

Public Law 96-218
96th Congress

Joint Resolution

Authorizing the President to proclaim May 1, 1980, "National Bicycling Day".

Mar. 28, 1980
[H.J. Res. 414]

Whereas, for more than a century, Americans of all ages have used the bicycle for personal transportation, health, fitness, and enjoyment;

Whereas more than one hundred million Americans engage in bicycling for recreation and transportation;

Whereas, for more than twenty years, the bicycle industry of the United States has celebrated the month of May as American Bike Month, observing the joys and utility of this unique, human-powered vehicle;

Whereas no single vehicle is more widely used by the youth of our Nation;

Whereas, with the increasing complexity of our national energy situation, Americans of all ages have discovered the great variety of practical uses of the bicycle for commuting, shopping, touring, improving physical fitness, camping, and enjoying the outdoors; and

Whereas the bicycle can be expected to play an increasingly important role in our Nation's energy conservation program: Now, therefore, be it
