one of the classic cases of abuses where those who are engaged in these scams will hire individuals who are not properly trained. They put at risk the very people who are receiving some of these services. And they are being billed out at the highest possible professional rates. So that is another aspect of the type of scamming that is going on.

Mr. BURNS. I thank the Senator.

Mr. COHEN. Madam President, I do not see others who are rushing to go to the floor to debate this particular matter.

I yield the floor for the moment.

Mr. DOMENICI. Madam President, before the Senator yields the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Mexico.

Mr. DOMENICI. Senator, might I first tell you that I appreciate your permitting me to be an original cosponsor of the amendment. Frankly, I compliment you wholeheartedly for what you are doing.

Actually, I think frequently we get so busy with ideas of reforming the system and changing everything that we forget that standing right in front of us stark visible is fraud and gaming of this health care system. I do not think we really have to wait around to do that. I think now is the time.

Everybody knows that with the best of commitments—and I understand there are commitments from both sides of the aisle to start up again next year, hopefully in a more bipartisan way and perhaps without such an ambiguous agenda on reform, that we might get something done.

But, why should we wait? As I understand it, the fraud and abuse and gaming of this system is so incredibly big that the sooner we get started the sooner we are going to save some money.

Frankly, it is not going to work in 1 month or 1 year, or maybe even 2 years. So why do we want to put that off? We are worried about the excessive costs in the health care delivery system. Whatever those excessive costs are pushed by and caused by, we ought to try to fix. If the numbers that the Senator has received in his indepth testimony and hearings are anywhere close to right, one of the big reasons inflation is so high in the health care delivery systems is because of the gaming and fraud and abuse.

As a matter of fact, the Senator knows, as I understand it—he and I have spoken to this on the floor—one of the big reasons we started health care reform—while everybody now thinks it is a health care reform motivated by covering everybody, by so-called “when do we get to universality?” Actually the prime reason 12 years ago, in this most current episode that we started talking about reform, was because of the excessive cost. In fact it was the single pillar prompting and promoting reform for a long time.

Why is it 12 and 14 percent a year when inflation is 4? Why was it 16 when inflation was 6; going right through the roof? That was the predicate for reform. Now we have added some reasons, clearly, for reform. But this is one that contributes to that very first pillar, that you cannot keep delivering health care with current excessive annual increases in costs. Why we would not do this is beyond me, and perhaps the Senator has explained why we would not do it. But maybe he might tell me one more time, what is the trepidation or hangup on adopting something as simple as this?

Mr. COHEN. Madam President, if the Senator will yield, let me give my explanation as to what has taken place. First of all, we were told that this anti-fraud amendment—which, ironically, everybody is for, from the President to the majority and minority leaders and virtually everybody in this Chamber—should not go on the crime bill. I attached a portion of it to the crime bill. I attached Title 18, Criminal Sanctions, to the crime bill by unanimous consent. Nobody disagreed with it. It went over to the House and they stripped it out saying we have to wait until the health care bill comes out because we will use this to pay for the health care bill. So the savings that would be realized from this, $100 billion, we continue to lose on an annual basis.

Then they are saying that would pay for this expansive health care reform package when it comes to the floor, so take it out of the crime bill and wait until the health care reform comes and we will deal with it there. Then we are at a situation where we do not have a health care reform bill, and we are not going to get a bill until next year. The question is, “Should we wait another year?” And we begin, not in January, perhaps late February or early March. We start the hearings all over again with new bills being introduced. We go through the Finance Committee, we go through all the other committees, we come to the floor, we debate. There will be great debate as to which approach is the better approach. We will go to the House. The House will do the same thing. And finally we will come back here, I suspect, in September of next year, and maybe, just maybe we might have a health care reform bill at that time. But in the meantime we are going to be out another $100 billion.

What is happening, and the reason the costs are going up, as my colleague pointed out so dramatically, at the rate of 14 percent as opposed to 3 or 4 percent, is that hospitals and others that are providing services and equipment are covering their costs. They are covering the costs they are losing by padding the bills to make up for the fraud. I used this example yesterday and again today. A woman from Maine who had a slight cut required really not more than a Band-Aid. She got this 6- by 8-inch transparent dressing. She used 14 of them. The cost should have been $40. The cost ultimately billed for Medicare to pay was $2,800. So it went from a $40 cost to $2,800. It was actually higher than that because there were additional gels and supplies sent to this woman, totaling $3,700, almost $3,800 for a cut less than an inch long. So somebody is picking up these costs and the people who are picking it up are the taxpayers in the form of their Medicare costs or Medicaid costs and also in their private insurance costs.

To give a couple of other examples. Two New York durable medical equipment suppliers stole $1.4 million from the New York State Medicaid program by repeatedly billing for expensive orthotic back supports that were never prescribed by physicians. The DME sales force used an aggressive personal solicitation and telemarketing campaign offering—think about this—“free Angora underwear to Russian immigrants in Brooklyn in exchange for their Medicaid ID numbers.” The State was then charged for the costly medical supplies that were never authorized by doctors and only rarely, if ever, delivered to the patients. And as described, these Angora underwear solicitations were again used as an inducement to obtain beneficiaries' Medicare numbers. They are offering Angora benefits to Russian immigrants to get their ID numbers so they can bill Medicaid for services never rendered or goods never supplied. It is an outrage, what is taking place.

The Justice Department, to prosecute these cases successfully, has to use mail fraud and wire fraud statutes. It is complicated. They would like to have a nice, clean piece of legislation saying we can go after these people, and we can penalize heavily those who engage in fraudulent behavior. So I say to myself, why is it taking us so long to do this? As I mentioned before, in 1981 we went looking for expert testimony to describe how easy it is to rip off the system. We called upon a physician who had an impeccable record, so to speak. He not only was a prominent physician, he was also a convicted felon. He came and testified before our Aging committee and said it was so simple. He was astonished it was so simple. He could not believe they actually reimbursed him for things which he never provided."

We sat back in astonishment. Guess what? Madam President, 13 years later he is back out there doing it again. He got reinstated, and he was just recently arrested and charged with fraud and more felonies. He is now being held on $2 million bail.

We can stand here and wait and raise points of order and say it does not belong here, it does not belong on appropriations bills, it does not belong on Health and Human Services appropriations, it does not belong on the crime bill; it belongs on health care reform—but we do not have a health care reform bill. In the meantime, the losers are the American taxpayers.

Madam President, I hope at some point this evening we will have a chance to either vote on this measure up or down. If a point of order is raised, then we will vote on the point of order. But I hope my colleagues would see, not the wisdom, but just the practicality just the plain common sense of doing something to combat fraud. Which is not to say it is a panacea—that if we pass the legislation, we will save $100 billion. We will never catch all the fraud. But if we got 10 percent or 20 percent or a third or even 50 percent, that would be $50 billion we could use to help cover the people who are currently going uninsured.

We have 37 million people who have no insurance. We want to cover them. We could do that if we had mechanisms in place that would cut down on the kinds of outlandish, overt, preposterous schemes that are inflicted upon us day after day. And we sit back here and say we have these technical provisions here. It may violate the jurisdiction of the Finance Committee. It may trespass upon the sensibilities of the House Ways and Means Committee. Judiciary really has a piece of the jurisdictional action here in both Houses. And we bounce this ball back and forth, back and forth. The American people look at us and say, "What are they doing? What in the world are they doing? Fiddling, while Medicaid and Medicare burn up with higher and higher costs. And private health insurance continues to escalate to the point where employers are canceling their policies for their employees, throwing more and more of them into the rolls of the uninsured." But we sit here or have extended quorums, waiting for someone to raise a technical point of order saying: We cannot do it this year. Next year we will be back and we will be out another $100 billion.

Madam President, I see there are others on the floor who perhaps wish to seek recognition and I now yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Pennsylvania.

AMENDMENT NO. 2595 TO AMENDMENT NO. 2594
(Purpose: To disqualify Members of Congress from participating in the Federal Employee Health Benefits Program and chapter 89 of title 5, United States Code.)

Mr. WOFFORD. Madam President, I would like to introduce a second-degree amendment and send it to the desk, to be added at the end of Senator COHEN's amendment, and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:
The Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. WOFFORD] proposes an amendment numbered 2595 to amendment No. 2594.

The amendment is as follows:

At the end of the pending amendment, add the following new section:

SEC. . DISQUALIFICATION OF MEMBERS OF CONGRESS FROM PARTICIPATING IN THE FEDERAL EMPLOYEE HEALTH BENEFITS PROGRAM.

(a) FINDINGS.—The Congress finds that—

(1) the Congress has failed to enact legislation that extends health insurance to all Americans and reduces inflation in health care costs;

(2) Members of Congress may obtain health insurance through the Federal Employees Health Benefits Program, which provides Members of Congress with guaranteed and affordable private health insurance, choice of health plans and choice of doctor, and no exclusions for preexisting medical conditions; and

(3) Members of Congress currently receive on average a 72 percent contribution of their health insurance premiums from their employer, the taxpayers.

(b) PURPOSE.—The purpose of this section is to provide that Members of Congress shall not obtain taxpayer-financed health insurance under the favorable conditions established through the Federal Employees Health Benefits Program unless Congress enacts health reform legislation that gives the American people the type of affordable, guaranteed health insurance that Members of Congress have provided for themselves.

(C) LIMITATION ON FEDERAL EMPLOYEE HEALTH BENEFITS PLAN COVERAGE FOR MEMBERS OF CONGRESS.—Effective on January 1, 1995.—

(1) the Office of Personnel Management shall—

(A) terminate the enrollment of any Member of Congress in a health benefits plan under chapter 89 of title 5, United States Code; and

(B) prohibit the original enrollment, re-enrollment, or change of enrollment of any Member of Congress in such a plan; and

(2) The Secretary of the Senate and the Clerk of the House of Representatives shall cease making applicable employee withholdings and Government contributions under section 8906 of title 5, United States Code, for any Member of Congress.

(d) CONTINUED COVERAGE.—A Member of Congress who is enrolled in a health benefits plan under chapter 89 of title 5, United States Code, on December 31, 1994, may receive continued coverage under section 8905a of such title.

Mr. COHEN addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Pennsylvania has the floor.

Mr. COHEN. I believe he lost the floor in sending his amendment to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Maine.

Mr. COHEN. I thank the Chair.

Madam President, I think this is an example of what is wrong with this system. Here we have pending an amendment which I was told was going to be either voted upon, in the way of a point of order being lodged against it, or accepted. Now the Senator from Pennsylvania has introduced a health care amendment which, if not so designed, will, in fact, result in killing any vote on something that he and everybody else ought to be in favor of. So I suppose at this particular point we can take the rest of the evening to talk about another health care bill. We have lots of them. We have the mainstream health care proposal that we can introduce this evening. We have Senator DOLE's health care proposal. We have Senator GRAMM's health care proposal. All of those can be debated. But this particular amendment now being attached to the amendment addressing fraud is really going to, for all practical purposes, end the debate for this evening and perhaps into the rest of tomorrow and beyond.

I do not question the motivation of the Senator from Pennsylvania. I know he has felt strongly about treating Members of Congress the same as the public is treated with respect to its health care. But I might respectfully suggest that this is going to result in "no" vote coming on the health care fraud amendment, which is supported by everybody.

So I think it ought to be known to all the people who are watching and all the people who are engaged in their races, that while we had an opportunity to talk about eliminating fraud that is costing the American people $100 billion a year, in all likelihood that is not going to take place now as a result of the Senator's offering his amendment to this particular piece of legislation.

I do not believe that was his intent. That is the result. Once again, this Chamber will be deprived of an opportunity to vote in favor of something that everyone agrees with and we will, instead, take up the rest of the evening and perhaps tomorrow debating health care reform, the proposal of the Senator from Pennsylvania. So I must say I regret he has chosen to attach his amendment to the pending amendment. It is certainly within his right. But the ultimate consequence is while Members at least would have an opportunity to vote on reforming our fraudulent system now, the health care fraud provisions which I believe would have been accepted by an overwhelming if not unanimous vote of the U.S. Senate, we will no longer have a chance to do that.

I regret that he has chosen to proceed with his amendment on this one. He has a perfect right to do that. I certainly will carry this message to whoever will listen, whether in Maine, Pennsylvania, or California, that once again Congress has ducked the opportunity to eliminate fraudulent practices which are robbing us blind and bleeding us dry.

We will not have an opportunity to vote on that for the balance of this session, because there are many people on this side of the aisle who have their own health care proposals. I was one of those who worked with the Senator from Pennsylvania—who became part of the mainstream coalition—who was seeking a way to come up with health care legislation that all of us could support or most of us could support, we were not able to do that. We were not able to do that. We were not able to do that. But I must say there was no disagreement on this amendment and I think it is regrettable that we will not have a chance to do that.

With that, Madam Chairman, I will yield the floor to the Senator from Pennsylvania. He can proceed as he sees fit. But I must say I am disappointed that we will not have a chance to vote on the antifraud provisions that are contained in my amendment.

(Mr. WOFFORD addressed the Chair.)

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Pennsylvania.

Mr. WOFFORD. I thank the Senator from Maine. I look forward to voting in support of his amendment. I trust we will move to his amendment. It will have my full and strong support.

I am introducing this second-degree amendment for the same reason that he took this opportunity to present his amendment; namely, that the opportunities for action are running out and I would like to put forth the case for my amendment. We will look at the procedure as we go forward. I want to put this amendment forth clearly and strongly to my colleagues and to the country, and I look forward in due course to supporting Senator COHEN'S amendment with enthusiasm.

Mr. President, like most Americans, I am angry with Washington's petty partisanship and special interest gridlock. I'm not interested in the debate over who killed health reform this year. This issue was brought to life by people and killed by politics. Special interests spent it to death, and Congress talked it to death.

But I know health care will rise again. Because for families and companies who are paying more and getting less each year, the need for action will not fade away. The need will only grow.

Luckily, there are many Democrats and Republicans of good will, including the Senator from Maine, and the majority leader from Maine, who share the goal of affordable private health insurance for all Americans, and have made their own serious effort to reach it. I hope that we will pick up those efforts right where we left off when Congress returns.

For the past 2 years, I have been reaching out across the aisle, working with colleagues in both parties to craft a commonsense health reform bill that would provide all Americans with the kind of affordable coverage and choice of private health plans that Members of Congress now have. Not Government-run health care, but private health insurance choices, built on what people like best about our current health system.

I have talked about how that first inadequate step that we took back in 1957 on the long march toward full civil rights for black Americans is an analogy for the kind of first step we could take this year toward affordable private health coverage for all Americans. Today, more than ever, I am determined to find the way to move forward. Not only here in Congress, but in States and communities across the country. Because health reform has to go forward, with or without Washington.

On this front, here in Congress, I have repeatedly said, on this floor and around the country, that it is wrong for Members of Congress to block other Americans from having the same kind of affordable coverage and choice of private plans that the taxpayers provide to Members of Congress. So now it is time for Members of Congress to support the plan they live under, or live under the plan they support.

Today I am introducing an amendment that turns that commonsense proposition into a reality. I know it will not be popular in these Chambers. I was not popular when I introduced the bill to end the free care that Members used to get from the attending physician. But we did it, because it was the right thing to do.

Under my proposal, Members of Congress will lose their taxpayer-financed health care benefits effective January 1, 1995.

Private citizens who lose their health insurance when they lose a job can get something called COBRA coverage that allows them to keep their current coverage for up to 18 months by paying for it themselves. Members of Congress will be in the same boat under this proposal. But the American taxpayers will no longer pick up 72 percent of the bill as they do now. Congress Members will have to pay the entire cost of their health insurance, as I have been doing for the last few months myself.

Translated into dollars and cents this amendment means that for Members of Congress who choose the standard Blue Cross family coverage, the taxpayers will no longer pay the monthly $303.75 employer contribution. Instead of only $101.25, Members will have to pay the full $405 premium themselves. After 18 months, if Congress still has not been able to agree on real reform, Members of Congress will be dropped from the Federal employee plan entirely. They will no longer enjoy the choices, the cost savings, and the consumer protections that come from being part of a large group plan. They will have to either purchase their own insurance with no help from their employer or go without.

It may be a hardship. I know. That is exactly what happens to million of other Americans every single day; no more, no less.

If Members of Congress want more time to study, as some claim, let us study what it is like to be a middle-class American, caught up in the health care mess. Let us find out just how difficult it is to pay for health insurance if your employer does not contribute a fair share. Let us experience what it is like to find a decent health plan without the help of our employer. Because that is the worry facing more and more Americans every day.

There are Members of Congress who say that doing nothing on health care will not hurt them a bit; who have celebrated their success at blocking action. I hope this amendment will help in some small way to show them that there is nothing to celebrate. Not for the American people, not for us.

Doing nothing about that may not hurt some special interests, but it sure hurts the public interest. Health care delay is health care denied.

When the Senate floor debate began this past summer, I quoted Abraham Lincoln who said "We cannot escape history. We of this Congress and this administration will be remembered in spite of ourselves." But whether we will together rise to the occasion; or fall, divided and defeated, remains very much in doubt. That is what I said then.

I would like to believe that in the days and nights ahead we will be guided as Lincoln put it, "by the better angels of our natures," that those watching us will witness self-government, not civil war. Because this debate is not about politics. It is about people's lives. That is what I said then.

Well now, one thing is for sure. This Congress will be remembered. Not for being angels, though.

Mr. President, I hoped I would never have to introduce this amendment. I did not come to the Senate to take away the health benefits of Members of Congress. I came to help see to it that the American people would finally be guaranteed the same kind of benefits for themselves that we have: a choice of affordable private health insurance plans. But until we act, American families will continue to have a health insurance maze in which the insurance companies make all the rules, while people fall through the loopholes and get caught in the fine print.

Until we act, health care costs will continue to rise out of control, putting an ever greater strain on businesses and devouring an ever-greater share of Federal, State, and local tax dollars, and family budgets.

Until we act, Americans will continue to suffer and die from diseases that could have been prevented or cured, if only they had been treated sooner.

Until we act, America will keep the distinction of being the only industrialized nation in the world, besides South Africa, that does not guarantee its citizens the right to see a doctor when they are sick.

And until a new Congress does stand up to special interests, and rises above partisan interests to turn that right to see a doctor when you are sick into a reality, we should not be taking from the American people what we cannot guarantee for the American people.

Madam President, I would like to ask unanimous consent to add Senator LAUTENBERG as a cosponsor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. WOFFORD. I yield to Senator DOMENICI.

(Mr. DOMENICI addressed the Chair.)
The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Mexico.

Mr. DOMENICI. Could I just discuss with you for a moment what we have been discussing here?

Senator BOREN and I have an amendment that we want to offer which is essentially the sum total of the recommendations of the Joint Committee on Congressional Reform encapsulated in one piece of legislation, and we do not find any other way to offer this amendment before we close the session other than to offer it as an amendment in disagreement on this bill, and to do that, I understand you are not necessarily in any hurry to have your amendment reach the point of disposition, and I understand our friend from Maine has no objection to us proceeding to consider this amendment that I have described, so with that in mind—

Mr. COHEN. Reserving the right to object, but am I correct that the Senator from Pennsylvania would have every opportunity to offer his amendment to any of the amendments in disagreement that come before the Senate on the District of Columbia appropriations bill?

Mr. DOMENICI. We would have to ask the Chair. I understand there are still amendments in disagreement available for further amending?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That's correct.

Mr. DOMENICI. Parliamentary inquiry. Are there not other amendments in disagreement, aside from the one that Senator COHEN has amended?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is correct.

Mr. COHEN. I simply wanted to point out to my friends from Pennsylvania and New Mexico that the Senator from Pennsylvania has now introduced a controversial amendment to a non-controversial amendment dealing with health care fraud, and as a result of that particular process, thereby jeopardized the vote that I thought we were about to have momentarily on health care fraud.

So now we have something that virtually everybody agreed to and, upon being amended with a controversial amendment, that will take perhaps several hours, if not days, can now be opened up by others who have their own health care proposals.

So I would appeal to my colleague from Pennsylvania that this was not the only opportunity for the Senator to offer an amendment. The Senator is within his rights. But I respectfully suggest to him that he has at least jeopardized the opportunity for the Senate to go on record to try to persuade our House colleagues that we ought to pass health care fraud provisions now as opposed to encumbering that with a very controversial proposal of the Senator's which could in fact be attached to any of the other amendments in disagreement on the D.C. appropriations bill. So I would hope that if we agree to set aside our amendments, the Senator might take that into consideration.

Mr. WOFFORD. Madam President, I am fully agreeable to what Senator DOMENICI has proposed in terms of his moving forward now. I look forward to talking with the Senator from Maine about the procedure. My case is a simple one. It has been made. I have no reason to think there will be a long debate on the amendment, whether it is controversial or not. I look forward very much to supporting the amendment of the Senator from Maine.

Mr. BYRD addressed the Chair.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from West Virginia.

Mr. BYRD. Who has the floor?
The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Pennsylvania had the floor.

Mr. BYRD. Will the Senator yield?
Mr. WOFFORD. I yield the floor to the President pro tempore.

Mr. BYRD. Will the Senator yield without losing his right to the floor while I might make one more parliamentary inquiry and help to propound the request, without losing his right?

Mr. WOFFORD. I do.
Mr. BYRD. Madam President, is there an amendment pending to the first amendment in disagreement, the amendment by Mr. GRAMM?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is correct.

Mr. BYRD. Is there an amendment pending to the second amendment in disagreement?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is correct.

Mr. BYRD. And is the amendment pending to the second amendment in disagreement the amendment by Mr. WOFFORD?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment by the Senator from Maine, as amended by the Senator from Pennsylvania, is the amendment to the second amendment in disagreement.

Mr. BYRD. I thank the Chair. Is there any amendment pending to the third amendment in disagreement?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. No, there is no amendment pending to the third amendment in disagreement that is Senate amendment numbered 12.

Mr. BYRD. Are there eight amendments in disagreement between the two Houses?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That is correct.

Mr. BYRD. I ask unanimous consent that the distinguished Senator from New Mexico may be permitted to offer an amendment at this point to the third amendment in disagreement, and only for the purpose of offering the amendment, but that such action not suspend action on the previous two amendments in disagreement.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. BYRD. The purpose being only to let the Senator offer his amendment. There are eight amendments in disagreement. At some point he will offer his amendment to one of those amendments. He wants to offer the amendment tonight, not debate it but just have it in line when the other amendments are disposed of.

Mr. DOMENICI. Reserving the right to object, and I greatly appreciate the distinguished chairman of the Appropriations Committee offering the unanimous-consent proposal in my behalf, let me say to Senator BYRD I thought I had already worked out with the Senator from Pennsylvania, by talking to his staff at length, and Senator COHEN, I had already worked out an arrangement where a consent would be granted that I offer the amendment and that theirs be set aside temporarily. So not only would the amendment of the Senator from New Mexico be pending, be in order but it would be pending. I think they would agree to that, and I would like to propound that unanimous consent in lieu of the Senator's.

Mr. BYRD. Very well. That is agreeable with me. I did not realize they were willing.

Mr. COHEN. Reserving the right to object—

Mr. WOFFORD. That is correct.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Maine.

Mr. COHEN. I hope that the Senator from West Virginia would withhold his unanimous-consent request, as well as the Senator from New Mexico, for a moment.

Mr. BYRD. Madam President, I withdraw my request.

Mr. DOMENICI. And I withhold mine.

Mr. COHEN. I wish to have an opportunity to suggest the absence of a quorum. I think we may be able to resolve this issue so we will not run into a conflict with the proposal.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The absence of a quorum has been suggested. The clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BYRD. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BYRD. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that the pending amendments be temporarily laid aside for the purpose only of allowing the Senator from New Mexico [Mr. DOMENICI] to call up an amendment and Mr. BOREN to call up an amendment to the Domenici amendment; that both amendments be considered as read, printed, and no debate thereon occur tonight.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Without objection, it is so ordered.

AMENDMENT IN DISAGREEMENT TO THE SENATE AMENDMENT NUMBERED 12

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The pending question is Senate amendment 12, which the clerk will report.

The bill clerk read as follows:

Resolved. That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 12 to the aforesaid bill, and concur therein with an amendment as follows:

In lieu of the matter stricken and inserted by said amendment, insert: "forecast which shall be supported and accompanied by cash forecasts for the general fund and each of the District government's other funds other than the capital projects fund and trust and agency funds."

AMENDMENT NO. 2596 TO AMENDMENT IN DISAGREEMENT TO THE SENATE AMENDMENT NUMBERED 12.

(Purpose: To improve the operations of the legislative branch of the Federal Government, and for other purposes)

Mr. DOMENICI. Madam President, I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

I think a unanimous consent agreement has already been granted that it be considered as read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the amendment by number.

The bill clerk read as follows:

The Senator from New Mexico [Mr. DOMENICI] proposes an amendment numbered 2596 to the amendment in disagreement to the Senate amendment numbered 12.

AMENDMENT NO. 2597 TO AMENDMENT NO. 2596

(Purpose: To improve the operations of the legislative branch of the Federal Government, and for other purposes)

Mr. BOREN. Madam President, I send an amendment in the nature of a second-degree amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The bill clerk read as follows.

The Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. BOREN] proposes an amendment numbered 2597 to amendment numbered 2596.

The text of the amendment is printed in today's RECORD under "Amendments Submitted."

Mr. DOMENICI addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Mexico.

Mr. DOMENICI. Madam President, I thank Senator BYRD for his assistance here tonight and I thank Senator WOFFORD and Senator COHEN for their consideration. I apologize for having made their evening a little longer than it should have been.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who seeks recognition?

Mr. BYRD. Madam President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The absence of a quorum has been suggested. The clerk will call the roll.

Mr. KOHL. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

GRAMM AMENDMENT TO THE THIRD AMENDMENT IN DISAGREEMENT

Mr. DURENBERGER. Mr. President, I rise to explain why I will oppose the amendment offered by my distinguished colleague from Texas, Senator GRAMM.

Last August, I cast certain procedural votes on the crime bill conference report that were designed to allow the consideration of 10 different Republican amendments. This did not mean that I agreed with the substance of these amendments; it meant only that I believed more bipartisan input should be injected into the process.

Republicans did not get a chance to offer these amendments during consideration of the conference report, so the 10 proposals have returned as 1 consolidated amendment to this appropriations bill. I must go on record opposed to this amendment for three reasons.

First, this amendment would strike a provision—the Family Unity Demonstration Project Act—which is based on a bill I introduced last year. This bill would authorize demonstration projects that would allow nonviolent incarcerated mothers to serve their sentences in supervised community programs with their children.

Children who are separated from incarcerated parents have a high risk of developing social and emotional problems, of dropping out of school, and of becoming criminals themselves. Family unity demonstration projects will minimize the trauma to children and place them in a stable, caring, healthy environment. The parents will participate in parenting classes, substance abuse treatment, and educational and vocational training.

In addition to being more cost-effective than incarceration and saving the costs of foster care placement, these programs produce results. In communities that have tried this approach, the participants have been much less likely to repeat their crimes and more likely to emerge as better parents and productive members of society. Unlike many of the provisions in the crime bill, I believe that this proposal will be an effective tool in the war on crime.

Second, I am opposed to this amendment because of its expansion of mandatory minimum penalties. The consensus in the judicial community is that mandatory minimum sentences are a terrible policy. In many cases, they have swelled our prison population with people who aren't a threat to the community and who would probably do better in an alternative to incarceration.

Mandatory minimum sentences have not succeeded in reducing crime, and in many cases have reduced the prospects for rehabilitation. Our increasing use of incarceration for first-time, non-violent offenders has done little more than create more hardened criminals at the taxpayer's expense.

Few people have more experience dealing with criminals than judges. But mandatory minimums take away the ability of judges to do their job—to make the punishment fit the crime. They do not allow judges to take factors into account like the offender's age, role in the offense, or prospects for rehabilitation.

Finally, I am concerned that this amendment would allow less flexibility for States who apply for prison funding. The crime problem is intensely local; I believe that States are more capable than Washington politicians to craft their own sentencing policy and determine the most effective use of prison dollars.

For all of these reasons, I intend to vote against this amendment.

MORNING BUSINESS

Mr. KOHL. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that there now be a period for morning business, with Senators permitted to speak therein for up to 5 minutes each.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

IS CONGRESS IRRESPONSIBLE? YOU BE THE JUDGE OF THAT

Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, anyone even remotely familiar with the U.S. Constitution knows that no President can spend a dime of Federal tax money that has not first been authorized and appropriated by Congress—both the House of Representatives and the U.S. Senate.

So when you hear a politician or an editor or a commentator declare that "Reagan ran up the Federal debt" or that "Bush ran it up," bear in mind that it was, and is, the constitutional duty and responsibility of Congress to control Federal spending. Congress has failed miserably in that task for about 50 years.

The fiscal irresponsibility of Congress has created a Federal debt which stood at $4,670,105,589,039.37 as of the close of business Tuesday, September 27. Averaged out, every man, woman, and child in America owes a share of this massive debt, and that per capita share is $17,912.96.

VERY SPECIAL ARTS TURNS 20

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I rise today in honor of the 20th anniversary of Very Special Arts.

Very Special Arts was founded in 1974 by Jean Kennedy Smith, today our distinguished Ambassador to Ireland, as an affiliate of the John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts. Its mission is unique and important—to promote awareness of the educational, cultural, and personal benefits of the arts for people with disabilities. By sponsoring programs in creative writing, dance, drama, music, and the visual arts, Very Special Arts helps provide people with disabilities the skills they need to be full participants in the arts.

Mr. President, Very Special Arts sends the message that the arts are for all people. Today, it has programs in all 50 States and the District of Columbia, and in more than 55 countries worldwide. It is among the largest and most diverse international organizations serving people with disabilities.

NOTABLE ACCOMPLISHMENTS

Over the last 20 years, Very Special Arts has sponsored many groundbreaking programs at the State, national, and international levels. I would like to highlight just a few of its recent achievements.

In April 1991, in a joint project with the Bureau of Indian Affairs, it hosted the first National Native American Very Special Arts Festival in Santa Fe, NM. This 2-day festival showcased the artistic accomplishments of native American students from many different tribal groups. Since then, the festival has reached more than 3,000 students nationwide.

In 1992, Very Special Arts issued a Call for Art, inviting people of all ages to submit artwork for a U.S. Capitol 200th Anniversary Art Exhibition Project. This project was designed to challenge artists to use their imaginations to explore the history of one of our Nation's most important landmarks. Last fall artists from all 50 States were represented in an exhibit in the Rotunda of the Cannon House Office Building.

Start with the Arts is an instructional program for young children ages 4 to 6 to help educators and parents create meaningful learning experiences in all the arts—visual arts, creative movement, creative drama, and music. This program gives these young children an early opportunity to excel.

In May of this year, Very Special Arts hosted its second international Very Special Arts Festival in Brussels, Belgium. Over 40 States and 75 countries sent delegations to Brussels for performances, workshops, and other cultural exchanges, and more than 1,000 individuals of all ages with and without disabilities took part in this exciting week-long celebration of the arts.

Other programs have included "The Young Playwrights Program," "New Vision Dance Project," "Young Soloists Award," "The Yamagata International Visual Arts Program," and "Arts for Children in Hospitals." The list goes on and on.

The nonprofit Very Special Arts operates two galleries—one in downtown Washington, DC, and a new sister gallery in nearby Georgetown. These galleries play an important role in boosting self-esteem and professional careers. Proceeds from sales support exhibitions and Very Special Arts programs. World-renowned artists such as Hiro Yamagata, Robert Rauschenberg, and Frank Stella help Very Special Arts through unique print and poster editions displayed in the gallery.

SERVICE TO KANSAS

In my own home State of Kansas, Very Special Arts recently launched a new initiative involving one of the most important groups of people in this country—our veterans. In August, Very Special Arts Kansas began a drama program for the veterans of the day treatment center at the Colmery O'Neil VA Medical Center in Topeka. Led by Chuck Bland, a drama therapist who is also a vietnam veteran, over 50 veterans between 28 and 80 will create and perform a historical play. The play will be later performed at other sites in Kansas with a final performance for the friends and families of the veterans.

A CONTINUING LEADER

Mr. President, no doubt about it, for 20 years Very Special Arts has been a leader. I congratulate them for their service and commend them for their continuing commitment to excellence and their dedication to providing opportunities for people with disabilities to enjoy meaningful experiences through the arts.

DO NOT RAISE INTEREST RATES

Mr. DECONCINI. Mr. President, yesterday the Federal Reserve decided not to raise interest rates. I congratulate them. The last thing the American economy needs is higher interest rates.

I am concerned, however, that Chairman Greenspan has been given unlimited authority to raise interest rates unilaterally between now and November 15. I urge Chairman Greenspan not to utilize that authority and give the economic recovery a little breathing room.

I ask unanimous consent that a copy of my letter of today's date to Chairman Greenspan be included in the RECORD at this point.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

U.S. SENATE,

Washington, DC, September 28, 1994.

Hon. ALAN GREENSPAN,
Chairman, Federal Reserve Board, Washington, DC.

DEAR CHAIRMAN GREENSPAN: I want to congratulate you on yesterday's decision by the Federal Reserve not to raise interest rates. At the same time, I want to urge you not to use your authority to unilaterally raise rates between now and November 15th.

The recovery of the American economy is delicate at best. It simply cannot tolerate any additional interest rate increases and continue to grow.

Again, I applaud the Federal Reserve's restraint and urge you to continue it.

Sincerely,

DENNIS DECONCINI,
U.S. Senator.

NEW EXHIBITION AT THE NATIONAL GALLERY OF ART— "ROBERT FRANK: MOVING OUT"

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, it is a privilege to take this opportunity to commend the Polaroid Corp. of Cambridge, MA, for its sponsorship, along with the Lannan Foundation, of the exhibition about to open this weekend at the National Gallery of Art, entitled, "Robert Frank: Moving Out."

The exhibition opens on Sunday, October 2, and it celebrates the life and work of Robert Frank, one of America's greatest living photographers. It marks the first time that the gallery has held an exhibition commemorating the work of a living photographer.

Frank's highly stylized and dramatic images portray a wide range of American experience and have had a lasting influence on American photography.

It is fitting that the Polaroid Corp. is participating in the sponsorship of this exhibition. For many years, Polaroid has been a household name symbolizing excellence in photography. Over the years, Polaroid has worked closely with America's great photographers, and those artists have worked closely with Polaroid scientists, helping to generate new advances in the art and technology of photography. As a result, Polaroid is renowned as a leader in such diverse fields as computer imaging, medical diagnostics, and fine arts restoration, in addition to commercial and popular photography.

Because of this exhibition, the powerful photography of Robert Frank will be seen by thousands of individuals who otherwise would not have had the opportunity. The exhibition will be at the National Gallery in Washington until December. It will then travel to Japan, Switzerland, and the Netherlands, and will return in 1996 to the Whitney Museum of American Art in New York City and then to the Lannan Foundation in Los Angeles. I know that the exhibition will be acclaimed in the Nation's Capital and in all the other places where it travels, and I congratulate all those who are a part of it.

JAMIE L. WHITTEN FEDERAL BUILDING

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. President, I support H.R. 4576 which names the U.S. Department of Agriculture building at the northeast corner of 14th Street and Independence Avenue, in Washington, D.C., as the "Jamie L. Whitten Federal Building." This is a very appropriate honor for Representative WHITTEN.

Representatives WHITTEN is serving his 27th consecutive term in the House of Representatives, representing with distinction the First Congressional District of Mississippi.

As a leader in the shaping of our Nation's agricultural policy, Representative WHITTEN helped develop and fund numerous farm programs that have enriched the lives of many Americans. He has also placed a great deal of emphasis on research programs, which have enabled our farmers to be the most productive and efficient in the world. These programs will enable American agriculture to meet challenges in the next century.

During his tenure in office, Representative WHITTEN has often been referred to as the Permanent Secretary of Agriculture. Therefore, it is very appropriate that the Federal Agricultural Headquarters Building be named in his honor.

CONFERENCE REPORT ON REAUTHORIZING THE ELEMENTARY AND SECONDARY EDUCATION ACT

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. Mr. President, I would like to congratulate the House and Senate education committee conferees for including several important changes to the Elementary and Secondary Education Act [ESEA] in their conference report. As I know from having spoken at the conference last Friday, moving this legislation forward has been a tremendously difficult—but essential—achievement.

After almost 2 weeks of continuous debate, the House and Senate education conferees completed deliberation on H.R. 6 last night. This bill reauthorizes the Elementary and Secondary Education Act, which contains many of the most important Federal education programs for students in grades K-12—including Chapter 1, a $6.7 billion program to help educate poor and disadvantaged children that will affect over 90 percent of school districts in the Nation.

With over 5 million students, California public schools desperately need effective Federal education programs to provide specialized services and address the needs of an extremely diverse student body. While I am not a member of the Senate Education Subcommittee or the conference, I participated in the reauthorization process to ensure that the new legislation would include improvements that are important to California. During the last 2 years, I have spoken with my colleagues about California's educational concerns, debated education issues on the Senate floor, introduced my own related legislation, and suggested several amendments to the reauthorizing legislation.

As a result of my efforts and others', the conference report will include several issues that I believe are essential:

Gun-Free Schools: The gun-free schools provision requires States and school districts who receive Federal funds to establish mandatory 1-year expulsion policies for students who bring guns to school. This measure will strengthen California's current expulsion policy and make schools throughout the country safe from the threat of violence. As I stated when I appeared in front of the conferees, it is time to stop making excuses for children who bring guns to school. I believe that this measure, which I co-authored with Senator DORGAN, is one of the most important steps that we can take to create an environment where children can actually learn.

Improved Chapter 1 Formula: Under the new formula, California's share of Chapter 1 funds will grow significantly. In fiscal year 1995, the reauthorized Chapter 1 formula will yield $729 million for California—$35 million more than the State will receive this year. In fiscal year 1996, the formula will begin to target more funds to areas with large numbers of poor children. In fiscal year 1997, the new formula will begin using updated poverty data. Because of these changes, California's allocation will grow at a higher rate each year.

Despite the delay until 1997, the effect of using regularly updated poverty data in the Chapter 1 formula will have a tremendous benefit to California. Between 1980 and 1990, California's share of poor children increased 38 percent without any change in the State's Chapter 1 allocation. To address this problem, I have pressed this issue with my colleagues and introduced legislation to enable the Census Bureau to produce more timely information. Next year, I will try to win passage of poverty data legislation to prevent the use of outdated information in all Federal funding formulas.

Increased Funding Level for Immigrant Education: In the conference report, the authorization level for the Emergency Immigrant Education Act will be increased from its current $40 million level to $100 million—a 150-percent increase. The Emergency Immigrant Education Act provides supplementary funds to school districts with large influxes of immigrant children, and in fiscal year 1994 California received $15 million—or 40 percent of funds appropriated—to help educate the Nation's largest population of immigrant students. During the last 2 years, I have helped increase the appropriations for this program from $29 million in fiscal year 1993 to $50 million in fiscal year 1995—a 72-percent increase over the last two years. A further increase in the authorization level will enable Congress to continue appropriating more funds for immigrant education in future years.

While the Emergency Immigrant Education program does not address the enormous costs of educating illegal immigrant children, it does provide an important resource to States like California for educating the children of legal immigrants who have recently arrived in this country. I also intend to continue to press for fair compensation to the State for the costs of educating immigrant children, both legal and illegal.

The reauthorization of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act is an important piece of legislation, and the conferees have addressed House-Senate differences with admirable fairness. Once again, I congratulate them on their achievement and look forward to Senate consideration of the report after the House has given its approval.

MESSAGES FROM THE PRESIDENT

Messages from the President of the United States were communicated to the Senate by Mr. Thomas, one of his secretaries.

EXECUTIVE MESSAGES REFERRED

As in executive session the Presiding Officer laid before the Senate messages from the President of the United States submitting sundry nominations which were referred to the appropriate committees.

(The nominations received today are printed at the end of the Senate proceedings.)

MESSAGES FROM THE HOUSE

At 11:26 a.m., a message from the House of Representatives, delivered by Mr. Hays, one of its reading clerks, announced that the House has passed the following bill, in which it requests the concurrence of the Senate:

H.R. 3392. An act to amend the Safe Drinking Water Act to assure the safety of public water systems.

The message also announced that the House has passed the following bill, with an amendment, in which it requests the concurrence of the Senate:

S. 783. An act to amend the Fair Credit Reporting Act, and for other purposes.

At 11:56 a.m., a message from the House of Representatives, delivered by Mr. Hays, one of its reading clerks, announced that the House has passed the following bill, in which it requests the concurrence of the Senate:

THE CENTRAL CITY AND BLACK HAWK LAND EXCHANGE ACT

• Mr. CAMPBELL. Mr. President, I am introducing legislation to exchange approximately 300 acres of fragmented Bureau of Land Management lands near Black Hawk, CO, for approximately 4,500 acres that will be added to Rocky Mountain National Park and to other Department of the Interior holdings in Colorado, while dedicating any remaining equalization funds to the purchase land and water rights for the Blanca Wetlands Management Area near Alamosa, CO.

This legislation is supported by local governments, environmental groups, and land developers in Colorado.

While I know that it is too late to enact this legislation this Congress, I and my colleague Senator BROWN have agreed to introduce it as a gesture of good faith to all the parties who have labored so long to craft this bill in the hopes that the lands will remain available until Congress can act on it next year. More specifically, the bill:

Enables Rocky Mountain National Park to obtain an adjacent 40-acre parcel known as the Circle C Ranch. The Park Service has long sought to acquire the ranch to avoid its subdivision and development;

Enables the BLM to acquire 517 acres within the Arkansas Headwaters Recreation Area. This land has approximately 3 miles of Arkansas River frontage and will afford fishermen access to a beautiful stretch of the river;

Results in the acquisition of approximately 4,000 acres of land currently owned by Quinlan Ranches, Inc. This land is located at the headwaters of La Jara Canyon and Fox Creek, approximately 10 miles from Antonito, CO. It has excellent elk winter range and other important wildlife habitat;

Creates a fund from cash equalization moneys that may be paid to the United States as a result of the exchange, with the fund to be used to purchase land or water rights from willing sellers to augment fish and wildlife habitat in the BLM's Blanca Wetlands Management Area. The BLM has wanted funds for these purposes for many years.

In exchange for approximately 4,500 acres of land, 130 parcels of highly fragmented BLM land totaling about 300 acres will be made available for private acquisition. Of these 130 parcels, 88 are less than 1 acre in size. The BLM, through its established land management process, has already identified these lands as appropriate for transfer to private ownership. This land will most likely be used to construct homes and small businesses near the city of Black Hawk.

I hope my colleagues will support this effort, and I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill, along with letters of support from the Colorado Division of Wildlife, Colorado State Parks Department, the Sierra Club, the Lake County Commissioners, the Conejos County Commissioners, the city of Black Hawk, Central City, Michael Quinlin, Colorado Trout Unlimited, and the Collegiate Peaks Anglers be printed in the RECORD along with a recent article from the Denver Post.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 2470

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. FINDINGS AND PURPOSES.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress finds and declares that—

(1) certain scattered parcels of Federal land located within Gilpin County, Colorado, are currently administered by the Secretary of the Interior as part of the Royal Gorge Resource Area, Canon City District, United States Bureau of Land Management;

(2) these land parcels, comprised of approximately 130 separate tracts of land ranging in size from approximately 38 acres to much less than an acre, have been identified as suitable for disposal by the Bureau of Land Management through its resource management planning process and are appropriate for disposal; and

(3) even though these land parcels are scattered and small in size, they nevertheless appear to have a fair market value which may be used by the Federal Government to exchange for lands which will better lend themselves to Federal management and have higher values for future public access, use and enjoyment, recreation, the protection and enhancement of fish and wildlife and fish and wildlife habitat, and the protection of riparian lands, wetlands, scenic beauty and other public values.

(b) PURPOSE.—It is the purpose of this Act to authorize, direct, facilitate and expedite the land exchange set forth herein in order to further the public interest by disposing of Federal lands with limited public utility and acquire in exchange therefor lands with important values for permanent public management and protection.

SEC. 2. LAND EXCHANGE.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The exchange directed by this Act shall be consummated if within 90 days after enactment of this Act Lake Gulch, Inc., a Colorado corporation (as defined in section 4 of this Act), offers to transfer to the United States pursuant to the provisions of this Act the offered lands or interests in land described herein.

(b) CONVEYANCE BY LAKE GULCH.—Subject to the provisions of section 3 of this Act, Lake Gulch shall convey to the Secretary of the Interior all right, title, and interest in and to the following offered lands—

(1) certain lands comprising approximately 40 acres with improvements thereon located in Larimer County, Colorado, and lying within the boundaries of Rocky Mountain National Park as generally depicted on a map entitled "Circle C Church Camp", dated August 1994, which shall upon their acquisition by the United States and without further action by the Secretary of the Interior be incorporated into Rocky Mountain National Park and thereafter be administered in accordance with the laws, rules and regulations generally applicable to the National Park System and Rocky Mountain National Park;

(2) certain lands located along the Arkansas River in Lake County, Colorado, which comprise approximately 517 acres, as generally depicted on a map entitled "Arkansas River Headwaters Frontage", dated August 1994; and

(3) certain lands located within and adjacent to the United States Bureau of Land Management San Luis Resource Area in Conejos County, Colorado, which comprise approximately 3,993 acres and are generally depicted on a map entitled "Quinlan Ranches Tract", dated August 1994.

(c) SUBSTITUTION OF LANDS.—If one or more of the precise offered land parcels identified above is unable to be conveyed to the United States due to appraisal or other problems, Lake Gulch and the Secretary may mutually agree to substitute therefor alternative offered lands acceptable to the Secretary.

(d) CONVEYANCE BY THE UNITED STATES.—(1) Upon receipt of title to the lands identified in subsection (a) the Secretary shall simultaneously convey to Lake Gulch all right, title, and interest of the United States, subject to valid existing rights, in and to the following selected lands—

(A) certain surveyed lands located in Gilpin County, Colorado, Township 3 South,

Range 72 West, Sixth Principal Meridian, Section 18, Lots 118-220, which comprise approximately 195 acres and are intended to include all federally owned lands in section 18, as generally depicted on a map entitled "Lake Gulch Selected Lands", dated July 1994;

(B) certain surveyed lands located in Gilpin County, Colorado, Township 3 South, Range 72 West, Sixth Principal Meridian, Section 17, Lots 37, 38, 39, 40, 52, 53, and 54, which comprise approximately 96 acres, as generally depicted on a map entitled "Lake Gulch Selected Lands", dated July 1994; and

(C) certain unsurveyed lands located in Gilpin County, Colorado, Township 3 South, Range 73 West, Sixth Principal Meridian, Section 13, which comprise approximately 10 acres, and are generally depicted as parcels 307-326 on a map entitled "Lake Gulch Selected Lands", dated July 1994: Provided, however, That a parcel or parcels of land in section 13 shall not be transferred to Lake Gulch if at the time of the proposed transfer the parcel or parcels are under formal application for transfer to a qualified unit of local government. Due to the small and unsurveyed nature of such parcels proposed for transfer to Lake Gulch in section 13, and the high cost of surveying such small parcels, the Secretary is authorized to transfer such section 13 lands to Lake Gulch without survey based on such legal or other description as he determines appropriate to carry out the basic intent of the map cited in this subparagraph.

(2) If the Secretary and Lake Gulch mutually agree, and the Secretary determines it is in the public interest, the Secretary may utilize the authority and direction of this Act to transfer to Lake Gulch lands in sections 17 and 13 that are in addition to those precise selected lands shown on the maps cited in paragraphs (d)(1)(B) and (d)(1)(C), and which are not under formal application for transfer to a qualified unit of local government, upon transfer to the Secretary of additional offered lands acceptable to the Secretary or upon payment to the Secretary by Lake Gulch of cash equalization money amounting to the full appraised fair market value of any such additional lands. If any such additional lands are located in section 13 they may be transferred to Lake Gulch without survey based on such legal or other description as the Secretary determines appropriate as long as the Secretary determines that the boundaries of any adjacent lands not owned by Lake Gulch can be properly identified so as to avoid possible future boundary conflicts or disputes. If the Secretary determines surveys are necessary to convey any such additional lands to Lake Gulch, the costs of such surveys shall be paid by Lake Gulch but shall not be eligible for any adjustment in the value of such additional lands pursuant to section 206(f)(2) of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976 (as amended by the Federal Land Exchange Facilitation Act of 1988) (43 U.S.C. 1716(f)(2)).

(3) Prior to transferring out of public ownership pursuant to this Act or other authority of law any lands which are contiguous to North Clear Creek southeast of the City of Black Hawk, Colorado, in the County of Gilpin, Colorado, the Secretary shall notify and consult with the governments of the County and the City and afford such units of local government an opportunity to acquire or reserve pursuant to the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976 or other applicable law such easements or rights-of-way parallel to North Clear Creek as may be necessary to serve public utility line or recreation path needs: Provided, however, That any survey or other costs associated with the acquisition or reservation of such easements or rights-of-way shall be paid for by the unit or units of local government concerned.

SEC. 3. TERMS AND CONDITIONS OF EXCHANGE

(a) EQUALIZATION OF VALUES.—The values of the lands to be exchanged pursuant to this Act shall be equal as determined by the Secretary of the Interior utilizing nationally recognized appraisal standards, including, to the extent appropriate, the Uniform Standards for Federal Land Acquisition, the Uniform Standards of Professional Appraisal Practice, the provisions of section 206(d) of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976 (43 U.S.C. 1716(d)), and other applicable law. In the event it is determined that cash equalization moneys are owed to the United States in the exchange, any such cash equalization moneys shall be retained by the Secretary of the Interior and may be utilized by the Secretary until fully expended to purchase from willing sellers land or water rights, or a combination thereof, to augment wildlife habitat and protect and restore wetlands in the Bureau of Land Management's Blanca Wetlands, Alamosa County, Colorado. Any water rights acquired by the United States pursuant to this section shall be obtained by the Secretary of the Interior in accordance with all applicable provisions of Colorado law, including the requirement to change the time, place, and type of use of said water rights through the appropriate State legal proceedings and to comply with any terms, conditions, or other provisions contained in an applicable decree of the Colorado Water Court. The use of any water rights acquired pursuant to this section shall be limited to water that can be used or exchanged for water that can be used on the Blanca Wetlands. Any requirement or proposal to utilize facilities of the San Luis Valley Project, Closed Basin Diversion, in order to effectuate the use of any such water rights shall be subject to prior approval of the Rio Grande Water Conservation District.

(b) RESTRICTIONS ON SELECTED LANDS.—(1) Conveyance of the selected lands to Lake Gulch pursuant to this Act shall be contingent upon Lake Gulch executing an agreement with the United States prior to such conveyance, the terms of which are acceptable to the Secretary of the Interior, and which—

(A) grants the United States a covenant that none of the selected lands (all of which currently lie outside the State of Colorado's current legally approved gaming area) shall ever be used for purposes of gaming should the current legal gaming area ever be expanded by the State of Colorado; and

(B) permanently holds the United States harmless for liability and indemnify the United States against all costs arising from any activities, operations (including the storing, handling, and dumping of hazardous materials or substances) or other acts conducted by Lake Gulch or its employees, agents, successors or assigns on the selected lands after their transfer to Lake Gulch: Provided, however, That nothing in this Act shall be construed as either diminishing or increasing any responsibility or liability of the United States based on the condition of the selected lands prior to or on the date of their transfer to Lake Gulch.

(2) Conveyance of the selected lands to Lake Gulch pursuant to this Act shall be subject to the existing easement for Gilpin County Road 6.

(3) The above terms and restrictions of this subsection shall not be considered in determining, or result in any diminution in, the fair market value of the selected land for purposes of the appraisals of the selected land required pursuant to section 3 of this Act.

(c) REVOCATION OF WITHDRAWAL.—The Public Water Reserve established by Executive order dated April 17, 1926 (Public Water Reserve 107), Serial Number Colorado 17321, is hereby revoked insofar as it affects the NW  $\frac{1}{4}$  SW  $\frac{1}{4}$  of Section 17, Township 3 South, Range 72 West, Sixth Principal Meridian, which covers a portion of the selected lands identified in this Act.

(d) MANAGEMENT OF CERTAIN LANDS.—Upon their acquisition by the United States, the lands referred to in section 2(b)(2) of this Act shall be managed by the Secretary of the Interior in accordance with the laws, rules, and regulations generally applicable to the public lands, and, as appropriate, in accordance with cooperative agreements such as the existing Arkansas Headwaters Recreation Area Memorandum of Understanding, with special emphasis on public fishing and recreational access to the Arkansas River, and riparian and wetland habitat protection. The acquisition of such lands by the Secretary shall not be construed to impose any responsibility or liability on the Secretary with respect to hazardous substances which may exist on the lands as of the date of their acquisition by the United States. Without precluding any future determination by the Secretary or appropriate Federal or State authorities that cleanup of any hazardous substances which may be found to exist on the property would be appropriate, nothing in this Act shall be construed to require the Secretary to undertake any hazardous substances cleanup activities or studies.

SEC. 4. MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS.

(a) DEFINITIONS.—As used in this Act:

(1) The term "Secretary" means the Secretary of the Interior.

(2) The term "Lake Gulch" means Lake Gulch, Inc., a Colorado corporation, or its successors, heirs or assigns.

(3) The term "offered land" means lands to be conveyed to the United States pursuant to this Act.

(4) The term "selected land" means to be transferred to Lake Gulch pursuant to this Act.

(5) The term "Blanca Wetlands" means an area of land comprising approximately 9,290 acres, as generally depicted on a map entitled "Blanca Wetlands", dated August 1994, and any nearby land which the Secretary may purchase from willing sellers after the date of enactment of this Act utilizing funds provided by this Act or other funds and manage in conjunction with and for the same general purposes as the land depicted on that map.

(b) TIME REQUIREMENT FOR COMPLETING TRANSFER.—It is the intent of Congress that unless the Secretary and Lake Gulch mutually agree otherwise the exchange of lands authorized and directed by this Act shall be completed not later than 6 months after the date of enactment of this Act.

(c) ADMINISTRATION OF LANDS ACQUIRED BY UNITED STATES.—In accordance with the provisions of section 206(c) of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976 (43 U.S.C. 1716(c)), all lands acquired by the United States pursuant to this Act shall upon acceptance of title by the United States and without further action by the Secretary concerned become part of and be managed as part of the administrative unit or area within which they are located.

SUMMARY OF PROPOSED LAKE GULCH LAND EXCHANGE LEGISLATION

Lake Gulch Inc. gets:

Approximately 300 acres of fragmented BLM lands located along the southern boundary of the City of Black Hawk, Colorado. The BLM lands comprise 130 separate parcels and range in size from 38 acres to one-one hundredth of an acre. 88 of the 130 parcels are less than one acre in size, and most are surrounded by, or adjacent to, land already owned by Lake Gulch Inc. or its affiliates. BLM has identified all the lands for disposal.

Lake Gulch Inc. has agreed to covenants that limit future use of the land to non-gaming purposes (i.e. no gambling development) and will hold the United States harmless from any liability relating to cleanup of old mining wastes on the land Lake Gulch acquires.

United States gets:

The 40 acre Circle-C Church Camp which lies within Rocky Mountain National Park south of Estes Park, Colorado. Circle-C has been a long time acquisition priority for the Park Service because of potential for development that would be inconsistent with Park plans.

The 517 acre Minnequa Bank property located along the Arkansas River approximately 7 miles south of Leadville, Colorado. This property lies within the Arkansas Headwaters Recreation Area (a joint BLM-Colorado State Parks management area) and has about three miles of river frontage on the east bank of the Arkansas River. It also has fishing on two tributary streams. The property affords excellent views of Mt. Massive and Mr. Elbert and comprises mostly river floodplain. Acquisition by BLM would open significant new public fishing opportunities along the Arkansas river in a County where access is currently very limited due to private ownership.

Approximately 4,000 acres of private land intermingled with BLM and Forest Service holdings in the headwaters of La Jara Canyon and Fox Creek approximately 10 miles northwest of Antonito, Colorado. The land currently belongs to Quinlan Ranches, Inc. It has excellent elk winter range and other wildlife habitat, and borders the scenic La Jara Canyon. It also lies within and adjacent to the BLM's Los Magotes Area of Critical Environmental Concern (ACEC).

Funding to purchase water or land from willing sellers to augment wildlife habitat in the BLM's Blanca Wetlands management area 7 miles northeast of Alamosa, Colorado. The Blanca Wetlands contain existing and historic wetlands that are very productive for ducks and geese and have crucial winter habitat for bald eagles.

Fiscal savings: The Circle-C, Arkansas River and Blanca Wetlands acquisition proposals in this exchange all appear on a nationwide acquisition priority list that has been provided to Congress for Fiscal Year 1995 Land and Water Conservation Fund appropriations. Acquiring these three priority properties through a land exchange would achieve the LWCF goals without the need for spending increasingly scarce LWCF dollars.

LAKE COUNTY,
BOARD OF COUNTY COMMISSIONERS,
Leadville, CO, Aug. 5, 1994.

Hon. BEN NIGHTHORSE CAMPBELL,
Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR CAMPBELL: The Lake County Board of Commissioners through this letter seeks your help in opening a unique segment of the Arkansas River to permanent public access. As you can see from the enclosed newspaper article, which appeared in the Denver Post last fall, the upper Arkansas River is indeed bouncing back. The completion of two water treatment plants in the upper California Gulch watershed near Leadville together with the resiliency of the Arkansas River itself have led to producing a truly first class fishery.

On August 4, 1994 the Board held a formal public hearing on a proposal to have the Bureau of Land Management acquire a three mile stretch of the river south of Leadville by means of a land exchange. The County Commissioners toured this stretch of the river several weeks ago and strongly believe it should become public. At the public hearing unanimous support for the proposal was received along with statements of a truly remarkable resurgence in the river's water quality and fishing. According to several representatives from Trout Unlimited, the fishery is now among the best in the entire state.

The biggest obstacle at this time in Lake County is that most of the river frontage is in private ownership. This severely limits access to fishing opportunities along the river. The BLM acquisition of the Minnequa Bank parcel would provide new public access along a three mile length of the river as well as along two tributary streams where we have observed first hand healthy fish.

In summary, the Board views this land exchange as having a very positive impact for Lake County as we expand our economic base. The Board notes that a land exchange of this nature will not require the expenditure of tax dollars, and appears, therefore, to be a prudent and fiscally sound endeavor in all respects.

Accordingly, based on the findings of the Public Hearing, the Lake County Board of Commissioners requests that you assist in whatever capacity is needed to move this exchange proposal forward.

Thank you in advance for your consideration of this matter. Of course the Board stands ready to offer any further assistance or information as may be helpful in your deliberations.

Sincerely,

JAMES E. MARTIN,
Chairman.
EDWARD J. O'LEARY,
Commissioner.
ROBERT W. CASEY,
Commissioner.

CITY OF BLACK HAWK,
Black Hawk, CO, Aug. 3, 1994.

Senator BEN NIGHTHORSE CAMPBELL,
Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR CAMPBELL: We are writing to express our support for the efforts by Lake Gulch Inc. to acquire approximately 400 acres of scattered public lands lying directly south of the boundaries of Black Hawk and Central City. We understand that the acquisition will be by way of a land exchange with the United States and are supportive of that concept.

The public lands which Lake Gulch Inc. is seeking to acquire consist of dozens of small scattered parcels administered by the U.S. Bureau of Land Management, ranging in size from approximately 1/100th of an acre to 33 acres. Most are less than an acre in size. The BLM lands are largely either surrounded by or contiguous to, land which is privately owned or controlled by Lake Gulch Inc. or its affiliates. As such, and because of the very small size of most of the BLM parcels, their utility for future public use and enjoyment is very limited. The land ownership pattern and problems are similar to those which prompted Congress and the President to approve the recently enacted law in neighboring Clear Creek County. With the exception of a small portion of the North Clear Creek floodplain, lands are not needed for any purposes of local government and can be conveyed into private ownership.

It is our belief that the proposed acquisition by Lake Gulch Inc. will benefit our area by consolidating land that can be used for future residential and non-gaming purposes, and that the consolidation represents the most likely scenario to achieve an early cleanup of the numerous mine tailings and other surface disturbances which scar the land and inhibit cleanup of our streams.

As you may also be aware, the rapid commercial development associated with gaming in our area has resulted in a scarcity of affordable land available for residential purposes. As a result, many of those who work in Black Hawk and Central City are commuting in long distance every day from the Denver metro area, which is an undesirable situation from numerous standpoints, including employee health and safety, air pollution, and traffic congestion. Likewise, because of high land values within the gaming area and the rugged, unbuildable terrain which predominates into many surrounding areas, our community currently lacks many basic stores and services which other communities take for granted. We believe that because the intermingled Lake Gulch Inc. and BLM lands lie directly adjacent to the boundaries of Black Hawk and Central City, but outside the legally permissible gaming area, a consolidated private ownership will realistically lend itself to the construction of affordable housing and other non-gaming uses and services for which we have a great need.

Thank you for considering our views on this important matter. We hope you will be able to lend your assistance to the land exchange project as it moves forward.

Sincerely,

KATHRYN ECCKER,
Mayor.

QUINLAN RANCHES, INC.,

Hon. SCOTT MCINNIS,
U.S. House of Representatives,
Washington, DC.

Senator BEN NIGHTHORSE CAMPBELL,
Russell Senate Office Building,
Washington, DC.

Senator HANK BROWN,
Hart Senate Office Building,
Washington, DC.

GENTLEMEN: Our family corporation is the owner of approximately 4,000 acres of land near Conejos Canyon in Conejos County. This land is interspersed with BLM and National Forest land and is appropriate for acquisition by those agencies to enable them to better manage their lands as an integrated unit. The land has absolutely superb elk habitat, very important winter range, and is highly scenic. We believe you will shortly be receiving a communication from the Colorado Division of Wildlife further describing the property and the reasons why it should be in public ownership.

For those reasons we are working with representatives of Lake Gulch Inc. to include our land in a land exchange with BLM so that it will come into public ownership. We understand that the proposal will be presented to you for introduction into the Congress next week, and we encourage you to give it your support.

We stand ready to offer you any assistance we can in consummating the exchange. Please let us know what additional information you may require. The family members are getting on in years and would like to see the public acquisition a reality.

Sincerely,

MICHAEL C. QUINLAN.

COLORADO TROUT UNLIMITED,
Englewood, CO, June 30, 1994.

Senator BEN NIGHTHORSE CAMPBELL,
Russell Senate Office Building,
Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR CAMPBELL: For several years now our members have been involved in efforts to have BLM acquire a 517 acre tract of land in Lake County approximately 7 miles south of Leadville. This land has roughly 3 miles of river frontage on the Arkansas River, as well as fishing on Big Union Creek and Spring Gulch, which cross the property. For your reference, I am enclosing a copy of an article about the tract which appeared in the Denver Post last fall.

Our members are interested in this acquisition because it would open a prime stretch of the Arkansas River in Lake County to public access and fishing. Most of the river of Lake County is currently closed to fishing because it is private land. BLM acquisition of the land would also dovetail very nicely into the Arkansas Headwaters Recreation Area management scheme, which is an ongoing cooperative effort between BLM and the State of Colorado. Although there may be some hazardous materials deposited in the floodplain of the property as a result of washdowns from California Gulch before EPA's recent cleanup efforts, the river in this segment now appears to be in good condition, and we believe the benefits of public ownership are paramount.

On behalf of our members, therefore, Colorado Trout Unlimited urges you to assist BLM acquisition of this property. We understand that the property may be included in a land exchange proposal to be submitted for your consideration in the near future. Assuming the other aspects of the proposed exchange meet with your approval, we strongly urge you to seek its approval so that the Arkansas River land will be opened to public use.

For the Board of Directors,

J. STEPHEN CRAIG,
Executive Director.

COLLEGIATE PEAKS ANGLERS,
CHAPTER OF TROUT UNLIMITED,
Salida, CO, July 15, 1994.

Senator BEN NIGHTHORSE CAMPBELL,
Senate Office Building,
Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR CAMPBELL: This is the second time in 2 years that our Trout Unlimited chapter has written to seek your support for a land exchange proposal involving key river frontage property along the upper section of the Arkansas River just south of Leadville. Our 150 members include several people who live in Leadville. The citizens of the upper Arkansas Valley have little public access to the Arkansas and this exchange would go a long way toward easing that situation.

The proposed exchange includes 3 miles of frontage on the main river as well as access to parts of Big Union Creek and Spring Gulch. The land is contiguous with BLM property just down stream and will make an excellent addition to the Arkansas Headwaters Recreation Area which is jointly managed by the BLM and the Colorado Department of Natural Resources.

In addition, we would ask that there be a condition placed on the acquisition that would limit the number and size of the fish that could be harvested. The exact regulations would be set by the Colorado Division of Wildlife. There is a superb population of large fish in this part of the river because it has not been open to public fishing and it would be a disservice to other anglers to allow a few greedy people to remove these fine fish in the first few days of public access.

On behalf of our members here in the Upper Arkansas Valley we urge you to support this exchange.

For our Board of Directors,

GEORGE KAVOURAS,
President.

COLORADO DIVISION OF WILDLIFE,
Salida, CO, July 20, 1994.

Senator BEN NIGHTHORSE CAMPBELL,
Russell Senate Office Building,
Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR CAMPBELL: The Colorado Division of Wildlife supports the proposal for a land exchange by the BLM in order to acquire a portion of land bordering the Arkansas River in Lake County, 7 miles south of Leadville.

This acquisition would open, for fisherman access, a valuable 2.5 miles along the Arkansas River as well as fishing opportunity on Big Union Creek. Presently Lake County has limited public access on the river. This proposal would be of significant value to the area.

Since the EPA Superfund Clean-up Activity, the Arkansas River Headwaters has become a valuable fishery and will continue to improve.

Therefore, I strongly urge that when this land exchange proposal is submitted, you give it favorable consideration, assuming it meets the land exchange criteria.

Regards,

STAN OGLIVIE,
Area Wildlife Manager.

STATE OF COLORADO,
COLORADO STATE PARKS,
Denver, CO, July 15, 1994.

Senator BEN NIGHTHORSE CAMPBELL,
Russell Senate Office Building,
Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR CAMPBELL: I have recently learned of the opportunity the Bureau of Land Management (BLM) may have to purchase approximately three (3) miles of riverfront property along the Arkansas River in Lake County near Leadville, Colorado. This is exciting news, and I would like to offer my support of this acquisition.

The BLM and Colorado State Parks, together, manage the Arkansas Headwaters Recreation Area (AHRA). This is a unique partnership for management of an outstanding area that extends 148 miles from just below Leadville to the upper end of Pueblo reservoir.

The AHRA is a newly created area (1989) and, as such, is still in its development stages. The authors of the area's Management Plan, primarily the region's local citizens and representatives, and the Division of Wildlife, have identified a real need to acquire fishing access in almost exactly the same area available to us now.

There is currently very little public river access in Lake County, especially this close to Leadville. Acquisition of this property would consequently be very beneficial to the citizens of Leadville, Lake County, and the visitors to the Arkansas Headwaters Recreation Area. Once acquired, the area can and will be incorporated into AHRA, as already provided for in the area's Management Plan.

I also understand that the floodplains along the river contain some depositional material from mining activities that fit under the category of hazardous materials. These deposits may be a source of contamination to the river and could be a future liability problem if any cleanup is needed. It is important that any action authorizing acquisition of his property address this issue.

I hope this addition to the Arkansas Headwaters Recreation Area can become a reality. Thank you for any help you can lend.

Sincerely,

LAURIE MATHEWS,
Director.

SIERRA CLUB,
ROCKY MOUNTAIN CHAPTER,
Denver, CO, August 30, 1994.

Senator BEN NIGHTHORSE CAMPBELL,
Russell Senate Office Building,
Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR CAMPBELL: I am writing today to express the support of the Rocky Mountain Chapter of the Sierra Club for H.R. 5016, the Gilpin County, Colorado—BLM Land Transfer Act of 1994, introduced by Rep. David Skaggs. The Sierra Club in Colorado has had the opportunity to review the particulars of this bill and we believe it is in the overwhelming best interests of the citizens of Colorado and of the United States that the bill be quickly enacted. We urge you to cosponsor this bill in the United States Senate.

The lands to be disposed by the United States are scattered small tracts on the edge of expanding development and are best suited for transfer to private ownership. In exchange, the United States will receive title to a number of spectacular parcels, including several of the highest priorities for land acquisition by the BLM and the National Park Service in Colorado. The acquisition of these high priorities—Blanca wildlife habitat by BLM and the Circle-C church camp by Rocky Mountain National Park—will result in a fiscal savings of some $1 million by avoiding the need to spend scarce Land and Water Conservation Funds. At the Blanca wildlife habitat area, BLM is attempting to recreate in the San Luis Valley a portion of what was once the most extensive wetlands in Colorado. The Circle-C church camp acquisition will eliminate a serious conflict with management of the Park Service's Long Peak campground.

The bill's remaining acquisitions will also result in significant gains for public fish and wildlife habitat. The Arkansas River parcel will open up 3 miles of river to public fishing along a stretch gaining popularity with anglers, and the large block of lands in La Jara Canyon will safeguard important big game winter range.

Sincerely yours,

MARK PEARSON,
Wilderness Chair.

[From the Denver Post, Sept. 22, 1993]
UPPER ARKANSAS IS BOUNCING BACK
(By Charlie Meyers)

LEADVILLE.—With all the daintiness of a matron sipping high tea, the trout removed the fly from the rippled surface, lowered its head and prepared to resume its repose in the depths of the pool.

The angler, alerted by a recent surge of activity, snapped the rod back sharply in anticipation of yet another of the river's modest-sized trout. What happened next was totally out of character for a stream that, by rights, shouldn't have any fish at all.

At the first pressure, the line scythed sharply downstream and the angler, surprised by the power of the run and fearing for his light tippet, felt the rod dip dangerously before he yielded line. The fish that eventually came splashing into the shallows was, like a dozen or so before it, a brown trout. But this one, quickly photographed and released, measured just more than 18 inches and displayed the beginnings of a hooked jaw, a testament to a longevity that defied its circumstances.

This fish had been caught just 5 miles below a place where, less than a year and a half earlier, an ugly effluvium soil poisoned the river. Now the upper Arkansas River is teeming with trout, some of very respectable size. How they, and their ancestors, survived through all the outpouring of heavy metals from the controversial Yak Tunnel near Leadville is a mystery. Less puzzling, but still not wholly determined, is what the future of the river will be.

The tunnel, a 4-mile-long conveyance through which the leachings of some 200 old mines have been delivered for the better part of a century, more recently has gained notoriety as a Superfund site of the Environmental Protection Agency and, consequently, a political and legal football.

EPA has put the clamps on two mining companies that had the remarkably poor judgment to take over the tunnel operation 40 years ago. Res-Asarco Joint Venture, a foible of the Asarco and Newmont mining companies, was ordered to install a $15 million water treatment plant to clean up the assortment of zinc, cadmium, lead and arsenic that had been flowing down California Gulch in an ugly orange rush into the Arkansas.

Although they had to be dragged, kicking and screaming, much of the way, the mining companies have executed the charge well. The plant has been in operation since April 1992, and Kan Wangerud, EPA's manager for the project, reports it is removing 200 tons of toxins a year from the river.

"It has been estimated that 80 percent of all the metal loading in the Arkansas comes from California Gulch," said Wangerud, who said his agency will continue to pursue cleanup of other pollution sources, even as it moves to resolve its legal entanglements with Res-Asarco.

Meanwhile, the upper river seems to have taken a decided turn for the better, particularly on a 3-mile stretch that is being shuttled through Congress as part of an appropriation package that would put it under control of the Bureau of Land Management and, hence, open to the public. The parcel, which includes 517 acres of river bottom land that largely has been abused by cattle, is presently under foreclosure by the Minnequa Bank of Pueblo. The appropriation amount is $350,000.

I came to this stretch last week with John Singletary, a Pueblo resident who represents the bank in its efforts to sell the property.

"You won't believe how many fish are in the river," Singletary had said. "I caught 30 or 40 one day, some of them really nice."

I've known Singletary for years, have hunted with him, and know him as an honorable man. But I also had fished this same place a dozen years earlier and come away convinced the mine effluent had left it virtually decimated. Could there have been such a rousing recovery so soon?

On a day when golden aspen trees shimmered on the flanks of the surrounding peaks beneath a cloudless sky, the answer came quickly. A 16-inch brown took a deep drifted Prince nymph and, as the day and the water warmed, a dozen and a half were caught and released on an Elk-hair caddis on the surface. Twice that many more moved on the fly in some manner. The catch also included a cutthroat and a brook trout. Singletary added eight fish on spinners, his efforts doubtlessly hampered by the cold water.

So where did all these fish come from? One likely scenario is that, as water quality improves, they have migrated in from both upstream and downstream, as well as from a major tributary, Lake Fork Creek.

Of all this, the element that impressed me most was the river itself. It turns and tumbles through some of the more inviting rifles and runs you'll ever find in a stream that size. There could be even better days ahead, with an agreement in principle for EPA and Res-Asarco to settle all aspects of litigation.

"Then we could use all our resources for pollution control instead," Wangerud said.

Let the cleanup continue.

SIERRA CLUB,
ROCKY MOUNTAIN CHAPTER,
Durango, CO, July 13, 1994.

Senator BEN NIGHTHORSE CAMPBELL,
Russell Senate Office Building,
Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR CAMPBELL: I am writing to encourage your support for acquisition of water rights and habitat for the Bureau of Land Management's Blanca Wildlife Habitat area in the San Luis Valley. Specifically, a new opportunity has arisen whereby funds could be provided to BLM for this important acquisition as part of a larger, legislated land exchange.

The Blanca Wildlife Habitat area offers the potential for 3,000 acres of riparian wetlands and associated recreational opportunities such as hunting, fishing, hiking, picnicking, and birdwatching on the floor of the San Luis Valley. Acquisition of land and water rights by BLM will make possible the protection and restoration of historic wetlands that produce 15,000 waterfowl and 1,500 geese each year and also provide critical winter habitat for bald eagles. In addition, the Blanca Wildlife Habitat area is already a congressionally approved mitigation site for the Bureau of Reclamation's Closed Basin Water Salvage Project. Acquisition of the Blanca Wildlife Habitat area therefore not only greatly benefits wildlife and recreation in the San Luis Valley, but also furthers the importance congressional goal of mitigating impacts from a major Bureau of Reclamation project. For these reasons, federal acquisition of land and water rights at the Blanca Wildlife Habitat area merits your support.

Legislation may soon be proposed to implement a wide-ranging land exchange of BLM and private lands throughout Colorado. Part of this exchange envisions freeing up funds for BLM to purchase land and water rights at the Blanca Wildlife Habitat area. I encourage you to support this legislated land exchange to benefit the Blanca Wildlife Habitat area if the other, as yet undefined, components of the exchange meet with your approval.

Sincerely yours,

MARK PEARSON,
Wilderness Chair.

CONEJOS COUNTY GOVERNMENT,
BOARD OF COUNTY COMMISSIONERS,
Conejos, CO, Sept. 1, 1994.
Re Hogote Property Trade-BLM.

Mr. WAYNE QUINLAN,
Quinlan Ranches, Inc., Antonito, CO.

DEAR WAYNE: We understand that the BLM is interested in acquiring your Hogote property through a trade which would result in BLM owning this property. We further understand that Scott McGinness and Ben Nighthorse Campbell on behalf of the BLM are willing to introduce a bill in Congress for the acquisition of this property.

Please be advised that the Conejos County Board of County Commissioners has no objections to such a transaction.

Sincerely yours,

LEROY VELASQUEZ,
Chairman.

By Mr. KOHL (for himself and Mr. COHEN):

S. 2471. A bill to authorize the Administrator of the Office of Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention Programs to make grants to States and units of local government to assist in providing secure facilities for violent and chronic juvenile offenders; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

THE JUVENILE CORRECTIONS ACT OF 1994

• Mr. KOHL. Mr. President, only weeks have passed since the President signed the crime bill into law. I, and others, have praised the crime bill for being comprehensive and sweeping in nature—for attacking the crime problem on a range of different fronts including policing, punishment, prisons, and prevention.

There is one facet of the crime problem, however, that the Crime Act did not address. Even though juvenile crime is, as we know, at the very heart of the crime problem nationwide, and even though the crimes juveniles commit are increasingly violent in nature, not one penny of the Crime Act is dedicated to the construction, expansion, and operation of juvenile corrections facilities.

Not one penny dedicated to juvenile detention facilities, Mr. President, in an omnibus law that otherwise contains $8 billion in prison funding.

The truth is that the draft version of the crime bill conference report did indeed contain a provision establishing funding for secure juvenile facilities. But this provision was inexplicably eliminated at the eleventh hour by conference negotiators.

Today I resurrect that crucial provision. The Juvenile Corrections Act of 1994, which I am pleased to introduce together with my friend and colleague Senator COHEN, would establish a distinct source of Federal funding for State and local governments to construct, expand, and operate secure juvenile corrections facilities. These facilities will be used to incarcerate violent and chronic juvenile offenders.

Mr. President, this bill would guarantee that juvenile corrections does not become the poor stepchild of Federal anticrime efforts. And it would do so without increasing the deficit, by funding juvenile facilities through a reallocation of 10 percent of the Crime

Act's general prison funding. It is not, in my view, unreasonable to suggest that 10 percent of the money spent by the Federal Government on prisons should be devoted to juvenile facilities and the incarceration of violent juvenile offenders.

Let me close, Mr. President, by pointing out that the need for Federal juvenile corrections assistance is clear and immediate. A study released this past week by the Office of Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention indicates that the majority of juvenile detention facilities nationwide are vastly overcrowded and understaffed—much more so than adult prisons. Juvenile offenders attacked detention facility staff 8,000 times last year. And recidivism rates for juveniles who have been incarcerated are unbelievably high.

In short, we cannot afford to turn a blind eye to the juvenile corrections problem. And so I hope my colleagues will join with me and Senator COHEN next year in enacting the Juvenile Corrections Act as an important supplement to the Crime Act.●

By Mr. LOTT:

S. 2472. A bill to require the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency to issue rules governing risk assessments, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Environment and Public Works.

THE SOUND SCIENCE IN RISK ASSESSMENT ACT

● Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, the bill I am introducing today will ensure that the Environmental Protection Agency provides a solid, uniform, credible foundation for our environmental laws and regulations. Clearly, there is a credibility crisis today because of the politicizing of scientific data. It has reached such a level "Nightline's" Ted Koppel devoted an entire show to how shamelessly sound scientific data has been ignored to advance a political agenda. This is wrong.

EPA is jeopardizing all scientifically based rules and regulations by its cavalier and frequently arbitrary manner in establishing risk criteria. To provide a balanced approach, legislative guidelines are needed. My bill will address this problem. It allows both the public and the scientific community through public forums to examine the scientific foundation for each risk criteria. This bill will not prevent EPA from implementing rules. Rather, it will provide greater support for the rules because of this inclusive risk criteria developmental process.

Another equally valid reason for this bill is prioritization. The risk assessment process will apply consistent rules which will enable appropriate comparisons, and the identification of anticipated benefits. This means public officials can select rules which afford the greatest protection to the public. Fiscal constraints makes this essential because governments, at all levels, have limited and finite resources.

EPA already has a number of risk assessment guidelines; however, there is widespread recognition that they are inadequate. Even an internal EPA review revealed that its process is not up to the standards necessary for providing unbiased scientific public policy.

My bill will restore confidence in the process for developing risk assessment. First, it requires full and clear disclosure of all uncertainties. Second, it sets specific timeframes for promulgating rules. Third, it requires all risks go through the public notice and comment procedure. The same process that all regulatory rules are subjected. And fourth, it requires EPA to update risk assessments as scientific understandings change.

In closing, I urge my colleagues to support this legislation. It makes risk assessment fully accountable to both the public and the Congress and not just subject to the discretion of invisible bureaucrats or an agency.●

Whereas United States interests are best served by policies that treat Taiwan's leaders with respect and dignity;

Whereas the results of the Executive branch review of the policy of the United States toward Taiwan were announced on September 7, 1994;

Whereas the adjustments made in United States policy toward Taiwan do not concretely or adequately upgrade relations.

Therefore it is the sense of the Senate that United States policy toward Taiwan should:

(1) welcome the President of the Republic of China on Taiwan and other high-level government officials to the United States;

(2) allow unrestricted office calls by all representatives of Taiwan in the United States to all United States departments and agencies, including the Departments of Defense and State and offices in the Old Executive Office Building;

(3) send cabinet-level officials, including officials from the Departments of State and Defense, to Taiwan on a regular basis;

(4) support a proposal in the 48th General Assembly of the United Nations for formal observer status for Taiwan as a first step toward full membership in the United Nations and its specialized agencies;

(5) support a proposal at the earliest possible time for full admission for Taiwan into a wide range of international organizations including, but not limited to:

(a) the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT) as a developed country, irrespective of the timetable for the admission into GATT of the People's Republic of China;

(b) the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development (IBRD or the World Bank);

(c) the International Monetary Fund;

(d) the Convention on Trade in Endangered Species of Flora and Fauna (CITES);

(e) the Montreal Protocol of the United Nations Environment Programme (UNEP);

(f) International Maritime Organization (IMO);

(g) International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA); and

(h) United Nations High Commission for Refugees (UNHCR)

(6) change the name of Taiwan's representative office in the United States to the "Taipei Representative Office";

(7) approve defensive arms sales to Taiwan based solely on Taiwan's self-defense needs, without qualitative or quantitative restrictions;

(8) require advice and consent of the United States Senate for the highest level representative of the United States in Taiwan;

(9) upgrade the status of the existing American Institute in Taiwan (AIT);

(10) include a report by the Secretary of State to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee and the House Foreign Affairs Committee on U.S. economic, cultural, political and security relations with Taiwan on an annual basis;

(11) support participation of the President of the Republic of China on Taiwan in the Asia Pacific Economic Cooperation forum; and

(12) raise U.S. concerns about the People's Republic of China threat to forcefully reunify Taiwan and the People's Republic of China.

• Mr. MURKOWSKI. Mr. President, I am submitting this resolution to express the sense of the Senate concerning United States relations with Taiwan on behalf of myself and Senator ROBB, Senator BROWN, Senator PELL, Senator HELMS, and Senator SIMON.

In July 1993, the administration indicated that it was involved in an inter-agency review of United States policy toward Taiwan. I was told on many occasions that an announcement about the policy review was imminent, but then something would come up to delay its release—and that something was usually the People's Republic of China. First there was the most-favored-nation debate, and then North Korea negotiations, and then Secretary Brown's trip to Beijing. Finally, on September 7, during the congressional recess, the policy was quietly announced.

It is often said that you have to crawl, before you walk, before you run—and the administration really took that adage to heart when it looked at United States policy toward Taiwan. It did not even make real changes to the policy, only adjustments. Let me make clear: I welcome the mere fact that the adjustments were made at all. A review of United States-Taiwan relations was long overdue, and at least the changes that were made are tentative steps toward making our policy more rational. But I think bolder and more substantive steps are necessary.

First, the policy review changed the name of the Coordination Council for North American Affairs to the Taipei Economic and Cultural Representative Office. At least it has a geographical reference, but why not identify Taiwan?

Second, higher-level U.S. Government officials from economic and technical agencies will be allowed to visit Taiwan under the revised policy. Of course, Carla Hills, U.S. Trade Representative during the Bush administration, visited Taiwan, so this adjustment is not breaking new ground. The key here is implementation.

Third, ROC officials meeting with some high-ranking U.S. officials will now be able to meet in official settings rather than hotels and restaurants. But the policy leaves the caveat that this excludes meetings at the State Department, Old Executive Office Building, or the White House, even though AIT officials are now allowed to go to the Foreign Affairs Ministry in Taipei, the equivalent of our State Department. So we can go into theirs, but they cannot visit ours. Does this make sense?

In those areas where adjustments were made, the administration at least acknowledged some inconsistencies. I am most concerned about those areas where the administration chose to keep the status quo intact. What did not change?

The arms sale policy still has the inconsistency of the bucket. The Taiwan Relations Act says we will provide for Taiwan's self-defense needs, but then we told the PRC we would limit the quality and quantity of our sales. In practice, the bucket is an anachronism because we broke it with the F-16's. But by pretending to still adhere to arbitrary limits, our defense exporters lose sales because there are no ground rules for when a system will or will not be approved.

In testimony submitted by the American League for Exporters and Security Assistance before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee hearing yesterday on United States relations with Taiwan it is estimated that past and present defense sales lost to the Taiwan defense sales policy could reach as high as $20 billion in revenue and 456,000 jobs.

In addition, these questions remain to be answered:

United States military planes cannot stay overnight, but must go to Japan. What purpose does this serve except to waste U.S. taxpayer dollars?

Visas are stamped with Hong Kong rather than Taipei. What happens in 1997?

Official visits to the United States by President Lee and other high-level Taiwanese officials are still prohibited.

Government officials are still prohibited from visiting the State Department, the White House, and the Old Executive Office Building.

Taiwan membership in the United Nations is not supported.

I know that the administration will likely defend the lack of change as a signal that the policy has been working in the past—if it's not broke, don't fix it. But Mr. President, I disagree.

This new policy might suit diplomacy 101, but it does not suit fairness 101. This is not a just policy for the 21 million people on Taiwan who lack representation in the multilateral institutions that want Taiwan's money and Taiwan's compliance but not their input. It is not a just policy for the ROC Government officials who act with great dignity and respect, but are not treated to the same.

This is not a just policy for a country like the United States that claims to stand for democracy and human rights. This is not a just policy for President Clinton who made democracy a cornerstone of his foreign policy. This is the President who said: "We need new leadership that will stand with the forces of democratic change . . . a President who will utilize our economic, political and cultural resources to assist the new forces of freedom emerging around the world." Why does this apply to Haiti, but not Taiwan?

Mr. President, I find it ironic and sad that this administration is willing to risk the lives of American soldiers to restore Aristide to power in Haiti under the guise of democracy, but is not willing to ruffle the PRC's feathers by rewarding democracy and human rights in Taiwan. The United States continues to turn a cold shoulder toward Taiwan, even as the world itself is warming up. Our Taiwan policy is a relic of the cold war.

Back in 1978, when the United States broke off diplomatic relations with the ROC and recognized the PRC we lived in a very different world. A wall still divided the two Germanys, the Soviet Union was the "evil empire" and the people of Taiwan lived under martial law. This was the state of the world when the United States passed the Taiwan Relations Act. Although the world has changed dramatically since then, our policy has not.

Taiwan has emerged as a model democracy: martial law was lifted, press curbs were lifted, and opposition parties were made legal. Popular presidential elections are scheduled for 1996.

Taiwan has emerged as an economic powerhouse: the world's 13th largest trading economy with the largest foreign reserves, our 5th largest trading partner, despite power buying trips led by Secretary of Commerce Brown, Taiwan still buys twice as much from the United States as the PRC.

Taiwan and the PRC have allowed economic and social contact. In 1993, the ROC became the second largest investor in the PRC. 1.5 million residents of Taiwan traveled to the mainland last year.

But rather than reward Taiwan for the enormous, positive changes it has undertaken, the United States has chosen to treat it like an international pariah. We are all familiar with the unfortunate incident when President Lee's request for an overnight stay in Hawaii en route to Costa Rica was denied after protests from the PRC Embassy. There are many of us in Congress who feel very strongly that not only should President Lee be permitted to stay overnight on U.S. soil, he should be welcomed as a guest.

After all, this administration has seen the benefit to having Yasser Arafat, head of the PLO and not a recognized government leader, visit the White House. Similarly, Gerry Adams, head of Sinn Fein, the political wing of the Irish Republican Army, visited the United States. In each of these cases, there were certainly objections. In fact, I am told that the United States has recently granted Gerry Adams a 2-week visa to visit several cities, over the objections of the U.K. Similarly, Tibet's exiled leader, the Dalai Lama called on Vice-President GORE at the White House. The PRC strongly objected to this visit. But the administration rightly went ahead with the visit. Why not President Lee?

The administration's new policy explicitly states that it will not support Taiwan's bid to enter the United Nations, presumably because the PRC would object. I disagree with this rationale. With organizations like the GATT, the United States looked for ways where both Taiwan and China could join. Taiwan agreed to call itself a customs territory and the GATT members, under United States leadership, have worked out an arrangement where the two will likely enter the GATT together. Certainly the United States could be a leader for creative diplomacy in the U.N. arena as well. Other countries would follow our lead, but if the United States does not take the moral high ground, other countries will not want to be bold.

We saw a recent example of this when the Japanese, under intense pressure from Beijing, asked President Lee not to attend the Asian Games, even after the invitation was extended. If the United States were to allow President Lee to visit the United States for an event such as accepting an honorary degree from Cornell, however, Japan may find the backbone to allow President Lee to attend international sports events.

However, the United States must be willing to risk a little PRC bellowing. The PRC has grown arrogant because every time they yell, we back down. This appeasement only compels them to seek greater concessions. This must stop. We all look forward to the day that the PRC is important because it is governed freely and that it uses its long tradition and culture, not just its immense size, to garner respect. But the PRC is not there yet. Clearly, the United States has important interests in maintaining relations with the mainland, but that does not mean that our foreign policy can be held hostage by the PRC. The United States stands for democracy and freedom. We must not turn our backs on the people of Taiwan. If the administration will not turn United States-Taiwan relations loose, the United States Congress must.

Therefore, Mr. President, along with Senators ROBB, BROWN, PELL, HELMS, and SIMON, I am introducing this resolution to express the sense of the Senate concerning United States relations with Taiwan. It states that it is the sense of the Senate that United States policy toward Taiwan should include 12 policy changes to improve United States-Taiwan relations, many of which I have just mentioned.

