UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT FOR THE EASTERN DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA

CHRISTOPHER LEONG,
Petitioner,
v.
D. ASUNCION,
Respondents.

No. 2:16-cv-1213 MCE GGH P

FINDINGS & RECOMMENDATIONS

Introduction and Summary

Petitioner, a state prisoner proceeding pro se, has filed a petition for writ of habeas corpus pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 2254. The matter was referred to the United States Magistrate Judge pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 636(b)(1) and Local Rule 302.

Petitioner challenges a judgement and conviction entered against him on May 20, 2011 in the Sacramento County Superior Court for a prison sentence of 30 years to life. Petitioner was convicted of second degree attempted murder and received gang and gun enhancements. Petitioner appealed the conviction which was denied by the California Court of Appeal on October 14, 2014. ECF No. 22, Exh. A. Subsequently, on November 19, 2014, petitioner filed a petition for review in the California Supreme Court, which was denied on January 14, 2015. Res't's Lod. Doc. Nos. 7, 8. On April 13, 2015, petitioner filed a petition for writ of certiorari

1 with the United State Supreme Court, and was denied on June 8, 2015. Res't's Lod. Doc. Nos. 9, 2 10.

3 A federal petition for habeas corpus was filed on June 3, 2016- adding an unexhausted 4 claim. ECF No. 1. In response to the Motion to Dismiss filed by respondent, ECF No. 12, 5 petitioner filed an opposition and a motion to delete the unexhausted claim (a sentencing claim).
6 See ECF Nos. 17, 18. The undersigned granted petitioner's motion to delete the unexhausted 7 claim and proceed with the three remaining claims. ECF No. 19. The following claims, which all 8 parties agree are exhausted, are:

- 9 1. The trial court prejudicially erred in admitting evidence by expert witness;
- 10 2. Ineffective assistance of counsel; and
- 11 3. The gang expert's testimony was improper.¹

12 After independent review of the record, and application of the applicable law, petitioner's 13 application for habeas relief should be denied.

14 Factual Background

15 In its unpublished memorandum and opinion affirming petitioner's judgment of 16 conviction on appeal, the California Court of Appeal for the Third Appellate District provided the 17 following statement:

18 This case arises from a homicide on October 31, 2009, and two drive-by 19 shootings five weeks later. Defendants Christopher Leong and Juan 20 Carlos Carranco, Jr., were charged in a consolidated information with the 21 attempted murder of Jessie Mena (Pen. Code, §§ 664/187, subd. (a); count 22 two,² shooting at an occupied vehicle (§ 246; count three), and shooting at 23 an inhabited house (§ 246; count four); Carranco and Manuel Miguel 24 Sotelo were charged with the first degree murder of Carlos Cervantes (§ 25 187, subd. (a); count one); and Carranco alone was charged with felony evading a peace officer with willful disregard for public safety (Veh.
Code, § 2600.2. subd. (a); count five). The information also alleged various gun (§ 12022.53, subds. (b), (c), (d) & (e)(1)) and gang (§ 186.22, subd. (b)(1), (4)) enhancements. Carranco's motion to sever count one from the trial of the remaining counts was granted, and the trial of count

26 ¹ Petitioner does not raise the primary issue raised on appeal, that is, petitioner's Confrontation 27 Clause rights were violated by the expert's reliance on testimonial hearsay. The undersigned will 28 not review that issue here.

² [Fn. 1 in original excerpted text] Further undesignated statutory references are to the Penal Code.

1 one was ordered to trail the trial of counts two through five.³

2 A jury found defendants guilty of attempted murder, shooting at an 3 occupied vehicle, and shooting at an inhabited house, and Carranco guilty 4 of evading a peace officer with willful disregard for public safety. The 5 jury also found true allegations Leong intentionally and personally 6 discharged a firearm in the commission of the attempted murder of Mena, 7 and that defendants were principals in the attempted murder, shooting at 8 an occupied vehicle, and shooting at an inhabited dwelling offenses were 9 committed for the benefit of, or in association with, the Norteño criminal 10 street gang, and with the specific intent to promote, further, or assist the 11 Norteños or any member of that criminal street gang.

12 A second jury found Carranco not guilty of the first degree murder of 13 Cervantes but guilty of the lesser included offense of second degree 14 murder. The jury also found true allegations Carranco intentionally and 15 personally discharged a handgun, and thereby proximately caused the 16 death of Cervantes, and the murder was committed for the benefit of, or in 17 association with, the Norteño criminal street gang, and with the specific 18 intent to promote, further or assist the Norteños or any member of that 19 criminal street gang.

20 The trial court sentenced Leong to an aggregate term of 30 years to life in 21 state prison, consisting of 15 years to life for shooting at an occupied 22 vehicle and a consecutive 15 years to life for the shooting at an inhabited 23 house. The trial court stayed Leong's sentence for attempted murder 24 pursuant to section 654.

25 The trial court sentenced Carranco to an aggregate term of 70 years to life, 26 plus 13 years in state prison, consisting of 15 years to life for second 27 degree murder, plus 25 years to life for the gun enhancement, plus 10 28 years for the gang enhancement; a consecutive 15 years to life for shooting at an occupied vehicle; a consecutive 15 years to life for shooting at an occupied dwelling; and a consecutive three years for evading. The trial court stayed Carranco's sentence for attempted murder pursuant to section 654.

Defendants filed separate appeals, which we consolidated on our own motion for purposes of oral argument and decision only.

Defendants raise claims of evidentiary error and prosecutorial misconduct.
We shall conclude that defendants forfeited most of their claims by failing to raise them below, and in any event, all but one fails on the merits. As to the sole meritorious claim, we shall conclude the error was harmless under any standard. Accordingly, we shall affirm the judgments in their entirety.

FACTUAL AND PROCEDURAL BACKGROUND

A. Jury Trial Number 1 (Counts Two through Five)

³ [Fn. 2 in original excerpted text] Manuel Sotelo later pleaded no contest to one count of assault with a deadly weapon and admitted the gang enhancement in exchange for an agreed upon sentence of eight years in state prison.

1 On the evening of December 9, 2009, Jessie Mena was visiting a friend at 2 the Dewey Garden Apartments on Dewey Boulevard and Falconer Way in 3 the south area of Sacramento. He left around midnight and, as he was 4 walking to his car on Falconer Way, he saw a white Ford Taurus slowly 5 drive past him. The car was full of males, and the male seated in the front 6 passenger seat was hanging out of the window looking around. Mena did 7 not have a "good feeling," so he hurried to his car, got inside, and 8 attempted to leave. As he was headed down Falconer Way toward Dewey 9 Boulevard, the Taurus circled back around, and the male seated in the 10 front passenger seat began shooting. Mena sped up, turned into a parking 11 lot "to try to avoid getting shot," jumped out of his car, and ran about 15 12 yards to his friend's apartment. As he turned into the parking lot, a shot 13 hit the passenger door of Mena's car, and his back window shattered.
14 Once back inside his friend's apartment, he told his friend's father Larry 15 Trejo that someone was shooting at him.

9 The male who fired the shots was "light-skinned." Mena knew the male 10 as not lack but otherwise could not identify his race. Mena believed the 11 man who fired the shots was wearing a white or light-colored shirt.

11 Trejo heard approximately five gunshots after Mena left the apartment.
12 Trejo telephoned law enforcement approximately five minutes after Mena 13 returned to the apartment and was placed on hold for approximately two 14 minutes. Officers were dispatched to the scene at 12:40 a.m.

14 According to Trejo, it was not uncommon to hear gunshots around the 15 apartment complex. The apartment manager's grandson, Eddie Lerna, 16 resembled Mena and drove a similar car. Trejo did not know if Lerna was 17 in a gang but testified that he wore a lot of red clothing and got "into 18 problems a lot."

17 Mena denied belonging to a gang, ever being associated with a gang, or 18 having any enemies. He had never seen the white Taurus prior to the 19 shooting.

