PAYMENT OF DAMAGES TO CERTAIN UNITED NATIONS' EMPLOYEES

Whereas eleven American employees in the United Nations were asked in 1952 and 1953 to testify before the Internal Security Subcommittee of the Senate concerning their membership in the Communist apparatus and other subversive activities, but refused under the fifth amendment to answer, with the result that such subcommittee recommended their dismissal from such employment; and

Whereas the Secretary General of the United Nations dismissed the eleven employees from their employment in the United Nations, and they appealed; and

Whereas on appeal the United Nations Administrative Tribunal awarded damages to the eleven employees in a total amount of $179,420 on account of such dismissal, and the International Court of Justice has recently upheld the Administrative Tribunal; and

Whereas the case is now before the General Assembly of the United Nations, which must approve the award of such damages before payment thereof can be made; and

Whereas the United States, which pays approximately one-third of the expenses of the United Nations, should not be compelled to contribute any of its funds for the payment of damages in a case of this kind to persons who have a record of disloyalty to the United States: Therefore be it