Specifically, the United States should welcome the President of the Republic of China on Taiwan and other high-level government officials to visit the United States. Reciprocally, the United States should send cabinet-level officials, including officials from the Departments of State and Defense, to Taiwan on a regular basis. The United States should support a proposal for observer status at the United Nations for Taiwan, and membership in other international organizations.

If the United States takes these and the other steps listed in this resolution, United States policy toward Taiwan will head in the right direction. I urge my colleagues to fully support this resolution.●

SENATE RESOLUTION 271—RELATIVE TO THE PROPOSED ORGON OPTION PROJECT

Mr. HATFIELD submitted the following resolution; which was referred to the Committee on Governmental Affairs:

S. RES. 271

Whereas Federal, State and local governments are dealing with increasingly complex problems which require the delivery of many kinds of social services at all levels of government;

Whereas historically, Federal programs have addressed the Nation's problems by providing categorical assistance with detailed requirements relating to the use of funds which are often delivered by State and local governments;

Whereas although the current approach is one method of service delivery, a number of problems exist in the current intergovernmental structure that impede effective delivery of vital services by State and local governments;

Whereas it is more important than ever to provide programs that respond flexibly to the needs of the Nation's States and communities, reduce the barriers between programs that impede Federal, State and local governments' ability to effectively deliver services, encourage the Nation's Federal, State and local governments to be innovative in creating programs that meet the unique needs of the people in their communities while continuing to address national goals, and improve the accountability of all levels of government by better measuring government performance and better meeting the needs of service recipients;

Whereas the State and local governments of Oregon have proposed a pilot project, called the Oregon Option, that would utilize strategic planning and performance-based management that may provide the new models for intergovernmental social service delivery;

Whereas the Oregon Option is a prototype of intergovernmental relations, and it has the potential to completely transform the relationships among Federal, State and local governments by creating a system of intergovernmental service delivery and funding that is based on measurable performance, customer satisfaction, prevention, flexibility, and service integration; and

Whereas Oregon is well prepared to begin work on the Oregon Option, and the project has the potential to dramatically improve the quality of Federal, State and local services to Oregonians; Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That it is the Sense of the Senate that the proposed Oregon Option project has the potential to improve intergovernmental service delivery and that the Federal Government should work cooperatively with the State and local governments of Oregon to fully implement the Oregon Option proposal.

• Mr. HATFIELD. Madam President, a very interesting meeting took place in my State earlier this month. During the week of September 19, over 100 officials from Federal, State and local government met in Portland to begin work on a project called the Oregon Option. I believe this project has the potential to vastly improve intergovernmental service delivery in my State, and today I am submitting a sense of the Senate resolution that urges the Federal Government to continue to be an active partner in this effort.

Oregon proposes a new and revolutionary basis of intergovernmental service delivery. When the Oregon Option is implemented, Federal grants or transfers to State and local government in my State will be based on results rather than procedures. The different governments will agree on a set of outcome-based performance measures, which will be based on the ingenious Oregon Benchmarks model, and on the level of funds that each government would provide to achieve those performance goals. Regulations, at the Federal, State, and local level would be dramatically streamlined. This pilot project would give Oregon's State and local governments more flexibility in responding to the specific problems faced in the communities of the State in exchange for greater accountability, in the form of performance measures.

Madam President, my State has learned that current Federal programs create disincentives for State and local government to work to prevent human service problems. State and local governments receive billions of Federal dollars to subsidize human service programs, but these governments are penalized—because they lose these Federal funds—if they spend money on programs that prevent people from needing human service payments in the first place. Additionally, federally supported programs at the State and local level tend to be too rule-driven. Millions of dollars end up mired in regulatory process instead of being available for services to people.

The Oregon Option proposal elevates the traditional debate about intergovernmental relations to a new level. This proposal is not about finding more Federal funding for State and local programs; it is also not merely a request for more waivers of Federal regulations. Instead, this proposal recognizes that the current relationship among our governments has focused on procedure and compliance rather than on whether we are serving the citizens of our Nation.

Madam President, I believe the Oregon Option builds on the greatest strengths of Federal, State, and local government. The Federal Government plays a very important role in setting national goals and protecting our Nation's most needy people. However, one of the things I have learned over my career is that States and local governments are better at knowing how to create programs to meet these goals in ways that fit the State or community. State and local governments are the innovators. By using the performance-based and measurable benchmarks, the Oregon Option creates a good balance between protecting the intent and goals of Federal policy and allowing States and local governments the freedom to find appropriate solutions to community problems.

Madam President, the work on this project is just beginning, and the 100 officials who meet in Portland are very committed to this project. At the conclusion of this 3-day meeting, the Federal, State and local participants selected five benchmarks as the starting point for exploring this new intergovernmental relationship, and task forces have formed to begin to outline the important goals and barriers in achieving these benchmarks. I look forward to working with them and with my colleagues in the Senate as this project moves forward. •

ADDITIONAL STATEMENTS

NO COMMUNITY IS ISOLATED

• Mr. HATFIELD. Mr. President, an essay by Jerry Timmons, a former associate editor of the Oregonian, came to my attention recently and I would like to take this opportunity to share it with my colleagues. In his article, Mr. Timmons makes clear that the divisions between rural and urban regions are on occasion artificial demarcations, the creation of which often works to the disadvantage of rural communities. His point that "rural issues affect everyone" is one I agree with fully. I urge my colleagues to consider the arguments presented by Mr. Timmons and to bear these comments in mind as issues affecting both communities come before the Senate.

The essay follows:

[From the Oregonian, July 26, 1994]

POPULATION SHIFT NOT AS IMPORTANT AS CROPS

(By Jerry Tippens)

Whatever did the western half of the country do to deserve the popular interpretation of the 1990 census? From the time the decennial data were assembled, the West has been bombarded by breathless pronouncements that the region is more urban than rural.

Imagine that. Of course, the population of the West has been more urban than rural for decades. Indeed, in a strict delineation between those who live in town and those who live in the country, even Harney County is more urban than rural.

It makes one wonder what the big deal was about the 1990 figures. Do they make rural issues somehow less important to the region and the nation than they would be if more people lived on the land?

Let us all hope not. But there is something disturbing about the way the findings are presented. The implication is that, since more people in the West live in cities than outside of them, it is all right to ignore rural issues and focus exclusively on urban ones. Indeed, it may be the proper course to follow.

That notion ought to sound the alarm for everyone concerned that decisions affecting food supply increasingly will be made by people who know nothing about food production because the population is drifting away from its agricultural ties.

The problem is that rural issues tend to affect everyone. We are all in trouble if that fades from urban view.

Even if rural matters weren't vital to all, however, the fact that more Westerners reside in cities than in the countryside does not mean that the region may simply turn its back on rural problems. Take a look at the map. The West is still mainly rural, even if most of the people are clustered in metropolitan concentrations along the Pacific shelf, plus a few inland enclaves in such places as Denver and Salt Lake City.

Wise use of the West's natural resources to produce food and fiber for the nation and much of the world is the urgent business of everyone in the country. It is incumbent upon all people, even those in the most urban settings of the East, to be knowledgeable about what transpires on the land out there where so few people live.

But that is especially true of those in Western cities where the wide open spaces are part of the neighborhood. Those spaces are neither barren wastelands nor playgrounds for leisure activity, but in fact form the foundation of the region's economy. They also contribute extensively to the nation's standing around the globe through its ability to feed itself and still have food enough for much of the rest of the world.

The urban and rural West ought to be in harmony on sound environmental practices, judicious use of limited water resources cleansed of pollution from the past, the gaining of maximum economic as well as nutritional returns from agricultural abundance, and population distribution to keep small communities healthy while preventing the cities from choking on congestion.

Such issues may reside in the rural West, but they are of equal importance to those who dwell in the urban West. The urban West, however, must realize as much. The cities must do better, for instance, in understanding the region of which they are a part than they did on airline deregulation. With vast distances and limited population, the West had an urgent stake in maintaining a reliable regional air transportation network. But the cities seemed more concerned about reduced fares to New York.

If food supply and international trade are to be ignored by most people because they live in the city, it is not just the rural West that is in trouble. It is the nation. It is the world.

That prospect is what's disturbing about the way the 1990 census figures of the West are presented. •

EPIC AWARD

• Mr. SIMON. Mr. President, I am proud to be able to announce Women

Employed as the first recipient of the Exemplary Public Interest Contribution [EPIC] Award presented by the Department of Labor.

It is not surprising that this outstanding community organization is based in Chicago, IL. And although Women Employed is well known for its grassroots efforts, it also has a widely respected national role as the lead advocacy organization on equal employment opportunity issues.

Mr. President, I ask to include into the RECORD following my remarks a statement by Women Employed that highlights why Anne Ladky, Nancy Krieter, and all the other hard working women at Women Employed are deserving of this first EPIC Award.

My sincere congratulations and best wishes.

The statement follows:

1994 EXEMPLARY PUBLIC INTEREST [EPIC] AWARD

INTRODUCTION

In the twenty-one years since its founding, Women Employed has played a critical role in many of the most important advances in women's employment rights and opportunities. WE began in 1973 as an advocacy organization aimed at improving working conditions and combatting discrimination in Chicago's downtown business district. Today, Women Employed is the foremost grassroots advocate for effective federal equal opportunity programs and a vital source of assistance for thousands of women seeking better opportunities. As Chicago's largest working women's organization, WE provides an extensive range of career development and job search services for its 1600 members.

Women Employed has long been recognized as the leading national monitor of the performance of the OFCCP and a key analyst of its policies.

Women Employed's role is unique because we combine our perspective as a representative of working women with extensive technical knowledge of the Executive Order and OFCCP. Since 1976, Women Employed has been responsible for convening regular meetings between the leading national civil rights and women's groups and every Secretary of Labor, Assistant Secretary of Labor (ESA), Solicitor of Labor and OFCCP Director in order to shape effective public policy. WE consults regularly with regional and national OFCCP staff to develop and refine regulatory issues, enforcement initiatives and recommendations for improving compliance review activity. Women Employed brings a critically needed grassroots view to its role in providing comprehensive technical research and analysis on women's EEO issues. We are called upon by Congress to testify about the effectiveness of affirmative action as well as OFCCP's mandate to enforce the Executive Order.

Women Employed was instrumental in negotiating affirmative action policies in major Chicago financial institutions and insurance companies, in response to working women's complaints about inaccessibility to promotions and higher-paying jobs. We worked closely with OFCCP staff to develop the concept of targeting industries for review and applying an affected class analysis to determine remedies for thousands of victims of discrimination. The organization was a key resource for Carter administration officials charged with reorganizing federal equal opportunity agencies; we documented the need for consolidating all federal agency contract compliance activities into the OFCCP, a proposal which was adopted and implemented. WE worked closely with OFCCP, the Secretaries of Labor, and Congress to preserve the Executive Order when serious efforts to abolish it were initiated in the 1980's.

In 1989, Women Employed worked with the Solicitor's Office to reach a $14 million back pay settlement in the Harris Bank case, the largest back pay settlement ever secured under the Executive Order. The Harris Bank case, developed and filed by WE in 1974, involved discriminatory hiring, placement, pay and promotion practices. WE's documentation of the bank's practices, our development of key anecdotal and statistical evidence, and fourteen years of persistent pressure resulted in remedies for 8000 women and minorities. The case established the validity of third party representation on behalf of large numbers of victims whose anonymity was protected; it also upheld the legal principle underpinning the requirement of backpay under the Executive Order. The methodology developed in this case continues to be applied in reviews of all types of federal contractors where class-wide discrimination is uncovered by OFCCP.

Women Employed has successfully brought together constituency groups and federal contractors to explore effective approaches to improve equal opportunity practices and increase employment access for women and minorities.

Women Employed has implemented a model partnership between women's and civil rights groups and corporations who are major federal contractors as well as leaders in EEO and affirmative action. Chicago Area Partnership (CAPS), composed of thirteen corporations with national headquarters or substantial operations in Chicago, local civil rights and women's organizations, and the Region V OFCCP staff holds monthly meetings that have resulted in on-going and frank dialogue about human resource challenges. The beginning phases included lively discussions concerning our perspectives of and biases about each other, development of a list of cutting-edge issues the group was interested in pursuing, and an executive examination of the crucial elements of mobility and diversity. CAPS fulfills two significant purposes. First, it brings together important players to network and communicate different perspectives and practices. Second, it provides opportunities to collaborate on specific EEO/HR projects. CAPS has committed to undertake three specific projects: creating a "best practices" document focusing on glass ceiling issues, improving linkages with community-based organizations to provide entry level employment opportunities, and collaboration on federal EEO regulatory reform. The group intends to become a model for productive collaboration that can be replicated nationally. OFCCP's participation has encouraged CAPS in this direction.

Women Employed is an excellent source of qualified female applicants for federal contractors seeking to meet affirmative action requirements.

The organization is the largest provider of career development and job search services to women in the Chicago metropolitan area. We maintain an on-going job bank available at no charge to our 1,600 members which lists federal contractors' current job openings. Our Career Development Network links members currently employed in major companies in all industries at all employment levels with members who are job-seeking or considering career changes. We offer job search seminars and career awareness programs to our members and the general public.

Keys To Success, a pre-employment training program serving approximately 100 women annually, enables displaced homemakers to make the transition into the paid workforce, and provides highly motivated job candidates to Chicago-area employers. Keys To Success offers employers, including federal contractors, a job placement service that sends employers only pre-screened candidates, provides quick access to a pool of highly motivated candidates, and lowers employee turnover.

We build relationships with Chicago area employers to offer them a pool of qualified female candidates while helping women find economically self-sufficient employment. Our job developer works closely with federal contractors seeking female and minority candidates for a variety of positions.

We especially promote and encourage non-traditional opportunities for women seeking employment, pre-apprenticeship programs, or other training and apprenticeship programs. Women Employed leads a statewide effort to increase the participation of women in training programs leading to employment in non-traditional occupations. We are also designing a pre-technical training program for women to be launched on a pilot basis in the fall of 1994. We anticipate that program graduates will be able to fill the need for qualified applicants for entry-level technical and mechanical jobs.

CONCLUSION

Over the past two decades, Women Employed has played a unique role in promoting equal employment opportunity. Our advocacy at both the national and local levels has helped numerous OFCCP administrations shape effective public policy. We have built strong relationships with federal contractors in an effort to encourage voluntary programs to improve equal opportunity practices and increase employment access for women and minorities. Women Employed has provided thousands of working women with training, counseling and job referral services. •

HONORING JUSTICE ROSALIE WAHL

• Mr. DURENBERGER. Mr. President, I rise today to celebrate the career of a distinguished jurist and a great Minnesotan. On August 31, Justice Rosalie Wahl—the senior member of the Minnesota Supreme Court—retired after 17 distinguished years on the bench.

In 1977, Rosalie Wahl made history when Governor Rudy Perpich appointed her to our State's high court. She was the very first woman to serve in that capacity—and throughout her years on the court, she served with great intelligence and independence of spirit.

A woman of firm feminist convictions, she was notable for putting the law ahead of her personal preferences. In a notorious rape case, she dissented in favor of the defendant because she believed his rights had been violated. She recognizes that impartiality in the execution of justice is the most difficult—and the most necessary—element of the work of a judge.

Rosalie Wahl is a very impressive Justice, and the pride of the Minnesota legal system. She will be missed as a judge—but all those of us who are fortunate enough to know her personally will continue to treasure her friendship.

Mr. President, I ask my colleagues to join me in congratulating this distinguished justice on the occasion of her retirement.

I ask that a profile of Justice Wahl from the August issue of Bench & Bar be included in the RECORD at the conclusion of my remarks.

The profile follows:

JUSTICE IS A WOMAN (By Gwenyth Jones)

You didn't give the Supreme Court to a woman "in those days," any more than you gave a little girl a toy gun or a boy a doll for Christmas, says former Chief Justice Douglas K. Amdahl. It just didn't occur to the male legal establishment to think of a woman justice. "Those days" were before Rosalie Wahl was appointed to the Minnesota Supreme Court in 1977. And, says Amdahl, as her appointment ended the males-only era, her retirement August 31 will confirm the new era, one in which the appointment of a woman to the Court draws no particular notice.

Justice Wahl is now senior member of the Court and one of a female majority, although the Court has yet to have a female chief justice. During her tenure she helped initiate and chaired task forces which made intensive studies of racial and gender bias in the Minnesota justice system, served on the American Bar Association's accreditation committee, was chair of that committee, and eventually chair of the Section on Legal Education and Admissions to the Bar.

Wahl was appointed by Gov. Rudy Perpich, who had specifically promised to name a woman to the first Supreme Court vacancy in January, 1977.

Minnesota feminists had kept Perpich's promise in mind. When there was a rumor in May that Justice Harry MacLaughlin might be appointed to the federal bench, the Minnesota Woman Lawyers had the names of seven women ready to recommend as his replacement. These they circulated in a letter sent to women activists throughout the state. Ironically, Wahl was never identified as a "favorite" in any of the speculative news coverage that followed. Every one of the other women on the list eventually became a judge and one of them, Esther Tomljanovich, eventually joined Justice Wahl on the Supreme Court.

Perpich had never met Wahl; she was one of three "finalists" named by a nonlawyer committee he asked to find suitable candidates. He said he felt the court was tilted toward justices with corporate law and prosecutorial backgrounds. The governor interviewed all three finalists and, he says, was particularly impressed by Wahl's work directing the criminal practice clinic at William Mitchell College of Law. Recently, with just a touch of disappointment in his voice, he said he had hoped she would be "another Miles Lord." Lord, whom Perpich greatly admires, is a former attorney general and federal judge known by many for his activist devotion to the underdog, and criticized by others for what they consider undignified, even improper conduct. Perpich insists he wasn't disappointed in Wahl, however.

(She says, "I don't have it in me to be Miles Lord.")

RUNNING WATER AND OTHER PERKS

Justice Wahl describes her attitude when she first came on the bench as one almost of awe: "It's so nice of you to let me come in, I'll obey the rules." She says she "didn't realize the prerogatives of power." When asked what prerogatives she means, she doesn't talk about limousines or private dining rooms (although the Court has the latter) but things like the authority to order certificates of appreciation for volunteer workers on court-appointed task forces, or to express her views when she swore people into office.

One prerogative Justice Wahl didn't have was a private rest room—there wasn't any women's rest room in the Court wing of the Capitol then. She and staff women had to use the public rest room off the rotunda until, several years later, after the chief justice's secretary petitioned the Court, a women's rest room was installed inside the Court precincts.

Wahl was named in June but didn't take her seat on the Court until October, because she couldn't be officially appointed until Justice MacLaughlin resigned, and he was waiting for his nomination to the federal bench to be confirmed. She made use of the time to read the cases that would be coming before the Court that fall so she'd be prepared to hit the ground running. She also called on each justice. They knew her through hearing her argue almost 100 cases, but she didn't know any of them. (Chief Justice Robert Sheran had one advantage over his fellows: He had 18 years' experience working with a woman professionally—Charlotte Farrish was senior partner of their law firm in Mankato.) Justice Wahl asked the justices for advice on proper behavior for justices and what activities she would have to give up. (She stayed on the mailing list of the Minnesota Women's Consortium to "read about all those things that I couldn't do, but were getting done.")

When the justice lined up to enter the courtroom for Justice Wahl's first session, Justice Walter Rogosheske opened the door for her. "Oh, you don't need to open the door for me," she said, but Justice Rogosheske, a warm and courtly man, replied, "As long as we serve together, I'll open the door for you."

"She was very persuasive and had her share of cases where she changed the Court's mind," remembers Amdahl. "She could call me an idiot and make me like it," says Chief Justice A.M. Keith.

The Court had had experience with her outspokenness when she was arguing a criminal case. Dismayed by some of the questions from the justices, she declared, "I can't believe this court agrees with the proposition that only the innocent are entitled to a fair trial."

A TOUGH ELECTION BATTLE

About ten months after she took her seat, Justice Wahl had to defend herself in what was surely the most interesting and perhaps the dirtiest judicial campaign in the state's history. None of the three men—two district judges and a former short-term attorney general—who ran against her in the primary would admit that the fact that she was a woman had anything to do with it. But the conventional wisdom was that a woman incumbent would be easier to beat and before she even took her seat, Wahl had predicted she would be opposed. The men said they were running because she didn't have enough experience, although she had argued cases before the Supreme Court for ten years and had directed the William Mitchell criminal law program for four years. Second District

Judge J. Jerome Plunkett, one of her primary opponents, described the program as "showing [the students] where the criminal court was" or "taking high school students and having them sit in on a day in court." Actually, under the Student Practice Rule, the senior students handled misdemeanor cases from beginning to end, preparing them under Wahl's supervision and presenting them in court under the supervision of public defenders.

Plunkett also objected to support given Justice Wahl by the Lawyers Volunteer Committee to Retain Incumbent Justices. The committee (to which Plunkett had contributed previously) had existed for years, and had always supported any incumbent justice who was opposed. In the 1978 election, although only Justice Wahl was opposed in the primary, Justice C. Donald Peterson was opposed in the general election, and they ran a joint campaign. When Plunkett lost out in the primary he refused to endorse Justice Wahl, saying he didn't think it appropriate for a judge to make an endorsement in a "political" race.

Women of all political shades worked on Justice Wahl's campaign. And women lawyers, many of whom had not been politically active, also joined in. Among her public supporters there were also men from both parties, among them a former Republican governor. The campaign included all the kinds of activities of the usual political race except those Justice Wahl thought might not fit the dignity of a judicial election. (No pressing the flesh in shopping malls.)

There was a citizens volunteer committee; there were fund-raising coffee parties and lunches in elegant Lake Minnetonka houses, talks to clubs, an ice cream social, even—a rarity in those days—an appearance on a radio call-in show. Twice, once by car and once by chartered plane, Justice Wahl made a campaign swing around the state with hour-by-hour schedules and interviews lined up with local newspapers and radio stations in half a dozen towns.

After the primary, which eliminated the two trial judge candidates, the Minnesota State Bar Association took its traditional plebiscite on judicial candidates and Wahl got 2,547 votes to 779 for Robert Mattson Sr., the other survivor of the primary. Soon afterwards Mattson began attacks on her which were strongly resented by many of the bar. First he filed a formal complaint with the Ethical Practices Board, charging that her campaign committees were illegally organized. The board, which had previously approved the organization, dismissed the complaint.

Mattson was quoted on several occasions as saying that Justice Wahl had taken positions "contrary to Minnesota law" when she dissented on some criminal cases. The majority opinion was the law, Mattson declared. He also charged her with favoring a convicted rapist, perhaps with an eye to dampening her support among women. She had not hesitated to be the only dissenter from the decision upholding the conviction because she believed the defendant's rights had been violated. Despite her own feminist convictions, she has dissented since in other, similar cases, thereby earning the professional dislike of many prosecutors. (One, hearing that this article was to be written, exclaimed, "I hope it's not going to be a tribute!")

Mattson also charged that Justice Wahl hadn't carried her weight during the year she had been on the Court, and hadn't written as many opinions as the other justices.

However, he didn't cite any figures and the rotation system by which justices are assigned cases from the calendar means that all of them write approximately the same number of opinions, plus any dissents they may write. When it was apparent that she would have a tough election campaign, Chief Justice Sheran offered to assign her fewer cases, but she refused, since it would have meant an extra burden for other justices.

In October, Mattson ran a series of advertisements in the Twin Cities newspapers. One attacked Justice Wahl for her vote in the rape case. It said Mattson, in contrast, believed in "judicial support for the police." Another said Justice Wahl had "lost 95 percent of her cases." C. Paul Jones, state public defender at the time, says the ad apparently referred to post-conviction-remedy cases Wahl had argued for his office and says she "won every case that possibly could have been won by any attorney anywhere."

Justice Wahl and her supporters sang hymns around the piano in the University Club while waiting for election returns, which gave her 57 percent of the votes and Mattson 43 percent.

COMPANY ON THE COURT

She was the only woman on the Court for five years, and on the last day before Jeanne Coyne was to be sworn in, Justices Wahl and James Otis, whom Coyne succeeded, were the only members of the Court around at lunchtime. They went down to the cafeteria where reporter Betty Wilson was standing next to them in the line. Said Wilson, "Well Justice Wahl, tomorrow you'll have company on the Court." Justice Otis drew himself up and replied: "I'll have you know she has always had company on the Court."

Justice Coyne was appointed by Gov. Al Quie, who had refused to talk about the possibility of naming a woman or minority, saying he didn't think it right to name anyone because of his or her sex or color of skin. (He appointed two men before Coyne was named.) He says, "She was the best candidate offered to me."

There could hardly have been a greater contrast between two career women than there was, outwardly, between Justices Wahl and Coyne. Justice Wahl was married and had four children before she went to night law school, and gave birth to her fifth child while she was a student. (She was divorced in 1972.) Her legal experience was all in criminal defense of indigents. She is an outgoing person who doesn't hesitate to go around a table in a public restaurant embracing everyone. Justice Coyne, who is unmarried, is a reserved, quiet person who admits that some people consider her "formidable." She was an accountant before she went to the University of Minnesota Law School, and immediately after graduation got a job with Meagher Geer, who, she says, "turned me loose." Her practice covered real estate, tax and estate planning, and related fields. At one time she was up for consideration for the 8th Circuit Court of Appeals and got as far as going to Washington to be "vetted." But she killed any chance she had by saying, after being escorted around, questioned by one person after another, "Nobody has asked me whether I'm interested in this job."

Both women shun labels. Although Justice Coyne admits to being more "conservative" than the rest of the Court, she says she doesn't mind being the only conservative, pointing out that she was the only woman in a firm of about 20 men for years. She says some things happened to her during her practice that might have been considered sexual harassment, but she was too busy to pay attention, adding, "Nobody ever took me lightly twice."

Justice Coyne says she believed the biggest thing she could do for other women who might aspire to come after her was "to be a really good, competent lawyer." But she helped organize the Minnesota Women Lawyers, and, when the Equal Rights Amendment was under consideration, she was a member of a speakers bureau which went out campaigning for the ERA.

Justice Wahl says she didn't realize until after Justice Coyne came to the Court "that I really had been alone, in a way." All the men were friendly and helpful, she says, but there are some little things one woman can share with another that she can't with a man.

Another thing Justice Wahl says she didn't realize at first was "how many male lawyers there seemed to be who had spent their careers positioning themselves to get on the Supreme Court" and resented not being named. Through the grapevine she heard of remarks made at bar social events like "I worked so hard all these years and see what happens."

Since the Court has had a four-to-three female majority, there has never been a down-the-line gender division on any case, according to Chief Justice Keith; but when Justices Wahl and Coyne were still the only women they dissented together in two cases (Abuzzahad and McClelland) denying permanent maintenance to women divorced after several decades of a traditional marriage. "The men on the Court were generally good on gender discrimination," Justice Wahl says, "but they just couldn't understand the situation of a woman of 50 or 55 with a permanently diminished earning capacity."

IN HER OPINION(S)

The opinions Justice Wahl wrote which she particularly remembers range from ruling that witnesses can't testify about things they remember under hypnosis to giving confidentiality protection to group therapy sessions. The latter case came when the Court's calendar was so crowded—about 1,500 cases a year—that it frequently issued summary affirmations, or decided cases without oral arguments, and the group therapy case almost fell through the cracks. But Justice Wahl felt the public interest was at stake, not just one defendant's, and persuaded the Court to give the case a full hearing with amicus briefs.

Minnesota lawyers are indebted to Justice Wahl for one of her memorable cases: The Court ruled police could not get a warrant authorizing the search of a lawyer's entire office if they wanted material concerning one client who was under investigation. The Court said police would have to subpoena the specific file, which a judge would then review in camera.

But Justice Wahl's biggest satisfaction has been "just knowing my being here has made a difference. Maybe not as much difference as I think needs to be made, but I did make a difference."

Chief Justice Keith says Justice Wahl "created the sense of fairness on the Court," and thinks that in the long run her greatest contribution will have been her work on the gender and racial bias task forces.

Only two of Justice Wahl's five children are connected with the law: Sarah, whose husband, Michael Davis, was recently appointed a federal judge, is in the Hennepin County Attorney's office and her youngest daughter, Jenny, is in the Management Information Service Department (MIS) of Fredrikson & Byron in Minneapolis. She has six grandchildren, ranging from one and a half months to 24 years old.

Sarah Wahl has always been in the county attorney's civil division, with offices far from the criminal division, but she occasionally hears remarks from prosecuting colleagues like, "Well, I see your mother has done it again" when Justice Wahl has voted for reversal on due process grounds.

Justice Wahl refuses to lay out a schedule for her retirement. First she's going to relax, because she wants "to see if there's any cream to rise to the top." Then, she says, "I'll try to find things that are important for me to do that might not be done if I don't do them." •

SUPPORT MACEDONIA NOW

• Mr. DECONCINI. Mr. President, a major meeting of the Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe—commonly known as the CSCE or Helsinki process—will convene in Budapest on October 10, only a few weeks away. This meeting will assess the situation in places like the Balkans, Central Asia, the Caucasus, and the emerging democracies of East-Central Europe generally, with a heavy focus on human rights and building democratic institutions.

Unique among European institutions, the CSCE seeks to include all countries of the region, and the smallest participant has the same rights and privileges as the largest and most powerful. Unfortunately, of the entire CSCE region, one, and only one, country is actually being denied full membership. That country is Macedonia. Macedonia, a former Yugoslav Republic, wants to be a member, and deserves to be a member, but has so far been restricted to observer status. Greece has continually denied the consensus needed for full membership. Greece claims its northern neighbor to be a threat, by its flag, its constitution, and its very name.

I have been to Macedonia twice, and communicated with its leaders, representatives of its Albanian community and, of course, with Greek officials here and in Greece regarding this important issue. I would like to suggest a few important points.

There is a complex historical debate over what Macedonia is, and who Macedonians are. It is clear, however, that Macedonia did not seek the breakup of Yugoslavia. It only has sought to cope with the fact that it did breakup, leaving a choice between independence or being an appendage to the repressive and chauvinist Greater Serbia that remained. It certainly did not advocate the use of force to resolve differences or to achieve its objectives. As it embarks on its course of independent statehood, Macedonia has had to cope with the collapse of the Yugoslav economy of which it was an integrated and dependent part. It has had to enforce the international sanctions on Serbia to the north, and it had to contend with its own ethnic diversity, which includes a sizable ethnic Albanian community. From the beginning, it met the European criteria for recognition used for the other former Yugoslav Republics.

Yet, recognition by most of Europe was delayed by over 1 year. It took the United States almost another year to recognize it. We still do not have full and formal diplomatic relations, even though we have over 500 Americans there as part of the U.N. peacekeeping contingent. And Macedonia still is being blocked from full participation in the CSCE. Greek objections have been supplemented this year by an economic blockade on its northern neighbor designed to pressure Macedonia into agreeing to Greek demands. Macedonia, while defending its positions, has demonstrated its willingness to, but cannot submit to economic coercion which violates the spirit of the CSCE.

And, regardless of our own individual readings of Balkan history, the Macedonia people genuinely believe themselves to be ethnic Macedonians, and their country to be Macedonia. This will remain the case, no matter what Greece or anybody else tries to tell them, and to try to convince them otherwise only generates resentment. Holding to their Macedonian national identity in no way means the people of Macedonia have any claims on Greece or any other neighbor. Do not people have the right to their own self-identification?

Not only is blocking Macedonian membership wrong, it is dangerous. Macedonia has avoided major violence so far, but history shows the potential it has to explode with violence. Macedonia has been the focus and victim of wars several times this century. Today, with war nearby in Bosnia and Herzegovina, severe repression next door in Kosovo, and tensions throughout the Balkan region, we cannot afford to risk the further destabilization of Macedonia. The presence of U.N. peacekeeping forces demonstrates international concern over the threat of destabilization.

Blocking Macedonian membership is also counterproductive. There are some nationalists in Macedonia, but no more—and probably less—so than in virtually any other country in the region. The flag, and perhaps some parts of the constitution, indicate their presence. Macedonia, again like others who nevertheless are CSCE members, has difficulties in the transition to democracy. However, by isolating the country, do we do more to encourage extreme Macedonian nationalism than to discourage it? Can we not accomplish more to build democracy in Macedonia by including it in European affairs politically and economically?

Mr. President, I think it not only appropriate but necessary for Macedonia to become a full member of the CSCE in Budapest, and I am urging the State Department to push hard for this. The U.S. Delegation and a majority of the present CSCE States not only support Macedonian membership, but lament its continued denial. Budapest is not only a major conference, however, it begins the week before Macedonia holds elections, the first multiparty elections since achieving independent statehood. Movement in the CSCE would go far in demonstrating support for democracy in Macedonia at this critical time. And, while we are at it, the United States needs to move beyond merely recognizing Macedonia. The United States should immediately establish full bilateral relations with Macedonia, and Greece needs to be persuaded that the blockade it has unilaterally imposed on Macedonia must be lifted. •

UNITED STATES-JAPAN TRADE TALKS

• Mr. ROCKEFELLER. Mr. President, I wish to express encouragement and support to our trade negotiators who are once again entering the 11th hour in negotiations with Japan over their unfair trade practices. We have learned from previous administrations, who have backed down in the face of Japanese intransigence, that only firm and consistent pressure will make sustained progress on this most intractable of bilateral trade problems.

Sustaining such pressure may be particularly difficult right now because I sense that many people may have tired of the struggle. We have worked so hard for so many years to penetrate the Japanese market, it is no surprise that people are weary. We have had to expend enormous amounts of government and private sector energy to make even modest inroads. Yet it is precisely at this point, when the long-term economic fundamentals in both Japan and the United States are moving in our favor, that we should continue to apply pressure.

That is why earlier in this Congress I introduced, with House Majority Leader GEPHARDT, the Fair Market Access Act of 1994 (S. 1872). The goal of our bill is to apply consistent pressure by establishing a structure for setting measurable targets for our trade negotiators in order to give the administration and its successors more tools in the seemingly never-ending fight to open Japan's markets. I did not pursue S. 1872 this year in large part because I wanted to see how the framework talks would conclude. I still hold out hope that our outstanding differences will be settled, and I applaud President Clinton and Ambassador Kantor who have rightfully set real results and real market access as their goals.

Those results must include progress in reducing the cartel behavior that blocks many United States goods and services from being imported into Japan. Agreements that tear down these barriers, open Japan's market to United States imports, and are backed by measurable criteria for assessing progress, will provide enormous benefits to the economies of the United States, Japan, and the entire world.

A recent article by Clyde Prestowitz and Alan Tonelson of the Economic Strategy Institute makes this case in plain dollar figures. They estimate that Japan's trade barriers are costing the United States $50 billion in annual exports; $50 billion, and as many as 1 million jobs. Worldwide, Japan's trade barriers are depressing global economic output by $400 billion. That is a staggering amount.

And let's not be fooled by those who say we are merely trying to export America's economic problems to Japan. For years, Japan pleaded with us to cut our budget deficit, and President Clinton finally did it to the tune of $500 billion over 5 years. The biggest budget cut the world has ever seen.

Nor can American lack of competitiveness be blamed here either. American businesses, from heavy industry to high technology, have made a remarkable turnaround in recent years. Yet, as Prestowitz and Tonelson point out, this has had no positive impact on exports to Japan, despite the fact that the yen continues to rise and make our products cheaper. Indeed, that very increase is compelling evidence of the rigidities in their economy that cause them to pile up huge surpluses.

In fact, the whole point of the framework talks was to pinpoint precisely those areas where the Japanese Government plays a role in maintaining trade barriers and where the United States is most competitive around the world. The framework emphasized areas such as Government procurement of high technology telecommunications and medical equipment, major sectors such as automobiles and auto parts, regulatory reform in services like insurance, and areas where we already had agreements, such as in flat glass.

Everywhere else in the world American industries in these sectors not only are competitive, they are doing well. Yet in Japan, our businesses face hurdle after hurdle. Distribution networks closed to our products; customs practices that stall our products at the docks; regulations that are impossible for foreign companies to comply with; practices that are as effective as an embargo; and cartels, keiretsus, that block our companies from entering anywhere in the vertical supply chain. Add to this continual changes at the top of the Government—four prime ministers in 1 year—and a bureaucracy that is accountable to no one and you have a perfect mix for intransigence.

President Clinton and our trade negotiators should not feel the slightest doubt from this Congress about the importance of standing firm on resolutions of these issues. The consequences of Japan's market barriers are not abstractions or minor irritants. They have direct effects on the industries, their workers and families, and communities in our States. West Virginia is full of industries, large and small, that make products for sale all over the world. We know we have to compete, and as part of a country that is an open lane to our trading partners who import their products, services, and goods to buyers in the United States. But West Virginians expect their Government and this Congress to insist on a two-way street with Japan. As Japan takes advantage of the international marketplace to build its economy, it cannot continue protecting its own industries from the rest of us.

The only way we can respond is to be resolute and to make clear that we won't settle for a bad deal. A credible threat of sanctions seems to be the only way to convince the Japanese to come to terms and make an enforceable deal. The cellular agreement that Motorola negotiated earlier this year is a perfect example. We cited Japan for not complying with previous agreements, and with the threat of imminent sanctions hanging over their head, they finally came to the table and negotiated a reasonable deal. To abandon the quest for more successes like this at this critical juncture would send exactly the wrong signals to currency markets and our other trading partners.

With respect to the specifics of the talks, it is important to note that the sectors on the table were not chosen haphazardly. We specifically identified areas where American industry is most competitive, and where we could identify a legitimate market opportunity in Japan.

I want to focus on two of the framework sectors to show just how strong our position is: flat glass and telecommunications procurement.

Flat glass includes items like insulating glass, safety glass, and high performance coated glass. American flat glass makers are globally competitive—with market shares approaching 25 percent in Europe and Latin America—yet the United States has less than 1 percent of Japan's $4.5 billion glass market, and our minimal market share has continued to experience a year-to-year decline in both absolute and percentage terms. In sharp contrast, Japanese glass makers account for 20 percent of United States sales.

The explanation? A cartel of three Japanese companies has divided the market for two decades, maintaining steady market shares in a 5-3-2 ratio. This cartel perpetuates the closed distribution system that represents the most egregious market barrier facing U.S. glass makers. With few exceptions, each of the approximately 400 wholesalers and distributors of flat glass in Japan represent only one Japanese manufacturer. Only a small handful of distributors with nominal market share are even willing to handle imported glass. Japan even acknowledges the cartel, admitting in a Japan Fair Trade Commission report that there is a "state of monopoly by three makers, pricing by consensus, and creation of sales networks of distribution by each maker."

To correct this imbalance, Japan promised in a 1992 "Action Plan" signed by President Bush and Prime Minister Miyazawa to "substantially increase market access for competitive foreign flat glass manufacturers." Two years later, it is clear from the numbers that this commitment has not been kept. Despite active bilateral negotiations, Japan has failed to take meaningful action and is in effective violation of our trade agreement. And that is why 6 months ago the trade representative's office identified in its National Trade Estimates Report access to Japan's flat glass market as a priority foreign trade objective.

The other area I want to comment on today is Government procurement, specifically of telecommunications equipment. Japan is planning to invest nearly half a trillion dollars in telecommunications infrastructure over the next 15 to 20 years. Half a trillion dollars of real money, real jobs, and real market opportunities for American companies and companies from around the world. Overall procurement plans by the Japanese Government over the coming decade are among the most significant market opportunities in the world. Our negotiators must be resolute. It is vital that American industry has a fair opportunity to compete for that business.

America is the world leader in information technologies. Our fiber optics and ATM switching and wireless communications are second to none, just to name a few of the telecommunications technologies that the Japanese telecommunications company, NTT, will deploy in its network. If we have an open and nondiscriminatory opportunity to sell in the NTT market, we will win a major share of it. Unfortunately, NTT has had a history of discrimination against foreign manufacturers. Since the agreement that was signed in the early 1980's to open the NTT market, foreigners have gained only a 6 percent market share. This is far below the market share United States companies have been able to command in the non-NTT telecommunications market in Japan and in other export markets. The evidence here is clear, NTT has discriminated against United States companies, and the Government, through the Ministry of Finance, still has both legal and effective control of NTT. The Government can clearly solve this problem if it wants to.

These are just two of the areas where we are negotiating with Japan. They are particularly important to the glass workers of my State of West Virginia. This part of our economy that makes advanced glass products—things like fiber optics and technologically advanced flat glass—has generated new jobs over the last 10 years, and it is critical that we fight for their access to markets worldwide.

The other areas we are negotiating with the Japanese are mightily important, too. Our autos are competitive the world over; yet you could drive on the streets of Tokyo for hours without seeing an American car. Our auto parts are state of the art, but the Japanese inspection system effectively keeps them out of the market for replacement parts. From medical technologies to service sector regulations, our negotiators must stand tough and make good deals. If the Japanese cannot be brought into agreements that will mean real results, real market access, then we must take appropriate action.

Such action is not my goal. What I want to see, and what these industries want to do, is the selling of United States products in Japan. But if Japan will not come to reasonable agreement in these most reasonable areas, then we must do what is necessary. No more empty promises and vague statements of intent.

I beseech Japan's leaders and negotiators to recognize the reasons that they should give our industries and products the same treatment that they expect and get all over the world including in the United States. I urge President Clinton and Ambassador Kantor to fulfill their obligation both to America's interests and the principle of fair trade that should be the basis of the strengthened relationship that we seek with Japan.●

HONORING JACK HORNER

● Mr. DURENBERGER. Mr. President, I rise today to honor one of the preeminent figures in the history of Minnesota broadcasting.

Next week, my friend Jack Horner will receive the 1994 Pioneer Broadcaster Award from the Minnesota Broadcasters Association. This award could not be more appropriate, because in the State of Minnesota, Jack Horner was the pioneer broadcaster.

The history of American broadcasting in this century has exactly two parts—before TV and after. In Minnesota, Jack Horner was the man who first scouted this Continental Divide.

On December 7, 1947, Jack became the first person ever to appear on television, not just in Minnesota but in the entire midwestern United States. His broadcast lasted 25 minutes—during which he introduced film clips of football games and the marriage of England's then-Princess Elizabeth.

If Jack's sole lifetime achievement had been standing in front of the camera that day, his name would still be remembered today. But his historic broadcast in 1947 was just one episode in a breathtaking career that has spanned nearly five decades.

When Jack Horner started out in broadcasting, the New Deal was still new. It was 1935 when a 22-year-old Jack joined KGFK radio in Moorhead, MN—and he was already doing play-by-play coverage of basketball the following year. After a number of broadcasting jobs around the Midwest, Jack came to the Twin Cities in 1944—and prepared to inaugurate the age of television.

Since 1947, Jack has put together a monumental record of Minnesota broadcasting firsts. First baseball game televised in Minnesota (1947). First University of Minnesota football telecast (1948). First ever TV appearance by the internationally renowned Harlem Globetrotters (1949). The list goes on.

For four decades, Jack Horner has been welcomed into hundreds of thousands of living rooms. Countless families welcome his voice—and I speak on their behalf when I say "Thank you, Jack, for giving us your work over the last forty years."

I myself grew up in rural Minnesota, with a dad who was athletic director at St. John's University. My window on sports outside of SJU was "Jack Horner's Corner"—and I thank Jack for the memories.

Mr. President, I ask my colleagues to join me in wishing this historic broadcaster—this good friend—and his wife Cel our warmest congratulations on this richly deserved award.●

JAPAN'S BID FOR A PERMANENT SEAT ON THE U.N. SECURITY COUNCIL

Mr. ROTH. Madam President, since the end of the cold war, the United Nations and its most important decision-making body, the Security Council, have assumed more prominent roles in addressing global problems.

During the past 5 years, the Security Council has authorized more peacekeeping operations and passed almost half as many resolutions as it did during its first 45 years. Despite the increased activity, the Security Council has remained essentially unchanged since it was established at the end of World War II.

To enable the Security Council to better address the expanded range and number of problems it now confronts, the General Assembly last year adopted a resolution requesting that all member nations provide suggestions on restructuring the Security Council. Close to 80 countries responded. More than 40 suggested that Japan take a permanent seat on the Security Council.

After all, with the world's second largest economy, Japan would seem a logical choice for permanent membership in a restructured Security Council. In its statement of support, the United States said that Japan should gain a permanent seat because Tokyo has achieved a level of global influence greater than most of the current permanent members.

Other supporters pointed to Japan's position as the United Nations' second largest financial contributor and the world's largest provider of overseas development assistance.

Yesterday, Japan's Foreign Minister, in a speech before the U.N. General Assembly, made the most direct official statement ever on Japan's desire to gain a permanent seat on the Security Council.

The Foreign Minister, however, began his speech by stating what Japan would not do as a permanent member of the Security Council, rather than listing the activities which it would perform in such a capacity.

Today, the United States Ambassador to Japan, Fritz Mondale, made plain President Clinton's backing for Japan's position.

The Ambassador said that United States "Government support is rock solid," and that the United States sees no requirement "that permanent members of the Security Council participate in U.N. peacekeeping operations."

Fritz is an old friend of mine, and a man I hold in great respect. Yet I believe he overstated his case: Since January of this year the Senate has twice passed resolutions suggesting United States support for Japan's bid for a permanent seat, but only contingent on Tokyo taking steps necessary for the country to fully engage in any form of U.N. peacekeeping or peacemaking operation. Japan currently is incapable of such engagement.

And given the Foreign Minister's speech, Tokyo now clearly has no intention of removing obstacles to its full engagement in such operations. Therefore, the only solid opinion expressed by the Senate—that of opposition to Japan's bid for a permanent seat under these circumstances—has only been hardened.

As I have stated before, and as my colleagues in this body have unanimously agreed, the special status conferred by permanent membership entails special responsibilities. In particular, permanent members must be able to participate in any form of operation they themselves authorize through the Security Council, including any form of peacekeeping or peacemaking operation.

If Japan were to obtain a permanent seat now, the country would be given an opportunity to endorse U.N. missions that endangered the lives of citizens of other countries but in which Japan itself could play no role. Not only would Japan be courting the sort of criticism it received during the gulf war, other countries could well encounter greater domestic opposition to putting their own personnel at risk.

In either case, the effectiveness of the Security Council in handling the United Nations' most important work—that of making decisions on guarding the peace—would be compromised.

The Japanese Foreign Minister's remarks yesterday were premised on currently accepted interpretations of the country's Constitution as forever renouncing the use of force—even under U.N. mandate—as a means of problem solving.

What is crucial to recognize, however, is that Japan's current interpretation of its constitution was shaped as much—if not more—by the country's economic self-interest than by any idealistic desire to serve as a model peaceful state. In the aftermath of World War II, had Japan accepted an interpretation permitting it to participate in collective security arrangements, precious resources would have been diverted from the country's push to regain economic strength and achieve its century-old goal of catching up with the West.

Now that the goal has been realized, it is more important than ever to understand that the American framers of Japan's Constitution never intended to prohibit Japan from participating in collective security arrangements or U.N. peacekeeping activities.

Moreover, the key Japanese official involved in fostering the currently accepted constitutional interpretation, Prime Minister Shigeru Yoshida, foresaw the need for Japan to take on added responsibilities once the country prospered. Yoshida believed that other nations would never tolerate Japan receiving special international status once it caught up economically with the West.

Prime Minister Yoshida's strategy of avoiding collective security arrangements through constitutional interpretation brilliantly laid the groundwork for Japan's remarkable postwar economic success. I believe his views on how Japan's international role, and hence constitutional interpretation, would have to change after that success was achieved were just as farseeing.

STATEMENT ON THE NOMINATION OF KENNETH W. KIZER

Mr. ROCKEFELLER. Madam President, I am pleased to support the nomination of Kenneth W. Kizer, M.D., to be the Under Secretary for Health for the Department of Veterans Affairs. The VA Under Secretary for Health is one of the most important public servants. If confirmed, Dr. Kizer will guide the VA medical system—the Nation's largest health care system—into the next century.

I recently had the chance to meet with Dr. Kizer and to discuss the job he will have of providing health care to the men and women who have served this Nation. I have also had the opportunity to read his answers to prehearing questions and to hear his testimony at a September 13, 1994, committee hearing on his nomination. Dr. Kizer has expressed his belief that services provided to veterans at VA medical facilities across the country should be easily accessible, compassionate, and of superior quality. I wholeheartedly agree and feel that Dr. Kizer has the intelligence, the experience, and the drive to maintain this special obligation to our Nation's veterans.

Dr. Kizer is professor and chairman of the department of community and international health at the University of California, Davis, School of Medicine. Before his position in academe, Dr. Kizer was director of the California Department of Health Services, serving as the chief health official for the Nation's largest State health agency. Prior to his appointment, Dr. Kizer served as chief deputy director and chief of public health for the California Department of Human Services, and before that as director of California's Emergency Medical Services Authority.

Dr. Kizer is a fellow of the American College of Emergency Physicians, the American Academy of Toxicology, the American College of Occupational and Environmental Medicine, the American College of Preventive Medicine, the Royal Society of Health, and the Royal Society of Medicine. Dr. Kizer has medical specialty board certification in emergency medicine, medical toxicology, occupational medicine, and general preventive medicine and public health.

Dr. Kizer received his bachelor of science degree in biological sciences from Stanford University in 1972, and his doctor of medicine and masters of public health degrees from UCLA in 1976. He undertook postgraduate medical training with the U.S. Navy and the University of California, San Francisco.

Dr. Kizer has demonstrated that he understands the huge responsibility that would be his. He has responded openly to questions from Senator MURKOWSKI and myself at the committee hearing, and in addition to the prehearing questions, he has completed the committee's questionnaire. On September 23, the committee voted unanimously to approve Dr. Kizer's nomination. I know of no opposition to his nomination.

Madam President, in my view, Dr. Kizer is well qualified for this important position. He would bring to it a strong mix of private sector and public section health care management experience. Because the Veterans Health Administration has been without leadership for far too long, I urge my colleagues to approve the nomination.

THE NOMINATION OF DR. KENNETH KIZER

Mr. MURKOWSKI. Madam President, it has now been over a year and a half since the incoming administration removed VA's theoretically nonpartisan Under Secretary for Health. I did not object to that action because I know that America's veterans, and the Congress, will hold both Secretary Brown and the administration accountable for the state of veterans' health care on their watch and I can understand why the Secretary and the administration would want their own person as Under Secretary for Health.

As the head of the Veterans Health Administration [VHA], the Under Secretary for Health holds one of the most important, and most challenging, offices in the Federal Government.

As Under Secretary, Dr. Kenneth Kizer will be responsible for a budget of almost $17 billion, a staff of over 200,000, a physical plant of 171 medical centers and hundreds of outpatient clinics, and—most importantly—the health of the 2½ million veterans who will turn to VA for medical care in the year to come.

The critical importance of the Under Secretary's mission, the awesome reach of his or her responsibilities, combined with the demonstrated talent and unquestioned qualifications that Dr. Kenneth Kizer will bring to VA, explain why I urge the Senate to confirm Dr. Kizer to be VA's Under Secretary for Health.

That importance of that mission, and the scope of those responsibilities, also explain why I am frustrated that this vote takes place only during the waning days of the 103d Congress.

Too much time has passed between the forced departure of the last Under Secretary and Dr. Kizer's nomination. The Senate did not receive Dr. Kizer's nomination until July 29, 1994. The Committee on Veterans' Affairs held a hearing on September 13 and voted unanimously to approve the nomination on September 23. The delay in filling this critical leadership position is not the responsibility of the Senate and I regret that the Veterans' Health Administration has gone so long without a confirmed leader because of the administration's failure to send a nomination to the Senate.

I applaud Dr. Kizer for agreeing to serve as head of the Veterans Health Administration. The challenges he will face will be daunting. The constraints under which he will have to operate will be crushing. The responsibilities he will assume will literally include questions of life and death. His reward for faithful service is likely to include a generous measure of second guessing.

He will assume responsibility for the Veterans Health Administration at a time when American health care is re-making itself. The practice of medicine is changing at a pace that can hardly be measured, much less explained. The transition away from hospital care to outpatient care may be only the most visible example.

The organization of medicine is also undergoing profound changes as the Federal Government debates the funding and administration of care while at the same time the individual States enact their own health care reform legislation. VA must adapt to this changing environment if it is to continue to provide quality care to America's veterans.

Dr. Kizer will assume responsibility for laying the foundation for a 21st century health care system while at the same time operating a network of hospitals constructed to fulfill a vision of health care as it was understood at the end of World War II, a half century ago.

His success will depend upon his willingness to make significant changes, to ask unpopular questions, and to propose bold changes in course. None of those actions will be easy. Many, perhaps most, will be controversial.

But I believe that neither the Congress, nor the veterans we serve, are, or can be, satisfied by the status quo. And I do not believe that VA can make significant improvements by continuing to do only what has been done before.

If Dr. Kizer proposes a course toward more ambulatory care, I hope he can count on the support of the Senate, even if that course comes at the expense of medically excessive, but locally popular, inpatient capacity.

If Dr. Kizer proposes to integrate VA health care more closely with other community and Federal providers, I hope he can count on the support of the Senate if his proposals will improve health care for veterans.

If he shifts VA's focus away from the bricks and mortar of its buildings and toward health care services for veterans, I will applaud his actions. If he transfers authority away from bureaucrats in Washington and empowers VA's leadership in the field, I will stand by his side.

Dr. Kenneth Kizer has agreed to accept a very difficult mission and I commend him for his courage and for his commitment to America's veterans. He can not succeed in that mission without the support of the Congress and I urge my colleagues to join me in not only supporting his confirmation as Under Secretary for Health but to also join me in supporting him as he begins the difficult task of reinventing the VA health care system while at the same time continuing to provide quality health care to millions of America's veterans.

LEGISLATIVE SESSION

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the Senate will return to legislative session.

MEASURE PLACED ON THE CALENDAR

Mr. BOREN. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that H.R. 4924 relating to the conservation of rhinoceroses and tigers just received from the House be placed on the calendar.

AMENDMENT NO. 2598

Mr. BOREN. On behalf of Senators GLENN and ROTH, I send an amendment to the desk and I ask for its immediate consideration; that the amendment be agreed to, and that the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. GLENN. Madam President, Senator ROTH and I urge our colleagues' support for this manager's amendment to S. 2170, the Government Management Reform Act of 1994. This legislation is based in large part on recommendations of the National Performance Review contained in H.R. 3400 and passed by the House of Representatives last year. The bill was reported favorably by the Committee on Governmental Affairs on March 23, 1994. Amendments are made for technical corrections and to reflect the jurisdictions of our committee and our counterpart committee, the House Government Operations Committee.

This bipartisan initiative is designed to improve the economy and efficiency of Government operations, and to strengthen Government's financial accountability. The legislation expands the Chief Financial Officers Act of 1990, which has helped the Government to reduce waste, fraud and abuse, and to support agencies in making more informed spending decisions. S. 2170 would require major agencies to produce audited financial statements for all accounts; the bill also requires a governmentwide audited financial statement. The legislation includes an initiative that will save Government administrative costs by encouraging the use of electronic funds transfer [EFT] for paying Federal employees and retirees. Additionally, the bill establishes a pilot program for franchise funds to help agencies lower costs and share such common administrative services as data processing and payroll.

We believe this bipartisan bill is important to our shared goal of a Government that works better and costs less. Strengthening the stewardship of Federal resources will improve services, save money and make Government more accountable to the taxpayer. We urge your support. I ask unanimous consent that a summary of our amendment and its changes be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the summary was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 2170 MANAGER'S AMENDMENT—BRIEF SUMMARY

Section 101: Limitation on certain annual pay adjustments. Requires that any annual "automatic" adjustments (COLAs) to the salaries of members of Congress, the Executive Schedule, or the judiciary would not exceed that given to General Schedule Federal employees.

Section 202: SES annual leave accumulation. Amends Title 5 to establish a limitation for members of the Senior Executive Service to accrue up to 90 days of annual leave.

Section 301: Authority to increase efficiency in reporting to Congress. Directs the Office of Management and Budget to work with Congressional Committees to streamline, consolidate and eliminate duplicative or obsolete reports to Congress.

Section 402: Electronic payments. This provision strengthens the ability of Federal agencies to expand conversion to electronic delivery of payments to Federal employees and retirees.

Section 403: Franchise fund pilot programs. Provides for the authorization of six pilot franchise funds to help lower costs and share common administrative services. Funds will adhere to all applicable Federal financial management laws and terminate October 1, 1999.

Section 404: Simplification of management reporting process. Directs the Office of Management and Budget to work with the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee and House Government Operations Committee to streamline and consolidate financial management reports from the agencies to OMB and from OMB to the Congress.

Section 405: Annual financial reports. Starting in 1997, all 24 agencies covered under the Chief Financial Officers Act are required to produce audited financial statements for all activities. Starting in 1998, the government will produce an audited consolidated financial statement of all 24 CFO Act agencies.

SUMMARY OF MANAGER'S AMENDMENT CHANGES TO S. 2170

Section 102: Reduction of Federal full-time equivalent positions and Section 201: Federal workforce training—The sections are struck because the provision is unnecessary; they are similar but inconsistent in their details with the provisions signed into law as part of P.L. 103-226, The Federal Workforce Restructuring Act, shortly after the markup of S. 2170.

Section 302: Transfer of Davis-Bacon Functions—The section is struck because of objections to shifting certain Davis Bacon Act debarment and disbursement functions from the General Accounting Office to the Department of Labor.

Section 402: Electronic Payments—Subsection (f) is struck because it could be interpreted as preventing the government from encouraging recipients of Social Security or Railroad Retirement benefits to receive payments by electronic means.

Section 403: Franchise Fund Pilot Programs—Subsections (3) and (4) are struck because the Congressional Budget Office has determined that the use of agency unobligated balances to establish franchise funds would violate Budget Act rules and constitute a "pay-go" situation. The number of pilots are increased from four to six in order for the Administration to experiment with establishing competition for administrative services to drive down costs and reduce duplication in agencies. A technical provision is added to allow agencies to capitalize certain administrative equipment into the franchise fund pilots. Another change vests authority to select pilots in the Director of OMB, instead of the President.

Section 405: Annual Financial Reports—A technical change clarifies that the Treasury Department will prepare the statement in accordance with the form and content requirements set forth by the Director of OMB.

Section 406-410: Contracts for Collection of Services and Adjusting Civil Monetary Penalties for Inflation—These sections are struck because of issues of Committee jurisdiction in the House of Representatives and because of objections to the civil monetary penalties adjustment provisions.

Mr. ROTH. Madam President, I am pleased to join with Senator GLENN in bringing to the floor the Government Management Reform Act of 1994. The managers' amendment to this bill modifies it, so that it now focuses on several widely supported improvements in Federal management systems, including greater use of electronic payment to Federal employees, simplification of the management reporting process, and several pilot projects in the use of franchise funds within Federal agencies.

Probably the most significant reform mandated by the bill is the requirement for annual agencywide audited financial statements for the 23 major agencies covered by the Chief Financial Officers Act of 1990, along with the requirement for an annual governmentwide audited financial statement.

The pilot projects conducted under the CFO Act have shown the great value in requiring agencies to develop annual financial statements that are then audited. These audits have confirmed what we have long suspected—that Federal agencies have a great deal of work ahead if they are to come into the modern age of effective governmental financial management. It is important that Congress not only mandate these new requirements, but that it be fully supportive of agency efforts to comply.

In the shorter term, the payoff will be much more accurate numbers in reports that track how much agencies have actually spent, what their assets are worth, what outstanding obligations they have accrued, how much they are owed, and similar figures.

In the longer term, however, I would hope for an even greater payoff. Under the recently enacted Government Performance and Results Act, starting in 1997 Federal agencies will have to begin developing 5-year strategic plans, annual performance plans, and annual performance reports. The annual reports will have to show the measurable performance goals for each program, compared to the actual results. The legislation specifically envisions that these reports might be combined with the audited financial statements.

If this merging of the reports happens, and it is done properly, we will begin to see a very powerful set of reports flowing from the agencies—each showing how much was actually spent in each program area, along with what was actually achieved with respect to activity levels and program results. In other words, for the first time we will really see what we are getting for our money, ideally on a cost-per-unit basis.

I urge the support of my colleagues for this important addition to our tools for improving governmental accountability.

So the amendment (No. 2598) was agreed to.

(The amendment is printed in today's RECORD under "Amendments Submitted.")

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, was read the third time, and passed, as follows:

"§ 4311. Discrimination against persons who serve in the uniformed services and acts of reprisal prohibited

"(a) A person who is a member of, applies to be a member of, performs, has performed, applies to perform, or has an obligation to perform service in a uniformed service shall not be denied initial employment, reemployment, retention in employment, promotion, or any benefit of employment by an employer on the basis of that membership, application for membership, performance of service, application for service, or obligation.

"(b) An employer shall be considered to have denied a person initial employment, reemployment, retention in employment, promotion, or a benefit of employment in violation of this section if the person's membership, application for membership, service, application for service, or obligation for service in the uniformed services is a motivating factor in the employer's action, unless the employer can prove that the action would have been taken in the absence of such membership, application for membership, performance of service, application for service, or obligation.

"(c)(1) An employer may not discriminate in employment against or take any adverse employment action against any person because such person has taken an action to enforce a protection afforded any person under this chapter, has testified or otherwise made a statement in or in connection with any proceeding under this chapter, has assisted or otherwise participated in an investigation under this chapter, or has exercised a right provided for in this chapter.

"(2) The prohibition in paragraph (1) shall apply with respect to a person regardless of whether that person has performed service in the uniformed services and shall apply to any position of employment, including a position that is described in section 4312(d)(1)(C).

"§ 4312. Reemployment rights of persons who serve in the uniformed services

"(a) Subject to subsections (b), (c), and (d) and to section 4304, any person who is absent from a position of employment by reason of service in the uniformed services shall be entitled to the reemployment rights and benefits and other employment benefits of this chapter if—

"(1) the person (or an appropriate officer of the uniformed service in which such service is performed) has given advance written or verbal notice of such service to such person's employer;

"(2) the cumulative length of the absence and of all previous absences from a position of employment with that employer by reason of service in the uniformed services does not exceed five years; and

"(3) except as provided in subsection (f), the person reports to, or submits an application for reemployment to, such employer in accordance with the provisions of subsection (e).

"(b) No notice is required under subsection (a)(1) if the giving of such notice is precluded by military necessity or, under all of the relevant circumstances, the giving of such notice is otherwise impossible or unreasonable. A determination of military necessity for the purposes of this subsection shall be made pursuant to regulations prescribed by the Secretary of Defense and shall not be subject to judicial review.

"(c) Subsection (a) shall apply to a person who is absent from a position of employment by reason of service in the uniformed services if such person's cumulative period of service in the uniformed services, with respect to the employer relationship for which a person seeks reemployment, does not exceed five years, except that any such period of service shall not include any service—

"(1) that is required, beyond five years, to complete an initial period of obligated service;

"(2) during which such person was unable to obtain orders releasing such person from a period of service in the uniformed services before the expiration of such five-year period and such inability was through no fault of such person;

"(3) performed as required pursuant to section 270 of title 10, under section 502(a) or 503 of title 32, or to fulfill additional training requirements determined and certified in writing by the Secretary concerned, to be necessary for professional development, or for completion of skill training or retraining; or

"(E) called into Federal service as a member of the National Guard under chapter 15 of title 10 or under section 3500 or 8500 of title 10.

"(d)(1) An employer is not required to reemploy a person under this chapter if—

"(A) the employer's circumstances have so changed as to make such reemployment impossible or unreasonable;

"(B) in the case of a person entitled to reemployment under subsection (a)(3), (a)(4), or (b)(2)(B) of section 4313, such employment would impose an undue hardship on the employer; or

"(C) the employment from which the person leaves to serve in the uniformed services is for a brief, nonrecurrent period and there is no reasonable expectation that such employment will continue indefinitely or for a significant period.

"(2) In any proceeding involving an issue of whether—

"(A) any reemployment referred to in paragraph (1) is impossible or unreasonable because of a change in an employer's circumstances,

"(B) any accommodation, training, or effort referred to in subsection (a)(3), (a)(4), or (b)(2)(B) of section 4313 would impose an undue hardship on the employer, or

"(C) the employment referred to in paragraph (1)(C) is brief or for a nonrecurrent period and without a reasonable expectation that such employment will continue indefinitely or for a significant period, the employer shall have the burden of proving the impossibility or unreasonableness, undue hardship, or the brief or nonrecurrent nature of the employment without a reasonable expectation of continuing indefinitely or for a significant period.

"(e)(1) Subject to paragraph (2), a person referred to in subsection (a) shall, upon the completion of a period of service in the uniformed services, notify the employer referred to in such subsection of the person's intent to return to a position of employment with such employer as follows:

"(A) In the case of a person whose period of service in the uniformed services was less than 31 days, by reporting to the employer—

"(i) not later than the beginning of the first full regularly scheduled work period on the first full calendar day following the completion of the period of service and the expiration of eight hours after a period allowing for the safe transportation of the person from the place of that service to the person's residence; or

"(ii) as soon as possible after the expiration of the eight-hour period referred to in clause (i), if reporting within the period referred to in such clause is impossible or unreasonable through no fault of the person.

"(B) In the case of a person who is absent from a position of employment for a period of any length for the purposes of an examination to determine the person's fitness to perform service in the uniformed services, by reporting in the manner and time referred to in subparagraph (A).

"(C) In the case of a person whose period of service in the uniformed services was for more than 30 days but less than 181 days, by submitting an application for reemployment with the employer not later than 14 days after the completion of the period of service or if submitting such application within such period is impossible or unreasonable through no fault of the person, the next first full calendar day when submission of such application becomes possible.

"(D) In the case of a person whose period of service in the uniformed services was for more than 180 days, by submitting an application for reemployment with the employer not later than 90 days after the completion of the period of service.

"(2)(A) A person who is hospitalized for, or convalescing from, an illness or injury incurred in, or aggravated during, the performance of service in the uniformed services shall, at the end of the period that is necessary for the person to recover from such illness or injury, report to the person's employer (in the case of a person described in subparagraph (A) or (B) of paragraph (1)) or submit an application for reemployment with such employer (in the case of a person described in subparagraph (C) or (D) of such paragraph). Except as provided in subparagraph (B), such period of recovery may not exceed two years.

"(B) Such two-year period shall be extended by the minimum time required to accommodate the circumstances beyond such person's control which make reporting within the period specified in subparagraph (A) impossible or unreasonable.

"(3) A person who fails to report or apply for employment or reemployment within the appropriate period specified in this subsection shall not automatically forfeit such person's entitlement to the rights and benefits referred to in subsection (a) but shall be subject to the conduct rules, established policy, and general practices of the employer pertaining to explanations and discipline with respect to absence from scheduled work.

"(f)(1) A person who submits an application for reemployment in accordance with subparagraph (C) or (D) of subsection (e)(1) or subsection (e)(2) shall provide to the person's employer (upon the request of such employer) documentation to establish that—

"(A) the person's application is timely;

"(B) the person has not exceeded the service limitations set forth in subsection (a)(2) (except as permitted under subsection (c)); and

"(C) the person's entitlement to the benefits under this chapter has not been terminated pursuant to section 4304.

"(2) Documentation of any matter referred to in paragraph (1) that satisfies regulations prescribed by the Secretary shall satisfy the documentation requirements in such paragraph.

"(3)(A) Except as provided in subparagraph (B), the failure of a person to provide documentation that satisfies regulations prescribed pursuant to paragraph (2) shall not be a basis for denying reemployment in accordance with the provisions of this chapter if the failure occurs because such documentation does not exist or is not readily available at the time of the request of the employer. If, after such reemployment, documentation becomes available that establishes that such person does not meet one or more of the requirements referred to in subparagraphs (A), (B), and (C) of paragraph (1), the employer of such person may terminate the employment of the person and the provision of any rights or benefits afforded the person under this chapter.

"(B) An employer who reemploys a person absent from a position of employment for more than 90 days may require that the person provide the employer with the documentation referred to in subparagraph (A) before beginning to treat the person as not having incurred a break in service for pension purposes under section 4318(a)(2)(A).

"(4) An employer may not delay or attempt to defeat a reemployment obligation by demanding documentation that does not then exist or is not then readily available.

"(g) The right of a person to reemployment under this section shall not entitle such person to retention, preference, or displacement rights over any person with a superior claim under the provisions of title 5, United States Code, relating to veterans and other preference eligibles.

"(h) In any determination of a person's entitlement to protection under this chapter, the timing, frequency, and duration of the person's training or service, or the nature of such training or service (including voluntary service) in the uniformed services, shall not be a basis for denying protection of this chapter if the service does not exceed the limitations set forth in subsection (c) and the notice requirements established in subsection (a)(1) and the notification requirements established in subsection (e) are met.

"§4313. Reemployment positions

"(a) Subject to subsection (b) (in the case of any employee) and sections 4314 and 4315 (in the case of an employee of the Federal Government), a person entitled to reemployment under section 4312, upon completion of a period of service in the uniformed services, shall be promptly reemployed in a position of employment in accordance with the following order of priority:

"(1) Except as provided in paragraphs (3) and (4), in the case of a person whose period of service in the uniformed services was for less than 91 days—

"(A) in the position of employment in which the person would have been employed if the continuous employment of such person with the employer had not been interrupted by such service, the duties of which the person is qualified to perform; or

"(B) in the position of employment in which the person was employed on the date of the commencement of the service in the uniformed services, only if the person is not qualified to perform the duties of the position referred to in subparagraph (A) after reasonable efforts by the employer to qualify the person.

"(2) Except as provided in paragraphs (3) and (4), in the case of a person whose period of service in the uniformed services was for more than 90 days—

"(A) in the position of employment in which the person would have been employed if the continuous employment of such person with the employer had not been interrupted by such service, or a position of like seniority, status and pay, the duties of which the person is qualified to perform; or pay, the duties of which the person is qualified to perform, only if the person is not qualified to perform the duties of a position referred to in subparagraph (A) after reasonable efforts by the employer to qualify the person.

"(3) In the case of a person who has a disability incurred in, or aggravated during, such service, and who (after reasonable efforts by the employer to accommodate the disability) is not qualified due to such disability to be employed in the position of employment in which the person would have been employed if the continuous employment of such person with the employer had not been interrupted by such service—

"(A) in any other position which is equivalent in seniority, status, and pay, the duties of which the person is qualified to perform or would become qualified to perform with reasonable efforts by the employer; or

"(B) if not employed under subparagraph (A), in a position which is the nearest approximation to a position referred to in subparagraph (A) in terms of seniority, status, and pay consistent with circumstances of such person's case.

"(4) In the case of a person who (A) is not qualified to be employed in (i) the position of employment in which the person would have been employed if the continuous employment of such person with the employer had not been interrupted by such service, or (ii) in the position of employment in which such person was employed on the date of the commencement of the service in the uniform services for any reason (other than disability incurred in, or aggravated during, service in the uniformed services), and (B) cannot become qualified with reasonable efforts by the employer, in any other position of lesser status and pay which such person is qualified to perform, with full seniority.

"(b)(1) If two or more persons are entitled to reemployment under section 4312 in the same position of employment and more than one of them has reported for such reemployment, the person who left the position first shall have the prior right to reemployment in that position.

"(2) Any person entitled to reemployment under section 4312 who is not reemployed in a position of employment by reason of paragraph (1) shall be entitled to be reemployed as follows:

"(A) Except as provided in subparagraph (B), in any other position of employment referred to in subsection (a)(1) or (a)(2), as the case may be (in the order of priority set out in the applicable subsection), that provides a similar status and pay to a position of employment referred to in paragraph (1) of this subsection, consistent with the circumstances of such person's case, with full seniority.

"(B) In the case of a person who has a disability incurred in, or aggravated during, a period of service in the uniformed services that requires reasonable efforts by the employer for the person to be able to perform the duties of the position of employment, in any other position referred to in subsection (a)(3) (in the order of priority set out in that subsection) that provides a similar status and pay to a position referred to in paragraph (1) of this subsection, consistent with circumstances of such person's case, with full seniority.

"§4314. Reemployment by the Federal Government

"(a) Except as provided in subsections (b), (c), and (d), if a person is entitled to reemployment by the Federal Government under section 4312, such person shall be reemployed in a position of employment as described in section 4313.

"(b)(1) If the Director of the Office of Personnel Management makes a determination described in paragraph (2) with respect to a person who was employed by a Federal executive agency at the time the person entered the service from which the person seeks reemployment under this section, the Director shall—

"(A) identify a position of like seniority, status, and pay at another Federal executive agency that satisfies the requirements of section 4313 and for which the person is qualified; and

"(B) ensure that the person is offered such position.

"(2) The Director shall carry out the duties referred to in subparagraphs (A) and (B) of paragraph (1) if the Director determines that—

"(A) the Federal executive agency that employed the person referred to in such paragraph no longer exists and the functions of such agency have not been transferred to another Federal executive agency; or

"(B) it is impossible or unreasonable for the agency to reemploy the person.

"(c) If the employer of a person described in subsection (a) was, at the time such person entered the service from which such person seeks reemployment under this section, a part of the judicial branch or the legislative branch of the Federal Government, and such employer determines that it is impossible or unreasonable for such employer to reemploy such person, such person shall, upon application to the Director of the Office of Personnel Management, be ensured an offer of employment in an alternative position in a Federal executive agency on the basis described in subsection (b).

"(d) If the adjutant general of a State determines that it is impossible or unreasonable to reemploy a person who was a National Guard technician employed under section 709 of title 32, such person shall, upon application to the Director of the Office of Personnel Management, be ensured an offer of employment in an alternative position in a Federal executive agency on the basis described in subsection (b).

"§ 4315. Reemployment by certain Federal agencies

"(a) The head of each agency referred to in section 2302(a)(2)(C)(ii) of title 5 shall prescribe procedures for ensuring that the rights under this chapter apply to the employees of such agency.

"(b) In prescribing procedures under subsection (a), the head of an agency referred to in that subsection shall ensure, to the maximum extent practicable, that the procedures of the agency for reemploying persons who serve in the uniformed services provide for the reemployment of such persons in the agency in a manner similar to the manner of reemployment described in section 4313.

"(c)(1) The procedures prescribed under subsection (a) shall designate an official at the agency who shall determine whether or not the reemployment of a person referred to in subsection (b) by the agency is impossible or unreasonable.

"(2) Upon making a determination that the reemployment by the agency of a person referred to in subsection (b) is impossible or unreasonable, the official referred to in paragraph (1) shall notify the person and the Director of the Office of Personnel Management of such determination.

"(3) A determination pursuant to this subsection shall not be subject to judicial review.

"(4) The head of each agency referred to in subsection (a) shall submit to the Select Committee on Intelligence and the Committee on Veterans' Affairs of the Senate and the Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence and the Committee on Veterans' Affairs of the House of Representatives on an annual basis a report on the number of persons whose reemployment with the agency was determined under this subsection to be impossible or unreasonable during the year preceding the report, including the reason for each such determination.

"(d)(1) Except as provided in this section, nothing in this section, section 4313, or section 4325 shall be construed to exempt any agency referred to in subsection (a) from compliance with any other substantive provision of this chapter.

"(2) This section may not be construed—

"(A) as prohibiting an employee of an agency referred to in subsection (a) from seeking information from the Secretary regarding assistance in seeking reemployment from the agency under this chapter, alternative employment in the Federal Government under this chapter, or information relating to the rights and obligations of employee and Federal agencies under this chapter; or

"(B) as prohibiting such an agency from voluntarily cooperating with or seeking assistance in or of clarification from the Secretary or the Director of the Office of Personnel Management of any matter arising under this chapter.

"(e) The Director of the Office of Personnel Management shall ensure the offer of employment to a person in a position in a Federal executive agency on the basis described in subsection (b) if—

"§ 4316. Rights, benefits, and obligations of persons absent from employment for service in a uniformed service

"(a) A person who is reemployed under this chapter is entitled to the seniority and other rights and benefits determined by seniority that the person had on the date of the commencement of service in the uniformed services plus the additional seniority and rights and benefits that such person would have attained if the person had remained continuously employed.

"(b)(1) Subject to paragraphs (2) through (6), a person who is absent from a position of employment by reason of service in the uniformed services shall be—

"(A) deemed to be on furlough or leave of absence while performing such service; and

"(B) entitled to such other rights and benefits not determined by seniority as are generally provided by the employer of the person to employees having similar seniority, status, and pay who are on furlough or leave of absence under a contract, agreement, policy, practice, or plan in effect at the commencement of such service or established while such person performs such service.

"(2)(A) Subject to subparagraph (B), a person who—

"(i) is absent from a position of employment by reason of service in the uniformed services, and

"(ii) knowingly provides written notice of intent not to return to a position of employment after service in the uniformed service, is not entitled to rights and benefits under paragraph (1)(B).

"(B) For the purposes of subparagraph (A), the employer shall have the burden of proving that a person knowingly provided clear written notice of intent not to return to a position of employment after service in the uniformed service and, in doing so, was aware of the specific rights and benefits to be lost under subparagraph (A).

"(3) A person deemed to be on furlough or leave of absence under this subsection while serving in the uniformed services shall not be entitled under this subsection to any benefits to which the person would not otherwise be entitled if the person had remained continuously employed.

"(4) Such person may be required to pay the employee cost, if any, of any funded benefit continued pursuant to paragraph (1) to the extent other employees on furlough or leave of absence are so required.

"(5) The entitlement of a person to coverage under a health plan is provided for under section 4317.

"(6) The entitlement of a person to a right or benefit under an employee pension benefit plan is provided for under section 4318.

"(c) A person who is reemployed by an employer under this chapter shall not be discharged from such employment, except for cause—

"(1) within one year after the date of such reemployment, if the person's period of service before the reemployment was more than 180 days; or

"(2) within 180 days after the date of such reemployment, if the person's period of service before the reemployment was more than 30 days but less than 181 days.

"(d) Any person whose employment with an employer is interrupted by a period of service in the uniformed services shall be permitted, upon request of that person, to use during such period of service any vacation, annual, or similar leave with pay accrued by the person before the commencement of such service.

"§ 4317. Health plans

"(a)(1)(A) Subject to paragraphs (2) and (3), in any case in which a person (or the person's dependents) has coverage under a health plan in connection with the person's position of employment, including a group health plan (as defined in section 607(1) of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974), and such person is absent from such position of employment by reason of service in the uniformed services, the plan shall provide that the person may elect to continue such coverage as provided in this subsection. The maximum period of coverage of a person and the person's dependents under such an election shall be the lesser of—

"(i) the 18-month period beginning on the date on which the person's absence begins; or

"(ii) the day after the date on which the person fails to apply for or return to a position of employment, as determined under section 4312(e).

"(B) A person who elects to continue health-plan coverage under this paragraph may be required to pay not more than 102 percent of the full premium under the plan (determined in the same manner as the applicable premium under section 4980B(f)(4) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986) associated with such coverage for the employer's other employees, except that in the case of a person who performs service in the uniformed services for less than 31 days, such person may not be required to pay more than the employee share, if any, for such coverage.

"(C) In the case of a health plan that is a multiemployer plan, as defined in section 3(37) of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974, any liability under the plan for employer contributions and benefits arising under this paragraph shall be allocated—

"(i) by the plan in such manner as the plan sponsor shall provide; or

"(ii) if the sponsor does not provide—

"(I) to the last employer employing the person before the period served by the person in the uniformed services, or

"(II) if such last employer is no longer functional, to the plan.

"(b)(1) Except as provided in paragraph (2), in the case of a person whose coverage under a health plan was terminated by reason of service in the uniformed services, an exclusion or waiting period may not be imposed in connection with the reinstatement of such coverage upon reemployment under this chapter if an exclusion or waiting period would not have been imposed under health plan had coverage of such person by such plan not been terminated as a result of such service. This paragraph applies to the person who is reemployed and to any individual who is covered by such plan by reason of the reinstatement of the coverage of such person.

"(2) Paragraph (1) shall not apply to the coverage of any illness or injury determined by the Secretary of Veterans Affairs to have been incurred in, or aggravated during, performance of service in the uniformed services.

"§4318. Employee pension benefit plans

"(a)(1)(A) Except as provided in subparagraph (B), in the case of a right provided pursuant to an employee pension benefit plan (including those described in sections 3(2) and 3(33) of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974) or a right provided under any Federal or State law governing pension benefits for governmental employees, the right to pension benefits of a person reemployed under this chapter shall be determined under this section.

"(B) In the case of benefits under the Thrift Savings Plan, the rights of a person reemployed under this chapter shall be those rights provided in section 8432b of title 5. The first sentence of this subparagraph shall not be construed to affect any other right or benefit under this chapter.

"(2)(A) A person reemployed under this chapter shall be treated as not having incurred a break in service with the employer or employers maintaining the plan by reason of such person's period or periods of service in the uniformed services.

"(B) Each period served by a person in the uniformed services shall, upon reemployment under this chapter, be deemed to constitute service with the employer or employers maintaining the plan for the purpose of determining the non-forfeiture of the person's accrued benefits and for the purpose of determining the accrual of benefits under the plan.

"(b)(1) An employer reemploying a person under this chapter shall, with respect to a period of service described in subsection (a)(2)(B), be liable to an employee pension benefit plan for funding any obligation of the plan to provide the benefits described in subsection (a)(2) and shall allocate the amount of any employer contribution for the person in the same manner and to the same extent the allocation occurs for other employees during the period of service. For purposes of determining the amount of such liability and any obligation of the plan, earnings and forfeitures shall not be included. For purposes of determining the amount of such liability and for purposes of section 515 of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 or any similar Federal or State law governing pension benefits for governmental employees, service in the uniformed services that is deemed under subsection (a) to be service with the employer shall be deemed to be service with the employer under the terms of the plan or any applicable collective bargaining agreement. In the case of a multiemployer plan, as defined in section 3(37) of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974, any liability of the plan described in this paragraph shall be allocated—

"(A) by the plan in such manner as the sponsor maintaining the plan shall provide; or

"(B) if the sponsor does not provide—

"(i) to the last employer employing the person before the period served by the person in the uniformed services, or

"(ii) if such last employer is no longer functional, to the plan.

"(2) A person reemployed under this chapter shall be entitled to accrued benefits pursuant to subsection (a) that are contingent on the making of, or derived from, employee contributions or elective deferrals (as defined in section 402(g)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986) only to the extent the person makes payment to the plan with respect to such contributions or deferrals. No such payment may exceed the amount the person would have been permitted or required to contribute had the person remained continuously employed by the employer throughout the period of service described in subsection (a)(2)(B). Any payment to the plan described in this paragraph shall be made during the period beginning with the date of reemployment and whose duration is three times the period of the person's service in the uniformed services, not to exceed five years.

"(3) For purposes of computing an employer's liability under paragraph (1) or the employee's contributions under paragraph (2), the employee's compensation during the period of service described in subsection (a)(2)(B) shall be computed—

"(A) at the rate the employee would have received but for the period of service described in subsection (a)(2)(B), or

"(B) in the case that the determination of such rate is not reasonably certain, on the basis of the employee's average rate of compensation during the 12-month period immediately preceding such period (or, if shorter, the period of employment immediately preceding such period).

Mr. ROCKEFELLER. Madam President, as chairman of the Committee on Veterans' Affairs, I am enormously pleased that the Senate is about to take final action on H.R. 995, the proposed Uniformed Services Employment and Reemployment Rights Act of 1994, legislation which would revise and improve the Veterans Reemployment Rights [VRR] law, found in chapter 43 of title 38, United States Code, this is the final legislative action in an effort that dates back to the early days of the last Congress.

The pending measure, H.R. 995, with a House amendment to the Senate amendment to the original House bill, represents a compromise agreement that the Veterans' Affairs Committees of the House of Representatives and Senate have reached on H.R. 995 as originally passed by the House on May 4, 1993, and as passed by the Senate on November 8, 1993. This measure, which I will refer to as the compromise agreement, would, as would the original House and Senate versions in somewhat different ways, completely revise chapter 43 of title 38, United States Code, in order to clarify VRR law provisions and to make improvements in various aspects of this over-50-year-old law. The VRR law has as its core principle ensuring that an individual who enters the military for a short period of service can return to the civilian job held before entering service and can do so with no loss of seniority or benefits based on seniority.

Madam President, the House passed this compromise agreement on September 13, 1994, and I urge my colleagues to give this measure their unanimous support and send it to the White House for the President's signature.

BACKGROUND

Madam President, the VRR law, first enacted in 1940, provides job security to employees who leave their civilian jobs in order to enter active military service, voluntarily or involuntarily. Within certain limits, the law generally entitles an individual who serves in the military to return to his or her former civilian job after being discharged or released from active duty under honorable conditions. For purposes of seniority, status, and pay, the employee is entitled to be treated as though he or she never left. The effect of this law is often characterized as enabling the returning veteran to step back on the seniority escalator at the point he or she would have occupied without interruption for military service. The law applies both to active-duty service and to training periods served by reservists and members of the National Guard.

The VRR law is intended to encourage noncareer service in the uniformed services by eliminating or minimizing the disadvantages to civilian careers and employment which occur as a result of such service. The pending measure would help ensure that the VRR law effectively and fairly continues to serve this historical purpose.

The compromise agreement is also aimed at clarifying the VRR law. It is important that both employees and employers be able to understand this law clearly so that active-duty servicemembers and reservists, whether they serve on active duty during an extended conflict, such as in Operation Desert Shield/Desert Storm, or participate in routine training, do not experience unnecessary delays or disputes in returning to their former civilian jobs. Unfortunately, over the last 54 years the VRR law has become a confusing and cumbersome patchwork of statutory amendments and judicial constructions that, at times, hinder the resolution of claims. Thus, the compromise agreement would amend the VRR law to restate past amendments in a clearer manner and incorporate important court decisions interpreting the law. The substantive rights at the heart of the VRR law would remain as valuable protection to those who provide this country with noncareer service in the uniformed services.

Madam President, Congress has long recognized that the support of civilian employers is necessary if the uniformed services are to be able to recruit and retain noncareer personnel. I sincerely appreciate the very cooperative and patriotic manner in which the vast majority of employers have carried out their responsibilities under the VRR law. The compromise agreement is designed to take into account the legitimate interests and needs of employers and to assist them by stating their obligations in a clear fashion.

Both the House and the Senate Committees on Veterans' Affairs and the administration committed much time and energy to the revision and improvement of this law over the past several years. For over 3 years, beginning in the mid-1980's, and executive branch task force on VRR law, including representatives of the Departments of Labor, Defense, and Justice and the Office of Personnel Management, worked to develop a revision of chapter 43. H.R. 1578, the proposed Uniformed Services Employment and Reemployment Rights Act of 1991, as passed by the House on May 14, 1991, was similar to and largely derived from draft legislation submitted by the administration in early 1991. H.R. 1578 was modified and passed again by the House on October 1, 1992.

The Senate Committee on Veterans' Affairs during the 102d Congress worked closely with representatives from each of the Federal agencies responsible for administering the VRR law in developing the Senate bill, S. 1095, the proposed Uniformed Services Employment and Reemployment Rights Act of 1991. Our committee held a hearing on the legislation and subsequently filed a report on S. 1095 on November 7, 1991. Unfortunately, the Senate was unable to proceed to the consideration of S. 1095 until October 1, 1992—only a few days before adjournment of the 102d Congress—and, as a result, no further action was possible.

In this Congress, I introduced VRR legislation on April 29, 1993, as S. 843. The committee held a hearing on this bill on May 13, 1993, and the bill was reported on October 18, 1993. As I noted a moment ago, the Senate passed this legislation on November 8, 1993. I refer my colleagues and all others with an interest in the bill as reported to the committee report, Senate Report No. 103-158.

Because the provisions of the compromise agreement are describe in detail in an explanatory statement—developed jointly with our colleagues on the House Committee on Veterans' Affairs and which my good friend, the chairman of the House Committee, SONNY MONTGOMERY, inserted in the RECORD during House passage of this measure on September 13, 1994—I will at this point just summarize chapter 43 as it would be amended by the compromise agreement.

SUMMARY

Madam President, as it would be modified by the compromise agreement, chapter 43 of title 38 would:

Continue to protect employees or applicants for employment from discrimination or reprisal based on their military obligation, and add a prohibition of employer reprisals against witnesses in reemployment rights cases. I note, as the committee report did (page 45), that the portion of new section 4311 which would codify the burden and standard of proof in discrimination cases is merely a reaffirmation of the original intent of Congress when present section 2021(b)(3) was enacted in 1968. The restatement of the standard and burden of proof in the compromise agreement is, therefore, meant to be applicable to all discrimination cases based on the VRR law regardless of when the claim first arose.

Place a 5-year limit, with certain exceptions, on the cumulative length of time that an individual may be absent from a position of employment and still be eligible for reemployment rights with respect to that position.

Repeal the exclusion of individuals who held temporary positions from reemployment protection.

Generally base time requirements for returning to work or applying for re-employment on the length of the individual's absence for service.

Require an absent individual—or an appropriate officer of the uniformed service—to give the employer advance written or verbal notice of service.

Allow employers who reemploy individuals absent for more than 90 days for active-duty service to require documentation regarding their service before they would become entitled to pension benefits with respect to the period of service.

Codify court holdings that entitlement to reemployment protection does not depend upon the timing, frequency, duration, or nature of an individual's service.

Require employers to make reasonable efforts—actions, including training, that do not create an undue hardship on the employer—to refresh or update the skills of an individual who needs training in order to qualify for reemployment.

Require employers to make reasonable efforts to accommodate the disability of an individual seeking employment who has a service-connected disability.

Ensure an individual whose reemployment in a legislative or judicial branch position, or as a National Guard technician, is impossible or unreasonable, an offer of alternative employment in a Federal executive agency in a position of like seniority, status, and pay.