19 Ten spent shell castings were found near the intersection of Falconer and 20 Dewey. The casings "traveled from the intersection...approximately...30 21 feet." A projectile consistent with a bullet was found in a bucket outside 22 the apartment complex's laundry room.

21 Meanwhile, at 12:29 a.m. that same morning, Sacramento Police Officer 22 Mario Valenzuela was parked alongside Officer Ralph Knecht in the area 23 of 21st Avenue and Bradford when he heard about four gun shots north or 24 northwest of their location. Valenzuela and Knecht began looking for 25 vehicles leaving the area. Knecht positioned himself along 21st Avenue 26 because it is a main thoroughfare, and one or two minutes later, a call 27 came over the radio stating that there had been a "possible drive-by 28 shooting in the area of 17th Avenue," the same general area where 29 Valenzuela said he heard the gunshots. No more than a minute later, 30 Knecht saw a "white sedan" "shoot across" 21st Avenue on 71st street.
31 The car was traveling at a "decent rate of speed" and was coming from the 32 area where the shots had been fired. Knecht "went to try to catch up to it," 33 and when he did so, he noticed the car did not have a license plate.
34 Knecht notified dispatch that he was making a traffic stop of a white Ford 35 Taurus with approximately six occupants and then activated his overhead

1 lights. When the Taurus failed to stop, Knecht activated his siren and a 2 pursuit ensued. During the approximately 12-minute pursuit, the Taurus 3 ran 13 stop signs and numerous stop lights and reached speeds of upwards 4 of 80 miles per hour. Knecht did not observe anyone throw anything out 5 of the Taurus during the pursuit; however, he lost visual contact with the 6 Taurus several times such that he would not have been able to see if 7 something was thrown from the car.

8 The pursuit ended after the Taurus experienced mechanical problems. All 9 six occupants were ordered out of the Taurus at gunpoint. Carranco was 10 seated in the driver's seat, and Leong was seated in the front passenger 11 seat. The other occupants were Phoenix Allianic, Justin Guerrero Ceasar 12 Santana, and David Hinnen. Leong, who is Asian, was wearing a white, 13 black, and green striped shirt.

14 Defendants were placed together in the backseat of Knecht's patrol car 15 and were recorded by the car's "in-car camera." On the recording, a male 16 voice can be heard stating, "I ditched it."

17 The Taurus involved in the pursuit matched the description of the vehicle 18 given by Mena earlier that morning. Approximately 1:00 a.m., Mena was 19 brought to the location where the pursuit as the same car that was involved 20 in the shooting on Falconer Way. Mena was "100 percent sure it was the 21 same vehicle."

22 The Taurus was searched, and no firearm was found. There was one spent 23 shell casing and one live bullet underneath the front passenger seat, one 24 shell casing between the driver's side window and the front windshield, a 25 spent round that someone shot into the car on the floorboard.

26 Officers also searched the pursuit route, particularly those areas where 27 Knecht lost sight of the Taurus, and no gun was found.

28 At 1:10 a.m., a forensic investigator arrived at 7512 17th Avenue. She observed five 40-caliber shell casings in the street in front of the house, a spent bullet on the driveway, two bullet holes through the front window of the residence, one bullet hole in the garage door, and one bullet hole in a car parked in the driveway. The residents were a couple in their forties or fifties.

At approximately 2:40 a.m., defendants' and the other occupants' hands were tested for gunshot residue. According to the prosecution's expert in gunshot residue analysis, gunshot residue consists of particles containing lead, barium, and antimony. These chemicals exist separately inside the primer cup inside the shell. When the gun is fired, however, the mixture vaporizes and the chemicals fuse together. The combination of lead, barium, and antimony does not exist in nature and is not used in any common industry – the "only occurrence that has been found for these particles are from the discharge of a firearm." "Because these chemicals existed separately, when they are vaporized there's no guarantee [all three] will condense together. So what that means is we have an opportunity to produce particles that contain lead, barium, and antimony, but we also have opportunities to get two-component particles, lead and barium, lead and antimony, or antimony and barium." Gunshot residue has no adhesive properties, and thus, can be removed quite easily. Eighty percent of 1 gunshot residue falls off a moving object or person within two hours. The 2 expert further explained that “if a person has gunshot residue particles 3 detected on them, that means they either fired a weapon, handled a 4 weapon that has been fired, or ammunition that had been fired, or they’ve 5 been near a weapon when it was discharged.” In cases where only one or 6 two particles of gunshot residue are detected, secondary transfer cannot be 7 ruled out.

8 There was one lead, barium, and antimony, six lead and antimony, and 9 eight lead-only particles detected in the samples collected from Hinnen.
10 There was one lead, barium, and antimony, one lead and antimony, and six 11 lead-only particles detected on the samples collected from Allianic. There 12 was one lead, barium, and antimony, and two lead and antimony particles 13 detected on the samples collected from Guerrero. There were two lead, 14 barium, and antimony, and two lead-only particles detected on the samples 15 collected from Santana. There were four lead, barium, and antimony, nine 16 lead and antimony, and 12 lead-only particles detected on the samples 17 taken from Leong. There were 14 lead, barium, and antimony, 14 lead 18 and antimony, one lead and barium, and five lead-only particles detected 19 on the samples taken from Carranco. According to the expert, the amount 20 of gunshot residue detected on the samples taken from Leong makes 21 secondary transfer unlikely. The amount of gunshot residue detected in 22 the samples collected from Carranco is inconsistent with secondary 23 transfer; rather, it is consistent with firing a weapon, handling a fired 24 weapon, or being near a weapon when it was fired.

25 According to the prosecution’s firearm and tool mark identification expert, 26 the shell casings collected from Falconer Way, 17th Avenue, and inside the 27 Taurus were fired from the same semi-automatic firearm.

28 The prosecution’s gang expert, Detective Donald Schumacher, was permitted to testify as an expert in Hispanic street gangs, specifically the Norteños. Schumacher had been a detective in the Sacramento Police Department’s gang unit for over four years and specialized in Hispanic street gangs in the “south part of Sacramento,” specifically the Norteños.
He had served as the lead investigator on no less than 50 gang crimes and assisted in the investigation of at least one hundred others. He typically had contact with six to eight gang members per week. The contact typically involved “interviewing them for a case or...doing...proactive intel-type work,” such as “the [ins] and outs of the gang itself, how it works, [and] who’s in it...” He also reviewed records and spoke with patrol officers and members of neighboring law enforcement agencies to gather information about Hispanic gangs, and in particular, the Norteños.

Schumacher opined that the Norteños are a criminal street gang, explaining that there are about 1,500 Norteño gang members within the County of Sacramento, they have a common symbol, the number 14 and the color red, and they claim all Sacramento as their turf. There are a number of neighborhood subsets within the larger Norteño street gang in Sacramento, including the Varrío Diamonds and 14th Avenue, and there are rivalries among some of the subsets. Norteños have a common enemy, the Sureño criminal street gang. Gang members often show allegiance to their gang with tattoos. Any version of the number four or 14, which goes to “N” being the 14th letter of the alphabet, is a common tattoo for Norteño gang members. Norteños also use various hand signs associated with the

1 number 14, such as holding up one finger on one hand and four on the 2 other.

3 When asked for his expert opinion as to the primary activities of the 4 Norteños, Schumacher responded that he had “been part of investigations 5 stemming from just graffiti to car thefts, burglaries, carjackings, sales of 6 narcotics, drive-by shootings, possession of illegal firearms, all the way up 7 to homicide.”

