Radio Remarks on “Read Across America” Day
March 1, 1999

The best and most enjoyable way for children to open their minds is by opening a book. This Tuesday America will celebrate “Read Across America” Day. More than one million people—from baseball star Cal Ripken, Jr., to the sailors of the U.S.S. Saipan—will share the joy of reading with children in every part of our country. I encourage all caring adults to get involved: Read to children on “Read Across America” Day, and read to them every day. Together, we can make our children the best readers in the world.

NOTE: The President’s remarks were recorded at approximately 2:55 p.m. in the Oval Office on February 22 for later broadcast as a public service announcement. These remarks were also made available on the White House Press Office Radio Actuality Line.

Radio Remarks on Internet Accessibility in Classrooms
March 1, 1999

Vice President Gore and I have set a goal of connecting every classroom in America to the Internet. I’m pleased to announce that new Department of Education data show that more than half of all our Nation’s classrooms are now connected—nearly twice as many connections as last year. And thanks to new E-rate discounts that help schools and libraries connect to the Internet, we’ll reach our goal of every classroom and library connected by the year 2000.

Computers and new educational software can make a real difference in the way teachers teach and a student learns. Because of our efforts, children in poorer or isolated areas will now have access to the same universe of knowledge as children in the most affluent suburbs. All