Maintain the so-called escalator principle under which an individual absent from employment by reason of service in the uniformed services is entitled, upon being reemployed, to the seniority and other rights and benefits determined by seniority the individual had when he or she began service plus the additional seniority and rights and benefits he or she would have attained if the person had remained continuously employed.

Reaffirm that while an individual is performing service in the uniformed services, he or she is deemed to be on furlough or leave of absence and is entitled to those other rights and benefits not determined by seniority which were in effect at the beginning of the service, unless the individual knowingly waives this entitlement by indicating that he or she does not intend to return to the civilian position.

Provide that if an individual's employer-sponsored health plan coverage would otherwise terminate due to an extended absence from employment for purposes of service in the uniformed services, he or she may elect to continue the health plan coverage for up to 18 months after the absence begins or for the period of service, whichever period is the lesser. The individual generally could be required to pay no more than 102 percent of the full premium for the coverage, and an individual serving for less than 31 days could not be required to pay more than the normal employee share of any premium.

Provide that a reemployed individual whose period of service was more than 30 days but less than 181 days could not be removed without cause for 6 months; and an individual whose period of service was more than 180 days could not be removed without cause for 1 year.

Provide that an individual, upon submitting a written request to his or her employer, would be able to use accrued vacation or annual leave while serving in the uniformed services.

Provide that, for pension purposes, an individual must be treated as not having incurred a break in service with the employer; service in the uniformed services would be considered service with the employer for vesting and benefit accrual purposes; the employer who reemploys the individual is liable for funding any resulting obligation; and the reemployed individual would be entitled to any accrued benefits from employee contributions only to the extent that the individual makes payments with respect to the contributions.

Provide that, in a multiemployer defined contribution pension plan, the sponsor maintaining the plan may allocate among the participating employers the liability of the plan for pension benefits accrued by individuals who are absent for service in the uniformed services. If no cost-sharing arrangement is provided, the full liability to make the retroactive contributions to the plan would be allocated to the last employer employing the person before the period of uniformed service or, if that employer is no longer functional, to the overall plan.

Provide that a returning employee's payments into the pension plan may be made, as the employer and employee may agree, during any reasonable continuous period—beginning with the date of reemployment, but in no event will the individual be afforded a payment period shorter than the length of absence for service for which the payments are due.

Provide, for the purposes of determining an employer's liability or an employee's contributions under a pension benefit plan, that the employee's reconstructed compensation during the period of his or her service in the uniformed services would be based on the rate of pay the employee would have received from the employer but for the absence during the period of service, or if the employee's compensation was not based on a fixed rate, on the basis of the employee's average rate of pay during the 12-month period immediately preceding his or her entry into service—or, if shorter than 12 months, the period of employment immediately preceding entry into service.

Require the Secretary of Labor to investigate an individual's complaint that the employer has failed or refused, or is about to fail or refuse, to comply with the reemployment law, and require the Secretary to make reasonable efforts to ensure compliance.

Authorize the Secretary of Labor to require by subpoena the attendance and testimony of witnesses and the production of documents relating to any matter under investigation.

Enable Federal executive agency employees whose cases are not resolved successfully by the Department of Labor to receive representation by the Office of Special Counsel before the Merit Systems Protection Board [MSPB] and the U.S. Court of Appeals.

Provide that an individual would be able to petition a U.S. Court of Appeals to review a decision of the MSPB.

Require the heads of intelligence agencies, which are otherwise exempt from enforcement procedures of the reemployment laws applicable to Federal agencies, to prescribe the conditions under which individuals who are absent from employment by reason of service in the uniformed services will be reemployed and the procedures for ensuring that those who satisfy the conditions are reemployed. In cases where it is impossible, unreasonable, or not practicable to reemploy an individual, the agency head would be required to notify the individual and the Director of the Office of Personnel Management [OPM]. The Director of OPM would be required to place the individual in a comparable position elsewhere in a Federal executive agency.

Authorize the award of attorneys' fees and expenses to employees who choose to be represented by private counsel and who prevail in court.

Provide for liquidated damages in an amount equal to the compensatory damages awarded in a case in which an employee prevails against a State—as an employer—or a private employer in court and the court determines that the employer's failure to comply with the provisions of the employment law was willful.

Provide that, effective August 1, 1990, the amount of Federal civil service retirement payments for a period of military service may not exceed the amount that would have been deducted or withheld for a period of civilian service if the employee had not performed the period of military service.

Provide for the treatment of contributions to the Thrift Savings Fund by Federal employees who perform military service.

CONCLUSION

Madam President, before closing I note one issue that involves a matter related to the compromise agreement which is under the jurisdiction of the Finance Committee, a committee on which I am privileged to serve. This matter relates to provisions in the compromise agreement which address a returning servicemember's rights to participate in the employer's pension plan and more specifically, the relationship between the VRR law and the Internal Revenue Code. Under the VRR law as it will be amended, it is possible that a pension plan, by seeking to comply with the VRR law, could have to make payments on behalf of now returned servicemembers that could cause the plan to go out of compliance with the Internal Revenue Code because of the total amount of payments made by the plan in a given year. Obviously, this is a situation that is not intended and which should be avoided. However, the appropriate remedy—an amendment to the Internal Revenue Code—is in the jurisdiction of the Finance Committee and thus the matter cannot be resolved in the compromise agreement.

Madam President, so as to allow time for such an amendment to be considered, the compromise agreement provides a 2-year period before compliance with the pension provisions in the agreement would be required. It is my intention, which I have communicated to Senator MOYNIHAN in his role as chairman of the Finance Committee, to take the lead in the Finance Committee in proposing the appropriate amendment to the Internal Revenue Code as part of the first appropriate tax bill. In addition, I have indicated to Chairman MOYNIHAN that, should such an amendment not be in law as the 2-year window provided in the compromise agreement nears its end, I will work to amend the VRR law so as to provide for a further delay in the effective date of the pension provisions. I very much appreciate Senator MOYNIHAN's assistance and cooperation on this issue which facilitates Senate action on the compromise agreement.

Madam President, this is a good and needed piece of legislation and I urge my colleagues to give it their full support. I thank my good friends SONNY MONTGOMERY and Representative BOB STUMP, the chairman and ranking minority member of the House Committee on Veterans' Affairs for their cooperation and assistance as we have developed this compromise. I also thank our committee's ranking minority member, my good friend FRANK MURKOWSKI, and all the members of the Senate committee for their support on this measure. I thank the staff who have worked so long and hard on this compromise—Jill Cochran, Joe Womack, Pat Ryan, Mack Fleming, and Kingston Smith on the House committee, and Bill Brew, Jim Gottlieb, Bill Tuerk, and John Moseman with the Senate committee. I also thank Wade Ballou and Charlie Armstrong of the House and Senate Offices of Legislative Counsel for their excellent assistance and support in drafting the compromise agreement. Finally, I would be remiss were I to fail to note the tremendous work done on this legislation by Chuck Lee, a former member of the staff of the Senate committee, prior to his taking another position earlier this year.

Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that the explanatory statement that I mentioned earlier be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

EXPLANATORY STATEMENT ON H.R. 995

H.R. 995 reflects a compromise agreement that the Senate and House of Representatives Committees on Veterans' Affairs have reached on certain bills considered in the Senate and the House of Representatives during the 103d Congress. These measures are H.R. 995, which the House passed on May 4, 1993, (hereinafter referred to as "House bill"), and the text of S. 843, which the Senate passed on November 8, 1993, as an amendment to H.R. 995 (hereinafter referred to as "Senate amendment").

The Committees on Veterans' Affairs of the Senate and the House of Representatives have prepared the following explanation of H.R. 995 as amended (hereinafter referred to as the "compromise agreement"). Differences between the provisions contained in the compromise agreement and the related provisions in the above-mentioned House bill and Senate amendment are noted in this document, except for clerical corrections, conforming changes made necessary by the compromise agreement, and minor drafting, technical, and clarifying changes.

SCOPE OF COVERAGE

Current law: Section 4301(a) provides that an individual must have left a position (other than temporary) in the employ of an employer in order to perform training or service in the Armed Forces to be eligible for reemployment rights and benefits.

House bill: Proposed new section 4312(a) would provide that an individual must have left a position (other than temporary) in the employ of an employer for voluntary or involuntary service in the uniformed service to be entitled to a leave of absence or, upon completion of service, to reemployment.

Proposed new section 4303(8) would define "other than a temporary position" to mean a position of employment as to which there is a reasonable expectation that it will continue indefinitely.

Senate amendment: Proposed new section 4312(a) is similar to the provision in the House bill, but would not exclude individuals who held temporary positions when they entered the uniformed services from eligibility for reemployment rights and benefits. Also, proposed new section 4303 would not define the term "other than a temporary position."

Compromise agreement: Section 4312(d)(1)(C) would provide that an employer is not required to reemploy an individual if his or her employment prior to military service was for a brief, nonrecurrent period and there was no reasonable expectation that it would continue indefinitely or for a significant period.

The compromise agreement would not, therefore, include a definition of the term "other than a temporary position."

PROHIBITION AGAINST DISCRIMINATION AND ACTS OF REPRISAL

Current law: Section 4301(b)(3) provides that an individual may not be denied hiring, retention in employment, or any promotion or other incident or advantage of employment because of any obligation as a member of a Reserve component of the Armed Forces.

House bill: Proposed new section 4311 would provide that (1) an individual may not be denied initial employment, reemployment, retention in employment, promotion, or any benefit of employment because of present or past application for or membership in a uniformed service, or obligation for future service; (2) an employer is considered to have committed a prohibited act of discrimination or reprisal against an individual if the individual's service, application, or obligation for service was a motivating factor in the employer's action, unless the employer can prove that the action would have been taken in the absence of the service, application, or obligation for service; (3) an employer may not discriminate against or take any adverse employment action against any individual because that individual has filed a claim under the Act, sought assistance concerning an alleged violation, testified in a proceeding, assisted or otherwise participated in an investigation, or exercised any right under the reemployment law; and (4) the prohibitions regarding discrimination will apply with respect to an individual regardless of whether that individual has performed service in the uniformed services.

Senate amendment: Proposed new section 4311 is substantively identical to the House provision but would extend protection under the reemployment law to employees in a foreign country.

Compromise agreement: Section 4311 does not contain protection for employees in a foreign country.

MAXIMUM PERIOD OF SERVICE FOR COVERAGE

Current law: Under section 4304, an individual is permitted to remain on active duty for a total of four years and still retain reemployment rights. An additional year of eligibility for reemployment rights is granted if an individual remains on active duty beyond the four-year period at the request of, and for the convenience of, the Federal Government. Active duty for training and inactive duty does not count toward the five years.

House bill: Subsections (a) and (c) of proposed new section 4312 would provide for a five-year limit on an individual's cumulative length of absence from a position of employment with the employer by reason of service in the uniformed services for the purposes of reemployment rights and benefits. This would include all types of service except (1) service required beyond five years to complete an initial period of obligated services; (2) service from which the individual, through no fault of his or her own, is unable to obtain a release from service within the five-year limit; (3) service for statutorily mandated training or to fulfill additional training requirements determined by the Secretary of Defense to be necessary for individual professional skill development; (4) service resulting from an order to, or retention on, active duty during a war or national emergency under a law or joint resolution related to a specific crisis situation; (5) service resulting from an order to active duty in support of an operational mission for which personnel have been ordered to active duty in section 673b of title 10, United States Code; (6) service resulting from an order to active duty in support, as determined by the Secretary concerned, of a critical mission or requirement of the uniformed services; or (7) service resulting from an order to active duty by the President of members of the National Guard to suppress an insurrection.

repel an invasion by a foreign nation, suppress a rebellion, or execute laws of the United States that the President is unable to execute with the regular army.

Senate amendment: Subsections (a) and (c) of proposed new section 4312 are substantively identical to the House provision, but with additional coverage of Coast Guard personnel ordered to or retained on active duty under circumstances excepted for other uniformed service personnel.

Compromise agreement: Subsections (a) and (c) of section 4312 contain the Senate provision.

APPLICATIONS FOR REEMPLOYMENT

Current law: Section 4301(a) requires that an individual who is inducted into the Armed Forces generally must make application for reemployment within 90 days after separation. Section 4304(a) requires the same application obligation of an individual who enlists in the Armed Forces. Subsections (c) and (g) of section 4304 require that a member of a Reserve component who is ordered to an initial period of active duty for training of not less than 12 consecutive weeks or who is ordered to active duty other than for training under section 673b of title 10, generally must make application for reemployment within 31 days after separation; section 4304(d) provides that all other individuals required to perform active duty for training or inactive duty training must report to work at the beginning of the next regularly scheduled working period after expiration of the last calendar day necessary to travel from the place of training to the place of employment following the employee's release, or within a reasonable time thereafter if delayed return is due to factors beyond the employee's control.

Under current law, if an individual is hospitalized incident to active duty, the application for reemployment generally must be made within the foregoing timeframes determined by the individual's type or category of military training or service. However, the application period begins upon discharge from hospitalization of not more than one year instead of beginning on the date of discharge from service.

House bill: Proposed new section 4312(e)(1) would require that (1) if the service was for less than 31 days or for the purpose of an examination to determine fitness to enter service, an individual entitled to reemployment must report to the employer for reemployment at the beginning of the first full regularly scheduled working period on the first calendar day following the completion of service and the expiration of eight hours after a time for safe transportation back to his or her residence or as soon as possible after the expiration of the eight-hour period if reporting within that period is impossible or unreasonable through no fault of the individual; (2) if the period of service was 31 days or more but less than 181 days, an individual entitled to reemployment must submit an application to the employer no later than 14 days following completion of service or as soon as possible thereafter if submitting an application within the period is impossible or unreasonable through no fault of the individual; (3) if the period of service was 181 days or more, an individual entitled to reemployment must submit an application no later than 90 days following completion of service or as soon as possible thereafter if submitting an application within the period is impossible or unreasonable through no fault of the individual.

Proposed new section 4312(e)(2) would provide for an extension of the time limits specified in subsection (e)(1) by up to two years if an individual is hospitalized for, or convalescing from, an injury or illness incurred or aggravated by military service. The two-year period would be extended by the minimum time required to accommodate the circumstance beyond the individual's control which makes reporting within the time limit impossible or unreasonable.

Senate amendment: Proposed new section 4312(e)(1) is substantively identical to the House provision, but without possible extension for events beyond the individual's control if the period of service was 31 days or more.

Proposed new section 4312(e)(2) is substantively identical to the House provision.

Compromise agreement: Section 4312(e)(1) contains the House provision regarding service of less than 31 days or for the purpose of an examination to determine fitness to enter service; the House provision regarding service of 31 days or more but less than 181 days, modified to make specific the time beyond 14 days within which the returning employee must make application for reemployment; and the Senate provision regarding service of more than 180 days.

Section 4312(e)(2) includes the provision relating to an extension of time in the case of an illness or injury.

Section 4312(e)(3) provides that a failure to report or apply within the time limits does not automatically forfeit the person's reemployment rights, but subjects the person to the employer's rules, policies, or practices pertaining to absence from work.

DOCUMENTATION UPON RETURN

Current law: No provision.

House bill: Proposed new section 4311(g) would provide that: (1) when reporting for reemployment, an individual, upon request, must provide to the employer documentation to establish the timeliness of the application for reemployment, that the individual did not exceed the applicable time-in-service limitation, and that the character of service was satisfactory; (2) notwithstanding a failure to provide documentation, an employer must reemploy an individual if the failure occurs because such documentation does not exist or is not readily available at the time of the request, with the condition that if, after reemployment, documentation becomes available that establishes that one or more of the eligibility requirements was not met, the employer may terminate the individual's employment and the provision of any rights or benefits afforded the individual prospectively; and (3) it is unlawful for an employer to delay or attempt to defeat a reemployment obligation by demanding documentation that does not then exist or is not then readily available.

Senate amendment: Proposed new section 4312(f) contains documentation requirements substantively identical to those in the House bill except that, if an individual is absent from employment for more than 90 days, the employer may require documentation before making retroactive pension contributions.

Compromise agreement: Section 4312(f) contains the Senate provision.

ENTITLEMENT LIMITATIONS

Current law: No provision.

House bill: Proposed new section 4312(i) would provide that entitlement to protection under the reemployment law does not depend on the timing, frequency, duration of an individual's training or service or the nature of that service if the service does not exceed the service limitations and the applicable notice requirements are met.

Senate amendment: Proposed new section 4312(h) is substantively identical to the House provision.

Compromise agreement: Section 4312(h) contains this provision.

POSITION TO WHICH ENTITLED UPON REEMPLOYMENT

Current law: Section 4301(a) provides that a returning servicemember who was absent from an employment position (other than a temporary position) for service in the Armed Forces is generally entitled (1) if still qualified to perform the duties of that position, to be restored to that position or a position of like seniority, status, and pay; or (2) if not qualified to perform the duties of that position by reason of a disability sustained during service, to be offered and employed in a position the duties of which he or she is qualified to perform that will provide like seniority, status, and pay, or the nearest approximation consistent with the circumstances of the individual's case.

Section 4301(b)(2) provides that it is the sense of Congress that an individual must be so restored as to give the individual the status that he or she would have enjoyed but for the absence for service in the Armed Forces.

House bill: Proposed new section 4313(a)(1) would provide that an individual whose period of service was for fewer than 91 days must be reemployed promptly (1) in a position that he or she would have attained by remaining continuously employed, unless the employer can prove that the individual is not qualified or capable of becoming qualified with reasonable efforts by the employer, or (2) if not qualified or capable of becoming qualified for the new position, in the same position that he or she left. Proposed new section 4313(a)(2) would provide for a similar pattern of position offerings for an individual whose period of service was for 91 days or more, with the additional option that the employer may offer a position of like seniority, status, and pay to the new position or, as determined by whether the individual is qualified or capable of becoming qualified, the position that the individual left. Proposed new section 4313(a)(4) would provide that a returning servicemember who is not qualified to be employed in the position that he or she would have attained by remaining continuously employed or in the position that he or she left, for any reason other than disability incurred during the period of service, and who cannot become qualified with reasonable efforts by the employer, must be employed promptly in any other position of lesser status and pay the duties of which he or she is qualified to perform, with full seniority.

Senate amendment: Proposed new sections 4313(a) (1), (2), and (4) are similar to the House provisions but would provide that the employer may offer a position of like status and pay if the period of service was for more than 30 days.

Compromise agreement: Section 4313 generally follows the House bill.

POSITION TO WHICH ENTITLED IF DISABLED

Current law: Section 4307 requires an employer to make reasonable accommodations to the known physical or mental limitations incurred in the military service of an individual to enable him or her to perform the essential functions of a position, unless the employer can demonstrate that the accommodation would impose an undue hardship on the operation of the business. The terms "reasonable accommodation" and "undue hardship" have the same meanings as are provided in the Americans with Disabilities Act of 1990 (ADA) (Public Law 101-336; 42 U.S.C. 12101 et seq.).

House bill: Proposed new section 4313(a)(3) would provide that if an individual is disabled because of a disability incurred during, or as a result of, a period of service in the uniformed services and is not qualified to be employed in the position that he or she would have attained if continuously employed or in the position that he or she left for service (even after reasonable efforts by the employer to accommodate the disability), the individual must be reemployed promptly (1) in any other position of similar seniority, status, and pay for which he or she is qualified or would become qualified with reasonable effort by the employer; or (2) in a position which is the nearest approximation consistent with the circumstances of the individual's case.

Senate amendment: Proposed new section 4313(a)(3) is substantively identical to the House provision.

Compromise agreement: Section 4313(a)(3) contains this provision.

TWO OR MORE PERSONS ENTITLED TO REEMPLOYMENT IN THE SAME POSITION

Current law: Section 4306 provides that in any case in which two or more individuals are entitled to reemployment in the same position, the individual who left first has the prior right to be reemployed in that position, without prejudice to the reemployment rights of the other individual or individuals.

House bill: Proposed new section 4313(b) would provide that in any case in which two or more individuals are entitled to reemployment in the same position and more than one of them has reported for reemployment, (1) the individual who left the position first has the prior right to be reemployed in that position and (2) any individual not reemployed is entitled to be employed promptly in any other position which is equivalent in seniority, status, and pay for which the individual is qualified or would become qualified with reasonable efforts by the employer or in a position which is the nearest approximation consistent with the circumstances of the individual's case.

Senate amendment: Proposed new section 4313(b) is substantively identical to the House provision.

Compromise agreement: Section 4313(b) contains this provision.

REEMPLOYMENT BY THE FEDERAL GOVERNMENT

Current law: Section 4303 provides that any individual who is entitled to reemployment and who was employed, immediately before entering the Armed Forces, by any agency in the executive branch of the Federal Government or by the District of Columbia, must be reemployed by that agency or the successor to its functions, or by the District of Columbia. In cases in which the Director of the Office of Personnel Management (OPM) finds that (1) the agency is no longer in existence and its functions have not been transferred to any other agency, or (2) for any reason it is not feasible for the individual to be reemployed by the agency or the District of Columbia, the Director must determine whether or not there is another position in any other agency in the executive branch or in the government of the District of Columbia for which the individual is qualified and which is either vacant or held by an individual having a temporary appointment, and, if such a position exists, the individual must be offered the position and, if the individual so requests, be employed in the position.

In cases in which it is not possible for an individual who is entitled to reemployment rights to be restored to a position that he or she left in the legislative branch and who is otherwise eligible to acquire a status for a transfer to a position in the competitive service, the Director of the OPM is required to search for a comparable position in the executive branch for which the individual is qualified and which is either vacant or held by an individual having a temporary appointment, and, if such a position exists, it must be offered to the individual. An individual who was employed in the judicial branch must be restored to the position that the individual held immediately before entering the Armed Forces.

House bill: Proposed new section 4314 is similar to current law but would provide that (1) an individual is entitled to be reemployed according to the priorities set out in new section 4313; (2) the District of Columbia government is not considered part of the executive branch; and (3) in a case in which an employer in the legislative or judicial branch, or the adjutant general of a State in the case of a National Guard technician, determines that it is impossible or unreasonable to reemploy an individual who left to serve in the uniformed services and the individual is otherwise eligible to acquire a status for a transfer to a position in the competitive service, the Director of OPM must identify and offer an alternative position in the executive branch.

Senate amendment: Proposed new section 4314 is similar to the House provision but would require the Director of OPM to ensure that an individual whose reemployment in a Federal Government position—to include the legislative or judicial branch—or as a National Guard technician is impossible or unreasonable is offered an alternative position of employment in the executive branch.

Compromise agreement: Section 4314 contains the Senate provision.

REEMPLOYMENT BY CERTAIN FEDERAL AGENCIES

Current law: Although current Chapter 43 does not exempt federal intelligence community agencies—those listed in section 2302(a)(2)(C)(ii) of title 5, United States Code (the Federal Bureau of Investigation, the Central Intelligence Agency, the Defense Intelligence Agency, the National Security Agency, and any Executive agency or unit the function of which is determined by the President to be the conduct of foreign intelligence or counterintelligence activities), section 403(c) of title 50, United States Code, provides that the Director of Central Intelligence may, in his or her discretion, terminate the employment of any officer or employee of the Agency whenever he or she deems such a termination necessary or advisable in the interests of the United States. Other intelligence community agencies have similar authority to make employment determinations without outside review.

House bill: No provision.

Senate amendment: Proposed new section 4315 would provide that the head of each agency referred to in section 2302(a)(2)(C)(ii) of title 5 must (1) prescribe procedures for ensuring that veterans' reemployment rights apply to the employees of that agency, and ensure, to the maximum extent practicable, that the procedures for reemployment in that agency are similar to those that apply to other executive branch employees; (2) upon making a determination that the reemployment of an individual is impossible or unreasonable, notify the individual and the Director of OPM of the determination; and (3) on an annual basis, submit to the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence and the Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence of the House of Representatives a report of the number of individuals whose reemployment with the agency was determined to be impossible or unreasonable during the year preceding the report and the reason for each determination.

Compromise agreement: Section 4315 contains the Senate provision, modified to require the heads of each agency to submit annual reports to the House and Senate Committees on Veterans' Affairs.

GENERAL RIGHTS AND BENEFITS

Current law: Section 4301(b)(1) provides that an individual reemployed under the veterans' reemployment rights law (1) shall be considered as having been on furlough or leave of absence during the period of service, (2) must be reemployed without loss of seniority, and (3) is entitled to participate in insurance or other benefits offered by the employer according to rules and practices relating to employees on furlough or leave of absence in effect with the employer at the beginning of the period of service. Section 4301(b)(2) provides that it is the sense of Congress that the reemployed individual should be so reemployed as to give the individual the status that he or she would have enjoyed if employed continuously during the period of active service.

House bill: Proposed new section 4315(a) would, as in current law, provide that upon reemployment under the veterans' reemployment rights law, a person would be entitled to the seniority and other rights and benefits determined by seniority that the individual had on the date of the beginning of uniformed service plus the additional seniority and rights and benefits the individual would have attained if the individual had remained continuously employed.

Proposed new section 4315(b) would provide that (1) an individual who performs service in the uniformed services would be considered to be on a furlough or leave of absence while in the uniformed services and would be entitled, while away, to rights and benefits, not determined by seniority, relating to other employees on furlough or leave of absence which were established, but contract, practice, policy, agreement, or plan effective at the beginning of the period of service or implemented while the individual is performing service; and (2) the individual may be required to pay the employee cost, if any, of any funded benefit continued to the extend other employees on furlough or leave of absence are required to pay.

Senate amendment: Subsections (a) and (b) of proposed new section 4315 are substantively identical to the House provision, except that subsection (b) and (1) provide that in the case of a multiemployer pension plan, liability will be allocated by the plan or if the plan does not provide, liability would be allocated to the last employer before the period of uniformed service; (2) clarify that the servicemember deemed to be on furlough or leave of absence because of uniformed service would not be entitled to any benefits which he or she would not otherwise be entitled if the individual were not on furlough or leave of absence; (3) exempt entitlement for health insurance to care and treatment to the extent the individual would be entitled to the same care and treatment from the Federal Government during uniformed service; (4) preserve policy exclusion of disability insurance for persons in service in excess of 31 days; (5) preserve policy war-claim exclusions; and (6) limit the right of continued insurance coverages to the lesser of (a) 18 months from date of absence, or (b) the period of service plus period of notice of intent to return.

Compromise agreement: The compromise agreement addressed the seniority and non-seniority benefits in three sections—proposed new sections 4316 (Rights, benefits, and obligations of persons absent from employment for service in a uniformed service), 4317 (Health Plans), and 4318 (Employee pension benefit plans).

Subsection (a) of section 4316 contains the general provisions relating to seniority benefits as set forth in both the House bill and the Senate amendment.

Subsection (b) of section 4316 contains the general provisions relating to non-seniority benefits with a provision, in new subsection 4316(b)(2)(A), that provides that a person otherwise entitled to rights and benefits accorded to other employees on furlough or leave of absence may waive those rights and benefits if the person knowingly provides written notice of intent not to return to employment after military service. Basic waiver law would be applicable to such a knowing waiver.

Subsection 4316(b) contains the Senate provision relating to multiemployer plans, modified to provide that, in the event the last employer is not functioning, liability would be allocated to the plan. Subsection (b) also contains the Senate provision clarifying that a servicemember deemed to be on a leave of absence because of uniformed service is not entitled to any benefits which a person would not be entitled to if he or she was not on a leave of absence.

Although the compromise agreement for subsection 4316(b) does not contain the Senate exemptions relating to duplicative federal coverage, disability insurance, or war clauses, nothing in this law is intended to overrule contract rights of coverage in the areas of health, disability, and life insurance.

RETENTION RIGHTS

Current law: Section 4301(b)(1)(A) provides that an individual who was inducted into the Armed Forces and who is then reemployed cannot be discharged from his or her position without cause for one year following reemployment. Subsections (c) and (g) of section 4304 provide that reservists who were ordered to an initial period of active duty for training of not less than twelve consecutive weeks or who were ordered voluntarily or involuntarily to active duty under section 673b of title 10 cannot be discharged from their positions without cause for six months after reemployment.

House bill: Proposed new section 4315(d) would provide that an individual reemployed under this chapter may not be discharged from employment, except for cause (1) if the period of service was more than 180 days, within one year; (2) if the period of service was more than 30 days but less than 181 days, within six months; or (3) if the period of service was less than 31 days, within a period of time equal to the period of service concerned.

Senate amendment: Proposed new section 4316(e) is similar to the House provision except that retention rights would not be provided to individuals serving for less than 31 days.

Compromise agreement: Section 4316(c) contains the Senate provision.

ACCRUED LEAVE

Current law: No provision.

House bill: Proposed new section 4315(e) would provide that any individual who is absent from a position (other than a temporary position) for voluntary or involuntary service in the uniformed services may use, during the period of service, accrued or other leave which the individual could have used if employment had not been interrupted for service.

Senate amendment: Proposed new section 4316(f) is similar to the House provision, except (1) temporary positions are not excluded, and (2) application would be limited to accumulated vacation or annual leave with pay.

Compromise agreement: Section 4316(d) contains the Senate provision, modified to add "similar leave" with pay to the types of leave that could be used.

HEALTH PLANS

Current Law: Section 4301(b)(1)(A) provides, among other things, that any reemployed person "shall be entitled to participate in insurance or other benefits offered by the employer pursuant to established rules and practices relating to employees on furlough or leave of absence in effect with the employer at the time such person was inducted into" the Armed Forces.

Section 4301(b)(1)(B) provides that, in the case of employer-offered health insurance, an exclusion or waiting period may not be imposed in connection with coverage of a health or physical condition of a servicemember entitled to participate in that insurance, or a health or physical condition of any other individual who is covered by the insurance by reason of the coverage of the servicemember, if (1) the condition arose before or during the individual's period of training or service in the Armed Forces; (2) an exclusion or waiting period would not have been imposed for the condition during a period of coverage resulting from participation by the individual in the insurance; and (3) the condition of the individual has not been determined by the Secretary of Veterans Affairs to be service-connected.

House bill: Proposed new section 4315(c)(1) would provide that, notwithstanding the general provision that persons in military service are considered to be on furlough or leave of absence and are entitled to non-seniority rights and benefits which other employees on furlough or leave are entitled to, a person would be entitled to continuation of any insurance provided by the employer, including health insurance, for up to 18 months. The person could be required to pay the entire cost of any insurance benefit, except the person would only be responsible for the employee share of any insurance premium when the person was ordered to service of less than 31 days.

Proposed new section 4315(c)(2) is substantively identical to existing section 4301(b)(1)(B) (dealing with reinstatement of health coverage without exclusions or waiting periods).

Senate amendment: Proposed new section 4316(d)(1), dealing with an employee's right to continue health-plan coverage, would apply if the person's health-plan coverage "would otherwise terminate due to an extended absence from employment for purposes of performing service in the uniformed services." A person who elects continuation coverage could be required to pay 102 percent of the full premium associated with such coverage except, in the case of service of less than 31 days, the person could not be required to pay more than the employee share. A person who elected continuation coverage would not be entitled to such coverage (1) to the extent that the person is entitled to care or treatment from the Federal Government, or (2) if the person failed to notify the employer of the person's intent to return to employment within the periods prescribed in section 4312(e) of the Senate bill.

Proposed new section 4316(d) would provide that, if an individual's coverage under an employer-sponsored health plan is terminated by reason of uniformed service, an exclusion or waiting period may not be imposed in connection with coverage of the servicemember or any other individual covered by the health plan upon reemployment by the employer, if an exclusion or waiting period would not have been imposed had coverage not been terminated. An exception would apply to disabilities that the Secretary of Veterans Affairs has determined to be service-connected.

Compromise agreement: Section 4317 requires the health plan to offer continuation coverage for up to 18 months to persons who have coverage in connection with employment and who are absent from such employment due to military service. The health plan may not require the person to pay more than the employee share for that coverage if the period of military service does not exceed 31 days. If the period of service exceeds 31 days, the employee may be required to pay not more than 102 percent of the full premium under the plan.

The compromise also includes provisions pertaining to allocation of liability in the case of a multiemployer plan and limiting the obligation to continue coverage to the day after the date on which the person fails to apply for or return to a position of employment.

With respect to reinstatement of health plan coverage following a period of service, the compromise generally follows the Senate provision, with a clarification that all persons who are covered by the plan by reason of the reinstatement of the coverage of the person who is reemployed would also have coverage reinstated without the imposition of an exclusion or waiting period.

EMPLOYEE PENSION BENEFIT PLANS

Current law: Section 4321(b)(1)(A) provides that upon reemployment after military service, a person shall be restored without loss of seniority. In Alabama Power Co. v. Davis, 431 U.S. 581 (1977), the Supreme Court held that pension benefits were protected under the Act as "prerequisites of seniority" because the real nature of the benefit is a reward for length of service.

House bill: Proposed new section 4316 would clarify the protection provided pension benefits under the Act. Section 4316(a)(1)(A) would define the pension plans entitled to protection under the Act as any plan which falls within the definition of an employee pension benefit plan described in section 3(2) of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974, 29 U.S.C. s 1002(2), as well as any federal, state or local government plan.

This definition would include profit-sharing plans to the extent that such plans provide retirement benefits to participants.

Sections 4316(a)(2) (A) and (B) would make explicit the rights of reemployed servicemembers in their pension plans, such as no break in employment service would be considered to have occurred, no forfeiture of benefits already accrued would be allowed, and there would be no necessity to requalify for participation in the pension plan by reason of absence for military service.

Section 4316(b)(1)(A) would provide a pension plan with a claim against the employer for amounts that may be required to fund obligations arising under this section. In the case of a multiemployer plan, this provision would enable the plan to pursue its existing remedies under section 515 of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act, 29 U.S.C. 1145, for failure to make the required contributions, in the event that neither the plan nor the collective bargaining agreement pursuant to which the plan is maintained provides for any such funding obligations.

Section 4316(b)(1)(B) would provide that a returning veteran is entitled to have earnings and any employer contribution which is determined without reference to the number of, or compensation of, plan participants credited to such person's pension account to the same extent as they would have been credited had such person remained continuously employed instead of serving in the uniformed service. With regard to forfeitures, this section would permit, but not require, the allocation of forfeitures to such person's pension account.

Section 4316(b)(2) would provide that, if the plan is contributory (i.e., provides for employee contributions as well as employer contributions), the portion of such accrued benefit that is derivable from employee contributions would be required to be calculated only to the extent that the reemployed serviceperson makes the required employee contribution to the plan. No interest or penalty would be charged on the employee contribution, nor would the employee be credited with interest that would have been earned on such contribution. However, if a reemployed serviceperson has withdrawn his or her pension plan monies, in whole or in part, prior to entering military service, such person must be allowed to voluntarily repay the withdrawn amounts (together with the interest that would have been earned had the monies not been withdrawn) and receive the appropriate credit in the pension plan. The period of repayment would be subject to negotiation between the employer and employee.

Section 4316(b)(3) would provide that if there is a need to use imputed earnings of an employee to calculate pension benefits during a period when in fact there were no earnings because of the absence in military service, the employee's preservice rate of pay will be used or if no fixed rate was in effect, the average earnings of the 12 months immediately preceding military service shall be used.

Section 4316(c) would require that, where military service might result in additional pension liability, the administrator of a multiemployer pension plan be notified that a contributing employer has reemployed a veteran under chapter 43. Such a notification would provide the plan the opportunity to take whatever steps may be required to protect its interests. Unlike administrators of single-employer pension plans, administrators of multiemployer plans are generally not in a position to be aware of the fact that a contributing employer has reemployed a person who may have a pension claim arising from a period of military service.

Senate amendment: Proposed new section 4317 is similar to the House provisions with some changes (described below).

Section 4317(b)(1) would provide, in the case of a multiemployer pension plan, if the plan does not have a method of allocating liability for a returning servicemember, the last employer employing the person prior to military service shall be liable.

Section 4317(b)(2) would provide, with reference to the repayment of employee contributions, for the repayment period to be no shorter than the length of absence.

Section 4317(b)(4) would not allow earnings on contributions to a plan until the contributions are made and would not allow the reallocation of already allocated forfeitures to a returning servicemember's account.

Section 4317(d) would provide that no action need be taken which would cause the plan, participants, or the employer to suffer adverse tax or other consequences under the Internal Revenue Code.

Compromise Agreement: Section 4318 generally follows the House bill with several modifications.

The first modification is that, in a multi-employer context, section 4318(b)(1)(A) requires allocation of liability first to the plan in whatever manner the plan provides. If there is no provision made, the last employer of such person before military service would be responsible and, if there is no longer a functional last employer, the liability would revert to the plan.

The next modification is the section 4318(b)(2) now provides that repayment of employee contributions can be made over a period of three times the period of military service, not to exceed five years.

Under section 4318(b)(3), for purposes of computing an employer's liability or an employee's contributions to the extent that they are based on an employee's earnings, the same "reasonable certainty" analysis as is applicable to pay rate cases would be applicable here.

It is the Committees' intent that earnings or losses on contributions made after return from military service not be credited until after the contributions are made and only prospectively and there is no requirement to reallocate already allocated forfeitures to a returning servicemember's account.

The Committees also intend that no pension rights accrue for a period of military service if the servicemember elects not to be reemployed, but the person's vested interest prior to entering military service would remain intact.

ASSISTANCE IN ASSERTING CLAIMS

Current law: Under section 4305, the Secretary of Labor, through the Office of Veterans' Reemployment Rights, is required (1) to render aid in the replacement in their former positions or reemployment of individuals who have satisfactorily completed a period of active duty in the Armed Forces or the Public Health Service and (2) to use existing Federal and State agencies engaged in similar or related activities and the assistance of volunteers.

House bill: Proposed new section 4321 is similar to current law, except that the Secretary would be authorized, rather than required, to use existing Federal and State agencies engaged in similar or related activities and the assistance of volunteers.

Proposed new section 4322 would specify (1) procedures for individuals to file reemployment complaints with the Secretary and (2) that the Secretary is authorized to conduct investigations and make efforts to obtain voluntary compliance from employers.

Senate amendment: Proposed new section 4321 is similar to the House provisions and in addition, would require that in cases in which the efforts of the Secretary to obtain voluntary compliance are unsuccessful, the Secretary must notify the individual who submitted the complaint of (1) the results of the investigation, and (2) the complainant's entitlement to request referral of the claim to the Office of the Special Counsel or the United States Attorney, depending on whether the employer is the Federal government or a State or private employer.

Compromise agreement: Section 4321 and 4322 contain the Senate provisions.

ENFORCEMENT

STATE OR PRIVATE EMPLOYER

Current law: Under section 4302, in the case of a private or State employer who fails or refuses to comply with the reemployment laws, (1) the district court of the United States for the district in which the employer maintains a place of business, exercises authority, or carries out its function, has the power, upon the filing of a motion, petition, or other appropriate pleading by the individual entitled to the benefits or the reemployment laws, to require the employer to comply with the reemployment law and to compensate the individual for any loss of wages or benefits suffered by reason of the employer's unlawful action; (2) the United States attorney or comparable official, if reasonably satisfied that an individual who applies for representation is entitled to the reemployment benefits, must appear and act as an attorney for the individual in the amicable adjustment of the claim or in the filing and prosecution of a complaint; (3) no fees or court costs may be taxed against an individual who applies for such benefits; (4) only the employer may be deemed a necessary party respondent; and (5) no State statute of limitations may apply to any proceedings.

House bill: Proposed new section 4322 is similar to current law except that it would provide that (1) if the Secretary of Labor, after investigation, is reasonably satisfied that a violation has occurred and efforts to obtain voluntary compliance are not successful, and if the claimant requests referral for litigation, the Secretary must refer the case to the Attorney General; (2) the Attorney General, if reasonably satisfied that the individual requesting representation is entitled to the rights or benefits sought, may appear and act as attorney for the claimant in the filing and prosecution of a complaint; (3) an individual may be represented before the District Court by a counsel of choice; (4) the court may award an individual who prevails a reasonable attorney's fee, expert witness fee, and other litigation expenses; (5) the court may use its full equity powers to vindicate rights under the Act; (6) a reemployment rights claim may only be initiated by an individual claiming such rights or benefits, not by an employer, prospective employer, or other entity with obligations under the reemployment law; (7) a State will be subject to the same remedies, including prejudgment interest, as may be imposed upon any private employer; and (8) if the District Court determines that the employer's failure to comply with the provisions of chapter 43 were willful, the court may require the State or private employer to pay, in addition to the compensation determined to be paid the person, an amount equal to that compensation as liquidated damages.

Senate amendment: Proposed new section 4322 is substantively identical to the House provision.

Compromise agreement: Section 4323 contains these provisions.

FEDERAL GOVERNMENT AS EMPLOYER

Current law: Section 4303(a) provides that the Director of the Office of Personnel Management is authorized and directed when the Director finds, upon appeal of the individual concerned, that any agency in the executive branch or the government of the District of Columbia has failed or refuses to comply with the provisions of the law relating to reemployment by the executive branch or the government of the District of Columbia, to issue an order requiring compliance and to compensate the individual for any loss of salary or wages suffered by reason of failure to comply, less any amounts received by the individual through other employment, unemployment compensation, or readjustment allowances.

House bill: Proposed new section 4322(e), which applies with respect to the Federal Government as employer, would provide that (1) if the Secretary, after investigation, is reasonably satisfied that a violation has occurred with respect to the Federal Government as employer and efforts to obtain voluntary compliance are not successful, and if the claimant requests that the claim be referred for litigation before the Merit Systems Protection Board (MSPB), the Secretary would be required to refer the case to the Office of the Special Counsel; (2) if the Special Counsel is reasonably satisfied that the individual requesting representation is entitled to the rights or benefits sought, the Special Counsel would be required to appear and act as an attorney for the claimant in filing and pursuing an appeal to the MSPB; (3) if the Special Counsel were to decline to represent an individual after receiving a referral from the Secretary or if an individual were to decide not to apply to the Secretary for assistance or to use the Special Counsel for representation, the individual may be represented before the MSPB by counsel of the individual's choice; (4) if the MSPB concludes that a Federal Government employer has failed or refused to comply with the reemployment laws or that the Director of OPM has not met his or her obligation under the reemployment law, it would require the employing agency or the Director to comply with the law and to compensate the individual for any loss of wages or benefits suffered by reason of the unlawful action; and (5) a claimant would be able to petition the United States Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit to review a decision of the MSPB in which the claimant is denied the relief sought, but would not be represented by the Secretary or the Special Counsel before the Court of Appeals or the Supreme Court.

Senate bill: Proposed new section 4323 is substantively identical to the House provision but would provide that (1) the individual would be able to be represented before the MSPB by a representative of choice; (2) the MSPB would be able to award the individual reasonable attorney fees, expert witness fees, and other litigation expenses; and (3) an individual would be able to be represented by the Special Counsel in an action for a review of a decision issued by the MSPB, unless the individual was not represented by the Special Counsel before the MSPB regarding this decision.

Compromise agreement: Section 4324 contains the Senate provision.

FEDERAL INTELLIGENCE AGENCY AS EMPLOYER

Current law: No provision.

House bill: No provision.

Senate amendment: Proposed new section 4324 would provide that any individual employed prior to service in the uniformed services by a federal intelligence agency—those listed in section 2302(a)(2)(C)(ii) of Title 5 (the Federal Bureau of Investigation, the Central Intelligence Agency, the Defense Intelligence Agency, the National Security Agency, or any Executive agency or unit the function of which is determined by the President to be the conduct of foreign intelligence or counterintelligence activities)—would be able to submit a complaint regarding reemployment to the Inspector General of the agency in question, who would be required to investigate and resolve the claim pursuant to procedures prescribed by the head of the agency, which must be, to the maximum extent practicable, similar to the provisions relating to the investigation and resolution of a claim by the Secretary of Labor.

Compromise agreement: Section 4325 contains the Senate provision.

SUBPOENAS

Current law: No provision.

House bill: Subsections (b) and (c) of proposed new section 4323 would provide that the Secretary may (1) require by subpoena the attendance and testimony of witnesses and the production of documents relating to any matter under investigation and (2) in the case of disobedience of a subpoena, may request that the Attorney General apply to a district court of jurisdiction for an order enforcing the subpoena. Subpoena authority would not apply in the case where the employer is the Federal Government.

Senate amendment: Subsections (b) and (c) of proposed new section 4325 are substantively identical to the House provisions, but would not apply the subpoena authority to the legislative and judicial branches of the United States.

Compromise agreement: Section 4326 contains the Senate provision.

REGULATIONS

Current law: Under section 4303(a), the Director of the Office of Personnel Management (OPM) is authorized and directed to issue regulations relating to the reemployment in the executive branch or in the government of the District of Columbia.

House bill: Proposed new section 4331 would provide that (1) the Secretary of Labor, in consultation with the Secretary of Defense, would be authorized to prescribe regulations with regard to States, local governments, and private employers; (2) the Director of OPM, in consultation with the Secretaries of Labor and Defense, would be authorized to prescribe regulations with regard to the Federal Government as employer, and any such regulations would have to be consistent with regulations pertaining to States and private employers, except that employees of the Federal government may be given greater or additional rights; and (3) regulations may be prescribed by the Merit Systems Protection Board and by the Office of Special Counsel to carry out their responsibilities.

Senate amendment: Proposed new section 4331 is substantively identical to the House provision but (1) would not authorize the Director of OPM to prescribe regulations giving Federal employees greater rights than employees of States and private employers, and (2) would authorize intelligence community agencies to prescribe regulations.

Compromise agreement: Section 4331 contains the House provision, modified to authorize intelligence community agencies to prescribe regulations.

REPORTS

Current law: No provision.

House bill: Proposed new section 4332 would require the Secretary of Labor, after consultation with the Attorney General and Special Counsel, to provide Congress no later than February 1, 1995, and each February 1 annually thereafter, a report concerning actions taken under chapter 43 during the prior fiscal year, including (1) the number of cases reviewed by the Department of Labor; (2) the number of cases referred to the Attorney General or the Special Counsel; (3) the number of complaints filed by the Attorney General; (4) the nature and status of each case; (5) an indication of whether there are any apparent patterns of violation of the provisions of this chapter; and (6) recommendations for administrative or legislative action that the Secretary, Attorney General, or the Special Counsel considers necessary for the effective implementation of this chapter.

Senate amendment: Section 2(c) would require the Secretary of Labor, the Attorney General, and the Special Counsel to submit a report to Congress, not later than one year after the date of enactment, relating to the implementation of chapter 43.

Compromise agreement: Section 4332 contains the House provision, modified to provide that Congress be provided with an annual report on February 1 of each year for five years, beginning with 1996.

OUTREACH

Current law: No provision.

House bill: No provision.

Senate amendment: Proposed new section 4332 would require that the Secretaries of Labor, Defense, and Veterans Affairs to take appropriate actions to inform individuals entitled to reemployment rights and benefits and employers of the reemployment rights, benefits, and obligations.

Compromise agreement: Section 4333 contains the Senate provision.

EXEMPTION FROM MINIMUM SERVICE REQUIREMENTS

Current law: Section 5303a(b)(1) of title 38 generally provides that an individual who is discharged or released from active duty before completing the shorter of 24 months of continuous active duty or the full period for which called or ordered to active duty is not eligible by reason of that period of active duty for any benefit under title 38 or any other law administered by the VA.

House bill: Section 3 would exclude reemployment benefits under chapter 43 of title 38 from the minimum service requirements.

Senate amendment: Section 3 is identical to the House provision.

Compromise agreement: Section 3 contains this provision.

THRIFT SAVINGS PLAN

Current law: Under current law, Federal and Postal employees who return from active military service have certain reemployment and restoration rights, including the rights to obtain retirement credit under the Civil Service Retirement System (CSRS) or under the basic annuity provisions of the Federal Employees' Retirement System (FERS) for the period of military service. However, Federal and Postal employees who separate from service or who enter leave-without-pay status to perform military service cease to be eligible to make contributions to the Thrift Savings Plan (TSP) or to have their employing agencies contribute to their accounts during their period of military service. The TSP is a deferred compensation arrangement similar to private sector 401(k) plans. The structure of the TSP is based on the premise that contributions by employees must be deferred from current civilian pay in order for an employee to enjoy the tax benefits of deferred income, which are an integral part of the TSP.

House bill: Section 4 would amend title 5, United States Code, principally by adding a proposed new section 8432b, so as to allow Federal and Postal employees who separate or enter leave-without-pay status to perform military service to make up contributions to the Thrift Savings Plan (TSP) missed because of military service. The maximum amount an employee would be allowed to contribute would be equal to the amount an employee would have been eligible to contribute, subject to the applicable statutory maximums, reduced by any contributions actually made during the period of military service (since these employees may use military or annual leave to cover periods of military service and since employees on military and annual leave continue to receive civilian basic pay, contributions continue to be made to the Thrift Savings Fund for such periods.)

For purposes of any computation under this section, an employee would be, with respect to the period of military service, considered to have been paid at the rate which the employing agency determines would have been payable over such period had such employee remained continuously employed in the position which such employee last held before separating or entering leave-without-pay status to perform military service.

An employing agency would be required to give an employee up to two times, and may give an employee up to four times, the length of his or her military service to make up TSP contributions, although an employee may choose to make up contributions sooner. Make-up contributions would have to be made at the same time, in the same manner, and in addition to, contributions the employee is otherwise eligible to make.

If an employee is entitled to agency matching contributions based on make-up contributions, the agency would be required to make such contributions in the same manner as regular matching contributions. Agency matching contributions attributable to employee make-up contributions would be in addition to any matching contributions to which the employee is already entitled.

Upon reemployment or restoration, the employing agency would be required to pay lost earnings on contributions made by the employee as well as any agency automatic contributions to which the employee would have been entitled during the make-up period.

The period of military service would be counted towards service required for vesting in TSP agency automatic contributions, and any separation to perform military service would not cause forfeiture of such contributions if the employee is subsequently reemployed or restored pursuant to chapter 43 of title 38. Persons who received involuntary TSP payments as a result of their separation to perform military service would have the right to restore those payments to the plan.

Employees who have been restored or reemployed before the date of enactment of this Act would be entitled to make up contributions for the period beginning with their absence from civilian service and continuing through either the date of enactment or the first TSP open season from which the employee is eligible, whichever occurs first.

An employee would be allowed to elect, for purposes of transferring TSP account balances to eligible retirement plans or establishing nonforfeiture of account balances of less than $3,500, to have the employee's separation treated as if it had never occurred. An election for these purposes would have to be made within such period of time after restoration or reemployment, as the case may be, and otherwise in such manner as the Executive Director of the Federal Retirement Thrift Investment Board prescribes.

Senate amendment: Section 6 is substantively identical to the House provisions but does not include requiring the employing agency to pay lost earnings on retroactive contributions.

Compromise agreement: Section 4 follows the House bill with a modification giving the employing agency the discretion to pay lost earnings on retroactive contributions.

REVISION OF FEDERAL CIVIL SERVICE RETIREMENT BENEFIT PROGRAM FOR RESERVISTS

Current law: Some Federal workers—those enrolled in Federal Employees' Retirement System (FERS)—who interrupt their civilian employment to serve on active duty in the military may be required to pay more to receive Federal civilian retirement credit for that service than they would have had to pay had they not gone on active duty.

In order to receive Federal civilian retirement credit for military service, Federal employees who are enrolled in FERS are required to pay 3 percent of their military pay. However, these employees pay only 0.8 percent of the civilian wages to receive retirement credit for their civilian Federal employment. As a result, when 3 percent of such an individual's military pay exceeds 0.8 percent of that individual's civilian pay, the individual would pay a larger dollar amount to receive retirement credit for military time than the individual would have paid had he or she remained in the civilian job.

House bill: No Provision.

Senate amendment: Section 5 would amend sections 8334(j)(1) and 8422(e)(1) of title 5, United States Code, to provide that in the case of individuals enrolled in FERS (or in the Civil Service Retirement System, which does not have this anomaly) who have their Federal civilian service interrupted by military service and who are reemployed under chapter 43 of title 38 on or after August 1, 1990, the deposit into their retirement benefit program may not exceed the amount that would have been deducted and withheld from basic pay during civilian service if the employee had remained in continuous civilian service.

Section 5 also would amend sections 8331(13) and 8401(31) of title 5, to expand the definition of "military service" for both CSRS and FERS, respectively, by adding to the meaning full-time National Guard duty (as that term is defined in section 101(d) of title 10) if that service interrupts creditable civilian service and is followed by reemployment in accordance with chapter 43 of title 38 that occurs on or after August 1, 1990.

Compromise agreement: Section 5 includes this provision.

INCREASE IN AMOUNT OF LOAN GUARANTY FOR THE PURCHASE OR CONSTRUCTION OF HOMES

Current law: Section 3703(a)(1) of title 38 sets the maximum amount of a VA loan guaranty for loans for the purchase or construction of homes at $46,000, an amount that would support a no-downpayment, VA-guaranteed home loan of $184,000.

House bill: No provision in H.R. 995. Section 1 of H.R. 949, as passed by the House on September 21, 1993, would amend section 3703(a)(1) to increase the maximum loan guaranty to $50,750 and thus increase the maximum loan guaranty to $50,750 and thus increase the no-downpayment VA-guaranteed home loans to $203,000.

Senate amendment: Section 10 is substantively identical to section 1 of H.R. 949.

Compromise agreement: Section 7 includes this provision.

TRANSITION RULES AND EFFECTIVE DATES

Current law: No provision.

House bill: Section 6 of H.R. 995 would provide that (1) except as provided elsewhere, the amendments made by this Act would be effective with respect to reemployment initiated on or after the first day after the 60-day period beginning on the date of enactment, (2) the reemployment provisions contained in chapter 43 in effect on the day before the date of enactment would continue to apply to reemployment initiated before the end of the 60-day period; (3) for the purposes of the five-year service limitation, military service performed prior to the date of enactment would be considered only to the extent that period of military service would have counted toward the service limitations under current law; (4) the anti-discrimination provisions that are added by amendments to this Act would be effective on the date of enactment; (5) the insurance provision would be effective on the date of enactment, except that an individual on active duty on the date of enactment would be able to elect to reinstate or continue insurance coverage for the remaining portion of the 18 months that began on the date of separation from civilian employment; and (6) the disability provisions would be effective with respect to reemployment initiated on or after August 1, 1990.

The provisions of section 4311(a) defining the actions protected from discrimination or reprisal and the standard and burden of proof set forth in section 4311(b) are not additions to the Act but are a codification of existing law.

Senate amendment: Section 9 is substantively identical to the House provision with the additional provision that the provisions of proposed section 4325 regarding investigations and subpoenas would become effective on the date of enactment and apply to any matter pending with the Secretary of Labor.

Compromise agreement: Section 8 contains the Senate provision. It also contains a provision that the notice of intent not to return found in section 4316(b)(2) applies only to furlough or leave of absence rights and benefits under that section and does not apply to or waive any other right or benefit under the Act.

The compromise also provides that nothing in this Act would relieve an employer or an obligation to provide contributions to a pension plan (or provide pension benefits) which is required by the provisions of the existing chapter 43 of title 38, United States Code, in effect on the day before this Act takes effect. Any plan which is not in compliance with the requirements of the law would have two years from the date of enactment to come into compliance with the law.

Mr. BOREN. I move that the Senate concur in the House amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the motion. The motion was agreed to.

AUTHORIZATION OF THE TAKING OF A PHOTOGRAPH OF THE SENATE CHAMBER

JOBS BILL

(Ms. DELAURO asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. DELAURO. Mr. Speaker, today, I, along with the majority leader, the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. GEPHARDT], will introduce the National Infrastructure Development Act of 1994. This legislation will achieve two important goals: It will create more than 250,000 new jobs nationwide, and it will strengthen this country's crumbling infrastructure by providing resources to build new roads, bridges, water treatment facilities, and the like.

Due to Federal, State, and local budget constraints, there is a growing gap between infrastructure needs and the resources to fund them. Increasingly, we have looked to public-private partnerships to fill that gap. The legislation I introduce today will put a permanent mechanism in place to help us maximize our opportunities to create jobs in infrastructure development.

Too many of our workers are being left behind. At a time when the Government is struggling to meet its obligations, we need to look for innovative ways to create jobs. The Infrastructure Development Act taps new markets and resources to spur long-term job growth.

Over the coming weeks and months, my colleagues in the House will have the opportunity to review this legislation. I expect this will be a piece of legislation that will find support on both sides of the aisle. Whether Democrat or a Republican, we all know that job creation is the key to a strong economy.

A CONTRACT IS A PROMISE

(Mr. KNOLLENBERG asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. KNOLLENBERG. Mr. Speaker, starting this past Thursday, the Democratic leadership has begun a carefully orchestrated campaign of misinformation on the Republican contract with America.

Why you might ask? Well, they are scared.

What we propose is a simple straightforward, 100-day legislative agenda that offers hard-working American taxpayers a real choice, a real chance, and some real hope.

And rather than get into the legislative specifics of the contract, let me just say that under our guarantee, we promise to limit Federal bureaucracy, make Government accountable, promote economic opportunities and individual responsibility, and maintain security at home and abroad.

A growing number of Americans are discarding the failed ideas of big government, and it is up to Congress to recognize this movement.

We've made our promise. Now isn't it about time that our friends on the other side of the aisle make their own stand? They need to realize that the public does not want rhetoric; they want accountability. Yesterday, we showed we're accountable, and we started delivering.

TRIBUTE TO THE MATHENEY FAMILY

(Mr. DICKEY asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. DICKEY. Mr. Speaker, I come today to share with this body and the Nation a truly remarkable family in the Fourth Congressional District of Arkansas. Roy Eason Matheney, Sr., his wife, Verlene, and their seven children are all striking examples of the spiritual, moral, and hard-working fiber on which our Nation was founded.

Roy Eason Matheney, Sr., has been a spiritual leader for nearly four decades. He has met the needs of thousands of people throughout his life long work as a pastor-evangelist. This Sunday, October 2, he and his wife will be honored for their years of service to the south Arkansas community.

Following in their footsteps are their seven children Roy, Jr., Robert, Ronald, Rickey, Ralph, Rodney, and Roslyn Matheney-Williams—two medical doctors, two educators, one pastor, and two associate pastors who are all college educated. The Matheney children are beacons of hope for today's youth.

Because of his accomplishments, Roy Eason Matheney, Sr., was inaugurated on May 7, 1994, into the Office of Bishop of the Third Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction of Arkansas in the Churches of God in Christ, by that organizations' national bishop, Bishop L.H. Ford. It's a position that oversees over 60 churches in south Arkansas.

It is with great pleasure that I take this time to honor this great American family. Pastor and Mrs. Matheney will celebrate their 33d wedding anniversary at the Davis Memorial Church of God in Christ in Crossett, AR, this Sunday, October 2, 1994. The Matheney name and their deeds will be long remembered by the people of the Fourth Congressional District.

TAKE THE TIME TO READ THE BILL

(Mr. GOSS asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. GOSS. Mr. Speaker, in a rare victory yesterday, those of us seeking to uphold the Standing Rules of the House won an important point. It may sound like a small thing, but by preserving the traditional 3-day layover requirement for bills coming to the floor, we won Members an extra day to read S. 349, the lobby reform bill. This is an important subject, long overdue and responsive to the call of the American people for stronger and clearer disclosure, gift, and travel rules. But this bill is as confusing as it is important, and even the most well-meaning, unsuspecting Members could find themselves in a minefield if they do not understand the nuances. The Ethics Committee will develop guidelines to help Members adhere to the new policies, but I urge Members not to be complacent. Take advantage of that extra time, and read the bill. As is the case for the average American, ignorance of the rules will not be an acceptable excuse, and boy is this lobby bill full of new rules.

HEALTH CARE REFORM

(Mr. LAZIO asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. LAZIO. Mr. Speaker, according to Senator MITCHELL and the House Democrat leadership, the 103d Congress will not pursue even a modest health care reform proposal any further before adjournment.

My constituents tell me that they want health care reform. They, as I, recognize that we have the best health care in the world, but the system is far from perfect and can certainly be fixed. They also tell me that they want reform done right and not to do more harm than good in the name of political expediency.

Reforming our Nation's health care system is arguably the most complicated issue that Congress will ever address. For a wide variety of reasons, moving a comprehensive reform package through the legislative process has proven politically infeasible.

However, a number of reforms have been identified during the debate that many of us on both sides of the aisle do, in fact, agree on. To me, it makes sense that we constructively use the time left before adjournment to focus on that common ground. We must brush aside partisan bickering and work together on the elements of health care reform where we agree. A stalemate simply does not serve the American people well.

ENCOURAGING MEMBERS TO LOOK AT THE LOBBYING DISCLOSURE ACT CAREFULLY

(Mr. GINGRICH asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. GINGRICH. Mr. Speaker, I just want to caution my colleagues on both sides of the aisle to look very, very carefully at the lobbying bill which is coming up. Our initial analysis indicates that those who lobby on behalf of religious organizations on issues such as abortion or pornography would have to file for grass roots activities. The small businesses which might want to come and talk to a Member of Congress could potentially be required to register officially, that efforts to communicate precisely the way the health bill was defeated would, in fact, become much more difficult and much more dangerous, and that a brand new President, with all of the police powers of the Government, might well be able to coerce freedom of speech, not in dealing with the Congress but in grass roots, lobbying, talking to grass roots voters.

I urge all of my colleagues, look very carefully at what is a hidden effort here to cut off free speech and to cut off citizens being informed and citizens being active and religious groups being active.

This is potentially a very antireligious activist, antimall business, antigraffiti voters bill.

THE LOBBYING DISCLOSURE ACT

(Mr. OLVER asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. OLVER. Mr. Speaker, it just makes sense, in spite of what the previous speaker said.

It bans most gifts from lobbyists.

It makes lobbying activities public.

It is the lobbying reform and gift ban bill.

And it is a small step toward reforming our political system.

The public debate should be won not with a fancy dinner or a golf trip—but with facts.

That is a step forward.

We can go further.

We can still fight expensive campaigns by limiting PAC contributions.

We can still clean up the system so people can have confidence in those they put in office.

But this week, we start with a single, simple step.

Pass lobbying reform and the gift ban.

It is the right thing to do.

WHAT ARE DEMOCRAT CHICKEN LITTLES SO AFRAID OF?

(Mr. SMITH of Texas asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. SMITH of Texas. Mr. speaker, Democrats are running around like a flock of Chicken Littles, all frantically clucking "the sky is falling, the sky is falling."

Why? Because of Republicans' contract with America. So much commotion begs the question: What are the Democrats so afraid of?

Are the Democrats afraid of the fiscal responsibility this contract would require? Are they afraid that we will take back our Nation's streets?

Are they afraid of our proposals to increase personal responsibility or to reinforce America's families? Are they afraid of job creation, of legal reforms, and allowing seniors to work without penalty?

Are the Democrats afraid of these reforms that America wants or are they just afraid that reform—real reform, real change, and right now—will cost them their ability to dictate to this Congress and this country what will be debated?

Republicans' contract with America does not signal that the sky is falling, as the Democrat Chicken Littles claim. Republicans' contract with America signals that the clouds are parting.

REPUBLICAN CONTRACT WITH AMERICA IS NO JOKE

(Mr. GEPHARDT asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. GEPHARDT. Mr. Speaker, yesterday, Republican House candidates signed their contract with the Republican leadership—a list of the bills they would introduce if they gained control of the House.

It would be easy for us to view this contract as a mere partisan ploy—a jumble of time-worn, discredited proposals that simply do not add up. Indeed, today's U.S.A. Today describes it as a "con," "fiscal games," and "the same old fraud."

But before we dismiss this contract as an election year joke, we would be wise to remember that the last time Republicans banded together to present the same agenda, the joke was on us.

Back in 1980, when the Republicans cried for large tax cuts for the wealthy, massive increases in defense spending, and a balanced Federal budget, few of us took it very seriously. In the absence of real dissent, America was treated to a 12-year Reaganomic roller-coaster ride—tax giveaways for the rich, runaway deficits, and rampant economic decline.

That is why we have to take this effort to resuscitate Reaganomics very, very seriously. This contract would blow a hole in the Federal budget of roughly a trillion dollars.

Their commitment to balance the Federal budget would require $743 billion in budget cuts over 5 years. On its own, this would force deep cuts in Medicare or Social Security or both—since these programs represent about 40 percent of all available savings.

Tack on a $70 billion defense increase, and $200 billion in tax cuts for the wealthy, and the result is a trickle-down time warp that could bury us in debt for much of the next century.

The fact that the GOP is touting these failed policies as fresh, new ideas may seem laughable—but if we do not expose their deception, we will laugh this country into fiscal oblivion.

In the words of today's U.S.A. Today, "Like 1980's free lunch, this one promises a huge bellyache later."

103D CONGRESS COULD DO MORE

(Mr. GUNDERSON asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. GUNDERSON. Mr. Speaker, I think the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. GEPHARDT], the majority leader, ought to focus a little less on what the Republicans want to do in the next session of Congress and focus a lot more on what is not being done in this Congress. I do not care whether one is a Democrat or Republican, liberal or conservative, I think one of the great reasons the public is disgusted with this institution is because we cannot even agree on and implement those basic elements of health care reform essential to every American.

There is not a person in this institution who does not agree that we ought to eliminate the preexisting condition barrier to insurance coverage. There is not a person in this institution who does not believe we ought to give 100 percent deductibility to farmers and self-employed and individuals who purchase their own insurance.

Yet, for partisan posturing and other reasons, we see an all-or-nothing mentality. And while we argue, the people are suffering.

I have numerous farm families in my district paying $600 to $800 a month for health insurance and, because of a preexisting condition, they cannot switch policies. And because we do not give them 100 percent deductibility, they had held out hope this year that we would change things so that they could do something different next year.

Now it looks like the Congress is going to disregard these, our constituents, with whom we were elected to serve.

CONFERENCE REPORT ON H.R. 4556, DEPARTMENT OF TRANSPORTATION AND RELATED AGENCIES APPROPRIATIONS ACT, 1995

Mr. GORDON. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on rules, I call up House Resolution 553 and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

H. RES. 553

Resolved, That upon adoption of this resolution it shall be in order to consider the conference report to accompany the bill (H.R. 4556) making appropriations for the Department of Transportation and related agencies for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1995, and for other purposes. All points of order against the conference report and against its consideration are waived. The conference report shall be considered as read.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. MONTGOMERY). The gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. GORDON] is recognized for 1 hour.

Mr. GORDON. Mr. Speaker, during consideration of this resolution, all time yielded is for the purpose of debate only. At this time I yield the customary 30 minutes for the purpose of debate only to the gentleman from Florida [Mr. GOSS], pending that I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. GORDON. Mr. Speaker, House Resolution 553 provides for the consideration of the conference report on the Department of Transportation and related agencies appropriations bill for fiscal year 1995.

The rule waives all points of order against and conference report and against its consideration.

I would like to commend Chairman BOB CARR and ranking Republican FRANK WOLF for bringing this comprehensive conference report to the floor today.

The long hours, hard work and dedication have produced a good bill which maintains our current transportation infrastructure and provides funding for innovative technologies which will make our Nation's transportation system safer, more efficient and economical.

This year, Chairman CARR and the conferees had to achieve these goals with a much tighter budget. The conference report is $10 million below the 602(b) allocation.

I want to commend Chairman CARR for his many achievements as chairman of the subcommittee. Under his leadership, the Transportation Appropriations Subcommittee developed detailed investment criteria which every member submitting a funding request must complete. I hope the criteria continues to be utilized in the years to come.

I want to thank Chairman CARR for his friendship and advice. I also want to thank FRANK WOLF and the subcommittee staff for all of their hard work and for a job well done.

I urge my colleagues to adopt the resolution.

□ 1020

Mr. GOSS. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, the 1995 transportation appropriations bill has evolved through a process of give-and-take that saw some rearranging of priorities and, I think, resulted in a better and fairer product for the American people. The conference report that came to the Rules Committee last evening represents the result of months of hard work and negotiating on both sides of the aisle and both sides of the Capitol. The rule before us waives all points of order—a blanket waiver—blank check, if you will—that affords this conference report complete protection from violations of the rules of the House. While I recognize that bills of this magnitude are often so complex that it is difficult to determine if every "I" is dotted and every "T" is crossed—I believe that chairmen who bring these bills forward should know which House rules their bills have violated and which waivers they need. I have been given by staff a partial list of the rules violations in this bill—including germaneness, scope and legislating in an appropriations bill—and for that I am grateful. I think that providing such specific information allays Members' concerns about hidden surprises that might be tucked into these massive bills—and it certainly comes closer to living within the rules we have set for ourselves in this House. I hope that these specific waiver requests, as opposed to blanket waivers, will become more the norm than the exception. In addition, Members should note that the blanket waiver in this rule sets aside the requirement that conference reports be available for 3 days prior to floor consideration—another provision of House rules designed to protect Members against unpleasant surprises. As the Washington Post noted this week in an editorial, such waivers can cause real problems. They said, "Members are sometimes forced to vote on bills they haven't read and into which provisions have been inserted that might not be able to stand the light of day; the crime bill was a recent example."

Now, I am not implying that this bill has such a problem—but generally I think it is best if we make sure we give Members enough time to be sure on their own. Still, I do recognize that October first—end of the fiscal year—is fast approaching, and so I will not object to this waiver on this bill.

Mr. Speaker, as a Floridian, I must admit that I am still concerned about the formulas used for allocating Federal highway dollars—formulas that continue to leave high-growth States with the short end of the money. As a strong advocate for the Coast Guard, I note that, while this bill offers an increase for Coast Guard funding from last year's bill, it still falls short of their request. I know my colleagues don't need to be reminded of the important duties the Coast Guard traditionally performs—duties that have been forced to a lower priority in recent months as the Coast Guard has become a major player in the Clinton administrations war like Haitian policy. To conclude Mr. Speaker, I wish offering blanket waivers were not such a reflex action in the Rules Committee, and I hope that during next year's appropriations process we will see fewer such requests.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. GORDON. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, in conclusion, I would like to say briefly that this is the last appropriations bill that the chairman of the committee, the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CARR], will be presenting to the U.S. House of Representatives. Not only is he a friend and colleague, but BOB CARR is someone who I think has really brought new accountability to this appropriations process, a system that hopefully will live on and make a more logical, economical approach to these very needed appropriations.

Mr. Speaker, he is a good friend, he is a good Member, he is a good man. We are all going to miss him, and all my best to BOB, his wife Kate, and family.

Mr. GOSS. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time. In the interests of bipartisan comity and of moving this bill in a forward way, I would like to associate myself with the remarks of the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. GORDON] about the chairman, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. GORDON. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time. I yield back the balance of my time, and I move the previous question on the resolution.

The previous question was ordered.

The resolution was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

Mr. CARR of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, pursuant to House Resolution 553, I call up the conference report on the bill (H.R. 4556) making appropriations for the Department of Transportation and related agencies for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1995, and for other purposes.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. MONTGOMERY). Pursuant to House Resolution 553, the conference report is considered as having been read.

(For conference report and statement, see proceedings of the House of Monday, September 26, 1994, at page H9719.)

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CARR] will be recognized for 30 minutes, and the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. WOLF] will be recognized for 30 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CARR].

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. CARR of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks on the conference report to accompany H.R. 4556.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

Mr. CARR of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, today we present to the House a conference report on the fiscal year 1995 transportation appropriations bill. As Members know, the start of the 1995 fiscal year is just 3 short days away. The conference agreement provides funding to continue the important operations of transportation programs and related activities, including air traffic control, Coast Guard operations, and other critical transportation safety activities.

The transportation appropriations bill always requires a delicate balancing act, and this year was no different. We have had to deal with competing demands for extremely limited funds. This conference agreement is the result of long and arduous negotiations, and represents the very best efforts of the conference committee to achieve a fair and a balanced bill.

Before getting into the specifics of the conference agreement, I want to offer my sincere gratitude and appreciation to the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. WOLF], the ranking minority member of the subcommittee and my partner in this bill. He has worked hard to obtain a good bill. I have appreciated his diligent efforts during the long months of hearings and throughout the House consideration of the bill and right up until the conference and the final filing of the conference report. I also want to acknowledge the work of the other members of the subcommittee: The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. DURBIN], the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. SABO], the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. PRICE], the gentleman from Texas [Mr. COLEMAN], the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. FOGLIETTA], the gentleman from Texas [Mr. DELAY], and the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. REGULA] for their contributions, as well as the contributions of the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. OBEY], our full committee chair, and the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. McDADE], the ranking full committee minority member. They have all made invaluable contributions to the legislation that we are about to consider today.

Finally, I want to make sure that everyone understands as we here in the body know so well that the product could not be with us today without the able help of our professional and associate staff members. They have worked very hard and very long. While many of the members are able to take a lot of the credit for the work product, it is truly theirs.

Mr. Speaker, the conference agreement provides $13.7 billion in new discretionary budget authority and assumes $12 billion in new outlays. The conference report is just below our 602(b) allocation in budget authority and virtually identical to our allocation in outlays. The total budget resources provided, including new budget authority, limitations on obligations, and exempt obligations, is $14.3 billion in budget authority and $37.1 billion in outlays.

Mr. Speaker, we have faced several difficult and challenging issues in crafting this compromise agreement. In recent days the issue of how to allocate fairly funding for designated highway projects presented a dilemma. While the total amount allocated for such projects in both the House and Senate bills is roughly similar, each body chose a markedly dissimilar approach to determining the distribution of those funds in individual projects. The conferees ultimately agreed to provide a total of $352 million, evenly divided between the two Houses, with each House allocating its portion.

As anyone who reads the newspapers knows, it has not been easy reaching an accommodation with very divergent and passionately held views of the conferees. I believe it is a testament to the judgment and objectivity of all the conferees that this potentially divisive matter was resolved in an equitable manner.

Another important issue was that of the Penn Station redevelopment project in New York City. Members on both sides of the Capitol have equally strong feelings both for and against this project. It ultimately may require the Federal Government to invest about one-third of the total project cost of $315 million. The compromise embodied in this bill provides $40 million toward the Federal matching share but specifies that none of these funds may be obligated unless authorized. I believe this is a good compromise between the divergent views on this item and I believe it is a compromise that the Members of the House should accept.

The proposed demonstration of two-person high occupancy vehicles on I-66 inside the beltway in Virginia also generated a tremendous amount of controversy. I am pleased to report that the difference of opinion on this matter has also been resolved. The conference agreement allows the demonstration to go forward if approved in advance by certain members of the Transportation Planning Board.

Mr. Speaker, I would now like to turn to some of the specific provisions in the conference agreement:

The agreement provides $3.7 billion for the activities of the coast Guard, a slight increase over the 1994 level. Included within this amount is $2.6 billion for operations and $363 million for acquisitions and construction. We have restored a $25 million appropriation for the Boat Safety Program which the administration had not included in its budget request.

The agreement provides $8.4 billion in new budget authority and obligation limitations for the activities of the Federal Aviation Administration. Within this total we have increased appropriations for critical FAA operations to $4.6 billion or $15 million more than the 1994 level. This appropriation includes $17.6 million to continue the pay demonstration project. The bill limits obligations for FAA's airport improvement program to $1.45 billion—a slightly lower level of effort than in the current fiscal year.

The agreement provides a total of $19.9 billion in new budget authority and obligation limitations for the Federal Highway Administration. Reflecting the severe budget constraints facing the conferees, the bill includes $17.2 billion for the primary Federal-aid Highways Construction Program. Unfortunately this amount is $430 million below the 1994 level, but under these difficult budget circumstances this was the best that we could do.

The agreement provides $2.5 billion for transit formula grants, including $710 million for operating subsidies. With regard to operating subsidies, we reached a compromise funding level approximately midway between the current level and the administration's request.

The agreement allocates $1.7 billion for transit discretionary grants including: $725 million for rail modernization; $353 million for buses and bus facilities; and $647 million for section 3 new fixed guideway systems.

We also faced a perplexing challenge in fairly allocating funds for buses and bus facilities, as well as section 3 new starts. Again, because the House and Senate took such different approaches to allocating these funds, the conferees agreed to approximately a 50:50 split of the funds, with each body then allocating its share according to its priorities. A priority for the conferees was to reserve a portion of bus and bus facility funds for allocation by the Secretary of Transportation. The conference agreement reserves $30 million for this purpose.

To provide financial support to Amtrak, the bill appropriates $772 million for Amtrak operations and capital grants, $200 million for Northeast corridor improvements, and $40 million for Penn Station redevelopment, as I mentioned previously. This is 10 percent more than was provided for Amtrak this fiscal year.

Mr. Speaker, the conference agreement also includes several other important provisions.

The bill appropriates $37 million for pipeline safety programs, nearly doubling current appropriations to address numerous safety issues arising from the March 1994 gas pipeline explosion in New Jersey and last year's oil pipeline spill in Reston, VA.

The bill appropriates $30 million to continue the Interstate Commerce Commission [ICC], a reduction of 33 percent below the 1994 level. Mr. Speaker, this funding level comports with the enactment into law of H.R. 2178, which abolishes motor carrier tariff filing requirements, and thereby eliminates about one-third of the ICC's regulatory responsibilities. These collective actions will result in a streamlined ICC and permanent budget savings, but will avoid disruption of ongoing ICC regulatory responsibilities in the rail area.

The bill also includes significant administrative savings in the operation of the Department of Transportation, including reductions in the Department's working capital fund, procurement obligations, staffing and employee award. Additional details of the bill are addressed in the conference report and joint explanatory statement of the managers.

Mr. Speaker, I merely want to say when the day is done that this conference agreement was difficult to achieve. The agreement is carefully crafted and it protects the significant provisions and major interests in the House-passed bill. It is within our budgetary allocations. We had the cooperation of all the Members. I ask the membership of this body to approve the conference report on transportation appropriations.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. WOLF. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I now support this bill. As the members know, I had serious reservations earlier about the distribution by the conference of certain highway funds, but these concerns about the basic fairness of the bill have been resolved and I support Chairman CARR's efforts. I ask my colleagues to support H.R. 4556 as well.

But I would also like to retrace the chronology of the controversy over this bill and make the point that the inequity of one State dominating the highway demonstration account must never happen again. And, this was not a partisan issue. There was concern on both sides of the aisle.

As the Members know, one project in the State of West Virginia, corridor H, was allotted $140 million in the Senate version of this bill. That was nearly one-half of the $352 million in the entire highway demonstration account. When we completed the House-Senate conference on this bill, corridor H still had $90 million, nearly one-third of the total resources available. This was unfair and worked to the detriment of many States with severe congestion problems, especially large States like California, Florida, and Illinois. And even more disturbing was the fact that this same project already had $75 million in the fiscal year 1995 energy-water bill, and all the State of West Virginia can obligate this coming year is $82 million. I felt that it was extremely unfair for one State to bank large sums of money, while other States aren't even able to meet pressing highway needs.

Without going into detail, these concerns were addressed in my September 26 statement which I will include in the RECORD.

I am pleased, however, that, through the efforts Chairman CARR and full committee Chairman OBEY, this matter of fairness was resolved with the Senate conferees, and in this conference report, corridor H is only allotted $35 million. I believe this has resulted in a more equitable distribution of these funds among the States.

Today, I want to discuss the 1995 transportation appropriations bill that went to conference late last week. The highway demonstration projects account of the bill is particularly troubling.

Before the bill went to conference, Chairman CARR and LAUTENBERG agreed to share the highway funding between the Chambers at a 52-48 percent split. The House's share of the $352 million was about $170 million which Chairman CARR and the subcommittee handled fairly. The Senate's share, on the other hand, about $183 million, was highway robbery.

Of the $183 million in the Senate, one State, West Virginia, got $95 million, or 53 percent, for two projects—$90 million for the controversial corridor H and another $5 million for route 52 improvements. To put it in terms that everyone can easily understand, West Virginia got more Senate money for highway demonstration projects than the rest of the country combined. A total of 1.8 million people got $95 million while the rest of the country, about 254 million, splits $88 million. And let me just say for the record, the people of West Virginia are good people, but this is unfair, unjust, and inequitable. This is just plain wrong. It is exactly why the American people are fed up with Congress. When the power of a few is stronger than the power of the people, something has got to change.

What makes matters worse is, in addition to the $90 million in this bill, corridor H got $75 million in the energy and water spending bill earlier this year bringing the total for this road project to $165 million. I checked with the Federal Highway Administration and they told me West Virginia can only obligate $82 million for this project in fiscal year 1995. West Virginia has gotten twice as much money as it can spend, while the rest of the country doesn't have enough. This money could be going to needed projects to help congested areas like Los Angeles and Miami, where moms and dads are sitting in traffic while they could be at home spending time with their kids. California and Florida both got $0 in Senate funding.

To put it in perspective, if you add up the Senate funding for the 20 most populated States, they get a total of $39 million, California gets nothing, Florida gets nothing, Illinois gets nothing, New York gets only $1 million and on and on and on. Each of you has been provided with a chart which clearly shows these figures. And West Virginia gets $95 million? How can this be?

In 1988, Senator ROBERT BYRD of West Virginia announced that he was going to trade in his post of Senate majority leader to take the chairmanship of the Senate Appropriations Committee with the intent of bringing to West Virginia $1 billion by 1995. At a 1990 dedication ceremony in Beckley, WV, Senator BYRD commented on his pledge, "I'm trying to get the money as fast as the State can keep up with it." By 1990, 4 years ahead of schedule, Senator BYRD's total of $1 billion for West Virginia had been reached.

Just look at the last five transportation spending bills.

In the fiscal year 1991 transportation appropriations bill, Senator BYRD hijacked $137 million, or 30 percent, of the $459 million for highway projects for West Virginia.

In the fiscal year 1992 transportation appropriations bill, Senator BYRD took $162 million, almost 30 percent, of the $589 million available. Of the $162 million, $148 million was for the corridor G project which received an additional $58 million in the energy and water appropriations bill. The next closest State in highway receipts was Michigan with $46 million. West Virginia got $162 million. Twenty-three States, including California and Texas, got nothing.

In fiscal year 1993 West Virginia got $104 million for two projects, corridor L at $24 million, which was second only to corridor G at $80 million. These two projects in West Virginia amounted to one-third of all highway demonstration project dollars.

In fiscal year 1994 corridor L got another $54 million which amounted to 43 percent of the country's highway dollars.

And in fiscal year 1995, you know the story, West Virginia, for two projects, got 52 percent of the Senate's money or 27 percent of the Nation's highway money for demonstration projects.

Another part of the story is, the figures I have just gone over are basically transportation bills only. They do not take into account the relocations of parts of several governmental agencies like the FBI, the Bureau of Public Debt, the Fish and Wildlife Service, the Coast Guard, and so on.

The message here is, and the Washington Post, Orlando Sentinel, Houston Chronicle, and other have recognized it, there is a pattern of greed and abuse of power here and until it changes, the attitude toward this body with the American people will not improve.

Again, I want to thank both Chairman CARR and Chairman OBEY for being responsive to my concerns and for their diligent work in persuading the Senate to accept a more reasonable approach to the distribution of these highway funds. Also, since this is the last vote my friend from Michigan, Mr. CARR, will seek on a transportation bill in this body, I want to tell him how much I have valued working with him as the ranking member of the subcommittee. No one has worked harder than BOB CARR to bring accountability and fairness to the allocation of scarce transportation resources, and my hat is off to him. I want to wish him well and to let him know that I will miss him.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. CARR of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. OBEY], the chairman of the full Committee on Appropriations.

□ 1040

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Speaker, I want to do a number of things on this bill this morning. The first thing I want to do is to express my regret that the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CARR] will be leaving this House. He is seeking what I would not call higher office, but he is seeking a different office, located on the other side of the Capitol. I question his judgment, but I nonetheless hope that he succeeds in that endeavor because he has brought a tremendous amount of skill, a tremendous amount of integrity, and energy to the process, and I very much appreciate that. I think he has performed a tremendous service to the public in the years which he has served in this House and we are going to miss him.

I would also like to comment briefly on the conference report itself. As I think most Members know, there were a number of items which appeared to be causing controversy after the conferees had concluded their original meetings. One was a misunderstanding involving the HOV lane situation in Virginia. I am very pleased that that was worked out in a more favorable fashion.

Second, the question of the Corridor H funding in West Virginia was a significant problem, and it was a problem which was brought up to me by a good many Members on both sides of the aisle.

I want to congratulate very much the flexibility shown by Senator BYRD, by the gentleman from Virginia, Mr. WOLF, and by Chairman CARR. I think that without that flexibility on all sides this problem could not have been worked out, and as a result that project which was at $140 million originally in the Senate bill and $90 million in the conference report is now at $35 million, which is I think a substantially more understandable result, and I think Members in this House can feel quite good about it.

The third issue was whether or not the highway projects would be 48 to 52 split in favor of the Senate or if they would split down the middle 50-50. That was adjusted so that the House and Senate shared equitably in the highway projects in this bill.

I would simply say that this bill is a valuable bill for the country. It will provide a good many jobs because of the construction projects that are included in this bill. It will provide for economic modernization, and it will increase economic efficiency. We do have two bridges a day that fall down in this country. It would be kind of nice if we made more progress in fixing them and this bill helps to modernize our transportation infrastructure which is crucial to providing good economic opportunity across the country.

I also want to commend House Members on both sides of the aisle for declining generally to try to load up these bills with extraneous matters. As we know, in the other body there is a good deal of loading up which appears to be going on on several of the appropriations bills. I very much appreciate the fact that on both sides of the aisle Members in this House have not engaged in delay, have not engaged in obstruction, have not engaged in overt partisanship with respect to any of the appropriations bills which have come before the House this year.

There is only one appropriations conference report remaining to be passed through this House after this bill is passed, and we expect to finish our work on that tomorrow and then the House's work will be done on appropriation matters.

So, I very much again appreciate the assistance of the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CARR], the assistance of the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. WOLF], and I would urge the House to support the bill as it stands before us.

Mr. CARR of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 1 minute. I merely want to applaud the efforts of our full committee chairman, the gentleman from Wisconsin, Mr. DAVID OBEY. Our bill did have a major, I would say almost a catastrophic impasse at the close of the conference. I have been on this committee now for some 12 years, and I have never seen a full committee chairman who was more responsive to a subcommittee chairman in terms of a request for help and intercession and bringing tremendous legislative skill to solving a most difficult problem.

While I am at it, I want to commend the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations in the other body, who exercised heroic restraint and one might say political self-sacrifice to see to it that there was an equitable resolution of the controversy at hand and that is what makes this bill and its contents so supportable by all Members of the House and the Senate.

Mr. WOLF. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. KASICH].

Mr. KASICH. Mr. Speaker, I really appreciate the gentleman yielding the time to me. I would like to take this moment to pay a special tribute to my colleague, the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. WOLF], who has been very aggressive on this bill in a variety of ways, but one way in particular that took an immense amount of courage from him was his support of my effort, really a bipartisan effort to eliminate the Interstate Commerce Commission.

We ended up passing that bill through this House eliminating that commission. It then went over to the Senate, where the elimination was blocked.

However, contained in this bill today is a 30 percent reduction in the total operating costs of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

The gentleman from Colorado [Mr. HEFLEY], who is on the floor with us today, and I actually went to the Senate and made this argument. The gentleman from Colorado [Mr. HEFLEY] and I together have been working on this issue for a number of years and the gentleman from Colorado deserves an enormous amount of credit for his work in terms of trying to eliminate this bureaucracy.

I would say to the House today that the 30 percent cut is not something that I view as a lasting victory, but only, I guess the only way I would put it is a grudgingly accepted compromise on the part of the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. HEFLEY] and myself. But we will be back next year. We have already begun negotiations with Members of the majority party and we have entered into discussions about the way to orderly transfer these activities into the Department of Transportation.

I have a gentleman's handshake from most of the Members on the Democrat side of the aisle in regard to the orderly transfer of this operation. That is clearly what we must do, an orderly transformation and a twentieth century upgrade in terms of the entire responsibilities of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

But a 30 percent cut at this point is something that we are prepared to accept and give praise to Members on both sides of the aisle with the knowledge that we must move forward and truly reinvent this agency.

But I must just take a special second to thank again the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. WOLF], who under a lot of personal pressure said, "I think what Mr. HEFLEY and Mr. KASICH are proposing in reasonable." Without his support, frankly, I do not think we would have come this far. We have a way to go, but we have taken a first step with more steps to come.

Mr. CARR of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. PRICE], a very valuable member of this committee and a member who has been of tremendous personal assistance to me in carrying out my obligations as chairman during this most difficult year.

Mr. PRICE of North Carolina. Mr. Speaker, I enthusiastically rise in support of H.R. 4556, the bill making appropriations for the Department of Transportation for the fiscal year 1995.

The first thing I want to do is to thank our chairman, the gentleman from Michigan, Mr. BOB CARR. He has done a superb job of chairing this subcommittee during tough budgetary times. He has been fair. He has insisted that the projects in this bill be justified, that they be subjected to close scrutiny and justification in terms of specific economic criteria.

He has made certain that this bill represents a sound investment in our economic future.

I wish the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CARR] the best of luck and hope to continue to work with him as he joins the other body.

The gentleman from Virginia [Mr. WOLF] has made a substantial contribution to this bill, raising questions that needed to be raised. He and the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CARR] have continued the Transportation Subcommittee's impressive bipartisan tradition. I commend them both for that. I also commend our staff for their dedication and professionalism in crafting this conference report.

This conference report is the result of hard work and cooperation and conciliation by many, many people. We have here a sound bill, a balanced bill. It honors our commitment to fiscal responsibility. It also honors our commitment to spending what we do spend wisely, making sound investments. This bill will enable us to move ahead in developing all transportation modes in a balanced way, in promoting safety and protecting the environment, and in undergirding economic growth and job creation.

This is a bill of vital importance to my State of North Carolina and to this entire Nation, and I encourage my colleagues on both sides of the aisle to support it.