8 Schumacher further opined that the Norteños were engaged in a pattern of 9 criminal gang activity, explaining that he investigates two or three 10 “Norteño crimes” on average per week, “whether they be assaults, 11 shootings, or just follow up on maybe a gun possession cases....” The 12 prosecutor asked Schumacher about “a couple of specific examples.” First, 13 the prosecutor asked Schumacher indicated that he had “reviewed that case 14 and talked to the investigating detective on that.” He explained that 15 Martinez, a Norteño, showed up uninvited to a birthday party at a local 16 restaurant and got into a dispute with one of the partygoers. Martinez 17 asked the partygoer where he was from, and the partygoer responded, “I’m 18 not from anywhere. I don’t gang bang.” As the partygoers attempted to 19 leave, Martinez pulled out a handgun and fired multiple shots into the 20 partygoer’s car.

21 The prosecutor also asked Schumacher if he was “familiar with the crime 22 of attempted murder committed by Mr. [Gabriel] Torres on July 15th, 23 2007.” Schumacher indicated that he was familiar with “that case” because 24 he “reviewed the report, and...spoke to the investigat[ing] detective....”
25 According to Schumacher, Torres, a Norteño, and three others approached 26 a group of people at a gas station and began calling them “scraps,” a 27 derogatory term for a Sureño gang member. When Torres and members of 28 his group began calling out “Oak Park,” one of the victims said, “[W]e’re not from anywhere. We don’t want any problems.” Immediately thereafter, Torres picked up a metal trash can and threw it through the driver’s window of the victim’s car, striking the victim in the face. When asked if Torres had “a subsequent issue” in September 2007 Schumacher said Torres was present at a fist fight that occurred outside Torres’ cousin’s house. Torres’ cousin saw a former Norteño gang member and began calling him a snitch. A fist fight ensued, Torres’ cousin knocked the former gang member to the ground, and Torres shot him multiple times.⁴

22 ⁴ [Fn. 3 in original excerpted text] The prosecution also introduced court records showing: a jury 23 found Martinez guilty of attempted murder and maliciously discharging a firearm at a motor 24 vehicle on August 5, 2007, and found true allegations Martinez personally discharged a firearm in 25 the commission of the attempted murder, and maliciously discharged the firearm at a motor 26 vehicle for the benefit of, or in association with the Norteño criminal street gang, with the specific 27 intent to further, promote, and assist criminal conduct by gang members; Torres had been charged 28 with assault and felony vandalism arising out of the July 15, 2007, incident and had pleaded no contest to felony vandalism in exchange for dismissal of the assault charge; and Torres had been charged with two counts of attempted murder, along with firearm and gang enhancements, in connection with the September 10, 2007, incident and had pleaded no contest to two counts of assault with a deadly weapon and admitted the firearm and gang enhancements in exchange for a stipulated sentence.

1 The detective had no personal knowledge concerning the facts of these 2 cases; rather, he had reviewed three reports regarding the cases.

3 Schumacher was familiar with the Dewey Garden Apartments. He had 4 been to the apartment complex and had been involved in investigations of 5 suspects who lived there. From what he understood from a couple of 6 independent sources, in late 2009, the apartment complex was primarily 7 inhabited by Varrio Diamonds. Schumacher also was familiar with the 8 manager of the apartment complex and her grandson, Eddie Lerna.
9 Schumacher had contacted Lerna with a few other Varrio Diamonds at the 10 apartment complex in 2007. Schumacher photographed Lerna, spoke to 11 him, and validated him as a Varrio Diamonds gang member.

12 Referring to “the police department reports,” the prosecutor asked 13 Schumacher if he was familiar “with the address of the shooting on 14 December 10th, 7512 17th Avenue,” and Schumacher responded, “That’s 15 the address of a Varrio Diamonds gang member named Adam White.” The 16 prosecutor then asked Schumacher to tell him about the relationship 17 between the Norteño subsets Varrio Diamonds and 14th Avenue.
18 Schumacher responded, “It’s not a good relationship,” explaining that in 19 2005, Tony Sotelo, a 14th Avenue gang member, shot and killed a Varrio 20 Diamonds gang member in a bar fight. The victim was good friends with 21 Adam White, and White’s half-brother Kenny Anderson. Anderson was 22 present during the shooting and identified Tony Sotelo as the shooter 23 during an interview with police. The feud between the Varrio Diamonds 24 and 14th Avenue continued past December 2009. Schumacher explained 25 that in December 2010, a year after the drive-by shootings at issue, “we 26 were . . . doing surveillance on the house next door to 7512 . . . when we 27 actually saw a silver car pull up, subject get out and fire shots into the 28 house in broad daylight.” Following a short pursuit, Schumacher arrested two men, one of whom was Santana, a 14th Avenue gang member and one of the occupants of the white Taurus on December 9, 2009. Schumacher further testified that Tony Sotelo is the brother of Manuel Sotelo, and that Manuel Sotelo and Carranco were involved in the shooting death of an out-of-town Norteño on October 31, 2009, about five weeks before the shootings at issue in this case.

Schumacher opined that each of the occupants of the white Taurus was a Norteño gang member in December 2009. More particularly, he opined that Allianic was a member of the 14th Avenue subset because he admitted to being a Norteño to another officer, was photographed making a hand gesture of the letter “A,” which is associated with the 14th Avenue subset, and repeatedly had been contacted with other Norteño gang members. He opined that Guerrero was a member of the Fruitridge subset because he had been contacted at least four times with other validated Norteño gang members, mostly from Fruitridge, and had been involved in several gang related crimes, including auto theft, possession of illegal firearms, and sales of controlled substances. Schumacher opined that Hinnen was a member of the Fruitridge subset because he had been contacted wearing gang clothing on multiple occasions, repeatedly associated with other gang members, mostly “Fruitridge Norteños,” and had the letters “FR,” which stand for Fruitridge, tattooed in red on his arm. He opined that Santana was a member of the 14th Avenue subset because he had been contacted by officers in gang related clothing, had been contacted at least 11 times with other Norteño gang members, mostly 14th Avenue, had “AVE” tattooed

1 on his hands, and had been photographed displaying the hand gesture “A,” 2 a common sign for 14th Avenue. He opined Leong was a member of the 3 Fruitridge subset because he had been contacted at least three times with 4 other Norteño gang members, most of whom were members of Fruitridge, 5 and had been involved in crimes associated with gang members, including 6 burglary, possession of concealed weapons, and sales of narcotics. Finally, 7 Schumacher opined that Carranco was a member of the 14th Avenue subset 8 because of his involvement with Manuel Sotelo, a member of 14th Avenue, 9 in the shooting of an out-of-town Norteño in October 2009, and because he 10 had been contacted at least twice with other gang members, had “14th 11 Ave” tattooed on the inside of his index finger, had a large red “A” tattooed 12 on his forearm, had a crossed out “S” or dollar sign tattooed on his body, 13 which signifies disrespect for the Sureños, and had been photographed with 14 other gang members wearing red and “throwing up” the hand sign “A,” 15 which is associated with 14th Avenue.

9 The prosecutor asked Schumacher the following hypothetical: “[A]ssume 10 that there are six Norteño gang members of either 14th Avenue or 11 Fruitridge in a car. [¶] They . . . drive to an area that is in a rival Norteño 12 set’s area, Diamonds’ area. They see a man who resembles, both 13 physically and by the car he’s heading towards, a rival Diamonds’ gang 14 member, and they shoot approximately ten times at that person. [¶] Would 15 you have an opinion as to whether that crime was committed for the benefit 16 of, or in association with, the Norteño criminal street gang?” Schumacher 17 responded, “[I]t most definitely was,” explaining the car was full of 18 Fruitridge and 14th Avenue gang members who, by shooting, “were trying 19 to eliminate [a person] who they perceive to be a rival gang member.”

15 Before posing a second hypothetical, the prosecutor asked Schumacher 16 whether he was “aware of any facts that would lead you to the conclusion 17 that Manuel Sotelo has taken . . . the disagreement between Tony Sotelo, 18 his brother, and the Kenny Anderson-Adam White faction personally?” 19 Schumacher responded, “That would be a conclusion that I would very 20 strongly consider” Among other things, Schumacher noted that 21 Manuel Sotelo had the phrase, “Fuck Huero” on his left index finger,” and 22 “Huero” referred to Anderson. Schumacher further testified that according 23 to the residents at 7512 17th Avenue, White and Anderson had been living 24 at that address until about two months prior to the shooting.

