Remarks to Members of the Defense Community at Andrews Air Force Base, Maryland

June 11, 1991

Thank you all very much. And I hope everybody's enjoyed this tour as much as I have. And first, let me pay my respects to the men and women of the U.S. Air Force. I was telling General McPeak and the Secretary that I'm always so impressed by you all's dedication, certainly service. And I'm just delighted to be here with those that have made this exhibition possible from the research stage and right on up until now. I want to salute Dick Cheney, of course; our leader—one of our leaders, Bob Dole, is with us today; Don Rice, of course, our Secretary; General McPeak, you've heard me speak about him; and Members of the Senate who took the time to come out here today—our chairman, Sam Nunn, and others. And I'm just delighted you all are here.

Senator Warner, Senator Nunn, and the members of the committee have been strong supporters of Stealth technology even before the first prototype F-117 in 1977. And we've now seen the promise of Stealth fulfilled with a remarkable success of the F-117 in Desert Storm.

The F-117 carried a revolution in warfare on its wings over Baghdad. And these remarkable aircraft flew only about 2 percent of the combat sorties, but struck over 40 percent of the strategic targets. The success of the F-117 is a tribute to those men and women who could see—even in the seven-