Mr. WOLF. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. REGULA], a member of the committee.

Mr. REGULA. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of the conference report to the transportation appropriations bill for fiscal year 1995.

As with all of the appropriation bills this year, it has been difficult to meet the needs as articulated by Members and at the same time work within the confines of the funds available.

The Nation's transportation infrastructure, as was pointed out by the previous speaker, is vital for continued economic development. If we do not have a strong system of highways, rail, and airports, our Nation could never be as competitive in the world marketplace as we should be. We have adopted NAFTA; the GATT agreement is pending for action here, and all of these things point to a very competitive world out there in the years to come as we become more and more a part of the global marketplace.

Transportation serves as the arteries of the Nation and determines our ability to move goods. The ability to be efficient as a producing country depends a great deal on the quality of our transportation infrastructure.

I think this is one of the most important appropriation bills that we have had, because it is basic to everything else. We talk about welfare problems. We talk about crime problems. Many of those flow from the absence of jobs, and jobs oftentimes flow from the absence of transportation facilities in any given marketplace. So it is an important bill.

I want to commend our leader and chairman, the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CARR]. He did something unique, and that is establish standards that we could measure these projects by. This was a first, and it resulted in the projects being funded that were cost-effective, that demonstrably were supported by the State, were part of the State's program. I think this set a benchmark that ought to be followed in many other things we do, and that is determine or have some measuring stick as we determine where we will put the limited resources available to us. He certainly, as a chairman, was very open to the minority. It was a collegial committee, and our ranking minority member, the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. WOLF], worked closely with the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CARR], and it is a pleasure to be a member of this subcommittee.

We will miss the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CARR] as chairman next year, but I think the standards and the criteria that he established will be a legacy that will be very important to our subcommittee as we again have to try to meet the needs with the limited resources available to us. It is because of that, I believe, his contributions will go much beyond his tenure as a chairman in the House.

Mr. CARR of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. SABO], chairman of the Committee on the Budget and a member of the subcommittee, a member who has been of invaluable service to the creation of this product.

Mr. SABO. Mr. Speaker, to the chairman and to the ranking member, let me say thank you for bringing a good bill to the House, and to the chairman, let me say just a personal thank you for his great efforts not only on this bill, but it has been a real pleasure to be his colleague these many years in the House. We expect to be across the table with the gentleman from Michigan in the future, not on the same side of the table, and I look forward to continuing to work with him in the years ahead not only on transportation questions but on a whole host of issues where he brings great energy and great wisdom to public policy in this country.

So I simply wanted to thank him for his great service in the House and wish him well and look forward to continuing to work with him.

Let me just simply say about this bill it is a good bill, and let me also say that one of the features of this bill is that there are some highway projects that we fund very specifically, and those come under attacks at times, but there are also times when you do things that are very unique and very important because of that. One that I am particularly familiar with, we are redoing a frontage road on a freeway in advance of freeway reconstruction. What it means is that a small community can do that access road in a fashion that has been planned by the community, that accommodates the residential area, at the same time preserves commercial-industrial area in that suburban community that has very small commercial-industrial tax base.

If they simply waited until reconstruction to reconstruct the existing access road, it would have meant substantial disruption for the neighborhoods, and it probably would have also meant the loss of all the businesses along that stretch of the freeway, because simply doing the access road in an unplanned fashion, reconstructing the existing one would have eliminated all of the access that people had to those businesses.

So the money that is being spent is being spent in a unique fashion and also in a way to preserve a neighborhood and preserve commercial-industrial base in a very important suburban community.

So I thank the gentleman from Michigan for his good work and wish him well.

Mr. WOLF. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. HUTCHINSON].

Mr. HUTCHINSON. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time, and I commend our ranking member, the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. WOLF], for the outstanding leadership he has provided.

Mr. Speaker, I rise today in strong support of H.R. 4556, the fiscal year transportation appropriations bill. I commend the chairman and the ranking member of the subcommittee for their hard work on this legislation and for the fine job they have done with limited Federal resources. In particular I would like to commend them for their inventive thinking on section 314A.

The Federal Government is no longer able to fund transportation projects as it has done in the past. I have had a number of conversations on this subject with Federal Highway Administration officials over the last 2 years. In response to the current fiscal situation, it is my understanding that the Federal Highway Administration has been encouraging States to work with them to develop innovative financing plans for Federal highway projects. As a member of the Public Works and Transportation Committee, I would also note that this action is consistent with the 1991 Intermodal Surface Transportation Efficiency Act [ISTEA].

At this point, I would like to enter into a colloquy with my colleague from Virginia.

Is it the intent of the Appropriations Committee that section 314A is to cover applications for innovative financing proposals on high priority corridors as designated in the ISTEA?

Mr. WOLF. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HUTCHINSON. I yield to the gentleman from Virginia.

Mr. WOLF. That is correct.

Mr. HUTCHINSON. Is it also your understanding that should the State of Arkansas have an innovative financing loan proposal approved by the Federal Highway Administration for Highway 71, that all the funding under that proposal is to be used on the northern portion of Highway 71 from Alma to Fayetteville?

Mr. WOLF. If the gentleman will yield further, that is correct. That is the understanding, and the gentleman is correct.

Mr. CARR of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HUTCHINSON. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. CARR of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, I would like to concur with the statements of my colleague, the ranking member of the subcommittee. It is the intention of the committee that section 314A be used as a loan program for innovative financing proposals on high priority corridors. And further that funds approved for the State of Arkansas under this section may be used on the Alma to Fayetteville portion of Highway 71.

Mr. HUTCHINSON. Mr. Speaker, I would just want to thank the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CARR] for the leadership he has provided and for this reassurance that he has given us today. I also thank the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. WOLF].

Mr. WOLF. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from New Jersey [Mrs. ROUKEMA].

Mrs. ROUKEMA. I thank the gentleman for yielding this time to me.

Mr. Speaker. I rise today in support of H.R. 4556, Transportation appropriations for fiscal year 1995. I commend the Appropriations Committee for directing its attention to a transportation nightmare in my congressional district in New Jersey.

The interchange of Route 17/Route 4 in Paramus, NJ, is a major east/west to north/south link in northern New Jersey and its improvement is vital for commuters and commerce. The interchange lies at the heart of Bergen County's commercial hub, and it is a critical crossroad for all of northern New Jersey.

The existing interchange was built in 1932 and designed to accommodate an estimated volume of 12,000 vehicles per day. Clearly, with the present estimated daily volume of 250,000 vehicles, the interchange is no longer suitable, and in dire need of improvement. Not only is the interchange one of the busiest intersections in New Jersey, it is also one of the most dangerous—averaging one motor vehicle accident per day.

This interchange has got to go. We must improve safety and traffic flow.

In addition, a new interchange will help control northern New Jersey's critical air pollution problem and alleviate the heavy traffic flow which has spilled over to residential streets as commuters attempt to avoid the crowded interchange. On any given day, we have gridlock in Bergen County as the direct result of the 4-17 nightmare.

At an estimated total cost of $90 million, completion of the Route 17/Route 4 interchange project is heavily dependent upon Federal funding.

Full funding for the interchange should not be a problem since both Route 17 and Route 4 have been designated by the U.S. Department of Transportation as components of the urbanized area portion of the NHS, at the request of the N.J. Department of Transportation, the North Jersey Transportation Coordination Council, and other local planning organizations, and in accordance with applicable provisions outlined in the Intermodal Surface Transportation Efficiency Act of 1991 [ISTEA]. As a currently authorized project, the Route 17/Route 4 interchange has already demonstrated its clear merit to the U.S. Congress.

Our local officials have worked closely with the New Jersey Department of Transportation to formulate the approved interchange design. New Jersey stands ready to provide the required matching funding necessary to bring the Route 17/Route 4 interchange problem to a successful resolution.

This appropriation bill contains $15 million for this project—far more than the insufficient $3 million that was considered early this year. But the residents of northern New Jersey need more. So I will be back next year fighting for the rest of our fair share.

In the meantime, I urge the House to uphold the Federal Government's commitment to construction and completion of the Route 17/Route 4 interchange by approving this appropriation bill today.

Mr. CARR of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from West Virginia [Mr. WISE].

Mr. WISE. I thank the chairman for yielding this time to me.

Mr. Speaker, I want, as the chairman of the full committee, the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. OBEY], did, to acknowledge the efforts of negotiating this bill that certainly the subcommittee chairman made, the ranking member [Mr. WOLF], the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. OBEY], and the senior Senator from West Virginia [Mr. BYRD].

What this bill did, I think, was to focus a lot of attention, and perhaps we are going to visit it again, but I think we have to look when there are certain allegations made about the inequity of one State in an account. That account was for $352 million, it was one part of a $36.5 billion bill, of which $13.7 billion alone went to highways.

So the proportion begins to decline greatly. I think that this discussion has also been helpful, though, because it has caused us to recognize the different needs that each of us has. West Virginia lives and breathes on highways. If you turn to other parts of the bill, for instance, we have some airports getting earmarked, which I support, some airports getting earmarks which exceeded what West Virginia gets for airport money. We have no mass transit systems. We can spend a lot of time looking for mass transit systems in West Virginia. But they are called coal shuttle cars. We have no mass transit system in West Virginia. The issue of controversy on Corridor H, coming out of the conference, $90 million is what it costs 1 mile of Metro.

So I just ask that everyone look. I think this does reflect a fair agreement. I am encouraged for this reason. First of all, the $35 million for the most troublesome section of Corridor H can be built; I think that is very important. The second thing is this committee, for which I appreciate the efforts of all involved, recognizes the importance of Corridor H as a truly national highway. I understand it has funding needs and is ready to go, in the words of the committee, I believe will proceed expeditiously on it.

I think for all of us it is a plus. I hope what this debate has done is begin to cause each of us to recognize the needs which each one of us has and that you may not get what you want in one account but you are probably getting help and assistance in another account. In the context of this broad bill, I believe this committee has addressed many, many needs.

Mr. WOLF. Mr. Speaker, before I yield to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. DELAY], I want to yield myself such time as I might consume. I would want to say one thing with regard to corridor H. I do not want to beat a dead dog, and we are not going to do it. I personally have some fundamental problems on the corridor H issue. While there has been talk of bringing corridor H into my congressional district, into Virginia, the people in the western part of my district do not want the road and obviously, as the gentleman from West Virginia follows the wishes, as he should and does, very ably, of his district, that is something that I want to kind of lay out so there is no misunderstanding.

Second, on this whole issue of corridor H, I think it a decision that the good people of West Virginia are going to have to decide on. There is some controversy developing in West Virginia itself; not in the Nation but in West Virginia itself. I think the people of West Virginia are going to have to sort this issue out. I do not really want to talk a lot about it, but if the gentleman wants—

Mr. WISE. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WOLF. I yield to the gentleman. Mr. WISE. I thank the gentleman.

Just real quickly, as far as the gentleman's district goes, and I am happy to work with him and others, and he and I have discussed this, I agree with the gentleman. If the people of his district do not want a 4-lane highway, we have discussed this. And they do not have one. That is the way the ARC system works, and it is the way the highway building thing works.

I pledge to him I am not going to try to ram anything through. If he wants to stop at the line, that is fine.

Second, in West Virginia, yes, there is opposition, as there is opposition on every road project everywhere. I invite the gentleman to take a trip with me along the proposed route, and I think we are going to find solid support, particularly as we keep moving westward.

Mr. WOLF. Well, I appreciate that, and I may want to do that sometime. I consider the gentleman a friend. I just think we are going to end the issue with that. I just did not want this to seem as if there were no concerns on corridor H. I did want to make that point clear with regard to the State line and with regard to the local feelings.

Mr. Speaker, I now would like to yield, if I may, 5 minutes to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. DELAY], a distinguished member of the committee who has made a great contribution here.

Mr. DELAY. I thank the gentleman for yielding this time to me.

Mr. Speaker, I want to commend our ranking member, the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. WOLF], for the diligent work that he has done in his second year as ranking member of this subcommittee. He has proved himself an extremely fair, honest and hard-working member of the subcommittee, standing up not just for the interests of the committee but for the interests of the House as a whole. He has put in many long hours crafting this Nation's transportation needs. I commend the gentleman.

I have got to say that Mr. WOLF stood up for the honor of the House when, in my opinion, the other body tried to take advantage of the House. I cannot get into that right now, but suffice it to say—and I put the Members on notice—that the Senate did try to take advantage of the House, and it was because of Mr. WOLF's courage and tenacity that we were able to bring a little fairness back to this bill.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the conference report. This is the bill that literally keeps America on the move. I would like to commend my chairman, the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CARR], in his last year and last act as chairman, for his diligent efforts on behalf of this Nation's transportation needs. In his short tenure as chairman of the subcommittee, he has instituted many crucial and necessary changes to the committee and applaud his efforts. And, if his future endeavors are successful, he might be able to help make those same necessary and crucial changes in the other body. I would also like to pay tribute to my ranking member, the gentleman from Virginia, [Mr. WOLF]. In now his second year as ranking member he has proved himself as an extremely fair, honest, and hard working member of the subcommittee standing up not just for the interests of the committee but for the interests of the House as a whole, putting in many long hours crafting this Nation's transportation needs. I commend the gentleman and again, am proud to serve on the committee with him.

Mr. Speaker, this committee has gone to great lengths to address transportation programs in a fair and responsible manner. But I would say that this is just a good conference report, not a great one. I do not think anyone walked away from the conference happy, and I believe that this year's conference was a lesson in how the process really works. With regard to that effort, I would like to also talk briefly about Houston Metro.

The committee has shown continued support for Houston's regional bus plan. Although the conference halved nearly all projects, this was a fair and equitable decision since no project received special attention. Almost as important as the funding for Houston Metro was the language in the report regarding the regional computerized traffic signalization system.

The language states that the funding provided for the regional bus plan program is intended to be used for the entirety of the regional computerized traffic signal system [RCTSS] project, as described in Metro's grant application to the Federal Transit Administration for the first annual capital construction program.

This was necessary because there has been a great deal of confusion with regard to Houston's plan and the overall goals and objectives of the program. Put simply, there has been a literal "change-of-heart" regarding what the FTA has already approved for Houston.

Without this state-of-the-art system, the regional bus plan will be just another bus system—which is not at all what will effectively serve Houston and is not what I support. Houston's innovative bus system using the regional computerized traffic control system, as planned, will allow buses to operate like a rail system at a significantly lower cost. For the new FTA to be suddenly reassessing its past endorsement and support of the regional bus plan and the regional traffic control system is simply wrong. This language will clarify the committee's intent for the Federal funding of Houston Metro.

This plan, without question, serves as a model for transit programs throughout the Nation. They also have the lowest cost-per-new-rider index out of all of the projects funded by the Federal Transit Administration. I am very proud of the accomplishments Metro has enjoyed and I want to commend their efforts.

Regarding the Interstate Commerce Commission, the Senate added $30.7 million for the continuation of the ICC, rejecting the House's position that called for its elimination. It was not an issue during the conference. The Senate position assumes a staffing reduction of one-third, a streamlining of the Commission and additional ramifications of reform legislation that has been recently enacted into law. I want to point out that this year, Congress has done more for the deregulation of the trucking industry than any other year since 1980, instituting many of the reforms that I have been advocating since many days in the Texas Legislature.

Mr. Speaker, there were other issues that the conference committee considered such as the 13(c) issue, which is an issue that affects the prompt obligation of funds for transit projects. The House position was strong language designed to avoid unnecessary delays of transit projects by the Department of Labor. The conference decided to accept a compromise amendment that does little to help the problem. Hopefully, the committee will be able to address this problem in a much more responsible manner next year.

Again, I want to thank my colleagues on the committee for their hard work, and the staff's time and effort, and I urge all Members to support this conference report.

Mr. WOLF. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. HEFLEY] who has worked so hard on this issue with regard to the ICC.

Mr. HEFLEY. Mr. Speaker, I want to comment on the funding included in the conference report for the Interstate Commerce Commission.

As has already been noted, the conference report before us includes $30 million for the Interstate Commerce Commission, and this is a 30-percent cut below previous funding levels. Contrary to some of the accounts, however, the funding level does not reflect the position the House took last June when it voted to eliminate the ICC, eliminate, do away with, kill off, never see again. We wanted to get rid of the ICC, and it was a relatively overwhelming vote in the House of Representatives, and I understand compromise, and I understand the Senate did not share our sentiments as strongly, but a 70-percent funding does not equal zero funding. What this cut does represent is a desperate effort by some Members, and particularly those in the other body, to save the Interstate Commerce Commission. They think by throwing us a bone in this case, in this case tariff filing requirements for truckers, they can save the commission that has been targeted for elimination by every major taxpayer group in the country. Speaking for myself, I am not satisfied with the offering. While I support eliminating the tariff filing, it is a reform that I have sponsored and worked on for the last 8 years, and the compromise continues to fund a commission whose very existence should really be the focus to our debate.

Let us be perfectly clear. The ICC apologists do not support eliminating rate filing for motor carriers. They did not support it when the House passed the Motor Carrier Act in 1980. They refused to consider it last year when we passed the undercharge legislation. Even after it became clear this mindless regulation had cost Americans over $30 billion in attorneys and back charges, and could do the same in the future, these Members dug in their heels and said, "No." Today they offer to eliminate the tariff filing, not as a good government reform, I think, but as a sacrifice to save the ICC. It may work; it may not work. But I want everyone to understand that next year I will be back on the House floor fighting to eliminate this unnecessary commission.

Those that were terribly concerned that we were too precipitous this year with our efforts to try to eliminate the commission so drastically said it ought to be done in a more reasoned way. Well, this year gives us a reasoned way to do this, so work with us, and let us try to get this thing done in an appropriate way for next year.

Mr. Speaker, there is an unbreakable law in Washington which says, "If you give somebody a job and a title, they'll find something to do." That is the position of the ICC today. Fourteen years ago Congress took away most of their responsibilities. Since then the ICC has been busy filling up time and space, publishing little manuals, scraping together some turf. Today we are going to eliminate the single largest remaining responsibility of the ICC, and I think that is good, but how will the ICC respond? As they have in the past, new responsibilities will be discovered.

In my mind the choice is clear. Either we eliminate the ICC outright or we wait and watch as the commission rebuilds its turf and continues to waste taxpayers money. That is what it has done for 107 years, and that is what we will do again if we give it the opportunity.

Mr. CARR of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Rhode Island [Mr. REED].

Mr. REED. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of this legislation and also to pay tribute to the extraordinary effort of the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CARR] and the ranking member, and gentleman from Virginia [Mr. WOLF], and all the members of the subcommittee who have done a great service to this Nation and, in particular, an extraordinary service to the State of Rhode Island. Because of the contemplated electrification of the Northeast corridor by Amtrak, our freight rail system out of Quonset Point and Davisville literally was in jeopardy of being strangled, and that would have caused the State the inability to develop one of the, we hope, premier ports in the Northeast at Quonset Point and Davisville. I brought my concerns to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CARR]. He listened, and not only did he listen, but he also came up to Quonset Point, Davisville, along with the gentleman from Texas [Mr. DELAY] and the gentleman from Texas [Mr. COLEMAN]. Their individual observations confirmed what we were saying, and through their efforts we were able to get for the first time Federal assistance to reconstruct and rebuild our freight rail system out of Quonset Point and Davisville to give Rhode Island a chance to rebuild its economy. This is an extraordinary effort on behalf of Mr. CARR and his colleagues. It would not have happened without him because he took a personal interest in it, and this is an example of the kind of concern he shows not just for his own constituents, but for the Nation overall, and I know he will be showing that same concern in the other body in the next few months. I want to thank him, thank all the Members, for what they have done and also thank the staff, particularly Rich Efford who unfailingly responded to all our concerns and questions.

So, Mr. Speaker, on behalf of the State of Rhode Island and my constituents I say, "Thank you, Mr. Chairman, and good luck."

Mr. WOLF. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. FAWELL].

Mr. FAWELL. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. WOLF] for yielding this time to me.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in somewhat reluctant opposition because it seems as though everybody who has talked here is very much in favor of this legislation, and I have a lot of respect for our ranking member who has done so much, as has the chairman, I think, in trying to take care of that situation in West Virginia. But what we have here is, No. 1, a waiver of the 3-day rule so that people such as myself and, I think, a lot of Members of this Congress have not had the opportunity to carefully review this conference report and, thus, to be assured that this legislation is as good as a lot of people who have spoken think it is. From what little review my staff has been able to make, what we have is $350 million going for these "surface transportation projects" and roughly $44 million going to West Virginia, $46 million going to Michigan. That is over 25 percent, and then five other States, all of whom were represented, I understand, by conferees who come from those States, divvying up another $85 million.

So 50 percent of all the funds is going to some seven States. By contrast, if the $350 million were to be distributed by the statutory formula so that all States would share—and certainly all States have programs that are very important to those States—then even most of those States that are receiving funds under this conference report would get more than the amount of money they are getting under the circumstances we have here. Certainly, that is not so as far as West Virginia and Michigan are concerned. Those two States walk off with 25 percent of the appropriations. And probably that is not true of the other five States that also pick up a disproportionate 25 percent of the total $350 million appropriation. But the rest of the States are the ones that, at least in this distribution, come out being very much shorted. That is not the way to run the Congress, I believe.

In addition, we have to recognize what we have here. What we are doing here, as I understand it, we are using general funds, $350 million of general funds. That is peanuts, I suppose one might say, in $1.5 trillion annual budget account. But, by gosh, when we do this over and over and over again, we are talking about billions, and that is sort of big money back in Illinois.

I do not think we have to do this. We can follow the statutory formula for the distribution of highway gas tax funds. We can just simply pay this money in accordance with that formula and distribute it by the formula. That is, at least fair if we insist in passing out this added largesse—these special projects, which are over and above the 6-year 1992-97 $122 billion of transportation appropriations.

I do not think, therefore, that I can say this is sound legislation. It's just more profligate spending—money we have to borrow from our children and grandchildren. We're just that much deeper in debt. I am not going to ask for a vote. This bill will pass even with or without a vote. I am not trying to make a Federal case out of it, but I guess it is a Federal case. I just do not think this is the way we ought to be operating. When I see things like this, I know the people are better off when Congress isn't in session.

Mr. WOLF. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to my last speaker, the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. MYERS].

Mr. MYERS of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Virginia for yielding me the time.

Mr. Speaker, I thank Chairman CARR and my friend, the gentleman from Virginia, [Mr. WOLF] as well as the other members of the committee and the staff, for the attention they have given the Indiana projects over the years. I hope that next year they will continue to remember those Indiana projects. They are, as some people might say, out in the far Midwest. But I do thank them for the attention they have given to the Indiana projects.

Mr. Speaker, I rise with somewhat of a question. It has come to my attention through the Indianapolis Center for Air Traffic Controllers that the equipment they are using to take care of and handle the increasing flow of traffic is still antiquated, that the most up-to-date equipment is not available to them, and that the trust account is not being used.

Is that because it is included in the budget restraints? The trust account for the airport and airways fund is still available, is it not? Can anyone tell me why we are unable to fund some of the updating and upgrading of equipment especially?

They do a great job with the equipment they have, but they tell me they could do a better job if they had the more updated, sophisticated equipment.

Mr. CARR of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MYERS of Indiana. I yield to my chairman for an answer.

Mr. CARR of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, I would answer by saying it really is not a problem of budget constraints. There have been serious development problems in the airway systems modernization. There have been problems and delays and cost overruns in the AAS systems and the other associated subsystems to the modernization. But these problems are getting worked out. I believe we will be back on track, although there has been much delay from where we had hoped to be at this time. It is not, I would tell the gentleman, a matter of budget constraints.

Mr. MYERS of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for his response. We all use the airways frequently, and a lot of business people have to travel frequently. We expect the best and we get the best, I think, in air traffic controllers, but if there is better equipment available, it could make safety devices more available to the air traffic controllers and those who use the airways, and I think we should have it.

I appreciate the response here. As you go to the other body and we stay here in this body, we will try to work together, I hope, next year, to improve safety in the airways. Again I thank the gentleman for what the committee has done for us in Indiana.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. MONTGOMERY). The gentleman from Virginia [Mr. WOLF] has 1 minute remaining.

Mr. WOLF. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. CARR of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, how much time do I have remaining?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CARR] has 9 minutes remaining.

Mr. CARR of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I merely want to take this time to thank all of my colleagues for their kind words of tribute. It has been a pleasure working not only with the subcommittee but with each and every Member of this House.

We have tried to lead by example, and I would say that if someone really wants to pay tribute to the work I have contributed, I hope that the subcommittee will continue to refine and perfect the initiative that we started two years ago to make sure that decisions are based on economic merit, and that we reduce the politics in decision-making when we make investments of the taxpayers' hard-earned dollars. We must respect the hard work that earned those dollars that are given to us by way of taxes and returned by way of investment.

So if anyone is really interested in a tribute, they will continue the process of trying to put merit before politics when the committee makes its decisions.

I also want to say that it has been a tremendous pleasure working with the Members of this body. I hear and read, as every American does, the criticisms of the Congress and the President, and I have to say that in the years that I have been privileged to serve, I feel there are no finer men and women serving our country than those who serve in this body, the other body, and the executive agencies. I think sometimes, even though it is an election year and things get said, it also needs to be said that we ought to tone down the volume a little bit.

The gentleman from Virginia [Mr. WOLF] and I have had a tremendous relationship, a working relationship, a bipartisan relationship, in operating this committee, and it is due to his efforts that we have been successful. We have tried to do the best we could for all Americans. There are no Republican roads or Democratic bridges. There are no liberal ports or conservative airports. We serve America, and it seems to me that we have gotten ourselves a little bit into some petty partisan bickering from time to time, and I would hope that in the years ahead we could tone down that volume because the American people fundamentally, first and foremost, expect us to be listening to them and not be so concerned about listening to one another.

If we put the American people first, we are going to make sure that their priorities are in front of us, and that we carry out our responsibility to this great country of ours.

I want to thank all my colleagues for the kindnesses that they have contributed to my career. I apologize to anyone who I unintentionally offended in the heat of battle. But this has been one terrific experience.

Mr. BERMAN. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in support of the conference agreement on H.R. 4556, appropriations for the Department of Transportation and related agencies for fiscal year 1995.

I want to draw special attention to the Federal Transit Administration's national planning and research account. The House bill provided approximately $26 million for the various research and development programs and activities funded by this account, including the advanced transportation systems program authorized in section 6071 of ISTEA. The Senate bill transferred $10 million from section 9 activities to the national planning and research account, thus increasing the total appropriation for that account to a level of approximately $36 million. This $10 million increase was sought and secured for the specific purpose of ensuring that certain projects under the advanced transportation systems program are funded at an adequate level. The conferees reduced the transfer to $8 million, but the intent remains the same. I expect that the FTA will recognize this and act accordingly.

Mr. Speaker, the advanced transportation Systems program provides vital funding to industry-led consortia, including the California-based CALSTART, engaged in the development of various clean transit technologies. These technologies will help us improve air quality, reduce our dependence on oil imports, increase our global competitiveness and create new high quality jobs. I commend my colleagues for recognizing the importance of this program, and I urge them to join me in supporting passage of this measure.

Ms. FURSE. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in strong support of the conference report on H.R. 4556 which includes important funding for transportation projects across America for the 1995 fiscal year.

I want to take a moment and thank Chairman CARR for all his efforts on behalf of a project which is central to my region's future, Westside Light Rail. This conference report includes $98 million for the Westside Light Rail project in my district that will extend from Downtown Portland to Downtown Hillsboro. Oregon's unique land-use laws ensure that growth is properly managed and the quality of life all Oregonians have come to enjoy is protected. Westside Light Rail is key to this planned future in my region of the country, and this conference report marks the second year in a row that this project has been funded at record levels.

As one of my top priorities in Congress, I have extolled the virtues of Westside Light Rail to almost anyone willing to listen. I want to express my most sincere thanks to my friend Senator HATFIELD for all his efforts on the Senate side to advance the Westside project over the past 2 years, and making the project a reality before I came to Congress. My friends RON WYDEN and PETE DEFAZIO have worked with me on ensuring that Westside stays on track. In fact, the entire delegation has been supportive and I want to extend my personal thanks to all these people.

I wish Chairman CARR luck in his future endeavors, and urge all my colleagues to support this important conference report.

Mr. PORTER. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased that the subcommittee again used the investment criteria written last year to judge and select new projects to be funded in this bill. The use of these standards assures taxpayers the best projects for their dollars.

I am also very pleased that the subcommittee included funding for Metra, the commuter rail division of the Regional Transportation Authority of northeast Illinois, of $2.5 million for the Wisconsin Central. This is a new commuter rail project that Metra is undertaking to serve the northwest suburbs of Chicago. In fact, the Wisconsin Central will be the first new commuter rail line in the Chicago area since 1926. This rail line will serve a significant population, reduce traffic congestion, benefit the environment and will be one of the most cost-effective commuter rail operations in the country.

Over the past 2 years, I have had the opportunity to work with Metra on the Wisconsin Central rail line, which will provide commuter service to downtown Chicago for many of my constituents.

I am pleased to be able to say that the bulk of the funding for this project has already been raised by State and local efforts and, as a result, only a small amount of Federal funding has been requested.

The $2.5 million appropriation included in the bill will allow Metra to begin initial service on the Wisconsin Central in the spring of 1996—and will allow Metra to initiate Phase II improvements—such as additional tracks in critical areas to decrease travel time and additional trains during rush hour to better serve the reverse commute.

One of the truly outstanding members of the Appropriations Committee is the ranking member of the Transportation Subcommittee, my friend and colleague, FRANK WOLF of Virginia. He has always addressed projects with an eye to keeping spending under control and working responsibly to find those which are most cost effective and worthy of support. I appreciate his strong support for the Wisconsin Central project and his efforts to ensure that this bill include equitable funding levels for all project named in both the House and Senate versions of the bill. I know of the difficult budgetary constraints facing the subcommittee, and I thank the subcommittee for their hard work on this bill.

Mr. COLEMAN. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to rise to express my strong support for the conference report accompanying H.R. 4556, the Transportation appropriations bill for fiscal year 1995, and commend Chairman BOB CARR for his leadership in crafting this agreement. His fairness and diligence has produced an important work product and established an important precedent in the public policy arena. I also want to thank my colleagues on the committee on both sides of the aisle for their contributions to the bill, as well as the professional and associate staff members.

The conference agreement appropriates approximately $14 billion for critical transportation issues in fiscal year 1995, and funds the important work of the Department of Transportation and its agencies which include the Coast Guard, Federal Aviation Administration, Federal Highway Administration, Federal Railroad Administration, Federal Transit Administration, Research and Special Programs Administration, and related agencies.

The agreement reflects the fact that many difficult choices had to be made by both bodies. While Members may have specific concerns about funding priorities, it is important to remember the process which brought us to this point. Both Chambers worked their will through their respective appropriations procedures. The House marks reflect hours of committees hearings and review of economically based investment criteria for consideration of special funding requests by States and local communities. This will provide much needed jobs across the country while making important infrastructure improvements, contributing to environmental cleanup, and helping in the war against drugs.

I appreciate the consideration given by the conference to those projects important to the Southwest border region, the State of Texas, and my district of El Paso. One critical piece of conference report language relates to need for transportation infrastructure funding along our country's northern and southern border regions, especially as the United States, Mexico, and Canada move to implement the North American Free-Trade Agreement. Other provisions will address mass transit projects in Texas, including important bus projects in El Paso. The purchase of alternative fuel buses in my city will help address environmental concerns in my community, and a new transit facility in El Paso's Lower Valley will aid bus commuters and economic development in this historic area.

I urge my colleagues to adopt this conference report.

Mr. BEREUTER. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of the conference report. This Member is pleased that this conference report includes funding for a feasibility and corridor study for a proposed south and east bypass for Lincoln, NE, by examining alternative routes that at this point are exclusively outside the city limits.

This Member thanks the distinguished gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CARR], the chairman of the House Transportation Appropriations Subcommittee, and the distinguished gentleman from Virginia [Mr. WOLF], the ranking member of the subcommittee, and all of the conferees for their help in funding this important project.

While this bypass study is critically needed, the City of Lincoln's Metropolitan Planning Organization receives only about $190,000 per year for planning activities. Clearly, a study of this magnitude would require additional funding in order to be undertaken.

The current transportation network in Lincoln, NE, a city of nearly 200,000 inhabitants, is under financial stress and a new approach must be studied to implement a new transportation system. The approach which seems to make the most sense is the completion of a circumferential roadway system by the development of highway segments south and east of the city. This possible circumferential roadway would help meet current needs and accommodate future growth before such development of these highway corridors becomes prohibitively expensive. A beltway highway for Lincoln has been discussed for more than three decades and the need to implement such a plan becomes more apparent each year.

A recent city task force looking at the possibility of the beltway determined that the development of such a system would be a crucial component of the regional transportation network which would accomplish the goals of moving traffic around congested urban areas and providing for an expanded capacity of the urban system.

In addition, a truck route study was recently prepared for the city of Lincoln. One of the conclusions reached by the study was that a very key element, if not the most important element of the Lincoln truck study implementation plan is construction and completion of the East-South Bypass link. That study found this proposed project would complete the beltway system for the city of Lincoln, thus enabling major amounts of regional traffic to bypass the major urban development areas of Lincoln.

This Member would also like to stress that he has received written assurances from the city of Lincoln and the Nebraska Department of Roads that the current National Highway System designations are surrogate or temporary designations that will be replaced by new route designations when the bypass study identifies the desired route locations. This Member is voting for this legislation with that understanding.

This Member would further stress that the eventual corridor designation must be exclusively outside the city limits of the city of Lincoln. Although the study will determine the optimal corridor zone, this Member would like to reiterate what he stated before the Committee on Public Works' Subcommittee on Surface Transportation on March 8, 1994. This Member believes it would be preferable to locate the eastern segment on or between 96th and 134th Street and the southern segment on or between Yankee Hill Road and Saltillo Road. With respect to the southern route, this Member believes the corridor should be located no farther north than Yankee Hill Road and possibly south of Saltillo Road.

This Member would also like to express his appreciation for the continued support for the proposed bridge between the Newcastle, Nebraska area and Vermillion, SD. For six decades, the prospect of constructing a bridge in the Newcastle-Vermillion area has enjoyed widespread support. An impressive coalition of community organizations, local governments, businesses, and individuals from both Nebraska and South Dakota has joined together in support of this bridge.

Such a bi-State consensus is possible because the benefits resulting from the bridge's construction are so clear to all. These benefits include increased economic development, enhanced recreational opportunities, improved access to health care, and a reduction in transportation costs. Also, the construction of this bridge will improve the general quality of life for the area's residents by creating additional opportunities for higher education and cultural and social activities.

Due to the current lack of a bridge in this region, communities in northeast Nebraska and southeast South Dakota—including Vermillion, SD, the location of the University of South Dakota—have remained isolated from each other despite their proximity. As a result, economic activity in the region has been hampered and labor and commerce options have been limited. Clearly, the completion of this bridge across the Missouri River will be a significant aid in attracting new businesses to the area.

Mr. Chairman, this Member is convinced that this bridge, when completed, will serve as a connector for one of two major north-south routes across Nebraska. In addition, to act as a connector it will first require a new highway connection between Wayne, NE, and the bridge; and second, it will require an upgrading of the highway between Wayne and Norfolk, NE to connect to U.S. 81 which is currently being upgraded. This will mean that from the Kansas border, near Chester, NE, there will be a direct link across Nebraska to Vermillion, SD, and I-29 to points north, northeast, and northwest.

This Member would also like to thank the committee and subcommittee for continuing to recognize the need for a bridge between Niobrara, NE, and Springfield, SD. Initial authorization for such a bridge is contained in a provision of Public Law 100-17, the Surface Transportation and Uniform Relocation Assistance Act of 1987. An authorization of $4.7 million was also included in the Intermodal Surface Transportation Efficiency Act of 1991. However, this amount was less than originally requested and less than necessary to complete the project.

Because of redistricting, the Nebraska portion of this project is now in the district of the distinguished gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. BARRETT]. However, due to this Member's previous efforts and the tremendous need for this bridge, this Member remains very supportive of this project.

The proposed Niobrara-Springfield bridge has enjoyed widespread support from residents on both sides of the river as well as local and State officials. Since 1927, efforts have been made to construct this much needed bridge. The issue became even more critical in the mid-1980's with the abandonment of ferry service. As a result of a previous legislative initiative, the Department of Transportation directed the Nebraska Department of Roads and the South Dakota Department of Transportation to conduct a study to determine the feasibility of reinstituting ferry service. The report, which was completed in December 1987, estimated that the car ferry would cost approximately $5 million to $6 million. Because of the Department of Roads' analysis that a bridge could be built for far less than was previously discussed, the bridge option became more attractive.

Motorists, farmers, and businesspeople would benefit greatly from the reduced travel distance if this bridge is built. Also, because of the beneficial impact this bridge would have on the Indian tribes in the area, the Bureau of Indian Affairs has expressed its support for the project. For example, by reducing the driving time from the Santee Sioux reservation to the Indian Health Service facility in Wagner, SD, the bridge would play an important role in improving medical care for the tribes served by the facility.

This Member would also like to thank his distinguished colleague from South Dakota [Mr. JOHNSON] for his outstanding efforts and cooperation with this Member on behalf of these interstate bridge projects. The completion of these bridges will play an important role in facilitating a mutually positive interdependence between communities in Nebraska and South Dakota. Mr. JOHNSON deserves recognition for the important role he has played in bringing this goal closer to reality. It has been a pleasure to continue the close and good cooperation on this and other bistate projects and issues.

Again, Mr. Speaker, this Member would like to thank the distinguished gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CARR], the chairman of the House Transportation Appropriations Subcommittee, and the distinguished gentleman from Virginia [Mr. WOLF], the ranking member of the subcommittee, and all of the conferees for their cooperation in including these important projects in this conference report.

Mr. BUYER. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the transportation appropriations conference report. I am pleased the committee has included $2.475 million in funding for the Hoosier Heartland Corridor.

The Hoosier Heartland Industrial Corridor was authorized by the Intermodal Surface Transportation Efficiency Act as a high priority congressional corridor. This project will link Fort Wayne to Lafayette by a four-lane highway. It is one of the top priorities of the Indiana Department of Transportation and enjoys broad bipartisan support in the communities all along the project route.

The Hoosier Heartland Corridor will become a vital link in the economic development of north central Indiana. The corridor is a major delivery route for manufacturers and producers of goods. Tractor trailers use the road as well as passenger cars and slow-moving farm equipment. In addition, many portions of the existing configuration of the highway are narrow, two-lane, with narrow shoulders and dropoffs. The State of Indiana has indicated that there will be a 50-percent reduction in accidents that will lead to savings both in terms of personal injuries and property damage.

I appreciate the hard work of Congressman WOLF and Congressman CARR in producing this conference report. This funding is an important step in keeping this project on track. Although I recognize that the committee has limited resources available, I am grateful that the members recognize the significance of this project to north central Indiana.

Mr. CARR of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, I yield back the balance of my time, and I move the previous question on the conference report.

The previous question was ordered.

The conference report was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

STATE AND LOCAL GOVERNMENT INTERSTATE WASTE CONTROL ACT OF 1994

Mr. BONIOR. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Rules, I call up House Resolution 551 and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

H. RES. 551

Resolved, That at any time after the adoption of this resolution the Speaker may, pursuant to clause 1(b) of rule XXIII, declare the House resolved into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for consideration of the bill (H.R. 4779) to amend the Solid Waste Disposal Act to authorize local governments and Governors to restrict receipt of out-of-State municipal solid waste, and for other purposes. The first reading of the bill shall be dispensed with. General debate shall be confined to the bill and shall not exceed one hour equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Energy and Commerce. After general debate the bill shall be considered for amendment under the five-minute rule for a period not to exceed four hours (excluding time consumed by recorded votes and proceedings incidental thereto). It shall be in order to consider as an original bill for the purpose of amendment under the five-minute rule the amendment in the nature of a substitute recommended by the Committee on Energy and Commerce now printed in the bill. Each section of the committee amendment in the nature of a substitute shall be considered as read. Any amendment offered by the chairman of the Committee on Energy and Commerce or his designee may amend portions of the bill not yet read for amendment. At the conclusion of consideration of the bill for amendment the Committee shall rise and report the bill to the House with such amendments as may have been adopted. Any Member may demand a separate vote in the House on any amendment adopted in the Committee of the Whole to the bill or to the committee amendment in the nature of a substitute. The previous question shall be considered as ordered on the bill and amendments thereof to final passage without intervening motion except one motion to recommit with or without instructions.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Michigan [Mr. BONIOR] is recognized for 1 hour.

Mr. BONIOR. Mr. Speaker, for the purpose of debate only, I yield the customary 30 minutes to the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. QUILLEN], pending which I yield myself such time as I may consume.

During consideration of this resolution, all time yielded is for the purpose of debate only.

Mr. Speaker, as we head into the 21st century, one of the biggest challenges our State and local communities face is the question of how we deal with—and how we dispose of—solid waste.

It is one of the biggest health challenges we face.

It is one of the biggest economic challenges we face.

And it is one of the biggest environmental challenges we face.

But one thing it is not: It is not a small problem.

Not when you consider that every single year, America generates about 200 million tons of solid waste—200 million tons.

In case you are wondering, that works out to about 1,600 pounds of solid waste for every man, woman, and child in the United States today, 1,600 pounds every single year.

If you have ever wondered why people talk about the "art of solid waste management," that is the reason why. It is because we have a ceaseless, relentless, large-volume supply of garbage, and a limited amount of space to put it all.

That is why it is in all of our interests to deal with this problem.

And fortunately, over the last 20 or 30 years, many State and local communities have accepted responsibility for dealing with this problem.

Working together with the private sector and local residents, many State and local communities have come up with innovative action plans and strategies to deal with waste management, to educate the public, to encourage reducing, reusing, and recycling, and to reduce the amount of solid waste being dumped in our landfills today.

And it is working. It has had an enormous effect. Anybody who has ever seen their street lined with green or blue recycling bins early in the morning knows that we are making progress.

But today, many of our State and local communities that have accepted responsibility for dealing with this issue face a new problem. They are being forced—many of them against their will—to accept trash from places that have not taken responsibility for dealing with the problem.

They are being forced to accept out-of-State waste—and in some cases out-of-country waste—from places that have not made the same priority of reducing, reusing, and recycling.

Again, this is not a small problem.

Of the 200 million tons of solid waste produced in this country in 1992, 19 million tons—one-tenth of the total amount—crossed State lines.

Some of this waste found its way to communities that were more than happy, for reasons having to do with job creation, tax revenues, or other benefits, to take it in.

But most of this waste found its way, unwanted, uninvited, and often unlimited, into communities that had sacrificed year after year to reduce the flow of garbage into their own landfills, because they say the continuing burgeoning of their local landfill as a health threat and an environmental threat to the local community.

If you are wondering why they cannot just say no, well there is a very simple reason.

Because in 1992, the Supreme Court, in one of their lesser known but more damaging decisions to the quality of life in local communities, ruled that local communities had no control over the waste that was coming into their communities.

The Supreme Court ruled that local communities had no say.

If some local landfill owner wanted to make a profit by shipping in waste from a thousand miles away, the Supreme Court ruled that that was their right under the Commerce Clause—no matter how much the local community protested.

In that 1992 decision, the Court then looked in our direction, and said it was up to us to restore the rights of local communities to have a say in this matter.

In short, Mr. Speaker, that is why we are here today.

The bill before us will restore local control.

It will give local communities and local governments the ability to decide whether or not to accept out-of-State trash into their communities, to control the garbage that is being trucked on their streets and dumped in their landfills.

Let me be clear, Mr. Speaker: This is not a radical bill.

It is a balanced, reasonable approach that has made a priority of considering all sides in this debate.

Let me tell you what it does not do. It does not place an immediate, undue burden on local businesses.

And above all, it does not prohibit communities from taking in waste if they want to.

It simply says that local communities should be able to decide whether or not any new landfills should be allowed to accept waste in their community.

It simply gives local communities a say in an issue that affects the health, the environment, and the quality of life of residents and businesses in their communities.

And it does so in a responsible way, by phasing in this responsibility over a sufficient period of time to give affected States, businesses, and local communities time to adjust.

Mr. Speaker, hundreds of thousands of communities in America today are trying to take responsibility for improving the way they handle solid waste.

States like Michigan and many others have made important strides toward making reducing, reusing, and recycling a priority. We have reduced our need for landfills. And we should not be forced to accept trash from places that have not.

This is a fair bill. This is a bipartisan bill. This is a fair and open rule. And this is a responsible approach. Because it gives all parties time to adjust while restoring the rights of State and local communities to control the problems of solid waste.

Mr. Speaker, House Resolution 551 is a simple, open rule for the consideration of H.R. 4779, the State and Local Government Interstate Waste Control Act of 1994.

The rule provides 1 hour of general debate, equally divided between the chairman and ranking minority member of the Energy and Commerce Committee.

The rule makes in order the Energy and Commerce Committee amendment in the nature of a substitute now printed in the bill as an original bill for the purpose of amendment.

The rule limits to 4 hours the time for consideration of the bill for amendment under the 5-minute rule.

The rule also provides that an amendment to be offered by Representative DINGELL may amend portions of the bill not yet read for amendment.

Finally, the rule provides one motion to recommit the bill.

Mr. speaker, this is a simple, open rule—and I urge my colleagues to support it.

Mr. Speaker, I would mention at this time the outstanding job that has been done on this bill by my colleagues, particularly the gentleman from the State of Washington [Mr. SWIFT], who we will dearly miss in this next Congress, who has labored to put this together along with the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. DINGELL], the chairman of the committee, who has taken an active role in this issue and participated in crafting a bill we can live with.

□ 1140

The gentleman from Virginia [Mr. BOUCHER], who has been a consistent, strong supporter of this legislation over the years and I had the pleasure to work with and who cares about our health and environment in a very special way; the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. SHARP], from my neighboring State, who has worked tirelessly on this issue, the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. UPTON], from my home State, has also labored, as well as the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. OXLEY] and the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GREENWOOD], an articulate spokesman on this issue, and the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. GILLMOR], my friend.

All of these gentlemen deserve our gratitude for the work that they have put in, the hours they have put in on a difficult issue. It has taken us years to get here. I am glad we are here, and I praise their work and look forward to working with them to make this a reality and making this law.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. QUILLEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I join Mr. BONIOR in supporting this open rule. It is not often that the Energy and Commerce Committee requests an open rule for legislation under their jurisdiction, and I am especially pleased to have an open rule for this particular bill. The State and Local Government Interstate Waste Control Act has been surrounded with controversy, and it is especially important to allow all Members the opportunity to offer amendments as this measure could have a severe impact on individual districts and States. Although the rule does impose a 4-hour time limitation for the consideration of amendments, I find this acceptable in view of the limited amount of time we have left before adjournment.

I would like to commend Chairman DINGELL, CARLOS MOORHEAD, AL SWIFT, MIKE OXLEY, RICK BOUCHER, and everyone else who has worked so diligently over the past year and a half to put together this bill. It offers, in my opinion, an affirmative response to the various court decisions regarding whether States may impose restrictions on the importation of municipal solid waste.

I urge adoption of this rule so we can proceed with the consideration of this important piece of legislation.

Mr. BONIOR. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. SYNAR].

Mr. SYNAR. Mr. Speaker, let me take this opportunity, as the gentleman did, to commend all the Members who have been so actively involved in this effort, particularly the gentleman from Washington [Mr. SWIFT] and the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. SHARP] who will be leaving the Committee on Energy and Commerce. This is indeed a great tribute to their dedication to a very important issue.

There will probably be few things that we will do in the closing moments of this session that will have a more direct impact on the communities that all of us represent. I think the bottom line that Members will be hearing today, as we debate this issue and amend it and move it forward, is that communities across this country are literally sick and tired of dealing with garbage generated by other communities when they are struggling to deal effectively with their own.

The legislation which we will pass today will put those communities for the first time in the driver's seat, by giving them the ability to decide up front how much out-of-State municipal waste they want to receive and requiring those facilities who wish to accept out-of-State waste to negotiate with host community agreements, explicitly authorizing those shipments.

That is a real big step in the right direction. I encourage my colleagues to support the rule. I encourage them to support the legislation. And again, my congratulations to the gentleman from Washington [Mr. SWIFT], the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. SHARP], the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. OXLEY], and others who have done such a magnificent job on this.

Mr. Speaker, today the House acts to reverse several recent court decisions by addressing the ability of State and local governments to restrict the importation of out-of-State municipal solid waste [MSW].

For too long, communities in the Midwest and other so-called importing States have had to bear the solid waste disposal burdens that exporting States have avoided dealing with.

Although Oklahoma is not currently a major importer of municipal solid waste, cheaper land, and reasonable disposal costs make communities in my State frequent targets of imported waste proposals.

The legislation before us puts those communities in the driver's seat by giving them the ability to decide up-front whether and how much out-of-State municipal solid waste to receive, and by requiring facilities wishing to accept out-of-State waste to negotiate a host community agreement explicitly authorizing such shipments. The legislation also recognizes the important role that the State plays in overseeing solid waste management needs within its borders, and allows importing States to place a "freeze" on the total amount of out-of-State waste sent to the State for disposal. In particular, I want to commend my colleagues on the Energy and Commerce Committee, Representative SHARP and Representative BOUCHER, and their staffs for the long hard work they have put into negotiating this legislation among waste companies, and State and local governments.

Finally, I would like to note that a considerable amount of negotiating between the importing States of Indiana, Pennsylvania, and Ohio and the exporting States of New York and New Jersey occurred at the committee level. The bill reflects the results of these negotiations. Nevertheless, because compromise could not be reached, the House will be considering a number of amendments from both sides today. The bottom line here is that communities across this land are sick and tired of dealing with the garbage generated by other communities, when they're struggling to deal effectively with their own. As public policy makers, we should demand that those who generate garbage should take care of it as close to home as possible. And if exporting garbage to another State is necessary, it should only be done with the permission of the importing community and State. I urge my colleagues to support this bill to strengthen controls over unwanted exports of interstate waste and pass H.R. 4779.

Mr. QUILLEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. OXLEY].

Mr. OXLEY. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the rule and commend the Committee on Rules for providing this open rule so that we can debate some of the last remaining issues that have to be decided by the House.

This has been a long and difficult process that we are finally seeing bear some fruit. I want to particularly commend my good friend, the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. BONIOR], for helping in this effort. I know he has a particular issue in his district and our committee, I think, was very sensitive to that. Along with, of course, the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. DINGELL], the chairman, and particularly the gentleman from Washington [Mr. SWIFT], chairman of the subcommittee that I am honored to be ranking member.

He has in many cases threaded the needle on this legislation to get it where it is today, to be able to bring it to the floor in good shape where we have essentially compromised a lot of the potential problems that existed between the exporting States and the importing States.

Essentially what this bill is, Mr. Speaker, is an empowerment bill. It empowers local governments and Governors to get a better handle on that flow of waste into their particular jurisdictions.

I think that is a positive thing for the country.

All of those who are involved on our side as well as the other side do deserve a great deal of commendation. I look forward to the debate and the amendments to get this bill forward and to get it to pass, hopefully before we adjourn sine die.

I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me.

Mr. BONIOR. Mr. Speaker, I thank my friend, the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. OXLEY], for his comments. I thank him for his good work on this issue.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. SHARP], who we will miss dearly in this institution, who has been a strong advocate of working families and a clean environment, healthy environment. I thank him again for his work on this matter.

Mr. SHARP. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the rule and in support of the bill before us.

It is the result of almost 4 years of negotiations and compromise between representatives from importing States, as my own, Indiana, and the exporting States, and with the gentleman from Washington [Mr. SWIFT], providing extremely skillful leadership through a lot of very difficult problems, we have the legislation before us today.

I particularly want to commend the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. BONIOR] who, while not a member of the Committee on Energy and Commerce, has been a vital player. And as someone who shared his point of view, I am extremely appreciative of his work that gets us here today.

I might just briefly indicate to our colleagues that we hope the proceedings this afternoon will go more easily than perhaps was originally anticipated, because there have been some further negotiation between leaders of importing and exporting States. So that we hope to dramatically reduce the number of amendments that are offered here that our Members will have to choose from.

Mr. BONIOR. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Oregon [Mr. WYDEN].

Mr. WYDEN. Mr. Speaker, I want to commend the gentleman from Washington [Mr. SWIFT]. I think that our colleagues on both sides of the aisle know that if the gentleman from Washington is involved that issues are going to be handled in a professional and responsible fashion and also with good humor on top of it. We thank him for the good work.

If I could, Mr. Speaker, very briefly, my State has had a unique problem with respect to out-of-State waste. Earlier this year the U.S. Supreme Court invalidated a special program that Oregon set up to try to recoup some of the costs associated with dealing with the problems of out-of-State waste.

As a result of the Supreme Court decision, my State and others, in effect, would be a dumping ground for out-of-State waste. Fortunately, this legislation would correct it.

I also want to thank the gentleman from Virginia. He worked tirelessly with us to come up with an alternative that would authorize States to impose surcharges of up to $2 per ton on imported waste. In my view, this is something that will encourage recycling. It will encourage sensible conservation practices. I want to thank the gentleman from Virginia for his help and again commend the gentleman from Washington and also add my thanks to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. BONIOR] who has also spent years toiling on this issue.

Mr. Speaker, I want to commend both the chairman of the Energy and Commerce Committee, Mr. DINGELL, and the subcommittee chairman, Mr. SWIFT, for moving forward on an issue that is considered highly controversial—the interstate shipment of garbage.

For the typical consumer, garbage is something you put out at the curb and it's carted away. And, once out of sight, it's out of mind.

But for the residents of waste-importing States and communities, garbage is not so easily ignored. Trash trucks and railcars roll into our States and dump refuse in our communities, which affects both property values and the quality of life.

While garbage may be an issue that many would prefer to turn their noses up and away from, the impacts of interstate waste shipments on Oregon and other importing States are serious concerns that merit congressional action, and I am pleased that the Congress is moving forward on interstate waste legislation.

The legislation before us today may not be perfect, but it is clearly better than the existing situation where waste is shipped and dumped throughout the country without any restriction whatsoever.

Due to the efforts of Mr. BOUCHER and other members of the Energy and Commerce Committee, H.R. 4779 goes to considerable lengths to protect the interests of local communities with facilities receiving out-of-State waste. And, because of a number of improvements that I and other members made to the bill in committee, it also provides important roles to States, including the ability to charge compensatory fees to recoup the States' costs of managing imported waste.

Several years ago, Oregon tried to recoup its costs arising from out-of-State waste by imposing a surcharge based on the State's costs of managing this waste. Oregon hired outside consultants who calculated that it cost the State over $2 for each ton of imported waste.

Earlier this year, the U.S. Supreme Court invalidated Oregon's surcharge. As a result of this decision, Oregon and other waste-importing States will not only be the dumping ground for other States' garbage, but they also get stuck with the bill for managing the out-of-State trash.

Working with my colleague from Virginia, Mr. BOUCHER, I added an amendment to correct this unfair situation by authorizing States to impose surcharges of up to $2 per ton on imported waste. This amendment is critical to my State and it is important for other waste-importing States as well.

I want to thank Mr. BOUCHER for working with me on a consensus amendment that recognizes the financial impact of interstate waste shipments on the importing States and provides an opportunity for those States to recover their costs through compensatory surcharges. I also want to thank the chairman of the committee, Mr. DINGELL, for his willingness to work with me on this and especially for your support of the Wyden-Boucher waste import fee amendment.

I urge my colleagues to support this legislation.

Mr. QUILLEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GREENWOOD].

Mr. GREENWOOD. Mr. Speaker, I would like to add my commendations to all the Members who have been mentioned on both sides of the aisle. This is an issue of extreme importance to my State of Pennsylvania. We are the No. 1 trash importer in the country. Yesterday we went to the Committee on Rules, and despite the fact that we thought we had worked out a bill that was pretty well compromised, we stood for an open rule, knowing full well that we would anticipate 22 amendments, and we were prepared to debate all 22 of those amendments under the provisions of this open rule.

Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to report now that as of this morning, it appears that we have worked out agreements and will be able to expedite this process by agreeing to two or three amendments. We may have to debate one amendment. I think we can finally come to conclusion on this bill, and I stand in support of the rule.

Mr. QUILLEN. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. BONIOR. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time. I yield back the balance of my time, and I move the previous question on the resolution.

The previous question was ordered.

The resolution was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. MONTGOMERY). Pursuant to House Resolution 551 and rule XXIII, the Chair declares the House in the Committee of the Whole House for the consideration of the bill, H.R. 4779.

IN THE COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill (H.R. 4779) to amend the Solid Waste Disposal Act to authorize local governments and Governors to restrict receipt of out-of-State municipal solid waste, and for other purposes, with Mr. PRICE of North Carolina in the chair.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. Pursuant to the rule, the bill is considered as having been read the first time.

Under the rule, the gentleman from Washington [Mr. SWIFT] will be recognized for 30 minutes, and the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. OXLEY] will be recognized for 30 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Washington [Mr. SWIFT].

Mr. SWIFT. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of H.R. 4779, the State and Local Government Interstate Waste Control Act of 1994, which was ordered reported on a voice vote, with bipartisan support, by the Committee on Energy and Commerce on August 18 of this year.

This legislation, which is the product of several years of intense negotiations, attempts to address one of the most controversial issues that has arisen in the debate over solid waste management. It is probably the closest thing to a good compromise on this issue that we could achieve. I commend my colleagues on the committee who have all worked so terribly hard on this legislation.

The committee members have worked with exceptional diligence to bring this bill to the floor. It has not been an easy task. I would especially like to commend the chairman of the committee, Mr. DINGELL, for his hard work in keeping this legislation moving forward when it seemed that it might falter. As usual, he provided the critical leadership necessary to bring the bill to this point.

Over the last 4 years, the committee has heard testimony from a large number of witnesses regarding this issue. Last Congress, our committee reported a RCRA reauthorization bill that contained a provision giving local governments the authority to control their own destinies in regard to the receipt of out-of-State trash. That section of the RCRA bill was the starting point for the legislation before us today. Two years after the RCRA legislation was reported out of the Energy and Commerce Committee, we are back with another bill. Every provision of H.R. 4779 has been intensely negotiated among a wide range of parties. Agreement was not reached on everything, but the list of outstanding issues has narrowed considerably since we started work on this bill early in 1993.

As I mentioned before, this legislation attempts to address one of the most controversial issues in solid waste management, a question that has been raging for the last several years. That question is: Should States and local government have the ability to restrict garbage coming into their jurisdictions for disposal?

There are a number of persons who believe that a waste company should be able to build a facility and dispose of garbage wherever it wishes. There are others who, for a variety of reasons, including the NIMBY syndrome, believe that States should be able to completely halt all incoming waste flows. Let's face it, my colleagues: most people are not rational about garbage. It's dirty, it smells, and we don't want to deal with it. The urge to ship it somewhere else is natural. If we are to have any hope of having a rational solid waste management policy in this country, it is essential that we find the middle ground. This legislation attempts to do just that.

Interstate transportation of waste is a major political issue in many States. A number of States and communities, most of them rural, feel that they are being used as dumping grounds for States and cities, that for a variety of reasons, are unwilling or unable to dispose of their trash at sites within their own borders. Further, States and local governments often view waste from outside their jurisdictions as a burden on their waste management systems, including existing landfill capacity. In other instances, State and local officials who have made unpopular and often painful siting decisions do not want to see their localities become dumping grounds for jurisdictions that fail to make those same difficult decisions. This is where the NIMBY syndrome comes in. These days, it is difficult enough for hard-pressed local officials to make the decision to site a waste management facility. To reward those who make these tough decisions by telling them that they will be unable to keep out-of-State trash out of their hard-won facility is unfair and is bad public policy to boot.

In a series of decisions, the U.S. Supreme Court and other Federal courts have held that, absent an express grant of authority from the Congress, States and local governments are powerless to halt the importation and disposal of out-of-State waste in private owned facilities located in their jurisdictions.

The inability of local communities to control their own destinies in the face of mounting waste imports has spawned a national effort to give local governments a voice in the decision whether to accept out-of-State waste. This legislation will ensure that landfills and incinerators are not importing out-of-State waste over the opposition of the affected community.

The bill gives affected local governments the primary authority to decide whether or not to allow out-of-State waste in to their jurisdictions, while also giving Governors the authority to freeze waste imports at 1993 levels. This freeze authority will help Governors plan for solid waste management on a State-wide basis.

H.R. 4779 as reported by the Committee on Energy and Commerce is not a perfect bill. Like much of the legislation we consider, it does not solve everyone's problems. Nevertheless, I believe that it is a good compromise that makes significant progress toward finding a rational, balanced solution to what we all know are emotionally and politically charged problems.

Mr. Chairman, let me cite two Members who I think are particularly important in this. I introduced, 3 years ago, a proposal to solve this problem, and it had the unique virtue that virtually everybody on all sides of this issue hated it. It was clearly not a vehicle that was going to go anywhere.

Enter the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. BOUCHER], who worked very hard in the last Congress to fashion what was then and is now the fundamental concept around which this bill is crafted. I think that he found something that virtually nobody else, in working this issue in Congress, had heretofore been able to discover. It is on this basis that he crafted this legislation that all of the compromises thereto have been based.

Mr. Chairman, the other person is the chairman of the full committee, the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. DINGELL], who basically did the end game. The gentleman from Virginia [Mr. BOUCHER] played the opening, and the gentleman from Michigan played the end game. The result is that we have a good, workable, solid piece of legislation that we can commend to the Congress. I would urge my colleagues to support the legislation.

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. OXLEY. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, I would first like to commend the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. DINGELL], the chairman of the committee, the gentleman from Washington [Mr. SWIFT], the subcommittee chairman, the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. SHARP], who is retiring, the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. BOUCHER], with whom I have worked closely on telecommunications legislation, and this is a long way from telecommunications, but it is extremely important, the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. UPTON], and the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GREENWOOD], a freshman Member who has taken a strong interest in this legislation.

Mr. Chairman, this is an effort by our committee to find a consensus on where America disposes of its waste.

Mr. Chairman, Americans now produce more than 200 million tons of household trash a year. Needless to say, as we became more and more of a throwaway society, municipal solid waste disposal became a major industry in our country. In fact, we are spending nearly $30 billion each year to dispose of our waste.

While Americans do not agree on whether we should bury it, burn it, or recycle it, we do agree on the fact that we want our waste hauled away to where we don't ever see it again. The reality is that we don't want our own waste, or anyone else's waste, in our own backyard.

Two dramatic examples of that attitude were the garbage barge which left Long Island in 1987 and the garbage train which left New York City in 1992 unsuccessfully searching for a place to unload.

With landfill capacity dropping and disposal costs rising, particularly in the Northeast, large volumes of waste was shipped across State lines. A surge of out-of-State trash in the 1980's led residents of my home State of Ohio to fear that our State was becoming a dumping ground. Local communities urged State lawmakers to prevent their waste disposal capacity from being depleted by out-of-State waste and as a result, new laws were enacted limiting waste shipments or charging differential fees.

However, when court decisions struck down laws banning or restricting waste imports, States were forced to reexamine their options for addressing waste disposal problems.

Ohio continues to be concerned about its dwindling options for dealing with the increasing challenges associated with solid waste disposal. Because disposal costs in Ohio are less than one-third of those in East coast cities, Ohio still imports 1.8 million tons of out-of-State waste, which represents more than 10 percent of the total amount of waste disposed in the State each year. In addition, well over 1 million tons of construction and demolition debris comes into the State.

We receive waste from over 20 States and Canada and we are facing the possibility of nearly doubling the amount of imported waste should a landfill in eastern Ohio take more Canadian waste as planned. This one facility expects to import another 1.5 million tons of trash from Canada, which is the equivalent of nearly 125 rail cars of garbage per day.

Needless to say, my constituents continue to believe that too much out-of-State waste is dumped into landfills that they are counting on to meet their current needs, as well as the needs resulting from future economic growth. Midwestern States have paid the price for the irresponsibility of other States in dealing with their own trash.

The 1976 RCRA amendments contained provisions encouraging States to adopt comprehensive solid waste management plans. However, the Supreme Court decisions which restrict States from limiting waste shipments are making it impossible for States like Ohio to manage its own garbage.

Ohio has the space to manage its solid waste but this space is being filled by other States who have shown little capacity to act responsibly. In addition, out-of-State waste shipments are undermining Ohio's efforts to responsibly limit our own waste. Ohioans legitimately wonder why they should recycle in order to conserve disposal space for other States' waste.

Mr. Chairman, solid waste has long been thought of as an unwanted material and now more than ever, my constituents would like more control over the amount of unwanted waste they receive.

Over the past several years, Congress has considered various legislative remedies and has debated how to address the concerns of States like Ohio, as well as States like New York and New Jersey, which obviously need to become more self-sufficient in managing their own waste.

Mr. Chairman, the bill before us today is a compromise representing a balance between the powers given to the States and those given to the local governments. This bill does not stop the movement of interstate waste, it merely gives States and local communities the opportunity to say "yes" or "no" to out-of-State waste. This authority will protect the ability of State and local governments to adequately plan for solid waste management.

You may think this bill is a Midwest fix but keep in mind that without this bill, out-of-State waste will soon be everyone's problem.

Again, Mr. Chairman, I would like to commend particularly the gentleman from Washington [Mr. SWIFT], the chairman of the subcommittee, who is unfortunately leaving us after this session of the Congress but who has been really the fulcrum and the guiding force in working this compromise.

Mr. Chairman, I urge my colleagues to support this bill which will give State and local governments more control over solid waste capacity.

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. SWIFT. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. SHARP].

Mr. SHARP. Mr. Chairman, first I just want to say a word about our colleague the gentleman from Washington [Mr. SWIFT] who is leaving. He has been an extraordinary Member of the House of Representatives and an extraordinary subcommittee chairman. The country is suffering a loss as are the people that he represents with his retirement from the House of Representatives. As citizens we probably gain from getting back this person among the normal human folk. He has done an outstanding job and this is just one more example of it on a very complex political and substantive issue that really cries out for some resolution.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in strong support of the bill before us, even though from my perspective and the perspective of the importing States, it is half to 60 percent of a loaf but it does improve the situation and the capacity for our local governments and our States that have responsibly planned for how to manage trash to regain some control over their situation.

As has been outlined here by other speakers, there has been a history here where the Congress had reaffirmed with the States that it really was their responsibility to manage municipal waste, only to find out as they struggled to do so that they did not have full control over their local area because private negotiations and contracts could undermine public policy. The courts tended to strike down the public policy, leaving the States and localities without the authority to act, even though there was a need for them to act responsibly, and a number of them had. In particular, our colleague, the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GREENWOOD], has been an extraordinary participant in this. In his own career previously at the State Senate level, he had helped to lead his State to take responsible actions to plan ahead on how to reduce waste, how to recycle, and how to manage that which is left over in landfills and other ways, only to find out that out-of-State importation of waste could undermine the tough political substantive decisions that that State was willing to take.

We have a similar picture in my home State of Indiana. Our Governor Bayh and State and local officials have worked dramatically to develop a program of waste reduction, waste recycling, and waste management, only to discover that importation of out-of-State waste was filling up our landfills as we sought to reserve space for the future.

Mr. Chairman, I really hope that our colleagues today will pass this legislation as will the U.S. Senate. I do want to indicate that the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. BOUCHER] has been the staunch leader on this issue and as the gentleman from Washington [Mr. SWIFT] indicated, provided the fundamentals of the bill. Many of us had to push and pull and argue to try to get our points of view more strongly held in the bill. That is the natural way of the process, but he charged forth with the right principles and we owe him a great debt in this process. I do want to also indicate one of the toughest adversaries that those of us from the importing States had was the gentleman from New York [Mr. MANTON] who very skillfully and very thoroughly defended the rightful interests of those exporting States that are struggling to manage their waste.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of H.R. 4779, the State and Local Government Interstate Waste Control Act of 1994, as reported by the House Energy and Commerce Committee. I believe it is a good bill. I believe it is a fair bill, and I believe it is a balanced bill. Most important, it is a compromise, a fragile compromise, achieved after over 2½ years of work, with all affected parties at the table.

Mr. Chairman, many States and local communities, including my home State of Indiana, are being dumped on, and we are now powerless to stop it. If enacted, H.R. 4779 will give these States and local communities the opportunity to say "no" to out-of-State waste.

We also give States the authority they need to do what Congress told them they had to under the Solid Waste Disposal Act—to responsibly plan for and manage their solid waste.

In Indiana, we have worked hard to responsibly manage our solid waste. We have worked hard at the local level, in our State legislature and at the grassroots to appropriately manage our waste. We have a statewide goal of reducing the amount of waste we landfill by 34 percent by 1996 and 50 percent by the year 2001. In order to achieve this goal we have recycling and source reduction programs, bans on yardwaste and tires going into landfills, yardwaste composting programs, and public education. Our citizens are modifying their behavior to make our waste reduction goals a reality.

All of our 61 districts are making a concerted effort to reduce the portion of our waste going to landfills. Thus we are conserving landfill space. Our efforts and our citizens' commitment to the program is being undermined as our landfill space is being filled up by out-of-State waste. Our citizens are unhappy that all of our planning and efforts are for naught in the face of this onslaught of out-of-State waste. We want to regain control of our destiny.

I tell you this only in part to generate sympathy for our cause. I tell you this also to pique your self-interest. This is our problem today, but without this bill, it will be your problem tomorrow. Without this bill, a responsible State is a sucker.

Take the case of Pennsylvania. Pennsylvania in the 1980's bit the bullet, went through an extensive planning process, and required localities to site enough landfills to meet the State's capacity needs. New York did not do this. And lo and behold, Pennsylvania landfills are filling up with New York waste. This is not fair. This is not right.

Some people argue that we want to stop the movement of interstate waste. That is not true. We merely want to give States and local communities the opportunity to say "yes" or "no" to out-of-State waste, and to preserve the ability of States and localities to plan for and manage the disposal of solid waste.

Those communities who want the economic benefit that may be derived from hosting a landfill can do so. In fact this bill gives them leverage in negotiating with waste companies who are not now required to enter into agreements with host communities.

Some people argue that trash should move around just like any other commodity, without any role for State and local communities. This is an indefensible position. Garbage is not like any other commodity. As economists like to say, it generates externalities, or social costs—it smells, it leaches into groundwater, it makes noise, it creates traffic, it lowers property values. States and local communities must have some say over where and how it is managed.

Last year I introduced a bill, H.R. 2848, the Interstate Transportation of Municipal Waste Act of 1993. That bill, which was supported by the Governors of 22 States, was considerably stronger than H.R. 4779, the bill that has been reported from the Energy and Commerce Committee.

The bill before us is half a loaf, but nonetheless an important improvement for States and communities seeking to manage waste.

In the process of full committee consideration I listened to the views and concerns of exporting communities, and waste companies. Mr. BOUCHER and other concerned Members and I compromised. Mr. MANTON successfully amended the bill at subcommittee and full committee mark-up to allow New York more time to change its waste export practices. None of us got everything we wanted.

I hope you will join me in supporting H.R. 4779.

Mr. OXLEY. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from California [Mr. MOORHEAD], the ranking member of the Committee on Energy and Commerce.

Mr. MOORHEAD. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of H.R. 4779, the State and Local Government Interstate Waste Control Act of 1994. This legislation is the product of over 4 years of debate in the Committee on Energy and Commerce. During this period, the committee has held extensive hearings and several markups on legislation addressing the interstate movement of municipal waste. In the last Congress, for example, it was part of the RCRA reauthorization legislation. And in this Congress, numerous stand-alone pieces of legislation were introduced and considered.

After much informal discussion among members, the Subcommittee on Transportation and Hazardous Materials reported out H.R. 4779 by voice vote on July 22, 1994. The Energy and Commerce Committee then reported out the bill, again by voice vote, on August 18, 1994. I am pleased to see we are now able to debate this legislation on the floor under an open rule.

Mr. Chairman, while I think the House should have an opportunity to debate this fully as it will under the open rule that has been granted, given the level of strong interest among some delegating, I myself have reservations about the wisdom of Congress taking any action in this area. The Supreme Court has recently held that States may not interfere in the movement of municipal waste or the provision of waste management services. And I tend to think that, in general, the Supreme Court has it right. States should not be allowed to balkanize the national economy due to local fears.

I think a recent editorial in the Journal of Commerce sums up my concerns quite well.

Trash disposal is a business like any other, subject to the laws of supply and demand. Garbage tends to flow to areas that can handle it cheaply—generally regions with a dry climate and sparse population. The trade benefits both sides: receiving communities get tax revenue and other concessions from landfill operators, and shipping communities get relatively cheap trash disposal.

The editorial concludes:

The irony here is rich. While the rest of the world moves toward open economies, Congress is busy building barriers to obstruct domestic trade in trash. That violates the spirit, at least, of the constitution's commerce clause, which aims to protect nationwide commerce against balkanization by the states.

Perhaps it is easy for me to see the big picture since California is not really affected by this legislation. And I can sympathize with the Members who feel the need to circle the wagons and close their borders to waste from other States. But do not be surprised if this rush to limit interstate commerce comes back to haunt you when it is your State that is the exporter.

Finally, Mr. Chairman, I would note that there is no real health or safety issue involved in this legislation. With EPA's municipal landfill regulations in place, the Agency does not view the interstate movement of waste as having a pronounced environmental effect—either pro or con. Simply put, this is not really an environmental issue.

It is, however, a powerful political issue, particularly in the areas that import waste. After over 4 years of debate, I believe it is time Congress acted. My hope is that we can solve the very legitimate political concerns of Members, and dispense with this issue without wreaking havoc on the national economy. I believe the bill reported out of Energy and Commerce generally accomplishes this goal, and I will judge any proposed amendments accordingly.

In closing, Mr. Chairman, I want to congratulate our ranking Republican member, the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. OXLEY], for his work on this bill. But I want to also bid a special thanks to the gentleman from Washington [Mr. SWIFT], the chairman of the subcommittee for the remarkable job that he has done on many many bills over the years that he has been in Congress. The gentleman has been our friend, he has been a very great contributor to the work of the Committee on Energy and Commerce, and we will miss him very much as he leaves to do other things.

Mr. SWIFT. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. MANTON], who has worked very hard on behalf of the concerns of his State and region and has been extremely helpful in the process.

Mr. MANTON. Mr. Chairman, I thank the chairman for those kind words and also my colleague, the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. SHARP], for his kind words. I must point out the gentleman from Indiana has been a very worthy adversary on this legislation, and we have conducted our debate I think in a civilized manner with comity on all sides.

Mr. Chairman, the legislation under consideration seeks to address a complex emotional and political problem, but I hope we do not overlook the significance of our actions here today.

This legislation has the potential to impose untold economic harm on communities that export some of its municipal solid waste and on other communities that import waste as a means of economic development.

Mr. Chairman, I have worked with my colleagues from States that import municipal solid waste in an effort to negotiate a compromise based on reason, comity and sound public policy. Unfortunately, while we have made progress, I believe we need to continue these negotiations as this measure moves forward.

Mr. Chairman, all politics is indeed local, and I fully appreciate the pressures some of my colleagues are faced with on this issue. However, I do not believe Congress should be micro-managing where municipal solid waste goes for disposal. We should work to ensure that our solid waste disposal policy is designed to protect human health and the environment.

Mr. Chairman, municipal solid waste currently crosses State lines for disposal for one reason, and one reason alone: the cost of doing business. This is not an environmental issue, it is an issue of economics. I do not think Congress should take actions which specifically seek to deny private businesses the right to protect their investments and maximize their profits—providing that their actions are in accordance with existing Federal, State and local law.

Mr. Chairman, we should not lose sight of the fact that many communities openly welcome the development of waste disposal facilities in their jurisdictions for the receipt of out-of-State municipal solid waste. I believe the legislation as currently written may indeed limit this opportunity and deny these communities much needed economic benefits.

Mr. Chairman, it is no secret that municipal solid waste is exported from my State of New York, but virtually every other State in the Union also exports municipal solid waste. The amount of municipal solid waste that is exported from New York, while relatively significant in volume, represents only a small fraction—some 19 percent—of the approximate 17 million tons of waste generated, recycled, treated and disposed of in the State each year. I might point out New York is a net importer of hazardous waste.

Mr. Chairman, I will have more comments on the legislation during consideration of amendments.

Mr. OXLEY. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GREENWOOD], who has been a real leader on this entire issue.

Mr. GREENWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding me the time. I also would like to again commend Chairman DINGELL and ranking member MOORHEAD and the chairmen of the subcommittees, the gentleman from Washington [Mr. SWIFT] and the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. OXLEY], for their fine work. But I would be remiss if I did not point out the remarkable working relationship I have had with the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. SHARP], who has been just a perfect gentleman and joy to work with on this issue. And I would also like to thank the staff on both sides of the aisle who are the real work horses who do the hard labor of putting the fine tuning on these negotiations.

Mr. Chairman, the State and Local Government Interstate Waste Control Act is of vital importance to my State of Pennsylvania and to my congressional district.

Until relatively recently, when we set our household trash on our sidewalks or at the end of our driveways, it was trucked to local dumps, and we did not think much about it.

In the late seventies and early eighties, we in Pennsylvania did the right thing for the environment. We began to close down these dumps because they lacked adequate liners or collection systems to prevent leachate from polluting our ground water aquifers.

We closed more than a thousand such antiquated facilities. The good news was that we protected our environment. The bad news was that we ran out of safe places to dispose of our garbage.

By 1986 Pennsylvania was exporting 3 million tons of trash a year. In 1988, as a member of the State Senate, I helped write the Municipal Waste Planning, Recycling and Waste Reduction Act. This new law required counties and local governments to make plans for the disposal of their waste, encouraged the permitting of disposal facilities that met environmental standards, and mandated local recycling so we can reduce our waste flow.

The results have been dramatic. The good news this time was that Pennsylvania quickly developed state-of-the-art facilities to safely dispose of its trash. The bad news was that our neighbors in New Jersey, New York, Maryland, and Delaware started trucking their trash to these facilities in record volumes. We are now the No. 1 trash importing State in the country.

Bucks County, with its two landfills and new incinerator, bears much of the brunt of these imports. In 1993, 900,000 tons of out-of-State trash was trucked into Falls Township and Tullytown Borough. This figure does not count trash from Philadelphia and other Pennsylvania counties.

Why should we be concerned about all this out-of-State waste? We should be concerned because even the best available technology is not pollution-free. Because we accept so much out-of-State waste, our air and water are placed at risk beyond the levels proportionate to our population.

The out-of-State waste hauled into my district puts the equivalent of 40,000 tractor trailers per year onto our local highways. This legislation will enable us to reduce this volume by half.

Mr. Chairman, our ability to pass stringent pollution control and waste reduction legislation in Congress requires a national constituency with a stake in the outcome. As long as entire regions can export their waste rather than properly dispose of it, they will not insist upon tough solid waste laws.

If Pennsylvania's facilities become filled to capacity with out-of-State trash, we will soon be scrambling to find places to dispose of our own waste again.

The new Local Government Interstate Waste Control Act will allow Pennsylvania and four other major trash-importing States to cut in half the volume of out-of-State waste crossing their borders. We do not close our borders, we simply gain some control over the volume of imported wastes. And we allow communities who want to take more trash to do so as a local option.

The key to responsible solid waste management is to give everyone a stake in it. This legislation does that in a way that is fair, balanced, and sensible. I urge the Members to support it.

Mr. SWIFT. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from New York [Mrs. MALONEY].

Mrs. MALONEY. Mr. Chairman, I rise to express my serious concern over provisions of the State and Local Government Interstate Waste Control Act.

There is a certain irony that we are taking up this legislation, having just passed the conference report on transportation appropriations which represents our Government's investment in making it easier to move goods and people between the States. Yet here we are about to enact the first legislation to create protectionist barriers between States.

Once this precedent against interstate commerce is set, we might begin to see bills that allow surcharges against the import of Idaho potatoes to New York in order to boost the State's major potato farms on Long Island. I hope my colleagues will see fit to postpone action on this legislation in order to craft a bill that effectively helps States reduce their waste exports without penalizing these localities that are forced by economics and geography to ship some portion of their municipal waste to other jurisdictions.

For example, New York is striving to reduce the amount of exported municipal waste, particularly in New York City, where we have just implemented a citywide recycling program that is among the most ambitious in the Nation. But the fact is that New York exports 19 percent of its municipal waste because it is economically reasonable to do so.

But if we place restrictions on out-of-State municipal waste, no one would be surprised if within a single State some localities take the precedent being set here today and begin to ban waste imports from larger cities within the same State. In addition to the general precedent being set, there are specific provisions of the bill that are very worrisome. One of the most troubling aspects of this legislation is that it grants local governments the authority to break existing contracts between businesses and other States.

The bill also gives local authorities the right to break agreements that they had entered into even after the enactment of the bill.

I am concerned that in an effort to pass legislation that sounds politically popular we will wind up passing legislation that does more harm than good.

Mr. OXLEY. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. SCHAEFER], a member of the committee.

Mr. SCHAEFER. Mr. Chairman, the Interstate Waste Control Act before us today represents the end product of months of hard work and negotiation on how States will be allowed to restrict the flow of waste through their borders.

I will only touch on one aspect of the bill before us: the needs determination provision. This language incorporates an amendment I offered during markup at the Energy and Commerce Committee.

Originally, this bill would have allowed the Governor of a State to veto local land use decisions through a grant of authority to deny otherwise legal waste permits. This provision had nothing to do with the regulation of interstate waste. However, it had everything to do with the restriction of property use and the limitation of local decisionmaking.

The needs language in the present bill strikes a good balance between the two extremes in this debate. First, it grants to States the ability to consider local and regional needs for waste disposal capacity in the comprehensive solid waste management planning process. This is an entirely appropriate and needed consideration.

Second, it grants to affected local governments the ability to determine their own local or regional need for a new landfill or incinerator or a major modification to such a facility. This should ensure that the final authority and decisionmaking in these matters rests exactly where it belongs—at the local government level.

All the parties involved have worked in good faith to try to strike a healthy balance in this bill. While there are still many areas of disagreement on the issue on interstate waste transport, I believe that the measure before us today largely accomplishes that goal.

Mr. OXLEY. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to our good friend, the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. CLINGER].

Mr. CLINGER. Mr. Chairman, this past St. Patrick's Day, 16 of the 21 members of the Pennsylvania delegation introduced a strong bill to allow State and local governments to control waste imports. We hoped that with the luck of the Irish we would be able to get an interstate waste bill passed this Congress. I am very pleased today that an agreement has been worked out between the major parties and the major disputants on this very contentious issue, and urge my colleagues to strongly support the Energy and Commerce bill without any amendments to weaken it.

Unfortunately, Pennsylvania has the dubious distinction of being the No. 1 importer of other peoples' garbage. The amount of waste imported into Pennsylvania continues to increase each year. In 1991, the amount of garbage imported was 3 million tons; in 1992 as shown on this graph, it was 3.8 million tons; and in 1993 it was close to 4 million tons. In my own district, we import over 100,000 tons of garbage a year or 432 pounds per person. We are inundated with other peoples' garbage. At the same time, very little of Pennsylvania's waste is exported because the State requires communities to plan and dispose of their own trash, in a responsible fashion.

Very simply, this is not fair. The landfill space planned for our own garbage is being used up, and the health and safety of our citizens is endangered with a proliferation of trash trucks on our highways. We cannot plan for our own disposal needs because we cannot now control our own destiny.

H.R. 4779 is a compromise bill. As with any compromise no one is entirely satisfied, but it has broad support from key players. It takes into account both the needs of exporting States, importing States, local governments, and the waste industry. Local governments have indicated that local communities should have the right to say "yes" or "no" to out-of-State waste. The bill provides the affected local governments with this authority through host community agreements. At the same time, the bill provides States with the authority to plan for adequate future disposal capacity within their State.

Mr. Chairman, our citizens in Pennsylvania are frustrated. We need to ensure that our Nation's waste is disposed of in a more equitable manner—and we need to give State and local governments the tools to achieve this goal. I commend the Energy and Commerce Committee members, Chairman DINGELL, Congressman MOORHEAD, Congressman SHARP, Congressman SWIFT, Congressman GREENWOOD, and Congressman OXLEY, on negotiating this vitally needed compromise legislation. I ask my colleagues to support it without any weakening amendments.

Mr. BOUCHER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. VISCLOSKEY].

Mr. VISCLOSKEY. Mr. Chairman, I rise today to express my support for H.R. 4779. This bill gives State and local governments some control over the amount of out-of-State waste being deposited in their landfills. In short, this legislation is a step toward States taking responsibility for and controlling their own waste and environmental futures.

The area I represent, northwest Indiana, has been a dumping ground for trash coming in from our neighboring State to the west. For example the Gary, Indiana Landfill collected 661,274 tons of out-of-State trash in 1992, ranking first out of 24 landfills in Indiana that accept imported garbage. All of the waste was from Illinois. In Porter County, the Wheeler landfill took in 390,656 tons of imported garbage, ranking it second in the State. That trash also came from Illinois. States such as Indiana cannot continue to let those outside our boundaries bury trash in our backyard. This bill recognizes that our current system is as unacceptable to the people I represent as it is unsustainable for the future.

Indiana continues to properly plan for reducing solid waste within its borders and for the development of adequate in-State capacity for solid waste disposal. The State's planning efforts will be undermined if the State is not allowed to control the amount of waste it accepts from outside Indiana. Since 1990, Indiana has tried numerous actions to protect Indiana citizens from public health and welfare problems related to uncontrolled importation of solid waste. The majority of these initiatives were ruled unconstitutional by Federal courts based on interstate commerce protection.

Court decisions all the way up to the U.S. Supreme Court have presented a need for congressional action in the area of interstate waste regulation. State governments have pleaded with us to give them some measure of control over their own destinies and to make it possible for them to effectively plan for their future waste disposal needs. H.R. 4779 provides them with this control.

I urge my colleagues to vote in favor of this important legislation and give State governments more control over the flow of waste into their States. It is a good first step.

Mr. OXLEY. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to my good friend, the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. GILLMOR].

Mr. GILLMOR. Mr. Chairman, Archaeologist William Rathje writes that "man faced his garbage crisis when he became a sedentary animal—when, rather than move himself, he chose to move his garbage."

According to a recent poll, waste disposal is seen among local officials as an extremely serious or very serious local problem more often than any other issue except improving education.

Yet to a large extent, State and local governments—especially in the Midwest—find their hands tied when trying to address the waste problem. This is because, despite all of the planning, management and foresight they can exercise as to their own waste, they are unable to limit out-of-State waste. Failures of the Federal Government under the interstate commerce clause to give States authority forces them to accept it.

The 10th amendment says that powers not delegated to the United States "are reserved to the States." I have always favored an approach that gives control over waste disposal to the States. After all, we are talking today about interstate waste shipments, and out-of-State waste. H.R. 4779 is a political compromise and is a blend of two different bills, one that gives control to the States and another that gives control to the local governments.

The bill allows local governments to create host community agreement with waste companies to site new landfills. Those host community agreements are impervious to State authority granted elsewhere in the bill, including the power of a State to phase down the amount of out-of-State waste. This is a true compromise. There is no outright ban on out-of-State waste, and there is no authority for the States to impose such a ban. The bill encourages each State to be responsible for its own waste.

I will be interested to see if anyone characterizes this bill as a "nimby" bill—a "not in my backyard" bill. This is really a "mimby-yebebe" bill—a "mine in my backyard, yours in your backyard" bill. Again, we want States to be responsible for their own waste.

The bill does not have everything I want in it, but it is a reasonable compromise. I have come prepared to offer amendments, but I think we have struck some agreements regarding amendments and will abide by them this is a pro-environment, and pro-responsibilities bill.

I would like to thank my colleagues, PHIL SHARP, AL SWIFT, RICK BOUCHER, MIKE OXLEY, JIM GREENWOOD, and Chairman JOHN DINGELL for their hard work on this bill. We can be very proud that we are standing here on the floor debating this bill today.

Mr. BOUCHER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. SCHUMER].

Mr. SCHUMER. I thank the gentleman for yielding this time to me.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to this bill. I must say that I fully agree with the stated intention of the legislation—providing local communities with a say on whether or not they want to take out-of-State trash. Local communities should have the right to decide whether or not they want to accept out-of-State trash.

But that's not what this bill is all about. No, this bill is more environmental politics than environmental policy. It allows a few State Governors to make political statements at the expense of a few other States like New York and New Jersey. Unfortunately, the consequences of those political decisions are going to wreak havoc in my State of New York and I cannot support any legislation with so pernicious a result.

Provisions in the bill will allow State Governors to override local decisions to accept out-of-State waste, even when the local communities have determined that it is in their best economic interest to accept it. It allows State governments to say "we'll take your trash, Florida and Michigan—but not your trash, New York and Illinois." It allows States to deem some facilities unfit to take out-of-State trash when the same facility can take the same kind of trash from in-State sources. The bill is just not fair.

This legislation is also an unnecessary infringement on private enterprise. Remember, many local communities across the country are willing to take out-of-State trash for one simple reason: It means jobs. The restructuring of our economy has forced many towns and counties to consider alternatives that yesterday seemed unnecessary but today mean survival, including competing for prison construction sites and waste disposal sites.

Within 3 years, the city of New York is going to have to find a home for its commercial waste because provisions in the bill before us will probably close off most of the current disposal options. For the record, Mr. Chairman, New York City already handles all of its residential waste locally—no small feat for a city of 7 million people with few good disposal options. But it has done that through tough recycling programs and a commitment to reduce local waste.