21 The prosecutor then posed the following hypothetical: “[S]ix Norteños 22 from either the 14th Avenue or Fruitridge subsets do a drive-by shooting 23 on the 17th Avenue house that is intimately associated with Adam White 24 and Kenny Anderson, Diamonds Norteños. [¶] The driver of the vehicle 25 that does the drive-by is closely associated with Tony Sotelo’s younger 26 brother who has taken that disagreement personally to the point of getting a 27 tattoo. [¶] Would you have an opinion as to whether that drive-by shooting 28 was done for the benefit of, or in association with the Norteño criminal street gang?” Schumacher responded that “obviously it’s [in] association with the gang and other gang members,” noting that there were six gang members in the car.

27 During cross-examination, Schumacher acknowledged that he did not have any role in investigating the crimes in this case and agreed that “[his] opinions and the information [he’s] providing today here, is based on reading reports.” He concluded Leong was a Norteño based upon a review

1 of various police reports; he personally had no dealings with Leong.
2 Schumacher acknowledged that selling marijuana is not a “gang crime” 3 because marijuana is not a controlled substance, and that Leong had been 4 convicted of selling marijuana. He also agreed that persons other than 5 gang members commit the other crimes Schumacher identified in relation 6 to Leong -- burglary and gun possession.

7 B. Jury Trial Number 2 (Count One)

8 On the night of October 30, 2009, Carlos Cervantes, Sonja Jones, Noe 9 Alvarado, Israel Cuevas, and several others travelled from Marysville to 10 south Sacramento to attend a party. There were between 30 and 100 11 people at the party, a number of whom appeared to be Norteño gang 12 members based on their clothing and tattoos. Sometime after midnight, the 13 party began to spill into the street and people started shouting the names of 14 gangs. Most of these individuals, including Carranco, were shouting “14th 15 Avenue.” Others were shouting, “Diamonds,” “Gardens,” and “Crips.” 16 Cuevas had served a previous prison term and was not supposed to be in 17 the presence of gang members, so Cervantes, Jones, Alvarado, and Cuevas 18 decided to leave. Around this time, the individuals who had been chanting 19 gang names began yelling and pushing Cuevas. A man with a large neck 20 tattoo, later identified as Manuel Sotelo, told Cuevas that he “needed to 21 learn respect.” Meanwhile, three or four other men began punching and 22 kicking Alvarado. When Jones threatened to break a bottle on the 23 attackers’ heads if they did not move away from Alvarado, the fighting 24 ceased. Cervantes was not involved in the altercations; he was urging 25 everyone not to fight.

26 After the fight, Cervantes, Jones, Alvarado, and Cuevas walked down the 27 street and away from the party. When they reached the corner, Alvarado 28 realized that his cell phone was missing, and the group returned to the party to look for it. When Alvarado asked the people at the party to identify the person who had attacked him, a number of people took responsibility and called Alvarado a “bitch” and a “punk.” Alvarado said he did not want any problems and attempted to shake one man’s hand. The man pushed Alvarado’s hand away and started to walk off, which sparked an altercation between Cuevas and Manuel Sotelo. Alvarado and Cervantes joined in the scuffle, and a large brawl broke out. During the brawl, Cervantes stood in front of Alvarado and held his hands up in an effort to break up the fight. As the fight moved into the street, Carranco was hitting Cervantes while Cervantes was pushing him away. Jones then saw Carranco point a gun at Cervantes’s head and shoot. Another partygoer testified that she observed Carranco swing his right fist at Cervantes in an overhead motion and an instant later heard a gunshot and saw Cervantes on the ground.
Cervantes later died as a result of the gunshot wound to his head.

29 Schumacher again testified for the prosecution as an expert in Hispanic 30 street gangs, specifically Norteños. His testimony concerning the Norteños 31 and their status as a criminal street gang that engaged in a pattern of 32 criminal gang activity was identical in all material respects to that given at 33 the first trial. In addition, Schumacher testified that he reviewed the facts 34 of the case and researched Carranco’s history. He had no information that 35 Carranco had been involved in any criminal activity other than the shooting 36 at issue and the two drive-by shootings in December 2009. He opined that 37 Carranco was a member of 14th Avenue, a Norteño subset, at the time of 1 the shooting. He based his opinion on the following: Carranco was 2 repeatedly in the company of other Norteños; he had an “A” tattooed on his 3 forearm; he had been photographed displaying 14th Avenue hand gestures 4 with other gang members, including Manuel Sotelo; and he had 5 participated in gang related crimes. In particular, Carranco was arrested on 6 December 10, 2009, following two drive-by shootings and was later 7 “convicted of both those events” and gang enhancements were found true.

8 That case involved 14th Avenue members shooting at other Norteños.

9 Schumacher was given a hypothetical based on facts rooted in the evidence 10 and opined that such a shooting was for the benefit of or in association with 11 the Norteño criminal street gang. Schumacher explained that it was done 12 in association with 14th Avenue because there were multiple members of 13 that gang present. He explained that it was also for the benefit of the 14 Norteños, even though the victim may have been a Norteño, because the 15 victim was from out-of-town and was on 14th Avenue turf. According to 16 Schumacher, Norteños fighting Norteños helps the gang as a whole 17 “because the community sees this, other members of the gang see this, . . .
18 people on the street see this, and they realize that if these two Norteño gang 19 members are fighting each other, what would they do to a citizen who 20 actually came forward and said this is what I saw, . . . or I want to testify.”

21 Carranco testified on his own behalf at trial. He admitted that he was a 22 member of the Norteño criminal street gang and that he had been a member 23 on the night of the shooting. He arrived at the party around 10:45 p.m. He 24 recognized a number of people at the party, but the only person he knew 25 personally was Manuel Sotelo. When people began shouting their 26 “hoods,” Carranco yelled out, “14th Ave” a couple of times. He 27 remembered seeing Alvarado doing calisthenics in the street but denied 28 ever seeing Cervantes prior to the shooting. He also denied being present at the party when the first altercation occurred, stating that he had gone to the liquor store to purchase some chewing gum. When he returned, he saw people fighting and was “blind-sided” by a punch to the left side of his face. Although he did not see who had punched him, he began punching Cervantes, who was standing nearby. Carranco exchanged blows with Cervantes, and at some point Carranco backed away, pulled out a semiautomatic handgun, and told Cervantes to “get back.” When Cervantes moved closer and began punching Carranco in the face and head, Carranco began hitting him with the gun. As Carranco was swinging the gun at Cervantes, it went off. Carranco was shocked; he was not expecting the gun to go off and did not intend to shoot or kill Cervantes. He was trying to get Cervantes away from him.

Less than an hour after the shooting, Carranco sent the following text message: “I know, did his brains get all over the place? Haha, don’t tell no one, at all for real, blood, on 14th Avenue, and tell them niggas, too”
In a second text message, he wrote, “I did, but I can’t sleep, I’m on”
In a third text message, he stated, “I know, but fuck it, it’s the Ave. over anything.” Two days later, he sent another text message: “Was there blood all over your shoes from the other night? Ave. Gang.”

Carranco admitted his involvement in two drive-by shootings five weeks after shooting Cervantes.

3 AEDPA Standards

4 The statutory limitations of a federal courts' power to issue habeas corpus relief for 5 persons in state custody is provided by 28 U.S.C. § 2254, as amended by the Antiterrorism and 6 Effective Death Penalty Act of 1996 (AEDPA). The text of § 2254 provides:

7 (d) An application for a writ of habeas corpus on behalf of a person in 8 custody pursuant to the judgment of a state court shall not be granted with 9 respect to any claim that was adjudicated on the merits in State court proceedings unless the adjudication of the claim

10 (1) resulted in a decision that was contrary to, or involved an unreasonable 11 application of, clearly established Federal law, as determined by the Supreme Court of the United States; or 12 (2) resulted in a decision that was based on an unreasonable determination of facts in light of the evidence presented in the State court proceeding.