The program is not that New York has to find a local home for its trash—the problem is the incredibly short amount of time in which it has to do it under this legislation. Three years is what the bill gives us. Creating local waste disposal options will take at least twice that long. Siting landfills, obtaining permits, constructing incinerators—all that takes time.

The result of this bill will mean chaos in the interstate markets for garbage disposal. It will mean New Yorkers pay higher trash bills and it will mean communities that see waste disposal as a viable means of economic survival may have to look elsewhere.

I would also like to warn my colleagues that this bill could come back to haunt you. Any State which in the future may need to export trash—even on a short term basis—may find their options severely limited if this bill becomes law.

We could have had a bill that gave local communities control of their destinies and yet treated States that currently export trash with respect. It is regrettable that we do not.

I urge my colleagues to oppose this bill.

Mr. OXLEY. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. BEREUTER].

Mr. BEREUTER. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding this time to me.

Mr. Chairman, this Member will vote for H.R. 4779, the Local Government Interstate Waste Control Act, with the desire that it will be improved during conference with the other body.

This Member has long believed that Congress must make the necessary changes so that States are given the control over waste imports that they need and deserve. Although citizens and State and local governments have become increasingly concerned about the impact these waste shipments will have on future landfill capacity, they have learned that they are powerless to do anything about it. Clearly, something must be done to correct this problem and allow local governments to properly plan and control the various aspects of waste management.

Many States are seeking to regulate and control the amount of solid waste which enters their borders. However, their efforts have been frustrated by the courts which have consistently and properly ruled that under existing conditions, States, without congressional action, cannot prohibit or place restrictions on these shipments without violating the U.S. Constitution's interstate commerce clause.

The U.S. Supreme Court, though, has made it clear that State actions which are clearly authorized by Congress can overcome this legal hurdle. The Constitution specifically allows the Congress to pass legislation to regulate interstate commerce. As a result, this Member believes it is important for Congress to take action which would give States the authority to control the importation of waste.

This Member testified before the Committee on Energy and Commerce's Subcommittee on Transportation and Hazardous Materials in 1991 on this issue and earlier this year wrote to the committee to express his views on the subject.

This Member would like to express strong support for granting the Governor of each State new authorities to restrict the importation of waste. Because waste transport companies often target small, rural communities when choosing disposal sites for out-of-State waste, this Member believes it is imperative that States as well as local communities have an adequate role in addressing interstate waste problems. As the result of attractive financial incentives, communities often receive garbage due mainly to economic considerations rather than on the basis of responsible statewide and national solid waste management goals.

This Member would also like to express opposition to the grandfathering of current agreements which would allow these existing flows to continue in perpetuity. Such an approach would lock States and communities into the unacceptable situation which has brought this issue to the attention of Congress. These States and local governments must be given the opportunity to reclaim control over waste entering their States.

This Member is pleased that this issue is finally being addressed on the floor. Although there are positive signs that recycling and other means of waste reduction are gaining wider acceptance across the country, the fact is that the problem of what to do with the waste that is placed in landfills must be addressed. This trash has to go somewhere and increasingly it is ending up in Nebraska and other Midwestern and Western States. Landfill space is rapidly becoming a precious commodity, and by continuing to allow States to export solid waste without any regulations or restrictions, we are following a policy which does nothing to encourage waste reduction or recycling. By allowing this practice to continue, the message is sent that as long as a State, locality, or private business can locate landfill space somewhere else, it can continue to generate enormous amounts of trash. It also penalizes those States which have adequately prepared for future solid waste disposal.

While some States may find it in their best interests to continue mutually beneficial solid waste disposal arrangements with other States, these important decisions should be made by the States when their communities and rural areas are affected. States are in the best position to plan and control the various aspects of waste management.

Mr. Chairman, this Member supports moving this issue forward with the hope that the legislation will be improved during the conference.

Mr. OXLEY. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from New York [Ms. MOLINARI].

Ms. MOLINARI. I thank the gentleman for yielding this time to me.

Mr. Chairman, I rise today to voice my strong opposition to this bill. But first, I would like to commend my colleagues, the gentlemen from New York, Mr. MANTON, Mr. PAXON, Mr. RANGEL, Mr. SCHUMER, and Mr. TOWNS, who have dedicated their time and effort to reach a compromise on this difficult issue. In my opinion, this debate centers around public perception and politics and is devoid of good, sensible public policy.

As the representative of the world's largest landfill, let me say that this legislation will be devastating to my district and the entire city and State of New York. Fresh Kills landfill alone handles all of New York City's residential waste and is nearing capacity. Environmental concerns are being cast aside for the sake of a political statement. And this is not the case only in New York. The details of this bill will create chaos in interstate markets for garbage disposal and that will ultimately negatively impact each and every State in the union.

While attempting to address the needs of importing States, this legislation succeeds at tying the hands of those that export. This legislation goes so far as to abrogate contracts by allowing local governments to prevent execution of renewal options even if they are called for in the terms of the contract. Now communities who have negotiated in good faith will be forced to look elsewhere and find alternative disposal arrangements. Ironically, this bill makes this practice extremely difficult.

Under the terms of the authority in this legislation, a Governor could order a facility to begin reducing the amount of imports it takes from one state even when it takes the same amount or increases the amount it takes from other States. In addition, this legislation does not include a system for verifying whether a State's 1993 import level was sufficient for it to qualify for the ratchet.

I urge my colleagues to consider the precedent that H.R. 4779 will set. Rest assured, this bill appears to be a direct threat to New York and New Jersey, but your State and district may be next. Any State which in the future may wish to export waste—even on a short-term basis—may be precluded from doing so if this misguided bill becomes law.

Mr. SWIFT. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 1 minute.

Mr. Chairman, I just feel that it is necessary to lay out again—in the wake of some of the good people who oppose the legislation, simply point out—this is not a winner-take-all bill. This is not the bill that those who wanted to prevent any importation into their State would in their ideal world have asked for. It is not the bill, in fact, that has been put forward for several years both in this body and in the other body. This is a compromise, and, as we listen to those who raise legitimate concerns from their regional perspective with this bill, I think it is just important to keep in mind that this is not a bill that seeks to stiff any interest, but rather this is a bill that tries to work out a difficult compromise on the public policy issues between the exporting States and importing States.

Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. COOPER].

Mr. COOPER. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman from Washington [Mr. SWIFT] for yielding this time to me.

Mr. Chairman, my State of Tennessee is a beautiful, largely rural State that happens to be geographically central to two-thirds of the population of our country. We are within a 1-day's truck drive of two-thirds of the population of the United States. That has given our State a tremendous advantage in terms of recruiting industry and recruiting jobs, but it has also made us a tempting target for out-of-State waste haulers. It is well known now that the Supreme Court has taken away our traditional right as a State, as communities, and as the people of Tennessee, to say no to out-of-State garbage. It is high time that we pass this bill, H.R. 4779, to make sure that we restore those traditional rights of our State, of our communities and of our people to say, "Don't dump on Tennessee."

Mr. Chairman, Tennesseans are responsible people. They know we have to take care of our own garbage. But they also know that we have no obligation to take care of everyone else's garbage. This bill is a fair compromise to make sure that we restore the right to say no to our own people.

I thank the gentleman from Washington [Mr. SWIFT] for his hard work in crafting this bill. I look forward to the passage of this bill.

Mr. OXLEY. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. BUYER].

Mr. BUYER. Mr. Chairman, I rise in strong support of H.R. 4779, the Local Government Interstate Waste Control Act. The State of Indiana is currently forced to accept increasing amounts of municipal waste from different regions of the country. In response to these increased amounts of imported waste, Indiana landfills are expanding. For example, last year in Buffalo, IN, the Liberty landfill increased by approximately 100 acres in response to the growing levels of trash coming across Indiana borders. In 1991 Indiana landfills contained approximately 1.5 million tons of out-of-State waste, while in 1992 this figure rose to approximately 1.8 million tons. The total amount of waste generated outside of Indiana and hauled into landfills during these years accounted for approximately 1/3 of all landfill waste.

Figures provided by the Indiana Department of Environmental Management show that in 1980 Indiana had 150 small landfill sites, by 1993 the total number had dropped markedly to 54. Indiana's landfill capacity is not infinite.

Hoosiers recognize the need to address landfill capacity and solid waste management. The Indiana General Assembly passed legislation to create task forces designed to investigate ways to reduce waste materials flowing into Indiana landfills. This legislation also formed solid waste management districts across the State in an effort to attempt to control solid waste disposal. This responsible approach to waste management includes specific State waste reduction goals and other targeted efforts which continue at the State and local level today.

Mr. Chairman, I do not wish to see the meritorious actions taken by concerned Hoosiers negated as we are forced to sit and watch waste haulers cross Indiana borders and dump tons of trash in our landfills.

I support the approach to waste management agreements as included in this legislation. Governors and local governments should have the right to greater discretion over the amount of solid waste dumped in landfills. Local communities in Indiana's Fifth District are taking a responsible approach to an overall reduction of waste in landfills. White County Recycling Center in Reynolds, IN has seen an increase in their recycling business due to community involvement and education programs. I believe other States should do the same.

H.R. 4779 is a necessary measure to stem the exponential growth of waste being imported into the State of Indiana, while providing the States with greater jurisdiction over landfill deposits. I, therefore, urge my colleagues to grant Governors and local communities greater jurisdiction over municipal waste within State boundaries by supporting H.R. 4779.

Mr. OXLEY. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. UPTON] who has been a real leader in our committee on this very important issue.

Mr. UPTON. Mr. Chairman, as one of the original two co-authors of this bill, I obviously favor its immediate passage.

This is critically important legislation to thousands of American communities, especially small towns and rural areas. This is not a wholesale assault on the Constitution's Commerce Clause and it is not an attempt to make America's cities drown in their own wastes.

It is a prudent, measured proposal to give American States and communities the limited right to set terms and conditions on the inflow of waste from other States.

You will hear some unique phrases on this floor during the debate on H.R. 4779. You will hear about host community agreements, ratchets and caps, and about alternative definitions of municipal solid waste. This is lawmaking and definitions are half the battle in any legislative exercise, but the key thing in this case is the overall intent of the legislation.

When the Supreme Court struck down Michigan's program for regulating out of State waste in 1992, it left people and affected local governments in lightly populated areas, like the district I represent, with the feeling that they had no role in a decisionmaking process with enormous tangible effects on their homes, neighborhoods, and communities. Who wants to watch giant trucks taking waste through his or her town, especially when the waste comes from communities where they have seemingly lacked the political will to solve their own waste problems?

As soon as legislation to modify the Court's decision was discussed, two camps formed. One camp insisted that the Court's decision was consistent with the venerable Commerce Clause and termed efforts to alter it as tinkering with the Constitution. The other camp could have supported the erection of myriad Berlin Walls at State boundaries, blocking the flow of municipal solid waste among the states.

Months and months of negotiations ensued involving all interested parties and this bill, along with the chairman's amendment, is the result. It is a fair, well-crafted, and balanced bill that avoids the extremes at both ends.

Mr. Chairman, we have made great progress in dealing with solid waste in this country. Last year's implementation of the subtitle D landfill regulations means that waste in the future will be disposed of in well-designed, responsibly managed landfills with adequate lining, cover and systems for controlling leachate and methane gas. Source reduction and recycling are restraining the volume of waste.

These are important steps forward, but they will ultimately mean little if some communities simply dump their waste willy-nilly in someone else's backyard. Out of sight, out of mind.

This legislation encourages all American communities to deal responsibly with the waste they generate.

It will not close the door to interstate shipments. Modern landfills can cost $750,000 per acre and few lightly populated areas can afford such facilities without revenues from out-of-state waste. Many will want to attract out-of-state waste.

This legislation merely strengthens the hand of affected local governments in dealing with out-of-state interests. It gives them back a measure of control over their destinies, a measure of control they lost when the Supreme Court handed down its 1992 decision, and I urge its immediate passage.

Mr. Chairman, I would like to extend my deep thanks to the staff on the Committee who gave their talent and time to help write a good bill. They are:

Roger Goodman, Keith Cole, Dick Frandsen, Judy Borger, Jim Matthews, Troy Timmons, and Jennifer Hamann.

Mr. OXLEY. Mr. Chairman, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. SWIFT. Mr. Chairman, I have just one more speaker.

Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. BOUCHER], the author of the legislation.

□ 1250

Mr. BOUCHER. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Washington [Mr. SWIFT] for yielding this time to me, and also commend him for the excellent leadership he has provided in bringing this very thoughtful measure to the floor today.

Each year 15 million tons of municipal solid waste are transported across State borders for disposal. In all too many instances, that garbage is dumped in privately owned landfills sited over the opposition of local residents and over the opposition of the local government of the host community.

Under a series of Supreme Court decisions, neither States nor their localities may erect barriers to the flow of out-of-State waste into private landfills unless Congress specifically authorizes those barriers.

In response to a course of complaints from citizens, from local governments, and from State officials of the importing States, H.R. 4779, before the committee today, proposes a thoughtful set of rules under which some limitations can be imposed on the flow of garbage from out-of-State.

The premise of the bill is that the local government of the host community should have the power under Federal law to approve or disapprove of the importation of waste into privately owned local landfills. The measure assures that in the future out-of-State waste may not be deposited in those landfills unless the local government of the community in which the landfill is located has given its consent to that importation through the execution of a host community agreement.

Existing investment in private landfills will be protected, as will the ability of exporting communities to utilize out-of-State facilities for the duration of contracts which they have entered into governing the flow of waste, the collection of waste, and the removal of it from their communities.

The legislation is the product of more than 3 years of work by a large number of Members and their staffs, the committee staff, and the interested external community, including the National Association of Counties, a number of individual States and local governments, and representatives of industry. The measure carefully balances the often competing needs of these affected parties.

Mr. Chairman, I particularly again want to commend the outstanding chairman of our subcommittee, the gentleman from Washington [Mr. SWIFT], for the superb work he has done on a host of measures, and particularly on this legislation. The gentleman exhibited great patience as we resolved the many initial differences that were inherent in this debate.

I also want to thank for their many contributions, the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. UPTON], my principal co-sponsor from whom the committee just heard, and also the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. BONIOR], both of whom have greatly aided our effort to bring the measure to the floor today.

The gentleman from Ohio [Mr. OXLEY], the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. DINGELL], the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. SHARP], the gentleman from Oregon [Mr. WYDEN], the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GREENWOOD], the gentleman from New York [Mr. MANTON], and a number of others, have made significant contributions to the measure as well.

The bill is a major step towards resolution of a particularly troublesome practice. It will assure that in the future waste that is shipped across State lines only goes where it is wanted. No longer will it be forced on unwilling communities. It is a thoughtful and balanced measure, and I am pleased, Mr. Chairman, to urge that it be approved.

Mr. BONILLA. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of this legislation which respects and enforces the rights of local government. H.R. 4779, The State and Local Government Interstate Waste Control Act of 1994 gives local communities the authority to regulate the amount of imported out-of-State waste. This bill will require landfill operators to acquire authorization from local authorities to import out-of-State municipal waste. There are too many communities in our country who have absolutely no control over waste from other States. This is not right.

In my own district we have seen the impact of out-of-State waste on small communities. Today, New York City is dumping its sludge on the people of Sierra Blanca, TX. Recent Federal court decisions have left local governments powerless to regulate the importation of out-of-State municipal waste. States should attempt to manage their own waste problems and local communities should at least have some say in interstate waste contracts. This legislation helps bring accountability and responsibility to waste disposal. States like New York must learn to solve their own waste problems and stop exporting trash. This bill gives communities the power to exercise their democratic rights to say "yes" or "no" to out-of-State waste. I urge my colleagues to vote for this legislation.

Ms. LONG. Mr. Chairman, I thank the distinguished gentleman, Mr. SWIFT, for putting together this thoughtful piece of legislation, and Mr. BOUCHER, the sponsor of H.R. 4779. I also wish to acknowledge Mr. OXLEY for his thoughtful contributions to this bill. In addition, I commend Chairman DINGELL, whose leadership proved to be the linchpin in ensuring the consideration of this bill on the floor.

Finally, I express my appreciation for the work of Mr. SHARP, a Member whose diligence, aptitude, and resilience have enabled him to thoughtfully reshape many of our Nation's energy policies during his years of service in the House. He will be missed by those of this Chamber, but especially by fellow Hoosiers.

Mr. Chairman, on balance, I believe H.R. 4779, as reported, to be a fair piece of legislation that will be critical to alleviating the pressures that some States are experiencing with regard to imports of solid waste. Without this legislation, States like my home State of Indiana, which work hard to effectively manage their solid waste, will continue to be undermined. States like Indiana have been hard at work to responsibly manage their solid waste, and to reduce landfilled waste. However, the current legal framework paradoxically leaves Indiana helpless against generators of waste from other States who continue to fill up their landfill resources.

This bill give the States the option of saying "no" to waste sent from out of State for disposal. For instance, if a State or local community finds that a proposed new waste disposal facility, or expansion of an existing facility, does not fit within the affected community's disposal capacity projections, then that community or State can deny the facility proposal.

Mr. Chairman, as you may know, many local communities have established solid waste management districts, which are charged with assessing their locality's future solid waste capacity needs. These assessments are then forwarded to State authorities for inclusion in a comprehensive solid waste management plan. Indiana has such a plan. However, due to a number of court decisions over the years, these management plans have been useless when States attempt to use them to effectively manage their solid waste, or reduce landfilled waste.

This legislation will empower States and localities to use these solid waste management plans as a means of refusing out-of-State waste if this waste proves to be inconsistent with the local needs assessment.

Indiana recently enacted a law which has provisions similar to those contained in H.R. 4779. This law is designed to provide consistency between the needs of local communities and the needs of the State in general, and to be integrated with States' solid waste management district's plans for future disposal capacity. I believe H.R. 4779 will provide the same coherence, and I urge my colleagues to support its passage.

Mr. MCDADE. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of the Interstate Waste Control Act, a bill which will give Pennsylvania and other States the authority to take back control of their borders and regulate the flow of interstate waste. The enactment of this bill will bring some measure of rationality and balance to the waste management business. I believe it effectively balances the rights of communities, along with their health and welfare concerns, with the needs of commerce.

For the last 8 years, I have been working on the passage of interstate waste legislation, an issue which is of great concern to me and my constituents. As an original sponsor of the Pennsylvania delegation's Interstate Waste Control Act, it gives me great pleasure to stand in support of this bill which contains many provisions drafted into my original bill. As a member of the working group which crafted this critical legislation, I am pleased to report that this bill is the fruit of a bipartisan agreement which has been diligently designed and represents over 2 years of hard but fair negotiations.

I want to commend the Pennsylvania delegation and the Governor of our great Commonwealth for working together on this critical issue. Passage of this vital legislation will empower the Governors to freeze all out-of-State imports at 1993 levels and ratchet down import levels by 50 percent over 5 years. Currently, Pennsylvania receives over 4 million tons of imported waste a year making it the No. 1 importing State in the Nation. The dumping of this waste brings health hazards and heavy truck traffic to the host communities accompanied with a burdensome reduction in the quality of life. Hopefully, full congressional approval of this measure will help to reverse this trend by helping neighboring States to become responsible for the disposal of their own waste within their borders.

As out-of-State imports increase over time, our local capacity to handle in-State waste is being consumed. Clearly, it is every State's prerogative to save this disposal capacity for its own citizens. In spite of many Governors' actions to restrain the importation of waste, the courts have overruled their actions as a unilateral violation of the Constitution's interstate commerce clause. The courts have ruled that only through congressional action can the Governors' limits on imported waste be validated. Consequently, it is appropriate that we exercise our constitutionally granted authority to help bring some measure of rationality to the waste management business. I am pleased to inform my colleagues that no State limitation in this bill is deemed to violate the interstate commerce clause.

Mr. Speaker, I therefore urge my colleagues to support passage of the Interstate Waste Control Act, a bipartisan and equitable solution to the Nation's interstate waste crisis.

Mr. TOWNS. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the bill H.R. 4779. Essentially, it is aimed directly at my State, New York, because we are the major waste exporting State. Yet almost every State exports some waste, and—like New York—also import wastes from other States. That is the nature of waste flow today, and the geographic and economic forces that govern it. Almost every major metropolitan area will be hurt by this bill.

The irony of this bill is that it affords no additional environmental protection to the communities who do not want waste. They get consideration only if a facility wants to bring in out-of-State waste, from in-State wastes they get no protection. Indeed, the bill makes clear that permit violations, which represent some environmental danger, jeopardize the out-of-State flow, but not the in-State flow. Garbage is garbage, and our Federal laws should be about protecting health and the environment, not imposing burdens to ignite political battles.

I am happy to see the principle of local control and local consent in this bill. It makes a fine start for when Congress takes up reauthorization of our solid waste disposal statute. I am concerned to see it here subordinated to the whims of State enforcement, where protection may vary from community to community, and the opening this leaves for discrimination.

Geography has made New York one of the key players in the development of interstate commerce. We were involved in one of the early landmark Supreme Court cases. Today, the city hosts many jobs which are held by residents of neighboring States. The geography of the city has always meant that the city and State boundaries do not represent its logical limits. New York may be the largest city facing this problem, but geography will also make this bill detrimental to Chicago, Philadelphia, Seattle, and many other cities.

I do not want out wastes to travel where they are not wanted by local communities, nor to facilities that are not environmentally safe. But what I observe here is an effort to make some garbage seem more threatening than others, without enhancing the safety of anyone's environment.

I urge my colleagues to oppose this bill.

Mr. SWIFT. Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

The CHAIRMAN. All time for general debate has expired.

Pursuant to the rule, the committee amendment in the nature of a substitute now printed in the bill shall be considered under the 5-minute rule by sections and each section shall be considered as read.

The bill shall be considered for amendment under the 5-minute rule for a period not to exceed 4 hours, excluding time consumed by recorded votes and proceedings incidental thereto.

Any amendment offered by the chairman of the Committee on Energy and Commerce or his designee may amend portions of the bill not yet read for amendment.

The Clerk will designate section 1.

The text of section 1 is as follows:

H.R. 4779

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "State and Local Government Interstate Waste Control Act of 1994".

Mr. MANTON. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the last word.

Mr. Chairman, I had intended to offer an amendment in the nature of a substitute on behalf of myself and the gentlewoman from New York [Ms. MOLINARI].

I have decided, after discussions with the proponents of the bill, not to offer our amendment. I will, however, at the appropriate time offer a minor en bloc amendment, which I believe has been agreed to by all parties.

However, I want to take this opportunity to outline for my colleagues some of the problems with H.R. 4779 as reported and discuss how my substitute would have addressed these shortcomings.

First, and foremost, I support the concept that local communities should have the final say in whether or not they accept out-of-State municipal solid waste for disposal. But, I believe the bill will preempt local decision making in certain regards and grants too much authority to the States.

I believe the bill also addresses the problems associated with the interstate transportation of waste in a manner which will create chaos in the markets for the disposal of municipal solid waste and will ultimately work to the detriment of every State in the Nation.

This is particularly true for the relatively short "grandfather" of spot market waste. The 3 years envisioned by the bill simply does not provide enough time for exporting communities to identify and develop alternative disposal options. While it is true that some States may extend this period out to 6 years through the exercise of a "ratchet," the percentage reductions in the amount of waste allowed to be exported are too great and established too quickly.

I continue to have substantial concerns over the so-called needs provision of the bill. It is my interpretation of the legislation that a local government could change its mind after it had executed a valid, host community agreement, by asking their Governor to deny a permit for a facility expansion. Similarly, we believe a Governor would be able to deny a facility expansion, not based on environmental concerns, but on the premise that the additional space was not needed under the State's solid waste management plan.

In both cases, we could see the invalidation of host community agreements or legally binding contracts.

Another concern, which I understand will not be dealt with today, is the issue of construction and demolition debris. This material is currently included in the definition of municipal solid waste under the bill. This provision will make it very difficult for the construction industry to identify disposal capacity, and likely interfering with the economic recovery this is now experiencing.

Mr. Chairman, the Manton-Molinari substitute amendment would have addressed these and other concerns we have with the bill. Basically, the substitute proposed to:

Ensure that contracts would be absolutely protected under the terms of the bill.

Provide a longer grace period or grandfather for spot market waste and modify the proposed percentage reductions or ratchets.

Establish the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency as the repository and verifier of the information establishing beleaguered State status as defined in the legislation.

Modify the provisions for denying a permit to a facility which sought to accept out-of-State municipal solid waste.

Delete construction and demolition debris from the definition of municipal solid waste.

Eliminate the double standard inherent in the bill that would allow a non-complying facility to ban the receipt of out-of-State waste while it remains open to the receipt of in-State waste.

Limit the application of surcharge fees on the receipt of out-of-State municipal solid waste.

Mr. Chairman, in the spirit of comity and the belief that all parties are acting in good faith, I have decided not to offer my substitute. I believe these very real concerns will continue to be discussed.

The CHAIRMAN. Are there amendments to section 1?

If not, the Clerk will designate section 2.

The text of section 2 is as follows:

"(i) Information establishing that, before the date of the enactment of this section, the owner or operator of the landfill or incinerator has entered into a host community agreement or received a State permit, specifically authorizing the owner or operator to accept, at the landfill or incinerator, out-of-State municipal solid waste. This clause shall be effective only if the owner or operator complies with all of the terms and conditions of the host community agreement or permit and, in the case of a permit, notifies the affected local government of the permit, as soon as practicable but not later than 90 days after the date of enactment of this section.

"(ii) Information establishing that during 1993, the landfill or incinerator received shipments of out-of-State municipal solid waste. Such information shall include information about the date of shipment, place of origin of the waste, and the type of waste.

"(B) In the case of a landfill or incinerator in operation on the date of the enactment of this section, the landfill or incinerator must be in compliance as of such date with applicable Federal and State environmental laws (including regulations), including, in the case of landfills, applicable laws and regulations relating to design and location standards, leachate collection, ground water monitoring, and financial assurance for closure and post-closure care and corrective action.

"(2) AMOUNT RECEIVED UNDER PARAGRAPH (1)(A)(ii).—

"(A) STATES NOT EXERCISING RATCHET AUTHORITY UNDER (c)(5).—

"(i) FACILITIES COVERED.—This subparagraph shall cover only landfills and incinerators in States which do not establish a limit on out-of-State municipal solid waste under subsection (c)(5).

"(ii) WASTE UNDER CONTRACT.—For any landfill or incinerator covered by this subparagraph and authorized to receive out-of-State municipal solid waste pursuant to paragraph (1)(A)(ii), if out-of-State municipal solid waste was received at such landfill or incinerator during 1993 under a contract, paragraph (1)(A)(ii) shall apply to the amount of out-of-State municipal solid waste specified in the contract for the longer of the following periods:

"(I) The life of the contract.

For purposes of subclause (I), the term 'life of the contract' shall not include any renewal, novation, or other extension thereof (as determined under State law).

"(iii) SPOT WASTE.—For a landfill or incinerator covered by this subparagraph and authorized to receive out-of-State municipal solid waste pursuant to paragraph (1)(A)(ii), if out-of-State municipal solid waste was received at such landfill or incinerator during 1993 in the absence of a contract, paragraph (1)(A)(ii) shall apply to the receipt of out-of-State municipal solid waste for a period ending 3 years after the enactment of this section.

"(iv) CONTRACT AND SPOT WASTE.—For any landfill or incinerator covered by this subparagraph and authorized to receive out-of-State municipal solid waste pursuant to paragraph (1)(A)(ii), if out-of-State municipal solid waste was received at such landfill or incinerator during 1993 both under a contract and otherwise, clause (ii) shall apply with respect to the waste received under the contract and clause (iii) shall apply to the other municipal solid waste received at the landfill or incinerator.

"(B) STATES EXERCISING RATCHET AUTHORITY UNDER (c)(5).—

"(i) FACILITIES COVERED.—This subparagraph shall cover only landfills and incinerators in States which establish a limit on out-of-State municipal solid waste under subsection (c)(5).

"(ii) WASTE UNDER CONTRACT.—For any landfill or incinerator covered by this subparagraph and authorized to receive out-of-State municipal solid waste pursuant to paragraph (1)(A)(ii), if out-of-State municipal solid waste was received at such landfill or incinerator during 1993 under a contract, paragraph (1)(A)(ii) shall apply to the amount of out-of-State municipal solid waste specified in the contract for the longer of the following periods:

"(I) The life of the contract.

"(II) The period ending January 1, 2000.

For purposes of subclause (I), the term 'life of the contract' shall not include any renewal, novation, or other extension thereof (as determined under State law).

"(iii) SPOT WASTE.—For a landfill or incinerator covered by this subparagraph and authorized to receive out-of-State municipal solid waste pursuant to paragraph (1)(A)(ii), if out-of-State municipal solid waste was received at such landfill or incinerator during 1993 in the absence of a contract, paragraph (1)(A)(ii) shall apply to the receipt of out-of-State municipal solid waste for a period ending January 1, 2000.

"(iv) CONTRACT AND SPOT WASTE.—For any landfill or incinerator covered by this subparagraph and authorized to receive out-of-State municipal solid waste pursuant to paragraph (1)(A)(ii), if out-of-State municipal solid waste was received at such landfill or incinerator during 1993 both under a contract and otherwise, clause (ii) shall apply with respect to the waste received under the contract and clause (iii) shall apply to the other municipal solid waste received at the landfill or incinerator.

"(3) AVAILABILITY OF DOCUMENTATION.—The owner or operator of a landfill or incinerator which is exempt under paragraph (1) of this subsection from the requirements of subsection (a) shall provide to the State and affected local government, and make available for inspection by the public in the affected local community, a copy of the host community agreement or other documentation required under paragraph (1). The owner or operator may omit any proprietary information contained in the contracts, but shall ensure that at least the following information is apparent: the volume of out-of-State municipal solid waste to be received, the source of the waste, and the duration of the contract.

"(4) DENIED OR REVOKED PERMITS.—A landfill or incinerator may not receive for disposal or incineration out-of-State municipal solid waste in the absence of a host community agreement if the operating permit or license for the landfill or incinerator (or renewal thereof) was denied or revoked by the appropriate State agency before the date of enactment of this section unless such permit or license (or renewal) has been reinstated as of such date of enactment.

"(5) WASTE WITHIN BI-STATE METROPOLITAN STATISTICAL AREAS.—The owner or operator of a landfill or incinerator in a State may receive out-of-State municipal solid waste without obtaining authorization under subsection (a) from the affected local government if the out-of-State waste is generated within, and the landfill or incinerator is located within, the same bi-State level A metropolitan statistical area (as defined by the Office of Management and Budget and as listed by the Office of Management and Budget as of the date of enactment of this section) which contains two contiguous major cities each of which is in a different State.

"(c) AUTHORITY OF STATE TO RESTRICT OUT-OF-STATE MUNICIPAL SOLID WASTE.—

"(1) LIMITATIONS ON AMOUNT OF WASTE RECEIVED.—

"(A) LIMIT FOR ALL FACILITIES IN THE STATE.—A State may limit the amount of out-of-State municipal solid waste received annually for disposal at each landfill or incinerator in the State to the limitation amount described in paragraph (2), except as provided in this subsection. No such limit may conflict—

"(i) with provisions of a permit specifically authorizing the owner or operator to accept, at the facility, out-of-State municipal solid waste, or

"(ii) with a host community agreement entered into between the owner or operator of any such landfill or incinerator and the affected local government.

"(B) CONFLICT.—A limit referred to in subparagraph (A) shall be treated as conflicting with a permit or host community agreement if—

"(i) the permit or host community agreement establishes a higher limit, or

"(ii) the permit or host community agreement does not establish any limit, on the amount of out-of-State municipal solid waste which may be received annually at the facility.

"(C) LIMIT FOR PARTICULAR FACILITIES.—At the request of an affected local government that has not executed a host community agreement, the State may limit the amount of out-of-State municipal solid waste received annually for disposal at the landfill or incinerator concerned to the limitation amount described in paragraph (2). No such limit may conflict with provisions of a permit specifically authorizing the owner or operator to accept, at the facility, out-of-State municipal solid waste.

"(D) EFFECT ON OTHER LAWS.—Nothing in this subsection shall be interpreted or construed to have any effect on any State law relating to contracts.

"(2) LIMITATION AMOUNT.—For any landfill or incinerator that commenced receiving documented out-of-State municipal solid waste before the date of enactment of this section, the limitation amount referred to in paragraph (1) for any year shall be equal to the amount of out-of-State municipal solid waste received for disposal at the landfill or incinerator concerned during calendar year 1993. The documentation referred to in this subparagraph shall be such as would result in criminal penalties in case of false or misleading information. Such documentation shall include the amount of waste received, place of origin, including the identity of the generator, date of shipment, and type of waste.

"(3) OTHER LIMITATION AMOUNT.—(A) Except as provided in subparagraph (B), the limitation amount referred to in paragraph (1) shall be zero for a landfill or incinerator authorized to receive out-of-State municipal solid waste solely by reason of receipt in calendar year 1993 of municipal solid waste that was not received under contract or otherwise authorized under this section.

"(B) The limitation amount of zero referred to in subparagraph (A) shall not be applicable to receipt of any out-of-State municipal solid waste by the landfill or incinerator if the owner or operator, on the date of enactment of this section, owned the land on which the facility that received such waste is located.

"(4) NO DISCRIMINATION.—Except as provided in paragraph (5), in establishing a limitation under this subsection, a State shall act in a consistent manner that does not discriminate against any shipments of out-of-State municipal solid waste on the basis of State of origin.

"(5) ADDITIONAL LIMIT FOR MUNICIPAL WASTE.—(A) Any State (hereinafter in this paragraph referred to as an 'importing State') that imported more than 750,000 tons of out-of-State municipal solid waste in 1993 may establish a limit under this paragraph on the amount of out-of-State municipal solid waste received pursuant to the authority of subsection (b)(1)(A)(ii) for disposal at landfills and incinerators in the importing State. A limit under this paragraph shall be in addition to, or in lieu of, any other limit imposed under this subsection. A limit under this paragraph may be imposed only if each of the following requirements are met:

"(i) The limit shall not conflict (within the meaning of paragraph (1)(B)) with any permit or host community agreement authorizing the receipt of out-of-State municipal solid waste.

"(ii) The importing State shall notify the Governor of the exporting State or States of the proposed limit at least 12 months before imposition of the limit.

"(iii) The importing State shall notify the Governor of the exporting State or States of the proposed limit at least 90 days before enforcement of the limit.

"(iv) The percentage reduction in the amount of out-of-State municipal solid waste which is received at each facility in the importing State at which a limit may be established under this paragraph shall be uniform for all such facilities.

"(B) The limit established under this paragraph shall be a percentage of the amount of out-of-State municipal solid waste generated in the exporting State during calendar year 1993 and received at facilities in the importing State in which a limit is established under this paragraph. For any calendar year after 1994, the percentage shall be as specified in the following table:

1997 .....	75
1998 .....	65
after 1999 .....	50.

"(d) NEEDS DETERMINATION.—Any comprehensive solid waste management plan approved under Federal or State law and any implementation of such plan through the State permitting process may take into account local and regional needs for solid waste disposal capacity. An affected local government may make a determination that there is no local or regional need for a new landfill or incinerator or major modification to an existing facility in the area under the jurisdiction of the affected local government. Such determination shall be based on a finding that the proposed facility does not have a host community agreement or is inconsistent with the capacity needs established in the comprehensive solid waste management plan adopted by the affected local government pursuant to State law. No comprehensive solid waste management plan may expressly prohibit the importation of municipal solid waste from out of State.

"(e) IMPLEMENTATION AND ENFORCEMENT.—Any State may adopt such laws and regulations, not inconsistent with this section, as are necessary to implement and enforce this section, including provisions for penalties.

"(f) EFFECT ON INTERSTATE COMMERCE.—No State limitation established as provided in subsection (c), no State planning and permitting process referred to in subsection (d), and no State law or regulation referred to in subsection (e) shall be considered to impose an undue burden on interstate commerce or to otherwise impair, restrain, or discriminate against interstate commerce.

"(g) ANNUAL STATE REPORT.—Each year the owner or operator of each landfill or incinerator receiving out-of-State municipal solid waste shall submit to the Governor of the State in which the landfill or incinerator is located information specifying the amount of out-of-State municipal solid waste received for disposal during the preceding year. Each year each such State shall publish and make available to the public, a report containing information on the amount of out-of-State municipal solid waste received for disposal in the State during the preceding year.

"(h) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this section:

"(1) AFFECTED LOCAL GOVERNMENT.—(A) For any landfill or incinerator, the term 'affected local government' shall mean—

"(i) the public body authorized by State law to plan for the management of municipal solid waste, a majority of the members of which are elected officials, for the area in which the landfill or incinerator is located or proposed to be located, or

"(ii) if there is no such body created by State law, the elected officials of the city, town, township, borough, county, or parish exercising primary responsibility for the use of land on which the facility is located or proposed to be located, except that for purposes of host community agreements entered into before the date of enactment of this section, the term shall mean either the public body described in subparagraph (A) or the elected officials of the city, town, township, borough, county, or parish exercising primary responsibility for the use of land on which the facility is located or proposed to be located.

"(B) Two or more Governors of adjoining States may use the authority provided in section 1005(b) to enter into an agreement under which contiguous units of local government located in each of the adjoining States may act jointly as the affected local government for purposes of providing authorization under subsection (a) for municipal solid waste generated in one of such counties and received for disposal or incineration in another.

"(2) HOST COMMUNITY AGREEMENT.—The term 'host community agreement' means a written, legally binding agreement, lawfully entered into between an owner or operator of a landfill or incinerator and an affected local government that specifically authorizes the landfill or incinerator to receive out-of-State municipal solid waste.

"(3) MUNICIPAL SOLID WASTE.—The term 'municipal solid waste' means all waste materials discarded for disposal by households, including single and multifamily residences, and hotels and motels. The term also includes waste materials generated by commercial, institutional, and industrial sources, to the extent such wastes are essentially the same as waste normally generated by households or were collected and disposed of with other municipal solid waste as part of normal municipal solid waste collection services, and regardless of when generated, would be considered conditionally exempt small quantity generator waste under section 3001(d). Examples of municipal solid waste include food and yard waste, paper, clothing, appliances, consumer product packaging, disposable diapers, office supplies, cosmetics, glass and metal food containers, elementary or secondary school science laboratory waste, and household hazardous waste. Such term shall include debris resulting from construction, remodeling, repair, or demolition of structures other than debris that is not otherwise commingled with other municipal solid waste and has been determined by the generator, to be contaminated. For purposes of determining whether any such debris is contaminated, the generator shall conduct representative sampling and analysis of such debris, the results of which shall be submitted to the affected local government for record keeping purposes only, unless not required by the affected local government. Any such debris that has been determined to be contaminated shall be disposed of in a landfill that meets, at a minimum, the requirements of this subtitle. The term does not include any of the following:

"(A) Any solid waste identified or listed as a hazardous waste under section 3001.

"(B) Any solid waste, including contaminated soil and debris, resulting from—

"(i) a response action taken under section 104 or 106 of the Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation, and Liability Act (42 U.S.C. 9604 or 9606),

"(ii) a response action taken under a State law with authorities comparable to the authorities of section 104 or 106, or

"(iii) a corrective action taken under this Act.

"(C) Recyclable materials that have been separated, at the source of the waste, from waste otherwise destined for disposal or that have been managed separately from waste destined for disposal.

"(D) Materials and products returned from a dispenser or distributor to the manufacturer or an agent of the manufacturer for credit, evaluation, and possible reuse.

"(E) Any solid waste that is—

"(i) generated by an industrial facility; and

"(ii) transported for the purpose of treatment, storage, or disposal to a facility that is owned or operated by the generator of the waste, or is located on property owned by the generator of a company with which the generator is affiliated.

"(F) Any medical waste that is segregated from or not mixed with solid waste.

"(G) Sewage sludge and residuals from any sewage treatment plant, including any sewage treatment plant required to be constructed in the State of Massachusetts pursuant to any court order issued against the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority.

"(H) Combustion ash generated by resource recovery facilities or municipal incinerators, or waste from manufacturing or processing (including pollution control) operations not essentially the same as waste normally generated by households.

"(4) OUT-OF-STATE MUNICIPAL SOLID WASTE.—The term 'out-of-State municipal solid waste' means, with respect to any State, municipal solid waste generated outside of the State. The term includes municipal solid waste generated outside of the United States.

"(5) SPECIFIC AUTHORIZATION.—For purposes of this section, the term 'specifically authorizes' refers to an explicit authorization, contained in a host community agreement or permit, to import waste from outside the State. Such authorization may include a reference to a fixed radius surrounding the landfill or incinerator which includes an area outside the State or a reference to 'any place of origin', reference to specific places outside the State, or use of such phrases as 'regardless of origin' or 'outside the State'. The language for such authorization may vary as long as it clearly and affirmatively states the approval or consent of the affected local government or State for receipt of municipal solid waste from sources or locations outside the State from which the owner or operator of a landfill or incinerator proposes to import it. The authorization shall not include general references to the receipt of waste outside the jurisdiction of the affected local government.

"(i) COST RECOVERY SURCHARGE.—

"(1) AUTHORITY.—A State may impose and collect a cost recovery surcharge on the combustion or disposal in a landfill or incinerator of out-of-State municipal solid waste in such State.

"(2) LIMITATION.—During the period beginning on the date of the enactment of this section and ending on December 31, 1996, a State may not impose or collect a cost recovery surcharge from a facility on any out-of-State municipal solid waste that meets both of the following conditions:

"(A) The waste is being received at the facility under one or more contracts entered into before the date of the enactment of this section.

"(B) The amount of waste being received in a calendar year under the contract or contracts does not exceed the amount of waste received at the facility during calendar year 1993.

"(3) AMOUNT OF SURCHARGE.—The amount of the cost recovery surcharge may be no greater than the amount necessary to recover those costs determined in conformance with paragraph (5) and in no event may exceed $2 per ton of waste.

"(4) USE OF SURCHARGE COLLECTED.—All cost recovery surcharges collected by a State shall be used to fund those solid waste management programs administered by the State or its political subdivisions that incur costs for which the surcharge is collected.

"(5) CONDITIONS.—(A) Subject to subparagraphs (B) and (C), a State may impose and collect a cost recovery surcharge on the combustion or disposal within the State of out-of-State municipal solid waste if—

"(i) the State demonstrates a cost to the State arising from the combustion or disposal within the State of a volume of municipal solid waste from a source outside the State;

"(ii) the surcharge is based on those costs to the State demonstrated under subparagraph (A) that, if not paid for through the surcharge, would otherwise have to be paid or subsidized by the State; and

"(iii) the surcharge is compensatory and is not discriminatory.

"(B) In no event shall a cost recovery surcharge be imposed by a State to the extent that the cost for which recovery is sought is otherwise recovered by any other fee or tax assessed against the generation, transportation, treatment, combustion, or disposal of solid waste.

"(C) The grant of a subsidy by a State with respect to entities disposing of waste generated within the State does not constitute discrimination for purposes of subparagraph (A)(iii).

"(6) BURDEN OF PROOF.—In any proceeding in which a State invokes this subsection to justify a cost recovery surcharge on the combustion or disposal within the State of out-of-State municipal solid waste, the State shall bear the burden of establishing that the cost recovery surcharge satisfies the conditions set forth in paragraph (5)."

"(b) TABLE OF CONTENTS AMENDMENT.—The table of contents of the Solid Waste Disposal Act (42 U.S.C. prec. 6901) is amended by adding after the item relating to section 4010 the following new item:

"Sec. 4011. Interstate transportation and disposal of municipal solid waste."

The CHAIRMAN. Are there amendments to Section 2?

AMENDMENT OFFERED BY MR. MANTON

Mr. MANTON. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment on behalf of myself, the gentleman from New York [Mr. PAXON], the gentleman from New York [Mr. SCHUMER], the gentleman from New York [Mr. TOWNS], and the gentleman from New York [Ms. MOLINARI].

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. MANTON: Page 21, insert the following after the period on line 20: "No host community agreement that is entered into by the elected officials described in clause (ii) may be overturned by an act of a public body described in clause (i) if such body is created by State law after the execution of such host community agreement."

On page 17, beginning on line 10, strike "Except as provided in paragraph (5), in" and insert "In".

Mr. MANTON (during the reading). Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the amendment be considered as read and printed in the RECORD.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

Mr. MANTON. Mr. Chairman, quite simply, this amendment seeks to ensure States will not be discriminated against under the bill. The second provision of the amendment will clarify the definition of affected local government. I believe this amendment significantly improves the bill, and I believe it is acceptable to all parties.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. MANTON].

The amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. Are there other amendments to section 2?

AMENDMENT OFFERED BY MR. ZIMMER

Mr. ZIMMER. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. ZIMMER: Page 9, line 24, strike "3 years" and insert "6 years".

Page 10, line 2, strike "not include any renewal, novation, or other extension thereof (as determined under State law)." and insert "be determined under State law."

Page 11, line 25, strike "not include any renewal novation, or other extension thereof (as determined under State law)." and insert "be determined under State law."

Page 23, line 5, strike "Such term shall include debris resulting from construction" and all that follows down through "the requirements of this subtitle." in lines 18 and 19.

Mr. ZIMMER (during the reading). Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the amendment be considered as read and printed in the RECORD.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New Jersey?

There was no objection.

Mr. ZIMMER. Mr. Chairman, I have offered this amendment on behalf of myself and the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. PALLONE], because we believe that the bill as passed by the Committee on Energy and Commerce would create a solid waste crisis for New Jersey.

New Jersey is the most densely populated State in the Nation and is in a unique situation because it has been an importer of garbage though much of its history.

Until the 1970's, the State of New Jersey was a major net importer of waste, primarily from New York and from Philadelphia. And, in the case of New Jersey versus Philadelphia. The U.S. Supreme Court determined that New Jersey's efforts to ban out-of-State waste violated the commerce clause of the Constitution.

Landfill space that our State had relied on for long-term disposal capacity was filled by other States' waste. New Jersey began developing a solid waste plan in the 1970's, and we were the first State in the Nation to begin to do so. That plan calls for self-sufficiency in the year 2000, and we are on track.

New Jersey has reduced its solid waste exports by 50 percent since 1987, and we have spent hundreds of millions of dollars doing so. But we need more time. We need til the end of the decade to accomplish this.

It is important to understand this background because New Jersey is not in disagreement with the ultimate goals of the legislation. New Jersey has done more extensive planning than any other State to accomplish the goals of the bill, and it should not be punished by this legislation.

We have a number of problems with this bill. It would ban the interstate transport of waste unless the host community agrees to accept the waste shipments. This idea, called a presumptive ban, is a bad idea because it would make it extremely difficult for Governors of two or more States to work together to resolve mutual problems relating to solid waste disposal.

The bill contains a provision that protects contracted waste for 3 years or the life of the contract, whichever is longer, but the language is unduly burdensome and really punishes the State of New Jersey, because in order to minimize progress in achieving self-sufficiency, New Jersey has allowed counties to enter into only short-term contracts.

New Jersey would be penalized under this bill for doing the right thing, because it would not get the benefit of the full term of the extension.

Also the bill includes construction and demolition debris in the definition of municipal solid waste. This category is exceedingly difficult to define and track and includes everything from the remains of a demolished building or road to leftover wood, pipe, or even tree stumps. This category of debris is often mixed with other categories of waste, and it is often handled by private agreements that do not involve the local government, unlike municipal solid waste which is much more often considered to be a local government responsibility.

New Jersey has had remarkable success in recycling construction and demolition debris, reducing the need for disposal by a categorywide average of more than 50 percent.

I recognize that two States are receiving large amounts of this kind of waste from Canada. However, I do not believe that the language included in the legislation has been thought out well enough, and it would place an unnecessary burden on New Jersey to accommodate an additional waste burden before needed facilities can be developed in our State.

My amendment would correct New Jersey's problems with the contract provisions in the bill and eliminate the provision relating to construction and demolition debris. However, I do not intend to ask for a vote on this amendment. I will withdraw it, because it is my understanding that an agreement has been reached on the contract portion of the legislation. That agreement will be reflected in an amendment to be submitted by the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. PALLONE] and myself shortly.

I believe that all of New Jersey's major problems must be addressed before I can support this legislation. However, I will withdraw this amendment in favor of the amendment just described that will deal exclusively with the contracts issue.

Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to withdraw my amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New Jersey?

There was no objection.

The CHAIRMAN. Are there further amendments to section 2?

AMENDMENT OFFERED BY MR. PALLONE

Mr. PALLONE. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. PALLONE: Page 9, line 24, strike "3 years" and insert "6 years".

Mr. PALLONE. Mr. Chairman, I rise to offer this amendment with my colleague, the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. ZIMMER]. The amendment would allow facilities receiving out-of-State waste under existing contracts to continue to do so for the life of the current contract or for six years after enactment.

New Jersey's current contracts to export waste should be protected until the end of the decade, pursuant to this amendment. New Jersey now has several contracts due to expire and an inability to renew under the House approach in this bill would impair New Jersey's ability to obtain self-sufficiency.

A great deal of the solid waste which New Jersey exports for disposal is being done under disposal contracts which were entered into in good faith according to the laws and regulations in effect at the time they were entered into. Since New Jersey has been trying to encourage counties to develop the means to dispose of waste within the State, as my colleague, the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. ZIMMER], mentioned, most of our contracts are due to expire in the next 2 years. These contracts must be protected at least through the year 2000, if we are going to achieve self-sufficiency within our State.

To change the ground rules at this point in time and declare these contracts void would, in my opinion, be extremely unfair and would go against all the planning which we have done in New Jersey, which, as Members know, has tried and is really moving in the direction of self-sufficiency.

Proponents of the bill have said that they do not want communities to receive in perpetuity waste that they never agreed to accept in the first place. This amendment keeps to that concept, in my opinion, Mr. Chairman, but merely allows 3 additional years for exporters to eliminate flows.

Mr. OXLEY. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the last word.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the gentleman's amendment and wish to associate myself with his remarks. I believe this amendment will improve the bill and I urge my colleagues to support the gentleman's amendment. This amendment would extend the protections for shipments under contract from the current 3 years to 6 years. I urge my colleagues to support the amendment.

Mr. SWIFT. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. OXLEY. I yield to the gentleman from Washington.

Mr. SWIFT. Mr. Chairman, I, too, would like to say that we support the amendment on this side. We urge its adoption.

Mrs. ROUKEMA. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words, and I rise in support of the amendment.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the Zimmer-Pallone amendment to the solid waste legislation before us today. This amendment will ensure that facilities currently receiving out-of-State waste under existing contracts can continue doing so for up to 6 years after this bill's date of enactment.

Disposal Capacity in New Jersey has been overtaken by out-of-State waste. We have reduced our own solid waste disposal.

We have been consistent in our own planning with goals of this bill.

Mr. ZIMMER has correctly outlined the provisions in the bill that would penalize New Jersey for having "done the right thing."

The bipartisan amendment deserves our strong support for current contracts.

This change is vital for States like New Jersey, because the original bills' language would have protected these contracts for only 3 years, which the Commissioner of our State's Department of Environmental Protection [DEP] believes could "precipitate a solid waste crisis" if this measure were enacted as currently drafted.

Consequently, the Zimmer-Pallone amendment allows New Jersey to continue implementing its long-term plan to become self-sufficient with respect to solid waste by the year 2000.

In addition, adopting this amendment will avoid the dangerous scenario of many local governments in New Jersey not having the means to dispose of their solid waste after their existing, short-term contracts expire, while they wait for new in-State solid waste disposal facilities to come on line and statewide recycling and source reduction efforts to fully phase-in in the near term.

It's ironic that H.R. 4779, as reported by the Energy and Commerce Committee, seeks to penalize States that export solid waste. In the early 1970's,

New Jersey was one of the first States that sought to ban the importation of solid waste only to have the Supreme Court rule that Congress must give State and local governments this authority—the Court held that States cannot ban out-of-State imported waste on their own.

Once the courts denied the State the ability to ban the importation of solid waste, New Jersey embarked on a long-term solid waste self-sufficiency plan. Environmentally unsound landfills were closed, which reduced our own State's capacity.

With less in-state capacity, New Jersey began exporting surplus solid waste to States in the Midwest, while it also began the long process of bringing on-line new, environmentally safe in-state capacity, reducing solid waste sources, and instituting an aggressive recycling campaign.

Well, here we are 20 years later, and absent some significant changes, this bill will penalize New Jersey, and wreak havoc on the State's good faith effort to become self-sufficient regarding solid waste in the next 6 years.

Most of the solid waste that New Jersey currently exports to other States is being handled under contracts that local governments in our State and in other States have entered into in good faith and in accordance with all relevant rules and regulations. The bill's original language that fails to protect these agreements for more than 3 years must be changed, and that's exactly why the Zimmer-Pallone amendment must be adopted.

While the adoption of this amendment would represent an important improvement for States like New Jersey, I remain very seriously concerned about the damage that this overall package, as currently crafted, would do to the State of New Jersey.

DEP Commissioner Robert Shinn has written a letter to the entire New Jersey delegation detailing the State's objections to H.R. 4779. At the same time, the State has expressed its view that the Senate version of this bill, S. 2345, is far more preferable.

I hope that when the conference committee meets to write the final version of this important legislation that the interests of States that export solid waste, like New Jersey, can be accommodated instead of being ignored. As such, I hope that as much of the Senate bill as possible can be incorporated into the final conference committee report.

Simply put, this issue is too important to become a victim of petty politics between importing and exporting States. New Jersey is well on its way to becoming self-sufficient very shortly.

I hope that any solid waste disposal legislation that we enact this year allows our State to continue its efforts to achieve this noteworthy goal without undue roadblocks or interference.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. PALLONE].

The amendment was agreed to.

AMENDMENT OFFERED BY MR. SMITH OF NEW JERSEY

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. SMITH of New Jersey: Page 10, line 2, strike "not include any renewal, novation, or other extension thereof (as determined under State law)." and insert "be determined under State law."

Page 11, line 25, strike "not include any renewal, novation, or other extension thereof (as determined under State law)." and insert "be determined under State law."

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey (during the reading). Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the amendment be considered as read and printed in the RECORD.

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New Jersey?

There was no objection.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Chairman, I appreciate the opportunity to speak today on the State and Local Government Interstate Waste Control Act of 1994 (H.R. 4779). The amendment I am offering to protect existing interstate contracts is absolutely crucial to my home State of New Jersey, as well as neighboring New York and other States which export some amount of their municipal solid waste for disposal.

During the 1970's and the early 1980's, several States—particularly New Jersey, New York, and others in the Northeast—suffered from a solid waste management crisis. Costs for disposal skyrocketed and taxpayers paid through the nose for basic trash removal and disposal. Environmental protection standards—where they even existed—were neglected. Taxpayers are still paying for this in the form of the numerous Superfund sites and other sites of environmental degradation which spot the Nation.

At that time, Mr. Chairman, New Jersey was the No. 1 importer of municipal solid waste from other States. New Jersey is now the No. 2 exporter of municipal solid waste, second only to New York.

Over the past two decades, New Jersey has undertaken an ambitious and comprehensive strategy to meet the basic waste disposal needs of its residents and protect the delicate environment of the Garden State. As a part of this plan, the State has recognized the need to become self-sufficient in its solid waste management and to end its dependence on other States—such as Pennsylvania and some Midwestern States—for disposal.

New Jersey has made a concerted good faith effort to reduce its exports of municipal solid waste. In fact, since 1989, the State has exported a decreasing volume of waste each year. The New Jersey Department of Environmental Protection [DEP] estimates that the State can achieve self-sufficiency by the year 2000—but only if we are permitted to continue to pursue the point-by-point strategy the State painstakingly plotted and has methodically carried out. As written, the presumptive ban of H.R. 4779 denies us the time and flexibility needed to achieve this.

Under existing State law, each of the 21 New Jersey counties and the Hackensack Meadowlands Commission are designated as solid waste management districts and charged with developing an integrated solid waste management plan for waste within their boundaries. The integrated plans include not only collection and disposal of waste, but also required baseline standards for recycling and educational programs to promote personal responsibility for litter and trash creation. Each district's plan must be approved by the State.

The Department of Environmental Protection carefully links the 22 individual plans to meet the guidelines for an integrated State solid waste management plan. For example, the State encourages counties to share transfer stations, waste-to-energy facilities, landfills, composting facilities, and recycling facilities.

Mr. Chairman, the State has taken an increasingly hard line approach to approving contracts which involve the export of waste to other States. Traditionally, New Jersey counties had entered into long-term contracts for out-of-State waste disposal. In recent years, however, the DEP, has conditioned approval on reduced terms of the contract to keep in line with the December 31, 1999, goal of self-sufficiency.

For example, last year, a New Jersey county submitted to the State a 10-year contract for out-of-State disposal, which would have ended in 2003. The DEP approved the contract for an initial time period of 2 years and required the county to adhere to a series of milestones leading to full in-State disposal in the long term. As the required milestones are met by the county, the DEP would authorize a 3-year renewal on the initial 2-year contract. This example is consistent with the course of action the State has taken with several of its major exporting counties.

My amendment is necessary to allow the DEP to continue this type of manipulation of solid waste management by the counties toward full in-State disposal. The simple change in wording of my amendment ensures that the additional 3 years referenced in the above example could not be considered outside of the life of the contract by an importing State's legislature and therefore unprotected.

For many of the major importing States, advocacy of a ban on interstate waste transport has become a politically charged issue. It is easy to say that "Pennsylvania should not accept any New Jersey waste;" but it is not so easy to plot a responsible strategy for where that waste should then go. New Jersey has both recognized the need to stop exporting waste and created a strategy to reach self-sufficiency by the year 2000.

Unamended, H.R. 4779 ties the hands of those States already caught between a rock and a hard place—like New Jersey—and could easily precipitate a second solid waste crisis in the Northeast and elsewhere. We all recognize the realities of this issue—everyone creates trash, no one wants it in his hometown, and unquestionably no one wants to be responsible for putting it in someone else's hometown; but it has to go somewhere. New Jersey is working to deal with this matter in a way reduces the potential for environmental disaster in the future and avoids increasing the already heavy burden on taxpayers. Passing H.R. 4779 ignores this good faith effort and the successes which it has already achieved. With this kind of carrot, who needs a stick?

Finally, Mr. Chairman, let me say that I intend to withdraw this amendment as part of a good faith agreement reached by New Jersey and the leading importing States. It is only through the withdrawal of my amendment and the other amendments offered by several of my New Jersey colleagues that the Pallone-Zimmer amendment to protect existing contracts for up to 6 years after enactment of this legislation was able to have just been approved by a voice vote. Both New Jersey and New York have been steadfast in negotiating with the leading importing States over this legislation and generally over this issue, and it is through this sort of 11th hour negotiating that these States have come to this agreement.

Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that my amendment be withdrawn as part of that agreement.

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New Jersey?

There was no objection.

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. The amendment is withdrawn.

Mr. SHARP. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the last word.

Mr. Chairman, myself, the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GREENWOOD], and several of us from the importing States have announced a number of amendments we would like to have offered. Because we have been able to negotiate with our colleagues from the exporting States and they have withheld on some of their amendments, we are simply wanting to indicate to our colleagues that we are going to withhold on our amendments, recognizing that we think that our interests and their interests are better served through negotiation, rather than a fight over some of the details here among our entire colleagues.

Mr. GREENWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the last word.

Mr. Chairman, I would simply like to echo the words of the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. SHARP], who indicates we had been prepared to offer a series of amendments to strengthen this bill. There were a total of more than 20 amendments that we would have dealt with today. By virtue of the every good faith agreements that were made this morning, we have decided to withdraw our strengthening amendments in exchange for those, for the withdrawal of those amendments which would have weakened this legislation.

We think it is now in good shape for final passage.

Mr. SWIFT. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the last word.

Mr. Chairman, I would simply like to note that what has just gone on here is legislation as it should be conducted; people of legitimately differing views, with legitimacy to either side's particular point of view, working things out civilly so that we can come up with a compromise that pleases no one ultimately, but which everybody can live with. It happens more frequently than the body ever gets credit for, but I think it is important to note that the very lack of fire and flamboyant rhetoric and what have you should not obscure the fact that what has transpired here today is the amicable resolving of intensely important issues to portions of this country, and it is at times like this that I am most proud to be a Member of this body.

Mr. PAXON. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the last word.

Mr. Chairman, the legislation we are considering today, H.R. 4779, the State and Local Government Interstate Waste Control Act, attempts to deal with the problem of the interstate shipment of solid waste by authorizing State and local governments to restrict or prohibit municipal solid waste from entering their State.

This has been a contentious issue for a number of years and past attempts to solve it have failed. Unfortunately, I believe that this bill before us is on the same road to failure.

As currently written, H.R. 4779 places a very great burden on New York State. The time tables and ratchet provision in subsection (c) are unreasonable and will not allow New York the 3 to 7 years needed to fully develop in-State disposal capacity.

In addition, the bill language does not sufficiently protect waste disposal contracts and may still allow the abrogation of some contracts.

To help improve H.R. 4779, Mr. SCHUMER and I offered two amendments in Rules Committee. However, only one of the amendments, to prohibit discriminatory use of the ratchet, will be offered today.

This amendment would make it clear that a beleaguered State may not impose an import ratchet in a discriminatory manner. Either all imported waste would be subjected to the ratchet or no waste would be so affected. It is only fair that a State may not pick and choose which waste to restrict based solely on its State of origin.

I understand this amendment will be offered en bloc with an amendment by Mr. MANTON clarifying the definition of affected local government and I would urge all of my colleagues to support this very, very modest en bloc amendment.

In conclusion, however, H.R. 4779 remains a politically motivated bill designed to obstruct interstate commerce and punish those States who need to export solid waste until sufficient in-State waste disposal capacity is created.

I intend to oppose this legislation today and I would urge all Members who support free and open commerce and who support the environmentally sound management of solid waste to vote "no" on final passage.

Mr. HUGHES. Mr. Chairman, I had intended to offer an amendment on behalf of myself and my colleague from New Jersey, Mr. FRANKS.

Mr. Chairman, as a result of an understanding that has been agreed to by the State of New Jersey and the managers of the bill, I will not offer this amendment. But first I would like to speak about the management of our Nation's solid waste—an issue that is critically important to the State of New Jersey.

New Jersey is currently a net exporter of solid waste. In part, this is because our State is geographically small, but at the same time heavily populated and urbanized. However, in large measure, we are an exporter because we have long been forced to accept waste from other States which has filled our disposal sites. In 1972, in Philadelphia versus New Jersey my State lost a case in which it tried to establish its right to control the importation of waste that was quickly filling our disposal space. So, we understand and are committed to the principle that communities should not be forced to take unwanted waste from other communities in perpetuity.

New Jersey has been a leader in efforts to achieve self-sufficiency with respect to solid waste. In fact, our State is committed to achieving self-sufficiency by the year 2000. Since 1989, there has been a steady reduction in solid waste exports from New Jersey.

Unfortunately, H.R. 4779 contains a number of provisions that could seriously damage New Jersey's attempts to attain self-sufficiency. Among other things the bill sets a new definition for municipal solid waste which includes construction and demolition debris or C&D. This, to my knowledge, is the first time that C&D has been included in the definition of municipal solid waste. In fact, EPA treats C&D as a category separate and distinct from municipal solid waste. Local governments have traditionally assumed responsibility for managing municipal solid waste, while C&D has often been handled privately—hailed away from specific, temporary sites by private companies hired to handle waste from those sites.

The amendment that Mr. FRANKS and I had intended to offer would have remedied at least this part of the bill by striking construction and demolition debris from the definition of municipal solid waste.

By including C&D in the definition of municipal solid waste, H.R. 4779 will severely impact New Jersey's current waste management efforts. The State has gone to great lengths to reduce its waste exports and has had some of its best recycling successes in the area of C&D waste. For example, we are currently recycling some 91 percent of waste concrete, asphalt, and masonry, and about 99 percent of heavy iron wastes.

While the State is developing plans to reduce its C&D exports even further, our plans could be severely disrupted if we are suddenly forced to absorb this new waste category. It could prevent us from achieving the self-sufficiency we desire by the year 2000.

While I am pleased that my colleagues have reached some agreement with the managers on one outstanding issue pertaining to contracts, I am not at all satisfied with the content of this legislation. I certainly hope that we can correct many of this bill's problems in conference with the Senate. However, the severe impact that this legislation—in its current form—could have on my State and its efforts to reduce and recycle waste cannot be underestimated. Therefore, I intend to vote against this bill. I hope that my colleagues will be mindful of New Jersey's plight and join with our delegation to defeat this bill.

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. If there are no further amendments, the question is on the committee amendment in the nature of a substitute, as amended.

The committee amendment in the nature of a substitute, as amended, was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. Under the rule, the Committee rises.

Accordingly, the Committee rose, and the Speaker pro tempore [Mr. DEFazio] having assumed the chair, Mr. SAWYER, Chairman pro tempore of the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union, reported that that Committee, having had under consideration the bill (H.R. 4779) to amend the Solid Waste Disposal Act to authorize local governments and Governors to restrict receipt of out-of-State municipal solid waste, and for other purposes, pursuant to House Resolution 551, he reported the bill back to the House with an amendment adopted by the Committee of the Whole.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under the rule, the previous question is ordered.

Is a separate vote demanded on any amendment to the committee amendment in the nature of a substitute adopted by the Committee of the Whole? If not, the question is on the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, and was read the third time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the passage of the bill.

The question was taken; and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

Mr. BOUCHER. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground that a quorum is not present and make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Evidently a quorum is not present.

The Sergeant at Arms will notify absent Members.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—yeas 368, nays 55, not voting 11, as follows:

Messrs. EWING, OWENS, HYDE, SERRANO, and ROYCE changed their vote from "yea" to "nay."

So the bill was passed.
The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.
A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

Mr. LEWIS of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I was unavoidably detained and unable to vote on H.R. 4779, the State and Local Government Interstate Waste Control Amendments of 1994—rollcall vote No. 443. Had I been present, I would have voted "aye." In attempting to cope with our country's waste products, I support providing State governments the authority to control the flow of solid waste crossing their borders.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

Mrs. COLLINS of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, on the final vote for passage of H.R. 4779, the State and Local Government Waste Control Act, I was misrecorded as having voted "aye" for the bill. I wish to be recorded as voting against the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. DEFAZIO). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Washington?

There was no objection.

DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE REORGANIZATION ACT OF 1994

Mr. DERRICK. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Rules, I call up House Resolution 554 and ask for its immediate consideration.

The clerk read the resolution, as follows:

H. RES. 554

Resolved, That at any time after the adoption of this resolution the Speaker may, pursuant to clause 1(b) of rule XXIII, declare the House resolved into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for consideration of the bill (H.R. 3171) to authorize the Secretary of Agriculture to reorganize the Department of Agriculture, and for other purposes. The first reading of the bill shall be dispensed with. All points of order against consideration of the bill are waived. General debate shall be confined to the bill and the amendments made in order by this resolution and shall not exceed one hour equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Agriculture. After general debate the bill shall be considered for amendment under the five-minute rule. It shall be in order to consider as an original bill for the purpose of amendment under the five-minute rule the amendment in the nature of a substitute recommended by the Committee on Agriculture now printed in the bill. The committee amendment in the nature of a substitute shall be considered as read. All points of order against the committee amendment in the nature of a substitute are waived. At the conclusion of consideration of the bill for amendment the Committee shall rise and report the bill to the House with such amendments as may have been adopted. Any Member may demand a separate vote in the House on any amendment adopted in the Committee of the Whole to the bill or to the committee amendment in the nature of a substitute. The previous question shall be considered as ordered on the bill and amendments thereto to final passage without intervening motion except one motion to recommit with or without instructions.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. PENNY). The gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. DERRICK] is recognized for 1 hour.

Mr. DERRICK. Mr. Speaker, for purposes of debate only, I yield the customary 30 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. SOLOMON], pending which I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, House Resolution 544 is an open rule providing 1 hour of general debate, equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Agriculture Committee.

All points of order are waived against consideration of the bill. The rule makes in order the Agriculture Committee amendment in the nature of a substitute now printed in the bill as an original bill for the purpose of amendment.

The substitute shall be considered as read. All points of order are waived against the substitute. Finally, the rule provides one motion to recommit with or without instructions.

H.R. 3171 responds to the administration's reinventing Government proposal introduced last September. Among its provisions, the plan recommends reorganizing the streamlining the operations of the Department of Agriculture. This legislation clearly answers the demands for a Government that works better and costs less.

The Department of Agriculture Reorganization Act requires the administration to meet the goals for job reduction and cost savings set forth in the reinventing Government initiative.

H.R. 3171 requires the elimination of 7,500 full-time positions by the end of fiscal year 1999.

The measure mandates that the Agriculture Department merge, consolidate, or close a number of its farm program field offices.

The consolidation plan will create a new system of about 2,500 farm service centers. These service centers will provide one-stop shopping for farmers for such now-separated farm services as crop support payments, rural housing loans, and crop insurance.

The bill projects savings of $2.5 billion over the 5 years following its enactment.

Mr. Speaker, I don't need to remind my colleagues that there is a general perception that we know how to create agencies and programs, but we don't know how to eliminate them, even when they are obsolete.

Industry replaced farming as America's principal business over 100 years ago. However, the Agriculture Department still operates more than 12,000 field service offices.

That is an average of nearly four offices for every county in the Nation—that is rural, urban, and suburban communities.

H.R. 3171 will help us focus the debate on performance—how the Agriculture Department works and how it does its business.

We have the opportunity to make the Agriculture Department more cost effective and efficient. That will make Government work better for all of us.

Mr. Speaker, House Resolution 544 will allow this body to fully debate the Department of Agriculture Reorganization Act. I urge my colleagues to support the rule and H.R. 3171.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. DERRICK] for being so gracious with his time. And, Mr. Speaker, I might just also take a moment to point out, as I speak about the gracious gentleman from Edgefield, SC, who has been a Member of this body for 20 years: He has made a decision not to seek reelection. He is going to retire, and, as my colleagues know, he and I have had some pretty heated arguments over the last couple of decades, but I say, when you think about the phrase "southern gentleman," Mr. BUTLER DERRICK does epitomize those words "southern gentleman." So, in spite of all the perhaps misunderstandings and arguments, Mr. Speaker, he is truly a southern gentleman, and we are going to miss him.

Mr. Speaker, at this point I insert in the RECORD the following information:

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, I have opposed the majority on the Committee on Rules as aggressively as any Member of this body when the Committee has tried to restrict the amendment process on this floor. However, Mr. Speaker, today the Committee on Rules is finally reporting one of those all-too-rare open rules, and it should be commended for that step in the right direction. I say to the gentleman, "I commend, you, sir."

Mr. Speaker, this rule also waives all points of order against consideration of the bill and the substitute. However in this case that waiver of all points of order actually covers three specific violations of House rules:

First, there are two sections in the Agriculture Committee amendment in the nature of a substitute which are not germane, because they fall in the jurisdiction of other committees.

Second, the bill provides for inter-agency transfers of unexpended balances of appropriations, and technically this is an appropriation on legislation.

Third, while the bill overall cuts positions, it does raise salary levels for certain departmental positions, and because it is theoretically possible that this spending could still take effect this fiscal year, the Parliamentarians view this as a technical violation of the Budget Act.

Before the Committee on Rules' meeting, I discussed this rule with the ranking Republican on the House Committee on Agriculture, the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. ROBERTS]. He supported an open rule to move this bill to the floor of the House, so that the House would have the opportunity to make some needed improvements in this legislation, and, Mr. Speaker, this legislation has the potential to cause some major problems in a large rural district like the one I represent. The district I represent covers most of the territory as one heads north out of New York City all the way to the border with Canada. That is about 250 miles long and covers about 10,000 square miles. If there is not an Agriculture Department office in at least every one of those huge counties along that 250-mile stretch, Mr. Speaker, it becomes a major problem just for farmers to get into the office to transact their business.

I understand the need to combine offices for one-stop service, and the need to save as much money as possible, but it has to be done in the right way or we can do more harm than good and actually cost the Federal Treasury more money.

So, Mr. Speaker, while I do not support this bill in its present form, hopefully I will after the amending process. If it is going to be considered in this House, it should be considered under an open rule so the House will have the opportunity to improve some of the problems in the bill. Since the rule before us now is an open rule, the subjects of the rule waivers can be stricken entirely or amended. I will vote for this open rule and hope we get more of them, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. DERRICK. Mr. Speaker, before I yield time to our next speaker I want to thank the gentleman from New York [Mr. SOLOMON] very much for his kind words, and I assure him that the feeling is mutual.

Mr. Speaker, for purposes of debate only, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. TRAFICANT].

Mr. TRAFICANT. Mr. Speaker, I was not going to speak on the rule. I am for the rule; I am for the bill. I commend the chairman of the Committee on Agriculture, the gentleman from Texas [Mr. DE LA GARZA], for the work he has done as well as the ranking member.

However, Mr. Speaker, I thought I would just take a minute to talk about the fine gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. DERRICK] who is leaving, who at times has put me through some trips. I think we are going to lose a great Member.

Mr. Speaker, my position on trade is that I feel our country is giving away the farm, and the gentleman from South Carolina is a member of the leadership that I thought could have made a difference.

□ 1410

I am saddened the gentleman is leaving. I think there are a lot of American workers that are saddened by the fact that the gentleman from South Carolina is leaving us. So I am not going to take a whole lot of time, because then the gentleman from California [Mr. FAZIO] will ask for a favor. But I mean that, Mr. Chairman. A lot of people, working people, agree with you very much, and know that we had a leader that took some of our concerns to heart.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time, and wish the gentleman the best.

Mr. DERRICK. Mr. Speaker, I say to the gentleman, "Thank you very much, Mr. TRAFICANT, for your kind words. I assure you the feelings are mutual."

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. SMITH]. Mr. Speaker, we all remember the movie, "Mr. Smith Goes To Washington." My colleagues know we had a SMITH that came to Washington 2 years ago, and he comes from Addison, MI, population 425.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, I appreciate and concur with the comments of the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. TRAFICANT]. I was hoping he would also include some comments on the importance of buying American food and fiber as we discuss this agriculture bill. The American farmer is in a predicament right now in several areas of production.

I would like to compliment the members of the Rules Committee for making this rule open, so that we can have a thorough debate. If you will, this legislation is a prelude to the important 5-year farm bill that we are going to develop next year.

The agricultural industry in this country is our largest industry. It contributes the greatest support to our balance of trade worldwide. And this total body, not only the Members from the agricultural community, but every Member of Congress, needs to consider the importance of strengthening this very important industry. On the specific amendments that we will be talking about during general debate, I will also be offering amendments and contribute to that discussion.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. DERRICK. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time, and I move the previous question on the resolution.

The previous question was ordered.

The resolution was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to House Resolution 544 and rule XXIII, the Chair declares the House in the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill, H.R. 3171.

IN THE COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE

Accordingly, the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill (H.R. 3171) to authorize the Secretary of Agriculture to reorganize the Department of Agriculture, and for other purposes, with Mrs. KENNELLY in the chair.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. Pursuant to the rule, the bill is considered as having been read the first time.

Under the rule, the gentleman from Texas [Mr. DE LA GARZA] will be recognized for 30 minutes, and the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. ROBERTS] will be recognized for 30 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Texas [Mr. DE LA GARZA].

Mr. DE LA GARZA. Madam Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Madam Chairman, let me begin by saying to Mr. SOLOMON, I appreciate his enthusiasm, and I am glad we were able to accommodate his great desire to have open rules. My only question is, Why start with us?

Otherwise, let me mention very briefly, because I know Members would like to conclude at an early hour today, that this bill has nothing to do with the programs at USDA. This bill is solely to consolidate, reorganize, and streamline. If anyone has any interest or concern in the programs, that will be dealt with next year on the farm bill.

This is also not about money, although this bill saves some money, about $2.5 billion. But what we do in Agriculture is serve all of the people. Since it was started by President Lincoln, the guidance and the direction is to serve farmers and ranchers, to promote economic and community development in rural areas, to provide good assistance and educate the general population about proper nutrition. That is across the spectrum in the United States. To promote soil and water conservation, clean air, clean water, to meet other environmental goals in rural areas, to ensure the quality and safety of our food, and to carry out agriculture research, economic analysis, and educate the American public: This is the Extension Service, the research, the land grant institutions, all of those areas are covered under the mandate of the Department of Agriculture.

But this consolidation and streamlining under H.R. 3171 is done to accommodate the changing times. Let me say that in the beginning, that now, from the people's Department of President Lincoln, it is still the people's Department. But almost 60 percent of the Department of Agriculture budget is devoted to domestic nutrition programs. Only 20 percent of the budget is devoted to the farm commodity program. So the reorganizing we are dealing with here and the streamlining of USDA—60 percent entails the domestic programs. It deals with the nutrition, food stamps, feeding the elderly, nutrition information—60 percent.

Also we have the Forest Service and Soil Conservation. That is only like about 9 percent. Rural Development is about 8 percent. And, as I mentioned, the commodity program.

But everything that USDA does entails supporting programs that bring income. The balance of trade, where we deal with the world, everything on agriculture, manufactured items, there is one here, one there, that is selling. But collectively, we have a deficit of about $125 billion, a deficit. The only thing that brings money in collectively is agriculture, about $18 to $20 billion. And I have a chart here, the green part, that is agriculture collectively. The red part, that is everybody else. So that is what we are dealing with.

Also, let me state—the top 10 entitlements, the bottom one of the entitlements is the price support programs that we have for agriculture. But of the top 10 entitlements, it is the only one projecting a decrease in cost, 1.4 percent in the years between 1991 and 1997. We are dealing with food safety; we are dealing with all of the agencies of the Department of Agriculture, all of the offices out there in the countryside. And this bill gives the Secretary authority that he does not have to reorganize and to meet the challenges that the people of this country have presented to us. The bill also requires the Secretary to reduce personnel and staff over the next 5 years. We have local elected farmer committees closer to field offices. That might save some money.

So, Madam Chairman, the bulk of this legislation is basically technical—to consolidate, to streamline, and to make, in 1994, the Department of Agriculture what President Lincoln wanted it to be in 1862.

Madam Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. ROBERTS. Madam Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

My colleagues, about 2 years ago, the Clinton administration and, more especially, Secretary Espy announced they were going to reorganize the Department of Agriculture and that reform effort, although that always worries me, what lurks under the banner of reform in terms of unintended effects, but that reform effort followed a similar effort in the Bush administration by Secretary Madigan to consolidate and to reorganize and to achieve cost savings within the Department of Agriculture and also in regards to the field offices that serve as the infrastructure, the delivery system of the farm program to our producers.

The effort by Secretary Madigan was to achieve cost savings and, hopefully, to make the farm program or the delivery of the farm program more farmer-friendly. And I know that is Secretary Espy's goal as well.

At the time we examined the Secretary's authority. And when I say "at the time," I am talking about both Secretary Madigan and Secretary Espy, and when I say "we," I am talking about members of the House Committee on Agriculture which have been very much involved with this effort for several years. And we examined the secretary's authority to restructure the agencies of the Department and found that the Secretary of Agriculture has 85 to 90 percent of the authority that he needs to complete the job. In other words, the secretary can act on his own behalf without passing legislation in the Congress to achieve these cost savings that the chairman of the committee has mentioned and, hopefully, again, make the delivery service of our farm program more farmer-friendly.

And, that is certainly an issue out in farm country with, all the paperwork and regulations and time spent in regards to the farm program.

Well, hindsight and personal observation, and I understand that hindsight is always 20/20 around here, but that tells me that instead of really beginning that task on an administrative basis immediately, the administration simply sent up a bill and waited for its passage. And I would tell my colleagues that when we have legislation of this magnitude and that will attract this much interest, it does engender significant controversy and has consumed a great deal of time, almost 2 years.

So after a lengthy committee process, we are now bringing a bill to the floor today that may not be what the Secretary wants or what this Member wants or what the chairman wants or what other Members want or certainly what the farmer and rancher wants, and this bill has created significant controversy.

But having said that, let me say that too much time has already been wasted. There is a need to get on with reorganizing the Department of Agriculture, so while I still have serious, very serious reservations about the course this legislation has taken, I support the effort to move the process along.

I will also be supporting the amendment to be offered today by the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. ALLARD], a member of the committee, to provide a better farmer support agency structure for the Department. This is needed to ensure that we avoid any unnecessary disruption of service to our farmers while streamlining the work of the Department of Agriculture.

My colleagues, the one really innovative section of this bill, in my personal opinion, was offered in committee by my colleague, the gentleman from California [Mr. CONDIT], to require a careful assessment of risk and evaluation of the benefits of risk management for actions of the department, and I am talking about health and safety or environmental regulations. This is an integral part of the ongoing effort to produce more careful and reasonable risk management regulation in all departments, all departments of government. The Condit amendment has attracted a considerable difference of opinion between other committees, other Members, I understand that. But the Condit amendment also is boilerplate legislation.

And let us tell it like it is. Something like the Condit amendment should be applied to all Federal agencies in order to make our Government be a partnership with people, not an adversary, and hopefully to make government much more cost effective and to protect the individual rights of the people who are affected by the regulations that tend to stream out of Washington.

I may be offering an amendment to strengthen the Condit provision. The amendment that I am going to be offering, in behalf of the gentleman from Florida [Mr. CANADY] and myself, would ensure that the rulemakers in fact carry out a proper risk assessment.

A strengthened Condit provision would take a major step toward, I think, bringing balance and reason back to the whole business of environmental regulation.

The issues in this bill and the amendments I have mentioned are directed to the structure and the functioning of the Department of Agriculture as a whole. While they are important, while they have attracted considerable difference of opinion, let me echo the statement of my distinguished chairman.

I hope that my colleagues who have other individual issues they want to address will keep this in mind, that this is more of a technical bill and defer their amendments until we take up programs in the farm bill or some other appropriate vehicle and we will do that.

Our purpose here today is to restructure the Department, to achieve the cost savings, to make it more farmer-friendly. And we should keep that in mind as we consider any other amendments.

Madam Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. DE LA GARZA. Madam Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Let me thank my distinguished colleague from Kansas for his presentation and his always very wise statements. We have no disagreement. This is not the best of times. This may not be the bill that each one of us wants. But now is the time for us to act, and that is why we find ourselves here.

I would like to add further, though, that this process began back with the Bush administration and Secretary Madigan. They had a Commission to go out throughout the countryside and, my humble colleague did not mention the fact that our colleagues, the gentleman from Texas [Mr. STENHOLM] and the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. ROBERTS], were part of that Commission. So a lot of the information and a lot of the thrust that has been incorporated came from that Commission, and these two gentlemen played a major part in the endeavor.

Madam Chairman, H.R. 3171, the Department of Agriculture Reorganization Act of 1994, provides for a major restructuring and streamlining of the Department of Agriculture.

The committee believes this legislation is needed—not because USDA is a burden on the budget, for it is not—but because we believe the Department's structure must change to meet our Nation's changing needs.

The bill the Committee on Agriculture brings to the floor today has three principal objectives.

First, the bill mandates revisions in USDA's organizational structure to better reflect its modern-day activities. It endorses the six broad mission areas carried out by the Department and creates Under Secretary positions to head up each area. Those missions are:

- To serve farmers and ranchers.
- To promote economic and community development in rural areas.
- To provide food assistance and educate the general population about proper nutrition.

- To promote soil and water conservation and to meet other environmental goals in rural areas.

- To ensure the quality and safety of our food.

- To carry out agricultural research, economic analyses and educate the American public.

Madam Chairman, each of these missions is vitally important to our Nation. In particular, I would point out that this bill establishes a separate Under Secretary for Food Safety at USDA, whose sole responsibility will be to administer USDA's vital food safety and meat and poultry inspection programs.

Second, the bill allows the Secretary to improve services to all who use USDA programs through a more efficient management of USDA personnel and the use of modern technology.

The bill requires USDA to combine farm-related agencies and field offices to provide "one-stop shopping." It establishes an independent appeals process. It encourages the development of computer and other information systems that will allow the exchange of information between programs and agencies.

Third, the bill requires USDA to undergo organizational and management changes that are designed to save the taxpayers' money in the years to come.

The bill requires the Secretary to reduce total USDA personnel* by 7,500 staff years over the next 5 years—a process USDA has already begun. Improved computer capabilities are also designed to save money in the years ahead. And of course, the bill allows the Secretary to go forward with his announced intentions to close and consolidate USDA farm agency field offices.

WHAT THE REORGANIZATION BILL DOES NOT DO

Madam Chairman, I also think it important that the Members understand what this bill does not do.

Field office closures: This bill does not limit in any way the Agriculture Secretary's current authority to consolidate or close USDA field offices around the country. The Secretary has pledged to begin downsizing the field office network once Congress completes action on the reorganization bill. This bill supports that end by reaffirming the Secretary's authority to downsize the field office network.

Locally elected farmer committees: The committee bill also maintains the successful system of using locally elected committees of farmers to help implement USDA farm programs at the county level. These committees are a democratic institution that helps ensure that USDA programs are implemented with common sense at the local level.

The committee-reported bill recognizes the need to increase the involvement of minority farmers in the county committee system. The bill continues the Secretary's authority to appoint nonvoting minority advisors to local committees. In addition, the committee-reported bill adds a new directive for outreach to encourage greater diversity among the farmer nominees who stand for election to these local committees.

Separate conservation agency: Finally, this bill continues the separate administration of research conservation programs from our farm commodity programs.

The majority of the committee believe—and I share this view—that our Nation's farmers are best served by a separate and strong agency at USDA to oversee our resource conservation programs. This enhances the credibility of USDA's conservation and environmental efforts. And it also recognizes the fact that a significant portion of USDA activities in this area is actually serving State and local governmental entities.

Let me make clear that this provision does not in any way limit the Secretary's authority to collocate these conservation agency offices with the farm program agency in the same town and the same building.

ADDITIONAL PROVISIONS TO BE OFFERED IN EN BLOC AMENDMENT

Madam Chairman, I intend to offer in the Committee of the Whole several amendments packaged en bloc. These amendments—which has been agreed to on both sides of the aisle—seek to address the concerns raised by various Members since the committee reported the bill. Let me briefly explain what these en bloc amendments do.

National Appeals Division: The en bloc amendment includes additional legislative guidance on the structure and procedures to be used by the new independent National Appeals Division.

Local farmer committees: The en bloc amendment reaffirms the authorities of the local-elected farmer committee in two very important ways. First, the en bloc includes an amendment that clarifies that the county or area elected committee will continue to have the authority to appoint the executive director for the local Agricultural Service Agency offices. Second, the en bloc amendment includes a provision that prohibits the Secretary from merging farmer-elected county committees unless the farmers vote for the merger.

Socially disadvantaged farmers: The en bloc amendment strengthens the Secretary's authority to ensure the fair and equitable treatment of all socially disadvantaged farmers who participate in USDA farm programs. The en bloc includes an amendment that requires the Secretary to take certain actions with respect to farm program operations to rectify any past USDA decisions not made in accordance with laws against discrimination. It also requires a GAO study to determine whether socially disadvantaged farmers are underrepresented on the farmer-elected county and area committees, and whether such underrepresentation has led to bias in committee decisions.

Computer purchases: The en bloc includes an amendment that clarifies the budgetary aspects of the bill's requirement that new computer equipment purchases by USDA facilitate inter-agency communications. Simply put, the en bloc requires that when the Secretary procures computer systems authorized in advance through appropriations acts, the Secretary is to do so in a manner that enhances efficiency, productivity, and client services.

SIGNIFICANCE OF THE REORGANIZATION EFFORT

Madam Chairman, the Department of Agriculture is one of our Nation's most important domestic agencies, and its work and activities touch the lives of all Americans. The Department is not a static, unchanging bureaucracy. While farm programs are still an important function at USDA, they actually involve only about one-quarter of its total outlays.

The Department of Agriculture has, in fact, evolved to meet the changing needs and priorities of our society. More than half of its funding goes to our vital domestic food assistance programs. USDA is a major force in recreation and the environment through its management of our national forests and its soil and water conservation assistance for private lands.

The Department also oversees the Federal-State research partnership at our Nation's land-grant universities that have provided so many scientific advancements for our society. USDA helps provide housing and water services for low-income people living in rural areas. And its Extension Service helps people in urban and rural areas improve their lives.

Today's Department of Agriculture truly serves all Americans. The Department's success in developing our Nation's agricultural system and improving the lives of the American people is in no small part due to the dedicated service and work of its employees.

What this reorganization bill represents is another step forward in the Department's continuing evolution. This bill will provide for a renewal and, we hope, a reinvigoration of the Department's activities.

Madam Chairman, the changes proposed in this bill reflect USDA's modern-day responsibilities as we see them today. We recognize USDA's responsibilities will continue to change, and that the Department's structure will continue to evolve.

Making USDA a more cost-effective and efficient department of Government that works for the benefit of taxpayers, farmers, consumers, and all who use USDA programs requires an on-going commitment by both Congress and the executive branch. H.R. 3171 fulfills that commitment to improve USDA's organization and management structure as we see it today. I urge my colleagues to support H.R. 3171.

BRIEF SUMMARY OF H.R. 3171, DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE REORGANIZATION ACT OF 1994 AS AMENDED AND REPORTED BY THE COMMITTEE ON AGRICULTURE

Streamlines national office structure: Realigns functions and establishes 6 top appointed Under Secretary positions, subject to Senate confirmation, based on USDA's 6 basic mission areas as outlined by the Administration proposal.

Downsizes USDA employment and field offices: Requires reduction in Federal employment by at least 7,500 staff years by Fiscal Year 1999. Requires greater staff cuts in Washington headquarters than in field offices. Clears the way for the Secretary of Agriculture to proceed with announced plans for the closure or consolidation of 1,100 USDA field offices.