13 As a preliminary matter, the Supreme Court has recently held and reconfirmed "that § 14 2254(d) does not requires a state court to give reasons before its decision can be deemed to have 15 been 'adjudicated on the merits.'" Harrington v. Richter, 562 U.S. 86, 98 (2011). Rather, "when 16 a federal claim has been presented to a state court and the state court has denied relief, it may be 17 presumed that the state court adjudicated the claim on the merits in the absence of any indication 18 or state-law procedural principles to the contrary." Id. at 99, citing Harris v. Reed, 489 U.S. 255, 19 265 (1989) (presumption of a merits determination when it is unclear whether a decision 20 appearing to rest on federal grounds was decided on another basis). "The presumption may be 21 overcome when there is reason to think some other explanation for the state court's decision is 22 more likely." Id.

23 The Supreme Court has set forth the operative standard for federal habeas review of state 24 court decisions under AEDPA as follows: "For purposes of § 2254(d)(1), 'an unreasonable 25 application of federal law is different from an incorrect application of federal law.'" Harrington, 26 supra, at 101, citing Williams v. Taylor, 529 U.S. 362, 410 (2000). "A state court's determination 27 that a claim lacks merit precludes federal habeas relief so long as 'fairminded jurists could 28 disagree' on the correctness of the state court's decision." Id. at 101, citing Yarborough v.

1 Alvarado, 541 U.S. 652, 664 (2004).

2 Accordingly, “a habeas court must determine what arguments or theories supported 3 or...could have supported[] the state court’s decision; and then it must ask whether it is possible 4 fairminded jurists could disagree that those arguments or theories are inconsistent with the 5 holding in a prior decision of this Court.” Id. at 102. “Evaluating whether a rule application was 6 unreasonable requires considering the rule’s specificity. The more general the rule, the more 7 leeway courts have in reaching outcomes in case-by-case determinations.” Id. Emphasizing the 8 stringency of this standard, which “stops short of imposing a complete bar of federal court 9 relitigation of claims already rejected in state court proceedings[,]” the Supreme Court has 10 cautioned that “even a strong case for relief does not mean the state court’s contrary conclusion 11 was unreasonable.” Id., citing Lockyer v. Andrade, 538 U.S. 63, 75 (2003).

12 The undersigned also finds that the same deference is paid to the factual determinations of 13 state courts. Under § 2254(d)(2), factual findings of the state courts are presumed to be correct 14 subject only to a review of the record which demonstrates that the factual finding(s) “resulted in a 15 decision that was based on an unreasonable determination of the facts in light of the evidence 16 presented in the state court proceeding.” It makes no sense to interpret “unreasonable” in 17 §2254(d)(2) in a manner different from that same word as it appears in § 2254(d)(1) – i.e., the 18 factual error must be so apparent that “fairminded jurists” examining the same record could not 19 abide by the state court’s factual determination. A petitioner must show clearly and convincingly 20 that the factual determination is unreasonable. See Rice v. Collins, 546 U.S. 333, 338 (2006).

21 The habeas corpus petitioner bears the burden of demonstrating the objectively 22 unreasonable nature of the state court decision in light of controlling Supreme Court authority.
23 Woodford v. Viscotti, 537 U.S. 19 (2002). Specifically, the petitioner “must show that the state 24 court’s ruling on the claim being presented in federal court was so lacking in justification that 25 there was an error well understood and comprehended in existing law beyond any possibility for 26 fairminded disagreement.” Harrington, supra, at 102. “Clearly established” law is law that has 27 been “squarely addressed” by the United States Supreme Court. Wright v. Van Patten, 552 U.S.
28 120, 125 (2008). Thus, extrapolations of settled law to unique situations will not qualify as

1 clearly established. See, e.g., Carey v. Musladin, 549 U.S. 70, 76 (2006) (established law not 2 permitting state sponsored practices to inject bias into a criminal proceeding by compelling a 3 defendant to wear prison clothing or by unnecessary showing of uniformed guards does not 4 qualify as clearly established law when spectators' conduct is the alleged cause of bias injection).
5 The established Supreme Court authority reviewed must be a pronouncement on constitutional 6 principles, or other controlling federal law, as opposed to a pronouncement of statutes or rules 7 binding only on federal courts. Early v. Packer, 537 U.S. 3, 9 (2002).

8 The state courts need not have cited to federal authority, or even have indicated awareness 9 of federal authority in arriving at their decision. Id. at 8. Where the state courts have not 10 addressed the constitutional issue in dispute in any reasoned opinion, the federal court will 11 independently review the record regarding that issue. Independent review of the record is not de 12 novo review of the constitutional issue, but rather, the only method by which we can determine 13 whether a silent state court decision is objectively unreasonable." Himes v. Thompson, 336 F.3d 14 848, 853 (9th Cir. 2003).

15 Finally, if the state courts have not adjudicated the merits of the federal issue, no AEDPA 16 deference is given; instead the issue is reviewed de novo under general principles of federal law.
17 Stanley v. Cullen, 633 F.3d 852, 860 (9th Cir. 2012). However, when a state court decision on a 18 petitioner's claims rejects some claims but does not expressly address a federal claim, a federal 19 habeas court must presume, subject to rebuttal, that the federal claim was adjudicated on the 20 merits. Johnson v. Williams, ___ U.S. ___, 133 S.Ct. 1088, 1091 (2013).

21 Discussion

22 Claim One: Prejudicial Error in Admitting Evidence

23 Petitioner argues the trial court prejudicially erred in admitting evidence of co-24 defendant's, Carranco, involvement in an October 2009 gang-related shooting that resulted in the 25 death of an out-of-town Norteño. ECF No. 1 at 5.

26 At trial, the prosecution's gang expert, Schumacher, referred to Carranaco's involvement 27 in the October 2009 shooting as a basis for his opinion that the two drive-by shootings were gang 28 motivated. Carranco's trial counsel objected to the introduction of such evidence under Cal.

1 Evid. Code § 352. Carranco’s trial counsel argued the evidence, although relevant, was more 2 prejudicial than probative. Prosecution contended that the evidence was relevant to show 3 Carranco’s intent and motive in committing the drive-by shootings. The trial court concluded the 4 evidence was admissible as “a part of the basis of the expert’s opinion as it relates to motivation 5 and intent factors.” People v. Christopher Leong at*25-26. However, prosecution was 6 admonished by the trial court to “tread very lightly” and “not to focus on it.” Id. at *26. The 7 following day, the trial court questioned whether evidence that the October 2009 shooting 8 resulted in a death should be excluded. The prosecutor argued the evidence was relevant in 9 establishing Carranco’s intent to kill. Carranco’s trial counsel argued that the evidence that an 10 individual had died as a result of a prior shooting would be overly prejudicial and not relevant.
11 The trial court ultimately concluded the evidence was admissible as its “strong probative value 12 was not substantially outweighed by the potential for prejudice.” Id. The following testimony 13 took place during the prosecutor’s direct examination of Schumacher:

14 Q. And are you familiar with the fact that Manuel Sotelo and Juan 15 Carranco were involved in the shooting death of an out of town Norteño on October 31st, 2009?

16 A. Yes.

17 Q. About five weeks before this?

18 A. Yes.

19 Id.

20 Petitioner claims the admission of Schumacher’s testimony was improperly admitted 21 because the “little probative value it may have had was substantially outweighed by its prejudicial 22 effect.” ECF No. 1 at 21. Petitioner cites to various evidence codes relating to relevancy (Cal.
23 Code §§ 350, 351, 210) and Penal Code § 186.22(b)(1) for the proposition that the evidence was 24 inadmissible and therefore there was insufficient evidence to support the charge of a gang 25 enhancement. ECF No. 1 at 21-22. Petitioner argues the facts of the instant case fail to show 26 Carranco acted with the same motive and intent as he did in the October 2009 shooting death of a 27 Norteño. Accordingly, petitioner contends this wrongful admission violated the Due Process 28 Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment.

1 More will be said about this contention in the section on ineffective assistance of counsel, 2 but suffice it to say that petitioner somewhat misses the point. He has no standing to assert that 3 Carranco's rights were violated; rather it has to be that the admission of evidence against 4 Carranco, even if properly admitted against Carranco, was of such gravity that it bled over to 5 unfairly taint petitioner. The undersigned presumes that if the evidence did not come in at all, it 6 could not have tainted petitioner.

7 However, petitioner's challenge, no matter how posed, entirely rests on the applicability 8 of state evidentiary rules. A challenge to a state court's application of state law does not give rise 9 to a cognizable federal habeas claim. See Estelle v. McGuire, 502 U.S. 62, 67 (1991) 10 (recognizing that issues of state law do not warrant federal habeas relief). If the issue before a 11 federal district court is "whether the state proceedings satisfied due process; the presence or 12 absence of a state law violation is largely beside the point." Holley v. Yarborough, 568 F.3d 13 1091, 1101 (9th Cir. 2009) (citing Jammal v. Van de Kamp, 926 F.2d 918, 919-10 (9th Cir. 1991) 14 (internal quotations omitted). Therefore "the admission of evidence does not provide a basis for 15 habeas relief unless it rendered the trial fundamentally unfair in violation of due process." 16 Holley, 568 F.3d at 1101. However, the Supreme Court has yet to hold that admission of 17 irrelevant or prejudicial evidence raises constitutional concerns. As set forth in the AEDPA 18 standards, such a Supreme Court pronouncement is the sine qua non for federal habeas corpus 19 cognizability. To the extent petitioner argues that admission of Schumacher's testimony is 20 unsupported by the evidence and therefore violates the state law's application of the evidence 21 code, thereby infringing his due process rights, such a claim is a non-starter in a habeas action 22 governed by AEDPA except in the most egregious, prejudicial situations. Estelle v. McGuire, 23 502 U.S. 62, 67-68 (9th Cir. 1991); Holley v. Yarborough, 568 F.3d 1091, 1101 (9th Cir. 2009) 24 (recognizing that the Supreme Court has not found due process violation by the introduction of 25 prejudicial evidence). See also Greel v. Martel, No. 10-16847, 2012 WL 907215, at *504 (9th 26 Cir. Mar. 19, 2012); White v. Davey, No 2:14-cv-1427-EFB P, 2016 WL 7404761, at *10 (E.D.
27 Cal. Dec. 12, 2016); Marks v. Davis, No. 11-cv-02458-LHK, 2016 WL 5395958, at *14 (N.D.

28 ///

1 Cal. 2016 Sept. 19, 2016); Mermer v. McDowell, No. cv 16-932-VAP (E), 2016 WL 53292623, 2 at *16 (C.D. Cal. Aug. 15, 2016).

3 For the aforementioned reasons, the court finds that the trial court, in permitting gang 4 expert, Schumacher, to testify to the October 2009 shooting death of a Norteño, does not raise a 5 meritorious claim in federal court. Moreover, petitioner fails to presents any legal arguments that 6 the trial court's admission of the testimony rendered the trial fundamentally unfair. Accordingly, 7 this claim should be denied.

8 Claim Two: Ineffective Assistance of Counsel

9 Petitioner claims his defense counsel was deficient for failing to object to the admission of 10 Schumacher's testimony with respect to the evidence regarding Carranco's shooting in another 11 situation, i.e., Count 1 of the information. Petitioner argues his counsel's failure to join 12 Carranco's trial counsel's challenge to the relevancy of the evidence, and any forfeiture of 13 preserving a challenge, rendered his trial counsel's assistance ineffective. The 3rd Appellate 14 District Court of Appeal provided the following analysis on the issue:

15 Before we determine whether Leong's rights were violated, we must 16 decide whether he preserved his claim for appellate review. Although 17 Carranco moved to bar Schumacher from referring to Carranco's 18 involvement in the prior shooting, Leong did not join in the objection or 19 interpose his own. Given the trial court's treatment of Carranco's 20 objection, one certainly could argue that any objection by Leong would 21 have been futile. (People v. Wilson (2008) 44 Cal.4th 758, 792-793.) 22 Leong inexplicably fails to make any such argument, claiming only that 23 "[i]f this court finds that defense counsel failed to object ..., counsel was 24 deficient for failing to do so." As we shall explain, even assuming the 25 issue was preserved for review, it fails on the merits. Accordingly, 26 Leong's trial counsel was not deficient. (People v. Price (1991) 1 Cal.4th 27 324, 387 [counsel's failure to make a futile or unmeritorious objection is 28 not deficient performance].)

23 People v. Christopher Leong at*26.

24 First and foremost, although petitioner argues that his trial counsel's failure to challenge 25 the admission of Schumacher's testimony of the October 2009 shooting resulted in a forfeiture of 26 the claim, the Court of Appeal clearly addressed petitioner's ineffective assistance of counsel 27 claim "assuming that the issue was preserved for review." Therefore, whether trial counsel's 28 failure to challenge the admission of evidence resulted in forfeiture of the claim is moot.

1 Certainly, Respondent does not raise a procedural bar argument for this claim.⁵ Accordingly, the 2 next issue to be addressed is whether trial counsel's failure to join Carrano's trial counsel's 3 challenge to the relevancy of the evidence raises a meritorious ineffective assistance of counsel 4 claim. The undersigned finds that it does not.

5 The test for demonstrating ineffective assistance of counsel is set forth in Strickland v.
6 Washington, 466 U.S. 668, 104 S.Ct. 2052, 80 L.Ed.2d 674 (1984). First, a petitioner must show 7 that, considering all the circumstances, counsel's performance fell below an objective standard of 8 reasonableness. Strickland, 466 U.S. at 688, 104 S.Ct. at 2065. To this end, the petitioner must 9 identify the acts or omissions that are alleged not to have been the result of reasonable 10 professional judgment. Id. at 690, 104 S.Ct. at 2066. The federal court must then determine 11 whether in light of all the circumstances, the identified acts or omissions were outside the wide 12 range of professional competent assistance. Id. "We strongly presume that counsel's conduct 13 was within the wide range of reasonable assistance, and that he exercised acceptable professional 14 judgment in all significant decisions made." Hughes v. Borg, 898 F.2d 695, 702 (9th Cir.1990) 15 (citing Strickland, 466 U.S. at 689, 104 S.Ct. at 2065).

16 Second, a petitioner must affirmatively prove prejudice. Strickland, 466 U.S. at 693, 104 17 S.Ct. at 2067. Prejudice is found where "there is a reasonable probability that, but for counsel's 18 unprofessional errors, the result of the proceeding would have been different." Id. at 694, 104 19 S.Ct. at 2068. A reasonable probability is "a probability sufficient to undermine confidence in the 20 outcome." Id. In extraordinary cases, ineffective assistance of counsel claims are evaluated 21 based on a fundamental fairness standard. Williams v. Taylor, 529 U.S. 362, 391-93, 120 S.Ct.
22 1495, 1512-13, 146 L.Ed.2d 389 (2000), (citing Lockhart v. Fretwell, 506 U.S. 364, 113 S.Ct.
23 838, 122 L.Ed.2d 180 (1993)).

24 The Supreme Court has recently emphasized the importance of giving deference to trial 25 counsel's decisions, especially in the AEDPA context:

26 ⁵ Nor could a procedural bar claim prevail as such would constitute the quintessential legal 27 "Catch 22." The initial thrust of an ineffective counsel claim for failure to object is that counsel 28 unreasonably did not object. To hold that one could not raise such an ineffectiveness claim because of a failure to object would be circular nonsense.