Improves services to farmers: Consolidates direct farm program functions (Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, Federal Crop Insurance Corporation and farm-lending by Farmers Home Administration) into a single Agricultural Service Agency. Requires collocation of USDA field offices to provide "one-stop" service and budget savings.

Strengthens rural development activities: Consolidates rural economic development functions under an Under Secretary for Rural and Community Development.

Elevates food safety responsibilities: Designates for the first time an Under Secretary for Food Safety to administer USDA's food safety activities, and separates this function from USDA's farm marketing activities.

Enhances sensible environmental efforts: Elevates conservation activities within USDA by creating an Under Secretary for Natural Resources and Environment. Permits the Secretary to create a Natural Resources Conservation Service. Ensures farmer-elected committee input into initial producer appeals of conservation decisions by the USDA conservation agency. Establishes an office at USDA to analyze the risk/benefit of proposed regulations.

Establishes independent appeals process: Establishes an independent National Appeals Division to handle administrative appeals of agency decisions.

Madam Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. STENHOLM], chairman of the subcommittee, who did yeoman work on this endeavor.

Mr. STENHOLM. Madam Chairman, passage of H.R. 3171 will clear the way for the long-needed restructuring of the Department of Agriculture. The bill has three very important objectives: First, to create a USDA structure that can better respond to the future challenges facing the food and fiber industry, consumers, rural Americans, and taxpayers; second, to improve services to USDA's many diverse clients; third, to streamline the Department to achieve management efficiencies and cost savings for taxpayers.

This legislation culminates a painstaking and bipartisan process that began during the 102d Congress. Work was started during the previous administration under Secretary Madigan. At that time, I, along with the ranking minority member of the committee, the gentleman from Kansas, were asked to travel across the country with the Department to hear from USDA employees, farmers, ranchers, and other clients about how to improve structures and services.

Last fall, the administration brought our committee a bill to achieve modernization. Since last year, the committee and the Subcommittee on Department Operations and Nutrition held four hearings in Washington, DC, and nine hearings in the field—in Iowa, Georgia, Arkansas, Nebraska, North Dakota, Indiana, Texas, California, and Pennsylvania—to receive testimony on how the Department should be reorganized. We gathered extensive testimony from Department officials, including the Secretary and Deputy Secretary, and from approximately 250 public witnesses.

Utilizing that input, my subcommittee, in February, marked up a comprehensive bill that was amended and approved by the full Agriculture Committee on June 16. The bill we have brought to the floor: first of all, reflects the six missions of the Department that the Secretary originally spelled out—elevating and putting on an equal level with production agriculture other increasingly important functions including nutrition, food safety, the environment, and rural development; our bill provides the Department with broad flexibility to reorganize. Too many times, we in Congress tie the hands of the Secretary by trying to micro-manage his or her work, often creating more problems than we solve; it requires an independent national appeals division; it locks into law the staff cuts, the consolidation of field office administrative functions, and the computer improvements that the administration says it wants.

Some may argue that this bill will not accomplish much more than the Department can already do. We disagree. The issue at hand is whether we will provide the appropriate guidance to achieve our goals in the most thoughtful, prudent manner possible—and not undermine those USDA programs and services that producers, consumers, food program recipients, and other clients rely on.

This bill does not change those programs and policies—that is our job for next year—when we will be writing the 1995 farm bill. This bill today will give us a USDA that will become more efficient, client-friendly, and prepared for the challenges of tomorrow.

Mr. ROBERTS. Madam Chairman, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. BARRETT] who represents the Third District, the area from which many fine football players come.

Mr. BARRETT of Nebraska. Madam Chairman, I thank my ranking member for yielding time to me, and for the generous introduction.

Madam Chairman, I want to thank the Agriculture Committee chairman, and his staff, for including my provision relating to county committees in his en bloc amendment.

This is an important provision to the many farmers who participate in USDA commodity programs involving the election of county committees. The measure prevents the termination and consolidation of existing county committees, with another county committee, or area committee, unless the farmers vote to do so.

I had previously offered a similar version at the subcommittee and full committee level, and am indeed grateful to the chairman for understanding the importance of having farmer-elected county committees. These committees will be allowed to continue to help administer farm programs at the local level.

Farm programs and rules for compliance are becoming more and more complicated. It is vital to agricultural producers to have trust and confidence in those who will administer these programs. It is imperative we keep those with local knowledge, and who understand the different conditions which may exist in their county, when considering farmers compliance.

The administration's proposal for the Agriculture Department reorganization will close or consolidate approximately 1,200 USDA field offices. The original bill would have terminated county committees and established a new procedure of selection by appointment. Area-wide field offices would be served by one committee.

Eliminating hundreds of county committees would have removed important elements of local control. There is no way a committee member can be as knowledgeable about a large area of up to five or more counties, as committee members who serve a single county.

In fact, some States now have consolidated field offices which serve one or more counties. In those instances, they have kept in place the individual county committees to keep local control over questions relating to farmer compliance and appeals.

It is clear, the present traditional system within USDA which allows for local administration of farm programs works. The Barrett provision will ensure that it continues with this new reorganization.

Mr. DE LA GARZA. Madam Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to our distinguished colleague, the gentleman from South Dakota [Mr. JOHNSON].

Mr. JOHNSON of South Dakota. Madam Chairman, I rise in support of H.R. 3171, which contains provisions which would establish an independent National Appeals Division within the Department of Agriculture. I want to thank Chairman DE LA GARZA and Chairman STENHOLM for working with me to include this title in the reorganization legislation.

Among the changes we could see with reorganization, the establishment of a National Appeals Division is among the most important in terms of its direct impact on farmers and ranchers. We have amended the various appeals statutes a number of times over the last several years, but we still have an appeals process that farmers do not trust and many do not participate in because they feel they are not going to receive an impartial hearing.

That is why I introduced H.R. 2950 with a number of my colleagues. A National Appeals Division clear of any undue influence from the agencies which are making the determinations, should help to bolster producers' confidence in their ability to receive a fair and impartial hearing. We have designed the process so that producers will know what to expect and when to expect it.

The NAD title does nothing to change the current county and State committee informal appeal process through the ASCS and also encourages the use of mediation where it is available to avoid having to go to the NAD. However, to make the process farmer-friendly, the hearing officers of the NAD will be located out in the field as is the case with the Farmers Home NAD. I would tell my colleagues that most of the language in the NAD title is taken from current law. All we are doing is bringing the appeal provisions to each of the agencies under one entity.

Again, I want to thank Chairmen DE LA GARZA and STENHOLM for working with me to include this important provision in the USDA reorganization legislation.

Mr. ROBERTS. Madam Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. SMITH].

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Madam Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me.

Madam Chairman, having served 4 years, from 1969 to 1974, as a deputy administrator in ASCS, I am firmly convinced that it is very important to give the Secretary of Agriculture flexibility to design, organize, and implement the administrative operation and organization of the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

I am frustrated that the consolidation of USDA field offices to increase the efficiency, throughout the farm communities of the United States has to be accomplished through passage of another law rather than action by the administration. It was not accomplished under Secretary Madigan and it has not been accomplished under Secretary Espy. Those individuals, Secretaries of Agriculture have had the authority to consolidate but have not acted because of potential political pressure of Congressmen arguing that their county offices should not be closed, consolidated, or reorganized.

However, these are administrative decisions that ultimately must rest with the administration and with the respective secretaries of the different departments of the Federal Government. I urge this administration and every administration to be responsible and not to seek cover through congressional mandates.

Make no mistake, this bill is a cover from criticism from the Secretary of Agriculture to close and make efficient changes in the organizations of those USDA field offices by having it mandated under law. I would strongly urge this administration and every other administration to make the changes necessary, rather than putting off those decisions and asking for a congressional mandate by law.

Mr. DE LA GARZA. Madam Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to our distinguished colleague, the gentlewoman from North Carolina [Mrs. CLAYTON].

Mrs. CLAYTON. Madam Chairman, I am appreciative of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. DE LA GARZA] for his diligent work, and also for the efforts of the ranking member, Mr. ROBERTS, and the subcommittee chairman, the gentleman from Texas [Mr. STENHOLM], in putting this critical USDA reorganization legislation together. As an original cosponsor of H.R. 3171, I rise in strong support of this legislation. Consistent with the Vice President's Re-inventing Government, this legislation will allow the Secretary of Agriculture to make the necessary changes in the Department to prepare us for the needs of the next century.

H.R. 3171 will refashion not only the USDA national headquarters through streamlining and making current operations more efficient, it modifies the way we think about local services by providing one-stop shopping and collocation of services for the benefit of our nation's farmers and ranchers in ways which are sensible and workable.

Madam Chairman, I also applaud the gentleman for his work in addressing the issue of diversity for our local Agricultural Service Agency county committees. As the gentleman knows, this is an issue of major significance for those who have been traditionally left out of the equation—that is, women, minorities, and limited-resource farmers. Through opening up the nomination process, allowing the Secretary discretion to adjust yields for the purposes of administering various farm programs, and requiring a GAO report on this historical problem, I believe we are taking a significant step forward. Although I would have chosen a more direct remedy to resolve this representation issue, I look forward to working with the gentleman and my other colleagues in the future to address this matter of concern.

As a new Member from an extremely rural region in eastern North Carolina, I believe that this legislation is good for rural America. The bottom line for the Department is that it serve the needs of Americans who depend on it for its services. The USDA plays a profound role in insuring that American agriculture and nutrition remain at the highest levels of quality and accessibility. I urge my colleagues to support American farmers and those who depend on USDA services by supporting this legislation.

□ 1440

Mr. ROBERTS. Madam Chairman, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. DE LA GARZA. Madam Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from California [Mr. FARR].

Mr. FARR of California. Madam Chairman, as an original cosponsor of this bill, I would like to first of all commend our embattled Secretary of Agriculture Mike Espy. Whatever challenges he may currently face, let us give credit where credit is due. This administration is committed to reinventing Government and Mr. Espy has fulfilled that promise by getting to us a plan focused on improving efficiency and service while at the same time, cutting costs.

I would also like to express my admiration and support of Chairman DE LA GARZA and Mr. STENHOLM's diligence and dedication to this reorganization bill.

Madam Chairman, in its current form this bill contains a provision that would create an Office of Environmental Risk within the Department of Agriculture which would effectively mandate risk and cost-benefit analysis for public health and safety, and environmental regulations.

The risk assessment provision was adopted in full committee at the last minute, with no prior warning, and was passed with little debate, by voice vote, and with few members present.

This is a very controversial provision that is being presented to my colleagues and to the public as a good government provision. It would require the Office of Environmental Risk to certify that benefits to public health and safety justify the costs.

If this is a good government provision then I am sure that those supporting it will be willing to come forward and reassure me that it applies to all major USDA regulations including commodity programs.

If they are not able to do this, then it will be clear that it is targeted at certain types of regulations including nutrition programs and environmental programs.

I look forward to developments on this issue on the floor today. If there are no positive developments, I may be forced to withdraw my support for this bill.

Mr. DE LA GARZA. Madam Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Washington [Mr. KREIDLER].

Mr. KREIDLER. Madam Chairman, I rise in support of the provisions in this bill that will help USDA do a better job protecting the public health and the safety of meat and poultry.

Nearly 2 years ago in Washington State, three children lost their lives, dozens more were hospitalized, and hundreds of people were affected by an outbreak of deadly food poisoning, traced to a microbe in undercooked hamburger. That tragedy was a wake-up call for USDA, for public health authorities, and for all of us.

Since then, there have been at least 45 outbreaks of E. coli infection, and at least 15 deaths, in all parts of this country—Washington, Oregon, Minnesota, California, Nebraska, North Carolina, Vermont, North Dakota, Ohio, Massachusetts, New York, Connecticut, Hawaii, New Jersey, Florida, Pennsylvania, Montana, Wisconsin, Alabama, Illinois, and Indiana.

A system that spends half a billion dollars a year to inspect meat and poultry, and allows products to go on the market with a label saying they are safe or wholesome, is a system that can no longer ignore the microscopic pathogens that present the greatest danger.

It is not enough to blame the victims who didn't cook the meat. It is not enough to require warning labels on raw meat and poultry. It is not enough to blame the inspectors who have to use 19th century methods on the threshold of the 21st century.

It is time to bring modern science to meat and poultry inspection, and Mike Espy has done more in the past year and a half than any of his predecessors in this century to improve food safety.

Title VII of this bill will help him do more. It separates inspection from marketing. It requires that the person in charge of food safety actually know something about public health. It gives food safety the priority it should have, by making the Under Secretary for Food Safety a Presidential appointee.

A lot of people—a lot of my constituents—believe that USDA cannot be trusted to protect the safety of meat and poultry. They think some other agency would do better. Maybe they are right. But I care more about getting the job done than about who does it.

Mike Espy is committed to safer meat and poultry. He has appointed people who are committed and knowledgeable. He has proposed a Pathogen Reduction Act, to test for pathogens and trace back contaminated meat to the source—a bill which I hope the Committee on Agriculture will make its first order of business in the next Congress.

Let us give him the tools to do the job, starting with title VII of this bill. I urge my colleagues to support it.

Mr. DE LA GARZA. Madam Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Madam Chairman, I thank the gentleman for his contribution. I can assure him and all of our colleagues that we on the committee certainly will continue working on this issue. We are satisfied that the Department has worked diligently on this issue and I commend Secretary Espy for his leadership in this area. We are appreciative of everything that he has done. This is to assure our colleagues that in this and several other areas of concern that do not rightly belong in this legislation, our commitment is to continue to work with our colleagues as we move into 1995 and draft the farm bill legislation.

Madam Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. PENNY].

Mr. PENNY. Madam Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding me the time.

Madam Chairman, I wanted to take this opportunity during general debate to express my strong support for the legislation before us today. I applaud the leadership of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. DE LA GARZA], the chairman of the committee, in moving this legislation through committee and onto the House floor. I appreciate the interest expressed by those on the other side of the aisle. I understand they may have some amendments for us to consider today, but I believe we all share a desire to reorganize the Department of Agriculture and to position ourselves for leadership on rural and agricultural issues on into the next century. The reorganization plan has been in the works for literally years but that effort was accelerated under the leadership of our new Secretary of Agriculture Mike Espy who in my opinion has done outstanding work on behalf of American agriculture.

The effort to consolidate and co-locate offices makes eminent sense in the 1990's, a time when fax machines and 800 numbers and other conveniences allow us to achieve these sorts of cost-saving initiatives while still providing farmers with the sort of service they have come to expect from the Department of Agriculture.

I am also supportive of the efforts of my colleague, the gentleman from California [Mr. FARR], to include in this legislation risk assessment provisions which will help our farmers to be protected against unnecessary intrusions from bureaucrats who do not necessarily understand what it means to farm and make a living on the land and hope that his language can be contained in this bill as we move it on to the Senate.

This is part of the President's reorganization of Government initiative. I think it is one of the most exciting aspects of his agenda for the Nation. We on the Committee on Agriculture should be proud that we are the first to step forward with a major restructuring plan. I trust that we will see other departments and agencies restructured accordingly. It will save taxpayers money and improve the services of government. Again I commend the chairman for his leadership in bringing this issue to the House.

Mr. DE LA GARZA. Madam Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Madam Chairman, I thank the gentleman for his contribution. Let me add that the gentleman of his own volition and accord has decided not to remain a member of this body. Let me at this point in time pay tribute to his great contribution, his dedication in everything worthwhile for agriculture. Now and then we may not have agreed on an item, but his seriousness and his work and the efforts which he thought were correct and proper needs to be applauded. I do that at this point in time. I wish him well.

Mr. ROBERTS. Madam Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DE LA GARZA. I yield to the gentleman from Kansas.

□ 1450

Mr. ROBERTS. I would like to echo the comments of my distinguished chairman, more especially relative to the outstanding service of the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. PENNY]. In behalf of my Kansas producers and all of us in agriculture and all of us on the minority side of the House Agriculture Committee I want to commend him for a very dedicated and conscientious career in public service, not only in regards to legislative matters, but the personal example that he certainly emulates in regards to comity and fairness and personal treatment of other Members. Simply said, Mr. PENNY, you will be sorely missed.

I thank the chairman for yielding.

Mr. DE LA GARZA. I thank the gentleman from Kansas and echo his sentiments. We wish well to the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. PENNY] in his further endeavors.

Mr. BISHOP. Madam Chairman, I rise today in vigorous support of H.R. 3171, as reported by the Agriculture Committee, of which I am a member, and I want to thank my chairman, Mr. DE LA GARZA, for the courage and diligence he has shown in the enormous and complex task of crafting and refining legislation that reorganizes the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

The issue of reorganizing the Department of Agriculture is one of agriculture's most important policy challenges in decades, and one of my first official actions as a Member this body was to make a formal request that field hearings be held on this matter, and that Georgia be the site of one of those hearings, and I also want to thank Chairman STENHOLM of Texas for bringing the Subcommittee on Department Operations to Georgia for this purpose. The result of this legislation will have a profound impact on how all of our farm programs are implemented at the local level and here in Washington. For example, it will provide a new emphasis on nutrition, and save billions of dollars for the Treasury by streamlining the delivery of services to citizens throughout the Nation.

The Department of Agriculture is an extremely complex organization which has developed into a bureaucratic monster, burdening our farmers with over regulation, compromising the nutrition of our children's school lunches, and providing fodder for negative connotations associated with agriculture in the mind of the public. We must take steps to correct this perception or all of our farm programs will remain in jeopardy.

I believe that we must streamline the Department and its services, and on that I hope we can all agree. However, we must move in a logical and careful manner. Most importantly, we must not compromise our rural communities for the sake of bureaucratic convenience, and never forget that our No. 1 priority in this reorganization process is to improve the services provided to the customers of USDA—whether it be farmers who participate in conservation programs, farmers who use ASCS farm programs, or the children who are fed in our school lunch programs.

The Agriculture Department Reorganization Act reduces costs, cuts waste, streamlines operations, and improves services to farmers and other customers of USDA. H.R. 3171 consolidates farm price support, crop insurance, and agricultural loan programs into a single farm service agency, which allows farmers a one-stop shop for farmer programs. The bill places all agricultural conservation programs within a natural resources conservation service and reorganizes various rural development and rural electrification programs into a rural community development service.

H.R. 3171 streamlines USDA by requiring a reduction in the number of its employees by 7,500 staff-years by the end of 1999. It is important to note that the bill requires larger staff cuts in the Department's headquarters offices than in its field offices, and the measure specifies that the overall reduction in headquarters personnel must be twice as great, on a percentage basis, as the reduction in field office personnel. I mention these reductions to point out the wisdom in this bill that we are not abandoning our farmers and rural communities in this reorganization, but we hope to achieve a more effective and cost-savings delivery of services to the people who feed and clothe all the citizens of the United States and increasingly the world.

Secretary Espy should be commended for bringing this issue to the forefront, and for his commitment to start the reorganization process here in USDA Washington offices, before suggesting that field offices be closed. Therefore, I strongly support the passage of this substitute offered by Mr. DE LA GARZA.

Ms. LONG. Madam. Chairman, I rise to commend Chairman DE LA GARZA, Subcommittee Chairman STENHOLM, and the other members of the House Agriculture Committee who have worked so hard on this legislation. Contrary to some of the concerns that have been raised, this legislation is, on balance, a major undertaking that will reinvent and reorganize the U.S. Department of Agriculture. Madam Chairman, the USDA is the second largest department in the Federal Government—second in size and personnel only to the Department of Defense. Reorganizing USDA has not been easy. Secretary Espy has been an advocate of reorganizing the Department, not just by consolidating and coordinating the various agricultural offices located in the States, but by reorganizing the bureaucracy right here in Washington, DC. Despite some of the concerns raised today—and let me say that I also have several concerns which I hope can be addressed in the conference—but despite some concerns, this is needed and comprehensive legislation that should be approved by the Congress. Reorganization of USDA is the first major department to undertake this re-inventing and reorganizing effort. It is my hope that others will take the lead of the House and Senate Agriculture Committees and get on with the business of re-inventing and reorganizing some of the other Federal departments.

Mr. GLICKMAN. Madam Chairman, as we vote on this bill today, we must consider what we are hearing from people across the country. Americans are alienated from and angry with a distant, ineffective, and seemingly unresponsive Federal Government. Business as usual is over, it is time to reorganize the way government works. Those of us in agriculture must step up to the same challenge. The logical place to begin is with the overwhelming size and complexity of the Department of Agriculture. The job will not be finished until, from top to bottom and headquarters to country office, we have transformed a 19th century levathan into a structure able to meet the challenges of the 21st century.

I have introduced two bills in the last 2 years, that laid the foundation and ground work for the bill we are debating today. This legislation will streamline both the farmer service agencies and the Washington bureaucracy of USDA. I strongly support H.R. 3171.

The legislation introduced today calls for a transformation. It will map out a comprehensive reorganization plan for USDA, to streamline and make more efficient its county offices and cut its redtape. It will lead, I hope, to a more efficient, more responsive bureaucracy.

This legislation includes consolidating farmer programs and services into one agency. Then for example, a farmer would be able to go to just one office for basic farm programs, for loans and crop insurance, instead visiting each office separately.

The bill also requires the Secretary to establish an independent entity within USDA to hear farmer's appeals of program decisions. As it is now, essentially the same people in charge of carrying out the programs are also in charge of hearing appeals of rulings affecting those programs. This is obviously a basic conflict of interest which must be remedied.

Furthermore, H.R. 3171 elevates the importance of food safety in the Department. In order to separate food safety programs from other agriculture interests, the bill establishes a new position, an Under Secretary for Food Safety.

I am convinced that reorganizing USDA is a long overdue task. The time for study has passed. We have heard testimony from farmers, producer groups, USDA and county employees, and received numerous reports from the General Accounting Office. For example, in 1991 the General Accounting Office released a report of a 3-year review of USDA's management and structure, which stated in part:

USDA's organizational structure—essentially unchanged since the 1930's—is not responsive to the new challenges facing the Department. Consolidating and integrating organizational functions would allow USDA to provide the same services and more efficiently to agribusiness customers and give it flexibility to meet needs more effectively.

The restructuring and evolution of the Department of Agriculture should have happened years ago. We must pass this legislation now. Farmers and taxpayers will ultimately be better served by a more efficient and streamlined bureaucracy. It will save money and will give farmers more time to be farmers. I urge my colleagues to support H.R. 3171.

Ms. MCKINNEY. Mr. Chairman, I come before this body today to thank Chairman DE LA GARZA for including language that will address the issue of diversity on the U.S. Department of Agriculture [USDA] farmer committees. I'd like to commend the chairman for taking a stand on an issue that's so important to the farmers in all of America's farming districts.

For too long, Mr. Chairman, farmer committees have operated without proper representation for women, African-Americans, Hispanics, and other groups. A more diversified membership on USDA's powerful county committees will certainly reduce if not eliminate the possibility of discrimination in USDA programs.

I have no doubt, Mr. Chairman, that when the Comptroller General prepares a report to determine whether "socially disadvantaged producers" are underrepresented on State, county, and local committees, it will show decades of severe under-representation of female and minority farmers and most notably African-Americans. It will show that we have to take steps now to ensure greater diversity of racial, ethnic, and gender representation on State, county and local committees.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Mr. Chairman, I want to thank Chairman DE LA GARZA for including my amendment in his en bloc amendment. My amendment allows the Secretary to have some discretion in holding off on consolidations if it is not in the best interest of farmers and it won't increase efficiency. It is extremely important that we don't sacrifice the quality of service to farmers in our efforts to combine field office agencies. I'm glad the Chair and I were able to work together to ensure that USDA reorganization improves the efficiency and effectiveness of field office service.

Mr. CONDIT. Mr. Chairman, I am submitting the following comments concerning the language that has been negotiated in conference concerning my risk assessment provision in the USDA reorganization bill, H.R. 3171. This language represents both important gains and the need to revisit this issue next year.

As I am sure you are already aware, the risk assessment-cost benefit analysis issue is a major impediment to the passage of several important pieces of environmental and organizational legislation. The fact that we have been able to craft a compromise that accomplishes many of our original goals is significant.

Specifically, I would point to the establishment of an Office of Risk Assessment and Cost-Benefit Analysis as a major development in the field of regulatory reform. I am also pleased that this legislation will assure that USDA regulations dealing with health, the environment, or public safety will contain the information that the public needs to comprehend the risk; the costs of addressing it, and the benefits it will receive from these expenditures.

There are, however, several shortcomings in the compromise that I would like to address. First, there is a fundamental weakness in the comparative risk language contained in the compromise. The language states that "where appropriate and meaningful" the Secretary shall include risk comparisons. I firmly believe that "appropriate and meaningful" is entirely too subjective of a standard. It is my belief that comparative risk should be an absolute requirement in this provision and it should only be waived if an apt comparison is an absolute impossibility, in which case a detailed explanation should be contained in the Federal Register along with the regulation.

Another objection I have to the compromise document is that it allows the Secretary to skip the risk-assessment, cost-benefit analysis requirement altogether if compelling circumstances arise. This standard fails to establish any definition whatsoever for the word compelling.

Compounding my frustration on this issue is the fact that I had prepared language based upon the President's Executive order on regulatory review in an effort to solve this impasse. My language would have restricted the exemption to emergencies, court orders and other provisions of law. Had I been extended the simple courtesy of being invited to the table to negotiate on my amendment I am confident that this issue could have been resolved to everyone's satisfaction.

The only other major objection I have to the compromise deals with the evaluation component. My original language called for a full secretarial certification on the contents of the risk assessment/cost benefit analysis. I understand the view of those who objected to this provision, yet I cannot believe that this compromise has resulted in a clearer statute. On the other hand, I am grateful that the language I requested to reveal the cost imposed by regulation upon local, State, and other public and private entities was retained.

During the next Congress I have every intention of aggressively performing oversight of the creation of the office. The statute states clearly that 6 months from enactment cost benefit and risk analyses will be published for all major regulations dealing with health, the environment, or public safety. I do not intend to allow this to be taken lightly.

The farm bill will be reauthorized next year and I therefore intend to attempt to correct some of the shortcomings I have outlined by amending the appropriate regulatory titles in the bill.

In closing, let me stress that risk assessment and cost benefit analysis has proven to be the great bill killer of the 103d Congress. The USDA reorganization bill is very likely going to be the only major legislation that will pass in this Congress that contains any strong risk assessment/cost benefit provisions. I am proud that I am the author of this language and grateful to those who assisted in its becoming law.

We have finally established the starting line from which the 104th Congress can create a consistent, comprehensive, and coherent regulatory policy that incorporates risk assessment and cost benefit analysis.

Mr. BROWN of California. Mr. Speaker, we are all pleased to have contributed to the effort initiated by the administration to reorganize the Department of Agriculture. I participated in the effort to slow the consideration of this bill by the House, not because I objected to reorganizing USDA, but because I objected to language that I believe was designed to cripple USDA's regulatory authority and to set a precedent for this in other Government agencies. This bill is likely to be the only one which will emerge from this Congress which contains provisions on risk assessment and cost-benefit analysis of major regulations promulgated by the Agency.

The language contained in the conference bill is the product of long negotiation, and represents a good-faith effort by all who are concerned about this issue. I believe that we have provided a viable starting point for a debate that is sure to continue into the next Congress. This language is the basis for an experiment which will provide us with some tangible evidence of the utility of risk assessment and cost-benefit analyses in regulatory decision making.

I would like to offer my views on the proper role of risk assessment and cost-benefit analysis in the regulatory decisionmaking process. The most strident proponents of these provisions in this Congress claim that their goal is to ensure that state-of-the-art scientific information is used to direct Agency rulemaking. They claim that they are not interested in weakening health and safety standards or environmental protection, but are simply trying to ensure that regulations are cost effective and that our scarce resources are utilized efficiently. This is about good government and fiscal responsibility.

The compromise language that appears in this conference report represents a good-faith effort to foster these goals: the original language offered in the House Agriculture Committee was not. I believe that if it were, there would not have been such concerted efforts made to reassure all of the supporters of commodity and price-support programs that these provisions would not apply to them. This puzzles me, and has contributed to my continuing skepticism of the merits of these proposals mandating the use of these analyses. If the goal is good government, fiscal responsibility, and cost-effective decision making why did my colleagues rush to restrict these risk assessments and cost-benefit analyses to a subset of regulations promulgated by USDA? Why were these provisions only offered in the context of regulation in the areas of public health and environmental protection? Good government and sound decision making should apply throughout the Government in all contexts.

Risk assessments and cost-benefit analyses are two valuable tools that can and should be used to assist decision makers in developing cost-effective regulatory policy. However, I believe that it is a grave mistake to require analyses that will overburden the Agency, and produce results that are designed to confuse the public and ridicule regulatory actions that are taken to protect public health and safety and the environment.

By contrast, the provision for comparisons of risks included in the bill we passed ensures that sensible, relevant comparisons will be utilized to provide useful information to the public and to USDA regulators. I believe that this compromise provision on regulatory analysis is now in a form that will guide the regulatory process not destroy it. Our scientific knowledge base is impressive, but it is not complete enough to allow anyone to predict with certainty the nature of the risks which we impose upon ourselves through the many actions taken by individuals and industries in our society.

The promulgation of regulations is necessary to protect public health, safety, and the environment and to prevent us from having to spend increasingly scarce Federal dollars to clean up or mitigate the unintended effects of our economic activities. Pollution prevention is one of the most cost-effective strategies that we can pursue. If we had regulated the disposal of toxic substances earlier, we would not be facing the tremendous cleanup and litigation costs of Superfund today. We cannot afford to foreclose options to regulate potentially hazardous activities. It is too expensive in human terms and in financial ones.

Whether they recognize it or not, many of the risk assessment proposals that have been offered in this Congress start from the assumption that pollution is not a risk to human health and the environment. They make the argument that if we cannot prove that some action results in a measurable risk, agencies should assume the action to be risk-free and issue no regulation. This type of strategy will lead to agencies issuing regulations only after some problem is evident, and, unfortunately, for victims and taxpayers, the regulation will come too late to prevent damage to health and the environment and the outlay of Federal dollars to mitigate the identified problem. I believe that we should recognize the limits of our knowledge, learn from our past mistakes, and permit agencies charged with the task of protecting public health, safety, and the environment to provide an adequate margin of safety for all of our citizens.

I hope that we can cast aside some of the unproductive efforts of this Congress and begin to discuss intelligent approaches to fostering the use of valuable analytical tools in a way that will assist Federal regulatory agencies in developing cost-effective policies to protect human health, safety, and the environment.

Mr. DE LA GARZA. Madam Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

SEC. 807. PROPOSED CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.

Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary shall submit to Congress recommended legislation containing additional technical and conforming amendments to Federal laws that are required as a result of the enactment of this Act.

The CHAIRMAN. Are there any amendments to the bill?

AMENDMENTS OFFERED BY MR. DE LA GARZA
 Mr. DE LA GARZA. Madam Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. DE LA GARZA: Strike section 801 of the bill (page 35, line 3, through page 39, line 22) relating to State mediation.

Strike section 803 of the bill (page 43, line 12, through page 44, line 17) relating to selenium levels in animal diets.

Mr. DE LA GARZA (during the reading). Madam Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the amendment be considered as read and printed in the RECORD.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

Mr. DE LA GARZA. Madam Chairman, this amendment is basically technical in nature. That is the purpose of this amendment.

Mr. ROBERTS. Madam Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DE LA GARZA. I yield to my distinguished colleague, the gentleman from Kansas.

Mr. ROBERTS. Madam Chairman, I thank my chairman for yielding. The minority is in full accord with the chairman's amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. DE LA GARZA].

The amendment was agreed to.

AMENDMENT OFFERED BY MR. ALLARD
 Mr. ALLARD. Madam Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. ALLARD: Strike section 202 of the bill (page 14, line 9 through line 10, page 18) and insert the following new section:

SEC. 202. COLLOCATION OF AGENCY OFFICES.

(a) COLLOCATION OF OFFICES.—

(1) COLLOCATION.—As provided in section 104 regarding Department field offices, the Secretary shall collocate, as soon as practicable and to the maximum extent consistent with efficiency and effectiveness, the offices of the Department located at county, regional, and State levels, which carry out the functions, duties, and programs of the following existing agencies:

(A) the Agriculture Stabilization and Conservation Service;

(B) the Soil Conservation Service;

(C) the Farmers Home Administration and the Rural Development Administration;

(D) the Federal Crop Insurance Corporation; and

(E) such other agencies as the Secretary determines appropriate upon subsequent notice to the Congress of such actions.

(2) ECONOMY OF OPERATION.—The Secretary shall implement and maintain the collocation of the agencies and entities as effected by this subsection by reducing to the maximum extent administrative and overhead costs, by reducing the cost of agency personnel, equipment, computer, and telecommunications services through the sharing of their use and utilization, and by otherwise reducing duplication and utilizing other management and personnel improvement practices that will provide the efficiency and effectiveness of the individual and collective agencies that are collocated.

(3) PROHIBITION.—The Secretary shall not establish any agency, nor shall any agency be given authority, that would have single supervisory authority over the individual entities or their successors to be collocated as provided for in this subsection.

(b) JURISDICTION OVER CONSERVATION PROGRAM APPEALS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Until such time as an adverse decision described in this paragraph is referred to the National Appeals Division for consideration, the Agriculture Stabilization and Conservation Service shall have initial jurisdiction over any administrative appeal resulting from an adverse decision made under title XII of the Food Security Act of 1985 (16 U.S.C. 3801 et seq.), including an adverse decision involving technical determinations made by the Soil Conservation Service. The Agriculture Stabilization and Conservation Service may reverse an adverse decision of the Soil Conservation Service if the Agriculture Stabilization and Conservation Service finds that such decision was arbitrary and capricious.

(2) TREATMENT OF TECHNICAL DETERMINATION.—With respect to administrative appeals involving a technical determination made by the Soil Conservation Service, the Agriculture Stabilization and Conservation Service, by rule with the concurrence of the Soil Conservation Service, shall establish procedures for obtaining review by the Soil Conservation Service of the technical determinations involved. Such rules shall ensure that technical criteria established by the Soil Conservation Service shall be used by the Agriculture Stabilization and Conservation Service as the basis for any decisions regarding technical determinations.

(3) REINSTATEMENT OF PROGRAM BENEFITS.—Rules issued to carry out this subsection shall provide for the prompt reinstatement of benefits to a producer who is determined in an administrative appeal to meet the requirements of title XII of the Food Security Act of 1985 applicable to the producer.

(4) DEFINITION.—For purposes of this subsection, the term "Soil Conservation Service" includes any successor agency to the Soil Conservation Service.

(a) CROP INSURANCE.—The Federal Crop Insurance Act (7 U.S.C. 1501 et seq.) is amended in section 505(a) (7 U.S.C. 1505(a)), by striking "the Under Secretary or Assistant Secretary of Agriculture responsible for the farm credit programs of the Department of Agriculture," and inserting "one additional Under Secretary of Agriculture as designated by the Secretary".

Page 20, beginning line 7, strike "and in considering administrative appeals under the jurisdiction of the Agricultural Service Agency, as provided by section 202(c) of the Department of Agriculture Reorganization Act of 1994" and insert "and in considering administrative appeals under the jurisdiction of an agency of the Department of Agriculture described in section 202(a)(1) of the Department of Agriculture Reorganization Act of 1994".

Page 30, beginning line 4, strike "(except to the extent those functions and duties are delegated to the Agricultural Service Agency under section 202)" and insert "(except to the extent jurisdiction over conservation program appeals are assigned to the Agriculture Stabilization and Conservation Service under section 202(b))".

Mr. ALLARD (during the reading). Madam Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the amendment be considered as read and printed in the RECORD.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Colorado?

There was no objection.

Mr. ALLARD. Madam Chairman, despite the yeomanlike job of Congressman STENHOLM, the chairman of the subcommittee that initiated the reorganization of the Department of Agriculture, and the leadership of Mr. DE LA GARZA, chairman of the full committee, H.R. 3171 remains flawed. The stated purpose behind USDA reorganization has not been met, that is to save taxpayers money and to provide better services to USDA's clients. No portion of H.R. 3171 better illustrates its deficiencies than the creation of the Agricultural Service Agency [ASA], which combines the Farmers Home Administration, the Agriculture Stabilization and Conservation Service, and the Federal Crop Insurance Corporation, into one new super bureaucracy. While the ASA is supposed to reorganize and streamline operations at USDA headquarters in Washington, and in field offices across the Nation, it creates more problems than it solves.

Among the many problems this new super bureaucracy presents is that it merges Federal and non-Federal employees under one agency. In the States ASCS employees administer the Farm Commodity Programs. They serve a county committee that has been elected by farmers, they are not Federal employees. By merging them into one agency with Federal employees we are setting the stage for big problems in the future, such as, how will future reductions in force at USDA work when certain employees will have retention rights, based on serving in the Federal service, and others will not? And when new employees are hired will they be hired through the local system or through the Federal hiring process? Also, since it is illegal for non-Federal employees to supervise Federal employees, what check does the administration have in mind to avoid this problem? I think the answer to these questions is that the administration is going to Federalize local ASCS employees, a solution that will not serve agriculture producers and would actually add to the Federal work force. Furthermore, this new bureaucracy will not reduce the number of people required to run these programs, the agencies they are merging have different responsibilities, one is responsible for credit programs, one for an insurance program, another for commodity programs. It is not possible for one person to have working knowledge of all these programs.

The amendment I am offering will eliminate this new bureaucracy, maintaining the current structure, while mandating the Secretary of Agriculture close and collocate USDA field offices so that our farmers can go to one office for the services they need, making the field office structure more efficient and saving the taxpayer over $700 million.

The final portion of this amendment follows closely on an action taken by Mr. STENHOLM in committee. In committee Mr. STENHOLM allowed the farmer elected county committee more oversight on environmental decisions that have an impact on farmers. This amendment would give the county committee further authority over environmental decisions that they determine are arbitrary or capricious.

I urge a "yes" vote on the Allard amendment. It will save taxpayers money and serve the clients of USDA better than what has been proposed in this legislation.

Mr. STENHOLM. Madam Chairman, I move to strike the last word.

Madam Chairman, I rise in again somewhat reluctant but very strong opposition to the gentleman's amendment. This is a discussion that we carried on in subcommittee and in full committee, and the results of four hearings in Washington and eight hearings in our various States that prompted us to make the recommendation that we truly do move to one-stop shopping. This amendment would gut that.

Basically what the gentleman from Colorado is saying is the status quo is OK, we should not make any changes to the current structure, that somehow, some way we can achieve all of the goals. I readily agree on what he says about the savings, the majority of which occur from the consolidation of offices, but there is also a savings that will be reached in the long term, I believe very strongly, in the long term by forcing a change in the manner in which we administer and supervise and man various farm programs at the local level.

To do that we are going to have to make some changes in the status quo. That is the only reason basically that we are here today.

I know there are some who would suggest we really do not have to change anything, that we can just fine tune this and fine tune that. But how quickly we forget the problems we saw in the agricultural appropriation bill last week. If we do not believe that was a serious problem, wait until next year and the year after that as we have to make tough decisions in prioritization, and where we are going to spend our scarce dollars in the agricultural function.

I know the gentleman is well meaning. He can make a good argument. It resonates good with a lot of people. But in my opinion, if his amendment should pass today, as we stated in the full committee, it will really gut the intent of this reorganization effort, and it will gut the intent of a large number of our employees and others out there who have given their best shot in seeing that we in this case, when we do reorganize, that we give the department the tools to get on with doing the job.

So I would strongly encourage all of our colleagues to oppose this amendment, stay with the committee bill in its current form. Many of the desired results can only be achieved by us biting some tough bullets today.

Mr. SMITH of Oregon. Madam Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

Madam Chairman, this has been a difficult discussion we have had on this whole issue of reorganization of the USDA. As our chairman, the gentleman from Texas [Mr. STENHOLM], has indicated, we do have a difference of opinion, not about reorganization of the department because we all agree to that, but how to do that so that it is farmer friendly.

□ 1500

I think those of us from agricultural areas around this country have that one prerequisite in mind, and that is how do we do this so it is farmer friendly, it can be efficient, and it can save money, and the amendment offered by the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. ALLARD] certainly gets to that issue, as far as I am concerned. It does so in several ways.

First of all, the committee bill establishes a broad new bureaucracy called the Agricultural Service Agency, and while doing that, it leaves out a very important function, and that is the Soil Conservation Service. It seems to me, and to a lot of us, if, indeed, we are going to reorganize the Agriculture Department into a broad new agency which is going to cost a lot of money, by the way, we ought to have all of the agricultural services within it. So in that manner, the amendment offered by the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. ALLARD] says simply this, let us save the money we all agree by collocating offices that will be saved, and let us allow our farmer-elected committees to continue to serve in their manner advising the USDA and officials about the best way to take care of these farm programs on the ground.

Now, beyond that, there is this question about how we satisfy the environmentalists. Supposedly the environmentalists want us to create this new service agency but leaving the Soil Conservation Service out on its own to be probably directed by some official in Washington, DC; as to their attempts, we call it the new EPA for agriculture, their attempts to determine what may occur on the ground for agriculture through the Soil Conservation Service. That would be a horrible thing to occur in farm country, and I do not think farmers want it, and certainly I do not want it either.

So rather than the status quo, the Allard amendment is not so. We want reorganization. We want collocation of offices. We do not want to be subservient to some environmental organization in Washington, DC, that directs the Soil Conservation Service to implement their programs in farm country. We do not want that.

Therefore, the Allard amendment is certainly the best alternative. Without that, this bill is not farmer friendly and ought not to be supported.

Mr. EWING. Madam Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

Madam Chairman, I rise in support of the Allard amendment.

We have, indeed, spent a lot of time talking about reorganization, and in most of those conversations, we get down to the bottom line that it is needed so that we can save funds that have been projected to be saved through reorganization for other uses.

The Allard amendment will save most of the funds that are projected to be saved by the reorganization of USDA, and it will avoid a number of other problems, for instance, the problems of commingling Federal employees with non-Federal employees.

The way it operates, ladies and gentlemen, out in the country now for the ASCS office, if you have employees that are not needed, they can be let off; they can be put on part time. If we make them all Federal employees, you lose that flexibility. Then we are going to hire people, they are going to be there whether there is work or not, and in the ASCS offices out in the country, there are busy times and there are down times.

If we want to save money, we would not be doing this. Actually the operation of these different offices is working well now.

To reorganize it into a new super-agency, I think, will lead to more bureaucracy and less direct service to the farmers.

I am also very concerned about the creation of the Natural Resource Conservation Service out of the Soil and Water Conservation Service. I do not want an EPA out there. I want a Soil and Water Conservation Service that is friendly to American agriculture, and we are making great headway.

For those reasons, I support the Allard amendment and would ask my colleagues to do the same.

Mr. DE LA GARZA. Madam Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

Madam Chairman, let me state that the collocation, there is a lot of confusion, but collocation as it is being used now by USDA means that all of the different offices of USDA would be put in one location, in one building, and that is already being done in my home county. The USDA offices are collocated, and farmers come to one specific spot, and all of the agencies are there. The bill does that.

The argument here is that we should not have a consolidation of some of the programs, and basically this amendment will undo the thrust of the bill basically, but there is a reason for separation of a highly technical area.

And my colleagues who just spoke, all that we do on the Soil Conservation is change the name. It does not do any basic change, but the important thing is that we are moving to collocation. That is where the savings are going to be. That is where the savings are, and the service to farmers, and not necessarily to the farmers, because the Soil Conservation Service works in the countryside with different owners of different lands, and as I mentioned in the beginning, and I repeat it now, what a farmer needs besides being a good farmer is he needs good soil, he needs good water, and he needs clean air.

This is the area where historically the Soil Conservation has worked, and they have technical expertise that cannot be merged with book and/or desk-type operations like the ASCS office, although the ASCS office goes and measures farms and acreage, some with Soil Conservation figures, and in cooperation with, and if you have them side by side, collocated, then you would have fulfilled the desire to streamline. You would have a more efficient operation to have the farmers come to one location.

I would urge my colleagues to vote no on this amendment, because otherwise, the thrust of this legislation would fall by the wayside.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Madam Chairman, I move to strike the last word.

Madam Chairman, I still consider myself a farmer, so I want you to take my ideas with a grain of salt and use them to suit your taste.

This amendment, the Allard amendment, improves the bill for a couple of reasons. First, the 10,000-plus ASCS employees are not technically Federal employees. The reason that we have made this provision in law distinguishing a difference between Federal Government employees and ASCS employees is so that the county committee system and that county executive director have greater latitude to hire, change job descriptions, and discharge these individuals as opposed to the more complicated process through Civil Service. Once we comingle these individuals with other Federal employees as provided in the original legislation, it moves us in the direction of designating ASCS employees as Federal employees. If you look on page 9, section 104 says that you are going to use common administrative personnel, you are going to use common receptionists, you are going to use employees of ASCS, FCIC, and FmHA interchangeably to gain the efficiency the sponsors of the bill envision. So the danger is to lose the flexibility that has traditionally been a benefit within our State and county ASCS system.

Let me just conclude by saying I see a danger in Congress trying to direct the administration to be more efficient. Our goal is to increase efficiency, but, ladies and gentlemen, there are counties out there, and there are multicounty units for ASCS and SCS and the Federal Crop Insurance and FmHA that are going to be disrupted and are going to lose efficiency by a mandate of either collocation or consolidation.

The reason I am going to vote against this legislation is because of those inefficiencies that are going to result from Congress' attempt to mandate administrative efficiency rather than give the Secretary the authority that he or she needs to make these kinds of changes. The Secretary should not be saddled with a one-size-fits-all mandate. It's not going to work out.

With the Allard amendment that mandates that field offices be collocated or with the original language of the bill, where we mandate that they be combined into a single agency, we are going to disrupt some of the efficient operations in some parts of this country. In some of those agricultural communities we are going to end up with less efficient operations and poorer service to farmers. We will be coming back to Congress to make changes in this bill to gain what we ultimately are trying to achieve.

Mr. STENHOLM. Madam Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. I am happy to yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. STENHOLM. Madam Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding to me, and I say that I am one Member who truly appreciates the experience that you bring to this floor.

The gentleman knows a lot of what he is speaking about in this instance. The concerns that he brings up we have tried to address in the bill itself regarding the supervision by non-Federal employees of Federal employees and we believe that there is a general concurrence that may occur except in instances where hiring and firing and other instances in which you are protected under Civil Service law.

I do not believe for a moment that this bill today, if we pass it, will create a major hindrance for the county elected committee system. Were I as convinced of that as apparently the gentleman is, I would be arguing with him. The important thing, though, that I think we have to establish here when we talk about there are no savings to be accrued—it seems to me in all of these deliberations that if we can more efficiently utilize personnel by having an FSA concept whereby we have one manager of an office who can direct how the various employees shall spend their time, whether they be in Farmers Home, whether they be FCIC, whatever that end up being in FSA, whether it be AFCS, wherever it, but there has to be one boss. Why I said respectfully to the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. ALLARD] in opposing his amendment, it is absolutely critical that we are able to gain efficiencies other than closing offices. We may have one office open somewhere under the gentleman's amendment in which the personnel will be utilized 50 percent. We may have another office open somewhere under his amendment in which the personnel will be utilized 120 percent. That seems to be intolerable in consideration of the goals we are trying to pursue.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. SMITH] has expired.

(By unanimous consent, Mr. SMITH of Michigan was allowed to proceed for 1 additional minute.)

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Madam Chairman, I have tremendous respect for the gentleman from Texas. I appreciate his comments. He is well respected in my congressional district in the agricultural community. However, we do have some counties in Michigan that use, for example, one agency very little but have a very high use of some of the other agencies. So where we demand consolidation come hell or high water, we may in some areas in some counties cause greater inefficiency rather than the efficiencies we desire.

Mr. ROBERTS. Madam Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words, and I rise in support of the amendment introduced by the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. ALLARD].

Madam Chairman, this is not fine-tuning with what we are about; this is a major colocation effort, saving $2.5 billion in an effort, that whatever we do in regards to reorganization, it should be primarily farmer-friendly. If it is farmer-friendly, we achieve the other goals of the legislation.

In other words, the Allard amendment gives the taxpayers what they want and farmers what they want. That is, less expensive government services. In regards to the farmer, they want user-friendly services. The Allard amendment retains the logical—let me emphasize the word logical—field-based agencies while mandating they be located in order to achieve the budgetary savings that we all want. It also provides the farmer one-stop shopping. And obviously that is what we want. And it accomplishes this without really creating what can be, and I predict will be, a personnel nightmare caused by this bill.

Without the Allard amendment, we have what is called now a new super-agency or what some of us are worried about, a superbureaucracy, it is called the ASA, Agriculture Service Agency. In doing that, we merge the field structure of Farmers Home and Federal Crop Insurance program, ASCS, the Agricultural Conservation and Stabilization Service, but we leave a fourth field agency in a separate pasture, that is, the environmental pasture. The Soil Conservation Service is renamed and it now stands alone.

This is unnecessary to achieve the budget savings in field office restructuring. I do not know how many times we have to say that. The Secretary can do that, 80 to 90 percent of his effort, all by himself. All of the savings associated with this legislation derive from the closure and consolidation of the USDA field offices. And as I have said before, the Secretary of Agriculture enjoys that authority.

What the Allard amendment does is it maintains the existing technical expertise of the four field-based USDA agencies. They are all separate, they all have different expertise. Since each of the agencies perform entirely different functions, it would be one thing if you have one boss under four separate agencies with very similar functions. They are not. They have different sets of policies and procedures and also regulations. It just makes sense to hold on to their separate identities.

Finally, the Allard amendment will avoid the personnel, again I say, possible disaster that will be created by this bill when you blend the non-Federal, get this now, blend the non-Federal ASCS employees with Farmers Home Federal employees in joint retention rights, creating management nightmares. Who gets promoted? How does the boss settle on that one?

Language in this bill to mitigate the adverse impact, while well-intentioned, I think is very inadequate and perhaps could even confuse the matters worse. The Allard amendment can eliminate this conflict altogether. I understand what the proponents of this bill want. They want greater environmental emphasis. I want greater environmental emphasis but emphasis that works with producers and not a stand-alone agency which could present some real problems down the road. We have an honest difference of opinion about this. Goodness knows, I understand an administration that wants their name in lights in regard to the ASA. Throughout this whole business for the last 5 or 10 years we have had people in both the House and the Senate purging the USDA like it is some water buffalo out of some past history book that is no longer useful. That is not correct. Much of the criticism in regard to the USDA is not factual. We have people down there doing an excellent job under very difficult circumstances.

I understand any administration that wants to come in brand new and reform and change, but change for the sake of change does not work out a lot of the time. I do not see any need to change the stationery and the name on the door and go through all of this when we have separate agencies doing an outstanding job on behalf of the consumer, the taxpayer and the farmer. The Allard amendment allows us to continue to save money; it continues the march in regard to the USDA doing a good job and makes it better. I urge my colleagues to vote "yes."

Mr. DE LA GARZA. Madam Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

Madam Chairman, I do so in order to say that this amendment was introduced by Mr. ROBERTS, or almost the text of this amendment, in the committee, and it was defeated in the committee.

Yes, there is some philosophical disagreement, I guess, amongst us, but the fact is nonetheless that this bill as we are considering now does save money. It does provide for streamlining. We are already in the process of collocating to save money, and there are areas where you need to consolidate and streamline. This bill does that.

All of the work that we have done through the months and maybe years now would be undone by this amendment. This amendment will just keep the status quo. The status quo is not acceptable any more.

Yesterday there was a group outside here, in front of the Capitol, with 10 items that they want to change because they do not want the status quo. Some of those areas I might even agree with.

So, the fact now is, and the issue now is, do we want streamlining, do we want to enhance USDA operations to where Mr. Lincoln wanted it 100-some years ago? Or, if you vote for this amendment, then you will undo, you keep the status quo as it is. This is a bill for change. This is a time for change. Everyone around this Hill is clamoring for change.

□ 1520

So, Madam Chairman, a "no" vote on this amendment is a vote for change, for better change, and streamlining the Department of Agriculture.

Mr. ROBERTS. Madam Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DE LA GARZA. I yield to the gentleman from Kansas.

Mr. ROBERTS. Is the gentleman suggesting this is point 11 in the contract with America? Is the gentleman suggesting that the Espy plan for reorganization is point 11 in the Republican contract with America?

Mr. DE LA GARZA. I do not know that it is. I have not been able to find out who the Mr. Gillespie is that is putting out the press releases.

Mr. ROBERTS. Is the gentleman talking about Mr. Gillespie or Mr. Espy?

Mr. DE LA GARZA. Gillespie.

Mr. ROBERTS. Gillespie.

Mr. DE LA GARZA. That is what I read about this contract thing, but this may not be the time or the place to discuss this issue.

Mr. ROBERTS. I say to the gentleman, I think that's probably a very wise comment, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. DE LA GARZA. I am still looking for Mr. Gillespie.

Mr. ALLARD. Madam Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

Madam Chairman, I would just like to make a few comments in summary. In my view this does eliminate a new bureaucracy that was created by the legislation that has just come to the floor. What it does also is that it allows for, provides, the collocation of offices, and that is where the real savings are; that is, collocation. That is $700 million of realized savings actually that is in this effort to bring everything together in "one-stop shopping," and it is something that has been recognized by both sides, how important it is that we have central office there where it serves the farmer, where it is convenient for the farmer. This amendment maintains that. What it does, Madam Chairman, it takes away this new bureaucratic level that is created through the legislation.

I am asking for a "yes" vote on the Allard amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. ALLARD].

The question was taken; and the chairman announced that the noes appeared to have it.

RECORDED VOTE

Mr. ALLARD. Madam Chairman, I demand a recorded vote.

Mr. OWENS and Mr. NEAL of Massachusetts changed their vote from "aye" to "no."

Ms. ROUKEMA changed her vote from "no" to "aye."

So the amendment was rejected.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

Mr. WYDEN. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the last word.

Mr. Chairman, I want to commend the gentleman from Texas for this work in this area and raise with him an additional problem that my staff and I have uncovered. My staff and I have uncovered a variety of problems relating to whistleblower protection at the Department of Agriculture.

For example, we have come across instances where Forest Service employees who expose timber theft by contractors were the subject of retaliation by their supervisors. Specifically, we have been concerned about the prospect that they would be subjected to various forms of harassment.

We have also been concerned, in addition to the protections for employees who uncover timber theft, about the matter of non-Federal employees who blow the whistle, for example, with respect to violations of sanitary practices in restaurants and meat packing.

I had intended to offer an amendment to this bill to address this need and further protect whistleblowers, but I have understood, after some discussions with the distinguished chairman from Texas, that he would prefer that this matter be dealt with in the farm bill.

I am anxious to work with the gentleman and would ask him whether he would be willing to address the need for stronger whistleblower protection in the farm bill that he will be tackling next year.

Mr. DE LA GARZA. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WYDEN. I yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. DE LA GARZA. Mr. Chairman, I appreciate the concerns of the gentleman on the issue of protecting so-called whistleblowers. We appreciate his interest, appreciate his going into this area, and we will be happy to work with the gentleman.

Unfortunately, this is not the time or the area where we can address fully this issue, but the gentleman has a commitment from me and from the committee that we will work with him, that we will address this issue fully and hopefully to his satisfaction.

Mr. WYDEN. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman. My concern is, in these tight budgetary times, to take the steps that we need to protect the public, particularly in the area of health and safety practices, we need these whistleblower protections. I look forward to working with the chairman as we tackle the farm bill.

The Wyden amendment would have strengthened the protections contained in the Whistleblower Protection Act for Federal Government employees who expose wrongdoing involving the U.S. Department of Agriculture. The amendment also protects employees of private sector businesses and other persons who help to expose improper activities involving the Department of Agriculture against discharge and other forms of retaliation. Specifically, the amendment prohibits discharge, discipline, harassment and discrimination against employees and other persons because that person commences or participates in a proceeding arising out of Department of Agriculture functions or responsibilities. The language of the amendment is as follows:

AMENDMENT TO H.R. 3171, AS REPORTED,
OFFERED BY MR. WYDEN OF OREGON

Page 47, after line 15, add the following new section (and redesignate subsequent sections accordingly):

SEC. 805. WHISTLEBLOWER PROTECTION.

(a) PROHIBITIONS.—A person may not discharge, discipline, harass, or discriminate against an employee or other person because the employee or other person—

(1) commences, causes to be commenced, or is about to commence a proceeding arising out of any function or responsibility of an agency, office, or unit of the Department of Agriculture;

(2) testifies or is about to testify at such a proceeding; or

(3) assists, participates in, or is about to assist or participate in any manner in such a proceeding or in any other action to carry out any function or responsibility of an agency office, or unit of the Department of Agriculture.

(b) IDENTIFICATION AND TREATMENT OF VIOLATIONS.—Subject to subsection (c) of this section, subsections (b), (c), and (d) of section 31105 of title 49, United States Code, shall apply with respect to the filing of a complaint alleging a violation of subsection (a) and the handling of such a complaint.

(c) BURDEN OF PROOF.—If the complainant establishes by a preponderance of the evidence that an activity protected by subsection (a) was a contributing factor in the alleged prohibited discharge, discipline, harassment, or discrimination, the burden of proof in the hearing shall be on the adverse party to prove by clear and convincing evidence that the alleged discharge, discipline, harassment, or discrimination would have occurred for legitimate, independent reasons even if the complainant had not engaged in an activity protected by subsection (a).

Mrs. BENTLEY. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the last word.

Mr. Chairman, today I planned to offer an amendment that would have prohibited foreign-owned grain traders from participating in USDA's export programs. I also planned to offer an amendment requiring foreign-flag ships carrying U.S. Government cargoes to comply with American labor standards. After consulting with the Parliamentarian about the germaneness of these amendments, and after discussing them with my good friends on the Agriculture Committee, I have decided to withdraw both amendments.

While I have long supported USDA's export promotion efforts, the time has come for us to end the abuses in the export programs in order to preserve their intended mission. This mission is to help America's family farmers. Perhaps the most outrageous abuse is the siphoning off of hundreds of millions of dollars per year in export subsidies by foreign-owned grain traders.

The New York Times discovered last year that while USDA's regulations require that grain traders incorporate in the United States and maintain a presence here, some are little more than mail drops. For example, CAM U.S.A., a subsidiary of a Paris-based company, brokered $500 million in USDA-subsidized farm products out of a Greenwich, CT, office that was so small that it did not even have a published telephone number. CAM has also received $250 million in so-called bonuses under USDA's EEP program.

Other foreign-owned grain traders have benefited from huge EEP bonuses. These include Louis Dreyfuss Corp. of France, which has received $915 million since the inception of the program, Garnac Grain of Switzerland, which has received $175 million, and two subsidiaries owned by the Ferruzzi family of Italy, which have received almost $400 million.

Some say that grain traders are mere middlemen and that the programs are working so long as U.S. agricultural products are exported. They are wrong. In this post-cold-war era, every dollar spent by the Government on the promotion of exports should be received by an American citizen. There is no shortage of American-owned grain traders. Our American traders and American farmers should receive the benefit of brokering the sale of American agricultural commodities. Foreign grain traders should not be permitted to siphon off any portion of U.S. agricultural export subsidies.

I understand that others in the agricultural community share my concerns. At a time of enormous trade deficits, we need to ask if EEP is benefiting American farmers or foreign corporations. I believe that when American farmers see that Mitsubishi International and other foreign companies have received billions in Government bonuses, while grain prices are still low, American farmers will be justified in being angry at the administration of this program.

As all of you know, I have been a strong supporter of the American merchant marine. All too often the debate over our programs has been shaped as agriculture versus maritime. This is wrong. What we need is for American farmers and the American merchant marine to end the battle and do what's best for all Americans.

We will not solve this problem today. The problems of foreign participation in USDA agriculture programs will be debated during the 1995 farm bill. I also hope that Congress will consider why USDA allows substandard, foreign-flag-of-convenience ships to carry Government food aid abroad. These ships do not meet any of our labor, safety, environmental, and tax regulations.

It behooves those of us who support American agriculture and American maritime to work together to preserve the programs that promote both industries. If we do not, neither industry will prosper.

On this note, I will conclude my statement and withdraw the amendments.

Mr. Chairman, I include for the RECORD an explanation of the amendment referred to.

EXPLANATION OF AMENDMENT

The amendment would require that participants in USDA's export promotion programs be U.S. citizens. Participants include exporters, exporters of record, assignees, and sellers.

The U.S. citizen requirement, however, would not apply to foreign purchasers and users.

Three principal USDA programs would be affected—

(1) Export Enhancement Program (EEP)—under this program authorized by section 301 of the Agricultural Trade Act of 1978, as amended (7 U.S.C. §5651), USDA pays bonuses to grain traders so that the grain traders can export wheat and other U.S. agricultural commodities at prices that are competitive with heavily subsidized foreign, particularly European Union, prices. Since the inception of EEP in 1985, USDA has paid over $6.8 billion in cash and commodity bonuses.

(2) Direct Credit Sales (e.g., GSM-5)—under this program authorized by section 201 of the Agricultural Trade Act of 1978, as amended (7 U.S.C. §5621), USDA provides below-market-rate loans to foreign grain purchasers that would have difficulty finding financing from commercial banks. The USDA has not used this program since 1985.

(3) Credit Guarantees (GSM-102 and GSM-103)—under these programs authorized by section 202 of the Agricultural Trade Act of 1978, as amended (7 U.S.C. §5622), USDA guarantees the financing of close-to-market-rate loans to foreign purchasers that would be unable to obtain commercial financing without the guarantees. The GSM-102 program provides loan guarantees for terms of up to three years, and the GSM-103 program provides loan guarantees for terms of three to ten years. The GSM-102 program was used to provide $5.75 billion in loan guarantees to the Soviet Union and Russia. Russia defaulted on its GSM loans in 1992 and 1993, forcing USDA to pay more than $1 billion to the lender banks.

AMENDMENTS

Under clause 6 of rule XXIII, proposed amendments were submitted as follows:

H.R. 3171

By Mrs. BENTLEY:

At the appropriate point in the bill after Section 803 add a new Section 804 as follows and renumber subsequent sections;

At the end of the bill add the new section:

Mr. Chairman, for the RECORD I include the following article from the New York Times on October 10, 1993:

ABUSES PLAGUE PROGRAMS TO HELP EXPORTS OF AGRICULTURAL PRODUCTS

(By Dean Baquet with Diana B. Henriques)

The Agriculture Department's $40 billion campaign to bolster crop exports, begun a decade ago to help beleaguered farmers, has instead enriched a small group of multinational corporations while doing little to expand the American share of the world's agricultural markets.

From 1986 through 1989, for example, one large Agriculture Department program to help the United States compete against the Europeans awarded $1.38 billion—more than half its payouts—to four multinational corporations, two of them based in Europe: Louis Dreyfus of France and Arterf Inc., which is owned by the Ferruzzi Group of Italy. The others were Cargill Inc. of Minneapolis and Continental Grain of Chicago.

A review of Government documents, many of them classified, also provides strong evidence that the department's export programs have been plagued by abuses. Many of these allegations, involving some of the country's biggest companies, remain under investigation.

FOREIGN CROPS IN DISGUISE

Some companies, including leading tobacco processors, used Federal subsidy programs to buy cheap foreign commodities and ship them from the United States, thinly disguised as American exports. One Government audit showed that of $208 million of tobacco shipped under an export program in the late 1980's, at least $135 million of it, or 65 percent, was grown in foreign countries.

At the same time, the Government has accused other companies, including Mitsui Inc., a Japanese trading house, and Comet Rice, the largest American rice exporter, of using the program to finance improper payments to officials and executives in Iraq, Mexico and other countries.

An examination by The New York Times of the subsidy programs highlights the symbiotic relationship between one of the biggest and least scrutinized Federal departments and some of the politically influential companies it regulates. It also sheds light on the revolving doors through which some of their top officials pass, and shows that the programs have done little to open new markets overseas.

COURTSHIP OF IRAQ

The study also illuminates an unexamined aspect of the United States' doomed courtship of Iraq before the Persian Gulf war: the questionable activities of some American companies vying to share in some $4 billion of agricultural support to Baghdad.

Through the 1980's, as Washington sought to moderate Saddam Hussein's behavior, it gave Iraq loan guarantees so the country could borrow money to buy American crops.

In interviews with Government agents, Christopher P. Drogoul, a former manager of the Atlanta branch of Banca Nazionale del Lavoro, a state-controlled Italian bank, has described a culture of bribes and kickbacks among American agricultural companies competing for Iraqi business.

One American cotton exporter kept a "bribe fund" to help it win Baghdad's business, said Mr. Drogoul, who has pleaded guilty to making unauthorized loans to Iraq. Other American executives traveled the world with suitcases filled with cash to pay brokers with ties to the Iraqi Government, he said.

To generate cash for kickbacks, Government documents assert, some American exporters overcharged the Iraqis for goods they shipped, with the complicity of Baghdad. While business-related gifts and favors are common in many parts of the world, they may run afoul of American laws, and investigators are trying to determine if any company officials violated the law.

In a recent interview, Federal District Judge Marvin Shoob of Atlanta, who presided over the Drogoul case, said he was concerned that Government investigators and the public might overlook the activities of big American companies that benefited from the Banca Lavoro loans.

"I feel some investigation is in order in view of the number of times some of these companies have come up in documents the court has reviewed," Judge Shoob said.

REGULATORY TIES: A REVOLVING DOOR FOR AGRIBUSINESS

On Capitol Hill, two leading members of the Senate Agriculture Committee—Tom Harkin, an Iowa Democrat, and Patrick J. Leahy, a Democrat who is the committee chairman—attributed the chronic abuses to the Agriculture Department's close ties to large agricultural businesses. Mr. Leahy said the department had a "good-old-boy attitude" toward the companies, which created "a cozy relationship all around."

Fostering this closeness is the interdependence of business and regulators. In 1988, for example, Christopher Hicks, the Agriculture Department's general counsel, argued against a plan that would have expelled many companies caught abusing department programs, arguing that it involved too many rules and too much red tape. Today, Mr. Hicks is out of the government, representing some big exporters.

David Kunkle was a top official in the Agriculture Department's main export program in 1990, when the Inspector General issued a scathing report accusing Comet Rice, a subsidiary of Early Industries of Los Angeles, of abusing the program.

Comet Rice, the Inspector General said, used Government-backed loans to finance payments and gifts to Middle East executives when the company was seeking business in Iraq. Export officials declined to disqualify Comet, which strongly denied using the loans to make the payments. Upon leaving the Government, Mr. Kunkle was hired for a year as a consultant at one of Comet's sister subsidiaries.

Clayton K. Yeutter, who served as Agriculture Secretary from 1988 to 1991, vastly expanded export subsidies to agricultural businesses that sold wheat and rice to Iraq. A month after he left office Mr. Yeutter became a consultant for the National Bank for Cooperatives, a Colorado bank that was a prominent participant in the export program to Iraq. Bank officials said they paid Mr. Yeutter $50,000 for four meetings and some telephone consultations.

There is no evidence that the three officials violated Government rules, which generally forbade them to lobby the Agriculture Department for a year after leaving office.

Mr. Yeutter was traveling and unavailable for comment, his spokeswoman said. But a department official said he had received clearances before working for the bank.

Mr. Hicks did not respond to several messages left at his Washington office. And Mr. Kunkle, who now works for a consulting firm, is traveling in a remote region of the former Soviet Union and cannot be reached for comment, his office said.

The agriculture industry is one of the most politically powerful in America. Its lobbying forces can invoke the image of the American farm family struggling to hold onto its land, while using campaign contributions from some of the country's richest businesses.

"Agriculture is probably the most grassroots political department in Washington," said Joseph Wright, the director of the Office of Management and Budget in the Reagan Administration, who tried unsuccessfully to convince the department to be tougher on big agricultural businesses.

"It has offices around the country and tremendous political support" in Congress, he said. "Its bureaucracy is beyond the Secretary. It's beyond the President."

POWERFUL DEFENDERS: WEB OF PROGRAMS; FEW BENEFICIARIES

In interviews, Government officials acknowledged the abuses, and said Mr. Drogoul's allegations were under investigation. But they said the improprieties were relatively minor for a $5 billion-a-year Government program. Moreover, they contended, the programs had been a big success, opening new markets for American farmers.

"They helped introduce some countries to American products, and it helped our country offset European competition," said Senator John B. Breaux, a Louisiana Democrat who is a champion of farm export programs.

Last month, President Clinton announced a plan to lift controls on technology exports, intensify efforts to promote manufactured goods, and offer up to $600 million a year in subsidized loans for foreign buyers of American factory products. But so far he has sidestepped the politically volatile question of whether 80 percent of the country's export-financing dollars should continue to be spent on farm products, which account for only a tenth of American exports.

If the Administration decides to change that ratio, it must unravel a web of programs supported by corporate constituents. These companies' stake has grown as the focus of Federal export assistance has shifted from farmers to big corporations.

The export assistance effort began in the early 1980's, when it set out to promote international sales of American wheat, rice, and other products through a generous mix of loan guarantees and cash subsidies. The idea was to bootstrap struggling American farmers into a world marketplace increasingly dominated by foreign producers.

Yet for all their subsidies, American rice farmers, for example, have seen their share of the world market slip. They now hold about 19 percent, a share that has not budged since the subsidies began a decade ago and has actually dropped since the 1970's. The pattern is similar for other crops.

But if there is little proof that farmers benefited from the buildup in export assistance, there is evidence that big companies profited. Four corporations received nearly $1.4 billion, or more than 60 percent, of the $2.3 billion in subsidies dispensed through the Export Enhancement program, the most generous program, in its first four years.

An analysis of the other main program, the General Sales Manager program of the Commodity Credit Corporation, showed that federally guaranteed loans aimed at raising exports of more than two dozen crops, from barley to wheat flour, were dominated by six companies: Cargill Inc., of Minneapolis; continental Grain of Chicago; Louis Dreyfus; Archer-Daniels-Midland of Decatur, Ill.; CAM U.S.A., of Greenwich, Conn., and Pillsbury of Minneapolis, which is owned by a British company, Grand Metropolitan P.L.C. And some big participants are not American companies at all.

The programs require that beneficiaries be incorporated in the United States and maintain a presence in this country. But Government records show that some are little more than mail drops.

CAM U.S.A., the subsidiary of a company based in Paris, operates out of a small office in Greenwich, Conn., a wealthy suburb of New York City. It has a unlisted telephone number. Yet from this unlikely outpost, the company has brokered $500 million in farm products with federally backed loans.

CAM was not the only company to take advantage of the program with a minimal presence in the United States. A report in 1990 by the Agriculture Department's Inspector General concluded that some leading participants in subsidized tobacco exports were foreign companies with post office boxes or one-person offices in the United States.

Agriculture Department officials said none of these companies was violating the rules, as long as they sold American farm products. LITTLE SUPERVISION: FOREIGN TOBACCO IS SOLD IN DISGUISE

The first hints that blatant abuses marred the loan guarantee program came one summer morning in 1989, when a Customs Service agent and two Congressional investigators turned up at a busy pier in Norfolk, Va. Acting on a tip, they pried open 40-foot shipping containers supposedly loaded with boxes of high-grade North Carolina tobacco.

But inside were bundles of foreign-grown leaf clearly marked "Product of Zimbabwe," "Product of France" and "Product of Brazil." The shipment was bound for Iraq, which bought the goods with loans guaranteed under the General Sales Manager program.

The investigators realized the Government was being duped into financing shipments of cheap foreign tobacco. Indeed, the exporters had made little effort to hide it.

Frank Weeks, an Agriculture Department investigator, recalled that the exporters said they were surprised they had not been caught sooner, because the tobacco being shipped was priced too low to be American-grown. And, he added, "When one company started doing it, and got it past the U.S.D.A., the others had to do it to stay competitive—or so they said."

In September 1990, eight tobacco dealers pleaded guilty to defrauding the Federal Government by substituting cheap foreign tobacco for higher-quality American. They were fined a total of $300,000, and six of them agreed to make restitution to the Government totaling $1.1 million.

The six also admitted to using Government-backed loans to make $1.5 million in improper payments to unidentified officials and agents in Iraq and Egypt.

Tobacco was ultimately excluded from the program. But over the strong objection of the department's Inspector General, some of the companies that admitted guilt are still paid by the Government to store tobacco bought for distribution in other programs.

Department officials portray the tobacco cases as an isolated problem. But Government records show that the agency made only one thorough examination of any major part of the export program. Its scrutiny of the $4 billion trade with Iraq was prompted by the Persian Gulf war. And when investigators looked closely, they found widespread abuses that went beyond tobacco companies.

QUESTIONABLE PAYMENTS: DID BRIBES RESULT FROM GUARANTEES?

The reports assert that at least two other leading participants in the loan-guarantee program—Comet Rice and Mitsui Grain—overcharged the Iraqis on subsidized sales to generate enough cash to make payments to Iraqi officials.

In a little-noticed case, Mitsui has pleaded guilty in Federal District Court in Atlanta to using federally backed loans to make $250,000 in illegal payments to Iraqis. The company has been fined and temporarily barred from the program.

As for Comet Rice, Government documents contend that Comet gave $95,000 in cash and equipment to Middle Eastern businessmen and officials. At least $50,000 of that went to a Jordanian lawyer with close ties to Jordan's royal family. The payments were funneled through a Cayman Islands bank account that was inaccessible to investigators, leading the Government to question whether other questionable payments were made through the account.

Gerald Murphy, the chairman of Erly Industries, Comet's parent, said the payments were not covered by the loan guarantees, but came from Comet's own accounts. He described them as normal service to big customers and said the Iraqis used the money to buy equipment that helped the rice trade. The company has not been charged with a crime, but the investigation is continuing.

Federal officials, speaking on the condition that they not be identified, said it would be hard to make criminal cases against most American companies. The Agriculture Department's export program rules are so lax that until recently, it was not clearly illegal to use money generated by loan guarantees to provide gifts or cash to importers. Even if the rules were more precise, officials said, it would be hard to tell whether payments came from Government-backed loans.

While examining the Iraqi trade, investigators also found signs of trouble elsewhere. Former executives of Progresso Grain Inc., a large grain dealer in Progresso, Tex., confirmed that the company made $100,000 in cash payments to Mexican importers to obtain their business. William Haney, who became the president of Progresso in 1990, said the payments were authorized by a top executive who preceded him. Mr. Haney, in an interview, said he saw checks written to the Mexican executives.

Progresso has since gone out of business.

STUDIES FIND BENEFITS OF SUBSIDIES ARE MEAGER

(By Diana Henriques)

Supporters of the Agriculture Department's export subsidies say the programs opened new markets for American farm products and helped preserve old markets in the face of large European subsidies.

But trade statistics and Government reports, including the Agriculture Department's own studies, provide little evidence that the programs have helped American exports substantially.

"Generally, all the people who have studied these things reach a similar conclusion:

It just doesn't work," said Cletus C. Coughlin, senior economist at the Federal Reserve Bank of St. Louis, who has studied subsidized wheat sales.

Since 1986, more than 80 percent of the money in one program has been spent to subsidize wheat sales. But while wheat exports increased in 1987 and 1988, the department's researchers credited the subsidies with only 20 percent of that growth; the rest was attributed to other factors. After 1988, wheat exports declined, falling below the levels that prevailed before the program started, trade records show.

The same trend is evident in market share. America sold 30 percent of all world wheat exports in the 1986 crop year. That grew to 41 percent by May 1988, then slumped to 30 percent last month.

The European Community's share of world wheat exports now stands just shy of 20 percent—about four percentage points higher than in 1980. Similar patterns can be seen in feed grains, corn, rice and soybean products.

Export subsidies have been part of Federal farm aid since the Depression, but most Depression-era programs were scrapped in the early 1970's, when American farmers benefited from a turbulent boom in global trade, fed by escalating oil prices. By the late 70's, high interest rates and a strong dollar were undermining those gains, and farm groups began to demand Federal help.

In response, the Agriculture Department created an elaborate system of loan guarantees, cash payments and tax-financed promotional campaigns for farm exports.

There are two principal programs. In one, the General Sales Manager program, the Government guarantees the repayment of $40 billion in commercial bank loans for countries that could not otherwise get credit to buy American farm products. Most of those guarantees cover loans to Iraq, Mexico and the former Soviet Union. About $4.6 billion of those loans are in default, with American taxpayers picking up the payments.

The second program reimburses exporters—with cash or surplus crops stockpiled by the Government—to offset price reductions they must offer to compete in foreign markets. Under this program, known as the Export Enhancement Program, the Government has spent about $5.4 billion to subsidize about $18 billion worth of exports. A third, smaller effort provides up to $1.25 billion in direct grants to finance promotional campaigns.

By and large, these programs are an inefficient way to help American farmers, said Robert Paarlberg, a political science professor at Wellesley College and an associate of the Harvard Center for International Affairs. "In the case of wheat, for example, the Government could provide a greater benefit to wheat farmers at lower cost to the taxpayers if it simply purchased the surplus wheat and burned it," he said.

And the General Sales Manager program "is a way of trying to buy, or at least rent, foreign customers at considerable risk to taxpayers," he said. "Sure, it doesn't cost you a penny until there's a default—but then it costs you billions."

A RICE EXPORTER'S COZY LINK TO U.S. AGENCY REAPS PROFIT

(By Diana B. Henriques with Dean Baquet)

On Nov. 7, 1988, a cable stamped confidential landed on the desks of officials of the Iraqi Grain Board, one of the largest buyers of imported rice. It was from Peter Vegas, an executive of Comet Rice, a unit of the chronically unprofitable Erly Industries in Los Angeles.

Although the grain board had requested bids, this was not a bid, but an audacious promise—"We are offering to beat the lowest offer that you receive."

The cable explained that Comet Rice had a new plant in the port of Aqaba, Jordan, where rice could be unloaded in bulk, polished, bagged and loaded on trucks bound for Iraq—for at least $30 a ton less than other bidders. By August 1990, when the Persian Gulf war halted trade with Iraq, the new plant had achieved its purpose: Erly Industries had a near-monopoly in one of the most coveted rice markets.

LOW-COST U.S.-BACKED LOAN

What the cable did not explain was that the Aqaba plant had been built with a low-cost $4 million federally backed loan from the United States Agency for International Development, which has also given Erly more than $134 million in consulting work.

In a broad examination of the cozy relationship between Corporate Agriculture and the Federal Government, the case of Erly Industries discloses how easily a politically connected agricultural corporation can reap rewards by skillfully exploiting loosely managed Federal programs.

Erly's dealings with A.I.D., the chief conduit for American assistance to needy nations, enabled the corporation to build a plant that lifted its Iraqi rice sales by almost $100 million, more than a fourfold increase.

ACCUSED OF NO CRIME

Comet has not been accused of a crime, but officials of the aid agency now say they believe the company may have acted unethically by not fully explaining just how much it would benefit from the Government-financed plant.

Dozens of interviews, court and corporate documents and hundreds of Federal documents obtained through the Freedom of Information Act provide the following details about how Erly used an obscure Government program to corner a valuable market:

The company did not disclose to A.I.D. the true aim of the Aqaba project, which was to use a little-known Government loan program to give Comet Rice an advantage over other American rice companies.

It did not disclose its leadership role in the project, letting the agency conclude that a Jordanian company was in charge and that all United States rice exporters would benefit.

It helped its Jordanian partner sidestep the agency's competitive bidding rules in the buying of plant equipment, thereby ensuring that its Comet subsidiary would receive a portion of the loan funds as payment for the equipment.

It reaped additional profits by investing the low-cost loan proceeds in the United States at higher interest rates.

It used international government connections, developed at taxpayer expense through a subsidiary's consulting work for A.I.D., to foster its own commercial interests.

Richard L. McCall, who took over this year as chief of staff at the agency, said he had referred the Aqaba loan to the general counsel for review. "It is an ethical question," Mr. McCall said. "For us to be used in any shape, form or fashion for anything but to help develop needy nations is wrong." But he conceded that "we have got to more effectively manage this place" so that all project applications are examined more carefully.

Gerald D. Murphy, Erly's affable and strong-willed chief executive and the company's largest shareholder, sees the Aqaba story as an example of "solving my customer's problems" through a grasp of "how the political game is played."

"I don't have any problems with that," said Mr. Murphy, a conservative Republican who claims friendship with former President Ronald Reagan and other Republican stalwarts. "Those are the rules. I've never understood people who sit back and play a game and don't understand the rules. How the hell are you going to win if you do that?"

GETTING THE LOAN: SELLING THE DEAL TO THE AGENCY

Mr. Murphy, a 65-year-old Harvard Business School graduate who has personally directed his company's investment and business strategy over two decades, says the Aqaba plant was his idea. He planned it. Comet Rice built it and a Comet subsidiary managed it—all for Comet's exclusive use.

But Louis Reade, the agency official who approved the project in 1988, said he was shocked to learn that Erly developed the project for the exclusive use of Comet. "There was no intent to set this up for an individual American corporation," Mr. Reade said.

Instead, he said, A.I.D. believed the loan applicant was a Jordanian company that would create jobs and serve all American rice exporters.

But, according to Mr. Murphy, Jordanians were involved in the Aqaba project only because Jordanian law required it—and because his partner, Wafai Dajani, brother of a former Jordanian Cabinet minister, had "useful" connections.

OTHER EXPORTERS BARRED

In return for serving as Comet's agent in Jordan, Mr. Dajani and his relatives got consulting fees and a share of the profits. He also invested in the project.

Comet barred other American rice exporters from the Aqaba plant. "I saw no reason to be the front-end guy taking the risk and pass it off to somebody who hadn't taken the risk," he said.

The risk seemed worthwhile: in 1983, when the United States resumed relations with Iraq after a 16-year freeze, Baghdad, with the help of Agriculture Department loan guarantees, became one of the world's biggest buyers of long-grain rice. The department backs commercial loans for countries too strapped to get bank credit on their own.

Seeking more Iraqi business, Mr. Murphy flew to Baghdad in 1987 and, he said, met with Zuhair Daoud, head of the Iraqi Grain Board. Mr. Murphy asked the Iraqi official to list his biggest rice problems. The answer: shipments from Turkey were vulnerable to bandits, shipments into Aqaba were slow and all shipments came in big unwieldy bags.

Mr. Murphy had the perfect solution: an automated rice processing plant in Aqaba. "But we needed some financing," Mr. Murphy said, "and we said, 'Hey, this sounds like an A.I.D. project.'"

AGENCY'S CONSULTANT: KNOWING THE ROPES, HIDING TIES

It is understandable that A.I.D. came to mind. Chemonics International, one of the few profitable subsidiaries of Erly Industries, relies on agency contracts for more than 98 percent of its revenues. On the Aqaba project, Mr. Murphy said, Chemonics knew the right person to see.

When Mr. Murphy's brainchild was submitted to the agency the actual application was made by Amman Resources, Mr. Dajani's company.

The application reflected a thorough knowledge of the agency's policy manual—and it conspicuously avoided disclosing the true relationship between Comet Rice and Amman Resources.

For example, the executive who signed numerous letters from Amman Resources to A.I.D. and the Bank of Jordan is also listed in Erly Industries records and correspondence as an employee of Comet Rice. Nowhere in the agency correspondence is Comet identified as anything but the supplier of equipment for the plant.

NO COMPETITIVE BIDS

The agency's rules normally would have required Amman Resources to get bids from other suppliers of rice-processing equipment. Amman Resources avoided this by telling the aid agency that it had a "sole distributorship" contract with Comet, signed on Oct. 21, 1987.

This contract, the agency was told, prevented Amman Resources from buying the equipment from other companies. Without checking, the agency exempted the project from competitive bidding rules.

On Feb. 2, 1988, a $4 million loan to Amman Resources was approved by the agency, based on the conclusion that it would help Jordan.

PROFITING ON LOAN: AN INVESTMENT BRINGS WINDFALL

With A.I.D.'s green light, Mr. Murphy's partnership negotiated the loan terms with the Bank of Jordan—and arranged to profit by investing the proceeds in a safer currency and at higher interest rates than the original loan.

In early 1988, the partners made a 10 percent down payment on the $4 million project and borrowed $3.6 million, in Jordanian dinars, for five years at 6.25 percent interest. That is at least seven percentage points less than Erly would have paid for credit in the United States, given the company's shaky finances. Indeed, the agency-backed rate was less than the Federal Government, considered the soundest borrower around, was being charged on five-year Treasury bonds. A seven-point cut in the interest rate on a $3.6 million loan saves the borrower $252,000 a year.

Mr. Murphy is proud of the arbitrage windfall. First, his partnership shifted the loan from dinars into dollars ahead of a 40 percent deterioration in the dinar, which meant it took fewer dollars to repay the borrowed dinars. "We had good information," Mr. Murphy said with a smile, when asked if Mr. Dajani's connections had guided the currency switch.

DEPOSITED IN NEW YORK

Then, the borrowed dollars were left on deposit at the New York bank "because it earned more interest than it was costing me on the A.I.D. loan on the other side," Mr. Murphy explained. He did not say how much more, but many five-year corporate bonds were paying at least 8.25 percent interest in 1988.

What is less clear is how the partnership paid for the rice-processing plant. Comet's independent audits show the Aqaba partnership had also taken out an interest-free loan from Comet during this period, but Mr. Murphy said he could not recall if that covered the cost of equipment shipped to Jordan or equipment for a subsequent expansion.

Nor is it clear whether A.I.D. regulations address such arbitrage activity. "But," said Mr. McCall, the chief of staff, "I feel the taxpayers' dollars should not be used to manipulate a set of circumstances and reap a profit at the public's expense."

CONNECTIONS: FINDING BUSINESS: A POLITICAL PROCESS

The A.I.D. loan is but one example Mr. Murphy cites of how his company has benefited from official connections that Erly's Chemonics subsidiary has developed through its aid agency work.

Mr. Murphy said he started Chemonics in 1976 because "I've always wanted a way to do two things: one, have my own C.I.A., and two, be helpful to people."

His recipe for cooking up business, he said, was to send the new unit's president to Washington to call on members of Congress, announcing he was a consultant looking for business.

Chemonics, whose staff includes former A.I.D. and Agriculture Department officials, has more than quadrupled its revenues in the last decade. It has been hired by the aid agency to work on issues close to Erly's heart, ranging from trade policy in Jamaica, where Comet was trying to increase its rice imports, to alternative crops in Honduras, where Erly was considering a citrus project.

AN OPEN DOOR

Thanks to Chemonics contacts with top-level ministers of foreign governments, Mr. Murphy said, Erly executives "have an open door to walk in and sit down and talk about whatever seems sensible." And Chemonics "has given me an appreciation for the political process in Washington in a different way," he added.

"It's obviously a political process," he continued, "A.I.D. contracts just don't happen." Thurston Teele, the president of Chemonics, said he helped on the Aqaba A.I.D. project. But he disputed Mr. Murphy's account of the unit's role in other Erly ventures, saying Chemonics had "scrupulous policies" in place "to avoid conflicts of interest."

Nevertheless, more than a dozen Chemonics proposals to the agency boast of linkages among various Erly subsidiaries. In one, Chemonics noted that Erly "has strong and influential links with U.S. Government agencies, from which our projects can benefit." On another, Mr. Murphy himself was picked to serve on a project advisory council. And in each instance, Chemonics reassuringly depicts its parent corporation as successful and financially robust.

STORM WARNINGS: COMPANY RECORD A BUMPY ROAD

In fact, without the profits Erly earned by dominating the Iraq trade and advising the aid agency, the publicly traded corporation almost certainly would have sunk under the weight of its own financial mismanagement.

What Chemonics left out of the corporate track record was a messy series of unwise loans, mushrooming debt, unsuccessful acquisitions, aborted spinoffs, lax accounting and money-losing foreign ventures.

In 1988, as the Aqaba project was being built, Erly told investors that if faced "a short-term cash liquidity problem." A little more than a year later, Erly missed an interest payment to bondholders and its independent auditors were warning that there was "substantial doubt about the entity's ability to continue as a going concern."

In March 1990, Erly proposed a complicated merger between its Comet Rice unit and another struggling company, American Rice Inc. of Houston, which it controlled—but it could not find lenders.

Clearly, despite the glowing descriptions by Chemonics, Erly would have had trouble competing in Iraq against strong American rivals like the Continental Grain Company or Cargill Inc., without its edge in Aqaba.

As it was, Erly's sales to Iraq grew from less than $19 million in March 1987 to $114.5 million in March 1990. By then, Comet's share of Iraq's rice trade through the Federal export credit guarantee program exceeded 80 percent. And sales to Iraq by Comet represented a remarkable 30 percent of Erly's overall revenues.

WAR SCARS: GULF CLASH A BLOW TO ERLY'S TRADE

But by August 1989, the warning flags were flying. That was when Federal agents raided the Atlanta branch office of Banca Nazionale del Lavoro, the big state-controlled Italian bank, investigating whether the bank had made $4 billion worth of unauthorized loans to Iraq.

Banca Lavoro had helped finance Iraq's purchases of agricultural products, including rice from Comet. With the raid, Iraq's eligibility for the export credit program was threatened. Then, in August 1990, Iraq invaded Kuwait and trade with Baghdad was embargoed.

The impact on Erly was severe. By March 1991, only $21.5 million worth of rice had been sold to Iraq, all of that before the invasion. In March 1992, Erly reported a $12.5 million loss, as the vanishing Iraq business halved Comet's profits. That—and the Federal investigation of Comet's own dealings with Iraq through Banca Lavoro—made bankers leery of financing the merger with American Rice, Mr. Murphy said.

Erly finally mustered enough credit to complete the merger last May, but as part of the deal, Comet sold the Aqaba plant and a Cayman Island management unit to Mr. Dajani, its Jordanian partner, a deal that finally allowed other companies to use the plant.

Indeed, since the sales contract gives Comet a royalty on non-Comet rice handled by the plant, Mr. Murphy is encouraging his rivals' business. "Hey," he said, "I'm a generous guy."