1 To establish deficient performance, a person challenging a conviction 2 must show that ‘counsel’s representation fell below an objective standard 3 of reasonableness.’ [Strickland, supra,] 466 U.S. at 688, 104 S.Ct. 2052, 4 80 L.Ed.2d 674. A court considering a claim of ineffective assistance must 5 apply a ‘strong presumption’ that counsel’s representation was within the 6 ‘wide range’ of reasonable professional assistance. Id., at 689, 466 U.S.
7 668, 104 S.Ct. 2052, 80 L.Ed.2d 674. The challenger’s burden is to show 8 ‘that counsel made errors so serious that counsel was not functioning as 9 the ‘counsel’ guaranteed the defendant by the Sixth Amendment.’ Id., at 10 687, 466 U.S. 668, 104 S.Ct. 2052, 80 L.Ed.2d 674.

11 With respect to prejudice, a challenger must demonstrate ‘a reasonable 12 probability that, but for counsel’s unprofessional errors, the result of the 13 proceeding would have been different. A reasonable probability is a 14 probability sufficient to undermine confidence in the outcome.’ Id., at 694, 15 466 U.S. 668, 104 S.Ct. 2052, 80 L.Ed.2d 674. It is not enough ‘to show 16 that the errors had some conceivable effect on the outcome of the 17 proceeding.’ Id., at 693, 466 U.S. 668, 104 S.Ct. 2052, 80 L.Ed.2d 674.
18 Counsel’s errors must be ‘so serious’ as to deprive the defendant of a fair 19 trial, a trial whose result is reliable.’ Id., at 687, 466 U.S. 668, 104 S.Ct.
20 2052, 80 L.Ed.2d 674.

21 ‘Surmounting Strickland’s high bar is never an easy task.’ Padilla v.
22 Kentucky, 559 U.S. 356, —, 130 S.Ct. 1473, 1485, 176 L.Ed.2d 284
23 (2010). An ineffective-assistance claim can function as a way to escape 24 rules of waiver and forfeiture and raise issues not presented at trial, and so 25 the Strickland standard must be applied with scrupulous care, lest 26 ‘intrusive post-trial inquiry’ threaten the integrity of the very adversary 27 process the right to counsel is meant to serve. Strickland, 466 U.S., at 28 689–690, 104 S.Ct. 2052, 80 L.Ed.2d 674. Even under de novo review, the standard for judging counsel’s representation is a most deferential one.
Unlike a later reviewing court, the attorney observed the relevant proceedings, knew of materials outside the record, and interacted with the client, with opposing counsel, and with the judge. It is ‘all too tempting’ to ‘second-guess counsel’s assistance after conviction or adverse sentence.’
Id., at 689, 466 U.S. 668, 104 S.Ct. 2052, 80 L.Ed.2d 674; see also Bell v.
Cone, 535 U.S. 685, 702, 122 S.Ct. 1843, 152 L.Ed.2d 914 (2002);
Lockhart v. Fretwell, 506 U.S. 364, 372, 113 S.Ct. 838, 122 L.Ed.2d 180 (1993). The question is whether an attorney’s representation amounted to incompetence under ‘prevailing professional norms,’ not whether it deviated from best practices or most common custom. Strickland, 466 U.S., at 690, 104 S.Ct. 2052, 80 L.Ed.2d 674.

Establishing that a state court’s application of Strickland was unreasonable under § 2254(d) is all the more difficult. The standards created by Strickland and § 2254(d) are both “highly deferential,” id., at 689, 466
U.S. 668, 104 S.Ct. 2052, 80 L.Ed.2d 674; Lindh v. Murphy, 521 U.S.
320, 333, n. 7, 117 S.Ct. 2059, 138 L.Ed.2d 481 (1997), and when the two apply in tandem, review is “doubly” so, Knowles, 556 U.S., at —, 129 S.Ct. at 1420. The Strickland standard is a general one, so the range of reasonable applications is substantial. 556 U.S., at —, 129 S.Ct. at 1420. Federal habeas courts must guard against the danger of equating unreasonableness under Strickland with unreasonableness under § 2254(d). When § 2254(d) applies, the question is not whether counsel’s actions were reasonable. The question is whether there is any reasonable

1 argument that counsel satisfied Strickland's deferential standard.
2 Harrington v. Richter, 562 U.S. 86, 104-105, 131 S.Ct. 770, 787-788, 178 L.Ed.2d 624 (2011);
3 see also Premo v. Moore, 562 U.S. 115, 131 S.Ct. 733, 178 L.Ed.2d 649 (2011) (discussing 4 AEDPA review of ineffective assistance of counsel claim where petitioner alleges that counsel 5 was ineffective at the plea bargain stage).

6 The California Court of Appeal, as part of claim one above, addressed this claim in its 7 opinion ruling that trial counsel was not deficient in his failure to object. Therefore, the 8 undersigned reviews the ineffectiveness claim with the AEDPA filters firmly in place. It is well 9 established that if this court decides that admission of evidence was not error on the "straight" 10 admissibility claim, there can be no ineffective assistance of counsel for not objecting to the 11 evidence. See e.g., Miller v. Keeney, 882 F.2d 1428, 1434 (9th Cir.1989); Meza v. Uribe, 2011 12 WL 7176145 (C.D.Cal.2011); Dixon v. McDonald, 2011 WL 4433259 (E.D.Cal.2011); People v.
13 Szadriewcz, 161 Cal.App.4th 823, 836, 74 Cal.Rptr.2d 416 (2008). Every court understands this, 14 and the decision of the Court of Appeal on the admissibility claim stands as an implicit rejection 15 on the merits of the mirror image ineffectiveness claim, and is binding here unless its reasoning
16 on the prejudicial effect of the admission was AEDPA unreasonable.⁶

17 The Court of Appeal found:

18 Here, Carranco's involvement in the shooting death of an out-of-town 19 Norteño was properly admitted to explain Schumacher's opinion that the 20 drive-by shootings were gang motivated, e.g. "committed for the benefit 21 of, at the direction of, or in association with any criminal street gang" 22 (§ 186.22, subd. (b).) Such evidence tended to show that Norteños did not 23 limit their violent acts to members of other gangs; rather, they sometimes targeted rival subsets of the same gang. Such evidence was relevant in the trial of the two drive-by shootings because the alleged targets of those shootings (Lerna, White, & Anderson) all were members of a rival Norteño subset. In addition, Carranco's relationship with Manuel Sotelo provided a possible motive for the drive-by shooting at 7512 17th Avenue

24 ⁶ Indeed, the inadmissibility of the evidence would go both to counsel's reasons for not objecting 25 to the evidence and any asserted prejudice occasioned by not objecting. If petitioner were 26 arguing that state law simply did not permit the evidence, the ineffectiveness issue would be over 27 with the ruling by the appellate court that state law allowed the evidence. However, since the 28 basis of the appellate court's ruling was that the evidence was not sufficiently prejudicial, that component of the ruling may be reviewed through the AEDPA lens. In other words, when state law permits a balancing of probative value versus prejudice, this value judgment is susceptible to AEDPA review.

1 insofar as Anderson, who identified Manuel Sotelo's brother (Tony 2 Sotelo) as the shooter in a prior homicide, lived there until just prior to the 3 shooting. That Carranco and Manuel Sotelo were involved in a shooting 4 five and one-half weeks prior to the drive-by shootings also tended to 5 show that their relationship was ongoing.

6 The evidence's probative value was not outweighed, substantially or 7 otherwise, by any potential prejudice to Leong. The testimony concerning 8 the October 2009 shooting was very brief, and the description of the 9 incident was relatively mundane; Schumacher did not say that Carranco 10 was the shooter, much less that he shot the victim in the head. He simply 11 indicated he was "familiar with the fact that Manuel Sotelo and Juan
12 Carranco were involved in the shooting death of an out of town Norteño 13 on October 31st, 2009." Moreover, the trial court reduced the likelihood of 14 any undue prejudice when it instructed the jury consistent with CALCRIM 15 No. 1403 that evidence of gang activity could not be considered to prove 16 that the defendant was of bad character or had a disposition to commit 17 crime. We presume the jury understood and followed this limiting 18 instruction. (People v. Lindberg (2008) 45 Cal.4th 1, 26.)

19 We reject Leong's contention that evidence concerning the October 2009 20 incident was irrelevant to the issue of intent because "[a]lthough one can 21 assume that shooting a Sureño would be for the benefit of the Norteños, it 22 makes no sense that killing a fellow Norteño would benefit the Norteños." 23 The jury reasonably could conclude that shooting at someone who is 24 perceived to be a member of a rival Norteño subset (Mena) benefitted the 25 Norteños by instilling fear in the community at large, and that shooting at 26 what was believed to be the home of a fellow Norteño who was perceived 27 to be a "snitch" (Anderson) benefitted the Norteños by discouraging others 28 from engaging in similar conduct.

Finally, we need not consider Leong's additional contention that even assuming Schumacher's testimony concerning Carranco's involvement in the shooting was admissible, his testimony that it resulted in death violated Leong's right to due process of law because any error was harmless under any standard.

People v. Christopher Leong at*27-29.

Certainly, the evidence was more probative if Carranco were the petitioner here rather than Leong. And certainly, if the point on admission had been whether Leong intended to kill the victim in this case, the evidence might well have been more prejudicial than probative. However, the point of the admission was to show the gang relatedness of the shooting in petitioner's case.
It is logical to find that if petitioner Leong runs in a group including Carranco, who has gunned down victims for gang purposes, and a shooting takes place involving petitioner as the shooter, and Carranco, for no ostensible reason other than singling out a victim, the Carranco shooting proves a valid point of gang relatedness of the shooting in petitioner's case. Although there may

1 have been some prejudice accruing to Leong from the admission of a killing by Carranco, the 2 Court of Appeal was not AEDPA unreasonable in conducting the balancing which it did.
3 Accordingly, the failure by petitioner’s counsel to object on a Cal. Evidence Code section 352 4 basis was not Strickland prejudicial.

5 Claim Three: Gang Expert’s Testimony was Improper

6 Petitioner argues the hypothetical the prosecution posed to Schumacher was unsupported 7 by the facts, denied him a fair trial, and failure by petitioner’s trial counsel to object to both the 8 question and answer was deficient. ECF No. 1 at 31. See Section IV of the People v. Christopher 9 Leong opinion. However, as respondent correctly notes, this claim is procedurally barred. The 10 California Court of Appeal articulated that petitioner “forfeited his claim by failing to object to 11 the prosecutor’s hypothetical or the expert’s response thereto below. (See People v. Gutierrez 12 (2009) 45 Cal.4th 789, 818-819). In any event, his claim fails on the merits.” People v.
13 Christopher Leong, *34-35.

14 “A federal habeas court will not review a claim rejected by a state 15 court if the decision of [the state] court rests on a state law ground 16 that is independent of the federal question and adequate to support 17 the judgment.’ ” Kindler, 558 U.S., at —, 130 S.Ct, at 615 18 (quoting Coleman v. Thompson, 501 U.S. 722, 729, 111 S.Ct.
19 2546, 115 L.Ed.2d 640 (1991)). The state-law ground may be a 20 substantive rule dispositive of the case, or a procedural barrier to 21 adjudication of the claim on the merits. See Sykes, 433 U.S., at 81– 22 82, 90, 97 S.Ct. 2497, 53 L.Ed.2d 594.

23 * * *

24 To qualify as an “adequate” procedural ground, a state rule must be 25 “firmly established and regularly followed.” Kindler, 558 U.S., 26 at —, 130 S.Ct., at 618 (internal quotation marks omitted).FN4 27 [omitted] “[A] discretionary state procedural rule,” we held in 28 Kindler, “can serve as an adequate ground to bar federal habeas review.” Ibid. A “rule can be firmly established’ and regularly followed,’ ” Kindler observed, “even if the appropriate exercise of discretion may permit consideration of a federal claim in some cases but not others.” Ibid.

California’s time rule, although discretionary, meets the “firmly established” criterion, as Kindler comprehended that requirement.
The California Supreme Court, as earlier noted, framed the timeliness requirement for habeas petitioners in a trilogy of cases.
See supra, at 3 [citing Clark, Robbins, and In re Gallego, 18 Cal. 4 th 825, 18 Cal.4th 825, 77 Cal.Rptr.2d 132, 959 P.2d 290 (1998).
Those decisions instruct habeas petitioners to “alleg[e] with 1 specificity” the absence of substantial delay, good cause for delay, 2 or eligibility for one of four exceptions to the time bar. Gallego, 18 3 Cal.4th, at 838, 77 Cal.Rptr.2d 132, 959 P.2d, at 299; see Robbins, 4 18 Cal.4th, at 780, 77 Cal.Rptr.2d 153, 959 P.2d, at 317.

5 Walker v. Martin, 562 U.S. 307, 131 S.Ct. 1120, 1127–1128, (2011) (abrogating Townsend v.
6 Knowles, 562 F.3d 1200 (9th Cir. 2009)).

7 The Ninth Circuit has recognized and applied California’s contemporaneous objection 8 rule, which provides that a criminal defendant must make a timely objection to the admission of 9 evidence or other objectionable item at trial in order to preserve a claim challenging that 10 evidence/statement on appeal, as grounds for denying a federal habeas corpus claim under the 11 doctrine of procedural default where there was a failure to object at trial. See, e.g., Fairbanks v.
12 Alaska, 650 F.3d 1243, 1256 (9th Cir. 2011); Inthavong v. Lamarque, 420 F.3d 1055, 1058 (9th 13 Cir. 2005); Paulino v. Castro, 371 F.3d 1083, 1092–1093 (9th Cir. 2004); Melendez v. Pliler, 288 14 F.3d 1120, 1125 (9th Cir. 2002) (citing Garrison v. McCarthy, 653 F.2d 374, 377 (9th Cir.
15 1981)); Vansickel v. White, 166 F.3d 953, 957 (9th Cir. 1999); Bonin v. Calderon, 59 F.3d 815, 16 842–843 (9th Cir. 1995). See also MacDonald v. Paramo, 2016 WL 1670524 (E.D. Cal. 2016).
17 Under the contemporaneous objection rule, California courts broadly construe the sufficiency of 18 objections that preserve issues for appellate review, focusing on whether the trial court had a 19 reasonable opportunity to rule on the merits of the objection. Melendez, 288 F.3d at 1125.

20 The claim is procedurally barred. No specific argument for cause and prejudice has been 21 made, and the undersigned will not review one on his own. Moreover, it is clear that this 22 argument, the improper admission of evidence, would not be cognizable in federal habeas corpus.
23 See Claim 1.

24 Petitioner adds as a tag line for this issue in his headline of Section 3 of his petition that 25 his counsel was ineffective for not objecting. However, this separate issue was not exhausted, 26 and the undersigned will not treat it as such. In any event, for the reasons set forth in the Court of 27 Appeal opinion, Section IV, involving state law admissibility of expert opinions, petitioner could 28 not have been AEDPA prejudiced.

Conclusion

Accordingly, IT IS HEREBY RECOMMENDED that petitioner’s application for a writ of habeas corpus should be denied.

These findings and recommendations are submitted to the United States District Judge assigned to the case, pursuant to the provisions of 28 U.S.C. § 636(b)(1). Within fourteen days after being served with these findings and recommendations, any party may file written objections with the court and serve a copy on all parties. Such a document should be captioned “Objections to Magistrate Judge’s Findings and Recommendations.” Any response to the objections shall be filed and served within fourteen days after service of the objections. The parties are advised that failure to file objections within the specified time may waive the right to appeal the District Court’s order. Martinez v. Ylst, 951 F.2d 1153 (9th Cir. 1991).