A COMPANY UNDER INVESTIGATION, BUT ITS SHAREHOLDERS AREN'T TOLD

For nearly three years, Erly Industries of Los Angeles has endured a Federal investigation of its rice sales to Iraq, which were financed by the Atlanta branch of Banca Nazionale del Lavoro, the state-controlled Italian bank that is the focus of a continuing Federal inquiry. But Erly has not formally told its shareholders of the investigation.

Gerald D. Murphy, Erly's children, said the investigation delayed a crucial merger between the Comet Rice unit of Erly and American Rice Inc. of Houston, which Erly also controls. That brought American Rice's principal rice-processing plant in Freeport, Tex., to the brink of foreclosure by its banks, and pushed Erly's slender net worth so low that last November it lost its license as an approved warehouse for Federal crop programs.

But neither Erly nor American Rice—both publicly traded companies—has mentioned the Federal inquiry and its side effects to investors and regulators in filings with the Securities and Exchange Commission.

"My God," Mr. Murphy said, "What am I supposed to disclose? That the press is pestering us, and because it's pestering us, it's going to cost us a lot of money? That's a silly kind of statement."

American Rice's shareholders narrowly voted approval of the merger in March 1991, based on a merger plan dated Jan. 22, 1991. Despite all the subsequent developments, shareholders were not given an updated proposal or a chance to reconsider their vote before the merger was concluded last May.

Texas law did not require a new vote, said John Howland, chairman of the merged company's board and former chief executive of American Rice. Instead, the board relied on recent advice from Houlihan, Lokey Howard & Zukin, a Los Angeles investment bank, that the deal was still fair.

John G. Mavredakis, a managing director of Houlihan, LoKey, said the firm stood behind its fairness opinion, but he would not discuss its contents.

Long before the final merger was concluded, two of the three independent directors of American Rice resigned, leaving a board dominated by large Erly shareholders: Mr. Murphy; Douglas Murphy, his son, and William Burgess, also an Erly director. "We didn't feel it would be productive to appoint additional directors." Mr. Howland said. "But nothing has been done that disadvantaged the public shareholders."

AGRICULTURE COMPANIES STILL GET FEDERAL BUSINESS DESPITE ABUSES

(By Dean Baquet with Diana B. Henriques)

Defying a Presidential order and requests by its own investigators, the Agriculture Department continues to give billions of dollars of business to politically powerful agricultural companies that have been caught rigging bids, fixing prices and defrauding Government programs.

Repeatedly in the last decade, the Agriculture Department's Inspector General, the internal watchdog official responsible for investigating corruption and abuse within the department, has urged top department officials to bar these businesses from participating in Government programs or, at the very least, to impose stiff fines on them, according to interviews and thousands of pages of internal documents obtained under the Freedom of Information Act.

The companies accused of abusing Government programs include huge dairies like Borden and Pet, and one of the nation's biggest rice exporters, Comet Rice, a subsidiary of Erly Industries.

But in virtually every instance, records show, top department officials—including the Secretary of Agriculture in the Bush Administration and his most senior aides—have refused to comply or have prolonged the process for years, with arguments that the department lacks the legal expertise to bar companies, and that kicking major businesses out would cause some programs to collapse.

Mike Espy, the Secretary of Agriculture, referred questions about the department's current policy to James Gilliland, the new general counsel. Mr. Gilliland said the department had declined to take sterner measures because it was satisfied with its own regulations regarding expulsion and suspension of companies. Harsher moves would be far too cumbersome and involve unnecessary paperwork, said Mr. Gilliland, a Clinton Administration appointee and a friend of Vice President Al Gore.

But documents and interviews show that every other Government agency went along with a directive issued by former President Ronald Reagan requiring that any company found abusing a Government program be barred from all other Government programs. And the Agriculture Department's own Inspector General and other nondepartment officials had repeatedly criticized the department's own rules as far too lenient—a view that Mr. Gilliland said he did not share.

Most other Federal agencies have refused to accept arguments that the Presidential order was unworkable, documents show. In October 1988, for example, officials in the Office of Management and Budget wrote an unusually harsh memo accusing top Agriculture Department officials of "entrusting Government funds to those who have been found irresponsible and with whom every other Government agency will not do business."

Given the department's reluctance to punish big companies, some of the largest Federal food programs—ranging from subsidized grain exports supervised by its Foreign Agricultural Service to school lunches subsidized by the Food and Nutrition Service—continue to be dominated by the same companies that have abused the programs in the past.

The programs involved entail up to $50 billion in annual assistance payments—including loans, grants, loan guarantees, direct subsidies and cash reimbursements—and make up the bulk of the Agriculture department's spending.

Besides the Food and Nutrition Service's reimbursements to hundreds of school districts that buy milk and bread for school lunch programs, the assistance payments cover a broad array of projects like the Foreign Agricultural Service's programs that help foreign governments buy billions of dollars of American farm commodities from conglomerates like Cargill, Continental Grain and Comet Rice.

In examining how the Agriculture Department polices its huge subsidy and grant programs, the New York Times obtained more than two dozen internal Government audits and nearly 1,600 pages of departmental correspondence and reports. They highlight how sprawling bureaucracies like the Agriculture Department, one of the Federal Government's biggest departments, can become so powerful that they can defy Federal policies and even ignore the direct orders of Presidents.

These were among the findings from the documents and from interviews:

From the late 1980's until last summer, 52 American dairies were convicted of price-fixing and bid-rigging Federal contracts to sell milk to school lunch programs and military bases. Despite requests from other Federal officials, the Agriculture Department has expelled only two relatively small regional dairies, and those actions have come only in the last two months. Based on the same instances of misbehavior, the Defense Department already has suspended or expelled nearly three dozen dairies, including several industry giants.

Three years after internal Agriculture Department investigators issued a series of highly critical reports accusing some major export companies of abusing the nation's biggest farm export program, most of those companies continue to do business with the department.

Many of the Agriculture Department's major agencies, including the Foreign Agricultural Service, award grants and loans to companies without checking them against a list of companies and individuals banned from Government programs. One result: the department gave $60 million in export subsidies to Richco Grain, partly owned by Marc Rich, a fugitive American financier regarded by Federal prosecutors as one of the biggest tax cheats in history. Had the Agriculture Department checked, it would have found that Mr. Rich had been barred by other Government agencies for years.

The Agriculture Department is the only Government agency that has refused for seven years to comply with President Reagan's 1986 Executive Order No. 12549, an obscure but sweeping anti-corruption measure aimed at insuring that the Government did not continue to do business with companies that had violated Federal regulations.

POWERFUL CONSTITUENTS: U.S. RESOLVE IS QUESTIONED

The failure of the department to take strong action against companies that abuse its programs highlights its deep and longstanding relationships with its powerful corporate constituents. It also raises questions about the Government's ability and resolve to root out and eliminate the corruption that adds to the costs and erodes the effectiveness of its biggest and most visible programs.

In August, Senator Patrick Leahy, a Democrat from Vermont, said he would push legislation forcing the department to expel dairies that rig bids. The Senator, who is chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee, said his bill, if passed, "will end a history of Government inaction—to the point of tolerance—for corporations that steal from taxpayers and schoolchildren."

Ellen Haas, the new Under Secretary in charge of the department's Food and Nutrition Service, said in a recent interview that she planned to step up efforts to expel from her program some of the big dairy companies convicted of wrongdoing.

In addition to the expulsion of two regional dairies—Coble Dairy Products Cooperative Inc. of North Carolina and the Dairy Fresh Corporation of Alabama—she said her agency was examining a dozen other dairies convicted of various crimes, and would likely take additional action. Unlike Mr. Gilliland, the general counsel, she criticized the previous Administration for its leniency.

"I think it was an irony of a previous Administration that talked about fraud and abuse to be as permissive as they were," she said.

Even if the Clinton Administration were to get more aggressive, present and former senior Government officials said it would take a change in attitudes throughout the massive agency for it to adopt a tougher stance against companies that run afoul of its rules. They pointed out that some members of the Reagan and Bush Administrations had made similar efforts in the past, without success.

And one document obtained by The Times raises questions about the new Administration's appetite for confronting this issue. It shows that as recently as last summer, the department decided not to push to expel a shipping company whose top management had been convicted in a criminal dumping case, because to do so would resurrect the earlier debate over whether the department was too lax.

The case involved William P. Reilly and John Patrick Dowd, the two top executives of Coastal Carriers, a Maryland shipping company. Their freighter, the Khian Sea, left Philadelphia in August 1986, bound for the Bahamas, loaded with 15,000 tons of incinerator ash. For more than two years, the potentially dangerous shipment was turned away at ports in the Dominican Republic, Haiti, Honduras, Costa Rica, the Cape Verde Islands, Turkey and Chile. Finally, the ship dumped the ash into the Indian Ocean. In July of this year, the two senior executives were convicted of perjury for lying to a grand jury when they denied illegal dumping.

ALARMED LETTER: A COMPANY IS NOT EXPELLED

Still, neither the executives nor the company were expelled from any of the Agriculture Department's programs that subsidize the costs of shipping American farm products abroad. This led to an alarmed letter on July 23 from a top official of the Foreign Agricultural Service, Christopher E.

Goldthwait, to Thomas V. Conway, the department's associate general counsel.

"We believe we should move to suspend Mr. Dowd, Mr. Reilly, and Coastal Carriers based on making false statements and a lack of business integrity," Mr. Goldthwait wrote. "We understand that both Mr. Dowd and Mr. Reilly are probably still involved with firms which supply ocean transportation under our food aid programs."

Mr. Goldthwait went on to complain that Mr. Conway's office had so far resisted his plea that Coastal Carriers, Mr. Reilly and Mr. Dowd be suspended because department lawyers did not want to start proceedings that might "draw attention to this contentious issue" of the Agriculture Department's failure to comply with the Government-wide debarment rules in the past.

"Given the nature of the offense," Mr. Goldthwait wrote, "I think it is important for us to move ahead with our suspension action. We do not want carriers to take lightly the certifications they must make in connection with shipments under our food aid programs."

Last week, Mr. Reilly was sentenced to 37 months in prison and fined $7,500. Mr. Dowd was fined $20,000 and sentenced to five months in prison.

Mr. Goldthwait said in an interview two weeks ago that the department had just begun the process of expelling the two men from Government programs. The process could take several months, because the subject usually gets the opportunity to respond to the department's proposed expulsion.

When President Reagan first signed his executive order to ban misbehaving companies from Federal programs, the Agriculture Department immediately balked. And it made no bones about the reason: the mission of the assistance programs was to help big agriculture businesses, department officials argued, there was no need to antagonize those businesses.

"Assistance relationships are very close, and usually cooperative, as opposed to 'arm's-length' procurement-type relationships," wrote Lawrence Wilson, then acting director of the department's Office of Financial Management, in a letter to the Office of Management and Budget on April 22, 1986. He added that looking into the background of each participant in the huge export programs—which can include farmers, exporters, shippers and banks—would create a paperwork nightmare.

But over the next two years, every other Federal agency followed the Presidential order and devised rules for suspension and debarment. The list of companies that had abused Federal programs grew massive, eventually becoming a bound book that runs to 250 pages. The list was distributed to all Government purchasing officers so they could check a new program applicant to see if it had abused some other agency's programs in the past.

But as other departments complied, the Agriculture Department resisted the Presidential order, repeating in one memorandum after another the phrase that Clayton K. Yeutter, then the Secretary of Agriculture, used in a letter to Richard G. Darman, director of the Office of Management and Budget, on Feb. 16, 1989: "We would prefer to maintain the status quo."

Under pressure from O.M.B. which was charged with carrying out President Reagan's order, the Agriculture Department did agree in the spring of 1988 to carry out some aspects of the anti-corruption program. But it insisted on exempting some of its largest, most expensive agencies.

Officials at O.M.B. were livid, they said in interviews. On May 25, 1988, James B. MacRae Jr., O.M.B.'s chief compliance official, wrote that the agriculture department's proposal to exempt most of its operations from the executive order was "inconsistent with O.M.B.'s guidelines which are part of the Administration's initiative to prevent fraud, waste and abuse."

Over the next four years, the internal battle grew even more heated, according to interviews with present and former officials. Inspector General Leon Snead, charged with policing abuses in department programs, strongly urged Mr. Yeutter and other top officials to cooperate with the anti-corruption initiative, the officials said.

Nonetheless, the Agriculture Department insisted on exempting five of its key agencies. Soon, thereafter, for reasons not explained in the internal documents, the Office of Management and Budget apparently gave up the fight.

Current officials at O.M.B. declined to be interviewed for this article.

As the Agriculture Department was resisting the anti-corruption measures, Federal and state prosecutors were finding that one of the department's most visible domestic projects, the school lunch subsidy program, was awash in corruption. In state after state, investigators found that dairy and bakery company executives had conspired to subvert competitive bidding procedures and divide up the marketplace by deciding in advance who would submit the winning bid in each territory.

The practice drove up the prices school districts paid by eliminating competition. The Agriculture Department, and American taxpayers, were the ultimate victims because the department reimbursed the local school districts for the cost of milk and bread.

BIG AGRICULTURE

PROVIDES A STUDY IN RAW POWER

(By Diana B. Henriques)

Why are giant agricultural corporations treated so gently by their Federal regulators?

Some critics blame the close ties between senior Federal officials and the corporations they regulate, and the "evolving door" by which former Government appointees take up lucrative corporate positions.

But in dozens of interviews, current and former Government officials also cited another reason: the raw political power wielded by big agricultural interests. And, many officials said, there was no better example of the bruising effects of that power than the "rice wars," a bitter trade dispute that the American rice industry waged with South Korea in the early 1980's.

The battle began when the South Korean rice harvest failed in 1980. After agreeing to buy all available California rice, the variety Koreans prefer, Seoul looked to Japan for more.

A DILEMMA FOR AGRICULTURE

But under a bilateral agreement Tokyo had just signed with the Agriculture Department, in which Japan promised not to dump its heavily subsidized rice on world markets, the Japanese-South Korean deal required Federal approval.

This posed a dilemma for the department. Approval would give Seoul leverage in negotiations with American suppliers and infuriate the American rice lobby. But rejection could destabilize South Korea, an important ally and trade partner.

So the Agriculture Department offered a compromise: in exchange for Federal approval, South Korea had to agree to buy additional American rice.

The compromise placated neither the powerful Rice Growers Association nor the Farmers Rice Cooperative, the two co-ops that controlled more than half the California rice crop. Their exclusive trading agent was Grover Connell, a generous contributor to Congressional campaigns. The lawyer for the co-ops was Joseph L. Alioto, the colorful Democratic politician and former San Francisco mayor. The prior year, Mr. Connell had figured in the "Koreagate" Congressional influence-peddling scandal that swirled around Tongsung Park, who was Mr. Connell's agent in trade deals with Seoul.

The co-ops argued vehemently against the Japanese sale and then appealed to Congressional allies, who accused the South Koreans of stalling on the additional rice purchases.

Finally, Mr. Alioto took aim at the State Department—specifically, at Robert Richmond, the Korea desk chief, and his superior Anthony Albrecht, the Deputy Assistant Secretary for East Asian affairs. He accused both men of improperly urging Seoul to delay its rice purchases. Both officials, who were later cleared by a State Department investigation, now say they believe the incident damaged their careers. Mr. Alioto did not return calls seeking comment.

In December 1981, then-Representative John Breaux of Louisiana—now a Senator—and more than a hundred other Congressmen sent a letter to the South Korean President hinting that Seoul's rice purchasers were corrupt. The co-ops filed lawsuits, accusing rival suppliers of bribing the Koreans. Defying diplomatic immunity, Mr. Alioto subpoenaed the South Korean ambassador, touching off a political crisis in Seoul.

It is not clear whether South Korean officials were unwilling to buy the rice as the emergency eased—or whether they were just unwilling to deal with Mr. Connell, who was openly insulting them. It hardly mattered. Every deal Seoul struck with a rival supplier set off a Congressional uproar.

Enter the strong-willed Gerald D. Murphy the chairman of Erly Industries. In December 1981, over lunch at La Caravelle restaurant in New York, Mr. Murphy—who boasted of strong Republican connections—told Mr. Connell he intended to compete for the Korean business. In May 1982, Mr. Murphy beat out Mr. Connell in a bid to supply Seoul with 370,000 metric tons of rice.

"PLAYING CHICKEN"

But he only had about 130,000 tons; he planned to buy the rest from the California co-ops. They refused his initial offers because, Mr. Connell later explained they believed Mr. Murphy could be forced to pay more to avoid defaulting on his contract. In fact, Mr. Murphy's contract called for a very modest default penalty. While he stood pat and the White House took a hands-off approach, the co-ops faced skyrocketing bills for storing the unsold rice.

This ruinous stalemate was broken in July 1983 by Ralph Newman, the new chief executive for the Farmers Rice Cooperative. "The costs of playing chicken with the Koreans were just astronomical," Mr. Newman said. Breaking ranks with Mr. Alioto and Mr. Connell, he offered his rice to the Koreans—through any intermediary they wished.

It was South Korea's last major rice purchase, from the United States or anyone else. At the height of the conflict, leaders in Seoul became so disgusted that they renewed the nation's drive for self-sufficiency in rice.

All major agricultural corporations share the power of the rice belt, according to Representative Charles E. Schumer, the Brooklyn Democrat, because legislators band together to protect one another's pet crops. "The exporters are very powerful politically," he said.

SIDESTEPPING AN EXECUTIVE ORDER

The Agriculture Department is the only United States department that has failed to comply with the Reagan Administration's 1986 order to deny contracts to companies that have been suspended or removed from other Government assistance programs. A chronology of Agriculture's efforts to avoid compliance follows.

Feb. 18, 1986.—President Reagan signs Executive Order 12549 mandating that any company suspended or removed from one Government assistance program is barred from participating in all other Federal programs.

April 22, 1986.—The Agriculture Department balks. Lawrence Wilson, then acting director of Agriculture's Office of Financial Management, tells the Office of Management and Budget, that the department's relationships on assistance contracts "are, by their nature, very close, and usually cooperative, as opposed to 'arm's-length' procurement-type relationships."

Feb. 24, 1988.—As other Government departments begin to comply with the order, Mr. Wilson, in a letter to O.M.B., says that, given a choice of creating a rule barring certain companies from participating in any Federal program or delaying it, "U.S.D.A. would prefer to maintain the status quo at this time." He argues that it would take time to teach the staff how to implement the policy and that no one could forecast the impact of barring companies. He reiterates his views a month later.

May 25, 1988.—The day before the deadline for compliance with the executive order, James B. MacRae Jr., acting administrator for O.M.B.'s office of information and regulatory affairs, notifies Christopher Hicks, general counsel at the Agriculture Department that its proposals for compliance are "inconsistent with O.M.B. guidelines, which are part of the Administration's initiative to prevent fraud, waste and abuse." The problem is that the department wants to exclude "large numbers of U.S.D.A. programs from the order."

June 29, 1988.—Joseph R. Wright Jr., deputy director of O.M.B., has a note hand-delivered to John J. Franke Jr., assistant Agriculture Secretary saying, "U.S.D.A. still is the only agency who has not joined the common rule on suspension and debarment." Noting that Agriculture had not even submitted a revised proposal, Mr. Wright says "It would be very helpful for you to get your agency moving in this direction. Thanks."

Feb. 16, 1989.—Clayton Yeutter, Agriculture Secretary, writes Richard G. Darman, the O.M.B. director, and reiterates the opposition.

May 1990.—Mr. MacRae of O.M.B. writes to Alan Raul, the Agriculture Department's general counsel, rejecting a proposed rule for the Foreign Agricultural Service because it does not automatically bar corporate participants that have been barred by other Government departments.

There is no record of further O.M.B. efforts to secure compliance by the department.

Mr. DE LA GARZA. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

Mr. Chairman, I do so only to thank our colleague, the gentlewoman from Maryland [Mrs. BENTLEY] for bringing us this information, working with us, and we look forward to her continued input and working with us as we address this issue in the next year.

Mr. ROBERTS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DE LA GARZA. I yield to the gentleman from Kansas.

Mr. ROBERTS. Mr. Chairman, I wish to associate myself with the remarks of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. DE LA GARZA], and make the observation that there has been no stronger supporter of the U.S. merchant marine than the gentlewoman from Maryland [Mrs. BENTLEY].

Many times in the past, Mr. Chairman, we have disagreed with regard to policy issues, but her support for the U.S. merchant marine has never wavered; not that she has been unfriendly to the American farmer. I want to thank her for her service, for her dedicated leadership, and there has never been quite a fighter like the gentlewoman from Maryland on behalf of her constituency.

Mr. CARDIN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DE LA GARZA. I yield to the gentleman from Maryland.

Mr. CARDIN. Mr. Chairman, I also want to join in the strong commendation of my colleague, the gentlewoman from Maryland [Mrs. BENTLEY], and her work for the merchant marine and for this Nation. She has done a great job in supporting the merchant marine. She is going to be sorely missed in this Chamber next year for her strong advocacy for U.S. interests. I really wanted to take the time to thank her for her long service on behalf of the people of her district.

Mr. STUDDS. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the statement of the gentlelady from Maryland.

Last October, the New York Times ran a series that was highly critical of the Agriculture Department's export policies. The allegations in the Times exposé raise a number of questions on the beneficiaries of American agriculture export assistance programs.

It turns out a surprising number of USDA recipients are actually foreign-owned companies. There is something fundamentally wrong with Government policy when we can't support U.S. maritime companies that transport our troops and supplies to war and U.S. goods during peacetime, but can allow billions of dollars to subsidize foreign agricultural conglomerates.

While we are not debating USDA export policy today, we should take a long and hard look at this issue when we consider next year's farm bill. I look forward to working with the distinguished chairman of the Agriculture Committee on that bill.

AMENDMENT OFFERED BY MR. KREIDLER

Mr. KREIDLER. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. KREIDLER: Page 34, line 8 after "safety" insert

"...including responsibilities under the Federal Meat Inspection Act and the Poultry Products Inspection Act. Until such time as the Under Secretary establishes, based on the best available scientific and technologic data, levels of pathogens that constitute a threat to human health in meat and poultry, and prohibits or restricts the sale of meat and meat products and poultry and poultry products that exceed these levels, no official inspection seal shall be applied to such products that states that the product has been inspected for wholesomeness or inspected and approved, nor shall the Department of Agriculture print or distribute any educational material that suggests that meat and poultry has been inspected in a manner designed to protect human health by limiting bacterial contamination".

Mr. KREIDLER (during the reading). Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the amendment be considered as read and printed in the RECORD.

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Washington?

There was no objection.

Mr. KREIDLER. Mr. Chairman, last year three children died in Washington State because a batch of Government-approved hamburger was contaminated with a deadly microscopic organism known as E. coli 0157:H7.

That was only one of 20 E. coli outbreaks reported in 1993, with 11 more deaths. Another 25 outbreaks, and at least 4 deaths, have been reported so far this year, in Oregon, Minnesota, California, Nebraska, North Carolina, Vermont, North Dakota, Ohio, Massachusetts, New York, Connecticut, Hawaii, New Jersey, Florida, Pennsylvania, Montana, Wisconsin, and Alabama.

E. coli may be the most dangerous pathogen in meat and poultry, but it is also rare. Much more common are pathogens like salmonella, listeria, and others we have all heard too much about. They are the greatest threat to the safety of meat and poultry.

These microbes can be kept to a minimum with proper processing techniques, backed up by an inspection system based on science. Today's system can deal only with what inspectors can see and feel. For half a billion dollars a year, the American consumer deserves more.

This amendment specifies that the Under Secretary for Food Safety is responsible for meat and poultry inspection, and it prohibits the use of the USDA inspection seal, which implies that inspected meat and poultry is wholesome and safe, until the Department has brought the inspection system into the modern era.

That means setting limits on pathogen levels, based on the best available scientific information.

The Pathogen Reduction Act, which the gentleman from Texas [Mr. STENHOLM] has introduced at the request of the administration, requires USDA to set and enforce pathogen limits. This amendment does not incorporate that complex proposal, but this amendment prohibits the use of the USDA seal of approval until we have an inspection system that deals with this growing threat. I think that is the least we can do.

I understand the need to consider the Pathogen Reduction Act fully, and I believe the chairman is committed to do so early in the next Congress. Meanwhile, I urge the adoption of this amendment so that consumers are no longer misled by the USDA seal when they buy meat and poultry.

□ 1600

Mr. STENHOLM. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment of the gentleman today.

Mr. Chairman, again it is not that I do not agree with the basic thrust of the amendment because the gentleman has correctly pointed out that we have introduced legislation last week that encompasses a good portion, in fact perhaps would be construed as being much stronger than the gentleman's amendment today.

The difficulty we have with the gentleman's amendment today is as I mentioned, we got the bill from the administration last week. We are currently trying to see if we can reach some agreement and accommodation that can get something done this year in legislation.

This piece of legislation today is not the time and the place for us to consider this amendment. What we need to do, and the gentleman was correct in his earlier statement. In fact, we not only have introduced legislation in our committee but we are actively working to see what can be done to move forward the pathogen problem and come up with a constructive solution that we can in turn interject into our meat and poultry system so that in fact we do begin testing for pathogens in our meat and poultry supply.

The difficulty and why I say I must reluctantly rise in opposition, and I would ask the gentleman to consider perhaps withdrawing his amendment today, with the full assurances that not only are we sympathetic, we have introduced legislation last week and we will actively begin working for purposes of seeing how we might do it. This is not the time and the place. But I would hope that with this assurance, the gentleman may consider withdrawing his amendment today. If so, I would certainly look forward to working with him in solving a very real problem.

Mr. KREIDLER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. STENHOLM. I yield to the gentleman from Washington.

Mr. KREIDLER. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding. I thank him and very much appreciate the comments of the chairman of the subcommittee relative to his commitment to address this issue. This is an issue of deep and abiding concern particularly to my State that has grievously suffered at the expense of undercooked hamburger that has been contaminated by E. coli. We are very interested in my State as indeed I believe the whole country is that we make sure our poultry and meat supply is as safe as possible. It is not my desire as a member of this body to slow down the process or complicate the work of this committee or from the standpoint of making sure that the USDA moves forward as aggressively and forcefully as possible.

With that understanding, I will take the request or the suggestion that has been offered to me by the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to withdraw the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore (Mr. MURPHY). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Washington?

There was no objection.

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. The amendment is withdrawn.

Mr. STENHOLM. Briefly, Mr. Chairman, reclaiming my time, I thank the gentleman for withdrawing the amendment and look forward to working with him in a constructive solution to the very real problem that he has highlighted today in this discussion.

Mr. DE LA GARZA. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. STENHOLM. I yield to the gentleman from Texas, the chairman of the committee.

Mr. DE LA GARZA. Mr. Chairman, I also rise to thank the gentleman and commend him for his energetic and vigorous pursuing of this issue. We will work with him diligently and we will appreciate his input into the process as we work in this area and commend him for all the work that he has done. The people of his area and his district should be proud of the vigorous manner in which he has pursued this issue.

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. Are there further amendments to the bill?

Mr. DE LA GARZA. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the last word, and I yield to my colleague, the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. TORRICELLI].

Mr. TORRICELLI. Mr. Chairman, I sought recognition to enter into a colloquy with the gentleman from Texas [Mr. STENHOLM], the chairman of the subcommittee, if I might.

Mr. Chairman, last January I introduced into the House the Katie O'Connell Safe Food Act, comprehensive legislation designed to revamp and modernize our meat and poultry inspection system. A key provision of the bill is to move the meat and poultry inspection from the Department of Agriculture to an independent agency.

The USDA as he knows is charged with the dual goals of promoting and policing agricultural products. I strongly believe that this is an inherent conflict of interest. Meat and poultry inspections should be viewed as a public health concern, not as a business concern. I have strong doubts that the USDA's top priority is public health if it is also promoting sales.

Apparently Vice President GORE and his commission shared this view and recommended moving meat and poultry inspection to the Food and Drug Administration in his Reinventing Government report.

Today I came to the floor with the intention of offering an amendment to move this function from the USDA to the FDA. However, I am persuaded that a move of this nature needs more extensive study. Because I have particular confidence in the gentleman from Texas [Mr. STENHOLM] and the relevant committees involved, I am seeking his assurance the subcommittee will further study the ramifications of this move and hold hearings on the subject in the next Congress so we might consider my recommendations and legislation with some confidence.

Mr. STENHOLM. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DE LA GARZA. I yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. STENHOLM. Mr. Chairman, I appreciate very much all of the gentleman's efforts on this issue and share many of his concerns. Recognizing the need to separate meat and poultry inspection and other food safety obligations from marketing and promotion type responsibilities within USDA, this bill today creates a new Undersecretary for Food Safety, elevating and keeping completely separate all food safety activities within the Department. This approach represents a fundamental shift in the way USDA does business, one which the Committee on Agriculture believes is the most immediate, appropriate and effective way to address this concern. In our effort to improve the current system, the Committee on Agriculture has had numerous hearings concerning USDA's meat and poultry inspection system and will continue to have an interest in ensuring the safety of our Nation's food supply with future hearings. I look forward to working with the gentleman.

Mr. TORRICELLI. Mr. Chairman, I want to thank the gentleman from Texas [Mr. STENHOLM] for his cooperation in this matter. I also want to thank the families of all the E. coli victims who have worked to write the Katie O'Connell Act and I look forward in the next Congress to working with him in finding a comprehensive solution. I would also like to express my keen interest in the Pathogen Reduction Act which the gentleman introduced recently. I would appreciate it if he could briefly summarize the legislation that he has offered.

Mr. STENHOLM. In general terms, the bill would provide broad authority for the Secretary to issue regulations requiring testing for the presence of pathogens, establish acceptable levels for pathogens, provide mandatory recall and trace-back authority, and impose civil penalties. I fully intend to review this legislation in my subcommittee—in fact, we have already begun the process—and work with the gentleman and all interested parties in moving a bill next Congress that most appropriately addresses our mutual concerns.

Mr. TORRICELLI. Mr. Chairman, I want to thank the gentleman for his explanations and his commitment. I look forward to working with him in the next Congress, and I have complete confidence that under his leadership, we will be able to move forward the issue of food safety. I also want to thank the gentleman from Texas [Mr. DE LA GARZA], the chairman of the committee, for yielding me this time and for his support and cooperation.

AMENDMENTS OFFERED BY MR. DE LA GARZA

Mr. DE LA GARZA. Mr. Chairman, I offer amendments, and I ask unanimous consent for them to be considered en bloc.

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. The Clerk will report the amendments.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. DE LA GARZA (during the reading). Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the amendments be considered as read and printed in the RECORD.

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

Mr. DE LA GARZA. Mr. Chairman, I yield to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. TRAFICANT].

Mr. TRAFICANT. Mr. Chairman, we do have back in my community, in my district, quite a presence of farmers. They have continuously expressed support for the bills of the gentleman from Texas, the chairman of the committee. I appreciate the fact that he has included my amendment and is looking at the plight of farmers in the trade issues facing our Nation. I thank the chairman for including my amendment in the en bloc amendments.

Mr. DE LA GARZA. Mr. Chairman, the en bloc amendments include clarifying the process for computer purchases at USDA, the local farmer committees keep the authority to hire an executive director, that committees could not merge unless farmers vote, socially disadvantaged farmers, the National Appeals Division which modernizes it, technical conforming amendments, and the amendment mentioned by the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. TRAFICANT] to buy American equipment.

Mr. ROBERTS. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the last word.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the chairman's en bloc amendment and wish Members to understand that I know of no other amendments to be offered. So with the completion of the chairman's en bloc amendment I also wish to inform Members that it is not the intention of the minority to call for a recorded vote on final passage. I will yield to the chairman so that he may indicate if that would be his desire as well. Is that what the chairman feels would be the wisest course of action in here?

Mr. DE LA GARZA. If the gentleman will yield, that is always the wisest course to take.

Mr. ROBERTS. I thank the gentleman for his contribution.

I want to say one other thing, Mr. Chairman, I want to thank the chairman for his help, and I want to thank the gentleman from Texas [Mr. STENHOLM] and all of the Members of the majority side and the minority and the House Committee on Agriculture. We have some strong differences of opinion on this bill, and I hope all of the things the chairman and the gentleman from Texas [Mr. STENHOLM] have said will certainly turn out to be accurate, and all of the concerns that we have raised perhaps we can work on.

I do have one other final concern. About 2 months ago when we were considering the reorganization bill, an unfortunate situation happened at the Department of Agriculture, and I am going to make a brief mention of this because I do not want it to happen again. We have many research grants at the Department of Agriculture with the Cooperative State Research Service, the CSRS. These are our land grant schools. These are very valuable research grants that go to graduate students and fund a great deal of agricultural research.

To influence votes on the reorganization bill there was a political hold placed on these research grants, some 350 of them, and an additional warning that 800, 800 of these grants would be under a political hold. It was to influence votes, or at least to try to stir action or to be a catalyst for action on the USDA reorganization bill.

It influenced this Member all right. I really think that this action was unprecedented. It dealt with last year's appropriations, not this year's, and it was not necessary. Quite frankly, it was bush league.

I could go on into considerably more detail, but after consideration by myself, the Department of Agriculture and the gentleman from Oregon [Mr. SMITH], the political hold was lifted. I would hope that in any future debate, whether it be crop insurance reform, or USDA reorganization, or a farm bill, or GATT, or anything, that this kind of action would not be necessary. The P.S. that I put on the letter to Secretary Espy was at any time he could come by my office and discuss any kind of a bill, regardless of our differences, and this kind of action simply was not needed, and it put a lot of people in a very difficult position, and again, it was not necessary.

I think we see today with only one recorded vote on the USDA reorganization that even though we have strong differences of opinion, the Committee on Agriculture will work together, we will always work together.

Again, I appreciate the chairman's leadership in this regard and I support his en bloc amendment.

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore (Mr. MURPHY). The question is on the amendments offered by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. DE LA GARZA].

The amendments were agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. Are there further amendments to the bill?

If not, the question is on the committee amendment in the nature of a substitute, as amended.

The committee amendment in the nature of a substitute, as amended, was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. Under the rule, the Committee rises.

Accordingly the Committee rose; and the Speaker pro tempore (Mr. McDERMOTT) having assumed the chair, Mr. MURPHY, Chairman pro tempore of the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union, reported that that Committee, having had under consideration the bill (H.R. 3171) to authorize the Secretary of Agriculture to reorganize the Department of Agriculture, and for other purposes, pursuant to House Resolution 544, he reported the bill back to the House with an amendment adopted by the Committee of the Whole.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under the rule, the previous question is ordered.

Is a separate vote demanded on any amendment to the committee amendment in the nature of a substitute adopted by the Committee of the Whole?

If not, the question is on the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

Mr. DE LA GARZA. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the Senate bill (S. 1970) to authorize the Secretary of Agriculture to reorganize the Department of Agriculture, and for other purposes, and ask for its immediate consideration in the House.

The Clerk read the title of the Senate bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

The text of the Senate bill is as follows:

S. 1970

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

If the participant elects to participate in the hearing, the participant shall have the same procedural rights as the appellant with regard to the hearing and other procedures described in this title.

(e) EFFECT OF REVERSAL OR MODIFICATION OF ADVERSE DECISION.—If an adverse decision is reversed or modified by the Division, a decisionmaker may not base any subsequent adverse decision with regard to that appellant on the information that was available to the previous decisionmaker (or could have been available with reasonable diligence on the part of the previous decisionmaker).

The hearing officer shall leave the record open after the hearing for a reasonable period of time to allow the submission of information by the appellant or the decisionmaker after the hearing to the extent necessary to prevent the appellant or the decisionmaker from being prejudiced by new facts, information, arguments, or evidence presented or raised by the decisionmaker or appellant. At the hearing, the agency may not rely on or assert new grounds for the adverse decision, if the grounds were not described in the agency decision notice.

(4) BURDEN OF PROOF.—The appellant shall bear the burden of proving that the adverse decision of the agency was erroneous.

(2) selenium at such levels is not safe to the animals consuming the additive;

(3) selenium at such levels is not safe to individuals consuming edible portions of animals that receive the additive;

nium food additive regulations, and any modification of such rule issued after the date of the enactment of this Act.

The motion was agreed to.

The Senate bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

A similar House bill (H.R. 3171) was laid on the table.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. DE LA GARZA. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks on the bills just passed.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

REMOVAL OF NAME OF MEMBER AS COSPONSOR OF H.R. 4821

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to have my name removed as a sponsor from H.R. 4821.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. McDERMOTT). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Oklahoma.

There was no objection.

LEGISLATIVE PROGRAM

(Mr. GINGRICH asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. GINGRICH. Mr. Speaker, I ask for this time to allow my colleague, the gentleman from California, and the distinguished majority leader to discuss the prospect of taking up a debate on Haiti and the way in which we will proceed. If I might, I will yield first to the gentleman from California to express his concerns.

Mr. COX. I thank the gentleman for yielding, and I thank the majority leader for joining us on the floor for this colloquy.

Mr. Speaker, as both the Republican whip and the Democratic majority leader know, I filed a privileged resolution even before the Haiti occupation for the purpose of forcing what ought to have been scheduled freely, an open debate on the floor of the Congress and decisionmaking by way of vote on the subject of whether an occupation is a good or bad idea, the wisdom of that policy; second, on the scope of the operation and the objectives; and, third, on the cost and what sources we might be willing to make available to pay for such an operation.

I have rolled that resolution so that in the interim the United States has actually occupied Haiti. I have rolled it again because there have been good-faith efforts to see to it that we get such a debate, and I am willing to do so once again, because I know that the majority leader is working on this.

Mr. GEPHARDT. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GINGRICH. I am happy to yield to the gentleman from Missouri.

Mr. GEPHARDT. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding.

As the gentleman probably knows, the Committee on Foreign Affairs today did vote out a resolution that deals with a variety of questions with regard to Haiti, and I believe under that resolution which we will bring to the floor next week we can, in cooperation with Members on both sides of the aisle, structure a debate on all of the three questions the gentleman raised. We also would obviously intend to have alternatives available to the resolution from the Committee on Foreign Affairs, undoubtedly one for the minority, and there may be other Members on both sides of the aisle who would like an additional alternative, and there may be a vote allowed on that as well.

My own feeling is that the questions that you raise and have been asking to raise through the offering of a privileged resolution can be structured into this debate, and it is appropriate that it happen in this debate, and we will try to structure a sufficiently long debate so that the Members of the House on both sides of the aisle can be heard.

Mr. COX. I appreciate very much what the majority leader has described, and I have questions about it.

If I may proceed, do you know what you have in mind by means of complete time for debate? How much time would be devoted to this? I allude to the Persian Gulf debate, for example, when we expended in excess of a day because of the urgency of this matter, because our troops could become involved in hostilities without notice as a defensive matter, because October 15 is nearly upon us. If the agreement is not upheld, we might be required to mount offensive operations. Time really is of the essence. This will be our only opportunity to have a full and free debate. How much time would the majority leader have in mind?

Mr. GEPHARDT. If the gentleman will yield further, we will obviously consult with Members including yourself on both sides of the aisle about how the debate should be structured. I cannot make a commitment now as to the exact length of the debate, but I do believe, and I think the chairman of the committee and others believe, that this should be a sufficiently long debate so that people can get the ability to express themselves and to have a give and take so that the issues that are involved here can be well presented both to the Congress and to the American people.

I agree with the gentleman that the debate on the Persian Gulf was a constructive moment, and I believe a high moment for this institution, and we want to use that kind of an effort to tease out all of the issues involved in the Haiti questions.

Mr. COX. Is the majority leader proposing this debate take place on Monday?

Mr. GEPHARDT. That decision has not been made. I would doubt that Monday would be the day for this. It probably would be Tuesday or Wednesday.

Mr. COX. Tuesday or Wednesday. And would the procedure on the floor permit consideration of the major points that I have described, the wisdom or not of an occupation, first, the possibility of legislating objective criteria for that mission, if it were decided that occupation were a wise idea; second, and; third, the sources of funding for any such efforts?

Mr. GEPHARDT. I believe the resolution that has come from the Committee on Foreign Affairs largely deals with those issues. But obviously if the minority is afforded an alternative, and I believe it will be, if it is your feeling or the feeling of a group on your side that these issues have not been sufficiently addressed in the resolution, they will have the opportunity to present an alternative.

Mr. COX. My only concern is that because the division on all of these questions is not a partisan one, because most of the positions that are possible on every one of the items that I mentioned are represented on both the Democratic and the Republican sides, that if we structure debate on the floor around a single measure that would, for example, limit our participation in Haiti to 60 days or a Republican alternative that had a different number in it, we would be having a full debate on only a footnote of the entire issue that Congress really ought to engage in. This issue has been a significant one in American foreign policy for many months now.

The United Nations voted to authorize, and the Congress did not. And while I would have preferred that the President actively seek our participation by way of debate and a vote, it is nonetheless incumbent upon this institution to take that up itself, not only under article I, section 8, and the war powers that we share with the President, but also our broader powers under article I to raise and support armies and appropriate funds and so on.

I think all of those questions are properly debated here on the floor. I would hate to see us so constricted that we had a resolution with a time period on one side and a different time period on the other and that was it.

□ 1630

Mr. GEPHARDT. If the gentleman will yield, I would think we would want to have enough general debate time so that the debate on the larger questions could be well structured.

Mr. COX. With that understanding, would it be fair to say that no later than Wednesday this would occur? We are running out of time, of course, in the whole Congress, so we are running up against the wall next week in any case.

Mr. GEPHARDT. If the gentleman will yield, and I am not trying to indicate we are not going to do this issue, we are going to do this issue, I cannot commit to a specific time because we have an active schedule. We are trying to leave by October 7, and there is every intention here to do that. We will have this debate next week. It will be on probably Tuesday or Wednesday, it could be Thursday, I am not sure. I cannot make a commitment at this point because we have so many other matters we have to get done. We are not going to put that in a time period when Members cannot participate, we are not going to avoid it, it will happen.

Mr. COX. I am advised that the length of the debate on the Persian Gulf was about 26 hours. I do not know that 26 hours is necessarily the right time for the debate on the Haitian occupation, but it would seem to me that somewhere in the neighborhood of a day of debate rather than just a few hours of debate would be appropriate.

Mr. GINGRICH. If I might make an observation for a second, it does seem to me—and I hope the majority leader can agree with this—what we might do is indicate to Members on both sides of the aisle that the debate is upcoming and that if we have some expression of interest, say by Monday, that we would have a notion of whether, for example, we might want to start the debate—and I am not sticking to Wednesday—but if we are going to have the votes on Wednesday, we might well to start the debate on Tuesday at the end of the legislative session. Literally, if there are that many Members who want to engage in a serious debate, to allow it to begin in a fairly open manner leading up to a more structured environment on the day of the actual votes.

I remember I stayed here, I had the assignment, until 5 o'clock in the morning or something, on the first when we literally ran out of time on the Desert Storm debate. I do not know if that, for my friend from California, would be a good starting point, but if we could say to all of our colleagues this debate is coming up, it is very serious, it is potentially a matter of life and death and certainly a matter of American foreign policy, if you think you are going to have an interest in substantial time on this, let us know so that we can on a bipartisan basis insure that every Member have the time by creating that kind of a scheduling opportunity.

Would that be a starting point to what the gentleman is describing?

Mr. COX. Yes. I would point out that the privileged resolution which I filed both before the occupation and subsequently has a very short resolution, and that is that the Speaker should immediately schedule a debate and vote upon the scope of an authorization for the United States military occupation of Haiti. If that commitment were made here on the floor, not necessarily to have the debate immediately, we might not be having it until Tuesday or Wednesday or even Thursday of next week, but to schedule it immediately so that would provide Members with the advance notice they would need. And it would set up a procedure so that we could all be confident in knowing that it is going to take place.

Mr. GEPHARDT. If the gentleman will yield, we will be releasing a schedule for tomorrow for next week, and undoubtedly this will be scheduled on that schedule so that Members will have notice, and we will make a special effort to let Members have notice and we will make a special effort to let Members know this is coming. We may even try to figure out how many Members would like to talk so that we can schedule adequate time.

Mr. COX. Finally, I would raise once again something that the leader and I discussed in private conversation on the floor, and that is the possibility that rule sufficiently open to encompass the things we have discussed might be structured so that the majority leader and the minority leader would control what amendments to whatever basic vehicle made it to the floor would be in order. I think certainly every Member of this Congress would trust the judgment of the majority leader and BOB MICHEL, the Republican leader, in matters of war and peace that would permit us the widest scope but also insure that nothing brought up with parochial interests or some other purpose would interfere with the discussion on this floor of the wisdom of our Haiti policy. Would that suggestion—

Mr. GEPHARDT. I appreciate that suggestion. We would obviously consult with the minority in putting this procedure together.

Mr. COX. Well, with the understanding that the debate will take place next week, whether it amounts to the 26 hours we had on the Persian Gulf or not, we would be talking about perhaps a full day of debate, with the understanding that the scope of that debate would not be constricted to a resolution calling for a pullout by a date certain or allowing merely a time period, but also would extend to the financing of the venture and the wisdom of the occupation and objective criteria for success or failure, I have no reason to press my privileged resolution.

Are those things a fair statement of what we have discussed in this colloquy?

Mr. GEPHARDT. I thank the gentleman.

Mr. COX. With that understanding, I yield back.

SPECIAL ORDERS

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. SCOTT). Under the Speaker's announced policy of February 11, 1994, and June 10, 1994, and under a previous order of the House, the following Members are recognized for 5 minutes each.

HAITI: THE CURRENT SITUATION

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Florida [Mr. GOSS] is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. GOSS. Mr. Speaker, we have just had a very instructive colloquy between the distinguished gentleman from California, Mr. COX and our distinguished majority leader, and the distinguished whip, Mr. GINGRICH on where we are going on the subject of the debate of Haiti. Is it not extraordinary that we could be standing here on the 9th day of the occupation of a friendly neighboring country finally saying that we are going to schedule a debate sometime next week that involves a country that has something like 15,000-plus of our Armed Forces at least partially in harm's way, certainly involved in a dangerous and volatile situation down there? A day late and a dollar short, does not quite say it when we talk about, in my view, the negligent way that the leadership of the Democrat Party has handled the debate and discussion of this subject in the House of Representatives.

Certainly, the people of this country are very, very upset that Congress has not chimed in. The polls show that because most of the people across our country do not believe that we should have our troops in harm's way in Haiti. There is no national security reason for them to be there. There are very few national interests that can be resolved by putting our troops there. And there are certainly extra dangers and extra hazards involved for our troops who are there.

So it would seem that we have been asking the wrong question for quite a while here about should we draw a date certain to get our troops out? I think that is the wrong question. I think the question to ask is when should we start pulling our troops out? And the answer is now, today, immediately. I do not know how long it will take to get 15,000-plus troops out of Haiti, but it will surely take a while to do it in an orderly and safe way. I believe that process should start now.

So, the question we should ask is when do we begin removing our troops from Haiti? I hope that the answer to that question, and I urge that the answer to that question, be now immediately. It turns out, as we read the newspaper accounts from down there, we are being asked to police virtually everything. It is not just the parliament building we are protecting today. It is the aid warehouses, we are going to have to protect President Aristide when he returns. Presumably, we are going to have to protect some of the members of the military who are going to be subject to an amnesty accord and protection when they are there because there are plenty of people who are mad at them and they are no longer in the army, no longer have the protection of their own army. Who is going to protect them? I presume that is part of President Carter's agreement with General Cedras and others in his junta.

That sort of leaves us in the position, America, where the taxpayer is paying for not only the bodyguards, but the palace guard of President Aristide who many will go back and read some of his comments and find that he has not been particularly a great fan of the United States of America or certainly of the form of government and democracy that we have here. That will probably agitate some Americans to learn that if they do not know it already.

But then there is the other side of it. Are we also going to be providing bodyguards for General Cedras who has been described as one of the most brutal thugs in the Western Hemisphere? Are we going to give them each a Mercedes Benz that is armor plated so they can go about their business in downtown Port-au-Prince? It seems to me like we are really carving another giant taxpayers expense which would be laughable were it not so expensive and so dangerous.

I do not think the administration has thought this thing out very well.

Talking about dollars, we had the privilege today in the Committee on Rules of talking about the supplemental we will be dealing with under defense appropriations tomorrow. It will be $300 billion. That does not take care of the costs after the intervention slash invasion that came about a week ago Sunday. That is the costs up to that point. The estimate for the costs after that point, to follow the Pentagon plan and the administration plan that we have heard enunciated, gets up into the $2 billion-plus area. That is a lot of money for Haiti, and I would suggest, if we took all of these costs, and put them together, and divided it by the number of people in Haiti, and sent them a check or handed them dollars in their proportional share amount, we would have done a whole lot more for that democracy than the way it has been handled by the Clinton administration so far.

The bottom line is we are going to become ever further sucked into this quagmire down there. We are told that we cannot distribute our aid supplies from the warehouses that are there right now. They are being trashed by the crowds who do not want to get the supplies out in an orderly way. Presumably some of them want to get them out for humanitarian purposes and for their own family and friends. Others inevitably probably exercise a little private enterprise, want to take some of those supplies and sell them on the black market. So, we have got to protect everything that is going on down there.

It has almost gotten to the point, Mr. Speaker, that our military is going to have to protect not only their lives and the lives of each other, their buddies, their colleagues, but the equipment that we have there will start to mysteriously disappear into the night, the guns, the things we are trying to buy back. That program has not had great success so far. I understand we bought something like 18 guns back, but these are the kinds of things that have not been foreseen that a thoughtful foreign policy would have understood, and provided for, and, frankly, avoided.

I see that my time has expired on me, but the subject is not expired, and I know others will take it up.

THE NATIONAL INFRASTRUCTURE DEVELOPMENT ACT

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. SCOTT). Under a previous order of the House, the gentlewoman from Connecticut [Ms. DELAURO] is recognized for 5 minutes.

Ms. DELAURO. Mr. Speaker, I rise this evening to address the state of our economy and to outline innovative new legislation to build our infrastructure and create jobs. Over the past 2 years we have witnessed an upturn in our national economy. Under the strong leadership of the Clinton administration, 3½ million new private sector jobs were created in the past 18 months.

Despite this upturn in our national economic fortune, there are regions of the Nation where continued efforts to create new jobs remain imperative. In my home State of Connecticut, despite a declining unemployment rate in the past year, the threat of future layoffs looms large as defense downsizing continues. People remain concerned about job security and the ripple effect it can have on a community. The need to train workers and create new jobs is as great today as it has ever been.

At the same time, the infrastructure American business needs to maintain a competitive edge in the world economy is aging. Our Nation's roads, bridges, sewers, and airports demand almost $70 billion for repair or replacement each year. And according to recent estimates from the Department of Transportation, the combination of State and Federal funds available for infrastructure leave an almost $30 billion shortfall each year. This shortfall will become a growing burden on American industry, as it finds its means of transporting goods limited and its domestic and international trade increasingly costly.

For years it has been known that investments in our infrastructure have the added benefit of creating good jobs. Combining a strategy to address both of these pressing priorities is not novel. But today I have introduced legislation that seeks to remedy both problems through a limited public investment.

I am joined in this effort by our majority leader, the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. GEPHARDT], who has worked tirelessly in this body to create jobs for working Americans.

This legislation, the National Infrastructure Development Act, would create as many as 250,000 new jobs each year by leveraging a limited public investment in infrastructure to attract significant additional private capital funds.

The bill is designed to be particularly attractive to the pension community and other institutional investors. These investors represent $4.5 trillion in investment potential. For infrastructure, this is a vast investment opportunity. Evidence of the attractiveness of investment in infrastructure is easy to find. Earlier this year an 80-member delegation of pension managers traveled to China to investigate infrastructure investment opportunities there. And they liked what they saw. We must make it attractive for these funds to invest in America.

The bill creates a Government-sponsored corporation, the National Infrastructure Corporation—or NIC—which would be funded by an initial $1 billion Government investment for 3 years. Its mission would be to invest in and insure infrastructure and environmental projects that will generate revenues. Construction or repair of toll roads, airports, bridges, sewage treatment facilities, and clean water projects are potential investments.

By lending or insuring funds to municipalities or States with projects like these, the NIC would allow pension funds to strengthen their investments while helping us strengthen our economy. And over time, the NIC itself would become an attractive investment for the pension community. Private investors could eventually buy the Corporation from the Federal Government, repaying the taxpayers' original investment.

In addition, the bill would create something called the public benefit bond. The bill would allow cities and States to offer bonds to pension funds for use in infrastructure construction. Under the public benefit bond, these investments would be attractive to pension funds because it allows them to pass on tax benefits to their pensioners.

What this bill does not do is end traditional means of funding our road construction. It does not replace the need for Federal or State assistance to highway and mass transit programs. Instead, it offers a new method of filling the $30 billion annual shortfall that has been projected for these projects. The NIC will supplement, not supplant, traditional methods of financing our infrastructure development. Investment from NIC will allow States and municipal governments to use existing formula and grant funds for other projects of importance.

Who benefits from this approach? We all do. First and foremost, American workers will benefit from this new twist in an old concept of job creation. Under traditional Government transportation investment programs, every $1 billion the Federal Government invests creates 30,000 to 50,000 new jobs. Under the National Infrastructure Development Act, every $1 in Federal investment will result in $10 of actual construction. So each $1 billion in Federal investment will create 250,000 to 450,000 jobs.

American business benefits. The reliable airports, roads, and other means of transportation vital to the movement in goods in an international economy become more secure, assuring continued growth. The taxpayer benefits from better modes of transportation for fewer tax dollars. Pension investors benefit because they can look to American opportunities to invest their pension dollar instead of China.

Mr. Speaker, I introduced the National Infrastructure Development Act because as a member of the Appropriations Committee I understand all too well that the Federal dollars are increasingly limited. I understand that in order for Government to accomplish its goals we will need to find new methods of getting the job done. I believe by making it more attractive for private investors to engage in the rebuilding of America we will be forging a vital partnership—one that will help us create new jobs and good investments, and rebuild our aging infrastructure.

I believe that this bill represents ideas that will be attractive to my colleagues on both sides of the aisle and it is my hope to work with Democrats and Republicans to see this legislation actively considered in the next session of Congress.

Mr. GEPHARDT. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to join Congresswoman DELAURO in cosponsoring the National Infrastructure Development Act of 1994.

The purpose of the National Infrastructure Development Act is to increase the public works investment so critical to sustaining our long-term economic growth. Good roads, airports, transportation networks, sewer systems, and other public works have been recognized as necessary for strong productivity growth.

Over the past 2 years, the Clinton administration and the Congress have made tough choices to reduce the Federal budget deficit. While we have made historic progress in rekindling sustainable economic growth, our rate of investment in public works remains well below the level believed necessary for optimal economic growth.

During the 1980's, real Federal investment in infrastructure fell 16 percent. As the Federal Government reduced its investment, greater burdens fell on the States and municipalities. And many of them—not just inner cities or small towns but suburbs as well—have been unable to meet their needs.

As investment has lagged and our public works have aged, their contribution to our economy has diminished. Traffic congestion, for example, now costs drivers in our largest cities over $40 billion per year in lost time and wasted gasoline.

It is not just the economic effects that the American people see so plainly. In Missouri, failing septic systems have left raw sewage standing in our streets and gutters; local sewer districts are unable to afford even basic improvements. Long-promised road improvements have gone unfulfilled—leaving our county roads with accident and fatality rates substantially higher than the national average.

While we have made some improvements in recent years, numerous studies document the need for additional public investment. Bringing our bridges and highways up to current safety standards would require a doubling of the current highway program. The backlog of sewage projects totals over $200 billion. Last year, the Bipartisan Commission to Promote Investment in America's Infrastructure reported that America's investment shortfall in its infrastructure totals between $40 and $80 billion per year.

The Federal Government must lead the way with new resources. Our strategy should recognize also that many States are more capable and sophisticated than they were in the past. New methods of financing may be both necessary and possible.

The National Infrastructure Development Act establishes an innovative, investment-oriented Federal infrastructure strategy to help States and municipal governments finance needed infrastructure. Specifically, it establishes a National Infrastructure Corporation to provide a broad array of financing to projects capable of providing an economic return. These would include projects like toll roads and bridges, wastewater and drinking water treatment plants, and airports.

By leveraging private and other public sector monies, the Corporation would substantially increase the amount of infrastructure created by each federal public works dollar. Experts estimate that the Corporation could leverage $10 or more in private investment for every $1 it receives from the Federal Government. Under this legislation, the corporation's capitalization would be $3 billion. It is anticipated that this could support up to $30 billion in new project work, generating between 675,000 and 900,000 new jobs.

Congresswoman DELAURO has proposed an innovative mechanism to address a difficult problem. It is my hope that we can move forward in promoting additional public works investment in the next Congress. This legislation makes a valuable contribution to understanding the issues and attaining this goal.

TRIBUTE TO FORMER REPRESENTATIVE EDWARD PATTEN

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. HUGHES] is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. HUGHES. Mr. Speaker, New Jersey and our Nation suffered a tragic loss last week with the passing of our former colleague and friend, Congressman Ed Patten. Rutgers University, our State University, also lost a great and loyal friend.

I would like to take a few moments to reflect upon his life, and to pay tribute to this man who was surely one of New Jersey's finest sons. He was a big man, with a gentle smile and pleasing and outgoing personality.

Eddie Patten was also one of the most colorful, congenial and compassionate individuals to ever grace the Halls of Congress. To remember him any other way would be unfair to a man who built his reputation on the basis of his warmth, great sense of humor and genuine love of Congress and the people he served.

When I first came to the Congress in 1975, Eddie Patten was one of the senior Members of our delegation, one who I looked to for guidance and good counsel. I must confess, I at first never knew when to take him seriously.

He was always telling stories, cracking jokes, and hatching the kind of schemes which made him a legend around the Capitol, such as the time he clipped off another Member's tie with a pair of scissors so he could replace it with one manufactured in his hometown of Perth Amboy.

No matter how tense the situation might be, or how difficult the issue was that we were facing, you could always count on Eddie to come up with a well-placed joke or one-liner that would ease the pressure and help everyone get through the crisis at hand. He was quite a character.

But Eddie was also one of the most able and effective Members of our delegation. As a Member of the House Appropriations Committee, he helped lead the fight for education and job training programs. He worked tirelessly in support of programs to create jobs and put people to work.

Just as importantly, Eddie never lost sight of the people he served. Indeed, it was difficult to go anywhere in his district that people didn't know him by name and enjoy being around him. To Eddie, the people always came first.

I am very proud to have had the opportunity to serve with Eddie Patten, and to get to know him as a legislator and a friend. I wish to extend my condolences to his daughter Catherine and to the citizens of New Jersey on the loss of this wonderfully kind and productive public servant. We will miss him.

Mr. MENENDEZ. Mr. Speaker, Congressman Edward James Patten, who served in this body from 1963 until his retirement in 1980; passed away on September 17, 1994, at the age of 89.

Mr. Patten spent his entire life in public service. He graduated from Rutgers Law School; and, at age 27 became the youngest mayor in the history of Perth Amboy. He then served as the Middlesex County clerk and secretary of state for the State of New Jersey under Gov. Dick Hughes.

Following the 1960 census, New Jersey's 15th Congressional District was created. Ed Patten was selected by the county Democratic organization to run for Congress in the newly established district.

He went on to win that election in 1962 and each subsequent election through 1978. During that time, he had only one serious primary challenge and that was during the Vietnam war.

Ed Patten loved the House of Representatives. He was a Democrat who believed that we had a responsibility to meet the needs of the Republic's people. He felt privileged to serve with former Speakers of the House John McCormick and Tip O'Neill.

He sat on the House Appropriations Committee for many years, during which time he was an impassioned fighter for education. During his tenure on the Labor—Health and Human Services—Education Subcommittee, he championed the growth of higher education and our State university, Rutgers, held a special place in his heart.

He was also an advocate of the work done at Princeton and worked hard for the Princeton Plasma Physics Center, which as we all know has done recordbreaking research in the field of fusion.

But, Mr. Speaker, people remember Ed Patten for his love of his family, his fellow human beings, and for his love of Perth Amboy, NJ. He was Perth Amboy's favorite son. He lived in the same house on Market Street for his entire married life. He was enormously proud of his daughter, Sister Catherine Patten, to whom I want to extend my deepest sympathy. He was a man who could relate to the people because he was one of them. His favorite hours were spent in Perth Amboy at the Elk's Club. His office was open every Saturday, where he and his late wife, Anna, would see constituents all day. He was a good man with a generous and caring heart, and the problems his constituents had became his problems.

Mr. Speaker, it seems that here, in the House of Representatives, everyone who knew him has an Eddie Patten Story. Mine concerns one of his congressional elections, where his opponent publicly stated that, "running against Ed Patten is like running against Santa Claus."

I never had the privilege of meeting Ed Patten, but I wish I had.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. HUGHES. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks on my special order just given.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New Jersey?

There was no objection.

TRIBUTE TO THE LATE HON. ROBERT L.F. SIKES

(Mr. HUTTO asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. HUTTO. Mr. Speaker, it is my sad responsibility to announce to the House that my predecessor, former Congressman Bob Sikes, passed away this morning. Congressman Sikes spent 38 years in this House of Representatives. He was a member of the Committee on Appropriations and was the chairman of the Subcommittee on Military Construction on Appropriations. He will certainly be missed by many, particularly those he served in northwest Florida. He was somewhat of an institution in our area.

Congressman Sikes is survived by his wife, Inez T. Sikes; a son, Robert K. Sikes of Orlando; a daughter, Bobbye Sikes Wicke of Indiana, and a number of grandchildren, great-grandchildren, and one great-great-grandchild.

WHY CONGRESS SHOULD NOT PASS THE GATT AGREEMENT

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. BROWN] is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, yesterday the administration sent to Congress the Uruguay Round of GATT, the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade. It deserves to be defeated. The lawyers who wrote this 3,000-page agreement included not one single provision for child labor laws, for worker rights, for labor standards, or even any prohibition against slave labor. Even NAFTA, as bad as it was, had a side agreement on labor.

I believe strongly that our Government should begin to negotiate trade agreements that benefit the people in the plant floors, not just high-powered international financiers. GATT ignores labor issues. The administration tried but failed to get labor provisions included in this agreement. We are left with another international trade agreement that does nothing to promote fair trade. This agreement does nothing to address the cruelest and most prevalent unfair trade practice of all, the suppression of worker rights by governments seeking low wage, low standard competitive advantage on the world market.

Why should American workers, the backbone of our country, the backbone of our economy, why should American workers have to compete with workers who make $2 a day if they are lucky? Until worker and labor standards are included in a trade agreement, we will never have fair trade, and American workers will continue to pay the price.

GATT is especially bad, because it would create a powerful new bureaucracy, an international bureaucracy known as the World Trade Organization. The WTO is a threat to the sovereignty of the United States and more trouble down the road for our country, for consumers, for people that work. Under the WTO, each nation in the world has one vote. Japan has one vote, Cuba has one vote, Haiti has one vote, even Saint Lucia has one vote. Saint Lucia would have the same voting power in the WTO as does the United States.

Of the 120 countries in the WTO, 80 of them as members of the United Nations voted against the United States more than 50 percent of the time. So if Cuba and Haiti and Saint Lucia decided the United States food safety laws violated the GATT agreements, our clean food, clean food safety laws, they could haul the United States before the World Trade Organization, which could impose sanctions on the United States. That would hurt our products when we try to sell them on the world market.

If you like Japan writing trade rules, then you will love GATT. If you want to put the United States on the same level with countries the size of a postage stamp, then the World Trade Organization is for you, then GATT is for you.

Meanwhile, the international trade deficit is killing America's competitive position in the world. The U.S. trade deficit in July alone, in 1 month, reached $10.99 billion, the second highest level in our country's history. We have done a good job the last 2 years getting the budget deficit down. Unfortunately, the trade deficit is getting larger and larger. The deficit with Japan alone in July was $5.67 billion. The deficit with China, which uses slave labor and has all the human rights violations that people on this floor have talked about, the deficit just last month with China was $2.67 billion.

For too many years, we have allowed other countries to write our trade laws. That trade deficit of over $100 billion this year kills American jobs. Balancing our international trade account would save approximately 160,000 jobs every month. That is why fair trade is so important to building a strong economic future for northeast Ohio and building a strong economic future across this country. That is why I will be voting against GATT next week.

THE CLASSROOM TECHNOLOGY ACT

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from California [Mr. LEWIS] is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. LEWIS of California. Mr. Speaker, I rise this evening to discuss a piece of legislation being introduced by my colleague, the gentleman from California [Mr. LEHMAN] and myself, dealing with the Classroom Technology Act, and I would like to yield to my colleague [Mr. LEHMAN].

Mr. LEHMAN. Mr. Speaker, there is much talk about the information superhighway and how the information revolution will affect our Nation's economic competitiveness. We usually discuss the information revolution in terms of maximizing worker productivity and improving the bottomline for business in the global economy, but there is one major sector in our Nation that is being left to scavenge back on the home front during the information revolution—education.

Students cannot be adequately prepared for the use of technology in the workplace if they are not educated with computers and other technologies in the classroom. Being able to program the VCR or play video games is not good enough. We—as community leaders, as policymakers, as concerned Americans—must take the lead in helping our schools take advantage of computer, telecommunications, and other technologies to ensure that our children are eager to take on the world and its educational resources.

We have seen remarkable changes in learning technology over the past quarter century. And yet, technology has not transformed schools to the degree it has other aspects of our society. In fact, a teacher from the little red schoolhouse of last century could walk into a classroom today and feel comfortable because so little has changed.

While many schools have and use computers in instruction, few schools have the capacity for any degree of two-way voice, data and video networking with data bases and with other schools. Only 12 percent of U.S. classrooms have a telephone. Only 4 percent of teachers have a modem, and only 4 percent have access to internet—NEA survey.

The classroom remains isolated and simplistic at a time when the world is becoming more interactive and complex. We are letting our budgetary and other constraints limit the possibilities for our students, our future work force. Instead of yielding to these constraints, we must push ahead with innovative ways of meeting our students' technological needs.

Earlier, this year, Mr. Speaker, we made the initial plans to meet these needs when we passed the Goals 2000 legislation, which incorporated the use of technology and telecommunications in achieving the national education goals. This legislation, as well as the Elementary and Secondary Education Act reauthorization—which includes a title for technology for education for the first time—set the standards which schools must aim for.

Unfortunately, the schools have not been provided with the tools to meet these standards. A report by the National Institutes of Standards and Technology underscored this fact when it determined that the computer base in elementary and secondary schools is completely inadequate to meet the telecommunications applications of today. The report notes that of 80 percent of the computer base, over 50 percent are Apple Two's. This puts the students-to-computers ratio of 14 to 1 in the United States in proper perspective—quality education data study.

If there are 14 students sharing one computer, and that computer is 10 years—and at least 4 generations—old, it is obvious that very little innovation is taking place. While these computers are adequate for routine tasks such as games and drills, educational software is no longer developed for them and the students are definitely not learning to use equipment that they will encounter in the workplace. This is like teaching students to drive on the highway in a Model T.

That is assuming that the teachers are able to teach the students how to drive. Less than half of school districts in the United States have an introductory computer course for their teachers—IEA computers in education study. Because of this lack of formal training, teachers must learn as they go along and often only when the school computer is available. As a result, it takes teachers an average of 5 to 6 years to develop expertise in computer use which can be relayed to their students—NEA survey.

An additional gap in the quality of educational technology is the lack of connections between business and schools. For example, my State of California ranks last nationally in the computer-per-student ration—quality education data. In a State that boasts of cutting edge technology companies, this is an appalling statistic.

I believe that business and schools should link up to provide our children with effective technologies that will prepare them for the modern workplace. That is why I am introducing legislation with my colleague from California, Mr. LEWIS, which would provide incentives to businesses to share outdated equipment with schools and establishing a fund to improve schools' telecommunications capabilities.

The Classroom Technology Act encourages elementary and secondary schools, colleges, libraries, and other information sources to join together to share the resources they have through telecommunications. Once the urban and rural regions of the country are linked, connections to national networks of information and programming will be easier to make.

I strongly believe that the convergence of information and telecommunications will allow students to overcome income, geography, and other barriers to learning. Mr. Speaker, this can only benefit us as a society and as a nation because these students will grow up more aggressive and more well-rounded when it comes to information technology. We must begin the fight for our economic future today—I call on my colleagues to join me in laying the groundwork for our Nation's survival.

Mr. LEWIS of California. Mr. Speaker, I very much appreciate my colleague's contribution.

The least that we had hoped from the initial stages of this legislation is to create models, perhaps in more than one urban center, models in a rural sector of California and other States that essentially would provide a design as to how computers and computer technology can be used to better enhance and prepare our students for the technology so necessary for tomorrow, not just in the workplace but for their own personal use as well.

This is a critical moment in the history of American education. The use of technology has exploded, affecting all aspects of life from the workplace to the living room. Our children must have access to new technologies and information tools like computers, networks, CD-ROMs, modems, and the emerging information superhighway. To produce tomorrow's leaders, we must provide our children and their teachers with this kind of technology.

To better serve the needs of students and teachers, Congressman LEHMAN and I have introduced H.R. 5013, the Classroom Technology Act of 1994. This legislation will promote the use of technology and telecommunications in classrooms throughout the country. The bill focuses on school technology, grant programs, and incentives for public/private partnerships. It will give students the technology necessary to communicate with libraries, other students, and experts in every field across the country and around the world. This will be especially useful to rural districts like my own, where students often have trouble accessing essential information.

The Classroom Technology Act directs the Department of Education to coordinate educational technology activities among the related Federal and State agencies, industry leaders, and interested educational and parental organizations. There are many individual schools in the United States that have incredibly advanced programs for their students. I am fortunate enough to have one such school in my district, the Science and Technology Center in Apple Valley. I feel that it is vital that schools with good programs, like the Science and Technology Center, share their knowledge and experience with other schools around the Nation. Our bill establishes an Office of Educational Technology that would oversee educational technology activities nationwide and help less progressive schools implement the programs proven valuable and successful.

Furthermore, our bill encourages public and private sector cooperation in providing schools with hardware and software. It establishes a clearinghouse with an 800 number at the Department of Commerce for businesses to donate their old computers. As you know, corporations are forever updating their equipment. While no longer state of the art, most of such equipment can still be extremely valuable, especially to schools which often lack the funds necessary to purchase any equipment at all. Under H.R. 5013, the businesses can get rid of older machinery and receive a tax break for the donation. Our schools will certainly benefit from the free technology.

H.R. 5013 would also direct the National Telecommunications Infrastructure Administration [NTIA] to set aside a percentage, 33 to 40 percent of its funds from the matching grant program for educational purposes. It would set up a joint Department of Education and NTIA fund for matching grants, the quickest way to maximize a modest amount of Federal money. The funds would come from the universal user fees and penalties that are collected by the Federal Communications Commission from telephone companies. The money would be used for school site infrastructure, from wiring to computers to satellite dishes.

While California is a high-technology giant in the eyes of the world, its classrooms are woefully unprepared to teach students the computer skills they need. With the rapid advancements in computer technology, we cannot afford to let a generation of students fall behind other leading industrialized countries. The Classroom Technology Act creates a public-private partnership involving students, parents, education, business, and Government. It will ensure that today's students are equipped for tomorrow's jobs.

CLASSROOM TECHNOLOGY ACT WOULD INTEGRATE COMPUTER LEARNING THROUGHOUT NATION

WASHINGTON, DC.—Citing the need to improve computer learning in America's classrooms to prepare students for the job markets of the future, Congressman Jerry Lewis has introduced the Classroom Technology Act of 1994, legislation that encourages the use of emerging computer and telecommunications technologies in a classroom setting largely through building partnerships between the business and education community.

"Today's students and tomorrow's leaders should and must be computer literate and technologically equipped to acquire the skills they need for the jobs of tomorrow," Lewis said.

"The information superhighway has become more than just a futuristic pipedream. It is our present—and our future. We must begin to prepare our classrooms for this necessary change in education."

According to Lewis, the measure directs the Department of Education to formulate a plan to coordinate educational technology activities among federal and state agencies, while also involving high-tech industry leaders and interested educational and parental organizations. The legislation would direct the National Telecommunications Infrastructure Administration to set aside a percentage (33-40%) of its funding for educational purposes.

The bill also encourages public/private cooperation in providing schools with computer hardware and software through establishing a computer clearinghouse with a toll-free number at the Department of Commerce. Under the legislation, businesses would receive a tax-break for the donation of outdated equipment, while students would receive free working computers.

"While California is a high-tech giant in the eyes of the world, its classrooms are woefully unprepared to teach students the computer skills they need," Lewis said.

"With the rapid advancements in computer technology, we cannot afford to let a generation of students fall behind other leading industrialized countries. The Classroom Technology Act creates a public-private partnership of students, parents, education, business and government to ensure that today's students are equipped for tomorrow's jobs."

SOO LINE RAILROAD

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. SCOTT). Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. DINGELL] is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. DINGELL. Mr. Speaker, in accordance with a motion adopted by unanimous voice vote of the Committee on Energy and Commerce today, I am introducing legislation to extend and preserve the status quo through February 28, 1995, relative to the pending dispute between the Soo Line Railroad Co. and certain of its employees represented by the United Transportation Union. Mr. MOORHEAD, ranking Republican of the Committee on Energy and Commerce, Mr. SWIFT, chairman of the Subcommittee on Transportation and Hazardous Materials, and Mr. OXLEY, ranking Republican of the Subcommittee on Transportation and Hazardous Materials, are original cosponsors of this legislation.

The Soo Line Railroad is the ninth largest of 15 class I railroads in the United States. It operates over 5,000 miles of line in 11 States, including Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Kentucky, Michigan, Minnesota, North Dakota, South Dakota, and Wisconsin. The United Transportation Union [UTU] represents more than 1,000 employees of the Soo Line Railroad, including conductors and trainmen.

Since 1988, the Soo Line and UTU have been in contract negotiations pursuant to the provisions of the Railway Labor Act [RLA]. To date, all efforts to reach a voluntary agreement have failed, including efforts of the National Mediation Board [NMB] to mediate the dispute. In June 1994, the parties rejected the NMB's proffer of arbitration, thus triggering a 30-day cooling-off period that expired on July 14, 1994. Under the terms of the RLA, after the expiration of this 30-day period, either party was free to resort to so-called self-help, for example, the railroad could impose new contractual terms unilaterally or the union could engage in a strike.

On July 14, the Soo Line Railroad imposed new contract terms and the union commenced a strike. This situation persisted for 47 days until the President, by Executive Order 12925, effective August 29, 1994, created Presidential Emergency Board [PEB] No. 225. The President's order was based on the judgment of the NMB that the dispute "threatens substantially to interrupt interstate commerce to a degree that would deprive a section of the country of essential transportation service."

By the terms of the President's Executive Order, PEB, 225 was directed to investigate the dispute and report to the President within 30 days of its creation. As in other similar situations, the parties subsequently have stipulated to an extension of time for submission of the PEB's report until October 14, 1994, by letter dated September 21, 1994 from the chairman of PEB 225. Under the RLA, a final 30-day cooling off period follows the submission of the PEB's report. If no voluntary settlement is reached within such period, the parties are free to resort to self-help. Thus, assuming no further extensions, the date when the parties could engage lawfully in self-help activities is November 14, 1994.

Due to the potential ramifications that self-help could produce in this situation—at a time when Congress will have adjourned—the members of the Committee on Energy and Commerce believe it is essential that legislation be enacted that extends the final cooling off period until after the 104th Congress has been convened and organized. Such action is consistent with prior precedents, such as the 1988 Chicago NorthWestern strike, where the final cooling off period was extended past the date of the August recess.

Under the terms of the motion approved by the Committee on Energy and Commerce today, I have been directed to take action to have the resolution considered in the House under suspension of the rules at the earliest possible date. I, with the cooperation and support of our Republican Members, will follow through fully with the committee's instructions and hereby notify Members of the House of our intent to consider this legislation on the suspension calendar at the earliest possible date.

Clearly, it is the strong and unequivocal desire of every Member of Congress that the parties reach a voluntary agreement. The action authorized by the Committee on Energy and Commerce today encourages voluntary agreement of the parties by giving them sufficient additional time to consider the report of PEB 225 and to negotiate a final resolution of all outstanding issues. It is our sincere hope and desire that the parties redouble their efforts to bring an end to this dispute prior to February 28, 1995.

HAITI

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. WELDON] is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. WELDON. Mr. Speaker, I rise today, again, as a member of the Committee on Armed Services to express my grave concern with what is happening in Haiti as well as my outrage at some additional facts that I learned today in a briefing that was provided to myself and other members of the Committee on Armed Services.

President Clinton has been telling the American people that this effort is a multinational effort and if you ask most Americans and, I think, most Members of Congress who is in Haiti right now, they would tell you, it is a multinational force.

At today's briefing we had the Deputy Secretary of Defense, John Deutch, and Lt. Gen. John Sheehan, who is the Director of Operations for the Joint Chiefs.

I asked that specific question. Right now, today, 10 days after President Clinton committed our troops and has told the American people it is a multinational force, how many Americans are involved in that effort? The answer is that there are 19,000 young Americans who are involved in Haiti today.

Then I said, "Would you tell me how many other troops are involved in that effort today right now, 10 days after the President committed us, after he has told the American people it is a multinational force?"

Secretary Deutch hemmed and hawed and talked about what is committed and what may be. I said, "No, what is there right now, how many troops that are not American?"

He said, "Well, about two dozen."

I said, "You mean like 24?"

Three times I repeated the question and three times Secretary Deutch confirmed that there are 24 non-United States troops involved in Haiti right now; 19,000 Americans and 24 troops, not 24 countries, 24 troops. I said, "Where are they?" And he said, "They are all in the command headquarters."

So we have 19,000 Americans in Haiti in harm's way and we have 24 troops from other countries who are all in the headquarters building.

Mr. Speaker, this is not what the Members of Congress and the American people have been led to believe. This is not what this President has told us in terms of the commitment and the involvement.

Last week he said that within 2 to 3 days the multinational forces would be in Haiti. Here we are 10 days later.

Some other things came out of the briefing. We learned today that the United States in fact will pay all of the costs, if and when other troops come in. So for the taxpayers of this country, we can now advise them that with our serious budget shortfall, if, in fact, we get other troops to come in, which is still doubtful, the taxpayers of this country will pay the full bill. We will pay their salaries. We will pay the cost of transporting them. We will pay all of their expenses.

And in fact, today we had an announcement that the Russians will send troops. We will pay the Russians, not the United Nations, the United States.

Mr. Speaker, this is outrageous. Not only are we going to pay the cost for the troops, but we even heard about big gun buy back program in Haiti. America is buying those guns. We, in fact, are the ones who are paying that bill. What is the cost going to be? Secretary Deutch could not give us an exact figure. Estimates range from $800 million to $1.5 billion.

The Secretary tried to focus on the fact that we should not legislatively impose a date certain to bring the troops out. Well, that is outrageous. Because most of us in this body do not think they should have been inserted there in the first place.

The Secretary and the President would tell us, they are going to be out within a few months, perhaps in the early part of 1995. If you read the Boston Globe today or yesterday, there is an article that says the U.S. military role may last until and through 1996.

Mr. Speaker, we are not getting good information. The American people are not being told the truth about what is happening in Haiti, and we have our men and women in harm's way. Now we hear, if you read the news accounts today, that what we thought was a suicide of one of our troops in Haiti is now thought to not be a suicide and, in fact, there was one AP report today that said it is likely not to be a suicide. We do not know the facts of that young military personnel's death, but we will find that out.

Mr. Speaker, what is happening in Haiti is outrageous because we are not given the facts and the chance to even ask the questions about what we are doing there.

Mr. Speaker, I wanted Strobe Talbott to be at the briefing today. Strobe Talbott was scheduled to be one of the witnesses, representing Warren Christopher, our Secretary of State. Strobe Talbott did not show up. But if I would have had him there, I would have asked him to respond to the internal memo of the United Nations from the United States special envoy to Haiti, Dante Caputo. On May 23 of this year, this is what he wrote to Boutros-Ghali:

To the minister's question about the existence of another alternative, other than force, Dante Caputo replies that the United States acted as a brake to a diplomatic solution, creating a situation where military intervention became nearly inevitable.

Mr. Speaker, as we all know, Dante Caputo resigned from the United Nations last week because of his objections to what we have done in Haiti. I have inserted twice in the record of this institution the full text of Dante Caputo's memos where he outlines everything that is happening now back in May of this year.

Mr. Speaker, this outrage has got to stop. We have got to have a full vote on this. We have to debate and we have got to bring our troops home, not next month, not 90 days but this week.

Mr. Speaker, I include for the RECORD the article to which I referred.

U.S. MILITARY ROLE MAY LAST UNTIL 1996

UNITED NATIONS.—U.S. officials have told the United Nations that they plan to maintain a significant military presence in Haiti until after a new president is inaugurated in 1996.

"The US presence" in the UN follow-up operation "will be fairly substantial," according to a senior UN official who said US forces could make up as much as 50 percent of a 6,000-member UN military and police presence. That force will take over the job of maintaining peace after the bulk of the 20,000 US combat forces withdraw. "They want to be involved until the UN withdraws from Haiti altogether."

In order to win public support for what is proving to be a distinctly unpopular use of military force, President Clinton last week played down the operation's potential for long-term commitment, promising that the United Nations will be capable of taking over the operation in as few as a "couple of months."

"Politically, the administration has to present this as a short-term intervention," said Matthew Vaccaro, an analyst at Defense Forecasts Inc., who participated in Pentagon policy discussions on Haiti until early this summer. "Public support is so tenuous, there's no way the administration could sell a long drawn-out and costly intervention."

At the same time, administration officials and military planners recognize that the United States would have to keep the coalition of peacekeepers from unraveling.

US planners also are betting that they can gradually earn the public's support to sustain a more long-term commitment if the initial military operation proves successful.

"The Clinton administration has deemphasized the key role that the US will play in the UN operation," Vaccaro said. "But they realize that in order for the follow-up UN mission to function there must be a large US presence."

Although UN officials are concerned a large US military presence in the UN follow-up mission may undermine its international complexion, they nevertheless would welcome a more robust US commitment. UN Secretary General Boutros Boutros-Ghali, frustrated by the Clinton administration's reluctance to stay the course in peace enforcement operations in Somalia and Bosnia, is reportedly hopeful that greater US involvement will improve the likelihood for success, restoring credibility to both the United States and the United Nations.

With "peace-keeping fatigue syndrome" spreading throughout the United Nations in the wake of Bosnia and Somalia, diplomats said Boutros-Ghali believes that the only cure is a dose of US arm-twisting. But senior UN officials overseeing the Haiti operation said they fear that Clinton may hand the ball off to them too soon.

Before placing the Haiti mission under the UN flag, Clinton has vowed that US forces will remove Haiti's military dictators, install a team of international police monitors, retrain a Haitian police force, restore Haiti's elected President Jean-Bertrand Aristide to office and create a secure and stable environment for the nation to begin preparations for elections.

UN officials said Washington has pretty much left them in the dark as to how it intends to accomplish these tasks, complicating UN efforts to recruit other countries to serve in the international effort. And they doubt that US troops will be able to create a secure environment for lightly armed UN replacements for at least several months.

These officials are also concerned that if public support for the US operation erodes after the invasion, the Clinton administration may choose prematurely to slough the operation off on the United Nations as it did a year ago in Somalia.

The Pentagon, they pointed out, long wary of the Haiti operation, is said to be eager to get troops out of Haiti as soon as possible, leaving the policing and nation-building tasks to international agencies.

"The military is interested in turning over the responsibilities for nation building and civil administration to the UN as soon as they can," said Dr. Richard Downes, a former staff military planner with the Joint Chiefs of Staff and currently director of communications at the University of Miami's North-South Center.

"They don't look at the postconflict period of Haiti with relish."

ANNOUNCEMENT OF INTENTION TO OFFER MOTION TO INSTRUCT ON H.R. 820, NATIONAL COMPETITIVENESS ACT

Mr. ROHRABACHER. Mr. Speaker, pursuant to clause 1(c) of rule 28, I announce to the House that tomorrow I intend to offer a motion to instruct conferees on H.R. 820. I had previously expected to offer this motion today. The form of the motion is as follows:

Mr. ROHRABACHER moves that the managers on the part of the House at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the 2 Houses on the Senate amendment to the bill, H.R. 820, be instructed to insist on the provisions contained in section 506 of the House bill, entitled "Prohibitions", the text of which is as follows: "None of the funds made available in this Act may be used to provide any direct Federal financial benefit to any person who is not (1) a citizen or national of the United States; (2) an alien lawfully admitted for permanent residence; or (3) an alien granted legal status as a parolee, asylee, or refugee."

THE BRYANT BILL, A GRASS-ROOTS GAG RULE

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. GINGRICH] is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. GINGRICH. Mr. Speaker, I am going to speak today on the Bryant bill, a grassroots gag rule. I want to alert my colleagues that they should have in their office right now a letter to Members of Congress from the Christian Coalition entitled "Stop the gag rule on free speech, vote no on the lobbying disclosure conference report." I urge every Member to read that, because I do not think that Members realize that buried in this so-called lobbying bill is a deliberate grassroots gag rule designed to kill precisely the pressure from back home that has been so effective in this Congress.

Let us be honest, Mr. Speaker, liberals hate grassroots voter pressure. It was voter pressure in support of home schooling that forced the liberals to pull out a provision that would have killed home schooling. It is the grassroots pressure of the right-to-life movement that has sustained a fight that liberals would have crushed years ago. It is the grassroots pressure of people who believe in the second amendment which has stopped the efforts by liberals to strip Americans of the right to bear arms. It has been the opposition to the Clinton tax increase by the grassroots which reduced it to a one-vote margin when the entire power structure of Washington was going to raise taxes on the American people.

Again and again, Mr. Speaker, whether it is school prayer, opposition to prohomosexual education in first grade, or a range of issues which are not politically correct here in Washington, it has been the grassroots who have risen up. The crowning blow to liberals was the grassroots opposition to the Clinton health plan which stopped in its tracks an effort to create a big government, big bureaucracy, big tax health plan.

Now what do we have? We have in the Bryant conference report an effort to strangle grassroots efforts. I urge every Member, get a copy of this report and look at the specifics I am going to give you today, so you understand, this is not some scare story. This is a danger of the Clinton administration getting even. This is the Clinton revenge bill, to get even with the grassroots activists.

This is what they say. This is in the bill, page 5:

Grass Roots Lobbying Communications—the term "inside grass roots lobbying communications" means—

(A) any communication that attempts to influence a matter described in ***

In these various clauses "through an attempt to affect the opinions of the general public. * * *" This is not lobbying the Congress, but informing the general public.

(B) any communication between an organization and any bona fide member of such organization to directly encourage such member to make a communication to a covered executive branch official or a covered legislative branch official with regard to ***.

Any matter described here; again, not lobbying the Congress, but if you belong to a group and you try to talk to your own group, this is now going to be described by the Bryant gag rule as something inappropriate.

(C) any communication between an organization and any bona fide member of such organization to directly encourage such member to urge persons other than members to communicate ***.

In other words, if you are anywhere in America and you decide you want to lobby Congress up to 10 percent of the time you are paid for, and you spend over $2,500, which is one round trip from Los Angeles and hotel spending, one trip. From that point on under these rules you are going to be subject to the registration act, and you are going to have to report to the Director of Registration.

Who is the Director of Registration going to be? For 5 years, longer than a Presidential term, it is going to be somebody appointed by Bill Clinton. Let us say Roberta Achtenberg, for example, is appointed, a vehemently, in the case of Elders, anti-Catholic person.

Now we have a question: Is a papal message on school prayer political or is it religious? Is a papal message on homosexuality political or is it religious? Is a papal message on right-to-life political or is it religious?

Mr. Speaker, I happen to be Baptist, but I would say that those people who are worried about Joycelyn Elders' anti-Catholicism ought to ask, what would that kind of person do in the Director's office? By the way, the Director can assess a fine of up to $200,000.

Now, you are a local grassroots organization out here. Let us say you are an antitax organization. Yes, you do the horrible thing of actually seeing your Member of Congress, lobbying. You actually pay one member to do this part time, and they spend 10 percent of their time seeing the Illinois delegation. They are now subject to filing every report as directed by Bill Clinton's appointee. If they do not, they can be fined, I believe, $10,000 per occasion. This is madness.

Mr. Speaker, I ask my colleagues, read pages 5, 6, and 7 of this particular proposed bill, the Bryant gag rule. Let me just close and say that I hope this does not come up tomorrow. I hope we have several days to look at this. I am convinced it will die in the Senate. I think it ought to die in the U.S. House.

TRIBUTE TO FORMER MEMBER OF CONGRESS ED PATTEN

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. PALLONE] is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. PALLONE. Mr. Speaker, today, 14 years after Ed Patten's retirement from Congress, his name is still a household word in my district.

I did not have the good fortune to serve with Ed, but I now represent eight towns in Middlesex County that were in his district. My constituents, mayors and councilmen, educators, workers and businessmen continue to refer to him with the warmth, love, and respect that he engendered during the 18 years he served in the House of Representatives.

As a member of the Appropriations Committee, Ed fought tirelessly for

New Jersey and his district. His was responsible for seeing that vocational and adult education received the national attention and funding it deserved. Without Ed Patten, Rutgers University would not be the leading institution it is today and Princeton might never have obtained the special physics lab that has pioneered research in atomic fusion. Ed Patten was responsible for the creation of Middlesex County College.

He also initiated the restoration of Ellis Island and began the cleanup of the Raritan River. To students, senior citizens, factory workers, and consumers in general, Ed Patten was a hero.

There was the memorable personal side of Ed Patten. He was once referred to as Perth Amboy's answer to Will Rogers. This is because he had a unique wit and wisdom and never lost touch with his constituents.

He probably knew more of his constituents on a first-name basis than any Congressman in history. With his pockets full of pennies for the kids, he would attend weddings and funerals during his weekends home. He spoke the language of his constituents and reflected their views naturally.

Many remember Ed Patten as one of the most colorful individuals ever to serve in Congress. He was also a consensus builder. At a time when we perhaps take ourselves too seriously, it is worthwhile to reflect on Ed Patten and the perspective he brought to these Chambers. He knew it was important to stand up for what you believe in—and he did that on many occasions—but he also knew that whether you won or lost, it was as important to be a good loser as a good winner. In that way, both sides could move on to the next important issue and get things done, which is, after all, why we are here.

Upon Ed Patten's retirement 14 years ago, a letter was read in this Chamber from a Metuchen, NJ, woman whose sons had interned in his office. She wrote:

Both my sons were imbued with a sense of respect for the office you honor. In a time of doubt and cynicism, I am thankful that they had the opportunity to have developed such positive feelings about the workings of our government.

Ed Patten's passing gives us the opportunity to think about some of the things he stood for and perhaps make this institution function—for the good of everyone—in a more effective and less contentious manner.

CALLING FOR THE RESIGNATION OF SURGEON GENERAL JOYCELYN ELDERS

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. SCOTT). Under the Speaker's announced policy of February 11, 1994, and June 10, 1994, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr.

CRANE] is recognized for 30 minutes as the designee of the minority leader.

Mr. CRANE. Mr. Speaker, I rise tonight to inform colleagues about the introduction of a bill that I submitted last Friday, H. Res. 545. H. Res. 545 was the result of a frustrating experience that a number of us had in communicating with the White House on our conviction that our Surgeon General should be removed from office. The fact of the matter is we wrote 2 separate letters to the President urging him to call for her resignation and he did not agree. So we have introduced this legislation with 25 cosponsors already that calls upon the President to please seek to remove her from the bully pulpit where she sets so horrifying an example to the Nation.

There is a group called the Family Research Council. The Family Research Council has a member, Kay James, that responds to a number of the Elders' quotes that I would like to read.

Joycelyn Elders says:

"We have drivers' ed for our kids. We've taught them what to do in the front seat of the car but not what to do in the back seat."

Kay James responds:

"Why assume they are going to be in the back seat? Assuming that kids are going to be sexually active is comparable to giving them a license. But choosing to be sexually active is more critical than the decision to drive a car. Why don't we teach them what not to do in the back seat? Elders is known for saying 'you can't be what you can't see.' I agree with that, and unfortunately, she is not modeling anything that would give kids encouragement for abstinence."

Next quote from our Surgeon General:

"You've been preaching abstinence for a hundred years. I've still got a problem. I've still got thousands of teenagers having babies every year."

Kay James' response:

"The truth is that we have not been teaching abstinence to kids. Public schools have never implemented a comprehensive abstinence education curriculum in their family life programs. Title X funding is $170 million compared with Title XX, abstinence education funding, at approximately $1 million. No reputable study shows that contraceptive based programs have worked and many have shown otherwise. A Lou Harris poll shows that teens who have had a sex education course that discusses contraceptives have a 50-percent higher sexual activity rate than those who have not. Abstinence based programs are the only ones with a consistent track record of success, often dramatic success."

Again our Surgeon General:

"Look who's fighting the pro-life movement. A celibate, male-dominated church, a male-dominated legislature, and a male-dominated medical profession."

Kay James' response:

"Wrong. Actually the 2 most prominent pro-life groups in the United States, National Right to Life, and the American Life League, are headed by women. Many minorities are pro-life. A 1989 Wirthlin Group National Survey shows that women are far more pro-life than men. In fact, the Black Americans for Life is one of the fastest growing pro-life groups in the United States. Her ad hominem arguments don't really address the issues."

Again our Surgeon General. Elders calls her critics "non-Christians with slave-master mentalities."

James responds:

"The slave imagery doesn't work on this one. Elders is trying to appeal to the days of slavery, equating the abortion struggle with a civil rights issue. Elders shouldn't denigrate the civil rights movement with her reference to what she calls "reproductive freedom." There are many of us who are growing weary of social engineers hijacking the freedom train to accomplish their own agenda."

Again, Joycelyn Elders:

"I would hope that we would provide prostitutes Norplant so that they could use sex if they must to buy their drugs."

Mr. BURTON of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CRANE. Yes.

Mr. BURTON of Indiana. That is almost too much for me to digest. Would the gentleman read that again? This is our Surgeon General saying this.

Mr. CRANE. Our Surgeon General, a direct quote. It was Talk Line on CNBC that they did on June 19, 1993. I will read it again:

"I would hope that we would provide prostitutes Norplant so that they could use sex if they must to buy their drugs."

Mr. BURTON of Indiana. If the gentleman would yield, I wish everybody in America could hear your special order tonight, because the moral foundation of any administration is extremely important to the moral health of the country. It appears to me and to many of my colleagues, yourself included, that there really is not much of a moral foundation in this administration. They have brought in every kind of deviate they can possibly think of into every agency of Government, and now they are advocating these kinds of policies for the people of this country? It makes no sense.

I would just submit when people start wondering why when the economy is not really bad that a President's popularity is going right straight down the tubes, it is because the people of this country understand that there is a moral problem that is being created, not solved, by the administration. This administration and the people that he is putting in these key positions is killing the moral fiber of America instead of helping make it better. I think it is a sad state of affairs when the chief executive of this country would even put somebody like this in a position of leadership.

Mr. CRANE. I appreciate the gentleman's remarks.

The fact of the matter is on some of the remarks that have been made by our Surgeon General, the administration has attempted to position itself in opposition, in theory, yet has taken no action. Yet Dr. Elders herself remarked in an interview, "I saw the President recently and he congratulated me on what I've been doing."

Mr. BURTON of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman would yield further, that is the old ham-and-egg game that is played many times in politics to make people think that the guy on the white horse in the White House is really a good guy when he has got somebody else doing the dirty work that he supports.

If the President really thought that Joycelyn Elders was on the wrong track, it would be a matter of a snap of his fingers, he would replace her. The fact of the matter is, she is doing his bidding by pushing his social and moral agenda on this country. If he did not want her making these kinds obnoxious statements, if he did not want her talking about the youth of America like she does, he could get rid of her in a heartbeat. The fact of the matter is, he is in league with her and he does not want to do anything about it.

Mr. CRANE. I thank the gentleman for his comments.

I would be happy to yield to my colleague, the gentleman from California.

Mr. DOOLITTLE. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, I think the comments that have been made are very appropriate and I think it should not and they do not just focus on Joycelyn Elders because, after all, she was put in place by the President of the United States who has given her, it seems, based on the quotes that were just read, an unqualified endorsement and ratification of the extreme position she has taken.

Imagine, the very idea of teaching sex education to kindergartners in the public schools, to passing out condoms, to basically making comments that encourage promiscuous sexual activity, which apparently in her mind is OK, as long as you have a condom. We are witnessing a severe moral crisis in this country.

It is on my mind because of what recently happened to a good friend of mine in Rocklin who was literally run down by a 19-year-old who was mad about something. He was looking around for 3 days driving around, according to newspapers. So this woman is walking, Rocklin is a great place where people walk and ride their bikes. She is out walking in the morning, 6:30 a.m., and he plows into the back of her going about 40 miles an hour. We have had numerous surgeries, it has only been about 4 weeks, I guess now, going on 5, so there are great injuries to be repaired. Thankfully it did not kill her.

But I am struck by a comment that William Raspberry made recently in the Washington Post, it was 3 or 4 weeks ago now, but I saved it. The article referred to the consciencelessness of our young people, not all our young people, but some of our young people, who apparently in the most minor dispute would settle it with a gun or a knife. It is getting to the point where the morals of this country have gone precipitously downhill, and I think it starts with moral leadership like we are getting from the top, President and Mrs. Clinton on down through Dr. Joycelyn Elders, the Surgeon General of the United States.

These comments about legalizing drugs. Every time you legalize something like that, you increase the use. The most widely used legal drug in the country, I guess, is alcohol, and we have a persistent problem with alcoholism, not only amongst our young people but amongst adults. If you want to see what would happen with drugs, look what goes on with alcohol and just magnify it and multiply it because that is exactly what you would have if you legalized marijuana or cocaine or heroin. It would be a disaster.

Then to have these statements about religion, which are just outrageous that have been made. You know George Washington, our country's first President said this Republic was founded upon and could only be maintained upon two fundamental pillars or foundations. One was religion and the other morality.

And when you have a republic that loses its religious base or that loses its morality you are going to lose your freedom. That was basically a paraphrase of the philosophy of the Founders.

I would just submit, Mr. Speaker, that we are in the process of losing that freedom. We all lose our freedom when we are fearful to go out on the streets, or to go out in our car because we think somebody might harm us. And we are losing our freedom when we subject ourselves to being preyed upon by people without conscience.

We had this debate I think on the crime bill, and to me I do not care how many police you hire or how many prisons you build, these are only interim solutions. They will never stem the flood unless we teach children values in the home, and that means children have to be raised with a mother and a father, ideally. And we as a country should seek to be cutting our taxes, and cutting our regulations so that more mothers and fathers can stay together and teach those values in the home.

Instead of that you have a President Clinton come in who appoints somebody like Joycelyn Elders who preaches this gospel of free sex, and antireligion, and you have high taxes levied upon the people, while out of the other side of their mouths they are talking about reducing the deficit and getting in touch with the people. In reality they are deliberately hurting the people by putting a bigger burden of government on their shoulders, which leads to more family breakups which leads to more children being raised without that mother and father in the home, which leads ultimately to the present problems that we have. All of this 1960's generation, we have sown these seeds, and we are reaping the whirlwind right now with higher rates of crime, higher rates of illegitimacy, with the poor performance in the schools, the record amounts of abuse and spousal abuse. This is the bountiest harvest that the liberals have sown for us, and we ought to recognize what the problem is.

It is not because of the Reagan revolution where we tried to cut back on the excesses of government. It is because the liberals forgot that values mattered and that if you do not have values in the home and morals being taught, you do not have anything. And Joycelyn Elders' comments are just a perfect representation of this relativist, this moral relativism that has gotten us in such trouble.

Mr. CRANE. I could not agree with the gentleman more, and I agree with his comments.

Mr. BURTON of Indiana. If the gentleman will yield further, we had down here one evening a list of all of the Presidential appointments, like Joycelyn Elders, and the backgrounds on a number of them was unbelievable as far as their views on immoral activities and things that would lead this country in the wrong direction. I do not know whether the gentleman brought that with him tonight. Does the gentleman happen to have that?

Mr. CRANE. No; I do not have.

Mr. BURTON of Indiana. I hope that we will do another special order before we adjourn sine die, and I will try to get that list so that we can go through the backgrounds and the views of not just this but a number of Clinton appointees so that the people of this country can see that this is not an accident that this sort of thing is going on. I mean, there is a design they have put together and in position throughout all of this administration that is leading this country down what I consider, and I think most Americans consider to be an immoral road.

Mr. CRANE. I agree with the gentleman's assessment. The fact of the matter is the Surgeon General commands a bully pulpit for accomplishing real, positive things, and yet the example we have in Dr. Elders is the exact contrary.

Let me quickly read Kay James' response to that quote earlier, and I will repeat it one more time:

I would hope that we would provide prostitutes Norplant so they could use sex if they must to buy their drugs.

And Kay James' response:

This is perhaps the most irresponsible statement that any public health official has ever made. It shows a complete lack of understanding of the drug crisis, the AIDS epidemic and the growing menace of other sexually transmitted diseases. Elders is identifying pregnancy as the ultimate evil. What about the immoral and unhealthy behavior of prostitution? What about the abuse of drugs? It seems that Elders' only goal is to stop pregnancy, or more accurately, births.

Rather than give all of the responses from Kay James, I would heartily recommend to everyone again, because as I say, the Family Research Council here in Washington, DC, can provide all of the responses of Kay James, but let me give some more examples of Dr. Elders' quotes.

We pay for pregnancy but we won't pay for contraception. That doesn't make sense.

That was in the Raleigh news and Observer back in March of last year.

If Medicaid does not pay for abortions, does not pay for family planning, but pays for prenatal care and delivery, that's saying "I'll pay for you to have another good, healthy slave, but I won't pay for you to use your brain and make choices for yourself." It's a way to keep people poor, ignorant, and enslaved. If you're poor and ignorant you are a slave.

American Medical News in January of last year.

Mr. Speaker, I yield to my colleague from California [Mr. DORNAN].

Mr. DORNAN. I thank the gentleman for yielding. In racing over here from my Rayburn office, when I saw your wonderful countenance appear on the tube, I did not hear some of the opening remarks, so let me just, because they are all worth repeating, let me just hit and miss some things.

Did the gentleman get into the RECORD that sad story of Kevin Elders, the Surgeon General's son, that he has been sentenced for 10 years on cocaine?

Mr. CRANE. No, no, I did not touch about that.

Mr. DORNAN. What is interesting about this is the Surgeon General knew that he had been arrested and was procuring, as any good mother would, good, solid legal defense, working this through, during that period when the world did not know about the arrest, but Kevin knew, and the mother, the Surgeon General knew, she came out with her first suggestion about legalizing drugs, hardly a statement devoid of a vested interest. And that went on until the court case began that ended up with guilty for Kevin Elders.

This morning on my friend—not—Phil Donahue's show, there was America's prime radical lawyer, a man of great candor, William Kunsler. He said that this was a political case, that the judicial system was punishing Joycelyn Elders for her candor and openness and sending her son to jail for 10 years. That type of Oliver Stonehead extreme conspiracy fantasizing tears up America youth just as badly as it does for the chief health officer of the United States to say:

You young people should have legalized drugs. You young people should get condoms down to 9 years of age.

And then quoting her, she says:

And let me tell you about an 8-year-old in Arkansas that was pregnant with twins.

By the way, I have never doubted her word or her frankness except that story. I want to see an 8-year-old pregnant with twins. And I would like to know what happened to that pregnancy, and if these 9-years-olds should get condoms, and in the very adjacent sentence start discussing an 8-year-old, then we are fair in saying she wants 8-years-olds to have condoms. Among my nine grandchildren I have two 8-year-olds, and when I look at them, look at their faces, they both happen to be girls, I say, "Is this woman bereft of her senses?"

Here is another thing I want to discuss. Did any of my three colleagues discuss that the press went up to her after one of her more outrageous statements, and I am going to put them all in the RECORD either during your special order or I have another one that follows the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. BURTON], so we have time here to get this on the record, that Clinton was about to leave for Normandy for all of those photo ops, pushing veterans aside to see if he could get his poll numbers up, which did not happen, they went down, and while he was out of the country they went up to Joycelyn Elders and they said to her:

What about these last statements here, does the President know you're saying these things? Is he approving of all of this?

I have no reason to believe that Joycelyn Elders was not telling the truth when she said the following, remember, talking about legalizing drugs was not, not telling the truth, that was a hidden agenda because her son was arrested for cocaine, not only usage but selling.

□ 1740

And so that was deceitful and against openness, but nothing to do with, you know, not creating a story out of fiction. She said to the press, "The President, came up to me the other day and said, 'Joycelyn,'" and they are friends all the way back to Arkansas where she was chief health officer, and I do not know whether they have a military title assigned to it, "he said, 'Joycelyn, I love it.'" I have seen this in print.

Both of my sons saw it visually. She said, "Clinton said to me, 'I love what you are doing, Joycelyn, Keep it up. I am behind you.'"

Within days he had fired the drug czarina, the director of national drug policy, Kristine Gebbie, excuse me, the director of the AIDS program, he had fired Kristine Gebbie because the homosexual activists wanted Kristine Gebbie fired for shooting off her mouth and making dumb statements and mainly for all the wrong reasons, and they got her fired.

Less than 1 percent of this country is homosexual in or out of privacy, what the pejoratively call the closet, privacy is what it really is, and she gets fired by the activists of less than 1 percent of the country.

But the entire Nation of observant Jews, observant Catholics, observant Protestants, people of faith and belief are saying this woman is hurting our children, and he says, "I love what you are doing. Keep it up. I am behind you." She said "You think I am not telling you the truth? Ask him when he comes back from Normandy."

Well, did the press ask him? No, or if they did, they did not report it. It appears that the real problem here is not the Surgeon General but the man and the co-President and the administration that appointed her and tolerates these outrageous statements hurtful to the youth of America.

Mr. BURTON of Indiana. Can I involve my self in this colloquy?

Mr. DORNAN. I want you involved.

Mr. CRANE. I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. BURTON of Indiana. This is what I was talking about just a few minutes ago.

If you look through the appointments made by the President and this administration, it is amazing the number of people that have the same kind of liberal social agenda and immoral agenda, I call it, as Joycelyn Elders, and it permeates the entire administration.

The problem is the American people are not aware of all of these appointments. Joycelyn Elders stands out like a sore thumb because she makes such outrageous statements on a regular basis.

She is not the only one. There must be 20 or 30 of these people in very key positions who are advocating, at Personnel Management, OPM, and they have got a person over there right now, and I cannot think of the gentleman's name, that is advocating sensitivity training in all Government agencies for people to deal with homosexuals.

Mr. DORNAN. Sensitivity training means homosexuality must be raised to the level of family, of normal family, and Joycelyn Elders says, which is a dangerous lie, not a lie, a dangerous, stupid misstatement to the American people, that homosexual conduct is not only normal, it is healthy, she says, healthy.

Mr. BURTON of Indiana. In Indianapolis in some of the government agencies over there, they are now mandating, and they have put up big bulletin boards for the homosexual community so they can set up meetings with one another. This is sanctioned by this Office of Personnel Management, and it makes no sense. I mean, they are actually advocating that with Government tax dollars, because that agency is in favor of it. Now, that is the problem. It is permeating this entire administration.

Mr. DORNAN. Absolutely. This must be like 1776; another patriot has arrived on the floor from the great State of Missouri.

Mr. CRANE. I yield to the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. HANCOCK].

Mr. HANCOCK. You know, you mentioned Joycelyn Elders holds gay sex healthy; it is broader than that. She says it is wonderful.

Mr. DORNAN. That is right, I forgot.

Mr. HANCOCK. She says it is wonderful and healthy. She says that it is wonderful and a normal and healthy part of our being. You know, she called the Boy Scout ban on homosexual scouts and Scout leaders unfair. She said school-based health clinics should address the needs of homosexuals as well as heterosexual students. Well, nobody is going to argue with that except the advocacy of it is where we draw the line.

I mean, certainly the people or schools, the students should be educated on sex hygiene and this type of thing, but not advocating it as she is advocating it, and there is a lot more to it than just saying that it is, and when they say healthy, I agree with the gentleman from California, this is one of the most dangerous activities that we can engage in, the homosexuals.

Mr. DORNAN. In some urban areas, it surpasses gunshot deaths for young males, AIDS infection.

Mr. HANCOCK. And they are not teaching the results of this type of activity. All they are teaching is how to perform it, how to get involved in it, and how to protect yourself, and there is only one protection, and that is absolute, and that is abstinence. I mean, it is just that simple.

So I fully support the fact that this individual should not be the Surgeon General of the United States, and I just wonder what other countries are looking at, how they think about all of this.

Mr. DORNAN. I do not know if other countries wear a Public Health Service uniform, but Dr. Koop, and I agreed with him on most things, I mean, he all by himself has saved hundreds of thousands of lives in America because he reduced the smoking rate from the high 30's down to the low 20's, and that is going to have a health effect. I disagree with him on some of the things. I fought against my good colleague, the gentleman from California [Mr. WAXMAN], to get his appointment through under Ronald Reagan in 1981, and he turned 180 degrees on some issues and ran up a white flag of surrender, but Koop was on a weekend show a week ago Saturday, on "American Interests," no, on Adam Smith's economics show, and he was explaining the cost of unhealthy sex, although he caved in to the condom-distribution solution, and he went through the killer aspect of this.

So I called the Centers for Disease Control down in Atlanta and said, "Give me the new statistics on AIDS deaths in this country," and if my staff, which they are supposed to do, is watching me on the House floor, they are going, "Uh oh," because I asked them 4 days ago to get the June 30 cutoff. I do not have it. I am reaching for it, and it is not in my mind. So I will go with September 30, first, 217,000 dead Americans. Remember Legionnaires' disease, it broke out here again with one to two dead people; I think the total there never passed the 20 mark. Two hundred seventeen thousand dead.

Dr. Koop told me that figure in 1983, 1984, 1985, 1986, and 1987 was low by 10, probably 20 percent, he said. Let us take 10. Ten percent of 217,000 means over 257,000 deaths, and 200,000 of those deaths are attributed to homosexual conduct and/or drug-using homosexuals. They do not know which way they got it.

You know, we are approaching World War II death totals of 312,000, depending on your encyclopedia. In 4 or 5 years, more young males, not in combat, except sexual combat, will have lost their lives than above the sea, under the sea, in the jungles, the sand, and the forests of Europe, all over the world, 312,000 Americans, and this is called healthy by the Surgeon General to protect our health.

Then, as I started to say, I do not know what other countries do, but Koop bragged about how he brought the uniform back, because it gave him a uniqueness, particularly with that Lincoln-esque beard, and I do not know what ribbons he wore, but Joycelyn Elders has about three rows of ribbons. There was a rumor out she was wearing a Purple Heart. That was a little wild, and turned out that was not true. But most of those ribbons, if not all of them, are ribbons awarded to the Public Health Service. Servicemen listening know what a unit commendation is. You wear it when you are in the unit, but when you leave the unit, you do not take it with you. That is because you are in that unit that got a Presidential commendation.

She wears all of these combat ribbons, and she is killing people, the wrong way, with the wrong advice, so I just think that we have got to look to who hired her and who protects her, not that she should resign in disgrace.

And do we all know what the word is on the street, the conventional wisdom? It is that she has something on the man who appointed her, because she was head of the health departments in Arkansas when several cases came up against her relatives, and I do not want to speak poorly of the dead who have gone to heaven, particularly when they are part Irish, but there were some cases that came up. One of them he was in this 2-year short term as attorney general in his early thirties, 30 to 32, and then he become Governor, 32 years of age, another case came up, and there are rumors in Arkansas that Joycelyn Elders played a key role, which means she is not fireable. She is protected by her gender, by her ethnic heritage, and by these rumors.

So I guess we are going to have to live with her 2 more years, so that is why I want to focus in on the person who appointed her.

PRESIDENT CLINTON AND GOVERNOR JIM GUY TUCKER OF ARKANSAS

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. SCOTT). Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. BURTON] is recognized for 30 minutes.

Mr. BURTON of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, I will be happy to dedicate another 10 minutes to this discussion, if you would like. I am going to need about 20 minutes.

Mr. CRANE. If the gentleman will just yield to me for a parting statement that I would like to make, and I concur with the remarks of my colleagues tonight, the ultimate responsibility and the buck stops at the President's doorstep. The President made the decision to put her in. It was not like she was a total stranger, that he knew nothing of her background, put her in that position. He has been written to, as I indicated at the outset, on two different occasions with multiple colleagues calling for him to seek her resignation.

□ 1750

So my resolution, House Resolution 545, as I indicated, has 25 cosponsors right now. I would urge my other colleagues to get on board and hopefully we can get the President's attention and replace Dr. Jocelyn Elders with someone qualified for that job.

I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. BURTON of Indiana. I thank the gentleman for taking the initiative on that resolution. I would be more than happy to be a cosponsor if I am not already.

Mr. DORNAN. May I ask a question?

Mr. BURTON of Indiana. Certainly.

Mr. DORNAN. What was the subject of the gentleman's special order?

Mr. BURTON of Indiana. The subject of my special order is President Clinton and Gov. Jim Guy Tucker of Arkansas and their possible nefarious activities in Whitewater and some other development corporations down in Arkansas.

Mr. DORNAN. I will listen attentively. I thought that it might be Haiti because the gentleman from Indiana is a renaissance man like Mr. HANCOCK and Mr. CRANE, and we are all concerned about this—it is not a briar patch anymore, it is a tar pit. We are like a big woolly mammoth stuck in a tar pit down there, only it is not going to be Chelsea who is going to be sniped at, it is going to be some women in uniform down there. All of our men are targets down there now. It should not be called Mission Restore Democracy, it should be called Mission Creep. But I have a perfect dovetail subject where our health services in the military are worried about our young men in Haiti.

Mr. BURTON of Indiana. Because of the AIDS virus.

Mr. DORNAN. You got it. The gentleman and I started this discussion in 1985. It is not just AIDS, not just AIDS which has permeated the whole prostitute class down in Haiti, but, get this: A bigger sampling than anybody would have dreamed for to get a percentage rating on the whole nation of Haiti was available at Guantanamo from this cross-sample of people with the strength to get out of the country on a raft and out into the hurricane season of the Windward Passage. Seven percent of the people of Haiti are infected with the HIV/AIDS, always fatal, virus.

Mr. BURTON of Indiana. You are talking about 1 out of 12 people.

Mr. DORNAN. 1 out of 12 people.

Now, AIDS is bad enough, but hepatitis B, that is the one that changes your life—I had hepatitis A in the Air Force once, and they should not have even called both of them hepatitis. Hepatitis A is nothing. I just could not give blood anymore because I have it forever. But B is the killer, the one that has permeated the whole homosexual activist groupings in the United States. Hepatitis B is medium to high level worldwide standards. Now, get this next line that I am reading in all these reports out of Haiti: Penicillin-resistant syphilis penicillin-resistant gonorrhea, real virulent strains, and penicillin-resistant two or three other sexually transmitted diseases, are by worldwide standards medium to high in Haiti. The truth is everybody should watch everybody else down there. Nobody should get a 3-day pass. When it settles down, if ever, nobody should go on leave and nobody should go near any prostitute back in the bushes. This is going to cause Americans to be curled up in a prenatal position on a bed, holding their mother's and dad's hand, brothers and sisters around them. Not homosexuals, GI's. And 5, 10 years, even as late at 15 years from now, dying in the prime of life because of one moment of weakness, dying in the prime of life when they are supposed to be restoring democracy.

Now, Mission Creep, a daily evolving, dangerous mission with no direction, is going to cause a major health problem. Now, we released all the Haitians in the early waves that came to Guantanamo into the United States where by a court order of one Florida judge who had more regard for this country, some flakey liberal judge, how many Americans are going to come back from Haiti?

I am going to tell you this, DAN: Does the gentleman know that I affected the CBS news one night by calling Dan Rather? I had had an acquaintance with him, sponsored a dinner for him in the Speaker's dining room once, with Bill Dannemeyer, a pal of mine who has retired. I said would he take my call? So he took my call. This is like 1985 or early 1986.

I said, "Dan, Bob Dornan." And he said, "Yes, Congressman, what can I do?"

I said, "Dan, you just said something on the air tonight that is not true. You said the major categories for AIDS," this is in the 1985-1986, 8 years ago, maybe 8½ years, "still are homosexuals, hemophiliacs, and Haitians. And that is a nice alliteration, but Haitians had nothing to do with hemophilia or activism in homosexuality. There is no genetic coding in Haitians that make them susceptible to AIDS or makes them have AIDS more than any other nation in the world. You are not only slandering a country, it is historically inaccurate, and you are causing a terrible social problem for every decent Haitian, whether they are naturalized American citizens or not."

And he said, "Well, Congressman, what is the answer?"

I said, "Are you broadcasting from New York this week?"

He said, "Yes." I said, "Check it out, check it in the homosexual community in New York. New York homosexual activists have discovered Haiti as a vacation port of call. They took AIDS to Haiti. And when health people interviewed Haitians"—and I know of what I speak, Dan, because I am a loyal Catholic. People of French Catholic culture, when asked if they took money for homosexual services, they deny it. So every Haitian, whether he is into voodoo or practicing Catholic or some Protestant faith, will say, "I have had no homosexual contact."

So you think it is something genetic. I said, "Dan, it is New York homosexuals taking it to Haiti, and it spread in that country because they are impoverished and when tourists come down there with a lot of money, it breaks down people's moral ethos."

And he said, "Congressman, I am going to check it out, get into that."

He never again said Haitians as a category. NBC and ABC were not into that. And nobody was heard in this Nation about Haitians.

Now, where did I get all of that brilliant dialog? Down at the Centers for Disease Control, up at the National Institutes for Health, out at my friend Tony Fauci. So here I am defending the honor of Haiti by explaining how they got this disease. Now it is up to 7 percent.

Now, I do not want to take any more of the gentleman's time, but what I would like to do, because I have my 30 minutes, is to tell people that I have been trying to get a special order here for 2 or 3 weeks to document carefully with every statement. I put it in the RECORD before, and there were some misprints. I want to go through this on Jocelyn Elders, following the gentleman's special order. I will truly, as I do every time the gentleman is talking about all of these scandals bottled up in the press—

Mr. BURTON of Indiana. So there will be some consistency, we can let the gentleman go and I will just follow up with mine afterward because I think we ought to have some consistency for the record. I would be happy to take an interruption here.

Mr. Speaker, we understand that the gentleman from Michigan has a special order between the two of us. Is that correct?

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. SCOTT). The gentleman from Michigan [Mr. BONIOR] has a 1-hour special order, and the order after that would be the gentleman from California and then the gentleman from New York after that.

Mr. BURTON of Indiana. How much time do I have left on my special order, Mr. Speaker?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Twenty minutes.

Mr. DORNAN. I will tell you what I will do—

Mr. BURTON of Indiana. I would be happy to yield to the gentleman.

Mr. DORNAN. If you let me do my prolog, I will then put in all of our statements in the RECORD. I agree continuity is important.

Now, here is good news for Mr. BONIOR: I will then sit and listen to the gentleman's special order and then waive my 30 minutes and then he goes. So usually I try to be extemporaneous because I think through the C-SPAN television cameras you grab people more, grab the feeling that it is from your heart—tell it as you see it from your heart. I want this just right.

WHY JOCELYN ELDERS SHOULD BE FIRED

Now, that is my title. Now the prolog: the overall mission of the office of the U.S. Surgeon General is the protection, improvement, and advancement of the health of all American people.

The primary responsibility of our Surgeon General is to advise the Nation on public health matters. As the Nation's top spokesperson on issues of public health, the American people look to the person who serves as the Surgeon General for guidance and leadership on such matters.

Now, my statement: Clearly, our current Surgeon General, Jocelyn Elders, has failed in the mission of her office. She has demonstrated hostility toward mainstream American values and mocked American citizens who want public policy to reflect the Judeo-Christian ethical standards of our culture.

□ 1800

Elders has also abused the public trust and compromised her ability to unify the American people under the common goal of sound public health policies. Moreover, her policies and pronouncements are dangerous to the health and well-being of families in America.

Now what I will do is just give paragraph titles, and then they can find it in the RECORD.

Jocelyn Elders on Teenage Sexuality: three extremely offensive and harmful statements.

I just got a message from my staff. AIDS figures will not be updated until October. We used to get them every month. Now we have to sit with December 21 figures. Since this is the middle of September I said 217 were dead. It was really more like 250. We are already up to 275,000 given the death rate.

So, I put in those on teenage sexuality:

Jocelyn Elders continues to taunt and ridicule Americans who advocate principles of sexual restraint and responsibility as a means of preventing unwanted pregnancies and/or sexually-transmitted diseases.

Elders disregards and disdains that abstinence is the only proven method of preventing unplanned pregnancies and sexually-transmitted diseases and should be part of any education program. In fact, Elders' prescription for dealing with the problem of teenage pregnancy includes free condoms in grade and high schools; explicit and graphic sex education beginning as early as kindergarten and; unrestricted, tax-funded abortion.

Elders even went so far as to say, "We have driver's ed for our kids. We've taught them what to do in the front seat of the car, but not what to do in the back seat." (Evening Times, 3/4/92). Yet during her previous tenure as Arkansas health director, the incidence of teenage pregnancy and sexually transmitted diseases actually rose steadily—even after posting steady declines in the years before her appointment (Alan Guttmacher Institute and Arkansas Department of Health).

Next on homosexual activity, one, two, three extremely offensive statements:

ON HOMOSEXUAL ACTIVITY

Jocelyn Elders continues to advocate a re-definition of the traditional family structure by supporting the adoption of children by homosexuals (USA Weekend Interview, 6/2-5/94).

Elders has said, "Yes [Boy Scouts should admit homosexuals]. I also think girls who are lesbians should be allowed to join the Girl Scouts." (USA Weekend Interview, 6/3-5/94).

Regardless of documented evidence that shows homosexual behavior is associated with communicable venereal diseases such as hepatitis and the always fatal AIDS, Elders has endorsed homosexual sex as "healthy," "wonderful," and "normal" (The Advocate, 3/94). This has given a false sense of security to all those who engage in high-risk sexual behavior.

On abortion, one, two, three, four amazingly offensive, bigoted and anti-Catholic specific statements:

ON ABORTION

Jocelyn Elders is a relentless advocate for abortion on demand for any or no reason. She has even said that, "Abortion has reduced the number of children with severe birth defects * * * The number of Down's syndrome infants in Washington State in 1976 was 64 percent lower than it would have been without legal abortion * * * Abortion was the single most important factor in the significant decrease in neonatal mortality between 1964 and 1977." (Testimony before Senate Labor Committee on FOCA, 5/23/90).

Elders continues to insult and demean Americans who believe pre-born children are human beings worthy of constitutional protections as well, telling pro-life advocates to "get over their love affairs with the fetus." (Arkansas Democrat-Gazette 1/19/92).

Elders has also characterized people who oppose abortion as "non-Christians with slave-master mentalities" who want "to keep people poor, ignorant, and enslaved." (American Medical News, 1/11/93).

Regarding those who are morally opposed to taxpayer financed abortion, Elders claimed, "If Medicaid does not pay for abortions, does not pay for family planning, but pays for prenatal care and delivery, that's saying: I'll pay for you to have another good, healthy slave." (Arkansas Democrat-Gazette 1/19/92).

On religious bigotry, this is a category she has publicly demonized and marginalized Americans whose values are rooted in religious tenets and who advocate public policies that reflect those values. One, two, three, four statements on that:

RELIGIOUS BIGOTRY

Jocelyn Elders has publicly demonized and marginalized Americans whose values are rooted in religious tenets and who advocate public policies that reflect their values.

Elders has characterized those who hold moral and religious values as harmful to our Nation's children and has said, "We've got to be strong to take on those people who are selling our children out in the name of religion." (June 22, 1994, Lesbian and Gay Health Conference).

Elders has also criticized how religious leaders view human sexuality and has called those who oppose sex education the "un-Christian religious right" (June 22, 1994 Lesbian and Gay Health Conference).

When asked why there was such a sharp rise in teen pregnancy in Arkansas during her tenure as Arkansas Health Director, Elders claimed it was, "poverty and ignorance and the Bible-Belt mentality." (National Review, "Life and Death in Arkansas," 4/26/93).

Furthermore, Elders continues to wage a non-stop, public attack on Roman Catholics by saying, prior to her appointment, "Look who's fighting the pro-choice movement: a celibate, male-dominated Church." (Address to Arkansas Coalition for Choice, 1/18/92).

Reckless judgment calls, what a category, one, two, three, four, five, and I think those will cause people to die in this country because the statement from the bully pulpit, in uniform, combat, decorations to the Public Health Service emblazoned across her uniform.:

RECKLESS JUDGMENT CALLS

Joycelyn Elders has demonstrated reckless judgment on serious societal problems with statements such as, "I would hope that we would provide them [drug-abusing prostitutes] Norplant, so they could still use sex if they must to buy their drugs." (CNBC "Talk Live", 6/19/93); and

In addition, despite strong evidence that illegal drug use is on the rise, Elders has said that "We would markedly reduce our crime rate if drugs were legalized" (National Press Club Luncheon) and recommended that "we have doctors or clinics set up where addicts can get their drugs free or pay $1." (USA Weekend, 6/3-5/94).

When Elders was asked about her son Kevin's recent conviction for selling cocaine, she replied, "I don't feel that was a crime." (Houston Chronicle, 9/3/94)

Elders has even justified higher Federal spending on AIDS research rather than on cancer and heart disease because, "most of the people that die with heart disease and cancer are our elderly population, you know, and we all will probably die with something sooner or later" and that "we are losing the people that's going to be paying my Social Security, and that bothers me." (Senate committee hearing, 5/11/94).

And while claiming to care about the health of our children, Elders recklessly refused to notify the public about defective condoms dispensed by the State of Arkansas to school-based clinics.

In conclusion, and then I am finished: Surgeon General Joycelyn Elders continues to exploit her privileged position and compromise her ability to unite the American people under the common goal of improving the health of the general public.

More importantly, Elders is failing to carry out the overall mission of the Office of the United States Surgeon General and is therefore failing to protect, improve, and advance the health of all Americans.

Joycelyn Elders' unrelenting, insulting statements demean our Nation's top public health post and common decency demands that the President ask for her resignation.

If we were earlier in the session, I would draw up articles of impeachment, and I found out through our top Parliamentarians that I would have been able to get a little earlier in the year a vote whether or not to table that as a privileged motion, and that vote, to smart people all across the country, would have been an up or down vote on Joycelyn Elders. We will just have to wait and see what the election results are. I am sure my friend, the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. BONIOR], will be back. I will try and recruit him, and, if that does not work, another solution:

Fire Mr. Clinton and the co-President.

Mr. BURTON of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, I thank my colleague, the gentleman from California [Mr. DORNAN], for his remarks, and I am glad we got that information into the RECORD.

I would like to, in the remaining time I have, talk about the continuing saga of Arkansas. Arkansas is a great State, but, boy, they have got a history of all kinds of allegations against government officials down there that just boggles the mind. Right now there is an investigation going on by the independent counsel that is probably going to take 6 months or longer because of Whitewater, and Morgan Guarantee Savings & Loan, and all of these alleged nefarious activities that took place under the Clinton administration in Arkansas.

Now tonight I want to talk about a related subject that parallels what happened under Bill Clinton's administration in Arkansas with the Whitewater Development Corp. Jim Guy Tucker, who is now the Governor of Arkansas, was the Lt. Gov. of Arkansas under Bill Clinton. He became Governor when Clinton was elected President. They are very close political allies. He is running for reelection this year against Republican Sheffield Nelson.

Governor Tucker, as I said, is a close political ally of President Clinton. Like President Clinton, Mr. Speaker, he has been involved in several questionable business deals with James McDougall that contributed to the bankruptcy of Madison Guarantee Savings and Loan at a cost to the taxpayers of $47 million.

According to press reports, Mr. Speaker, the Resolution Trust Corporation, the RTC, has subpoenaed documents from Governor Tucker's businesses going back over a decade, and the RTC is pursuing fraud claims against him. These same kinds of allegations have been made against President Clinton and Whitewater, and these are being investigated as well. The RTC has named Governor Tucker in a criminal referral to the Justice Department. Governor Tucker is a possible target for indictment in the independent counsel's investigation into the failure of Madison Guarantee Savings and Loan.

Now Jim Guy Tucker borrowed over $1¼ million from Madison Guarantee Savings & Loan. When Madison was taken over by Federal regulators in 1986, Governor Tucker's $1 million loan for a sewer system was one of the largest delinquent loans on the books. According to the Wall Street Journal, Governor Tucker never filled out, never filled out, loan applications or put up a down payment. He told the Little Rock Democrat Gazette, "I called up Jim McDougall if I wanted to borrow money." He did not even fill out applications for $1 million. It would be kind of nice for Americans to be able to go and do that anytime they needed money.

So, Mr. Speaker, this raises serious questions. How can a thrift savings institution whose deposits are insured by the Federal Government, by the taxpayers, loan hundreds and thousands of dollars without getting so much as a written loan application? How could a federally insured savings and loan give out hundreds and thousands of dollars in loans without getting even a small down payment? Could it be because of the political influence of President Clinton, or then-Governor Clinton, and now Governor Jim Guy Tucker? To what extent did Jim Guy Tucker's bad loans at Madison contribute to Madison's $47 million tax-funded failure?

Governor Tucker also borrowed over three-quarters of a million, and this is a different one, over three-quarters of a million dollars from David Hale's Capital Management Services Co. Jim Guy Tucker was a millionaire primarily because of his investments in cable television. However Capital Management Services was licensed by the Small Business Administration to loan to people only, quote, "who are socially or economically disadvantaged small business people." Now, if he was a multimillionaire as a result of his cable television industry, how could he borrow money from the SBA when they were supposed to only loan money to people who are socially or economically disadvantaged? This is because, obviously, of the political influence.

One of Tucker's companies defaulted on $100,000 of those loans, and Capital Management Services also went bankrupt. David Hale has pled guilty to fraud and is now cooperating with Federal investigators. David Hale has accused both Bill Clinton and Jim Guy Tucker of applying political pressure to get him to make inappropriate loans.

So, this raises more serious questions. No. 1, why would a millionaire like Jim Guy Tucker go to David Hale's company to borrow money when he could borrow from any bank in Arkansas? No. 2, Jim Guy Tucker represented both David Hale and Capital Services as an attorney, Capital Services Management in legal matters, and borrowed from Capital Services Management repeatedly. He was a legal counsel, and he borrowed from them all the time. How could he be unaware that they were supposed to make loans only to disadvantaged people and still go ahead and get a loan himself? No. 3, to what extent did Jim Guy Tucker's bad loans contribute to the failure of Capital Management Services? No. 4, did Jim Guy Tucker and Bill Clinton pressure David Hale to make loans that the law prohibited him from making, as David Hale claims?

Mr. Speaker, that, we believe and hope, is being investigated by the independent counsel. But it also ought to be investigated by the Congress of the United States, and, if we get a majority next year, you can rest assured that we will have these investigations that are now being stonewalled by the Democrat majority in this House.

Now two examples of Jim Guy Tucker's tangled financial transactions: One was the Castle Sewer and Water Co. In 1986 Jim Guy Tucker formed the Castle Sewer and Water Co. to purchase the water utility associated with a new development called Castle Grande. He purchased the utility from Madison Financial Co., a subsidiary of Madison Guarantee Savings and Loan, both owned by Jim McDougall, Bill Clinton's partner in Whitewater. Tucker's company borrowed $1.2 million from Madison Guarantee Savings and Loan to purchase the water company. He put up a down payment with $150,000 that he borrowed from David Hale's Capital Management Co.

Now think about that. He borrowed $1.2 million, and how did he make the down payment? He borrowed $150,000 with no collateral, evidently no collateral, from Capital Management Services, David Hale's company. An appraiser with close financial ties to Madison Guarantee put the utility's value at $1.3 million.

When the RTC, the Resolution Trust Corporation, took over the loan a year later, an independent appraiser placed the true value of that property at only $640,000, about half of what they said it was worth a year earlier. This is one of several known instances of appraisers with ties, with ties, to Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan, inflating the value of the properties. And when you get into this, you find that these people who are making these appraisals have financial dealings with these institutions as well. And one questions whether or not they were being twisted or blackmailed into raising the appraised values of these properties. It sure raises one's hair a little bit to think that sort of thing was going on.

Tucker's company made payments on the note for only 5 months. He only made payments for 5 months. When the RTC ousted Jim McDougall from Madison Guaranty in July, the Castle Sewer note was one of the largest delinquent notes in the Madison Guaranty portfolio, which cost the taxpayers $47 million.

In 1989, the Resolution Trust Corporation negotiated a settlement with Jim Guy Tucker's lawyers and reduced the amount of the loan from $1.2 million to $525,000. That is a pretty good deal. They lowered it by more than half. However, a year later they were still missing payments even on the $525,000. The $150,000 loan that he used to get the $1.2 million loan from Capital Management Services was never repaid. That $150,000 just went out the window. Instead, Capital Management Services had to settle for a one-third stake in the worthless sewer company. So, for the $150,000, they got one-third ownership in a sewer company that was defunct, and that contributed to the failure of David Hale's company.

In 1989, Jim Guy Tucker sold his stake in the company, $1.2 million, he sold his stake in the company for $10, and he walked away from the whole mess.

Questions: How could Jim Guy Tucker, a millionaire with extensive holdings in several companies, just walk away from a legitimate business debt and saddle the taxpayers of America with it?

Two: How could Jim McDougall get away with a conflict of interest like approving a million dollar loan when the transaction involved his own company?

Three: How could Jim McDougall get away with basing a million dollar loan on an appraisal performed by an appraiser with a serious conflict of interest?

Four: How could Jim Guy Tucker get away with borrowing over $1 million without putting up a cent of his own money?

Five: Why, after the RTC cut the loan amounts by $600,000, was Tucker's company still unable to make regular payments?

Six: Why was the $150,000 loan from Capital Management Services never repaid?

Now, let us talk about the Castle Grande Development. Also in 1986, Jim Guy Tucker borrowed $260,000 from Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan to invest in 34 acres of the Castle Grande land development deal being put together by Jim McDougall. This is very similar to Whitewater, what Bill Clinton was doing. They parallel each other. If you put them on the chart and go down, they did almost the same thing, like almost they learned from one another. As everyone knows, Jim McDougall was Bill Clinton's partner in the Whitewater Land Development deal.

Half of the $260,000 was to be used to purchase the land, and the other half was to pay for improvements on the land. According to the Associated Press, Federal investigators are investigating whether Jim Guy Tucker committed bank fraud by misrepresenting what he would use the loan for. The funds were never spent on the land, they were never spent on land improvements. They were spent to pay off a loan Tucker guaranteed for a friend.

So the money he borrowed, the $260,000 was for land purchases and improvements. He took the money for the land improvements, and instead of using it for that purpose, he committed what many believe is bank fraud by paying off a loan for a friend.

A second appraiser with financial ties to Madison Guaranty valued the land at $350,000. Here again we have somebody who was tied to Madison Guaranty, had financial ties, who appraised this land at $350,000. Yet when the RTC took over the land, they appraised it for one-third of that value, $120,000. Once again, the taxpayer gets the shaft.

Jim Guy Tucker quickly turned around and sold the land to Southloop Construction Co. which he coowned, for $350,000, which was a $200,000 profit for him. Southloop Construction Co. funded this purchase partly with a $100,000 loan from Capital Management Service. Again, David Hale's company was never repaid.

Southloop Construction never paid off the loan from Madison. After becoming seriously delinquent, it was paid off in 1993 by another one of Tucker's companies.

Question: Once again, how could an inflated appraisal be accepted from an appraiser who was indebted to Madison Guaranty? The appraiser evidently owed over $200,000 to them. He made the appraisal and obviously was going to do what they said, because he was owing them $200,000 at the time.

Again, why was Jim McDougall allowed to approve a loan in which he had a personal financial stake? This is a serious conflict of interest and a violation of the law.

Third, after Jim Guy Tucker made a $200,000 profit by selling the land to his own corporation based on an inflated appraisal, why was he allowed to walk away from the $100,000 he still owed to Capital Management?

To reiterate some previous questions to what extent did Jim Guy Tucker's bad loans at Madison Guaranty contribute to that S&L's downfall, which cost the taxpayers $47 million, you and me and all of the country. To what extent did Jim Guy Tucker's bad loans at Capital Management Services contribute to its downfall? And did Jim Guy Tucker and Bill Clinton both exert political pressure on David Hale to make loans not allowed under its license with the Small Business Administration?

We need answers to all of these questions, and we need a complete investigation. Not like that which the Committee on Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs had in this House, or they had in the other body. Those investigations were a whitewash of Whitewater.

What they ended up doing was saying when we started to question people about things like what happened with Whitewater and Vince Foster's death, they gave the Republican Members and all Members 5 minutes to question 10 people and get answers. You cannot question one person and get answers in 5 minutes. They had them questioning 10 people at one time, and they had 5 minutes to get both the questions and the answers in. Even everybody watching across the country came to the conclusion, anyone paying attention, that this certainly was inefficient and not a complete investigation.

We have millions and millions and millions of dollars of taxpayers' money that has been stolen, literally, by people involved in these corporations. Bill Clinton, it is alleged, used his political influence, and many people believe that documents we need to prove that have been shredded. We can go into that, and that would take more time than I have tonight.

Now, we find that Lieutenant Governor Jim Guy Tucker, his Lieutenant Governor and colleague in politics down there, is accused of doing the same thing, and there is documentation that proves there is merit to these arguments. That is why the independent counsel is investigating this.

But even through we have an independent counsel looking into these allegations and looking into these cases very thoroughly, the defraud of this country of millions and millions of dollars from the taxpayers, we still need a complete and thorough investigation by the Congress of the United States.

We have not been able to get the majority party to go along with that. We have had a whitewash of Whitewater. We are probably now going to have a whitewash of this Castle Grande Development Corp. And the people of this country should not tolerate it.

All of these things I have been talking about on the floor for the past month or month and a half should be investigated thoroughly, not only by the independent counsel, but by a selected committee, of both Democrats and Republicans in this House. We are talking about honesty and integrity in government, and taxpayers' money, and the Congress of the United States is charged with responsibility of spending taxpayers' money in the right way.

Since taxpayers have been defrauded in these cases, we need to have congressional investigations. So as we come close to adjourning sine die in this session of Congress, I just would like to say to my colleagues, when we come back in January, one of the first orders of business should be complete and thorough hearings into Whitewater and all related matters, even if it involves the President of the United States and Hillary Clinton.

REGRETTABLY, NAFTA ISN'T WORKING

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. SCOTT). Under the Speaker's announced policy of February 11, 1994, and June 10, 1994, the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. BONIOR] is recognized for 60 minutes as the designee of the majority leader.

Mr. BONIOR. Mr. Speaker, there's an old story my grandfather used to love to tell about the time he immigrated from Ukraine to Hamtramck, which is a small enclave within the city of Detroit.

The town was filled with Polish and Ukrainian immigrants. And one time one of the people from the old country robbed a bank. He was caught right away, but he didn't have the money on him. And he didn't speak a word of English.

The police chief got an interpreter, sat them both down in the jail, and told the interpreter, "Ask this man where the money is."

The interpreter asked, but got no answer.

The chief took out his gun, placed it on the table, and said: "You tell this guy he better answer or he's in big trouble."

The interpreter asked again, but again, he got no answer.

Finally, the chief picked up the gun, pointed it at the bank robber's forehead and said, "You tell this guy he better talk or he'll be sorry."

The interpreter delivered the message, and this time the robber said in Polish: "I confess. I stole $100,000 and dropped the money in a dry well behind the bank. The money's there."

The interpreter thought for a moment, turned to the chief and said: "The robber says he's not afraid to die."

Mr. Speaker, I think of that story a lot whenever I think about the North American Free-Trade Agreement—whenever I hear the way it's being interpreted.

Mr. Speaker, last fall at this time, many of us in this House opposed NAFTA because we thought it was a bad deal for American workers and American jobs.

We felt that the American people deserved a better deal, one that would increase the standard of living in this country while raising Mexico's standard to our level.

One that would stick up for the rights of working families while doing more to improve the human rights situation in Mexico.

We thought we could do better. But as we all know, Mr. Speaker, NAFTA passed. It's now the law of the land.

And now that it is the law, we all hope that it works. We all hope that it will help American families and not hurt them.

And indeed, now that we've passed the 6-month mark of this treaty—if you listen to interpretations of NAFTA by the Commerce Department and others who supported this agreement—it's clear some believe it is working.

But I am concerned, Mr. Speaker. I am concerned that many of the interpretations I have seen by the Commerce Department and others recently take the same tact they did last year during the NAFTA debate: they only looked at half of the story.

While we all hope that NAFTA works—until we're honest with ourselves and look at both sides of the story—we have to recognize that it never will work.

We are here tonight, Mr. Speaker, to talk about the other side of the story. The side of the story we must pay attention to if this treaty really is going to be a boon to America.

Let me talk about why I find the recent claims of the Commerce Department extremely misleading.

They point out that United States exports to Mexico are up 17 percent. What they don't say is that imports from Mexico are up 21 percent, and that's cost us jobs.

They point out that the United States has exported 22,000 vehicles to Mexico from January to July. What they don't say is that we have imported 221,000 vehicles from Mexico—10 times more than we sent them—and that's cost us jobs.

They claim that NAFTA could create 100,000 jobs this year, with no supporting documentation. What they don't say is that 35,000 workers from 224 firms in 37 States have already applied for benefits due to jobs lost from NAFTA and that's just through August.

Using the logic of the Commerce Department report, you would conclude that the 1962 New York Mets were a good baseball team because they won 40 games. Their NAFTA math lets you overlook the fact that the 1962 Mets lost 120 games, and that's why they're known as one of the worst teams in baseball history.

When you look at both sides of the story, it's easy to understand why our trade surplus with Mexico has dropped by over 30 percent in the past year alone. It's gone from $1.6 billion to $1 billion—and headed in the wrong direction fast.

In fact, I believe we really need to take a look at our entire trade policy.

In trade figures that just came out last week—at the same time they're trying to sell us good news about NAFTA—our overall trade deficit recently rose to the second-highest level in history. It surged to over $10 billion in July.

Our deficit with Japan alone soared to $5.67 billion for the month of July—adding to the $60 billion annual deficit they held over us last year. Our deficit with China reached $2.67 billion in the same period.

We can't keep closing our eyes to both sides of the story. We can't keep listening to the happy talk while closing our eyes to the other side of the story. It's time we get real.

Clearly, the deficit is a disturbing trend. But an equally disturbing trend is emerging among our top auto competitors that should concern us all.

Again, this wasn't discussed at all in the Commerce Department report, but it's something we have to watch closely.

Last year, there were many of us who warned that once NAFTA passed, our top auto competitors would use Mexico as an export platform into the United States.

Since NAFTA eliminates tariffs between the United States and Mexico, we feared that countries such as Japan, Korea, and Germany would set up shop in Mexico in order to export cars into the United States duty-free, in effect, skirting the existing tariffs we charge those countries to import cars into our country which would further erode our balance of trade.

That was our concern and regretfully, it appears to be exactly what's happening.

In the short time since NAFTA passed, several major Japanese and European automakers have announced plans to build or expand production in Mexico.

Since NAFTA passed, Honda has announced plans to construct a $50 million plant in Guadalajara that will begin assembling Honda Accords in November of next year.

BMW has revealed plans to invest $180 million to begin operations in a plant just west of Mexico.

Nissan recently opened a new plant in Mexico as part of a 6-year, $1 billion plan to double its production capacity in North America.

Volkswagen only sold 50,000 cars in the U.S. last year.

Now, after NAFTA, they plan to boost production in Mexico and vow, and I quote, "to sell more than 100,000 cars" in the United States this year.

Even Toyota President Tatsuro Toyoda, who has never even exported cars to Mexico before, was recently reported in Automotive News to be quote, "interested in Mexico as a possible production base, following the implementation of NAFTA."

And it's not just foreign auto companies that are moving to Mexico. Samsung of Korea just announced this month that it would start building a $150 million electronics plant in Tijuana.

And listen to the reason why. When a Korean Government economist was asked "why Mexico," he didn't say, "because we want to sell more products to Mexican consumers." He responded that quote, "Latin America is very important (because) it provides easier access to North America markets."

Meanwhile, our automotive trade in the first 9 months of NAFTA has followed the same unhealthy pattern that was set before NAFTA.

We sell them parts, they turn those parts into finished vehicles and then they ship them back to us.

When you look at the Commerce Department's own figures, you find that ranked in dollar value, our No. 1 manufactured export to Mexico is auto parts, while our No. 1 manufactured import from Mexico is finished vehicles.

What's the benefit of our exports to Mexico if they come right back across the border to us and never reach the Mexican consumer?

And why can't workers in the United States assemble those cars just like we have for over 100 years?

The more we ignore the reality of these numbers, the more we put the jobs of our own workers in jeopardy.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, let me describe to you a case which I believe calls into question the depth of our commitment to the side agreements that were signed to get NAFTA passed.

If you recall, Mr. Speaker, last year the administration negotiated two separate side agreements—one on the environment and one on labor rights—that everyone agreed were vital to getting the treaty passed.

As part of the labor side agreement, our Government committed itself to helping enforce workers rights in Mexico.

We committed ourselves to challenging Mexico to live up to the letter of their own law and promised to take immediate action if any violations were reported.

Well, earlier this year, there was a case that tested that commitment.

Shortly after NAFTA went into effect, 11 workers at a General Electric Plant in Juarez and 20 workers at a Honeywell plant in Chihuahua were fired.

The reason? Because they were trying to organize a union. Working conditions in one of the plants were so dangerous that workers consistently came down with headaches and nausea and so, they spoke out about it.

They met in their own homes and tried to organize a union just like workers in the other plant.

And for that, they were fired.

The treatment of these workers were in clear violation not only of Mexico's own domestic laws, but of the labor side agreement of NAFTA.

Because these workers had been in contact with organizers from several American unions, those unions submitted a formal complaint to the Labor Department.

Under NAFTA, the Labor Department is responsible for investigating their claims and the Labor Department agreed to hold a hearing.

Since this was the first hearing of its sort, it was to set an important precedent.

But if the precedent it set is any indication of how stringently we're going to enforce NAFTA, we all have reason to be concerned.

First, the hearing was scheduled to be held not in El Paso—which was the U.S. site nearest to the complaints—but in Washington, which most of the witnesses could not afford to travel to.

Then, the hearing was scheduled for August 31. But anyone wishing to testify had to submit written testimony by August 19th—which happened to be 2 days before the biggest election in Mexican history, which most of the witnesses were participating in. So there was no time to prepare.

After numerous letters from members of Congress to protest the date, it was finally moved to September 12.

But the hearing limited testimony to 10 minutes per person, including translation time—which actually cut the testimony down to 5 minutes per person. This for people who had traveled thousands of miles to make their case.

Four panels spoke. But there were no questions asked of the first or fourth panels, and only limited questions of the third panel.

What's more, cameras, tape recorders, and videotaped testimony was not permitted, which completely limited public access.

And while the Labor Department said transcripts would be made available within 3 days, they now say they are making none available. If you want one, you have to call the recording company.

It took my office over 2 weeks to get a copy.

Mr. Speaker, I think you would agree, this is not a good precedent to set. And if this is any gauge about our commitment to the side agreements, we all need to be concerned.

Mr. Speaker, last year, we fought for a better NAFTA agreement.

Now, that's its law, we all hope that it works.

But until we're honest with ourselves, until we look at both sides of the story, and work to honor the commitments that we made, it never will work.

□ 1830

Mr. Speaker, I call upon everyone to join in making sure that it does work.

Mrs. BENTLEY. Mr. Speaker, the demand in this nation for humane law, and the expectation of fair and equal treatment for all Americans, has made many of us naive in dealing with nations rooted in other traditions, other value systems, other legal structures.

The lack of fair treatment of Mexican labor whether by their employers or by their representatives to the NAFTA or by our NAFTA representative's inability to move the Government of Mexico toward a more humane attitude toward its own citizens should not come as a surprise.

Under what special power can the long, dark history of civil rights violations in Mexico be changed? By the mere shipping of a tripartite trade agreement such as NAFTA?

I think not.

In one of the poorest nations of the world, which counts among its elite 30 billionaires—more than are counted in any one of the industrialized nations—most of them created since Mexico privatized many of its national industries during the 1980's—the notion of expecting that individual human rights would be upheld above all considerations of making money is rather farfetched.

A commentary upon the difficulty of dealing with the laws of the various nations through the dispute panel mechanism central to every one of these major trade agreements, including the proposed GATT, was made most brilliantly by retired U.S. Circuit Judge Malcolm Wilkey regarding the decision by the Extraordinary Challenge Commission of the Canadian Free Trade Agreement on exports of soft wood lumber products into the United States.

Representing the United States on the ECC appeal against Canadian subsidies of soft wood lumber, Judge Wilkey, outvoted 2 to 1, clearly stated the dangers inherent in the dispute panel process:

It is clear that a new body of United States law, fathered by Binational Panels and ECCs under the CFTA (soon NAFTA), will be created, while long-established U.S. law will continue to be applied to imports from all other countries. All of this has occurred in the operation of this innovative scheme of appellate review between Canada and the United States, two common law countries with similar traditions and antecedents. Now we have Mexico as a third member of NAFTA, and in the near future perhaps Chile and other Ibero-American countries. Mexico has no legal system or traditions in common with the United States whatsoever; it is proudly a Civil Law country. . . . If Canadians on the Panels and ECCs have failed—as in my judgement here they have—to comprehend the United States standards of judicial review of administrative agency action, what can we expect from lawyers and judges schooled in the Civil Law?

Mr. Speaker, what can we expect also from the more than 120 nations in the GATT who will have power over our domestic laws equal to that which we have given Canada and Mexico? Nations as unaccustomed to freedom and civil rights as China and Sri Lanka, Russia and Malaysia.

Will our higher standards in every phase of our every day life appear to them to be nothing more or less than structural impediments to the free flow of their goods into our markets?

Of course they will. Just as Venezuela is going to charge before the GATT that our standards for clean gasoline were designed just to keep their lower standard of gasoline out. And, never forget, that this administration was prepared to give Venezuela a waiver under the threat of a challenge to the old toothless GATT, until the Senate stopped that nonsense. Imagine how far Mr. Kantor will roll under a GATT with enforcement powers if the Venezuelan challenge is upheld.

And we are being told we have nothing to fear if the new GATT passes.

Ask the workers in the GE plant and the Honeywell plant how much better life is for them now that the NAFTA is going into effect. Obviously not much.

These agreements are not good deals for America. They seem to not be helping the workers in these other nations and they will be devastating to the jobs of American workers. They will ultimately strip the Congress of all of its powers guaranteed in the Constitution over the whole body of U.S. interstate and foreign commerce law.

We should have voted no on NAFTA. We must vote no on GATT.

TITLE I—AMENDMENTS TO THE ELEMENTARY AND SECONDARY EDUCATION ACT OF 1965

SEC. 101. AMENDMENTS TO THE ELEMENTARY AND SECONDARY EDUCATION ACT OF 1965.

The Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 (20 U.S.C. 2701 et seq.) is amended to read as follows:

“SECTION 1. TABLE OF CONTENTS.

“This Act may be cited as the ‘Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965’.

“TITLE I—HELPING DISADVANTAGED CHILDREN MEET HIGH STANDARDS

“SEC. 1001. DECLARATION OF POLICY AND STATEMENT OF PURPOSE.

“(a) STATEMENT OF POLICY.—

“(1) IN GENERAL.—The Congress declares it to be the policy of the United States that a high-quality education for all individuals and a fair and equal opportunity to obtain that education are a societal good, are a moral imperative, and improve the life of every individual, because the quality of our individual lives ultimately depends on the quality of the lives of others.

“(2) ADDITIONAL POLICY.—The Congress further declares it to be the policy of the United States to expand the program authorized by this title over the fiscal years 1996 through 1999 by increasing funding for this title by at least $750,000,000 over baseline each fiscal year and thereby increasing the percentage of eligible children served in each fiscal year with the intent of serving all eligible children by fiscal year 2004.

“(b) RECOGNITION OF NEED.—The Congress recognizes that—

“(1) although the achievement gap between disadvantaged children and other children has been reduced by half over the past two decades, a sizable gap remains, and many segments of our society lack the opportunity to become well educated;

“(2) the most urgent need for educational improvement is in schools with high concentrations of children from low-income families and achieving the National Education Goals will not be possible without substantial improvement in such schools;

“(3) educational needs are particularly great for low-achieving children in our Nation’s highest-poverty schools, children with limited English proficiency, children of migrant workers, children with disabilities, Indian children, children who are neglected or delinquent, and young children and their parents who are in need of family-literacy services;

“(4) while title I and other programs funded under this Act contribute to narrowing the achievement gap between children in high-poverty and low-poverty schools, such programs need to become even more effective in improving schools in order to enable all children to achieve high standards; and

“(5) in order for all students to master challenging standards in core academic subjects as described in the third National Education Goal described in section 102(3) of the Goals 2000: Educate America Act, students and schools will need to maximize the time spent on teaching and learning the core academic subjects.

“(c) WHAT HAS BEEN LEARNED SINCE 1988.—To enable schools to provide all children a high-quality education, this title builds upon the following learned information:

“(1) All children can master challenging content and complex problem-solving skills. Research clearly shows that children, including low-achieving children, can succeed when expectations are high and all children are given the opportunity to learn challenging material.

“(2) Conditions outside the classroom such as hunger, unsafe living conditions, homelessness, unemployment, violence, inadequate health care, child abuse, and drug and alcohol abuse can adversely affect children’s academic achievement and must be addressed through the coordination of services, such as health and social services, in order for the Nation to meet the National Education Goals.

“(3) Use of low-level tests that are not aligned with schools’ curricula fails to provide adequate information about what children know and can do and encourages curricula and instruction that focus on the low-level skills measured by such tests.

“(4) Resources are more effective when resources are used to ensure that children have full access to effective high-quality regular school programs and receive supplemental help through extended-time activities.

“(5) Intensive and sustained professional development for teachers and other school staff, focused on teaching and learning and on helping children attain high standards, is too often not provided.

“(6) Insufficient attention and resources are directed toward the effective use of technology in schools and the role technology can play in professional development and improved teaching and learning.

“(7) All parents can contribute to their children’s success by helping at home and becoming partners with teachers so that children can achieve high standards.

“(8) Decentralized decisionmaking is a key ingredient of systemic reform. Schools need the resources, flexibility, and authority to design and implement effective strategies for bringing their children to high levels of performance.

“(9) Opportunities for students to achieve high standards can be enhanced through a variety of approaches such as public school choice and public charter schools.

“(10) Attention to academics alone cannot ensure that all children will reach high standards. The health and other needs of children that affect learning are frequently unmet, particularly in high-poverty schools, thereby necessitating coordination of services to better meet children’s needs.

“(11) Resources provided under this title can be better targeted on the highest-poverty local educational agencies and schools that have children most in need.

“(12) Equitable and sufficient resources, particularly as such resources relate to the quality of the teaching force, have an integral relationship to high student achievement.

“(d) STATEMENT OF PURPOSE.—The purpose of this title is to enable schools to provide opportunities for children served to acquire the knowledge and skills contained in the challenging State content standards and to meet the challenging State performance standards developed for all children. This purpose shall be accomplished by—

“(1) ensuring high standards for all children and aligning the efforts of States, local educational agencies, and schools to help children served under this title to reach such standards;

“(2) providing children an enriched and accelerated educational program, including, when appropriate, the use of the arts, through schoolwide programs or through additional services that increase the amount and quality of instructional time so that children served under this title receive at least the classroom instruction that other children receive;

“(3) promoting schoolwide reform and ensuring access of children (from the earliest grades) to effective instructional strategies and challenging academic content that includes intensive complex thinking and problem-solving experiences;

“(4) significantly upgrading the quality of instruction by providing staff in participating schools with substantial opportunities for professional development;

“(5) coordinating services under all parts of this title with each other, with other educational services, and, to the extent feasible, with health and social service programs funded from other sources;

“(6) affording parents meaningful opportunities to participate in the education of their children at home and at school;

“(7) distributing resources, in amounts sufficient to make a difference, to areas and schools where needs are greatest;

“(8) improving accountability, as well as teaching and learning, by using State assessment systems designed to measure how well children served under this title are achieving challenging State student performance standards expected of all children; and “(9) providing greater decisionmaking authority and flexibility to schools and teachers in exchange for greater responsibility for student performance.

“SEC. 1002. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

“(a) LOCAL EDUCATIONAL AGENCY GRANTS.—For the purpose of carrying out part A, other than section 1120(e), there are authorized to be appropriated $7,400,000,000 for fiscal year 1995 and such sums as may be necessary for each of the four succeeding fiscal years.

“(b) EVEN START.—For the purpose of carrying out part B, there are authorized to be appropriated $118,000,000 for fiscal year 1995 and such sums as may be necessary for each of the four succeeding fiscal years.

“(c) EDUCATION OF MIGRATORY CHILDREN.—For the purpose of carrying out part C, there are authorized to be appropriated $310,000,000 for fiscal year 1995 and such sums as may be necessary for each of the four succeeding fiscal years.

“(d) PREVENTION AND INTERVENTION PROGRAMS FOR YOUTH WHO ARE NEGLECTED, DELINQUENT, OR AT RISK OF DROPPING OUT.—For the purpose of carrying out part D, there are authorized to be appropriated $40,000,000 for fiscal year 1995 and such sums as may be necessary for each of the four succeeding fiscal years.

“(e) CAPITAL EXPENSES.—For the purpose of carrying out section 1120(e), there are authorized to be appropriated $41,434,000 for fiscal year 1995 and such sums as may be necessary for each of the four succeeding fiscal years.

“(f) ADDITIONAL ASSISTANCE FOR SCHOOL IMPROVEMENT.—For the purpose of providing additional needed assistance to carry out sections 1116 and 1117, there are authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary for fiscal year 1996 and each of the three succeeding fiscal years.

“(g) FEDERAL ACTIVITIES.—

“(1) SECTION 1501.—For the purpose of carrying out section 1501, there are authorized to be appropriated $9,000,000 for fiscal year 1995 and such sums as may be necessary for each of the four succeeding fiscal years.

“(2) SECTIONS 1502 AND 1503.—For the purpose of carrying out sections 1502 and 1503, there are authorized to be appropriated $50,000,000 for fiscal year 1995 and such sums as may be necessary for each of the four succeeding fiscal years.

“SEC. 1003. RESERVATION AND ALLOCATION FOR SCHOOL IMPROVEMENT.

“(a) PAYMENT FOR SCHOOL IMPROVEMENT.—
“(1) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in paragraph (3), each State may reserve for the proper and efficient performance of its duties under subsections (c)(5) and (d) of section 1116, and section 1117, one-half of 1 percent of the funds allocated to the State under subsections (a), (c), and (d), of section 1002 for fiscal year 1995 and each succeeding fiscal year.

"(2) MINIMUM.—The total amount that may be reserved by each State, other than the outlying areas, under this subsection for any fiscal year, when added to amounts appropriated for such fiscal year under section 1002(f) that are allocated to the State under subsection (b), if any, may not be less than $200,000. The total amount that may be reserved by each outlying area under this subsection for any fiscal year, when added to amounts appropriated for such fiscal year under section 1002(f) that are allocated under subsection (b) to the outlying area, if any, may not be less than $25,000.

"(3) SPECIAL RULE.—If the amount reserved under paragraph (1) when added to the amount made available under section 1002(f) for a State is less than $200,000 for any fiscal year, then such State may reserve such additional funds under subsections (a), (c), and (d) of section 1002 as are necessary to make $200,000 available to such State.

"(b) ADDITIONAL STATE ALLOCATIONS FOR SCHOOL IMPROVEMENT.—From the amount appropriated under section 1002(f) for any fiscal year, each State shall be eligible to receive an amount that bears the same ratio to the amount appropriated as the amount allocated to the State under this part (other than section 1120(e)) bears to the total amount allocated to all States under this part (other than section 1120(e)).

"PART A—IMPROVING BASIC PROGRAMS OPERATED BY LOCAL EDUCATIONAL AGENCIES

"Subpart 1—Basic Program Requirements

"SEC. 1111. STATE PLANS.

"(a) PLANS REQUIRED.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Any State desiring to receive a grant under this part shall submit to the Secretary a plan, developed in consultation with local educational agencies, teachers, pupil services personnel, administrators, other staff, and parents, that satisfies the requirements of this section and that is coordinated with other programs under this Act, the Goals 2000: Educate America Act, and other Acts, as appropriate, consistent with section 14306.

"(2) CONSOLIDATION PLAN.—A State plan submitted under paragraph (1) may be submitted as part of a consolidation plan under section 14302.

"(b) STANDARDS AND ASSESSMENTS.—

"(1) CHALLENGING STANDARDS.—(A) Each State plan shall demonstrate that the State has developed or adopted challenging content standards and challenging student performance standards that will be used by the State, its local educational agencies, and its schools to carry out this part, except that a State shall not be required to submit such standards to the Secretary.

"(B) If a State has State content standards or State student performance standards developed under title III of the Goals 2000: Educate America Act and an aligned set of assessments for all students developed under such title, or, if not developed under such title, adopted under another process, the State shall use such standards and assessments, modified, if necessary, to conform with the requirements of subparagraphs (A) and (D) of this paragraph, and paragraphs (2) and (3).

"(C) If a State has not adopted State content standards and State student performance standards for all students, the State plan shall include a strategy and schedule for developing State content standards and State student performance standards for elementary and secondary school children served under this part in subjects as determined by the State, but including at least mathematics and reading or language arts by the end of the one-year period described in paragraph (6), which standards shall include the same knowledge, skills, and levels of performance expected of all children.

"(D) Standards under this paragraph shall include—

"(i) challenging content standards in academic subjects that—

"(I) specify what children are expected to know and be able to do;

"(II) contain coherent and rigorous content; and

"(III) encourage the teaching of advanced skills;

"(ii) challenging student performance standards that—

"(I) are aligned with the State's content standards;

"(II) describe two levels of high performance, proficient and advanced, that determine how well children are mastering the material in the State content standards; and

"(III) describe a third level of performance, partially proficient, to provide complete information about the progress of the lower performing children toward achieving to the proficient and advanced levels of performance.

"(E) For the subjects in which students will be served under this part, but for which a State is not required by subparagraphs (A), (B) and (C) to develop, and has not otherwise developed such standards, the State plan shall describe a strategy for ensuring that such students are taught the same knowledge and skills and held to the same expectations as are all children.

"(2) YEARLY PROGRESS.—

"(A) Each State plan shall demonstrate, based on assessments described under paragraph (3), what constitutes adequate yearly progress of—

"(i) any school served under this part toward enabling children to meet the State's student performance standards; and

"(ii) any local educational agency that received funds under this part toward enabling children in schools receiving assistance under this part to meet the State's student performance standards.

"(B) Adequate yearly progress shall be defined in a manner—

"(i) that is consistent with guidelines established by the Secretary that result in continuous and substantial yearly improvement of each local educational agency and school sufficient to achieve the goal of all children served under this part meeting the State's proficient and advanced levels of performance, particularly economically disadvantaged and limited English proficient children; and

"(ii) that links progress primarily to performance on the assessments carried out under this section while permitting progress to be established in part through the use of other measures.

"(3) ASSESSMENTS.—Each State plan shall demonstrate that the State has developed or adopted a set of high-quality, yearly student assessments, including assessments in at least mathematics and reading or language arts, that will be used as the primary means of determining the yearly performance of each local educational agency and school served under this part in enabling all children served under this part to meet the State's student performance standards. Such assessments shall—

"(A) be the same assessments used to measure the performance of all children, if the State measures the performance of all children;

"(B) be aligned with the State's challenging content and student performance standards and provide coherent information about student attainment of such standards;

"(C) be used for purposes for which such assessments are valid and reliable, and be consistent with relevant, nationally recognized professional and technical standards for such assessments;

"(D) measure the proficiency of students in the academic subjects in which a State has adopted challenging content and student performance standards and be administered at some time during—

"(i) grades 3 through 5;

"(ii) grades 6 through 9; and

"(iii) grades 10 through 12;

"(E) involve multiple up-to-date measures of student performance, including measures that assess higher order thinking skills and understanding;

"(F) provide for—

"(i) the participation in such assessments of all students;

"(ii) the reasonable adaptations and accommodations for students with diverse learning needs, necessary to measure the achievement of such students relative to State content standards; and

"(iii) the inclusion of limited English proficient students who shall be assessed, to the extent practicable, in the language and form most likely to yield accurate and reliable information on what such students know and can do, to determine such students' mastery of skills in subjects other than English;

"(G) include students who have attended schools in a local educational agency for a full academic year but have not attended a single school for a full academic year, however the performance of students who have attended more than one school in the local educational agency in any academic year shall be used only in determining the progress of the local educational agency;

"(H) provide individual student interpretive and descriptive reports, which shall include scores, or other information on the attainment of student performance standards; and

"(I) enable results to be disaggregated within each State, local educational agency, and school by gender, by each major racial and ethnic group, by English proficiency status, by migrant status, by students with disabilities as compared to nondisabled students, and by economically disadvantaged students as compared to students who are not economically disadvantaged.

"(4) SPECIAL RULE.—Assessment measures that do not meet the requirements of paragraph (3)(C) may be included as one of the multiple measures, if a State includes in the State plan information regarding the State's efforts to validate such measures.

"(5) LANGUAGE ASSESSMENTS.—Each State plan shall identify the languages other than English that are present in the participating student population and indicate the languages for which yearly student assessments are not available and are needed. The State shall make every effort to develop such assessments and may request assistance from the Secretary if linguistically accessible assessment measures are needed. Upon request, the Secretary shall assist with the identification of appropriate assessment measures in the needed languages through the Office of Bilingual Education and Minority Languages Affairs.

"(6) STANDARD AND ASSESSMENT DEVELOPMENT.—(A) A State that does not have challenging State content standards and challenging State student performance standards, in at least mathematics and reading or language arts, shall develop such standards within one year of receiving funds under this part after the first fiscal year for which such State receives such funds after the date of enactment of the Improving America's Schools Act of 1994.

"(B) A State that does not have assessments that meet the requirements of paragraph (3) in at least mathematics and reading or language arts shall develop and test such assessments within four years (one year of which shall be used for field testing such assessment), of receiving funds under this part after the first fiscal year for which such State receives such funds after the date of enactment of the Improving America's Schools Act of 1994 and shall develop benchmarks of progress toward the development of such assessments that meet the requirements of paragraph (3), including periodic updates.

"(C) The Secretary may extend for one additional year the time for testing new assessments under subparagraph (B) upon the request of the State and the submission of a strategy to correct problems identified in the field testing of such new assessments.

"(D) If, after the one-year period described in subparagraph (A), a State does not have challenging State content and challenging student performance standards in at least mathematics and reading or language arts, a State shall adopt a set of standards in these subjects such as the standards and assessments contained in other State plans the Secretary has approved.

"(2) ELIGIBLE SCHOOL ATTENDANCE AREAS.—For the purposes of this part—

"(A) the term 'school attendance area' means, in relation to a particular school, the geographical area in which the children who are normally served by that school reside; and

"(B) the term 'eligible school attendance area' means a school attendance area in which the percentage of children from low-income families is at least as high as the percentage of children from low-income families in the local educational agency as a whole.

"(3) RANKING ORDER.—If funds allocated in accordance with subsection (c) are insufficient to serve all eligible school attendance areas, a local educational agency shall—

"(A) annually rank, without regard to grade spans, such agency's eligible school attendance areas in which the concentration of children from low-income families exceeds 75 percent from highest to lowest according to the percentage of children from low-income families; and

"(B) serve such eligible school attendance areas in rank order.

"(4) REMAINING FUNDS.—If funds remain after serving all eligible school attendance areas under paragraph (3), a local educational agency shall—

"(A) annually rank such agency's remaining eligible school attendance areas from highest to lowest either by grade span or for the entire local educational agency according to the percentage of children from low-income families; and

"(B) serve such eligible school attendance areas in rank order either within each grade-span grouping or within the local educational agency as a whole.

"(5) MEASURES.—The local educational agency shall use the same measure of poverty, which measure shall be the number of children ages 5 through 17 in poverty counted in the most recent census data approved by the Secretary, the number of children eligible for free and reduced priced lunches under the National School Lunch Act, the number of children in families receiving assistance under the Aid to Families with Dependent Children program, or the number of children eligible to receive medical assistance under the Medicaid program, or a composite of such indicators, with respect to all school attendance areas in the local educational agency—

"(7) WAIVER FOR DESEGREGATION PLANS.—The Secretary may approve a local educational agency's written request for a waiver of the requirements of subsections (a) and (c), and permit such agency to treat as eligible, and serve, any school that children attend with a State-ordered or a court-ordered school desegregation plan or a plan that continues to be implemented in accordance with State-ordered or court-ordered desegregation plan, if (A) the number of economically disadvantaged children enrolled in the school is at least 25 percent of the school's total enrollment; and (B) the Secretary determines on the basis of a written request from such agency and in accordance with such criteria as the Secretary establishes, that approval of that request would further the purposes of this pact.

“(2) SPECIAL RULE.—Notwithstanding paragraph (1)(C), the number of children attending private elementary and secondary schools who are to receive services, and the assistance such children are to receive under this part, shall be determined without regard to whether the public school attendance area in which such children reside is assisted under paragraph (1).

“(c) ALLOCATIONS.—

“(1) IN GENERAL.—A local educational agency shall allocate funds received under this part to eligible school attendance areas or eligible schools, identified under subsection (a) or (b), in rank order, on the basis of the total number of children from low-income families in each area or school.

“(2) SPECIAL RULE.—(A) Except as provided in subparagraph (B), the per pupil amount of funds allocated to each school attendance area or school under paragraph (1) shall be at least 125 percent of the per pupil amount of funds a local educational agency received for that year under the poverty criteria described by the local educational agency in the plan submitted under section 1112, except that this paragraph shall not apply to a local educational agency that only serves schools in which the percentage of such children is 35 percent or greater.

“(B) A local educational agency may reduce the amount of funds allocated under subparagraph (A) for a school attendance area or school by the amount of any supplemental State and local funds expended in that school attendance area or school for programs that meet the requirements of section 1114 or 1115.

“(3) RESERVATION.—A local educational agency shall reserve such funds as are necessary under this part to provide services comparable to those provided to children in schools funded under this part to serve—

“(4) SPECIAL RULE.—(A) Except as provided in subsection (b), the Secretary may, through publication of a notice in the Federal Register, exempt schoolwide programs under this section from statutory or regulatory provisions of any other noncompetitive, formula grant program administered by the Secretary, or any discretionary grant program administered by the Secretary (other than formula or discretionary grant programs under the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act), to support schoolwide programs, if the intent and purposes of such other programs are met.

“(B) A school that chooses to use funds from such other programs shall not be relieved of the requirements relating to health, safety, civil rights, gender equity, student and parental participation and involvement, services to private school children, maintenance of effort, comparability of services, uses of Federal funds to supplement, not supplant non-Federal funds, or the distribution of funds to State or local educational agencies that apply to the receipt of funds from such programs.

“(5) PROFESSIONAL DEVELOPMENT.—Each school receiving funds under this part for any fiscal year shall devote sufficient resources to effectively carry out the activities described in subsection (b)(1)(D) in accordance with section

"(3) publicize and disseminate to teachers and other staff, parents, students, and the community, the results of the annual review under paragraph (2) of all schools served under this part in individual school performance profiles that include statistically sound disaggregated results as required by section 1111(b)(3)(I); and

"(c) SCHOOL IMPROVEMENT.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—A local educational agency shall identify for school improvement any school served under this part that—"(i) in consultation with parents, the local educational agency, and the school support team, develop or revise a school plan in ways that have the greatest likelihood of improving the performance of participating children in meeting the State's student performance standards, which may include reviewing the schools' plan in the context of the opportunity-to-learn standards or strategies developed by such State under the Goals 2000: Educate America Act; and

"(ii) submit the plan or revised plan to the local educational agency for approval.

"(B) Before identifying a school for school improvement under paragraph (1), the local educational agency shall provide the school with an opportunity to review the school-level data, including assessment data, on which such identification is based. "(C) During the first year immediately following such identification, the school shall implement such school's plan or revised plan.

"(3) PROFESSIONAL DEVELOPMENT.—(A) Each school identified under paragraph (1) shall, as part of the school plan under paragraph (2), improve the skills of its staff by providing effective professional development activities. "(4) TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE.—(A) For each school identified under paragraph (1), the local educational agency shall provide technical or other assistance as the school develops and implements such school's plan or revised plan, such as a joint plan between the local educational agency and school that addresses specific elements of student performance problems and that specifies school and local educational agency responsibilities under the plan, and waivers or modifications of requirements of local educational agency policy or regulation that impede the ability of the school to educate students.

"(B) Such technical assistance may be provided directly by the local educational agency, through mechanisms authorized under section 1117, or with the local educational agency's approval, by an institution of higher education, a private nonprofit organization, an educational service agency, a comprehensive regional assistance center under part A of title XIII, or other entities with experience in helping schools improve achievement.

"(5) CORRECTIVE ACTION.—(A) Except as provided in subparagraph (C), after providing technical assistance pursuant to paragraph (4) and taking other remediation measures, the local educational agency may take corrective action at any time against a school that has been identified under paragraph (1), but, during the third year following identification under paragraph (1), shall take such action against any school that still fails to make adequate progress.

"(B)(i) Corrective actions are those, consistent with State and local law, determined and made public and disseminated by the local educational agency, which may include—

"(C) Prior to implementing any corrective action, the local educational agency may refrain from such corrective action for one additional year to the extent that the failure to make progress can be attributed to extenuating circumstances as determined by the local educational agency.

"(D) A school that is no longer operating its schoolwide program due to a corrective action may not resume operation of such a program until the local educational agency determines that the school has adequately reformed its schoolwide program plan to enable the school to make adequate progress toward meeting the State's challenging student performance standards.

"(6) STATE EDUCATIONAL AGENCY RESPONSIBILITIES.—The State educational agency shall—

"(A) make technical assistance under section 1117 available to the schools farthest from meeting the State's challenging student performance standards, if requested by the school or local educational agency; and

"(3) IDENTIFICATION.—(A) A State educational agency shall identify for improvement any local educational agency that—

"(i) for two consecutive years, is not making adequate progress as defined in section 1111(b)(2)(A)(ii) in schools served under this part toward meeting the State's student performance standards, except that schools served by the local educational agency that are operating targeted assistance programs may be reviewed on the basis of the progress of only those students served under this part; or

"(ii) has failed to meet the criteria established by the State through such State's transitional procedure under section 1111(b)(7)(B) for two consecutive years.

"(B) Before identifying a local educational agency for improvement under paragraph (1), the State educational agency shall provide the local educational agency with an opportunity to review the school-level data, including assessment data, on which such identification is based. If the local educational agency believes that such identification for improvement is in error due to statistical or other substantive reasons, such local educational agency may provide evidence to the State educational agency to support such belief.

"(4) LOCAL EDUCATIONAL AGENCY REVISIONS.—

(A) Each local educational agency identified under paragraph (3) shall, in consultation with schools, parents, and educational experts, revise its local educational agency plan under section 1112 in ways that have the greatest likelihood of improving the performance of schools served by the local educational agency under this part in meeting the State's student performance standards.

"(B) Such revision shall include determining why the local educational agency's plan failed to bring about increased achievement, and may include reviewing the local educational agency's plan in the context of the opportunity-to-learn standards or strategies developed by such State under the Goals 2000: Educate America Act.

"(5) STATE EDUCATIONAL AGENCY RESPONSIBILITY.—(A) For each local educational agency identified under paragraph (3), the State educational agency shall—

"(I) develop and implement the local educational agency's revised plan; and

"(II) work with schools needing improvement; and

"(ii) make available to the local educational agencies farthest from meeting the State's standards, if requested, assistance under section 1117.

"(B) Technical or other assistance may be provided by the State educational agency directly, or by an institution of higher education, a private nonprofit organization, an educational service agency or other local consortium, a technical assistance center, or other entities with experience in assisting local educational agencies improve achievement, and may include—

"(i) interagency collaborative agreements between the local educational agency and other public agencies to provide health, pupil services, and other social services needed to remove barriers to learning; and

"(ii) waivers or modification of requirements of State law or regulation (in States in which such waivers are permitted) that impede the ability of a local educational agency to educate students.

"(6) CORRECTIVE ACTION.—(A) Except as provided in subparagraph (C), after providing technical assistance pursuant to paragraph (5) and taking other remediation measures, the State educational agency may take corrective action at any time against a local educational agency that has been identified under paragraph (3), but, during the fourth year following identification under paragraph (3), shall take such action against any local educational agency that still fails to make adequate progress.

"(B)(i) Corrective actions are those actions, consistent with State law, determined and made public and disseminated by the State educational agency, which may include—

"(VIII) a joint plan between the State and the local educational agency that addresses specific elements of student performance problems and that specifies State and local responsibilities under the plan.

"(ii) Notwithstanding clause (i), corrective actions taken pursuant to this part shall not include the actions described in subclauses (I), (II), and (III) of clause (i) until the State has developed assessments that meet the requirements of paragraph (3)(C) of section 1111(b).

"(C) Prior to implementing any corrective action, the State educational agency shall provide due process and a hearing (if State law provides for such due process and a hearing) to any local educational agency identified under paragraph (3) and may refrain from such corrective action for one year after the four-year period described in subparagraph (A) to the extent that the failure to make progress can be attributed to such extenuating circumstances as determined by the State educational agency.

"(7) SPECIAL RULE.—Local educational agencies that for at least two of the three years following identification under paragraph (3) make adequate progress toward meeting the State's standards no longer need to be identified for local educational agency improvement.

"(e) CONSTRUCTION.—Nothing in this section shall be construed to alter or otherwise affect the rights, remedies, and procedures afforded school or school district employees under Federal, State, or local laws (including applicable regulations or court orders) or under the terms of collective bargaining agreements, memoranda of understanding, or other agreements between such employees and their employers.

"(ii) equity in participation and achievement of students by sex has been achieved or significantly improved.

"(B) Schools designated under this paragraph may serve as models and provide support to other schools, especially schoolwide programs and schools in school improvement, to assist such schools in meeting the State's student performance standards.

"(C) States shall use funds reserved under section 1003(a) and funds made available under section 1002(f) to allow schools identified under this paragraph to carry out the activities described in subparagraph (B) and may use such funds to provide awards to such schools to further such school's education programs under this part, provide additional incentives for continued success, and reward individuals or groups in the school for exemplary performance.

"(D) A local educational agency may also recognize the success of a distinguished school by providing additional institutional and individual rewards, such as greater decisionmaking authority at the school building level, increased access to resources or supplemental services such as summer programs that may be used to sustain or increase success, additional professional development opportunities, opportunities to participate in special projects, and individual financial bonuses.
